YOUR WIRE. NATURE CURE FORBIDS DESPAIR NOT-WITHSTANDING ODDS. WROTE ON FIFTEENTH.\(^1\) GOING DELHI SUNDAY. HOPE MOTHER BETTER YOU ALSO.

LOVE.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

\(^1\) This was not received by the addressee; _vide_ “Letter to D.V. Ramaswami”, 29-8-1946.
80. TELEGRAM TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

Express

SEVAGRAM,
August 23, 1946

RASHTRAPATI JAWAHARLAL NEHRU
18 HARDINGE AVENUE
NEW DELHI

WIRE RECEIVED. LEAVING SUNDAY. STAYING Bhangi
QUARTERS. INFORM BIRLA BRIJKRISHEN.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

81. TELEGRAM TO C. RAJAGOPALACHARI

Express

SEVAGRAM,
August 23, 1946

C. RAJAGOPALACHARIAR
THYAGARAYANAGAR

YOUR LETTER. HOPE YOU WELL ENOUGH. ATTEND DELHI
MEETING\(^1\)

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

82. TELEGRAM TO KASHINATH TRIVEDI

SEVAGRAM,
August 23, 1946

KASHINATH TRIVEDI
RANIPURA
BARWANI

TARAMANIBLEHN CAN BE SENT PROVIDED YOU HAVE FIXED MAHILASHRAM. SHE CAN STAY SEVAGRAM FOR A TIME.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

\(^1\) Of the Congress Working Committee which was held from 27th to 30th July 1946
83. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

SEVAGRAM,
August 23, 1946

CHI. LILY,

I have your letter. One too much crushed by debts feels not debts; one too much crushed by suffering feels not suffering. What are you afraid of? I have told you that you have neither relatives nor friends till you have passed your examination. Your studies are your relatives. I leave for Delhi on Sunday.

Blessings from

BAPU

CHI. LILAVATIBEHN
G. S. MEDICAL COLLEGE
LADIES’ HOSTEL
BOMBAY

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 10242. Courtesy: Lilavati Asar

84. LETTER TO K. M. MUNSHI

SEVAGRAM,
August 23, 1946

BHAJJI MUNSHI,

I have your letter. Chi. Lilavati in her letter told me that you were busy day and night with the Constituent Assembly work. I feel no pity for you on that score, provided of course that you are not working at the cost of your health.

I am glad that the Sharma-Gadodia case is over. I did feel hesitant about burdening you with that work.

Blessings from

BAPU

From Gujarati: C. W. 7700. Courtesy: K. M. Munshi
85. LETTER TO UTTIMCHAND GANGARAM

SEVAGRAM,
August 23, 1946

Bhai Uttimchand,

I have your letter. I was delighted to see your Hindustani. I read the Urdu also. I am sending the cheque to Sardar. I like the analogy from geometry and I got the answer too by drawing the figure.

Yours,
M. K. Gandhi

86. ADDRESS TO TRAINEES OF BASIC TEACHERS’ CAMP

SEVAGRAM,
August 23, 1946

One of the complaints that has been made by one of you is that too much emphasis is laid here on manual work. I am a firm believer in the educative value of manual work. Our present educational system is meant for strengthening and perpetuating the imperialist power in India. Those of you who have been brought up under it have naturally developed a taste for it and so find labour irksome. No one in Government schools or college bothers to teach the students how to clean the roads or latrines. Here cleanliness and sanitation form the very Alpha and Omega of your training. Scavenging is a fine art you should take pains to learn. Persistent questioning and healthy inquisitiveness are the first requisite for acquiring learning of any kind. Inquisitiveness should be tempered by humility and

---

1 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”. There were 79 trainees sent by various Congress-ruled provinces and by the Kasturba Trust. The meeting was held in the Talimi Sangh Hall.
respectful regard for the teacher. It must not degenerate into impudence. The latter is the enemy of receptivity of mind. There can be no knowledge without humility and the will to learn.

Useful manual labour, intelligently performed, is the means par excellence for developing the intellect. One may develop a sharp intellect otherwise too. But then it will not be a balanced growth but an unbalanced distorted abortion. It might easily make of one a rogue and a rascal. A balanced intellect presupposes a harmonious growth of boy, mind and soul. That is why we give to manual labour the central place in our curriculum of training here. An intellect that is developed through the medium of socially useful labour will be an instrument for service and will not easily be led astray or fall into devious paths. The latter can well be a scourge. If you grasp that essential point, the money spent by your respective government in sending you here for training will have been well-spent.

_Harijan, 8-9-1946_

87. COCHIN

I have read all that has appeared in _The Hindu_ of 30th July about the announcement made by the Maharaja of Cochin. It is good as far as it goes. His Highness deserves congratulations for his courage. But good words do not carry us much further, unless they are accompanied by present action. It would certainly be a tremendous advance if the Maharaja were to make the beginning today, irrespective of what Travancore or other States do or do not do. Will Cochin become a part of what is called British Malabar today, the Maharaja keeping for himself no status other than what the free vote of the adult population of Cochin gives him?

_SEVAGRAM, August 24, 1946_

_Harijan, 1-9-1946_

---

1 This appeared under the heading ‘Notes’.

2 The Maharaja of Cochin in a statement had declared that he was prepared to discuss the unification of his State with Malabar and Travancore to form a State of Kerala.
88. LETTER TO MADALASA

Not revised August 24, 1946

CHI. MADU,

I feel pity for you. I am also angry with you. What you have told me fills me with pity. But I am angry because you kept it to yourself all this time.

We should blame no one except ourselves. That is the only way to be happy in life and remain clean. I have told you that you should find some work which will leave you no time to think about yourself. Mahila Ashram work was one such activity, but it did not suit you. You should, then, find some work which you can do alone or with a friend you will choose. If you can think of nothing, you could learn all the processes of spinning. Read books on nature cure. There are some in Gujarati, and in Hindi, too.

Do write to me every Tuesday, and that at length. Do not lose your temper with anybody, not even with yourself. Learn to sing the bhajans aloud.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, pp. 327-8
89. LETTER TO D. B. KALELKAR

SEVAGRAM,
August 24, 1946

CHI. KAKA,

I have your letter. Next week the dictionary must be published.\(^1\) We can only try, however. Please send me what you can. That will satisfy me. How can we pass imperfect material in order to finish the work? After all it is only a beginning. It was not possible to send for you.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10973

90. LETTER TO MUNNALAL G. SHAH

August 24, 1946

I had long talks with Kanchan. I only pity her. She can take no decision just now. She certainly desires conjugal pleasure and to bear children. This wish on her part cannot be despised. You are a married man. No one can find fault with you if you beget progeny. It is only right for you to satisfy her and find satisfaction yourself. It is another matter if, seeing your ascetic disposition and out of love and compassion for you, she herself releases you. But at present this is beyond you both. You have not the necessary firmness of mind. Kanchan certainly wants to taste of the worldly pleasure. The two of you should therefore stay there for the present. When I arrive there it will not be necessary for you to visit the Ashram too often. You may come whenever you conveniently can. It will not matter if you don’t. If in the meanwhile my plans have crystallized, we shall know how matters stand with regard to you. Kanchan has suffered much. She must not suffer more. She will explain the rest if she can. I have given you quite enough in this letter. I am not revising this.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 10239. Courtesy: Munnalal G. Shah

\(^1\) English-Hindustani dictionary which was to be serialized in Harijan, Harijanbandhu and Harijan Sevak from September 1, 1946.
When the Ashram was first started in Kochrab we set before us certain ideals. The same ideals are before us today. What is our duty in terms of these ideals in the face of the conflagration that is raging in the country today? Let us be humble and confess that we have not got the strength today to meet all the expectations that the people entertain of us. But we are sincerely striving for it. If we had fully realized the principles for which we stand, we should have rushed into the blaze and offered the purest sacrifice which might have conceivably quenched the flames.

He then proceeded to give his definition of ‘pure sacrifice’. It was not the thoughtless annihilation of the moth in the flame. Sacrifice to be effective must be backed by the uttermost external and internal purity. There is nothing that such sacrifice cannot achieve. Without the requisite purity, sacrifice is no better than a desperate self-annihilation devoid of any merit. Sacrifice must, further, be willing and it should be made in faith and hope, without a trace of hatred or ill-will in the heart.

Although we have fallen short of the ideal, we have never been found wanting in honest endeavour. The art of jail-going we have learnt with the rest. But jail-going is only the beginning, not the end of satyagraha. The acme of satyagraha for us would be to lay down our lives for the defence of India’s just cause. Let us then pray to God to give us the requisite purity and fearlessness in the true sense of the term, to make our sacrifice worthy of the altar. Then alone shall we be worthy of the name of the Ashram.

_Harijan, 8-9-1946_

---

1 Extracted from Pyarelal’s ‘Weekly Letter’, 3-9-1946
92. HINDUSTANI v. URDU AND HINDI

A Bombay Government circular of 16-8-1939 reads:

It has been observed that the word “Hindustani” is being used indifferently for Hindi or Hindustani. Please note that Hindustani is different and distinct from both HINDI and URDU, and when a reference to that language is to be made, it should be made as “Hindustani” only.

On 9th October 1940 a press note was issued:

In September 1938 the Government of Bombay announced their decision to introduce the study of Hindustani in the schools of the Province. Steps were accordingly taken to implement that decision and the language is being taught in the primary schools, secondary schools and in the training institutions. In actual practice the teaching of the language in the schools has raised certain difficulties which have to be considered. The chief of them are lack of literature in the language, as it has yet to develop, and the absence of suitable text-books for use in schools. The Hindustani text-books now in use have been found to be defective, both in regard to the language used in them which is said to contain too many words of Hindi origin and in regard to the subject matter of the lessons included in them, some of which are stated to be unsuitable for Muslim pupils. Besides, both Urdu and Hindustani have so much of a common vocabulary that it has been suggested that it is unnecessary to insist on the teaching of Hindustani in Urdu schools. The Government having carefully considered the whole question have now directed teaching of Hindustani in other institutions. Urdu educational institutions in the Province, i.e., the primary and secondary schools and training institutions where the medium of instruction is Urdu, should be exempted from the inclusion of such teaching in the curriculum.

Another circular issued in 1941 exempts Hindi schools from the teaching of Hindustani, thus leaving Hindu schools where the medium is other than Hindi or Urdu for teaching Hindustani. What is the present Government of the Province, which is based on popular will, to do?

The answer is contained in the admission that the present Provincial Government is based on popular will. If the Hindi schools wish to have Hindustani, the national language, taught in the primary and secondary schools, it should be taught. Naturally the question has to be decided by the parents of the children learning in these schools. If they do not want it and an attempt is made to impose it by force, the claim for being a popular Government cannot be sustained. I should certainly advise the parents to want their children to be taught it. It should never be forgotten that Hindustani is essentially a cross between Hindi and Urdu and written in both the scripts. If the parents want either only Hindi or Urdu and only one script, they cannot impose it on an unbelieving or unwilling Government. Either party has freedom of action.

The question whether Hindustani is or can be a national form of speech is irrelevant at this stage. The argument has, moreover, been examined often enough in previous issues of the Harijan.

SEVAGRAM, August 25, 1946

Harijan, 8-9-1946

93. ADVICE TO AN ASHRAM INMATE

SEVAGRAM, August 25, 1946

Why should you want to touch my feet? Millions cannot do that and what millions cannot afford, we should voluntarily renounce. I go so far as to say that if ahimsa cannot be practised by the millions, I have no use for it for myself. But if they did not want to, although they could, I would hold on to it, even if I were all alone. People say that ahimsa is only for the saint and the seer. I think otherwise. If what they say is right, it ceases to have any value in my eyes. Similarly, if it were open to me alone to desire and strive to live for 125 years, I would not entertain that desire. But everybody can and should desire to live for 125 years, for the service of God and His creation. Self-interest too demands that. For what would life be worth in a world in which I am the sole survivor of all those I have worked with and known?

Harijan, 1-9-1946

1 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”. The inmate had wanted to touch Gandhiji’s feet as Gandhiji was leaving Sevagram. According to the source this incident took place on the 25th morning.
94. ALTERNATIVE TO INDUSTRIALISM

A correspondent writes :

Do you then believe that industrialization of India—to the extent of India producing her own ships, locomotives, aeroplanes, etc., —is necessary? If not, will you kindly suggest the alternative means by which India shall discharge her responsibilities as a free and independent nation?

If you believe in the establishment of such industries, who should, in your opinion, exercise control over the management and the profits that will accrue?

I do not believe that industrialization is necessary in any case for any country. It is much less so for India. Indeed, I believe that Independent India can only discharge her duty towards a groaning world by adopting a simple but ennobled life by developing her thousands of cottage [industries] and living at peace with the world. High thinking is inconsistent with complicated material life based on high speed imposed on us by Mammon worship. All the graces of life are possible only when we learn the art of living nobly.

There may be sensation in living dangerously. We must draw the distinction between living in the face of danger and living dangerously. A man who dares to live alone in a forest infested by wild beasts and wilder men without a gun and with God as his only Help, lives in the face of danger. A man who lives perpetually in mid-air and dives to the earth below to the admiration of a gaping world lives dangerously. One is a purposeful, the other a purposeless, life.

Whether such plain living is possible for an isolated nation, however large geographically and numerically in the face of a world armed to the teeth and in the midst of pomp and circumstance, is a question open to the doubt of a sceptic. The answer is straight and simple. If plain life is worth living, then the attempt is worth making even though only an individual or a group makes the effort.

At the same time I believe that some key industries are necessary. I do not believe in armchair or armed socialism. I believe in action according to my belief, without waiting for wholesale conversion. Hence, without having to enumerate key industries, I would have State ownership where a large number of people have to work together. The ownership of the products of their labour, whether skilled or unskilled, will vest in them through the State. But as I can conceive such a State only based on non-violence, I would not dispossess monied men by force but would invite their co-operation in the process of conversion to State ownership. There are no pariahs of society, whether they are millionaires or paupers. The two are sores of the same disease. And all are men “for a’ that”.

And I avow this belief in the face of the inhumanities we have witnessed and may still have to witness in India as elsewhere. Let us live in the face of danger.

ON THE TRAIN TO DELHI, August 25, 1946
Harajan, 1-9-1946

95. ENGLISH NOTICES

You and Congress Government advocate immediate discontinuance of English as the medium of instruction in this country. Will you not exert your influence through the Harajan to get all sign and direction boards, plates of offices, names of roads, streets, lanes, villages, schools, colleges, hospitals, etc., written in the regional language of the district? A change in Government or semi-Government institutions will be a lesson to private shops, stores, saloons, etc., to follow suit. Articles in the Company’s and other Acts requiring a name-board in English must go.

I believe that nowadays the tendency is towards the use of the regional language on signboards, etc. The correspondent is right regarding Government institutions and offices. Now that there are national Governments, the change should be introduced.

If any such rule exists in Company’s or other Acts as referred to by the correspondent, it should certainly go.

ON THE TRAIN TO DELHI, August 25, 1946
Harajan, 1-9-1946

96. HINDUSTANI PRACHAR EXAMINATIONS

The examinations for the Hindustani Prachar Sabha, Wardha, had been announced to take place on September 15th. But owing to the postal strike, letters were not delivered regularly for nearly a month, nor did the centres receive the examination books in time. In the circumstances, the time for examinations has

1 This and the following item were published under ‘Notes’.

64 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
been postponed to November 17th (Sunday). In view of the extra time afforded, it is hoped that advantage will be taken to open more centres and more examinees will be forthcoming. The last day for receiving applications for the examinations at the Wardha office is 30th September.

I endorse the hope that the extra two months gained by the postponement will mean more entrants for the examinations.

ON THE TRAIN TO DELHI, August 25, 1946

Harajan, 1-9-1946

97. LETTER TO J. C. KUMARAPPA

ON THE TRAIN TO DELHI,
August 25, 1946

MY DEAR KU,

I am told that Zaverbhai has accepted a post under the Government on a fat salary. If this is so, it is a backward step.

In my opinion no responsible person belonging to our organization can accept any pay for services. Our advice and service should be rendered gratis. Rent and conveyance expenses actually incurred may be charged. We get money from the well-to-do, the government get from the starved masses. The less we have to do with Government money, the better.

Love.

[PS.]

I am sorry. I have to run away. Hope to be back in about a week.

BAPU

From a photostat: G. N. 10183
98. LETTER TO DR. SATYAPAL

ON THE TRAIN
FROM SEVAGRAM TO DELHI,
August 25, 1946

BHAI SATYAPAL,

I got your letter. I am glad to know that you are happy.

Yours,

M. K. GANDHI

DR. SATYAPAL (OF LAHORE)

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

99. LETTER TO DR. SHEIKH MUHAMMED ALAM

ON THE TRAIN,
August 25, 1946

BROTHER ALAM,

I have your letter. I do remember the Begum and your daughter. I hope you are all well.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Urdu: G. N. 33

100. GOA

The game of hunting lovers of civil liberty is going on merrily in Goa. A small power because of its smallness often acts with impunity where a great power cannot. If the facts are as they have come to me, Shri Purushottam Kakodkar is fasting in his prison and may soon join the majority. As a believer unto death in satyagraha, neither I nor any satyagrahi should deplore the death. In such deaths of spotless victims lies the seed of true liberty.

But what of the Portuguese power which boasts of philanthropy and alliance with the Roman Catholic Church? That power will have to justify itself man and God. The blood of the innocents (assuming the innocence of the victims) will cry out from their tombs or their ashes. It is more potent than the voice of the living, however powerful and eloquent.

1 This appeared under the heading ‘Notes’.

ON THE TRAIN TO DELHI, August 26, 1946
Harijan, 1-9-1946

101. IF I WERE THE MINISTER

The talks with the Ministers concerned at Poona on 29th to 31st July on village crafts and basic education have given rise to a lot of correspondence and private discussion. For the guidance of the Provincial Governments and others interested in the question of khadi which has naturally occasioned the bulk of the correspondence and discussion, I set forth below my thoughts on the subject.

I refer the reader to my note in the Harijan of 28th April last.
My views, then expressed, remain unaltered. One thing has created a misunderstanding. Some friends have read compulsion in that note. I am sorry for the obscurity. In it I had answered the question as to what representative governments could do if they wished. I had, I hope pardonably, assumed that such governments’ notices too could not be interpreted as compulsion. For every act of a bona-fide representative government would assume consent of the voters represented. The voters would mean the whole populace, whether registered as voters or not. With that background, I wrote that the Government should notify to the villagers that mill cloth would not be supplied to the villagers after a certain fixed date, so as to enable them to wear khadi prepared by themselves.

Whatever the meaning of my article of 28th April last, I want to state that any scheme adopted about khadi without the willing cooperation of those concerned must mean death to khadi as a means for attaining swaraj. Then the taunt that khadi was a return to the darkness and slavery of the Middle Ages would be true. But I have held the contrary view. Whilst khadi under compulsion was a badge of slavery, khadi intelligently and voluntarily prepared, primarily for one’s own use, was easily the badge of our freedom. Freedom is nothing if it is not all-round self-help. I for one would have nothing to do with khadi, if it were not a free man’s privilege as well as duty.

A friendly critic asks whether khadi thus prepared could also and at the same time be for sale. Yes, if sale is its secondary use; not, if manufacture for sale is its only or even primary use. That we began with sale of khadi shows temporary necessity as well as our limited vision. Experience is a great teacher. It has taught us many things. Not the least is its primary use. But it is by no means the last. But I must leave this fascinating field of speculation and proceed definitely to answer the question put in the heading.

My first business, as the minister in charge of revival of the villages as the centre of all governmental activity, would be to find out from among the Permanent Service honest and incorruptible men capable for the work. I would put the best among them in touch with the A. I. S. A. and the A. I. V. I. A., creations of the Congress, and bring in a scheme for giving the village crafts the greatest encouragement. I would stipulate there should be no compulsion on the villagers, that they must not slave for others and that they should be taught to help themselves and rely upon their own labour and skill for the production of articles of food, cloth and other necessaries. The scheme would thus have to be comprehensive. I would instruct my first man, therefore, to see the Hindustani Talimi Sangh and see what it has to say.

Let us assume that the scheme, thus produced, contains a clause saying that the villagers themselves declare that they would not want mill cloth, say, after one year from a fixed date, that they require cotton, wool and necessary implements and instruction, not as a gift but to be paid for on the easiest terms. The scheme provides too that it will not apply at once to the whole of any province but only to a part to begin with. The scheme further tells one that the A. I. S. A. will guide and assist the working of the scheme.

Being convinced of its soundness, I would give it legal form in consultation with the law department and issue a notification, fully describing the genesis of the scheme. The villagers as well as the mill-owners and others would have been party to it. The notification will show clearly that it is the people’s measure, though bearing the Government stamp. The Government money will be used for the benefit of the poorest villagers, making the largest return possible to the people concerned. It will, therefore, be probably the most profitable investment in which expert assistance will be voluntary and overhead charges the least item. The notification will give in detail the whole cost to the country and the return to the people.

The only question for me as minister is whether the A. I. S. A. has the conviction and capacity to shoulder the burden of creating and guiding a khadi scheme to success. If it has, I would put my little barque to sea with all confidence.

ON THE TRAIN TO DELHI, August 26, 1946

_Harijan_, 1-9-1946

102. THE PLACE OF MEDICINE IN NAYEE TALIM

Shrimati Asha Devi does her own work and is considerate of my time. However, one day she asked me to give her five minutes. Her contention was that Nayee Talim should provide for some elementary instruction in medicine and she wondered whether, to make this possible, she herself should undergo training in medicine for four or five years.

I realized at once that with the best efforts on her part she had not been able to free herself wholly from the hold of the old system of education. Asha Devi, after all, has taken an M.A. degree from a University which was created by the British. I myself possess no degree, and I ceased long ago to attach any value to the little knowledge I acquired at High School. I have besides taken in deeply the system of nature cure. So I said to her: “You say the first lesson our children have to learn is how to keep fit and how to keep themselves and their surroundings clean. I say this covers all the medical knowledge we need. Nayee Talim is intended for the millions in villages. It is for their good. They live close to nature and yet do not know the laws of natural living. Those who know those laws do not follow them. It is from observing their way of living that we conceived the need for Nayee Talim. The knowledge that Nayee Talim imparts is scarcely to be had from books. It is from the book of nature that this knowledge is to be had. We must similarly seek what medical knowledge we need from the same book of nature. This means that if we know the laws of hygiene and follow them and take the right nutrition we can become our own doctors. The man who eats in order to live, who lives in friendship with the five basic substances, namely, earth, water, ether, sun and air, who is a servant of God who has created these, can never fall ill. And if he does, he will surrender himself to God’s care and calmly meet his end. He will be content to use such medicinal herbs and remedies as the grounds and fields of his village yield. Tens of millions of people live and die thus. They have not so much as heard of a doctor, let alone seeing one. We must make ourselves just like these villagers and teach village boys and adults who come to us also to live in that way. Doctors say that 99 per cent of all diseases are caused by insanitation, by eating things not fit to eat and by lack of proper nutrition. If we can teach 99 per cent of the people the art of living, we can forget the remaining one per cent. They will find some doctors like Sushila Nayar. We need not bother too much about them. Today pure water, pure earth and pure air are not available. We live sheltered from the sun. If we pay attention to these and take proper nourishment we shall have done the work of ages. Acquiring knowledge of this requires neither degrees nor money in crores of rupees. All that is needed is faith in God, the spirit of service, an acquaintance with the five basic substances and knowledge of proper diet. We can acquire all this with our own effort and in very little time without going to schools and colleges.

---

1 A translation of this was also published in _Harijan_, 1-9-1946.

ON THE TRAIN TO DELHI, August 26, 1946
[From Hindi]

Harijan Sevak, 1-9-1946
103. TELEGRAM TO SHAFAAT AHMED KHAN

NEW DELHI,
August 26, 1946

SIR SHAFAAT AHMED KHAN
CLARENDON COTTAGE
SIMLA
THANK GOD YOU ARE SAFE.¹ HOPE RECOVERY WILL BE RAPID.

GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

104. TELEGRAM TO DR. M. D. D. GILDER

Express
NEW DELHI,
August 27, 1946

DR. GILDER
MINISTER
POONA
PLEASE CONVEY WISHES DOCTOR VISHWANATHAN FOR SUCCESS ANTI-MALARIA CAMPAIGN.

GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ The addressee had resigned from the Muslim League to join the Interim Government. On August 24, he was waylaid in Simla and stabbed seven times. He was sworn in on September 11.
105. TELEGRAM TO GOVERNMENT INFORMATION BUREAU, GOA

[August 28, 1946]

HEAD
GOVERNMENT INFORMATION BUREAU
NOVA GOA

HAVE JUST SEEN YOUR OFFICIAL CONTRADICTION ABOUT TREATMENT OF PRISONER KAKODKAR. PLEASE WIRE WHETHER YOU WILL LET A REPRESENTATIVE OF WEEKLY “HARIJAN” INTERVIEW PRISONER AND REPORT ON FACTS.

The Hindu, 3-9-1946. Also Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

106. MESSAGE REGARDING PARSİ RUSTOMJI HALL AND LIBRARY

NEW DELHI,
August 28, 1946

WISH PARSİ RUSTOMJI HALL AND LIBRARY SILVER JUBILEE FUNCTION EVERY SUCCESS AND HOPE THAT LIBRARY HAS SERVED AND WILL CONTINUE TO SERVE USEFUL PURPOSE. HOPE SORABJEE HAIL AND HEARTY AND WILL PROVE WORTHY SON OF WORTHY FATHER. IF RESISTERS CONTINUE CIVIL RESISTANCE UP TO END WITH PERFECT DIGNITY SUCCESS CERTAIN.

GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

1 The source has “August 18” which appears to be a slip; vide “Telegram to Government Information Bureau”, Goa, 28-8-1946, 26-8-1946 and 29-8-1946. However, Pyarelal Papers have “August 29”.

2 The Goan authorities refused to “accept in a purely internal matter the interference of a newspaper man”.

72 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
DEAR FRIEND,

I write this as a friend and after deep thought.

Several times last evening you repeated that you were a “plain man and a soldier” and that you did not know the law.1 We are all plain men though we may not all be soldiers and even though some of us may know the law. It is our purpose, I take it, to devise methods to prevent a repetition of the recent terrible happenings in Calcutta.2 The question before us is how best to do it.

Your language last evening was minatory. As representative of the King you cannot afford to be a military man only, nor to ignore the law, much less the law of your own making. You should be assisted, if necessary, by a legal mind enjoying your full confidence. You threatened not to convene the Constituent Assembly if the formula you placed before Pandit Nehru and me was not acted upon by the Congress.3 If such be really the case then you should not have made the announcement4 you did on 12th August. But having made it you should recall the action and form another ministry enjoying your full confidence. If British arms are kept here for internal peace and order, your Interim Government would be reduced to a farce. The Congress cannot afford to impose its will on warring elements in 1 For Wavell’s version of the interview, vide Appendix “Lord Wavell’s Note on Interview with Gandhiji and Nehru”, 27-8-1946.

2 The reference is to the riots that had occurred in Calcutta.
3 Gandhiji had found Wavell’s attitude so unhelpful that he caused a cable to be sent to Sudhir Ghosh in London to the following effect : “Gandhi says Viceroy unnerved Bengal tragedy. Please tell friends he should be assisted by abler and legal mind. Otherwise repetition of tragedy a certainty.” Sudhir Ghosh accordingly met Pethick-Lawrence and Attlee to convey to them Gandhiji’s feelings. For Sudhir Ghosh’s letter to Gandhiji on the subject, vide Appendix “Letter from Sudhir Ghosh to Gandhiji”, 7-9-1946.
4 This was to the effect that the Viceroy had invited the President of the Congress to make proposals for the formation of an Interim Government and that the Congress President had accepted the invitation.
India through the use of British arms. Nor can the Congress be expected to bend itself and adopt what it considers a wrong course because of the brutal exhibition recently witnessed in Bengal. Such submission would itself lead to an encouragement and repetition of such tragedies. The vindictive spirit on either side would go deeper, biding for an opportunity to exhibit itself more fiercely and more disgracefully when occasion occurs. And all this will be chiefly due to the continued presence in India of a foreign power strong in and proud of its arms.

I say this neither as a Hindu nor as a Muslim. I write only as an Indian. In so far as I am aware, the Congress claims to know both the Hindu and Muslim mind more than you or any Britisher can do. Unless, therefore, you can wholly trust the Congress Government which you have announced, you should reconsider your decision, as I have already suggested.

You will please convey the whole of this letter to the British Cabinet.

I am,

Yours sincerely,

M. K. Gandhi

H. E. THE VICEROY
THE VICEROY’S HOUSE
NEW DELHI

The Transfer of Power, Vol. VIII, p. 322; also Gandhiji’s Correspondence with the Government, 1944-47, pp. 221-2

108. LETTER TO MANILAL GANDHI

NEW DELHI,
August 28, 1946

CHI. MANILAL,

I have your letters. The letter to Sushila I have given to Kishorelal and told him to forward it to her. You are in a proper quandary. Your duty, it seems clear, is to court imprisonment. There is no doubt at all that a fight has to be given. It is difficult for me to advise what should be done about the Press. You alone can decide. I should like Sushila being with you. But it appears that her duty is to be here. I cannot think of sending Arun and Ila there and I could not countenance Sushila leaving them and going. This is the difficulty. You must consider and decide. In coming to a decision please give no thought to what I might want or other elders might want. Or course you have to consider what Sushila would want.

Here everything is in confusion. No one can tell what will happen. I do not even know how long I shall have to be in Delhi. My heart is in the Ashram of course. I shall see where He takes me. Devdas already cabled to you, so you will see that no compromising step has been taken here and you may rest assured that none will be taken. I shall not be surprised if the newspapers there publish fabrications to harm the cause. Wasn’t I similarly attacked in 1896?¹

_Blessings from_
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 4989

109. LETTER TO SUSHILA GANDHI

NEW DELHI,
August 28, 1946

CHI. SUSHILA,

I got your letter here. I am glad that Ila has recovered. All that I could write to you is covered by my letter to Manilal, a copy of which is attached.² For the present I am camping here. I cannot say when I move out.

SMT. SUSHILA GANDHI

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ The reference is to be the assault on Gandhiji in Durban on January 13, 1897 following a distorted summary of a pamphlet of Gandhiji by Reuter.
² Vide the preceding item.
110. LETTER TO ARUN GANDHI

August 28, 1946

CHI. ARUN (GANDHI).

I am sorry that you and your friend told a lie. We are apt to fall into the habit. I regard this as the worst among all bad habits. It will be good if in future you keep away from it.

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

111. LETTER TO CHIMANLAL N. SHAH

SEVAGRAM,¹

August 28, 1946

CHI. CHIMANLAL,

I have given you quite a lot of work. Take care of your health, only doing what you can. This applies to Shakaribehn too. She must not ruin her health. See about Anna² and Kamala. If they both work well, they can do a lot of work.

Please tell Govind Reddy that I was not able to have a talk with him. I cannot say definitely when I shall be arriving there.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10641

¹ This is a slip. Gandhiji was in Delhi on this date.
² Harihar Sharma
112. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

DELHI,
August 28, 1946

CHI. AMTUSSALAAM,

You were in my thoughts on Monday, but how was I to write? Yesterday also passed in the same way. Today I am writing at 6.30 in the morning. This is the last day of Ramzan. Remember what true Ramzan is. Be firm of resolve and make your body as strong as steel. How is Jajuji? How is Kishorelal? How is your finger? I am well.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 526

113. LETTER TO HOSHIARI

[August 28, 1946]¹

CHI. HOSHIARI,

I expect you have started going to the Khadi Vidyalaya. You should have a healthy body and healthy mind.

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

114. LETTER TO KAMALA SHARMA

NEW DELHI,
August 28, 1946

CHI. KAMALA.

If you have really become what you say, you will be able to render a lot of service. When the mind has been thoroughly cleansed, the body also will be all right. There is a saying that if the mind is pure the Ganga flows at one’s door-step. In other words, if the mind

¹ In the source this letter is placed among the letters of this date.

VOL.92 : 9 AUGUST, 1946 - 6 NOVEMBER, 1946 77
is steady and sattvic the body too must become so.

I am not writing to Anna¹ separately.

SHRIMATI KAMALABEHN SHARMA
SEVAGRAM

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

115. LETTER TO LAKSHMINARAYAN GADODIA

NEW DELHI,
August 28, 1946

BHAI LAKSHMINARAYAN,

I got your letter and was sorry to read about Chi. Saraswati. You have both been tested. I hope she will get completely cured by naturopathy. Munshiji has written to me about your case. Sharma² came and saw me. I still do not have his opinion. Both of you will be informed when I have it.

LAKSHMINARAYAN GADODIA
DELHI

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

116. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,
August 28, 1946

Even today I cannot tell you how long I may have to stay in Delhi. I am certainly here till the day after tomorrow because the Working Committee meeting will be held then instead of tomorrow. I hope to be able to speak to you day after tomorrow.

We run away from fear. We should not. Those who do have no faith in God. When God resides in our hearts, where is the need to get scared? If one loses one’s life, it is because God wills it so. We do not matter at all. If we are beaten, it is God who has to put up with the beatings. How can one who always thinks of God get scared?

Referring to the Calcutta riots Gandhiji said:
I am not able to say what I want to say. Words fail me. Over

¹ Addressee’s husband Harihar Sharma
² H. L. Sharma
such an outrage happening in India it is better to remain silent. Very often silence is the most effective communication because silence is filled with truth.

[From Hindi]

_Hindustan_, 29-8-1946

\textit{117. SALES TAX}\footnote{The Gujarati original of this appeared in \textit{Harijanbandhu}, 8-9-1946.}

I have received many letters in regard to the Sales Tax Act of the Bombay Presidency. Many arguments advanced against it are, in my opinion, thoughtless. Nevertheless, I placed some of the complaints before the Finance Minister. Shri Vaikunthbhai Mehta is a cautious and conscientious Minister. He has sent me a full reply.

It appears that this Act was framed before the popular Government came in. The present Ministry have made some essential changes in it. The letters received by me were full of criticism giving the impression that the present Government was wilful, indifferent to public opinion and the tax was already in vogue. As a matter of fact, not only has the collection of the Sales Tax not begun, but it has been postponed till October 1st and may be delayed still further if need be. Moreover, many articles of necessary use have been exempted, thereby showing that the Government has paid due attention to public objections and inconvenience. I am aware that there are people who hold that there should be no Sales Tax at all. A great deal has been said in favour of this view. But no government could exist if it were to listen to abstract objections. In other words, it is wisdom, in such cases, not to raise basic issues.

The Sales Tax is in vogue in many provinces. The main criterion in judging any tax should be that it does not hit the poor. It should also be seen that the money raised thereby is used for the public good.

A popular ministry is responsible to the legislature, and cannot do anything without their consent. Every elected member in a popular legislature is responsible to his voters. Therefore the voter who represents the public should ponder well before embarking on any criticism of the government of his creation. Moreover, one bad habit of the people should be borne in mind. They do not like any tax whatsoever. Where there is good government, the tax-payer gets full return for his money as, for example, the water tax in cities. No tax-payer could get water on his own for the same payment. But even so, and in spite of the fact that the tax is levied by the popular will, tax-payers always resent even paying such taxes. It is, of course, true that one cannot prove the benefit of all taxes as easily as the one I have cited as an example. But as society grows in size and complexity and the field of service also grows, it is difficult to explain to the individual tax-payer how he gets his return for any particular tax. This much, however, is clear that taxes as a whole should stand for the general benefit of society. If this were not so, the argument that taxes were levied by popular will would not hold. To the extent that we are still under foreign rule, the Government is not wholly responsible to the people. But in the Provinces today the Government are popular to a large extent and we must judge the Sales Tax accordingly.

NEW DELHI, August 29, 1946
Harijan, 8-9-1946

118. GOA

With reference to Mr. Gandhi’s short commentary on Goa in the Harijan of the 18th instant,¹ where he gives the so-called “contrast” between French and Portuguese authorities, we have to state the following for your knowledge and publicity purposes:

There is nothing more out of place as a comparison between French India and Portuguese India. The objects, administrative methods and the goal are absolutely dissimilar in their essence. The recent integration (1816) of the French possessions in India in the French Colonial Empire and its setbacks, have nothing in common with Portuguese India which for more than 400 years, has been benefited by the Portuguese administration, completely identifying its destinies with the Motherland.

If the inhabitants of French India wish to identify their destinies with Free India (what has yet to be ascertained), the same does not happen in Portuguese India where the totality of the inhabitants wish to continue under the beneficial action of Portuguese administration which has been the cause of its material and moral progress to the point of Goa being the pride of the Portuguese colonizing effort and part and parcel of the ¹Vide “Goa”, 18-8-1946.

Motherland.

These being the facts based on historical data, we trust you will publish the relevant corrections in your paper:

This letter to the Editor of the Harijan from the Head of the Government Information Bureau, Nova Goa, makes sorry reading. It is an example of the truth of the proverb, “Comparisons are odious.” Surely there is not much to choose between French and Portuguese imperialism. The hands of imperialism are always dyed red. The sooner imperialistic powers shed their imperialism like Ashoka the Good, the better it will be for the groaning world. One may be pardoned for giving credit to France where credit is deserved, as it is in the case of French India, assuming, of course, the truth of the newspaper version of the statement of the Governor of French India. Moreover, it is ridiculous for the Head of the Government Information Bureau to write of Portugal as the motherland of the Indians of Goa. Their mother country is as much India as mine. Goa is outside British India but it is within geographical India as a whole. And there is very little, if anything, in common between the Portuguese and the Indians of Goa.

I have read also the contradiction of my statement about Shri Purushottam Kakodkar. I must adhere to it in spite of the contradiction of the Portuguese authorities in Goa. Here is what his wife says in her letter dated 24-8-1946:

Shri Purushottam Kakodkar, Secretary of the Goa National Congress, was arrested while talking to a friend on 9-8-1946 by the Portuguese authorities. On the 10th he was removed to Panjim (Nova Goa). On the 11th and 12th, he was kept on half rations. When he learnt that the authorities were deliberately underfeeding him, he went on hunger strike on the 13th and was still fasting on 20th.

The Portuguese Government is undeterred in its policy and up till now (24-8-1946) no attention has been paid to the written request sent in by Shri Kakodkar for adequate food supply to himself and other prisoners.

I ask the Portuguese authorities whether they would allow a representative from the Harijan to meet Prisoner Kakodkar and ascertain facts for himself?

NEW DELHI, August 29, 1946

Harijan, 8-9-1946
119. TELEGRAM TO C. RAJAGOPALACHARI

Express

NEW DELHI,
August 29, 1946

RAJAJI
BAZLULLAH ROAD
THYAGARAYANAGAR

YOUR WIRE. YOU MUST NOT OVERSTRAIN YOURSELF BUT BE COMPLETELY WELL FOR TASK AHEAD.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

120. TELEGRAM TO DINSHAW K. MEHTA

NEW DELHI,
August 29, 1946

DR. DINSHAW
6 TODDYWALA ROAD
POONA

REGRET MY LETTER NOT RECEIVED. NOW POSTING COPY. DESPONDENCY NOT PERMISSIBLE. HOPE MOTHER BETTER.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

121. LETTER TO D. V. RAMASWAMI

NEW DELHI,
August 29, 1946

CHI. RAMASWAMI,

I have your letter. The news of Mother’s death has only brought me relief. Of what use can life be for a person ridden by disease. Besides, she was also advanced in age.

It is good that Hanumantha Rao’s widow is looking after the Kasturba Trust work in Sithanagaram.
Your work of service should now pick up momentum.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI D. V. RAMASWAMI
VIZAGAPATTAM, ANDHRA

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

122. LETTER TO G. B. PANT

NEW DELHI,
August 29, 1946

Bhai Pantji,

I see that Mirabehn is unable to do any work these days. She has shown me the correspondence she carried on. Now that the Ministry too has changed, is it advisable to have her even as an honorary adviser? She is, of course, a devoted worker and does not crave for office as such. Besides, her health, too, has suffered from incessant travelling. Please let me know what in the present circumstances would be the right thing to do. I wanted to talk it over with you, but could not do so.

In my opinion, Mirabehn may not be able to do much work for about two months. The fever still persists. Perhaps it is better to spare her.

G. B. PANT
LUCKNOW

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

123. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

HARIJAN COLONY,
NEW DELHI,
August 29, 1946

Chi. Jawaharlal,

We never have a moment to ourselves. I do not ask for it. You never have any time to spare. Nor do I have any. So a good many matters remain untouched.
I have before me your letter of the 20th. It came to me yesterday via Wardha. It dwells on the question of who should be the Congress President in view of the fact that you will be the Prime Minister. You incline in favour of Maulana Saheb. This I do not understand and cannot understand. In my view, Maulana Saheb should not accept nomination. Maulana Saheb hesitates to accept ministership. The responsibilities of the President, especially in the present juncture, are I feel arduous. But in my view it is not the only reason why he should not be president. I cannot accept, too, that other than Maulana Saheb, Sardar Patel and Rajendra Babu, no suitable person can be found.

I cannot definitely say who else will be suitable because I am not any more in very close with the Congress organization.

One thing more. It is also a question as to who should be the President of the Constituent Assembly. I shall not write anything more about it now, because it is not certain whether the Constituent Assembly will meet. Once the Working Committee meeting is over I do not think it is necessary for me to stay on here or at Mussoorie. This hardly needs to be discussed at the Working Committee. Please consider and tell me what I should do. I shall do as you say.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

I have a great deal of work to do at Wardha. You may show this whole letter to Maulana Saheb.

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar
124. TELEGRAM TO MANAGER, SEVAGRAM ASHRAM

NEW DELHI,
August 30, 1946

MANAGER
ASHRAM SEVAGRAM
WARDHA
RAMPRASAD SHOULD REPORT HIMSELF TO JEHANGIRJI PATEL ON THIRD FOR DISCUSSION AND SETTLEMENT.¹

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

125. LETTER TO MUNNALAL G. SHAH

NEW DELHI,
August 30, 1946

CHI. MUNNALAL,

I have not been able to write to you two. However I often think of you. I shall therefore only express the hope in this letter that both of you are calm. Whatever you do, do as a part of your duty. I hope that you will make each other happy, spending the least time in idle talk, and enjoy dreamless and sound sleep at night. Your daily activities must be going on as regularly as clock-work. You will also be improving your Urdu. I am not in a position yet to say when I shall be free from here. I am trying to make it as early as possible.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 8392. Also C. W. 7216. Courtesy: Munnalal G. Shah

¹Vide also “Telegram to Manager”, Sevagram Ashram, 30-8-1946.
126. LETTER TO KANCHAN M. SHAH

NEW DELHI,
August 30, 1946

CHI. KANCHAN,

Be composed. Therein lies your good. Remember what I have told you. Your physical condition depends entirely on your mental condition. I do feel pity for you, and that is why I also feel irritated with you. Why do you make yourself an object of pity? I look upon you as a child. But considering your age, you ought not to be a child in mind. You should learn to think systematically. You should find your own path in life. Your day should be spent in service of some kind; your night should be given to sleep.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 8254. Also C. W. 6978. Courtesy: Munnalal G. Shah

127. LETTER TO JEHANGIR PATEL

NEW DELHI,
August 30, 1946

Bhai Jehangirji,

I have your letter. I understand what you say¹. I shall write in English whenever I have anything special to say. But I do want you to get used to reading and writing Gujarati.

I have wired Ramprasad to see you on the 3rd.² I have also written to Bhai Bhise. Your committee can now do as they like. I hope Khurshedbehn is well. It will be more than enough if she maintains her health. I am glad that Dinshaw will be going with you. Please comfort him.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI JEHANGIR PATEL

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ Vide “Letter to Jhangir Patel”, 30-8-1946.
² Vide “Letter to Jhangir Patel”, 30-8-1946.
128. LETTER TO RAMPRASAD VYAS

NEW DELHI,
August 30, 1946

CHI. RAMPRASAD,

You have to go and see Jehangirji Patel on the 3rd. I think you will benefit by going to him. At present he has called you only for an interview. I should like you to see him and have a frank talk with him and try to join him if you find the work good.

Enclosed is a letter from Jehangirji.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

129. LETTER TO VICHITRA NARAYAN SHARMA

NEW DELHI,
August 30, 1946

BHAJ VICHITRA,

Your resolve to present yarn on the occasion of Charkha Jayanti is indeed commendable and I hope it will succeed. My faith has ever been increasing that if we all take to spinning with the right understanding we can make greater headway along the path of freedom.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI VICHITRA NARAYAN SHARMA
GANDHI ASHRAM
MEERUT

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 Vide also the preceding item.
130. LETTER TO VICHITRA NARAYAN SHARMA

August 30, 1946

Bhai Vichitra,

Thinking over the talks I had with Dada¹ and with you and the letter that is in front of me, I have come to the conclusion that your work in the U. P. should be wholly independent of the Charkha Sangh work and should be complementary to it. You have many workers. They are capable. Though we all work for the same cause, there still remains a difference of outlook between the Charkha Sangh and the Gandhi Ashram. I feel that if Gandhi Ashram grows independently, the khadi activity will probably develop faster. I am taking the step in this hope.

You would still be under the debt of the Charkha Sangh. I think it is indeed difficult, if not impossible, for you to pay off the whole sum right now. Therefore, I would advise you to return the sum in ten annual instalments. In case of failure to send the yarn or the instalment as promised or in case of khadi work being given up, the whole amount must be returned forthwith. The first instalment—cash as well as yarn—will be payable one year after the date of this letter.

If your work does not succeed in any part of U. P., the Charkha Sangh will have the right to work there independently. The step is being taken in the hope that it will promote decentralization and help the Gandhi Ashram to develop independently.

If you want any modification, please let me know.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI VICHITRA NARAYAN BABU
GANDHI ASHRAM
MEERUT

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ J. B. Kripalani
131. TELEGRAM TO MURIEL LESTER

NEW DELHI,
August 31, 1946

MURIEL LESTER
22 CLUB BACK ROAD
BYCULLA

WELCOME. CAN COME HERE. HOPE YOU WELL.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

132. LETTER TO GANGABEHN VAIDYA

NEW DELHI,
August 31, 1946

CHI. GANGABEHN,

I have your letter dated August 1, 1946. There is nothing wrong in your spending your life there [in Bochasan]. What you write about the Muslim boy makes interesting reading. I take it you have arranged for his education. If he is a Gujarati boy it is desirable that he knows Gujarati very well. And since he is a Muslim he ought to be taught to read the Koran. It is our duty to see to that.

Blessings from
BAPU

GANGABEHN VAIDYA
BOCHASAN

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
133. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

NEW DELHI,
August 31, 1946

CHI. SHARMA,

I have received Shri M[unshi]'s award. From what you told me I had thought it was in your favour. Now I find that it is not in your favour but against you. When I receive fair copies of the document I shall send one to you.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Hindi]
Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsh, p. 364

134. LETTER TO K. M. MUNSHI

NEW DELHI,
August 31, 1946

BHAI MUNSHI,

I have your letter as also the draft of your award. I have gone through the note you wrote for my information. I see that you have taken great pains over it. I agree with most of what you say in the note. You suggest that I should keep it confidential. I would rather show it to Sharma, if you would permit me. Your verdict is clear and concise. You had better write it in either Gujarati or Hindi. It need not be on stamped paper. The thing is not at all meant for a court of law. Of course it will be a different matter if such an action will involve any infringement of the Stamp Act. In that case we must affix the stamps. It will suffice to send your verdict only to me, and I shall forward it to both the parties, although it will be all right if you send a copy direct to each party. Of course you will send one copy to me. Do as you think right. I am required to stay here till the 7th. Please mind your health and if possible become as strong as steel. You have to render much service. I have sent the gist of your verdict to Sharma.

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
135. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,
August 31, 1946

Congress leaders were going into the Interim Government to make the path of freedom somewhat easy for the people, declared Mahatma Gandhi, addressing the prayer meeting on Saturday evening.

On September 2, Mahatma Gandhi said, Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, Sardar Patel, Babu Rajendra Prasad and others were going to wear crowns. But they were not going to be crowns of gold. They were to be crowns made of thorns which would try them sorely. They were going there—they whose whole life had been one of sacrifice—not to enjoy themselves or lead lives of ease but to serve the masses the more.

Gandhiji said he did not want the people to imagine that India was going to be free on September 2. Freedom he said, was not bought easily, nor was it a cheap commodity. It demanded its full price always. The leaders were going there to make the path of freedom somewhat easy for them. It was up to the people to help the leaders by being ready for sacrifices and willing to wear a crown of thorns themselves.

The A. I. C. C., Mahatma Gandhi said, was going to be held shortly in Delhi. Residents of Delhi would then be on trial. He hoped they would be sober, disciplined and peaceful and make such arrangements as to ensure the safety of the smallest child. They could only maintain their honour, as did Draupadi of old, by relying on God who alone could sustain them. He would not speak to them on the recent holocaust in Calcutta. Silence, he said, was his best friend.

He drew the attention of the congregation to a ‘bhajan’ sung during the prayer and said that it was a hymn which had been sung in his ears even before he went to jail in India for the first time in 1922. At that time he was sentenced to six years and for the first part of his prison life was kept by himself with two prisoner wardens to look after him. Since prayer had become part of his very being even while he was in South Africa, he used to sing the daily ‘bhajan’ however indifferently himself.

Out of the many who went to prison, Mahatma Gandhi said, there were those who looked out for every opportunity to escape, every opportunity to deceive and cheat. But he had long since decided that the ideal of a true satyagrahi was to make the prison a palace, and this could only be done by faith and prayer. The ‘bhajan’ (sung at the prayer meeting on Saturday) used to sustain him. It taught them that they could only be true to their resolution if they relied on God. He alone could keep them on the straight path. What could be the ideal of each one of those present except to make India free and keep themselves pure?

The Hindustan Times, 1-9-1946
136. TELEGRAM TO GOVERNMENT INFORMATION BUREAU, GOA

NEW DELHI,
September 1, 1946

HEAD
GOVERNMENT INFORMATION BUREAU
NOVA GOA
ALL OVER WORLD I HAVE HEARD OF FOREIGNERS AND FOREIGN JOURNALISTS BEING ADMITTED BY COUNTRIES CARING FOR WORLD SYMPATHY AND OPINION EVEN IN DOMESTIC SCANDALS.¹ SHOULD NOT HAVE THOUGHT THAT PORTUGUESE GOVERNMENT WAS INDIFFERENT TO CRITICISM OF OUTSIDERS.²

The Hindu, 3-9-1946. Also Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

137. TELEGRAM TO HANDLOOM CLOTH MANUFACTURERS AND MERCHANTS ASSOCIATION

NEW DELHI,
September 1, 1946

HANDLOOM CLOTH MANUFACTURERS AND MERCHANTS ASSOCIATION
HOSHIARPUR
APPROACH GOVERNMENT.

GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ Vide “Telegram to Government Information Bureau, Goa, 1-9-1946.
² The Goan Government’s reply to this was: “There are no domestic scandals in this country. That is why I don’t find your point of view either correct or sound.”
138. LETTER TO MADALASA

BHANGI NIWAS,
NEW DELHI,
September 1, 1946

CHI. MADU,

I got your letter. Keep up the spirit which that letter reveals. Never miss a Tuesday in writing to me, whether you receive my reply or not. Only one thing is required for keeping up your cheerfulness, namely, a living faith in God. Have a frank talk with Shriman, calmly and courteously. Similarly with Mother. You should be generous towards everybody and never take amiss what they say.

I shall have to stay here up to the 10th at any rate.

Kisses to Rasagulla.

Blessings to both from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, p. 328

139. LETTER TO MANILAL GANDHI

NEW DELHI,
September 1, 1946

CHI. MANILAL,

A cutting from the Indian Opinion sent by Sushila has reached me here in Delhi. If what it says is true it is a very serious matter. If the whole of the Negro population enters into a bloody conflict with the whole of the Indian population, there is not the least doubt that both will perish. One must have the capacity to fight to win in a bloody conflict. Neither party has this. Any help from the whites will be quite out of the question. You will lose even such help as you are now getting. I cannot therefore believe that except for a few crazy individuals there are any Indian groups who would wish to oppose the ghettos through violence. There is only one sure way and everyone knows it. Your path, therefore, is clear. Even if you are alone you must clearly and courteously state your views and if they put you in prison you must go to prison. I am becoming more and more convinced each day that Sushila should not go there for the present. If she takes care of the children as a good mother should, she will be doing her duty.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 4990

140. ANTIDOTE

After giving a graphic description of the recent unfortunate and disgraceful happenings in Calcutta, a writer asks:

What is our duty in such circumstances? The Congress gives no clear instructions to the rank and file in such crises. Sermons on non-violence from afar are of little use. To have offered non-violent resistance would have meant allowing all property to be destroyed and every Hindu to be killed.

The Congress Working Committee has given the clearest possible lead in the last sentence of its resolution published in the newspapers. Fratricide will not abate by “intimidation and violence but by mutual understanding, friendly discussion and, if necessary, by agreed arbitration.” One does not need to believe in non-violence as a creed to perceive the truth of this practical proposition. If through deliberate courage the Hindus had died to a man, that would have been deliverance of Hinduism and India and purification of Islam in this land.

As it was, a third party had to intervene in order to still mutual savagery. Neither the Muslims nor the Hindus concerned have gained by the intervention. Supposing that the Calcutta virus extends to the whole of India and British gunpowder keeps the two from stabbing one another, the British power or its substitute will be in possession of India for a long time to come. The length will be measured by the period required by the parties coming to sanity. It will come either by an exhausting mutual fight, independent of the foreign element or by one party eschewing violence in spite of the heaviest odds. Successful mutual strife is obviously impossible in the present state of general ignorance of the use of modern weapons and their inaccessibility. Non-violence does not require any outside or outward training. It simply requires the will not to kill even in retaliation and the courage to face death without revenge. This is no sermon on ahimsa but cold reason and the statement of a universal law. Given the unquenchable faith in the law, no provocation should prove too great for the exercise of forbearance. This I have described as non-violence of the brave.

---

1 The Working Committee met in Delhi from August 27 to August 30.

Unfortunately for us, we are strangers to the non-violence of the brave on a mass scale. Some even doubt the possibility of the exercise of non-violence by groups, much less by masses of people. They restrict its exercise to exceptional individuals. Only, mankind can have no use for it if it is always reserved only for individuals.

Be that as it may, this much is clear that if the people are probably not ready for the exercise of non-violence of the brave, they must be ready for the use of force in self-defence. There should be no camouflage. Self-defence must be pure and simple. Then too it must never be cowardly or crude. It must, therefore, never be secret. Such is stabbing in the back and evading detection. I am conscious of the fact that we are a people unarmed and untrained in the use of arms. Opinions will differ as to whether it is good that we are in that position. There can be no denying the fact that no one needs training in the use of arms in self-defence. What is wanted for the purpose is strong arms and stronger will.

Doing injury to another is obviously violence but harbouring injury to another and yet unwillingness from cowardice to defend oneself or one’s neighbour is also violence and probably worse than the first.

What then are the leaders to do? What are the new Ministers to do? They must ever seek to attain communal harmony—never under threats, ever for its own sake. I regard a Muslim or any non-Hindu as my blood brother, not in order to please him but because he is born of the same mother Hind as I am. He does not cease to be my brother because he may hate or disown me. I must woo him even, it may be, in spite of himself. The new Ministers must resolve never to use British troops, no matter what their hue is, not even the police trained by them. They are not our enemies. But they have been hitherto used not to help the people but to keep them under the foreign yoke. They should now, as they can, be used for constructive purposes. The military are specially qualified for such work. They are trained and expected to bring into being canvas cities in a moment. They know what it is to procure and keep clean water and make perfect sanitary arrangements. No doubt, they know how to kill and be killed in the act. The public knows this part of their work only too well. But it is by no means the most substantial part of their work. It is the background which should be prized, advertised and followed. The animal part of it is unhuman, the other part is essentially human and clean. Let us copy it and humanize the troops if we can. The attempt is worth making. It can only be made by those who are not deceived by the glamour that hangs round them and the awe they inspire. This is possible only when we have the courage to face death without revenge or retaliation in mind or deed.

NEW DELHI, September 2, 1946
Harajan, 8-9-1946

141. FOR READERS

The ‘Question Box’ has become a regular feature of the Harajan. It tries to resolve the doubts of questioners as far as possible. But the post often contains questions which have been answered in one form or the other on more than one occasion. Readers should study the contents of ‘Question Box’ carefully.

Then there are letters asking for medical advice for sick people. The desire is there to answer such questions. But the fulfilment must take time. It is difficult too to satisfy incomplete postal inquiries. Ailing correspondents should wait awhile.

NEW DELHI, September 2, 1946
Harajan, 8-9-1946

142. VILLAGE INDUSTRIES EXHIBITION:
WHAT IT SHOULD BE LIKE¹

The Congress session is in the offing. The question arises what it should be like, considered from the villagers’ point of view, for only the villagers’ point of view can be relevant in India. If we want the villages to survive and become strong and prosperous the exhibition should be free from all pomp and ostentation characteristic of the cities. There should be no place for city games and entertainments. The exhibition should not under any circumstances be reduced to a show or a source of revenue. It should not become an attraction for traders. No goods should be sold, not even khadi or other products of village industry. The exhibition should become a place of education. It should be interesting and should be such that, having seen it, a villager should be inspired to learn some craft or other. There should be people to explain to the visitors the shortcomings of the villages in general and how to remove them. They should be shown what progress has been made since the work for the uplift of villages was first taken up. There should also be someone to instruct the villagers in the ways in which village life can be made artistic. Let us now see how the exhibition can be made to conform to these requirements.

¹ The Hindi original of this was published in Gramodyog Patrika.

(1) There should be two models of villages: one showing an average village as it is today and the other showing the village as it will look after the reform. The reformed village will be clean, with dwellings, village paths, general surroundings, fields and the condition of the livestock greatly improved. There should be maps and charts and books to show how different industries are carried on and developed.

(2) Guidance should be provided on how the various village industries are run and where the necessary tools for them are to be had or manufactured. There should also be demonstrations of the working of the various industries. Along with this we should show the following things:

(a) Ideal village diet
(b) The difference between cottage industry and machine industry
(c) An object lesson in animal husbandry
(d) A model latrine
(e) An art section
(f) Organic manure v. chemical fertilizers
(g) The utilization of hides and bones of dead cattle
(h) Folk music and folk dances
(i) Village sports, gymnastics and wrestling
(j) Nayee Talim
(k) Village herbs
(l) Village maternity home

If further things can be added keeping in view the guidelines enunciated above, this may be done. The things I have enumerated should be taken only as illustrations. I have not included here the various village crafts, of which the charkha is the first. Without them the exhibition should be considered as of no value.

[From Hindi]
Hindustan, 2-9-1946

143. WHY GO ABROAD?

An Indian doctor went to America in order to learn neurosurgery, so that he might return and serve his people here. He has with difficulty secured a seat in the Columbia University and is working as a house surgeon.

He writes to ask me to influence students not to go abroad for the following reasons:

(a) The amount our poor country spends on sending and training ten students abroad could be better utilized by securing the services of a first rate professor who could train 40 students as well as equip a laboratory.

(b) Students who come here acquire basic knowledge in research but do not know how to equip a laboratory on their return home.

(c) They have no chance of continued work.

(d) If we have experts brought out, our laboratories will also get perfected.

I have never been an advocate of our students going abroad. My experience tells me that such, on return, find themselves to be square pegs in round holes. That experience is the richest and contributes most to growth which springs from the soil. But today the craze for going abroad has gripped students. May the extract quoted serve as a warning!

NEW DELHI, September 2, 1946
Harijan, 8-9-1946
144. NOTES

THE DEVADASI SYSTEM

A correspondent writes:

It is a well-known fact that you are trying your best to uplift the Harijan community and even spending your most precious time in the Harijan Colony. But may I assure you that there are thousands of Devadasi girls of the Harijan community residing in Poona and Bombay and are leading a life of public prostitution. Why should this be so? Is it because these girls belong to low caste community and are induced to lose their moral character that they are neglected by the public and put to the shameful life of prostitution?

May I be justified in stating that this is a most important and urgent problem. Is it not possible to stop this illegal practice in the Bombay province as in Madura and Madras by the Madras Government under the ruling of Section 366A, 366B, 372 and 373 of the Indian Penal Code, page No. 574?

I have, on more than one occasion, written about the shame attached to the Devadasi system, whether in temples or in other places. “Prostitutes” is commonly supposed to apply to women of lewd character. But the men who indulge in vice are just as much, if not more, prostitutes as the women who, in many instances, have to sell their bodies for the sake of earning a livelihood. The evil practice should be declared illegal. But the law can only help up to a point. The evil exists clandestinely in every country in spite of the law. Vigorous public opinion can help the law as it also hinders.

UNTACTHABILITY AND THE FLUSH SYSTEM

Q. Do you consider that the adoption of the flush system is one way of eradicating untouchability? If so, you would not presumably oppose its introduction on the basis of your dislike of machinery.

A. Where there is ample supply of water and modern sanitation can be introduced without any hardship on the poor, I have no objection to it. In fact, it should be welcomed as a means of improving the health of the city concerned. At the moment, it can only be introduced in towns. My opposition to machinery is much misunderstood. I am not opposed to machinery as such. I am opposed to machinery which displaces labour and leaves it idle. Whether the flush system will remove the curse of untouchability is open to grave doubt. This latter has to go from our hearts. It will not disappear through such means as has been suggested. Not until we all become bhangis and realize the dignity of the labour of scavenging and latrine-cleaning, will untouchability really be exorcized.

NEW DELHI, September 2, 1946
Harijan, 15-9-1946

145. ADVICE TO THE MADRAS GOVERNMENT

NEW DELHI,
September 2, 1946

All credit to the Madras Government for being the first in the field, among the Provincial Ministries, to put forward a definite Scheme for the reconstruction of our sadly neglected villages including, as the most vital and fundamental part of it, a large-scale scheme for the development of khadi. I appreciate the completely sincere faith in khadi which has prompted the Madras Government to offer their resources, on a scale without precedent, for the rapid development of khadi, but I am afraid they have not realized that the conditions necessary for securing the success of such a large-scale venture probably do not exist now, and that they have yet to be created by extensive propaganda by all genuine lovers of khadi, including the Provincial Ministers and members of the Provincial Legislatures. I am quite clear in my own mind that it would be extremely unwise to force the pace in regard to a matter like khadi, until the proper atmosphere has been created and has borne fruit in the form of a strong public demand from the villagers themselves, thus guaranteeing immediate success and giving lasting benefit from large-scale expenditure of the money and energy such as is involved in the Madras Government’s scheme. The Madras Government seems to have underestimated the difficulties of securing enduring success in a field, steady progress in which has not been found too easy even by experts, namely, the All-India Spinners’ Association. I am naturally most anxious that Shri Prakasam should not embark upon any Khadi Scheme, the success of which is not assured. If we try to move too fast,

1 The Khadi Scheme of the Madras Government which envisaged making villages as far as possible self-sufficient in cloth; vide “Speech at Prayer Meeting, 25-9-1946.
I have no doubt that we shall fail, and fail badly, and such failure will not only reflect discredit on the Government which has embarked upon such a venture without sufficient consideration, but will also do great harm to khadi work in general. It is, therefore, necessary, especially as expenditure of funds allotted from Provincial Revenues is involved, that we should be very careful before undertaking the work on a large scale.

2. I would accordingly advise the Madras Government to be guided in this matter by the only expert body in India which can claim intimate and long experience of khadi work, namely, the All-India Spinners’ Association. Subject to my approval, the Association will select a group or compact groups of villages in which khadi has made some progress already, and which will, therefore, be a hopeful field for intensive work of the kind contemplated by the Madras Government. The khadi work in these areas should be done in accordance with a plan prepared by the Association, which the Madras Government should announce after finalising it in consultation with the Association. The plan will provide for allotment of the necessary funds by the Government, and also for the appointment, by them, of the necessary wholetime staff in consultation with the Association. The staff so appointed will execute the Scheme under the instructions and guidance of the Association.

If, as we all hope, this modest scheme succeeds, I shall gladly support proposals for its extension, with modifications if any suggested by our experience of its actual working, to other and larger areas.

3. I am requesting Shri Jajuji to prepare immediately, a scheme on the lines indicated above, in consultation with the Provincial Textile Commissioner, Madras, who will be meeting him at Sevagram for the purpose, on his way back to Madras. I shall ask Shri Jajuji to forward the scheme to Shri Prakasam after I have approved it.

4. I not only agree, but I am most anxious, that in these areas selected for the khadi work, all other items of rural reconstruction, as envisaged in Shri Prakasam’s note dated 22-5-46 should also be tried simultaneously in consultation with the A.I.V.I.A. and the A.I.T.S.

5. In any event, and in order to create the proper khadi spirit, all schools and colleges under the Government should be instructed to devote at least half an hour per day to spinning together with the anterior processes, the charkhas or taklis, as the case may be, to be supplied by the Government, and khadi training schools be immediately established by them in consultation with and under the guidance of the A.I.S.A.

6. It should be remembered that the scheme I have in view does not contemplate any workshop for the manufacture of spinning-wheels, these being already in existence in the villages to be selected. The scheme also contemplates the manufacture of wheels and the like by the local village carpenters and blacksmiths.

M. K. GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

146. NOTE TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL, RAJENDRA PRASAD AND JAGJIVAN RAM

VALMIKI MANDIR,
NEW DELHI,
September 2, 1946

Since after the prayer I have been thinking only about you people. Abolish salt tax, remember Dandi March, bring together Hindus and Muslims, remove untouchability, adopt khadi.

[From Hindi]

Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhaire, p. 324

1 This is in Devanagari.

2 The addressees had gone to seek Gandhiji’s blessings before they went to the Viceroy’s House for the swearing-in ceremony. It being Gandhiji’s Silence Day he wrote this note.
147. LETTER TO JHAVERBHAI PATEL

NEW DELHI,
September 2, 1946

CHI. JHAVERBHAI,

I have your letter. If I had met you, I would have told you in person. But on receiving the complaint, I took the first opportunity, and thereby no harm has been done. In Nagpur, the Government must provide the accommodation. It must at any rate give you the travelling expenses. I am of opinion that we should not demand expenses for boarding and lodging, and that is what I have stated. Only thus can we remain clean. But we will talk further about it when I arrive there.

I fear I shall have to stay on here till the end of this month.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 1360

148. LETTER TO SUSHILA GANDHI

NEW DELHI,
September 2, 1946

CHI. SUSHILA,

I have written to Manilal. A copy is enclosed. You will have all the news from it. Stay there quietly and look after the children. You may render any other extra service if you can. I shall have to stay on here till the 10th, or even till later; I can’t say. We live from moment to moment.

SMT. SUSHILA GANDHI
AKOLA

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 The addressee had taken up a job in the Government; vide “Letter to Jhaverbhai Patel”, 2-9-1946.
149. LETTER TO DR. SUSHILA NAYYAR

NEW DELHI,
September 2, 1946

CHI. SUSHILA,

Mataji wished you were here today. For no particular reason. She just expressed a fond wish since today a popular government is assuming office.

I have no doubt that your place is there till Vijaya arrives. I shall be here certainly till the 10th. Maybe I shall have to spend the whole month here. Let us see what God wills. Bal must have gone to Calcutta.

I hope you are well and the work of the clinic is progressing well. There is no letter from you. Chand has gone to Amritsar.

The weather cannot be said to be too warm.

SUSHILA NAYYAR
SEVAGRAM

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

150. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

NEW DELHI,
September 2, 1946

CHI. A. S.,

You must have got one letter I wrote from here. Of course you are always in my thoughts. I had a talk with Khan Saheb, too. For the present he does not ask for you. Later we shall see. He went back the day before yesterday.

I have a lot of work to do here. Still I am well. You should become strong. What do you do? I may have to be here the whole of September. I am certainly here till the 10th.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 529
151. LETTER TO ANAND T. HINGORANI

NEW DELHI,
September 2, 1946

CHI. ANAND AND GANGI,

I have your letter. I continue to write the “Thought for the Day”. It does not look good Mahadev being ill. I hope he has recovered by now.

Your foot will be all right. I have not received the album yet.

Blessings to all three from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Hindi. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

152. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,
September 2, 1946

At last the way to purna swaraj has been opened. The whole of India has waited for this day for years and years and made innumerable sacrifices. Whatever our quarrels with the British Government in the past, we must thank it today, for it has voluntarily arrived at a settlement with our leaders.

A correspondent asks me, now that the Government is in the hands of Indians, when the Viceroy’s House will be turned into a hospital for the poor. My answer is that this will be done when people have all the power in their hands. So far we have not secured full independence. There was no exaggeration in what I had said on the subject at the Round Table Conference. Undoubtedly Harijans are amongst the poorest of the Poor. The Viceroy is still there in the Viceroy’s House. And so long as he occupies his office as Viceroy, it will be discourteous to tell him to vacate it.

We shall have full freedom only when our uncrowned king Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru and his colleagues in the Interim Government devote themselves to the service of the poor as people expect them to do.

This is a memorable day in the history of India. There is no occasion, however, for illuminations and jubilation. We must remember that today our ministers are putting on the crown of thorns.

The Muslim League, which is the second most important organization after the Congress and represents the Muslims of India, has not joined the Interim Government. Muslims are related to us by blood, for they are the children of the same land. They are angry with the Hindus. The Muslim League contends that the Hindus have betrayed them. The followers of the League are observing this day as a day of mourning. But the Hindus should not answer anger with anger and blow with blow. Time was when the Ali Brothers were with the Hindus. So, even though the Hindus cannot join the Muslim Leagues in observing the day as a day of mourning they should avoid illuminations, feasting and other forms of rejoicing. They should be patient. They should ask themselves for what failing of theirs the Muslims have come to regard them as enemies.

The Muslim League wants to launch direct action both against the British Government and the Hindus. But it cannot ride two horses at the same time. If it wants to non-co-operate with the British it must co-operate with its Hindu brethren. Then I really do not understand why it wants to non-co-operate with the latter. This is not in keeping with the teaching of Islam. I too claim to understand Islam a little. In South Africa I have lived and worked with Muslims.

The Congress cannot enter into a pact with the British against Muslims. The Congress agreed to join the Interim Government solely in order to secure freedom for the whole of India. This means that it wants freedom for the Muslim League too, and that is what wisdom, democracy and humanity demand. Nevertheless if the Muslim League continues to regard the Interim Government as its enemy, the latter should, by its actions, prove it wrong.

The question has been asked what the Congress Ministers should do as a first step. Here, my mind goes back to the days of the Dandi March. Our women played a great part at that time. The heroism and sacrifice they displayed then was unprecedented. The Dandi March symbolized the resolve of the Congress to secure freedom for the poor. The cry was raised that salt tax be abolished. Therefore the very first step of the Interim Government should be to abolish that tax, so that the poorest villager can have the feeling that the dawn of freedom has arrived. The poor include Hindus as well as Muslims of India.

I have said a good deal about communal unity. Unlike the abolition of salt tax this cannot be achieved by a stroke of the pen. The Ministers will have to stake their lives for it. If I had my way I would not let them seek military or police help. Well, if Hindus and Muslims must fight each other it is better that they bravely do their fighting themselves. So long as we depend on the British for protecting us, true freedom will not be ours.

We are also committed to eradicating untouchability and to promote khadi. Being a Bhangi myself I have been pleading with the Viceroy, as the representative of the British Government, to improve the lot of the Bhangis. Now I shall go to the Interim Government for this. They must do something about the living quarters of the Bhangis.

They must encourage khadi activity to clothe the naked poor of the country. By promoting hand-spinning and hand-weaving villages should be made self-sufficient in cloth. Some people object to the condition that khadi may be bought only on tendering yarn. But why should anyone, I ask, expect to have anything without working for it?

If members of the Interim Government want khadi for furnishing their houses or offices they should come to me as friends. I shall give them the yarn for getting the khadi. There is no doubt a shortage of khadi in the country today. Still I shall try to secure for them as much khadi as they order. I cannot of course promise them the fine khadi produced in Andhra.

I hope the Interim Government will provide the right leadership to the country and take it forward on the path of truth, purity and genuine swaraj. Every Indian must whole-heartedly support this Government.

[From Hindi]

_Hindustan, 3-9-1946_

153. KHADI SCHEME OF MADRAS

[On or after September 2, 1946]

In my opinion the Madras Government would be well advised if they asked the Charkha Sangh as to how many _firkas_ or how many villages and what area they are willing to take up at once and make self-sufficient as far as khadi is concerned. Government should only be responsible for finance and such other help as the A.I.S.A. may ask for.

---

1 _Vide_ the preceding item.

The present scheme may sound well on paper but will become the usual top-heavy official scheme which will fail as it will not be of the people. The word compulsion may have been eliminated but there will be compulsion.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

154. SOUTH AFRICA

Sir Shafat Ahmed Khan who, but for the recent murderous assault on him, would have joined the Interim Government yesterday wrote on August 6th to me an interesting letter from which I quote as follows:

My study of the Indian community while I was in South Africa convinced me that but for your heroic work in the Union, the Indian race in that country would not have survived as a self-respecting community. You built up, cell by cell, the power of resistance in a highly gifted race and your work in that country is the inspiration of the Indian race in South Africa at the present time.

My sole aim in South Africa was to lay the foundation of Indian unity in Natal. I do not think I succeeded completely in my aim but I am inclined to think that the heroic struggle which our race is carrying on at the present time would have been impossible but for the dissolution of the Natal Indian Association and A. I. Kajee’s Natal Indian Congress and the revival of the Natal Indian Congress, which you had founded in 1894. This was accomplished on August 29th 1943 and since that time, there has been only one political organization of Indians in Natal.

The South African situation is complicated and owing to conventions of diplomacy, my lips are sealed. My despatches from South Africa which give a complete picture of the political situation for three years and are very exhaustive, cannot be published owing to conventions of international intercourse. . . .

I came to the conclusion that no redress of our grievances in South Africa is possible unless we are masters in our own homeland and India is free.

\(^1\) Vide “South Africa”, 3-9-1946
In reply to my letter acknowledging receipt of the above, Sir Shafaat Ahmed Khan further writes:

You will be glad to hear that since my return from South Africa, I have been busy preparing my speeches in South Africa and have added a section in my book, shortly to be published, on the history of the Indian community in South Africa. In this I have made bold to give a brief account of your work there and followed with the greatest interest your march to Volksrust, etc.

For more than three years—1942-45, I wrote lengthy despatches to the Government of India on the South African problem and in April 1943 I warned them against General Smuts’ policy and told them to take the strongest measures against the Union Government in connection with the Pegging Act.

Strong measures have been taken now, but I am afraid it is too late. If the Congress forms a National Government soon and the new member in charge of the Department decides to publish these despatches, particularly from April 1943 onwards, they will clear up numerous points for the next session of U. N. O. I am bound to say that the convention is that such despatches are not published unless and until there is rupture of relations between two countries. I offer no opinion as to whether they should be published at all. This is a matter which the new Government should decide.

NEW DELHI, September 3, 1946

Harijan, 8-9-1946

155. LETTER TO S. V. VENKATESWARAN

BHANGI COLONY,
NEW DELHI,
September 3, 1946

DEAR SHRI VENKATESWARAN,

There is one thing which got inadvertently left out in the note you prepared and which Gandhiji amended and added to and signed for you to take to Shri Prakasam. Both Gandhiji and you forgot to mention the fact that in the former’s opinion khadi and textile mills cannot go hand in hand. As you may have noticed I took notes of your conversation with Gandhiji and on referring to them I find he said as follows: “Prakasam, if he swears by khadi, cannot work hand in hand with mills. If Madrasis are satisfied with khadi, mills must go. No new ones must be allowed.” As this is a very important item Gandhiji wants you to add it to the note especially as Prakasam

1 Vide “South Africa”, 3-9-1946
2 Textile Commissioner, Madras has a scheme before him of allowing new mills to be started in Madras.

I am sending this to Shri Jajuji and asking him to hand it over to you if you are still in Wardha. Otherwise, he will send it on to you by post.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

AMRIT KAUR

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

156. LETTER TO PUSHPA DESAI

NEW DELHI,
September 3, 1946

CHI. PUSHPA,

I have your letter. You may by all means join Nayee Talim. Sushilabehn tells me that you could do a lot of good work if you became a village nurse. Meet her also and then make your choice. Anything that makes of you a calm, steady and devoted worker will be welcome to me. “Live as you like, but attain Hari anyhow.” This is what Akha said. Had I not been so far away, we could have talked more. Bhansalibhai’s decision and . . .1 are for your good.

Take care of your health.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Did you receive any reply from your father? . . .2 is at peace.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9273

157. LETTER TO J. P. BHANSALI

NEW DELHI,
September 3, 1946

CHI. BHANSALI,

Guide Pushpa as you think fit. Let us hope that she becomes a sincere and dedicated worker. Sushilabehn has written suggesting that 1 A few words are illegible in the source.

2 The letter is damaged here.
she should become a nurse. Discuss the matter with her also, and then guide Pushpa as you think best. I shall approve of either ideal. Pushpa alone can say what would interest her more. It is difficult to say whether she knows what is best for her. That she is a simple girl we have observed ever since she first arrived.

Please eat regularly.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 9274

158. LETTER TO JIVANJI D. DESAI

NEW DELHI,
September 3, 1946

CHI. JIVANJI,

I saw the dictionary. I feel that we should go a little faster. I therefore suggest that you regularly give four columns. That will make one leaf. If one whole leaf can be given, one can tear it off and preserve it. That was Kakasaheb’s idea, but I was afraid that I might not be able to cope with the work. But now I have gained confidence. So I shall be able to send 120 words. This time if you can give four columns do so. You have enough material for it. Pyarelal has already written to you about sending the Muslim gentleman here. If you can spare him, please send him here immediately.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 9968. Also C. W. 6942. Courtesy: Jivanji D. Desai

---

The first instalment of the dictionary covered only half a column containing thirteen words.
159. LETTER TO MANU GANDHI

NEW DELHI,
September 3, 1946

CHI. MANUDI,

You say, “You and your circle have separated me from Father and so thrashing my arms and legs I try to swim on my own.” Now is that true? When did I separate you? Who is my circle? You too are my circle. I have written to you that you may come whenever you wish. Yes I have asked for Jaisukhlal also to come with you. If you can find the strength to face the world by yourself I am ready to keep you here by yourself. But you alone know that. I do miss you of course. Many people ask me when you will be coming. The field of service is wide and the means of learning the work are many. Sushila tells me that if I were to send for you, she would make of you an excellent nurse. Chand has passed the examination. Zohra has joined the hospital. If you were to come three would get trained. Now the hospital is quite separate. I suppose you know that it is in the Birla Dharmashala?

Your problem is difficult. But if you are going to stay there be patient. The fruits of patience are sweet. Wait for a message from me. For you it is already there.

The talk about my going abroad is quite unfounded. Or are you referring to India? In India of course I have to travel from place to place. If you accompany me your routine of studies will be disrupted. Jaisukhlal must improve his health. Everything has been fixed about Umia and Pratap. All the expenses on Vilas will be paid by Birla.

There is a separate letter for Atmaram.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./III
160. LETTER TO ATMARAM

NEW DELHI

September 3, 1946

Bhai Atmaram,

I have your letter. You should put up everything to Nanabhai and do as he says.

Blessings from

Bapu

SJT. ATMARAM
C/O JAIUSKHILAL HATHI
MAHUVA

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

161. LETTER TO DHIRUBHAI DIKSHIT

NEW DELHI,

September 3, 1946

Chi. Dhiru,

I have your letter. I understand about your fast and I am happy. Tamarind-water cannot be the cause of eczema because tamarind cures eczema and such other ailments. That is to say tamarind possesses the same properties that are found in lime. But the tamarind that is offered for sale is treated with chilli-water. Moreover, much of the tamarind available in the market contains dirt and is far from clean. I would say water mixed with such tamarind ought to be shunned. But the fault does not lie with the tamarind. It is due to the chilli the salt and the other impurities mixed with it. Tamarind sold in the market is also mixed liberal quantities of salt, in the absence of which it cannot be preserved for long. I have myself consumed tamarind in fair quantities and also persuaded others to do likewise. I do not remember anybody having come to harm on account of it. But I took dry pods of fresh tamarind and dispensed their juice or pulp. Please read out all this to Dr. Bhagawat, so that he will avoid buying the tamarind sold in the bazaar. Tamarind can be had almost free if it is stocked during the season for it, because tamarind trees are found everywhere and I have never heard of their being leased out.

From a copy of Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

162. LETTER TO SHRILAL BHATT

NEW DELHI,
September 3, 1946

BHAJ SHRILAL,

I got your letter of the 29th on the 31st. The names of Vithaldas and others are not to be found on the Exhibition Committee. Have you consulted Jajuji and Kumarappa? I am glad that you have stopped the sale of khadi. I am of the opinion that products of other village industries ought to be sold as usual. This covers the answer for you.

SHRILAL BHATT
GANESHBAG
DADISHETH AGYARI LINE
BOMBAY

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

163. LETTER TO HAREKRUSHNA MAHTAB

NEW DELHI,
September 3, 1946

BHAJ HAREKRUSHNA MAHTAB,

I have your letter of August 23. I could not reply earlier as I was tied up with the work here.

I have received a note which I pass on to you. You will find that it is unsigned. Why, I do not know. If the note is a concoction and the statements contained therein are false, I shall have nothing to say. But it is my firm conviction that the absence of big mills is the cause of Orissa’s poverty. And if, to set up four mills, one lac and nine thousand spindles have to be procured, the Orissa Government may as well forget about khadi. I conveyed the same opinion to Prakasam. His Textile Commissioner had come to see me on his behalf and left only yesterday. Big mills are not going to revitalize the Orissa villages, and the real India lives in its villages. Now that the Government is in the hands of the people, it is the duty of people’s representatives to turn their full attention to the villages and see that the wheel hums in every home and all the local industries are revived everywhere. This is my cherished dream and, I assume, yours too.

Supposing the members of the Orissa Assembly are not of this opinion, you should resign as Premier and let the reins of Government pass into the hands of those who favour setting up of big mills in Orissa.

I send you the letter I have received regarding the Sambalpur scheme. I shall certainly write on the scheme after I fully understand it.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

164. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

NEW DELHI,
September 3 1946

CHI. JAWAHARLAL,

Dr. Shaukatullah Ansari¹, who was here yesterday, tells me that your health is deteriorating and that there is fear of a nervous breakdown. People say that you keep working till past midnight. I am certain this is not at all good. For the work ahead of you, you need great care. This becomes impossible if you overstrain your mental resources.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ Son-in-law of Dr. M. A. Ansari
165. LETTER TO K. M. PANIKKAR

NEW DELHI,
September 3, 1946

Bhai Panikkar,

I have your letter regarding reforms in Bikaner State. I do not wish to write anything on the matter yet. I had advised the Maharaja Saheb that whatever is to be done should be done in consultation with Pandit Jawaharlal’s All-India States People’s Conference. It that were done the work would progress more smoothly.

Why is the Maharaja Saheb’s appeal in English? How many among the Bikaner subjects know English? Why, again, is the Bikaner seal on documents in English? In my opinion you ought to learn Hindustani. Should this not be possible, it would be better to have the help of secretary to carry on your work in Hindustani.

Blessings from
BAPU

Diwan, Bikaner

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

166. LETTER TO LADORANI ZUTSHI

NEW DELHI,
September 3, 1946

DEAR SISTER,

I have your letter. Doing work of service among the coolies of Mussoorie is not an easy job. I am afraid you will not be able to do it. Consult Jawaharlalji and others.

I did not get your previous letter of 15-8-1946. Besides, in Africa people hardly get to know things.

Smt. Ladorani Zutshi
22 Hamilton Road
Allahabad

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
167. LETTER TO RAM NARESH TRIPATHI

NEW DELHI
[September 3, 1946]

Bhai Ram Naresh,

I was sorry to learn of your illness. You must be getting the Harijan Sevak. I have started a new feature in it. You may contribute to it whatever you can. You may suggest any additions or alterations to the terms already included. You may include as many village expressions as you can. If you can suggest any idiomatic expressions, well let me have a whole lot of them.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI RAM NARESH TRIPATHI
VASANT NIWAS
SULTANPUR

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

168. LETTER TO A ZAMINDAR

[September 3, 1946]

RAJASAHEB,

I have your two letters. Why do you sign in English? I have written a lot about the Zamindars; I cannot remember in which particular issues. A good many collections of my articles have been published. With a little effort one of your secretaries will be able to look these up and tell you. My opinion, in brief, is that no zamindar or rich man should perish. The greatest need is to bring about a change of heart in them. If every zamindar, every Rajah and every millionaire lives as servant of the people there will be no problem. In the final analysis land belongs to the man who has worked on it. The present system which divides people into capitalists or landlords on the one hand and the have-nots or serfs on the other, should not be tolerated. All this I have explained in my articles a number of times.

1 A glossary of English-Hindustani words in Devanagari and Urdu scripts, started from September 1, 1946.
2 In the source this letter is placed among the papers of 3-9-1946.
As to religion, I feel our country, and indeed the world, should have room for all religions. I consider no one high and no one low. The duties enjoined on a Brahmin or Kshatriya are for all. Only, some have these in greater measure than others. But these are duties, never rights. One who claims a right to Brahminhood is not a Brahmin. Similarly, the claimant to the prerogatives of a Kshatriya ceases to be one. I have shown the easiest way to save Hinduism and that is that we should all become Bhangis voluntarily. For a Bhangi can have knowledge, valour and business acumen, while the spirit of service will always be there. In my own view all these are for service.

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

169. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,
September 3, 1946

The Viceroy’s House is kept very neat and clean.¹ Not a scrap of waste paper, not a piece of rag can be spotted anywhere. The houses occupied by former members of the Viceroy’s Executive Council were equally clean and well appointed. There is no gainsaying that we have not learnt the art of external sanitation to the degree that the English have. What is so distressing is that the living quarters of the menials and sweepers employed in the Viceroy’s House are extremely dirty. This is a state of affairs the ministers of our new Government will not tolerate. Although they will occupy the same well-kept bungalows, they will see to it that the lodgings of their servants are kept as clean as their own. They will also have to pay attention to the cleanliness of the wives and children of the staff. Jawaharlal and Sardar have no objection to cleaning their own lavatories. How can they have any in having the living quarters of their attendants cleaned? A one-time Harijan servant of Jawaharlal is now a member of the U. P. Assembly. I shall be satisfied only when the lodgings of the ministers’ staff are as neat and tidy as their own.

[From Hindi]

Hindustan, 4-9-1946

¹ Gandhiji was commenting on the fear expressed by some Englishmen that with the departure of the British the gardens of the house occupied by the members of the Viceroy’s Executive Council would suffer neglect, the furniture would be ruined by oil and grease, lavatories would be left uncleaned, and so on.
THE LOWLY COW

A knowledgeable sister writes:

Q. 1. With the exception of those cows or buffaloes that are in calf, cannot all others, whether in milk or not, be used to plough the land? This would be of immense help to the farmer but the general public is averse to the idea. What is your opinion?

Q. 2. There is a great dearth of pasture land in our country. It is difficult for the farmer to provide fodder even for useful cattle. Are you then in favour of the slaughter of all such animals as cannot be made use of or do you think this slaughter should be forbidden by law?

A. 1. The first question was put to me as long ago as 1915. I felt then as now, that if the cows referred to were used for purposes of ploughing the land, it would not hurt them. On the contrary it would make them strong and increase their yield of milk. But this benefit could only come about provided the cow was treated as a friend and not cruelly as cattle in our land so often are. This friendly treatment should of course be insisted on for animals from whom we take service. Every living being has to work within or its limitations. Such work uplifts, never lowers either man or beast.

A. 2. The second question also has long since been answered by me. Cow-slaughter can never be stopped by law. Knowledge, education, and the spirit of kindness towards her alone can put an end to it. It will not be possible to save those animals that are a burden on the land or perhaps even man if he is a burden.

KHADDAR

Readers of the Harijan may well say that in the present atmosphere of mad frenzy any talk of khadi is meaningless, because many khadi-loving persons live in cities and so far, the trouble is, by the grace of God, confined to cities. As a matter of fact, all city-dwellers are by no means party to the senseless strife, and those who truly love khadi must always be actuated by thoughts of peace. We have either to make khadi universal among the masses or give up all dreams of non-violent swaraj. Therefore, all who love and believe in peace, however fiercely the storm of communal strife may rage

---

1 The Hindi original was published in Harijan Sevak 15-9-1946.
around them, will forget neither the spinning-wheel nor khadi. They may omit their meals but not the charkha.

The request given below on behalf of the Charkha Sangh is thus quite proper. Such requests have been made by other khadi-loving organizations too. Those who look upon khadi in the above light will act on the resolution passed by the A. I. S. A. as referred to below:

1. The Trustees of the Charkha Sangh hereby appeal to all Khadi Bhandars and all khadi-lovers to try their utmost to secure 78,000 ordinary co-operators for the coming seventy-eighth Khadi Jayanti, of which number, at least half shall be self-sufficient.

2. By an ordinary co-operator is meant one who is a habitual khadi-wearer and will donate at least 6 hanks of self-spun yarn annually to the Charkha Sangh.

3. By ‘self-sufficient’ is meant one who, unless prevented by illness or other sufficient and unavoidable cause, regularly produces whether spun by himself or through his family members or friends, at least \(\frac{7}{2}\) hanks yarn, per month or 5 hanks, if he has done his own ginning, carding and slivering.

4. The Charkha Sangh has also passed a resolution to the effect that in all khadi producing centres, at least one square yard per person, according to the population, must be used by the people in the area. This much at least must be accomplished.

NEW DELHI, September 4, 1946

_Harijan,_ 15-9-1946

171. CABLE TO SUDHIR GHOSH

NEW DELHI,

_Sudhir Ghosh Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library_
172. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

NEW DELHI,
September 4, 1946

CHI. NARANDAS,

I got your two letters. You have completed sixty. You should aspire to live to 125 and serve till the end.

Tell Gokibehn\(^1\) not to worry about me. What was accomplished on the 2nd was nothing very great.\(^2\) A great deal more still remains to be done. I shall indeed be happy if you keep her with you. It is good that you send her milk. Read this out to her with my humble pranams.

What you wrote to Kamalabehn Nimbkar was right. She has met me often. She is very talkative, and as obstinate. If she writes to me, I shall see what can be done.

I hope Jamna\(^3\) is well. With me are Kanu, Abha, Sushila Pyarelal and R. K. A gentleman named Prabhudas has arrived from Bardoli. As typist we have Parasram. Muriel and Gladys have just arrived.

I hope Purushottam\(^4\) and Vijaya\(^5\) are well.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C. W. 8635. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

\(^1\) Gandhiji’s sister
\(^2\) The reference is to the formation of the Interim Government
\(^3\) Addressee’s wife
\(^4\) Addressee’s son
\(^5\) Addressee’s daughter-in-law
173. LETTER TO D. B. KALELKAR

NEW DELHI,
September 4, 1946

CHI. KAKA,

I have your letter. I understand about the Hindustani. Do what you can. I am getting the translation from English into Hindustani done by Rajkumari as best as I can. What will of it I do not know. In the end I have had to accept your suggestion of giving two pages. You believe it can be managed. I do realize that it is not advisable to go to Madras at present. Everywhere there is chaos. We have to make our way through it. I have been feeling that to ensure regular progress in our work, all of us must stay in one place for some time. I don’t know when that will be possible.

Now, about Goa. I cannot understand how you can go to Belgaum, for I feel that if you go you will have to stay there for a long time. If you do not stay on, the work will suffer. I therefore feel that it might be better if you would be content with whatever you can do from Wardha.

I understand about Konkani. I am confident that you will be able to attend to such activities from Wardha.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10974

174. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,
September 4, 1946

Gandhiji said that they had a right to hope that their country would soon become a country where there was no sorrow and sighing. That country, however, of the poet’s imagination, Gandhiji reminded them, was in their hearts and they all knew the conditions necessary for bringing about that peace and happiness. If everyone made room in his heart for God, there could be no sorrow and no sighing. But today, alas! the people were filled with fear and anger. Brother quarrelled with brother and returned anger for anger and blow for blow. What could their Ministers do? Were they expected to send military and police to protect them? The whole atmosphere was rotten. Offices and staff had been multiplied a hundredfold. No wonder bribery and corruption were rampant.

On Tuesday, Gandhiji said, he had spoken to them of the duty of proper attention to hygiene and sanitation. It was an essential factor for health and the duty of every citizen. But inward cleanliness was even more necessary and much more difficult. Nevertheless, if they did not purify themselves they would make Government impossible for their Ministers and displace the very men whom they had put in power.

Gandhiji again referred to the evil of untouchability. It pained him to hear and read of the persecution of Harijans in villages. If there was an epidemic they were beaten. They could not draw water from wells. They lived in hovels. This state of affairs, Gandhiji said, may not exist in the country of our dreams. All human beings are one in the sight of God and they must look upon Harijans as no less members of the great human family than they themselves were.

Gandhiji then said a word to the Bhangis whose first servant he said he was. It pained him to hear of the bribery and corruption among them. He did not want their so-called leaders to oppress them. He did not want Bhangis to look upon themselves as beggars at anyone’s door. They must demand justice and fight for it but with clean hands. And now with their own Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru and others as Ministers they need have no fear that justice would not be meted out to them.

_The Hindustan Times, 5-9-1946_

---

175. TELEGRAM TO J. P. BHANSALI

Express

NEW DELHI,

September 5, 1946

BHANSALIBHAI
ASHRAM SEVAGRAM
WARDHA

YOU MAY GO TO RAJNANDGAON IF YOU CAN SPARE YOURSELF.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
176. LETTER TO MANILAL B. DESAI

NEW DELHI,
September 5, 1946

CHI. MANILAL,

I have your letter. It is quite frank. May your twelve-year vow be a complete success. Never mind that you forgot to mention it to me beforehand or to obtain my prior permission. The work there will proceed but slowly. There are three Harijan settlements in Uruli Kanchan. In which of these three do you conduct the prayers? I think it is not proper for us to go for prayers where we are not wanted by the people. We cannot impose our dharma on others. Hence, if you have gone there after consulting the Harijans of the settlement you don’t have to quit now. However, I would not consider it wrong to go to each Harijan settlement by turns. All of you should consult each other and then do what you think right.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI MANIBHAI
URULI KANCHAN

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

177. LETTER TO MOHANLAL M. SHAH

NEW DELHI,
September 5, 1946

BHAI MOHANLAL,

I have your letter. By all means take the Preston land if you can. Sir Chunilal can certainly put up a building on the site if he wants. The final ownership should be the Trust’s. It should also be used in a manner that the Trust can afford. The plot is so large that Sir Chunilal can have a piece of it for himself. Only Dr. Dinshaw Mehta can say where such a piece can be carved out. He knows every nook of the land. I have been there only once.
I am writing to Kumarappa and suggesting to him that he should pay a visit. I am not writing separately to Bachhraj.

Blessings from

BAPU

SJT. MOHANLAL, GADHADAWALA

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

178. LETTER TO PURUSHOTTAM BHATT AND GANGA BHATT

NEW DELHI,
September 5, 1946

CHI. PURUSHOTTAM AND GANGA,

I have your letter. It is a pleasure to read the letters from you both. Mix with everyone as much as you can. You must do nothing beyond your capacity. Why don’t you ask Rama also to write? What does she do?

You must not force yourself to take any food that you cannot digest or that does not agree with you. This rule should be strictly followed. And you should regard as medicine whatever food you take; you should never eat anything only to indulge the palate.

Blessings from

BAPU

SMT. GANGABEHN BHATT

URULI KANCHAN

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

179. LETTER TO DR. ATMARAM K. BHAGAWAT

NEW DELHI,
September 5, 1946

BHAI BHAGAWAT,

I have your letter. It is lucid, though it leaves me with something to say. But you are right. We shall be able to decide something only when we meet.

I hold that soap is not necessary for cleanliness. I gave up the use of soap many years ago. I only use it to wash my hands after a visit to the toilet, which means that one cake lasts me a year. As compared to soap, I consider the use of soap-nut more beneficial. However, letting dirt collect in the hair or the eyes or the teeth or the ears, I regard as a crime. I have noticed that we are very careless in observing the laws of hygiene. The rest when we meet.

DR. BHAGAWAT

URULI KANCHAN

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

180. HARIJANS AND WELLS

Shri Hardev Sahay writes:

Last evening (4-9-'46) in your address to the prayer gathering, you drew the attention of the public to the disability attached to Harijans in the matter of drawing water public wells. After 25 years of incessant effort on their behalf, we have not yet succeeded in removing this disability. No one knows of their sufferings more than you.

It is my humble opinion that now that Congress Government are in power, they should forthwith proclaim their policy towards the Harijans and remove all such of their disabilities as they can by law. In this connection I should like to draw your attention to conditions in the Punjab. Leave aside the question of drawing water from wells, Harijans are not even permitted to obtain land for sinking a well for themselves. I would beg of you to appeal to the Punjab Government to provide wells for Harijans at State expense, wherever there are no facilities of drawing water or at least provide them with land for sinking wells for themselves. There are ever so many villages in the Punjab where, even if the Harijans are willing to spend their own money, they are not given the requisite land.

There are a few places where the Government has started making wells for the Harijans; but they are wholly insufficient. It is surely the duty of the State to see that a proper supply of drinking water is available to all its citizens.

The writer is perfectly right in what he says. It is the duty of the Government to provide wells for the Harijans. It is not enough only to give the land; the Government should be responsible for sinking the wells.

NEW DELHI, September 6, 1946

Harijan, 15-9-1946

1 The Hindi original of this was published in Harijan Sevak, 15-9-1946
181. QUESTION BOX

NATURE CURE A PANACEA

Q. It has been said that nature cure can be applied to every disease. If so, can it cure short or long-sightedness, cataract and other eye diseases? Can one avoid spectacles? Can hernia, tonsils etc., which need the surgeon’s knife be cured by nature cure?

A. I know that the claim attributed to nature cure has been made by its exponents. I do not count myself among them. This much, however, can be safely claimed. Disease springs from a wilful or ignorant breach of the laws of nature. It follows, therefore, that timely return to those laws should mean restoration. A person who has tried nature beyond endurance, must either suffer the punishment inflicted by nature or, in order to avoid it, seek the assistance of the physician or the surgeon as the case may be. Every submission to merited punishment strengthens the mind of man, every avoidance saps it.

FORCED MARRIAGE

A sister writes:

What is an unwilling girl to do when her parents insist either upon her marriage or leaving the parental home? Where is she to go if she has not been educated enough to earn her own living? Whose protection is she to seek?

A. The question makes sad reading. It is wholly wrong of parents to force marriage on their daughters. It is also wrong to keep their daughters unfit for earning their living. No parent has a right to turn a daughter out on the streets for refusal to marry. Let us hope that such cruel specimens are rare. To the girl concerned, my advice would be not to look on any labour with her hands, down to scavenging, as beneath her dignity. Women may not look for protection to men. They must rely on their own strength and purity of character and on God as did Draupadi of old.

NEW DELHI, September 6, 1946

Harijan, 15-9-1946
182. CHARKHA JAYANTI AND HINDUSTANI

Shri Giriraj informs me that some examinees resent the holding of the Hindustani examination of the Gujarati Vidyapith on 22nd because that date falls on Charkha Jayanti, i.e., Bhadarva Vad 12. According to me, those who sit for the Rashtrabhasha examination are doing pure work. Khadi is the highest symbol of ahimsa. The same is true of all the other constructive activities of the nation. Khadi is the nucleus of all the activities. I therefore hope that on that day the number of examinees will go up and not go down. Bhadarva Vad 12 should never be a holiday. It is certainly not a day of enjoyment. On that day we should become more alive to the cause of service. And to sit for Hindustani examination is as much a matter of glory as it is a work of service.

NEW DELHI, September 6, 1946
[From Gujarati]
Harijanbandhu, 15-9-1946

183. CONGRESS MINISTRIES AND AHIMSA

Shri Shankrrao Deo writes: 2

People find it strange that men who once called themselves satyagrahis should, on becoming Ministers, resort to the use of the army and the police. They feel it is a violation of ahimsa, whether accepted as a creed or as a policy. It would seem they are right. This contradiction between the belief and the practice of Congress Ministers confuses our workers and they find it difficult to face the critics, inside the Congress and those outside the Congress who want to make capital out of it.

By and large the ahimsa of the Congress has been the ahimsa of the weak. This was the only thing possible under the prevailing conditions in India. . . . I admit that there can be no objection to people who accept ahimsa only as a policy accepting positions of power. Thus many Congressmen have accepted positions in the Government and you have permitted them to do so. . . . But having won power through ahimsa, how should we practise ahimsa in such a way government becomes redundant? If you do not suggest a way satyagraha

1 A translation of this was also published in Harijan, 15-9-1946.
2 Only extracts from the letter are translated here.
will be deemed to be an insufficient means for the end we seek.

I think the answer is easy. For some time now I have been saying that the words “truth and non-violence” should be removed from the Congress constitution. If we proceed on the assumption that whether these words are removed from the Congress constitution or not, we certainly have become removed from truth and ahimsa, we shall be able to judge independently whether a certain action is right or wrong.

I am convinced that so long as the army or the police continues to be used for conducting the administration we shall remain subservient to the British or some other foreign power, irrespective of whether the power is in the hands of the Congress or others. Let us suppose that Congress ministries do not have faith in ahimsa. Let us suppose further that Hindus, Muslims and others seek protection from the army or the police. In that case they will continue to get such protection. Then these Congress Ministers who are votaries of ahimsa and do not like to seek help the army or the police may resign. This means that so long as people have not learnt to settle their quarrels themselves, goondaism will continue and we shall never be able to generate the true strength of ahimsa in us.

Now the question is how to generate such strength. I answered this question [in the Harijan of] August 4 in my reply to a letter from Ahmedabad. So long as we do not develop the strength to die bravely, with love in our hearts, we cannot develop in us the non-violence of the brave.

Would there be State power in an ideal society or would such a society be Stateless? I think the question is futile. If we continue to work towards the building of such a society, to some extent it is bound to be realized and to that extent people will benefit by it. Euclid has defined a straight line as having no breadth, but no one has yet succeeded in drawing such a line and no one ever will. Still we can progress in geometry only by postulating such a line. This is true of every ideal.

We might remember though that a Stateless society does not exist anywhere in the world. If such a society is possible it can be established first only in India. For attempts have been made in India towards bringing about such a society. We have not so far shown that supreme heroism. The only way is for those who believe in it to set the example.

\[1\] Vide “Congress Ministries and Ahimsa”, 6-9-1946.

NEW DELHI, September 6, 1946
[From Hindi]
Harijan Sevak, 15-9-1946

184. LETTER TO INDIAN WOMEN’S ASSOCIATION,
LAURENCO MARQUIS

NEW DELHI,
September 6, 1946

DEAR SISTER,

I have your letter and the demand draft for Rs. 3,425. Thanks for the same. I think you did not write the letter yourself, nor have you signed it. It should not be so.

I would like it even if you wrote an [indifferent] handsome day it would improve. I am utilizing your gift for khadi work, because you have left the decision to me. This is one of the many welfare activities carried on by me which badly needs funds.

HINDI MAHILA MANDAL
POST BOX 393
LAURENCO MARQUIS

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

185. LETTER TO GIRIRAJ KISHORE

NEW DELHI,
September 6, 1946

CHI. GIRIRAJ,

I have your letter. You are right about the examination. I am writing in Harijanbandhu.¹

You are in somewhat of a dilemma over the dictionary. If there is need for another dictionary, it will also be prepared. Our misfortune is that the English-knowing people are unable to render even common English words into Hindustani.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 8776

186. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,

September 6, 1946

Mahatma Gandhi criticized the public for sending hundreds of telegrams daily to the Viceroy and Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru. He considered them a foolish waste of public money and at the same time waste of the Viceroy’s and Pandit Nehru’s precious time. Time was when the Viceroy was all-powerful and could do everything. But now he had of his own free will relegated his powers to the Cabinet of which, like the King of England, he was constitutional head. The King of England could not do anything without the consent of his Ministers. The people of England even beheaded one monarch because he went against their will. Gandhiji hoped that the people’s Ministers here would never do anything of the kind because they had in their possession the matchless weapon of satyagraha, should occasion ever arise for its use. In any case, the people who sent these wires should realize that apart from burdening the recipients and the telegraph offices they were also wasting the people’s money. The well-to-do imagined that it was their money, but it really belonged to the starving masses whom they exploited.

Gandhiji then turned with a heavy heart to the continued strife in Bombay. He did not know who killed whom. But it was tragic that some people even rejoiced that Hindus were enough to kill in return those who tried to kill them. Such revenge was folly. He would far rather that Hindus died without retaliation, for that was the only way to quench the fire of hatred. He did not want the people to ask the Government anywhere for military and police protection. They must generate their own strength and not rely on anyone else. Even if they demanded this help the Ministers should refuse it. The Ministers and leaders should be willing to go into the fray themselves and lay down their lives for the sake of Hindu and Muslim honour. As for military, they should be harnessed to all kinds of constructive work at which they were adepts. Let them grow more food for the starving millions and all kinds of other work that was waiting to be done.8

1 The report in The Hindustan Times has been collated with Pyarelal’s report in his “Weekly Letter” appearing in Harijan.

Some members of the Delhi Municipality and businessmen had come and complained, said Gandhiji, that in Delhi it was the Chief Commissioner’s and Deputy Commissioner’s raj. He had told them in reply that the remedy lay in their own hands. They should go to the Municipality for service only, with no personal end to serve. He was afraid they would not be able to stand that test. They had many sins of omission and commission to answer for. As elected representatives in the Municipality, they were responsible for the Harijan hovels and the dirt and squalor of Delhi. Businessmen and contractors exploited the poor. If communal strife occurs in Delhi, it is the citizens who are responsible. The day for the Commissioner’s raj is over. It must now be the people’s raj, but the people must be alive to their responsibilities.

Gandhiji brought his discourse to an end by expressing sorrow at the Qaid-e-Azam’s recent utterances. He was the leader of a powerful organization and it behoved him to weigh every word he spoke. If he did, it would redound to his credit; it would be for the good of Islam, for the benefit of Hinduism, too, and for the welfare of India as a whole. But, said Gandhiji, each one was responsible for his own correct action and correct action on the part of everyone would make the Qaid-e-Azam act a right too.

_The Hindustan Times_, 7-9-1946, and _Harijan_, 15-9-1946

187. PROHIBITION

The following extracts from Rev. E. Gordon’s writing provoke thoughts on total prohibition:

With famine facing the country, we cannot very well quarrel with sincere efforts for combating the menace, but why prohibition of food-stuffs such as pastries, ice cream, etc., which have real good value, and why talk of prohibition or severe reduction of supply of sugar to aerated water and other mineral water manufactures and yet keep absolutely silent about the prohibition or severe reduction of cereals and sugar to the distilleries and breweries? Is the drinking of alcoholic liquors any less of a luxury than the eating of pies, pastries and cakes? Can even the most astute and ardent lovers of alcoholic beverages argue that these drinks are so essential to life that no reduction can be made in the amount of cereals and sugar required to make whisky, beer, etc.?

Granted that there is a certain amount of food value in beer, is it equal in value to the barley that could be used in making bread or cakes?

The President of the United States has ordered a drastic cut in the quota of wheat

---

1 What follows is from the _Harijan_ report.
to be issued to distilleries in the U.S.A. How can we from India plead with America to send us large quantities of grain to save millions from death by starvation, when no published statements assure us that grains, whether imported or grown in this country, will be used for intoxicating drinks?

We give our whole-hearted approval to the Congress Ministry of Madras in their desire to introduce prohibition as soon as possible. Not withstanding all that anti-prohibitionists say about the failure of prohibition in the United States, if they would honestly look at the other side of the picture, they would find that the drinking is far worse now than it was than and the amount of spirituous liquors is increasing year by year. Other things being equal, we sincerely believe that under prohibition, honestly tried courageously and indefatigably enforced, India will forge ahead much quicker and more rapidly than she could without prohibition. She will prove to the world the extent to which liquor has dragged and is dragging down the nations of the world.

The Reverend gentleman is right. India has the capacity and the opportunity to lead the world in the matter of prohibition. Can she forgo the revenue derived from this degrading traffic? She must, if she is to live. I have a hideous tale from South Africa, related to me by satyagrahi Cachalia Junior, a worthy son of the deceased father who was a hero of the first Satyagraha campaign in that country. He tells me that a thoughtless agitation has brought to the Indian community the freedom to drink, with the result that it is sapping their moral strength. I know what this deadly freedom means. On this issue there is no difference of opinion between Hindus, Mussalmans and, shall I say, others in India save the liquor interest.

I have no doubt that the loss of revenue which drains the moral and material means of the poor drinkers will be more than balanced by the gain accruing to them from prohibition. Moreover, the military burden, in defence of which the argument for the maintenance of the excise revenue has so far been used, cannot hold water in the New India, where that burden will not longer exist. The excise revenue must, therefore, be sacrificed without delay and without hesitation. No thought of the loss of this revenue, should interfere with the progress of this much-needed reform. Whether the happy conjunction between the Congress and the League takes place or not, the Congress Provinces should dare to do the right.

The positive side of prohibition must run side by side with the negative. The positive consists in providing the drinker with counter-attractions giving him health and innocent amusement.

NEW DELHI, September 7, 1946
Harijan, 15-9-1946

188. HARIJAN WORK IN KISTNA DISTRICT

Shri G. Ramachandra Rao writes a letter giving an account of his Harijan work. The following is a precis of it:

We have taken up the problem of the use of public wells by Harijans. Section 126A of the Madras Local Boards Act of 1920 provides for the use, by persons of whatever caste or creed, of wells, tanks, reservoirs, water-ways, etc., maintained by a Panchayat. It even imposes a fine of Rs. 100 on anyone who obstructs its operation. But the law is honoured in the breach where the Harijans are concerned. It is pathetic to see the latter often waiting in long queues for hours at a time in front of a public well for some generous non-Harijan to fill their pots with water. We chose Kankipadu village where a public well is maintained by the local Panchayat and explained to the leaders, not only the implications of the law but also their moral obligations. The response, after about three weeks of propaganda, being heartening, we called a public meeting where, owing to overwhelming support for the proposition, it was announced that in future Harijans would be allowed to use the well in question without molestation.

The next morning, however, the Harijans themselves were found to be too timid to take advantage of the decision. It was a sad commentary on their mentality and we had to work hard to bring them to the well. As soon as they began drawing water, a reaction set in among the caste Hindus, the vast majority of whom, even at personal inconvenience, refrained from coming to the well. A few, however, remained staunch to their resolve and gradually the opposition was worn down. I had also to appeal to the Deputy Inspector of Local Board to explain to the people the implications of section 126A.

This experience has encouraged us to take up similar work in other villages too, where Harijans have no facilities for obtaining water. I am of opinion that for the removal of such disabilities, moral persuasion and legal provision should go hand in hand. Absence of one renders the other inefficient. The existing Government acts dealing with social disabilities are vague and weak. This defect must be remedied and the Government of Madras, who have set aside one crore of rupees for Harijan work, might well utilize a certain sum for publicity of the provisions of the relevant laws already on the statute-book. Execution of the law is as important as its passing.

Professor Rao deserves hearty congratulations for his assiduous work on behalf of the oppressed Harijans. His effort ought to be supported by the public.

NEW DELHI, September 7, 1946

Harijan, 15-9-1946

189. ABOUT HINDUSTANI

A gentleman from Bihar writes:

The great and commendable work that is going on under your leadership for Hindustani-Prachar is of immense help for the country’s progress and freedom. A nation that has no language of its own has hardly any right to exist. And that is our misfortune today. Yet our leaders are not fully aware of the problem. In spite of your efforts, Congress workers are not whole-hearted in this regard. You will also be aware that at Congress Committee meetings as also in our legislatures, most people, including even whose mother tongue is either Hindi or Urdu, prefer to speak in English. Is it not possible to make it obligatory for Congressmen to speak, whether at meetings or in legislatures, in Hindustani, as it is obligatory for them to wear khadi? Some concession can be allowed in regard to those who cannot at all speak Hindustani, but a time-limit should be set for them also to learn Hindustani. My experience is that responsible Congressmen who know Hindustani prefer to speak in English. This must be stopped. Unless this is done no transformation is possible in the country. The Congress is assuming the responsibility of office. Here too Congressmen should carry on their work in Hindustani.

The correspondent is quite right. The lure of English has not left us. And until it goes, our own languages will remain impoverished. Would that the people’s Government everywhere would do their work either in the national or provincial languages! But to attain this, they must have people representing all languages in their offices and the public should be encouraged to address the Government in the provincial or the national language. We shall not only be saved much expense by adopting our own languages but it will also make things much easier for the general public.

1 A translation of this was also published in Harijan, 15-9-1946, under the title “Regarding Hindustani”.

NEW DELHI, September 7, 1946

[From Hindi]

_Harijan Sevak_, 15-9-1946

190. LETTER TO CHANDRAKANT MEHTA

NEW DELHI,

September 7, 1946

BHAI CHANDRAKANT,

I have your letter addressed to Bapa dated July 24, 1946. The number of English words you use betrays your imperfect and inadequate knowledge of Gujarati. I wonder how, being what you are, you can marry a Harijan girl and be happy or make her happy. Moreover, I should like to know what it is that you call revolutionary in such acts of service. Strange that a revolutionary though I am I fail to understand what you want to say.

I certainly have a Harijan girl in view but I cannot afford to let her marry just anybody. I can only give such an alliance a religious character and hence indulgence can have no place in it. My advice therefore is that you should come and see me when I settle down at Sevagram.

SJT. CHANDRAKANT MEHTA

MORVI HOSTEL

[BANARAS] HINDU UNIVERSITY

BANARAS

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

191. LETTER TO GOKULBHAI BHATT

NEW DELHI,

September 7, 1946

BHAI GOKULBHAI,

You are too simple. God has not yet opened fully through my instrumentality the portal of swaraj for India. We are yet to enter it. I take it that you are not regretting that you gave up cereals. Anyone who can take milk and milk products does not need what are known as cereals. If we can eat fruit, sweet and sour, and various kinds of leafy vegetables, roots and tubers, then there will be no need for cereals. This is my experience through many years. Now that you have resumed taking cereals I must warn you to guard against diseases caused by grain. So far as we are concerned, nothing needs to be celebrated. Following dharma is imperative for all of us.

Blessings from
BAPU

GOKULBHAI BHATT
SIROHI, RAJPUTANA

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

192. LETTER TO KISANLAL C. TEJPAL

NEW DELHI,
September 7, 1946

BHAII KISANLAL,

I have your letter. I agree with what you say. What is there is to celebrate so long as we have not achieved complete independence? At the most we can say that we have got a glimpse of independence. But it would be a sign of stupidity to rest content with that. At present Hindus and Muslims in the towns are fighting each other. At such a time overseas Indians will have helped in bringing independence nearer if they effectively display unity. Since you live in Egypt you can contribute much in this regard.

Blessings from
M. K. GANDHI

SHRI KISANLAL CHHOTALAL TEJPAL
C/O N. CHHOTA LAL & BROTHERS
SAQQUARA EL GIZA
CAIRO

VOL.92 : 9 AUGUST, 1946 - 6 NOVEMBER, 1946 137
193. LETTER TO GIRIRAJ KISHORE

NEW DELHI,

September 7, 1946

CHI. GIRIRAJ,

I was distressed to see your letter. Yesterday I heard the purport of your letter. This morning I went through Krishnamurti’s article. I could not follow it fully so I asked to see your letter. What a messy handwriting! It is unbecoming for you to write such a hand. You are a teacher, your handwriting should be a model, as should be all your work.

Krishnamurti’s article is good, but it is unnecessary to publish it. The English handwriting is also not good, and the letters are too small.

Do everything neatly.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 8777

194. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,

September 7, 1946

The speeches being made by the Qaid-e-Azam and his followers cause me much pain. They say that they will take what they want by force. It is true that the reins of the Government are now in the hands of the Congress, but this only adds to their responsibilities and duties. During the struggle for freedom Congressmen were arrested, beaten and persecuted. They were even killed. These are now things of the past. Had the Congress taken to the path of violence it would have come to a bad end. In true suffering there is no room for revenge. Then alone can success be assured. The 40 crores of Indian people, that is to say the teeming millions in the villages, do not think of violence. They are slaves. Violence is lodged only in the hearts of a handful of men in the cities.
I am a villager. I belong with the villagers. The Congress has accepted power for the sake of these downtrodden villages. I had taken up the cause of Hindu-Muslim unity long before I joined the Congress. I had a number of Muslim friends when I was at school. I went to South Africa to plead the case of some Muslim friends of my brother. I had gone there to gain my livelihood, but soon after my arrival there I gave the first place to service. As a coolie-barrister I served my friends of the labouring class. I had gone as an employee of a Muslim firm and I served the Hindus through them. My memory of those days is a happy one. It is a matter of deep regret that even in South Africa communal differences have arisen. Nevertheless they are unitedly fighting for the rights of Indians. I still remember those hefty Muslims, and especially Seth Cachalia, who participated in the satyagraha and who said they would rather die than live as slaves. When the Qaid-e-Azam and his followers describe Hindus as their enemies I am surprised and pained. I am not a Muslim but I venture to say that Islam does not preach enmity towards anyone. I think I am as much a Christian, a Sikh and a Jain as I am a Hindu. Religion does not teach one to kill brother however different his belief. No one can treat another as his enemy until the latter has become his own enemy. Muslim League leaders were not right when they said that they would compel the Congress, the Hindus and the British to accede to their demand.

I am reminded of an incident during the Khilafat days. I was speaking at a meeting of Hindus. I said to them: “If you want to protect the cow then protect Khilafat. If required even lay down your lives for it.” When I said this it brought tears of joy to the eyes of the Ali Brothers. But what a tragic change we see today. I wish the day may again come when Hindus and Muslims will do nothing without mutual consultation. I am day and night tormented by the question what I can do to hasten the coming of that day. I appeal to the League not to regard any Indian as its enemy. I appeal to the English not to nurse the thought that they can divide Hindus and Muslims. If they do they will be betraying India and betraying themselves. Hindus and Muslims are both born of the same soil. They have the same blood, eat the same food, drink the same water and speak the same language. The Qaid-e-Azam says that all the Muslims will be safe in Pakistan. In Punjab, Sind and Bengal we have Muslim League Governments. Can one say that what is happening in those provinces augurs well for the peace of the country? Does the Muslim League believe that it can sustain Islam by the sword? If it does it is committing a great error. The very meaning of the word ‘Islam’ is peace and I am certain that no religion worth the name can be kept alive except through peace.

[From Hindi]
_Hindustan, 8-9-1946_

195. TELEGRAM TO MANAGER, SEVAGRAM ASHRAM

NEW DELHI,
September 8, 1946

MANAGER
ASHRAM
SEVAGRAM, WARDHA
TELL SANKARAN TO COME.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

196. LETTER TO JIVANJI D. DESAI

NEW DELHI,
September 8, 1946

BHAI JIVANJI,

From the difficulty you mention it would appear that only as much English matter can go in as we can send from here. The same, we may take it, applies to the Hindustani. Only what we send from here will be published, and that just as it is. I take it that you have the necessary resources and facilities for having the Devanagari transcribed into Persian. But if you cannot do even this much you must tell me and we shall have the Urdu also sent from here. That of course would be too much. All our people should know both the scripts. That includes the compositors.

I understand what you say about Hunner. But I am thinking of sending all the Hindustani matter from here. Would you still want to engage him? I have sent to you the long letter he wrote to me. If you return it to me I shall send Hunner the necessary reply.

You will have started giving four columns of the English-Hindustani. I don’t think it is necessary to give it in Harijan Sevak. We proceed on the assumption that those who read Harijan Sevak do not know English. Since these will be four columns now it will make one whole leaf. It should go to the readers of Harijan free of cost. Those who ask for it separately should be charged 2 pice in cash.

If the prayer book is printed here on behalf of Navajivan and if it is printed quickly, what objection can we have? There is a great demand for it here. My feeling is that it cannot be printed in Ahmedabad as quickly as it can here.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 9969. Also C. W. 6943. Courtesy: Jivanji D. Desai

197. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,
[September 8, 1946]

Though she could never swim in plenty, India could grow enough food for her requirement, chances of wastage being eliminated, said Mahatma Gandhi in his after-prayer speech on Sunday evening. Talking of cloth shortage, he said that if only the country took to the khadi scheme, no Indian need be in want.

Gandhiji said that their President Jawaharlalji had also referred to these two primary needs in his broadcast on Saturday evening. He had appealed to those countries abroad who could spare food also to send it to India. Gandhiji had no objection to anyone who could spare anything and felt like sending out foodstuffs. But he was quite certain that India could not live if she was going to depend on outside aid for her food. He had maintained from the beginning that India could grow enough food for her requirement.

An English sister who was like a relation of his, was with him just now on her way to China. She was a woman who had chosen to make her home among the poor in London and when he went there for the (second) R. T. C. she had invited him to stay with her which he gladly did and looked upon Kingsley Hall as a palace. She had told him how strictly rationed they were for everything in England, how rationing included everyone from the King and Prime Minister downwards and how proud everyone was to share the burden. These people were disciplined and war had taught them to suffer willingly. If one goes further into the war-devastated countries of Europe, the suffering was much worse and would be still greater with the approaching winter.

Today the whole world was starving, and why should India look for relief from outside. Gandhiji maintained that if everyone put his shoulder to the wheel all would be well with them. No one must eat a morsel more than he required and everyone who had any little piece of land should at once grow vegetables or cereals on it. In the U. P. he had been told that 75,000 bighas of uncultivated land was waiting to be ploughed. All this meant that they could produce much more food if they directed their energies to it.

Gandhiji said it hurt him to hear it said that Travancore had food only for 15 days more. This was a land of plenty and yet the poor lived in perpetual want because of exploitation by a foreign power and the city folk. Gandhiji explained that when he said that enough food could be grown he did not mean that they could afford to waste anything. They would never be swimming in an ocean of milk. That was possible only for God. But for the absolute lack of any milk or ghee or even oil for the poor the city folk must hang their heads in shame.

Gandhiji next turned to India’s nakedness. The answer to this was, in his opinion, quite simple. People talked glibly of starting more textile mills. But they needed none of these. The mills existed today in their villages in the shape of hands, spindles, wheels and looms. The art was an old one and was alive. He knew, as President of the Spinners’ Association what wonders could be worked if only everyone would take to the wheel. It was a crying shame that we who had plenty of cotton to export should have to depend upon mills. He appealed to each one to spin and send the yarn to him. He would have it woven and given to the poor or sold to the giver of enough yarn. It was up to the public to be true to themselves and help to the utmost to solve the problem. The solution lay in their own hands, not in those of the few members of the Cabinet.

The Hindustan Times, 9-9-1946

198. WHAT TO DO?

A friend sends the following questions:

Q. 1. You have all along held and expressed the view that persons should observe strict non-violence even when attacked by hooligans or others. Does this hold good when women are attacked or outraged? If people are unable to follow your lead regarding non-violence would you advise them to die as cowards or resist aggression with violence?

Q. 2. Should you not unequivocally condemn the dual role that the Muslim League is playing today? While, on the one hand, its leaders are openly preaching violence and jehad against Hindus, the same men continue, on the other hand, to hold office as Ministers having a controlling hand on all the threads of administration, including police and justice.

Q. 3. Is there no constituted authority in India which can put a stop to this grave anomaly which is unprecedented in history?

Q. 4. Do you realize that if the present happenings are allowed to continue, civil war will become inevitable? How would you advise your countrymen to face such a catastrophe, if it comes?

A. 1. In a society of my imagination, outrage posited by the questioner cannot take place. But in the society in the midst of which we are living, such outrages do take place. My answer is unequivocal. A non-violent man or woman will and should die without retaliation, anger or malice, in self-defence or in defending the honour of his womenfolk. This is the highest form of bravery.

If an individual or a group of people are unable or unwilling to follow this great law of life, which is miscalled my lead, retaliation or resistance unto death is the second best, though a long way off from the first. Cowardice is impotence worse than violence. The coward desires revenge but being afraid to die, he looks to others may be the Government of the day, to do the work of defence for him. A coward is less than man. He does not deserve to be a member of a society of men and women. Lastly, let me add that if women had followed or would now follow my advice, every woman would protect herself without caring or waiting for aid from her brother or sister.

A. 2. Of course, the dual role adverted to is unequivocally bad. It is a sad chapter in our national life. My condemnation is of universal application. Fortunately it is so bad that it cannot last long.

A. 3. The only constituted authority is the British. We are all puppets in their hands. But it would be wrong and foolish to blame that authority. It acts according to its nature. That authority does not compel us to be puppets. We voluntarily run into their camp. It is, therefore, open to any and every one of us to refuse to play the British game.

Let us also admit frankly that the British authority is struggling to quit India. It does not know how. It honestly wants to leave India but wants before leaving to undo the wrong it has been doing for so long. Being in the position of ‘the toad under the harrow’, I must know where it hurts. I have been telling the authority, if it will undo the wrong quickly, to leave India to her fate. But those who compose the British service cannot realize this obvious fact. They flatter themselves with the belief that they know India better than we do ourselves. Having successfully kept us under subjection for over a century, they claim the right to constitute themselves judges of our destiny. We may not grumble, if we are to come into our own through the way of peace. Satyagraha is never vindictive. It believes not in destruction but in conversion. Its failures are due to the weaknesses of the satyagrahi, not to any defect in the law itself. The British authority having decided to quit, (whatever the reason), will show growing defects and weaknesses. Parties will find that it is more and more a broken reed. And, when parties quarrel as Hindus and Muslims do let one or the other or both realize that, if India is to be an independent nation, one or both must deliberately cease to look to British authority for protection.

A. 4. This brings me to the last question. We are not yet in the midst or civil war. But we are nearing it. At present we are playing at it. War is a respectable term for goondaism practised on a mass or national scale. If the British are wise, they will keep clear of it.
Appearances are to the contrary. Even the English members in the Provincial Assemblies refuse to see that they were given seats by the Act of 1935, not because it was right but in order that they might protect British interest and keep Hindus and Muslims apart. But they do not see this. It is a small matter. Nevertheless it is a straw showing the way the wind is blowing. Lovers and makers of swaraj must not be dismayed by these omens. My advice is satyagraha first and satyagraha last. There is no other or better road to freedom. Whoever wants to drink the ozone of freedom must steel himself against seeking military or police aid. He or they must ever rely upon their own strong arms or, what is infinitely better, their strong mind and will which are independent of arms, their own or other.

NEW DELHI, September 9, 1946

Harijan, 15-9-1946
199. TELEGRAM TO CHIMANLAL N. SHAH

NEW DELHI,
September 9, 1946

CHIMANLALBHAI
SEVAGRAM, WARDHA

REGRET NOT RETURNING BEFORE TWENTYFIFTH. INFORM ALL.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

200. LETTER TO SIBNATH BANNERJI

NEW DELHI,
September 9, 1946

DEAR SIBNATH (BANNERJI).

I am silent. I dislike this craze for the West. What this army of men and women will bring, I shall watch. Only do not seek my blessings for what I dislike. My opinion you know.

Yours sincerely,

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

201. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

September 9, 1946

CHI. A. S.,

I have your letter. God has granted your wish, for I cannot leave here before the 24th.

If you work only as much as your health permits, both your body and mind will become as strong as steel. You will then be able to do as much work as I want you to do.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 528

1 Vice-President, E. I. Railwaymen’s Union
202. LETTER TO KUSUM DESAI

NEW DELHI,
September 9, 1946

FOOLISH KUSUM,

Manibehn gave me the news of Jadavbehn’s demise. I said I wouldn’t write anything till Kusum wrote to me. I do not wish to offer you condolences. I have looked upon you as a wise woman. Should I say now that you are ignorant? Jadavbehn led a very happy life. Both of you sisters have rendered valuable services. She had to depart, as you and I and all of us have to. You should have asked me to cheer you up and prayed that you might cultivate total dedication to service. From what you say I understand that Jadavbehn also expected the same from you... Has my wish yet been fulfilled?

It is still far off. I wish to live for 125 years, whereas you are wishing me only a hundred years. This is another instance of your stupidity. What is Pushpa’s age? Give my blessings to Manibhai.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarat: G. N. 1855

203. LETTER TO CHIMANLAL N. SHAH

NEW DELHI,
September 9, 1946

CHI. CHIMANLAL,

I have received your two letters. Perhaps Anantram will have arrived there by now. I am glad that Krishnachandra is convinced by Vinoba’s persuasion. Balvantsinha and Om Prakash came here and have now proceeded to Khurja. I would consider Hoshiari’s problem to have been solved if Gajraj goes to you. It would be excellent if Madhu’s shortcomings are overcome. You will be receiving twenty-five tents. They have been dispatched from there along with poles and

---

1 Some three lines are illegible here.
2 Addressee’s younger sister pegs. I hope all the mosquito-nets have been got ready and there is no shortage now.

Manmohan Choudhari, I hope, has recovered by now. How did he get fever? I hope Prabhu Dayal and Arjun have also recovered and Sinharaj is doing well.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10651

204. LETTER TO GAJANAN NAIK

NEW DELHI
September 9, 1946

CHI. GAJANAN,

Your letter does not show impartiality. However, if the information contained in it is correct it is startling. I must show your letter to Jhaverbhai. Or I would say that there is no substance in your complaint. About the salary I have already taken steps. I will proceed after I get reply.

Blessings from

BAPU

SJT. GAJANAN NAIK
MAGANWADI
WARDHA

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

205. LETTER TO GOKULBHAI BHATT

NEW DELHI,
September 9, 1946

BHAI GOKULBHAI,

Herewith a letter from Jagannath. Read it and return it with your comments. I am postponing any further action until I have your reply.

SJT. GOKULBHAI BHATT

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
206. LETTER TO MRS. HARILAL DESAI

NEW DELHI,
September 9, 1946

DEAR SISTER,

I have your joint letter. I have certainly tried to do tapashcharya. It can be said to have borne fruit when we get rid of what Akha Bhagat has described as the “excess growth” and when Hindus and Muslims live as one. Will the Doctor undertake this surgery?

Blessings from

M. K. GANDHI

[C/O] DR. HARILAL DESAI
AHMEDABAD

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

207. LETTER TO JAGANNATH JANI

NEW DELHI,
September 9, 1946

BHAI JAGANNATH,

I have your letter, which I have passed on to Gokulbhai. After I have his reply I shall make further inquiries if necessary.

SJT. JAGANNATH JANI
ROHIRA, SIROHI STATE

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
208. LETTER TO RAMPRASAD VYAS

NEW DELHI,
September 9, 1946

CHI. RAMPRASAD,

I have your letter giving me full and detailed information. I shall be able to reach there only after the 24th, when we shall have a long talk. I hope Kanta was able to manage during your absence.

I expect you could observe things in Bombay too. Perfect you Urdu.

Blessings from
BAPU

SJT. RAMPRASAD VYAS
SEVAGRAM

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

209. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

NEW DELHI,
September 9, 1946

CHI. SHARMA,

M[unshi] is here today. He has sent you a copy of his award. The stamped one he has sent to Gadodiaji. He has also made a deposition. If you want I can send you a copy, but it is not necessary.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Hindi]

Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsh, p. 368
210. LETTER TO VITALDAS KOTHARI

NEW DELHI,
September 9, 1946

BHAU VITALDAS,

I have your letter. I cannot regard the Hindustani translation as accurate but I see no misinterpretation in it. Since there is a question-mark I cannot see the possibility of any frightful interpretation of it. But I might understand what you want to say if you throw more light. I cannot revise what I have written regarding Kakodkar’s case. Please remember that I have not said it in regard to fasting in general. I had only Kakodkar’s fast in mind. The only untoward outcome of the fast would have been that he might have died and I would not have regarded it as a terrible consequence. I would have regarded it as wrong if the fast had been given up owing to fear hunger, or a false notion of morality.

Uncertified khadi means khadi that does not come up to the standard, but is it not khadi all the same? I for one would regard it as wrong to use mill cloth in place of such khadi. The fact is it is wrong to expect at present khadi for book-binding and so on.

SJT. VITALDAS KOTHARI
GUJARATI VIDYAPITH

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

211. LETTER TO PRABHU

NEW DELHI,
September 9, 1946

BHAU PRABHU,

Sushilabehn has given me your two cheques. The beginning has been good. The receipt, etc., will be sent by Kanu Gandhi. It will go along with this letter.

Blessings from

BAPU
Both the cheques will be utilized only for the work that was dear to Mahadev.

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 9229

212. LETTER TO ABIDALI JAFARBHAI

NEW DELHI,
September 9, 1946

Bhai Abidali,

I have your long letter. Isn’t there a Gujarati proverb saying that suspicion is a demon and ambition a witch? This applies in your case. Whatever I did only out of love. It is true that I do not have confidence in your capacity for thought or your non-violence and I have said as much in my letters to you. When you accepted my advice to give up your fast and vacate the Congress House I was very happy and realized that you were as loyal as ever.

As regards prayer I see no need to say anything. I believe you totally when you say that you pray every day and that you have faith in prayer. And this makes me happy. One who has sincere faith in prayer is saved from many sins. I have no faith and no interest in going to Western countries. I try to dissuade those wanting to go. Only today I wrote to Sibnath Bannerjee along these lines. Yesterday I spoke to Ruikar. That they may not stay back at my behest is beside the point. I gave them the advice I considered right and my duty was done. I think now I have answered all your points. I shall have to be in Delhi till the 24th. I would prefer your coming to Sevagram rather than Delhi to see me. But if there is something urgent you want to ask that you cannot put down in a letter, you may come over to Delhi. I was sorry that nothing had yet been done about arbitration.

Blessings from

BAPU

Abidali Jafarbhai
Bombay

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

213. LETTER TO CHANDRANI

NEW DELHI,
September 9, 1946

CHI. CHAND,

I have your letter. What shall I say to you? What can I do? I consider it a great crime to let one’s health deteriorate to such an extent. You are now wasting time, causing anxiety to your parents and others you hold dear. Well, what has happened has happened. Observe henceforth the rules of health and get well. I shall be here till the 24th. Sushila’s wedding is to take place at Wardha on 2nd October. After that I shall be there. Don’t worry. Cheer up.

Blessing from
BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

214. LETTER TO G. B. PANT

NEW DELHI,
September 9, 1946

BHAIJI,

I have your letter. You did well in writing to Mirabehn. I am well. There is nothing to worry about. We are all in God’s hands.

Blessing from
BAPU

GOVIND BALLABH PANT

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
215. LETTER TO RAMANAND TIRTH

NEW DELHI,
September 9, 1946

SWAMIJI,

I have your letter. I am carrying on correspondence. Now you are coming on the 15th. I shall be here. We shall have a talk.

Blessings from

BAPU

SWAMI RAMANAND TIRTH

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

216. LETTER TO SANKARAN

NEW DELHI,
September 9, 1946

CH. SANKARAN,

Both your letters came into my hands only yesterday. I shall now be here till the 24th but I think it is pointless for you to come here to see me. Stick on there and do whatever work Sushilabehn gives you.

Your chief task is to bring about a change in your diet. You should set about this. If you maintain good health under all circumstances, I shall feel that at least in your own case nature cure has been of benefit. Chimanlalbhai does not take medicines. It would be a great thing if he, too, showed some improvement. The rest when we meet.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI SANKARAN
SEVAGRAM

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
217. LETTER TO SHIVAJI

NEW DELHI,
September 9, 1946

BHAI SHIVAJI,

I have your letter. I was indeed sorry that even though Kakodkar was consuming fruit and milk he was considered to be fasting. At least you could have said that he was fasting on milk and fruit. When we utter what is untruth or very near to it it is our duty to correct ourselves even though this should cause us temporary harm. My experience is that this never causes harm. I am confessing my error through the Press and to the Goan Government.¹

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

218. MESSAGE TO PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,
September 9, 1946

I am asked when the salt tax will be removed; and why it has not been removed already. The question implies impatience. The Cabinet has only been in office for eight days. The Finance Member has not yet taken charge of his office. We must wait. The Cabinet must do everything after full deliberation. It is I who should be impatient, for it was I who initiated the fight for the abolition of this tax. I also know how the loss of revenue can be made up for. Nevertheless I think we should not be impatient. We should not hustle the Cabinet. The Cabinet is of the people and works under their mandate. We must have faith that the salt tax will go and he who has faith can afford to be patient. There are many other things that the Cabinet has to do for the people as quickly as possible. If we continue to give it our support it will surely do all that should be done for the good of the masses.

Yesterday I told you that if we would learn to make our cloth ourselves there would be no need for anyone to go naked. Many people do not know how to spin. It is therefore proposed to start classes in the Bhangi Colony from September 11 to 22 for all wanting to learn the various processes from ginning to spinning. Morning classes will be held from 7 to 11 a.m., afternoon classes from 2 p.m. to 6 p.m. Only Re. 1 per head will be charged. Those who wish to join may send their names either to Shri Kanu Gandhi or to Gandhi Ashram, Chandni Chowk, by the morning of September 11. I hope as many persons as can will take advantage of this opportunity.

[From Hindi]
_Hindustan, 10-9-1946_

219 TELEGRAM TO GOVERNMENT INFORMATION
BUREAU, GOA

NEW DELHI,
September 10, 1946

I HAVE NOW LEARNT FROM MY ORIGINAL CORRESPONDENT THAT BY THE HUNGER-STRIKE OF SHRI KAKODKAR HE MEANT EXCLUSION OF ALL FOOD EXCEPT MILK AND FRUIT. HE ADDS TOO THAT THIS PARTIAL FAST IS DISCONTINUED. I REGRET THE ERROR INTO WHICH I WAS LED.

_The Bombay Chronicle, 11-9-1946, and The Hindustan Times, 12-9-1946_

220. LETTER TO HORACE G. ALEXANDER
NEW DELHI,
September 10, 1946

MY DEAR HORACE,

Muriel read your letter and gave it to me last evening. I am glad you have frankly given me your reaction to the situation in Calcutta. I wholly endorse your first reaction. It is in every way undesirable for the Congress to rely upon British troops or even police for upholding authority and keeping law and order. It is tantamount to suicide.

I wholly dissent from the second. One can waive a right. Can

---

2 On August 16, which the Muslim League had declared “Direct Action Day”, savage riots had broken out in Calcutta; _vide_ “What Can Violence Do”, 19-8-1946.
one waive a duty? And I regard it as a duty not to sacrifice a principle, here a nationalist Muslim. Surely it should be enough in all conscience that Congress accommodates a nationalist or rather a non-League Muslim without encroaching upon the Muslim quota or any minority interest. Nor can Congress be party to the recognition of the League claim that it is the only body that can represent Muslim interests and that the Congress is a communal organization representing only caste Hindus.

Your question is quite good. Congress is more than willing so far as I know to form coalitions in provinces as also at the centre.

Your thought of running to me even for a day was quite sound. You can fly to me in a few hours from Madras, assuming of course, that you have no objection to flying.

Love.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

221. LETTER TO MANU GANDHI

NEW DELHI,
September 10, 1946

CHI. MANUDI,

I kept the enclosed letter for two days. I am sending it now. See from it the love Sushila has for you and if you can come do so before the 2nd October. I would be glad if Jaisukhlal came too. I have not invited anyone. Need I invite you?

You must have got my previous letter. I am here till the 24th.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: M.M.U./XXIV
BHAJ JAJUJI,

I am quite certain that a Provincial Government which goes about setting up new mills should formulate no schemes for khadi. No Government is obliged to start a new mill. Prakasam’s wire has arrived only today. I enclose a copy of it. I was under the impression that there would be no khadi exhibition at the Congress session. We have still not received any invitation. When the Gandhi Ashram workers consulted me, I told them that they could do so independently but they said they did not want to do anything without my consent and that it would be desirable that the Charkha Sangh itself took the initiative. I then asked them to consult you. In my opinion, we should not take the responsibility but should give whatever help they ask for. I have advised the Gandhi Ashram workers not to incur any expenditure. All the expenses should be borne by the Reception Committee. No khadi should be sent. The Khadi Vidyalaya may offer training in all the processes of khadi-making such as carding, making slivers, weaving, etc. They should sell all village industry products except khadi. They should demonstrate the techniques employed in the various village industries. For this they should seek help, though not monetary, from the A. I. V. I. A., the Talimi Sangh and the Goseva Sangh. Now you may write to them as you think best.

I hope you are keeping good health.

I forgot to send you a copy of the letter I wrote to Vichitra.¹

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ Presumably of August 30, 1946; vide “Letter to Vichitra Narayan Sharma”, 30-8-1946.
223.  LEPROSY AND CONTAMINATION

Dr. R. G. Cochrane, Principal of the Missionary Medical College for Women in Vellore, writes:

My good friend Mr. Jagadisan has brought to my attention a paragraph in the Hindu of Madras of August the 26th. It reads: ‘Bihar is going to have a separate jail for the leper prisoners, it is learnt, to save other prisoners from contamination. Arrangements are being made in the first instance, it is understood, to segregate about 100 such prisoners at Govindpur in the District of Manbhum. I was so pained by the news that I could not resist the urge to write to you, for you have been a consistent champion of those who suffer from leprosy and indeed, of all persons in society who are undeservedly stigmatized. I feel that I should write to you and say that it will be a great pity if the Bihar Government were to build a separate jail for prisoners with leprosy. It is a gratuitous measure whose only effect will be the strengthening of the public’s prejudice against leprosy. On examination, it is likely to be found that 80 per cent at least of the prisoners with leprosy are non-infective, and therefore there is absolutely no reason why these should be separated from the other prisoners. With regard to the prisoners who suffer from infective leprosy, the main precautions are that the prisoner should not come into contact with healthy persons during night and should avoid direct close contact during the day. As leprosy is a mildly contagious disease, even its infective types, a prisoner with infective leprosy could be more easily dealt with than prisoners with other infective diseases. And yet, if the report is true, the Bihar Government is going to act on the fear of ‘contamination’. The very use of this word indicates a mediaeval attitude to leprosy. It is a great pity that statements are being continually published to suggest that leprosy patients are contaminated in some way or other.

We in Madras, enthusiastically supported by Mr. Jagadisan, are doing all we can to protest against the discrimination of the patient suffering from leprosy on the grounds of social stigma. It is no more of a disgrace to get leprosy than to get measles, and not until the general public realize that it is not a rapidly spreading plague, as it is commonly believed to be, shall we make any advance in the control of leprosy. I am very grateful to hear from Mr. Jagadisan that you have now put leprosy work as an integral part of the nation’s Constructive Programme. Your remark that the leprosy patient is as much a part of society as the tallest of us moves me deeply. May I hope that India’s leave will follow your footsteps and do the right thing by the leprosy patient?

\[ \text{\textsuperscript{1}} \text{Vide “Letter to Dr. R.G. Cochrane”. 11-9-1946.} \]

It is to be hoped that the information about Bihar is not true and that, if it is, this letter of his will dissipate the fear of leprosy. “Superstitions die hard.” In this land of faith and superstitions, both flourish abundantly. Hence, they often intermingle and the contamination of superstitions—a multitude—seems to have overlaid faith, so much so that it is hard to distinguish between the two. But my faith, which burns too bright for the army of superstitions to touch it, tells me that leprosy is no contamination. We must learn the laws governing infectious and contagious diseases and obey them.

Dr. Cochrane is, I believe, a medical philanthropist. He knows a great deal about leprosy and lepers. I what that the National Governments will not be wrong in accepting his judgment that, of all the diseases of the kind, leprosy is the least among them. In its virulent form, it deprives a patient of his limbs and defies ordinary medical treatment. What nature does is yet unknown. But the ordinary man does not need to bother about this difficult matter. Enough if he realizes that a leper is as much his brother as any other, and he is on no account to be shunned.

NEW DELHI, September 11, 1946
Harijan, 22-9-1946

224. TIRED OF SATYAGRAHA?

News comes from Durban that a group of Indians has sprung up in South Africa who have lost faith in satyagraha. They cherish the dream that they can overthrow the rule of the White man there only by joining forces with the Negroes the coloured people, other Asiatics and European sympathizers and adopting violent means. The rumour, if there is any truth in it, is disturbing and a definite fly in the ointment. All, whether they believe in non-violence or not, should realize that Indians in South Africa gained world-wide esteem simply because, in spite of being a handful, they showed infinite capacity for suffering and did not, through losing their patience, resort to sabotage and violence. They learnt the wholesome lesson that true well-being springs from suffering and that victory lies in unity. From my own experience, my firm advice to Indians in South Africa is that they should, on no account, be lured away into throwing aside the matchless weapon of satyagraha.

1 The Gujarati original of this was published in Harijanbandhu, 22-9-1946.

This does not, however, imply that they are not to accept the help of the coloured people, Negroes and any other sympathizers or that they will not help them in their need, should occasion arise. The only condition is that satyagraha should be their one and only weapon. If they go astray from the path of non-violence, they will conform to the description of the poor woman who as an Indian proverb goes, went in search of a son and succeeded in losing her husband!

NEW DELHI, September 11, 1946
Harijan, 22-9-1946

225. TELEGRAM TO SECRETARY, SRI NARAYANA DHARMA PARIPALANA

NEW DELHI,
September 11, 1946

SECRETARY
WALLUVANAD SNDP
OTTAPALAM

EVERY GOOD ACT CARRIES ITS OWN BLESSINGS.

GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
226. TELEGRAM TO GANESH TRIPATHI

NEW DELHI,

September 11, 1946

GANESH TRIPATHI
SECRETARY STEEL EMPLOYEES UNION
CAWNPORE

NO INTERVENTION FOR UNAUTHORIZED FAST.¹

GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

227. TELEGRAM TO MEHR CHAND KHANNA

NEW DELHI,

September 11, 1946

MEHR CHAND KHANNA
MINISTER
PESHAWAR

MISS LESTER ARRIVING FRONTIER MAIL FRIDAY. INFORM DOCTOR KHANDSAHEB AND BADSHAH KHAN.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ Ganesh Dutt, a worker of J. K. Iron and Steel Mills, had gone on a fast from September 1 to press his demand for increased bonus. He gave up the fast on September 12 on the persuasion of Congress workers.
228. TELEGRAM TO SUSHILA NAYYAR

NEW DELHI,

September 11, 1946

DR. SUSHILABEHN
SEVAGRAM
WARDHA

NO NOTICE HERE. EVERYTHING THERE.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Dr. Sushila Nayyar

229. LETTER TO DR. R. G. COCHRANE

NEW DELHI,

September 11, 1946

DEAR DR. COCHRANE,

I have just read your letter which I am publishing in Harijan1 and a copy of which I am sending to the Bihar Minister concerned. I suggest that you should send me a well-considered medical opinion, signed by as many medical men as possible. I have been carrying on correspondence with the Sind Ministers also with whom I have not been able to make much headway. Hence my suggestion.

Yours sincerely,

MISSIONARY MEDICAL COLLEGE
VELLORE

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1Vide “Leprosy and Contamination”, 11-9-1946.
230. LETTER TO MADALASA

NEW DELHI,
September 11, 1946

CHI. MADU

If you see only the faults in yourself and only the virtues in others you will advance fast, be happy and never experience sorrow. We have no right to expect anything from anyone. We are debtors and that is why we have been born. We are not creditors. Let this sink in your heart and the whole world will appear good to you. This is not mere pious advice but the surest way of making the stream of life flow smoothly.

Many kisses to Rasagulla.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, p. 329

231. LETTER TO D. B. KALEKAR

NEW DELHI,
September 11, 1946

CHI. KAKA.

I got your letter just now. I have already sent a wire informing everybody about the date of my arrival. It would be strange if you did not receive it. I cannot reach there before the 25th.

I have not so far been able to share the dictionary work with others. All the work is being done by Rajkumari and myself. She has to give to it 6 to 7 hours every week. It would be good if you could go on sending the words you select. For the present of course we can do even if you send nothing. We are managing somehow. But the words you can send without too much trouble can certainly be useful. But you should not take this to mean that you must send them at any cost.

As for Tarachand, ask him to send only what he can. I think you won’t get any help from him about the dictionary.

Sushila had written to me about Chandan’s illness. There has been no news since.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10975

232. LETTER TO LAKSHMIDAS ASAR

NEW DELHI,
September 11, 1946

CHI. LAKSHMIDAS,

I have your letter before me. I like your suggestion, but who can have it implemented? The Ministers did meet but God knows what the outcome was. For my part, I am at the moment pursuing the Madras scheme because the Minister there tells me that he will do what I ask him to do. Let me see how things shape. I take it that you would have come for the A. I. S. A. meeting.

I hope you are in good health. Enclosed please find a letter for Lakshmi which you should read before passing it on to her. I am sending a copy of my letter to Narandas.

Blessings from
BAPU

SJT. LAKSHMIDAS ASAR
SABARMATI

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

233. LETTER TO LAKSHMI SHARMA

NEW DELHI,
September 11, 1946

CHI. LAKSHMI,

I have preserved your letter of July 14. You ask me to show you the way but I don’t think I can. Do as you think right. Go ahead

1 Addressee’s daughter-in-law, wife of Satish Kalelkar along your own way. You have the land, you have the money and still you ask for help. This is something I don’t like. I should like you not to take money from anybody and to preserve your self-respect. In my view a person who has money of his own and expects money from other places has bartered away his self-respect. I learnt this lesson when I was even younger than you are. I have conducted myself accordingly, and this is a thing that those who are regarded as my children as well as others should learn from me.

Blessings from

BAPU

SMT. LAKSHMIBEHN MARUTI
SABARMATI ASHRAM

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

234. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

NEW DELHI,
September 11, 1946

CHI. MATHURADAS,

I have your letter. What you think is correct. I shall write if I can think of something on the basis of what you say. I have the feeling that now is not the time for this kind of writing. However, if after thinking over it I feel that something can be written, I shall do so.

You yourself never say anything about your health. Dr. Jivaraj tells me that you are somewhat better. The rest you must be seeing in the papers.

Blessings from

BAPU

MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI
BOMBAY

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal. Courtesy: Pyarelal
235. LETTER TO SUSHILA GANDHI

NEW DELHI,
September 11, 1946

CHI. SUSHILA,

I had your letter and the newspaper cuttings. You will see that I have made use of them. I shall be here till the 24th. Then off to Sevagram. Arun, Ila will be well. I also have your letter of 3-9-1946. You are not to worry about what will happen to Ila.

To you all,

Blessings from

BAPU

SUSHILABEHN GANDHI
AKOLA

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

236. LETTER TO HARGOVIND GUPTA

NEW DELHI,
September 11, 1946

BHAI HARGOVIND GUPTA,

I had and still have a great regard for Ganesh Shankarji. Since Maithilisharanji is associated with the work it will be a literary accomplishment. But he true memorial to him will be if we generate in us a spirit of self-sacrifice even to the extent of laying down our lives.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI HARGOVIND GUPTA
GANESH SHANKAR HRIDAYATIRTH
CHIRGAON (JHANSI)

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
A Gujarati friend asks:

Ever so many national organizations insist that not only should their staff be dressed in khadi, but that even books should be khadi-bound. Since certified khadi can only be had from the recognized bhandars on payment of a certain quota of yarn, they naturally resort to uncertified khadi. Is this right? Is not mill cloth preferable to uncertified khadi? Is not insistence on khadi that results in buying it from uncertified shops really a false pretence?

When, among other things, there is a dearth of khadi, it is improper to insist on its use for purposes of bookbinding, etc. When there was an abundance of khadi, it was I who recommended its use for all such purposes. The entire Congress Camp in Ahmedabad in 1921 was bedecked in khadi. Today it would be madness to attempt such a thing. Time and circumstances alter methods.

But I do not understand the writer’s plea for mill cloth as opposed to uncertified khadi. What is uncertified khadi? Is it not hand-spun and hand-woven cloth though uncertified? That there may be fraud about it is another matter. The Charkha Sangh cannot guarantee cent per cent purity in even certified khadi. That nothing in this world is proof against deceit has been true throughout the ages. Drawbacks in uncertified khadi are well known. In it there is no fixity of wages to the spinners and the weavers. Those who sell it make what profits they like. Often do persons set up shops, merely to spite the Charkha Sangh Bhandars. Nevertheless, where there is no fraud, all cloth which is hand-spun and hand-woven must be called khadi. What a person spins and has woven into cloth for himself, is not certified in the legal sense and yet it is khadi in the highest and purest sense of the term. It would be a crime on that person’s part to use mill cloth instead of the cloth made from the labour of his own hands.

The upshot is that exclusion of mill cloth must be maintained. Uncertified khadi should be avoided as far as possible, but where certified khadi is not available and the choice lies between mill cloth and uncertified home-spun preference should be given to the latter,

---

1 The Gujarati original of this appeared in Harijanbandhu, 22-9-1946.
assuming of course that it is pure khadi. You may condemn, if you like, as uncertified, cloth made out of the labour of one’s own hands; but the fact remains that it is a purer production than certified khadi. And, if all span enough to have cloth woven for their requirements, what need would there then be for the Charkha Sangh? Heaven and earth would then ring with cries of victory to the Charkha Sangh.

NEW DELHI, September 12, 1946
Harijan, 22-9-1946

238. LETTER TO JIVANJI D. DESAI

NEW DELHI,
September 12, 1946

BHAJ JIVANJI,

I glanced through Harijanbandhu and Harijan Sevak today. I was a little unhappy to see that, while Harijanbandhu has sixteen columns, Harijan Sevak has only eight. I don’t understand the reason behind this. Maybe you were not able to cope with the Hindustani articles. If I go a little deeper into this, I can find out whether or not this guess is correct. But I don’t propose to do so. I will say only this: that as I have already informed you, you should print only as much Hindustani matter as I send from here and whatever translations you require for Harijanbandhu should be made from Hindustani, never from English. Though you have capable translators there to translate from English into Gujarati, I do receive complaints from time to time. Hence the best course would be that I should send from here Hindustani and Gujarati translations from English. Or I shall send Hindustani from here and Gujarati you can do there. It should be child’s play to translate from Hindustani into Gujarati. If, however, there are any complications even in this, let me know. We should receive no complaints about translation. If we follow this policy there will be no difference in size between Harijan Sevak and Harijanbandhu. Our ideal should be to have the same size for all the three. It will take us some time to reach this ideal, for many things have to be put across to foreign readers and that can be done only through English.

I have already written to you about the dictionary and, therefore,
I don’t repeat it here. It will be all right if you give four pages every fortnight. One column contains nearly forty words, which means 320 words for eight columns. I shall be satisfied with that. I shall not keep you waiting for it till the last. I hope to supply it in good time.

When I had dictated the above I looked again at Pyarelal’s suggestion and found that the Urdu and Hindi editions of Harijan Sevak are not identical word for word. I must of course admit my negligence, namely, that I don’t go through all the issues. Certainly I don’t compare them. I did so today out of curiosity and discovered this. Pyarelal tried to put up some defence for this difference but he has not so far been able to justify it. Let us see if he can. He told me, however, that the Persian script occupies more space. This I knew and, therefore, I started looking into the issues and inspected the issues of September 1. On doing so, I found that the Hindi edition had eight pages whereas Urdu had sixteen and also that Urdu had nineteen articles and Hindi had thirteen. I will be glad if you explain to me the reason for this difference. If I go further into it, I may discover something more. I shall see what I myself can do. But I do expect it of you that you will not attempt anything beyond your capacity. You will then be able to do full justice to what you do.

You did very well in sending me the two complaints regarding the dictionary. If there are any other complaints, send them too. If there are any mistakes, it won’t be difficult to rectify them. I will procure a copy of the dictionary which you have mentioned. I have told Brijkrishna about it.

Not revised.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 9970. Also C. W. 6944. Courtesy: Jivanji D. Desai
239. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

NEW DELHI,
September 12, 1946

CHI. SHARMA,

I have your letter. I am inclined to think that the cost of the stamp was borne by M[unshi]. He is a lawyer of the first rank and at present he earns maybe 15 to 20 thousand rupees a month. Be that as it may, he is of a generous nature. Perhaps Gadodiaji will remit the cost of the stamp. I have not met him. You are at liberty to feel that the award is against you. But I do not feel so. I had written to you that all that should have been in your petition was not there.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Hindi]

Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsh, pp. 368-9

240. LETTER TO MORARJI DESAI

NEW DELHI,
September 12, 1946

BHAISHRI MORARJI,

Nagadi Sheth of South Africa brings you this note. This gentleman was an active participant in the struggle that I carried on in South Africa. Please see him.

BAPU

SJT. MORARJI DESAI
MINISTER

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
241. LETTER TO K. M. PANIKAR

NEW DELHI,
September 12, 1946

BHAI PANIKAR,

I have your letter. I understand your point. That your boys and girls will learn to read, write and correctly understand Hindi and Urdu—even this will be good.

But I cannot understand why, even in Bikaner, you cannot get all the work done in Hindustani. We shall talk about it if we have occasion to meet. I appreciate English in its own place.

BAPU

DEWAN, BIKANER

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

242. LETTER TO MOHAMMED YUNUS

NEW DELHI,
September 12, 1946

BHAI SAHEB,

I got your letter. There was nothing the matter with me except for a mild cold, which too has now gone. Do not worry. Who can harm a person as long as he is protected by God or keep him when He wants to take him away?

All that you have written about Calcutta is shameful. Joint electorates are a noble solution, I agree, but how to bring it about remains to be seen.

Yours,

M. K. GANDHI

JANAB MOHAMMED YUNUS
(OF BIHAR)

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
243. LETTER TO MOTILAL ROY

NEW DELHI,
September 12, 1946

BHAI MOTI BABU,

I could not reply to you earlier owing to pressure of work. Do please forgive me. If the Prabartak Sangh would go along with the A. I. S. A. you should strictly follow the rules of the latter. That would please me very much. But so long as the Sangh’s views on khadi are at variance with mine it would be best to work separately, though in a spirit of friendship.

I appreciate the sentiments you have expressed with regard to khadi. The policy of the A. I. S. A. is inspired by the same sentiments and its experience in the field is extensive and, if one may say so, unique. I would therefore urge that you or some other representative of the Sangh should have a talk with a representative of the Bengal branch of the A. I. S. A. and do as seems proper.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI MOTILAL ROY
PRABARTAK SANGH
CHITTAGONG

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

244. LETTER TO OM PRAKASH MITTAL

NEW DELHI,
September 12, 1946

BHAI OM PRAKASH MITTAL,

Swamiji gave me your letter. It would be wrong on the part of the Chamars to refuse to remove dead animals. In my view we should all do the work. We cannot oblige anyone to do a job.

A rise in wages is always to be welcomed. But what I say is of no significance. The right decision can be arrived at only after hearing both the sides. All the committees can jointly decide on the right course.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI OM PRAKASH MITTAL
MOREGANJ
SAHARANPUR

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

245. LETTER TO RANDHIR SINGH

NEW DELHI,
September 12, 1946

KUMARSHRI RANDHIR SINGH,

I have your letter. I do not think what you say about the existing condition is correct. Yes, I would certainly say that if zamindars and jagirdars devoted themselves to the service of their people no one would be able to touch them. After all, Maharana Pratap Became what he was because he always was a servant of his people.

Yours,
M. K. GANDHI

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

246. A NOTE

[On or after September 12, 1946]

It has been reported from Durban that your name is being freely used in support of a violent struggle in place of the present non-violent campaign being carried on in S.A. and the association of the Negroes, coloureds, other Asians and presently some Europeans in the violent effort is being sought. I would like you to give your reaction to the rumour about yourself.

From the original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

The note is scribbled on a sheet bearing the date September 12, 1946.
247. DISCONTINUE IT

Actionary that Harijan has been publishing already exists and asks why there should be another. If the question has substance I should think that Harijan’s labour is wasted. If such a work exists it will cause me surprise and pain that none of my co-workers told me about it or themselves knew of its existence. I am making enquiries and have asked for a copy of the dictionary that has been mentioned. If I find I have made a mistake I shall set it right and save the labour.

Another friend, writing in English, has said the same thing and added that my Hindustani is in fact Urdu and it is making me more and more unpopular in the Hindi world. The same is true of the Urdu world, only for the opposite reason. The charge here is that in the name of Hindustani I am introducing into Urdu words from Hindi, that is Sanskrit. I welcome both charges. My Hindustani is neither Urdu nor Hindi. It is the mingling of the two. The Saraswati that is to flow from the confluence of these two is still invisible. Scholars tell me that at one time it had become visible and then it disappeared. Be that as it may. The idea behind Hindustani Prachar is that the two languages, which have the same grammar but derive their vocabulary from two different sources should not remain separate but should mingle and flow as one stream. Whether the effort will succeed or not will depend upon the zeal of those working for it. If they put some vigour in their efforts they will not go in vain. In the end of course success is in the hands of God. And where He is the Doer and the Destroyer, what cause is there for grief and sorrow?

And is the purpose of the effort to gain popularity? A public servant is not flattered by praise nor frightened by censure. He who swells with applause and droops with criticism cannot render service. The reward of the worker lies in the work he does. I would therefore request my critics that, rather than criticize me, they should help in this noble cause and enlarge and enrich the language written and spoken by the masses of such a vast country as India. Then both the sister languages Hindi and Urdu will shine and India will advance. It will not offend God if I call Him Khuda or Ishwar and my knowledge of that Supreme Power will increase. What quarrel can one have with a person who respects both the languages and wants to unite the two?

NEW DELHI, September 13, 1946

[From Gujarati]
Harijanbandhu, 22-9-1946

248. GUJARAT—PROUD OR INSANE?

Who would not like Gujarat to be described as proud? One might in jest also describe Gujarat as insane. At the time of writing Gujarat appears not to be proud but insane in the proper sense of the word. Shri Parikshitlal is a servant of Harijans but how can he cope with the mad Gujarat? Those who are untouchables while alive remain untouchables when dead. On the cremation ground at any rate all should be one. Once the dead body is reduced to ashes any impurity in it is also burnt up. Nevertheless Harijans have not the right to burn their dead on the cremation ground. It required much effort to persuade the mahajan of Navasari to let an old Harijan be cremated on the common cremation ground. How could it be called a favour? What is there in it to be pleased about? “In a treeless country the castor-oil plant is honoured.” Similarly when a Harijan body was allowed to be cremated on the cremation ground, the event was eulogized. It was justified. The result was good.

Then there is another case, which is wholly tragic. Shri Parikshitlal has furnished me the name and other particulars of the village which I shall not give here. The reprehensible part of it is that when cattle die of an epidemic the Harijans are held responsible. The so-called savarna Hindus do not even bother to see the obvious cause of the mortality among the livestock. When there are rains grass comes up. It is infested with insects. The starved cattle go mad at the sight of the grass and devour it, insects and all. Then they sicken and die. The cause is thus obvious and Harijans’ cattle suffer no less. And yet the Harijans are held responsible and they are subjected to abuses and beatings by the caste Hindus. Such is the woeful tale the letter before me contains. I wish my words could reach the villagers concerned.

Now that the reformers hold the reins of the Government, the

1 A translation of this was also published in Harijan, 22-9-1946, under the title “Proud or Insane”.
2 Vide however “Persecution of Harijans”, 6-3-1946 villages can be rid of much of the ignorance if the officials will make the effort. If the mahajans shed their superstition, if the Harijans wake up and the Government and Harijan Sevaks do their duty there is a chance that Gujarat can be freed of this evil.

NEW DELHI, September 13, 1946
[From Gujarati]
Harijanbandhu, 22-9-1946

249. TELEGRAM TO K. S. DESHPANDE

NEW DELHI,
September 13, 1946

DESHPANDE
74 NARAYAN PETH
POONA
CONTEMPLATED OPENING OF TEMPLE GOOD WORK DESERVING IMITATION WIDE SCALE.

GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

250. TELEGRAM TO JAIRAMDAS DOULATRAM

NEW DELHI,
September 13, 1946

JAIRAMDASJI
CARE HINDUSTAN
KARACHI
SEPARATE ELECTORATES IMPOSSIBLE. BUT RESERVATION CERTAIN SEATS SUBJECT TO MERIT DESIRABLE.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 Krishnaji Shivaram Deshpande of Sri Ram Mandir, Thakurdwar, Bombay
2 Presumably this was in connection with the memorandum submitted by the Sind Provincial Scheduled Castes Federation demanding representation for Scheduled Castes on the local bodies. A similar telegram was also sent to the Sind Harijan Sevak Sangh.
251. LETTER TO JEHANGIR PATEL

NEW DELHI,
September 13, 1946

Bhai Jehangir,¹

I send this letter to you in English. So far as I am aware you are a bankrupt concern if what Ramprasad has told me is true. And it is altogether wrong to get a good worker and to expect him to be a collector of funds. I should like to talk to Balasahib² about this. I take it that Bapa also is in this concern. Ramprasad tells me that your Association is under debt. He cannot be of any use in wiping it off. He can be of inestimable use so far as management of the Association is concerned and that too among the Adivasis. All other difficulties that he has mentioned can be easily waived. He has said so to me but I know that he must not be used for collecting funds. And please know that neither you nor members of your Association are in any way obliged to entertain Ramprasad’s services.

As to Ramanama, we must talk about it. You cannot have it mechanically. It is not like a quinine pill or sun-bath. It stands on its own and by itself. I can understand and appreciate your objection to Ahuramazda because of the bad associations. Hence it is that we describe God as long suffering and patient beyond human endurance. Just now you must swear by your injections and pills although you are a trustee for nature cure.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI JEHANGIR PATEL

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ The superscription and subscription are in Hindi.
² B. G. Kher
252. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

NEW DELHI,

September 13, 1946

CHI. NARANDAS,

I got your letter. I will write and send something for the Rentiabararas. It will be published in the Harijanbandhu of the 22nd. I will, therefore, send you a copy of what I write.

You must meet the demand for the equipment. There are two ways of securing the wood. You should collect or buy up old and disused furniture from people. The other way is to use the minimum quantity of wood in making the equipment. The box-charkha is a development of the Gandiva, and the latter can be set up on anywhere if you have but the two wheels. For instance, it can be set up a desk or on a parapet and one can easily spin on it standing. At any rate one can spin sitting. I had tried all these methods in Yeravda jail and found them suitable. In some jails there are cement platforms, covered with wooden boards, to sleep on. I used to place the Gandiva on the board. Then I had tried and made a charkha from deodar strips obtained from packing cases. I think I had even brought it to Sabarmati. Ultimately we have to work in the villages for the poor and should, as far as possible, acquire even in cities only such things as can be introduced in villages. Think over the matter from this point of view.

I have written to Kishorelal about a man. I have received about five names. We cannot trouble Mavalankar. And Saralabehn is ill.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II

---

1 Gandhiji’s birthday according to the Vikram calendar
253. LETTER TO KISHORELAL G. MASHRUWALA

NEW DELHI,
September 13, 1946

CHI. KISHORELAL,

As usual Narandas has asked for someone in connection with Charkha Jayanti. He is asking for Saraladevi Ambalal. The other is Mavalankar. I think Mavalankar cannot go, nor should he be bothered with such functions. You should therefore find someone and send him. Dada Dharmadhikari, Gopalrao, Shriman, Janakibehn, Kaka—send any of these. These names are not in any order of preference or otherwise. I have dictated them as they have occurred to me.

Chimanlal writes that your health continues to be weak. But what is the point of lamenting over it? I get letters from Parikshitlal now and then. Both the incidents that he has narrated are painful. That we have to launch an agitation even for cremating the body of a Harijan in the cremation ground is a matter of shame.

Blessings from
BAPU

SIJ. KISHORELAL MASHRUWALA
SEVAGRAM

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

254. LETTER TO ANANTRAM

NEW DELHI,
September 13, 1946

CHI. ANANTRAM,

I have your letter. Have a good time in the hospital. Do some service as well. Go to the Ashram only when you are fully calm. Ramanama can work wonders. You have to prove it. Who will believe one's just saying it?

What if I did not come to the jail? How can I find time for such things?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of Hindi: S. G. 134
255. LETTER TO K. S. DESHPANDE

NEW DELHI,
September 13, 1946

BHAJ DESHPANDE,

Sushilabehn told me about your father’s death. I will not express grief. He was a very virtuous and devout man. He has left behind a great legacy for you. You must add to it and bring glory to your work of service.

A wire has been sent regarding the Harijan temple.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI TATYA DESHPANDE
74 NARAYAN PETH
POONA

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

256. COLLECTIVE PRAYER

Q. You believe in mass prayer. It congregational worship as practised today a true prayer? In my opinion, it is a degrading thing and therefore dangerous. Jesus said: “When thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the hypocrites are, but enter into thine inner chamber and having shut thy door pray to the Father which is in secret.” Most people in a crowd are inattentive and unable to concentrate. Prayer then becomes hypocrisy. The yogi is aware of this. Should not the masses, therefore, be taught self-examination which is the true prayer?

A. I hold that congregational worship held by me is true prayer for a collection of men. The convener is a believer and no hypocrite. If he were one, the prayer would be tainted at the source. The men and women who attend do not go to any orthodox prayer house from which they might have to gain an earthly end. The bulk of them have no contact with the convener. Hence it is presumed, they do not come for show. They join in because they believe that they somehow or other, acquire merit by having common prayer. That most or some persons are inattentive or unable to concentrate is very true. That merely shows that they are beginners. Neither inattention nor inability to concentrate are any proof of hypocrisy or falsity. It would be, if they pretended to be attentive when they were not. On the contrary, many have often asked me what they should do, when they are unable to concentrate.

The saying of Jesus quoted in the question is wholly inapplicable. Jesus was referring to individual prayer and to hypocrisy underlying it. There is nothing in the verse quoted against collective prayer. I have remarked often enough that without individual prayer collective prayer is not of much use. I hold that individual prayer is a prelude to collective, as the latter, when it is effective, must lead to the individual. In other words, when a man has got to the stage of heart prayer, he prays always, whether in the secret or in the multitude.

I do not know what the questioner’s yogi does or does not. I know that the masses when they are in tune with the Infinite, naturally resort to self-examination. All real prayer must have that end.

NEW DELHI, September 14, 1946

Harajan, 22-9-1946

257. NOTES

BLANK MINUTE BOOKS

A student writes:

It has become a fashion for all to pose as political workers. And politics consist in speeches and participation in election campaigns. You would be pained to know that the minute books of Congress Committees are entirely blank, except for proceedings of annual sittings. It is all power politics. Students also get drawn into its vertex. What is your ideal of a political worker?

I have all along stressed the need for constructive work and to that end, I drew up a list of items for the guidance of all workers. I hold that if the constructive programme were worked with vigour and understanding, the result would be far more than mere political swaraj. Speeches and election campaigns would be almost unnecessary if our workers established the Congress in the hearts of the people through service. Then there will be more service than power and the weekly or fortnightly meetings of Congress committees will be filled with a recital of the activities and achievements of committees in the wide field of work.
IS IT NOT COWARDICE?

Q. Non-violence in your opinion is not cowardice, but it is a form of resistance to injustice. You have admitted that it is wrong to arrest and imprison innocent persons which civil resisters are. And you have cheerfully courted arrest and imprisonment. Is this not inconsistent and cowardly?

A. Evidently you do not know the working of non-violence. An unjust law is itself a species of violence. Arrest for its breach is more so. Now the law of non-violence says that violence should be resisted not by counter-violence but by non-violence. Any breach of a law carries with it a penalty. It does not become unjust merely because I say so. Nevertheless, in my opinion, it is unjust. The State has the right to enforce it, whilst it is on the statute-book. I must resist it non-violently. This I do by breaking the law and by peacefully submitting to arrest and imprisonment. I call such behaviour an act of bravery to the extent required. That imprisonment for a man like me today carries no suffering with it is irrelevant, if it may be assumed that ordinary prison-treatment would make no difference in my mental condition. Thus non-resistance in the case under discussion is an essential condition of non-violence, not a symptom of cowardice. Resistance in the shape of refusing to be arrested etc., on the other hand, will in this case be certainly blustering, thoughtless violence and might be classified as cowardly brag.

NEW DELHI, September 14, 1946

_Harijan_, 22-9-1946

258. CHARKHA JAYANTI

What is known as Charkha Jayanti is not Gandhi Jayanti. It is true it has become linked with my birthday, but the reason for this is clear. Formerly the charkha bore no relation to freedom. If anything it stood for the slavery that lay behind it. For a crust of bread our women had to go through the drudgery of spinning. They span and a few cowries or pies were thrown to them each day. I remember watching, in my childhood, the Thakore Saheb of Rajkot throw to the poor on the *Shili Satam' day. I considered this throwing of money a game and it was fun to watch the game. I can imagine how, much in the same way, cowries must have been thrown to women spinners for their yarn and how greedily they must have pounced on them.

---

1 A translation of this also appeared in _Harijan_, 22-9-1946.

It was in 1908, in South Africa, that the idea came to me that if the poor of India were to be delivered from serfdom, we would have to learn to look upon the charkha, and the yarn produced on the charkha, not as a symbol of slavery but as a symbol of freedom and plenty. The person who to my knowledge understood this most fully was Narandas Gandhi. From this he understood the significance of the Charkha Jayanti. Before the date Bhadarva Vad 12 became associated with the charkha neither he nor anyone else, to my knowledge, had celebrated that day as my birthday. I was well known among the people in South Africa but I do not recollect anyone there celebrating my birthday. It was only here that the charkha was associated with it and Charkha Jayanti began to be observed on the day. It was then thought that my birthday according to the Western Calendar should also be observed and so two days, namely Bhadarva Vad 12 and October 2, came to be observed as Charkha Jayanti. Narandas took, as he still does, a leading part in all this. As I write this I can remember the observances in Rajkot on Bhadarva Vad 12 and October 2. But Charkha Jayanti will be truly observed when the charkha, which is the symbol of freedom and ahimsa, hums in every home. What can the observance signify if a few poor women, or even a million poor women, spin to earn a pittance? What great work will have been accomplished? This is possible even under a tyrannical regime and is indeed the normal thing in the capitalist system. The doles given to the poor help in sustaining the affluence of the millionaires, even if such doles be in the form of wages.

The observance will have meaning only when both the rich and the poor understand that all created alike by God, that all must work to attain glory and that the freedom of all will be protected not by guns but by the ball of yarn, not by violence but by non-violence.

If we consider the atmosphere of the world today, what I have

---

1 The seventh day of the moon in the month of Shravan, observed as the day of Shitala, the goddess of smallpox said above will sound ludicrous. But if we think deeply, this alone is right; this alone is true for all time. For the present it is only devotees of the charkha like Narandas who show this faith. Let us all observe Charkha Jayanti and October 2 in a similar spirit.

NEW DELHI, September 14, 1946
[From Gujarati]
Harijanbandhu, 22-9-1946

259. AN APPEAL TO CORRESPONDENTS

Some good people waste money on sending wires, asking me to secure seats on the Interim Government, others regarding strikes in various places, yet others on matters of fasting. To all these I would say that they not only take unnecessary trouble and waste money but pile work on an over-worked group of co-workers and helpers, without securing needed help from me. I have no wish to influence the National Cabinet in the choice of co-ministers and I hold that it would be wrong on my part or anybody else’s to do so. The members of the Cabinet should be left undisturbed in their choice if they are to render national service in an efficient and honest manner. In matters of strikes and fasts, my views are well known. These should give sufficient guidance when and where required. It is impossible and improper for me to give opinion on incomplete and one-sided data. And I have no time for studying individual cases. I have only limited capacity left in me. I assure correspondents that it is being exercised to the full extent without needing further additions.

NEW DELHI, September 15, 1946
Harijan, 22-9-1946

260. VILLAGE UNIVERSITY

Dr. Kini has been a secretary in the education department in Mysore. He has sent a very long article for Harijan. His contention is that India is poor and has remained so because the Government has kept the poor of the villages away from right education. He believes that the existing colleges and universities in our cities cannot serve our villages because the education imparted in these is designed to advance western influence and it is difficult to introduce education that will be of use to the villages.

1 This appeared under the heading “Notes”.

184

Dr. Kini is of the opinion that there should be village universities for the villagers where adults also can study.

Dr. Kini writes to say that the village universities should provide instruction in agriculture, horticulture, village sericulture, animal husbandry, poultry farming, bee-keeping, fishery, khadi industry, rural sanitation and hygiene, rural electrical engineering, rural roads and transport, rural home economics, rural pottery, rural economics, rural sociology, rural reconstruction, rural trade, rural bullion and banking, etc. If all these subjects were taught in the villages as sciences, the writer feels that the face of rural India would be changed. The villages then would not have to look to the cities for help but on the contrary the cities would have to look to the villages for help.

I have just given a gist of Dr. Kini’s article. If the Central and the Provincial cabinets accept his suggestions a great thing can be achieved. To give his proposals a concrete shape, Dr. Kini should consult Dr. Zakir Husain and the Aryanayakums. I personally believe that even urban universities can be changed.

NEW DELHI, September 15, 1946

[From Hindi]

Harijan Sevak, 13-10-1946

261. LETTER TO JOHN MATTHAI

NEW DELHI, September 15, 1946

DEAR FRIEND,

Herewith my file as it is. I see that some papers are missing. But what I send would give you what you need.

Yours sincerely,

DR. JOHN MATTHAI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

An economist, then Minister for Transport and Railways in the Interim Government
262. LETTER TO KHURSHED NAOROJI

NEW DELHI,
September 15, 1946

DEAR SISTER.¹

Your letter. You have done well to join the C. S. P.²

Who suggested that you showed off or did anything to please anybody? If you did, you [would] not be a dandi that you are. Cheer up!

Love.

KHURSHED NAOROJI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

263. LETTER TO JIVANJI D. DESAI

NEW DELHI,
September 15, 1946

CHI. JIVANJI,

I have your letter. I approve of the idea of giving eight columns of the dictionary every fortnight. You may, therefore, do whatever is convenient for you. The readers will probably find eight columns more convenient because it will be easier to preserve and bind them. It is for you to consider and decide what to do.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 9971. Also C. W. 6945. Courtesy: Jivanji D. Desai

¹ The source has “Vahala Behn” in Hindi.
² Congress Socialist Party
264. LETTER TO ANNADA SHANKER CHAUDHARY

NEW DELHI,
September 15, 1946

Bhai Annada,

I got your letter. Since we now expect the salt tax to be lifted, I shall not publish your article. Let us see what happens.

Blessings from

Bapu

SHRI ANNADA BABU
924 COLLEGE STREET MARKET
CALCUTTA

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

265. LETTER TO DHARMANAND KOSAMBI

NEW DELHI,
September 15, 1946

Bhai Dharmanandji,

Swami Satyanandji says that you are almost fasting. Please do not do so. It would be good to take four times a day as much of cow’s milk as you easily can with half as much juice of some fruit mixed with it. If you wish to take some vegetable with it, such as lettuce, radish, gourd or carrot, it should be taken in boiled form. This too would be a kind of fast. You may do what work of service you can. I shall be glad to have a wire that you have accepted my advice.¹

Blessings from

Bapu

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹Vide “Telegram to Satyanand”, 18-9-1946.
266. LETTER TO DHARMADEV SHAHSTRI

NEW DELHI,
September 15, 1946

BHAI DHARMADEV SHAHSTRI,

We do not lend glitter to gold; similarly the name *gurukul*¹ also does not need any embellishment. Forget about the name and such other things. All noble deeds carry their own blessings. Remember this and stop begging for blessings from others.

ASHOK ASHRAAM
P. O. KALSI (DIST. DEHRA DUN)

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

267. LETTER TO HUNNAR

NEW DELHI,
September 15, 1946

BHAI HUNNAR,

I had your letter. There has been some delay in replying as I was in correspondence with Jivanji². I should indeed like to have you with me as I do not have many Urdu hands who can work with speed.
Moreover, Pandit Sunderlal has spoken to me about you at length.
However, Jivanji says that these days he is short of Urdu help.
Therefore as long as you are required there you should keep quiet and so will I.

SHRI HUNNAR
NAVAJIVAN OFFICE
AHMEDABAD

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ A residential school run on traditional lines
² Jivanji D. Desai
268. LETTER TO SYED RAZA ALI

NEW DELHI,

September 15, 1946

BHAJ SAHEB,

I got your letter. Thanks. It was a misunderstanding on your part. It was wrongly reported in the papers. I shall not bother you with arguments. And I don’t have the time.

RAZA ALI
RAZA LODGE
MORADABAD

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

269. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,

September 15, 1946

Gandhiji said that the sight of 144 of them attending the spinning classes\(^{2}\) daily in the fullness of faith, made him hug the hope that one day the whole of India would be clad in khadi. When he started the spinning revival in 1918, India was buying 60 crores worth of foreign cloth excluding Indian mill cloth. This was the largest single import. Next came sugar with 18 crores and then hardware with 7 crores. Today, with the inflated prices the price of all mill cloth, indigenous and foreign, was probably 300 crores. Gandhiji asked his audience to ponder and realize what wealth this would mean to India, if 300 crores worth of cloth was produced by their own hands in the villages. There was a veritable mint of gold for them and if khadi became universal, the villages would rise to unknown heights. Today our masses were poverty-stricken, without the lustre of hope or intelligence in their eyes. The pure hands of the spinners could create this miracle for them and everyone could help. They should have understanding hearts and seeing eyes to detect the beauty in khaddar even if it is coarse and not be allured by mill finery which could never clothe their nakedness in the true sense of the term. The only way to clothe their nakedness and drive away hunger was for them to grow their own food and make their own cloth.

\(^{1}\) Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly letter”. A report of the speech was also published in The Hindustan Times, 16-9-1946.

\(^{2}\) Under the eleven-day spinning course organized by Kanu Gandhi
If this happy consummation could be achieved, the eyes of the whole world would be turned towards India. Today everything seemed to be going wrong in this land. He referred to the story that had appeared in the Press of the mad gunmen in Bombay who caused death of several innocent people. This shameful news must have been flashed over the radio to the world and they must hang their heads in sorrow. But, said Gandhiji, if they would only listen to him, all would be well with India. If all purified themselves and all thought of themselves as Indians, then they would have succeeded in learning the true lesson of the charkha.

_Harijan, 22-9-1946_

270. TALK WITH A CHRISTIAN MISSIONARY

NEW DELHI,

[Before September 16, 1946]

If I were a dictator, religion and State would be separate. I swear by my religion. I will die for it. But it is my personal affair. The State has nothing to do with it. The State would look after your secular welfare, health, communications, foreign relations, currency and so on, but not your or my religion. That is everybody’s personal concern!

You must watch my life, how I live, eat, sit, talk, behave in general. The sum total of all those in me is my religion.

Asked which movement, e.g., women’s, political, scientific or religious, would have had the most far-reaching influence in the world of tomorrow and would be considered 50 years hence as having had the greatest impact on world affairs as a whole and for the greatest good of mankind, he said it was wrong to bracket religious movement with the rest. He said:

It is the religious movement that will dominate the future. It would do so today but it does not, for religion has been reduced to a Saturday or a Sunday affair; it has to be lived every moment of one’s life. Such religion, when it comes, will dominate the world.

Q. Do you feel there is any special significance in the increasing number and magnitude of labour strikes, especially in India of late? What do you think will be the outcome of this labour trouble in India?

A. Strikes have today become a universal plague. there are

---

1 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”, 16-9-1946
2 The missionary had asked whether in free India religion would be separate from the State.
strikes everywhere, America and England not excepted. But in India they have a special significance. We are living under an unnatural condition. As soon as the lid is removed and there is a crevice letting in the fresh air of freedom, there will be an increasing number of strikes. The fundamental reason for this spreading strike fever is that life here as elsewhere is today uprooted from its basis, the basis of religion, and what an English writer has called ‘cash nexus’ has taken its place. And that is a precarious bond. But even when the religious basis is there, there will be strikes, because it is scarcely conceivable that religion will have become for all the basis of life. So there will be attempts at exploitation on the one hand and strikes on the other. But these strikes will then be of a purely non-violent character. Such strikes never do harm to anyone. It was such a strike perhaps that brought General Smuts to his knees. “If you had hurt an Englishman,” said Jan Smuts, “I would have shot you, even deported your people. As it is, I have put you in prison and tried to subdue you and your people in every way. But how long can I go on like this when you do not retaliate?” And so he had to come to terms with a mere coolie on behalf of coolies as all Indians were then called in South Africa.

_Harijan_, 22-9-1946

271. POOR OR SMALL COUNTRIES

Shri Chandrashankar, basing himself on well-known English writers, has very ably described for _Harijan_ the plight of the small countries during war time.¹ I give here the gist of it. The Gujarati readers are not going to benefit much by its translation. What will they gain by knowing the names of English writers? It will be enough if we know what views eminent writers of contemporary Europe hold on war.

They say that a time has come when only big and wealthy countries can fight a war. They have the money and the armed forces. The big nations either swallow up the small nations or wipe them out. Besides, the small nations are not able to manufacture armaments. They buy them from big nations and have to procure even spare parts from them. In the result small nations end up by becoming subservient to big nations.

¹ Chandrashankar Shukla’s article “What Can Poor Nations Do?” appeared in _Harijan_, 13-10-46.

Very often, whether they wish it or not, small nations are forced to buy arms from big nations. For example, when a big nation owes money to a small nation, it repays neither in cash nor in goods but in arms. Accepting such arms has only one implication for a small nation, namely, that it has become a vassal of the big nation.

The writers conclude that the time has come when small nations cannot have independent existence. They may well believe that triumph will not be of truth but of those who have the arms, the money and the bombs. But if we have faith, we will proclaim that in the end truth will prevail, never untruth. Experience also teaches this.

NEW DELHI, September 16, 1946
[From Gujarati]
Harijanbandhu, 13-10-1946

272. CATTLE WEALTH

Mirabehn writes that India cannot survive without cows and bullocks. In the war vast numbers perished and vast sums of money went down the drain. But the greatest loss was the destruction of the cattle wealth. Lakhs of cows and bullocks were slaughtered by the army for food. Breeding cattle requires about five years. Something can be done about it if the country wakes up right now. This work requires knowledge, incessant effort and assistance from the Central and Provincial governments. Can we hope for it?

NEW DELHI, September 16, 1946
[From Gujarati]
Harijanbandhu, 29-9-1946

1 According to the source this was written in Hindi, but the Hindi version is not available. This appeared under the heading “Notes”.

192 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
273. RAMA THE SON OF DASHARATHA

An Arya Samajist writes:

How can the Rama whom you believe to be undying, be the Rama who is the son of Dasharatha and the husband of Sita? Tormented by the doubt, I do join your prayers but take no part in singing the Ramdhun. This irks me for you say that everyone should join in singing and you are right. Could you not so modify the Ramdhun that all can join in it.

I have already explained what I mean by everyone. It means everyone who can join heartily and sing in unison. The others should remain silent. But this is of small importance. The more important question is how Dasharatha’s son can be imagined as undying. Tulsidas himself has raised the question and answered it. Such questions cannot be answered by the intellect or to the satisfaction of the intellect. This is a matter of the heart and the heart alone knows the ways of the heart. I first worshipped Rama as Sita’s Lord but, as realization and experience grew, my Rama became undying and all-pervasive. This means that He continued to be Sita’s Lord but the content of that description was enlarged. This is how the world goes on. The Rama of the man who conceives him merely as Dasharatha’s son cannot be all-pervasive. But to the man for whom Rama is all-pervasive, Dasharatha also becomes all-pervasive. It may be said that this is all arbitrary, “to each man according to his faith”. But I see no other way. If all religions are essentially one, we have to harmonize them. Today they are kept separate and that is why we kill each other. When we are tired of religion, we become atheists and then our ego alone is left and nothing else, not even God. But when we acquire true understanding, the ego perishes and God alone remains. Rama then is and is not the son of Dasharatha, the Lord of Sita, the brother of Bharata and Lakshmana. All honour then to those who not believing in Rama, the son of Dasharatha, still join the prayers. This is not rationalism. I have merely outlined what I do and what I believe.

NEW DELHI, September 16, 1946

[From Hindi]

Harijan Sevak, 22-9-1946

1 A translation of this also appeared in Harijan, 22-9-1946.
274. TRACTORS v. BULLOCKS

Under this heading Mirabehn has written an article for Harijan. Since it merits consideration I give a gist of it below:

Some people say that there should be no mechanical ploughs or tractors. They require large fields. In the long run the soil is ruined as it does not get cow-dung manure and also the cattle are rendered useless. Mirabehn admits that there is substance in the argument.

But in reply she says that in U. P. alone there are 79 lakh acres of fallow land. Almost all the provinces have such fallow land. It is difficult to plough such land with the help of bullocks and even if it was done it would take years to bring it under cultivation. So she says that to start with such land should be broken with tractors. This can be done immediately. For the rest bullocks should be used. We would thus be making a legitimate and limited use of tractors and this would cause no harm. She agrees that using tractors permanently would be harmful. Also she says the tractors are imported from abroad and trained personnel are needed to operate them. Besides tractors require other implements. At the moment our country is not ready for that and it should never be.

NEW DELHI, September 16, 1946
[From Hindi]

Harijan Sevak, 29-9-1946

1 This appeared under the heading “Notes”.

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
275. LETTER TO RUKMINI ARUNDALE

NEW DELHI,
September 16, 1946

DEAR SISTER,

I got your letter. What would you have me write? Basantibehn had excelled me in many fields not one. I had become her devotee before you were born. Isn’t it 60 years now? Wouldn’t it suffice to publish just this?

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRIMATI RUKMINIDEVI
THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY
ADYAR

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

276. LETTER TO JAMES HENRY COUSINS

NEW DELHI,
September 16, 1946

DEAR COUSINS,

In the midst of my preoccupations I mistook your letter for Rukmini Devi’s and this I did in spite of the fact that you had mentioned Mrs. Cousins. My love to you both. Please take my P. C. to Rukmini Devi as the contribution of a humble devotee of the late Dr. Annie Besant. That we had political differences as well as perhaps others did not affect my devotion to her many gifts.

Yours sincerely,

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

---

1 Dr. Annie Besant
2 Vide the preceding item.
277. LETTER TO S. A. WAIZ

September 16, 1946

BHAJ WAIZ,

I have your letter. Indians abroad—Pradesvasti Hindi. Pravasi is not correct. It means travelling or traveller. “Abroad” is not given in the Harijan Dict., because perhaps it is common.

Yours,

M. K. GANDHI

SHRI S. A. WAIZ
I. I. C. A.
SOHRAB HOUSE
235 HORNBY ROAD
BOMBAY FORT

From a photostat: G. N. 7940

278. LETTER TO MADALASA

NEW DELHI,
September 16, 1946

CHI. SILLY MADU,

I got your silly letter. Even so I find it sweet. You are as silly as ever. With Shriman looking after all your affairs, how are you ever going to be wise? Kamalnayan has immersed himself in business running into lakhs. The sisters are busy with their families. What is so strange about his going his own way? Don’t mind Savitri leaving. Enjoy yourself and be happy. Leave all to Rama—even Kamalnayan. Nothing is going to happen to him as long as God protects him. Don’t worry about anything.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Panchven Putrako Bapake Ashirvad, p. 329

1 The superscription is in Hindi. So are the first sentence and the words italicized in the text.
279. LETTER TO ABDUL HAQ

NEW DELHI,
September 16, 1946

Bhai Saheb,

Rajkumari Amrit Kaur read out to me the report of your speech published in yesterday’s Dawn. If it is true I am sorry that a competent maulvi like you should spread such false rumours. I have never, even in my thoughts, been inimical to Urdu. In South Africa as well as here I have always tried and am still trying to blend Hindi and Urdu. That it may be regarded as a mistake on my part is a different matter. But I am no one’s enemy. It was I who first raised the issue of Urdu in the Hindi Sahitya Sammelan.

I am not writing this for the sake of argument but to remove the misunderstanding if possible.

Your letter has come but I have not yet been able to reach it.

Yours,

M. K. Gandhi

Maulvi Abdul Haq

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

280. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,
September 16, 1946

When the charkha class is in progress, all else appears insignificant to me. For in every thread drawn I see Rama. I see swaraj in it. The thought of 20 crores of our people spinning fills me with boundless joy. How long it will be before that number of people take to spinning is another matter. But not to believe this possible will only show our ignorance and lack of faith. Is it impossible for the whole or even half of the population of the country to spin for half an hour everyday? If we cannot make even this small sacrifice for the country, what can we be worth? Is it so very much to ask? From the yarn that will be spun we can have enough khadi to clothe ourselves. I appeal to all to spin.

[From Hindi]
Hindustan, 17-9-1946

281. TELEGRAM TO J. C. KUMARAPPA

NEW DELHI
September 17, 1946

J. C. KUMARAPPA
AIVIA, WARDHA
YOU MAY ARRANGE ANY DATE FROM THIRD TO SEVENTH.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

282. TELEGRAM TO KRISHNADAS GANDHI

NEW DELHI,
September 17, 1946

KRISHNADAS GANDHI
SEVAGRAM
WARDHA

YOU CAN ARRANGE ANY DATE BETWEEN SEVEN AND THIRTEEN CONSULTATION KASTURBA TRUST.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
283. LETTER TO CHIMANLAL N. SHAH

NEW DELHI,

September 17, 1946

CHI. CHIMANLAL

I am in the Harijan Colony today. It is 3 a.m. As I have woken up, I have started writing letters. I am writing to Sharda. She has fallen ill again. Never mind if Shakaribehn has gone away. There was no alternative. It seems now her time will be divided between Surat and Sevagram. Do only that which can be done well. It will be good if you do not over-burden yourself. I hope Pushpa is doing well.

A good many persons seem to be ill there. They should all get well.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10652

284. LETTER TO SHARDA G. CHOKHAWALA

NEW DELHI,

September 17, 1946

CHI. BABUDI

I am writing this at 3 a.m. I woke up early and so I am writing important letters. You never quite recover fully. I do not like it. Neither Sevagram nor Surat suits you. It is good that Shakaribehn has gone there. Keep her as long as you wish. I want that all three of you should get well. I am here till the 24th at least.

Blessings from

BAPU

From Gujarati: C. W. 10069. Courtesy: Sharda G. Chokhawala

---

1 This is in Devanagari script.
2 Addressee’s husband and their son
NEW DELHI,
September 17, 1946

CHI. JAMNADAS,

I am glad you have written a long full letter after many days.

I agree with your view as regards students. But who is to bell the cat? Lilavati Munshi has discussed at length the question whether they should give one year or more for public work. But who will persuade the students! You yourself are weak. Besides, you think too much and hence nothing tangible is achieved by you. Others do not think, nor do they influence students. Those who can influence students believe in the kind of work you write about and all of them honestly hold the opinions they express. Such is the prevailing confusion. And it is not confined to this country but prevails throughout the world as one can see from the papers. Now tell me, what we should do.

What you write about the happenings in Bombay and other places is correct. But the idea you have expressed appears to me to be rather immature. If there were two parties, one calm and the other agitated, I have no doubt that the former would stand to gain in the absence of the police and the military. This you can say, that no one barring me would carry on without the police or the military. Mine is a voice in the wilderness. Indeed I need and I yearn for clearer vision, greater penance and greater courage. But can it all come for the yearning? Isn’t it a fact that “the fifth and the last factor is the Unseen”? This is the truth. Let us therefore cling to devout faith and hope for human effort and Divine grace. The effort should be sincere. I can elaborate further. But where do I have the time? Sushila will write about what she was given to read. I don’t let her have much time either. If I can organize things better or if they settle down themselves, I shall get some more time. There is much work to do. God’s will be done.

Are you keeping well? How are Santok and Radha?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 Bhagavad Gita xviii, 14; the other four being the field, the doer, the various means and several different operations.
286. LETTER TO SUSHILA NAYYAR

NEW DELHI,
September 17, 1946

CHI. SUSHILA,

You must be well. It will not do to fall ill. There is a letter from Manudi. I have kept it for you. She will be coming. Jaisukhlal will be coming too. Do not fall to the temptation of abandoning your work there and coming here. I would certainly be happy if you could come. Jivraj has examined me. I felt fine. The blood-pressure is 160/98.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI SUSHLABEHN
KASTURBA HOSPITAL
SEVAGRAM
WARDHA

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Dr. Sushila Nayyar

287. LETTER TO GANGA A. HINGORANI

NEW DELHI,
September 17, 1946

CHI. GANGI,

It is good you wrote a long letter. I am making inquiries. I shall write to you later. You are serving Anand and Mahadev so well. God will prosper everybody. I am writing this quite early in the morning. I shall not write more.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Hindi. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani
288. LETTER TO ANAND T. HINGORANI

NEW DELHI,
September 17, 1946

CHI. ANAND,

I have your letter. I also got the notebook you have sent for the daily thoughts. This I am writing in the morning at 3 o’clock. Your toe must be all right now. However many troubles you may have, you must be happy.

What can I write about Mahadev? God will give him back his strength. I am writing to him. Also to Gangi.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Hindi. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

289. LETTER TO MAHADEV A. HINGORANI

NEW DELHI,
September 17, 1946

CHI. MAHADEV,

You should not have written when you were so weak. Write when you are fully recovered. Quietly, slowly get strong and then write.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Hindi. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani
290. LETTER TO N. R. MALKANI

NEW DELHI,
September 17, 1946

CHI. MALKANI,

I have received several letters about the Karachi Khadi Bhandar. Please write to me what the facts are.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 950

291. LETTER TO PRABHU DAYAL VIDYARTH

NEW DELHI,
September 17, 1946

CHI. PRABHU DAYAL,

I have your letter. How did you fall? Were you not careful? Ramanama is the cure for sleeplessness. I know of no better remedy. One should have faith in Ramanama. There are no doubt external remedies, such as that there should not be too much of fatigue, laziness, heat or cold. One should neither be too full nor hungry, that is to say everything should be even. The mind should be healthy. I wish your body to become as strong as steel. And may you have equanimity.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a Photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 11667
292. TELEGRAM TO SATYANAND

NEW DELHI,
September 18, 1946

SATYANANDJI
DEHRIGHAT
PLEASE TELL KOSAMBIJI NOT TO BE OBSTINATE. HE SHOULD TAKE MILK AND FRUIT.¹ WIRE RESULT.

GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

293. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,
September 18, 1946

A U. S. Army general came to visit me a little before the prayer this evening. I was spinning at the time. As you all know the charkha to me is an inseparable companion. Whether I went to jail or journeyed to England, the charkha went with me. I laughingly told the American friend that since he would soon be going back to the U. S. A. he should tell his compatriots that Gandhi intended to defeat them with his puny spindles. The general laughed heartily at this but he understood the economic necessity of everyone producing to satisfy his own wants.

This is what I meant by defeating the U. S. A. Today India has to import cloth because, for our own fault, we do not have enough cloth in India. It will be a real victory for us when we can, without depending on mills, produce enough cloth to meet our requirements. This cannot be done through use of force. People should be able to look after their primary needs.

If it is folly to look to others for the foodgrains we need, it is equally folly to depend on others for our requirements of cloth. In doing this we go against the principles of natural living and that because we are too lazy. Laziness is a sin that makes us stray from our purpose. He alone is a wise man who makes full use of every minute of every day of his time. If we can but be self-reliant in food and clothing we shall be at peace with the whole world.

¹ Name assumed by Baldev Chaube, a village worker who had founded a Harijan Gurukul in Dehrighat, Distt. Azamgarh, U. P.

It is thus in the charkha that genuine freedom is to be found. The charkha is necessary for villages as well as towns. I have not the slightest doubt that if the inhabitants of Delhi take up spinning they can produce enough cloth for their needs.

[From Hindi]

Hindustan, 19-9-1946

294. QUESTION BOX

WHAT USE AHIMSA?

Q. In whichever direction in the world one looks today one sees only violence, onslaughts on people's rights and power politics. This is true even of America and England where it is said the voice of the people is the sole arbiter. Have you considered what your ahimsa can do in such a situation?

A. It is true there is power politics everywhere. But you are mistaken in thinking that in America and England the voice of the people is the sole arbiter. The voice of the people should be the voice of God. That is why we say that the Pancha are Parameshwar. But where people themselves feed on other people, how can one say that the voice of the people is the voice of God? We see how America and England live on the coloured races, exploit other peoples. It needs no proving. Exploiters are seen to co-operate with exploiters but that does not make their voice the voice of the people. Where the voice of the people is the voice of God the people do not want to live on others. They have truth on one scale of the balance and ahimsa on the other, both always having equal weight. This covers my whole reply. For me ahimsa is not disabled; it is not weak; it is supreme. Where there is ahimsa there is Truth and, Truth is God. How that God manifests Himself I do not know. All I know is that He is all-pervading and where He is all is well. There is therefore one law for all. Wherever in the world truth and ahimsa reign there is perfect peace and perfect happiness. If they are not to be found anywhere we must understand that they are hidden from view. But they cannot totally disappear. Those who possess the barque of this faith will safely go across in it and carry others across.

---

1 The sub-titles are from Harijan, 29-9-1946, in which a translation of this appeared.

SHOULD FOREIGNERS BE WELCOME?

Q. You say that foreigners who decide to live in free India as Indians will have no cause for fear. You will admit that such has not been the case in any other country. Where emphasis is on self others are not disliked but even so some suspicion of them always remains. Can free India escape this?

A. I am firmly of the view that free India will escape this. I can cite striking evidence for it. But it is not necessary. Only this much must be remembered: foreigners have to live here as Indians. If a foreigner staying here wants to protect his rights as a foreigner it can become difficult. It will mean that he wants to stay in free India as a superior person. This must lead to friction. The present quarrel with the British Government cannot go on when India is free. If it does, India cannot be said to be free.

NEW DELHI, September 19, 1946
[From Gujarati]
Harajanbandhu, 29-9-1946

295. TELEGRAM TO BAL D. KALELKAR

NEW DELHI,
September 19, 1946

BAL KALELKAR
Y.M.C.A.
25 Chowrangee Road
CALCUTTA

SUSHILA JUST ARRIVED. CEREMONY WARDHA. WE REACH WARDHA BEFORE FIRST OCTOBER.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar
296. LETTER TO ABDUL HAQ

NEW DELHI,
September 19, 1946

BHAI SAHEB,

I got your letter. I could go through it only today. I have no knowledge of what you write about. If you kindly send me the minutes of the proceedings, I shall be able to understand and also to suggest what ought to be done.

Yours,
M. K. GANDHI

MAULVI ABDUL HAQ
DELHI

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

297. CONGRESS MINISTERS, NOT SAHIB LOG

A Congress worker asks:

Should the Congress Ministers live in great State like their English predecessors? Will it be right for them to use Government cars for private work?

From my point of view there can be only one reply to both the questions. If the Congress wants to continue as a people’s organization, the Ministers cannot live as sahib log nor use for private work facilities provided by Government for official duties.

NEW DELHI, September 20, 1946
Harijan, 29-9-1946

---

1 This was published under the heading “Notes”. The Hindi original of this appeared in Harijan Sevak, 29-9-1946.
298. LETTER TO MIRZA ISMAIL

BHANGI COLONY,
NEW DELHI,
September 20, 1946

DEAR SIR M. ISMAIL,

Much as I should like to I may not write to you in Urdu.

I have now talked to Swami Ramanand Tirth and Shri Kashinath Vaidya. As I have already told you the contemplated reforms are no reforms.¹ The more I think of them the more I feel that they are not worthy of you. You may not seek to impose them on the inhabitants of Hyderabad. If you are sure that the States Peoples' Conference does not represent them, then of course I am out of court.

Maulana Sahib wants to help you. Sarojini Devi likewise. I count myself among them. But you know my limitations. I am a born satyagrahi and hope to die as such and that is my limitation as it is my strength. Strength has got to be proved. The limitation stares all my friends in the face.

If you cannot scrap the reforms and if you will not impose them you should postpone them and see whether they admit of amendments. Of course, their real guide is the States Peoples' Conference. But they have not yet learnt to forget me as I would like them to do. And since you and I know and like each other I must write this for what it is worth.

The Hindu, 31-12-1946

299. LETTER TO JIVANJI D. DESAI

NEW DELHI,
September 20, 1946

CHI. JIVANJI,

This is only about the Bhajanavali. This is going by airmail instead of by wire. Devdas will not be able to print 25,000 copies in four days. So the question is about the Congress. He says it will be ¹Vide also “Letter to Mirza Ismail”, 11-8-1946.

in the third week of November. If, therefore, you can print it before that, please reply immediately so that I can send the book to you or make some other arrangement—if, that is, you so desire. If you cannot print it by November, do write or wire to me and say also when you can print it.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 9972. Also C. W. 6946. Courtesy: Jivanji D. Desai

300. LETTER TO D. B. KALEL Kar

NEW DELHI,
September 20, 1946

CHI. KAKA,

I got your letter about Urdu. We shall have to think a little more about it and since I shall be there in a few days I should like to meet you and discuss the matter.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10976

301. LETTER TO KRISHNADAS GANDHI

NEW DELHI,
September 20, 1946

CHI. KRISHNADAS,

I have posted Jajuji’s letter after reading. I think it should be enough if the exhibition is not run in the name of the A. I. S. A. I am of the opinion that if they ask for any help we may give it without going out of our way and without incurring any expenditure. I think since we intend to hand over everything to Gandhi Ashram they had better undertake this work as their own and carry it through as best as they can.

I regard the work of handing over everything to Gandhi Ashram as incomplete so long as I do not have a reply to my letter on the subject, a copy of which I have forwarded.

Blessings from
BAPU

SJT. KRISHNADAS GANDHI
SEVAGRAM

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

302. LETTER TO LAKSHMIDAS ASAR

NEW DELHI,
September 20, 1946

CHI. LAKSHMIDAS,

A portion of the Sabarmati Ashram has been rented out for a camp of the sisters of the Kasturba Trust. The tenancy expires on December 10. I think it would be helpful at this critical time if these people could somehow be accommodated for a longer period. You should therefore start some new activities. I feel it will be worthwhile retaining them even if you have to put up some huts. But consider the matter only on its merit and if after examining the pros and cons you find that they cannot be accommodated, please don’t hesitate to write to me.

We shall discuss your scheme about khadi when we meet.

Blessings from
BAPU

SJT. LAKSHMIDAS ASAR
ASHRAM, SABARMATI

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

303. LETTER TO SARALADEVI A. SARABHAI

NEW DELHI,
September 20, 1946

DEAR SISTER,

I could have your letter read out to me only today. Yesterday Mridula came and gave me a copy of your letter. The original also reached me yesterday. I arrived here on the 16th. The stock of mail is so large that I hardly ever manage to read any letter the day it arrives. In other words, with the co-workers I have I cannot hope ever to cope with my correspondence. And increasing the number of co-workers is something I would not like. Although I wish to live for 125 years I regard my life as ephemeral. I do not therefore like to increase my commitments. I do not know if there is now any need for you to hurry because as you say you have permission to stay on in Sabarmati till the 10th of December. I think many changes can take place in the meanwhile. Hence it would be better if you stayed on till we meet. For my part I am making arrangements to secure the Sabarmati accommodation for a longer period. Hence you had better stay on till we hear about it. I am sending this by airmail instead of sending you a wire. I need not write more at the moment. I hope you are well.

Do not work beyond your capacity.
How is Nirmalabehn’s health?

Blessings from

BAPU

SMT. SARALADEVI SARABHAI
AHMEDABAD

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
304. LETTER TO ANJANA CHOWDHARY

NEW DELHI,
September 20, 1946

DEAR ANJANA,

I have your letter. I must thank you for the account you have sent me. How long does it take you to spin four hanks (of 640 rounds each) every day? How much time does Subhadra spend on spinning?

What does Sita do?

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Hindi]

Bapu: Maine Kya Dekha, Kya Samajha, p. 186

305. LETTER TO SANKARAN

NEW DELHI,
September 20, 1946

CHI. SANKARAN,

I have your letter. Now I can reach there any time after the 25th. I shall explain then. Meanwhile, do whatever is possible.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI SANKARAN
ASHRAM
SEVAGRAM

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

306. LETTER TO VICHITRA NARAYAN SHARMA

NEW DELHI,
September 20, 1946

BHAJ VICHITRA,

I think the substance of Jajuji’s letter to you is that the exhibition which I have allowed to be put up in the name of the Gandhi Ashram and on their own responsibility should be a training camp and not a money-making business. It would be better to leave out woollens also. Whoever needs these can get them from the Gandhi Ashram.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

SHRI VICHITRA NARAYAN SHARMA
GANDHI ASHRAM
MEERUT

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

307. FOOD SHORTAGE

There is nothing so depressing as when fear pervades the atmosphere. I remember an occasion when the waters of the Sabarmati were rising fairly high and a message said to be from Sardar Patel was received after midnight to the effect that inside of an hour the Ashram would be covered with the rising waters and that we were likely to be drowned in them if we did not vacate. It was a most anxious time for all of us—men, women and children. A sigh of relief went up to heaven when it was discovered that after causing some loss to property, the angry waters had begun to subside and that no loss of life need be feared.

Precisely in the same manner the danger of shortage reported from authoritative quarters bids fair to demoralize us into a panic which would be more fatal than real starvation. Such was my plight when a paragraph in the papers was read to me that of all the places in the world its intrepid Diwan had seriously contended that Travancore had a storage of foodgrains only for a fortnight. Knowing Travancore so well I imagined all sorts of calamities not merely for Travancore but for all India. Travancore with its luxuriant growth of edible tubers, coconut and fish had no need to starve for a single day, even though it might have no other supply from the other parts of India. My faith in Travancore kept me whole. And to my joy I discovered that the shortage was not of food but of wheat and rice only. Travancore can grow rice, not wheat. So far as the cereals are concerned the inhabitants of Travancore are rice-eaters. They take to wheat with difficulty and under stress. Would that the present distress could make us shed our provincialism and induce all India habits so as to make us feel fully at home, no matter which part of India we happened to find ourselves in.
For the moment, however, my object would be fully served if all responsible men in India would definitely tell the people in their respective provinces, districts and States, not to look beyond India for supply of food but to grow what they can themselves and learn to eke out a living from their own produce. And, if the numerous authentic letters I receive are an indication of things as they are or should be, we need fear no starvation for want of life-giving vegetables plus a little milk for vegetarians and fish, flesh or fowl for non-vegetarians.

Let India realize that as yet we have no appreciable quantity of food from outside our shores. Many are willing to help but they are themselves for the most part sufferers or have more calls on them than they are able to cope with. The transport difficulty is very real for all of them and our own will commence when the food-stuff reaches our shores. Internal transport and distribution constitute a problem by themselves. It is, therefore, practical wisdom to brace ourselves for the struggle and declare with one voice our resolve that we shall grow our eatables for ourselves and perish bravely in the attempt if we must.

This is the only way and no other.

NEW DELHI, September 21, 1946

Harijan, 29-9-1946

308. DO NOT ELIMINATE TRUTH AND NON-VIOLENCE

A correspondent who sends his name and describes himself as devoted to service writes:

I read Harijanbandhu regularly. Recently in your reply to Shri Shankarrao Deo you said: “I have been saying for some time that the words ‘truth and non-violence’ should be removed from the Congress constitution.”

If this happens in the existing circumstances, people will lose their faith in the Congress because they will feel that so long as it was not in power it was thought best to adhere to truth and non-violence but now that power has come it contemplates removing these words from the constitution. They might even infer that the removal is being resorted to in order to counter the Muslim League’s threat of direct action.

If these words are eliminated from the constitution Congress will fall from the high pedestal which these means alone have secured for it. It will lose in prestige. You have always said that you yourself cannot go forward one step without truth and non-violence and is it not their adherence to these that makes the public think of Congressmen as trustworthy, merciful, full of the spirit of service and bravery? The tree must perish if its roots are destroyed. You must see to it that the roots go deeper and deeper and are not eradicated.

\[1\] The Gujarati original of this appeared in Harijanbandhu, 29-9-1946. The Harijan translation reproduced here has been revised to bring it into conformity with the original.

Therefore I feel that you should compel every Congressman to follow these principles and if he refuses, he must leave the Congress.

How can I, a champion of ahimsa, compel anyone to perform even a good act? A well-known Englishman has said that he would rather be free and make mistakes than be unfree and avoid them. I agree with him. The reason is obvious. The mind of a man who is good under compulsion cannot be good; in fact it gets worse. And when compulsion is removed all the defects well up to the surface with even greater force.

Besides, no individual should have the power to force others. Even the Congress cannot force its members to follow truth and non-violence. These have to be accepted willingly from the heart.

I have been recommending the elimination of these words from the constitution for over a year, long before the Muslim League contemplated direct action. Thus my recommendation has no connection with the League’s resolution. But I have no help for those who invariably attribute sinister motives to my words.

I have strong grounds for my recommendation. The Congress may not hide untruth and violence under the guise of truth and non-violence. Is not this an all-sufficing reason? If Congressmen would not be hypocrites, nothing could be better than that Congress should adhere to these two pillars.

It could never be my wish that the Congress, the moment it comes to power, should discard the very ladder by which it has climbed so high. I believe that if Congressmen, while in power, renounce truth and non-violence, the lustre surrounding the Congress will grow dim.

We must all guard against one mistake. There is no rule against following what is not in the constitution. Indeed my hope is that when these words are removed, all, or a large majority of Congressmen, will heartily follow truth and non-violence even to the point of death.

The writer has forgotten to mention one thing which I should like to clarify. The words in the Constitution are ‘peaceful and legitimate’. I have no right to interpret them as truthful and non-violent, if they don’t bear that meaning. Congress has adopted them as a policy, not as a creed. The question of my right to retain or eliminate them does not arise. But whilst it lasts, policy is tantamount to creed and hence becomes obligatory. Of course, my recommendation has no meaning if ‘peaceful’ can be interpreted as violent and ‘legitimate’ as untruthful.

NEW DELHI, September 21, 1946

_Harijan_, 29-9-1946

309. LETTER TO INDRAVADAN MEHTA

NEW DELHI,

_September 21, 1946_

BHAI INDRAVADAN MEHTA,

I have your letter. You do admit that you are full of anger. Do you know anger is half way to insanity? How can one deal with insanity? However, if you are a regular reader of _Harijan_ you will see that I have said much the same thing that you suggest.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

310. LETTER TO ZOHRA A. CHAVDA¹

NEW DELHI,

_September 21, 1946_

CHI. ZOHRA,

I have your letter. Last night I had a talk with Sushilabehn. She says that you should take up some Kasturba Trust work. However, you can work wherever you want after you have finished your training, whether in Samau or in the Frontier Province, as Akbar may desire. But the condition will also be that wherever you are you will work for the Trust for three years. I think under the circumstances I should like you to join. In this way you will be bound down to one place, which will be better.

I do not like your constipation persisting. Sushilabehn says that you are not careful enough about your diet and sleep. This is not right. You must make your body strong as steel. As for night work, it is difficult but if you accustom yourself to having complete rest there may not be any difficulty.

¹ The letter is in the Devanagari script.

We shall now meet in a few days. Manu too might reach in time for the wedding.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

311. NOT SENTIMENT BUT REASON

Prof. Brij Narain has devoted two columns of the Lahore Tribune in support of the salt tax. I dare not combat his arguments though they make little appeal to my lay mind. He has come to the gratuitous conclusion that I ask for repeal on grounds of sentiment rather than reason. He reminds me of armchair politics and philosophy. Salt tax hits not only men, women and children, but also fish and cattle. Reason demands its immediate repeal. It is not the amount of the tax that kills, it is the monopoly and all it means that kills the poor villager and his cattle. Imagine what would happen if the poor were prohibited from breathing air or drinking water without permission of the Government. The condition as to salt is not radically different. The scientist has not taken the trouble to study what this prohibition to prepare salt even for one’s own consumption has cost India.

Prof. Brij Narain will not allow the Congress to be nationalistic enough even to warrant its abolishing a monopoly which presses heavily upon all the poor people without distinction, unless the Professor ignorantly imagines that the Muslims have no poor to think of.

NEW DELHI, September 22, 1946

Harijan, 29-9-1946

312. ABOUT KHADI BHANDARS

Since I wrote on happenings in the Karachi Khadi Bhandar, I have received several letters about other bhandars also. The gist of

1 The Gujarati original of this appeared in Harijanbandhu, 29-9-1946.
these is given below:

1. Khadi in bhandars is available only to friends of those in charge or to those who have influence.
2. Even if the bhandar is replete with khadi the reply the ordinary customer often gets is that there is none.
3. Some bhandars have no facilities for having yarn woven into khadi, while others cannot supply charkhas and their accessories.
4. In the circumstances khadi workers in many bhandars earn wages for doing no work. Time and again one’s yarn is not accepted on the plea that it is too coarse.

It would not be right to console oneself by saying that all these complaints are untrue. Such conduct as described is unwise, callous and disloyal. None of these defects should obtain in any bhandar, much less in khadi bhandars. How can khadi command respect, if its servants behave in the manner described? It is to be hoped that every khadi bhandar will become a model of service and thereby not only raise itself but also maintain the honour that khadi carries.

NEW DELHI, September 22, 1946
Harijan, 29-9-1946

313. ENTRY IN DIARY

NEW DELHI,
September 22, 1946

The inwardness of the spinning-wheel seems to have been forgotten. I was angry. I have to consider what my duty under the circumstances is. It seems to be so very hard to maintain detachment of mind in the midst of this raging fire. My heart-searching continues.

Harijan, 29-9-1946

314. ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

The treasurer of the A. I. C. C. asks me to say that he has received Rs. 2,400 on behalf of the President of the Congress from the Indian community in Manila, Philippine Islands, for the purpose of famine relief.

Harijan, 22-9-1946

1 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”
315. KARACHI KHADI BHANDAR

Numerous letters have been received with reference to the note in the Harijan of 25-8-'46 entitled “Disloyalty to Khadi”. I am making inquiries and hope to announce the result as soon as they are completed.

Harijan, 22-9-1946

316. LETTER TO MADALASA

NEW DELHI,

September 22, 1946

CHI. MADU,

I have your letter. I liked this one. If it is true that so long you have only been receiving, then you have to pay twice the amount in debt. You should therefore go on paying it and be happy. Will you be able to come to Wardha about the time that I arrive there?

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

_Panchaven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad_, pp. 329-30

317. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

September 22, 1946

CHI. A. S.,

I am wearing today all the things you have given. They are good.

If we are not worthy of sacrifice and still die it won’t be called a sacrifice. You have still to make yourself deserving. More when we meet.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 529

---

1 This appeared under the heading “Notes”.
2 Vide “Disloyalty to Khadi”, 18-8-1946
318. LETTER TO SHARDA G. CHOKHAWALA

NEW DELHI,
September 22, 1946

CHI. BABUDI,

Isn’t it good I received your letter? Would it not be better if you, as also Anand were at Sevagram while you were in indifferent health? Maybe you will recover there; Anand also will recover and Gordhandas’s worry will be lessened. You are of no help to him. Under the circumstances it is your duty to leave Surat. Both of you should think over this. Do not think of your bitter experiences in Sevagram. I will see only your foolishness in harbouring such thoughts. I have always considered you a generous person. We ourselves should commit no mistakes, but if others find fault with us we should not worry.

Blessings from
BAPU

From Gujarati: C. W. 10070. Courtesy: Sharda G. Chokhawala

319. LETTER TO RAMANAND TIRTH

NEW DELHI,
September 22, 1946

SWAMIJI,

The following is my suggestion regarding the trouble that has arisen in Hyderabad State in the name of “Reform”:

If the desired changes cannot be brought about by the Reform, it should be completely boycotted. By boycott I do not mean that we should resort to picketing or take out processions or hold meetings. Our job would be to have peaceful volunteers go from house to house and explain to the voters that the Reform is only so in name, not in substance. We may distribute leaflets in the language of the masses. The strength of the people will grow if they abide by all the restrictions that might be enforced by law, and if the boycott is successful it will be a big victory for the State Congress. There must not be the slightest exaggeration in the language of the leaflets and the facts

1 Vide “Letter to Mirza Ismail “, 11-8-1946; 20-9-1946 should be absolutely correct. The reason why I offer this suggestion is that there is yet no awakening in the State’s subjects in general. If my opinion is not warranted by the actual position and Pandit Jawaharlal advises otherwise his advice should be accepted.

Blessings from

BAPU

SWAMI RAMANAND TIRTH

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

320. LETTER TO HEMANT KUMAR NILKANTH

NEW DELHI,
September 23, 1946

CHI. HEMANT KUMAR,

I got your letter about Nanalal Kavi. I had written something to his son about the matter. I got the news late; it is not that I omitted to write for want of courtesy. I shall now see what I can write.¹ Have you now recovered fully?

Blessings from

BAPU

SIT. HEMANT KUMAR
HARIJAN ASHRAM, SABARMATI

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

321. THE LATE POET NANALAL²

A friend reproaches me as follows:³

One or two others also wrote in a similar vein. I kept silent. I shall be silent no more. If I thought it proper not to write in Harijanbandhu it was not because of any personal grudge. I had none of that. The readers should know that I notice someone’s death when there is something special about it. Thus I did not notice the deaths of many friends in Harijanbandhu. Poet Nanalal sometimes praised me and sometimes censured me as he felt disposed. He had the right to do both. I never felt hurt by his criticism. A man may speak as he feels. Why should one be hurt by it? It would not do simply for this reason to refrain from noticing his death. The fact is, I have very little understanding of poets and poetry. I remember reading only one of his books, Jaya-Jayant. I could not understand the poetry in it but I liked the subject-matter. I could not even read fully what he wrote about me. The reason is that my life has been spent in working amidst storms. Such reading as I was able to do was done in jails.

¹ Vide the following item.
² Nanalal Dalpatram Kavi (1877-1946), eminent Gujarati poet
³ The letter is not translated here. The correspondent had suggested that Gandhiji should have noticed poet Nanalal’s death in Harijanbandhu; vide the preceding item.

What should I do reading words in my praise: should I be flattered or should I weep? I hardly read anything for its literary worth. Should I relate anecdotes from my pleasant association with him? I kept silent because of this dilemma. It is recognized that Gujarat has suffered a loss in his death. What difference would my words make? Besides, I hold that good deeds are their own reward. Good and wicked deeds have their own laws, and only they are valid. Praise and blame are passing things and have no value. That is my belief.

NEW DELHI, 23-9-1946

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbandhu, 29-9-1946

322. TELEGRAM TO SATYANAND

NEW DELHI, September 23, 1946

SATYANANDJI

DEHRIGHAT

I CANNOT UNDERSTAND THIS OBSTINACY ON KOSAMBI’S PART. PLEASE PLEAD WITH HIM AGAIN DESIST. GET WELL AND COME TO ME.

GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

---

1 Nanalal wrote “Gujaratno Tapasvi”, eulogizing Gandhiji on his fiftieth birthday in 1919. He turned into a critic of Gandhiji after the Congress session at Ahmedabad in December 1921.

323. LETTER TO RENUKA RAY

NEW DELHI,

September 23, 1946

CHI. RENUKA,

Your long letter written after so many years revived old and pleasant memories. You and your husband seem to have risen to the occasion during the terrible crisis thro’ which Calcutta passed on and after the fateful 16th. Who knows what is in store for Bengal and the rest of the country in the near future? We have not gone through the worst yet. My views I have set forth as accurately as was possible in my article in Harijan of 15th inst. Read it again and again and follow one of the two ways described therein, never the third.

Do write again when you feel like it.

Blessings from

BAPU

RENUKA RAY

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

324. LETTER TO JAMNADAS GANDHI

NEW DELHI,

September 23, 1946

CHI. JAMNADAS,

Your explanation is correct. It is false to assert that there would have been no need for the police or the military if the Hindus had been helpless. The fact is that if the two communities fight each other, under whatever conditions, and both find themselves in a desperate situation, then in their own interest they are likely to behave. Such a situation will offer an opportunity to the person who wants to bring about amity. Today there is no such opportunity. Animosity and venom are growing. But the plain fact is that in the face of the

1 Satyendra Nath Ray
2 The reference is to the riots on August 16, which the Muslim League had observed as Direct Action Day.
3 Vide “What can Violence do”, 19-8-1946
4 This is in Hindi.
intervention by the police and the military, no one can do anything. Just now both the parties need them. So the question of their not being called in does not arise. However, it is our duty to draw attention to the matter whenever there is opportunity.

I understand what you say about students. You should persevere. Let me have your suggestions with detailed information that I can use.

We shall leave for Wardha in a couple of days.

Blessings from

BAPU

SJT. JAMNADAS GANDHI
BOMBAY

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

325. LETTER TO CHANDRANI

NEW DELHI,
September 23, 1946

CHI. CHAND,

I have your letter. How did you get malaria? Do you use a mosquito-net? It is good that your blood is improving. Don’t be in a hurry. Come to Sevagram when you have completely recovered. I plan to leave here for Wardha the day after tomorrow.

Blessings from

BAPU

CHI. CHANDRANI
C/O SARDAR KARMA SINGH
RTD. S.D.O.
KATRA JALLIANWALA
AMRITSAR, PUNJAB

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
NEW DELHI,
September 23, 1946

The music of the charkha murmurs sweetly that we are all one, born to be equal sharers in the goods of the earth with no one higher or wealthier than the other. Yet the world is today full of inequalities of wealth and invidious distinctions of high and low. This is folly. In our arrogance we forget that we are all one day going to be levelled with the dust by death that knows no distinctions. The second lesson is that we are to earn our bread by the sweat of our brow—what a Russian savant has called “bread labour”, and the third is that if we are one of and with the people, we should refuse to give food to those who are not in need or to take more than we need for health. If we all did that there would be no scarcity of food in this land and we would refuse to look across the seas for food-stuffs.

Yet his nearest comrades were about to make the mistake of serving refreshments, after the Jhanda-vandan by Dr. Rajendra Prasad, to volunteers and Harijans who were not in need of such. Was it not criminal to fritter away food-stuff that would serve to keep alive twenty men, to provide titbits to Harijans and volunteers who were certainly not suffering pangs of hunger? They were deceiving themselves if they thought that thereby they served the Harijans. The real hunger of the Harijans which needed to be satisfied was not for morsels of food but for decent living as self-respecting equal citizens, for a square deal as human beings, for freedom from fear, inculcation of clean and sanitary habits, thrift, industry, education. That required perseverance, self-sacrifice and patient intelligent labour on our part. If they gave him money to feed Harijans he would refuse to accept it. For he did not want to make beggars and idlers of them. He pointedly referred to the fact that Dr. Rajendra Prasad was their Food Member who wanted to save for the famishing every morsel of food. In the circumstances he very much questioned whether the oversight of his comrades was not due to his being lax with himself. Was he not allowing himself to partake rather too freely of the fruits that were placed before him? The lesson of yesterday, he remarked, was a grave warning for all, if we are to learn truly the lesson of the charkha.

Harajan, 29-9-1946

1 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”. The Hindustan Times, 25-9-1946, also reports the speech.

2 This was to be in celebration of Gandhiji’s birthday according to the Vikram calendar.
327. ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS

NEW DELHI,
[On or after September 23, 1946]

Q. Wrangling and corrupt practices have today become a common feature of our elections. What should be the attitude of Congressmen with regard to the elections?

A. What you say only shows that we seek leadership instead of being servants of the nation. There can be no room for wrangles when service is the ideal. Congressmen should realize that only a few can become leaders, the goal for all Congressmen to set before themselves can only be to qualify as true servants of the nation. An institution that suffers from a plethora of leaders is surely in a bad way. For instance, if every Khudai Khidmatgar aspired to become the chief, it would make the life of Badshah Khan hell besides disrupting the Khudai Khidmatgar organization itself.

If Congressmen lived up to the creed which they professed, viz., the attainment of swaraj through truthful and non-violent means, paraphrased in the Congress constitution by the words “peaceful and legitimate”, there should be no wrangling and no corruption. The existence of election wrangles and irregular practices is thus only a proof that the Congress policy of “attainment of swaraj through ‘peaceful and legitimate’ means” is honoured more in the breach than in the observance. I have, therefore, suggested that it should be dropped in the amended constitution that is to come into being. Pending the setting up of the new constitution I have suggested a plan of work which does away with further elections for the time being and which requires all Congressmen to be active servants. If it is adopted it should cut across all our difficulties and troubles.

Q. Very few minorities’ representatives have been returned at the elections. What remedy do you suggest?

A. Minorities being a minority, their representation in the Congress organization will naturally be proportionately less. If they feel dissatisfied, they can keep out of the Congress without ceasing to be Congressmen as I have done. It is my claim that I am not less a Congressman but more by reason of my ceasing to be even a four-

---

1 Extracted from Pyarelal’s report under the title “Some Posers”. The questions were asked by the Presidents and Secretaries of various Provincial Congress Committees who had assembled in Delhi for the A. I. C. C. session held on September 23 and 24.
Anna member of the Congress. At Faizpur Congress the question was raised by Mrs. Anasuyabai Kale at a gathering at which I was present. On interrogation it was found that the number of those who were four-anna members was very small. But in reply to the question as to how many in the gathering were not four-anna members, a forest of hands went up. These are real Congressmen seeking no reward but seeking ever to serve it. Bereft of them it would dwindle into a parlour show. The only worthy aim of a Congressman can be to belong wholly to the Congress, never to capture and dominate the Congress. If everybody took up the correct attitude there would be no minorities and majorities. To try to ‘capture’ the Congress would be to kill the Congress. And a Congressman who is worthy of his salt would die rather than be guilty of the murder.

Q. The policy of the Interim Government is to keep down the prices of foodgrains. Would it not adversely affect the production of foodgrains?

A. I want to reduce the prices of foodgrains still further. I claim to be a peasant myself and I know that only a fraction of the price paid by the consumer actually reaches the grower of food. It should be the business of the Interim Government to see that the tiller of the soil gets full value of his produce and that every pie paid by the consumer reaches the peasant’s pocket or else it should get out. The Interim Government can never be guilty of wishing to provide cheap grains to the consumer at the expense of the grower of food. The trouble with the cultivator is not low prices but the middleman.

Even in khadi production I set the target of 8 as. a day for the spinners. We actually reached the rate of 4 as. in spite of the objection that dear khadi would spell the ruin of khadi production that illustrates my attitude towards the producer. I would eliminate the middleman altogether. It is he who today sponges upon the agriculturist. Otherwise, there is no reason why the peasant should starve. At the same time a peasant who profiteers or exploits the black market belies his calling. He is no less an exploiter than the zamindar.

Q. The growth of parties in the Congress is having a very adverse effect on the Congress organization. What is the remedy?

A. There can be only one party in the Congress, i.e., that of Congressmen and no other. That is not to say that there is no room in the Congress for individuals or groups holding different opinions. I do not believe in dead uniformity. “All men are born equal and “free” is not Nature’s law in the literal sense. All men are not born equal in intellect, for instance, but the doctrine of equality will be vindicated if those who have superior intellect will use it not for self-advancement at the expense of others, but for the service of those who are less forward in that respect than they. Today there are all sorts in the Congress. That is why I have suggested the removal of the words “peaceful and legitimate” from the Congress objective. That need not mean abandonment of truth and non-violence by Congressmen. The object is only to purge out hypocrisy. It jars. Let those who believe in the doctrine of the sword openly avow it. To take the name of non-violence when there is sword in your heart is not only hypocritical and dishonest but cowardly. Our non-violence vis-a-vis the British Government has been the non-violence of the weak. Otherwise, why should there be all these wrangles among ourselves? We try to justify the disorganization and chaos in our midst by pointing to the example of “squatters” in England, forgetting that blind imitation would not help us. There is nothing more demoralizing than fake non-violence of the weak and impotent. If we had the requisite non-violence in us, our public life would be characterized by utmost toleration. There will then be room for as many parties as there are opinions. Differences of opinion would be an indication of healthy independence of mind which is the law of life, not party intrigues and party strife. The latter are incompatible with independence.

Q. How should the Hindu-Muslim questions be tackled?

A. I must own defeat on that point. I know that mine is today a voice in the wilderness and yet I claim that mine is the only practicable solution. I can never subscribe to the view that because certain members of a particular community have indulged in inhuman acts, therefore the whole community may be condemned outright and put beyond the pale. The Muslim League may call Hindus names and declare India to be Dar-ul-Harb, where the law of jehad operates and all Muslims who co-operate with the Congress are Quislings fit only to be exterminated. But we must not cease to aspire, in spite of this wild talk, to befriend all Mussalmans and hold them fast as prisoners of our love. It would be a present possibility if Hindus in their lakhs offered themselves to be cut to pieces without retaliation or anger in their hearts. Non-violence is today rightly laughed out of court as Utopian. Nevertheless, I maintain that it is the only way to keep Hinduism alive.
and India undivided. The history of the Congress non-violence for the last twenty-five years has taught us nothing if it has not taught us that.

Q. How can we counteract the activities of the Communists, who are openly opposing the Congress?

A. The principle which I have laid down vis-a-vis the Hindu-Muslim question also holds good in respect of the Communists. By “Muslim” I mean the Muslim League. For, not all the Muslims are Muslim Leaguers. The Muslim Leaguers have today raised the slogan that ten crores of Indian Muslims are in danger of being submerged and swept out of existence unless they constitute themselves into a separate State. I call that slogan scare-mongering pure and simple. It is nonsense to say that any people can permanently crush or swamp out of existence one fourth of its population, which the Mussalmans are in India. But I would have no hesitation in conceding the demand of Pakistan if I could be convinced of its righteousness or that it is good for Islam. But I am firmly convinced that the Pakistan demand as put forth by the Muslim League is un-Islamic and I have not hesitated to call it sinful. Islam stands for the unity and brotherhood of mankind, not for disrupting the oneness of the human family. Therefore, those who want to divide India into possibly warring groups are enemies alike of India and Islam. They may cut me to pieces but they cannot make me subscribe to something which I consider to be wrong.

The question of the Communists stands on a slightly different footing. They seem to have made trouble-making their profession. I have friends among them. Some of them are like sons to me. But it seems they do not make any distinction between fair and foul, truth and falsehood. They deny the charge. But their reported acts seem to sustain it. Moreover, they seem to take their instructions from Russia, whom they regard as their spiritual home rather than India. I cannot countenance this dependence on an outside power. I have even said that we should not depend even on Russian wheat in our present food crisis. We must have the ability and courage to subsist on what our soil can give us rather than depend on foreign charity. Otherwise, we shall not deserve to exist as an independent country. The same applies to foreign ideologies. I would accept them only to the extent that I can assimilate them and adapt them to the Indian scene. But I must refuse to go under them.

My formula for the Communists, therefore, is that I would prefer to die at their hands, but I will not retaliate.

Harijan, 6-10-1946

328. TALK WITH AN AMERICAN JOURNALIST

NEW DELHI,
[Before September 24, 1946]

Q. Are you full of the joy of life? Why do you want to live for 125 years?

A. Gandhiji told him that his desire to live up to 125 years was not for enjoyment but service. He explained that both were not the same and proceeded to explain to the puzzled interviewer the doctrine of “enjoyment through renunciation” as set forth in the Ishopanishad.

Q. When did your real enjoyment of life begin?

A. When I was born.

Q. No, I mean when did that pattern of life begin when service became a joy for ever?

A. When I understood the inner meaning of life.

Q. Is that India’s speciality?

A. The only speciality of India is her poverty as America’s is her glamour of riches.

Q. May not there be occasions when one may have to compromise ideals with expediency?

A. No, never. I do not believe that the end justifies the means.

Q. Is it possible that your activities may some day be removed from the political field?

A. Perhaps you do not know that I felt compelled to come into the political field because I found that I could not do even social work

---

1 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”

2 Pyarelal explains that the talk took place about the same time as the “Talk with an English Journalist”, which was before September 24.
without touching politics. I feel that political work must be looked upon in terms of social and moral progress. In democracy no part of life is untouched by politics. Under the British you cannot escape politics in the good sense. It embraces the whole life. All who breathe must pay a tax. That is British rule in India. Take the salt tax for instance. It concern everybody. The collector of revenue and the policeman are the only symbols by which millions in India’s villages know British rule. One cannot sit still while the people are being ravaged.

Q. Then your job will never be finished?
A. It will be finished only with my death. I must be watchful, whether it is the foreign government that is in power or indigenous, if I am a social reformer in the true sense of the term. This is applicable to all.

Q. When people attain power they grow away from the people. What about here?
A. Let us hope and pray that this will never happen here. I have likened our people’s office-acceptance to wearing a crown of thorns and pretty sharp thorns at that.

Q. What do you think of the students’ strikes?
A. It seems to be a universal malady, an epidemic.

Q. Do you ever feel depressed?
A. I believe in an over-ruling Power as I believe I am talking to you just now. This may be unreal, but that is real. It dominates me and enables me to remain calm even in the midst of storm.

Q. Gandhiji’s questioner next asked his opinion about predestination.
A. It is a much-abused word. It is true that we are not quite as free as we imagine. Our past holds us. But like all other doctrines this may well be ridden to death.

Q. This provoked the question as to how one could overcome the unpleasant effects of one’s predestination since predestination was a reality.
A. By taking the pleasant with the unpleasant in perfect detachment and thereby sterilizing the unpleasantness of its sting, even as you have tackled the problem of the prickly pear by removing its thorns through judicious selection and cultivation and converting it into edible fodder for cattle.

Q. How to prevent the next war?

A. By doing the right thing, irrespective of what the world will do. Each individual must act according to his ability without waiting for others if he wants to move them to act. There comes a time when an individual becomes irresistible and his action becomes all-pervasive in its effect. This comes when he reduces himself to zero.

If the third war comes, it will be the end of the world. The world cannot stand a third war. For me the second war has not stopped, it still goes on.

Harijan, 6-10-1946

329. TALK WITH A FRIEND¹

NEW DELHI,

[Before September 24, 1946]

I am filled with agitation; why could not I suffer this inner anguish with unruffled calmness of spirit? I am afraid I have not the detachment required for living up to 125 years. That also explains why charkha and khadi are making such slow progress. Success of khadi is impossible without infinite patience. A burning passion coupled with absolute detachment is the key to all success.

Harijan, 29-9-1946

¹ Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”, 24-9-1946
330. TALK WITH AN ENGLISH JOURNALIST

NEW DELHI,

[Before September 24, 1946]

India is on the march to Independence, it is coming whether there is an agreement between the Muslim League and the Congress or not. No one can stop it. It is her destiny. She has bled enough for it. Of course, if there is heart-co-operation between the two, the progress will be quicker and smoother. But it must be real heart unity—not a make-believe.

Gandhiji, who claims kinship with Pressmen and therefore their friendship began by telling this friend what he considered to be the function of journalism.

There are occasions when a journalist serves his profession best by his silence.

Did not Gandhiji believe in the capacity of the average man to judge correctly provided he had enough knowledge of facts?

Not knowledge of facts. What passes for facts is only impressions or estimate of things and estimates vary. Hence one gets different versions of the same event. What is really needed to make democracy function is not knowledge of facts but right education. And the true function of journalism is to educate the public mind, not to stock the public mind with wanted and unwanted impressions. A journalist has, therefore, to use his discretion as to what to report and when. As it is, journalists are not content to stick to facts alone. Journalism has become the art of ‘intelligent anticipation of events’.

As a public man and a social reformer, it is for me to judge when to say something and when to hold my tongue. What the world needs is not words but action. Actions and thoughts tell far more than speech. And this applies to all men both great and small.

Q. What do you think of Russia?

A. Russia is an enigma to me. It hurts me to think (if the reports are true) that a country which stood for the people has turned into an imperialist power. But I may not pass judgment on a great people and a great man like Stalin. I lack the data.

1 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”, 24-9-1946. The talk took place in the course of Gandhiji’s morning walk.
Q. Is the world progressing? Has the making of life and struggle for existence easier in the modern world resulted in the dulling of man’s instincts and sensibilities?

A. If that is your comment, I will subscribe to it.

Q. And the atom bomb?

A. Oh, on that point you can proclaim to the whole world without hesitation that I am beyond repair. I regard the employment of the atom bomb for the wholesale destruction of men, women and children as the most diabolical use of science.

Q. What is the antidote? Has it antiquated non-violence?

A. No. It is the only thing the atom bomb cannot destroy. I did not move a muscle when I first heard that the atom bomb had wiped out Hiroshima. On the contrary, I said to myself, ‘Unless now the world adopts non-violence, it will spell certain suicide for mankind.’

Q. What would be your fatherly advice to a young man about to launch into the world?

A. To hold his tongue. Was it not Shakespeare who said, ‘Lend everybody thine ear, thy voice to none?’

Q. You followed that policy fairly in your own case.

A. Yes, I used to think in my early days that I was a dunce and an idiot, that I should never be able to speak. Now I feel thankful for that disability.

Q. You have been a fighter all your life. What has fighting done for you?

A. It has braced me for the next struggle. Fighting has done me good. What it has done to others, I do not know.

Q. Considering that the difference between the Muslim League and the Congress has narrowed down to one or two basic issues would it not be better to make a little sacrifice to secure agreement?

A. You cannot sacrifice a principle to gain a doubtful advantage.

Q. After hearing both sides of the controversy, an outsider feels at sea. The only course, it seems, is to suspend judgment under the circumstances.

A. When two parties cannot agree and both are sincere in their convictions it is clear one of them must be wrong. Both cannot be right. The world must be the arbiter in that case. It dare not withhold judgment. It has often been found in the progress of non-violence that even people who want to be perfectly just come to wrong judgment.

Before taking leave the friend tendered Gandhiji congratulations in advance on his coming birthday.

I attach no importance to it. Every day one is reborn. I, at any rate, am.

_Harijan,_ 29-9-1946

331. ELEVEN-DAY CHARKHA CLASS¹

The class was held in the Bhangi Colony. Shri Kanu Gandhi has given me an account of it. I give below some noteworthy parts² of it.

In my opinion, this class has been of great value. The numbers of the learners, the class from which they came and the perseverance with which they worked are worthy of note. Thousands turned up to see the small exhibition. Leaders joined in the collective spinning, which is a good sign. It is good to see what perseverance can achieve.

.NEW DELHI, September 24, 1946

[From Gujarati]

_Harijanbandhu_, 29-9-1946

332. LETTER TO M.W. H. DE SILVA

_BHANGI COLONY,
READING ROAD, NEW DELHI,
September 24, 1946_

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter. Please do not think of a garden party for anyone, much less for the charkha class people. They do not come here now. Moreover, I am averse to encouraging entertainment being provided to anyone at this time of scarcity. Every morsel of food saved is so much food gained. Nevertheless, your good wishes I shall always treasure.

¹ A translation of this also appeared in _Harijan_, 29-9-1946.

² Not translated here. Kanu Gandhi had said that 156 adults and 3 children attended the class, which was held from September 11 to 21, and that to encourage people an exhibition was held on the 22nd demonstrating the various processes of spinning.

M. W. H. DE SILVA

CEYLON GOVERNMENT REPRESENTATIVE IN INDIA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

333. LETTER TO JAISUKHLAL GANDHI

DELHI,

September 24, 1946

CHI. JAISUKHLAL,

I have both your letters. I got the cheque with the second one. I hope to be in Wardha on the 2nd October. I am glad that you and Manu will be going there. It is good news that you have got well.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./III

334. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,

September 24, 1946

Being awarded prizes should not fill the recipients with pride. Many feel, and I am one of them, that people should not be given prizes for doing good work. Good work should be its own reward. I find it most annoying that when we do something worth while newspapers are filled with our praise.

Playing the charkha means doing body labour for the sake of India. By spinning we lend dignity to labour. The charkha teaches simplicity and strengthens our faith in God. The charkha is not a small thing. If we spin with full realization of the secret of the charkha, Hindus, Muslims, Parsis and Christians are seen as children of the same God. God comes to pervade the whole world. Let us partake

1 The Hindustan Times, 25-9-1946, which also reported the speech, assigns to this the date September 23, probably wrongly.

2 Earlier Gandhiji had distributed prizes to three women and two men for the best performance at the examination held for the charkha class. of the goods of the world only as trustees. Then we shall see that India has become much stronger and risen much higher. India does not want to rise higher at the cost of others.

If India rises all rise with it. This is the message of India and this is the message of the charkha too.

[From Hindi]

_Hindustan, 25-9-1946_

335. DRAFT RESOLUTION FOR THE WORKING COMMITTEE

[On or before September 25, 1946]

Maulana Abul Kalam Azad, the then President of the I[n]dian N[ational] C[ongress], had with the consent of the W[orking] C[ommittee] assured Pandit J[awaharlal] N[ehru] that the Congress would make his cause in Kashmir their own and that the Pundit should come back from Kashmir in order to continue the valuable work he was doing for the Congress. The Pundit willingly returned though not without misgivings. The W. C. regret to find that his misgivings were true. From all accounts received by the W. C. things are not going on as they should in that State. Repression of a subtle type is going on. Reforms though promising-looking on paper are reported to be so only in name. The W. C. cannot conceive the possibility of substantial reforms whilst unchecked repression is going on in Kashmir. The W. C. therefore earnestly recommend to the Kashmir State they should invite the Congress to send a deputation of reputable men of unquestioned ability and impartiality to find whether there is repression of liberty in Kashmir, whether there is tampering with the voters and whether reforms promised are substantial enough to secure contentment and prosperity of the people of the State. In this recommendation the W. C. invite the co-operation of all the enlightened States of India and the people residing in the States.

---

1 The National Conference under Sheikh Abdullah had launched in May, 1946, “Quit Kashmir” movement. The Sheikh and his supporters were arrested. Jawaharlal Nehru, when he attempted to enter the State was arrested. He returned from there after Azad gave him the assurance that the Working Committee would take up the cause of Kashmir. For the Working Committee resolution as passed, _vide_ Appendix “Congress Working Committee’s Resolution on Kashmir”, 25-9-1946.

2 The Working Committee met on September 25, 1946.
The W. C. have noted with regret the sentence on Sheikh Abdulla, the President of the Kashmir People’s Congress, but they would consider his incarceration as a worthy sacrifice if it results in the achievement of the freedom for which he was labouring.

From the original: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

336. TELEGRAM TO BAL D. KALELKAR

NEW DELHI,
September 25, 1946

BAL KALELKAR
Y.M.C.A.
25 CHOWRANGEE ROAD
CALCUTTA
POSTPONEMENT MARRIAGE INEVITABLE OWING SUSHILA’S HEALTH
OTHER CIRCUMSTANCES. COME DELHI IF IMPATIENT KNOW CIRCUMSTANCES.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

337. TELEGRAM TO D. B. KALELKAR

NEW DELHI,
September 25, 1946

KAKASAHEB KALELKAR
KAKAWADI
WARDHA
POSTPONEMENT MARRIAGE INEVITABLE FOR SUSHILA’S HEALTH OTHER CIRCUMSTANCES. HAVE WIRED BAL ACCORDINGLY.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar
DEAR FRIEND,

You have been good enough to send me your good wishes on my so-called birthday.¹ Thereby hangs a tale. The Indian calendar date is observed only in Gujarat, Bombay, never outside. Everywhere else in India and outside it is the Roman calendar date. And the birthday began to be observed only when it became identified with the revival of the spinning-wheel in its modern form, making it the symbol of freedom of the masses through constructive means. Can you in any way identify yourself with the rebirth of the wheel?

In any case I repeat my thanks for your good wishes.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

H. E. THE VICE-ROY
NEW DELHI

Gandhiji’s Correspondence with the Government, 1944-47, p. 219

DEAR MR. GREENFIELD,

Herewith is my proposal as promised. In it I have endeavoured to minimize all dislocation and loss to the Government save what abolition of the tax must involve. But while salt will no longer be a dutiable article, as a source of national instruction, refining a vital food adjunct of all dirt and increasing its output for man and beast will continue and make increasing progress from day to day. I hug the hope that loss of revenue as a burdensome tax will be more than made up by increase in the consumption of salt.

¹ Gandhiji’s birthday according to the Vikram calendar fell on September 22.
If you discover any flaw in this presentation, please tell me without the slightest hesitation.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

H. GREENFIELD, ESQ., C.S.I., C.I.E.

[ENCLOSURE]

Salt monopoly shall cease as from the first day of October 1946, and the duty on salt as from the first day of January 1947, subject to the exceptions and conditions hereinafter set forth.

The humanitarian clause on salt of the agreement popularly known as Irwin-Gandhi Pact shall be in full operation and all inspection of and interference with private manufacture of salt for evasion of duty shall forthwith cease.

Government control of salt works and factories hitherto maintained shall continue unabated till complete nationalization of salt industry is attained. These factories and works unlike private manufacture for sale shall carry duty up to 31st December.

In order to give full effect to the foregoing notification, any change in the Salt Act or rules or notices issued thereunder and required in law shall be made as soon as practicable but without interference with full effect being given to the foregoing notification.

Gandhiji’s Correspondence with the Government, 1944-47, pp. 162-3

340. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

September 25, 1946

CHI. BRIJKRISHNA,

Your letter is full of ignorance and sentimentality.

What I am doing I am not doing in anger. The error you people committed became merely the means. I was awakened. I sensed luxury in my food. The changes I have made are natural to me. It is not at all an atonement. You should rather pray that it may become natural to me. If it does not, I shall revert to my old diet. I have not given up leafy vegetables. I take their juice. There is more of jaggery than fruit. If it becomes necessary to take wheat I shall take it. Your atonement does not lie in feeling distressed, but in being awake and alert. Nor does it lie in fasting or imposing hardships on yourself. It lies rather in overcoming ignorance and sentimentality and giving yourself up to work with carefulness and detachment. Do not worry about me at all.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 2497

341. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,
September 25, 1946

Mahatma Gandhi spoke to the prayer audience on two matters, on Wednesday evening. First, he related how Shri Prakasam, Prime Minister of Madras, had undertaken to carry out three big schemes in that province, viz., the production of khadi with a view to clothe the entire province with it in time, the encouragement of village industries and the introduction of Nayee Talim in the villages.

Mr. Prakasam and his Ministry were also determined to root out the evil of untouchability, which was a special blot on the fair name of Madras, as also to bring in the much-needed reform of Prohibition. All these schemes had for many years been part and parcel of the Congress programme. To bring them into active existence, Gandhiji said, needed not to much intelligence as faith and determination, the faith and determination that enable man to die for a cause.

Congress leaders had to be true to their word and pure of heart. They must not be tempted by crores. They must be willing to go smiling to the gallows, if need be, for the sake of their principles. Textile mills had been started everywhere even before the last war. The provinces were being asked to start new ones. The machinery for them would be costly, but the money that was supposed to follow in their wake was the lure. Gandhiji explained how he thought textile mills were like poison for village India and therefore to be avoided.

People might wonder, Gandhiji explained, how he lived as a guest of a mill-owner—but these mill-owners had, in spite of his views, taken him in as one of their family, and non-violence demanded tolerance and love for all even if they differed from one. Shri Prakasam had promised Gandhiji that he would not be tempted with new textile mills for Madras and he would even hope to eliminate the existing ones as soon as enough khadi became available. For as Gandhiji said, mills and khadi could not go hand in hand. Khadi clothed everyone and put crores worth of cloth into the hands of the poor. The crores accruing from mills went into a few hands.

The second topic which Gandhiji referred to was food. Gandhiji said that Shri Rajendra Prasad had the heart of a king. He would share his last crust of bread with the poor. The moment he heard a cry of distress from the South he got rice from wherever he could and promised them supplies. Gandhi ji asked Shri Prakasam how his province could ever starve. He knew well the people of South India. His first introduction to the latter was in South Africa through a poor indentured labourer Balasundaram whose case he had sponsored. The poor man had his teeth knocked out. Later, when indentured Indians joined the Satyagraha movement he saw how clever and self-reliant they were. They only got a pound of bread and an ounce of sugar and during the resistance march he heard them singing and cooking a vegetable meal for themselves from soft edible leaves on the ground. Theirs was a land which produced the banana, the coconut, the yam, tamarind, greens and chillies. What more did they want?

They with their intelligence and resourcefulness could easily learn to do without rice if they were asked to do so. Gandhi ji said he had asked Shri Prakasam not to worry. Shri Rajen Babu and he (Mr. Prakasam) had promised he would not. It remained to be seen what strength he was given by God to make Madras self-sufficient. It behoved everyone today, wherever they were, to be self-reliant and resourceful, brave and willing, with intelligence and determination to face the food crisis. If all joined forces it would be well with India.

The Hindustan Times, 26-9-1946

342. TELEGRAM TO S. V. VENKATESWARAN

NEW DELHI,

September 26, 1946

VENKATESWARAN

TEXCOM

MADRAS

GANDHIJI APPROVES YOUR SCHEME SUBJECT ANNOUNCEMENT THAT NO NEW MILLS WILL BE CREATED AS EXPLAINED.

PYARELAL

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

---

1 S. V. Venkateswaran, Textile Commissioner, Madras

2 The khadi scheme of the Madras Government which envisaged making villages as far as possible self-sufficient in cloth.
343. TELEGRAM TO SHRIKRISHNADAS JAJU

NEW DELHI,
September 26, 1946

JAJUJI
SEVAGRAM
WARDHA
WIRED APPROVAL VENKATESWARAN.¹

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

344. TELEGRAM TO BABA ANANDRAO DESHMUKH²

NEW DELHI,
September 26, 1946

DESMUKH
MINISTER
NAGPUR
SUCCESS PIECEMEAL PROHIBITION DOUBTFUL NEVERTHE-LESS WISH SUCCESS. HOPE YOU ARE ATTENDING EDUCATIONAL SIDE.

GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

345. LETTER TO K. M. MUNSHI

September 26, 1946

BHAI MUNSHI,

I have only today been able to go through your papers concerning Ratlam. It seems you had no choice.

Blessings from
BAPU

From Gujarati: C. W. 7701. Courtesy: K. M. Munshi

¹ Vide the preceding item.
² Minister for Excise in the Central Provinces
346. LETTER TO S. P. PATWARDHAN

NEW DELHI,
September 26, 1946

BHAI APPA,

I am ashamed to read about your illness. If we workers keep falling ill, the service that we render will also be sickly; and how can any illness come to a nature cure worker? Now, get well soon, and write to me in detail. For the sake of people like you Dr. Bhagawat’s retirement from the profession would be interrupted, wouldn’t it?

Blessings from
BAPU

APPASAHEB PATWARDHAN
P. O. LANJE
DT. RATNAGIRI

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

347. LETTER TO POTTISRIRAMULU

BHANGI NIVAS,
NEW DELHI,
September 26, 1946

BHAID SHIRAMULU,

Bapuji got your letter. He says that for a Hindu to fast when Muslims are killed and thus to give up his life is quite wrong. One should not do this. About the temple of Nellore, Bapuji was under the impression that it had been thrown open to the Harijans. Do not be hasty. The Madras Government say that they are going to have the temple opened to Harijans.

Yours,
AMRIT KAUR

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 46
348. LETTER TO MAITHILISHARAN GUPTA

NEW DELHI,
September 26, 1946

BHAI MAITHILISHARAN,

I got your curious letter and also the four lengths of khadi from the two friends. May I thank you?

I have lost quite a lot for the sake of the charkha, but I do not feel the loss. I have gained more. It can be a true gain only when I feel perfect non-attachment. But that appears to be remote. When my own people err I lose my patience. That must not happen. That is the message of the charkha. Let us see when this comes about. If I wish to live up to 125 years I must achieve this state [or non-attachment] soon.

You must introduce weaving too in the household; it is not difficult. I should have laid stress on it from the very beginning; I did not. Well, morning is when we wake up. Kabir was a weaver, yet he left behind immortal poetry. If all of you turn weavers your poetry will have much greater power.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI MAITHILISHARAN GUPTA

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

349. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,
September 26, 1946

Mahatma Gandhi asked the prayer audience on Thursday evening to ponder over the fact that all was not well with them. News of stabbing affrays came daily whether from Calcutta, Bombay, Ahmedabad, Dacca or elsewhere. This showed that they were not making any real progress. The latter could only be if they made God witness to every action of theirs. Mirabai’s hymn that they had listened to during the prayer told them that God was the only one who could rid them of their woes and heal their pain. The devotee called God “Thou”—the most familiar of epithets—because all contact with Him was through love. It was up to man to own his own weakness. He was nothing without God’s grace. If they leant on Him, then alone would one or the other party drop the sword.
A brave Bengali had put some questions to him, Gandhiji said, as to how they should act at such times as Calcutta had recently been through. His advice was that the highest duty would be for Hindu or Muslim to lay down his life without retaliation. Gandhiji said he was daily receiving letters from friends to say that some relative or other had died. He wrote to all that they should not mourn nor should they expect him to sorrow with them. Man is born to die. Death is the natural corollary to physical birth. It is the soul alone that is immortal. So, whether God sent them a natural death or whether they were killed by the assassin’s knife, they must go smiling to their end.

Man cannot really kill anyone, said Gandhiji. That power rests in God’s hands. If they realized this, there would not be knives and sticks seen all over the place, as they were today. Gandhiji, therefore, asked all to pray to God to rid this land of the present trial and give them the strength to live and die without killing.

_The Hindustan Times, 27-9-1946_

350. DISCUSSION WITH LORD WAVELL

_September 26, 1946_

Lord wavell left the Interim Government not a moment’s respite. On the 26th September, he invited Gandhiji to meet him. In the course of their meeting he again returned to his pet theme:

Viceroy: The League must be brought in somehow.

Gandhiji: The Congress is ready provided the League is willing to come in a straight way. Let Jinnah seek an interview with Pandit Nehru and come to an honourable understanding. It will be a great day if and when the Congress and the League come together in the Interim Government after a mutual understanding, without any mental reservations, and not to non-co-operate and fight.

V. The only stumbling-block is the inclusion of a nationalist Muslim in the Interim Government. The Congress has undoubted right to nominate a nationalist Muslim. But in view of the fact that Jinnah is obstinate on that point, where is the harm in waiving it?

G. One may waive a right, one cannot waive a duty.

V. But if the League refuses to come in, what happens to the Constituent Assembly?

G. I admit that in that event the Constituent Assembly cannot properly meet. I must, however, make it clear that in this I represent nobody but myself.

---

1 For Wavell’s version of the discussion, _vide_ Appendix “Lord Wavell’s Note on Interview with Gandhiji”, 26-9-1946.
V. Let us pursue this line of thinking a little further. If the Constituent Assembly is not called, what happens next?

G. The National Interim Government will carry on administration as it is doing at present. If you do not allow it to continue, you will expose your bona fides to suspicion.

V. How can we do that?

G. Then, do you want to retain power for yourself under this excuse? If you do that the whole world will condemn you. All you may insist on is that the Interim Government should include the Muslim League representatives. The Congress is prepared to do that.

V. For that I shall need a mandate from the British Cabinet. I can only act according to my instructions. I admit that my sympathies are with the League. My endeavour to bring in the League will continue.

351. THE RIGHTS OF HARIJANS

I have received letters from Harijan friends and some have been to see me too. They feel that now that power is in the hands of the people, there should be more than one Harijan minister. According to the population ratio the number should be at least three, and they should be similarly represented in every department. They hold that it would be erroneous to argue that there are not enough able persons among them. Besides, it is not as if only able persons were taken in every province. Numerous instances of nepotism could be cited.

I am not ready to admit the correctness of all they say. My ideas in this regard are different. Man must pursue his duty, his dharma. Rights spring only from duties well done. Such rights alone are becoming and lasting. There are vast numbers of non-Harijans possessing ability. If they all claimed their right society would be disrupted. Performance of duty is open to every one. The field of service is immense. Only a few can become leaders and those who try to do so do fall behind. I know, however, that people do not act as I have suggested. There is generally a scramble for power and many have to be disappointed.

Holding the views I do, and having acted on them and made others act on them over the last fifty years, I have no interest left in fighting for personal rights. I shall therefore advise Harijan brethren that they should think only of their duties. They may be sure that rights will follow fast on the heels of duties done.

---

1 A translation of this also appeared in Harijan, 6-10-1946

NEW DELHI, September 27, 1946
[From Gujarati]
Harijanbandhu, 6-10-1946

352. LETTER TO LORD WAVELL

VALMIKI MANDIR,
READING ROAD, NEW DELHI,
September 27, 1946

DEAR FRIEND,

It occurs to me that I should reduce to writing my impressions of our talk of yesterday.¹

You were good enough to explain to me at length the result so far of your effort at peace-making between the Congress and the Muslim League. In the course of our conversation you told me that your leanings were towards the League. In your opinion there was left only one point of difference between the two parties, viz., the question of representation of a non-League Muslim out of the Congress quota. You recognized fully the reasonableness of the Congress position but you held that it would be an act of high statesmanship if the Congress waived the right for the sake of peace. I urged that if it was a question of waiving a right it would be a simple thing. It was a question of non-performance of a duty which the Congress owed to non-League Muslims. I entirely agreed with you on the proposition that it would be a great day if and when the Congress and the Muslim League came to a mutual understanding without reservations, mental or otherwise, and that it would be worse than useless if the two came together only with a view to fight each other. Moreover, I stressed the point that Quaid-e-Azam Jinnah should seek an interview with Pandit Nehru and try to come to an honourable understanding. If, however, the worst happened and the Muslim League boycott of the Constituent Assembly persisted and the British Government decided to discontinue the Constituent Assembly, I would hold it to be perfectly honourable. For, even though the Cabinet Mission had led one to suppose that they would continue the Constituent Assembly, I did not expect that they would or could continue it in spite of the successful boycott by one of the major parties. You then interpolated the remark that there were three parties, not only two. The States were the third party. You added that if the boycott persisted you had grave doubts as to whether the States would come in.

Though I might be alone to hold the view, I said that I could not envisage the framing of a workable constitution if one of the two parties withheld co-operation and force had to be used to keep the boycotters under restraint.

You then asked me to work out the logical conclusion of the discontinuance of the Constituent Assembly and asked me what I thought of the Interim Government. I told you that I had little doubt that no matter what happened, the National Government, having been once summoned, should continue to function unless they themselves felt unable, owing to their own incompetence or inability, to do so. I added that the Congress had put up its very best men, not at all in the spirit of gaining power for a party but in the spirit of selfless service of the whole nation. They were so considerate towards you and the League that they had hesitated to fill in the two Muslim seats in the hope of the League coming into the Interim Government. You doubted if you could contemplate the continuance of the Interim Government and that in any case you were only a servant of the Crown and that you would have to take your order from His Majesty’s Government. Whilst I appreciated your stand, I said the continuance of a bona-fide National Government at the Centre was a vital necessity and that any departure from it would lay the British people open to the gravest suspicion on the part of the people of India and would be a tragedy of the first magnitude.

At the conclusion of our cordial talk, encouraged by you to say anything further if I wished to, I mentioned the Kashmir case about which the Working Committee had passed a very just resolution which, in the event of Kashmir State’s obstinacy or notions of false prestige, might lead to far-reaching consequences and I asked for your friendly, as distinguished from legal, assistance to smooth out rough edges.
I had a talk last night with Pandit Nehru and Sardar Patel and as a result I have decided to stay on here for some days, maybe even a month.

I am,
Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

H. E. THE VICEROY
THE VICEROY’S HOUSE
NEW DELHI

The Transfer of Power, Vol. VIII, pp. 604-6; also Gandhiji’s Correspondence with the Government, 1944-47, pp. 223-5

353. LETTER TO H. GREENFIELD

BHANGI COLONY, NEW DELHI,
September 27, 1946

DEAR MR. GREENFIELD,

Whilst I thank you for your letter I shall await your promised counter-proposal if any.¹ Our agreed idea, I thought, was that the Finance Minister should not be troubled until you and I had either come to an agreement or had unfortunately agreed to differ. This was in order to save him unnecessary labour.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

H. GREENFIELD, ESQ., I.C.S.
SECRETARY, FINANCE DEPARTMENT
GOVERNMENT OF INDIA, NEW DELHI

Gandhiji’s Correspondence with the Government, 1944-47, p. 164

354. LETTER TO INDUMATI G. TENDULKAR

NEW DELHI,
September 27, 1946

CHI. INDU,

I have your letter. May you be happy in marriage and do great service. Come to Sevagram when you can. For the present I shall be here.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 6258

355. LETTER TO S. P. PATWARDHAN

NEW DELHI,
September 27, 1946

CHI. APPA,

I have your postcard. In my opinion milk and fruit-juice is the diet for you, and of course rest. Maybe even a single day’s fast without water will prove efficacious. If the bowels don’t move having an enema might be necessary. But since Dr. Bhagawat has arrived there is no need for me to say anything more. Ramanama is of course there. I hope you have received the postcard I wrote yesterday. It would be easier to guide you if the cause of the pain could be detected.

Blessings from
BAPU

SJT. APPA PATWARDHAN
P. O. LANJE

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

356. LETTER TO HUSSEINBHAI

NEW DELHI,
September 27, 1946

BHAI HUSSEINBHAI,

I have your letter. I understand that you had to rush back owing to the demise of your aunt who was also your mother-in-law. Is there any need for condolence? Birth and death are companions. One follows the other. Then what is there to grieve over? Let us live as God ordains.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

357. LETTER TO SUSHILA GANDHI

NEW DELHI,
September 27, 1946

CHI. SUSHILA,

I have your letter. You have given me really painful news. I hope Tara is all right now. Arun’s fever is likely to be as you say. I can understand you being upset by the news of the death¹. But this is a common occurrence; it is inescapable. Whoever is born must also die. Vijayabehn has shown great courage and fortitude.

I am writing to Manilal and enclosing a copy of the letter with this.

I had a letter from Sita. Ask Ila to write to me.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ Of Narayanbhai Patel, Vijaya M. Pancholi’s father
Mahatma Gandhi at his after-prayer speech on Friday evening, narrated a curious incident of a magistrate resorting to hunger-strike in order to persuade people in his area to obey his orders.

This story had come to Gandhiji from an Indian State. Briefly, some goondas had looted some shops and even beaten some persons. The inhabitants were frightened and the shopkeepers closed their shops. A special magistrate was sent to restore order. He could not prevail upon the shop-keepers to open their shops in spite of the assurances he gave them. As the people were put to great inconvenience the magistrate, instead of resorting to the law and forcibly having the shops opened, undertook a fast. The effect on the populace was almost immediate and calm was restored and the culprits caught.

Gandhiji said he had never heard of such action by a magistrate. As a rule, officials were hard and rigid. It was, however, possible for the Vice-roy or a Prince to act as this magistrate did. Officials differed only in rank. Perhaps people would say that it would be madness for them to do so. But Gandhiji did not think so. Many people today resorted to hunger-strike for all sorts of demands. Those were not proper fasts. This fast was undertaken to allay the sufferings of the poor people and melt the hearts of those who were putting them to trouble. It was, therefore, a big act if the story was true. It should be a matter of pride and joy that there was such a magistrate in India. He hoped there were many more.

Shri Suchetabehn having sung one of Gurudev’s Bengali hymns at the prayer that day (Friday), Gandhiji referred to the desirability of having such gems translated into Hindustani. Mahadev Desai, who was a worshipper at the shrine of Gurudev’s poetry, had done a translation of this particular ‘bhajan’ into Gujarati. There were few among them, but there ought to be many more, who should be familiar with Indian languages so that they could easily make translations of what was worth while. Gandhiji hoped to give them a Hindustani translation of the ‘bhajan’ the next day and to continue the practice when a non-Hindustani ‘bhajan’ was sung. He would not promise them printed translations. A servant of the people was a jealous trustee of the money he might raise.

The Hindustan Times, 28-9-1946
359. A DEED OF MERCY

A Pathan, an ex-I. N. A. man, now employed by a firm, tried to defend a lad of 10 years. His entreaty was in vain. The assailants stabbed both the boy and the Pathan. The boy died. The Pathan lives. The deceased boy’s father offered Rs. 4,000 as a reward for his bravery. He refused saying he tried to do his duty and would not take the reward offered. Would that such instances were multiplied!

NEW DELHI, September 28, 1946

Harijan, 6-10-1946

360. RIDING TWO HORSES

There are a fair number of Tantis in Orissa. In law they are classed as Harijans and are known as Pan-Tantis. Many of them earn their living in Kolhan in Singbhum District. They do not call themselves Pan-Tantis but only Tantis. As a result they are not classed with Harijans in Bihar. Their leaders also, when entering office, do not identify themselves as Harijans. In my view what they do is right. Why should one desire to be classed as a Harijan? What is to be gained by it, unless it is the votes, Governmental assistance and scholarship from the Harijan Sevak Sangh for education? Why should one demean oneself for this? The very idea is debasing. Is one to debase oneself for bread?

Tantis do not have to be Pan-Tantis. Today we have popular governments. It is their duty to see that backward classes get the same deal as Harijans in the matter of education, etc.

It was the British Government that constituted the Harijans into a separate class. To the popular government all poor and illiterate people are one, or should be. It cannot distinguish between high and low, between this religion and that, for all are Indian.

The Tantis should not try to become Harijans. They should also not hanker after Government jobs. What will happen to the crores of other Indians will happen to them and others like them. I shall there-

---

1 This appeared under the heading “Notes”.
2 A translation of this also appeared in Harijan, 6-10-1946.
fore advise the Tantis that they should themselves work to improve their condition. Others also should help them.

NEW DELHI, September 28, 1946

[From Hindi]

Harijan Sevak, 6-10-1946

361. TELEGRAM TO SHYAMLAL

NEW DELHI,
September 28, 1946

SHYAMLALJI
BAJAJWADI
WARDHA

ALL MEETINGS STAND BUT AT DELHI.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

362. LETTER TO LORD WAVELL

VALMIKI MANDIR,
READING ROAD, NEW DELHI,
September 28, 1946

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter of yesterday’s date for which I thank you. As the conversation between us turned out to be important as I conceived it, I thought I would let you have my impressions so that you could correct me if I had erred. For I had to report the purport of our conversation to Pandit Nehru and other friends. Even during the Cabinet Mission’s negotiations I had sent to Lord Pethick-Lawrence or Sir Stafford Cripps, as the case may be, my impressions of our talks and this was beneficial. As for your correction,¹ of course I accept it unhesitatingly. But my impression definitely was that at the very outset of your description of what had happened between you and Quaid-e-Azam Jinnah, I understood you to say that although in some of his presentations he was unreasonable, your leanings were towards the Muslim League. But after your correction my impression loses all its value.

¹ The Viceroy in his letter of September 27 had said: “I definitely did not say that my leanings were towards the Muslim League.”
I would like to have your other corrections also if you have the time. Although we may never make public use of our conversations, I have found, throughout my 55 years’ stormy public life, written records of inestimable value for promoting mutual understanding and further conversation. But, of course, I am in your hands in this matter and your wishes shall prevail for I want to fulfil your “hope” that I “should use” my “influence for a settlement”. For this cause, which I have at heart, I would naturally ever want to understand you correctly and fully if only because, of all the persons in India, you enjoy a unique position.

I am,
Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

H. E. THE VICE ROY
THE VICE ROY’S HOUSE
NEW DELHI

The Transfer of Power, Vol. VIII, pp. 618-9; also Gandhiji’s Correspondence with the Government, 1944-47, pp. 226-7

363. LETTER TO MANILAL GANDHI

DELHI,
September 28, 1946

CHI. MANILAL,

I have both your letters. I have already taken such action as they indicated. You will have seen it from the newspapers. Only I have not been able to find time to write to you.

I keep getting heaps of cables from there. Some of them are contradictory. The situation there would appear to have changed further. If, though alone, you remain unconcerned and do not swerve from your duty because many do not join you, I shall consider your contribution to have been ample. Jawaharlalji directly deals with the questions concerning South Africa. We often meet. The Indian delegation to the U. N. O. will include the best people available. My going is ruled out. Jawaharlal may go if he can be spared. Rajaji’s name also deserves to be considered. You should not worry on this score either. Ultimately everything will depend on what you people there are able to do. Have no doubts about that.

For the next fifteen days or more I shall be in Delhi. The massacres here are very painful. The outcome is in God’s hands.
Sushila is intelligent and therefore must be giving you all the news. I could write pages, but do not have the time.

Medh has not met me yet. Nor has he met Sushila. Do not at all worry about Sushila and the children. Devdas is engrossed in his work. He meets me only occasionally.

I have replied to your question in Harijan.¹ You must have read it.

Cachhalia had come to see me. He left a favourable impression on me. He seems to be an able man. I think he is good enough to be made even a trustee. But you alone can be the ultimate judge. Nagadi also came and spent a fairly long time with me.

I am well. There is no cause for worry. The heat here has gone down considerably.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 4991

364. LETTER TO MANU GANDHI

NEW DELHI,
September 28, 1946

CHI. MANUDI,

You must have seen from the newspapers that my going to Sevagram has been put off for the present, and the marriage also has been postponed. I shall, however, be happy if you and Jaisukhlal come over. Jaisukhlal writes that he will meet you in Bombay and then both of you will come here. I am here. I am heavily occupied with work.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./XXIV

¹Vide “Tired of Satyagraha”, 11-9-1946.
365. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

NEW DELHI,
September 28, 1946

BAPA,

I have both your letters. I am dictating this in the midst of a great rush. I have been going through some literature about the Mahanadi. I have discussed the subject with many people, including Dr. Khosla.

Work among the Bihar Adivasis is complicated. At the moment I am held up in Delhi. I have already sent a circular wire calling for the meetings of all the Sanghs in Delhi. You will be getting it too. So I take it you will shortly be coming here. We can then talk about the Adivasis. I would not so soon put you on the giant wheel of embarrassment, lest the old man that you are should reel!

I have gone through your letter about Tata. I have asked the Tata people a few questions in this regard.

SJT. AMRITLAL THAKKAR
SERVANTS OF INDIA SOCIETY
KALI GALI
CUTTACK

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

366. LETTER TO SHEELA

NEW DELHI,
September 28, 1946

CHI. SHEELA.

Your letter. Everyone did well. Do you ever observe silence during daytime while you are awake? You should do it.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHEELABEHN
NAWABHARATI
MEERUT

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 Presumably the Khadi Gramodyog Sangh, Sarva Seva Sangh, Talimi Sangh, Akhil Bharatiya Charkha Sangh, Harijan Sevak Sangh, Adim Jati Seva Sangh, etc.
367. CRIMINAL WASTE

All the suggestions made by the writer can and should be adopted at once if a major disaster is to be averted.

Harijan, 29-9-1946

368. THOU TOO, BIHAR!

It is a grim irony of fate that Bihar, which did so well during the golden days of satyagraha should now disgrace itself by criminal lawlessness. If the news published is authentic, chain-pulling and stopping trains without cause has become a common occurrence in Bihar, with the result that the trains rarely run to time. Passengers consider it superfluous to buy tickets for train journeys. Under a national government, they argue, payment should be unnecessary. Jai Hind is regarded as a cry for loot and murder.

I do not know what truth there is in these charges which are as wild as they well can be. I know some parts of Bihar where persons do not distinguish between things lawful and unlawful. I have even heard the argument that I am largely responsible for the prevailing lawlessness, not only in Bihar but throughout India. I need hardly say that it is a thoughtless charge. The lawlessness, if it can be so described, that I have advocated is like prescribing wholesome and necessary food for the body. Behind my ‘lawlessness’ there is discipline, construction and well-being of society. It is an effective protest against unjust and injurious law or act. It can never take the form of selfish evasion of a duty. It is a duty never to pull the alarm chain except in well-defined and rare emergencies and never to travel without due payment for the class in which we travel. Loot, arson and murder have never been part of my programme of so-called lawlessness. The answer to the argument that whilst my programme may be good enough for a select few, it can never be for the masses, lies in the question whether I am expected to starve the masses of good food for fear of their taking bad or poisonous food.

I have purposely entered upon what appears to be a personal

---

1 The article under this title by Amrit Kaur described the inefficiency with which stocks of foodgrains were handled and suggested ways of saving food.
note, not at all in self-defence, but in order to drive the point home that what is said to be going on in Bihar is administration of rank poison. That way lies not self-rule but licentiousness, not independence but helpless dependence, not life but suicide. Is Bihar of Brijkishore Prasad and Rajendra Prasad that I have known and lived in come to the pass described above? Let the public workers of Bihar not permit the senseless destruction of the fair work construction done with patient toil. Bihar, beware!

NEW DELHI, September 29, 1946
Harijan, 6-10-1946

369. NOTES

CO-OPERATIVES IN KERALA

Sjt. Kelappan came to see me two days ago and informed me that co-operative movement was going strong and had become very popular in Kerala. If the societies are sound, it was heartening news that Sjt. Kelappan gave me. I, however, expressed my serious doubts. The secret of successful co-operative effort is that the members must be honest and know the great merit of co-operation and it must have a definite progressive goal. Thus holding a certain sum of money in co-operation for the sake of making more money by charging exorbitant rates of interest is a bad goal. But co-operative farming or dairying is undoubtedly a good goal promoting a national interest. Such instances can be multiplied. I wonder what these numerous Kerala societies are. Have they honest inspectors who know their work? It may be mentioned that such movements have often proved disastrous when the management has been dishonest and the goal questionable.

GURUVAYUR

Who does not know this historic struggle? Sjt. Kelappan had threatened to fast for the opening of this temple to Harijans. He suspended it on my strong advice and assurance that I would fight for it. Then followed a successfully carried out referendum which resulted in an overwhelming vote of caste Hindus in favour of the opening.

1Vide Vol. LI
But the Zamorin protested helplessness. Later, I went to Guruvayur and a great public meeting signified its decided opinion in favour. I had the pleasure too of meeting the Zamorin who courteously reiterated his helplessness. Other Kerala temples have been opened. Travancore has set a brilliant example by its great State proclamation. The Minakshi and Palni temples are open. Why should Guruvayur yet remain closed? Surely no satyagraha should now be necessary? It is up to the Provincial National Government to see that the opinion of the great bulk of the temple-going public is not defeated by legal technicalities. It is a thousand pities that even at this time of day there are temples in India which shut out Hindus, miscalled Untouchables.

NEW DELHI, September 29, 1946

Harijan, 6-10-1946

370. LETTER TO M. W. H. DE SILVA

NEW DELHI,
September 29, 1946

DEAR FRIEND,

It is very good of you to want to do something for the charkha class. So far as I am concerned, the delicacy of your gesture is equal to the best you can do. However, in order to please yourself, I suggest a small donation to the cause of the removal of untouchability.

Yours sincerely,

M. W. H. DE SILVA

(CEYLON REPRESENTATIVE IN INDIA)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
371. LETTER TO PHEROZE

NEW DELHI,

September 29, 1946

BHAIFHEROZEBHAI,

I have your letter. Why in English? Have you forgotten your Gujarati? And why are you staying in bed? Why are you subsisting on your friend’s sympathies? What did you do all these years?

Vandemataram from

MOHANDAS GANDHI

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

372. HAND-SPINNING v. MILL-SPINNING

Some time before the Provincial Ministries throughout India were formed, I had heard that quotas of spindles were offered to the Provinces on pain—if a particular province did not take its quota—of the refused quota being transferred to the other provinces. Now that the Provincial administrations are in full swing, the question has arisen as to whether these Governments can admit new mills and, at the same time, promote hand-spinning on a national scale. My answer is emphatically in the negative, if the encouragement of hand-spinning is meant to be sincere. Behind the India-wide quota is the fundamental belief that mills alone can and must supply India’s needs for cloth and that hand-spun may be permitted to exist for the fastidious few. That was not how hand-spinning was conceived in Congress resolutions and that certainly is not the way that the A. I. S. A. has progressed. If the national Governments have come to the conclusion that hand-spinning has and should have no future, they should not waste a single rupee along the lines followed by the A. I. S. A., they should forgo their quota even if the forgoing should involve some initial loss. The loss will be demonstrably for the future gain of the masses.

Another question has arisen as to why the Working Committee should not, at any rate, declare a uniform policy to be followed by all the Congress Provinces. There is nothing to prevent the Committee from doing so. But it is open to them to say that the Congress policy has been enunciated times without number. Each Province has to measure its own belief in the Congress scales. The Working Committee might not go into details.

Then why may not the Central Government lay down a policy? The answer is obvious. The Central Government represents all India and all parties. It may not, therefore, lay down any exclusively Congress policy, much less a policy in a matter wholly within the jurisdiction of the Provinces. It would be an unwarranted interference with the rights of Provinces.

Looked at from all points of view, in the matter of khadi as of prohibition and other subjects allotted to the Provinces, the Provinces must evolve along their own lines. They will miserably fail if they look to the Working Committee to guide them. The Central Government simply has not the right, even if it had the unholy wish.

NEW DELHI, September 30, 1946
Harijan 6-10-1946

373. SCAVENGERS’ LOT

Q. You have doubtless written on this subject before but I would like you to say a word again in regard to the duty of municipal and other authority as well as private employers in the matter of providing Bhangis with the proper means of scavenging. Unless water-tight iron pails are provided, for example, the drippings during the rainy season, through baskets or gunny bags, fall on the unfortunate workers. All scavenging should really be able to be done without soiling the hands or any part of the body. If this were so, the work would assume a dignity which it does not carry at the moment. Along with the supply of proper means of scavenging, sweeping, etc., the Bhangi needs instruction. It is a matter which local and provincial authority should take up in the cause of cleanliness.

A. I would advocate bye-laws requiring authorized receptacles, brooms, etc., which would avoid physical handling of dirt and would also prescribe simple working costume. Inspectors or overseers will be trained for the humane and sanitary work instead of being expected to exact work anyhow. The result of the present system is maximum of insanitation and minimum of work plus bribery, corruption and bad manners.

NEW DELHI, September 30, 1946
Harijan, 6-10-1946
374. HOW?

A correspondent writes:

You are aware of the backward States of the Simla Hills. The Raja Saheb of Rampur Bushahr is a man of orthodox views. Recently a young man of a high caste Hindu family married a Koli girl. The Lambardar of the village (Mandhol) brought the matter to the notice of the ruler. The Raja Saheb has sentenced both husband and wife to six months’ imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 100 each. Such action is intolerable and retards progress. Some others who were contemplating inter-caste marriages have been deterred.

Must we wait till autocracy is wiped out?

The rule of one man over many is intolerable. It must end. How is the question. The way is for the many to begin to live. To cut off the head of one ruler is easy enough. Remember the legend of Ravana. He had ten heads. As soon as one was cut off, another popped up in its place. The moral is that no cutting off of heads becomes necessary in the presence of a living Demos. The one will respond and submit. In the given instance the couple will cheerfully undergo the sentence. Only many should follow their example, if the tie is not lustful bondage but a bond of love born out of the zeal for reform. If the reformers do not wish to suffer imprisonment, they should migrate to a free place where they can live without let or hindrance.

NEW DELHI, September 30, 1946

Harijan, 6-10-1946

375. TELEGRAM TO G. V. MAVALANKAR

NEW DELHI,

September 30, 1946

MAVALANKARJI

AHMEDABAD

SO FAR I AM CONCERNED FOURTEENTH SUITABLE.

WIRING SHYAMLAL.¹

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹*Vide* the following item.
376. TELEGRAM TO SHYAMLAL

NEW DELHI,
September 30, 1946

SHYAMLALJI
BAJAJWADI, WARDHA
MAVALANKAR DESIRES FOURTEENTH KASTURBA EXECUTIVE.
HAVE WIRED ACCEPTANCE.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

377. TELEGRAM TO ZAMINDARI AND MALGUZARI SABHA

NEW DELHI,
September 30, 1946

ZAMINDARI AND MALGUZARI SABHA
NAGPUR
ADVISE SEEK APPOINTMENT AFTER RETURN WARDHA.¹

GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

378. LETTER TO T. PRAKASAM

“VALMIKI MANDIR”,
READING ROAD,
September 30, 1946

I gave nearly one hour to Avinashilingam and probably over an hour next day to reading the papers you left with me on Basic Education and Village Industries. Both present an attractive though, in my opinion, a defective and expensive programme. I would like to warn you against going in for expensive programmes. That will betray a woeful lack of a knowledge of the realities in the 7,00,000 villages. It is not money so much as men that we want and if you have sincere honest workers who will work for love of service but not for love of money, success is assured. And you will get ten-fold return for the little money that you will have to spend.

¹ The Sabha had held a meeting on 22nd at Nagpur to oppose the abolition of zamindari and its representatives had sought an interview with Gandhiji.

Your educational programme is, in my opinion, far too ambitious. Basic Education cannot be started piecemeal—and to introduce a craft in the ordinary curriculum is to defeat the basic fact, viz., whole education through a craft, for Indian cotton craft. This is wholly different from education plus a craft or even spinning. Spinning you have to introduce in all schools and colleges, if the Khadi Scheme is to make headway. Shri Aryanayakum came in today. I must show this to him and let him write to you separately.

As to village industries, have you looked at the appendices? If not, just see and you will realize the absurdity. Haste is waste. Think well before you act.

SHRIT. PRAKASAM
PREMIER
MADRAS

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

379. LETTER TO NIRMALA

NEW DELHI,
Silence Day, September 30, 1946

CHI. NIRMALABEHN,

I cannot bear your still being bed-ridden. You have faith, you have humility—how can such a one contract a disease? It is a puzzle for one like me. It makes short work of my learning. If I was to stay in one place I would ask you to come to me and do what I can towards your recovery. Will it ever be?

Well or unwell, “drink the joy of Ramanama”.

Blessings from

BAPU

SMT. NIRMALABEHN
(THE) RETREAT
SHAHI BAGH
AHMEDABAD

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
380. MESSAGE TO PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,
September 30, 1946

Wherever I may be I am always surrounded by an atmosphere of spinning and khadi. I informed you the day before yesterday that another charkha class would be held here from today for seven days. This time the teachers are better prepared and all the accessories for teaching are also available. It was intended not to admit more than 30 persons at a time to the classes. But 38 came this morning and 34 this afternoon. There were 21 men and 17 women in the morning and 14 men and 20 women in the afternoon.

This shows that there is enough faith and enthusiasm in a certain section of the public. Is it then the fault of those who are responsible for teaching or the present age that spinning has not become universal? To put the blame on the times in which we live shows lack of courage. Faith and diligence should rise above circumstances. If all work were to be carried out on this basis and in this spirit, God would surely reward our labours.

Gandhiji requested those who had charkhas in their homes and were not using them to make them over to him either for payment or as gifts. More wheels were needed for the classes. Those whose charkhas were not in working order should take them to the Khadi Bhandar, Chandni Chowk, where they would be set right.

The Hindustan Times, 1-10-1946

381. NOTE TO AMTUSSALAAM

[September 1946] \(^2\)

Again you are making a mistake. The reason for my saying no is different. There is considerable danger in this. Instead of peace there can be rioting. I do not have the time now to explain. Have faith in my words if you can and forget about the thing. Service lies in \(^1\) It being a silence day, this message, which was in Hindi, was read out at the meeting.

\(^2\) This was obviously written when the addressee was in Delhi with Gandhiji, i. e., in September, 1946.
refraining. If you want to sleep at Devdas’s, you may go there. Eat, play, spin and read the Koran. Do you tell beads?

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 687

382. LETTER TO HANNAH

AS AT SEVAGRAM, WARDHA.¹

INDIA,

October 1, 1946

MY DEAR HANNAH².

Manilal tells me you have not yet shed your sadness. I had hoped that you had left all your sadness in India as lumber to be thrown away. Those like you who believe in God should have no sorrow. When the life is wholly dedicated to Him, we live a consecrated life as trustees to do His will and to work for Him. Therefore, you have to live free from care. If you would be worthy of Herman you cannot afford to worry. Choose some field of service. It will leave you not time for worry. All enjoyment has to be derived from service. If you could have kept well here, I would have asked you to come and share the life with me. But that cannot be.

Tell me all about your activities and your health.

This goes care of Manilal as I do not know your address.

All whom you came in touch with whilst you were in India often think of you with affection.

Love.

BAPU

HANNAHBEHN
C/O MANILAL GANDHI
S. AFRICA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ Permanent address
² Niece of Herman Kallenbach, Gandhiji’s friend and co-worker in South Africa
383. LETTER TO SAROJ NANAVATI

NEW DELHI,
October 1, 1946

CHI. SAROJ,

Just now, after the morning prayer, Kakasaheb tells me that today is your birthday. He says that the few lines you sent for me were left behind there.

May your devotion to service go on increasing and Raihana’s with yours, or yours with Raihana’s. You may be separate in body, but are not you one in spirit?

Blessings to both from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10465

384. LETTER TO JAMSHED MEHTA

NEW DELHI,
October 1, 1946

BHAJ JAMSHEDJI,

Tulsiram is an admirer of yours. that is why I was drawn towards him. He pleaded with me to write something to you. I told him that I knew you better than he did. You are dedicated to service. May your work of service grow.

Blessings from
BAPU

SJT. JAMSHED MEHTA
KARACHI

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
385. LETTER TO SARALADEVI A. SARABHAI

NEW DELHI,
October 1, 1946

CHI. SARALABEHN,

I am at present held up here. The meetings1 will be held here. So, even though the meeting of the Agents may not take place it will be good if you come over about that time. We can then have talks. If you want to come even earlier you may do so whenever you please.

Preserve your health.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

386. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

NEW DELHI,
October 1, 1946

CHI. AMTUL SALAAM,

You sent no letter with Deo. I am wearing only your dhoti. Now it will be one day yours and one day Avantikabai’s.

I have been detained here. I may leave by the 20th. You should get well and be of steady mind. The sheep that is to be sacrificed should be free from blemish.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 530

---

1 Of the various Sanghs
387. LETTER TO HOSHIARI

NEW DELHI,

October 1, 1946

CHI. HOSHIARI,

I have your letter. I am glad that you have taken up weaving. If you learn all the processes relating to cotton everything will be all right.

My stay here is getting prolonged.

Blessings from

BAPU

HOSHIARIBEHN
ASHRAM, SEVAGRAM

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

388. LETTER TO KALKA PRASAD

October 1, 1946

BHAI KALKA PRASAD,

Please sell khadi worth Rs. 50 to Tulsiram. You may assume that he has tendered the necessary yarn. However, please charge him the price of the yarn.

M. K. GANDHI

GANDHI ASHRAM
CHANDNI CHOWK
DELHI

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

389 SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING¹

[October 1, 1946]

In the song that has just been sung, the poet says that he who loses the self finds God. If we understand its significance, we really need nothing more. This is what the spinning-wheel teaches us. You might ask how it is possible to find God through the spinning-wheel. As I have told you before, the spinning-wheel enables us to identify ourselves with the millions. The millionaires imagine that money can bring them anything in the world. But it is not so. At any moment death might come and snuff them out. Some are being stabbed daily but losing one’s life that way is not the same thing as shedding the self. One has to learn to efface the self or the ego voluntarily and as a sacrifice in order to find God. The spinning-wheel rules out exclusiveness. It stands for all, including the poorest. It, therefore, requires us to be humble and to cast away pride completely.

¹ Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”, 7-10-1946

It holds the key to swaraj. But can one spin for swaraj and yet not be filled with subtle pride? If pride is there, spinning won’t bring one the swaraj of the spirit or the realization of God.

When the self is shed the change will be reflected in our outward behaviour. It will show in the least of our little acts. The whole outlook on life will be changed. Everything we do will be undertaken not for the self but for all.

The hymn goes on to say that to find God one need not go out anywhere. He resides in our hearts. But if we instal the self or the ego there we dethrone poor God. I have here used the epithet ‘poor’ advisedly. For, although He is the King of kings, Most High Almighty, yet He is at the beck and call of anyone who has reduced himself to zero and turns to Him in uttermost humility of spirit. Let us then become poor in spirit and find Him within ourselves.

_Harijan_, 13-10-1946

390. MESSAGE TO TAN YUN-SHAN

[On or after October 1, 1946]¹

Is not silent prayer better than a written message?

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers, Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

¹ This was in reply to the addressee’s letter of October 1, 1946 to Rajkumari Amrit Kaur.
391. TELEGRAM TO SHYAMLAL

Express
NEW DELHI,
October 2, 1946

SHYAMLALJI
BAJAJWADI
WARDHA
SUSHILA¹ SAYS DIFFICULT CONVENE MEDICAL MEETINGS
NOW. THEREFORE ADVISE POSTPONEMENT AGENTS MEETINGS ALSO.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

392. LETTER TO M. W. H. DE SILVA

NEW DELHI,
October 2, 1946

DEAR FRIEND,
I shall treasure your cheque for the cause of untouchability. May your work in India result in bringing the two countries together as never before.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

M. W. H. DE SILVA
CEYLON REPRESENTATIVE IN INDIA

From a copy. Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

393. LETTER TO DR. FOSS WESTCOTT

NEW DELHI,
October 2, 1946

DEAR FRIEND,
I got your kind letter of 18th Sept[ember] only three or four days ago. You know why it came into my hands so late.

¹ Dr. Sushila Nayyar
You are more Sudhir’s director than I. He was wanted by the Cabinet Mission and he went at their instance. My part consisted in not dissuading him from going. In any case I have never thought that his youth went against a man. But let Sudhir’s work tell its own tale. He is due on Saturday next.

You have given me interesting information about your activities. I am jealous of your youth.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

DR. FOSS WESTCOTT

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

394. LETTER TO PYARELAL

October 2, 1946

CHI. PYARELAL,

There is so much change in my ideas. The teacher should not look upon his pupil as his wife. But you were helpless. One’s nature cannot be checked. So I have decided not to stand in your way. I wished Manu would come. I naturally wanted to know her mind better, and dispel her fears. I have decided not to stop her in any way if she wants to marry. I will not perform the marriage. Beyond that I shall put no restrictions. This is my position.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

395. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

NEW DELHI,
October 2, 1946

CHI. AMTUL SALAAM,

I have received the other clothes sent by you. Much work had been done. I see ignorance in your letter. Ability comes from doing work. There you eat without earning your bread. All this shows that you write for the sake of writing. Do go to Borkamata and do whatever work you can. Only God knows where our good lies. How can man know God’s will? Therefore one should go where one’s heart may lead. After all God resides only in the heart.

Sankaran will come with Jajuji.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 531

396. LETTER TO POTTI SRIRAMULU

NEW DELHI,
October 2, 1946

CHI. RAMULU,

Now all your letters to me are in English. It is not good. Do not go about with a placard hung round your neck. The thoughts confined to the placard are valueless.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 107

397. LETTER TO PANDURANG PATWARDHAN

NEW DELHI,
October 2, 1946

Bhai Pandurang,

I have your letter. I do hope that Appasaheb will recover. You did well in writing to me. I shall be more careful. Keep writing to me.

Blessings from
BAPU

Shri Pandurang Purushottam Patwardhan
Sahitya Mandir
Ratnagiri

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
398. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,
October 2, 1946

It is as though God had sent us a special message in the form of this song.\(^1\) In truth the springs of India’s life are drying up. It would be folly to suppose that because there is a Congress Government at the Centre all is well. I shall not dwell on the stabbings that are going on, shocking as they are. To illustrate to you how the springs of our life are drying up, I shall say something on what is going on in Goa.

Goa is a small island. It is an integral part of India. News has come that Dr. Ram Manohar Lohia has been arrested immediately on his arrival there and placed in solitary confinement. A few days ago Shri Kakodkar was arrested for having raised his voice for civil liberty and sentenced to imprisonment for nine years. It is being said that he may be deported.

Dr. Lohia is a learned man. I may not agree with his views but this does not mean that I can remain untouched by his case. You must all be as much pained as I am by the arrest of Dr. Lohia and the happenings in Goa. I carried on some correspondence with the authorities in Goa, but it was infructuous. To tell any Indian that he cannot enter Goa is as insulting as to tell me that I may not enter any particular part of India. Goa is as much a part of India as Kashmir or any other State. It is intolerable that Dr. Lohia should be treated as foreigner and denied the right of entry into Goa.

Let us see what steps Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, who has donned the crown of thorns, and Lord Wavell take to see that this high-handedness on the part of the Goa authorities is stopped.

[From Hindi]

_Hindustan_, 3-10-1946

\(^1\) A song written by Rabindranath Tagore and sung at the congregation. Translated, its first line read: “When the springs of life are drying up, do then come as a shower of mercy.”
399. STATEMENT TO THE PRESS

NEW DELHI,
October 3, 1946

In the context of the forthcoming Congress Presidential election, some friends tell me, it is being said that I am in favour of Acharya Kripalani being elected. I have also been shown a newspaper report to this effect. Although I do have my own personal views in the matter I have told friends who came to consult me not to cite my name in any way in connection with the election. It is my firm view that Congressmen should exercise their vote in this election without being influenced by any other Congressman or by those who are not members of the Congress, such as myself. Congressmen should consider what is best in the interest of the country and vote accordingly.

[From Hindi]
Hindustan, 4-10-1946

400. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,
October 3, 1946

Gandhiji expressed satisfaction that the second charkha class was going on better than the first. There were fewer absentees. They had only three more days left, but if the will was there much work could be done in three days.

Gandhiji then referred to a letter he had received asking him how they should celebrate Dussehra. Should they take out a procession and eat and drink and be merry? Yesterday he had told them that the fountain of life had gone dry. Could there be rejoicing in a country where daily stabbings were taking place and brother hated brother? Dussehra was the celebration of Rama’s victory over Ravana, but this victory was not achieved by violence.

When Vibhishana asked Shri Ramachandra how unarmed, unshod, without any armour, he was going to defeat the heavily-armed and mighty Ravana with his chariots, Rama’s reply was that it was faith and purity that would win the battle. His bow was his self-control. His victory was the victory of good over evil. Gandhiji, therefore, advised the people to spend Dussehra quietly at home in prayer if they had understood the real meaning of religion and Dussehra.

Gandhiji added that he was daily receiving letters of abuse saying that his doctrine of non-violence was emasculating Hindus, that he was no Mahatma, that he was injuring them and leading them astray. He had never laid claim to being a Mahatma. He was an ordinary mortal as anyone of them. He hoped he had never injured anyone. What he told them he told them for their own and universal good. He had said that if they could not act non-violently they should defend themselves violently rather than be cowards.

But the ability to die smiling at the hands of a brother without any retaliation, physical or mental, was the highest bravery. In no case was it right to spoil for a fight. That was no self-defence. It was bad for them, bad for the country and utter disloyalty to their leaders. It was hindering them in their march towards swaraj.

Gandhi reiterated that today no one had a right to feast and eat one morsel more than necessary. If they behaved in a disciplined manner, India would live. If they did not, then India would die and they would be unable to hold their heads high.

The Hindustan Times, 4-10-1946

401. TELEGRAM TO SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA

NEW DELHI,

October 4, 1946

SATISBABU

KHADIPRATISHTHAN

15 COLLEGE SQUARE, CALCUTTA

DONT WORRY ABOUT ACCOMMODATION. WIRE TRAIN DATE ARRIVAL.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
402. AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE CONGRESS, THE MUSLIM LEAGUE AND THE NAWAB OF BHOPAL

October 4, 1946

The Congress does not challenge and accepts that the Muslim League now is the authoritative representative of an overwhelming majority of the Muslims of India. As such and in accordance with democratic principles they alone have today an unquestionable right to represent the Muslims of India. But the Congress cannot agree that any restriction or limitation should be put upon the Congress to choose such representatives as they think proper from amongst the members of the Congress as their representatives.

II. It is understood that all the Ministers of the Interim Government will work as a team for the good of the whole of India and will never invoke the intervention of the Governor-General in any case.

I accept this formula.

M. K. GANDHI
HAMIDULLAH [NAWAB OF BHOPAL]
SHOAIB QURESHI

Sardar Patel’s Correspondence, Vol. III, p. 282

---

1 This was intended to enable the Muslim League to join the Interim Government, which was to consist of 14 members—6 from the Congress, 5 from the League and 3 representatives of minorities to be nominated by the Viceroy. Jinnah put forth the condition that there should be no Muslim among the nominees of the Congress. Gandhiji therefore accepted the formula laid down in the agreement. As it was, it found no approval from other Congress leaders, notably Nehru, who found the formula “not happily worded”. In a letter to Jinnah he was prepared to concede to the Muslim League “the right to represent the Muslims of India, provided that for identical reasons the League recognized the Congress as the authoritative organization representing all non-Muslims and such Muslims as have thrown in their lot with the Congress.” He further suggested that no formula was necessary. In the event the Congress list contained the name of Asaf Ali and the League nominated Jogendranath Mandal.
403. LETTER TO SUMITRA GANDHI

DELHI,
October 4, 1946

CHI. SUMI,

I am glad you are comfortable there. You will do as much as you can, with due regard for your health, and go forward. That is what I hope.

I had certainly hoped to be in Sevagram this time but I am held up here till the 20th on account of the work. Let us see when I can get away.

Let me have news from there.

Blessings from

BAPU

KUM. SUMITRA R. GANDHI
KHALASI LINE
NAGPUR

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

404. LETTER TO ZOHRA A. CHAVDA

NEW DELHI,
October 4, 1946

CHI. ZOHRA,

I have your letter. You have my letter with you. You can make use of it in my absence so that the apparent contradiction will disappear. You should therefore quietly go on doing your work and improve your health.

Manu is at present here. Jaisukhlal too was here; he left last night. Manu will stay on for some more time.

Write to me what you decide.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 Presumably for Charkha Jayanti
405. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

DELHI,
October 4, 1946

CHI. SHARMA,

I have your letter. I agree that you should resign. But I see a number of difficulties in pursuing nature cure work in Khurja at present. I have not taken any decision yet. When you come here I shall understand your mind better. Then we shall decide. So come on Monday the 7th at 8 p.m. If in the meanwhile some other work crops up you will have to wait.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Hindi]
Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsh, p. 370

406. STATEMENT TO THE PRESS

NEW DELHI,
October 4, 1946

It is impossible for me to send individual acknowledgments to the senders in India and abroad of numerous messages of birthday greetings. I must content myself with sending them my thanks through the courtesy of the Press.

The Hindustan Times, 5-10-1946

407. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,
October 4, 1946

In the song that has been sung Mirabai says that she has bought Govind. There is a similar song by her in Gujarati, too. How can one buy God? Not with money, but with love certainly. The yarn lovingly drawn by a student of the spinning class can find God. Our Rashtra-pati yesterday said that Afghanistan was in need of cloth. Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, as President of the Congress, is not only our Rashtrapati, but he is also our Prime Minister. We cannot shut our eyes to the needs of others. Today we have to confess we have gone berserk and are fighting each other. But in 1920 we had resolved to fight the British with truth and non-violence. We achieved our freedom through non-violence and the whole world is congratulating us.
How then can we be enemies of anyone? Badshah Khan is a Pathan.
His Pathan brethren from across the border have asked us for cloth. It is India’s duty to give them this help. This river of love can and should flow from India. Time was when India produced all the cloth it needed and more, when its muslin was famous the world over. Today, owing to our laziness, we go naked in our own country. By plying the charkha we can not only meet all our requirement of cloth but also that of other countries. It is to be regretted that there are not enough charkhas for this second charkha class. Carpenters have forgotten the art of making charkhas, though they make any number of chairs and tables. But we shall teach spinning on taklis.

I appeal to everyone to spin and bring the yarn to me. I shall have it woven to provide cloth to those who need it.

[From Hindi]
Hindustan, 5-10-1946

408. ROWDYISM RUN RIOT

A correspondent from Jubbulpore describes the rowdyism exhibited by a section of the Hindus at a benefit performance in aid of the local convent school for girls. A Hindu friend actually organized the show. The actors in the little drama were all girls from the convent. Towards the end there was a scene in which an orphaned girl, tired of the world, was praying to God. Angels appeared and advised her to have faith in her Christ and the play ended with a hymn in praise of Jesus. This was the signal for pandemonium. The Hindus who created the disturbances raised a hue and cry against Christianity, the organizer who tried to speak was unable to make himself heard and money for the tickets was demanded back. The writer asks whether this scene could have taken place if the hymn sung had been in praise of Shri Krishna instead of Jesus.

If what the correspondent says is true, the behaviour described was wholly unworthy. It betrayed extreme intolerance. Those who do not like things that do not coincide with their notions need not patronize them but it is ungentlemanly to behave like less than men when things are not to their taste.

NEW DELHI, October 5, 1946

Harijan, 13-10-1946

409. QUESTION BOX

IS NOT WORK WORSHIP?

Q. Would it not be better for a man to give the time he spends in worship to the service of the poor? If a man did this, would worship be still necessary for him?

A. I sense mental laziness and unbelief in the question. The biggest of karmayogis never give up devotional singing and worship. Of course as a general principle it can be said that selfless service itself is worship and those who engage in it do not need any other kind of worship. But in truth bhajans, etc., are a help in the work of service and keep the awareness of God ever fresh.

HOW TO REMOVE UNTOUCHABILITY

Q. It is no doubt good to provide education to Harijans, to let them use public wells and visit temples, but really Harijans should not be segregated in cherries and the like. Then alone can untouchability be uprooted.

A. It feels good to say that Harijans not having separate quarters will be a sign of the vanishing of untouchability. Even at present, so far as I know, there is no law compelling Harijans to live in locations especially built for them. Only the evil custom segregates them. The custom is going, though rather slowly. It is the duty of all to do away with it. It is a question of moving the hearts of people. Such an enterprise can succeed only with tapascharya. Tulsidas says:

Through the power of tapa Brahma created the world.

Through the power of tapa Vishnu sustains the world.

Tapa, O Parvati, is the basis of all creation.

Go and do tapa, knowing this in heart.

The day someone is born who has this power everything will become easy and dharma will be saved.

1 A translation of this also appeared in Harijan, 13-10-1946.
Q. My nephew was ill. The relatives did not give him any medical treatment. They called in medicine-men and resorted to incantations. One cannot say that these did any good. Maybe your mother did the same in your case. Now you talk of Ramanama. Could Ramanama be the same as incantations?

A. I have, in one form or another, answered this question before. But it is as well to do so again. So far as I can recollect, my mother did give me medical treatment. But she certainly believed in incantations too. I do not. I have a few learned friends who believe in them, but I cannot have this faith. I can therefore categorically say that incantations have no connection whatever with my Ramanama. I have said that to utter Ramanama or any other name of God from the heart is to seek succour from the supreme power. What that Power can do no other power can. The atom bomb is as nothing compared with it. It is the cure for all pains. It must, however, be admitted that it is one thing to talk about uttering Ramanama from the heart, quite another to do it. Nevertheless, however difficult it may be, it is the highest thing in life.

NEW DELHI, October 5, 1946

[From Hindi]

_Harijan Sevak_, 13-10-1946

410. A GOOD WAY\(^1\)

The following is the gist of a correspondent’s letter from Dalhousie: \(^2\)

If this story is true, it just shows what a mighty weapon fasting can be in the armoury of the official class.

_Harijan_, 6-10-1946

---

\(^1\) The Hindi original of this appeared in _Harijan Sevak_, 6-10-1946.

\(^2\) Not reproduced here. It described how in a certain village shops were closed in protest against terrorism by some goondas and how a magistrate had them opened by resorting to a fast. _Vide “Speech of Prayer Meeting”, 27-9-1946._
411. WELLS THROWN OPEN

Shri Kalyanji Mehta writes:\footnote{The letter is not translated here. The correspondent had said that in Surat District many wells had been thrown open to the Harijans and a few leading persons had participated in a dinner to which Harijans had been invited.}

It is a good thing that the wells were thrown open. But more than that it is a matter of shame that Harijans are still not able to draw water from numerous wells. The burden of shame will be lightened if after having come to know about it, others are inspired to throw open the rest of the wells.

Some went in for inter-dining. While congratulating them one can’t help commenting—only so few!

NEW DELHI, October 6, 1946

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbandhu, 13-10-1946

412. THE DANGER OF ‘VANASPATHI’\footnote{A translation of this also appeared in Harijan, 13-10-1946.}

In the Harijan of 14-4-1946 you have supported Sardar Datar Singh on the question of ‘vanaspati’. His article contains several suggestions which, if acted upon, can check the evil. But the evil is spreading. In the Punjab, in Akola, Shegaon and Kurnool, permission has actually been given for starting new factories. At least this should be stopped. In a province like the Punjab the Government has not even ordered the colouring of ‘vanaspati’.

The above is the substance of a letter I have received. I have put ‘Vanaspati’ in quotes. Its full name is ‘vanaspati ghee’. Vanaspati, which means flowers, fruits, leaves and so on, is always good. But when it becomes the name of something else, it becomes a poison. Vanaspati is not and never can be ghee. If ever it were to become ghee, I would be the first to loudly proclaim that there is no further need for real ghee. Ghee or butter is the fat drawn from the milk of an animal. Selling vegetable oil in the form, or in the name, of butter or ghee is a great fraud perpetrated on India. It is a betrayal of India. It is the duty of the businessmen of India not to sell any oil or any other product in the name of ghee. Certainly no Government should countenance such sale. The crores of India today get neither milk nor buttermilk, neither ghee nor butter. The result is that people go on dying and becoming more and more enfeebled. Human body, it would appear, needs meat and milk or milk products, such as curds, buttermilk, ghee and butter. Anyone who deceives people in this regard or countenances deception of them is an enemy of India.

NEW DELHI, October 6, 1946
[From Hindi]
Harijan Sevak, 13-10-1946

413. DOLA-PALKI

The Hindus of the Garhwal District are so ignorant that they do not permit Harijan bridegrooms to ride in a palki or any conveyance and pass by temples or through public squares or the residential quarters of high caste Hindus. An evil custom like this should not be tolerated any more. A friend has even sent me a draft of a law, the passing of which might make these ignorant people see reason. This should be certainly done. In any case, whenever a Harijan bridal procession is taken out, these unfortunate people should be afforded police protection. The authorities should also distribute notices that no one is to be prevented from riding in a palki or using any other conveyance, and that anyone obstructing such a procession will be punished.

NEW DELHI, October 6, 1946
[From Hindi]
Harijan Sevak, 13-10-1946

1 A translation of this also appeared in Harijan, 13-10-1946.
414. TELEGRAM TO SARALADEVI SARABHAI

NEW DELHI,
October 6, 1946

SARALADEVI
CARE BUSINESS
AHMEDABAD

YES CERTAINLY YOU CAN REACH EIGHTH OR WHenever YOU WISH.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

415. NOTE ON INTERIM GOVERNMENT

[On or before October 6, 1946]

1. No reference to the Viceroy at any stage on any matter.
2. League to nominate all League quota of Muslims whenever vacancy occurs.
3. Congress to nominate other members including other minorities including nationalist Muslims.
4. Communal safeguards shall be decided by joint consultation subject to reference to arbitration in point of difference.
5. Vice-President to be from the Congress.
6. The Chairman of the inner cabinet to be the Leader of the House.
7. The Congress would like Q. A. to join the I. G.

From the original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

---

1 From the points listed in the note it is evident that they were set down by Gandhiji to be amplified by Jawaharlal Nehru in his letter to M. A. Jinnah, dated October 6, 1946; vide Appendix “Lord Wavell’s Note on Interview with Gandhiji and Nehru”, 27-8-1946.
416. UNCERTIFIED BUT GENUINE

The above two letters are from blood sisters. That both of them are very sincere is clearly shown by their letters. Some may even recognize them. I have had to delete as much I could to conceal their identity.

I have also received other similar letters. I can also understand the anguish of those who write in English and Hindustani. Even then I have to adhere to my dharma as I understand it. I should therefore like to stick to what I have written. It is possible that my writing is not very clear. In fact no writing is perfect because writing circumscribes the thought of the speaker or the writer. It is impossible to convey the complete thought through speech or writing.

Whether khadi is certified or not, as long as it is khadi ideologically it is superior to mill cloth. Mill cloth should be discarded even if compared to khadi it is cheap, soft and fine.

Those who buy cloth in the name of khadi knowing that it is not khadi are hypocrites. My writings are not meant for them. Genuine khadi even if it is uncertified is preferable to mill cloth.

The lady who, because of the purity of her thought returned empty-handed from a store selling uncertified khadi commands our respect.

There is a saying in English “Buyers Beware”. If a buyer is cautious he will never be deceived. He will make sure before buying anything. Such a person will read my articles again and again and till he is thoroughly convinced he will not act on them. A time may come when the Charkha Sangh will stop giving the certificates. What will happen to khadi then? Will not all khadi be uncertified then? Among stores dealing in khadi some would be honest and some dishonest. A buyer will buy khadi from the store he prefers.

A businessman should be honest and should not sell uncertified khadi.

The other letter deals with the office-bearers of the Congress. It

1 Not translated here. One of the correspondents had said that had to return empty-handed from an uncertified khadi store because it pricked her conscience. The other had complained about the corruption in the Congress.

2 Vide Vide “Uncertified Khadi v. Mill Cloth”, 12-9-1946 is a sad story. The corruption among us is responsible for the corruption that has crept into khadi. Those who have remained pure in spite of being in the midst of corruption, have to remain so. One needs steadfastness and generosity to cultivate that art. Is not being strict with oneself and generous to others the way to get rid of corruption?

NEW DELHI, October 7, 1946
[From Gujarati]
Harijanbandhu, 13-10-1946

417. TELEGRAM TO J. C. KUMARAPPA

NEW DELHI,
October 7, 1946

KUMARAPPA
MAGANWADI
WARDHA
BIHANGI COLONY SUITABLE.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
418. LETTER TO GENERAL MANAGER, G. I. P. RAILWAY

“VALMIKI MANDIR”, READING ROAD,
NEW DELHI,
October 7, 1946

THE GENERAL MANAGER
GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY
BOMBAY

DEAR SIR,

I thank you for your letter No. 20453-V 395 of 28th ultimo.¹ My suggestion is that the driver himself should be asked as to what article or articles of use he would want and you or the Railway Board should decide what should be done. The donors will have no opportunity of coming to a correct decision and it would be improper for them directly to approach the person concerned.

Yours faithfully,
M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: C. W. 10531

419. LETTER TO CHAMPA R. MEHTA

NEW DELHI,
October 7, 1946

CHI. CHAMPA,

I have your letter. If only you are patient, the clouds of misfortune that have gathered over you will disperse.

It is surprising that Shanti has still not recovered. Write to Sheth Bachharaj Tribhuvandas at Panchgani. He will at once make some arrangements. Medical and other facilities are available there. And go there when he writes. There is no need to go to Miraj just now. Besides, the place may have no facilities. It must be getting a little cold in Panchgani now, but that is nothing to worry about. Let me know what happens. Bachhrajbhai is known to us and you need not, therefore, go to another place.

¹ The addressee had said that he had received a further sum of Rs. 1200 to be given as a reward to the driver whose vigilance had averted a serious accident to Gandhiji’s train and had asked how the reward might be paid. Vide also “Letter to General Manager. G.I.P. Railway”, 2-8-1946.

Has Pramod stayed on there? I hope he has got well.
I shall have to stay on here for the present.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]
I am not writing a separate letter to Gatulal. Let this be for him also.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 1049. Courtesy: Champa R. Mehta

420. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

NEW DELHI,
October 7, 1946

CHI. LILY,
You did well in writing to me. Your letter is painful. What is His will He alone knows. We have gone completely mad. Thoughtful men and women should pray to God to save us. By “we” I do not mean you and I but everyone. You and I should ask that we may sacrifice ourselves in this conflagration. But we must also make ourselves fit for that, shouldn’t we? Go on doing service.

Blessings from
BAPU

CHI. LILAVATIBEHN ÜDESHI
G. S. MEDICAL COLLEGE
LADIES’ HOSTEL
PAREL
BOMBAY

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 10247. Courtesy: Lilavati Asar
421. LETTER TO KANCHAN M. SHAH

NEW DELHI,
Silence Day, October 7, 1946

ChI. KANCHAN,

I got both your letters. I do not at all like your having fallen ill. Now that your yearning has been satisfied, you should get well soon at least for the sake of the baby that will be born. You will do so not by overeating but by eating moderately, taking sun-baths, living in the open air, drinking clean water, taking fruit juice, eating steamed or boiled vegetables and avoiding sweets and spicy foods. If you take friction-baths and hip-baths, you will get well soon.

Why need you feel ashamed of being pregnant? That is what you were yearning for. Why need one feel ashamed of what one yearns for and of what happens to everybody? You must now overcome your sexual urge for three years at least. And that for the sake of the child.

Yes, Munnalal has reason to be ashamed of himself, for it was his ambition to observe brahmacharya though he had no capacity for it at all. I had cautioned him sufficiently. But what could even he do? Could he have helped following whither nature led him? If he humbly admits his weaknesses, they will disappear.

I advise you to have the confinement in Vyara itself. If you wish, you may go to Sevagram for it. But there are difficulties in that. To ensure easy delivery, Munnalal should be told to stay away from you. Moreover, he should now earn enough for a living. Nobody need hesitate to ask for his market-price.

I told Munnalal that, even if you two satisfied your passion, you could continue to do my work. If, therefore, he is ready to take up a regular job, I am prepared to give him one and pay him for it. Whatever may have happened from my point of view, Munnalal has committed on sin. He should, therefore, humbly admit what has happened without feeling guilty about it and take up whatever work is available. He should earn a modest living and do whatever other service is possible in the time he can spare from his duties as a householder. He should do nothing that will heighten sexual craving; he should try to control it. The birth of a baby is a reminder. You may show this letter to everybody without feeling the least embarrassment. Neither of you has committed a sin. If any party is guilty, generally it is the man. For the present I am here.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 8253. Also C. W. 6977. Courtesy:
Munnalal G. Shah

422. LETTER TO MUNNALAL G. SHAH

NEW DELHI,
October 7, 1946

CHI. MUNNALAL,

I got your letter written to Kanchan. Can the fact of pregnancy be ever concealed? And why need it be concealed? Surely you have committed no sin. And even if you have committed a sin, you should not commit another by hiding it. Sin is a kind of boil. If we let the poison circulate in the system we shall die, but if we throw it out with the help of natural remedies we shall live. You have committed no sin, but you did cherish great pride. Everybody thought that you were a strong-willed brahmachari. If that pride has melted, you have won. I have written to Kanchan at length and explained what she and you should now do. I shall not repeat it here. Generally I keep no copies of the letters I write to you. But copies of my letter to Kanchan and of this one shall be kept. They may also help me in refreshing my memory in future.

You should now, like a householder, earn an adequate living.
You can be accommodated in one of our departments. Think over your needs and let me know. Also state what kind of work you would like. It would be better if you reply to this letter after reading my letter to Kanchan. It would be all right even if both of you stay in Vyara. You may go on serving the people while looking after your own affairs. I am of course of the view that during the period of Kanchan’s pregnancy and for two years after the birth of the baby you should not cohabit with her. Doctors advise the same thing. It is for this reason that people adopt artificial methods of birth-control. I don’t think, however, that your craving for indulgence is so strong as to make that necessary. But even if it is, you should humbly admit the fact. There are numerous men and women who adopt artificial methods. Society does not boycott them; on the contrary, it even commends them. Sin is what we believe to be sin and virtue what we believe to be virtue. There are but few things which are sinful or virtuous in themselves. And in the last analysis even these are so because we think them so. I have written enough now.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 8398. Also C. W. 7217. Courtesy: Munnalal G. Shah

423. LETTER TO S. P. PATWARDHAN

NEW DELHI,
October 7, 1946

CHI. APPA,

I have your postcard. I hope you got my letters. You should leave only after you are fully recovered. Never mind if it takes time. If you are not completely cured and made strong, nature cure and Dr. Bhagawat will be put to shame. Handle from where you are as much Ratnagiri work as you can. Keep me posted with news of your health. You should regard me as free only when I leave this place.

Blessings from
BAPU

SJT. APPA PATWARDHAN

URULI KANCHAN

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
424. LETTER TO GAJANAN NAiK

NEW DELHI,
Silence Day, October 7, 1946

CHI. GAJANAN,

I am tired of you letters. I shall not get tired if you permit me to show them all to the persons about whom you write.

Many public workers go in for life insurance. How can they be bracketed together? You have to cultivate a liberal attitude.

One reaps as one sows. If we happen to notice someone’s shortcomings we should feel alarmed and say to ourselves: “What if I have even more serious ones and others can see them!” This reflection should make us try to see our own shortcomings and to remove them.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI GAJANAN NAiK
WARDHA

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

425. LETTER TO JATINDAS AMiN

NEW DELHI,
October 7, 1946

CHI. AMIN,

I have already sent you the messages. There is certainly nothing wrong in acquiring knowledge. Learn to have calmness of mind, to develop the spirit of service, to free yourself of attachments and aversions and to make your intellect steadfast.

Sushilabehn will write the rest.

Blessings from
BAPU

KOLHAPUR

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
426. LETTER TO MANGALDAS HARKISANDAS

NEW DELHI,
October 7, 1946

BHAJ MANGALDAS,

I was no doubt informed about your earlier cheque. Your cheque for Rs. 100 dated October 4, 1946, has reached me safely.

Blessings from
BAPU

SIT. MANGALDAS HARKISANDAS
BHAGA TALAO
SURAT

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

427. LETTER TO PRAVINA DIWANJI

NEW DELHI,
October 7, 1946

DEAR SISTER,

Kishorelal has forwarded to me here in New Delhi the noble gift you sent for me. It is beautiful.

Blessings from
BAPU

SMT. PRAVINABEHN DIWANJI
KHAR

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

428. LETTER TO SATISH D. KALELKAR

NEW DELHI,
October 7, 1946

CHI. SATISH,

I have your letter. The story about the Chinese is very interesting. I might use it in Harijanbandhu.

I was very glad to read that Chandan has acquired faith in Ramanama and following in her footsteps so have you. How nice if [the baby] possesses qualities worthy of the name it has been given and what a great delight it would be for all of you! If Rama came to dwell in Chandan’s heart all illness would disappear from her.

To you all,

Blessings from

BAPU

SJ. SATISH KALELKAR

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

429. LETTER TO DR. ATMARAM K. BHAGAWAT

NEW DELHI,
October 7, 1946

Bhai Bhagawat,

Appasaheb should leave the place only when he has recovered fully and regained his strength. If the cure is not within your reach and you need help from someone do take it. It is a human virtue to know one’s own limitations.

I hope everything else is going on well. How is Balkrishna? Is milk available?

My blessings to all.

URULI KANCHAN

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

430. LETTER TO CHANDRANI

NEW DELHI,
October 7, 1946

Chi. Chand,

It is bad that you keep falling ill. What service can you render if you continue to be ill? The weather there should be good these days. Do you get any sun in the house? Is the bathroom good? Do you get fresh air? I have stayed in Amritsar houses. One cannot say even the house of the rich are good. Is your diet all right? Air and diet are more efficacious than medicines.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
431. LETTER TO RAJ

October 7, 1946

CHI. RAJ,

Your handwriting is good. I was of course confident that your parents would be pleased with your sacrifice. Keep your pledge and strengthen your spirit of service.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

432. MESSAGE TO PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,

October, 7, 1946

The talks now going on give rise to the hope that the Muslim League will join the Cabinet. I shall pray for it. I ask all of you also to pray that the entente between the Congress and the Muslim League this time may be even more cordial and enduring than in 1916 or during the Khilafat days, that brother may not now abuse or kill brother and all may live in peace.

[From Hindi]

Hindustan, 8-10-1946

433. LETTER TO SITA GANDHI

October 8, 1946

CHI. SITA,

I have your letter. I hope you received the message I sent in Behn’s letter. When does New Year commence for us? Is not time

---

1 It being a Silence Day, the message was read out at the meeting.
2 Jawaharlal Nehru had met M. A. Jinnah to explore possibilities of the Muslim League accepting the five seats offered to it in the Cabinet, so that the Interim Government could be worked as a Provisional National Government.
3 Addressee’s mother, Sushila Gandhi changing ceaselessly? If we remain steadfast in all these changes, why need we care for a New Year?

But you may have the good wishes.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]
And aspire to live for 125 years, doing service till the end.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 4992

434. DISCUSSION WITH MEMBERS OF A. I. S. A.¹

NEW DELHI,
[October 8, 1946]²

A member suggested that the A. I. S. A. might pass a resolution requesting the Government to nationalize all new textile mills and the existing ones also as soon as practicable. Gandhiji demurring to the suggestion explained that they could not ask the Government to nationalize new textile mills when they were telling them that khadi and the erection of new mills could not go together. Shri T. Prakasam, the Premier of Madras, had already made an announcement to the effect that no new textile mills would be erected in the Madras Presidency. They might ask for the nationalization of the existing mills but he himself preferred putting them under strict State control to taking charge of and running them as a State concern. As a believer in non-violence he believed in trusteeship. He wanted a peaceful conversion of mill-owners, so that the mill-owners and their employees would all come under social control voluntarily. That meant that though, for instance, X might continue to be the legal owner, he would only take such commission out of the profits for himself as was warranted by his services and sanctioned by the people. The real owners would be the labourers in the mills. In one of the Tata concerns the labourers were reported to have become profit-sharers. Shri J. R. D. Tata’s speech in that connection was worthy of perusal. He (Gandhiji) considered such solution to be the best. Several mill-owners had assured him that they were ready to co-operate in any such scheme, if required, and would prevent further expansion of their textile mills. He deprecated the idea of joint control of the mill industry by the Government, the A. I. S. A. and the mill-owners. He said:

¹ Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”, 15-10-1946 and 18-10-1946. The annual meeting of the A. I. S. A. was held at the Harijan Colony in Kingsway on the 8th, 9th and 10th October.
² From Indian Annual Register
Our job is not to run mills but to ply the little wheel by hand. Why should we spend time in discussing a thing which lies outside our sphere of action. I would not shed a single tear if all the mills were to close. If mills flourish, khadi must die. It might still function as a supplementary occupation for the relief of the poor. But for that you do not need a big organization like the Charkha Sangh.

He would, he concluded, be perfectly satisfied if the State exercised control over the textile mills in consultation with them and so far as possible according to their advice.

“Would it not be advisable”, asked Shri Jajuji, “to ask the Government to give those who spin for themselves a subsidy so as to reduce the charges of weaving for self-spinners?” Gandhiji’s reply was that they should not ask for subsidy but ask the Government to help in supplying cotton, the necessary implements and the services of teachers and technical experts to those who would take to spinning for their own cloth requirements. He did not want to have it said that the Charkha Sangh was cashing its influence to make the government squander money on the whims of cranks and faddists. He wanted no favour for the Charkha Sangh which must stand or fall on its merits. He wanted everybody to feel that nothing had been given at the instance of the Charkha Sangh which had not been paid back tenfold.

Another member suggested that the weavers should be required to weave a certain amount of hand-spun yarn and unless they did that the quota of mill yarn should not be given to them. Any kind of compulsion, replied Gandhiji, would only create a revulsion against khadi. It would then cease to be the ‘livery of freedom’. He said:

The spirit of independence is in the air. The weaver might well refuse to be compelled.

“There is control in everything—food, cloth, etc. Why cannot joint control be introduced with regard to weavers?” Gandhiji replied:

I do not like the idea. We do not use compulsion with regard to spinners. We cannot use it for weavers. Let us go to the root of the difficulty. Our initial mistake was that we took to spinning but neglected weaving. If we had adopted universal weaving along with spinning, all these difficulties would not have arisen. The remedy is to improve the yarn so that the weavers have as little difficulty in weaving as possible. We should reason with the weavers and explain to them that dependence on mill yarn must kill their avocation in the end. Mill-owners are no philanthropists. They would draw the noose tight round the handloom weavers’ neck the moment they came within effective range of competition with mill cloth.
If we have faith in the charkha, we must forge ahead undismayed by these temporary bottlenecks. The number of handlooms weaving hand-spun will increase in due course. We have got enough artisans and indigenous skill in our country to produce all the cloth that we require for ourselves.

JAJUJI: This means that the work must go on as before at a snail’s pace. Our scheme of making 4 lakhs of people self-sufficient in cloth in a short time in this way will not succeed.

GANDHIJI: If it does not, the fault will be ours.

J. That is right in the ultimate sense. But circumstances also count.

G. It is man’s privilege to overcome adverse circumstances. Is not conquest of nature the slogan of the age we are living in? If circumstances alone had counted, Germany and Japan would have won the war. Let us in this respect take a leaf out of the book of the English people who do not know what it is to admit defeat. We have to cultivate austerity and penance on our life. There is nothing that the power of penance cannot achieve.

“You have taught us to be straight and above board in everything,” asked another member. “Is it not dishonest to wear uncertified khadi and be known as a khadiwala when one does not fulfil the conditions of wearing khadi? Is it not better to be honest and use mill cloth instead?”

Gandhiji replied that he did not approve of uncertified khadi, but he was of opinion that khadi, so long as it was genuine stuff, was preferable to mill cloth. All uncertified khadi was not dishonest.

For instance, people who spin for themselves or their family and have their yarn woven do not use certified khadi. Yet such khadi is of the highest merit. Certified khadi carried the guarantee that the rules of the A. I. S. A. have been observed, as for instance paying to the spinners a certain minimum wage. Khadi, even when the spinners are not paid the standard A. I. S. A. wage, is preferable to mill cloth. The higher wages paid to labourers in the spinning mills are more apparent than real. Mill cloth is \(2\frac{1}{2}\) times cheaper than khadi today. Experts have told me that if the mill industry did not receive special privileges and concessions in several ways, which it today enjoys, mill cloth would not sell cheaper than khadi. For instance, we provide cheap transport facilities to the mills to enable raw materials and mass-produced finished goods to be taken from one place to another. Again, enormous sums have been spent on growing long-staple cotton. or on starting technical institutes and on research work. No one has bothered to do anything for any of the seven lakhs of India’s villages. So the mills are today actually being subsidized in some shape or other. Remove all that and then see whether mill cloth is cheaper than khadi.

He could not possibly encourage uncertified khadi, continued Gandhiji, but mill cloth should be absolutely taboo.

A day might come when the A. I. S. A. might stop issuing certificates. Anybody would then be free to sell khadi. That would be inevitable when khadi became universal. The Charkha Sangh would then function as the custodian of the ethics and the general policy of khadi. Its business activities would cease.

People must become honest by habit and insist upon meticulous honesty on the part of the producers or the dealers in khadi so that only genuine stuff is sold and bought.

I have called khadi and the charkha the symbols of non-violence. But it is said that there is dishonesty even in certified bhan-dars. I wish it were not so. But there is no denying the fact that it is true of some.

I have objected to the term vegetable ghee because it is not ghee. It should be labelled as vegetable oil. Similarly, I cannot tolerate that cloth which is not khadi, i.e., is not hand-spun and hand-woven, should pass as such. The ultimate remedy lies in the buyer’s hands. “Buyer beware” is a sound legal maxim for all to remember.

It was suggested that the formulation of khadi policy for each unit of area should be left entirely to local bodies which should be completely independent of the central organization. Gandhiji, while he was entirely in favour of the maximum decentralization of initiative and responsibility, was opposed to the creation of local committees of untrained men and women to take the place of khadi workers. For organization of khadi work what was needed was a body of technicians and experts, men endowed with business talent and filled with the spirit of service. There was no room in it for personal ambition or power politics. The latter had become the bane of the Congress. To get rid of corruption in the Congress organization he had suggested that it should convert itself into an organization of workers. To introduce an element of democracy into khadi work would be to kill khadi. The Charkha Sangh was not a democratic organization in the sense the Congress was. It was an organization created by the Congress for the building up of democracy. Like the Directorate of the Bank of England, it was a business organization first and last. Only it was motivated by an altruistic, not profit, motive. A business organization of a democratic body could not be bound by the procedure of the democratic vote. He said:
We want to disperse in the villages. A khadi worker can have no use for any other sanction save such as persuasion and service can command. The moment he seeks to arm himself with any other, he kills khadi.

“To make khadi universal,” finally asked a friend, “you need to inspire the cooperation of everybody.”

Gandhiji replied that since khadi workers were expected to be full servants of the people, their worth if there was any could create public opinion in their favour. The need was not for a committee of members who might be a hindrance rather than help, whereas if service drew supporters they would be a powerful help.

“What would be the authority of the A. I. S. A. after khadi became decentralized?” was another question.

The answer came quick! The authority of the Sangh would be merely moral and, therefore, more potent than at present. Its function would not be to provide money or material but only to smooth the way for khadi work by the creation of a moral sanction. It would lend the khadi workers the use of its name but not seek to impose its will upon them. Its moral authority would be available to anybody who accepted its policy. Even its present assets would be put at the disposal of any unit that was ready and considered fit to claim autonomy, provided only that it guaranteed the right use of the assets allotted to it and bound itself to return the same after a certain period. The Charkha Sangh would have the right of inspection but even that would be at the will of the autonomous unit.

Harijan, 20-10-1946 and 27-10-1946

435. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,
October 8, 1946

We must all pray from the heart that the talks going on between the Congress and the Muslim League may bear fruit. I cannot give you any news today. I cannot even say what will happen in the future. Maybe it is the will of God that we should undergo yet further suffering. If that be so, we must put up with the suffering.

If we sincerely desire peace and if we have faith in God we should pray for a successful issue of the Congress-League parleys, so that people who are today behaving like savages may be brought back to civilized ways. However people in Europe or other parts of the world may behave, we must never sink to the state of the brute. We must remember that our actions reflect our inner feelings. You who are sitting here before me are but a drop in the vast sea of Indian humanity. If it is the wish of everyone to live at peace with his neighbour the Congress and the Muslim League will have to come to terms. Though it is true that the Viceroy acts under instructions from the British Cabinet, he is nevertheless an autocrat. Our leaders, on the contrary, are representatives of the people and must carry out people’s wishes. You should therefore pray that your mind may be cleansed of anger and hate and the leaders may be granted good sense so that the country may become united and free. If we desist from the present strife and mutual slaughter, we shall certainly achieve freedom. There is so much that a free India has to do. We are hungry and naked. Corruption and black-marketing are rampant. All this should go. Then alone can we organize ourselves and bring into being the new order which we want to see established.

[From Hindi]
Hindustan, 9-10-1946

436. ENGLISH-HINDUSTANI DICTIONARY

A friend from the Bhangi Colony, Delhi, asked me the other day why the Harijan Sevak had discontinued the above feature. I told him it appeared only in Harijan. He was disheartened. I explained to him that it was meant for the English-knowing public and, therefore, was not published in either the Harijanbandhu or Harijan Sevak and that it was by mistake it had appeared in Harijan Sevak. It would have been well to explain this in Harijanbandhu and Harijan Sevak. Those who are interested in it can remit postage stamps worth 1/6 and have the off-prints of the dictionary. Off-prints from the past issues are also available.

NEW DELHI, October 10, 1946

[From Hindi]
Harijan Sevak, 20-10-1946

1 This was published under the heading “Notes”.

304 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
437. TELEGRAAM TO Y. M. DADOO

NEW DELHI,
October 10, 1946

DOCTOR DADOO

DURBAN

GLAD PASSIVE RESISTERS ADHERE NON-VIOLENCE. HOPE NO WEAKENING OR DIVISION AMONG OUR PEOPLE.

GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

438. LETTER TO LORD PETHICK-LAWRENCE

NEW DELHI,
October 10, 1946

DEAR FRIEND,

It was good of you to send me your wishes for my birthday which is synonymous with the rebirth of the spinning-wheel in 1918.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

LORD PETHICK-LAWRENCE

Gandhiji’s Correspondence with the Government 1944-47, p. 217

439. LETTER TO SIR STAFFORD CRIPPS

NEW DELHI,
October 10, 1946

DEAR FRIEND,

Three letters I am writing after the morning prayer. The other two are to the Lawrences.

Many thanks to you two for your wishes. I am here only for the work you expect me to do. Heaven help us all.

1 Indian leader; Chairman of the Passive Resistance Council and Democratic Action Committee
Hope you are really well and strong.

With love,

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

SIR STAFFORD CRIPPS

_Gandhiji’s Correspondence with the Government, 1944-47_, p. 218

_440. LETTER TO DINSHAW K. MEHTA_

NEW DELHI,

_October, 10, 1946_

CHI. DINSHAW,

I will not address you in the honorific plural. I cannot help writing to you today. Jehangir’s letter has only a line about you. My heart cries out for you. Why should you, an adherent of nature cure, feel distressed? How can your sorrowing alleviate others’ sorrow? Hasn’t a nature cure practitioner himself said: “Physician, heal thyself.” If you can get away from there and if you are still depressed, come to me and have the cure for your depression. Never mind if I am in Delhi or Sevagram or anywhere else.

I hope Gulbehn and the children are well. Mother must have now recovered.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

DR. DINSHAW MEHTA

POONA

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

---

1 This is in English.
441. LETTER TO RANGANAYAKI DEVI

NEW DELHI,
October 10, 1946

CHI. RANGANAYAKI,

I have your letter. You may come wherever I may be. God is in you. He will give you fortitude. You have ears to listen to His voice, then why bother to hear anything else?

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI RANGANAYAKI DEVI
FIRST HOUSE
SRIRANGAM

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

442. NOTE TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

NEW DELHI,
October 10, 1946

It is wrong.¹ The really poor are never able to listen to the radio. I am therefore not at all enthusiastic about it.

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, p. 325

¹ Some one had suggested to the addressee that he should arrange for Gandhiji to broadcast on the radio, so that the whole country might hear him.
443. MESSAGE TO STUDENTS OF HARIJAN UDYOGSHALA

NEW DELHI, October 10, 1946

It is my earnest desire that the students of the Harijan Udyogshala and members of their families should become true Harijans—i.e., men of God.

[From Hindi]

Hindustan, 11-10-1946

444. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI, October 10, 1946

Addressing the prayer meeting in Bhangi Colony on Thursday evening, Mahatma Gandhi said that he had thought that all the jewellery that had been presented to him had been auctioned out. But a ring had just then been given him which he auctioned, as usual, immediately after the prayer. . . . He was, led to recall how over than 20 years ago he had, during the course of one of his tours, begun collecting money by auction at Ahmednagar. In those days, auctions used to go on by the hour and he used to collect thousands in a day. Now he had not the physical strength to do this.

Among other things, he even used to auction garlands of flowers which were presented to him. Here he confessed that he had never liked garlands of flowers. He had always held it to be cruel or wrong to pick flowers from plants. Flowers should be allowed to fall to the ground in a natural way. They then made a beautiful carpet under the trees and looked just as lovely as when they were in blossom. In his ashram people were expected not to pick flowers from off the trees. Thus was introduced the custom of presenting garlands of hand-spun yarn in the place of flowers.

Gandhiji, however, assured the audience that he did not want them to think that all who bid at the auctions had to pay or indeed bid at all.

The Hindustan Times, 11-10-1946

1 The message was for the convocation of the Udyogshala. Gandhiji was not able to be present.
445. LETTER TO PYARELAL

[After October 10, 1946]1

CHI. PYARELAL,

I have not written without thinking. You have high regard for your own knowledge. Hence, I feel like a child before you. How can I feel attached because you consider me your father and respect me? The very fact that your mind is in turmoil shows that in spite of your having lived with me for so many years you are in anguish! Whatever I say or do has no effect on you! How much should I write? To whom should I write? I am defeated.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

My silence does not apply when visitors like Nawab Saheb, Maulana Saheb come.

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

446. LETTER TO T. PRAKASAM

BHANGI COLONY,
READING ROAD,
October 11, 1946

DEAR SHRI PRAKASAM,

I am writing to you under instructions from Gandhiji.

He has had a letter from a friend, whose name he is withholding, making certain complaints. I give the relevant extracts and Gandhiji would like to have your opinion on them.

(a) “An indescribable arrogance has entered into the mind and heart of 75% of Congressmen in the Madras Province which is arousing bitterness in all who are not Congressmen... Some of them are blackmailing officials and others by openly approaching ministers and thus pretending that they could do anything with their influence.”

1 The letter is written on a paper bearing the stamp of this date “October 10, 1946”.
(b) “Members of the Legislature are paid Rs. 150/- p.m. They also get a large daily allowance and travelling bhutta when they attend the Councils. As paid men they should do some work for the district they represent but they don’t . . . . They are very prominent only when ministers visit the districts.”

Yours sincerely,
AMRIT KAUR

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

447. LETTER TO MANU GANDHI

NEW DELHI,
October 11, 1946

CHI. MANUDI,

I have gone through your letter. I gave it to Sushila Pai, Kanu, Sushila (Dr.) and Pyarelal to read. Here I shall tell you only this, that I liked your letter.

Further, I shall be happy if you come over and have a talk with me. I do not wish to put any pressure on you. It is my earnest desire that you should remain a pure virgin till the end of your life and spend your life in service.

I hope Umiya’s son is doing well.

Blessings to all from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./XXIV
448. LETTER TO PERIN CAPTAIN

NEW DELHI,
October 11, 1946

DEAR SISTER,

I have your letter. I wonder what I can do. I shall see what can be done; not much, I fear.¹

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRIMATI PERINBEHN CAPTAIN
ORIENT CLUB
BOMBAY

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

449. LETTER TO AMTUSALAAM

NEW DELHI,
October 11, 1946

CHI. AMTUL SALAAM,

Your letter is no doubt long. But it does not matter. If your heart prompts you to go to Borkamata, do go. I do not know what order to give you. When we meet we shall talk more.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 532

450. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING ²

NEW DELHI,
October 11, 1946

This¹ is a specimen of the yarn Punjabi women bring to me. The yarn has been given to me for the poor, including the Harijans, ¹ This sentence and the address are in English.

² A slightly different version of this speech also appeared in Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”, Harijan, 20-10-1946.
³ Here Gandhiji displayed a skein of yarn.
who are the most oppressed. The skein has a nice look, but it is difficult to unwind. It had been my experience in the past that unwinding the yarn took a long time and it frequently broke in the process. The result was further delay and more labour. What the spinner should do is to take off the yarn entirely from the spindle and put it on a winder that takes a round of four feet. They should count the rounds for each hank and tie them up. The yarn should be strong and even so that weavers do not find it difficult to handle. Today mill yarn is readily available. But this will not always be so. But why should weavers be dependent on mill yarn? If hand-spun yarn of good quality is available they will not buy mill yarn. If you can spin yarn of good quality you can clothe everybody and put an end to the mills.

I hope all spinners will take the trouble to do as indicated.

[From Hindi]

Hindustan, 12-10-1946

451. HINDU PANI AND MUSLIM PANI

A stranger travelling in Indian trains may well have a painful shock when he hears at railway stations for the first time in his life ridiculous sounds about pani, tea and the like being either Hindu or Muslim. It would be repulsive now that the Government at the Centre is wholly national and a well-known Indian in the person of Asaf Ali Saheb is in charge of Transport and Railways. It is to be hoped that we shall soon have the last of the shame that is peculiarly Indian. Let no one imagine that Railways being under a Muslim, Hindus may not get justice. In the Central and Provincial Governments, there is or should be no Hindu, Muslim or any other communal distinctions. All are Indians. Religion is a personal matter. Moreover, the members of the Cabinet have set up a wholesome convention that they should always meet at the end of the day’s work and take stock of what each member has done. It is team work in which the members are jointly and severally responsible for one another’s work. It is not open to any member to say that a particular thing is not his work because it is no part of his portfolio. We have a right therefore to assume that this unholy practice of having separate everything for every community at railway stations will go. Scrupulous cleanliness is a desideratum for all. If taps are used for all liquids there need be no compunction felt by the most orthodox about helping themselves. A fastidious person may keep his own lota and cup and receive his milk, tea, coffee or water through a tap. In this there is no interference with religion. No one is compelled to buy anything at railway stations. As a matter of fact many orthodox persons fast for water and food during travel. Thanks we still breathe the same air, walk on the same mother earth.

All communal cries at least at railway stations should be unlawful.

As I have often said in these columns trains and steamers are the best media for the practical education of the millions of travellers in spotless cleanliness, hygiene, sanitation and camaraderie between the different communities of India. Let us hope that the Cabinet will have the courage to act up to their convictions and may confidently expect the hearty co-operation of the Railway staff and the public in making this much needed reform a thorough success.

New Delhi, October 12, 1946

Harijan, 20-10-1946

452. REAL INDIA

If my frequent wanderings throughout India of the villages have not deceived me, it can be confidently asserted that the 700,000 villages get and want no police protection. The solitary Patel to a village is a terrorist lording it over the villages and is designed for helping the petty revenue collector to collect revenue due to the Mabap. I am not aware of the policeman having aided the villagers in protecting their goods or cattle against depredations of man and beast. The Police Patel is not to be blamed for what he is. He has been chosen for his task which he does well. He has not been taught to regard himself as the servant of the people. He represents his master the Viceroy. The change at the top has not yet permeated the most distant village. How can it? It has not come from the bottom. The Viceroy still retains legal and military powers to remove and even to imprison his ministers. The latter have no power, legal or other, to imprison the Viceroy. Even the Civil Service is still under his control. It is not suggested that the Viceroy does not mean to shed all power

1 Government
nor that he does not wish the most distant village to realize that he is determined under instructions from Whitehall to shed every vestige of British control in the quickest time possible.

The relevance of all this writing is for showing that we do not yet learn from the village in which India lives that every Indian, man or woman, is his or her own policeman. This he or she can only do when neither harbours mischief against his or her neighbour, no matter what religion he professes or denies. If unfortunately the politically minded will not or cannot go as far as suggested here, he must at least shed all fear and resolutely deny himself all protection whether from the military or the police. I am positive that India will not come into her own unless every home becomes its own castle not in the sense of the ages known as dark but in the very ancient true sense that everyone has learnt the art of dying without ill-will, or even wishing that since he cannot someone else will do away with the would-be assassin. How nice, therefore, it would be if everyone of us had this lesson burnt into us. There is much proof in support of the lesson, if we will take the trouble to examine the proof.

NEW DELHI, October 12, 1946

Harijan, 20-10-1946

453. QUESTION BOX

ONENESS OF COSTUME A CURE?

Q. In these last four weeks, I have seen so much bloodshed and firing that it has left a bitter taste in my mouth. Every day since the riots started I have been on duty as a magistrate trying to maintain the peace. Now, more than ever before, I am convinced of the necessity that we should insist on every Indian wearing the same nationalist dress— as you remember I had broached the subject before but at the time you had not approved of the idea. Why is it that none of the stabbings have been of people wearing a shirt and pant? This should be conclusive proof that the dress causes the difference in religion to be accentuated. Your reply to this through the Harijan for others like me who think that communal riots would disappear within a short time on our wearing the same kind of dress would be most appreciated.

A. I publish this as from a well-versed, well-meaning friend.
These three qualities combined do not necessarily make for clearness of thought. What is wanted is not oneness of costume but oneness of hearts. We have only to look at Europe to demonstrate the emptiness of the idea that oneness of costume will enable us to get out of the mess we are in. Ill-will is like an ill wind. It must go and be replaced by the fresh and bracing wind of goodwill.

THE SMOKING EVIL

Q. While you have all along written very strongly in favour of prohibition, you have not spoken either often enough or with equal emphasis in the matter of smoking. This evil is increasing with alarming rapidity and even children are increasingly getting addicted to it. The crores that are literally burnt by smoking could be so well utilized in wise ways in our poor land.

A. The taunt is true but not new. The reason for want of equal emphasis is to be sought in the fact that smoking has attained alarming respectability. When a vice reaches that state it becomes difficult to eradicate. This admission does not mean that we should not agitate for abatement of the nuisance. How to do so and when is the question. I am sorry to have to confess my inability to answer it.

THE CURSE OF DOWRY

Q. The demand for dowries in the marriage market is growing. None is immune from this injustice. The richer the parent of the prospective bride-groom, the heavier is the demand of the dowry. The problem now is such that many marriageable girls cannot be married and the state of their parents can better be imagined than described. Popular governments should help to check the evil through the law.

A. It is a curious phenomenon the questioner notices. Education not only does not improve the situation but makes it worse. The affected class has to wake up before the curse destroys the class which in its terrible weakness shamelessly betakes to it. Let them ceaselessly and restlessly agitate. I know no other way.

WHY THIS SECRECY?

Q. Can you say why, when mutual slaughter between brother and brother is going on, the names of the respective communities should be withheld?

A. I confess that the question has often occurred to me. There seems to me to be no reason for this hush-hush policy save that it is a legacy from the autocracy which, let us hope, the national Government have displaced. Those who ought not to know, know who stabs whom. And those who should know are kept in the dark. I am sure there are many Hindus and Muslims and even members of other communities taking pride in being Indians first and last without ceasing to be devoted followers of their own religions and who love to do their best to dissuade blind fanatics from making mischief. I know many such. They have no means of ascertaining facts except through the Press. Let darkness be exposed to light. It will be dispelled quicker.

NEW DELHI, October 12, 1946
Harijan, 20-10-1946

454. HOW TO MAKE THE WHEEL GO?

Shri Kanu Gandhi’s note\(^2\) deserves consideration. It should be remembered that the charkha is not, nor can ever be, like the various small or big things made in the West. There are millions of watches, all made in the same place. They are sold all over the world. The same story applies to the sewing-machine. These things are symbols of one kind of civilization. The charkha symbolizes an opposite kind of civilization. We do not want to mass-produce charkhas in one place and scatter them all over India. Our ideal is to manufacture charkhas and accessories in the towns or villages where the spinners live. Therein lies the value of the charkha. If anything goes wrong with the charkha the spinners should learn how to put it right. It is for the Charkha Sangh to see to all this. So long as this does not happen khadi can never replace mill cloth.

NEW DELHI, October 12, 1946
[From Hindi]
Harijan Sevak, 20-10-1946

455. NOTE TO J. C. KUMARAPPA

[October 12, 1946]\(^4\)

I am too much preoccupied to give due attention to this matter. Jhaverbhai\(^3\) should go. He does not want to take anything from the Government for his feed. This he wants to draw from A. I. V. I. A. You may talk to him and fix up what you think proper. That will save some time. He may see this note and you two may do what is necessary. Meanwhile let him not live on borrowed money. When I

---

\(^1\) A translation of this also appeared in Harijan, 20-10-1946.
\(^2\) Not translated here. The note had enumerated certain steps to be taken by Khadi Bhandars to make the charkha more popular.
\(^3\) The date is in the addressee’s hand.
\(^4\) Jhaverbhai Patel come to Sevagram we shall work it out. You may advance what he needs for the time.

From a photostat: G. N. 10184

456. LETTER TO H. GREENFIELD

VALMIKI MANDIR,
READING ROAD, NEW DELHI,
October 12, 1946

DEAR MR. GREENFIELD,

I have been shown a note\(^1\) on salt circulated to the Members of the Cabinet. You were to have sent me an amendment which you had admitted was necessary. But instead I see the long and argued note without any amendment. It contains also a proposal to retain a portion of the tax and therefore the monopoly also I suppose.

I confess that I have glanced through the note most hurriedly.
Rajaji has asked me to send him my amendment which I am now doing. A copy will be sent to you when I am ready [sic].

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

H. GREENFIELD, ESQ., C.S.I., C.I.E.
MEMBER, CENTRAL BOARD OF REVENUE
SECRETARIAT, NEW DELHI

Gandhiji’s Correspondence with the Government, 1944-47, p. 164

\(^1\) Not reproduced here. It contained proposals, for which “general approval” of Gandhiji was claimed, envisaging abolition of excise duty on salt but continuation of Government production of salt, control of organized manufacture and retention of existing machinery for exercising such control.
457. LETTER TO KALKA PRASAD

NEW DELHI,
October 12, 1946

BHAJ KALKA PRASAD,

Shridharani has just arrived from America. He needs khadi. Give him as much as he wants. Charge the actual price. Assume that the yarn is with me. Charge the price of the yarn also.

Blessings from
M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat of the Hindi: C. W. 10418

458. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING¹

NEW DELHI,
October 12, 1946

Mahatma Gandhi began his address by telling the audience that he had been in two minds whether or not to break his silence, which he had taken to for various reasons, in order to address them. Ultimately he decided to break it. He wanted to tell them that while he had not taken a vow of silence he had made up his mind for the time being to speak only on business to those whom he called his jailors. One result of his imposed silence was that he had been able to get through a fair amount of writing for Harijan.

Gandhiji went on to say how he felt impelled to tell them of the error committed by him three days ago. He was thoroughly ashamed of it. For him, at his time of life, it was unpardonable. No harm had been done to anyone because of it. His error consisted in being over-hasty. He read a little thing hurriedly, though there was no occasion for hurry, and fancied it was quite right whereas it was not quite that. No public servant had the right to act in this way. He seemed, for the moment, to have lost confidence in himself and the belief that he would live for 125 years.

The first verse of the Ishopanishad demanded giving oneself and all possessions to God. If a man fully did that, he could never be hasty. It may be that he was old now and his brain was getting weak. He knew that his memory was not as good as it used to be. It never was extra good. But when a man was guilty of error it was his duty to call God as witness and vow never to commit the mistake again. That was the only true way of repentance to realize the guilt and confess it immediately before the sun went down. Death had got to come to everyone, and who knew when it would come?

¹ A slightly different version of this speech also appeared in Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter” in Harijan, 20-10-1946.

Gandhiji said his life was an open book and he hid nothing from the world. They who listened to him were his world for the time. He was telling them of his mistake in order that they may learn a lesson from it and never be hasty or careless in their actions. While his mind had been relieved of a burden by confession, Gandhiji said it would take a long time for him to regain the lost confidence as far as living 125 years was concerned.

The Hindustan Times, 13-10-1946

459. RURALIZING UNIVERSITY EDUCATION

There is much truth in what Dr. Kini says. He should put himself in touch with Dr. Zakir Hussain and the Aryanayakums and devote his energies to evolving a workable scheme. I see no difficulty in existing Universities conforming to the requirements of the villagers, who are India, instead of turning out indifferent imitators of the West.

Harijan, 13-10-1946

460. DR. LOHIA AGAIN

Dr. Ram Manohar Lohia’s letter to the Chief Judge of the Goa High Court deserves more than passing attention. I copy it below from the daily Press:

At the time of my arrest¹, I had not, so far as I know, violated any Goan law. I may have been intent on doing so but that is irrelevant. The police officer at Collem walked into my compartment, asked me no questions and put me straightway under arrest. International law, as it stands today, probably empowers the Portuguese Government to arrest and deport anyone whom they consider an undesirable alien but they are surely not empowered to hold him in prison unless he has actually violated some law. The Portuguese Government have in the past declared me as alien and taken up their stand on a provision in International Law with regard to me. They owe me an apology and damages for illegal imprisonment or else

¹ This was appended to an article by Dr. Kini, Secretary in the Education Department of Mysore; vide also “Village University”, 15-9-1946

² On the 29th September
they must give up their attempt to apply International Law as between Goa and the rest of Hindustan. Furthermore, between September 29 and October 2, they kept me in a cell, which has probably as much ventilation as just keeps a man alive. They owe me an added apology and damages for this kind of treatment.

I continue to be held in solitary confinement, although under better conditions and I am not taken out of my cell except for bath and I am held incommunicado. These add to the illegality of my imprisonment.

Let no one laugh at Dr. Lohia’s presumption in asking for damages. If he had power behind him, the Goan authorities would quickly apologize and offer to pay damages. It is not an unusual thing for big powers to ask for damages and obtain them for injury or insult done even to insignificant subjects. Dr. Lohia is not a little man. Well, India has a National Government. I am sure they are as sensitive as any can be. I should not be surprised if they have lodged their protest and asked the Goa Government to mend their manners. Anyway, let the force of public opinion be behind the National Government and the injured Dr. Ram Manohar Lohia. The injury done to him is injury done to our countrymen in Goa and through them to the whole of India.

NEW DELHI, October, 13, 1946
Harijan, 20-10-1946

461. ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS

October 14, 1946

Q. Wouldn’t it be better to set up a public institution at Bordi for conducting research in the Ayurvedic system of medicine?

A. It would be good to make Bordi a public institution.

Q. The Government Ayurvedic Colleges teach seventy per cent allopathy. Ayurveda should be taught as a separate science. When this question was first discussed you had said that you would arrange for me to meet Dr. Gilder.

A. The Ayurvedic education is something I have been long interested in. The work can certainly be pursued if there are vaidyas you know who think like you and who are selfless. Only then would it be useful for you to go to Dr. Gilder.

1 The questions, reproduced here only in summary, were asked by Vallabhram Vaidya. Gandhi gave his answers in writing.
Q. It is difficult to find vaidyas who fully share my views. There are some who are too orthodox to allow any changes or innovations in the Ayurvedic system while others want to turn it into allopathy. In fact Ayurveda is based on theory of tridosha\textsuperscript{1} and its cure is based on five basic substances.

A. What do you think of Joshi of Poona? If there is no one else, what can you do by yourself? Many doctors have told me that the treatment based on tridosha is a fraud. It is for you to prove that it is not so. It is also for you to train vaidyas like you.

What Dr. Gilder has passed has also been prepared by vaidyas. Bhadkamkar, Lagu, Gananath Sen and Vishwanath are from among you, are they not?

Q. The doctors do not know anything about the treatment based on tridosha. Bhadkamkar and other vaidyas are more of doctors than vaidyas, and that is why they have approved the scheme.

A. I can arrange a meeting with Dr. Gilder. But I would advise you to see Bhadkamkar and Joshi. Have a little talk with Sushila Nayyar, with Satis Babu, too. He is here at present.

Q. I have gone through the book Prakritik Chikitsa which you gave me. It is full of tall talk and is not based on the author’s personal experience. He has described properties of medicines without citing authority.

A. I have noted the tall talk in it. Only you can write authoritatively on medicines.

Q. I will prepare the students. But it is obvious that my syllabus will be different from that prescribed by the Government Board. So what shall we do about its registration?

A. Prepare something. Do not worry about registration. First of all train the volunteers. It is not necessary for them to have degrees. If they are good I will accommodate them. I do not care for degrees.

From Gujarati: C. W. 2930. Courtesy: Vallabhram Vaidya

\textsuperscript{1} The three humours, viz., wind (vata), bile (pitta) and phlegm (kapha)
462. LETTER TO MANU GANDHI

NEW DELHI,
October 14, 1946

CHI. MANUDI,

You had left a letter here. I sent the reply the very next day. You would not have got it. It went to Udaipur.

I have your letter today. I was sorry to learn about Shankarlal’s illness. It is good you two sisters went to Udaipur. Tell Shankarlal that he should quickly get well. It does not behove a scout to fall ill. Whatever the job he may be doing, he cannot cease being a scout.

Why is Umia feeling unhappy? Bring her along with you. It is another matter if you yourself do not come.

I am not calling you to me to make you unhappy. You are not afraid of me, are you? It can never be that I would make you do anything against your wishes. I only wish you well. I wish to see you healthy and well.

Now there is no time to write more.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

463. MESSAGE TO PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,
October 14, 1946

Man should earnestly desire the well-being of all God’s creation and pray that he may have the strength to do so. In desiring the well-being of all, lies his own welfare; he who desires only his own or his community’s welfare is selfish and it can never be well with him.

Harijan, 20-10-1946

1 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”. This was a written message read out at the meeting, it being a Silence Day.
464. DEADLY EMBRACE

In Bombay a Hindu gave shelter to a Muslim friend the other day. This infuriated a Hindu mob who demanded the head of the Muslim friend. The Hindu would not surrender his friend. So both went down literally in deadly embrace. This was how it was described to me authentically. Nor is this the first instance of chivalry in the midst of frenzy. During the recent blood bath in Calcutta, stories of Muslims having, at the peril of their lives, sheltered their Hindu friends and vice versa were recorded. Mankind would die if there were no exhibition any time and anywhere of the divine in man.

Shri Balasaheb Kher, the Premier of Bombay, has described in glowing terms the instance of two youths rushing to still the wrath of a Muslim mob and meeting what they knew was certain death. They met Death as their true friend. Let no scoffer deny the inestimable value of such sacrifice—sacred deed. It would be mock sacrifice, if every such act ended in success so called. The certain moral is that, if such instances are sufficiently multiplied, the senseless slaughter on either side in the name of religion will stop. One indispensable condition is that there should be no hypocrisy, no mock heroism. Let us appear as we are.

NEW DELHI, October 15, 1946
Harijan, 20-10-1946

465. DECENTRALIZATION

At the meeting of the Charkha Sangh at Delhi on the 10th many important subjects were discussed. One of them was decentralization. Decentralization is the soul of khadi. The ambition of the Charkha Sangh is to see that charkhas and looms find a home in the seven lakh villages of India, that crores of Indians wear only khadi and mill cloth is completely wiped out.

The time has come for a province to become self-reliant, if it wants. However, if it does not want to do so or if it cannot do so a district can become self-reliant. If it fails to do that a taluka can become self-reliant. If that is not possible a group of villages can and if even they can’t become self-reliant, a single one can. Ultimately an individual can certainly become self-reliant.
One should not ask how this can be possible. Those who are members of the Charkha Sangh should write to its Secretary in detail, and their problem will be solved. Those who possess the property of the Sangh will have to make some arrangement to return the money. Only he will be bound by the policies of the Sangh who accepts them. No one is obliged to accept them. Discipline is for those who want to observe it. There is no uniform code of conduct. There is one root but there are many branches and each branch has many leaves. Diversity in unity is a wonderful law of the world. Therefore the Charkha Sangh has adopted as its policy the giving of as much encouragement as possible to decentralization. On the other hand the branches of the Sangh should aspire to become independent as soon as possible.

NEW DELHI, October 15, 1946

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbandhu, 20-10-1946
466. TELEGRAM TO RAM MANOHAR LOHIA

NEW DELHI
October 15, 1946

DOCTOR RAM MANOHAR LOHIA
RAMNIVAS THALAKWADI
BELGAUM

YOU HAVE TO RE-ENTER GOA BUT BEFORE DOING SO COME HERE. NO HURRY. WIRE REPLY.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

467. TELEGRAM TO SIDDHINATH SARMA

NEW DELHI,
October 15, 1946

SIDDHINATH SARMA
GENERAL SECRETARY
GAUHATI

GODS WILL. DOING WHAT IS POSSIBLE.

GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

468. LETTER TO H. GREENFIELD

BHANGI COLONY, READING ROAD,
NEW DELHI,
October 15, 1946

DEAR MR. GREENFIELD,

I have to thank you for your letters.¹ The maps will be useful. As to the amendments I have spoken to Rajaji. I have, therefore, no copy to send you. You will know all from him. Nevertheless, if there is any difficulty, I trust you will see me again or write. In any case I would like to see the final form before it is published.

¹ Both dated October 12. The first assured Gandhiji that “provisions relating to the use of structures and to the enclosure of land for salt manufacture” had not been forgotten and the second enclosed maps showing production, consumption and distribution of salt.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

H. GREENFIELD, ESQ., C.S.I., C.I.E.
MEMBER, CENTRAL BOARD OF REVENUE
NEW DELHI

Gandhiji’s Correspondence with the Government, 1944-47, pp. 166-7

469. LETTER TO PADMAJA NAIDU

NEW DELHI,
October 15, 1946

DEAR LOTUSBORN,

Your two loving letters.

You are doing good and brave work. It will bear fruit. Hope you are keeping well.

Love.

PADMAJA NAIDU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

470. LETTER TO T. PRAKASAM

NEW DELHI,
October 15, 1946

DEAR PRAKASAM,

I have your two letters. Sjt. Kaleswar Rao I understand.

As to khadi, you have a difficult task, I have seen the attack in Hindu. Is your Cabinet with you, is the Assembly with you, is the public with you? Then you have nothing to fear. If you are to have success, you should carry the country with you. If it is not, you may drop the scheme. I have stated the conditions of success. I know that the attack is ignorant. You and I should know that often does ignorance rule the public.

I am with you in the scheme on merits. But who am I?
Therefore, do not think of me, but think of the public and act.

Yours,

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

326 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
DEAR ABDUL HAMID.

I take it you know Gujarati. I await you every day. Your shoes are with me. How much money do you need? Why are you afraid of your parents? They don’t want to suppress you. come and see me. They looked for you at the hotel but could get no news of you.

Blessings from

M. K. GANDHI

MIAIN ABDUL HAMID
HOTEL IMPERIAL
NEW DELHI

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

472. LETTER TO KANTILAL N. KAMDAR

BHAI KANTILAL,

I referred your letter to a specialist in medicine. He says what you say is right but that there are so many scientific hitches involved that it is better not to go through the process. I therefore do not want to involve myself in the matter.

M. K. GANDHI

KANTILAL NAGARDAS KAMDAR
G. S. MEDICAL COLLEGE
PAREL, BOMBAY 12

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
473. LETTER TO MAULANA HIFZURREHMAN

NEW DELHI,

October 15, 1946

DEAR MAULANA SAHEB,

I have read all your papers. The attack is on me, not on Kripalaniji. If what I have always believed is a crime, then Kripalaniji is guilty.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

474. A LETTER

October 15, 1946

BHAII SAHEB,

I have your letter. I have not had a minute to spare... You take a perverted view of all that I say. God is our witness.

Yours,

M. K. GANDHI

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

475. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,

October 15, 1946

Addressing the prayer meeting on Tuesday evening in Bhangi Colony, New Delhi, Gandhiji said he was grieved to learn that floods in Assam had taken a heavy toll of life and property. Thousands had been rendered homeless, property worth lakhs had been destroyed, and many persons were reported to have been washed away by the floods. That was an act of Nature.

But what was far worse than the news from Assam was the fact that there

1 This could have been addressed to Moulvi Abdul Haq; vide “Letter to Abdulk Haq”, 19-9-1946.
2 Blank space in the source was rioting in Noakhali in Eastern Bengal. The papers said that the Hindus, a very small minority there, were being attacked by the Muslims. He did not want to go into the details of the happenings. He knew his doctrine did not count for much among the people today and yet it was his duty to give his advice whether they acted upon it or not. Gandhiji himself had never thought that there was any difference between Hindus, Muslims, Christians, Parsis or others. All were brothers, sons of the same soil. But even brothers fought furiously with each other sometimes and this was what was happening today between Hindus and Muslims.

Ever since he had heard the news of Noakhali, indeed ever since the blood bath of Calcutta, he had been wondering where his duty lay. God would show him the way. But what he wanted to tell them and through them a wider public was that it was the duty of every Hindu not to harbour any thoughts of revenge on Muslims in spite of what they did in Noakhali. That was the creed of the Congress. It had brought them thus far. But was non-violence only an expedient against the British, as some people thought, because the British were so strong?

Such an approach to non-violence was wholly wrong. The Congress had an overwhelming majority of Hindu members but it belonged to all communities. Maulana Saheb had served it for years and through it everybody, irrespective of caste or creed. His name was up again but he was withdrawing it and Gandhiji had supported his withdrawal. He was an ill man today. The new President was Shri Kripalani whom he had first met in Champaran. He was going not only to wear a crown of thorns but also lie on a bed of thorns. It was a much more difficult place than even the Cabinet members were filling.

Shri Kripalani would have to teach people how to die. That was the only way to end this fratricidal war, to learn how to die without killing.

A friend from Ahmedabad had some time ago written and said that people knew how to return blow for blow, they had learnt how to be fearless of going to jail but they had not learnt how to die without killing. It was up to him and others who believed in non-violence to teach people this supreme way by personal act.

Gandhiji said that the Muslim League was, according to Press reports, coming into the Interim Government. He hoped they were coming in to work as brothers. If they did, all would be well. And just as he had exhorted Hindus not to slay Muslims nor harbour ill-will towards them, so he appealed to the Muslim League, even if they wanted to fight for Pakistan, to fight cleanly and in a friendly manner.

Quaid-e-Azam had said how everyone would receive justice in Pakistan. It was as good as Pakistan where they were in the majority and he implored them to treat Hindus as blood brothers and not as enemies. He hoped both Hindus and Muslims would vow not to hurt each other henceforth. Unless they did this he would like to proclaim from the housetops that they had not got and would never get the independence they craved for. No man or people could be free who followed the law of the jungle.

_The Hindustan Times_, 16-10-1946

476. TALK WITH ASSAM DEPUTATION

[Before October 16, 1946]

In the course of his reply to the Deputation,\(^1\) Gandhiji said that Assam need have no fear. Pandit Nehru’s broadcast had made no change in the Congress stand as regards the grouping of provinces and Assam would be able to frame its future constitution by itself. Gandhiji added:

The Congress is an institution of the brave, not of cowards. The Congress would certainly help Assam if she marches on with courage.

_The Hindu_, 16-10-1946

477. TELEGRAM TO NARSEEBHAI DEVSHI

_October 16, 1946_

NARSEEBHAI DEVSHI

RANAVAV

YOU MAY COME THOUGH BUSY.

GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

478. TELEGRAM TO JANARDAN PRASAD

NEW DELHI,

_October 16, 1946_

JANARDAN PRASAD

LAHERIA SARAI

AM GLAD HE\(^2\) IS DELIVERED FROM AGONY. WE SHOULD ALL REJOICE.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

\(^1\) The Deputation, headed by Maulana Tayabulla, President of Assam Provin-ncial Congress Committee, had expressed the “strong attitude” of Assam with regard to Grouping.

\(^2\) Brijkishore Prasad, who had died on October 15, 1946
479. TELEGRAM TO YASHMILAP

NEW DELHI,
October 16, 1946

YASHMILAP
LAHORE
INSUFFICIENT DATA FOR JUDGMENT.

GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

480. LETTER TO JOHN HAYNES HOLMES

NEW DELHI,
October 16, 1946

DEAR DR. HOLMES,

Your kind letter of 27-9-1946 and the little book came into my hands only yesterday. His goods had to follow Devdas. He could not carry them in his 'plane'.

I am glad Devdas made it a point to see you, no matter how busy he was.

The book I am keeping on my desk, in the fond hope that I shall snatch a few minutes to drink in the wisdom it contains.

The rest you get from the papers.

Yours,

M. K. GANDHI

1 American Unitarian clergyman, pastor of the Community Church of New York
481. LETTER TO LADY PETHICK-LAWRENCE

NEW DELHI,
October 16, 1946

DEAR SISTER.

So you are two years ahead of me. You should try as we all should to live the full span of life—125 years. I seem to have lost the equilibrium I thought I would have to entitle me to entertain the wish. May you have what I seem for the moment to miss.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

LADY PETHICK-LAWRENCE
11 OLD SQUARE
LINCOLN’S INN
LONDON, W. C. 2

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

482. LETTER TO MADALASA

NEW DELHI,
October 16, 1946

CHI. MADU,

I should like you not to violate your resolution.¹ If you are busy, you may write only a post-card.

Thank God Rajat has recovered.

The love of has recovered.

The love of husband and wife should be like that of intimate friends, and perfectly pure. They should share each other’s joys and sorrows and must be able to tolerate each other’s weaknesses. They should be generous to each other and perfect understanding should prevail between them. They should entertain no suspicions against and keep back nothing from each other.

¹ The addressee had resolved to write to Gandhiji on every Tuesday but for some reason had not been able to write on one of the Tuesdays.
I think this is enough. For examples of such love ask me when we meet.

_Blessings to all from_

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

_Panchven Putrako BAPUke Ashirvad, p. 330_

483. LETTER TO PREMA KANTAK

NEW DELHI,

October 16, 1946

CHI. PREMA,

Two letters of yours are lying in front of me. I started writing a reply as soon as I received the second one, but laid it aside when the people for whose sake I am here came in. I am, therefore, writing the reply today.

I will say nothing about Nuremberg. In barbarity there are no comparisons. Whether it is here or there, it is all “here”.

It is not correct to say that I have abandoned constructive work to come here, nor that I have yielded to the temptation of politics. In fact life cannot be divided into compartments. The organs of the body are called by different names, but the body is one. The same is true about life. But since you think that it is an error on my part, you should believe it to be so. One day you will realize your error and see the unity of my life, or reform me. I have never laboured under the delusion that what I believe is true. Yes, what I believe is true for myself, otherwise I would cease to be a satyagrahi. The same rule applies to all.

And now your particular question. I should like the girls to remain unmarried, but they cannot be forced to do so. We must, therefore, help those who wish to get married.

It was, and is, Acharya Bhagawat’s duty to plead with you and other co-workers and carry them with him in whatever he did. He made a mistake in doing what he did without consulting you. You also should not tolerate his improper conduct through your desire for gaining something from him. But you did that. In this matter, too, the final decision must be yours. For occasions do arise when one has to swallow such bitter draughts. I have merely explained a general principle to you.

1 Acharya Bhagawat had persuaded women workers of the Kasturba Trust to get married and even arranged their marriages.

Please understand that I have no time to write more than this.

If Sushila, who is here, has understood the situation better, she will write to you. I am observing silence. It is doing me good. I was afraid that I might break down. More when we meet.

I was not happy that the meeting of the Agents\(^1\) did not take place.

_Blessings from_

_BAPU_

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10449. Also C. W. 6888. Courtesy: Prema Kantak

---

484. LETTER TO DURGA M. DESAI

NEW DELHI,

_October 16, 1946_

CHI. DURGA,

Rest assured that I will not go against your wishes and encourage Bablo in any way. I also read the letter from Narahari. I shall not enter into any argument because now there is no question of sending Bablo to Afghanistan.

I think it is right for you to stay wherever Bablo may be living. I also like the idea of [his] working for Nayee Talim. Let us all wish that he may keep good health and grow strong in body, mind and spirit.

My return to Sevagram is again delayed. Everything is in the hands of God.

_Blessings from_

_BAPU_

SMT. DURGABEHN DESAI
ASHRAM, SEVAGRAM

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

---

\(^1\) Provincial representatives of the Kasturba Trust
485. LETTER TO SHARDA G. CHOKHAWALA

October 16, 1946

CHI. BABUDI (SHARDA),

I have your letter. Your weight will increase if you eat properly. Shakaribehn should try hip-bath and friction-bath. She should put a cold mud pack on the part of the head affected by migraine. I am held up here.

Blessings from

BAPU

From Gujarati: C. W. 100671. Courtesy: Sharda G. Chokhawala

486. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

NEW DELHI,
October 16, 1946

CHI. SHARMA,

I have your letter. As far as I can tell I am here till the 23rd. But you should understand that I live from moment to moment.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Hindi]

Baptki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsh, p. 371

487. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,
October 16, 1946

Gandhiji said that he could not sense any generosity in the nomination of a Harijan1 by the Muslim League in their quota of five seats especially when he read of what was happening in East Bengal.

A man like himself ought to be glad, they might say, that another seat had been given to a Harijan. But he would be deceiving himself and Mr. Jinnah if he said so. Mr. Jinnah had always been of the opinion that Muslims and Hindus were two nations, that the League was a purely communal organization. How then could they nominate a Harijan to represent them? Gandhiji said he feared that the League’s mode of entrance into the Cabinet had not been straight. He was, therefore, forced to wonder whether they had come into the Cabinet also to fight. He hoped, nevertheless, that his fears would be proved wrong and that they would work there as brothers, determined to serve India as a whole. He hoped, too, that the Harijan member would prove a worthy son and servant of India.

1 Jagendranath Mandal

Gandhiji paid a glowing tribute to Babu Brijkishore Prasad of whose death he had learned in the morning. It was a custom to condole with the relatives of the deceased. But Gandhiji had said in his telegram that they should rejoice that Brijkishore Babu had been relieved of his physical suffering. He had first met him at the Lucknow Congress and then when he went to assist the indigo labourers of Champaran, he had realized the sterling worth of Babu Brijkishore from the beginning of his acquaintance. Dr. Rajendra Prasad looked upon him as his chief.

Babu Brijkishore was a man of his word, honest and a true servant not only of Bihar but of the whole of India. Gandhiji became closely associated with Brijkishore Babu, so much so that he sent his daughter, Prabhavati Devi, to Sabarmati Ashram. She became as Gandhiji’s own daughter. She married Shri Jayprakash Narayan. Brijkishore Babu had been a star in the firmament of Bihar and his memory would always be cherished.

_The Hindustan Times_, 17-10-1946

488. HAND-SPUN v. MILL CLOTH

The Premier of Madras has fallen foul of the big capitalist interests such as the Chamber of Commerce and even some Congressmen. I have had cuttings sent to me from the Madras Press. I am sorry to say that the criticism seems to me to be interested and ignorant.

My name has been dragged in the controversy. That I sponsored the Premier’s scheme should not affect a dispassionate discussion of the very simple problem.

The simple question is merely this: can khadi become universal in Madras if encouragement is given by the Madras Government to new mills being erected or old ones being so expanded as to enable them to double production? Are the villagers expected to be so simple as not to understand that it would be merely playing with khadi if mill cloth, heavily aided, is to be dumped down in their midst, probably at a rate cheaper even than cotton required to weave a particular length of calico? This happened when Japan sent her calico to India.

The Madras scheme is undoubtedly meant to utilize a part of the idle hours of the villagers for spinning sufficient yarn to clothe themselves. Is it chimerical to induce and expect the people to utilize their idle hours to do useful, national, honest labour?

It will be time to declaim against the Madras Government when there is a feasible scheme to find useful and more remunerative employment for all who need work. It is hardly an honourable pastime to dismiss from consideration honest servants of the nation by dubbing them idealists, dreamers, fanatics and faddists.

Let not capitalists and other entrenched personages range themselves against the poor villagers and prevent them from bettering their hard lot by dignified labour.

The great flaw about new mills in the Madras scheme was detected by me. It was when the Textile Commissioner was convinced of the absurdity of the two things running side by side and the feasibility of the scheme as envisaged by the A.I.S.A. that he ventured to recommend it to the Madras Government. His reputation will be at stake if it is impracticable or unworkable, not the critics’.

This is work for democracy by a democratic Government.

Hence the scheme must be popular at least where it is to be tried.

It must not be one man’s scheme but the whole Government’s.

It must have the backing of the Legislature.

In no case may it smack of compulsion.

It must be intrinsically practicable and of benefit to the masses.

These conditions of success are all reduced to writing. The Government has accepted them in toto after, I understand, full discussion with experts and among themselves.

Let it be remembered that the existing Madras mills will not be touched at present. That the whole mill industry will be affected if the scheme spreads like wildfire, as I expect some day such a thing must, goes without saying. Let not the largest capitalist rue the day when and if it comes.

The only question then worth considering is whether the Madras Government are honest and competent. If they are not, everything will go wrong. If they are, the scheme must be blessed by all and must succeed.

NEW DELHI, October 17, 1946
Harijan, 27-10-1946

489. TELEGRAM TO RAM MANOHAR LOHIA

Express
NEW DELHI,
October 17, 1946

DOCTOR LOHIA
RAMNIVAS THALAKWADI
BELGAUM
PROBABLY DELHI SOMEWHAT UNCERTAIN.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

490. TELEGRAM TO MEDH

NEW DELHI,
October 17, 1946

MEDH
CARE MITRAVADAN DHRU, SANKADI SHERY
RUGHNATH BUMB’S POLE, AHMEDABAD
THOUGH MY MOVEMENTS UNCERTAIN YOU CAN COME.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
491. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

October 17, 1946

CHI. AMRIT,

This is a mere love letter, not a news letter. I hope you had a comfortable journey and that the little boil was not too troublesome. I see you had to negotiate stairs. Hope it did no damage.

It is after 3 o’clock now and yet the expected wire has not come. But I shall continue to expect it.

Love to you all.

BAPU

From the original: C. W. 4178. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 7814

492. LETTER TO T. R. NARAYAN NAMBIAR

NEW DELHI,
October 17, 1946

DEAR NAMBIAR,

Why write in English? Not to know the inter-provincial language, Hindustani, of India is worse than praying after sunset or eating during sunset or not smearing the forehead. God can be worshipped at any time and no one is worse off for not smearing the forehead.

Yours,

M. K. GANDHI

T. R. NARAYAN NAMBIAR, B.A.,B.L.
THUCKALAY, TRAVANCORE

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
493. LETTER TO LAXMI KANT V. PRABHU

NEW DELHI,
October 17, 1946

DEAR LAXMI KANT,

Your p. c. All eatables are . . .¹ food whether vegetables, fruit, milk, cereals, pulses, eggs or flesh meat.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

LAXMI KANT V. PRABHU
C/O CAP. TARNSEJRA
AQUANDA
POST GOA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

494. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

NEW DELHI,
October 17, 1946

CHI. PRABHA,

Yesterday I got the news of your father’s² demise. I was glad. He was released from pain.

I hope you are well.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

I hope you got my wire.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 3586

¹ Illegible in the source
² Brijkishore Babu; Vide also “Telegram to Janardan Prasad”, 16-10-1946.
495. LETTER TO GANGA P. BHATT

NEW DELHI,

October 17, 1946

CHI. GANGA,

I had your earlier letter. If you have to follow Purushottam it is no more than your dharma. You ought now to give up your hankering after social service. Purushottam has some kink somewhere but I cannot place it. He ought to withdraw from some field of work or other. He alone can know best whether his body will stand up to it, whether he can do as much as this. If he cannot, you must give up your attachment [for social service], but this too appears difficult. You may therefore go on living as seem best to you. I am held up here.

To you both,

Blessings from

BAPU

SMT. GANGABEHN PURUSHOTTAM
29 BHAWANI PETH
POONA 2

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

496. LETTER TO MANILAL B. DESAI

NEW DELHI,

October 17, 1946

CHI. MANILAL,

I have your long but detailed and interesting letter. I don’t get any time to write letters. I am simply stuck here and cannot get away.

It is unfortunate that Gangabehn left. She is such a public-spirited worker. But this is how a woman’s life is. A man may desert his wife for any reason; a woman cannot do likewise even for the sake of selfless service. This is a flaw in dharma but it has gone so deep that it cannot be got rid of.¹

You must have a woman worker with you and if possible you

¹Vide the preceding item.
should train one locally. Only intense purity on the part of all of you can bring about this result. Act only after full consideration. Don’t be rash. Never mind if you have to carry on without a woman worker. If all of you are absolutely pure you will find one. Maybe Gangabehn will herself come back. We were hoping to have Kanchan but it cannot be thought of for the present. Amtussalaam is a big person. She might have to go to Bengal. Moreover, she will not stay there without me.

I cannot think of anyone else.

What you are doing is good.

It is now 6 o’clock in the morning and I must have my constitutional. So be content with this much.

Blessings to all.

MANILAL

URULI KANCHAN (POONA)

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

497. LETTER TO K. T. SHAH

NEW DELHI,
October 17, 1946

Bhai Khushal Shah,

I have gone through your statement and made a few changes that I thought were warranted. I have kept the substance intact. A point suggested itself and so I have added a paragraph which you may accommodate at the right place.

Blessings from

BAPU

Shri K. T. Shah
Baroda House
Delhi

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
498. LETTER TO SUNDARAM

NEW DELHI,
October 17, 1946

CHI. SUNDARAM,

I got your letter in beautiful Tamil handwriting. I could follow the whole of it. Panditji, I hope, is well.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 3178

499. LETTER TO DATAR

NEW DELHI,
October 17, 1946

BHAJ DATAR,

When will your work begin? When we work for someone on payment we have to observe a time-limit; the same applies to altruistic work.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI DATAR
NIJADHAM
URULI KANCHAN

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 Madan Mohan Malaviya
500. LETTER TO S. M. CHITRE

NEW DELHI,
October 17, 1946

BHAJ CHITRE,

I have your letter.

Do what you can by your own effort. Why do you write in English?

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI S. M. CHITRE
HARDIKAR HOUSE
BHANDARA, C. P.

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

501. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,
October 17, 1946

Gandhiji referred again to the tragic happenings in Noakhali and Tippera districts in East Bengal.

What hurt him very much more than the killings was the fact that women were being carried away, abducted and converted to Islam. Of course women generally did not carry swords. The Rani of Jhansi had one. All could not be Ranis. But he would remind them of the incomparable power of Sita whom all the physical might of Ravana could not defile. Women must learn how to die before a hair of their head could be injured. He would like to say to the Hindus wherever they were in the minority and vice versa to the Muslims not to die helplessly but face death bravely and without a murmur. Then only could the terrible killings now going on in Noakhali and Tippera come to a stop.

Sarat Babu, brother of Subhas Babu, who knew no barriers of caste or creed, will be visiting Bengal in a day or two. He was ill but that was not going to deter him. Shri Kripalani, the President-elect, and his wife were also going to do what they could to stop the slaughter. They were not going there to protect one party but to stop the fratricidal warfare. It was a good beginning for Acharya Kripalani and his wife.

The fair name of Bengal was being tarnished—Bengal which had given them so much, Bengal the home of Gurudev, whose bhajan they had just heard. The hymn asked God to make the devotee pure of heart and fearless. It was with this hymn on their lips that they were going and it was the audience’s duty to wish them every success.

Gandhiji referred to two letters he had received today in which the auctions he had been holding had been referred to as gambling and black-marketing. It was man’s duty to keep his speech correct but these friends had not weighed their words before writing.

Gambling and black-marketing were indulged in for personal ends. Men even died for their selfish ends and stooped to anything to make money. The money spent at the auctions here was given for the Harijan cause. The articles bought were not for use but to be kept as souvenirs for the children to remember what their parents did to remove untouchability. Of course anyone could misrepresent a pure act as an impure one. Such base misrepresentation could not be helped.

The Hindustan Times, 18-10-1946

502. DISCUSSION WITH CO-WORKERS

[On or before October 18, 1946]

In the course of the talk, one of them asked Gandhiji whether he would recommend fasting to check the orgy of communal madness that was spreading in Bengal. Gandhiji’s reply was in the negative. He narrated how a valuable colleague from Ahmedabad had invited him to immolate himself. “We believe in the non-violent way but lack the strength. Your example would steady our wavering faith and fortify us.”

The logic was perfect and the temptation great.

But I resisted it and said no. There is no inner call. When it comes, nothing will keep me back. I have reasoned with myself too about it. But I need not set forth my reasons. Let people call me a coward if they please. I have faith that when the hour arrives God will give me the strength to face it and I won’t be found unready.

Fasting cannot be undertaken mechanically. It is a powerful thing but a dangerous thing if handled amateurishly. It requires complete self-purification, much more than is required in facing death without a thought of retaliation. One such act of perfect sacrifice would suffice for the whole world. Such is held to be Jesus’ example.

1 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “The Travail”, 18-10-1946. The interviewers were two co-workers from Bengal who had come to seek Gandhiji’s permission to go to Bengal before he himself went.

The idea is that you appropriate to yourself and assimilate the essence of His sacrifice symbolically represented by the bread and wine of the Eucharist. A man who was completely innocent offered himself as a sacrifice for the good of others, including his enemies, and became the ransom of the world. It was a perfect act. “It is finished” were the last words of Jesus, and we have the testimony of his four disciples as to its authenticity.

But whether the Jesus tradition is historically true or not I do not care. To me it is truer than history because I hold it to be possible and it enshrines an eternal law—the law of vicarious and innocent suffering taken in its true sense.

A Hindu and a Mussalman braved the fury of the mad-dened crowd in Bombay and went down together literally clasped in a fatal embrace but refused to desert each other. Rajabali and Vasantrao Hegishte similarly fell to the frenzy of a mob in the attempt to quell it. “What came of it?” people might ask, “the fire still continues to rage.” I do not think for a moment it has gone in vain. We may not see the effect today. Our non-violence is as yet a mixed affair. It limps. Nevertheless, it is there and it continues to work like leaven in a silent and invisible way, least understood by most. It is the only way.

As a further illustration of his remarks he recalled the history of the Champaran Satyagraha. There had been several bloody risings within half a century preceding it against the infamous compulsory indigo plantation. But each attempt had only resulted in fastening the rivets tighter than ever before. Then came the Champaran Mass Satyagraha, untainted by acts of violence, and a century-old evil was overthrown in less than six months.

Go forth, therefore. I have done. I won’t detain you for a day longer. You have my blessings. And I tell you there will be no tears but only joy if tomorrow I get the news that all the three of you are killed.

“It will be pure joy to be so killed,” they echoed.

Go, but mark my words. Let there be no foolhardiness about it. You should go because you feel you must and not because I ask you to.

_Harijan_, 2-10-1946
503. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,

[On or before October 18, 1946]

Gandhiji remarked at the evening prayer gathering that day that he had received numerous messages from Bengal inviting him to go there and still the raging fury. Whilst he did not believe that he had any such capacity, he was anxious to go to Bengal. Only he thought it was his duty to wait till Pandit Nehru’s return and the meeting of the Working Committee. But he was in God’s hands. If he clearly felt that he should wait for nothing, he would not hesitate to anticipate the date. His heart was in Bengal.

Harijan, 27-10-1946

504. NOTES

HOW TO COMBAT UNHOLY BOYCOTT

A correspondent from Mercara (Coorg) writes to say that many youthful reformers do not believe in animal sacrifice offered to the village gods. Therefore, he says, the villagers have threatened to boycott them. What are the reformers to do?

Reformers all over the world have no easy task. The threatened boycott should have no meaning for the reformers. They must be ready and willing to submit to the hardships entailed by the boycott. They should on no account be angry with the villagers who honestly believe in superstitious practices. It is a question of the real education of the people. These village gods have no existence except in the villagers’ imagination. Unmindful of the boycott, they should calmly persevere in their reasoning with the villagers, rendering them all the time such services that the villagers may be in need of. Patience and perseverance will overcome the mountains of difficulties that may face the reformers. The reformers may not summon police assistance against the villagers.

WAYS OF VIOLENCE

A straight line is one. Non-violence is a straight line. Lines that are not straight are many. A child who has learnt how to handle a pen

---

1 Extracted from Pyarelal’s article “The Travail”, 18-10-1946
2 This was held on the 23rd, 24th and 25th October, under the presidency of Jawaharlal Nehru.
can draw as many lines as he wishes. He won’t draw a straight line except perhaps by chance. Several readers ask me whether in the violence “permitted” by me several things mentioned by them could be included. Strange to say all the letters received are in English! The writers should reread my article and they will at once know why I cannot answer those questions. I am unfit probably for the simple reason that I have never practised violence. Above all I have never permitted violence. I have simply stated two grades of bravery and cowardice. The only thing lawful is non-violence. Violence can never be lawful in the sense meant here, i.e., not according to man-made law but according to the law made by Nature for man. Though violence is not lawful, when it is offered in self-defence or for the defence of the defenceless, it is an act of bravery far better than cowardly submission. The latter befits neither man nor woman. Under violence, there are many stages and varieties of bravery. Every man must judge this for himself. No other person can or has the right.

NEW DELHI, October 18, 1946

Harijan, 27-10-1946

505. ELOQUENT FIGURES

When Shri S. Venkateswaran, the Provincial Textile Commissioner, was in Delhi specially for the purpose of the Madras khadi scheme, I asked him to give me his own figures on the assumption that Madras had no mills and had to clothe the whole Presidency in khadi. Here are the figures1 which speak for themselves:

Is it extravagant to expect every five persons out of eight to spin one hour per day, say, for love of the country of their birth?

NEW DELHI, October 18, 1946

Harijan, 27-10-1946

1 Not reproduced here
506. NOTES

FIREWORKS DURING DIWALI DAYS

I have received several letters complaining of the use of fireworks. The complaints are justified. I wrote against this practice in the columns of the Navajivan. I do not know whether the writing had any effect. At present when fire surrounds us it is a sin to have fireworks, illuminations with ghee or oil or electric lamps and consume sweets.

WHAT ABOUT DAKORE?

A friend from the Kheda District, who keeps Bhangi men and women in his house as his own brothers and sisters, writes: “Big temples in Madras are being thrown open to Harijans. Is it not strange that the deluded Gujarat should not throw open the Dakore temple?” If the deluded Gujaratis become sane, Dakore temple can be thrown open today. But if Gujarat must find joy in hugging a shameful custom, who can prevent her?

On the Trustees of the Dakore temple rests a heavy responsibility.

VICITMS OF DUTY

I give below an extract from a letter from a Parsee friend.

These two gentlemen are certainly worthy of commendation for their sacrifice and bravery. It is really baffling why neither the Congress nor the League said anything in their praise. There must be something at the back of it.

WHY THESE TEARS?

In his letter of birthday greetings to me, Professor Satish Kalelkar relates an interesting and instructive Chinese story, which I give below for the benefit of the readers of the Harijanbandhu.

---

1 A translation of this was also published in Harijan, 27-10-1946.
2 A translation of the original Gujarati published in Harijan, 27-10-1946, is reproduced here.
3 Not translated here. The letter described the death of Gazdar and Nawdar of St. John’s Ambulance corps during the riots in Bombay while they were engaged in removing the wounded.
4 A translation of this was also published in Harijan, 27-10-1946.
Dr. Wellington Koo, at one of his meetings in London, once narrated a sweet story about a Chinese family. The eldest member of the family was considered, as with us, the head of the family. As such he had the right to use an ancient family stick by way of punishment whenever necessary. Once a hundred-years-old man used the stick on the back of his seventy-five-years-old son. Tears ran down the withered cheeks of the son. The father asked the cause of the tears which he had never before seen him shed on a similar occasion. The son replied, “Father your stick has lost its original force. Your feebleness hurts me. Hence the tears.

Kakasaheb was in Delhi with me when the letter was received. I gave it to him to read and he said such things had happened in our country in the past and must be happening even now. He narrated the following incident:

One day a High Court judge of Madras is said to have gone out with a friend at the end of the day’s work instead of going home as usual. When, therefore, he reached home late in the evening he met his mother standing in the doorway waiting for him. “Why have you come late?” asked the old lady with a slap on his face. Tears rolled down the son’s cheeks.

The friend remarked that it was but natural that a grown-up learned man like him should feel insulted on being slapped like that. It was strange on the mother’s part to have slapped him.

“No, there was no insult in that slap,” promptly replied the judge. “It is my proud privilege to receive a slap from my revered mother now and then. My eyes became wet only because I missed this time the strength that used to be in her slap. Evidently she has grown old and weak. Should not that hurt a dutiful son?”

NEW DELHI, October 18, 1946
[From Gujarati]
Harijanbandhu, 27-10-1946
507. WHAT WILL YOU DO FOR HARIJANS?

A gentleman writes the following pathetic letter:

It is true. The correspondent himself is a Harijan sevak. It becomes difficult to bring about any reform when fraud is practised in the name of religion. This we see happening every now and then. Then again we are cowards. I have found only one royal road: namely, that one who has seen Truth should expound it through personal example, be generous towards opponents, never give up patience and remain happily engrossed in his own work.

NEW DELHI, October 18, 1946
[From Gujarati]
Harijanbandhu, 27-10-1946

508. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

NEW DELHI,
October 18, 1946

CHI. AMRIT,

The expected wire came after 5 p. m. yesterday. Everybody is anxious to know the result of medical examination there.

I have been incessantly writing for Harijan. Have practically or wholly finished. It is now 3 o’clock.

Love to you all.

BAPU

From the original: C. W. 4179. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 7815

1 Not translated here. The correspondent had lamented that people had not adopted Gandhiji’s programme for eradicating untouchability and asked him what changes he would suggest.
509. LETTER TO D. B. KALELKAR

NEW DELHI,
October 18, 1946

CHI. KAKA,

I have your two letters but not the article. I received the story, and it is going to the press.

I am engrossed in work. I am observing silence, it is that which is sustaining me. I have not been able to get the peace that I seek. I am striving for it. I will, therefore, reply to your second letter later on.

I am enclosing Vidyalankar’s scheme. Please read it. Let Shriman also read it and then give me your opinion.

I see no possibility of my being able to go there in the immediate future. I feel that fate will take me to Bengal. It seems I shall be here till the 23rd.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10977

510. LETTER TO HEMANT KUMAR NILKANTH

NEW DELHI,
October 18, 1946

CHI. HEMANTKUMAR,

Why talk about prejudice? We should not think of it. You have made much improvement in your Gujarati. Continue to show such good results.

Blessings from
BAPU

SJT. HEMANTKUMAR
HARIJAN ASHRAM
SABARMATI

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1Vide “Letter to Chandragupta Vidyalankar”, 18-10-1946
511. LETTER TO CHANDRAGUPTA VIDYALANKAR

October 18, 1946

BHAJ CHANDRAGUPTA,

I have received the scheme. I have gone through it. You have taken great pains. Why have you put languages in two sections? It will be a source of quarrels and so far as I can see no purpose will be served. I have sent the scheme to Kakasaheb and Shrimanji.¹ They will scrutinize it more thoroughly. More afterwards.

Yours,
M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 7209. Also C. W. 4865

512. LETTER TO JANAKIRAM

NEW DELHI,
October 18, 1946

BHAJ JANAKIRAM,

Your case has appeared in the newspapers; there is no need to say anything more.

Blessings from
M. K. GANDHI

SHRI JANAKIRAM
KADAVUR
VIZAGAPATTAM
SOUTH INDIA

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

513. LETTER TO PARWANI

NEW DELHI,
October 18, 1946

Bhai Parwani,

Personally I see nothing wrong in what you are doing.

Yours,

M. K. Gandhi

Shri Parwani
Tej
Kotri, Sindh

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

514. LETTER TO RATNAMAYEE DEVI

NEW DELHI,
October 18, 1946

Chi. Ratnamayee,

It is well that Dikshitji’s wife has left this world. We should learn from such a death.

Bapu

Shri Ratnamayee Devi
Balka Ashram
Okhla

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

---

1 Sitacharan Dikshit, who later served as Editor (Hindi) of The Collected Works of Mahatma Gandhi
2 She had been ailing for a long time.
515. CHARKHA MANDAL

The Charkha Mandal has evolved out of the three spinning classes held in the Bhangi Colony. How I wish such Mandals would spring up all over the country! Before that can happen a number of Mandals should be opened in Delhi and function regularly. There are so many clubs formed for sports. Why should we not have organizations for useful work?

NEW DELHI, October 18, 1946
[From Hindi]
Harijan Sevak, 18-10-1946

516. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI, October 18, 1946

Gandhiji advised the women in East Bengal to commit suicide by poison or some other means to avoid dishonour. . . . Yesterday he told the women to suffocate themselves or to bite their tongues to end their lives. But two doctors, B. C. Roy of Calcutta and Sushila Nayyar, had informed him that such means of suicide were impossible.

The only way known to medicine for instant self-immolation was a strong dose of poison. If this was so, he, the speaker, would advise everyone running the risk of dishonour to take poison before submission to dishonour. He had, however, heard from those given to yogic practices that it was possible by some yogic practice to end life. He would try to inquire. His was not an idle idea. He meant all he had said.

The very fact of steeling oneself for death before dishonour braced one for the struggle. A woman in our country was brought up to think that her place was with her husband or on the funeral pyre. He held wholly different views. He held that a woman could be as brave as the bravest man. If one half of India’s humanity was paralysed,

---

1 Kanu Gandhi’s outline of the Charkha Mandal, on which this is the comment, is not reproduced here. The Charkha Mandal had been founded to encourage community spinning at fixed times and places.
2 Vide “Eleven-day Charkha Class”, 24-9-1946.
3 The report has been touched up.
India could never really feel free. He would far rather see India’s women trained to wield arms than that they should feel helpless. He knew, however, that arms were a poor weapon when it came to the matter of defending one’s honour against odds. Honour knew no surrender to any power on earth.

Gandhiji then referred to a letter received from a Muslim friend to the effect that although he was ready to condemn atrocities by Muslims he preferred to be silent when Hindus committed them. He could only say that the charge was baseless. To him all human beings were like blood brothers.

Lastly, he mentioned messages received from Bengal inviting him to go there and help in restoring law and order. Whilst he did not believe that he had any such capacity he was anxious to go to Bengal. Only he thought it was his duty to wait till Pandit Nehru’s return and the meeting of the Working Committee. But he was in God’s hands. If he clearly felt that he should wait for nothing, he would not wait.

The Hindustan Times, 19-10-1946

517. THE COMING CONGRESS SESSION

A basketful of letters are before me in connection with the Meerut Congress session to be held shortly. The correspondents complain of the ‘lavish’ expenditure that is advertised to be incurred in connection with it. I must refuse to sit in judgment upon the doings of the Reception Committee. I have neither the wish nor the required leisure to study the facts. The following, however, I can say without the necessity of studying facts and figures. It may be of some use to the Committee. There should be no tamashas. The Congress session is any day a serious business to be tackled seriously. There can be no side-shows. Crowds should not be attracted. The fact of the Congress session being held is by itself enough attraction.

All illuminations should be strictly avoided. Food to be provided should be of the simplest kind requiring little or no fat and sugar in its preparation. Uninvited guests should bring their own provisions or refrain from coming.

Sanitary arrangements should be perfect and serve as a lesson to all comers. Sight-seers should be discouraged.

NEW DELHI, October 19, 1946

Harijan, 27-10-1946

1 This was published under the heading “Notes”.

VOL.92 : 9 AUGUST, 1946 - 6 NOVEMBER, 1946 356
518. I AM DEFEATED

Letters continue to rain down on me regarding uncertified khadi. They are from persons of repute and experience. I do not find any flaw in my argument. My defeat would lie in the fact that though there are large stocks of uncertified khadi it is very difficult to find in it genuine khadi. If this is true then I have to withdraw my words and I do so.

It is necessary to understand in what lies the defeat. I do not have any doubt and indeed no one has any doubt that genuine khadi, even if it is uncertified, is superior to mill cloth. But my friends laugh at me because genuine khadi is always certified and what is available in the market is an imitation only. It is adulterated; there is fraud in it and the desire to cheat. I must accept that such khadi is as good as mill cloth. I have come to know from reliable sources that because of my writings some dishonest traders were able to increase their loot. I therefore hope that from now onwards a khadi buyer will go only to a certified khadi bhandar and buy whatever is available there. He should not even by mistake go to a store where uncertified khadi is sold.

Those who can prove to me that they are unable to spin I will consider as friends and give them the certificate that I have received yarn from them, because I always have yarn accumulated with me.

NEW DELHI, October 19, 1946

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbandhu, 27-10-1946
519. TELEGRAM TO AMTUSSALAAM

NEW DELHI,

October 19, 1946

AMTUSSALAAM

SEVAGRAM, WARDHA

WRITING.† SELF MAY GO BENGAL AFTER 23RD.

BAPU

From a photostat: G. N. 534

520. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

NEW DELHI,

October 19, 1946

DAUGHTER AMTUL SалаAM,

I have wired to you. I have no information. What can I tell you? I do not consider myself fit to guide you. Go to Bengal if you want to.

I am myself getting ready to go there. I have said so in the Press also. When God will take me there I do not know.

Tell everybody to give up any hope of my returning to Sevagram for the present. I want to return there but God won’t let me.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 533

†Vide the following item.
521. LETTER TO C. RAJAGOPALACHARI

NEW DELHI,
October 19, 1946

DEAR C. R.,

Here is something on salt for you, Matthai¹ and Greenfield to see. There seems to be much in what the writer says. It has no bearing on the tax which I hope is soon going.

Love.

BAPU

RAJAJI
NEW DELHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

522. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

NEW DELHI,
October 20, 1946

CHI. AMRIT,

Your wire came in last night. So you were still suffering. That did signify subsiding. Let me hope it is better as I am writing this 5.35 p.m.

Here is a letter from V. G. D. You will see amusing remarks about the vocabulary. I must fully share the guilt with you about “architect”.² It should [have] been नक्शा. We must give a list of amendments. You may return the letter and I shall make notes.

Renuka and her sister were with me last night.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C. W. 4180. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 7816

¹ John Matthai, Finance Minister in the Interim Government
² The reference presumably is to the meaning of the word given in “Hindustani Dictionary” published in Harijan, 13-10-1946, where “architect” was explained as ह्मरात बनने बाला
523. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

October 20, 1946

CHI. LILY.

I see in your talk the same shallowness as before. It does not seem good. You talk without thinking. You are not to accompany me to Bengal. You must finish your study. After that you may devote yourself to service as much as you wish. I will then gladly accept it. It would be a different matter if you were to lay down your life in Bombay. I don’t like your doing no work here. You need not wait to be asked to do something. I am not referring to household chores. You can do some reading or writing or spinning. I see you doing none of that. I wish you would do some fine carding and spinning, repair spinning-wheels which go out of order and learn weaving. You will do all these things only if you feel a spontaneous urge to do them. But it does not seem likely. I shall be satisfied even if you become only a good doctor and do service.

Since it is now time for you to leave for Bombay, what more shall I say? Stop the bleeding.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 9603. Also C. W. 6575. Courtesy: Lilavati Asar

524. LETTER TO BAPU BHAI VASHI

NEW DELHI,
October 20, 1946

BHAIBAPUBHAI,

I have your letter. Bengal has caught hold of me so completely that I may say I have absolutely no time whatever. You may therefore glean whatever you can from Harijan. When you are completely recovered do come to Sevagram if I am there. Writer to Pyarelal.

Blessings from
BAPU

SJT. BAPUBHAI VASHI
KAPOL SANATORIUM, BLOCK NO. 6
DEOLALI (G. I. P.)

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

VOL. 92 : 9 AUGUST, 1946 - 6 NOVEMBER, 1946 360
525. LETTER TO BLIND STUDENTS

NEW DELHI,
October 20, 1946

BLIND STUDENTS,

Thanks for the gift you have sent through Jayantilal on the occasion of Charkha Jayanti. It will be used in the service of Harijans. Those who blindly drift along although they can see are truly blind. Those who go along the straight path are not blind.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

526. LETTER TO HARJIVAN KOTAK

NEW DELHI,
October 20, 1946

CHI. HARJIVAN,

You have fallen ill again. Now get well soon.
I am held up here for the time being.

Blessings from
BAPU

SJT HARJIVAN KOTAK
SHRI LALLUBHAI GORDHANDAS HOSPITAL
MANINAGAR
AHMEDABAD

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

527. LETTER TO MANU SUBEDAR

NEW DELHI,
October 20, 1946

BHAI MANU SUBEDAR,

I am going to make use of matter from your published article.
Have you seen what I have been writing recently on khadi? If you have, do you agree with it? If you have studied the Madras scheme, do you see any flaw in it? Don’t hesitate to ask for any information regarding it that you may need.

Do you at all spin? Do you know carding and other processes?
As I read your article I could see your faith in khadi and village industries.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

528. LETTER TO SUSHILA GANDHI

NEW DELHI,
October 20, 1946

CHI. SUSHILA,

I am sending you this (Manilalbhai’s letter). Nowadays I mostly observe silence. There is a great load of work. God carries it and hence I don’t feel it so much. The less one’s faith in Him the more one feels the burden. And I am certain there can be no burden where there is prefect faith. I take it that all of you are well. My return to Sevagram has been postponed for the present.

Blessings from
BAPU

SMT. SUSHILA GANDHI
AKOLA

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

529. LETTER TO VACHHRAJ T. DOSHI

NEW DELHI,
October 20, 1946

BHAI VACHHRAJ,

I got your two letters. I hope you got Champabehn’s letter.
Please do what is necessary. There is no sign of my going there for the present. You should all do what you can. You can have some additions and alterations made. We had better have Preston Grover in the regular way.

Blessings from
BAPU

BHAI VACHHRAJ TRIBHUVANDAS DOSHI
PANCHGANI

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

530. LETTER TO MAHESH DATT MISHRA

October 20, 1946

CHI. MAHESH,

I have gone through your letter. I see that you have not yet recovered. Here you have constipation. For this you must be at fault somewhere. If there is any deficiency in the diet, it should not be so.

I have made up my mind about you. You must work in Harijan. Therefore your Hindi and Urdu should be strong. If your English could also improve, it would be still better. I want to put the entire burden of Harijan Sevak on you. The Hindustani should be excellent. Today it is not so. If you do not like this work tell me. The English translation should be of good quality. Rajkumari compiles the dictionary. That you should do.

If you have to go home, it would be well if you went now.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 6714. Also C. W. 4458
531. LETTER TO DHIRENDRA

NEW DELHI,
October 20, 1946

BHAI DHIRENDRA BABU,

I had your letter. Please forgive me for the delay in replying. You can now take charge of the purse presented to me and spend the amount in accordance with the scheme you have sent to me.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI DHIRENDRA
VIDYA ASHRAM

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

532. LETTER TO ISHWARDAS NATWAR

NEW DELHI,
October 20, 1946

BHAII ISHWARDAS,

I have your two letters. Not a pie should be spent on your son’s wedding.

The [desire to] come to me is ignorant attachment. Besides, there is nothing certain about me.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI ISHWARDAS NATWAR
MOHAN ASHRAM
HARDWAR, U. P.

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
533. LETTER TO MAHAVIR PRASAD PODDAR

NEW DELHI,
October 20, 1946

Bhai Mahavir Prasad,

I have your letter. I am writing to Dr. Katju.

Blessings from
Bapu

Shri Mahavir Prasad Poddar
Arogya Mandir
Gorakhpur, U. P.

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

534. LETTER TO KAILAS NATH KATJU

NEW DELHI,
October 20, 1946

Bhai Kailasnathji,

Read the enclosed letter. My suggestion is that the work will be done more quickly if you appoint someone for such jobs.

Blessings from
Bapu

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

535. LETTER TO KALYAN CHOUDHARI

NEW DELHI,
October 20, 1946

Sister,

I have your letter. I have nothing to give. You should remain there and serve.

Yours,
M. K. Gandhi

Smt. Kalyan Choudhari
C/o Shri Jagdish Chandra Dutt Choudhari
Mohalla Maligunj
Ludhiana, Punjab

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
536. LETTER TO SANKARAN

NEW DELHI,
October 20, 1946

CHI. SANKARAN,

Your mental state does not appear to be good. What is it that has appeared in Jeevan-Sakha? It contains something about you which is not at all good. It does not suggest humility. Now, what are you going to do? It is not good to hang around here aimlessly. I allowed you to come here because I wanted to know your wishes. It is Sushilabehn who has made you what you are, and if you cannot get on with her how are you going to do the hospital work at Sevagram? Think for yourself and make a determined effort. I cannot talk. It is better for me to observe silence today.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI SANKARAN

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

537. LETTER TO SANKARAN

NEW DELHI,
October 20, 1946

CHI. SANKARAN.

If you remember the particular issue of Jeevan-Sakha, I shall obtain it from here. Perhaps it cannot be said that you possess scientific knowledge. That you have denied being a doctor is quite proper.

You will gain nothing by going around with me. By all means work in the Talimi Sangh if Aryanayakumji will have you.

What is the need of taking Jajuji into the Trust? He carries on his own activity. I do not find any harm in your working there. He will have assistance and you will add to your experience. My experience is little. You may sleep if you must. It will not be right to retire to a village.
It will be good to have a talk with Su[shila]behn.

Blessings from

BAPU

CHI. SANKARAN

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

538. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,
October 20, 1946

Mahatma Gandhi devoted his after-prayer discourse on Sunday to answering the question put to him during the previous 24 hours as to what should be done with persons who were forcibly converted or abducted.

He said he had no hesitation in maintaining that forcible conversion was no conversion at all nor abduction a bar to the return to her home of the abducted girl. He held that no purification or penance was necessary in such cases. Hindu society was wrong when it imposed penance on such persons. They had not erred.

Gandhiji said that he had lived for years among Muslims and Christians. They had all assured him that there could be no use of force in religion. Those who resorted to force did not deserve to be called men of religion. In a sense he and his audience who believed that God was one and no other and who believed that Mohammed was one of His messengers were Muslims. But if anyone forced them or him to recite the Kalma, they would flatly refuse to obey and take the consequences.

It was his fervent hope that all good Muslims would stand up against the practices reported from the affected areas in East Bengal.

The Hindustan Times, 21-10-1946
539. A THOUGHT FOR THE DAY

PANCHGANI,

July 16, 1946

He who loses patience, loses Truth as well as Non-violence.

July 17, 1946

There is no happiness like Truth, no misery like untruth.

July 18, 1946

The wonder is that even though a man knows where true happiness lies, he wastes his life in pursuing untruth!

July 19, 1946

Whatever we do should be done not to please or displease anyone, but only to please God.

July 20, 1946

Even if you have told someone something a hundred times and he has not listened, you must tell him again and again. That is patience.

July 21, 1946

Accepting undesired service, which is not joyfully rendered, is a painful burden.

July 22, 1946

Great caution is necessary when a man represses his nature.

July 23, 1946

If the nature is evil, it needs not repression but casting out.

July 24, 1946

He who wishes to save time will never do a single unnecessary thing.

July 25, 1946

He who obeys God’s Law will never care for any other law which is opposed to the Divine Law.

---

1 Gandhiji started writing “A Thought for the Day” for Anand T. Hingorani at the latter’s request, on November 20, 1944, and continued the practice for about two years. The thoughts for the period covered by this volume are reproduced as a single item under the last date, 10-10-1946. These were originally in Hindi. The translation by Anand T. Hingorani is reproduced here with slight alterations.
July 26, 1946

Is it proper that one should give up a good thing not because one wishes to but for the sake of friends?

July 27, 1946

The first service is latrine-cleaning.

POONA,

July 28, 1946

Inexhaustible patience is needed if Truth is to be brought home to anyone.

July 29, 1946

However great the fury of the storm, the sea does not abandon its calm.

July 30, 1946

Why does a man become restless when he is unable to do his work?

July 31, 1946

There is goodness as well as greatness in simplicity, not in wealth.

URULI

August 1, 1946

Whatever the crisis, the fire of love will overcome it.

August 2, 1946

Nothing turns out right so long as there is no harmony between body, mind and soul.

Saturday, August 3, 1946

Praise and censure should be alike for a votary of Truth. He will, therefore, neither listen to praise, nor be angered by censure.

August 4, 1946

He who is face to face with God does not speak, cannot speak.

ON THE TRAIN TO WARDHA,

Monday, August 5, 1946

Man has two eyes and two ears, but only one tongue; let him, therefore, do half as much talking as seeing, and half as much talking as hearing.
Man’s capacity for self-deception is amazing.

Give all, gain all.

Keep all, lose all.

What is ‘big’ or ‘small’ in sin? Sin is sin. To believe otherwise is self-deception.

To destroy something is easy. To build requires great skill and care.

We shall cease to think only of ourselves when we think of others.

Many things are wrought by patience, even as they are spoilt by impatience.

Simplicity cannot be affected, it should be ingrained in one’s nature.

Man cannot raise himself by searching outside. The scope for growth lies within.

Pure love removes all weariness.

How can one claim to be human if he acts like a beast?

When Reason and Faith are in conflict, it is better to prefer Faith.

He who is afraid of people’s censure will never be able to do anything worth while.
Monday, August 19, 1946

Everything is right and proper in its place, improper when out of place.

Tuesday, August 20, 1946

It appears that man cannot escape the snare of exaggeration.

Wednesday, August 21, 1946

Insistence (or dogmatism) may be true or false. Falsehood does not shake (or eliminate) it. Truth is not affected (or tainted) by it.

Thursday, August 22, 1946

Do not do anything do not read anything without understanding.

Friday, August 23, 1946

The Ganga flows in man’s heart, yet he does not bathe in it, and remains unwashed.

Saturday, August 24, 1946

He alone can offer sacrifice who is pure, fearless and worthy.

ON THE TRAIN TO DELHI,

Sunday, August 25, 1946

Despair corrodes man.

Monday, August 26, 1946

Selfishness and fear must go if one is to realize God.

NEW DELHI,

Tuesday, August 27, 1946

To surrender to force is a sign of unmanliness.

Wednesday, August 28, 1946

The real service to the Bhils would be to make them fearless and remove their despair.

Thursday, August 29, 1946

Silence above all.

Friday, August 30, 1946

The light of knowledge can never dawn on the proud.

Saturday, August 31, 1946

To quench one’s thirst without the water of the Ganga and to satisfy the soul without God are both equally impossible.
September 1, 1946

Nobody progresses without opposition.

September 2, 1946

Every man should seek for the Source of his being.

September 3, 1946

He who does not know himself is lost.

September 4, 1946

The human body is like a musical instrument. Any note that is desired can be struck on it.

September 5, 1946

Thought pierces even a wall of steel.

September 6, 1946

Die and be saved.

Saturday, September 7, 1946

Faith makes the ship move.

Sunday, September 8, 1946

Why fear death when the threat is ever present?

Monday, September 9, 1946

We are all mad. Which of us shall call whom mad?

Tuesday, September 10, 1946

When we wipe the slate clean, we see God’s signature clearly on it.

Wednesday, September 11, 1946

However lofty the ambition, even those considered the lowliest of creatures should come within its ambit.

Thursday, September 12, 1946

God and Satan cannot both occupy the throne of the heart.

Friday, September 13, 1946

Dying for religion is good; for fanaticism, neither dying nor living.

Saturday, September 14, 1946

Inner strength grows by prayer.

Sunday, September 15, 1946

If you see inner beauty, the outer will seem dull.
Monday, September 16, 1946
Life spent in service is the only fruitful life.

Tuesday, September 17, 1946
It is strange that we toil so much over externals without a care for what lies within.

Wednesday, September 18, 1946
All will be well with us if, even in the hour of our travail, we are able to realize the presence of God within us.

Thursday, September 19, 1946
The greater man’s realization of the Self, the greater his progress.

Friday, September 20, 1946
A troubled mind causes more suffering than an ulcer.

Saturday, September 21, 1946
The pain of hunger is said to be severe. If we wish to live as human beings, let us rise above even this pain.

Sunday, September 22, 1946
Only experience makes us realize how hard it is to attain the state of non-attachment.

Monday, September 23, 1946
In egotism lies all trouble.

Tuesday, September 24, 1946
A life without thought is like that of a beast.

Wednesday, September 25, 1946
We have to make ourselves as nearly as possible like Him we want to reach.

Thursday, September 26, 1946
If you must be annoyed, why should it be at other people’s lapses, why not at your own?

September 27, 1946
There is a lot of difference between living faith and a mere desire for faith. Man is deceived by not knowing this.
September 28, 1946

Not everyone is destined to acquire material knowledge. But all can acquire spiritual knowledge; it is their duty to do so.

Sunday, September 29, 1946

God is said to have four arms as well as a thousand. It shows that all this is mere imagery.

Monday, September 30, 1946

If we dwell on evil thoughts, they do not disappear; they are likely to become our companions. “Dhyayato vishayan.”

Tuesday, October 1, 1946

The simple and one hundred per cent truth is that if we dwell on nothing but Ramanama, all our thoughts and actions will be automatically right.

Wednesday, October 2, 1946

Man has to do God’s work, but how is he to know what that is?

Thursday, October 3, 1946

The way to know what God’s work is heartfelt prayer and corresponding action.

Friday, October 4, 1946

Faith is the sun of life.

Saturday, October 5, 1946

If God keeps you, what does it matter if men reject you?

Sunday, October 6, 1946

If one man can become perfect, it is but fair to assume that all can become so.

Monday, October 7, 1946

What a pity that even though a man knows it, he still prefers to fall!

October 8, 1946

Let us think not of big things but of good things.

October 9, 1946

What does it matter if people look upon us as dreamers?
October 10, 1946

The possibility of living up to 125 years is receding. What right has he to live who has not achieved sufficient mastery over anger and attachment?

A Thought for the Day, pp. 602-88

540. TELEGRAM TO HEMPRABHA DAS GUPTA

NEW DELHI,
October 21, 1946

HEmprabhaDevi
15 College Square
Khadi Pratishthan
Calcutta
You Should be Calm. Hope come soon.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

541. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

NEW DELHI,
October 21, 1946

CHI. Amrit,

Your two letters came in together.

I am sorry for your sufferings. Let them do you good which they would if you interpret them correctly. Physical suffering can be, and should be, transmuted into spiritual joy. It is a difficult process but it has to be gone through if one is to be truly rich. This enforced idleness should be used for enriching one’s thoughts.

That Shummy’s is not angry with me shows his nobleness, not the care I should have bestowed on you. On the first sign of the boil I should have insisted on your going to Simla. This place is

1 Wife of Satis Chandra Das Gupta, Founder-President, Bengal Khadi Pratishthan
2 Communal riots on a large scale had broken out in Calcutta and Noakhali.
3 The superscription in this and other letters to the addressee is in Devanagari.
4 Shumshere Singh, addressee’s brother not made for nursing patients like you. It has its unavoidable limitation.

Love.

BAPU

[PS.] V. ¹ cannot be sent for as you suggest. I know him much better than you do.

From the original: C. W. 3699. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 6508

542. LETTER TO VALJI G. DESAI

NEW DELHI,
October 21, 1946

CHI. VALJI,

I liked your letter of yesterday addressed to Rajkumari. If, extending the idea a little further, you yourself can prepare the dictionary², do so and send it. Rajkumari is herself compiling it with much effort. I have not found anyone as hardworking and regular as she is. I look through it but errors remain. Besides, Rajkumari is going to Paris³ for two months. I do not wish to place too great a burden on you. Give as much as you can.

How are you now? I am stuck here for the present. I shall have to go to Bengal. If I go, it will be after the 23rd.

I have omitted your sixth story⁴. You will have seen the reason.

It will be better if you send the Gujarati or English also of whatever you send. If you can send the Hindustani, too, nothing like it.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 3172. Courtesy: Valji G. Desai

¹ Valji G. Desai; vide also the following item.
² The reference is to the English-Hindustani dictionary, which appeared fortnightly in Harijan beginning with the issue dated September 1, 1946; vide also “English into Hindustani”, 25-10-1946.
³ To attend the UNESCO session as a member of the Indian delegation headed by S. Radhakrishnan
⁴ The addressee had been sending selected stories by different authors for publication under “Story Hour” in Harijan.
543. LETTER TO CHIMANLAL N. SHAH

October 21, 1946

CHI. CHIMANLAL,

Please pass on the accompanying letters to the addressees.

My return is being put off. Bengal is calling. One should live as He wishes and go cheerfully wherever He takes one. If we but reach the state where we know that we do nothing, what more can we desire?

How is Sharda1? Read the book she has. You will find in it something for Shakaribehn2. There is some exaggeration in it, but on the whole it is quite good.

If Shakaribehn wishes to cook separately for herself, let her do so. See that she and Babudi are happy.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S. G. 129

544. LETTER TO MANGALDAS PAKVASA

NEW DELHI,

October 21, 1946

BHAI MANGALDAS PAKVASA3.

I have your letter. I do not like your falling ill again and again. There is no hurry about the Trust work.4 Do it at your leisure.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 4693. Courtesy: Mangaldas Pakvasa

---

1 Sharda G. Chokhawala, also called Babudi, addressee’s daughter
2 Addressee’s wife
3 Solicitor; President, Bombay Legislative Council from July 1937 to August 1947
4 The reference, presumably, is to the drafting of Nature Cure Clinic Trust Deed; vide, “Letter to Mangaldas Pakvasa”, 12-6-1945, and 25-6-1945.
545. LETTER TO MANILAL B. DESAI

October 21, 1946

CHI. MANILAL,

I forgot to write about the distribution of work1 mentioned in your letter. I like it. Let everybody adhere to it and keep a daily account of his work.

The reason why Dhiru does not put on weight may be that his present weight is all that his system can carry. Only, he should keep up his energy and not lose weight further.

The cases have ended well. Has Datar2 sent any reply?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 2739. Courtesy: Manilal B. Desai

546 LETTER TO DINSHAW K. MEHTA

NEW DELHI, October 21, 1946

CHI. DINSHAW,

I have your letter. It is all right if you stay for the sake of Mother and your hotel. You have my permission to come over whenever you want to. Your mind must become calm. I hope Ardeshir3 and the little girl4 are all right and Gulbai5 is also well. My stay here has been prolonged.

I have written this in a great hurry.

Blessings from

BAPU

DR. DINSHAW MEHTA
HEALTH HOTEL
TODDYWALA ROAD
POONA

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 At Nature Cure Clinic, Uruli-Kanchan, where the addressee was Manager
2 Datar Singh
3 Son, daughter and wife of the addressee
4 ibid
5 ibid
547. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

NEW DELHI,
October 21, 1946

CHI. AMTUL SALAAM,

I have your letter. In my opinion your place is there. If you cannot be cured there, what will do in Noakhali? The thing is that what I say does not appeal to you. What is the use of swallowing it as a bitter draught? So long as it does not come naturally, you should do as your heart dictates.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

I shall probably leave for Bengal on the 24th or 25th. But God alone knows best.

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 535

548. LETTER TO DR. ATMARAM K. BHAGAWAT

October 21, 1946

Bhai Bhagawat¹,

I am able to write to you only now. Go for the medical conference.

I have got Appa Saheb’s² letter. I am writing to him at his address. He will have recovered by now.

Blessings from
BAPU

From Hindi: C. W. 2740. Courtesy: Manilal B. Desai

¹ Of Nature Cure Clinic, Uruli Kanchan
² Sitaram Purushottam Patwardhan
549. NOTE TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

October 21, 1946

I do not even remember that you said anything to me. Nobody has poisoned my ears. Kanu and someone else, too, told me and, after getting their permission, I reported it to Hariji. Yes, the letter was from some Harijan.

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 2496

550. LETTER TO HARIHAR SHARMA

NEW DELHI,

October 21, 1946

CHI. ANNA.

I have your letter. There is art in dying also. As it is, all die, but one has to learn by practice how to die a beautiful death. The matter will not be settled even if everybody went to Noakhali and got killed. When the time comes I shall call for you, Reddy and Amtussalam to go there. So far I do not see that the moment has come. Your keeping indifferent health is another difficulty. Considering all this, please tell me what you would like to do. Can you go to Assam? Or to Sindh?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

551. LETTER TO PADAMPAT SINGHANIA

NEW DELHI,

October 21, 1946

Bhai Padampat,

Mirabehn has forwarded to me the letters you wrote to Hari. In my opinion it is not right to postpone collecting the money till land

1 The addressee had in a note complained that Thakkar Bapa suspected him of having instigated Swarupanand to poison Gandhiji’s ears against Viyogi Hari.
2 Son of Narandas Gandhi
3 Secretary, Dakshina Bharat Hindi Prachar Sabha
4 Govinda Reddy, an inmate of Sevagram has been acquired. Do send the money and collect from other donors. The amounts will be returned in case the project does not materialize. I have collected money on many occasions; work always follows. Isn’t this the history of all activities?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

552. LETTER TO GOVINDA REDDY

NEW DELHI,
October 21, 1946

CHI. REDDY,

Read the letter I have sent to Anna.¹ I shall let you know when the time comes for you to go. Anyway, you are all free. On your own you can do whatever you wish, go wherever you please.

Blessings from
BAPU

SEVAGRAM

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

553. LETTER TO HEMPRABHA DAS GUPTA

NEW DELHI,
October 21, 1946

CHI. HEMPRABHA,

I have your sorrowful letter. But despite all that you have to regain your composure. You cannot get over grief by nursing it and brooding over it. It can be got over only by effort and tapas. Take the name of God and engage yourself in your routine. God will show the way.

The wire² I am sending will have been received. I have drafted it. It is night time now, so it will be despatched tomorrow.

I am trying to get there.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

² Vide “Telegram to Hemprabha Das Gupta”, 21-10-1946
Mahatma Gandhi declared in an interview today that the Muslim League Ministry in Bengal should be able to control the outbreak of disorders in East Bengal in which a good few thousands have been driven from their homes and an undetermined number killed or kidnapped. He said:

Control will depend on the Ministry. If the Muslim League wanted to control it, I should think that it could. The Muslim League has the overwhelming percentage of Muslim voters on their side.

Mahatma Gandhi described the Bengal outbreak as “heart-breaking”. His comments on the outbreak of robbing, burning and looting in East Bengal were made in his small room in the Untouchable Colony where he has lived most of the time since the arrival of the British Cabinet Mission in March. He sat on a thin mat with a small sloping desk before him and I sat on the floor while he talked of many things including America, the new Government in India, South Africa and his own health.

He announced again his intention of visiting the troubled areas in Bengal after his meeting on October 23 with Pandit Nehru and the Working Committee where they will discuss problems created by the entry of the Muslim Group into the Central Ministry. He said:

The fact that I go there will satisfy the soul and may be of some use.

PRESTON GROVER: Will the Muslims listen to you?

GANDHJI: I don’t know. I don’t go with any expectation, but I have the right to expect it. A man who goes to do his duty only expects to be given strength by God to do his duty.

To a question as to when this type of disturbances would end in India, he replied:

You may be certain that they will end. If the British influence were withdrawn, they would end much quicker. While the British influence is here, both parties, I am sorry to confess, look to the British power for assistance.

1 Of the Associated Press of America
Turning to the affairs of the Interim Government, Mahatma Gandhi regretted the statement of Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan, the Muslim League selection for the Central Government. To Raja Ghazanfar Ali Khan’s statement that the League was going into the Interim Government to fight for Pakistan, Mr. Gandhi said:

That is an extraordinary and inconsistent attitude. The Interim Government is for the interim period only and may not last long. While it is there to deal with the problems that face the country—starvation, nakedness, disease, bad communications, corruption, illiteracy. Any one of these problems would be enough to tax the best minds of India. On these there is no question of Hindu or Muslim. Both are naked. Both are starving. Both wish to drive out the demon of illiteracy and un-Indian education.

There is not much time to elapse between this Government and that to be set up by the Constituent Assembly. The time will be shortened if both apply their will to the completion of the work of the Constituent Assembly.

The Constituent Assembly is based on the State Paper. That Paper has put in cold storage the idea of Pakistan. It has recommended the device of “grouping” which the Congress interprets in one way, the League in another and the Cabinet Mission in a third way. No law-giver can give an authoritative interpretation of his own law. If then there is a dispute as to its interpretation, a duly constituted court of law must decide it.

[P. G.] But if the Muslim League do not accept the court interpretation?

[G.] They cannot impose theirs on others. If they do, they put themselves in the wrong box. The alternative is to come to blows. We are all savages and come to blows often when we don’t agree. Yet we are all gentlemen. This is so whether in America or Europe.

Asked for his reaction to the decision of the Madras Ministry which has decided against any expansion of the cotton mills industry in the Province in order to promote the Gandhian plan for home spinning and weaving, the Mahatma said:

I think it is the finest thing going. If you want to follow this logically, then you must follow it through.

Asked whether it would then be logical to “follow through” to the extent that mills presently in the Province would be stopped, he replied that if in time, through

1 Ghazanfar Ali Khan made the statement while addressing a students’ meeting at Lahore on October 19.
the progressive programme, the mills came to have no customers, then they would quit—“unless they chose to sell outside India”.

He assailed the Natal Sugar Mills industry as responsible for bringing indentured Indians there to work and thus creating the segregation problem.

To a question as to what would become of Englishmen in the service of the Government of India, Gandhi said:

I think that India has use for every one of them who is loyal to India and to Indian traditions and conditions and who will be above temptation and corruption. I don’t want to say that they should be disloyal to England. That is not the point. They should not be disloyal to India. These things not conflict but it has happened in history. Most have come here to serve the country of their birth by exploiting India. That is hypocrisy. It is dishonesty. There is no room for dishonesty in any service or outside it.

Asked if he had any message for America, he said:

Dislodge the money God called Mammon from the throne and find a corner for poor God. I think America has a very big future but in spite of what is said to the contrary, it has a dismal future if it swears by Mammon. Mammon has never been known to be a friend of any of us to the last. He is always a false friend.

Mahatma Gandhi, who has passed 77 years of age, said:

I am shaken in that belief, although not because it is illegitimate. But there are well defined limits to the fulfilment of that wish. If you do not fulfil those limits, then you may not attain the wish. For the time being, I feel dislodged. I have not attained the necessary equanimity. I don’t want to live 125 years or even one year on nostrums, medicines and that kind of thing. I want to live a life of service in my present way. That is possible provided you have equableness under every circumstance. Nothing should irritate you. I am not able to say today that nothing irritates me or has irritated me.

He said he had thought calmly of living until 125 “until a few days ago”, when he had a “rude shock”. It was on the occasion of his birthday by the Hindu calendar, which came this year ten days ahead of October 2, the day of his birthday by the ordinary calendar. Rajendra Prasad, the Food Member in the Cabinet, had come to preside at a flag raising in connection with the birthday, and on that occasion, he was told, “monkey-nuts, raisins, etc., were to be served to the Harijan children and volunteers in the camp”.

384 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
He said he considered it an insult to the Food Minister to give food needlessly in his presence to children and others “who were not in need”. His anger flared up, he said, because “every morsel of food has to be husbanded. If we do it, there will be no shortage. India is the last country in the world that should be short of food if our rulers know their business—and ther is no black marketing.” The Mahatma said:

I flared up madly. I lost my balance. You can use any adverb or adjective you may like to describe it. It was then I discovered my failure. This loss of self-control has cost some years of my life—which it will be possible to regain if I regain my equanimity—or gain it. That is the humbler way to say it.

_Harijan_, 3-11-1946

555. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI, October 21, 1946

Gandhiji pointed out to the people that the coming Diwali could not be an occasion for feasting. How could there be feasting in a house where there were any number of the starving and the naked? On top of that they were quarrelling amongst themselves. He had written and spoken enough on the subject. Yet he could not help repeating the same advice.

In these days those who were pure should become purer, those who were sinners should wash off their sins. All should save as much food as possible and spin as much as they could so that there might be more cloth. To save food was as good as producing it. To spin was to help reduce the nakedness of India. He who was truthful took the world a step forward. Let these things engage all their energies. It should be clear to them that these were not days of festivity or merry-making.

_The Hindustan Times_, 22-10-1946

556. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

October 22, 1946

CHI. AMRIT,

Your letter. Don’t worry about work here. It is clear to me that there was no sting. Something has come from within. Be patient and let it take its course.

I have written\(^1\) to Valji G. Desai. What I sent you was for your

\(^1\) It being Gandhiji’s day of silence, the speech was read out.
\(^2\) Vide “Letter to Valji G. Desai”, 21-10-1946.
amusement. Mistakes will occur in the work that is being done. We must be as accurate as possible when the book is published.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C. W. 4181. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 7817

557. LETTER TO MANU GANDHI
NEW DELHI,
October 22, 1946

CHI. MANUDI,

I got yesterday your letter written from Udaipur. I think now I shall be going to Bengal in a day or two. I would have been happy if you had come before that. But now you may do as you wish. I will accept anything that makes you happy, restores your health and enables you to resume your work of service.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

Stay there as long as necessary to please Umiya. Your health should improve there. People praise the climate of the place.

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./XXIV

558. LETTER TO SANTOK GANDHI
NEW DELHI,
October 22, 1946

CHI. SANTOK,

I have your letter. It is difficult to solemnize the marriage on Kartak Sud 12. God knows where I shall be on that day. The idea of my going is being hotly talked about. I will leave on the 24th or the 25th. It is not known how long I shall have to stay there. Under these circum-stances, we shall have to think what to do. Nor do I know when I shall be able to return, if at all, after I reach Bengal.

The reference is to the erroneous meaning of “architect” in English-Hindustani dictionary published in Harijan, 13-10-1946;
Addressee’s elder sister, Umiya Agrawal
Of the addressee’s daughter, Radha, who was married to Dipak Dutt Chowdhary
Everything is uncertain. Such being the situation, there is a risk in asking me to solemnize the marriage. Let me know what you think best. I may leave here tomorrow or the day after.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

559. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

NEW DELHI,
October 22, 1946

CHI. A. S.,

I have your letter. I cannot always be sending you telegrams. I have said what I had to say. It is strange your dragging Reddy and Anna with you. I have said ‘No’ to them. What can they do? I cannot see what even you will do. I merely told Jajuji¹ that if he felt so inclined, he might give his consent. Everyone is free, and may go anywhere in exercise of that freedom. But not on my behalf or the Ashram’s behalf.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 536

560. LETTER TO MAHESH DATT MISHRA

October 22, 1946

CHI. MAHESH,

I have gone through your whole letter. I do not believe that you will learn anything by coming to Calcutta. Your coming would have been meaningful if you were ready to take up Harijan work.² I advise you to get well and prepare yourself for Harijan.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 6715. Also C. W. 4459. Courtesy: Mahesh Datt Mishra

¹ Shrikrishnadas Jaju
561. MESSAGE TO VALMIKI MANDIR

NEW DELHI,
October 22, 1946

It is good that the Valmiki Mandir has, on the occasion of the Charkha Jayanti, taken part in the national yajna by spinning . . . 1 hanks of yarn. May you repeat the performance in future too, and march forward.

M. K. GANDHI

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

562. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,
October 22, 1946

Gandhiji said that a correspondent had drawn his attention to the fact that he had said nothing against illuminations at Diwali in his message on Monday. It was an accidental omission. He had been opposed to illuminations even in the olden days when there was no food shortage. To burn oil or ghee today when there was not enough to eat was unthinkable. Real India did not reside in cities like Delhi. It resided in the seven lakhs of villages. For the hungry and naked villagers there could be no Diwali illuminations or any other kind of festivity. It was their duty to abstain and save all the ghee, oil and money they could.

Commenting on the Marathi bhajan sung by Shri Balasaheb Kher, the Premier of Bombay, Gandhiji said that like Shri Thakkar Bapa, Kher Saheb had been a servant of the Harijans and Adivasis ever since he had known him. Now he had put on the crown of thorns and become the Premier of Bombay. For Gandhiji his service to Harijans and Adivasis was more important than anything else. In the bhajan Tukaram makes the devotee say that he would prefer blindness to vision which could enable him to harbour evil thoughts. Similarly, he would prefer deafness to hearing evil speech. He liked only one thing, namely, the name of God.

The Hindustan Times, 23-10-1946

1 Omission as in the source
Sheikh Saheb Hisam-ud-Din, former President of the All-India Majlis-e-Ahrar, has issued the following to the Press:\(^1\)

Maulana Saheb himself issued the following four days ago:\(^2\)

The value of these statements lies not so much in the numbers of Muslims supporting it, but in the fact that these Muslims of undoubted repute in Islam have no hesitation in condemning in unmeasured terms the nefarious deeds of the Muslims in East Bengal. It would be wrong to stigmatize the doers as goondas. These perpetrators of wrong are undoubtedly misled by men who should know better. There is little wonder that the atrocities have taken place when one bears in mind the poison that is instilled into the credulous minds of simpleminded Muslims.

In order to meet the evil, the sane element in Islam must not only speak out its mind, but act accordingly and promptly. It would be interesting to know whether the former President of the all India Majlis-e-Ahrar has been able to send the contemplated body of volunteers to undo the mischief.

NEW DELHI, October 23, 1946

Harijan, 3-11-1946

564. HOW VILLAGES CAN MANUFACTURE THEIR CLOTH

After reciting the scheme which I copied in the Harijan of August 14, 1946, from his letter to me, Shri Manu Subedar\(^3\) has given his argument in support of the scheme in the Rast Rahbar. I copy below two relevant paragraphs from the interesting article:\(^4\)

Not only will the cloth produced under the above scheme be cheaper than the black market, but it would be cheaper than the mill cloth for the reason that many items, which go into the price of the mill cloth to the consumer, would be eliminated. Amongst these are profits of the mills and of the \(^1\) Hisam-ud-Din and Abul Kalam Azad, in separate statements, not reproduced here, had condemned the arson, murder and forcible conversions in East Bengal as un-Islamic and called upon the Muslim majority there to protect the Hindu minority.

\(^2\) ibid

\(^3\) Member, Central Legislative Assembly

\(^4\) Only extracts are reproduced here.
middleman distributor of cloth, the cost of transport of cloth and cotton both ways, the cost of supervision and management, and interest charges and depreciation. Since the labour up to the stage of the yarn would be contributed and the labour charged for weaving would be in kind, even in normal peace time cloth produced under these conditions would be cheaper than factory cloth. . . .

I would invite the leaders to note that in the above scheme not only is there co-operation under the guidance of the village Panch and complete self-government, free from any interference of anybody outside, but there is the seed of the kind of economic revolution which we seek in this country. . . . The amount of State assistance involved in the proposal is so miserably small per head and is actually lower than the cost incurred by the State for many other purposes for the benefit of other groups and grades of the Indian population. The further advantage in this scheme is that it would be automatic in so far as in some villages it would take root quickly and they may want another bale inside a month. In other villages it might take them three or four months. Some of the villages will probably supply all their requirements by this method in the next few months and may have something to spare, and indeed I would not consider it wrong if cloth produced under these circumstances after it was found to be in excess of the requirement of the village which has produced it, was made available in the larger cities for sale to the general public. I would, however, sound a warning that the scheme would break down if individual exploitation is permitted. The surplus should not be dealt with except through the village collectively and should not be brought to the city except through the Government agency, which lands the bale at the door of the village. Nor should it be sold in the cities except at the Government retail shops. . . .

In a letter in Gujarati, Shri Subedar says:

If my scheme is not adopted, we may have the sorrowful spectacle of womenfolk going without cover and therefore remaining indoors.

The hard-heartedness which mill-owners and middlemen have exhibited require some such immediate remedy as I have suggested.

You have rightly said that the removal of the salt tax will drive home to the millions of villagers the truth that our Sarkar has now the reins of Government in its hands. Will they not also realize this truth, if the villages have cotton cotton delivered at their homes on the easiest terms possible so that with a little corporate labour they can clothe themselves without difficulty?

NEW DELHI, October 23, 1946

_Harijan_, 17-11-1946

565. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

_October 23, 1946_

CHI. AMRIT,

Your letter. It would be tragic if you couldn’t go to Paris because of obstinate boil. The doctor in attendance can’t say even that much! I am sure a good vaidya or, perhaps better still, a hakim could prescribe an innocent ointment which would bring it to a head and open it nicely and close the opening within the limited time. Ramanama is the sovereign remedy but it cannot be prescribed. It has to come of itself, if it comes at all.

J.’s wound is nothing but Badshah’s is bad. It was a narrow escape for the three.1

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C. W. 3700. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 6509

566. LETTER TO RENUKA RAY

.NEW DELHI, October 23, 1946

DEAR RENUKA2,

I am doing all I can about your question.

I am sorry about the illness of your brother’s child. Will you need to stay on whilst there is work in Bengal? Of course, you know where your duty lies for the moment.

Rajkumari is no better. The boil is obstinate. The surgeon in 1 Jawaharlal Nehru, Abdul Ghaffar Khan and Dr. Khan Saheb, while returning to Peshawar after a study-tour of tribal areas of the North-West Frontier Province on October 21, were attacked by a mob. Abdul Ghaffar Khan, who tried to protect Nehru, was injured more than the other two.

2 Congress worker and Vice-President of the Bengal Rehabilitation Committee
Simla says it cannot yet be opened.

Yours,

BAPU

SMT. RENUKA RAY
2 SAFDARIANG LANE
NEW DELHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

567. LETTER TO KUSUM DESAI

NEW DELHI,
October 23, 1946

CHI. KUSUM,

I do not know whether I shall be attending the Congress\(^1\) this time. So forget me. If you wish to go there, make your own arrangements. At present, I am preparing for a tour of Bengal.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI KUSUMBEHN DESAI
MEHTA POLE
BARODA

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 1852

568. LETTER TO SUSHILA, ARUN AND SITA GANDHI

NEW DELHI,
October 23, 1946

CHI. SUSHILA,

I have your letter. The excerpts from Indian Opinion which you send me are quite useful. So continue the practice. Most probably I shall be going to Bengal in a day or two.

Sita will have recovered by now. I like her plan of rushing to Manilal. But she must not give up what she has undertaken. I will say she has rightly fulfilled her duty if she takes up Manilal’s work in South Africa after completing her education. Build up well your body and mind. Go only after you have prepared yourself to leave the children in India. In the meanwhile Manilal will carry on. It is natural that he should want you and the children with him. But he has to restrain himself.

\(^1\) To be held at Meerut from November 21 to 25

It is good that your mother has returned. Take care of your health. How is Tara? I have written again about uncertified khadi. Do look it up. I did not realize that corruption has gone so deep. There have been many other letters too.

My silence is more spiritual than physical. It does not irk me; it pleases me. It saves me a lot of time. None of you are to worry.

Blessings from

BAPU

SUSHILA GANDHI

AKOLA

CHI. ARUN,

I am glad that you wrote to me. How nice that you like to study. Which do you like better, study or play? In which form are you? What games do you play?

Has Ila become less naughty? I shall see about the photographs.

CHI. SITA.

I shall save my time since I have already written enough about you.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

569. INTERVIEW TO ANDREW FREEMAN

NEW DELHI,

[On or after October 23, 1946]

ANDREW FREEMAN: Has the spinning-wheel a message for America? Can it serve as a counter weapon to the atom bomb?

GANDHIJI: I do feel that it has message for the U. S. A. and the

---

1 Tara Mashruwala, Sushila Gandhi’s sister
2 Vide “I am Defeated”
3 Son and daughter of Manilal Gandhi
4 ibid.
5 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “The Spinning-wheel and the Atom Bomb”
6 According to Pyarelal the interview took place after Freeman of the New York Post, returned from his assignment in the N. W. F. P. tour with Nehru which was on October 23.
whole world. But it cannot be until India has demonstrated to the world that it has made the spinning-wheel its own, which it has not done today. The fault is not of the wheel. I have not the slightest doubt that the saving of India and of the world lies in the wheel. If India becomes the slave of the machine, then, I say, heaven save the world.

India has a far nobler mission, viz., to establish friendship and peace in the world. Peace cannot be established through mere conferences. Peace is being broken, as we all see, even while conferences are being held.

A. F. It seems so tragic. India must lead the way and India is in turmoil. If any country can really take up the wheel, it is India. Do you think it will?

G. It is doing so, but I confess the process is very slow. Pandit Nehru called khadi the “livery of our freedom”. It cannot be that so long as it is the consolation of cranks and paupers only. There are many things that are not possible for man to accomplish. But everything is possible for God. If there is no living power called God, the spinning-wheel has no place.

A. F. Those who spin are not called cranks here.

G. No. I used that expression to anticipate what Americans would say. I allow myself to be called by that name to protect myself. I was described by a friend as a ‘practical idealist’.

A. F. As a fairly intelligent human being and an American I can only say that though many Americans would call spinners cranks, there are not a few who are thinking hard. Something has to be found that would save civilization from destruction. Life must be simplified.

G. Human personality cannot be sustained in any other way. I stand by what is implied in the phrase ‘Unto This Last’. That book marked the turning point in my life. We must do even unto this last as we would have the world do by us. All must have equal opportunity. Given the opportunity every human being has the same possibility for spiritual growth. That is what the spinning-wheel symbolizes.

A. F. Would you like the Americans to take to the spinning-wheel?

G. Yes. But I do not know whether it will be taken up by anybody before it is well established here. If, on the other hand, India adopts it for clothing itself, I won’t need to tell the world. It will adopt it of itself. Today there is such an onslaught

---
1 By John Ruskin
on India of Western machinery that for India to withstand it successfully would be nothing short of a miracle. I must confess that today everything seems to point to the contrary. Look at our internecine quarrels.

A. F. But you have not given up hope?

G. I cannot, so long as I have faith in that living Power which is more with us than we know. But let me ask you a counter-question. Has America with all its Mammon-worship abolished unemployment, poverty, corruption, Tammany Hall?

A. F. The answer is obvious.

G. Has England? Has it not still to grapple with the problems that baffle her? It is a very curious commentary on the West that although it professes Christianity, there is no Christianity or Christ in the West or there should have been no war. That is how I understand the message of Jesus. There is much ignorance and superstition in India. But deep down in us is that faith in God—the instinct for religion.

A. F. All newspapermen and others have sensed that. But I must confess there are moments when I feel it is hopeless. Look at the recent attack on Pandit Nehru in the tribal areas from which I have just returned, and the happenings in East Bengal. You too must at times have felt the hopelessness of it all. Would you say Islam has repudiated its teacher, as Christianity of today has its Jesus?

G. I have said so openly. Where is Mohammed and his message which is peace? I said recently at a public gathering that if Mohammed came to India today, he would disown many of his-so-called followers and own me as a true Muslim, as Jesus would own me as a true Christian.

A. F. How can we bring men back to God or to the teaching of Jesus or that of Mohammed?

G. I might give the answer that Jesus gave to one of his followers: “Do the will of my Father who is in Heaven, not merely say Lord, Lord". That holds true of you, me and everybody. If we have faith in the living God, all will be well with us. I hope not to lose that faith even to my dying day. In spite of my numerous failings and shortcomings of which I am but too well aware, my faith in God is burning brighter every day. If it did not, I would take the same prescription that I gave to women threatened with dishonour and with no prospect of help or escape, viz., commit suicide.

\footnote{St. Matthew, VII. 21}

A. F. Have you thought of the charkha as a therapeutic agent?

G. Yes. I have read some literature on the subject sent to me by a Glasgow professor. A retired Superintendent of a jail in Bengal too wrote to me describing the use of the spinning-wheel for curing lunatics, particularly by virtue of the soothing effect of its rhythmic motion.

_Harijan_, 17-11-1946

570. ABducted Girls

Q. You have called attention to the fact that girls who are forcibly abducted have not erred and that society would be wrong in penalizing them. In further exposition of your views, would you tell us if any ceremony purporting to be one of marriage forced on unwilling victims of such outrage, should be considered binding in any way, against the will of the girls concerned? Is it not right that both society and the family should be broad-minded enough to receive them back? In the case of unmarried girls abducted or forced to undergo such mock ceremonies of marriage, should not a special effort be made by society not only to reclaim them, but to help them to contract marriage in the normal manner and thus be completely vindicated and restored to the fold?

A. You are right. All you say follows from my remarks referred to by you. I have no doubt that girls forcibly abducted have committed no crime, nor incurred any odium. They deserve the pity and active help of every right-minded man. Such girls should be received back in their homes with open arms and affection, and should have no difficulty in being suitably matched.

NEW DELHI, October 24, 1946

_Harijan_, 3-11-1946

1 Vide “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 18-10-1946
2 This appeared under “Notes”.
3 Vide “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 20-10-1946
571. TELEGRAM TO SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA

NEW DELHI,
October 24, 1946

SATIS BABU
KHADI PRATISHTHAN
15 COLLEGE SQUARE
CALCUTTA

NO NECESSITY SPECIAL SHALL WIRE DATE DEPARTURE.

BAPU

From a photostat: G. N. 8913

572. LETTER TO MANU GANDHI

NEW DELHI,
October 24, 1946

CHI. MANUDI,

I replied the very next day to the letter you had sent. But you could not have received it. It must have gone to Udaipur.

I got your letter today. I am sorry to hear that Shankarlal' is ill. It was good that both of you sisters went to Udaipur. Tell Shankarlal to get well soon. It does not behove a scout to fall ill. He may take up any job but a scout does not cease to be a scout.

Why should Umiya be unhappy? Bring her along. If you yourself do not come, that is a different matter.

I am not sending for you to make you unhappy. Are you afraid of me? I will never force you to do anything against your wish. I always have your welfare at heart. I wish to see you healthy and happy.

I have no time to write more.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./24

---

1 Shankarlal Agrawal, husband of addressee’s elder sister Umiya Agrawal
573. LETTER TO MAHESH DATT MISHRA

October 24, 1946

CHI. MAHESH,

I have gone through your whole letter. Give up your insistence on accompanying me to Calcutta at present. If I feel, after reaching there, that your coming may be good, I shall send for you. Now go home and get ready for Harijan. Improve your health.

I admit my mistake about Harijan; forget it.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 6716. Also C. W. 4460. Courtesy: Mahesh Datt Mishra

574. LETTER TO RAM NARAYAN DUBE

NEW DELHI,

October 24, 1946

BHAI RAM NARAYAN DUBE,

I read your book on nature cure. It is packed with information but there is much exaggeration. There is a “must” with every instruction.

I passed on the book to a well-known vaidya to read the chapter on herbal science. He says that your claim cannot be proved.

If it is so, the book needs to be drastically revised.

M. K. GANDHI

SHRI RAM NARAYAN DUBE
PRAKRITIK CHIKITSALAYA
BENARES

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

575. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

NEW DELHI,

October 24, 1946

CHI. AMRIT,

I am so glad the boil has been opened and it promises to heal within time.
Jawaharlal was here when I got your letter. I showed it to him.

Just about to go to the prayer.

It was good to have attended to the dictionary, so like you.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C. W. 4182. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 7818

576. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,
October 24, 1946

Gandhiji told them that it had already reached them. His own place, he knew, was in Bengal. He assured them that the heart of every man and woman who believed in God was bleeding for Bengal. He admonished them for creating a disturbance at prayer-time and asked them to be calm and join in the prayers. . . .

The regular prayer was not recited. Gandhiji said their minds were not calm enough for it. Ramdhun was sung and as usual had a calming effect on the gathering. Although the regular prayer had to be given up, it was in his heart, said Gandhiji, and he was sure it would reach God.

He assured the audience that if members of the Interim Government were convinced that even by offering their lives as a sacrifice they could put a stop to the disturbances in East Bengal, not one of them would hesitate to make that sacrifice.

Referring to the remark of the young man who had used the metaphor of a house on fire, Gandhiji said that the duty of the owner of the house or his servant was that when the house was burning he should concentrate on putting out the fire and not lose his head. He alluded to the legend about King Janaka who remained calm and unperturbed when the report was brought to him that his capital was burning, because he had done all he possibly could before and after the accident and therefore could rest secure in his faith in God. If he had lost his head and run to the place of accident,

1 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”.
2 A crowd of excited young men carrying placards and shouting slogans had come to demand redress for East Bengal and invaded the prayer ground saying they wanted their voice to reach the members of the Working Committee which was meeting in Gandhiji’s room.
3 The following paragraph is reproduced from The Hindustan Times.
4 Somebody had shouted that they could not pray when their house was burning.
he would only have assisted the flames by distracting attention.

They were pained at the news of women’s suffering in East Bengal, said Gandhiji. But they had so lost their heads that they had themselves failed to be considerate towards the women in the audience. They had scared them away from the prayer ground. They had occupied the place where women sat every day. It was a strange way of demonstrating their sympathy with the outraged womanhood of East Bengal. He hoped that they would see the irony and inconsistency of it. Our women were easily scared away. It was so more or less all the world over. He wanted our women to learn to be brave. His advice to them to commit suicide rather than allow themselves to be dishonoured had been much misunderstood. They could keep a dagger for self-defence if they wished to. But a dagger was no use against overwhelming odds. He had advised them to take poison and end their lives rather than submit to dishonour. Their very preparedness should make them brave. No one could dishonour a woman who was fearless of death. They had two ways of self-defence—to kill and be killed or to die without killing. He could teach them the latter, not the former. Above all he wanted them to be fearless. There was no sin like cowardice.

But there was a moral code even for those who believed in violence. He did not wish them to copy the methods said to have been adopted in East Bengal. They must have read Maulana Saheb’s statement and the statement issued by the ex-President of the All India Majlis-e-Ahrar. They had said that Islam did not permit forcible conversion or abduction and molestation of women.¹

_Harijan_, 3-11-1946; also _The Hindustan Times_, 26-10-1946

577. ENGLISH INTO HINDUSTANI

This fortnightly attempt is proving its use. Its defects are not unknown to me. It is a labour of love for the Rajkumari. Insistence on such an effort was mine. I was anxious to give to the lovers of the blend of Hindi and Urdu something ready-made. The hope then was that the vocabulary will be the joint effort of perhaps half a dozen co-workers. But it could not be. It had to be made where I was. My lot happened to be cast in Delhi. The attempt was not to be interrupted. The Rajkumari took it up with rare passion. But she is no scholar of Hindustani. She produces every fortnight what labour of love can. When and if the labour is completed and the time comes to publish the vocabulary in book form, it will undergo revision and errors and defects will be removed. Friends will, therefore, please continue to send their corrections and suggestions which, where acceptable, will be adopted at the time of revision. The chief thing to be borne in mind is that the student may have by him a ready though not scholarly companion to refer to in case of need.

¹_Vide_ also “How Villages Can Manufacture their Cloth”, 17-11-1946
²_This appeared under “Notes”._

NEW DELHI, October 25, 1946
Harijan, 3-11-1946

578. PLUCKY STAND

Papers received from Natal contain among other things a remarkable correspondence between the Mayoral Secretary of Durban and the Natal Indian Congress Secretary. A committee has been formed for making arrangements for the royal visit to Durban proposed to take place in the month of March next year. The main committee has established a sub-committee to deal with the question of joining the coloured and non-European sections of the population of Durban. For the purpose, the Committee invited the Natal Indian Congress to appoint two representatives to serve on the sub-committee so as to give their advice and assistance to enable the Indian community to see Their Majesties and the Royal Princesses.

To this invitation the Joint Hon. Secretary of the Natal Indian Congress (Meer Saheb) sent the following plucky reply on the 11th September last:

I am directed by my Executive to state that while the Indian community has the greatest respect for Their Majesties and the Royal Princesses, it must be noted that the Indians of South Africa are at the present moment passing through the most critical period in their history. A series of colour discriminatory Acts depriving us of our elementary human rights during the last half century has culminated in the passing of the Asiatic Land Tenure and Indian Representation Act, 1946, passed in the teeth of the strongest opposition ever voiced by our community. The action of the Union Government in thus oppressing a voteless section of its population has plunged the whole Indian community in a state of grave unrest. Recent trends in colour legislation leave no room for doubt as to what is in store for people of colour in this country. The colour of a man’s skin has become the sole criterion of judging human qualities.

As a result of all this the Indian community of South Africa resolved on the 13th June, 1946 to launch a campaign of passive resistance against colour discrimination in the laws of this country. This peaceful protest still goes on... and 627 of our people, including national leaders like Dr. Yusuf Dadoo and Dr. G. M. Naicker, have been sent to jail where they are treated like common criminals. Some of them have served their sentences and have been released after being subjected to inhuman treatment, but hundreds still remain behind prison bars and many more continue to be sent to prison daily.

While the Indian community finds itself in such an unhappy situation in a part of His Majesty’s Empire, it is most unreasonable to expect Indians to participate in any rejoicing or celebrations in honour of Royalty. In the circumstances we cannot but suggest that you advise Their Majesties to postpone their visit until such time as there is peace and goodwill in South Africa between the rulers and the ruled, the White and the non-White, the represented and the unrepresented, the privileged and under-privileged, so that all who constitute the South African nation can equally share, not only its burdens, but also its rewards.

The Natal Indian Congress Executive is to be congratulated on the reply. The Royal visit can evoke no feeling of joy among those who are fighting for their self-respect in South Africa in the making of which they have no mean share. Let us hope that the Royal visit will be postponed to a more propitious time when the colour bar has become a thing of the past. Such self-denial on the part of Their Majesties will be quite in keeping with the direction which the King and Queen recently issued to substitute in the National Anthem the following new verses:

 Nor on this land alone,
  But be God’s mercies known,
    From shore to shore.
  Lord make the nations see,
    That men should brothers be,
  And form one family,
    The wide world o’er.

for the antiquated and indefensible verses:

 Oh, Lord our God arise,
 Scatter his enemies,
    and make them fall.
 Confound their politics,
    Frustrate their knavish tricks.
 On Thee our hopes we fix,
    God save us all.

NEW DELHI, October 25, 1946
Harijan, 3-11-1946
579. A WISE STEP

Shri G. D. Tapase, Minister for Backward Classes (Bombay) has sent me a copy of the Bombay Harijan (Removal of Social Disabilities) Act just passed by the Bombay Legislature. I give below the most relevant clauses:

3. Notwithstanding anything contained in any instrument or any law, custom or usage to the contrary, no Harijan shall merely on the ground that he is a Harijan—

(a) be ineligible for office under any authority constituted under any law; or

(b) be prevented from—

(i) having access to or using any river, stream, spring, well, tank, cistern, water-tap or any bathing place, burial or cremation ground, any sanitary convenience, any road, or pathway which the members of all other castes and classes of Hindus have right to use or have access to;

(ii) having access to or using any public conveyance licensed by the Provincial Government or any local authority to ply for hire;

(iii) having access to or using any building, well, cistern or place used for charitable or public purposes maintained wholly or partially out of the revenues of the Province or the funds of a local authority;

(iv) having access to a place of public amusement or place of public entertainment;

(v) having access to a shop which the members of all other castes and classes of Hindus have a right to have access to;

(vi) having access to or using any place set apart or maintained for the use of Hindus generally but not for the use of any particular section or class thereof;

(vii) enjoying any benefit under a charitable trust created for the benefit of Hindus generally but not for the benefit of any particular section or class thereof.

3.A. No person in charge of any of the places referred to in sub-clauses (i), (iii), (iv), (v) and (vi) or any conveyance referred to in sub-clause (ii), or clause (b) of Section 3 shall impose any restrictions on a Harijan or act in a manner as to result in discrimination against him.

4. No court shall in adjudicating any matter or executing any order recognize any custom or usage imposing any civil disability on any Harijan.
merely on the ground that he is a Harijan.

5. No local authority shall in carrying out the functions and duties entrusted to it under any law recognize any custom or usage referred to in Section 4.

6. Whoever—

(a) prevents any person, by reason of his being a Harijan, from having access to or using any of the places referred to in sub-clause (i), (iii), (iv), (v) and (vi) or any conveyance referred to in sub-clause (ii) of clause (b) of Section 3 or from enjoying any benefit under a charitable trust referred to in sub-clause (vii) of clause (b) of the said Section or abets the prevention thereof; or

(b) imposes any restriction on a Harijan or acts in a manner so as to result in discrimination against him or abets any person to impose such restriction or to act in such manner shall, on conviction, be punished with imprisonment for a term which may extend to three months or with fine which may extend to Rs. 200 or with both.

7. If any person who has been convicted of any offence punishable under this Act is again guilty of the same offence, he shall be punished on the second conviction with imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months or with a fine which may extend to Rs. 500 or with both and if he is again so guilty shall be punished on the third or any subsequent conviction with imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year and shall also be liable to fine which may extend to Rs. 1,000.

The author of the measure has kindly supplied me with the text of his speech delivered on his introducing the measure. From it I note below the most poignant passages.

This untouchability amounts to irrationality. As soon as a Harijan is born, untouchability applies to him. . . . As a Harijan he is born, as a Harijan he lives all through his life and as a Harijan he dies. . . . However clean he may be, however wise he may be, however superior he may be, to the so-called orthodox Hindus, he is not a superior being. The worse of it is that even after his death his dust and ashes are not allowed to mingle with the dust and ashes of the others. . . . The agonies of the untouchable are further aggravated by the fact that he is treated as an untouchable not only by the caste Hindus but even by Christians, Muslims and others. . . . To my mind the Bill gives a sanad, a charter, to the Harijans for the exercise of certain social, civic, fundamental rights.

It is worthy of note that the Bill was passed without opposition worth the name from the Hindu side. That is a good augury for the successful working of the Act. And yet it would not do to be oversanguine about it. Unfortunately for us, we know that we pass resolutions by acclamation and allow them to become dead letter.
The greatest vigilance will have to be exercised by the Government and the reformers in the strict enforcement of the law.

It is no use blinking the fact that the reign of irrationality referred to by the author of the relief bill is still very much to the fore in India. It is not merely in regard to untouchability but many other things. Reformers, therefore, have to watch the demon and utilize their watchfulness, courtesy and tact in dealing with those who are possessed by the demon.

NEW DELHI, October 25, 1946
Harijan, 3-11-1946

580. “AMONG THE SAVARAS OF ORISSA”1

The moral is that basic education, i.e., education through craft, is the education that India needs.

NEW DELHI, 25-10-1946
Harijan, 24-11-1946

581. LETTER TO J. P. BHANSALI

October 25, 1946

CHI. BHANSALI,

You are impatient. You will definitely be offered in sacrifice at the proper time. In my opinion Pushpa2 is not yet fully trained.
Everyone should be given sufficient time.

We shall know more about the situation in Bengal after I reach there. If necessary I will write from there.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 9276

---

1 The report by A. V. Thakkar under this title is not reproduced here. It gave an account of the efforts made by a social worker to attract Savara children to school and the difficulty the parents had in sparing the children from the various chores they were required to do.

2 Pushpa Desai

VOL.92 : 9 AUGUST, 1946 - 6 NOVEMBER, 1946  405
582. LETTER TO D. B. KALELKAR

NEW DELHI,
October 25, 1946

CHI. KAKA,

I have your letter. I do not at all remember what I said to Jainendra. Whatever I may have said, it is not certain whether I shall or can go to Meerut. I do not know what purpose I shall serve if I do go there. I am also of the opinion that there should not be too many meetings on the occasion and if there are, everyone should not attend all of them. You may, therefore, give your own independent opinion.

I understand about Nanavati. I had expected it. Gajanan has his own ways, and so has Babu Kamath.

I have been reduced to the position of Trishanku. I am hanging in mid air. I do not know whether I shall go to Bengal or continue here or go to Sevagram.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10978

583. LETTER TO NARAHARI D. PARIKH

NEW DELHI,
October 25, 1946

CHI. NARAHARI,

I have your letter. Since you seem to have made up your mind, I will not interfere. No doubt you will be useful wherever you are. Your arguments do appeal to me. If I had any say in the matter, I would have asked you to wait till I reached Sevagram. But I do not insist on that, either. I do not know where Fate will take me. Let Him decide.

1 For the annual session of the Indian National Congress
2 Amritlal T. Nanavati
3 Gajanan Naik
4 Character in mythology who found himself suspended between earth and heaven
It is good that Vanamala\textsuperscript{1} is staying on for the present. It is all right about M.’s\textsuperscript{2} daily diary. You must fully recover.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S. N. 9145

584. LETTER TO G. D. TAPASE

NEW DELHI,

October 25, 1946

BHAI TAPASE,

I have your letter of October 4, 1946. Thanks. I have been able to reach it only today. I am giving the relevant parts in the Harijan papers.\textsuperscript{3}

It should be properly implemented.

Blessings from

M. K. GANDHI

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

585. LETTER TO DEVPRAKASH NAYYAR

October 25, 1946

CHI. DEV,

It is not required of you to go to Bengal just now. I did wish you to be with me during the holidays. My visit to Bengal has not yet been finalized. Of course, my heart is there. Here also there has been enough work. There is no need to decide anything in haste. Enough if you know that the work you have taken up there is not quite simple.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Hindi. Courtesy: National Archives of India

\textsuperscript{1} Vanamala N. Parikh, addressee’s daughter \textsuperscript{2} Munnalal G. Shah
\textsuperscript{3} Vide “A Wise Step”
586. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,

October 25, 1946

India is passing through a difficult time. As a matter of fact the whole world is passing through a crisis and India is no exception. What help do we need to meet this crisis?

According to the teaching of the Gita the first requisite for spiritual conduct was fearlessness. On New Year’s Day people made some good resolve. He wanted them to make a firm resolve to shed all fear. Without fearlessness all other virtues were turned into dust. Attainment of truth or non-violence was impossible without fearlessness.

Fearlessness did not mean arrogance or aggressiveness. That in itself was a sign of fear. Fearlessness presupposed calmness and peace of mind. For that it was necessary to have a living faith in God.

In the song that had been sung before them, Gandhiji concluded, the devotee says that divorced from God, he is a most worthless creature. God is his refuge all along. He who takes refuge in God has no fear.

Harijan, 3-11-1946

587. SIND BANS “SATYARTH PRAKASH”

One had thought that the ban on Satyarth Prakash had lapsed, never to be renewed. But the hope was a dupe. Here is the renewed ban:

Whereas it appears to the Government of Sind that Chapter XIV of the book in Sindhi entitled Satyarth Prakash contains matter which promotes feelings of enmity or hatred between different classes of His Majesty’s subjects—

Now, therefore, in exercise of the powers conferred by Section 99-A of the Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898, the Government of Sind hereby declares to be forfeited to His Majesty every copy wherever found of the book in Sindhi entitled Satyarth Prakash written by Swami Dayanand Saraswati and published by Professor Tarachand D. Gajra, M.A., on behalf of the Pratinidhi Sabha, Sind, Karachi, and all other documents containing copies, reprints or translations of, or extracts from,

1 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”
2 The ban had lapsed on September 30, 1946.
Chapter XIV of the said book on the grounds that in the said chapter the author
(a) ridicules some of the religious beliefs of the Muslims; (b) misrepresents and reviles the teachings of the Koran; (c) attacks and belittles the authority of the Prophet Mohammed; and (d) generally contains matter calculated to hurt and which hurts, the religious susceptibilities of Muslims.

It is wider in application than before. The lapsed ban made it criminal to print or publish the book containing Chapter XIV. The renewed ban makes the possession of such a copy a crime. I cannot help feeling that the ban is senseless and is calculated to wound the susceptibilities of the Arya Samajists all the world over. Satyarth Prakash enjoys the same status for 40 lakhs of Arya Samajists as the Koran for the Muslims and the Bible for the Christians. It is possible to understand a ban on contemporaneous controversial literature, though at this time of the day popular Governments are reluctant even then to use their power. But is seems to be mischievous to ban a scriptural book. I would, therefore, urge the Sind Government to withdraw the ban in question. The Sindhi translation of Satyarth Prakash is not a new publication. Is it to be contended that a book that has passed through so many editions and has been translated in most of the languages of the world has been now found to contain matter “which promotes feelings of enmity or hatred between different classes of His Majesty’s subjects”? The virtue of toleration is never strained, especially in matters of religion. Differences of religious opinion will persist to the end of time; toleration is the only thing that will enable persons belonging to different religions to live as good neighbours and friends. Religion never suffers by reason of the criticism—fair or foul—of critics; it always suffers from the laxity or indifference of its followers.

NEW DELHI, October 26, 1946

Harijan, 3-11-1946
588. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

NEW DELHI,
October 26, 1946

CHI. AMRIT,

This is just a line under great pressure of work. I do hope you will not be in a hurry to see the cut healed. Let it take its course. It will be the shortest.

I leave tomorrow morning.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C. W. 418. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 7820

589. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

NEW DELHI,
October 26, 1946

CHI. AMRIT,

You do not acknowledge my letter in yours of today. I have never missed a day.

I do hope your cut will heal by the time you are ready to fly and that you will be able to leave without any harm to the body.

We leave for Calcutta on Monday.

Herewith a letter from Shanta.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C. W. 4183. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 7819

590. LETTER TO MUNNALAL G. SHAH

October 26, 1946

CHI. MUNNALAL,

I got your letter. I must have myself opened your letter if you had marked it ‘Personal’. I must have thought of answering it; but it would appear owing to pressure of other work I was not able to do so.

You can, of course, join in my work. You must accept a salary for that. There is nothing wrong or shameful in your having become a householder. You should do what all others do. All I suggest is that if you accept less than your market price, it will be tantamount to not accepting a salary. Your needs can never be many. Where then is the problem? Stop thinking too much and engross yourself in whatever you consider your duty. All my plans have been upset now. Whatever I can do from Bengal is all that is possible.

I am likely to leave for Bengal on Monday. I will do there what God prompts me to do. I shall be on my test. Under these circumstances, give up the idea of staying near me and engross yourself in some service. You need not consult Kanchan\(^1\) in this matter. She will be agreeable to whatever you do. You have to decide by yourself.

It is surprising that Kanchan has not written. The first delivery is often difficult. It is for you to decide what is your duty in this matter. I would not know. The decision whether you should stay with her or away from her rests with you two.

I have written these lines on the basis of what I remember of the contents of your letter. Do not write ‘Personal’ henceforth. Let the whole world know the facts.

_Blessings from_

_BAPU_

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 8400 and 8399

---

591. LETTER TO KRISHNADAS GANDHI
NEW DELHI,
_October 26, 1946_

CHI. KRISHNADAS\(^2\).

I have your letter. I agree that we should not demand yarn against [the sale of] such items as cotton-mats, carpets, webbing tape, etc.

Similarly, it seems right not to ask for yarn against khadi required for hospitals and such other institutions.

Tell Jajuji that I have his letter. Perhaps it would be only proper

---

\(^1\) Addressed’s wife

\(^2\) Son of Chhaganlal Gandhi for Rajaji not to say anything because he is in the Government. I am writing to Pattabhi.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

SIT. KRISHNADAS GANDHI
SEVAGRAM

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

---

592. LETTER TO P. G. MATHEW
October 26, 1946

BHAJ MATHEW,
Rajkumari is at Simla. She is giving herself a rest. No letters are sent there. Why grieve over the passing of your mother? She has been freed from pain. I am going to Bengal.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

PROF. P. G. MATHEW
SACRED HEART’S COLLEGE
THEVARA
ERNAKULAM

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 1546

---

593. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,
October 26, 1946

Gandhiji said that the late Shri Mahadev Desai had rendered the song into Gujarati. The burden of the song, commented Gandhiji, was that the devotee should have the strength to walk alone in the face of difficulties however great. If he realized that God was ever with him, he would not feel lonely. The _bhajan_ was not meant for

---

1 C. Rajagopalachari, who was in charge of Education and Arts in the Interim Government since October 6
2 Vide “Letter to Dr. B. Pattabhi Sitaramayya”, 27-10-1946
3 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter” in _Harijan_. The opening sentence and the last two paragraphs are from _The Hindustan Times_.
4 The reference is to Rabindranath Tagore’s song ‘Ekla Chalo Re’. It was sung by the poet’s grand-niece, Nandita Kripalani.
evil-doers. They could not walk alone.

The League members, he continued, had come into the Cabinet. He hoped that they had come with the firm resolve to make a success of their business. The Government of the country lay in the hands of these fourteen men'. They had to find food and clothing, provide for the education of the crores and fair transport facilities for them and be responsible for the peace and order in the country. He said:

Let us all pray that they will be able to work as one team and all their dealings will be above board and corruption and jobbery would be things of the past.

Gandhiji then reminded the audience of the Charkha Mandals that had been established in Delhi. Only those who had learnt all the processes beginning with the separation of cotton seeds and ending with spinning could become members. Tomorrow there would be an examination for them. Those who knew the processes could take part in the examination. Cotton would be supplied to them when they came. The rest of the equipment they should bring with them.

The organizers had not been able to procure enough cotton as yet. Cotton ginned in mills was easy to obtain but it was no good for 'tunai'. For that they required cotton as it came from the pod. The examinees were free to bring their own cotton to avoid disappointment in case of failure to procure it. They should learn the lesson of the bhajan to stand alone.

Harijan, 3-11-1946; and The Hindustan Times, 27-10-1946

594. WHO CAN BE A TRUSTEE?

The purpose for which the A. I. S. A. has been created is so vast and great that the qualifications to be a trustee of the A. I. S. A. require careful consideration. In my opinion they should be as below:

1. No one should be a trustee merely in name or for the sake of name. A trustee should have the faith that in a country like India

---

2 The Gujarati original of this appeared in Harijanbandhu, 3-11-1946. The translation reproduced here has been revised so as to bring it into conformity with the original.
where crores remain unemployed for four to six months in the year, everybody can easily be clad in self-spun cloth and need not touch any other if all those who are physically fit spin for a reasonable time every day, say on an average for an hour every day.

2. A trustee who has this unshakable faith will spin regularly to set a good example to others and for the satisfaction of contributing his or her mite to the service of the country.

3. He or she will try his or her best to attune his or her life with the life in the villages of India.

4. India is made of villages, but our intelligentsia has neglected them. A trustee of the A. I. S. A. would try his or her utmost to remedy the handicaps from which our village life suffers. In doing so he or she should remember that village life must not become a copy or appendage of city life. The cities have to adopt the pattern of village life and subsist for the villages.

5. If a trustee’s husband is connected with the mill industry, she should engage a weaver out of her personal money to weave yarn spun by herself or her friends and relatives and use the cloth thus produced. A trustee should read all the literature about hand-spinning and hand-weaving and understand the economic and moral significance of the cloth-making industry. He or she should know that it is possible to make it universal and explain it to others.

6. A trustee should study and understand the history of the A. I. S. A. from the beginning to date and from it should learn how the various processes connected with cotton, i. e., carding, spinning and weaving, have been revolutionized.

I have given my views as suggestions. They cannot be obligatory. I shall welcome all helpful suggestions by way of amendment or addition.

NEW DELHI, October 27, 1946
Harijan, 3-11-1946

595. TELEGRAM TO AMRIT KAUR

NEW DELHI, October 27, 1946

RAJKUMARI AMRIT KAUR
MANORVILLE
SUMMER HILL
SIMLA

GLAD PROGRESSING. NO WORRY. ADDRESS KHADI PRATISHTHAN, COLLEGE SQUARE. LOVE ALL.

BAPU

From the original: C. W. 4143. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 7452

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
596. LETTER TO SARALADEVI A. SARABHAI

NEW DELHI,

October 27, 1946

CHI. SARALABEHN,

I had told you that I would send you my views regarding a trustee. I could not manage it earlier. But now I have written something for Harijanbandhu and I am sending to you a copy. I see in it nothing that you cannot do. I shall therefore await your consent.

Tomorrow I leave for Bengal. I shall get your letter if you address it to Khadi Pratishthan, College Square, Calcutta.

How nice if Nirmalabehn were recovering.

Blessings from

BAPU

SARALABEHN SARABHAI
AHMEDABAD

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

597. LETTER TO JIVANJI D. DESAI

NEW DELHI,

October 27, 1946

CHI. JIVANJI (DESAI),

Is there any hitch in working out this amalgamation (of the Sasta Sahitya [Mandal] and the Navajivan Trust)?

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

(The suggestion is from Sjt. Manu Subedar.)

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1Vide “Who Can Be A Trustee”
598. LETTER TO BABUBHAI JHAVERI

NEW DELHI,
October 27, 1946

BHAI BABUBHAI,

You should let your wife do what she thinks right. I see no point in dragging her to court. I have torn up the letter.

Blessings from
M. K. GANDHI

SJT. BABUBHAI JHAVERI
248 DOSHIWADA’S POLE
AHMEDABAD

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

599. LETTER TO SHANTILAL A. THAKKAR

NEW DELHI,
October 27, 1946

BHAI SHANTILAL,

I have your pathetic letter. If your repentance is genuine, you have started life anew. Seek satsang if you can. If you cannot have satsang of people, read good books and meditate. You should give up pleasures and pastimes, but not exercise, asanas, etc., which are necessary for building up the body.

I am not available now. Nor am I useful any more for such work.

Blessings from
M. K. GANDHI

SHANTILAL AMRITLAL THAKKAR
DOSSA JIVAN’S CHAWL
NEW HANUMAN LANE
BOMBAY

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 Company of the good
600. LETTER TO LILAVATI MUNSHI

NEW DELHI,
October 27, 1946

CHI. LILAVATI (MUNSHI),

I have your letter. I like your idea. But for the time being you or people like you will not be going with me. I have no idea what God wants me to do. I shall see my way after I reach there. And if I feel the need, I may write to you or send a wire.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

601. LETTER TO NANABHAI

NEW DELHI,
October 27, 1946

Bhai Nanabhai and Brothers and Sisters,

I had your letter. Yours seems to be a laudable effort. It was nice of you to have sent the skein of yarn. Carry the work forward with the help of Bhai Diwanji.

Blessings from
BAPU

Bhai Nanabhai
Gandhi Kutir
Karadi (Dist. Surat)

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

602. LETTER TO DR. B. PATTABHI SITARAMAYYA

October 27, 1946

Bhai Pattabhi,

It would be well if you issued a statement\(^1\) to the effect that the attack on [the policy of] not having any new mills in Madras was not proper.

\(^1\)Vide also “Letter to P. G. Mathew”, 26-10-1946

VOL.92 : 9 AUGUST, 1946 - 6 NOVEMBER, 1946 417
I am going to Bengal.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

603. LETTER TO SARASWATI GANDHI

October 27, 1946

CHI. SARU (SARASWATI),

I am able to write only this much while preparing to go to Calcutta. I got your letter. Kanti¹ is doing well. You too are growing wise. May you both make progress, enjoy long lives and always render service.

Blessings to all three of you from

BAPU

SHRI KANTI GANDHI

BANGALORE

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

604. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING²

NEW DELHI

October 27, 1946

Speaking before the evening prayer Gandhiji said that he was leaving for Calcutta the following morning. He did not know when God would bring him again to Delhi. He wanted to go to Noakhali from Calcutta. It was a difficult journey and he was in poor health. But one had to do one’s duty and trust in God to make the way smooth. It was not that God necessarily and always removed hardships from one’s path, but He always enabled one to bear them.

He did not want anyone to come to the station. India had given him enough affection. It needed no further demonstration.

He was not going to Bengal to pass judgment on anybody. He was going there as a servant of the people and he would meet Hindus and Muslims alike. Some Muslims looked upon him as an enemy today. They had not done so always. But he did not mind their anger. Were not his own religionists angry with him at times?

¹ Addressee’s husband
² Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”
From the age of seventeen he had learnt the lesson that all mankind, be they of any nationality, colour or country, were his own kith and kin. If they were God’s servants, they had to become servant of all His creation.

It was in that capacity that he was going to Bengal. He would tell them that Hindus and Muslims could never be enemies. They were born and brought up in India and they had to live and die in India. Change of religion could not alter that fundamental fact. If some people liked to believe that change of religion changed one’s nationality also, even then they need not become enemies.

Suffering of women had always melted his heart. He wanted to go to Bengal and wipe their tears and put heart into them if he could. In Calcutta he would try to see the Governor and the Prime Minister Mr. Suhrawardy and then proceed to Noakhali.

He was proceeding under auspices none too happy. He referred to the ugly demonstration before the Viceroy’s House on the day before when Jawaharlalji and some of his colleagues in the Interim Government were abused and insulted. It was bad. Why should such things happen when the two parties, the Muslim League and the Congress, had formed a coalition at the Centre? Praise or abuse made no difference to the leaders who wanted to serve them to the best of their ability. But the people had to behave.

Let us all still pray and hope that all the Ministers will be able to work as a team. If India can speak with one voice, she will be the greatest country in the world and every true Indian must wish her to attain that status.¹

Gandhiji told the audience that about 30 men and women had taken part in the spinning examination held in the afternoon. The cotton had been procured. God always enabled one to procure the means for a good project. He (Gandhiji) himself had joined them in spinning and had spun the slivers prepared by them. It was a noble sight. They all knew their job and went about it in perfect quiet. The music of a well-running wheel or wheels was most soothing for the mind and the spirit. All those who took part in the spinning were well-to-do people. They did it as a sacrificial act. A number of such mandals were being established to popularize the idea of sacrificial spinning. The whole conception and the demonstration of it that he saw that day were beautiful.

_Harijan, 10-11-1946; and The Hindustan Times, 28-10-1946_

¹ What follows is reproduced from _The Hindustan Times_.

VOL.92 : 9 AUGUST, 1946 - 6 NOVEMBER, 1946 419
605. DISCUSSION WITH DIRECTOR OF BRITISH DAILY

NEW DELHI,

[Before October 28, 1946]

GANDHIJI: We are today suffering from a double evil—suppression of facts and concoction.

DIRECTOR: It does not pay to emphasize news about riots. My paper does not.

But Gandhiji told him that he and his paper would be doing a real service to India not by suppressing relevant facts but by presenting them truthfully, without bias or prejudice. He said:

Truth never damages a cause that is just.

Replying to another question as to when the present trouble would end, Gandhiji remarked that it was bound to go, though he did not see any signs of abatement just yet. He added:

There are interested parties fomenting it. Mine may be a voice in the wilderness today, but I maintain that so long as British troops are here, both Hindus and Mussalmans will continue to look up to them for help and the trouble will continue. Nothing worse could happen to a people struggling to be free.

This shocked the British conscience of the friend. He asked: “The Britisher would like his troops to go out quicker. Who obstructs?”

Who else but the British themselves, unless you can show that it is physically impossible to effect immediate withdrawal.

After some parrying the friend admitted that the British commercial and other vested interests in India and their henchmen stood in the way of their withdrawal. He was, however, still doubtful as to the function of British troops in the maintenance of law and order. “You say there can be no peace while they are here. Yet every day there is an increasing demand for them for the maintenance of peace. The complaint is that they are not sufficiently used.”

G. That is the very reason why they should be withdrawn.

---

1 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “A Friendly Overture”. Pyarelal explains that “a Director of an influential British daily paper had come to see Gandhiji at New Delhi and told him that his paper was anxious to do a friendly turn to India”

2 Gandhi left New Delhi for Calcutta on the morning of October 28, 1946.
Their presence, in my opinion, does not act as a preventive measure but becomes punitive. Where they are used to maintain law and order, it is after the trouble. Future historians will bear this out. Order will be restored in East Bengal too. But after what slaughter, what suffering? No, the British troops are in India not to protect India but to protect British interests which were imposed on India and which are now so well entrenched that even the British Government cannot dislodge them. The British did not come here as philanthropists, nor is there any altruism in their continued stay here or the continuation of their troops, all that might be claimed to the contrary notwithstanding.

D: How do you think the succession of war such as we have witnessed of late can be stopped?

G. I have no doubt that unless big nations shed their desire for exploitation and the spirit of violence of which war is the natural expression and atom bomb the inevitable consequence, there is no hope for peace in the world. I tried to speak out during the war and wrote open letters to the British people\textsuperscript{1}, to Hitler\textsuperscript{2} and to the Japanese\textsuperscript{3} and was dubbed a fifth columnist for my pains.

D: But non-violence might take a long time to act. But for the Second Front there probably would have been no Russia.

G. All these are arguments dictated by reason. It is not permitted me to think in these terms or else I would be denying my faith which today burns brighter than ever in spite of all the bitter experiences that I have had. History provides us with a whole series of miracles of masses of people being converted to a particular view in the twinkling of an eye. Take the Boer War. It has given to the English language the word ‘mafficking’. People went mad on the Maffeking Day. Yet inside of two years the whole British nation underwent a transformation. Henry Campbell-Bannerman became the Premier and practically all the gains of war were given up. The recent labour victory at the polls was another instance in point. To me it is a sufficient miracle that in spite of his oratory and brilliance, Churchill should cease to be the idol of the British people who till yesterday

\textsuperscript{1}Vide “To Every Briton”

\textsuperscript{2}Vide “Letter to Adolf Hitler”, 24-12-1940

\textsuperscript{3}Vide “To Every Japanese” hung on his lips and listened to him in awe. All these instances are enough to sustain the faith of a believer like me that when all other powers are gone, one will remain, call it God, Nature or whatever you like.

His own faith in the triumph of non-violence he likened to that of the witnesses in the Second Coming of Christ. It was to take place within the lifetime of the witnesses though it has taken two thousand years and yet remains a distant dream. Faith could think in no other terms.

_Harijan_, 10-11-1946

606. TELEGRAM TO SIND HARIJAN SEVAK SANGH

[On or before October 28, 1946]

SEPARATE ELECTORATES ARE IMPOSSIBLE. BUT RESERVATION OF CERTAIN SEATS SUBJECT TO MERIT IS DESIRABLE.

_The Hindu_, 30-10-1946

607. CABLE TO VIJAYALAKSHMI PANDIT

[On or before October 28, 1946]

GOD HAS CROWNED YOUR EFFORT WITH SUCCESS. CONGRATULATE CHAGLA ON MY BEHALF. THE RESULT WILL HEARTEN OUR PEOPLE IN SOUTH AFRICA.

_The Bombay Chronicle_, 29-10-1946

---

1 The news report under the date-line Karachi, October 28, said: “. . . The Sind Provincial Scheduled Castes’ Federation had submitted a memorandum to the Sind Government demanding representation for Scheduled Castes on the local bodies in the province. The Sind Government sought the views of the Sind Harijan Sevak Sangh over the memorandum and the Sangh in turn sought Gandhiji’s advice.”

2 The cable was reported under the date-line October 28, 1946.

3 The reference is to U. N. Steering Committee’s decision against Gen. Smuts’s proposal to omit from the agenda the South-Africa Indian question, which he argued was a domestic problem and not within the jurisdiction of the General Assembly. The addressee led the Indian delegation to the U. N. O.

4 M. C. Chagla, a member of the delegation.
608. TALK WITH A FRIEND

NEW DELHI,
[On or before October 28, 1946]¹

I do not know what I shall be able to do there. All I know is that I won’t be at peace with myself unless I go there.

There are two kinds of thoughts—idle and active. There may be myriads of the former swarming in one’s brain. They do not count. But one pure, active thought proceeding from the depth and endowed with all the undivided intensity of one’s being, becomes dynamic and works like a fertilized ovum.

He was averse to putting a curb on the spontaneous urge which he felt within him to go to the people of Noakhali.

_Harijan_, 10-11-1946

609 LETTER TO SUMITRA GANDHI

NEW DELHI,
_October 28, 1946_

CHI. SUMI²,

I had your note. Didn’t you go to Kashi a little early? I am today taking the train to Calcutta. I don’t know how long I shall have to be there or what is going to happen there. But then, what have we to do with that? Let us live as God wills and go on doing His bidding. He has already shown us what we should do! You are studying, aren’t you? Tell me.

The rest in my letter³ to Sita. Both the letters are for both of you.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

SUMITRA GANDHI
BANARAS

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”. According to Pyarelal Gandhiji was having an “argument with a very esteemed friend who made an eleventh-hour effort to dissuade him from setting out on such a long journey just then”. Gandhiji however left Delhi on October 28, 1946.

² Daughter of Ramdas Gandhi

³ This is not traceable.
610. LETTER TO SHANKARLAL G. BANKER

NEW DELHI,
October 28, 1946

CHI. SHANKARLAL,

I have sat down to write letters after the morning prayer. I have your letter before me, as also Anasuyabehn’s¹.

I am getting ready for Bengal. I will be doing there what God commands. I wish to be there as long as He wills. I hope you are calm. You should be. How do you spend your time?

My address will be: Khadi Pratishthan, College Square, Calcutta. But I want to go on to Noakhali.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHANKARLAL BANKER
AHMEDABAD

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

611. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

October 28, 1946

CHI. BRIJKRISHNA,

I think it useless for you to come to Bengal at present. Your health is not such that it can bear the strain. Otherwise also, there is work to be done here. I do not know what the conditions there will be like.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 2495

¹ Anasuyabehn Sarabhai
612. A LETTER
ON THE TRAIN TO CALCUTTA,
October 28, 1946

DEAR FRIEND,

Pardon the bad hand. I am writing on a moving train. You need not worry over the happenings1 of the 24th.

M. K. G.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

613. LETTER TO MADALASA
ON THE TRAIN,
October 28, 1946

CHI. MADU,

I am under the impression that I had immediately replied to your long letter. But I don’t find your name in the despatch list. And yesterday, on the occasion of the New Year, I got another letter from you.

Let us wait and see when our New Year commences.

I did not tell Janakibehn2 that you had written to me about Rama.3 But in reply to a question by me she expressed her own opinion. Everything should be left to Rama. He is no more a child. We should do what he wishes.

I hope you are well. I don’t know when I shall return from Bengal. Today only this much.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirwad, pp. 330-1

1 Presumably a reference to the incidents in Calcutta, in which five persons were killed and forty others injured
2 Addressee’s mother, Janakidevi Bajaj
3 Ramakrishna Bajaj, the addressee’s younger brother. The reference is to his marriage.
614. LETTER TO KANAM GANDHI

ON THE TRAIN,
October 28, 1946

CHI. KANAM\(^1\).

I am writing this on a moving train. I am going to Bengal. I do not consider your handwriting too bad. Still you can improve it. You are engrossed in your studies. I do not know when I shall be going that way. Ask Ushi\(^2\) to write to me.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 9523. Courtesy: Kanam Gandhi

615. LETTER TO AMRITLAL T. NANAVATI

October 28, 1946

CHI. AMRITLAL.

I have your letter. I will write to Satyanarayan\(^3\). I am writing this on a moving train which is taking me to Bengal. Do what you can. The result lies in God’s hands.

In the end the national language has to be Hindustani.

Cannot the books be sent with someone who may be going that side?

I cannot write more.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10812

---

\(^1\) Son of Ramdas Gandhi
\(^2\) Usha, addressee’s sister
\(^3\) M. Satyanarayan of Hindi Prachar Sabha, Madras
616. LETTER TO RAMDAS GANDHI

ON THE TRAIN,
October 28, 1946

CHI. RAMDAS,

I am writing this on my way to Bengal. I got your note. You had better preserve your health.

I had a postcard from Sumi. She seems to be deeply immersed in her studies. I don’t know when I shall be able to return from Bengal.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

617. LETTER TO JAIRAMDAS DOULATRAM

ON THE TRAIN,
October 28, 1946

CHI. JAIRAMDAS,

I have your letter. We cannot give up the flag. A procession or drums may not be necessary but it is our duty to hoist the flag in a peaceful manner. More can be said only after observation.

I am going to Bengal. I do not know when I shall return.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

618. CRUELTY TO THE DUMB CREATION

A Mysorean draws my attention to . . .

I have had the misfortune to advise the destruction of stray dogs. But that had to be, if men would be so cruel as, out of a false sense of pity, to feed pariah dogs and permit them to become a menace to the neighbouring population. But my advice can never include impounding such dogs and torturing them as those mentioned

1 The extract from the correspondent’s letter is not reproduced here.
by my correspondent seem to have been. Humanitarian instinct demands destruction of such animals in an instantaneous and painless manner. I would love to hope that there is exaggeration in what the correspondent has stated. Anyway, the Municipality in question and all such other institutions should mend their manner if they do not satisfy the test demanded by humanity.

ON THE TRAIN TO CALCUTTA, October 29, 1946
Harijan, 10-11-1946

619. DOLA-PALKI

The dola-palki dispute in Garhwal should be set at rest seeing that the U. P. Government are said to have passed orders for prompt measures to be taken against those who would interfere with Harijan bridegrooms riding on ponies or using any other form of conveyance in spite of custom to the contrary trotted out by objectors.

ON THE TRAIN TO CALCUTTA, October 29, 1946
Harijan 10-11-1946

620. VILLAGE INDUSTRIES

A thoughtful friend, writing of village industries, says 2:

... The children should be paid at the rate of one anna and the adults four annas per day from the day they begin to work. As they acquire more skill, the wages of the children should be increased up to five annas and those of the adults up to eight annas per day.

The manufacture in one village should be confined to one kind of goods only, so that in about two months’ time the workers will acquire skill and avoid making mistakes. The manufactured article should be such as can be utilized locally. The State should arrange to supply raw material and appoint two or three experts to train workers. The State should also undertake to popularize the manufactured goods and arrange for their transport and cheap distribution to the poor consumer. . . .

This scheme will enable millions to add to their income and make the two ends meet without throwing them on the unemployment dole or loss of self-respect.

1 The Gujarati original of this appeared in Harijanbandhu, 10-11-1946. The translation reproduced here has been revised so as to bring it into conformity with the original.

2 Only extracts from the letter are translated here.
The man who is engaged to keep stores, accounts etc., should be made responsible for the education of the children as well. After two or three years, the education should be carried on by the monitor system, that is to say, the senior boys should teach the junior ones and the teacher should teach the senior boys only.

This teacher should also keep about 50 commonly used drugs. These drugs should be sold to the villagers at the cheapest rates.

The following is a list of some of the household articles that can be manufactured in this way:

1. The letter is interesting and deserves consideration. One thing is apparent. The writer has given the first place to cloth. It is the only article in the list of universal importance. The various processes involved in khadi production can engage millions of adults and children and enable them to earn a fair amount. This includes the weavers. The weavers live in the cities today. The businessman exploits them and keeps them dependent on him. If the people’s Government could supply them with all the yarn they require it would simplify things for them and put their vocation on a stable basis. They would not then need to live in the cities. But this is beside the point. Much has been said and will be said about khadi.

In regard to this letter I have two kinds of difficulties. One is whether it is possible to sell hand-made articles as cheaply as machine-made ones. The second is that out of the articles that have been enumerated in the scheme, there is hardly any except khadi which can become universal. They will not, in a large measure, be consumed locally and so will have to be sold in the cities. This is as it should be. The villagers should develop such a high degree of skill that articles prepared by them will command a ready market outside. When our villages are fully developed there will be no dearth in them of men with a high degree of skill and artistic talent. There will be village poets, village artists, village architects, linguists and research workers. In short, there will be nothing in life worth having which will not be had in the villages. Today the villages are barren and desolate and are like dung-heaps. Tomorrow they will be like beautiful gardens and it would be difficult to deceive the people there.

The reconstruction of the villages along these lines should begin right now. That might necessitate some modifications in the foregoing scheme. The reconstruction of the villages should be organized not

---

1 The list, which named some 45 items, is not reproduced here.
on a temporary but on a permanent basis.

My second difficulty is that in the scheme under question training and education have been divorced from each other. In fact training is a judicious blending of craft, hygiene, education and art. According to Nai Talim, craft, literary instruction, hygiene and art are not separate things but blend together and cover education of the individual from the time of conception to the moment of death. Therefore, I would not divide village uplift work into water-tight compartments from the very beginning but undertake an activity which will combine all four. Instead of regarding craft and industry as different from education I will regard the former as the medium for the latter. Nai Talim therefore ought to be integrated into the scheme.

ON THE TRAIN TO CALCUTTA, October 29, 1946
_Harijan_, 10-11-1946

621. EXCISE DEPARTMENT IN C. P.¹
This is a scandalous abuse of authority for raising revenue. Let us hope that now that the Government is representative in C. P., as elsewhere, this abuse will be set right.

ON THE TRAIN TO CALCUTTA, October 29, 1946
_Harijan_, 17-11-1946

622. AN INDIAN VILLAGE FIGHTS AGAINST FAMINE²
I would only add to this thanksgiving essay that God helps those who help themselves. The villagers must be taught to grow more food themselves. Then help from outside will come and will be welcome.

ON THE TRAIN TO CALCUTTA, October 29, 1946
_Harijan_, 24-11-1946

¹ The article under this heading by A. V. Thakkar is not reproduced here. It described how the “outstill system of liquor production and distribution by Government through the agency of licensed manufacturers who are also retailers of the same” had helped increase excise revenue, especially in tribal and backward areas.

² The article under this heading by Horace Alexander is not reproduced here. It described the famine conditions that Belgatta, a village in Mysore, had to face on account of the failure of rains and the help it received in the shape of foodgrains from America, Canada, Australia and Egypt.
623. LETTER TO PUSHPA DESAI

October 29, 1946

CHI. PUSHPA,

I am writing this on the train which is carrying me to Calcutta. You could not stick to Nai Talim. You are not right in saying that you will learn nothing there. It only means that you have not learnt the knack of doing such work. I think your going there was premature. We should give perfect service wherever we are. Those who have accepted service as their sole dharma must learn to be perfectly happy wherever they are serving. One acquires the necessary knowledge while doing such service.

You will be calm now and keeping perfect health.

You must have read what I wrote¹ to Bhansalibhai about Bengal. There is no question yet of your undertaking such work. I myself do not know how things will shape.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 9277

624. LETTER TO GOVINDA REDDY

October 29, 1946

CHI. GOVINDA REDDY,

I had your letter but could not reply to it promptly. You should regard the work you are doing itself as Nai Talim. It can be said that work in the kitchen is the most difficult of all. It is not easy to humour people of different temperaments and yet get them to follow the rules. The task requires a sthitaprajna². I cannot tell you how you should accomplish it; you will learn by experience. Only you must have a generous heart, self-restraint, calmness and thoughtfulness.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI GOVINDA REDDY
SEVAGRAM

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ Vide “Letter to J.P. Bhansali”, 25-10-1946
² The man of steadfast intellect described in Bhagavad Gita, II, 55-72
625. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

SODEPUR,
October 29, 1946

In his prayer discourse he told them how he had never dreamt that he would be coming back to Sodepur so soon.¹ But God had sent him in their midst again. The train had arrived five hours late. He called that also the will of God. No doubt there were big crowds at Aligarh, Khurja Road, Kanpur and other big stations and the train was detained as a result. But he literally believed in the old maxim that not a blade of grass moves but by His will. Some might say that all his talk about God was a make-believe which he used as a blind to cover his hypocrisy. All he could say was that he was not aware of any hypocrisy in himself. He spoke what he believed to be God’s truth. As regards his future plan, Gandhiji said that he had come to Calcutta with a blank mind to do His will. What he could do here and how long he would stay in Bengal he did not know.² All he could say was that he had not come to stay in Calcutta. He would be in Calcutta only for a day or two and then proceed to Noakhali. His proper place was Noakhali. God would indicate to him the next step on reaching Noakhali.

Harijan, 10-11-1946; and The Hindu, 31-10-1946

626. TELEGRAM TO AMRIT KAUR

CALCUTTA,
October 30, 1946

RAJKUMARI AMRIT KAUR
MANORVILLE, SUMMER HILL
SIMLA

NO ANXIETY. GOING NOAKHALI PROBABLY FRIDAY.

BAPU

From the original: C. W. 4185. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 7821

¹ Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”. The prayer was arranged at 5.30 p.m. but Gandhiji could attend it only after 7 p.m.
² Gandhiji had earlier visited Sodepur in December 1945.
³ The following three sentences are reproduced from The Hindu.
627. LETTER TO KALYANJI MEHTA

CALCUTTA, October 30, 1946

Bhai Kalyanjji (Mehta),

I have your letter about the Dandi March Road. There is no need to write about it in Harijan. The project is such as can be accomplished with the efforts you make.

Blessings from
BAPU

DISTRICT SCHOOL BOARD
SURAT

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

628. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

SODEPUR, October 30, 1946

The next day, owing to his engagements in Calcutta with H. E. the Governor and the Prime Minister, he had again to apologize to his audience for coming late to the prayer meeting. He remarked:

He who gives all his time to the service of people, his whole life is an unbroken sound of prayer.

He did not however, wish thereby to diminish the importance of fixed time for prayer. There was a difference between community prayer and individual prayer. He was sorry he had not been able to do justice to the former. It was generous of them to have waited for him with such exemplary patience and it filled him with joy and faith and confidence in regard to the task before him. But he could not forgive himself so easily for his failure to keep punctually the prayer appointment with them.

He drew their attention to the Viceroy’s appeal issued in the name of the whole Cabinet of which the Viceroy was the President and Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, the Vice-President and which consisted of both Congress and Muslim League representatives. In that appeal the Viceroy, on behalf of himself and his colleagues, had appealed that the two major communities of India should bury the hatchet and become one at heart. The unity should be genuine,

1 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”
2 Sir Frederick Burrows and Huseyn Sheed Suhrawardy not imposed by the military or the police. The speaker had come to Bengal for that purpose. He took no sides. He could only side with truth and justice. He wanted them all to pray with him for the establishment of heart unity between the Muslims and the Hindus. Their name would be mud in the world if they degraded themselves by fighting among themselves like wild beasts.

_Harijan_, 10-11-1946

629. _SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING_

SODEPUR, October 31, 1946

Addressing the prayer meeting Gandhiji said that he was sorry to tell the audience that he would not be leaving for Noakhali tomorrow as he had intended to. The Prime Minister had sent him word that the train could not be arranged for Noakhali tomorrow. He hoped to leave on Saturday or Sunday. In the meantime he would try to render here whatever service he could.

Gandhiji was able to tell his audience that he saw a faint ray of hope that peace might be established between the communities. He had met H. E. the Governor and his Prime Minister twice. The visit to the former was more or less in the nature of a courtesy call. His main business was with the Prime Minister. As one drove through the deserted streets with garbage heaps, at places banked up nearly two feet high against the pavements, and entire rows of gutted shops and burnt-out houses in the side-streets and by-lanes as far as the eye could reach, one felt overcome with a sinking feeling at the mass madness that can turn a man into less than the brute. By its very nature this state of things cannot last. Human nature won’t stand it. As Abraham Lincoln said, “You cannot fool all the people for all time.” There seem to be indications that the people are already beginning to sicken of the carnival of blood and bestiality. They had been fighting amongst themselves like wild beasts. The fighting could do no good to Calcutta, Bengal, India or the world.

To make peace between quarrelling parties, the speaker said, had been his vocation from his early youth. Even while he practised as a lawyer, he tried to bring the contending parties together. Why could not the two communities be brought together? He was an optimist, he said.

From them he wanted only this help: that they should pray with him that this mutual slaughter might stop and the two communities might really become one at heart. Whether India was to become divided or remain one whole could

---

1 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”. The first paragraph is reproduced from _The Bombay Chronicle_.

434  THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
not be decided by force. It had to be done through mutual understanding. Whether they decided to part or stay together, they must do so with goodwill and understanding.

He could never be party to anything which might mean humiliation or loss of self-respect for anyone. Therefore any peace to be substantial must be honourable, never at the cost of honour.

In this he was only echoing the sentiment expressed to him by a prominent Muslim who had seen him. This friend had said: “We must reach our goal, whatever it might be—Pakistan or undivided India—without bloodshed or fighting. I go so far as to say that if it cannot be reached except through bloodshed and fighting amongst ourselves, it is not worth reaching.”

_Harijan, 10-11-1946; and The Bombay Chronicle, 1-11-1946_

630. _TELEGRAM TO SUDHIR GHOSH_

[October 1946]

SUDHIR GHOSH

NARGISBEHN BROUGHT LETTER YESTERDAY. SUSHILA SEVAGRAM ATTENDING CHOLERA PATIENTS. HOPE VISIT BENGAL LAST WEEK OCTOBER. LOVE.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

631. _TALK WITH A MUSLIM FRIEND_

SODEPUR, CALCUTTA, [Before November 1, 1946]

“Why do you want to go to Noakhali? You did not go to Bombay, Ahmedabad or Chhapra, where things have happened that are infinitely worse than Noakhali. Would not your going there only add to the existing tension?” Was it because in these places it was the Muslims who had been the sufferers that he did not go there and would go to Noakhali because the sufferers there were Hindus?

1 From the reference to Gandhiji’s visit to Bengal in the last week of October; he reached Calcutta on October 29, 1946.

2 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”, dated November 1, 1946

3 ibid.
Gandhiji’s reply was that he made no distinction between Hindu and Muslim. He would certainly have gone to any of the places mentioned by the friend if anything approaching what had happened at Noakhali had happened there and if he had felt that he could do nothing without being on the spot. It was the cry of outraged womanhood that had peremptorily called him to Noakhali. He felt he would find his bearings only on seeing things for himself at Noakhali. His technique of non-violence was on trial. It remained to be seen how it would answer in the face of the present crisis. If it had no validity, it were better that he himself should declare his insolvency. He was not going to leave Bengal until the last embers of the trouble were stamped out.

I may stay on here for a whole year or more. If necessary, I will die here. But I will not acquiesce in failure. If the only effect of my presence in the flesh is to make people look up to me in hope and expectation which I can do nothing to vindicate, it would be far better that my eyes were closed in death.

He had mentally prepared himself, he added, for abstention from the Congress session, if necessary. He had similarly disengaged himself mentally from all his responsibilities in respect of Sevagram and Uruli—his latest love.

Harijan, 10-11-1946

632. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

SODEPUR, CALCUTTA,

Friday, [November 1, 1946]

The whole of India, Gandhiji said, was faced with a difficult situation. That of Bengal was still more so, he remarked in his after prayer address on Friday last. He had been asked as to what their duty was under the circumstances. According to the scriptures, that was dharma which was enjoined by the holy books, followed by the sages, interpreted by the learned and which appealed to the heart. The first three conditions must be fulfilled before the fourth came into operation. Thus one had no right to follow the precepts of an ignorant man or a rascal even though they commended themselves to one. Rigorous observance of harmlessness, non-enmity and renunciation were the first requisites for a person to entitle him to lay down the law, i. e., dharma.

He had told them what he considered to be his duty. But they had to judge for themselves what their duty was. He did not ask them to follow him but he pointed out to them the way to discover what their duty was in the difficult position they found themselves in. The Gita had told them that if they only waited on God, they would know the way.

Harijan, 17-11-1946

---

1 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”
633. GREEN CROSS SOCIETY

Red Cross Society one is aware of. It had at one time only military associations and used to have an imperialist flavour. Now it has expanded into civil work and covers every form of first-aid work for the relief of suffering humanity. Nevertheless its activities are largely confined to cities. It has hardly touched Indian life.

England is a country for lost causes: humanitarian and even strange causes. One such is represented by the Green Cross Society for the wild life heritage. Mrs. M. H. Morrison is its Hon. Secretary (41, Asmuns Place, London, N. W. 11).

The Society aims at the U. N. O. identifying itself with it. The following resolution is to be submitted to the U. N. O. for acceptance:

(a) That U. N. O. ideals should include immediate effort in each country to delimit the area of any suitable National Park incorporating Nature Reserves for the protection of unique and valuable wild life—flora, fauna, avifauna—with the distinctive terrain upon which these depend.

(b) And, further, that the world at large should consent to an International Park, or World National Park in South America, Africa or Asia. If in Asia then upon, around or within—it is suggested—the immense mountains encircling Tibet, Britain, China, India, Russia and U. S. A. appointing Custodians and acting as Trustees.

Reasons adduced for inviting the U. N. O. to pass the foregoing resolution are:

1. That a stand must now be made against the maddening encroachments of materialism.

2. That the idealism and realism of the United Nations Organization should include an urge to all the world and to each nation to protect our heritage of wild life—its beauty, grandeur and interest—wild birds, wild animals, wild flora (flowers, plants, trees) and wild country or landscape; to protect our heritage wherever possible; and with special care within the Nature Reserves of National Parks.

3. That the United Nations will jointly set an example to the component nations by claiming its own World Nature Park, or International Park in South America, Africa or Asia. If in Asia, then upon, around, or within the immense mountains encircling Tibet. In this case Britain, China, India, Russia and U. S. A. might appoint Custodians and act as Trustees to prevent disastrous and disfiguring exploitation.
4. And, further, that such “Far Horizon”, can give direction and cohesion to friends, allies, sympathizers and well-wishers gathering in groups along the way for the march and drive on toward the distant goal.

Among the numerous signatories to the resolution are Sir Alfred J. Munnings, President, Royal Academy of Arts, Dame Laura Knight and the world famous George Bernard Shaw.

Mrs. Morrison would like the signatures of leading Indians and other leaders in Asia and Africa. Those who would endorse the resolution should put themselves in communication with Mrs. Morrison.

SODEPUR, November 2, 1946

Harijan, 17-11-1946

634. LETTER TO SHARDA G. CHOKHAWALA

CALCUTTA, November 2, 1946

CHI. BABUDI,

I have your letter. You are a brave girl; why then have you gone soft? It is true that generally during illness the spirit droops. But there was a girl just eighteen years old, whose mind retained such fortitude that, though suffering from a protracted illness, she wrote a fascinating book which has become very famous. You can achieve some such thing if you but make up your mind.

The secret of Ramanama is that one should repeat it mechanically even when one cannot concentrate. If one does this with faith, then all disturbing thoughts vanish and we become calm. If we take pleasure in repeating the name, it drives all maladies away. Ramanama does not bar other remedies. About food, consult the book and make necessary changes in your diet.

I am stuck here for the present. God knows when if at all we shall meet.

Do you strip completely for sun-bath? You can arrange for such privacy. It would be worth while to try the treatment recommended in the book you have, viz., sun-treated water in coloured bottles. If you do not have the energy to do all that, seek help from Shankaran¹. He has trained himself a little in this treatment. He will guide you.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 10072. Courtesy: Sharda G. Chokhawala

635. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING²

SODEPUR, CALCUTTA,
[November 2, 1946]

Mahatma Gandhi indicated that he was trying to do some work in the metropolis. He was not, therefore, leaving for Noakhali... Gandhiji added that the arrival of the four members³ of the Interim Government might help in the peace movement.

Gandhiji impressed upon the people how the desire of retaliation and the tendency to look to the Viceroy or the Governor, the military and the police for protection were incompatible with independence to which they were all pledged. The Viceroy’s powers vested in the Cabinet, the Governor’s in the Bengal Ministers. If they wanted lasting peace, it must come from the people’s hearts. He had been proclaiming from the housetops that no one could protect them except their own stout hearts. No one could ever dishonour the brave. Retaliation was a vicious circle. If they wanted retaliation they could not have independence. He said:

Supposing someone kills me, you will gain nothing by killing someone else in retaliation. And, if you only think over it, who can kill Gandhi except Gandhi himself? No one can destroy the soul. So let us dismiss all thought of revenge from our hearts. If we see this clearly, we shall have taken a big stride towards independence.

Harijan, 17-11-1946; and The Sunday Hindustan Standard, 3-11-1946

¹ Shankaran Nair
² Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”. The first paragraph is reproduced from The Sunday Hindustan Standard.
³ The reference is to Jawaharlal Nehru, Vallabhbhai Patel, Liaquat Ali Khan and Abdul Rab Nishtar who were expected to visit Calcutta.
636. LETTER TO PYARELAL

Silence Day [After November 2, 1946]

CHI. PYARELAL,

I understand nothing of this. What is a drop in the ocean? What in particular can I ask? What can I say? That is why I said that you should tell me what you want to tell me so that my knowledge of the subject may be increased.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

637. TELEGRAM TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

[November 3, 1946]

“MORNING NEWS” REPORTS BUTCHERY BY HINDUS OF MUSLIM PASSENGERS. MUSLIMS FLEEING FROM MOB FURY AND PREMIER COUNTENANCING. WIRE PARTICULARS.

The Bombay Chronicle, 5-11-1946

638. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

SODEPUR, CALCUTTA,
November 3, 1946

Gandhiji said that the Prime Minister of Bengal had asked him to delay his departure for Noakhali till after the Bakr-Id and the speaker had agreed to do so. The Prime Minister wanted him to pass the Bakr-Id in Calcutta. His presence in the city might be helpful for peace. Gandhiji said that he had come to Bengal to serve the Muslims as well as Hindus and others.

---

1 This is written on the reverse side of letter dated November 2, 1946.
2 Vide the following item and “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 4-11-1946
3 Communal rioting had broken out in Bihar following a hartal on October 25, and Morning News, an organ of the Muslim League, had stated that the number of persons killed was of the order of hundreds of thousands.
4 Srikrishna Sinha
5 For Jawaharlal Nehru’s reply, vide “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 4-11-1946
6 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”. The first paragraph is reproduced from Hindustan Standard.
From his earliest childhood, he had learnt to dislike the wrong, never the wrongdoer. Therefore, even if the Muslims had done any wrong, they still remained his friends, but it was his duty to tell them that they had done wrong. He had always applied that rule in life with regard to his nearest and dearest. He held that to be the test of true friendship. He had told them on the previous day that revenge was not the way of peace, it was not humanity. The Hindu scriptures taught forgiveness as the highest virtue. Forgiveness became a brave man. A learned Muslim friend had come to see him on the day before. He had told the speaker that the teaching of the Koran was also similar. If a man killed one innocent person, he brought upon his head the sin, as it were, of murdering entire humanity. Islam never approved of but condemned murder, arson, forcible conversions, abductions and the like.

If they could be generous enough to forgive a person who gave them a slap, remarked Gandhiji, they could give him one in return. He could understand that. But if the miscreant ran away and the injured party slapped his relation or co-religionist by way of retaliation, it was below human dignity.

If someone abducted his daughter, the speaker continued, was he to abduct the abductor’s or the abductor’s friend’s daughter? He held it to be infamous. Muslim friends had condemned such acts in Noakhali. But what was he to say of Bihar if what he was told was true? He was pained beyond measure to hear of the reported happenings in Bihar. He knew the Biharis well. The cry of blood for blood was barbarous. They could not take revenge in Bihar for the happenings in Noakhali. He was told that some Muslims, who were running away from Bihar in panic, were murdered by Bihari Hindus. He was shocked to hear it. He hoped that the report was not true. It was contended that the Mahabharata advocated the way of retaliation. He did not agree with that interpretation. The lesson of the Mahabharata was that the victory of the sword was no victory. That great book taught that the victory of the Pandavas was an empty nothing.

He told them of the talk he had with Shaheed Saheb, their Prime Minister. Years ago he had met him at Faridpur. Shaheed Saheb then took pride in calling himself the speaker’s son. He knew they had many grievances against their Prime Minister. But the latter had given him his assurance that he wanted peace. It had grieved him to alienate his Hindu friends. He, the speaker, could not disbelieve that assurance till it was found to be untrue. He had by giving that assurance put himself to test. The golden way was to be friends with the world and to regard the whole human family as members of one family. He who distinguished between one’s own family and another’s, miseducated the members of his own and opened the way for discord and irreligion.

Harijan, 17-11-1946; and Hindustan Standard, 4-11-1946
639. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

November 4, 1946

CHI. AMRIT,

Your packet just came. Am over head and ears in work though this is silence day. Bihar has shaken me to bits. I have been for the past six days on spare diet (milkless) principally for health. Now Bihar will send me to complete fast if things do not radically mend. There will be no time limit. Do not agitate yourself but be really glad that I feel I have the strength to go through the ordeal and live up to my creed.

Do not interrupt your Paris programme. If that programme is not to come off at all and if you are strong enough, you are at liberty to join me.

Love to you all.

BAPU

From the original: C. W. 3701. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 6510

640. LETTER TO JAISUKHLAL GANDHI

CALCUTTA,

November 4, 1946

CHI. JAISUKHLAL,

I have received Manu’s letter and along with it the one you wrote to her. As requested by her, I return both herewith. I write this to you since I am not sure whether Manudi has reached there or not. I do not have the time to write a separate letter to her. I may say that I don’t have the time even to write this. But I must. . . .

This letter has been written in three instalments. I am afraid this will be the last letter. The happenings in Bihar have made me decide that if people’s hearts do not change for the better I must not be a witness to them. These days I am observing something like a partial fast. The main reason for its being partial is my health. But Bihar will lead me on to a total fast. I will go to Noakhali the day after tomorrow. These days I write very few letters. After coming here this is the longest I have written today. These days, therefore, Manu should be with me. But it seems it is now impossible for her to come. May she be out of trouble and happy. The rest you will see from the newspapers.

1 Omission as in the source

[From Gujarati]

_Eklo Jane Re_, pp. 3-4

641. LETTER TO KISHORELAL G. MASHRUWALA

CALCUTTA,

November 4, 1946

DEAR KISHORELAL MASHRUWALA,

Because you are the oldest person in the Ashram, I am writing to you. Read this to all. Bihar has moved me. Chiefly for the sake of the body, I am on a semi-fast. Later on it may take the shape of a gradual complete fast. Gradual because I still have some work on hand. I have to go to Noakhali. You can read further details in the newspapers.

Nobody should run up to me, nobody should fast in sympathy, all should stick to their place and be completely engrossed in their work. Each should try to remove his own defects and should obtain purity for hard _tapas_. Nobody should worry about me. Let all pray for me that I may come out with flying colours through this penance and that I should not prove to be a coward.

Bhansali must not take any risks. When I am on fast, none should follow suit. Anything may happen after my passing away. I am not certain that, should I pass away, people’s hearts will melt. If that does not happen, my passing away will at least reduce the burden on the earth, for my capacity for progress will have come to a standstill.

Let Asha Devi, Aryanayakam and Deo act up to the principles of Nai Talim. Let Shanta bring glory to her work. What can I say about Jajuji and Krishnadas Gandhi? There is a heavy load on Kumarappa also. I am not writing separately to Vinoba. Nor can I

---

1. The Gujarati original of the letter is not available.
2. Ashadevi Aryanayakam and E. W. Aryanayakam
3. ibid
4. Shankerrao Deo
5. J. C. Kumarappa
write separately to Kaka.

Krishnachandra will be all right. I am still more convinced today of the correctness of what I have written to Pushpa.

Let Chimanalal1 not feel too much burdened with responsibilities. Let Balvantsinha overcome anger. I have left out many names but that is only because I have no time to write more and not because I have forgotten.

_Blessings from_

_BAPU_

From a copy: G. N. 10185

642. LETTER TO H. S. SUHRAWARDY

SODEPUR,

November 4, 1946

BHAI SHAHID,

The arrangements for rail-cum-steamer journey that you have made for me are for big people. I have already told Satis Babu that I don’t want all this. I shall be quite content with ordinary arrangements. All my companions will sit with me. Third class is good enough for us. It will suffice if we can have privacy on the steamer. We shall carry our own food and it will be enough. For myself I do not need even the special train. If the Railway people want it, then it is another matter.

There is no need for a journalist. Why make it a big caravan?

_Yours,_

M. K. GANDHI

[PS.]

BHAI SHAHID,

Is this from the _Nationalist_? Is there any truth in it? And why? I am disturbed over the Bihar episode. May God save us.

_Yours,_

M. K. GANDHI

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

---

1 Vide "Letter to Pushpa Desai", 29-10-1946
2 Chimanalal N. Shah
Yesterday, while speaking to you, I referred to the news which had come from Bihar. The news moved me deeply, and so I sent the following telegram\(^1\) to Jawaharlalji through the Prime Minister, Shaheed Saheb. Panditji has sent the following reply:

It is evident from the reply that although there has been exaggeration in the news, yet things have gone wrong and the condition is serious. This is unbearable for me as one who is attached to the province of Bihar and also wants that the infection should not spread to other provinces. I have been thinking deeply what my duty should be in this connection.

The Congress belongs to the people, the Muslim League belongs to our Muslim brothers and sisters. If Congressmen fail to protect the Mussalmans where the Congress is in power, then what is the use of a Congress Premier? Similarly, if in a League province the League Premier cannot afford protection to the Hindus, then why is the League Premier there at all? If either of them have to take the aid of the military in order to protect the Muslim or Hindu minorities in their respective provinces, then it only means that none of them actually exercises any control over the general population when a momentous crisis comes. If that is so, it only means that both of us are inviting the British to retain their sovereignty over India. This is a matter over which each of them should ponder deeply.

Let us wait for what Panditji and Nishtar Saheb are able to do in Bihar. Let us see whether the Hindus of Bihar shed their madness or not? Tomorrow is the day of Bakr-Id. It is not an occasion when we should quarrel with one another. Let us also wait and see what Shaheed Saheb does tomorrow. How nice it would be if from tomorrow Hindus and Mussalmans and every other community

\(^1\) It being Gandhiji’s silence-day, the speech was read out by Satis Chandra Das Gupta.
\(^2\) Vide “Speech at Prayer Meeting”.
in India start living with each other as friends, and the military or the police find no occasion to use their arms at all.¹

We always put the blame on goondas. But it is we who are responsible for their creation as well as encouragement. It is, therefore, not right to say that all the wrong that has been done is the work of the goondas.

The Bombay Chronicle, 5-11-1946

644. TELEGRAM TO AMRIT KAUR

CALCUTTA,

November 5, 1946

RAIJUMARI AMRIT KAUR

MANORVILLE, SUMMERHILL

SIMLA

COUGH DISTRESSING OTHERWISE WELL. GLAD YOU BETTER. VOCABULARY RECEIVED. SEND DIRECTLY TO “HARIJAN”. GOING NOAKHALI TOMORROW.

BAPU

From the original: C. W. 4186. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 7822

645. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

CALCUTTA,

November 5, 1946

CHI. LILI,

I may have to resort to a fast. If that happens, do not get panicky but concentrate on your studies and bring credit to me if not to yourself. Trust in God. You will not help me in any way by rushing here. I am getting more help here than I need. The additional help lies in each one doing his or her duty steadfastly. Those who come here uninvited will certainly be a hindrance. Therefore do not worry at all. Complete your studies and then engage yourself in my work.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 9604. Also C. W. 6576. Courtesy: Lilavati Asar

¹Vide “To Bihar”, 6-11-1946

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
646. LETTER TO MANILAL B. DESAI

CALCUTTA,
November 5, 1946

CHI. MANILAL,

For the present, you should all give up any hope of my coming to Uruli. I cannot leave Bengal and Bihar. I see that I shall have to resort to a fast if the carnage does not stop. You may see everything from the newspapers. I myself shall not be able to write, but I will have others to write. Let each one remain engrossed in his or her work, without worrying. Do not give up your work in Uruli, whatever happens to me. Dr. Bhagawat, Dhiru, Balkrishna¹ and you are of course there. If Parmanand is inclined to stay on, then he and his wife to be are more than enough.

This letter is for all of you. There will be no problem about money.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 2738. Courtesy: Manilal B. Desai

647. LETTER TO DINSHAW K. MEHTA

CALCUTTA,
November 5, 1946

CHI. DINSHAW,

Today is the seventh day of my restricted diet. I am fine. The main reason for my going on this diet was the cough and eruptions. Now it will continue and I may even go on a fast. The reason is the current massacre in Bihar. Whatever will be, will be. God is the doer as well as the undoer. There is no need to rush to me. Serve your mother who is there. Place your sanatorium on a sound footing. Write to me and ask me anything you want to.

¹Balkrishna Bhave, brother of Vinoba Bhave
Gulbai, I hope, is well and so also are the children.

Blessings from

BAPU

DR. DINSHAW MEHTA
POONA

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

648. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU
November 5, 1946

CHI. JAWAHARLAL,

The events in Bihar have distressed me. I can clearly see my duty. My bonds with Bihar are close. I cannot forget it. If half of what I hear is true, it means that Bihar has lost all humanity. To say that goondas were responsible for whatever happened there would be quite untrue. Although I have tried hard to avoid the fast, I shall not be able to do so. It is the seventh day today since I gave up milk and cereals. The cough and the boils were responsible for it, but also I was tired of the body. Then Bihar made matters worse. And the cry came from within: ‘Why should you be a witness to this slaughter? If your word, which is as clear as daylight, is not heeded, your work is over. Why do you not die? Such reasoning has forced me to resort to fasting. I want to issue a statement that if in Bihar and other provinces slaughter is not stopped, I must end my life by fasting.

The letter Mohammed Yunus wrote to Shamsuddin’ is with Sardar Baldev Singh’. See it. Is what it says correct? It is our duty to give full report of what happened.

My low diet will continue. There may be delay in undertaking the fast. In Delhi you had asked me about the fast. I had said I had no idea then. Now the situation is not the same. Still you may say what you want to say. If it appeals to me I shall give up the idea of a fast. What I hope is that, knowing my nature, you will appreciate my position. Whatever the issue, I shall advise that all of you continue to do your work. Do not waste time thinking of my

1 Shamsuddin Ahmed, Minister for Commerce, Labour and Industries in the Bengal Muslim League Ministry
2 Minister of Defence in the Interim Government

448 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
death. Leave me in the hands of God and stop worrying.

You can show this letter to the Bihar Cabinet. Is this the Bihar of Brijkishore Prasad?

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Hindi]
Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 326-7

649. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

SODEPUR,
November 5, 1946

BHI VALLABHBHAI,

I am enclosing a copy of my letter to Jawaharlal, which please see. I have nothing more to say. If you have anything to say, do let me know. I am willing to listen. This fast is not like the ones you have witnessed, though it is not too different either. I have passed through no small agony.

Rajaji, Devdas and others should read this letter.

No one should come rushing to me. There are so many to assist me. My going on living depends entirely on complete peace being established in India. You will certainly do everything to achieve that end. Do not attach too much weight to the warnings about my death. Say rather that if I have erred, there will be no harm in letting me die. I am well.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro— 2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, p. 325

---

1 A Congress leader of Bihar; father-in-law of Jayaprakash Narayan
2 Vide the preceding item.
3 In a postscript, Sushila Nayyar added that it was Gandhiji’s wish that Abul Kalam Azad also should be shown the letter.
650. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

SODEPUR, CALCUTTA,
November 5, 1946

The Hindus, said Gandhiji, might say: did not the Muslims start the troubles? He wanted them not to succumb to the temptation for retort but to think of their own duty and say firmly that whatever happened they would not fight. He wanted to tell them that the Muslims who were with him in the course of the day had assured him that they wanted peace. They were all responsible men. They said clearly that Pakistan could not be achieved by fighting. If they continued quarrelling with each other, independence would vanish into thin air and that would firmly implant the third power in India, be it the British or any other. India was a vast country, rich in minerals, metals and spices. There was nothing in the world that India did not produce. If they kept on quarrelling, any of the big powers of the world would feel tempted to come and save India from Indians and at the same time exploit her rich resources.

They wanted independence. They were ready to sacrifice their all for the Congress, the organization which had done so much for India. Were they going to undo all that the Congress had done for more than the last 60 years? He had told them they should return blow for blow if they were not brave enough to follow the path of non-violence. But there was a moral code for the use of violence also. Otherwise, the very flames of violence would consume those who lighted them. He did not care if they were all destroyed. But he could not countenance the destruction of India’s freedom.

The reports of the happenings in Bihar were awful if true. Pandit Jawaharlal had told the guilty parties that the Central Government would never tolerate such barbarism. They would even use aerial bombing to put it down. But that was the way of the British. The Congress was an organization of the people. Was the Congress to use the foreign mode of destruction against the people whose representative it was? By suppressing the riots with the aid of the military, they would be suppressing India’s freedom. And yet what was Panditji to do if the Congress had lost control over the people? The better way, of course, was to give up the reins of Government, if the people were not amenable to discipline and reason.

To retaliate against the relatives or the co-religionists of the wrong-doer was a cowardly act. If they indulged in such acts, they should say good-bye to independence.

Harijan, 17-11-1946

1 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”
651. TO BIHAR

SODEPUR,
November 6, 1946

TO BIHAR.

Bihar of my dreams seems to have falsified them. I am not relying upon reports that might be prejudiced or exaggerated. The continued presence of the Central Chief Minister and his colleagues furnishes an eloquent tale of the tragedy of Bihar. It is easy enough to retort that things under the Muslim League Government in Bengal were no better, if not worse and that Bihar is merely a result of the latter. A bad act of one party is no justification for a similar act by the opposing party, more especially when it is rightly proud of its longest and largest political record. I must confess, too, that although I have been in Calcutta for over a week I do not yet know the magnitude of the Bengal tragedy. Though Bihar calls me, I must not interrupt my programme for Noakhali. And is counter-communalism any answer to the communalism of which Congressmen have accused the Muslim League? Is it Nationalism to seek barbarously to crush the fourteen per cent of the Muslims in Bihar?

I do not need to be told that I must not condemn the whole of Bihar for the sake of the sins of a few thousand Biharis. Does not Bihar take credit for one Brajkishore Prasad or one Rajendra Prasad? I am afraid, if the misconduct in Bihar continues, all the Hindus of India will be condemned by the world. That is its way, and it is not a bad way either. The misdeeds of Bihari Hindus may justify Qaid-e-Azam Jinnah’s taunt that the Congress is a Hindu organization in spite of its boast that it has in its ranks a few Sikhs, Muslims, Christians, Parsis and others. Bihari Hindus are in honour bound to regard the minority Muslims as their brethren requiring protection, equal with the vast majority of Hindus. Let not Bihar, which has done so much to raise the prestige of the Congress, be the first to dig its grave.

I am in no way ashamed of my ahimsa. I have come to Bengal to see how far in the nick of time my ahimsa is able to express itself in me. But I do not want in this letter to talk of ahimsa to you. I do want, however, to tell you that what you are reported to have done will never count as an act of bravery. For thousands to do to death a few hundreds is no bravery. It is worse than cowardice. It is unworthy of nationalism, of any religion. If you had given a blow against a blow, no one would have dared to point a finger against you. What you have done is to degrade yourselves and drag down India.

You should say to Pandit Jawaharlalji, Nishtar Saheb and Dr. Rajendra Prasad to take away their military and themselves and attend to the affairs of India. This they can only do if you repent of your inhumanity and assure them that Muslims are as much your care as your own brothers and sisters.

You should not rest till every Muslim refugee has come back to his home which you should undertake to rebuild and ask your Ministers to help you to do so. You do not know what critics have said to me about your Ministers.

I regard myself as a part of you. Your affection has compelled that loyalty in me. And since I claim to have better appreciation than you seem to have shown of what Bihari Hindus should do, I cannot rest till I have done some measure of penance. Predominantly for reasons of health, I had put myself on the lowest diet possible soon after my reaching Calcutta. That diet now continues as a penance after the knowledge of the Bihar tragedy. The low diet will become a fast unto death, if the erring Biharis have not turned over a new leaf.

There is no danger of Bihar mistaking my act for anything other than pure penance as a matter of sacred duty.

No friend should run to me for assistance or to show sympathy. I am surrounded by loving friends. It would be wholly wrong and irrelevant for any other person to copy me. No sympathetic fast or semi-fast is called for. Such action can only do harm. What my penance should do is to quicken the conscience of those who know me and believe in my bona fides. Let no one be anxious for me, I am like all of us in God’s keeping.

Nothing will happen to me so long as He wants service through the present tabernacle.

Your servant,

M. K. GANDHI

Harijan, 10-11-1946
652. LETTER TO KIRON SHANKAR ROY

SODEPUR,
November 6, 1946

DEAR KIRON SHANKAR,

Please see Sarat Babu to whom I talked last night about my interview with Muslim friends. My opinion is that you should all join the proposed advisory committee if it comes into being.

Yours

M. K. GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

653. INTERVIEW TO UNITED PRESS OF INDIA

SODEPUR,
November 6, 1946

Gandhiji was asked whether he thought that after the withdrawal of the British troops from this country, the present disturbances would immediately stop and how he thought that the minority communities would be safeguarded from a fear of the majority communities in the different parts of the country. Replying Mahatma Gandhi observed:

The disturbances will not stop immediately, but they must stop much quicker when the British troops are withdrawn. Today we have to witness the degrading spectacle of wanting the help of the British troops. When they are withdrawn, people will necessarily learn the art of self-defence with counter-violence or, better still, with non-violence. The minorities will undoubtedly keep the British troops if they can unless they learn to be brave and trust the majority.

Again, when the British troops are gone, the majority will know how to behave towards the minority. Today, even the best behaviour of the majority does not receive its full value

---

1 Congress member of the Bengal Legislative Assembly
2 Sarat Chandra Bose
3 Gandhiji had met them on November 5 at the residence of H. S. Suhrawardy about forming a Central Peace Committee; vide “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 5-11-1946 whilst the temptation of relying on British troops exists. By British troops, I do not mean merely White soldiers, but all who have been trained by British officers and have been trained to be loyal to the British in India and have often enough been used against the people to crush their freedom.

In any event people will have first to learn to do without the protection of the military or the police during communal troubles. The function of the police is to protect the citizens against thieves and robbers, of the military generally to defend the country against the foreign aggressor where the people have not learnt the matchless bravery of non-violence.

When Gandhiji’s attention was drawn to the fact that in Calcutta and other places, people could move about quite safely even in the riot-affected areas if they were dressed in European fashion as the miscreants took them to be Christians, he said:

It is impossible for any self-respecting man to appreciate the advice that he must look like a Christian in order to avoid murder. The suggested change would cast a reflection on the Hindu as well as the Muslim. In order to live at peace with one another, we have to imbibe the virtue of toleration of the manners, customs and dresses of the different communities living in India.

The Hindu, 11-11-1946

654. LETTER TO MOHAMMED YUNUS

November 6, 1946

BHAI MOHAMMED,

What has happened in Bihar? I am stupefied. Read my letter1 to Jawaharlal. The train is leaving. Send me a full account.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 5106

1Vide “Letter to Jawaharlal Nehru”, 5-11-1946
655. SPEECH AT KUSHTIA

November 6, 1946

Addressing the waiting crowd Gandhiji said that his object in going to Noakhali was not to take sides and promote mutual quarrelling. He had toured all over Bengal including East Bengal with the late Ali Brothers. Those were the days when they had Hindu-Muslim unity. Large numbers of Muslims joined the Congress. The Congress then belonged to all. But today he was not going to East Bengal as a Congressman. He was going there as a servant of God. If he could wipe away the tears of outraged women, he would be more than satisfied.

Shaheed Saheb wanted to accompany him on the East Bengal tour but he was held up in Calcutta. He had sent Shamsuddin Saheb (the Labour Minister) instead. Shamsuddin Saheb had not come to spy upon him but to ensure Government help wherever it was required. He was hopeful that the tour would have good effect and the Hindu-Muslim unity of the Khilafat movement would come back. In the Khilafat days, no one talked of dividing India. Now they did so. But partitioning, even if it was desirable, could not be achieved through violence. Even if it could be achieved, it could not be retained except by the goodwill of the people concerned. The Bengal Ministers had assured him yesterday that the Muslims did not believe in Pakistan through force.

Continuing, Gandhiji said that perhaps his place now was in Bihar. He had served Bihar much more and he had much greater influence on the people there than in Bengal. For the time being, instead of proceeding to Bihar, he was satisfied by addressing an open letter¹ to the Biharis which they would all see and all that he had to say to the audience was that they could not live in India as enemies. They had to be friends and brothers. All that had happened in Bengal and was happening in Bihar was most unbecoming. They were being disgraced before the whole world. He had to go to Noakhali and would stay on till Hindus and Muslims again lived as blood-brothers.

The Bombay Chronicle, 7-11-1946

656. SPEECH AT GOALUNDO

November 6, 1946

Addressing a fairly large crowd that had gathered at Goalundo Ghat, from the deck of the steamer, Gandhiji said that he would like to visit every affected village in Noakhali if he could possibly do so. He was going to Noakhali to console the victims of the riots, to wipe the tears of the oppressed.

¹Vide “To Bihar”, 6-11-1946

If they thought in terms of revenge and kept quarrelling, Hinduism and Islam would both ultimately be destroyed. No religion, he said, sanctioned what was reported to have happened in Bihar and if anybody thought that Bihar had done the fine thing by way of teaching the Muslims a “lesson”, he was greatly mistaken. Such talk was sheer folly. In his opinion Bihar had disgraced itself and the fair name of India, even as Bengal had done. The Prime Minister at the Centre, Pandit Nehru, had told the Biharis that they had to kill him before they could touch a single Mussalman.

The reins of the Government were in the hands of the 14 members of the Central Government, but if they suppressed the riots with the aid of the military, the reins would pass into the hands of Lord Wavell, the Viceroy. Gandhiji said he could never tolerate that. If a population of 1,000 Muslims attacked the members of the minority community living in its midst and if they looted their homes, molested their women and tried to convert them forcibly, they thereby stabbed their own religion.

He was not going to leave Bengal till the Hindus and Muslims had told him that his presence in Bengal was no longer necessary. There was, of course, the call of Bihar. But Pandit Nehru had assured him that his presence was not required there at present.¹

It is sad that people should have left their homes and flocked to towns for relief. You must stick to your villages in face of any aggression and violence. Fight violence with non-violence if you can and if you can’t do that, fight violence by any means, even if it means your utter extinction. But in no case should you leave your hearths and homes to be looted and burnt.

_The Bombay Chronicle_, 7-11-1946; and _The Hindu_, 9-11-1946

657. INTERVIEW TO ASSOCIATED PRESS OF AMERICA²

November 6, 1946

CORRESPONDENT: In view of recent Indian history—1942 unrest, I. N. A. movement and unrest, R. I. N. mutiny, Calcutta-Bombay disturbances, movements in Indian States such as Kashmir and recent communal riots—can it be said that your creed of non-violence has failed, in so far as non-violence has not taken roots in Indian life?

GANDHIJI: This is a dangerous generalization. All you mention

¹ What follows is reproduced from _The Hindu_.

² The interview appeared under the title “A Challenge to Faith” by Pyarelal. According to _The Bombay Chronicle_, 8-11-1946, the interview took place on board the steamboat _Kiwi_ during Gandhiji’s journey to Chandpur.
can certainly be called himsa but that can never mean that the creed of non-violence has failed. At best it may be said that I have not yet found the technique required for the conversion of the mass mind. But I claim that the millions of the 700,000 villages of India have not participated in the violence alluded to by you. Whether non-violence has taken roots in Indian life is still an open question which can only be answered after my death.

What should one do in his day-to-day life—that is, what is the minimum programme—so that one can acquire non-violence of the brave?

The minimum that is required of a person wishing to cultivate the ahimsa of the brave is first to clear his thought of cowardice and in the light of the clearance regulate his conduct in every activity, great or small. Thus the votary must refuse to be cowed down by his superior, without being angry. He must, however, be ready to sacrifice his post, however remunerative it may be. Whilst sacrificing his all, if the votary has no sense of irritation against his employer he has ahimsa of the brave in him. Assume that a fellow passenger threatens my son with assault and I reason with the would-be-assailant who then turns upon me. If then I take his blow with grace and dignity, without harbouring any ill-will against him, I exhibit the ahimsa of the brave. Such instances are of everyday occurrence and can be easily multiplied. If I succeed in curbing my temper every time and though able to give blow for blow I refrain, I shall develop the ahimsa of the brave which will never fail me and which will compel recognition from the most confirmed adversaries.

Harijan, 17-11-1946

658. TALK TO CONGRESSMEN

CHANDPUR, [November 6, 1946]

Replying to memoranda presented to him by prominent leaders of Tippera district at Chandpur Gandhiji observed:

We feel helpless, but we are not so helpless. If we rely on the

---

1 The report said: “A number of Congressmen headed by Kamini Kumar Dutt, leader of the opposition in Bengal Legislative Council, met Gandhiji on board the steamer at Chandpur and apprised him of the situation. They submitted a detailed report of happenings from the beginning.”

2 Gandhiji reached Chandpur at 8.30 p. m. on November 6. He left the following morning.
military and the police then we are really helpless. If 20,000 people of Chandpur fight, then it will be a sight for the gods to see and I would like them to do this.

People must not take the offensive, but defend themselves they must, even, if necessary, with the help from the neighbouring people. None must flee and even if one is surrounded by 1,000 people, one should, if need be, die fighting. Those marooned should stick to their places. People should learn to die. Constructive work requires the spirit of sacrifice. But fighting must never be secret. In no case should women and children or invalids be touched.

The Hindu, 9-11-1946
APPENDICES

APPENDIX I

LETTER FROM JAWAHARLAL NEHRU TO M. A. JINNAH¹

October 6, 1946

I have consulted some of my colleagues about the matter discussed by us yesterday and over the possibility of a rapprochement between the Muslim League and the Congress. We are all agreed that nothing could be happier and better for the country than that these two organizations should meet again as before as friends having no mental reservations and bent on resolving all their differences by mutual consultation and never desiring or allowing the intervention of the British Government through the Viceroy or others or of any other foreign power. We would, therefore, welcome the decision of the League to join the Interim Government for it to work as a united team on behalf of India as a whole.

The points put forward by you in our conversation yesterday were :

1. the formula suggested to you by Gandhiji,
2. the League not being responsible for the members at present representing the Scheduled Castes and the minorities,
3. what should be done in case any vacancy should arise among the members representing the minorities other than the Scheduled Castes
4. the procedure to be adopted over what may be called major communal issues, and
5. alternating Vice-Presidency

Regarding No. 1, we feel that the formula is not happily worded. We do not question the purpose underlying it. We are willing as a result of the elections, to accept the Muslim League as the authoritative representative organization of an overwhelming majority of the Muslims of India and that as such and in accordance with democratic principles they have today the unquestionable right to represent the Muslims of India, provided that for identical reasons the League recognises the Congress as the authoritative organization representing all non-Muslims and such Muslims as have thrown in their lot with the Congress. The Congress cannot agree to any restriction or limitations to be put upon it in choosing such representatives as they think proper from amongst the members of the Congress. We would suggest, therefore, that no formula is necessary and each organization may stand on its merits.

Regarding No. 2, I am to say that the question of the League being responsible does not arise and, as you do not raise any objections to the present constitution of the Government in this respect, there is no question to be solved.

Regarding No. 3, I am to say that if any such vacancy arises, the whole Cabinet will consider what should be done to replace the vacancy and advise the Viceroy accordingly. There can be no question of right in the matter of consultation with the League in regard to the representation of these minorities.

Regarding No. 4, your suggestion about the Federal Court is not feasible. Matters coming before the Cabinet cannot be made subject matter of references to court. We should thrash out all such matters amongst ourselves and bring up agreed proposals before the Cabinet. In the event of failure to reach an agreed decision, we should seek the method of arbitration of our own choice. We hope, however, that we will act with such mutual trust, forbearance and friendliness that there will be no occasion to go to such arbitration.

Regarding No. 5, it is out of the question to have any rotation in the Vice-Presidentship. We have no objection if you desire to have an additional Vice-Chairman for the Co-ordination Committee of the Cabinet who can also preside over such Committee meetings from time to time.

I am hoping that if your committee finally decide upon the League joining the National Cabinet, they will also decide simultaneously to join the Constituent Assembly or recommend to your council to this effect.

I need hardly mention that when an agreement has been reached by us it can only be varied by mutual agreement and not otherwise.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladev Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

APPENDIX II

LORD WAVELL’S NOTE ON INTERVIEW WITH GANDHIJI AND NEHRU

August 27, 1946

I said that I had asked them to come and see me because I had returned from Calcutta. I gave a description of what I had seen in Calcutta; and said that the only way to avoid similar trouble all over India on an even larger scale was by some lessening of communal tension and settlement between Hindu and Muslim. I stressed the importance of coalition Governments, both in Bengal and at the Centre.

1. I said that while I recognized the difficulty in reopening negotiations with the Muslim League, I felt sure that the country expected it as a result of what had happened in Calcutta. The crux of the whole matter lay in the doubt about the

1 Vide”Letter to Lord Wavell”, 28-8-1946
Congress interpretation of the Grouping in the Constituent Assembly. I said that I thought I had been quite clear in my mind that Congress had now agreed to abide by the Statement of May the 16th, and to me this had meant the acceptance of the Grouping arrangements. When I made my broadcast a few nights ago, the draft of which I had shown to Nehru, I had been quite convinced that this was the intention and that it was on this understanding that I had said what I did in my broadcast. I said that I thought the only chance of a peaceful transfer of power in India was if the Congress made a categorical statement that they would accept the position that the provinces must remain in their sections, as intended by the Mission, until after the first elections under the new Constitution. I said that I could not undertake the responsibility of calling together the Constituent Assembly until this point was settled. I handed to Gandhi and Nehru the draft of a statement which I asked them to make, as follows:

2. “The Congress are prepared in the interests of communal harmony to accept the intention of the Statement of May 16th that provinces cannot exercise any option affecting their membership of the Section or of the Groups if formed until the decision contemplated in paragraph 19(viii) of the Statement of the 16th May is taken by the new Legislature after the new constitutional arrangements have come into operation and the first general elections have been held.”

3. Gandhi began by saying that it was a matter for the Interim Government. I said that it was a matter for Congress who had challenged the interpretation of the Mission. He then went on to long legalistic arguments about the interpretation of the Mission’s statement. I said that I was a plain man and not a lawyer, and that I knew perfectly well what the Mission meant, and that the compulsory Grouping was the whole crux of the Plan.

4. The argument went on for some time, and we did not make much progress. Nehru at one time got very heated and said that this was simple “bullying” by the Muslim League. Gandhi said that if a blood-bath was necessary, it would come about in spite of non-violence. I said that I was very shocked to hear such words from him. In the end they took away the formula, but I do not think there is much hope of their accepting it.

5. The interview lasted about forty minutes.

W(AVELL)
27-8-1946

From a copy: India Office Library & Records, London; also The Transfer of Power.
APPENDIX III

LETTER FROM SUDHIR GHOSH TO GANDHIJI

LONDON,
September 7, 1946

DEAR BAPUIJ,

I got your message of the 28th August. . . and I cabled an answer back. I went and saw Pethick-Lawrence as soon as I got the cable. . . . I guessed that you had sent it after your meeting with the Viceroy the previous evening. I therefore knew what it meant and I had no difficulty in interpreting it to Pethick-Lawrence.

I had a long discussion with him but he was rather sticky. He took the line that Congress people were trying to have it both ways; on the one hand they want to get hold of as much power as possible and want the British and their Viceroy to have as little to do with India’s affairs as possible and on the other hand they want British to step in and take a retrograde step, viz., to exercise their extraordinary authority in provincial matters and to suppress a constitutionally elected ministry in Bengal. He expanded himself on the subject. I explained to him that there was no desire on the part of Congress to take any retrograde step; all that we were worried about was that we could not afford to have a repetition of the Bengal tragedy. If Mr. Suhrawardy feels that injustice has been done to the Muslim League and he must seek redress by breaking the law of the land he is entitled to do so, and in that case he should go out of the Government, break the law and face the consequences. But if he chooses to be the keeper of the law and the breaker of the law at the same time, the situation becomes intolerable. Pethick-Lawrence pointed out that he had no evidence that Mr. Suhrawardy was implicated in the crime of breaking the peace in Bengal. I told him that I could not produce legal proof but there was enough circumstantial evidence of his guilt and in any case even if he was not implicated in the crime of breaking the peace, it was obvious to the whole world that he had fallen down on the job of maintaining order in the province which is the primary duty of a Government, and it resulted in gruesome tragedy, such as we have never before witnessed in the history of our country; this was sufficient justification for the dismissal of the Ministry in Bengal. Nobody in the Congress would like to take such a step, but how are they to deal with the numerous big problems that await their attention if they are not in a position to keep the country as a whole in order? Pethick-Lawrence explained that he did not believe that that was the way to keep the country in order. In his view the root of the trouble was the dissatisfaction in the Muslim mind and the only way to remedy it is for the Congress, who are now in a powerful position, to make some further concession which would induce Mr. Jinnah to come into the Government and thus there would be no further trouble from the Muslims. The concession which he thinks would satisfy Mr. Jinnah is that Congress should allow the provinces to go into their respective sections, according to the British plan, when the Constituent Assembly meets, and that they should make an announcement to that effect right now. He suggested that I should make a suggestion to Mr. Gandhi and persuade him to see the reasonableness of it. I had to be rather harsh to him and to tell him that I myself did not see the reasonableness of such a suggestion and therefore I was unable to say anything to Mr. Gandhi about it and in my view such a policy of appeasement would only make things worse. He was rather upset about it. Thus I have made myself somewhat unpopular.

2 Omissions as in the source
3 ibid

But Attlee showed a great deal more understanding. I went to him two days after I saw Pethick-Lawrence. I showed him the cable and explained to him what it meant. I also showed him the cuttings of the Statesman editorial comments on the Calcutta tragedy. He did not try to be diplomatic. He plainly said that if in Gandhi’s judgment the situation is such that the Viceroy needs the assistance of a mind abler than his own and if Gandhi thinks that, otherwise, a repetition of the Calcutta tragedy is not only possible or probable but certain, then that is a matter which must be taken seriously. He explained that he was naturally anxious to leave these things to the Secretary of State but he was going to call the Secretary of State and have a talk with him about all this. He told me that your letter to the Viceroy on this subject had been cabled to the British Government and he showed me the copy he had got. He said that all these things would be discussed at the next meeting of the Cabinet and he added that I might go and see him again on Wednesday the 4th. I therefore went to see him again on Wednesday. He said he was happy to hear from the Secretary of State that although the week-end was difficult time at Delhi, things had improved since the Congress leaders actually took office on Monday, the 2nd September and that there is really no need to worry about the progress of things at Delhi. He then talked at some length about the Viceroy and your message. He admitted that there was a good case for a new Viceroy but there was no sense in making a change unless he was in a position to find someone who was obviously better than the present occupant of the post. And it is not easy to find a man from this country who is very much better. Then he went on to remark (he was thinking aloud) that the kind of assistance which Gandhi thinks the Viceroy needs should now be provided by Nehru—who has a very able mind and legal mind. (Here he joked about legal minds and remarked that although he himself was a barrister he had left the profession early enough!) I said that the Prime Minister had hit the nail on the head; if he would now give instructions to the Viceroy that henceforward the Viceroy, in the exercise of his extraordinary authority, must always be guided by the advice given him by his Prime Minister Pandit Nehru, then the whole problem would be solved. The Prime Minister would not commit himself but he said he very much hoped things would work out that way.

Cripps is returning to London tomorrow. But I hear he is not very well in spite of his stay in Switzerland. He therefore will not be able to do much to help us. I have kept him fully informed about developments in India but he really has no very great influence with the British Cabinet. He is a good man but he is not what they call a good “party man” like Pethick-Lawrence is. Cripps's influence therefore is much less than that of Pethick-Lawrence. Attlee, on the whole, is very sensible about India. I am told that he is very different from what he used to be during the Round Table Conference days. My impression is that he is keen to get on with Congress.

Love from SUDHIR

_Gandhiji's Correspondence with the Government, 1944-47 pp. 370-2_

APPENDIX IV

CONGRESS WORKING COMMITTEE’S RESOLUTION ON KASHMIR¹

_September 25, 1946_

Recent events in Kashmir have been repeatedly considered by the Working Committee and the Committee have been greatly affected by them. They refrained, however, from expressing any opinion as they hoped that the situation could be handled satisfactorily by friendly mediation. Their approaches, however, to the State authorities had an unfriendly response, and the situation has progressively deteriorated, involving repression of, and suffering for, the people.

Recently, the popular leader of the people and the President of the Kashmir National Conference, Sheikh Abdullah, was sentenced to three years' imprisonment. This has added to the gravity of the situation and distressed and angered large numbers of people within and outside the State.

When Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru went to Kashmir and was arrested there, Maulana Abul Kalam Azad, the then President of the Congress, asked him to come back in order to continue the valuable work he was doing for the Congress in connection with the negotiations with the Cabinet Mission.

Maulana Azad had assured him then, with the consent of the Working Committee.

¹Vide “Draft Resolution for the Working Committee”, 25-9-1946
Committee, that the Congress would make his cause in Kashmir their own. Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru willingly returned, though not without misgivings. The Working Committee regret to find that his misgivings were justified.

From all accounts received by the Committee, repression of an open as well as a subtle type is continuing, and the people connected with the Kashmir [National] Conference are being harassed in many ways.

It is reported that while elections have been announced for the State Assembly, large numbers of names are being struck off the electoral rolls, and many prospective candidates for the election have been disqualified. No attempt is being made to liberalize the Constitution and to make it more democratic and responsible.

In view of these reports, the Working Committee feel it necessary to send a deputation, consisting of persons of unquestioned ability and impartiality, to inquire into the reports of repression and suppression of civil liberties. The Committee, therefore, earnestly recommend to Kashmir State that they should invite such a deputation.

Recent events in Kashmir have a large significance affecting the rulers and peoples of all the States in India and Committee trust that the States will welcome the step that they are taking in regard to Kashmir.

While noting with deep regret the sentence passed on Sheikh Abdullah, the Committee would consider his incarceration as a worthy sacrifice if it results in the achievement of the freedom for which he was labouring. The Committee express their sympathy for all those who have suffered or are suffering for the cause of freedom in Kashmir.

Sardar Patel’s Correspondence, 1945-50, Vol. I, pp. 23-4

APPENDIX V

LORD WAVELL’S NOTE ON INTERVIEW WITH GANDHIJI

September 26, 1946

I had also an hour with Mr. Gandhi. He told me that there was no fixed date for his departure, and obviously means to stay as long as the negotiations last.

I outlined to him the result of my discussion with Jinnah and used the same general line of argument as with Nehru. He listened patiently and then said that he had no doubt of the honesty of British intentions, that he entirely agreed that the Muslim League must come in, but that the Nationalist Muslim was a difficult issue. As usual, he then began splitting hairs, saying that if it was merely a Congress

\[1\] Vide “Discussion with Lord Wavell”, 26-9-1946 Lord Wavell also transmitted the text of the note to the Secretary of State the same day.
“right”, they could make concessions on it, but that if it was a “duty”, it was a different matter. He said that the proper way of settling the matter would be by a meeting between Jinnah and Nehru.

Gandhi then really disclosed his hand, by saying that he wished to know what we should do if the worst happened and the Muslim League did not come in. His own view was that in that event it would be of no use for the Constituent Assembly to meet, and it would be quite honourable for the British Government to say that their scheme could not be enforced, and that the solution of a Constituent Assembly in which the Muslim League was not represented would not be maintained by British arms.

I then said to him that that was a possible line of argument, but supposing the worst did happen, which I refused to admit and was not going to allow, what was his solution: “Where did he go from there?”

He than said that though the Constituent Assembly should be dropped, the Interim Government should go on, the vacant Muslim seats being filled by other prominent Muslims. This of course has been Gandhi’s objective and the objective of the majority of the Congress, I think, from the first: i.e., to establish themselves at the Centre and to suppress, cajole, or buy over the Muslims, and then impose a Constitution at their leisure.

I said quite firmly that I was not prepared to accept his solution; I was not going to allow the present negotiations to fail, but that if they did His Majesty’s Government would have to reconsider the whole position.

He concluded by saying that he hoped I would do something to prevent Kashmir from becoming a major issue.

W(AVELL)
26-9-1946

From a copy: India Office Library and Records, London
1. TALK TO RELIEF WORKERS

CHANDPUR,

November 7, 1946

GANDHIJI: What goes against my grain is that a single individual can be converted or a single woman can be kidnapped or raped. So long as we feel we can be subjected to these indignities, we shall continue to be so subjected. If we say we cannot do without police or military protection, we really confess defeat even before the battle has begun. No police or military in the world can protect people who are cowards. Today you say thousands of people are terrorizing a mere handful, so what can the latter do? But even a few individuals are enough to terrorize the whole mass, if the latter feel helpless. Your trouble is not numerical inferiority but the feeling of helplessness that has seized you and the habit of depending on others. The remedy lies with you. That is why I am opposed to the idea of your evacuating East Bengal en masse. It is no cure for impotence or helplessness.

A WORKER: East Bengal is opposed to such a move.

G. They should not leave. 20,000 able-bodied men prepared to die like brave men non-violently might today be regarded as a fairy tale, but it would be no fairy tale for every able-bodied man in a population of 20,000 to die like stalwart soldiers in open fight. They will go down in history like the immortal three hundred of Leonidas who made Thermopylae:

Stranger! Tell Sparta, here her sons are laid,
Such was her law and we that law obeyed.

I will proclaim from the housetops that it is the only condition under which you can live in East Bengal. You have asked for Hindu officers, Hindu police and Hindu military in the place of Muslim. It is a false cry. You forget that Hindu officers, Hindu police and Hindu military have in the past done all these things—looting, arson, abduction, rape. I come from Kathiawar—the land of petty principalities. I cannot describe to you to what depths of depravity human

---

1 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “The First Lesson”. A group of 20 to 25 workers and representatives of relief organizations had met Gandhiji in the dining saloon of the Kiwi on the morning of November 7. nature can go. No woman’s honour is safe in some principalities and the chief is no hooligan but a duly annointed one.

W. These are cases of individual depravity. Here we have got this on a mass scale.

G. But the individual there is not alone. He is backed by the machinery of his little State.

W. He is condemned even by his compeers. Here such acts are not condemned by the Muslims.

G. I have heard nothing but condemnation of these acts from Shaheed Suhrawardy downwards since I have come here. Words of condemnation may tickle your ears, but they are no consolation to the unfortunate women whose houses have been laid desolate or who have been abducted, forcibly converted and forcibly married.

What a shame for Hindus, what a disgrace for Islam! No, I am not going to leave you in peace. Presently you will say to yourself, ‘When will this man leave us and go?’ But this man will not go. He did not come on your invitation and he will go only on his own, but with your blessings, when his mission in East Bengal is fulfilled.

A WORKER: It is a part of their plan for Pakistan.

G. It is midsummer madness and they have realized it. They will soon sicken of it. They have already begun to.

W. Why do not they come here then and set this right?

G. That stage will come. Sickness only marks the crisis. Convalescence must precede cure. You see I am a nature-curist.

A WORKER: But here we are a mere drop in the ocean.

Gandhiji replied that even if there was one Hindu in East Bengal, he wanted him to have the courage to go and live in the midst of the Mussalmans and die if he must like a hero. He should refuse to live as a serf and a slave. He might not have the non-violent strength to die without fighting. But he could command their admiration if he had the courage not to submit to wrong and died fighting like a man.

There is not a man, however cruel and hard-hearted, but would give his admiration to a brave man. A goonda is not the vile man he is imagined to be. He is not without his noble traits.

W. A goonda does not understand reason.

G. But he understands bravery. If he finds that you are braver than he, he will respect you. You will note that for the purposes of our present discussion I have not asked you to discard the use of arms. I can’t provide you with arms. It is not for me to provide arms to the Chittagong Armoury Raid men. The most tragic thing about the Armoury Raid people is that they could not even multiply themselves. Their bravery was lop-sided. It did not infect others.

A WORKER: No wonder it could not. They were condemned.

G. By whom? I may have—that is a different thing.

W. The people did so. I am myself an Armoury Raid man.

G. They did not. You are no Armoury Raid man or, you should not have been here to tell these things. That so many of them should have remained living witnesses of the things that have happened is in my eyes a tragedy of the first order. If they had shown the same fearlessness and courage to face death in the present crisis as they did when they made that raid, they would have gone down in history as heroes. As it is, they have only inscribed a small footnote in the page of history. You will see I am not, as I have already said, asking you just now to unlearn the use of arms or to follow my type of heroism. I have not made it good even in my own case. I have come here to test it in East Bengal. I want you to take up the conventional type of heroism. You should be able to infect others—both men and women—with courage and fearlessness to face death when the alternative is dishonour and humiliation. Then the Hindus can stay in East Bengal, not otherwise. After all, the Mussalmans are blood of our blood and bone of our bone.

W. Here the proportion of Mussalmans and Hindus is 6 to 1. How can you expect us to stand against such heavy odds?

G. When India was brought under British subjection, there were 70,000 European soldiers against 33 crores of Indians.

W. We have no arms. The Government backs them with its bayonets.

G. The odds were much heavier against the Indians in South Africa. The Indian community there was a mere hand-ful in the midst of an overwhelming majority of Europeans and Negroes. The Europeans had arms. We had none. So we forged the weapon of satyagraha. Today the Indian is respected by the White man in South Africa, not so the Zulu with all his fine physique.

A WORKER: So we are to fight with arms anyhow?

G. Not anyhow. Even violence has its code of ethics. For

---

1 Carried out by a group of terrorists on April 18, 1930 instance, to butcher helpless old men, women and children is not bravery but rank cowardice. Chivalry requires that they should be protected even at the cost of one’s life. The history of early Islam is replete with such instances of chivalry and Islam is all the stronger for them.

W. Would you permit the Hindus to take the offensive?

G. The people of Bihar did and brought disgrace upon themelves and India. They have set the clock of India’s independence back. I have a right to speak about Bihar. In a sense I feel closer to Bihar than to Bengal as fortune enabled me to give a striking demonstration of the non-violence technique in Champaran. I have heard it said that the retaliation in Bihar has ‘cooled’ the Muslims down. They mean it has cowed them down for the time being. They forget that two can play at a game. Bihar has forged a link in the chain of our slavery. If the Bihar performance is repeated or if the Bihar mentality does not mend, you may note down my words in your diary: Before long India will pass under the yoke of the Big Three with one of them probably as the mandatory power. The Independence of India is today at stake in Bengal and Bihar. The British Government entrusted the Congress with power not because they are in love with the Congress but because they had faith that the Congress would use it wisely and well, not abuse it. Today Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru finds the ground slipping from under his feet. But he won’t let that happen.
That is why he is in Bihar. He has said he is going to stay there as long as it may be necessary.

Biharis have behaved as cowards. Use your arms well, if you must. Do not ill-use them. Bihar has not used its arms well. If the Biharis wanted to retaliate, they could have gone to Noakhalie and died to a man. But for a thousand Hindus to fall upon a handful of Mussalmans—men, women and children —living in their midst is no retaliation but just brutality. It is the privilege of arms to protect the weak and helpless. The best succour that Bihar could have given to the Hindus of East Bengal would have been to guarantee with their own lives the absolute safety of the Muslim population living in their midst.

Their example would have told. And I have faith that they will still do so with due repentance when the present madness has passed away. Anyway that is the price I have put upon my life if they want me to live. Here ends the first lesson.

Harijan, 1-12-1946

1 In 1917
2. DISCUSSION WITH MUSLIM LEAGUE LEADERS

CHANDPUR,
November 7, 1946

One of them remarked that no disturbances had taken place in Chandpur subdivision. The rush of refugees to Chandpur was due to panic caused by false Press propaganda. The number of Hindus killed by the Muslims was only 15 while double that number of Muslims had died as a result of firing by the military who were mostly Hindus.

Another member of the deputation who was an M. L. A. was even more bitter about the fact that the Hindus were still evacuating and their rehabilitation was being ‘obstructed’ by the Hindu workers who encouraged them to migrate in order to discredit the Muslim League Government and paralyse the administration.

Shamsuddin Saheb who was present at the meeting along with Nasrullah Saheb and Abdul Rashid Saheb interposed that it was no use isolating Chandpur subdivision and ignoring what had taken place elsewhere in the district. Equally irrelevant to their present argument was their reference to the military firing.

When they had finished, Gandhiji replying remarked that if what they had said was to be taken at its face value, then it amounted to this: that the Muslims had committed no excesses. The mischief had all been provoked by the excesses of the police and the military who were harassing the Mussalmans and it was they, therefore, who together with the panic-mongering Hindus were the real culprits. That was too big a pill for anybody to swallow. Why had it become necessary to call the military, if no disturbances had taken place? A deputation of 20 to 25 Hindus had a meeting with him in the morning.² They had told him awful tales of what had happened in Tippera and Noakhali. Similar tales had been pouring into his ears ever since he had set foot in Bengal. Even Muslim Leaguers had admitted that terrible things had been done. They disputed the figures which they feared were exaggerated. He was not concerned with numbers. Even if there was a single case of abduction, forcible conversion or forcible marriage, it was enough to make every godfearing man or woman hang down his or her head in shame.

He was not going to keep anything secret, Gandhiji proceeded. He would place all the information which he might receive before the Ministers. He had come to promote mutual goodwill and confidence. In that he wanted their help. He did not want peace to be established with the help of the police and the military. An imposed peace was no peace. He did not wish to encourage people to flee from their homes in East Bengal either. If the mass flight of the refugees had been deliberately planned to discredit the Muslim League Ministry, it would recoil on the heads of those who had done so. To him it seemed hardly credible. He suggested that the right course would be to make a clean breast of the matter.

¹ Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Overproof is Admission”. Several prominent Muslim League leaders of Tippera District met Gandhiji at Chandpur on board the Kiwi before he left for Chaumuhani.

² K. Nasrullah, M. L. A. and Parliamentary Secretary in the Home Department of the Muslim League Ministry in Bengal

³ Vide the preceding item.

It is far better to magnify your own mistake and proclaim it to the whole world than leave it to the world to point the accusing finger at you. God never spares the evil-doer.

The gentleman who had spoken first thereupon admitted that he had heard of some cases of arson and looting but the looting had taken place after the occupants had fled. The deserted houses offered too strong a temptation to the hooligans.

GANDHIJI: But why should people flee from their homes? People do not do so normally. Everybody knows that an unoccupied and unprotected house is bound to be looted by someone or the other. Would anyone risk the loss of all he owns just to discredit the League?

Still another member of the delegation remarked that only one per cent of the people had indulged in acts of hooliganism. The rest of the 99 per cent were really good people and in no way responsible for the happenings.

That was not a correct way of looking at it, Gandhiji replied. If 99 per cent were good people and had actively disapproved of what had taken place, the one per cent would have been able to do nothing and could easily have been brought to book. Good people ought actively to combat the evil, to entitle them to that name. Sitting on the fence was no good. If they did not mean it, they should say so and openly tell all the Hindus in the Muslim majority areas to quit. But that was not their position as he understood it. The Qaid-e-Azam had said that the minorities in Pakistan would get unadulterated justice. Where was that justice? Today the Hindus asked him if Noakhali was an indication of what they were to expect in Pakistan. He had studied Islam. His Muslim friends in South Africa used to say to him: “Why not recite the Kalama and forget Hinduism?” He used to say in reply that he would gladly recite the Kalama but forget Hinduism never. His respect and regard for Hazrat Mohammed was not less than theirs. But authoritarianism and compulsion was the way to corrupt religion, not to advance it.

Shamsuddin Saheb agreeing with Gandhiji quoted a verse from the Koran to the effect that there can be no compulsion in religion. He had told the Mussalmans, he said, that if they wanted Pakistan they must mete out justice to the minority community and win its confidence. “By doing what you have done, you have killed Pakistan,” he had told them.
Mr. McInerny, the District Magistrate of Noakhali, in a leaflet he has issued, has said that he will assume, unless the contrary is conclusively proved, that anyone who accepted Islam after the beginning of the recent disturbances was forcibly converted and in fact remained a Hindu. If all the Muslims made that declaration, it would go a long way to settle the question. Why should there be a public show of it, if anybody genuinely felt inclined to recite the Kalama? A heart conversion needs no other witness than God.

Mere recitation of the Kalama while one continued to indulge in acts which are contrary to elementary decency was not Islam but a travesty of it. That reminded him of the Plymouth Brothers\(^1\) who had invited him to embrace Christianity because then he would be free to do anything he liked since Christ redeemed the sins of those who accepted him. As against that there was the conclusive verse of the New Testament: “Not everyone who says Lord, Lord, with his lips comes to me.”\(^2\) It was therefore up to the leaders of the Muslims to declare that forcible repetition of a formula could not make a non-Muslim into a Muslim. It only shamed Islam.

“All that has happened is the result of false propaganda,” argued one member of the deputation who had not hitherto spoken.

G. Let us not make a scapegoat of false propaganda. False propaganda would fall flat if we are all right.

Finally one of the deputationists remarked that they were all prepared to go into the interior along with the Hindu leaders to restore peace and confidence but the latter distrusted them.

Gandhiji replied that that did not matter. He would gladly accept their offer. He said:

You and I will visit every village and every home in the interior and restore peace and confidence.

Harijan, 24-11-1946

---

2. St. Matthew, vii. 21
3. TALK TO REFUGEES

LAKSHAM,
November 7, 1946

I have not come on a whirlwind propaganda visit. I have come to stay here with you as one of you. I have no provincialism in me. I claim to be an Indian and therefore a Bengali even as I am a Gujarati. I have vowed to myself that I will stay on here and die here if necessary, but I will not leave Bengal till the hatchet is finally buried and even a solitary Hindu girl is not afraid to move freely about in the midst of Mussalmans.

The greatest help you can give me is to banish fear from your hearts. And what is the talisman that can do that for you. It is the unfailing mantra of Ramanama. You may say, you do not believe in Him. You do not know that but for His will you could not draw a single breath. Call Him Ishwar, Allah, God, Ahura Mazda. His names are as innumerable as there are men. He is one without a second. He alone is great. There is none greater than He. He is timeless, formless, stainless. Such is my Rama. He alone is my Lord and Master.

Gandhiji touchingly described to them how as a little boy he used to be usually timid and afraid of even shadows and how his nurse Rambha had taught him the secret of Ramanama as an antidote to fear. “When in fear, take Ramanama. He will protect you,” she used to tell him. Ever since then Ramanama had been his unfailing refuge and shelter from all kinds of fear.

He resides in the heart of the pure always. Tulsidas, that prince of devotees, whose name had become a household word among the Hindus from Kashmir to Cape Comorin as Shri Chaitanya’s and Shri Ramakrishna Paramahansa’s in Bengal, had presented the message of that name to us in his immortal Ramayana. If you walked in fear of that name, you did not need to fear any man on earth, be he a prince or a pauper.

Why should they be afraid of the cry of “Allaho Akbar”? The Allah of Islam was the protector of innocence. What had been done in East Bengal had not the sanction of Islam as preached by its Prophet.

Who could dare to dishonour their wives or daughters if they had faith in God?

1 According to a report in Hindustan Standard, 8-11-1946, Gandhiji addressed a gathering of about 10,000 people—Hindus and Muslims—waiting from early morning at Laksham Junction—en route to Chaumuhani, which he reached shortly after midday.
He, therefore, expected them to cease to be afraid of Mussalmans. If they believed in Ramanama, they must not think of leaving East Bengal. They must live where they were born and brought up and die there if necessary, defending their honour as brave men and women.

To run away from danger instead of facing it is to deny one’s faith in man and God and even one’s own self. It were better for one to drown oneself than live to declare such bankruptcy of faith.

If you ask the military, they will tell you that God is their protector. I want you, therefore, to be able to tell Shamsuddin Saheb that you no longer need the protection of the police and the military, which may be withdrawn, but would rather put yourself under the protection of Him whose protection they all seek.¹

Gandhiji said that the military and the police could not give any protection. They could ask the soldiers (who were then standing with them) whether anybody could save them in war. Guns were unavailing before death. It was only God who could protect. The only way to save oneself was to rely on one’s fellowmen, no matter whether they were Hindus or Muslims. It was the gospel of love that he had come here to preach.

The Bengal Ministers and other officials were accompanying him, he added, but not to look after him. They would help him preach and convince the people to have faith in their fellowmen and neighbours and remove fear from their minds. Gandhiji felt convinced that the people would soon learn to dispense with the military and the police. The sooner they could do so, he said, the better. He would like to hear people say so from today.

_Harijan_, 24-11-1946; and _The Hindu_, 10-11-1946

4. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING²

CHAUMUHANI,
November 7, 1946

Gandhiji told them how he had toured East Bengal in the company of the Ali Brothers during the Khilafat days. In those days the Muslims felt that all that he said was right. If the Ali Brothers went into a women’s meeting, they went blindfolded. He was allowed to go with his eyes open. Why should he blindfold himself when he went to his mothers and sisters? He had no desire to go among the purdah ladies. But the Ali Brothers insisted that he must go. The women were eager to meet him and they were sure that his advice would do good to them. In South Africa he had lived in the midst of Muslim friends for twenty years. They treated him as a member of their family and told their wives and sisters that they need not observe purdah with him. He had become a barrister in England but what was a dinner barrister worth? It was South Africa and the struggle that he had launched there that had made him. It was there that he discovered satyagraha and civil disobedience.

¹ What follows is from _The Hindu_.
² Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”. The meeting was held in the compound of the Hindu Vidya Mandir, a local school. The audience was estimated at 15,000, the majority of whom were Muslims.

He had come to them in sadness. What sin had Mother India committed that her children, Hindus and Muslims, were quarrelling with each other? He had learnt that no Hindu woman was safe today in some parts of East Bengal. Ever since he had come to Bengal, he was hearing awful tales of Muslim atrocities. Shaheed Saheb, their Prime Minister, and Shamsuddin Saheb had admitted that there was some truth in the reports that one heard.

I have not come to excite the Hindus to fight the Mussalmans. I have no enemies. I have fought the British all my life. Yet they are my friends. I have never wished them ill.

He had heard of forcible conversions, forcible feeding of beef, abductions and forcible marriages, not to talk about murders, arson and loot. They had broken idols. The Muslims did not worship them nor did he. But why should they interfere with those who wished to worship them? These incidents are a blot on the name of Islam. He said:

I have studied the Koran. The very word Islam means peace. The Muslim greeting ‘Salam Alaikum’ is the same for all, whether Hindus or Muslims or any other. Nowhere does Islam allow such things as had happened in Noakhali and Tippera. Shaheed Saheb and all the Ministers and League leaders who met me in Calcutta have condemned such acts unequivocally. The Muslims are in such overwhelming majority in East Bengal that I expect them to constitute themselves the guardians of the small Hindu minority. They should tell Hindu women that while they are there, no one dare cast an evil eye on them.

_Harijan_, 24-11-1946

---

1 _The Hindu_, 10-11-1946, reported: “After Gandhi ji concluded the 20 minute speech and before a Bengali translation of the speech could be given by Satis Chandra Das Gupta, it was time for Muslims to offer the evening namaz. An interval of ten minutes was allowed to enable Muslims in the gathering to offer their prayers.”
5. MESSAGE TO PEOPLE OF CHITTAGONG

CHAUMUHANI,

[On or after November 7, 1946]

Cultivate the spirit of fearlessness and self-sacrifice. Do not evacuate.

_Hindustan Standard, 16-11-1946_

6. TALK TO RELIEF WORKERS

CHAUMUHANI,

[On or after November 7, 1946]

GANDHIJI: The tragedy is not that so many Muslims have gone mad, but that so many Hindus in East Bengal have been witnesses to these things. If every Hindu in East Bengal had been done to death, I would not have minded it. Do you know what the Rajputs did? They killed their womenfolk when they issued forth to sacrifice themselves on the battlefield. The surviving ones immolated themselves by mounting the funeral pyre before the fortress fell rather than allow themselves to be captured and dishonoured. There is nothing courageous in thousands of Mussalmans killing out a handful of Hindus in their midst, but that the Hindus should have degraded themselves by such cowardice, i.e., being witness to abduction and rape, forcible conversion and forcible marriage of their womenfolk, is heartrending.

QUESTION: How can we create a sense of security and self-confidence?

By learning to die bravely. Let us turn our wrath against ourselves. I am not interested in getting the police substituted by the military or the Muslim police by the Hindu police. They are broken reeds.

To whom should we appeal—the Congress, the League or the British Government?

1 The report said: “A deputation from Chittagong waited upon Gandhiji at Chaumuhani and apprised him of the situation in Chittagong.”
2 Gandhiji reached Chaumuhani on November 7.
3 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”
To none of these. Appeal to yourselves, therefore to God.
We are men—made of flesh and blood. We need some material support.
Then appeal to your own flesh and blood. Purify it of all dross.

A WOMAN WORKER: What is your idea of rehabilitation?

GANDHIJI: Not to send them to Assam and West Bengal but to infuse courage in them so that they are not afraid to stay in their original homes.

How is that possible?
You must stay in their midst and say to them: ‘We shall die to the last person before a hair of your head is injured.’ Then you will produce heroines in East Bengal.

That was once our idea too.
I do not mind if each and every one of the 500 families in your area is done to death. Here you are 20 per cent of the population. In Bihar, the Muslims constitute only 14 per cent.

They know they won't be molested there.
They have been butchered in a more unsufferable manner and there have been cases of molestation of women too, this time.

If the Government do not provide rations?
There are so many relief organizations. Rations can be purchased but honour and self-respect cannot be bought. I have a feeling that even the Bengal Government do not want this thing to go any further. The lesson has been taught not by Bihar but the vile things done in Bengal. They stand aghast.

You have opened up a new vista before us, Mahatmaji. We feel fresh blood coursing through our veins.

_Harijan, 8-12-1946; and Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase, Vol. I, Book II, pp. 20-1_
7. SPEECH AT DATTAPARA

November 8, 1946

Gandhiji told them that it was a shame for both the Hindus and the Mussalmans that the Hindus should have to run away from their homes as they had done. It was a shame for the Muslims because it was out of fear of the Muslims that the Hindus had run away. Why should a human being inspire another with fear? It was no less a shame for the Hindus to have given way to craven fear. He had always said that man should fear none but God. The Government officials accompanying him were all anxious that they should return to their homes. To feed and clothe thousands in one place involved difficulties for the refugees as well as for the Government. The Government officials were ashamed of the fact that such things should have happened in their jurisdiction. He wanted them to forgive and forget what had happened in Noakhali and Tippera. That did not mean that they were to become cowards. But it served no useful purpose to keep on recalling the unpleasant past. He hoped and prayed that the Hindus and Muslims of these parts would become friends once more. He knew the Hindus had suffered a lot and were suffering still. He would not ask them to return to their homes till at least one good Muslim and one good Hindu came forward to accompany them and stand surety for their safety in each village. He was sure there were plenty of good Hindus and good Muslims in these parts who would give the necessary guarantee.

A Muslim friend from the audience said, they had already given them the assurance that they would look after them but the Hindus would not listen to them. Gandhiji replied that they should try to understand and appreciate the reasons of the Hindus’ distrust and overcome their fear. A Hindu refugee got up and asked how they could have confidence in the assurances of the Muslims any more. When the trouble was threatening they had promised to look after them but had failed to protect them afterwards. Besides, where were they to go and stay? They had lost their all. Were they to go back and stay in the jungles? And when fifty good Muslims in the village had failed to save them on the previous occasion, how would one good Muslim do so now? Moreover, miscreants were still at large roaming about in villages even after one month of the incidents. Gandhiji replied that the Government would see that

1 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”. Gandhiji was on his way back to Chaumuhani in the evening after a visit to Gopairbagh where, according to The Bombay Chronicle report, 19 out of the 22 male members of a family had been butchered and burnt in a corner of the compound. At Dattapara, the house where Gandhiji halted had at the time some 6,000 refugees.

2 According to The Bombay Chronicle, Gandhiji invited questions from the refugees.

3 This sentence is from The Bombay Chronicle.
their huts were rebuilt and they had food and clothing when they returned to their homes. Whatever might have happened in the past, if now one good Muslim and one good Hindu took the responsibility for their safety in each village, they could rely on their word backed as it would be by the collective invitation of all the Muslims in the village. If they were still afraid they were cowards and not even God could help the cowardly.

_Harijan_, 1-12-1946; and _The Bombay Chronicle_, 11-11-1946

8. DISCUSSION WITH MUSLIM LEAGUE LEADERS

CHAUMUHANI,
November 8, 1946

One of the friends suggested that in order to restore confidence Hindu leaders should reinforce the appeals of the Muslims to the refugees to go back to their villages. Gandhiji replied that that was not the right way to dispel the apprehension and distrust of the Hindus which was well grounded. He would not be able to advise them to return to their homes unless there was at least one good Hindu and one good Mussalman for each village who would stand guarantee for their safety and security and who would be prepared to immolate himself before a hair of their head was touched. It was for the Muslim League leaders who were also members of the Government to say whether such men would be forthcoming. There was no other way to restore confidence after all that had happened. They all agreed with Gandhiji’s suggestion and said that they would do their best to give effect to it.

_Harijan_, 24-11-1946

9. LETTER TO JITENDRA CHAKRAVARTI

CHAUMUHANI,
November 8, 1946

BHAI JITEN,

In the present condition of Noakhali and Tippera you can sell khadi without insisting on yarn in exchange. Keep sending an account of the khadi thus sold.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly letter”. Pyarelal says: “That night Shamsuddin Saheb with his colleagues from Calcutta and some local prominent Muslims saw Gandhiji and discussed the question of refugees.”

2 Jitendra Chakravarti, Secretary, Bengal Charkha Sangh
10. LETTER TO SHRIKRISHNADAS JAJU

[After November 8, 1946]

BHAI JAJUJI,

Keep this letter. My advice is that you should have Saraladevi’s name among the trustees. She is an extremely pure-hearted and truthful lady. What I wrote in Harijan was regarding her. If you see anything wrong in this, write to me.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

(Enclosure: Saralabehn’s letter of November 8, 1946)

SHRI SHRIKRISHNADAS JAJU

WARDHA

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

11. LETTER TO MANILAL GANDHI

November 9, 1946

CHI. MANILAL,

Do not worry on hearing about my fast, rather rejoice. When somebody does his duty, instead of worrying one should feel greater zeal in doing one’s own work. I am on a partial fast but am able to do my work as usual. Let us see when the total fast begins. That is in the hands of the Biharis. Rajendra Babu and the others have gone there. There are hopes that they will succeed in their mission. Whatever happens, should I not do my duty as I understand it? And, therefore, without worrying in the least, you should do yours.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 4993

---

1 From the date of the enclosure

2 Vide “Who Can be a Trustee”, 3-11-1946
12. STATEMENT TO THE PRESS

CHAUMUHANI,
November 9, 1946

Two telegrams from Patna reprove me on my “threatened” fast. “Threatened” is the word used in one of the wires. My proposed fast is not meant to coerce anyone; it is meant to quicken the dead conscience into life. Those who act from fear harm themselves and the cause they profess to serve. Surely, it is as plain as A. B. C. that the action of the Biharis in injuring the very small minority of Muslims in Bihar must postpone the day of India’s independence and ultimately sour Muslims all over India unless Bihar repents her folly of senseless and cowardly violence.

Rashtrapati Acharya Kripalani, whom every Bihari knows for his sterling services, Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, Dr. Rajendra Prasad and now Maulana Abul Kalam Azad and Shri Jayprakash Narayan are now in Bihar and expect to show fair Bihar that their terrible ill-treatment of the Muslims is communalism of the worst type and is calculated to defeat the growing nationalism of Bihar. I, therefore, warn everyone from abusing my contemplated fast which is in no way intended to deflect anyone from what he believes is the course of duty for him.

The Hindu, 11-11-1946

13. LETTER TO H. S. SUHRAWARDY

DATTAPARA,
November 10, 1946

BHAISHRI SHAHID SUHRAWARDY,

The work here is more difficult than I had imagined. And the Qaid-e-Azam’s statement given to the representative of the Globe which I saw in the Morning News of November 10, has rendered it even more difficult. In the beginning it uses the expression ‘caste Hindu’, later followed by the word ‘Hindu’. Is co-operation between Hindus and Muslims an utter impossibility? If it is so, what will be the plight of Bengal and Hindustan? What will happen to Noakhali and

1 Vide “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 14-11-1946
Tippera?

The refugees here do not get even half their rations and the rice they get is unfit for consumption. They have nothing to cover themselves with during winter. Their houses are damaged, the sanitation is unsatisfactory. Satis Babu has prepared a report which I am sending you.

The officials here are fully co-operating with me for which I am grateful to you as well as to them. But is it not our task to settle the differences and turn both the communities into mutual friends?

Yours
M. K. Gandhi

14. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

DATTAPARA,
November 10, 1946

Whether you believe me or not, I want to assure you that I am a servant of both the Hindus and the Mussalmans. I have not come here to fight Pakistan. If India is destined to be partitioned, I cannot prevent it. But I wish to tell you that Pakistan cannot be established by force. In the bhajan that was just sung ‘the poet has likened God to the philosophers’ stone. The proverbial philosophers’ stone is said to turn iron into gold. That is not always desirable. For instance, if all the rails of the railway track were turned into gold by the touch of the stone, the trains would not be able to run over them. But the touch of God purifies the soul. That is always desirable.

That philosophers’ stone is within us all. All that I wish to tell my Muslim brethren is that, whether they live as one people or two, they should live as friends with the Hindus. If they do not wish to do so, they should say so plainly. I would in that case confess myself defeated. The refugees cannot stay on as refugees for ever. The Government cannot go on feeding them. And what sort of feed are they getting? Less than half the daily ration of cereals to keep an able-bodied man alive, no fish, no vegetables, nor anything else to supplement it. It is not possible for them to exist like this for any length of time. If, therefore, the Muslims do not want them back in their villages, they must go elsewhere.

---

1 This appeared under the title “An Appeal to Conscience” as reported by Pyarelal.

But even if every Hindu of East Bengal went away, I will still continue to live amidst the Muslims of East Bengal and eat what they give me and what I consider lawful for me to partake of. I will not bring my food from outside. I do not need fish or flesh. All that I need is a little fruit, vegetables and some goat’s milk. As far as goat’s milk and cereals are concerned, I would take them again only when it pleases God that I should do so. I have given it up and would not resume it till the Hindus are really penitent of what they have done in Bihar.

For a thousand Hindus to surround a hundred Mussalmans or for a thousand Mussalmans to surround a hundred Hindus and oppress them is not bravery but cowardice. Fair fight means even numbers and previous notice. That does not mean that I approve of their fighting. It has been said that the Hindus and Mussalmans cannot stay together as friends or co-operate with each other. No one can make me believe that, but if that is your belief, you should say so. I would in that case not ask the Hindus to return to their homes. They would leave East Bengal, and it would be a shame for both the Mussalmans and the Hindus. If, on the other hand, you want the Hindus to stay in your midst, you should tell them that they need not look to the military for protection but to their Muslim brethren instead. Their daughters and sisters and mothers are your own daughters, sisters and mothers and you should protect them with your lives. I addressed them in the refugee camp yesterday. The District Magistrate, Mr. McInerny, told them that all mankind being descended from Adam and Eve, they were all members of one family—relatives, whatever their race or religion. So they should live together as relatives.

One man is said to have returned to his village last evening after the prayer meeting. He found his house surrounded by Muslims. They would not let him take his property. How can I, under these circumstances (if they are true), ask anyone to go back? You should ponder over what I have said and let me know what you really wish. I shall advise the Hindus accordingly.

I am told and I believe that there are many good Muslims who would welcome the Hindus back but the goondas stand in the way. I wish to tell you that if the good Muslims spoke out with one voice and acted according to their professions, the so-called goondas would become ineffective and would mend their ways.

_Harijan_, 1-12-1946

15. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

November 11, 1946

These days I write very few letters myself. One of them is this one to you. Your telegram\(^1\) was thoughtlessly drafted. You don’t know the facts. The newspapers are more or less useless. You are very ill. You can know almost nothing of the latest developments, and any conclusions you may draw from such knowledge will be mostly wrong. You have not even understood the full meaning of the step I have taken. I am writing this only to tell you that, though you are wise, you are unnecessarily spoiling your health. Better read good books, reflect on them and write on them. Or just think of God, that is, repeat Ramanama so that it may get inscribed in your heart. If you do so, you will not waste your energy in useless thoughts.

[From Gujarati]

_Bapuni Prasadi_, p. 214

16. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING\(^2\)

DATTAPARA,
November 11, 1946

Gandhiji poured out the anguish which the sights which he had seen had filled him with. Wherever he had gone, he had seen burnt houses and heard stories of looting and forcible conversions. Hindu women were without the auspicious vermilion mark on their heads and foreheads and without their conch-shell bangles. How he wished that all Muslim brothers would condemn these atrocities with one voice so that the Hindus could go back to their homes and live there as they used to before the disturbances. Their houses would be rebuilt before they could go back. The Muslims should help in that. Such he believed was the injunction of the holy Koran too.

_Harijan_, 1-12-1946

\(^1\) This had reference to Gandhiji’s intended fast over the Bihar atrocities.
\(^2\) Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”. It being a silence-day the speech was read out.
17. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

[DATTAPARA,]
November 11, 1946

CHI. AMTUL SALAAM.

I have your letter. You will send the khadi here.

I shall certainly come but I cannot say when. If I am late, Bapa will come. The work is difficult. But whatever the situation, we have to do our duty. What more shall I write? I have now come back from Noakhali and Sonachaka. Prayer is over and I am writing this.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 538

18. LETTER TO N. K. BOSE

[DATTAPARA,]
November 12, 1946

DEAR NIRMAL,

You went away suddenly and without seeing me. I was under the impression that you were with Satis Babu and therefore [with] me to the end. Hemprabha Devi says you would come if I needed you. I do need you for any work that may be assigned to you by me directly or through Satis Babu. If you are agreeable, please come without delay.¹

Yours,
BAPU

From a photostat: C. W. 10532. Courtesy: N. K. Bose. Also G. N. 10507

19. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

November 12, 1946

CHI. LILY.

What a letter you have written! Your mind is extremely unsteady. No one can travel with me as a matter of right. How often did Mahadev have to leave me? Is there any rule that a daughter must ¹The addressee, a professor in Calcutta University, had accompanied Gandhiji during his Noakhali tour till November 8 and then left to resume university work.

²He rejoined Gandhiji on November 17.
travel with her father? I have showed you your dharma. You are doing well in your studies. Do better still; I shall be fully satisfied with that.

I was not displeased with you when you were in Delhi. If you see only the bad in everything, how can I help it? The only way to please me is for you to complete your studies and use your knowledge for serving others.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 9605. Also C. W. 6577. Courtesy: Lilavati Asar

20. LETTER TO D. B. KALELKAR

CAMP DATTAPARA,
November 12, 1946

If this conflagration does not subside, I am certain that I shall be consumed by it.

I intend to fix all those who are accompanying me separately or they will take up their own independent work.

I shall be touring the surrounding villages here. I shall not be able to use your services. You may go on sending for Harijan whatever you can. Your place is in Assam. By all means go there. Bardoloi needs somebody by his side, and you are the right man.

Your duty is to look after the Hindustani work and bring credit to it. All need not offer themselves up in the sacrifice I am performing. Everyone should remain engrossed in his own work.

I got the articles sent by you. They will be published without any mention of my name. What is the point in giving my name in a journal being published by me, and that, too, over an article written by you? You can do that only after my death or in some other journal. But that also with a restrained pen.

I hope you are well.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10982

1 Gopinath Bardoloi, Prime Minister of Assam
21. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

CAMP DATTAPARA,
November 12, 1946

CHI. BRIJKRISHNA,

I see that it is useless sending for you here. There is no possibility at all of your being with me. Arrangements are being made for all those who are with me to be put in separate places. Therefore your duty is to stay on in Delhi and render whatever service you can there. The first duty is to make your body healthy.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 2494

22. LETTER TO MAHESH DATT MISHRA

November 12, 1946

CHI. MAHESH,

I think of you every day. I can now say definitely that your coming here will be useless. I am suggesting that each coworker should be put in a different village. What would be the good of sending for you? In fact, they should all be Bengalis. First I have to see about those who are with me. What shall I do if I send for new workers? How does it help if the new arrivals remain with me. Now do whatever you think is right. What will happen to me, only God knows. Have you fitted yourself for Hindustani Harijan.1

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 6717. Also C. W. 4461. Courtesy: Mahesh Datt Mishra

23. LETTER TO JAYAPRAKASH NARAYAN

DATTAPARA,
November 12, 1946

CHI. JAYAPRAKASH,

I feel that today you are the God in Bihar. Will Bihar really become calm? We have committed a grievous error. Write to me frankly what is likely to happen now. Give me your unreserved opinion. I have a feeling that there should be no Congress [session] this time. Leaders of all the provinces should remain in their own provinces. You may convey my opinion to all. I may not be able to do it as I have little free time.

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI

Where is Prabha? What does she do?
I hope you are keeping well.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI JAYAPRAKASH NARAYAN
PATNA

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

24. LETTER TO RAJENDRA PRASAD

DATTAPARA,
November 12, 1946

BHAI RAJENDRA BABU,
You have again fallen ill! How are you now? What is the condition in Bihar? Are those who committed the atrocities relenting? Do they need me there? They should not. If the Bihar fury does not abate, I do not wish to remain alive because my life would then be meaningless. Write to me what precisely the condition is.

The work here is very delicate. Let us see what comes about.

Blessings from
BAPU

DR. RAJENDRA PRASAD
PATNA

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

25. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

DATTAPARA,
November 12, 1946

Gandhi ji again referred to the question of repatriation. The Moulvi Saheb, the Vice-President of Union No. 6, who had addressed them before him had invited them in the name of the Mussalmans to return to their homes. But it was not so easy in action as it was in speech. Everyone was anxious to see the two communities live in

1 Prabhavati, addressee’s wife
2 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter” in Harijan. The audience consisted mostly of refugees.
peace and harmony once again. For that it was not necessary that they should have the same religion. He had seen awful sights of destruction. He had seen the terror-stricken faces of the sufferers. They had been forcibly converted once and they were afraid the same thing would be repeated. He wanted them to shed that fear. He alone deserved to live who refused to give up God’s name.¹ He remembered how during the Jallianwala Bagh days, young English lads made big, hefty men crawl on their bellies. The lane through which they were made to crawl was called the crawling lane. Those men had a human form but they were worse than worms. So they must learn to be brave and face death rather than give up Ramanama.

He was not enamoured of the military and the police. The function of the police was to arrest thieves and dacoits, that of the military to guard them against foreign aggression. The police and the military could not teach them to cease fighting among themselves and live as friends. He would not ask anyone to return to their homes unless one good Hindu and one good Muslim stood surety for their safety in their respective villages.² He referred to the scheme for repatriation but it could work only if the Muslim League wished to have peace and fully co-operated. Shamsuddin Saheb was coming in two or three days. They would hear from him what the League Government wanted to do.

_Harijan,_ 1-12-1946; and _Hindustan Standard, 15-11-1946_

26. _TRIBUTE TO MADAN MOHAN MALAVIYA_
DATTAPARA,
_November 13, 1946_

In Pandit Malaviya’s death³ India loses the oldest and one of the ablest and unswerving servants. Up to the last moment he never ceased to think of India and her freedom.

_Hindustan Standard, 15-11-1946_

27. _DISCUSSION WITH CO-WORKERS_
DATTAPARA,⁴
_November 13, 1946_

Early in the morning Gandhiji announced to his party an important decision. He had decided to disperse his party detailing each member, including the ladies, to settle down in one affected village and make himself or herself hostage for the safety and security of the Hindu minority of that village. They must be pledged to protect

¹ The rest of the paragraph is from _Hindustan Standard._
² This sentence is from _Hindustan Standard._
³ Madan Mohan Malaviya died on November 12, 1946; _vide_ also “Letter to V. A. Sundaram”, 18-11-1946
⁴ Extracted from Pyarelal’s “A Venture in Faith”

24
with their lives, if necessary, the Hindu population of that village. His decision was not binding on anyone of his party, he said. Those who wanted to, were free to go away and take up any of his other constructive activities.

Those who have ill-will against the Mussalmans or Islam in their hearts or cannot curb their indignation at what has happened should stay away. They will only misrepresent me by working under this plan.

So far as he was concerned, he added, his decision was final and irrevocable and left no room for discussion. He was going to bury himself in East Bengal till the Hindus and Mussalmans learnt to live together in harmony and peace. He would deprive himself of the services of all his companions and fend for himself with whatever assistance he could command locally.1 His ahimsa would be incomplete, he argued, unless he took that step. Either ahimsa is the law of life or it is not. A friend used to say that the Ahimsa Sutra in Patanjali—Ahimsa Pratishthayam Tatsannidhau vairatyagah (अहिंसा प्रतिष्ठयाः सतानादृहृ वैरात्यागः) was a mistake and needed to be amended and the saying Ahimsa Paramodharmah (अहिंसा परामोदर्माः) ought to be read as Himsa Paramodharmah (हिम्सा परामोदर्माः); in other words, violence, not non-violence was the supreme law. If at the crucial moment he lost faith in the law of non-violence, he must accept the deceased friend’s amendment which appeared to him to be absurd. Gandhiji continued:

I know the women of Bengal better than probably the Bengalis do. Today they feel crushed and helpless. The sacrifice of myself and my companions would at least teach them the art of dying with self-respect. It might open, too, the eyes of the oppressors and melt their hearts. I do not say that the moment my eyes are closed theirs will open. But that will be the ultimate result, I have not the slightest doubt. If ahimsa disappears, Hindu Dharma disappears.

“The issue is not religious but political. It is not a movement against the Hindus, but against the Congress,” remarked one member of the party.

GANDHIJI: Do you not see that they think that the Congress is a purely Hindu body? And do not forget that I have no watertight compartments such as religious, political and other. Let us not lose ourselves in a forest of words. How to solve the tangle—violently or non-violently—is the question. In other words, has my method efficacy today?

1 Pyarelal says what follows was explained by Gandhiji in the evening. In the discussion which followed, Thakkar Bapa and Sucheta Kripalani also took part.
QUESTION: How can you reason with people who are thirsting for your blood? Only the other day one of our workers was murdered.

GANDHI: I know it. To quell the rage is our job.

Another worker asked whether it was right to invite people to return to their villages under the prevailing conditions which involved a considerable amount of risk.

Gandhiji’s reply was that there was no harm in asking them to return to their villages if the Muslims of that village collectively guaranteed their safety and their guarantee was backed by one good Hindu and one good Mussalman, who would stay with them in that village and protect them by laying down their lives, if necessary. If there was that much guarantee, the refugees ought to return to their homes and face whatever risk there might be. If they had not the courage to live on these terms, Hinduism was doomed to disappear from East Bengal. The question of East Bengal is not one of Bengal alone. The battle for India is today being decided in East Bengal. Today Mussalmans are being taught by some that Hindu religion is an abomination and therefore forcible conversion of Hindus to Islam is a merit. It would save to Islam at least the descendants of those who were forcibly converted. If retaliation is to rule the day, the Hindus, in order to win, will have to outstrip the Mussalmans in the nefarious deeds that the latter are reported to have done. The United Nations set out to fight Hitler with his weapons and ended by out-Hitlering Hitler.

QUESTION: How can we reassure the people when the miscreants are still at large in these villages?

G. That is why I have insisted upon one good Mussalman standing surety along with a good Hindu for the safety and security of those who might be returning. The former will have to be provided by the Muslim Leaguers who form the Bengal Government.

_Harijan_ 24-11-1946

28. TALK TO OFFICIALS

ATTAPARA, November 13, 1946

It was represented by the Maulvi Saheb who had spoken the previous day in the prayer meeting that the Muslims, far from wanting to drive away the Hindus, themselves felt insecure as a number of them with status and standing had been put under arrest although they were innocent and that was the real obstacle in the way of

---

1 The officials included the District Magistrate, the Superintendent of Police and some officials. There were besides a number of representatives of relief organizations, the refugees and some local Muslims.
their befriending the Hindus. Gandhiji replied that he did not see how that could stand in the way of their establishing good relations with the Hindus. On the contrary, it ought to provide an incentive for cultivating their friendship and winning their confidence so that there would be no motive left to get innocent Muslims implicated. The issue was really irrelevant to the proposition before them.

When large numbers have participated in crime, it is but natural that some innocent men will be implicated with the guilty ones. It is so all the world over. That does not mean that the guilty ones should not be proceeded against.

The remedy was for the Muslims to confer with the Hindus and produce agreed lists of those who had been really guilty. No innocent person would then suffer. To bring to book the really guilty ones was the acid test of the sincerity of the authorities and the local Muslims alike. Addressing the members of the Muslim League in the gathering, Gandhiji proceeded:

I have come here to seek your co-operation. You are a powerful party. What has happened here does not show Islam at its best or even at its worst. It is the very negation of Islam. The first question we have got to settle is whether there can be co-operation between the Hindus and Muslims. I have apprised Shaheed Shurawardy of the things that have prevented the refugees from returning to their villages. The havoc which I saw yesterday was appalling. These things cannot be whitewashed. Energetic steps have to be taken.

Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase, Vol. I, Book 2, pp. 29-30

29. LETTER TO SUDHIR GHOSH

November 14, 1946

CHI. SUDHIR. 1

I have your two notes. 2 You are just now more useful there 3 than here. But when you feel that you want to consult me on anything, of course you are free to come. I am fixed up in East Bengal for some time, perhaps months, to come.

Both your letters are good so far as they go. Of course I was wholly right in what I had said about the Viceroy.

1 This is in Devanagari.
2 In Gandhi’s Emissary, “Discussion with Amiya Chakravarty”, 4-12-1946, the addressee explains that these were his drafts of letters written to interpret Gandhiji to Stafford Cripps and Pethick-Lawrence.
3 In New Delhi
Both the major parties are demoralized each in its own way. So is the third party—the British rulers. They cannot think cogently. Military glory and love of power will not allow them to do so. We see others as we are. Hence the central teaching of the Gita: acquisition of the capacity to see things with detachment as perfect as it is humanly possible.

In my opinion for the British not to leave India till there is perfect peace in the land seems to be an impossible dream. What they can and must do is to transfer the whole power to the willing and capable party at the earliest moment, to withdraw the British part of the army and disband the rest. They should not think of keeping any part for the protection of British interests. These must be left to the goodwill of the people of India. This is the royal road to peaceful transfer and no other. This conviction has not yet gone home to the cabinet. I doubt not that you can work out all the corollaries to the above. If you flounder at any point, send me your questions through a messenger.

Love to you and Shanti.¹

BAPU

¹ Addressee’s wife
she will not feel comfortable here. The climate and water are not very good. Even the necessities may not be available, or available only with great difficulty. The roads are difficult. The distance in miles from Calcutta is not great but there is a river to cross which is as wide as a sea. So it takes time.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./24

31. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

DATTAPARA,

November 14, 1946

CHI. VALLABHBHAI,

I began with ‘Chi’. and therefore do not score it out to make ‘Bhai’. You are to me what you are. Acharya’ told me everything. I have communicated my view to Jawaharlal. Please see it. The more I think about it, the more I find myself against the Congress session at Meerut. It is best not to have a session, but if you must have one, have it in New Delhi. Since it is Kripalani’s affair, it is only right to let him take the final decision, though everyone should give his own view. His address may be printed and read if the Congress is called off. You have many problems before you. You need peace to be able to solve them. You need time as well. If a mistake is made now, it will prove to be very costly.

I cannot leave this place. If it is necessary to consult me, you should come here and ask me. That is the only way out. Truly speaking, there should be no need at all to consult me. I have said and done enough. The work here may perhaps be my last. If I survive this, it will be a new life for me. My non-violence is being tested here in a way it has never been tested before.

I hope you are all well enough to be able to work.
[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 327-8

---

1 J. B. Kripalani

2 The session was held in New Delhi on November 19 and 20 and at Meerut from November 21.
32. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING

SHAHPUR,
November 14, 1946

Gandhiji had been told that there would be a big gathering at Shahpur. But someone had spread the rumour that he would be accompanied by the Superintendent of Police, the District Magistrate and an armed guard who would utilize the occasion for making arrests, with the result that very few people were in evidence when Gandhiji arrived there.

“It is a cruel joke,” remarked Gandhiji. For so far as he was concerned, he had never wanted any police or district authorities to accompany him. But the authorities said they could not take the risk of letting him go about unprotected.

It had been brought to his notice that in several places, while the local Mussalmans professed to be anxious that peace should be re-established, they were not prepared to do anything for it or give any guarantee unless the Muslim League leaders asked them to. Gandhiji, recognizing the reasonableness of their suggestion, referred to a statement of Qaid-e-Azam Jinnah which he had read that morning. He did not like everything in that statement but there were some things in it which should commend themselves to all. In that statement Qaid-e-Azam Jinnah had said:

“If the Mussalmans lose their balance and give vent to the spirit of vengeance and retaliation and prove false to the highest codes of morality and preachings of our great religion Islam, they will not only lose their title to the claim of Pakistan but also it will start of a most vicious circle of bloodshed and cruelty which will at once put off the day of our freedom and we shall only be helping to prolong the period of slavery and bondage.”

He had further said:

“We must prove politically that we are brave, generous and trustworthy . . . that in the Pakistan areas the minorities will enjoy the fullest security of life, property and honour just as the Mussalmans themselves, nay, even greater.”

He would like them, remarked Gandhiji, to ponder over that statement, if, on examination, they found that his quotation was correct. Murder, loot, arson, abduction, forcible marriages and forcible conversions could not but prolong India’s slavery. If they kept on quarrelling among themselves, if they looked to the police and the military for protection, they would be inciting the third party to rule over them.

Harijan, 1-12-1946

1 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”. Gandhiji left Dattapara for Kazirkhil in the afternoon. En route he addressed a public meeting at Shahpur.
Gandhiji said he found indescribable peace in the natural scenery around him but he found that peace missing on the faces of the men and women. And how could they have peace after all that they had been through? He found a number of guards standing there to protect him and his party. Against whom were they to protect him? He was not used to going about with a guard. He had toured in Bengal unprotected before this. He said:

But today the authorities would not let me do so. It is a matter of sorrow and shame for me and more than me it should be a matter of shame for the Mussalmans of East Bengal.

Even the schools and temples had been destroyed, he proceeded. Shamsuddin Saheb, their Minister, did not like it. The happenings in East Bengal, he said, had hurt him deeply. The hearts of the people had to be purged of hatred. For that their help and co-operation was necessary.

This fratricide was more awful than anything in his experience. He had carried on a grim struggle for 20 years in South Africa and for the last 30 years in India. But this mutual slaughter had nonplussed him. He did not know how he could induce the two communities to live in peace and harmony again. He had come to Bengal to find out a solution for the problem. Bengal was a big province. If the communal problem could be solved here, it would be solved elsewhere also. If he succeeded here, he would go away from Bengal with a new lease of life. If not, he wished God to remove him from this earth. He did not wish to leave Bengal empty-handed. The word “pessimism” was not to be found in his dictionary.

The Muslims butchered the Hindus and did worse things than butchery in Bengal and the Hindus butchered the Muslims in Bihar. When both acted wickedly it was no use making comparisons or saying one was less wicked than the other, or who started the trouble. If they wished to take revenge they should learn the art from him. He also took revenge, but it was of a different type. He had read a Gujarati poem in his childhood which said: “If to him who gives you a glass of water, you give two, there is no merit in it. Real merit lies in doing good to him who does you evil.”

Gandhiji concluded:

That I consider noble revenge.

1 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”. At Kazirkhil, Gandhiji had been lodged in a partially destroyed house which had been cleaned up and made habitable. Prayers were held in the compound of the house.
I read a story about one of the earlier Caliphs. A man attacked the Caliph with a sword. The Caliph wrested the sword from the assailant’s hands and was going to kill him when the assailant spat on his face. The Caliph thereupon let him go free because the indignity had filled him with personal anger. This produced a great impression upon the assailant and he embraced Islam. One who is forcibly converted to Islam ceases to be a man. To recite the Kalma through fear is meaningless.

_Harijan, 1-12-1946_

34. TELEGRAM TO JAIUKHLAL GANDHI

RAMGANI, November 15, 1946

JAIUKHLAL GANDHI
CARE SCINDIA NAVIGATION COMPANY
MAHUVA
DIFFICULT FOR YOU COME HERE. WHEN IS MANU COMING MAHUVA? WRITING.
BAPU

From a microfilm: M.M.U./24

35. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

November 15, 1946

CHI. AMTUL SALAAM,
I have your letter. There is no doubt at all about my going to Dashgharia.\(^1\) Discussion is going on with the Muslim League. There is no need for you to come here. You should get absorbed in your own work. Do not worry too much. Do what your strength permits you to do and be content.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 539

\(^1\) A village, four miles from Kazirkhil, where the addressee was working. Gandhiji had posted her in Siraudi centre and she had under her charge ten villages.
Gandhiji reiterated and emphasized his previous day’s appeal. He could talk to them of nothing but sorrow and suffering these days. Wherever he went he saw awful sights of destruction. There were no tears in his eyes. He who shed tears could not wipe those of others, but his heart did weep. He had come with the hope that he could have a frank talk with the Mussalmans and that they would repent of their misdeeds and request the Hindus not to leave their homes. If the repentance was genuine, the Hindus would recognize their sincerity and regain lost confidence. But he could see that the Hindus and the Muslims of East Bengal had been embittered against one another. He would not go into the reasons thereof. But the Muslim brethren would permit him to say that so far as he knew, in East Bengal they had been the aggressors. The Hindus were mortally afraid of them. At Chaumuhani Muslims came to his meeting in larger numbers than the Hindus did. But he did not know why they were avoiding him after the first meeting at Dattapara. It hurt him. He wanted the few Mussalmans who were present at the meeting to carry his message to the rest. A Muslim sister who had been going about meeting leading Muslims in these parts had said that the Muslims told her plainly that they wanted orders from the League leaders before they could promise to befriend the Hindus or attend Gandhiji’s meetings. The exodus of the Hindus was still continuing. If the Muslims assured them that they were neighbours, friends and brothers, sons of the same soil, breathing the same air and drinking the same water, that the Hindus had nothing to fear from them, the exodus would stop and even those who had left their homes would return. Even animals were friendly to those who befriended them. But man was made in the image of God. To justify his inheritance, man had to return good for evil. Whosoever was at fault, this truth applied to both the parties. The Muslims wanted orders from the League. He could understand it. There was a League Government in the province. But that did not mean that the Government should be inimical to those outside the League.

He reiterated what he said about Qaid-e-Azam Jinnah’s message on the previous day. They should search their hearts and ask themselves if they had lived up to that message. He concluded:

So far as I know, Islam does not permit forcible conversion and atrocities on women. What good can a mere repetition of the Kalma do to one whose heart does not accept Islam? You should ask your leaders, therefore, whether you are to be friends with the Hindus or

---

1 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”. The meeting was held in the school maidan.
2 Vide “Speech at Public Meeting”, 14-11-1946 enemies and tell me. If you wish to be enemies, the Hindus should be asked to leave East Bengal. For myself, I have come to stay in East Bengal till there is reconciliation between the two.

_Harijan_, 1-12-1946

37. LETTER TO VIYOJI HARI

November 16, 1946

_Bhai Viyogi Hari,_

Yesterday I read the letter written to you by your colleagues there. I do not consider it uncivil. The answer to it is not your resignation¹. On the contrary, you should have a talk with them and satisfy them . . .² is one of them. Work under him. To come out from there would be forsaking your duty. If you find yourself in a dilemma, you may come here and thrash it out with me. Bapa has seen this. He agrees with me. Both of us are stuck here.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

[From Hindi]
_Badonke Preranadayak Kuchh Patra, p. 19_

38. LETTER TO MANORANJAN CHAUDHURI

November 16, 1946

_Bhai Manoranjan Babu³,_

Why do you fall ill so often? It is the duty of a worker to keep his body and mind healthy. Observe scrupulously the rules of good health. I hope there is no fever now.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 10576

¹ From the Udyogshala of Harijan Sevak Sangh
² Omission as in the source
³ Hindu Mahasabha leader, who had been working for the formation of a peace committee
39. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

KAZIRKHIL,
November 16, 1946

Gandhiji, addressing the meeting after Goffran Saheb, began by referring to Shamsuddin Saheb’s speech at Chaumuhani a few days ago. They had now heard Goffran Saheb. The Ministers wanted them to live together as friends. The police and the military could not protect them. God alone could protect them. They had, therefore, to look to each other for their safety. Goffran Saheb had told them that the Government did not wish the Hindus to leave East Bengal. Awful things had no doubt happened but they should let bygones be bygones. They must turn a new leaf. When one had suffered as they had, one was liable to become filled with suspicion. But that had to be overcome.

A member from the audience had requested him to allow him five minutes to reply to Goffran Saheb’s speech which he said, required correction in several places. But Gandhiji replied that he was afraid he could not allow the meeting to be turned into a public debate. Whatever was said at the meeting was said in good faith and to do His work. But if the friend in question sent him a letter, not couched offensively, he would gladly forward it to Goffran Saheb. He rebuked the audience too for not observing pindrop silence while the Muslim Members of the audience were performing namaz. Culture and good breeding required that they should observe silence when others said their prayer. There should be mutual respect. All worshipped the same God, whatever their religion. He was glad to see the Congress and the League flags flying together in the prayer ground. Both had great significance. They should realize as Qaid-e-Azam Jinnah Saheb had said that if they kept on quarrelling among themselves the country would remain a slave country and Pakistan would vanish into thin air.

He was receiving threatening letters, said Gandhiji. Some Muslims feared that he had come to suppress them. He could assure them that he had never suppressed anyone in all his life. They asked him why he had not gone to Bihar. He had declared his resolve to fast if Bihar did not stop the madness. He was in constant touch with Bihar. Pandit Jawaharlalji, Dr. Rajendra Prasad and others had assured him that his

---

1 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”
2 Abdul Goffran, Minister for Civil Supplies, Bengal Government
3 Shamsuddin Ahmed met Gandhiji on November 8, vide “Discussion with Muslim League Leaders”, 8-11-1946.
4 Hindustan Standard has “in God’s name”.
5 Vide “To Bihar”, 6-11-1946 presence there was not required. Bihar, he understood, was practically peaceful now. Tension was still there, but it was going. The Muslims were returning to their villages. The Government had taken the responsibility to build the houses of those who had been rendered homeless. He was also receiving many telegrams from Hindus asking why he did not fast against the Muslims for the happenings in Bengal. He could not do so today. If the Mussalmans realized that he was their friend, he would be entitled to fast against them also. If he was to leave East Bengal he would go only after peace ruled the breasts of the Hindus and the Muslims. He had no desire to live any longer otherwise.¹

He was in the midst of a Muslim population in Noakhali, he said. He did not like the idea of staying with Hindu friends. He would like to see if he could stay with a League Mussalman.

My requirements are very few. All I want is cleanliness, clean water, permissible food and the freedom to pray to God in my own way.

The Muslim friends will have an opportunity to examine me at close quarters and find out whether I am an enemy or a friend.

_Harijan, 8-12-1946; and Hindustan Standard, 21-11-1946_

40. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

KAZIRKHIL,
November 17, 1946

The District Magistrate had issued orders and advertized the fact, remarked Gandhiji, that forcible conversions, i.e., conversions out of fear, would not be recognized by law. He did not know if everyone of those who had been converted forcibly had been restored to Hinduism. It not, it should be done if they wanted to replace the present bitterness between the two communities by cordiality.

Some abducted girls were still missing. They should be returned without further delay. A dhobi had brought to him his boy of one year this afternoon. He had recovered the child after a month from a Muslim with police help. It was the duty of the Muslim brethren to put an end to such acts. They should make a frank confession of error in the past and promise to avoid it in future. He, who tried to hide his mistakes, could never rectify them. He himself was a votary of truth. Even when he

¹ What follows is extracted from Pyarelal’s “The ‘Do or Die’ Mission”.
² Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”. On the morning of November 17, Gandhiji had visited the village of Dashgharia, two miles from Kazirkhil, where he was met by a large number of women, who had all been forcibly converted and now reconverted to their own religion.
practised law, he told his clients to tell him the truth if they wanted him to take up their case. He would not plead for a false case. The result was that only true and bona-fide cases were brought to him. He had long ceased to practise law and had even been struck off the rolls of the Bar register\(^1\) for the offence of sedition. But he continued to follow the same principle. His advice to the Hindus and the Muslims was to get rid of all evil in themselves. Without that they would not be able to live in peace or have respect for one another.

Gandhiji observed that he had heard that because he did not allow a gentleman to reply to Goffran Saheb’s remarks there and then at the meeting, the Hindus were annoyed and had boycotted the meeting.\(^2\) He was unrepentant. He never said or did anything merely to please others. He had always taught that one should do one’s duty irrespective of the reaction it may have on others. A man who always did what he believed to be right never feared anyone.

Harijan, 8-12-1946

41. TELEGRAM TO VIYOJI HARI
November 18, 1946

BAPA I GLAD YOU WITHDREW RESIGNATION. WRITING.\(^3\)

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

42. TELEGRAM TO D. B. KALELKAR
[November 18, 1946]\(^4\)

KAKASAHEB

YOUR LETTER. WROTE YOU TWO LETTERS. \(^5\) YOU CAN COME. DISCUSS THINGS.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

---

\(^1\) Gandhiji had been disbarred on November 10, 1922, following his conviction by Ahmedabad Sessions Court on March 18, 1922.

\(^2\) Gandhiji was later assured “that they had not boycotted the meeting but as it was Sunday and the bazaar day, the women were afraid to come out as there would be many Muslims, including goondas about.” Vide also “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 19-11-1946

\(^3\) Vide “Letter to Viyogi Hari”, 18-11-1946

\(^4\) This was found among items of this date in the source.

VOL. 93: 7 NOVEMBER, 1946 - 16 FEBRUARY, 1947 37
43. SILENCE-DAY NOTE TO N. K. BOSE

November 18, 1946

I want you, if you can and will, to be with me wherever I go and stay while I am in Bengal. The idea is that I should be alone only with you as my companion and interpreter. This you should do only if you can sever your connection with the University and would care to risk death, starvation, etc. Satis Babu knows all about my design. You will know from him.

Secondly, I want to collect from Dawn, Azad, Mornin News and Star of India all the telling extracts from Qaid-e-Azam’s and other League leaders’ writings and speeches and put them in chron-ological order giving under each extract date and origin.

These things you can do simultaneously.¹

From a photostat: C. W. 1533. Courtesy: N. K. Bose

44. LETTER TO V. A. SUNDARAM

November 18, 1946

CHI. SUNDARAM.²

So Panditji is gone and yet he is not gone! How can he, of so many unrivalled services? His ailing body is delivered from torture. But he is immortal.

Now is your testing time. You have to do all you can to make his monumental work a success. I do not mean merely financially. I am trying to write an article³ which you will see, if I succeed in finishing it as I hope to.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G. N. 3197

¹ The addressee replied saying: “The university releases me for your service and as long as you are in Bengal. . . . I shall try to fulfil your conditions.”

² Secretary to Madan Mohan Malaviya. The superscription is in Tamil.

³ Vide “Malaviyaji”.
45. LETTER TO DINSHAW K. MEHTA

November 18, 1946

CHI. DINSHAW,

I got your letter of the 11th today. Do whatever you wish calmly and with deliberation. Nature-cure treatment is not only for the body but also for the mind.

Your duty at present is to stay near your mother. You can think of coming here only after she is all right. Whatever you are doing there, you are doing as a matter of duty. Moreover, there is also the work of the sanatorium, which also you must attend to. I am carrying on as usual. God is there to take care of me.

Blessings to Gulbehn, children and you from BAPU

[PS.] I have not given any address because we don’t stay at one place. It will do if you address the letters to Khadi Pratishthan, Sodepur. For the time being, I may not have to go on a total fast.

BAPU

DR. DINSHAW MEHTA
POONA

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

46. LETTER TO GOVIND MALAVIYA

KAZIRKHIL, November 18, 1946

CHI. GOVIND,

Father is gone, yet not quite gone. He is in our midst in the manifold services he rendered. So his having passed away only means that he has been freed from physical suffering, which I regard as a relief. Now it is your duty, and your brothers’ and ours as well, to make a success of his great work as best as we can. I am writing an article in this connection; see it when it is published.

Blessings from BAPU

SHRI GOVIND MALAVIYA

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
47. LETTER TO VIYOGI HARI

KAZIRKHIL,

November 18, 1946

Bhai Viyogi Hari,

I have your wire. I have sent a wire saying that we are both glad. You must have received my other letter as well. Now have an amicable discussion with colleagues and mend matters where necessary.

You deserve to be President of the Sammelan. Render whatever service you can. My blessings you have but I wish to say nothing about the Sammelan. So my name must not be brought in on any account.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

48. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

KAZIRKHIL,

November 18, 1946

What can I tell you on my silence day? The more I go about in these parts, the more I find that your worst enemy is fear. It eats into the vitals of the terror-stricken as well as the terrorist. The latter fears something in his victim. It may be his different religion or his riches that he fears. The second kind of fear is otherwise known as greed [or love of material possession]. If you search [deeply] enough, you will find that greed is a variety of fear. But there has never been, and will never be, a man who is able to intimidate one who has cast out fear from his heart. Why can no one intimidate the fearless? You will find

---

2 ibid
3 Hindi Sahitya Sammelan in Karachi
4 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”. It being a silence day, the speech was read out. The first and the last sentences are reproduced from Hindustan Standard, 22-11-1946, which also reported that “the prayer meeting was held in the camp compound.”
5 From Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase that God is always by the side of the fearless. Therefore, we should fear Him alone and seek His protection. All other fear will then disappear by itself. Till fearlessness is cultivated by the people there will never be any peace in these parts for the Hindus or for the Mussalmans. Hence in order to establish any real peace, I have suggested that each affected village must have one good Hindu and one good Mussalman to accompany the returning refugees.

_Harijan, 8-12-1946; and Hindustan Standard, 22-11-1946_

49. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

_MADHUPUR,
November 19, 1946_

Gandhiji observed that a friend\(^1\) had told him that the explanation\(^2\) was a make-believe. If they had boycotted the meeting, he did no mind it. They owed him no apology on that account. And if they had stayed away out of fear, certainly no apology was due to him. But it was a shame for them to be so afraid. Were the men also such cowards that they had stayed away out of fear? Were the Muslims going to eat them up? If they were such cowards, they were not worthy of living in this country. The sister who had gone to him in the morning to request him to hold a women’s meeting at Madhupur had put before him three questions. The first question was that in spite of all their efforts they were unable to rescue some of the abducted women. He had told her that she should write to him about it and he would forward the letter to Shaheed Suhrawardy. He could even write to the Prime Minister directly. It was a matter which brooked no delay. Secondly she said there were some women in the villages who wanted to come away but wanted a military escort. He never could be a party to that. He had told the Prime Minister that he for one was not enamoured of the police and the military and that he could withdraw it at any time. The Hindus and the Muslims should be free to break each other’s heads if they wanted to. He would put up with that. But if they continued to look to the police and the military for help, they would remain slaves for ever. Those who preferred security to freedom had no right to live. He wanted the women to become brave. To change one’s religion under threat of force was no conversion but rather cowardice. A cowardly man or woman was a dead weight on any religion. Out of fear they might become Muslims today, Christians tomorrow and pass into a third religion the day after. That was not

---

\(^{1}\) Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Weekly Letter”

\(^{2}\) According to Hindustan Standard, this was Uma Guha.

\(^{3}\) Vide footnote 3, “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 17-11-1946
worthy of human beings. It was up to the men workers to tell the women that they would be their escort and would protect them with their lives. If still the women were afraid to come away, there was no help for them. He had come to proclaim from the housetops that the women had to become brave or else die. They should make use of the calamity that had befallen them to cast out the demon of fear. Lastly the sister had asked as to how they could advise the refugees to go back to their homes. He would not ask them to go back under police or military protection. They had run away out of the fear of the Muslims. Therefore, it was the Muslims who had to come forward and reassure them that they would regard them as their own mothers, daughters and sisters and protect them with their lives. Everybody must be entitled to retain his or her own religion without interference. All worshipped the same God although under different names. “If I see my God in this tree and worship it, why should the Muslims object?”

It was wrong for anyone to say that his God was superior to another’s. God was one and the same for all. Hence, his formula was that from every village one good Hindu and one good Muslim should stand surety for the peace of the village. Then and then alone would he ask the refugees to return. The Ministers had liked his suggestion.

_Harijan_, 8-12-1946

50. INTERVIEW TO “THE HINDU”

KAZIRKHIL,

[November 19, 1946]

QUESTION: Will the new experiment, which you propose to inaugurate tomorrow, of going and living singly in affected villages, infuse courage into the hearts of refugees and succeed in persuading them to return to their villages? What is the significance underlying this experiment?

GANDHIJI: This question would not arise if you knew that I was going to a village for my own sake, that is, to test my ahimsa. I am not going singly; there will be Nirmal Kumar Bose as my Bengali interpreter and my stenographer Parasuram from the South. If I have the requisite courage and capacity to undergo a comparatively hard life and to encourage inner ahimsa, I should expect to affect both Hindus and Muslims in the right manner.

You should also know that all members of my original party will similarly distribute themselves, taking with them a local Bengali

---

1 The report said that Gandhiji’s interview to “a special correspondent” was on “the eve of his departure for Srirampur”. He left for Srirampur on November 20.

2 _ibid_
worker. The choice of village will rest with Satis Chandra Das Gupta.

Asked whether Bengal Government would not feel that his action was aimed at bringing ridicule on them, Gandhiji replied:

I think not, only because I have not the remotest idea of bringing ridicule on them, assuming of course that Bengal Government have meant every word of what they have said. Indeed, I am in search of a League Muslim who will harbour me in his house as a member of his family.

Q. Are you not taking a serious liberty with your life at this stage by proposing to live in a village which is perhaps not free from goondas?

G. I recognize no one as a goonda—or all are goondas, some more, some less. I have the conviction that so long as God wants my service in the present body, He will keep it from all harm.

_Hindustan Standard, 22-11-1946_

51. A TALK

[On or before November 20, 1946]¹

When I was in detention in the Aga Khan Palace, I once sat down to write a thesis on India as a protagonist of non-violence. But as I proceeded with my writing, I could not go on. I had to stop. There are two aspects of Hinduism. There is, on the one hand, the historical Hinduism with its untouchability, superstitious worship of stocks and stones, animal sacrifice and so on. On the other, we have the Hinduism of the _Gita_, the _Upanishads_ and Patanjali’s _Yoga Sutra_ which is the acme of ahimsa and oneness of all creation, pure worship of one immanent, formless imperishable God. Ahimsa which to me is the chief glory of Hinduism has been sought to be explained away by our people as being meant for sannyasis only. I do not share that view. I have held that it is the way of life and India has to show it to the world. Where do I stand? Do I represent this ahimsa in my person? If I do, then deceit and hatred that poison the atmosphere should dissolve. It is only by going into isolation from my companions, those on whose help I have relied all along, and standing on my own feet that I shall find my bearings and also test my faith in God.

_Harijan, 8-12-1946_

¹ Extracted from Pyarelal’s “The ‘Do or Die’ Mission”

² From the reference to decision of “going into isolation from my companions”. Gandhiji reached Srirampur on November 20; vide the preceding item.
52. LETTER TO N. G. RANGA

November 20, 1946

MY DEAR RANGA,

This is one of the many letters about you. If there is any truth in it, you tell me. Why such complaints? My movements are fleeting. Hence the address is Khadi Pratishthan, Sodepur, Bengal.

Blessings from

BAPU

PROF. N. G. RANGA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

53. LETTER TO SHAH NAWAZ

November 20, 1946

DEAR SHAH NAWAZ,

I dare not write to you in Urdu during the short time at my disposal. I sent you a wire yesterday in reply to yours. Things here are so complex that they defy me. I do not know what use I can make of you at this juncture. I am breaking up even the party I have brought with me. I am distributing them singly in villages. There appears to me to be an atmosphere of falsity. Therefore I can only say: do the best you can wherever you are. I shall tell you further if I see more light.

BAPU

CAPT. SHAH NAWAZ

CONGRESS CAMP

MEERUT

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 President, All-India Kisan Sabha; President, Andhra Provincial Congress Committee; Member, Congress Parliamentary Party; Founder-President, Swatantra Party

2 The enclosure is not traceable.

3 This word is in Devanagari.
54. LETTER TO SATINDRANATH SEN

November 20, 1946

DEAR SATIS,

Amrit Babu has given me your letter.

A most complex position faces Bengal. I am not sure what is the exact thing to do. I am hoping that light will pierce through this darkness. I can therefore give you no guidance at present. Wait, watch and pray.

BAPU

SHRI SATINDRANATH SEN

BARISAL

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

55. LETTER TO VIJAYA

November 20, 1946

CHI. VIJAYA,

You have been married for quite some time but I am able to write to you only today. I intended and wished to write to you earlier. I trust your married life is happy and the capacity of both of you to render service has further increased as both of you are inclined to serve. You will have recovered. I hope the climate of Sevagram is suiting Apteji.

Sushila must be writing to you about the conditions prevailing here.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 3161

---

1 A Congress leader
2 This is in Devanagari.
56. LETTER TO RAIHANA TYABJI AND SAROJ
NANAVATI

KAZIRKHIL,
Wednesday, November 20, 1946

DEAR DAUGHTERS RAIHANA AND SAROJ,

I had two letters from you. Yesterday I started taking milk and shall take whatever diet agrees with me. Rajendra Babu says that the Bihar affair is settled now.¹ Let us see what God now prompts us to do. My proposal to fast was absolutely right but there is no time to argue about it. I shall argue it out if we meet some day, and I hope that you will agree that my action was right, or you will point out my error. I shall be satisfied either way.

It will not be right to invite you two here. The weather here is also not good.

Blessings from
BAPU

RAIHANA TYABJI
WARDHA

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

57. LETTER TO MALATI CHOWDHURI

November 20, 1946

CHI. MALATIBEHN².

Bapa has shown me your letter. Send me the judgment. But now that Mahtab Babu¹ is the Premier, why can’t he do something? Since there is a popular ministry, a man like me is redundant.

It will not be right for you or anyone else to come here at present. There is darkness all around which will not be dispelled but

¹ Vide “Statement to the Press”, 20-11-1946
² President of the Utkal Provincial Congress Committee; subsequently nominated as a member of the Constituent Assembly
³ Harekrushna Mahtab

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
only deepen with the arrival of outsiders. The best thing is to remain where you are and do your duty.

BAPU

SMT. MALATI CHOWDHURI

CUTTACK

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

58. STATEMENT TO THE PRESS

November 20, 1946

I find myself in the midst of exaggeration and falsity. I am unable to discover the truth. There is terrible mutual distrust. Oldest friendships have snapped. Truth and ahimsa by which I swear, and which have, to my knowledge, sustained me for sixty years, seem to fail to show the attributes I have ascribed to them.

To test them, or better, to test myself, I am going to a village called Srirampur, cutting myself away from those who have been with me all these years, and who have made life easy for me. I am taking Prof. Nirmal Kumar Bose as my Bengali teacher and interpreter and Shri Parasuram, who has been my most devoted, selfless and silent stenographer.

The other workers, whom I have brought with me, will each distribute themselves in other villages of Noakhali to do the work of peace, if it is at all possible, between the two communities. They are, unfortunately, all non-Bengalis except little Abha1. They will, therefore, be accompanied by one Bengali worker each as teacher and interpreter, even like Prof. N. K. Bose will be to me.

Distribution work and selection work will be done by Shri Satis Chandra Das Gupta of the Khadi Pratishthan. My ideal is to live in a local Muslim League family, but I see that I must not wait for that happy day. I must meanwhile establish such contacts with the Muslims as I can in their own villages. My suggestion to the League Ministers is that they should give me one honest and brave Muslim to accompany one equally honest and brave Hindu for each affected village. They should guarantee, at the cost of their lives if need be, the safety of the returning Hindu refugees. I am sorry to have to confess that without some such thing it seems to me difficult to induce them to return to their villages.

1 Abha Gandhi, wife of Kanu Gandhi

From all accounts received by me, life is not as yet smooth and safe for the minority community in the villages. They, therefore, prefer to live as exiles from their own homes, crops, plantations and surroundings, and live on inadequate and ill-balanced doles.

Many friends from outside Bengal have written to me to allow them to come for peace work but I have strongly dissuaded them from coming. I would love to let them come if and when I see light through this impenetrable darkness.

In the meantime, both Pyarelal and I have decided to suspend all other activities in the shape of correspondence, including the heavy work of the Harijan and the allied weeklies. I have asked Shri Kishorelal, Shri Kakasaheb, Shri Vinoba and Shri Narahari Parikh to edit the weeklies jointly and severally. Pyarelal and I may, if our work permits, send stra contributions from our respective villages. Correspondence will be attended to from Sevagram.

How long this suspense will last is more than I can say. This much, however, I can. I do not propose to leave East Bengal till I am satisfied that mutual trust has been established between the two communities and the two have resumed the even tenor of their life in their villages. Without this there is neither Pakistan nor Hindustan—only slavery awaits India, torn asunder by mutual strife and engrossed in barbarity.

No one need at present be disturbed about my low diet. On receipt of the following wire from Dr. Rajendra Prasad: “Letter received. Have already wired quiet. There have been no incidents for a week now. Situation satisfactory. Most earnestly desire resumption of normal diet. Myself going Delhi 19th”, I resumed goat’s milk from yesterday and propose to revert to normal diet as early as the system permits. The future is in God’s keeping.

_Harijan, 1-12-1946_
59. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

Srirampur, November 20, 1946

Speaking after the prayer at Srirampur to an audience of about a thousand persons, Gandhiji said that he had never imagined he would be able to come and settle down in a devastated village in Noakhali so soon. This had become possible through Satish Babu’s efforts. He had come here alone, with two companions only. One was to act as his interpreter and teach him Bengali, while the other, Shri Parasuram, who was from Malabar, had been brought along because he knew no Bengali and little Hindustani and so could not be set up in a village alone. For all practical purposes he had thus come here alone. His companions had been left behind at Kazirkhil, and each of them was likewise to choose one village for himself. His idea was that every Hindu worker thus sent should be accompanied by a single Mussalman worker, and both of them together should mix with the local people and gradually create an atmosphere in which the refugees would shed their fear and be able to come back and live in peace and friendship once more. For a Mussalman worker he depended on Shaheed Saheb and Shamsuddin Saheb. But he could not afford to wait until such a worker was available. He had, therefore, come here as soon as he found the opportunity. It was good that some Mussalmans were present in the meeting and two local Mussalman friends had already invited him to visit their homes. They had assured him that they also wanted the Hindus back in the village, but the Hindus were not yet in the proper frame of mind to do so.

Fear is a thing which he disliked. Why should one man be afraid of another man? Man should stand in fear of God alone, and then he can shed all other fears. Pyarelal had come to the meeting a short while ago. On his way, he had met about 150 refugees who were going away from the village with their belongings. On enquiry the refugees had told him that they were afraid that when the military and police left there would be fresh trouble. Whilst the roads were safe, therefore, they took the opportunity of moving away to some place of safety. But the man who is possessed by fear will not find safety anywhere. What help can the military or the police give to such a man? To depend on military and police aid is to add to one’s helplessness. He would therefore like these refugees to develop personal courage so that they would consider it beneath their dignity to fly from fancied danger merely for fear of losing their lives. Therefore, the better course for intending refugees would be to derive personal courage from men like him who went to the affected villages, assuming of course that these had the requisite courage.

But whether he could personally infuse such courage in another man or not he

---

1 Extracted from “Srirampur Diary”, which was “prepared from Press messages in newspapers . . . to make handy for the reader Gandhiji’s utterances . . .”
did not know. So long he had lived amidst a number of companions. But now he had begun to say to himself, “Now is the time. If you want to know yourself, go forth alone.” It was therefore that he had come practically alone like this to the present village. With unquenchable faith in God he proposed to persevere so as to succeed in disarming all opposition and inspiring confidence.

He would live here amidst the Muslim villagers, form intimate acquaintance with each family, know their mind, and help them also to know his mind. When they thus knew one another intimately, then would perhaps come the time when the atmosphere would change and sweetness prevail in the relations between Hindus and Mussalmans, where sourness was prevailing today.

Harijan, 5-1-1947

60. INTERVIEW TO “THE HINDU”

SIRAMPUR,

November 20, 1946

When I asked him whether he did not feel he was living alone as in jail,
Gandhiji said:

Yes, but with this difference. In jail I had willy-nilly to live alone. Here I have deliberately imposed it on myself. There are now two with me and they are too many. While Nirmal Babu will be my interpreter, Parasuram will help me in other ways. I want to reduce my correspondence to the minimum and I may write for the Harijan if I feel the urge.

When asked whether he was not putting too great a physical strain on himself,
he said:

People have been pampering me too much. I would not have felt free until I was severely alone... .

Asked how long he proposed to stay in the village, he said that it all depended on how things shaped in the coming days.

Explaining his programme of activity in the village, Gandhiji said that he had already seen local Muslims and explained the object of his visit. He proposed to go every morning to the houses of local Muslims and talk to them in order to ascertain their real views on the present situation. He would invite them to attend his prayer meetings and would influence them in every way so as to bring about friendly relations between the two communities.

The Hindu, 24-4-1946

---

1 The correspondent reported that he saw Gandhiji in the “evening in his new abode in Sirampur, sitting calmly in a half-burnt house amidst ruins”.

50 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
61. A WARNING

[On or after November 20, 1946]

In the army, a soldier who does not take care of his feet, for instance, and allows corns to form makes himself liable to be cashiered; much more is expected of a soldier of non-violence.

Harijan, 12-1-1947

62. NOTE TO PYARELAL

[On or after November 20, 1946]

You are not to proceed to your village. Those who go to village have to go there with the determination to do or die. If they fall ill, they must get well or die there. Then alone would their going have any meaning. In practice, this means that in case of illness, they must be content to do with home remedies or the therapy of nature’s elements. Sushila’s medical services are not supposed to be available to the members of our party. Her services are all premortgaged to the village folk of East Bengal. She has her work cut out in her village...

It won’t do to live in the villages like a jinn. We must learn to live and move with the proverbial cautiousness and wisdom of a she-elephant. Then alone shall we have the fitness to live there. To live in the villages of Bengal calls for a special knack. We have all to cultivate it. You and I have to pass that test.

Come to me when you are well and I shall further explain the meaning of ‘Do or Die’.

---

1 Extracted from Pyarelal’s article “Initiated”. Gandhiji gave the warning “when he sent out the members of his party separately on their ‘Do or Die’ assignment” on November 20.

2 ibid

3 Pyarelal explains that he had had an attack of malaria even before he had set out for his village and a worker had written to Gandhiji to send Sushila Nayyar to look after him. The following day he received the note in Gandhiji’s own hand. Gandhiji had disbanded his camp on November 20, 1946. Vide also the preceding item.

4 Omission as in the source. Dr. Sushila Nayyar had set up a free dispensary for the poor at Changirgaon.
63. LETTER TO SEVAGRAM ASHRAM INMATES

[On or after November 20, 1946]

I am afraid you must give up all hope of my returning early or returning at all to the Ashram. The same applies to my companions. It is a Herculean task that faces me. I am being tested. Is the satyagraha of my conception a weapon of the weak or really that of the strong? I must either realize the latter or lay down my life in the attempt to attain it. That is my quest. In pursuit of it I have come to bury myself in this devastated village. His will be done.

_Harijan_, 8-12-1946

64. NOTE TO V. V. DASTANE

[On or after November 20, 1946]

I have understood the aforesaid and it expresses my own opinion.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

65. LETTER TO DEVPRAKASH NAYYAR

_November 21, 1946_

CHI. DEV,

I read your letter to Pyarelal. Your dharma is clear. If you are not able to make yourself understood through talk, you should put down in writing what you want to say. Loyalty demands that you should frankly tell both of them what you feel and then dissociate

---

1 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “The ‘Do or Die’ Mission”
2 From the reference to Gandhiji’s decision “to bury myself in this devastated village”; _vide_ also the preceding two items.
3 According to the source, this was Gandhiji’s postscript to Pyarelal’s letter to the addressee which read: “Your institution being an authorized one, all the rules of the Charkha Sangh should apply to it and, therefore, the Charkha Sangh alone is entitled to the profits accruing therefrom.”
4 In the source, the letter has been placed between the items of November 20 and 24.
yourself from the Sangh. 1 Run an independent school on the same lines. This of course is for the future. If you give your consent I am prepared to write to the couple 2.

What he says about Balvantsinha and Chimanlal is totally incorrect. I don’t know how this misunderstanding arose.

I hope you are well.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Hindi. Courtesy: National Archives of India

66. EXTRACT FROM DIARY 3

SRIRAMPUR,
November 21, 1946

Conducted the morning prayer myself with the exception of the Gita chapters. After prayer, wrote letters to X, Y and Z. A Maulvi attached to the Howrah mosque (Noakhali) had a talk with me during the morning walk. A and B (two Hindu workers) came afterwards and had a long talk. 4 Told them that people ought to take their courage in both hands and return to their villages, especially where there is a good Hindu with a good Muslim to give guarantee of safety and protection.

Massaged the body with my own hands but had to forgo a shave (for lack of time). Had curdled milk with vegetable soup for midday meal. Some Muslims . . . saw me before the evening prayer; some more followed after the prayer. Made inquiries about local Muslims . . . . Had a two hours’ talk with M. and his friends. Diet the same as yesterday but without grape-fruit.

---

1 The Talimi Sangh. The addressee was a probationer in Nayee Talim.
2 E. W. Aryanayakam and Ashadevi
3 Omissions here and in other extracts from Diary are as in the source.
4 For a talk with the Hindu worker, vide “Talk With Hindu Workers”, 21-11-1945
67. TALK WITH NALINI MITRA AND RASHAMOY SUR

SIRAMPUR,
November 22, 1946

Gandhiji told them that if Noakhali set any precedent in the transfer of population to other districts in Bengal, other provinces might follow it, and such a policy would be suicidal for the whole country. He could never approve of such a scheme. He would not advise the people to leave their homes and go away somewhere else. The Bengalees were always in the forefront of civilized life in bravery and sacrifice and it was really shocking to find that people would run away in fear giving up their hearths and homes. He wanted to see every Hindu family settle down in its own village and face the situation fearlessly and with courage.

Concluding, Gandhiji told them that the present problem was not the question of Noakhali alone; it was a problem for the whole of Bengal and the whole of India.

Hindustan Standard, 24-11-1946

68. SPEECH AT MEETING OF REPRESENTATIVES OF HINDUS AND MUSLIMS

RAMGUNJ,
November 22, 1946

Consenting to the formation of the Committees, Mahatma Gandhi said that

1 The U. P. I. report said: “On behalf of Noakhali Central Relief, Rescue and Rehabilitation Committee, they met Gandhiji during his morning walk to place before him concrete suggestions about the temporary removal of refugees to West Bengal or outside for rehabilitation on a planned scheme.”

2 In Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase, Pyarelal says: “A conference of about 30 representatives of both the communities and Government spokesmen was held at Ramgunj Dak Bungalow on the evening of November 22, when a plan for the establishment of peace, based on the Bengal Government’s proposals, was finally hammered out, and a nucleus of the Peace Committee for Ramgunj police station was formed. The formula adopted was that there should be Peace Committees, with equal number of Hindus and Muslims, for the village, the village union, and the police station. The Muslims would be selected by the Hindus and an official would be the chairman. The Government would undertake to implement the recommendations of the Peace Committees. . . . The functions of the Peace Committees were defined to be (a) to do intensive propaganda work to restore confidence, (b) to help in constructing shelters for the returning refugees, and in procuring and distributing relief, e.g., food, clothing, etc., (c) to draw up lists of culprits and disturbers of peace, who should be rounded up, and (d) to prepare a list of houses destroyed or damaged during the disturbances.”
the Committees’ decisions should be accepted by the Government if they called themselves a people’s government. He again stressed the need for one honest Muslim and one honest Hindu to stand as sureties for the protection of the villagers and these two men must be prepared to die if necessary. Even if they died the result would be good, he added.¹

_Hindustan Standard, 25-11-1946_

69. EXTRACT FROM DIARY

SRIRAMPUR,
November 22, 1946

Rose at 4 a. m. The _Gita_ recitation took two hours. Pronunciation of the reciter was very unsatisfactory.

Wrote to R. that his son (who recently lost his wife) should not remarry, or marry a widow if he must.

Visited a Muslim _badi_ at 7.30 a. m. The way was long. It took full 20 minutes to get there—55 minutes coming and going.

Gave myself massage like yesterday. . . . At 10.30 a number of visitors came. After they had gone, had a short nap with mud-pack on the abdomen. Span for one hour. Abdullah (the Superintendent of Police) with some others came for the meeting at Ramgunj in the evening. Started at 4 p. m. with them for Ramgunj. Reached Ramgunj at 5.20 p. m. The meeting continued till 10.30 p. m. Addressed a few words at the end. . . . Had evening prayer on the boat on the return journey and then some sleep. Had milk while proceeding to Ramgunj; hot water on return. Reached Srirampur at midnight.

70. MALAVIYAJI

There is a saying in English, “The King is dead, Long Live the King”. The same may be said with reference to Malaviyaji. Malaviyaji was born for India and lives in the works he did for India. They were many. They were great works. The most magnificent among them is the Hindu Vishva Vidyalaya. We erroneously call it the Benares Hindu University. For this, not Malaviyaji but his followers are to blame.

¹ The report said that after three hours’ discussion, the representatives agreed to form and join peace committees.

² Homestead or a cluster of homesteads

³ A translation of this also appeared in _Harijan_, 8-12-1946.
Malaviyaji was a servant of his servants. He let his followers do as they liked. I know he was full of such magnanimity. He had it to the point of a fault. But the saying ‘no blame attaches to the mighty’ applies equally to Malaviyaji. He cherished the name Hindu Vishva Vidyalaya. The correction is even now due. Every stone of this University should reflect Hindu dharma. Not a single building should symbolize the materialism of the West, rather, it should stand for spirituality. The same should go for the teachers and scholars. Is that so today? Can it be said that every scholar of the University is a living embodiment of pure religion? If not, why not? The University will be judged not by the number of its scholars but by the degree to which they exemplify Hindu dharma, however small their number.

I know the task is an arduous one. But this is of essence for the University. If this be not so, the University is nothing. The duty, therefore, of Malaviyaji’s sons and followers is clear. What place does Hinduism occupy in the world today? What are its blemishes? How can they be removed? It is for the devotees of Malaviyaji to answer these questions. Malaviyaji has left us his bequest. To make it lasting and to develop it would be the right memorial for him.

Malaviyaji collected a great deal of money for the University, but a great deal still remains to be collected. Everyone can make his contribution to this work.

So much for his outward activity. His inner life was of the purest. He was an ocean of kindness. His knowledge of the Shastras was immense. Bhagavata was his most favourite book. He was a competent preacher. His memory was prodigious. His life was clean and simple.

I leave out his politics and his other manifold activities. He whose life was dedicated to selfless service and who was endowed with so many gifts, could not be confined in his activities. I have wanted to draw attention only to the most abiding of his works. Those who wish to make of the University an institution full of purity, would better study, ponder and follow the ideals of Malaviyaji.

Srirampur, November 23, 1946

Harijan Sevak, 8-12-1946
71. STATEMENT TO THE PRESS

Srirampur,
[November 23, 1946]¹

Beyond feeling still weak² and having skin eruptions I am feeling no ill effects of the recent reduction in diet. This is the fourth day since I resumed taking milk. Dr. Sushila Nayyar thinks that normal diet will remove skin eruptions which, she thinks, are due to lowered vitality, and restoration of normal strength is a matter of days now if I take care of myself otherwise.

Like the rest of my companions she has gone to a village near by. I may add that my work has not suffered and I hope it will not have to suffer for my physical weakness.

Hindustan Standard, 26-11-1946

72. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

Chanhipur,
November 23, 1946

Gandhiji said his advice to them was that all must help in the work of the Peace Committee³ that had been formed and strengthen its hands. By staying out of the Committee and carrying on Press propaganda they would not be helping the cause. He wanted to tell them his own experience in Champaran. As a result of the struggle there, a Commission of Enquiry was appointed. He was requested to become a member of the Commission unconditionally. He consulted his friends and accepted the offer. The result was that the indigo monopoly ended. It was probably a century-old wrong. Seven times the labourers had rebelled before. Each time the rebellion was put down ruthlessly, so that their condition was worse than before.

Similarly, let everyone join the Peace Committee and air his views before it. Probably there would be redress of every legitimate grievance.

They had heard the speeches of Minister Shamsuddin Saheb, Parliamentary Secretary Hamiduddin Saheb and others. They had requested the refugees to return to ¹ According to the report, Gandhiji made the statement “prior to departure to Chandipur” on this date.

² A report said that Gandhiji had had an attack of diarrhoea and vomiting while going by boat to Chandipur.
³ Vide “Extract from Diary”, 22-11-1946. For a more detailed report of Gandhiji’s views on the subject, Vide “Talk with Hindu Workers”, 21-11-1946 their villages and had assured them that they would guarantee their safety and honour. They should accept their assurance.

They might say all this was mere talk. They had been deceived before. It was beneath one’s dignity to distrust a man’s word without sufficient ground. If all Muslims were liars, Islam could not be a true religion. But his knowledge of history contradicted such a theory. A false thing could not last long in this world.

Islam spread amongst crores of people all over the world. It spread mostly because of its own intrinsic merits. Here were elected Muslims who were running the Government of the Province who gave them their word of honour. His advice to Hindus was to believe their word and give them a trial. This did not mean that there would not be a single bad Mussalman left in East Bengal. There were good and bad men amongst all communities. Dishonourable conduct would break any ministry or organization in the end. Shamsuddin Saheb had told them plainly that Pakistan could not be achieved by cruel deeds. It was clear to him as daylight that if they kept quarrelling amongst themselves, a third power was bound to rule over them. Whether it was British or Allied Powers, it made no difference. They would remain slaves.

There was a time when Hindus and Muslims had been united. There was the pact of unity between the League and the Congress in 1916. Whether it was good or bad was not the question. He was a newcomer in India at that time and hardly knew anybody or affairs in this country. Then came the Khilafat Movement and there was a communal unity that had never been seen before that. Today Hindus were frightened when they heard the cries of “Allah-o-Akbar”. In those days, these were the slogans repeated at all meetings: “Vande mataram”, “Allah-o-Akbar” and “Sat Sri Akal”. Hindus, Muslims and Sikhs in their thousands shouted these slogans with one voice. They were the same people today. Those who were youngsters in those days were grown-up men today. Why could not they live together as friends now? Gandhiji was not prepared to admit that bitterness had gone so deep that it could not be overcome.

The Peace Committee could not function without their help. If they wanted real peace there was no other way except to have mutual trust and confidence. Bihar, they said, had avenged Noakhali. Supposing Muslims in East Bengal or Muslims all over India made up their minds to avenge Bihar, where would India be?

Gandhiji said that where houses had been burnt and destroyed, Government was, he understood, raising new ones. If there were any difficulties or they were harassed in any way after they returned to their villages, they should place their complaints before the Peace Committee.

The speaker referred to a letter that had been handed to him during the meeting. It was said that in Chandipur the damage amounted to a crore of rupees and it should be compensated. He did not know whether it was a crore or a lakh. But the Government was bound to do what it could in such matters.

Then it was said in the letter that the Chief Minister’s speeches breathed fire. God alone knew the hearts of men. He could not say whether Suhrawardy Saheb was a good man or a bad one. But he knew that he was elected by the voters. Hindus and Muslims had to live under his Government just as those in Bihar had to live under the rule of the Congress Government. If people did not like a particular Government the electorate could change it. But it was not in his power to do so.

The letter further said that the Superintendent of Police was a bad man and should be sent away from Noakhali. Again, he did not know whether the Police Superintendent was a good man or bad. But he had the confidence of his chief. Gandhiji himself had come into contact with him fairly frequently during the last few days and he felt that the Superintendent would deny those charges if they were false, and express regret for his mistake if they were true. But he wanted to tell them this. If he was bad, it was so because the people of Noakhali were bad. There were very few men who remained good in the midst of bad people. All those in the Congress were not angels.

Then there was a request that the military must stay on. According to the present constitution, the military had to act under the orders of the Ministers. That was democracy. When the Ministers themselves were offering to become their soldiers, why should they ask for the military? After all, if the worst came to the worst they could only lose their lives. They must do so as brave men and women. By running away from East Bengal they would become the worst cowards. He could never wish that for anybody.

If all Hindus were bad, Hinduism must be bad. If all Muslims were bad, Islam must be bad. But neither Hinduism nor Islam was bad. Christ had said that he alone was His disciple who did His work, not he who merely called him ‘Lord, Lord’. That applied to all religions.

If Shamsuddin Saheb and his companions did not mean what they said they would know. Gandhiji for one did not wish to be a living witness of such a tragedy.

_The Hindu_, 28-11-1946

73. _EXTRACT FROM DIARY_

_SIRAMPUR_,

_November 23, 1946_

Recited the _Gita_ chapters (during morning prayer) also myself. In future Pyarelal is to recite the _Gita_ only when he has sufficiently mastered the pronunciation. Had an English hymn sung at the prayer.
Completed the statement on the death of Malaviyaji. Visited a Muslim house at 7.30 a.m. Talked about the Koran to the inmates. Later they sent a present of coconuts and oranges.

Massage was given by N. so that I was able to have a 40 minutes’ nap on the massage table. Leafy vegetable served at midday was very bitter. Took it with 1 oz. of coconut milk. . . . Next unsuccessfully tried to have a little sleep — nausea and gripe. Gave myself enema. . . . Dozed off with mud-pack on the abdomen while proceeding to Ramgunj. . . . Had to stop the boat on account of violent diarrhoea and vomiting. . . . Felt relieved. . . . Reached Ramgunj2 at 5 p.m. Had another motion during the recess but was able to address the meeting at the end without difficulty. Started on the return journey at 8.15 p.m. . . . Reached Srirampur at 11 p.m. . . . Completed the daily quota of spinning, partly on the boat while proceeding to the meeting and the balance at the meeting itself.

74. A TELEGRAM

[On or after November 23, 1946]

DO PERFORM MARRIAGE CEREMONY BOMBAY. WISH WELL.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

75. FOREWORD TO “SATYAGRAHA WA SWARAJYA”

Appasaheb Patwardhan4 is one of my few co-workers who have thought over my views in an independent way. I have known him for the last several years. His thought is reflected in his behaviour. That is why his articles have a great impact. I have gone through this book, but not thoroughly. I do not have the time. I have very little knowledge of the Marathi language. I can’t speak it but I do

1 Vide “Malaviyaji”, 8-12-1946
2 According to other available sources, Gandhiji did not go to Ramgunj on the 23rd November.
3 The draft of the wire is scribbled on the reverse side of a telegram received on November 23, 1946.
4 Sitaram Purushottam Patwardhan understand the substance of the articles. Hence I cannot assert that whatever is written in this book conforms to my thinking. But I can certainly say that there is great similarity between my views and those stated in this book. Appasaheb needs no certificate from me. The source of his ideas may be my views, but their final form is entirely his own. That only adds to the value of the book. The readers, too, will find much material to ponder over and will be able to form their ideas independently.

M. K. GANDHI

SRIRAMPUR, EAST BENGAL, November 24, 1946

[From Hindi]

_Satyagraha aur Swarajya_

76. LETTER TO D. B. KALELKAR

November 24, 1946

CHI. KAKA,

Here is my Foreword¹. I could manage it in time. You will get it in time.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10983

77. TELEGRAM TO D. B. KALELKAR

November [24]², 1946

KAKASAHEB, KAKAWADI

WARDHA

FOREWORD APPA’S BOOK POSTED.

BAPU

From a photostat: G. N. 10984

¹_Vide_ the preceding item.

²_ ibid_
78. NOTE TO N. K. BOSE

November 24, 1946

CHI. NIRMAL,

Put this in an envelope and give it to Shailen’. When his man goes to Chandipur he should post it from there. Ask him if he would do so. Herewith a telegram; write it down and give it to Shailen. Tell him to send it. Give him the charges for the telegram. Send a telegram to Bihar also.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 10514

79. DISCUSSION WITH S. C. BOSE AND OTHERS?

SRIRAMPUR,

[November 24, 1946]

Gandhiji agreed that the leaders had sunk to the lowest level, but not the common people. Their hearts were still sound. He added:

Even in this village I have noticed some response. But, of course, I do not build upon it.

BOSE: We believe your attempt is to raise humanity from the lowest level. But we are sceptical as to whether you will succeed.

GANDHIJI: I myself am sceptical about it. I may succeed, I can perish in the attempt. Success or failure is not the final test.

B. You are right.

G. And attempt up to the last is the only real test.

Bose next asked Gandhiji if there was any change of mentality on the part of

---

1 Shailen Chatterjee
2 This appeared under the title “At Srirampur” by Pyarelal, who in Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase says: “Early in the morning of November 24, Sarat Chandra Bose . . . Bengal Congress leader, with a number of friends from Calcutta had a two-hour talk with Gandhiji at Srirampur in regard to the Government’s peace proposals. In My Days with Gandhi, p. 67, N. K. Bose says that Chapakanta Bhattacharya, Editor, Anand Bazar Patrika, Debnath Das, Capt. Razik, Lieut. Samson of the Indian National Army and another local friend accompanied S. C. Bose.
3 ibid
the authorities. Gandhiji replied:

There is a change in the Government policy for the better. But as for the change of heart, it is for you and me to make a contribution to that consummation.

The interviewer remarked that it was painful to see how listless the Hindus had become. Gandhiji replied:

It is no prerogative of the Hindus. Listlessness is common to us all. Even if I am the only one, I shall fight this listlessness that has come over the Hindus of East Bengal. I have not come here to do a good turn to this community or that. I have come to do a good turn to myself. Non-violence is not meant to be practised by the individual only. It can be and has to be practised by society as a whole. I have come to test that for myself in Noakhali. Has my ahimsa become bankrupt? If I fail here, it won’t be any proof that the theory is wrong. It will simply mean that my sadhana has been imperfect, that there is some fault somewhere in my technique.

B. If the League leaders were to take the Noakhali situation as seriously as you and Jawaharlal took Bihar, order would be restored in a day.

To make such comparisons is to degrade oneself. What is called for is introspection and more introspection.

I have come here not only to speak to the Mussalmans but to the Hindus as well. Why are they such cowards? The Harijans, the Namashudras, have been relatively better so far as courage and physical prowess is concerned. They are brave. But the other Hindus must shed utterly the caste distinctions. If this calamity would open the eyes of the Hindus and result in eradicating untouchability root and branch, it will have served a good purpose.

Narrating his earlier experiences in India he recalled how during the Champaran Satyagraha, in Rajendra Babu’s absence, he could only sit in the outhouse in Rajendra Babu’s house and how Rajendra Babu’s servant would not let the speaker bathe at the well. Things had improved, but much more remained to be done.

The visitor agreed that Hinduism had still to go a long way to eradicate the evil. Talking of forced conversions in Noakhali, the interviewer remarked that unless those who had been converted were brought back to the Hindu fold quickly, the cleavage between the Hindus and the Muslims might become permanent.

G. Many had returned. But all must.

The question was put to him whether by taking up an unbending attitude on conversion, he was not identifying himself with one particular community. How could his stand in this respect be squared with his claim that he regarded all religions as equal?

G. I have, of course, always believed in the principle of religious tolerance. But I have even gone further. I have advanced from tolerance to equal respect for all religions. All religions are branches of the same mighty tree, but I must not change over from one branch to another for the sake of expediency. By doing so, I cut the branch on which I am sitting. Therefore, I always feel the change-over from one religion to another very keenly, unless it is a case of spontaneous urge, a result of inner growth. Such conversions by their very nature cannot be on a mass scale and never to save one’s life or property or for temporal gain.

He narrated his meeting with a South Indian Bishop who was a Harijan converted to Christianity and retained all his original weakness in spite of the change of religion. He had told the late Charlie Andrews that to his mind he was no bishop at all.

B. There is no end to the monstrosities that have been committed here and that too in the name of religion. It is enough to fill one with blank despair.

G. I have met human monsters from my early youth. I have found that even they are not beyond redemption if we know how to touch the right chord in their soul.

And he cited two instances within his recent experience of the milk of human kindness welling up in hard-boiled, sun-baked functionaries at the sight of stark human misery and devastation.

G. The whole thing is so ghastly. You do not need to exaggerate it. I have told the authorities I do not care for numbers. Has a single case of abduction, rape, forcible marriage, or forcible conversion occurred? If so, it is enough for me. It is admitted that such things have happened.

B. What about the rescue of abducted women? It was complained that as soon as information was received about such cases and the rescue party with the military police set out on their assignment, the miscreants received intimation and removed the victim to some other place.

G. I have told our people: ‘Do not depend on military and the police help.’ You have to uphold democracy, and democracy and dependence on the military and the police are incompatible. You cannot say it is good in one place and bad in another. Military help will degrade you. In a democracy, if you set up a hooligan as the head of the Government, you lie in the bed you have made. The only remedy is to educate and convert the electorate by satyagraha, if necessary. We should be consistent all along. If democracy is good in Bihar, it ought to be good in Bengal, too. I must, therefore, go to the popular, elected Ministers, for they are my Ministers. If they fail, public opinion must be created to replace them. That is democracy. Whether it is Bihar or Bengal, the people have to be brave and stand on their legs. I want everyone to die at his post like a brave man and not to leave his home or his village.

1 This paragraph is reproduced from Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase.

Another interviewer asked Gandhiji why Pandit Jawaharlal went to Bihar and took such an active part in putting down disturbances there while he did nothing for Bengal. If the Interim Government could not interfere in one Province because of provincial autonomy, how could it do so in another?

Gandhiji replied that they must not forget that besides being the Vice-President of the Interim Government, Jawaharlal was the first servant of the Congress. As the Vice-President of the Central Cabinet, he must act within the four corners of the constitution. It does not permit interference with provincial autonomy. But in Bihar, Pandit Nehru and Rajendra Babu have a standing and responsibility as Congressmen.

One of the interviewers remarked that Bengal was being used as a pawn on the political chess-board.

G. No. Bengal is in the forefront today because Bengal is Bengal. It is Bengal that produced Tagore and Bankim Chandra. It was here that the heroes of the Chittagong Armoury Raid were born, however misguided their action might have been in my eyes. No, you must understand it. If Bengal plays the game, it will solve all India’s problem. That is why I have made myself a Bengali. I have seen enough of ravages in Noakhali to make me weep my eyes out but I am not going to shed a tear for what has happened. We have a long way yet to go. Why should there be cowardice in the Bengal of such men?

B. Yes, when I see these desecrated places of worship, I ask, why did not every man, woman and child of the house die there before those places were touched.

1 The following six sentences are reproduced from Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase.
2 Chapalakanta Bhattacharyya
3 The following two sentences are reproduced from Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase.
Q. If they had done that, you would not have required any other help. Today Noakhali is bereft of its leading men. They refused to take the risk and have left their hearths and homes. Poor Manoranjan Babu is in a fix. Whom is he to put on the Peace Committees? I have told him that the common man must rise to fill the vacuum. There is no such thing as a vacuum in nature. Nature abhors it. Let him write to them, I have told him. If they come back, well and good. Otherwise, the common man must come forward. It is his day.

Q. Mahatmaji, tell us in one word, whether it is war or peace? Peace Committees or War Committees?

G. Peace Committees. War results when peace fails. Our effort must always be directed towards peace, but it must be peace with honour and fair security for life and property. On these two conditions alone will the refugees return. Of course, if they develop enough courage, they will return without any safeguards. Today I have suggested one Hindu and one Muslim standing surety for each village. If the people have the requisite courage, they would depend on none but God and their own strength of spirit for their defence. If they do that, all the goondas in Noakhali will feel the change in the atmosphere and behave decently. I know what I am saying. I come from Kathiawad, a Province notorious for its bandits. I know that they are not beyond redemption. Nor do I believe that goondas are responsible for all that had happened.

A suggestion was next made as to why they should not have only Muslims in the Peace Committees as the Hindus had played no part in breaking the peace.

G. No. The Hindus must be there to play their part, else the Peace Committees will be a farce.¹

B. Was it not possible no control Bihar with non-violence? Why did the Congress Ministers resort to the free use of Military there?²

G. Yes. But Bihar has been having a lesson in organized violence since 1942 and before. Our weakness for the goondas rose to the highest in 1942. I know the merits of 1942. The people were not

¹ In Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase Pyarelal says “During the morning walk in which Sarat Bose joined, Gandhiji remarked that he was beginning to feel that even if Muslim workers were not forthcoming for his peace mission, Hindus alone might do. A handful of such workers, if they were worthy of their salt, could turn the tide. The only condition was that the local Hindus should play the game. The least that he expected of them was that they should eradicate the curse of untouchability root and branch from their midst. Otherwise they would never come into their own.”

² This question is reproduced from Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase.
cowed down. But all the same I cannot shut my eyes to our mistakes. We have to learn to do better [or else pay the penalty].

_Harijan_, 12-1-1947; and _Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase_, Vol. I, Book II, pp. 48-50

80. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

SRIRAMPUR, November 24, 1946

I am sorry I had to start the weekly silence earlier than usual. Such was Shamsuddin Saheb’s order. But wherever I may happen to be, my heart is here. I can have no peace until the Muslim brothers and sisters of the village call back the Hindus who used to live here, and they return to their homes. They should treat this as a duty and try to fulfil it.

_Harijan_, 5-1-1947

81. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

November 25, 1946

CHI. BRIJKRISHNA,

I have your letter. It is good that you have written and given me the news. If you want to go to Vinoba, you may. But your first task is to improve your health. I cannot move from here. Give me all the news about the Congress. Of course, you are already rendering service. Who was at fault at Garhmukteshwar?²

_Blessings from_ BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 2493

82. SPEECH AT PEACE COMMITTEE MEETING

RAMGUNJI, November 25, 1946

Brothers, I had no desire to speak to you tonight, for, as you see, my voice is still very weak. Let me hope that your work will proceed well.

But there are indications that trouble is brewing even now. I

---

¹ It being a silence-day, the speech was read out.

² There had been a communal riot there on the occasion of an annual fair on November 8, and a large number of people had been killed.
have just received a wire from Sandwip and some more complaints which tend to show that all is not well. I am handing them over to Shamsuddin Saheb for enquiry and necessary action, if the reports prove true.

With regard to the Peace Committees formed in villages, 1 a complaint has reached me that some of the Muslim members on the Committees are not reliable. The Hindus stand in fear of them but have not the courage to speak out openly. But unless they muster such courage, and if wrong people are left there, the Committees will not be able to command confidence. What we really want is the right sort of person. My suggestion is that if two good and brave men, one a Hindu and another a Mussalman, take the responsibility of preventing mischief even at the cost of their life, that would be enough. Why should there be eagerness for entering the Committees? It is not a place for acquiring position or honour but a place of service, and if anyone really wishes to serve, he can as well serve outside as on the Committee.

It is only in order to serve the cause of Islam that the Muslims are being called to join the Committees. The most important task is to restore the confidence among the Hindus so that they would be able to pursue their religious practices in freedom. Mr. Akhil Dutta has lately sent me a cheque for Rs. 850 and a letter stating that 200 pairs of conch-shell bangles and a pound of vermilion had been despatched to Noakhali. These are for distribution among women who had suffered during the riots. The best part of the presents is that they were collected by eleven Muslim gentlemen and one Englishman. I have met women who put on the vermilion mark indoors but wipe it off when they stir out in public. Such fear has to be removed by the Muslims. It is not a question of giving monetary aid, but of restoring confidence by respect shown to the culture of others. I will ask my Mussalman friends to treat this as their sacred duty. The Prophet once advised Mussalmans to consider the Jewish places of worship to be as pure as their own and offer it the same protection. It is the duty of the Mussalmans of today to assure the same freedom to their Hindu neighbours. Qaid-e-Azam Jinnah has said that every Muslim must show by his conduct that not a single non-Muslim need be afraid of him, the latter would be guaranteed safety and protection.

1 Shamsuddin Ahmed, who was present, had announced that seven Peace Committees had been formed.
For, thus alone can the Mussalmans command honour and respect.

My Days with Gandhi, pp. 72-3

83. LETTER TO RENUKA RAY

SRIRAMPUR,

November 26, 1946

MY DEAR RENUKA,

I have delayed answering your letter for pressure of work. I am in an out-of-the-way village, quite happy but a little run down owing to the silly mistake I made in taking a very bitter bhaji. My work has not been interrupted.

You are doing well as you are. I dare not guide you from here. If you wish to see me, you will have to come to this out-of-the-way place.

Love.

SHRIMATI RENUKA RAY

CHANDPUR

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

84. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

November 26, 1946

CHI. GHANSHYAMDAS,

You know I am staying at Srirampur all by myself, with only Prof. Nirmal Kumar¹ Bose and Parasuram as my companions. The people with whom I am putting up are gentlemen. There is only one Hindu family in the entire village, the rest are all Muslims. They all stay widely separated from each other. The hundreds of villages here do not maintain much contact with each other through any conveyance after the water dries up. The result is that work is possible only on foot. Therefore, only desperadoes, hooligans, or able-bodied men can maintain contact among themselves. I am living in one such village at present and intend to spend more time in another village similar to this. It is my intention to stay on here so long as the Hindus and Muslims do not start living together as sincere friends. God alone

¹ The source has “Nirmal Chandra”.

VOL. 93: 7 NOVEMBER, 1946 - 16 FEBRUARY, 1947 69
can keep man’s resolve unshaken. At the moment I have forgotten Delhi, Sevagram, Urulian and Panchgani. My only desire is to do or die. This will test my non-violence, too. I have come here determined to emerge successful from this ordeal. If you are anxious to see me, then you can come over here. I personally do not see any necessity for it. If you wish to send a messenger to know something or carry letters by hand, you can do so.

I am not going into the Constituent Assembly; it is not quite necessary either. Jawaharlal, Sardar, Rajendra Babu, Rajaji, Maulana—any of these or all five can go—or Kripalani.

Send them the message.

If it is possible to arrange for a sitting of the Constituent Assembly only with the help of the military, then it is better not to have it. If it can be arranged peacefully, then the laws can be framed only for the participating Provinces. Let us see what the future of the police and the military will be. We have also to see what the Muslim majority Provinces will do, and what is to be done in the Provinces where Muslims are in minority, how the British Government will conduct itself, and how the Princes will react. I believe the State Paper of May 16 will probably have to be changed. The job is complicated enough, if we want to work independently. I have only given an indication of how I view the problem.

Friends will also do well to bear in mind that what I am doing here is not in the name of the Congress. Nor is there any thought of associating it with this work. What I am doing is only from my personal view of non-violence. Anybody, if he so desires, can publicly oppose my work. That in fact is his right; it may even be his duty. Therefore, whosoever wishes to do anything or say anything, let him do so fearlessly. If anybody wants to warn me of anything, let him do that too.

Please send a copy of this to Sardar so that he may tell the others named above. Or you can get copies made and send them to the five friends yourself.

Do express whatever you wish to. Write to me direct so that I may reply. Pyarelal, Sushila, etc., all are in different villages. Pyarelal has been ill since yesterday. I hope you are all right.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Hindi original: C. W. 8081. Courtesy: G. D. Birla. also G. N. 2212
85. LETTER TO CHANDRAMANI VIDYALANKAR

November 26, 1946

Bhai Chandramani Vidyalankar,

I have your letter. Thanks. I am myself in the dark. Under the circumstances I do not regard it as proper to send for anyone. You should do your duty remaining at your own place.

Blessings from

BAPU

Pandit Chandramani Vidyalankar

BHASKAR PRESS
DEHRA DUN

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

86. INTERVIEW TO MEMBERS OF COMMUNIST PARTY AND STUDENTS’ FEDERATION

November 26, 1946

Gandhiji stated that he was personally cast in a different mould; when he had no confidence in a particular step, he never took it. Under the present circumstances, he did not think that the step suggested by the friends would be of any use. Personally, he was trying to have everything done through the Ministry. He had also undertaken a programme here all by himself and this was without the co-operation of the tallest in Bengal. The Hindu population in Bengal could co-operate by utterly forgetting caste, not as mere lip-profession but in actual practice. They had also to purge themselves of all fear. For, it is only when a man’s heart is freed from fear that the flower of religion can find a place in it. Finally he added:

I do not want to retire from Bengal as a defeated coward. I would like to die here, if need be, at the hands of an assassin. But I do not want to court such death.

My Days with Gandhi, p. 74

1 N. K. Bose explains: “Some members of the Communist Party and the Students’ Federation saw Gandhiji by appointment at 8.20 a. m. As he sat basking in the sun outside his room, they reported that people apprehended fresh trouble on December 9, when the Constituent Assembly was to begin work. They had gone to Hamiduddin Ahmed for assurance, but had been advised by him to wait for the direction of the League High Command in this connection. The friends suggested that Gandhiji should convene an all-parties’ meeting in the district and co-ordinate the work done severally by various organizations.”
87. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

SRIRAMPUR,
November 26, 1946

Gandhiji said that even if a solitary refugee had to return to his village populated by Muslims, he would unhesitatingly advise his return. Whether they were men or women, if they were to become brave people, this courage was indispensable. Numerous letters had been coming to him in which people had questioned the wisdom of thus tempting faith, but he held that this was necessary if they were to become a self-respecting nation. He made no distinction between men and women. The latter should feel just as independent as men. Bravery was not man’s monopoly. The art of self-defence excluded all outside help. What he saw and heard showed him that people were apt to forget self-respect in order to save themselves. There was no swadesh and swaraj for persons who would not sacrifice themselves or their belongings for their honour. As his hearers knew, the Ministers and the Parliamentary Secretaries, who had come to Noakhali, had been proclaiming that for the sake of their honour and the influence of Islam, they were anxious that the refugees should return to their villages and feel perfectly safe and serene in the midst of the majority of Muslims living there. The speaker had no hesitation in trusting their pledged word and asking the people to do likewise. Those who trusted were never the losers; deceivers ever were. There was no room for goondaism in any religion worth the name, be it Islam, Hinduism or any other. He was trying to become a Bengali in order that if God gave him strength, he might try to live the life in the midst of the people of East Bengal and induce them to do likewise.

Harijan, 5-1-1947

88. LETTER TO ASUTOSH SINHA

November 27, 1946

If the refugees had the required spirit of co-operation, it would be possible. But it is a plant of slow growth and personal courage does not come even from co-operation. It comes when it does come, because it is a virtue which is its own reward. Therefore, the principle that there should be volunteers who would go to each one of the affected villages is perfectly sound. You may have noticed that I have been giving effect to it myself and I have made a beginning. Those who came with me from Sevagram are following suit. Whether they will prove themselves worthy of the great trust reposed in them remains to be seen. That may be said even about myself. Only I am not following anybody but am the originator so far as I am concerned, of the idea. Therefore, if you have any volunteers in view with the requisite qualifications, please send me their names and addresses.

1 Vice-President, Tippera Rescue, Relief and Rehabilitation Committee. The addressee had suggested that in order to restore their self-confidence the refugees instead of living separately should live and work together in one or two selected badis.

He did not want to make a public appeal, he explained, because the right quality of men and women would not come in answer to an advertisement.

They have to be persons of sterling worth and equally high courage... full of ahimsa, i.e., respect for the Muslims. It would be a pity if these volunteers started with distrust. Real courage is based on trust which is the surest foundation for it.

Besides, if he allowed volunteers, who might be attracted by the glamour of his presence to inundate Noakhali, it would create unhealthy excitement and cause the authorities and the local Muslims unnecessary trepidation. To make an individual act non-violently he has to be put absolutely at his ease first. Meticulously correct conduct on their part would put the local Muslims and the Bengal Government on their honour. He concluded:

I am watching what the Government are doing. People cannot be compelled to return to their villages. It would be a disastrous experiment in my opinion.

89. LETTER TO PYARELAL

November 27, 1946

CHI. PYARELAL,

I have your letter. It is good that you think that what I wrote was unnecessary. I do not think so. I do not understand what is painful in it? Sushila has come now to see the patient she did not see yesterday. Whether it is anger or pain or both it is the same as before. Let me see what happens.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

1 Omission as in the source
90. LETTER TO SYED MAHMUD

SRIRAMPUR, RAMGUNJ, November 27, 1946

BHAJ MAHMUD1,

I have your telegram. Rajendra Babu writes that I need not go to Bihar. Everything necessary is being done there. I am quite all right. Whatever weakness is left will go away. Write to me how things are over there. Are the Muslims who had fled coming back? Do write fully. Here my work is going on well.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 5105

91. INTERVIEW TO THE PRESS

SRIRAMPUR, November 27, 1946

QUESTION: How do you think lasting peace can be achieved by your new plan, unless the Muslim League itself which presumably guides the majority of the Muslim intelligentsia, sincerely co-operates in creating such atmosphere by their words and deeds?

GANDHIJI: My new plan does contemplate the necessity for a lasting peace and sincere co-operation of the Muslim League in establishing friendly relations between the two communities, irrespective of the merits or otherwise of Pakistan.

Asked as to what was the guarantee that some months later this sort of calamity would not be repeated in places like Noakhali, where Hindus were in a minority, Gandhiji said:

The only real guarantee is to be sought in the personal courage of individuals. Everything else depends on it.

The next question asked was whether he should not advise people in those areas where one or two houses were Hindu and the rest Muslim, to migrate to areas inside a district where the Hindus were in comparatively larger numbers, so that in case of emergencies they could put up some sort of resistance if they did not believe in non-violence. Gandhiji’s reply was:

1 Minister for Development and Transport, Government of Bihar
There is no such safety as you imagine in numbers in imagined conditions. Migration is no remedy whilst there is hope of co-operation. It will become a necessity when the majority party wishes it, if a clash is to be avoided. All this is a matter of mutual adjustment, not arbitrary action. What is needed is that barbarities must cease, if we are to survive as one nation or two, or many free nations still living in friendly co-operation.

_The Bombay Chronicle, 29-11-1946_

92. LETTER TO CHIMANLAL N. SHAH

November 28, 1946

CHI. CHIMANLAL,

Herewith I am sending you two cheques for Rs. 412 and Rs. 451 received from Uganda. I have countersigned them. Credit them to Harijan [Fund]. Ultimately the amounts are to be sent to Delhi to the Harijan Sevak [Sangh] office.

I intend to write to Babudi¹. It will depend on when I can spare the time. I hope things are going well there. Keep on writing.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10653

93. LETTER TO JIVANJI D. DESAI

November 28, 1946

CHI. JIVANJI,

Herewith an article which I could write with great difficulty.

I hope you will not find it too difficult to decipher the handwriting. There is an English translation too. Just now, you must not expect me to do articles for _Harijan_.

Write to me and let me know how things are. Pyarelal will send you whatever is possible.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 9973. Also C. W. 6947. Courtesy: Jivanji D. Desai

¹ Sharda G. Chokhawala, addressee’s daughter; vide “Letter to Sharda G. Chokhawala”, 29-11-1946
94. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

SRIRAMPUR,
November 28, 1946

Gandhiji related the story of how the Ashram prayer had taken its present shape. When he came to India in 1915, Gurudev invited him through the late Deenabandhu Andrews to stay at Santiniketan along with the inmates of the Phoenix Settlement. Kaka Saheb and Harihur Sharma were there and so were the late Deenabandhu Andrews and Pearson. These friends had created a sort of South African group at the place. The prayer which was recited at that early time by the small group practically continues to this day so far as the Sanskrit part is concerned.

While on his Harijan tour in Travancore, he added the first Hindu verse of the Ishopanishad to it, as, in his opinion, it contained the cream of spiritual thought. Later on, Raihana Tyabjee, daughter of the late Abbas Tyabjee, who is noted for her musical talents, proposed the incorporation of a passage from the Koran, and this was done. Lastly, on Kasturba’s death¹ at the Aga Khan Palace, Dr. Gilder² had recited a passage from the Zoroastrian scripture. Since then that prayer has been a part of the Ashram prayer. In addition there was a bhajan in an Indian language of an English hymn and Ramdhun.

The prayer which has thus taken shape can, on no account, be considered as belonging to any single community or religion. It is of universal appeal; and no one, whatever his denomination may be, should have hesitation in sharing it.

Harijan, 5-1-1947

95. LETTER TO FOSS WESTCOTT

SRIRAMPUR, NOAKHALI,
November 29, 1946

DEAR FRIEND.

I fear that I have neglected your question for a long time. You know the reason why. Many of my activities, including important correspondence, are held up and must remain so for the time being. Meanwhile I pick up what comes uppermost for the moment. Such before me is your letter to Pyarelalji.

¹ On February 22, 1944
³ Bishop of Calcutta and Metropolitan of India, Burma and Ceylon, 1919-45
Of course conversions will, so far as I know, continue under swaraj but there would be no State favouritism as there has been during the British regime.

Let us hope, under Swaraj, there will be no one man’s rule but the people’s. You and I will probably not be alive to see it in action.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

THE REV. DR. FOSS WESTCOTT
THE RECTORY
ST. PAUL’S SCHOOL
JALAPAHAR, DARJEELING

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

96. LETTER TO CHIMANLAL N. SHAH

November 29, 1946

CHI. CHIMANLAL,

Hereewith a cheque from Bangalore for Rs. 895. Credit it to my different accounts. I have sent a receipt to the Vanarasena.

A letter for Babu is enclosed.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10654

97. LETTER TO SHARDA G. CHOKHAWALA

November 29, 1946

CHI. BABUDI,

Chi. Chimanlal writes in his letter that since you are not recovering quickly you are in a hurry to go to Surat. This is not right. Now you should go only after getting fully well. You will thereby be helping Gordhandas. If you make up your mind, you can certainly get well in Sevagram. You don’t seem to be suffering from any disease. If you take enough milk, fruit and vegetables, you are bound to get well. You must take hip-baths and friction-baths. Apply mud-

---

1 A team of young volunteers
2 Addressee’s husband packs regularly and take sun-rays through blue glass. Do you have any problems there? If so, write to me.

Now about your letter. When I repeat Ramanama, or even otherwise, I have no definite image in my mind. I do not believe in such image-worship. In fact God is without form. There is no need at all to invest Him with a form while worshipping Him. We must believe God to be the absolute Truth and worship Him. He is both the law and the law-giver. If this sinks in one’s mind, there is nothing more to think about. This being so, if you ask what more does one gain by repeating His name, my answer is that, as the saying is, a man becomes what he thinks. By repeating His name, we become one with Him.

Your mind keeps changing. But don’t worry. Keep on ceaselessly repeating the name, so that no other thoughts may enter the mind. I know it is difficult for the sick to do this. Do not worry about it. If that repetition is diligently done, it sinks in one’s heart and proves an unfailing remedy even for the sick. Do not, therefore, think further but stay on there. Cling to nature-cure remedies and to Rama, and everything will be all right.

I hope Anand\(^1\) is well.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 10073.    Courtesy: Sharda G. Chokhawala

98. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA
November 29, 1946

CHI. GHANSHYAMDAS,

I have your letter. Yesterday I sent you a letter for Rajaji which is to be sent to him through someone. You will know after reading it.

I do not know what I am doing. If I have imbibed ahimsa I could not act otherwise. Let us see what God prompts me to do.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

From the Hindi original: C. W. 8082. Courtesy: G. D. Birla

\(^1\) Addressee’s son
99. LETTER TO RAVISHANKER SHUKLA

NOAKHALI
November 29, 1946

BHAI SHUKLAJI¹.

What is this complaint² about? Please return the letter of complaint with your reply.

Yours,

M. K. GANDHI

PANDIT RAVISHANKAR SHUKLA
NAGPUR

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

100. LETTER TO RAMACHANDRA RANO

November 29, 1946

BHAI RANO,

I had your wire. As it is, I do not interfere in such matters. Moreover I am not at all acquainted with this case.

I am returning the proforma for reply.

Vande Mataram from

M. K. GANDHI

SHRI RAMACHANDRA RANO
HARIJAN BADRI
HYDERABAD (SIND)

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

101. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING³

SIRAMPUR,
November 29, 1946

Gandhiji explained to the audience the object of his visit which he said was not to cause the ill-feeling between the two communities go deeper, but to cement their fellow-feeling so that Hindus and Muslims could live as brothers as before. God,

¹ Premier, Central Provinces
² The reference is to an open letter dated November 18, 1946, from the Secretary, City Muslim League, on the statement of the addressee that there was no communal disturbance in the Central Provinces.
³ According to the report Gandhiji held the prayer meeting at the house of a Muslim villager, about a mile from his place of residence. About 500 people, mostly Muslims, attended.
he said, had not distinguished between a Hindu and a Muslim. Why should man, breathing the same air and drinking the same water, do it?

Hindustan Standard, 2-12-1946

102. LETTER TO SECRETARY, ARYA PRATINIDHI SABHA

November 30, 1946

SECRETARY
ARYA PRATINIDHI SABHA
HYDERABAD (DN.)

SIR,

I have received your letter along with an English translation. Now please write to me what happened.

Yours,

M. K. GANDHI

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

103. A SIGN OF PROGRESS

Though I have noticed it in the Gujarati columns of the Harijanbandhu from a different source, at the risk of repetition in another form, I must quote\(^1\) from a touching letter from Shri Parikshitlal Majumdar addressed to Shyamlalji\(^2\), a copy of which has been sent by the latter.

I am writing this from Bardoli . . . . This year, during the Gandhi Jayanti week, nearly 40 public wells have been freely opened for the Harijans . . . . People have taken to this programme of their own will . . . local people have invited Harijans and taken them to the public wells . . . I myself have attended some functions and personally have become a witness to the marvellous change. . . . No doubt, it is Gandhiji’s efforts and the recent writings that have brought this change . . . Numerous inter-communal dinners have been held. There was one such big dinner at Nadiad, the real capital of the Kaira District . . . . One prominent well has been opened in Kadi, a citadel of orthodoxy and 150 people dined with Harijans at Padra in Baroda. There are numerous such incidents but I cannot enumerate them at present . . . .

Of course, compared to what we want to achieve, this progress is a miserable show. But seeing that Gujarat has been so far behindhand in this matter of removal of untouchability, the little progress of which Shri Parikshitlal takes note with pardonable

\(^1\) Only excerpts are reproduced here.
\(^2\) Secretary of Kasturba Gandhi National Memorial Fund, Sevagram satisfaction is pleasant, if it is permanent and is a precursor of better things to come. Every nail driven into the coffin of untouchability is a step in the right direction towards the purification of Hinduism.

SRIRAMPUR, November 30, 1946
Harijan, 15-12-1946

104. LETTER TO T. PRAKASAM
VILL. & POST. SRIRAMPUR,
“VIA” RAMGANJ, DISTT. NOAKHALLI,
E. BENGAL,
November 30, 1946

DEAR PRAKASAM,

Sri Sriramulu has sent me his letter addressed to the Minister for Endowments, Madras. Therein he says he will fast from the 1st of January next, if your Cabinet does not bring forward a bill permitting Harijans in all public temples in your province when there is much overwhelming public support and demand. I thought there was some such Act already in your statute book. You will please let me know full facts.

I am dictating this lying on my back because I need frequent rest during the day from having to sit. The semi-fast of twenty-one days, though it enabled me to do a little physical and full mental work, has weakened the body somewhat. No harm has been done.

SHRI T. PRAKASAM
PREMIER
MADRAS

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

105. INTERVIEW TO UNITED PRESS OF INDIA
November 30, 1946

GANDHIJI: There is no limit to the time I am going to stay in East Bengal. I hope to be able to do so, so long as I think it necessary. It may even be a lifetime. I shall try to do whatever I can in order to bring together the hearts of Hindus and Muslims who have lived so long together as friends and brothers and sisters. But what I shall be able to do is more than I can answer. Man can but make an attempt.

Success can be given only by God.

CORRESPONDENT: Here is one serious difficulty. Canal water will dry up shortly. People will not then be able to leave these villages even if they want to do so. Would you ask them to stay on, or do you want them to leave at once?

GANDHIJI: I have said at many meetings I have addressed in this part of the country that if the people are brave, whether they are few or many, they will not leave their homes, but will remain there, whatever the risk. And this I say irrespective of military or police protection. It is beneath the dignity of free men or those wanting to be free, to seek such protection. Surely during the past few days much has happened to encourage people to remain in their homes.

_Hindustan Standard, 2-12-1946_

106. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

_SIRAMPUR, November 30, 1946_

Gandhiji explained the meaning of the first _mantra_ recited in the Ashram prayer: _Namyo Horenge Kyo_. Its purport is, “Salutation to the Enlightened Ones.”

A Japanese Buddhist monk¹ who had happened to stay in Sevagram for two or three years was responsible for its introduction. He had come to India with the object of mastering the secrets of the religion which had its origin in India. The monk had a sweet nature and had endeared himself to every member of the Sevagram Ashram by unostentatiousness, affableness and silence. Every morning he used to walk round the Ashram grounds for full one hour, while beating upon a drum and reciting the above _mantra_ in a deep musical voice which sent a thrill into all those who heard him. He used to recite it at the prayer meeting. The recitation continued even after he was removed by the Government after hostilities with Japan began.

_Harijan, 5-1-1947_

107. LETTER TO MIRABEHN

_SIRAMPUR, via RAMGUNJ, December 1, 1946_

CHI. MIRA²,

I have your letter of November 2 received only today. You must have had mine written to you from Bengal. My cold and cough have disappeared. I am not driving too hard the “Brother Ass”. Therefore, do not worry on that score. As you see, I did not, because I could not, attend the Congress or the Working Committee. I am not likely to leave this place for some time to come, if ever.

¹ Rev. G. Haishao
² The superscription in this and other letters to Mirabehn is in Devanagari.
I see you are making steady headway. I hope it will be all solid progress. Your article\(^1\) on Mussoorie Bhangis will go in Harijan as it is.

As you may have read, all the company that I brought with me from Delhi is dispersed in different villages in Noakhali. Bapa has made common cause with me. So he is also in a village. Abha is with him. I have Prof. Nirmal Kumar Bose and Parasuram with me. You have to walk from place to place. No conveyance possible except country boats and these will cease to ply inside of ten days as there will not be enough water in the canals. I am not fit enough to walk three or four miles even. I like this isolation but you can imagine what it must be for poor people who live in dread.

I am glad that the spirit moved me to this place. Let us see what is in store.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU\(^2\)_

SHRIMATI MIRABEHN

From the original: C. W. 6519. Courtesy: Mirabehn. Also G. N. 9914

---

108. SILENCE-DAY NOTE TO PARASURAM

[Srirampur, Noakhali,
December 1, 1946]\(^3\)

Let Nirmal Babu examine my replies for the style as well as the manner. Are they satisfactory?

From a photostat: C. W. 19534. Courtesy: N. K. Bose

---

109. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

December 1, 1946

Chi. Ghanshyamdas,

I have prepared a personal statement\(^4\) about the Constituent Assembly. Profulla Babu\(^5\) will give it to you. Go through it and send your opinion to the Sardar.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From the Hindi original: C. W. 8083. Courtesy: G. D. Birla

---

1. “All Is Not Gold that Glitters”; it appeared in Harijan, 29-12-1946.
2. The subscription is in Hindi.
3. From a note, presumably by N. K. Bose, in the source
4. Vide “Note on the Constituent Assembly”, 3-12-1946
5. Profulla Chandra Ghosh, a Congress nominee for the Constituent Assembly which was to meet in Delhi on December 9
110. LETTER TO RAMAKRISHNA BAJAJ

ON NOAKHALI TOUR,
December 1, 1946

CHI. RAM,

You have come back after gaining a lot of experience. Now give its benefit to the country and also to your own business. We shall meet if I can free myself from here. There is no use coming here. I do not want to send for even Mataji. I may send for her only when I emerge from darkness into light. I trust she is all right, as also Savitri.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 3068

111. EXTRACT FROM DIARY

December 1, 1946

The back ached. Revised an article for Harijan lying in bed. Dozed off in the middle.

Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase, Vol. I, Book II, p. 41

112. LETTER TO AZIZ HUSSAIN

SRIRAMPUR,
DISTT. NOAKHALI,
December 1, 1946

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for inviting me. There is no possibility whatsoever

---

1 Janakidevi Bajaj
2 Wife of Kamalnayan Bajaj, addressee’s elder brother
3 In reply to the addressee’s letter of November 25, 1946, inviting Gandhiji to his house to spend a few hours with him while passing through Lucknow.
of my going to Lucknow and, even if I pass through Lucknow, of my staying there. However, I appreciate your invitation.

My wants are simple. All I need is good sanitary surroundings. Such food as I need I can cook for myself. Your request therefore is in no way unfair.

What is your occupation? Why do you write to me in English?
Do you not know Urdu? I send you my answer in English for fear you may be a foreigner in India, not knowing any of its languages.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

JANAB AZIZ HUSSAIN

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy:
Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

113. LETTER TO A. REDMOND

AS FROM SEVAGRAM,
“VIA” WARDHA (INDIA),
CAMP: SRIRAMPUR (BENGAL),
December 2, 1946

DEAR MADAM,

I have your letter of 11th ultimo.¹

I am afraid I must not encourage you to visit India for the purpose of studying Buddhist or Hindu teachings which you can pick up from books. If it is Hindu life you wish to study, I must warn you against coming to India for that purpose because you hardly realize the reality unless you are able to probe deep enough. And for doing humanitarian work you certainly do not need to tour any part of the world to learn the art of doing it. It is the art of humanity which is needed and that you will find in all countries and under all climes. As I have lived in South Africa for twenty years I know that there is ¹ In which the addressee had sought Gandhiji’s permission to visit India to study Buddhist and Hindu teachings so that she could do practical ‘humanitatiun’ work amongst her fellowmen.

enough humanitarian work in front of one in South Africa. This is merely a warning against hopeless delusions.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

MRS. A. REDMOND

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

114. LETTER TO CARL HEATH

AS FROM SEVAGRAM,
“VIA” WARDHA (INDIA),
CAMP: SRIRAMPUR (BENGAL),

December 2, 1946

DEAR FRIEND,

I got your touching letter¹ yesterday. I had heard that you had aged considerably and that you were passing through physical suffering. I hope it was an exaggerated statement and that this will find you in enjoyment of health.

I understand and appreciate your remarks about Dr. Ambedkar². I suppose you are aware that I know him very well and that I have met him often enough. He represents a good cause but he is a bad advocate for the simple reason that his passion has made him bitter and made him depart from the straight and narrow path. As I know to my cost, he is a believer in questionable means so long as the end is considered to be good. With him and with men like him the end justifies the means. Have you read his book? It is packed with untruths almost from beginning to end. I am sorry to have to say this of a countryman who has himself been obliged to put up with insults which have embittered men mightier than Dr. Ambedkar. You need not take all I say as gospel truth. I have written this to you in order to give you my . . . that if I do not go out of my way to seek contact with Dr. Ambedkar it is not for want of will or want of regard for you and friends like you but because I know that such seeking will, in my view, harm the cause [rather] than help it. No question of prestige will deter me from walking to him. I can say that the question of prestige has never interfered with my doing what I believed was a duty. I have laboured to show that in this case duty points the other way.

¹ The addressee in his letter of November 14, had referred to the bitter attitude of B. R. Ambedkar “largely directed against yourself” and asked Gandhiji to secure political justice for the untouchables. He had further asked him to invite Ambedkar to see him.

² B. R. Ambedkar (1891-1956); leader of the Depressed Classes, jurist and author; in 1942 formed the Scheduled Castes’ Federation; member, Constituent Assembly; Chairman, Drafting Committee for the Constitution of India.

You are at liberty to share this letter with all mutual friends.

With regards to yourself and your wife.

Yours sincerely,

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

115. LETTER TO MANU GANDHI

December 2, 1946

CHI. MANUDI.

The child may misbehave, but can the mother ever do so? Your letter is a hotchpotch. You have assumed things which I never said in the letter. That is why I consider you silly. Jaisukhlal has called you a slovenly girl. You have received education but learnt no wisdom. I do not, however, wish to point out your faults. I will do so and pull your ears when you come here. You will yourself admit that you have made those mistakes. You need not come just to meet me. Come only if you wish to take up some work here. Otherwise you had better stay with Jaisukhlal at present. You will know in a few months what happens to me. The job here is a difficult one. I am not going to leave the place till everything is settled.

I understand about Umiya. So long as we are satisfied with Shankarlal, we need not pay much attention to what sort of people the other family members are. It is Umiya’s job to reform the in-laws. She must regard Birla Sheth as filling the place of Jaisukhlal now. The problem about Pratap⁰ also will be solved. In your ignorance you are thinking too much about this matter. As long as Umiya is happy with Shankarlal, there is no cause at all for worry. Ask Shankarlal to write to me and explain frankly what the problem is. It is a mistake to suppose that he cannot write to me because I am a big man. I don’t regard myself as one, and in any case of what value is my supposed greatness in relation to you, the children? Since Shankarlal has married Umiya, he also is like a son to me.

---

¹ Omission as in the source
² Umiya’s son

Be calm now and do what you believe to be your dharma. If you wish you may come to stay with me.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

_[PS._]_
Vinodini¹ is ill. I had, therefore, asked her to come if she wished. But she has left now.

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U/III

116. LETTER TO SARALADEVI SARABHAI

_December 2, 1946_

CHI. SARALABEHN,

I am able to attend to your letter only today. I have written to Jajuji.² He will write if there is anything more to be done. He will write to me if there is anything to be said. I am very happy by your acceptance. May your good act bear fruit.

I am glad to hear that Nirmalabehn’s health is beginning to improve. You must recover fully.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 11151. Courtesy: Sarabhai Foundation

117. LETTER TO SHRIKRISHNADAS JAJU

_December 2, 1946_

BHAI JAJUJI,

If Prakasam remains firm about the mill at Madras no one will or can compel him. It would be a good thing if all the provinces followed an identical policy but probably it will not be possible. Prakasam had mentioned absolutely nothing about the difficulty. Of

¹ Addressee’s sister
² Vide “Letter to Shrikrishnas Jaju”, 8-11-1946 course, I am going to do all that is possible. But there is certainly some difficulty in acting from here.

How is your health?

Let me see what I can do about the Charkha Sangh in Bengal.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

What is being done in Madras about the Charkha Scheme?

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy Pyarelal

118. LETTER TO J. B. KRIPALANI

[December 2, 1946]

DEAR PROFESSOR,

Do you know anything about the Madras Charkha Scheme?

How are you getting along?

Whose wire is this? I cannot persuade myself to invite anyone here. It is all darkness for me; I could think of something if I saw a ray of light. I am watching developments.

When is Sucheta coming?

Krishnadas met me and gave me all the news.

Blessings from

BAPU

Enclosure: A telegram

ACHARYA KRIPALANI

NEW DELHI

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

119. LETTER TO SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA

December 2, 1946

CHI. SATIS BABU,

See this letter¹. What can we do in this matter? Is there any likelihood of your meeting Profulla?

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ In the source this is placed among two letters of this date.

² Dated November 15, 1946, from Shrikrishnadas Jaju to Sushila Pai
120. LETTER TO KUNDAR DEWAN

December 2, 1946

CHI. KUNDAR,

I got your letter and also the book. You have done well in translating it.

I have sent to Kaka Saheb a foreword for Appa’s book.

What can I say about the Hindu-Muslim [problem]? Let us see what I can do. I am surrounded by darkness. I can see no light. I hope there will be light. Ahimsa is indeed put to the test now. We shall have a talk when we happen to meet.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI KUNDAR DEWAN
NALWADI

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

121. LETTER TO RAMESHWARI NEHRU

December 2, 1946

CHI. RAMESHWARIBEHN.

I have your letter. I myself do not believe that one can defend oneself by carrying weapons. People can defend themselves only if they have courage. Otherwise they will have to have Government protection or employ private body-guards. I think we can only express our opinion in the matter. We shall have to leave it to others to act for themselves. The same idea can be applied to other places also.

Here too, the state of affairs is grave and delicate.

Blessings from

BAPU

SMT. RAMESHWARI NEHRU
WARRIS ROAD
LAHORE

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 Vide “Foreword to “Satyagraha Wa Swarahya”
122. INTERVIEW TO THE PRESS

SIRAMPUR,

[December 2, 1946]

The question of the exchange of population is unthinkable and impracticable. This question never crossed my mind. In every province, everyone is an Indian, be he a Hindu, a Muslim or of any other faith. It would not be otherwise even if Pakistan came in full.

For me any such thing will spell bankruptcy of Indian wisdom or statesmanship or both. The logical consequence of any such step is too dreadful to contemplate. Is it not that India should be artificially divided into so many religious zones?

When asked if, in view of the unsettled situation, it was not better to adopt a migration policy, Gandhiji said:

I see nothing to warrant such a policy. It is one of despair and, therefore, to be adopted in rare cases as a last resort.

QUESTION: You said the other day that there was no limit to your stay in East Bengal. Do you think that by confining yourself to Srimapur you will be able to send your message of peace to other villages of Noakhali?

GANDHIJI: Of course, I am not burying myself long in Srimapur. I am not idle here. I am seeing people of the surrounding villages and others. I am studying things and regaining lost physical strength meanwhile. The idea ultimately is to go on foot, when possible and necessary, from village to village and induce the evacuees to return. This I can only do with effect when I have seen things myself. It is quite clear to me that my mere word carries very little weight. Distrust has gone too deep for exhortation.

Gandhiji was next asked regarding the report that he found himself in darkness, and why and when the darkness came over him and whether he saw any release from it. Gandhiji said:

I am afraid the report is substantial. Outside circumstances have never overwhelmed me. The reason for the present distress lies within me. I find that my ahimsa does not seem to answer in the matter of Hindu-Muslim relations. This struck me forcibly when I came to learn of the events in Noakhali.

1 Extracted from “Srimapur Diary”

2 Hindustan Standard, 4-12-1946, reported the interview under the dateline “Srimapur, December 2”.
The reported forcible conversions and the distress of the Bengali sisters touched me deeply. I could do nothing through pen or speech. I argued to myself that I must be on the scene of action and test the soundness of the doctrine which has sustained me and made life worth living. Was it the weapon of the weak as it was often held by my critics or was it truly the weapon of the strong? The question arose in me when I had no ready-made solution for the distemper of which Noakhali was such a glaring symptom.

And so setting aside all my activities, I hastened to Noakhali to find out where I stood. I know positively that ahimsa is a perfect instrument. If it did not answer in my hands, the imperfection was in me. My technique was at fault. I could not discover the error from a distance. Hence I came here trying to make the discovery. I must, therefore, own myself in darkness till I see light. God only knows when it will come. More I cannot say.

_Harijan_, 19-1-1947

123. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

_Srirampur, December 2, 1946_

Speaking after prayer, Gandhiji chose as his theme the story referred to in the _bhajan_ which had just been sung. The chief of the elephants had gone for a drink to the river when he was caught hold of by an alligator. A furious struggle ensued, but in spite of his strength, the elephant was dragged into deeper waters. When he was on the point of being drowned, the elephant realized that his huge strength was of no avail, and he prayed to God for succour. God, the help of the helpless, came to his rescue and saved him from the jaws of death.

The moral was obvious. The strength of the strong without God’s help had been often found to be useless. Therefore, he advised dependence not on outside sources but upon the inner strength which came to all who sincerely sought it from God. This was the lesson which the people in Noakhali sorely needed to learn.

_Harijan_, 5-1-1947

124. EXTRACT FROM DIARY

_December 2, 1946_

Must stop. Even the left hand now aches and has struck work. To bed—9.30 p. m.

_Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase_, Vol. I, Book II, p. 41

1 Extracted from “Srirampur Diary”
125. NOTE ON THE CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY

Srivampur, Noakhali

December 3, 1946

I am quite clear that if there is a boycott by the Muslim League of the Constituent Assembly, it should not meet under the Cabinet Mission’s statement\(^1\) of May 16. It clearly contemplates the co-operation of the two major parties, viz., the Congress and the League. Therefore, if one of them proclaims a boycott, the Constituent Assembly cannot with propriety meet under that Paper. If the Government convene the Constituent Assembly in spite of the boycott, they can legitimately do so only under some other statement which they can draw up in consultation with the Congress. It should never be forgotten that however powerful the Congress has become, Constituent Assembly as contemplated today can only meet by action of the British Government.

2. Even if the Constituent Assembly meets in spite of the boycott, but with the willing co-operation of the British Government, it will be under the visible or invisible protection of the British forces, whether Indian or European. In my opinion, \(^2\) we shall never reach a satisfactory constitution under these circumstances. Whether we own it or not, our weakness will be felt by the whole world.

3. It may be said that not to meet as a Constituent Assembly under these circumstances will amount to a surrender to Qaid-e-Azam Jinnah or the Muslim League. I do not mind the charge because the waiver will not be an act of weakness, it will be one of Congress strength because it would be due to the logic of facts. If we have attained a certain degree of status and strength to warrant us in

---

\(^1\) In My Days with Gandhi, N. K. Bose explains that Gandhiji dictated this in the afternoon for the Working Committee.

\(^2\) The Muslim League had refused to attend the Constituent Assembly unless the Congress gave up its reservations on the question of grouping. The British Government, in an attempt to bring about a compromise, invited the leaders of the two parties to London for negotiations from December 3 to 6. No headway was made. For the British Cabinet’s statement dated December 6, vide “British Cabinet’s Statement on Grouping”, 6-12-1946

\(^3\) Vide “Statement of Cabinet Delegation and Viceroy”, 16-5-1946 convening our own Constituent Assembly irrespective of the British Government, it will be a proper thing. We will have then to seek the co-operation of the Muslim League and all the parties including the Princes, and the Constituent Assembly can meet at a favourable place even if some do not join. Thus it may be only the Congress Provinces plus Princes who may care to join. I think this would be dignified and wholly consistent with facts.

From a photostat: C. W. 10535. Courtesy: N. K. Bose. Also G. N. 3786

126. EXTRACTS FROM LETTER TO H. S. SUHRAWARDY

December 3, 1946

Having waited some time for the return of Shamsuddin Saheb as he had led me to expect, I write this to you and that in English in order the better to enable you to deal with the matter referred to herein.

1. Somehow or other the Committees that were being formed do not appear to be functioning properly. As yet, they have failed to inspire confidence.

2. In spite of all my efforts exodus continues and very few persons have returned to their villages. They say the guilty parties are still at large, some finding a place on the Peace Committees, that sporadic cases of murder and arson still continue, that abducted women have not all been returned, that forcibly converted persons have not all returned, that burnt houses are not being rebuilt and generally the atmosphere of goodwill is lacking. How far these charges are true or can be proved I do not know. My object just now is to bring these to your notice. It might be that a summary impartial inquiry is necessary to restore confidence.

3. Restrictions are being placed on volunteers irrespective of the organizations to which they belong. I can understand illegal activities being restricted, but no other restriction would be advisable.

4. Adequate food and warm clothing and fit habitation is surely necessary while there are bona-fide refugees. To deny these amenities would create suspicion and defeat the purpose of sending them back to their villages. I am of opinion that if the Government are unable to provide adequate food and clothing, facility should be readily given to benevolent persons to supply them.
5. As I write this the following letter has reached:
6. Another letter says:

This is by no means an exhaustive catalogue. I do not know whether you have an adequate conception of the mischief done.

127. LETTER TO PREMA KANTAK

December 3, 1946

CHI. PREMA,

I got your letter only today. I am in a far-off place. There is no post office here. How, then, can there be any facility for telegrams? I am stuck here. I may never leave the place. I can leave only when things become perfectly normal again. If they do not, I would prefer to die here. You may assume that just now I have forgotten all about Sevagram, Uruli-Kanchan, and so on.

I am alone here, but it is not likely that I shall be left so. I do not seem to be destined for such a test.

I will inform you when the dhotis are received. I will start wearing them immediately. My ahimsa is going to be severely put to the test here. The job is a difficult one.

Sushila came to see me for the first time yesterday after she had gone and taken up work in a village. I suppose you know that it was her birthday. She is deeply engrossed in her work.

How can you leave your work? You can easily be assigned one village. You are perfectly fit for the work, but I should not like to ask you to leave your work there. If you can come without any dislocation of your work you may do so.

1 The letters are not reproduced in the sources. The Last Phase, however, says that one of them gave details of an incident in which a Muslim mob of 250 had attacked a Hindu village, and the other referred to the economic boycott of Hindus by Muslims in the Chandpur sub-division.

2 ibid

3 The addressee used to send two hand-spun dhotis to Gandhiji every year.

4 Sushila Pai, one of Gandhiji’s secretarial aides; she had been working in a village called Karpara.
Sushila must be sending you all the details. I shall not, therefore, write more.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10450. Also C. W. 6880. Courtesy: Prema Kantak

128. LETTER TO PYARELAL

December 3, 1946

CHI . . . .

I have written about this matter to Suhrawardy.¹ Read it when you come here. Write to Sir Datar Singh that I have written to the Premier. I shall inform him of the developments.

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

129. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING²

SRIRAMPUR,

December 3, 1946

By way of introduction Gandhiji said that he felt very happy that Prof. Nelson³ had thus shared in the prayer. While in detention at the Aga Khan Palace, Mirabehn used to sing this hymn to him in her rich, sonorous voice. He then paraphrased the meaning of the first three verses and said that the sentiment expressed in it was the same as found in the Gajendra Moksha bhajan sung last evening. There was the same reliance upon God, who was the source of all strength when every other earthly aid failed us. All human power was transient and real safety could lie only when we placed our reliance wholly on God.

Beneath the shadow of Thy throne
Thy saints have dwelt serene;
Sufficient is Thine arm alone
And our defence is sure.

This was a lesson which all of us in Noakhali sorely needed to learn.

Harijan, 5-1-1947

¹ Sushila Pai, one of Gandhiji’s secretarial aides; she had been working in a village called Karpara.
² Extracted from “Srirampur Diary”
³ Professor Stuart Nelson of Howard University, Washington. He had come for relief work in Noakhali on behalf of the Friends Service Unit. He attended the prayer and recited from Isaac Watt’s famous hymn ‘Our God, our help in ages past’.

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
130. LETTER TO MIRABEHN

SIRAMPUR, NOAKHALI DISTRICT,

December 4, 1946

CHI. MIRA,

Your letter dated November 18 reached me only yesterday. You know I am in a more inaccessible place than you are in.¹ The distance is not too great but there is no cart road even. When the overflow canal water dries up, as it will in about ten days, all but walking to and fro will be out of place. The post is taken by runners as it was in Kathiawar only a few years ago and is in some places even now.

Don’t worry about me. Put your faith and trust in God. I am in His safe keeping. He will make or mar me. For Him it will be all making, never marring.

Newspapers do not come here regularly. When they come, they come behind time and what does come is local newspapers. Therefore, one does not know what appears in the Press. My prescription is “Don’t believe what appears in the Press”, and remember that no news is good news. Do you know that A. J. Balfour² when he was Prime Minister used to boast that he never read newspapers and lost nothing.

Then I suppose you know that all my companions are distributed in different villages. Pyarelal sees me often but he is not with me. He is in a village by himself assisted by a Bengali interpreter. I have Parasuram with me and therefore am able to dictate. The original idea was that I should take and want no assistance except a Bengali interpreter. Parasuram always helped Pyarelal but here he could not be placed by himself in a village. He was naturally anxious to be with me directly but he could not when I had all other assistance and was doing another class of work. Now that he is here, in addition to looking after me personally, he does my shorthand.

¹ In Bapu’s Letters to Mira, “Note to Manu Gandhi”, 19-1-1947, Mirabehn explains: “In April, I had become Honorary Adviser to the United Provinces Government in connection with the ‘Grow More Food’ campaign. This had entailed a lot of tour in the hot weather, and I was now in Mussoorie for recouping my health.”

² Arthur James Balfour, British Prime Minister, 1902–05
work, which enables me to go through what I had not expected or bargained for. And the Bengali assistant is a Professor who has for years made a deep study of my writings. Therefore, I have got most desirable assistance, but that assistance cannot cope with newspapers. Hence my outside work has been reduced to a minimum.

The work here is new, very pleasant, equally taxing. My ahimsa is on its trial. More of this another time. This is only to relieve you of all anxiety on my behalf. I am now taking or trying to take the usual diet but it may take some time after the twenty-one days’ denial to get used to it. I am progressing towards normal strength as quickly as I can. I dare not be in a hurry.

Now I see you resumed the thread you left on November 18, on 22. Your problems are extraordinary but they are all of your own making. Therefore you can, as you must, reduce them to a manageable degree. You will not find the men or the man by searching. He or they will come to you if God wants you to do the type of work for which you want the man. I will, therefore say, wait on Him and do what you can without vexing the soul. Krishnachandra, I think, will not come. He is now content to be under Vinoba and gives him full satisfaction and, so far as I know, is himself satisfied. He has not written to me for over a month. I know no other person whom I can send to you, nor do I think will Ghanshyamdasji be able to give you any guidance. He can only give you money but that is not what you need or should need. The Ashram is purely your own original idea. If the present site is not suitable for you, you should make what use you can of it. Personally, I would say, give up the idea of Ashram life except for your own person. Then you won’t feel cramped and you can expand as high or as broad as the universe. You know that as ashram I disbanded Sabarmati and it became a Harijan institution. The original was Satyagraha Ashram. That is gone for ever. Do not therefore ever think of handing over to anybody else the Ashram of your conception. Have in the present place married men or bachelors or whoever serves efficiently the activities you may take up. Otherwise, you will break down in health in spite of the most ideal weather you can have. Remember that in all I have said in the foregoing I have made the fullest allowance for your conception of the Ashram and because I have done so I have advised you to restrict the Ashram ideal to yourself, taking as your co-workers as many capable persons as you can get so long as their presence or manners do not jar on you or interfere with your own growth.¹

I hope I have carried to you the whole of my meaning. If so, I have done.

This I have dictated before going out for my walk, i.e., as soon after 7.30 in the morning as possible. I have been working since 4 o’clock Standard Time—5 o’clock Local Time. This includes the usual prayer time. The prayer is conducted by Parasuram.

Blessings from
BAPU²

From the original: C. W. 6520. Courtesy: Mirabehn. Also G. N. 9915

131. LETTER TO H. S. SUHRAWARDY

SRIRAMPUR (EAST BENGAL),
December 4, 1946

DEAR FRIEND,

Sardar Bahadur Sir Datar Singh of the Department of Agriculture, Government of India, New Delhi, writes to me to say that difficulty is being experienced in their land being restored to the Calcutta Pinjrapole Society. This was seized for military purposes evidently during the war period. The reason given for the refusal is that “the Provincial Government have under consideration a scheme for the development of the Kanchrapara area”. I fancy that the decision about the development scheme must necessarily take a longtime to make. When and if it is made there should be no difficulty in the Government appropriating the restored land. Meanwhile, it could be utilised for a benevolent purpose, namely, increase in the

¹ Mirabehn explains: “This letter led me definitely to the decision to give up the idea of trying to keep Kisan Ashram as a Brahmachari Ashram and to put married men with their families there. Bapu’s advice that I should restrict the Ashram of my conception to myself, I whole-heartedly accepted and as I was at that time planning a Government scheme for cattle development in the reserve forests near Rishikesh, I decided to settle in a little cottage on Gangaji’s bank in the middle of the grazing lands and make that my Ashram.”

² The subscription is in Hindi.
supply of milk for the city of Calcutta. Of course, the stipulation for restoration may well be made that the reverted land should be used only for the above purpose.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

THE HON’BLE THE PRIME MINISTER
(BENGAL)
CALCUTTA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

132. LETTER TO E. STANLEY JONES

AS FROM SEVAGRAM,
“VIA” WARDHA (INDIA),
CAMP: SRIRAMPUR,
EAST BENGAL,
December 4, 1946

DEAR DR. JONES,

Dr. Nelson¹ was with me yesterday with Mrs. Alexander and we immediately became as old friends. He gave me your letter which I had not read when I made myself at home with him. The reason for my not reading your letter there and then was that he was in the company of several friends and I was about to go to the prayer meeting² in which he took keen interest and wanted to read from a Pelican book in his possession, “Our God, our help in ages past” which I readily let him do, and at the close of the prayer the few words that I said to the audience consisted of a free rendering of the hymn he read but could not or would not sing. I have invited him to drop in again when he wished to which he said he would do in a few days time.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. G.

REV. DR. E. STANLEY JONES
150 FIFTH AVENUE
NEW YORK CITY

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

¹ Dr. William Stuart Nelson of Howard University. Washington. He had come for relief work in Noakhali on behalf of the Friends Service Unit.
² Vide “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 3-12-1946
133. LETTER TO NAZIR

CAMP: SRIRAMPUR,
EAST BENGAL,
December 4, 1946

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your draft for 5,000 rupees on behalf of the Ahmadiya Community for relief to sufferers in the recent Noakhali disturbances. The amount will be used as earmarked by you.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

THE NAZIR
UMOOR KHRIRAH
QADIAN

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

134. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

SRIRAMPUR,
December 4, 1946

CHI. VALLABHBHAI,

Herewith a statement of my views\(^1\) about the Constituent Assembly. Please go through it and do what you think fit. Jawaharlal’s absence will be a handicap. I hold very strong views in the matter. There is certainly no weakness on our part in giving up the plan. Doing what the situation demands is no weakness. But maybe I am quite wrong.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

_Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine_. p. 328

---

\(^1\)Vide “Note on the Constituent Assembly”, 3-12-1946
135. LETTER TO P. C. GHOSH

December 4, 1946

CHI. PROFULLA.

My views [about the Constituent Assembly] are enclosed herewith. You can show them to those of our friends whom you want to. Even after the meeting on the 9th, their publication can be put off or withheld. Personally I would like their publication. One of the two drafts will have to be finalized for publication.

My views will have to be conveyed to Maulana in any case.

Meet Ghanshyamdas. Do consult him.

Show them to Sharat Babu. I have already written who should publish it. There was no need for it.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

I am sending one more copy.

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 3785

136. DISCUSSION WITH AMIYA CHAKRAVARTY

[December 4, 1946]

At meal time Prof. Amiya Chakravarty of the Calcutta University, who had come to him on a visit, asked him the question as to what should be the technique for approaching the wrongdoers so that their resistance should be dissolved. “The chief difficulty with the callous perpetrators of crimes is,” Dr. Chakravarty remarked, “that they are not only unrepentant but defiant and even jubilant over their misdeeds.” Gandhiji replied:

Yes, they have their own reason to be jubilant and the only way to meet their attitude is not to succumb to it but to live in their midst and retain one’s sense of truth. Goodness must be joined with knowledge. Mere goodness is not of much use as I have found in life. One must cultivate the fine, discriminating quality which goes with spiritual courage and character. One must know, in a crucial situation, when to speak and when to be silent, when to act and

1 Extracted from “Do or Die at Work” by Pyarelal
2 From Hindustan Standard, 9-12-1946
when to refrain. Action and non-action in these circumstances become identical instead of being contradictory.

I am groping for light. I am surrounded by darkness; but I must act or refrain as guided by truth. I find that I have not the patience and the technique needed in these tragic circumstances; suffering and evil often overwhelms me and I stew in my own juice. Therefore, I have told my friends that they should bear with me and work or refrain as guided by wisdom which is now utterly demanded of us. This darkness will break and, if I see light even those who created the tragedy of the recent communalism in Bengal, will.

The new basis has to be built here in the villages where the Hindus and the Muslims have lived and suffered together in the land of their forefathers and must live together in the future. For the time being I have become a Bengali and a Noakhali man. I have come to live and share their task, to cement the two together or to perish in the attempt. I am in the midst of a raging fire and will stay here till it is put out. For this reason, I do not want to leave these parts. Life must be made livable for the sorely afflicted men and women. The work of organization must go on and the physical as well as moral rescue achieved.

Dr. Chakravarty next suggested that the reports from Gandhiji’s associates who are now working separately in the different villages should be collected and collated so that fellow-workers could gain new light on the technique of the non-violence of the strong that was being evolved and experimented within East Bengal. Gandhiji replied:

The time is not yet ripe for that. They have gone with my best wishes but to an atmosphere which is still unhelpful. They are following not a beaten path but a trackless route. Their work lies in the midst of a Muslim population. They do not know the language and are not familiar with local problems. I myself don’t know what the next step is and cannot guide them. They are unable to send reports now. If I made a chart for them, they would be able to keep a log-book. Even the great Thakkar Bapa, as old as myself, a seasoned worker and utterly selfless, is working away without knowing what he is doing—a thing he has never done before in his life. But I am hopeful that order will come out of what is for us the necessary chaos. Then what you wish, and I also, will be forthcoming and will be a most

---

1 This sentence is reproduced from Hindustan Standard, 8-12-1946.
2 This sentence is reproduced from Hindustan Standard, 9-12-1946.
valuable record for future workers.

A. C. That is what all our people feel and also workers abroad. Noakhali has now become a laboratory where a crucial test is being made; the remedy will apply to situations all the world over where disputes arise between communities and nationalities and a new technique is needed for peaceful adjustment.

G. From London too I have heard to the same effect. People are interested in what happens in Noakhali. I feel that my responsibility is great and that our work has to ring true.

A. C. That Bengal should be chosen for this great task, that you should have made this your centre, is, to us, a supreme privilege though people have suffered and are suffering beyond description. The whole of Bengal is conscious of your arrival and of the fact that you have come to live and work with the suffering men and women who need you so much at this hour.

G. For me, if this thing is pulled through, it will be the crowning act of my life. I had to come down to the soil and to the people of East Bengal. The first person to whom I mentioned this was Jawaharlal. Without a moment’s hesitation he replied: “Yes, your place is there. Although we need you so much here, we need you more in Noakhali.” I asked him, “When?” As soon as you feel like it,” he replied. In two days I started.

_Harijan_, 12-1-1947; and _Hindustan Standard_, 8-12-1946 and 9-12-1946

137. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

SRIRAMPUR, December 4, 1946

As Gandhiji began his daily discourse, he gave unstinted praise to the musicians. Indeed, he said, he had never heard the Bengal mridanga (drum) played so well as was done at the meeting. When played well it had a sweetness all its own. He had also appreciated the namasankirtan; but he hoped that it did not come merely from the throat but from their heart. For, a parrot also can repeat what it learns from its master. There is hardly any virtue when we take the name of God when we live in safety. It becomes real only when taken in danger.

He would never mind if a Hindu recited the kalma willingly and with a full

---

1 Extracted from “Srirampur Diary”
2 The report said: “Shortly before prayer, a group of people from the neighbouring villages arrived, singing the namasankirtan to the accompaniment of the khol (drum) and the karatala (cymbals). When the Ramdhun was being sung, they kept time by means of the khol.”

104 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
heart. But if he did so out of fear of losing his life or possessions, then he took the name of God in vain, for it was the voice of Satan which then spoke through him. As he understood Islam, it had never prospered nor could prosper by means of force. Any man who pretended to serve Islam in that manner only did a disservice to the noble religion.

Every religion today had become tainted by unwanted accretions. In Hinduism we treated a large part of our brethren as untouchables, and Gandhiji said he had no doubt that we were paying sorrowfully for that sin.

The first verse of the Ishopanishad contained the essence of Hindu spiritual experience. The purport of the verse was that all that existed in the universe was pervaded by and had its being in God. Therefore, no man could claim anything as his own. He should dedicate his body, mind and all that he possessed to that Universal Being and use only what he received through His grace. The moral of it was that we should deprive no man of his wealth, whether it be in the shape of life, honour or religion. A believer in this truth, living up to it, shed all fear and lived in perfect peace.

The verses of the Bhagavad Gita were then referred to as they formed the next item in the Ashram’s evening prayer. They described the characteristics of one who had attained knowledge and brought his senses under full control. The lesson of the Bhagavad Gita was meant not for those who had forsaken the world, but for every householder, irrespective of his birth and state. Everybody’s duty should be to attain the state described therein and this could only be done if life was built on the rock of fearlessness.

Harijan, 5-1-1947

138. NOTE TO PYARELAL

[After December 4, 1946]

I am still groping. I see I have not the knack. I have not yet quite found the key to ahimsa. Here I am out to perform a stupendous yajna, but my unfitness for the task is being demonstrated at every step. There can, however, be no running away. And where can I run away? Success or failure is not in our hands. It is enough if we do our part well. I am leaving no stone unturned. Ours is but to strive. In the end it will be as He wishes.

1 II. 54-72
2 Extracted from “Do or Die at Work” by Pyarelal
3 Inferred from Pyarelal’s introductory remarks
4 This sentence is reproduced from Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase.
139. LETTER TO HANNAH LAZAR

AS FROM SEVAGRAM,
“VIA” WARDHA, INDIA,
CAMP: SRIRAMPUR,
EAST BENGAL,
December 5, 1946

DEAR HANNAH,

I have your letter full of pathos and also full of news which I would not have got otherwise. I like your frankness. Who does not like life? Therefore, it is no fault in you that you should like life and that you should have also likes and dislikes. But though these are common to mankind we have got to overcome them if life is to become rich in reality, and the memory of departed dear ones is to become a treasure. It can only be to the extent that it enables us to translate in our own lives the best parts of dear ones and Hermann undoubtedly had many such parts which we may copy with advantage. You should therefore try to do so.

I am glad you went to Phoenix to help Manilal when he was so much in need of your help. I am glad Isele has qualified as a doctor and that she has got a permanent job as house physician in the General Hospital. Are you otherwise at peace with yourself? Manilal will tell you that I am at present engaged in tackling the most difficult piece of work in my life and I am staying in a most inaccessible part of India at the present moment.

Do not hesitate to write to me whenever the spirit moves you. It is easy enough for me to promise not to write in reply every time I hear from you. This time I feel like writing in order to encourage you to write to me regularly and also to tell you that you have in me your best friend who will try somewhat to do what Hermann used to do so fully. You are bound to miss him as we all do. He certainly expected to come back to me had he lived. But God willed otherwise.

Love,

BAPU

HANNAH LAZAR
JOHANNESBURG

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy:
Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

1 Niece of Hermann Kallenbach, Gandhiji’s co-worker in South Africa
140. LETTER TO T. PRAKASAM

SRIRAMPUR,
NOAKHALI DISTT.,
December 5, 1946

DEAR PRAKASAM,

I have your letter with enclosures. I have studied all the papers you have sent to me. Your statement appears to me to be in order so far as it goes. But I do feel that if the new policy\(^1\) becomes popular with the masses, the concentrated production of cotton will become decentralised and distributed like khadi cloth itself and to that extent the Presidency will be the gainer, as the whole of India will, if it takes up the Madras policy, as it will, if Madras succeeds, as it ought to if the villagers take up khadi with zest. They will, if khadi becomes cheaper than unprotected mill cloth, as Shri Manu Subedar has shown from the figures, which I have printed in Harijan.

The argument in the cuttings you have been good enough to send me makes no appeal to me and if I get time from the heavy Noakhali work before me I shall write in Harijan. But I know nothing about the legal argument which, of course, you will get properly examined by the Advocate-General and other lawyers expert in the matter and, if the legal argument is against you, naturally you will resile from the position taken up by you. But I take it that you had the legal position carefully examined before you took the plunge.

But apart from the question of establishing new mills or expanding the old ones, how is the scheme progressing? Have you already made the commencement? How are the people concerned taking it? Is the legislature overwhelmingly with you? I am in such an inaccessible place that I get very few newspapers and they are local ones. I, therefore, know very little of what is going on outside Noakhali. Therefore Noakhali at present is my world and it is large enough for me.

Please keep me informed of what is going on about the scheme and do not hesitate to make concrete suggestions if you expect me to do anything concrete.

Yours,

BAPU

---

\(^1\) Madras Khadi Scheme

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar
A special messenger from the District Magistrate, Comilla, delivered your packet containing your two letters dated 2nd and 3rd instant respectively. I am glad that you are going to issue some such statement as suggested by me. In these days of fear, sometimes not without ground and sometimes groundless, no contradiction should be superfluous, much less appear foolish.

2. If “some mischievous Hindu young men have been throwing crackers and missiles at Muharrum processions”, I would suggest that they should be brought to book.

3. I note that you have devoted a considerable portion of your letter of the 2nd December and the whole of the 3rd December to Bihar, and you have repeated the advice you have given me often enough that my place is rather in Bihar than in Noakhali. If I find any confirmation of the most serious statements made by you about Bihar, I confess that I have egregiously blundered by resuming normal diet. But I am loath to reject the testimony of Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, then of Dr. Rajendra Prasad, both responsible men and persons who had gone specially for the purpose of seeing things for themselves and allaying mob fury. They admit that the behaviour of the Hindu crowds was bad enough in all conscience but they do not bear out the statements made in your letter. Nor do they uphold the figure given by you. They also tell me that mob fury has subsided and that the Government have regained control undoubtedly with the assistance of the military. If I could feel that my presence was at all necessary in Bihar, I assure you that I would not need any encouragement from you to do so. On the contrary, my informants assure me that my presence is not required in Bihar. In these circumstances, unless I feel sure of my ground, I know that I must go to Bihar. But I would like to make the assurance doubly sure and with that end in view I would be glad to get your permission to send copies of your letters to the Prime Minister of Bihar and know his reaction. There too you will pardon me, will you not, for not taking your statements as gospel truth. For one thing, you have no first-hand knowledge of events. I suggest that there should be an impartial commission, appointed with the consent of the two Governments, to go into the disturbances both in Noakhali and Bihar.\(^1\) If your statements are true and the callous behaviour of the Bihar Government, which you so graphically describe, can be sustained, it is a bad day for the Bihar Government, a bad day for the Hindus and good-bye to restoration of friendly relations between the two communities, and it would be a serious question for me to consider where I stand. The least I can permit myself to say is that then I should have no hesitation in publicly denouncing the Bihar Ministers and Bihar Hindus. I would plead with you to suspend, if you at all can, final judgment in the matter.

\[1\] Vide “Statement to the Press”, 20,11-1946

4. Now I come to Noakhali. I sent you a longish letter yesterday and I asked Satis Babu to arrange for its quickest delivery through a special messenger. I tried even to see if there was possibility of sending it by air but I failed. You have painted a rosy picture of things in Noakhali. I wish I could share your estimate. I have formed no judgment. I have passed on to you the purport of much of what is handed to me in writing and what is given to me by word of mouth. If the information imparted to me is correct, things are not safe enough in Noakhali. Hindus have not shed their fear and from what you say even the Muslims are not free from it. My business in coming here is not to sow or promote dissensions between the two. I regard myself, as I have ever been, an equal friend of both. I know that through no fault of which I am conscious I have lost caste in the Muslim League circles. No Muslim friend has yet been able to tell me what I have done to deserve that fate. I am in Noakhali to be judged by my conduct. My non-violence is at stake. Bear with me whilst I am groping. I am the same person as I was when we met in Faridpur and later in Deshbandhu’s house after his death. This much is enough for time being.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

[PS.]

Wish you could show me a quicker way of reaching my letters to you, as they are likely to be important and probably frequent.

M. K. G.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

\(^1\) Apparently Gandhiji’s suggestion did not find favour with the Muslim League.
DEAR AGATHA,

Ramakrishna Bajaj has sent me your welcome letter. Carl Heath did write to me and I wrote to him at once. I have no doubt he will share that letter with you. I, therefore, say no more about the subject matter of the letter, important though it is.

Here I am in an inaccessible part of Bengal and dealing with the most difficult part of my mission in life. I have never been in such darkness as I am in today. And the darkness does not come from outside. It is due to my limitations. My faith in ahimsa has never burned brighter and yet I feel that there is something wanting in my technique of it that I feel as though I were on an unbeaten track.

As you must have known, my fast has blown over just now. Bihar is quiet and I am therefore trying to take the usual diet though I have still to be cautious. I hope soon to get over the physical weakness which was inevitable with no-protein and no-starch and no-fat diet. The most satisfactory thing about this reduced diet was that I was able to do full amount of mental work and a fair amount even of physical work.

If this letter reaches while Amrit is still in Europe, please tell her that I have received all her letters but I have written none to her purposely, feeling that she was soon to return and there was every danger of my letters missing her, especially as I am in an out-of-the-way place where there is no post office worth the name and no telegraph office at all. Naturally I am not in touch with what is going on in Delhi. If my mission succeeds here I shall be fit enough for further work. Anyway, so far as I know, I have to bury myself here till mutual confidence and friendship between the communities are restored. What happens here will happen throughout India, because Bengal is the nerve centre.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G. N. 1527
143. LETTER TO YVONNE PRIVAT

AS FROM SEVAGRAM, via WARDHA,
CAMP: SRIRAMPUR,
December 5, 1946

DEAR BHAKTI,

I have your very good letter. I am sorry that you are not getting Harijan at all. I am inquiring. Probably there is some legal difficulty in sending Harijan to foreign parts. I cannot understand that the Manager has neglected your copy.

Pyarelalji tells me that the paper edited by Anand\textsuperscript{1} is being received.

Of course, under the new arrangement all the co-workers are distributed in the affected villages of Noakhali.

I am hoping with you that some day we shall meet again. How, when and where, God alone knows. Of course I remember the occaision when I called you “babes in the wood” which you always will be to me.

Love to you both.

BAPU

MADAME YVONNE PRIVAT
1 AVENUE DE LA GARE
NEUCHATEL
SWITZERLAND

From a photostat: G. N. 8802

\textsuperscript{1} Edmond Privat, addressee’s husband
CHI. NARANDAS.

Your letter calls for a reply. I have resumed my normal food. Hence there is no cause at all now for worry. Really speaking worry has no place in a thoughtful life. The present mission is the most complicated of all I have undertaken in my life. "I cannot see my path in the thick darkness of the night, take this your child under your protecting care. Light up the path of my life." I can sing these lines¹ with perfect truth. I do not remember to have experienced such darkness in my life ever before, and the night seems long. My only consolation is that I have not accepted defeat or given way to despair. His will be done.

I mean to do or die here. "To do" means to restore amity between Hindus and Muslims; or I should perish in the attempt. This is difficult to achieve. But it will be as God wills.

All the co-workers have offered themselves up in this sacrifice of their own accord, but if they repent, they are free to leave. They have been posted, each in one village, with a Bengali interpreter to help him or her. Kanaiyo also is away from me as a part of this plan, and so is Abha.

I am camping in an unfortunate village in the interior. Parasuram, who cannot be posted alone because of the language difficulty, is with me. He is a silent worker and an expert stenographer. The other is a Bengali professor. Both give me personal services, too. Most of the others are at a distance of ten miles from me. They can come and see me whenever it is necessary. Pyarelal, Sushila Nayyar and Sushila Pai also are camping in different villages. Kanaiyo had fever for one day. He is better now. There is no cause for worry. He himself is quite cheerful. He leads the Ramdhun and remains fearless. God has blessed him with fine health. Abha is perfectly safe. She has gone with Bapa. She is in a village sixteen miles away. Kanaiyo preferred this arrangement. Bapa has taken great interest in her and is pleased with her spirit of service. She makes rotlis for him and, being a Bengali, works among Bengali women. She was not happy to be separated from me, but dharma dictated that course and so I sent her away. I had also started regarding her services as a necessity. However, in this difficult sadhana of mine, how can I afford to make a habit of getting service from others? You will now see that every step taken is being dictated by dharma. Everybody there should rejoice at what is happening. I have now written enough. You should go on with your work.

¹ From Narasinhrao Divatia’s “Premal Jyoti” a Gujarati rendering of Newman’s “Lead, Kindly Light”

Blessings from

BAPU

---

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C. W. 8637. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

145. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

December 5, 1946

DAUGHTER AMTUL SALAAM,

Yesterday you must have left a little wiser. Life should be reflective. Without thinking, life becomes worthless. That is why I am sending you this postcard from Raihana\(^1\). Write a line to her when you get the time. I am not writing to her.

Blessings from

BAPU

---

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 542

146. DISCUSSION WITH HINDU MAHASABHA LEADERS\(^2\)

December 5, 1946

Put yourself in Mr. Suhrawardy’s shoes; do you think he would favour it, or even the Muslim residents of Noakhali? For it would be interpreted as a preparation for war. But if you believe that this is the only workable scheme, you can go ahead with it.

For myself, the path is different. I have become a Bengali to

---

1. Raihana Tyabji
2. N. K. Bose explains: “Nirmal Chandra Chatterji and Debendranath Mukherjee, President and Secretary of the Hindu Mahasabha, Naren Bose, brother of Suren Bose, the first victim of Noakhali, and a few others had a 45-minute interview when the Mahasabha’s project of segregating the Hindu population in Noakhali for purposes of safety was discussed.”
all intents and purposes. Today Nirmal Babu is my ears and is indispensable, but when I learn enough Bengali, he will be free to go.

Then he explained his own plan—how he had already posted one worker in each village, with a Bengali interpreter where necessary, in order to “steal the hearts of the inhabitants”. It did not matter if there was only one or many Hindus in a village; his prescription was that they should stick to their posts and even face death, if necessary, with courage and willingness. If they lived in clusters, it would really mean accepting the Muslim League’s mischievous two-nation theory. Then he added:

If there has to be migration at all, it must be complete. I am not going to be a willing party to Pakistan. Even if I fail to prevent it and all Hindus go away, I shall still remain here; and shall not make a single change in my religious practice.

Nirmal Babu remarked that no one had taken to this advice so far, as the scheme was beyond the strength of the average individual. Gandhiji replied:

If some could die like this, the few shall become many. I am not a visionary as I am generally supposed to be. I am an idealist, but I claim to be a practical idealist. I have been born a Hindu and I shall die a Hindu, a sanatanist Hindu. If there is salvation for me, it must be as a Hindu. Hinduism absorbs the best in other religions, and there is scope for expansion in it.

Nirmal Babu thanked him for his kindness in thus taking up the cause of Bengal. Gandhiji immediately replied that it was no kindness and if it was, it was kindness to himself. He said:

My own doctrine was failing. I don’t want to die a failure but as a successful man. But it may be that I may die a failure.

My Days with Gandhi, pp. 96-7

147. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

December 6, 1946

CHI. GHANSHYAMDAS,

I got your letter of December 2 today as also Rajendra Babu’s.

What you have written is reasonable, but I feel that this resistance to evil is not honest. My point is that the whole game is lost if we resort to the law of the jungle. One may react to violence by counter-violence, but that counter-violence can be either brutal or civilized and effective. What happened in Bihar was brutal and ineffective and so was the case in Garhmukteshwar. In such matters the precedents from Mahabharata and Bhagavata can mislead us. Our life, that is, the ways of our people should become thoughtful and orderly. My effort is in this direction, the result is in the hands of God. I am not writing to Rajendra Babu separately. Please do not worry about my health. I take good care of it.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Hindi original: C. W. 8084. Courtesy: G. D. Birla

148. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

SRIRAMPUR,
December 6, 1946

Gandhiji began his after-prayer speech by saying that true prayer never went unanswered. It did not mean that every little thing we asked for from God was readily given to us. It was only when we shed our selfishness with conscious effort and approached God in true humility that our prayers found a response.

In the Ashram prayer nothing was asked. The prayer was for God to make them better men and women. If the prayer came truly from the heart, God’s grace would surely descend upon them. There was not a blade of grass which moved without his will, not one single true thought which did not leave a mark on character. It was good, therefore, to develop the daily habit of prayer.

Harijan, 5-1-1947

149. LETTER TO D. B. KALELKAR

Unrevised
SRIRAMPUR,
December 7, 1946

CHI. KAKA,

I have the letter you wrote on your way back from Assam. You have given a concise but complete description.

I think you cannot leave Wardha. Being the Kaka of Wardha you have a responsibility which you cannot forsake. Moreover, Satish’s is with you and can give you all the help you need in English. If Narahari joins you there, nothing like it. But I shall understand if he cannot and also if he does. I know that whatever decision he takes will be prompted by his regard for dharma.

1 Extracted from “Srirampur Diary”
2 Addressee’s elder son
3 Narahari Parikh
Whatever happens, do not give up writing for Harijan. And dictating, too. You will be able to collect a lot of material from there. Pyarelal does write something every time. I have asked him not to carry that load.

I am getting more and more busy with the work here. I may not, therefore, be able to write anything. The task here is a difficult one.

The situation in Assam seems all right. Bardoloi need have no fear. What need he fear who does his duty?

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

I have still not been able to take up the Hindustani work.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10985

150. LETTER TO JUGAL KISHORE BIRLA

SRIRAMPUR,

December 7, 1946

BHAJ JUGAL KISHORE,

Baba Raghavdas gave me a full account of the passing away of Malaviyaji. He also mentioned your pledge. You should therefore certainly set apart Rs. 25 lacs for the temple¹. However, I am afraid, it will not be conducive to the progress of Hinduism if Malaviyaji’s concept of the temple complex is translated literally. If the spirit of his concept is followed, it would raise Hinduism to greater heights. Today Hinduism is being compared with other religions. Under the circumstances, if we followed [his words] literally Hinduism would perish, while the spirit behind them will put new life into it. Baba Raghavdas will tell you the rest.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ It was to be erected on the Banaras Hindu University campus.
151. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

SRIRAMPUR
December 7, 1946

Gandhiji referred in his few words to a writing by a Mussalman. In it the writer had rightly contended that a man of God was never afraid to die or to lose his possessions for the sake of his self-respect or religion. God had given us life and could take it away. That teaching was universal and applied to all, Hindus as well as Mussalmans. Those who had in God their sole refuge cast out all fear. Then there could be lasting friendship between the two. He had been trying all these days to din this lesson into the ears of his listeners. There was a time when Mussalmans also listened to him; but now things seemed to have changed and even among Hindus there were not many who would follow his advice. But he felt sure lasting peace could come only when men of whatever community refused to surrender to any fear save the holy fear of God.

Harijan, 5-1-1947

152. LETTER TO PYARELAL

8.20 p. m., December 7, 1946

CHI. PYARELAL,

I have your letter and also the description. The description is good. It moved me deeply. It is true that the sooner all of us learn Bengali the better will it be. I have always believed that the task is a difficult one. There will be nothing more difficult than this in my lifetime. We shall survive if God wills.

You are not to rush in where the situation is dangerous. We have to suffer what falls to our lot. I feel that it would have been all right even if you had not gone to that place. Anyway I am not upset about it. Let us all die while doing our duty. Sushila is sitting by my side. We shall meet on Tuesday.

Blessings from
BAPU

1 Extracted from “Srirampur Diary”
153. MESSAGE FOR BABA RAGHAVDAS

[After December 7, 1946]

It is my firm conviction that the education imparted by the British administration, whether at the primary or the higher level, is not conducive to the progress of India, nor could it ever have been so. I have no doubt that only the scheme of education devised by the Talimi Sangh is the right education. And that is meant for all village people whether Hindus or others.

M. K. GANDHI

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

154. A LETTER

SRIRAMPUR (NOAKHALI),
December 8, 1946

What you describe as my “unparalleled action” is really the natural and logical conclusion of the creed of non-violence which I hold as dear as life itself.

_Hindustan Standard, 12-12-1946_

155. LETTER TO SATYENDU SUNDER CHAKRAVARTY

SRIRAMPUR,
NOAKHALI DISTT.,
December 8, 1946

DEAR SATYENJI,

I was delighted to receive your letter not merely for its contents but also because you are the late Syam Sunder Chakravarty’s son. I can never forget his features, his transparent sincerity and fearlessness. What you describe as my “unparalleled action” is really the natural and logical conclusion of the creed of non-violence which I hold as

---

1 Pachapurkar Raghavendra Seshappa (1896-1958); joined Indian National Congress in 1920; elected to U. P. Vidhan Sabha in 1946; an ardent advocate of Hindi; he established the Rashtrabhasha Mahavidyalaya at Gorakhpur.

2 In the source the message is placed after the material of December 7, 1946.

3 The report said that this was in reply to “a correspondent in Calcutta who had written to Gandhiji about the task he had undertaken to accomplish in Noakhali”.

118 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
dear as life itself.

Do come whenever there is need to. Better come any day between 2 and 5 p.m. On Tuesday I have to be out at Madhupur.

Yours,

SHRI SATYENDU SUNDER CHAKRAVARTY
STAFF REPORTER
“HINDUSTAN STANDARD”
1 BURMAN ST.
CALCUTTA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

156. LETTER TO MUNNALAL G. SHAH
December 8, 1946

CHI. MUNNALAL,

I have your postcard. I think your way of service has changed. You cannot now undertake the risks involved in the work here. The task here is a difficult one. Your duty is to live with Kanchan and make her perfectly happy. That is your swadharma. I see your spiritual progress only through her happiness. Whatever happens will be for the good. You are doing right in supervising the construction of the hospital buildings. Take similar interest in the other activities there and do them well. In whatever you do you should have Kanchan’s fullest mental co-operation. Physical co-operation she does give, willingly or unwillingly. But work is true karma only when both body and mind co-operate. This is nothing to be ashamed of. On the contrary, that is the right way to live and only those who live in this way make any progress.

He who curbs the organs of action but allows the mind to dwell on the sense objects, such a one, wholly deluded—is called a hypocrite.

Reflect over this verse' and rejoice. Kanchan should write to me as long as she has the strength to do so. The rest if and when we meet.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 8401. Also C. W. 7219. Courtesy: Munnalal G. Shah

1 Bhagavad Gita, III. 6
157. LETTER TO SHARDA G. CHOKHAWALA

Unrevised December 8, 1946

CHI. BABUDI,

I have your letter. I do respect your eagerness to go and stay with Gordhandas. I know, however, that in your present condition you will not be a help but a burden to him. The better course would be for you to stay in Sevagram, to get well and do as much service there as you can. If, however, Gordhandas does not like that, it would certainly be your duty to respect his wishes. I shall enclose with this the letter I am going to write¹ to him. If Chimanlal and you agree, he may leave that place. If you also cannot be happy there, I think it useless to force you to stay on. I think your remaining there is best for everybody. You are living there as a matter of right and not on sufferance. You belong to the Ashram. Do not worry about me. There is God to protect me.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 10074. Courtesy: Sharda G. Chokhawala

158. LETTER TO CHIMANLAL N. SHAH

December 8, 1946

CHI. CHIMANLAL,

A letter² for Munnalal is enclosed. Read it and then pass it on to him.

Read what I have written³ about Babudi and then advise her as you think fit. If she can be patient and live there peacefully, it would be desirable from every point of view. If she has any difficulties, remove them. She must not feel the slightest want in regard to food. If necessary, Shakaribehn may run her own kitchen and mother and daughter may have their meals separately from the others. It will be enough if you have your meals in the Ashram kitchen. Never mind if anybody criticizes you for this.

¹ Vide the following page.
² Vide the preceding page.
³ Vide the preceding item.
Vijayalakshmi’s wire\(^1\) which Ramprasad gave to the Press does not seem to be reported in any of the papers. What happened? I hope you are keeping good health and the pressure of work is not excessive. The job here is becoming more difficult every day.

\textit{Blessings from BAPU}

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10656

\textbf{159. LETTER TO GORDHANDAS CHOKHAWALA}

\textit{December 8, 1946}

CHI. GORDHANDAS,

\begin{quote}
It is a matter for regret that Chi. Sharda is still not getting well. She is now impatient to go to you. If you need her, it is her duty to go and it is our duty as her elders to send her. But I believe that as long as she remains ill she will not be of any help to you. If you wish to have her near you in the hope that that will benefit her health, I would count it as your ignorance. From the point of view both of climate and other facilities, Sevagram is the right place for Sharda. I am keen that she should first get well and then go to you and help you. If she has patience, with God’s grace she is bound to get well. Since she has not lost any weight, we can certainly hope for improvement. By and by the fever is bound to go. Notwithstanding what I think, however, ultimately, what you wish will be done.
\end{quote}

\textit{Blessings from BAPU}

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 10087. Courtesy: Sharda G. Chokhawala

\textbf{160. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING\(^2\)}

\textit{Srirampur, December 8, 1946}

Gandhiji said that a friend had sent him a book containing the sayings of Prophet Mohammed. He read the book whenever he could snatch a few minutes’ time. Today he tried to select something out of the book for them. Both Hindu and Muslim friends were assembled there and these sayings were such that both ought to practice what they learnt from them.

If men lived according to these precepts, then there would be an end to all

\textsuperscript{1} Vide “What will South Africa Do”, 29-12-1946

\textsuperscript{2} It being Gandhiji’s silence day, the speech was read out.
quarrels. They should be able to live as good neighbours in spite of differences of opinion and of religious belief. He would now present them with the translation of two sayings. The first was this in the original book by Abdullah Almamun Alshua Nawardy: “Actions will be judged according to intentions.”

The second was: “Man is an unbeliever unless he desireth for his brother that which he desireth for himself.”

_The Bombay Chronicle, 11-12-1946_

161. LETTER TO MANILAL GANDHI

December 8, 1946

CHI. MANILAL,

Only today I got your letter. It is excellent. I intend to find some space for it in _Harijan_ and publish it. You are getting excellent help. compliments to all.

You won great credit for yourself as prisoner. Never mind the loss of weight. You will get it back. I was very glad that otherwise you could preserve your general health. It is strange that things should be so bad. Vijayalakshmi’s performance in America is considered to be very good. It is a painful thing, though, that the others spoiled the effect. It is enough that you have proved your worth. How can one tell who will ultimately win the laurels in this?

Acting on your letter, I have already written to Sushila and told her to proceed there with or without the children. I would not risk doing anything against your wishes in this matter. There is no doubt at all that Sushila will be a help to you. Do use the services of the children, too. It will be good if both of you see to it that they do not forget Gujarati but, on the contrary, learn it properly. I am writing this after eight in the evening and cannot, therefore, write more.

I have written to Hanna¹.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 4994

¹ Niece of Hermann Kallenbach, Gandhiji’s co-worker in South Africa
162. LETTER TO MANU S. MASHRUWALA

December 8, 1946

CHI. MANUDI,

I was very glad to see your handwriting. I am of course engrossed in work, but I would welcome letters from you all. Do not worry on my account. I made khakhari\(^1\) only once. Who will let me work? With the great God above to protect me, why need you worry? I get plenty of dry fruits, etc.

I hope all of you are well. Do not spoil your health. It is 8.35 p. m. now and I must, therefore, stop.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 1583. Courtesy: Manu S. Mashruwala

163. EXTRACT FROM DIARY

December 8, 1946

I see my discipline of silence is only skin-deep. Silence is a great art, not easy to master.

_Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase_, Vol. I, Book II, p. 41

164. LETTER TO SATIS CHANDRA MUKHERJEE

SRIRAMPUR, NOAKHALLI,

December 9, 1946

DEAR SATIS BABU\(^2\),

Did Krishnadass tell you about the very silly mistake made, viz., that you had gone to your rest? How I came to have that impression I cannot make out except for the fact that I had not heard from you for a long time. You can therefore imagine my joy when he told me that you were very much alive, were able to have regular walks and were able to give instruction to true seekers as usual. I would love to think

\(^1\) Chapati made of bajra, wheat or jowar flour

\(^2\) 1865-1948. Worked for education on national lines and founded Bhagavat Chatuspathi in 1895; Editor, _Dawn_, 1897-1913; succeeded Aurobindo Ghosh as principal of the National College, Calcutta; in 1922, following Gandhiji’s arrest, helped the management and publication of _Young India_.

VOL. 93: 7 NOVEMBER, 1946 - 16 FEBRUARY, 1947  123
that you will finish your full span of 125 years which I may not do for want of the equanimity prescribed in the concluding verses of the \textit{Gita}, our \textit{kamadhenu}. I am trying hard to reach that state. Do please write to me when you have the time.

Yours,

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: C. W. 10536

165. \textbf{INTERVIEW TO DEOBHANKAR}\textsuperscript{1}

\textit{December 9, 1946}

When Deobhankar asked him as to how the Muslim masses could be won over and unified under the Congress and if this could not be achieved best through some form of economic struggle along class lines, Gandhiji replied that so far such a plan had not succeeded in respect of the people whose communal sentiment had proved too strong. What we had to do was to prevent the Congress from turning into a Hindu communal organization. Anyone who had made India his home should be protected by the Congress. Hindus should never think that Hindustan belonged exclusively to them. The Parsis had come centuries ago, and the Syrian Christians were Christians ever since the time of St. Thomas. Every one of them had to be treated as an Indian enjoying the same rights as any other Indian.

Congressmen should not however approach Muslims in a spirit of appeasement or flattery. Although something like that had been done, and it might even be justifiably said that he himself had partly been responsible for such an attitude, yet, his eyes were now opened and he held that it had been unwise to do so. It was by safeguarding every person’s legitimate interests that Congressmen could prove their genuine love of nationalism. He did not mind even if the Congress were manned by Hindus alone. If its members placed the cause of the whole nation above everything else, then their idealism would ultimately triumph over communalism.

What the Hindus or Mussalmans had exhibited so far in Bengal or Bihar was violence mixed with cowardice; there was no element of bravery in it. To those who did not believe in non-violence, he could hypothetically suggest a more civilized form of revenge than what they had actually been guilty of. Supposing there were a Government in Bihar which believed in violence and not in non-violence, they could have written to the Government in Bengal after the Calcutta riots, ‘Now, here are the inhabitants of this province who have returned from Calcutta. They have become furious and are bent upon taking revenge on the 14 per cent of Mussalmans in Bihar. But we will prevent them from doing so, if we can. In the meanwhile, you should do everything to stop the riot which is even now going on in Bengal.’

\textsuperscript{1} Deobhankar, Shridhar Purushottam Limaye and Rai Bajrang Bahadur, Raja of Bhadri in Partapgarh, U. P., had come with letters from Kripalani, Mridula Sarabhai and Ram Manohar Lohia.

Along with sending such a letter to the Muslim League Government in Bengal, the Government of Bihar should have kept the Muslims of Bihar informed about their efforts. If conditions in Bengal did not improve, they could have notified the Bengal Government that unless the Bihar Muslims left the province for Bengal within, say, eight days, they would have to send the latter forcibly over to Bengal rather than allow them to be butchered in Bihar. And when the eight days had passed, they might have taken necessary steps for evacuating the Muslims of Bihar.

It was quite likely that the Muslims of Bihar would have refused to move and declared that they were with the Congress rather than with the League in the policy that the latter had been pursuing in Bengal. That would have meant a victory for the Congress not only in Bihar but in all those provinces where the Government was run by the Congress.

Such action, though fully violent, would have been better than that to which Bihar had lowered herself today. Violence, when cowardly, only served to degrade and did not yield the desired political result.

Gandhiji lastly said that today he was seeking for a non-violent solution for his own sake alone. For the time being, he had given up searching for a non-violent remedy applicable to the masses. He had yet to see if non-violence would prove successful in the present crisis or not. He expected that things would take a definite turn one way or the other within two months and not remain uncertain as they were at the present moment.

My Days with Gandhi, pp. 102-4

166. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

SRIRAMPUR,

December 9, 1946

Gandhiji, in a short address, told them that it was their duty to take Ramanama at least twice a day, morning and evening. They must take Ramanama in difficult and troublesome days as they did in peaceful days when they lived a peaceful life without fear from anyone. He was very much pleased at their recitation of Ramanama.¹

Hindustan Standard, 12-12-1946

¹ The report said: “. . . for the first time . . . the people of Srirampur and its neighbouring village Kamardiya have picked up courage to recite Ramanama in chorus after the days of Noakhali disturbances. . . .”

VOL. 93: 7 NOVEMBER, 1946 - 16 FEBRUARY, 1947 125
167. LETTER TO DEVPRAKASH NAYYAR

December 10, 1946

CHI. DEV.

I have your letter. It is good. I agree with what you say but at the same time I think that you yourself have to find your own way. We shall do what we can. Come to me when you get leave for this year. Perhaps I may not engage you in the work here. But we shall have a talk and if I can throw some light on the issue I will do so. There is no hitch from my side but do as is convenient to you.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Hindi. Courtesy: National Archives of India

168. TALK TO WOMEN

Srirampur,
[December 10, 1946]¹

Gandhiji told them that since his arrival in Noakhali he had been telling them all to be fearless. If they acted accordingly and were fearless in all their work, they could live in peace. Pointing towards the sky, Gandhiji said:

Believe in Him. Pray to Him and fear Him alone, and none in this world.

Harijan, 19-1-1947

169. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

Srirampur,
December 10, 1946

If Hindus and Muslims in India gathered courage and cast from their hearts the fear of loss of possessions and life the face of India would change in no time, Gandhiji said. But the reformed social relations must be based upon character built on the rock of fearlessness; only thus could true mutual trust be generated. He referred to the saying of Prophet Mohammed quoted on Sunday last and said that in every

¹ Extracted from “Srirampur Diary”. According to the source, “a number of women met Gandhiji . . . in a corner of a paddy field where he was taking his evening walk to tell him their sad tales and the present conditions in which they were living.”

² From Hindustan Standard, 12-12-1946
religion there was a common fund of spiritual experience which applied all over the world.

Whatever differences struck our eyes were the results of requirements limited to particular epochs of time and place. Indeed there were as many religions as there were men on earth; for the needs of no two men were wholly alike. In spite of that, the commonness underlying all the religions could never be missed. A tree had a single stem, many branches and innumerable leaves, no two of which were wholly alike; it was even so in the case of religion.

No religion today was without blemishes. Islam had given rise to the noblest of characters and he counted among his friends men who stood tall and high over their neighbours. But unwanted accretions had gathered in the practice of Islam, which ran counter to the fundamental teachings of that religion.

Similarly, Christian nations, who followed their Master, who taught mankind to love their enemies, had been responsible for two major wars during our generation, which had blighted the face of earth and had left a legacy of suspicion, hatred and violence from which the whole world was suffering today.

In Hinduism too, diabolical wrong had been perpetrated in the name of religion. Our so-called untouchable brethren had been reduced to a condition which was the very opposite of human dignity. Indeed this very charge had been laid against us by General Smuts at the United Nations Assembly in America when Shrimati Vijayalakshmi Pandit demanded justice against the treatment meted out to us in South Africa.

Gandhi ji wound up by saying that both Hindus and Muslims were like blood-brothers. They were nourished by food grown from the same soil, quenched their thirst by water of the same river and finally laid themselves to rest in the same earth. If they feared God, they would fear no one else.

Hindustan Standard, 12-12-1946

170. ANSWER TO QUESTION

[On or before December 11, 1946]

QUESTION: Don’t you think that Bengal Ministers may regard your very presence here as an oppression and that whatever they do out of their own sense of justice towards the rehabilitation of the refugees may be regarded by the outside world as being done under the pressure of your presence?

ANSWER: In the first place your assumption is gratuitous. But if it was not, and the assumption were to accord with facts, your

---

1. Extracted from “Srirampur Diary”. The question was asked by the correspondent of a Madras newspaper.
2. From the Hindustan Standard report which appeared under the date-line “Srirampur, December 11”.

VOL. 93: 7 NOVEMBER, 1946 - 16 FEBRUARY, 1947 127
deduction would be correct and my stay here would not be consistent with ahimsa. I have come here to put my ahimsa to the acid test in this atmosphere of rank distrust and suspicion.

I claim that I have come as a friend as much of the Muslims as of the Hindus in this part of the world. You may recall my visit to Champaran in the very early period of my etur to the mother-land.
I was even served with a notice to quit. The conviction against me was cancelled on the orders of the then Viceroy and the Magistrate was instructed to permit and even help in my unofficial enquiry with the result that I was invited to become a member of the official Sly Commission1 and a century-old wrong was removed.

_Harijan_, 19-1-1947; also _Hindustan Standard_, 13-12-1946

171. TELEGRAM TO JAISUKHLAL GANDHI

RAMGUNJ,

_JAISUKHLAL GANDHI_

CARE SHEPHERD

MAHUVA

IF YOU AND MANU SINCERELY ANXIOUS FOR HER TO BE WITH ME AT YOUR RISK YOU CAN BRING HER TO BE WITH ME. WIRE ARRIVAL KHADI PRATISHTHAN, COLLEGE SQUARE, CALCUTTA.

BAPU

From a microfilm: M.M.U./24

172. LETTER TO V. A. SUNDARAM

SRIRAMPUR, NOAKHALI DISTRICT,

_December 11, 1946_

CHI. SUNDARAM,2

Your letter today with Press cuttings which you have done del well in sending. I have read them all. I have already written3 to Sheth J. K. Birla and sent the note by hand through Baba Raghavdas. You will probably see that letter and you will see too that I have spoken about you to him. In my opinion, your course is clear. If you can breathe the soul of Hinduism into the Viswa Vidyalaya4

---

1. The reference is to the Champaran Agrarian Enquiry Committee of which Frank Sly was the president.
2. The superscription and the signature are in Tamil.
3. Vide "Letter to Jugal Kishore Birla", 7-12-1946
4. Banaras Hindu University
you should stay, not otherwise. I have advised that the stipulated sum should be collected as was desired by Panditji\(^1\). Therefore, an appeal should go from the University to the Princes. They can easily find the sum expected of them and if it is properly managed they will do so. Businessmen will find their portion and the rest will come easily. But all this can and should be done only if a living, befitting temple is built.

The whole of the sum will not be spent in stone and mortar. Some marble is necessary. It should be a unique thing. It ought not to contain any idol. An idol is not a necessity of Hindu belief or a Hindu temple. Such a model structure but very artistic has been built in the Harijan Colony, Kingsway, Delhi. You have seen it. The one in the Viswa Vidyalaya grounds will be twenty times larger, with a great dome with proper acoustic properties, to accommodate an unlimited number of people. It will be a striking thing and there should be a daily service conducted there by priests who will show piety in every one of their activities, private and public. If the idea is grasped, the proper persons will come. More I need not say. You can dot the is and cross the ts.

I have not really the time to spare from the work here before me, but Panditji’s memory is a sacred trust for me. He was much greater than he himself knew. But his limitations were amazing. The wonder is that he surmounted them all.

I am in the hands of God. He will shape me as He will. Don’t worry or fret about me.

You can, if you wish, share this letter with those who were near and dear to him. It is not for publication at all.

BAPU

SHRI V. SUNDARAM

From a photostat: G. N. 3200

\(^1\) Madan Mohan Malaviya
DEAR PROFESSOR,

Sucheta is still in Calcutta attending to her ailing sister. I have asked her not to hasten so long as in her opinion her presence in Calcutta is necessary for her sister. She has not sent me the medical certificate but in her letters she says she will hand it to me when she comes. You may depend upon my not letting her overdo things to the damage of her health. I will see that she is quite safe with me.

Yours is no easy job. But probably it is more difficult than you or I had imagined. I do not think of the two letters of which you have sent me copies in the way you do. I think they are honest letters. Evidently, they have remained members of the Committee, but if I were you I would not insist on their remaining. I will take them at their word and have new blood with you, and I would say that if you find that you are unable to shape the organization in the best way possible and if they let you resign you should do so without a moment’s thought. We can only think of the organization we serve and nothing else.

The friend who brought your letter and Sucheta’s brought also a packet from Mridula. It contained copies of her note prepared for the Congress and another note prepared by her on her experiences of Garhmukteshwar. You must have seen both. I liked them. I read the note on the Congress organization only today. Her suggestions make a forcible appeal to me. I would advise you to ask her to see you and discuss all her proposals with you and enlist her services as also Keskar’s to the extent that they allow you to do so. I think that you should discuss her suggestions with Jawaharlal and let him take an active part in carrying them out. Whether he remains a member or whether he does not, I would not for one moment question his downright honesty. He promises to render all the help he can and I have no doubt that he will do so and perhaps more efficiently, because he would then enjoy freedom of action which he will not do otherwise. He is right also in his reflections on the Hindu-
Muslim question. It is a terrible problem and a great responsibility rests upon the Congress now—therefore, the greatest on you. You have asked me to send for you if I want to. I am not likely to do so, but I do want to feel that you are at liberty to come at any time you like without notice, if you want to consult me about anything. Personally I would say that you should do as your reason and conscience tell you, irrespective of what I may think or may not think. I am too much engrossed in the work before me to think of anything else, unless a letter like yours moves me.

Darkness around me still persists. It comes from within, not from without, but it certainly does not deject or disappoint me. I am passing through a fire such as I have never passed through before. All the same I am quite happy in thought that I am not shirking what I hold to be my duty. God is the Rock of ages and I cling to that Rock.

Blessings from
BAPU
ACHARYA J. B. Kripalani

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

174. LETTER TO MANU S. MASHRUWALA
December 11, 1946

CHI. MANUDI,

I got your letter after many days. I think I have already replied¹ to it. But these days I cannot keep a complete list for I am practically alone. You need not worry about me at all. I am quite well. I do not make my own khakharis. I made them only once. Parasuram is with me.

I hope all three of you are well.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 2682. Courtesy: Manu S. Mashruwala

¹Vide “Letter to Manu S. Mashruwala”, 8-12-1946
175. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

December 11, 1946

CHI. BRIJKRISHNA,

I have your two letters. In reply I have sent you a telegram which you must have received. In order to make progress you must not do what you wish to do, you must follow my instructions. Your first duty, as I see it from this distance, is to improve your health. Whether you have to stay at Benares for six months or more will be decided by me, and that too after seeing how you fare there. After all you will render some service even at Benares. I am not here entirely unattended. I am being looked after very well. It is Parasuram's first duty. Besides, Nirmal Babu is also here and he takes great pains. Therefore do not worry about me at all. Your welfare lies in doing what I say. The error committed by you on your birthday was a small one. You have done ample atonement. This should be enough.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 2492

176. LETTER TO SHANTA

December 11, 1946

CHI. SHANTA,

I have your letter. Do as much work as you can. You are bound to succeed. Teach the people to be clean. They should keep themselves, and the water and the lavatories clean. This kind of work does not require money. This can be done only by patience and by example. You have to keep healthy. The body is the abode of God, it is the real temple. Temples made of stone are temples only in name.

I am here on a difficult mission. Though there is darkness, I am not worried.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Hindi. Courtesy: National Archives of India
177. EXTRACT FROM DIARY

December 11, 1946

Exhaustion continues. . . . It seems I was not fully awake. Fancied it was before me, when in fact it was not. . . . Woke up with a start. Began to grope for it in the dark. Found it after a few minutes. . . . Wanted to take a dose of castor oil. Called Pyarelal thrice. . . . No reply. Tried to go to sleep by reciting Ramanama. Succeeded at last. . . . Why cannot I, who preach the all-healing virtue of Ramanama to others, be content to rely on it exclusively myself?

Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase, Vol. I, Book II, p. 41

178. WHAT WILL SOUTH AFRICA DO?

The deputation headed by Shrimati Vijayalakshmi Pandit and sent to the U. N. O. Conference by the Interim Government has undoubtedly done very effective work with marked ability and success. That is clear from the following cablegram sent by Shrimati Vijayalakshmi Pandit from New York:

Today with your blessings justice of South African Indian cause was vindicated. Committee voting twenty-four to nineteen in our favour. Went to General Smuts after meeting and shook hands. He expressed appreciation at manner in which I had conducted case.²

It remains now to be seen how the Parliament of the Union of South Africa and its European public respond. Field Marshal Smuts was able to hurl at the Indian deputation the taunt that India treated her so-called untouchables, legally described as the “Scheduled Classes”, much worse than the Union treated her Asiatics or for that matter the Africans. There would be much to be said for

¹ Pyarelal explains: “After the morning walk he felt so utterly exhausted that he had to lie in bed. It must have been about midnight when he got up to visit the chamber-pot.”

² According to a report in The Bombay Chronicle, 30-11-1946, Vijayalakshmi Pandit, in her reply to Heaton Nichols of South Africa before the U. N. General Assembly had said: “When I was coming here I saw Mahatma Gandhi, who is very much interested in this whole case. He said to me as I was leaving: ‘I do not mind whether you come back having won your case or having suffered defeat; but you must come back as a friend of General Smuts.’ And that is not what any man in Mahatma Gandhi’s position would have said.”
the Field Marshal’s taunt if it was true. It is true of South Africa that her treatment of Asiatics has legally deteriorated from time to time, so much so that it has now become well-nigh unbearable. Almost every promise made by the Union Government to the Government of India has now been broken. In India, on the other hand, there never has been any law carrying the bar sinister against the Scheduled Classes. It can be proved up to the hilt that the law has always sought to protect the Scheduled Classes. There is no legal bar, so far as I am aware, against any of the Scheduled Classes being regarded as equal in status to the tallest Indian. What is however true to the shame of orthodox Hinduism and the Sanatani Hindus is that religious custom has denied to these untouchables the rights which the law has allowed, and it is unfortunately also true that sometimes custom overrides the law. But public opinion is progressively rising against this barbarous custom and it is merely a question of time when the custom will be swept out of existence. Let us, therefore, hope that instead of taking doubtful advantage of the things in India which no one defends and against which public opinion is pro-gressively rising, the Europeans of the Union of South Africa will recog-nize that if the U. N. O. Conference is any index of world opinion, it is decidedly against the European prejudice which has hardened into law.

Srirampur, December 12, 1946

Harijan, 29-12-1946

179. FRAGMENT OF LETTER TO JAGNESWAR GHOSH
December 12, 1946

Your suggestion is that people of the same culture should be brought together in a common territory and placed under a common government. Of course, for administrative purposes, men have to be divided into groups. This is best done on economic grounds or on the basis of linguistic unity. What Gandhiji objects to is the redistribution of population on the basis of religion. That would mean an admission that people of different faiths cannot live on friendly terms within the same State. The Muslim League has suggested a similar remedy for the present Hindu-Muslim tension, when the minority who remain over in each Province will be held as hostages for the good behaviour of the majority in the

1 N. K. Bose who wrote this on behalf of Gandhiji, explains: “A correspondent named Jagneswar Ghosh has sent a letter from Chinsurah in which he proposes that Bengal should be partitioned, because, after all, the cultures of the Hindus and Muslims of this Province are incompatible with one another.”
neighbouring Province. This would amount to an armed truce and not peace on terms of equality, friendship and mutual trust. To cut up India into specifically religious zones, and then redistribute population to fit in with such an artificial scheme would, in Gandhiji’s opinion, be monstrous. For it will cut across many of the linguistic, cultural and fundamental bonds of co-operation which have held together our people in the past.

My Days with Gandhi, pp. 105-6

180. FRAGMENT OF LETTER TO RAMANIMOHAN SEN SHARMA

Srirampur,

December 12, 1946

Gandhiji can only ask an evacuee to return to his house if he can do so with full reliance upon God. Those who do not feel the necessary confidence in themselves, can certainly not be advised to return.

Gandhiji keenly feels that any word from his mouth cannot bring courage to anyone; and he would not therefore advise any person to return home by relying upon such a frail reed. If one can put faith in God, let him return.

My Days with Gandhi, p. 106

181. LETTER TO JAISUKHLAL GANDHI

December 12, 1946

CHI. JAISUKHLAL.

I have two letters from you now. The second arrived only today. Manu had asked for a wire in reply to the first and I had, therefore, wired to say that you could come over and leave Manu with me on condition that she would stay with me till the end.

I find the second letter in a different strain. If both of you believe that the atmosphere here is impure, how can Manu stay with me? I can certainly see that nobody harasses her. Whether or not she should talk with Pyarelal will be left to her choice. Just now he is in one village, I in another. If she does not want even to see him, she will be able to keep that resolve too. But I think that rather than live under such strict discipline it might be better for her to stay in a freer

---

1 Presumably drafted by N. K. Bose, who explains that the addressee was “a physician in the affected town of Sandwip in Noakhali”. In the source this appears after the letter to Jagneswar Ghosh; vide the preceding item.
atmosphere. It would be proper for her to come to me only if she feels perfectly safe with me. Pyarelal’s eyes are clean and he is not likely to force himself on anybody. I don’t think he did anything wrong in placing his idea before me in the presence of all. But we should forget all this now. Manu’s good lies in allowing her to do as she likes, and I want nothing but her own good.

I did not see the letter addressed to Kanu. It must have gone to him directly. Neither I nor anybody else here knows how it went astray. Here I am the only person knowing Gujarati. I shall know by and by what happened.

Kanu also is away from me. All the letters are first received by Satis Babu. I don’t know if he sends them to Pyarelal. He comes and sees me once a week at least. I shall know more from him when he comes here next.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./III

182. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

SRIRAMPUR,
December 12, 1946

Indeed this\(^1\) is the meaning of hymns wherever they are sung by saints and devotees. They always say: “Lead us from darkness to light, from untruth to truth.”

The Ramdhun has also a story behind it. Once Saint Tulsidas was touring on foot different shrines even as Chaitanya Mahaprabhu had walked to Puri and Brindavan, and reached the temple of Dakore. That temple is dedicated to Vishnu.

Tulsidas said to himself that unless God revealed himself in the form of his favourite Rama, his head would not bow in obeisance.

The story has it that this happened and the devout pilgrim saw before him seated in all their glory Rama and Sita surrounded by Lakshmana, Shatrughna and Hanuman. Hence the Ramdhun, meaning intoxication of God.

\(^1\) The report said: “Two friends who had joined the day’s evening prayer had sung a song which Gandhiji had chosen as the theme of his after-prayer speech. The purport of the song was prayer to God to light the lamp of truth in the heart after it had been freed from the blemishes by the abundance of God’s love.”
It is enough if the prayer springs from the heart and leads us from darkness to light and from fear to fearlessness.

_Hindustan Standard_, 16-12-1946

183. LETTER TO BHAGWANJI P. PANDYA

_Christ._ BHAGWANJI,

You have asked why the progress of anti-untouchability work is so slow. The reason is plain. The problem has one feature not to be found in any other, namely, that in this case _adharma_ has been assumed to be dharma. It takes time to explain and understand this. Moreover, it requires great _tapascharya_ to convince the people that what is known as dharma is in fact _adharma_. Those who would do so effectively must themselves be perfect embodiments of dharma. None of us are that. We are full of liking and aversion, yearn for worldly pleasures, lack the capacity to love even our enemies, are without courage and self-control. Who will, therefore, listen to us? This work requires not so much intellectual ability as spiritual strength. If you think over the other items of the constructive programme, the difference I have explained will become clear to you.

Please have patience and do your utmost to cultivate the virtues I have mentioned above.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

_Harijanbandhu_, 5-1-1947

184. LETTER TO MANILAL B. DESAI

_Srirampur_,

_Christ._ MANILAL,

The fact that I have not written to you recently does not mean that I do not think about you or others and Uruli-Kanchan. I really feel sorry that I cannot write. I spent, and made others spend, so much money over the things there, and at Panchgani too, and now God has tossed me here and is testing me. All the time, therefore, the saying “God’s will prevails” echoes in my ears.
I should like to have a detailed letter from there every week. I have not at all lost interest in the institution. How are Dr. Bhagawat’s experiments progressing? Are any dietetic experiments being conducted? We don’t get clean water anywhere here. Can anybody there say how this water can be easily purified? How is Dhiru? Is Paramanand still there? What about his marriage? How is Balkrishna? Does Gangabehn pay occasional visits? Has any woman worker been trained there? What about Gokhale? Do the local people help? What is happening about the building? Do you see Dr. Mehta sometime? The situation here defies description. I have got stuck here now. Does anybody look after Motilal’s affairs? Whom has he left behind?

_Blessings from_
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 2737. Courtesy: Manilal B. Desai

185. ADVICE TO WORKERS²

SRIRAMPUR,
December 13, 1946

The name _Rakshi Dal_ did not appeal to Gandhiji. Who could pretend to be the “protector” of another? Each one had to learn the art of self-protection whether it was a child of ten, a young girl or a grown-up man. If they felt they could protect themselves and others by means of violence alone, they should learn the art of warfare and the use of arms. But in such an enterprise he could give them little aid. Not only that, it had been his uniform experience that those who set out to protect others with the sword ended by turning oppressors themselves. Under his plan, not many men were needed in a village for the protection of the few against many. One or two would be enough. If they laid down their lives in the performance of their duty without flinching and without anger in their hearts, their example would probably inspire others to exhibit non-violent courage likewise, so that they would either be able to melt the hearts of their oppressors or die in the act of defending their self-respect and honour in a non-violent way. He, therefore, advised the workers to turn themselves into _Sevaks_ or servants rather than “protectors”.

_Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase, Vol. I, Book II, pp. 61-2_

---

1 Ganga P. Bhatt
2 Pyarelal explains: “About a hundred workers from villages around Srirampur came to consult Gandhiji; they wanted to organize themselves into a _Rakshi Dal_ — Protection League.”
186. EXTRACT FROM DIARY

December 13, 1946

Wrote to B.1 that anti-untouchability work proceeds at snail’s pace. . . . A worker who wants to work for this great cause has need to be duty (dharma) incarnate. . . .

For the evening meal had a khakhara (a paper-thin wafer) from two tolas of barley meal . . . followed later by some jaggery. They allayed hunger.

187. REMARK TO A FRIEND2

Before December 14, 1946

I don’t want to return from Bengal defeated. I would rather die, if need be, at the hands of an assassin. But I do not want to court it, much less do I wish it.

188. NOTE TO PYARELAL4

Before December 14, 1946

I have said from the very beginning that it is going to be a most hazardous task. A more hazardous task is not likely to fall to our lot in this life. Let us entirely resign ourselves to Him. His will be done . . . You are not to rush into danger unnecessarily but unflinchingly face whatever comes in the natural course. If, in this way, all of us are wiped out, I would not mind it in the least.

For myself, I am putting myself more and more in God’s hands.6

---

1 Bhagwanji P. Pandya; vide “Letter to Bhagwanji P. Pandya”
2 This and the following item are extracted from Pyarelal’s “Do or Die at Work”. They were reported under the date-line: “Bhatialpur, December 14, 1946.”
3 ibid
4 Extracted from Pyarelal’s “Do or Die at Work”
5 Vide the preceding item.
6 According to Pyarelal, this sentence was in “another note”.

VOL. 93: 7 NOVEMBER, 1946 - 16 FEBRUARY, 1947 139
189. TELEGRAM TO RAJIBALI PANDE

December 14, 1946

PANDIT RAJIBALI PANDE
HINDU UNIVERSITY
BENARES

YOUR LETTER RECEIVED ONLY YESTERDAY EVENING. AM CLEAR PANDIT KASHINATHJI’S FAST IS ILLEGITIMATE. HE SHOULD ABANDON.

GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

190. LETTER TO A MAHARAJA

SIRAMPUR, NOAKHALI
December 14, 1946

MAHARAJA SAHEB,

Yesterday I got your kind letter of the 9th instant which was delivered to me by Diwanbahadur Bijoyakumar Sen. Please accept my thanks for the same. I have had a detailed discussion with the Diwanbahadur about the subject which you have mentioned in your letter. He will personally tell you my views on the subject. Therefore I am not mentioning them here.

I am told that you will be returning from Calcutta in January. If you could find some time for me then, I would be very glad to meet you in Noakhal. This is all I have to say.

Yours,

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat of the Bengali: C. W. 10427

191. SPEECH AT MADHUPUR

[December 14, 1946]¹

Gandhiji in his speech said that although hospital work was not in his line, he had responded² to Dr. Das Gupta’s invitation because he was given to understand that

¹ From Chandulal Dalal, Gandhi—1915-1948 : A Detailed Chronology
² According to Chandulal Dalal, Gandhiji was opening a hospital which the Indian Medical Association had started under the guidance of Dr. J. N. Das Gupta.
the workers were actuated solely by a spirit of service. He knew that the task was a very delicate one today. Refugees had gathered together in camps and it was up to the workers to create an atmosphere when they could safely return to their deserted homes. Moreover, work here was not city work but lay in the villages where insanitation and wretched water supply had to be dealt with.

Those who read his writings in the Harijan knew that for some time past he had been advocating nature-cure methods. He confessed, this was an old love for him. His experience, as years rolled by, had been that there could be no greater healer than God Himself. It was only when man departed from the laws of Nature as set by Him that he became subject to diseases of body and mind. It was usual for the medical profession to pay heed to the body exclusive of the mind and the spirit. The result was bad. The health of all the three was their supreme concern. Here the chief malady was fear—a feeling which not only benumbed their senses, but also inhibited every attempt to restore conditions of healthy normal living.

The speaker had heard that Muslim villagers would not go to Hindu doctors. He hoped it was wrong. Medical profession knew no distinction between man and man, no matter to what faith he or she belonged.

It should be the aim of doctors posted here not to depend on foreign remedies. The countryside was teeming with potent herbs. Ayurvedic and Unani physicians made wide use of them. Why should not doctors with Western learning make use of these cheap remedies? Acharya Profulla Roy, Gandhiji had noticed one day, used plain mustard oil and salt, instead of depending on many oils and pastes turned out by the Bengal Chemical Works. When asked about it, Acharya Roy laughingly replied that those things were meant for simpletons and he was not going to add to their number by using them.

Hindustan Standard, 18-12-1946

192. EXTRACT FROM DIARY

December 14, 1946

Got up at 2.30 a.m. Applied sulphur ointment for scabies, then went off to sleep with the help of Ramanama.

---

1 P. C. Roy, founder, Bengal Chemical and Pharmaceutical Works
193. TELEGRAM TO MAHOMED TAYABULLA¹

SIRAMPUR,
[On or before December 15, 1946]²

I AM WATCHING.³

GANDHI

The Bombay Chronicle, 16-12-1946

194. INTERVIEW TO ASSAM CONGRESSMEN⁴

SIRAMPUR,
December 15, 1946

Asked for guidance in regard to the question of Grouping,⁴ Gandhiji replied:

I do not need a single minute to come to a decision, for on this I have a mind. I am a Congressman to the very marrow, as I am mainly the framer of the constitution of the Congress as it stands today. I told Bardoloi that if there is no clear guidance from the Congress Committee, Assam should not go into the Sections. It should lodge its protest and retire from the Constituent Assembly. It will be a kind of satyagraha against the Congress for the good of the Congress.

Rightly or wrongly, the Congress has come to the Decision that it will stand by the judgment of the Federal Court. The dice are heavily loaded. The decision of the Federal Court will go against the Congress interpretation of Grouping as far as I can make out, for the simple reason that the Cabinet has got legal advice which upholds their decision.

The Federal Court is the creation of the British. It is a packed court. To be consistent, the Congress must abide by its decision.

¹ President of the Assam Provincial Congress Committee
² The telegram was reported under the date-line Gauhati, December 15, 1946.
³ Tayabulla had reiterated Assam’s protest against the Grouping Clause in the Cabinet Mission’s plan and had sought Gandhiji’s help “at this hour of Assam’s peril”. Vide also the following item.
⁴ Bijayachandra Bhagwat, M.L.A., and Mohendra Mohan Chowdhury, Secretary of the Assam Congress Parliamentary Party, met Gandhiji on behalf of Gopinath Bardoloi. This appeared under the title, “Gandhiji’s Advice to Assam”.
⁴ The reference is to the British Cabinet’s statement dated December 6; vide “British Cabinet’s Statement on Grouping”, 6-12-1946 whatever it may be. If Assam keeps quiet, it is finished. No one can force Assam to do what it does not want to do. It is autonomous to a large extent today.

It must become fully independent and autonomous. Whether you have that courage, grit and the gumption, I do not know. You alone can say that. But if you can make that declaration, it will be a fine thing. As soon as the time comes for the Constituent Assembly to go into Sections you will say, “Gentlemen, Assam retires.” For the independence of India it is the only condition. Each unit must be able to decide and act for itself. I am hoping that in this Assam will lead the way.

I have the same advice for the Sikhs. But your position is much happier than that of the Sikhs. You are a whole Province. They are a community inside a Province. But I feel every individual has the right to act for himself, just as I have.

Q. But we are told that the framing of the Constitution for the whole of India cannot be held up for the sake of Assam. Assam cannot be allowed to block the way.

A. There is no need to do that. That is why I say I am in utter darkness. Why are not these simple truths evident to all after so many years? If Assam retires, it does not block, but leads the way to India’s independence.

Q. The British Government has said that the Constitution framed by the Constituent Assembly cannot be imposed on unwilling units. So, if some parts do not accept it, the British Parliament won’t accept it.

A. Who is the British Government? If we think independence is going to descend on our heads from England or somewhere, we are greatly mistaken. It won’t be independence. We will be crushed to atoms. We are fluctuating between independence and helpless dependence. The Cabinet Mission’s plan lies in between.

If we act rightly, there will be the full blown flower of independence. If we react wrongly, the blossom will wither away. Mind you, the League standpoint is quite correct. If they stand out, the Constituent Assembly cannot impose its Constitution on an unwilling party. The British Government has no say in the matter one way or the other.

The British cannot interfere with the working of the Constituent Assembly. Supposing the vast majority, including the Muslims and others form a constitution, you can defy the British Parliament if it seeks to interfere. Power is in your hands. Some such thing happened in Ireland only recently. And de Valera is no non-violent fighter. The position of India is far better than that of Ireland. If we have not the penetration, we will lose the advantage we have, as it is apparently being lost today.

If Assam takes care of itself, the rest of India, will be able to look after itself. What have you got to do with the constitution of the Union Government? You should form your own constitution. That is enough. You have the basis of a constitution all right even now.

I have never despised the 1935 constitution. It is based on provincial autonomy. It has the capacity for fullest growth, provided the people are worth it. The hill people are with you. Many Muslims are also with you. The remainder can be, too, if you act on the square.

You will have to forget petty jealousies and rivalries and overcome your weaknesses. Assam has many weaknesses as it has much strength, for I know my Assam.

ASSAM CONGRESSMEN: With your blessings we can even go outside the Congress and fight.

GANDHIJI: In 1939, when there was the question of giving up the Ministry, Subhas Babu opposed it as he thought Assam’s was a special case. I told Bardoloi that there was much in what Subhas Babu had said and, although I was the author of that scheme of boycott, I said Assam should not come out if it did not feel like it. But Assam did come out; it was wrong.

The Assam Congressmen said that the Maulana Saheb had then said that exception could not be made in the case of Assam.

G. Here there is no question of exception. Assam rebelled and that civilly. But we have that slavish mentality. We look to the Congress and then feel that if we do not follow it slavishly, something will go wrong with it. I have said that not only a Province but even an individual can rebel against the Congress and by doing so serve it, assuming that he is in the right. I have done so myself. Congress has not attained the present stature without much travail.

I remember in 1918, I think, there was the Provincial Conference of the Congress workers of Gujarat at Ahmedabad. The late Abbas Tyabjee was in the chair. All the old guards were there. The Ali Brothers had not yet joined hands with me fully then, as they did later on. The late Shri Vithalbhai Patel was there, and I moved the non-co-operation resolution. I was a nonentity then. A constitutional question arose. Could a Provincial Conference anticipate the decision of the Congress? I said, “Yes.” A Provincial Conference and even a single individual could anticipate the Congress for its own benefit. In spite of opposition of the old hands, the resolution was carried. That paved the way for the Congress to pass a similar resolution at Calcutta. India was dumbfounded at the audacity of a Provincial Conference passing the revolutionary resolution.

We had formed a Satyagraha Sabha outside the Congress. It was joined by Horniman, Sarojini Devi, Shankarlal, Umar Sobhani and Vallabhbhai. I was ill. The Rowlatt Act was passed. I shook with rage. I said to the Sardar I could do nothing unless he helped me. Sardar was willing. And the rest you know. It was rebellion, but a healthy one. We celebrate the 6th of April to the 13th. You have all these historical instances before you.

I have given you all this time to steel your hearts, to give you courage. If you do not act correctly and now, Assam will be finished. Tell Bardoloi I do not feel the least uneasiness. My mind is made up. Assam must not lose its soul. It must uphold it against the whole world. Else I will say that Assam had only manikins and no men. It is an impertinent suggestion that Bengal should dominate Assam in any way.

I have given you all this time to steel your hearts, to give you courage. If you do not act correctly and now, Assam will be finished. Tell Bardoloi I do not feel the least uneasiness. My mind is made up. Assam must not lose its soul. It must uphold it against the whole world. Else I will say that Assam had only manikins and no men. It is an impertinent suggestion that Bengal should dominate Assam in any way.

 Asked if they could tell the people that they had rebelled against the Congress with Gandhiji’s blessings, Gandhiji said:

Talk of God’s blessings. They are much richer. Tell the people even if Gandhiji tries to dissuade us, we won’t listen.

_Harijan_, 29-12-1946

195. _EXTRACT FROM DIARY_

_December 15, 1946_

Had a visit from Justice D. and his wife. Told them it was not possible to work in Noakhali without renouncing one’s all.

---

1 B. G. Horniman; the then editor of _The Bombay Chronicle_

2 Sarojini Naidu

3 Shankarlal Banker
196. SILENCE-DAY NOTE TO KAMALA DAS GUPTA

December 16, 1946

Personally I do not think the extent of the evil is so great. Many such cases have not come under my observation. In any case you may keep in mind the young men who will take in such girls and see what can be done when you come across a bona-fide case.

From the original: C. W. 1472. Courtesy: A. K. Sen

197. NOTE TO C. BHUSHAN CHOWDHURY

SRIRAMPUR,
December 16, 1946

Write to Kaka Babu that he is doing a lot of work by staying there. How is Manostan Babu?

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 8911

198. LETTER TO VIYOJI HARI

December 16, 1946

BHAI VIYOJ HARI,

Your letter of November 17 came into my hands on December 14. Such is the postal arrangement here !!! You have done right. Now the work for Harijans will shine forth. The times are such that everyone must do the greatest penance. And of course you have the capacity for it. You have done right in becoming the President of the Hindi Sahitya Sammelan. You should serve to the best of your ability. This work should not hinder your Harijan service. You must have got my letter to this effect.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Badoken Preranadayak Kuchh Patra, front cover

1 The addressee explains: “... a friend ... had received, in response to an appeal, 86 letters with the offer to marry the molested and dishonoured girls of Noakhali ... I, as Secretary of the B. P. C. C. Women’s Committee, went to ... meet Mahatma Gandhi and requested him to take the responsibility of disposing of them in any manner he chose. I reached ... Srirampur ... on December 16 ... As it was Gandhiji’s silence-day, he noted down his reply on two small pieces of paper.”

2 Vide "Letter to Viyogi Hari", 16-11-1946
199. SPEECH AT WORKERS’ MEETING

SRIRAMPUR,

December 16, 1946

The chief duty of a servant of a village is purification.

Today the villages are a festering sore upon the countryside. It is no use blaming the British Government for all our ills. The latter are going to quit India and we have already got a Government manned by our own people.

When the British first established themselves firmly in India their idea was to build cities where all rich people would gravitate and help them in exploiting the countryside. These cities were made partially beautiful: service of all kinds were made available to their inhabitants while the millions of villagers were left rotting in hopeless ignorance and misery.

Now that we have a Government manned by our own people let it not be said that they also care for the city people at the expense of the villagers. There is a saying in Gujarati: ‘Dawn is whenever one wakes up.’ Let it be so with us.

Let the popular Government in the Provinces, whether Congress or League, wake up to the urgency of renovating India’s rural life.

But this can never be the work of the Government alone; every citizen has to take his due share in public work before we can become a great nation.

Gandhiji then drew the attention of local workers to the pitiable condition of the villages. Clean drinking water was nowhere available, roads were in miserable condition, while the canals were choked up by water hyacinth. Every village seemed to have more than its share of dysentery, cholera and smallpox, all of which were preventable diseases. There were plenty of men of bad character who took every opportunity of fishing in troubled water for personal gain.

Purification of this dreadful double disease of mind and body is a task to which workers should address themselves. India is not lacking in manpower; what is necessary is collective effort rightly directed. Government can do much but they can only do so if there is enlightened public opinion behind them. Men are now living like

---

1 The source reported that about a couple of hours before prayer, Gandhiji had addressed a workers’ meeting and at the end of the prayer the same subject was further continued. The text has been edited.

2 The Interim Government had assumed office on September 2, 1946.
worms in villages. Darkness will give way only to patient and persevering endeavour. Bad men will then no longer find the environment in which they can grow or thrive. Harmonious relations will be restored among communities when poverty and ignorance have disappeared.

It was with that object Gandhiji said that he had come to Noakhali. He could not leave the place until his task was done. He did not mind laying down his life in that attempt.

Hindustan Standard, 18-12-1946

200. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

Srirampur,
December 16, 1946

Mahatma Gandhi, making his first reference to the Constituent Assembly, mentioned the resolution1 moved by Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru at the Constituent Assembly defining the objectives which the Constituent Assembly should have. Gandhiji said that the resolution was placed by the mover after mature consideration of every aspect of the complicated issue facing the country and with due regard to justice to all communities.

Gandhiji was sure that Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru would stick to that resolution, whatever be the criticism advanced or opinion held by others.

Gandhiji also referred to Pandit Nehru’s recent visit to London where he had gone and from where he had returned not happily. This taught the lesson that we should make our decision after careful deliberation and having full regard to truth and justice and then stick to that decision, whatever the consequences. Gandhiji said that he felt that he must stay on here until the situation had completely improved. His determination was inflexible, whatever other people might say or feel about it. In this connection, Gandhiji cited the story of an artist who had painted a picture. The artist placed it at a road corner and invited opinion on his work. Later the artist found that his picture had been marked in every place with remarks of disapproval. But this, Gandhiji continued, should not be taken by the artist in the light that his work was really not good. What one thinks best one should pursue. One should know what the wise say and see what the saints practise and then one should search one’s own heart whether it wants that thing. One should accept immediately what others might say or do. One must look to one’s own conscience and see if one is prepared for it.

Therefore, Gandhiji’s advice to people was not to return to their homes simply because he asked them to do so. They should know what the wise men say, what the saints do and also what was in their own mind or heart.

Hindustan Standard, 19-12-1946

1 Vide “Constitution Assembly Resolution”
201. EXTRACT FROM DIARY

December 16, 1946

S. and his friends have come with the desire to work under me in Noakhali. Told them that is hardly possible while I am still surrounded by darkness. They should go and report themselves to the Superintendent of Police, Abdullah; I have no accommodation or any amenities for them.

202. NOTE ON CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY

Srirampur,

December 17, 1946

In my opinion, it will be a grave mistake if the Constituent Assembly attempts, in the face of the boycott by the Muslim League, to frame a constitution for the whole of India. If and when the Muslim League boycott becomes an established fact, the Constituent Assembly should have a right to frame a constitution of independence for all the Provinces, States and units that may be represented at the Constituent Assembly. This will be an honourable and consistent position for the Constituent Assembly as it is at present constituted. There should be no fear of another or for that matter more constituent assemblies sitting, if the attitude advised by me is taken up. No other such constituent assembly can sit or function except under the aegis of the British Government whilst the latter functions in India. If the British Government wills it, such other constituent assemblies cannot [be] prevented except through a terrible struggle put up by the Congress, whether of a violent or non-violent nature.

I feel too that the Congress can subscribe to the contention of the British Government about Grouping if it allows Assam and the Frontier Province to secede from the Congress for the purposes of the Constituent Assembly. The Congress has no power save the moral to compel obedience by a Province or a group such as Sikhs.

Sardar Patel’s Correspondence, Vol. 3, p. 317

¹ According to the source, this was an “enclosure” to a letter dated December 20 from Asaf Ali to Vallabhbhai Patel.
203. LETTER TO SARAT CHANDRA BOSE

December 17, 1946

Gandhiji is very anxious on your account, and wishes to learn everything about the present course of treatment, and also if there has been any improvement in your condition.

He says further that it would not do for you to fall ill like this. When one has taken upon himself the responsibility of serving the country’s cause, one has also to master the art of keeping oneself in a workable and healthy condition. However heavy the burden of duties may be, the daily routine for maintaining the body in good order must never be broken. Otherwise one’s work is likely to be interrupted.

He would thank you also for news about Mrs. Bose.

My Days with Gandhi, pp. 110-1

204. LETTER TO S. RADHAKRISHNAN

SRIRAMPUR,

December 17, 1946

DEAR DR. RADHAKRISHNAN,

Om Prakash gave me your letter yesterday. My congratulations on your decision. I had expected nothing less of you. You will be in charge as long as you are needed there.

I never dreamt of any of the brothers being Pro-Vice-Chancellor or holding any of the high offices in the University or even any office whatsoever except it be required in its interest. They should all be mute servants. Perhaps you have seen my article on the subject in Harijan.

Dr. Shyamaprasad is an ideal man for the post. Only I wish he was as sober a Hindu Sabha man as he is an able and learned administrator. You may show this to him. You are calling him to no easy job.

1 N. K. Bose explains: “Just after the early morning prayer, Gandhiji asked me to write a letter in Bengali to Sarat Babu; he had noticed in the newspapers yesterday that Sarat Babu was ill.”

2 ibid

3 Then Vice-Chancellor, Banaras Hindu University

4 Vide “Malaviyaji”

5 Shyamaprasad Mookherjee was elected President of the 27th Session of the All-India Hindu Mahasabha to be held at Gorakhpur on December 27, 28 and 29.
As to your last paragraph, the less said the better. I am on the anvil.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

From a facsimile: Mahatma, Vol. VII, between pp. 344 and 345

205. LETTER TO ASAF ALI

SRIRAMPUR,
December 17, 1946

DEAR ASAF ALI,

You are an old and seasoned Congressman. I know how you stood in the estimation of the late lamented Hakim Saheb Ajmal Khan and Dr. Ansari and what value Maulana Abul Kalam Azad puts upon you, not to mention the many important Hindu and other friends you have. It is well therefore that the Interim Government of India has chosen you as its first Ambassador in America. India has a right to expect you to represent the combined culture India's many religions represent. What is perhaps more, you will represent simple living and high thinking for which the National Congress stands, and of which you are a distinguished member.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. G.

206. LETTER TO PYARELAL

CHI. PYARELAL,

December 17, 1946

I have your strange letter.

Whatever was important, you have settled while leaving. I know I cannot change your decision. I am not able to see my mistake. If I have made a mistake, it is your duty to point it out to me; and if you cannot do it, that is, if you cannot convince me, then you should follow my rule. If you are clear to the last moment, then there is no doubt that you should leave me. Now you may act and act quickly in the light of what you consider your duty. I have informed you that for me this is my severest test. If I do not do or die you must think me worthless. Then you may take it that my life is a burden.
You write that my confession was such a heavy punishment for Sushila that compared to that her keeping away without notice should be considered real mercy. This I cannot swallow. If that is so, then what I did in the case of Ba, my father and many other dear ones should be considered a mistake, is that not so? Surely you do not wish to say that I made a mistake only in this case?

You also realize that if I make a mistake again and having committed it, do not publicly correct it, there is no hope of success in my present work. Hence, I can do nothing else.

Though I may make a mistake and proclaim it to the world, yet the heaviest punishment is borne by one at whose cost the mistake is made! How can that be so? Is there not something very wrong in this line of thinking?

Suppose that A who is innocent is assaulted and abused by B. Then B repents and makes a public apology. In thus purifying himself B will have proved guilty and yet A will suffer, is that so? That A’s love may cause anguish to him is an other matter. Such anguish is only for the good.

If you consider B’s confession proper, there is no difference between him and me. Even if A is not innocent, B, who adheres to non-violence will not be proved innocent because by his own yardstick he has definitely been guilty. And anyone who has accepted my moral standard will say that it would be only proper that A also makes a public confession of his guilt.

Now, in deference to both of you, I have taken the only course possible for me. I have not mentioned anything in the diary. I do not give as much importance to my diary as you do.

Sushila of course insists that everything may as well be known to the public. But here insistence has no value because she says it out of anguish. She does not regard it as a duty. That is why I have not sent the note I had written to Nirmal Babu. I have torn it up. I have written to Sushila that her duty is to follow your advice; when you and I say different things, in my opinion she should do what you say. Now I have said everything that needs to be said. You may do what you consider proper.

Sushila is very deeply wounded. I have tried my utmost to pacify her. It may be good if you remain with her for the time being. I wish you would go to the village and stay with her. Both of you should together consider and decide what your duty is. The task this time is extremely delicate.

I have written all this after careful deliberation. This is the first thing I did after the morning prayer. Before this I wrote a postcard about Sriramulu and the first few sentences in the diary.

I must keep a copy of this, but probably you will not wish it copied in the diary. So you may return this to me or a copy of it.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

I have sent replies to Asaf Ali’s questions.¹ Read them when you get the copy. So, Sushila will be coming here on Saturday.

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

207. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

December 17, 1946

DAUGHTER,

I have your letter. What shall I say to you? I have already said that you do not understand me and still call me your guide. You caused pain to Kanu also. Now what shall I say? It is a crime even to talk to you. I shall be satisfied if you act according to what you have gained and be happy. I am afraid to talk to you about anything. You misinterpreted what I told you with great affection and caused pain to Kanu by giving him your interpretation. Neither you nor I will lose anything if you do not come here. Lose yourself in whatever service you like to take up.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 543

208. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

Srirampur,

December 17, 1946

Gandhiji told the audience that it was for the first time today that he could visit

¹Vide “Letter to Shrikrishnadas Jaju”, 8-1-1947 that place¹ to hold his prayers. God willing, he would like to tour such affected villages one by one. He had not the strength in him to undertake that big task now. For that strength he depended on God. He would like to hold his prayers wherever he goes during his village-to-village tour.²

Explaining further the object of his present mission, Gandhiji said that the task of rehabilitation of refugees had still to be undertaken and it remained an uphill one. He was glad that volunteers from far off places were coming forward to lend a helping hand and mentioned Sardar Niranjan Singh Gill and Sardar Jivan Singh, both of Azad Hind Fouj, who had met and expressed their desire to place their services at his disposal. Gandhiji said that both had met the Bengal Premier before coming to Noakhali and had been promised full support in their mission of assisting speedy rehabilitation.

Introducing Sardar Jivan Singh to the prayer audience, Gandhiji said that detailed plans of their work had been worked out by Sardars Jivan Singh and Niranjan Singh Gill and would be placed before Bengal Premier. Gandhiji was glad that members of the small Sikh community in far off Punjab considered that the problem facing East Bengal was an all-India problem and that no part of the country could afford to remain indifferent to happenings in other parts. This was a correct example which every one should emulate. Gandhiji was particularly glad that these bold Sikh soldiers who joined the Azad Hind Fouj and fought had now come without even their kirpans³ to work non-violently for the promotion of communal harmony. This perhaps explained the futility of violence in contrast to the efficacy and potentiality of non-violence.

Introducing Mr. Asaf Ali, Member of the Interim Government, to the prayer gathering, Gandhiji observed:

We are on the threshold of freedom. But we must not forget that we have not yet attained full freedom.

Gandhiji said that the Interim Government thought it desirable to have a representative in America for the purpose of interpreting India to the American people and Mr. Asaf Ali had been chosen to hold that high office and fulfil the mission entrusted to him. Referring to the Railway Portfolio now held by Mr. Asaf Ali, Gandhiji said that the immediate problem which should engage the serious attention of the Railway Member was to improve travelling facilities for the third-

¹ According to the report in The Hindu, the meeting was held in another part of Srirampur village where no less than 63 houses had been completely destroyed.
² The following three paragraphs are reproduced from The Hindu.
³ A small sword carried by Sikhs as a religious symbol class passengers and abolish the unhealthy system of supplying Hindu pani¹ and Muslim pani in railway stations.

Gandhiji then referred to his anger which had overcome him on Monday night.² He did not have even proper rest that night, but from half-past-two at night he began his work. In this connection Gandhiji related how once his father was angry when Gandhiji went to see a theatre. But his angry father did not say anything to him. Instead, he (his father) began to weep and beat his head. Similarly, he at the time of his anger that night began to beat his own head. But he did not like to weep like others. Instead he wanted to unburden his heavy heart by placing before the whole world what mistake he had committed by being angry. For he knew that a man of ‘ahimsa’ like him should not be angry. But he tried his best to suppress his own anger, but so far he had not completely succeeded. He said :³

I am not a Mahatma; I am an alpatma. I am an ordinary mortal like you all and I am strenuously trying to practise ahimsa. Today I lost my temper and, therefore, I am not a perfect man. If an imperfect man like me can try to practise ahimsa, all of you also can do so. I have come here with the determination to put my ahimsa to test and in that process either succeed or perish.

He said that every personal act had to be dominated by truth and non-violence if they were to be evidenced in big things. These were not wooden things but living organisms. He felt that he had not attained the necessary stage of detachment described in the Gita.

He asked his hearers to discard the thought that what one man could do was not possible for all human beings even if a persistent attempt was made. It was simple wisdom to remember that man’s vocation was to make the attempt and God’s grace alone could bless it with success.

Hindustan Standard, 20-12-1946 and 22-12-1946; and The Hindu, 20-12-1946 and 21-12-1946

¹ Water
² In My Days with Gandhi, “Letter to N. K. Bose”, 12-11-1946. N. K. Bose explains : “At 3.20 in the morning, I heard Gandhiji talking aloud to Sushila Nayyar. His voice seemed worried . . . suddenly all of us heard a deeply anguished cry . . . . It was Gandhiji’s voice, and then we heard the sound of two slaps . . . then a heavy sob.” On December 20, Gandhiji explained to N. K. Bose : “When she learnt about my proposed journey by foot, she was insistent that some old companion who knew about my personal requirements should be in my company . . . .” Vide “Talk with N. K. Bose”, 19-12-1946 and”Letter From Dr. Sushila Nayyar to N. K. Bose”, 22-12-1946
³ The following paragraph is reproduced from The Hindu, 20-12-1946.
209. LETTER TO ASAIF ALI

December 18, 1946

MY DEAR ASAIF,

Here is the letter I drafted, and a copy typed and signed. You make what use you like of it. May I suggest that if you have not, you should now pick up the Hindi and Urdu forms of Hindustani in both the scripts—[Dev]nagri and Urdu. Herewith the letters for Aruna1 and Jawaharlal.2

I am glad you came.

Yours,

BAPU

210. LETTER TO SACHINDRA NARAYAN ROY

SRIRAMPUR,
NOAKHALI,
December 18, 1946

DEAR PROF. ROY,

I have just got your letter of 25th ultimo and read it. I am sorry I have not yet got your open letter. Therefore, I do not know its contents. You need not worry about the contents of that letter whatever they may be.

What you say about Nasrulla Khan Saheb is startling.3 May I send your letter to him? Are you able to prove the statement? Is it possible to give the names and addresses and other particulars about the missing girls? I have had such complaints from other sources but no particular have been forthcoming.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. G.

PROF. SACHINDRA NARAYAN ROY
31 SHAH SABB LANE
DACCA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

1 Vide “Letter to Aruna Asaf Ali”, 18-12-1946
2 Not available
3 In his letter, the addressee had informed Gandhiji that K. Nasrulla Khan, the Parliamentary Secretary to the Chief Minister had concealed and confined not a few but several abducted girls in the Muslim areas of the city.
211. LETTER TO N. G. RANGA

SIRAMPUR,
NOAKHALLI,
December 18, 1946

MY DEAR RANGA¹,

I have your letter of the 11th instant and the enclosures. You ask me not to wade through the latter but ask my Secretary to go through them and bring to my notice the most important things. You do not know what I am doing and where I am staying. If you did, you would not have dictated that letter, but I see that you are too busy to look at the daily papers or my poor doings in this part of the world. Well, I am in an out-of-the-way village hamlet where many dwellings have been burnt down and the contents looted. I have deprived myself of secretarial assistance. I have a Bengali professor who has elected to become my interpreter and teacher and even gives me massage, etc. Parasuram of Malabar is with me by accident, and as he came to me as an expert short-hand writer and typist I make occasional use of him for taking down letters such as this. But generally he is in the charge of everything pertaining to my personal wants and I am sorry to confess that this business is so taxing and exacting that it takes the bulk of his time. But he is an uncomplaining, tireless worker, and as he had not had the opportunity of coming in personal touch with me during the two years he has been with me, he loves the work that he is doing now and I love him. Other fellow-workers have been distributed at the peril of their lives in various burnt and looted villages in the attempt to bring the two warring elements together and bring, if human effort can, peace to this unhappy portion of India. I confess that it is not the only unhappy portion of India, but Destiny chose it for putting me or rather my ahimsa and truth on their trial and here am I undergoing that stiff but self-imposed test. Therefore, you see that either I must myself wade through your papers or neglect them for the time being. But I dare not take the second course for the reason that I invited the task, and I must not complain. I am half through the long documents. It is deeply human and interesting and for the love I have towards you I will like to give much more than cursory attention to the papers you have prepared with such elaboration.

¹ President, All-India Kisan Sabha; President, Andhra Provincial Congress Committee; Member, Congress Parliamentary Party; Founder-President, Swatantra Party.

As so many trustworthy servants of the nation are up against you, I wish to suggest that you should, for the time being, neglect me and go your way honestly and therefore fearlessly, reposing the fullest trust in your honesty rather than on friends like me of doubtful value because of their national preoccupations and limited capacity for grasping and understanding facts, figures and statements. I however promise that I shall pursue such inquiry as I can during the moments that I can snatch from my present work, and if I can say anything useful I shall write to you. You on your part will not hesitate to give me all the facts you can.

Yours,

BAPU

PROF. N. G. RANGA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

212. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

December 18, 1946

DAUGHTER,

I went through your letters. I do not understand the fast. My advice is: do what Satis Babu asks you to do. I am ill at ease. Even though Kanu repeated it, you could have said that you did not have full knowledge. Kanu had no right to harass you. But whatever is done cannot be undone. After all you will follow me only as you understand me; what else can you do?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 544

---

1 This was an enclosure to “Letter to Satis Chandra Das Gupta”; vide the following item.

2 At Sirandi, Amtussalam had decided to go on a fast from December 26 in protest against some local Muslims who had stolen three khadags (sacrificial swords) belonging to Hindus. At Gandhiji’s instance, she broke her 25-day fast on January 20th; vide “Draft Pledge for Muslim”, 20-1-1947, and “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 21-1-1947.
213. LETTER TO SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA
December 18, 1946

CHI. SATIS BABU,

I am not prepared to say that Amtussalaam’s fast is not justified from any point of view. Full information is also not available with me to enable me to give any verdict. It would be good if the two of you could give your considered decision. I hope Hemprabha is all right.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Enclosed is a letter to Amtussalaam. Send it to her.

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 545

214. LETTER TO ARUNA ASAF ALI
December 18, 1946

CHI. ARUNA,

I should like you to accompany Asaf\(^1\) to America. You will be able to give him much help there, and it would also be a service to the country. I would also say that you will be able to do much independent work in America.

I think it is your duty to accompany Asaf.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 2201

215. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING
SRIRAMPUR,
December 18, 1946

Gandhiji emphasized the need for truth in expression. He said there were some newspapers in which matters were expressed in such a way as to increase their sale. They were put in exaggerated form or briefly. But as truth is greater than the sun, some day or other it will come to light.

Hindustan Standard, 21-12-1946

\(^1\) Asaf Ali had been appointed ambassador to the U. S. A.
216. FRAGMENT OF LETTER TO SIKHS

[On or before December 19, 1946]

Gandhiji in a letter to the Sikhs has advised them to demand an unequivocal declaration from the Congress that it shall never agree to Grouping in any shape or form.

He has further advised them to walk out if no such undertaking was forthcoming.

Revolt against the Congress. I have revolted several times myself.

The Bombay Chronicle, 20-12-1946

217. LETTER TO POTTI SRIRAMULU

NOAKHALL

December 19, 1946

DEAR RAMULU,

From Narasimuloo’s letter I learn that your fast persists and that you have not heard from me. I have written to you to desist from your fast. What is this news I get? I have seen nothing in the papers.

Yours,

BAPU

[PS.]

As this was going to the post I received your welcome postcard of breaking the fast.

From a photostat: G. N. 117

---

1 The letter was reported under the date-line New Delhi, December 19, 1946.
2 Vide also “Interview to Assam Congressmen”, 15-12-1946
3 A Congressman of Nellore
4 On December 8, Gandhiji had advised the addressee to end the fast, which he had undertaken on November 25, for throwing open the temples to Harijans in Madras Province.
218. INSTRUCTIONS TO PRESS REPRESENTATIVES

December 19, 1946

1. They should seek the permission of the villagers before staying anywhere. They should not be a burden to anyone.

2. They should help one another and share news without reserve.

3. They would not be allowed to accompany him in the walking tour as Gandhiji did not want to travel with a large retinue.

4. He wished that the correspondents should make independent observation in the surrounding villages and try to find out if evacuees were returning home or not, and what was the effect of Gandhiji’s presence on Muslim villagers.

My Days with Gandhi, p. 113

219. ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS

SRIRAMPUR,

December 19, 1946

1. As to the National Flag, my opinion is that whilst we are part of the British Dominions it is but right and proper that in the Ambassador’s office in America the Union Jack is flown side by side with the National Flag. In view of the Muslim League revolt, I would go so far as to question the prudence of flying in America the Congress flag as our National Flag. But it is a ticklish question and you should ask, on this and the other questions, for the instructions of the Interim Government, not merely of Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru. Every Ambassador carries written instructions within which he is bound to act. These he can neither diminish nor extend.

2. As to the second, India as she is at present cannot omit the Union Jack in foreign countries. Take instructions.

3. As to the third, there is a new British National Anthem, omitting all the objectionable words. I have no doubt that what was

---

1 N. K. Bose explains: “At prayer time Gandhiji felt too tired to make any speech. The news had gone round that he was about to begin to tour on foot through the affected villages of Noakhali and Tippera, and therefore several Press representatives and photographers arrived. . . . I met them in a private conference and communicated to them the following instructions from Gandhiji.”

2 The questions were asked by Asaf Ali, who had been appointed Ambassador to the U.S.A. and were sent through Pyarelal; vide “Talk with Satis Chandra Das Gupta”, 7-1-1947 done in England only recently can be safely done by the Indian Ambassador in America. Whether we can sing Vandemataram or Jai Hind or the Tricolour song at the same time should be decided by the Interim Government.

4. The Ambassador’s speeches where audiences are purely or predominantly Indian should be in Hindustani first and he can translate the same into English whenever occasion requires it. For pure American audiences speeches should be only in English. It would be pompous and unreal to deliver before American audiences speeches first in Hindustani and then translations in English.

It should be remembered that the most polished Ambassadors have read their speeches which they have prepared or have been prepared for them in advance.

220. LETTER TO H. S. SUHRAWARDY

SRIRAMPUR,
NOAKHALLI,
December 20, 1946

DEAR FRIEND,

I wrote to you three letters—one dated 3-12-46 on the general situation, a second dated 4-12-46 regarding Sardar Bahadur Sir Datar Singh’s suggestion and a third in reply to your letters of 2nd and 3rd December. I am sorry that all the letters have remained unanswered. I can only ascribe to heavy pressure on you the absence of any communication from you.

I took the liberty of sending to Abdulla Saheb three complaints which had come under my notice—one of very recent murder, another of rape and third of loot. He was good enough to call on me yesterday and to tell me the result of his investigation which he was good enough to hold very promptly. The first one he said was true as to the event itself but not sustained about the culprits named. I believe the guilty parties are being traced. The second has been found by him to be a concoction. The third is found to be true and is being pursued.

---

1 Vide “Extract from Letter to H. S. Suhrawardy”, 3-12-1946 and “Fragment of Letter to H. S. Suhrawardy”, 5-12-1946

2 ibid
For me the relevance for the purpose of this letter lies in the fact that the trouble is not over and the fear is not wholly without foundation. Indeed, complaints have been almost daily coming to me showing how difficult the problem is. If you can possibly regard me as a well-wisher of your Ministry and of the Muslim League, you will please continue as you began to let at least one Minister to be on the spot and keep himself in touch with me. If this expectation is too great or cannot be fulfilled, you will please tell me whether you approve of my keeping in touch with the District Magistrate and the Superintendent of Police to whom I could directly refer the matters which come under my notice and which I consider to be worthy of being put before them.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. Gandhi

[PS.]
Just as I was about to sign this, two messengers from Comilla came in and handed me your letter. I have not read it. I am letting this go and shall write again if necessary.

THE HON'BLE THE CHIEF MINISTER OF BENGAL

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

221. LETTER TO D. B. KALELKAR
SRIRAMPUR,
December 20, 1946

CHI. KAKA,

Your letter of the 6th arrived at Kazirkhil on the 12th. It seems to have been given to me on the 16th. I have been meaning to reply to it every day since then, but could manage to dictate this only now at 5.15 (local time) after the morning prayer. I am so helpless at present.

I am dictating this to Manu who arrived from Mahuwa yesterday. I wished to write the letter myself, but could not do that. I have been awake since 2.30 this morning. I have, therefore, been dictating letters lying in bed. I have just left the bed to drink warm water and honey. After that I shall lie down again. On careful reflection I feel that you are inclined now, on Mavalankar’s persuasion, to join the new University. By all means do so. I have no doubt at all that you will adorn whatever work you take up.

But I will blame you if there is the slightest slackening in Hindustani work. I will not then accept the reply that you joined the University with my consent. I should like you to join the University with this understanding. But you must know that your headquarters will necessarily be at Wardha. You should also tell Mavalankar that Sardar and other Gujaratis should agree to your joining the University. It will be enough if you inform him to that effect.

Your shield will be Dada. I could not follow your definition of “residential”. I have understood the word merely to mean that colleges and other institutions outside the University area should not be placed within its jurisdiction. For instance, the Aligarh University. Any student may join such a university, but there will be no affiliated colleges. Why does Dada insist that the Committee should have only Gujaratis as members? You are regarded as a Gujarati, and so is Mavalankar. But suppose it were not so; according to me it would be narrowmindedness then, if, on that ground, you could not be elected. If the U. P. or Bihar were to reject Kripalani as being a Sindhi, would it not be an illustration of the dog-in-the-manger attitude? One cannot oneself eat but would not let others eat. If, therefore, it is considered necessary to add a fifth qualification to the fourth mentioned, I would suggest this: Nobody will be appointed a member of this Committee merely because of his status or to please him, though any such person who possesses the other qualifications for passing the test will be accepted.

I understand about Narahari and Kishorelal. See that the latter does nothing at the cost of his health. I would describe my health as excellent. The climate here wholly agrees with me.

Bisen is working with Satis Babu. The latter had sent him today to me for my final decision. I had a long and frank talk with him. I have also understood what kind of a man he is. I will now think and decide in a day or two where to post him.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10986

1 Presumably the Committee for recommending the constitution of a new university for Gujarat. G. V. Mavalankar was appointed Chairman of the Committee.
2 G. V. Mavalankar
3 Shiv Balak Bisen, who was for some time secretary to Gandhiji
222. NOTE TO MANU GANDHI

December 20, 1946

CHI. MANUDI,

Stick to your word. Don’t hide even a single thought from me. Give a true answer to whatever I ask. The step that I took today was taken after careful thinking. Give me in writing what effect it had on your mind. I shall certainly reveal all my thoughts to you. But this much I want at the moment. Have it engraved in your heart that whatever I ask or say will be solely for your good.

If it is so indeed, I shall have to ask for nothing more. I shall only have to understand it. If your faith has really gone that far, then you are safe. You will play your full role in this great sacrifice even though you are foolish. Preserve this.

Question me if you cannot decipher any words.

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Eklo Jane Re, p. 10

223. LETTER TO DINESH SINGH

SRIRAMPUR,

December 20, 1946

CHI. DINESH,

I received the cheque for Rs. 1,000/- sent by Bhai Feroze Gandhi on your behalf for relief work in Noakhali. Please inform Bhai Feroze.

I may not remember to write to you. When you find me free from here, write to me and meet me. I hope everything is going on well.

Blessings from

BAPU

RAJASAHEB KALAKANKAR
KALAKANKAR HOUSE
PRATAPGARH

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 8677

1 The addressee assured Gandhiji that she had full faith in him and that she was prepared to undergo all hardships till the end. The more he told her about the atrocities, the more she was inclined to stay there. Vide also “Extract from Diary”, 20-12-1946
224. LETTER TO SYED MAHMUD

December 20, 1946

Bhai Syed Mahmud,

I cannot dictate this in the Urdu script because Manubehn does not know Urdu. If you are not required to stay there, I should like you to come and stay here and Harijan will be despatched from here. Have a talk with Pandit Sunderlal and take whatever decision you wish to.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

225. INTERVIEW TO RAYMOND CARTIER

December 20, 1946

As soon as the French gentleman entered the room Gandhiji greeted him in French “Comment allez vous?” And then added with a loud laughter that he had exhausted his entire stock of French!

The visitor was surprised and was all smiles on hearing Gandhiji greeting him in French.

Gandhiji then told him that he had learnt some French in his school days. Gandhiji then referred to Victor Hugo and said that he could still picture before his mind “Jean Valjean” crawling through the lanes of Paris.

Gandhiji then told Cartier that he had been to Paris thrice and had on every occasion wanted to stay in the quarters inhabited by the poor. It was surprising, he said, that the first city of the world in regard to fashion, luxury and certain other things should have miserable slums lying in the heart of the city.

On being asked by Cartier as to what Gandhiji thought about the present condition of Europe, Gandhiji said that people of Europe were talking of peace but harboured war in their hearts. Unless they shed violence from their hearts, it was not possible for them to have peace.

1 The subscription is in Gujarati.
2 The Sunday Hindustan Standard reported that the interviewer, editor of three French Newspapers, Matin, Samed Soir and Excelsior, was on a world tour. He arrived in the afternoon when Gandhiji was taking nature-cure treatment with an earth bandage on forehead and eyes closed.
3 How do you do?
4 This sentence is reproduced from Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase.
When the last war began, Gandhiji said, he had felt that unless Europe changed its ways this war would only be a prelude to a third and more disastrous war.\(^1\)

Raymond Cartier asked: “We who are children of violence in Europe, how do you expect us to become non-violent?”

In reply, Gandhiji said that if they continued like this, they were sure to perish. What had happened in Europe was that Hitlerism had only been destroyed by super-Hitlerism and this chain was endless. It would go on like that.

Raymond Cartier asked if the remedy lay in a new form of education.

Gandhiji said that education must be of a new type for the sake of the creation of a new world. He referred to Aldous Huxley\(^2\), who, he observed, represented a new type of thought which was working in the mind of Europe today. It might be in a minority today but if Europe was to save itself from suicide, something along the lines of non-violence had to be adopted.

Asked as to how it would be possible to destroy Hitlerism by non-violence, Gandhiji said that was what we had to find out. Otherwise, if one depended upon superior violence in order to destroy violence of the Hitlerism type, then small nations would have hardly any chance of survival. It was only when a nation individually refused to be beaten by Hitlerism or any combination of forces of violence, and stuck to its post at the cost of its life, but not at the cost of its honour, that it had a chance of survival. So, non-violence was the only guarantee of protection against the heaviest odds. Unless we could develop this courage and this type of resistance, democracy could never survive.\(^3\)

Cartier next asked, how France could have at all survived if it had not defended itself against the Nazi hordes.

Gandhiji replied that for that matter even the Maginot Line had not availed them much. Hitler had reduced it to nothingness.

Cartier said that the fault lay not in the principle; it was a technical flaw in the Maginot Line to which military strategists attributed its collapse. Gandhiji rejoined:

Maybe; but beyond that there is a deeper flaw which is fundamental to the whole philosophy of the Maginot Line. Unless you can better Hitler in violence, you cannot gain victory. But the moment you do that, it is Hitlerism that wins and the whole plan of eradicating violence by superior violence is reduced to futility. It is by non-violence alone that you can vanquish Hitlerism or any other species of violence. If I were a Parisian and the Germans invaded my city, I would stir up the Parisians, so that they would lay down their lives to the last man in the defence of their city, not as they did in the last war, but by showing that higher type of courage which the conquest of violence by non-violence calls for. That is what I am trying to evolve in Noakhali. How far I shall succeed, I do not know.

\(^1\) The following five paragraphs are reproduced from Harijan. They are extracted from “Srirampur Diary”.

\(^2\) Aldous Leonard Huxley (1894-1963), British author remarkable for his mocking humour who in later life became increasingly drawn to Hindu philosophy and mysticism.

\(^3\) The following three paragraphs are reproduced from Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase.

Lastly, Gandhiji again referred to the works of Victor Hugo and to two of his books, namely, Les Miserables and Ninety-three and recalled the story of the clergyman’s son who represented the type of courage to which Gandhiji was referring.

226. EXTRACT FROM DIARY

Friday, December 20, 1946

Got up at 12.30 a.m. Woke up Manu at 12.45 a.m. Made her understand about her dharma. Told her to have a talk with Jaisukhlal. She could still change her mind, but once having taken the plunge she would have to run the risks. She remained steadfast.¹ For my sake she would have a talk with Jaisukhlal. But he had left everything to her and would do so in future too. It was now 1.15 a.m. and I again got up at 3 for prayers.

[From Gujarati]

Eklo Jane Re, p. 9

227. LETTER TO CHIMANLAL N. SHAH

December 21, 1946

CHI. CHIMANLAL,

I got your letter. What you write about Champa² seems to be right. If, despite that, she insists on cooking her own food, she may do so on condition that that should throw no additional burden of work on the Ashram. She should make her own arrangements for buying the necessary provisions. In short the burden on the Ashram

¹Vide also “Letter to Syed Mahmud”, 20-12-1946
²Champa R. Mehta, daughter-in-law of Dr. Pranjivandas Mehta
I hope Pushpa will settle down. The news of Rajnikant’s expected arrival is alarming. But when there is a rent in the sky itself, how can we stitch a patch on it? It is possible that that relation is perfectly pure. But the father at any rate must be informed, and his consent obtained. Read my letter to Pushpa.

We may do whatever is possible for Sharda and then stop worrying. What is fated will happen.

Now about myself. You should give up the hope of my return, or early return there, as also of that of the other co-workers. The task here is a difficult one. I am being tested. Is the weapon of satyagraha of my conception really a weapon of the strong or only of the weak? It is, therefore, my firm resolve to accomplish my mission here or to lay down my life in the attempt. What is true of me applies to most of the other co-workers as well. It is with this idea in my mind that I have come and camped in a ruined village. God will do as He wills. All the letters will be received there. From here I will attend to the minimum of outside work.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10655

228. LETTER TO VALJI G. DESAI

December 21, 1946

CHI. VALJI,

I got your letter. We have dispersed and camped in different villages which have been seriously affected. Everybody has a Bengali interpreter with him or her. My companion is a gentleman named Nirmal Kumar. He is a professor. Another companion is Parasuram, who cannot be posted alone in any village, for he knows very little Hindustani. He comes from Malabar. You know him. We have dispersed and camped in different villages, Sushila Pai in one and Dr. Sushila in another, Pyarelal in a third, Kanu in a fourth, Abha and Bapa in a fifth and Prabhu\(^1\) in a sixth. The task is a complicated one. Everybody’s ahimsa is being tested. I am sending your note to Sushila Pai. Everybody comes and sees me occasionally. I do not

---

\(^1\) Prabhudas, a young man who used to be in Gandhiji’s party as office assistant know what the outcome is going to be.

You have given good news about Manu\(^1\) in the note addressed to Sushila. He is bound to make headway. He is a very good, intelligent and industrious young man.

I feel your leg should now get fully cured. When I think on it I cannot help the feeling that you are being lax.

Now about junior. If I can recollect all the incidents, I can point out the reason. But the papers have gone to Ahmedabad. It was for you to find out the reason. I had discovered it in the origin of those incidents, but I have forgotten everything now. If I get the papers again or if you send them to me and I can recollect the reason, I will let you know.

A large number of words have accumulated for the dictionary. They are at Ahmedabad. Rajkumari will come and give you. I have sent the material in all the three languages received from you to Ahmedabad.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 7501. Courtesy: Valji G. Desai

---

229. _LETTER TO SRIKRISHNA SINHA_

SRIRAMPUR,

_December 21, 1946_

BHAI KRISHNA SINHA,

I wrote a letter to you but have not received a reply. Possibly it was lost. It does happen to some of my letters.

I have received a copy of the Bihar Provincial [Muslim] League’s report. You too must have received a copy. I am therefore not sending it to you. It is a terrible thing if even half of what is stated were true. It even mentions that I should ask the Bihar Ministry for a full clarification of the massacre for which they were responsible. And if one has been already issued, I may be sent a copy. I should like to take you even further than that. I read in some newspaper that the Bihar Ministry does not propose to hold any inquiry\(^2\). I was sorry

---

\(^1\) Mahendra V. Desai, addressee’s eldest son

\(^2\) The appointment of a Commission of Enquiry was announced by the addressee on February 13, 1947.
to note it. I want the ministries of both the provinces to hold an impartial inquiry by a joint committee to probe the incidents in both the provinces. Even if Bengal does not co-operate, it is the Bihar Ministry’s duty to hold such an enquiry. It will be good if you can also let me know the true condition at present. What is the truth in the report that many Muslims have left Bihar and many are still leaving? There is also a complaint that representatives of the Muslim League are not even allowed to visit the Muslim refugee camps set up by the Bihar Government. I am sending a copy of this to Rajendra Babu.

BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

230. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

SRIRAMPUR,

December 21, 1946

Gandhiji began by saying that he held very strong views on the question of charity. It was wrong both to accept as well as to offer anyone a free gift. In our land irreligion often masqueraded in the name of religion. India was said to have a contingent of 56 lakhs of religious mendicants, not many of whom could be considered worthy in any sense. Even the hateful custom of untouchability had been given sanction of religion in this land of sorrow.

The problem of relief and rehabilitation, Gandhiji went to say, had become a serious one. People from all over India were eager to help the afflicted inhabitants of Noakhali with money or free gifts of all kinds, and there was a chance that the latter might slip into a mentality of willing dependence on public charity. This had to be combated as much as the complacence of those who might feel they were acquiring religious merit through charitable gifts.

Referring to the attitude which the Government should exercise with regard to the refugees in comparison with that held by public charitable bodies, Gandhiji proceeded to explain that it was true that people had gathered in the refugee camps for no fault of theirs. Their homes had been burnt and they were without shelter; others had been robbed of all their belongings although their cottages might still be standing, while a third group had deserted their homes mainly from a feeling of insecurity. It should be the object of the Government to deal with each case on its merits and help the people to return home with a feeling of security.

1 Extracted from “Srirampur Diary”

VOL. 93: 7 NOVEMBER, 1946 - 16 FEBRUARY, 1947 171
Before necessary conditions were created, it would not be right for the authorities to stop rations unless the evacuees went back home with their whole families. If the evacuees were expected to brave hardships and perhaps even death in order to reinstate themselves in their homes, then there would be no need of a state; it would be a condition of enlightened anarchy where every man would be able to protect himself by his own strength in the face of the greatest danger. But as things stood today, much of the necessary work of social service had to be conducted by Governmental organizations.

Adequate protection had to be given and an atmosphere created where the people might once more pursue their life’s work in peace. So long as the conditions were not forthcoming, arrangements for relief had to continue.

But the case of public charitable societies stood on an entirely different footing. Gandhiji held it was wrong for any man to live on public doles. While the South African satyagraha was going on, large sums of money were donated to cover the expenses of the satyagrahis. The Tolstoy Farm near Lawley in the Transvaal was established to accommodate the families and dependents of satyagrahis who worked to the best of their ability for their upkeep. Consequently, the satyagraha organization was able to refund large sums of money at the end of the campaign.

In accordance with the same principles, the charitable institutions now working here should plainly tell the people that everyone should deem it a dishonour to eat a single meal without honest labour. If we could shed the aversion to labour and adapt ourselves to unexpected changes of fortune, we would go a long way towards the acquisition of fearlessness and thus towards an upliftment of our national character.

He would venture to tell the refugees that whether they were poor or rich, they should say to the authorities that they would consider it below human dignity to accept doles from the Government. Poor or rich had nothing left to them. Therefore, they were in need of food, clothing, shelter and medical assistance. Therefore, they had a claim upon the State for providing these vital necessities of life. But they would be robbing society if they accepted this aid without each healthy man, woman, boy or girl, labouring to the extent of his or her ability and therefore he would like the Government to provide such useful work for society which they were capable of doing.

_Harijan, 19-1-1947_
231. EXTRACT FROM DIARY

December 21, 1946

After the morning prayer, worked on reports of prayer addresses till it was time for the morning walk. Walked double the usual distance. It took forty minutes; however felt no fatigue. . . . Dictated a letter to Suhrawardy while having the midday meal. Birla’s man brought some fruit from Calcutta. Had to give him time. That left very little time for spinning. Felt most unhappy.

232. MESSAGE TO THE PEOPLE OF PANIALA UNION

Srirampur, December 22, 1946

Brothers and sisters of Paniala Hindus and Muslims,

I am sorry that I am unable to come to you today, because the road is bad and I have no strength to walk that distance. I am glad that those Hindus who had left their home are returning. I hope that the Muslims there will reassure the Hindu brothers and sisters; those who are guilty will confess their guilt and all will live together amicably. I hope Hindus will eradicate untouchability. Let everyone eat together and let no one be an outcaste.

M. K. Gandhi

From a photostat of the Hindi: C. W. 10419

233. LETTER TO H. S. SUHRAWARDY

Srirampur, Noakhali, Distt., December 22, 1946

Dear friend,

I sent you yesterday by way of postscript a mere acknowledgment of your letter of 15th instant which came in as mine was going for despatch. I observe that Bihar is still on your brain and that

1 This was sent on the occasion of an inter-caste dinner which Gandhiji could not himself attend. The message was sent through Amrita Lal Chatterjee who was in charge of the Gandhi Peace Mission Centre for the relief and rehabilitation of the riot-affected Hindus and re-establishment of peace and concord between the two communities spread over some forty villages.
you are evidently so worried by the many cares of office that you have not taken the trouble to read my letter carefully, for you have quoted me from memory which has proved a false friend even to men of genius rightly proud of their memory. If you don’t mind, let me assist you by quoting the relevant portion from my letter of 5th instant referred to by you.

If I find any confirmation of the most serious statements made by you about Bihar, I confess that I have egregiously blundered by resuming normal diet. But I am loath to reject the testimony of Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, then of Dr. Rajendra Prasad, both responsible men and persons who had gone specially for the purpose of seeing things for themselves and allaying mob fury. They admit that the behaviour of the Hindu crowds was bad enough in all conscience but they do not bear out the statements made in your letter nor do they uphold the figures given by you. They also tell me that mob fury has subsided and that the Government have regained control undoubtedly with the assistance of the military. If I could feel that my presence was at all necessary in Bihar, I assure you that I would not need any encouragement from you to do so. On the contrary, my informants assure me that my presence is not required in Bihar. In these circumstances, unless I feel sure of my ground, I know that I must not go to Bihar. But I would like to make the assurance doubly sure and with that end in view I would be glad to get your permission to send copies of your letters to the Prime Minister of Bihar and know his reaction. There too you will pardon me, will you not, for not taking your statements as gospel truth. For one thing, you have no first-hand knowledge of events. I suggest that there should be impartial commission, appointed with the consent of the two Governments, to go into the disturbances both in Noakhali and Bihar. If your statements are true and the callous behaviour of the Bihar Government, which you so graphically describe, can be sustained, it is a bad day for the Bihar Government, a bad day for Hindus and good-bye to restoration of friendly relations between the two communities, and it would be a serious question for me to consider where I stand. The least I can permit myself to say is that then I should have no hesitation in publicly denouncing the Bihar Ministers and Bihar Hindus. I would plead with you to suspend, if you at all can, final judgment in the matter. To this, which I hold is a full and frank statement of my position, you were good enough to reply:

I was a little bit taken aback to read in your letter that having heard something from Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru and Babu Rajendra Prasad you thought that nothing had taken place in Bihar to justify your presence there.

I hope that the juxtaposition of the two quotations is enough to demonstrate to you the wholly unwarranted inference drawn by you. But if you still maintain in the correctness of your inference I shall gladly endeavour to demonstrate the unwarranted nature of your inference.

Further, you say:

I do not know . . . whether they said that there had been no murders, loot, massacre, rape, abduction, conversion or cruelties of unimaginable bestiality and brutishness.

I suppose, in support of this charge you have the report issued by the Bihar Provincial Muslim League, of which you have been good enough to send me a copy. In parenthesis, I may say that no other copy was received or seen by me. Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru and Dr. Rajendra Prasad admit loot and massacre but they do not admit rape, abduction and conversion in Bihar and if “unimaginable bestiality and brutishness” are used to convey more than has been conveyed by the words preceding, I would like you to instruct me as to the exact implication of the phrase. I had a visit only the other day from Pandit Dhanraj Sharma, M.L.A. (Bihar Congress). I try to get as much information as I can from those who come to me from Bihar. Perhaps, it will interest you to know what he had to say about the charges such as have been made in the Bihar report referred to above. I have read the main parts of that report and I must confess that it is not a balanced document. Its framers have failed to convince the reader of a fair measure of impartiality. Be that as it may, it carries no conviction to me and is in flat contradiction to what all my informants have given me including Pandit Dhanraj, a copy of whose letter I am sending you. The Bihar report confirms the suggestion I have made to you for the appointment of an impartial commission of inquiry. To this suggestion of mine, you have omitted to make any reply. Now that I have got a copy of the report of the Bihar Provincial . . . ¹ suggest to them the appointment of such a commission. I shall certainly tell you of the result.

¹ The source is mutilated here.

You proceed to say:

It is true that it is the Muslims who have suffered in Bihar and not Hindus.

And then you insinuate,

therefore, perhaps, your going to Bihar will not have any effect in re-establishing confidence amongst Muslims but the problems are by no means dissimilar.

Let me say that I do not regard the Muslims to have less claim on my service or attention. However, I admit that my going to Bihar for the time being will fail to re-establish confidence amongst Muslims. I must not go into the causes at this stage. I cannot help deploring the fact. This distrust is so utterly baseless. I regard myself as an efficient servant of India. Let me tell you, whether you as a late friend and other members of the Muslims League believe me or not, that I am here to regain the lost confidence. Nothing will move me away from Noakhali unless the lost confidence is regained, which will be the case if the Hindus and Muslims in these districts trust one another without needing the presence of the police or the military.

I observe that insistence on my leaving Noakhali is gathering volume. You also share that feeling. I urge you to show me how my presence offends and ask you to instruct the District Magistrate and the Superintendent of Police to keep a strict watch on my movements and tell these gentlemen in what way I have been erring. Let me repeat my assurance that I have come here with no intention whatsoever of sowing dissension between the two communities or to prefer the interest of Hindus over that of Muslims. I am doing everything I can to dispel all fear and the spirit of helplessness. I have told you how the fear is still persisting. I do wish that I could support your hope that the process of confidence and rehabilitation is making progress.

I must say I do not know that dissensions at the centre are widening nor have I the slightest notion that “the Congress has accepted the lead of the great Hindu Mahasabha leader, Mr. Shyama Prasad Mukherji”. Throughout its long career it has never accepted the leadership of anyone who has not been avowedly a whole-hearted Congressman. As to the rest of the points covered by my three letters whose receipt has been acknowledged in your letter under reply, I shall await a further and considered reply.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

Encl: 1

THE HON. THE CHIEF MINISTER OF BENGAL,
CALCUTTA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

234. EXTRACT FROM DIARY

December 22, 1946

Woke up at 1.30 a.m. Worked till prayer time.

235. LETTER TO PYARELAL

December 22, 1946

CHI. PYARELAL,

Sushila’s letter has brought me no peace. I have not the strength or desire to argue any more. I wish I could unsay whatever I have said by way of arguments. I may not mention her name, speak of her or write about her letters that others may see—these are conditions impossible for me to fulfil. I therefore do not propose to write except in specific public interest.

But I do think it necessary that for my satisfaction you should visit her from time to time and write to her at least one letter every day and ask for reply.

In my opinion either she is out of her senses, or I am. I do not notice the symptoms in me. This incident has nothing at all to do with what Devdas, etc. wish. I do not wish to turn her away. The cause of the friction is that I do not wish to take any service from her. I do not see how I can make it my duty to take service from her.

I consider the present spectacle very bad for Manu. I have given my soul to protect her and I am still doing it. I wanted to achieve two purposes by letting her come: first, she would be in a better situation and, secondly, you would be restored to normalcy. But for that, I would not have accepted her conditions. When I feel the need I may take service from anybody. But how can anyone wanting to serve lay down conditions? If your attitude is the same as Sushila's, you too must consider whether you should continue any relations with me. What personal benefit can you have in remaining with me? If you continue to be with me under pressure or unwillingly, it will do no good to you or to Sushila or to me. The position which Sushila is maintaining is in my opinion against dharma.

Why should a personal question of this kind arise at this moment at all?

I believe that you can keep nothing secret from Manu. That is what I have understood from you. I have not even liked the note, of which she has no knowledge. As for Sushila you can tell her (Manu) that from sheer helplessness you must withhold things from her. As I have understood you, you have absolutely no reason to hold back anything from her. If you have not understood how I have presented your case to her, ask me, and I shall again try to explain it to you.

You need not give me a copy of my letter to Sushila, nor of my letter to you. I did express the desire to have copies of both the letters but it is not important.

You can write or tell Sushila anything you wish out of this letter or the whole of it.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers, Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

236. SILENCE-DAY NOTE TO N. K. BOSE

Monday, December 23, 1946

A pupil to be worthy must make previous preparation for the lesson before the teacher.

From a photostat: C. W. 10537. Courtesy: N. K. Bose

1 According to N. K. Bose, “Gandhiji was learning Bengali and as he had not prepared his lesson that day he wrote this note to me”.

178 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
237. SILENCE-DAY NOTE TO N. K. BOSE

December 23, 1946

I do not know what God is doing to me or through me. If you have the time and inclination I would like you to walk to Sushila at daybreak and return after passing some time with her and learning all about her requirements and her health. You can give her the whole of our conversation about her without reserve. The rest you will know from her if she cares to tell you. You can show this to her if you wish. If you propose to shoulder this burden, you will act as the spirit moves you. Don’t work beyond your capacity.

My Days with Gandhi, p. 120

238. INSTRUCTION TO REFUGEES

December 23, 1946

I do not want them to hunger-strike at present. Let there be a full cause ready for such a strike. The question therefore is: are those who get their rations prepared to share with those (300) what they get? If they are, these should take their share while the matter is being prosecuted.

My Days with Gandhi, pp. 120-1

239. LETTER TO J. ASKELTON

SRIRAMPUR,
NOAKHALI DISTT.,
December 23, 1946

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter of 10th instant received here on the 17th. As an English Divine has said, when a man does his duty he is really discharging an obligation. We shall have come to a pitiable

1 According to N. K. Bose, Gandhiji had “handed” this note to him “early in the morning, at 5 o’clock”.
3 N. K. Bose explains : “Arun Datta, a volunteer, had come from the Nandigram Refugee Camp where, out of 1,800 evacuees, Government rations had been stopped for 300. The Government were trying to force the evacuees to return home.”
4 Thanking Gandhiji for the wonderful work he was doing in the distress areas of Bihar and Noakhali.
condition when the discharge of an obligation becomes a cause of merit. In doing the little I am able to for Bihar and Noakhali, I am doing no more than a serious attempt to discharge an obligation. My firmness is at present on its greatest trial. Shall I be able to stick to truth and non-violence in word, deed and thought in the midst of the greatest suspicion, distrust and exaggeration? I, therefore, appreciate the addition of your prayers to mine that I may not fail in the examination.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

SGT. J. ASKELTON

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

240. LETTER TO JAISUKHLAL GANDHI

December 23, 1946

CHI. JAISUKHLAL,

Manudi reminded me just now at 6 in the morning and I started writing this. It is, as you know, my silence day.

You had given me a sample of the slivers made from cotton carded by Ratilal. I spun all of them. They were fine. The slivers for spinning such fine count yarn are long and are wrapped in leaves or paper. I wish Ratilal’s venture all success.

Manudi is very well. She is giving me satisfaction. I heard from her that you recite the Ramayana as sweetly as Paramanand Gandhi¹ used to do. When I heard that, I felt sorry that I did not know it earlier; had I known it, I would certainly have urged you to stay on for a while and asked you to recite some portions. Parmanandbhai’s melodious voice still echoes in my ears. I don’t think you saw him. Kalidas² has inherited a little of that sweetness. We shall meet now only when God wills. Remember my suggestion.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./XXIV

¹ A cousin of Gandhiji
² Son of Parmanand Gandhi
241. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

6 a.m., December 23, 1946

BAPA,

You are working furiously, but why should you, like Sucheta, be bewildered? This is how it goes on in most places. We should do what we can wherever we happen to be, and be satisfied with it. None of us is almighty. If there were a number of Almighties, you and I would not be here. He is the One and only One who unmoved manipulates us; and we should dance to His tune. I will not give you a longer sermon. Where do I have the time?

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

242. NOTE TO KANCHAN AND MUNNALAL G. SHAH

December 23, 1946

KANCHAN AND MUNNALAL,

They may write when they feel like it. They need not wait for a letter from me. I may or may not write, so pathetic is my condition now.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 8412. Also C. W. 5618. Courtesy: Munnalal G. Shah

243. LETTER TO S. G. RANADE

SRIRAMPUR,

December 23, 1946

BHAIRANADE,

I have reached your letter of December 7, 1946 only today. I am engaged in a mighty yajna here and am of no other use at present. May your plan, undertaken at the instance of Sane Guruji, to have a common meal with a thousand people prove a success.

Yours,

M. K. GANDHI

SHRI S. G. RANADE
POONA

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
Gandhiji first referred to certain personal letters addressed to him as well as a number of articles or comments published in newspapers in which the opinion had been expressed that his continued presence in Noakhali was acting as a deterrent to the restoration of cordial relations between the Hindus and Muslims for his intention was to bring discredit upon the League Ministry in Bengal.

Two days ago he had tried to refute a rumour that a satyagraha movement of an extensive character was secretly planned by him in Noakhali. He had already said that nothing could be done by him in secret. If recourse were taken to secrecy and falsehood, satyagraha would degenerate into duragraha.

Today he found it necessary to answer the second charge levelled against him, to which reference had already been made. He would like to proclaim that he had come to Bengal solely with the object of establishing heart unity between the two communities, who had become estranged from one another. When that object was satisfactorily achieved, there would no longer be any necessity for him to prolong his stay.

His intention could never be to embarrass the League Government in Bengal, Gandhiji added. On the other hand, his relations with the Ministry, as well as with the officials, had been very cordial and he had been able to gather the impression that all of them looked with favour upon his peace mission. He had discovered no indication yet of his presence causing embarrassment to anyone. It was open to the Government to ask the Magistrate and the Superintendent of Police to convince him of his error if they were themselves convinced. As yet they had said not a word to that effect. If he felt convinced of any error on his part, he would leave.

Gandhiji said that he had enough work to do elsewhere which demanded his attention. There was Uruli-Kanchan, the seat of his nature cure experiments, and Sevagram, and there was Delhi again, where he might be of some service. He would love to spare trouble to the leaders who had to come to this out-of-the-way place in order to consult him. But personally he felt convinced that the work undertaken by him here was of the greatest importance for all India. If he succeeded in his present mission, it was bound to have a profound influence on the future of India, and, if he might be permitted to say so, even on the future peace of the world, for it was to be a test of faith in non-violence.

1 Extracted from “Srirampur Diary”
A copy of the Bihar Provincial Muslim League Report on the Bihar atrocities had been sent to him. He had gone through it with care and had felt that it bristled with over-statements. Nevertheless, he was making inquiries on the basis of the report. It was certainly true that much that had happened in Bihar was brutal enough and deserved the severest condemnation. The overstatement blurred the gruesomeness of the reality. He was assured that calm had been restored. It was on that assurance that normal diet was resumed by him.¹

The reason why he had not proceeded to Bihar, Gandhiji explained, was that he could exercise his personal influence effectively even from a distance. But if there were any reason to suspect that things still continued in Bihar in the manner described in the League report and that he had been misled by false assurance of his friends, then his place would surely be in that Province and he might even confess that this might imply that the life in the present body was now over and that there was no longer any room for him in the land of the living.

But he could not help uttering a word of warning that leaders of public opinion had a serious responsibility. Their word would be believed by the credulous public, and they all knew the tragic consequences. This he said irrespective of whether the leaders belonged to the Congress or the Muslim League.

_Harijan, 19-1-1947_

245. EXTRACT FROM DIARY

_Monday, December 23, 1946_

Had sound sleep today. Woke up at 3.15 a.m. Felt unhappy. How do I cope with the work here? How strong is my non-violence and what is my skill?² How shall I cope with the multitude of problems that beset me? All round me is raging fire.... Thank God,

¹ On November 19; vide “Statement to the Press”, 20-11-1946

² Pyarelal explains: "Untruth, negligence of duty or imperfection in his associates, Gandhiji regarded as a projection of his own shortcomings. . . . One day he noticed a changed look in the face of one of his companions and recorded his observation in his diary. . . . A few days later, this same worker absented himself from the camp without telling him, thinking it too trivial a matter to bother him with. But he took a very grave view of it and afterwards remarked that it revealed to him in a flash the nature of the goings on about him. He was filled with anguish when a trusted co-worker made a statement to another which he denied afterwards when Gandhiji confronted him with it. On still another occasion he became angry and did not rest till he had owned his lapse and 'utter unworthiness' before the evening prayer gathering.”

³ What follows is reproduced from _Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase._
it is my day of silence. . . .Told them’ not to launch on a hunger-strike as a protest against the treatment in the refugee camp but to give me a chance to strive with the authorities. . . . Abdullah handed me two printed placards demanding my expulsion from Noakhali.

[From Gujarati]

_Eklo Jene Re, p. 22; and Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase, Vol. I, Book II, p. 114_

246. LETTER TO H. S. SUHRAWARDY

December 24, 1946

MY DEAR SHAHEED,

I remind you of our pleasant meeting in Faridpur when Deshbandhu Chittaranjan Das was still in his physical case. If I remember rightly, you were the only one sitting in front of me spinning assiduously, though you were unable to pull an even or fine thread. And then, if I remember rightly, when I applied to you some distant adjective of affection, you corrected me by saying that you felt as son to me. I would like to think still that you are the same Shaheed and to feel proud that my son has become Chief Minister of Bengal. . . .

I wish you had Bengal on the brain rather than Bihar. Assume the truth of all that has been said in the Bihar provincial Muslim League's reports. . . . You do not want to satisfy yourself by thanking God for Bengal being as bad as Bihar. . . . You seem to believe the stories of Bihar cruelties with which you have been regaled. . . . I frankly confess to you that these reports do not carry conviction to me. If even 50 per cent of the stories are true, life would become a burden for me. . . . You should know that though here, I was able to affect events in Bihar by my putting myself on protein-and-fat-free diet and by my proposal, if things did not mend, to undertake complete fast.

Though I have not come out publicly, and I hope I shall

---

1 Refugees from Nandigram; _vide_ “Instruction to Refugees”, 23-12-1946
2 Omissions as in the source
3 _Vide_ also the preceding item.
never have to do so, things in this part of Bengal are not at all rosy. Fear still dominates the refugees. Refugees ought not to be threatened with stoppage of rations. There are several other humane ways of inducing them to return to their homes. If you really want them to do so, you ought to supply them with proper food, warm clothing and decent habitation . . . . If you cannot do so, because of want of funds or sufficient workers, it would be quite proper and honourable to make that announcement and let philanthropists do the needful. There are workers enough in the country who would respond to the call. You, single-handed, will not be able to cope with the work. And if you really mean the thing, you ought to send a responsible Minister whose sole task would be to attend to this public duty. In this you will find in me a ready, willing, and, I hope, efficient helper.¹

Yours,

BAPU

247. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING²

SRIRAMPUR,

December 24, 1946

Gandhiji began his speech by saying that complaints had been pouring in that people were unable to shed their fear because persons known to be guilty were freely moving about. He said that although this might be true, his advice to them would still be to take courage in both hands and return to their homes. When several persons had complained that the amount offered by the Government for rebuilding was inadequate for the erection of any kind of shelter, he felt sure that the Government which was determined on repatriation would extend their aid to the necessary extent.

What Gandhiji would personally prefer was that the refugees should be resourceful enough to tide over the present difficulty. He would honour a man who begged nothing for himself nor depended on outside aid for protection. If anyone depended on him for that purpose, he was depending on a broken reed.

¹ Replying on December 25, the addressee said that he could not spare any minister for Noakhali for the time being as there was “considerable amount of administrative work to be done at Calcutta”. He could “certainly, . . . have no objection” to Gandhiji bringing to the notice of local officers any complaints he received.

² Extracted from "Srirampur Diary"
The only effective protection came from reliance upon internal strength, i.e., on God. Everyone should realize the secret that oppression thrived only when the oppressed submitted to it. If they shed fear from their hearts, nobody would or could oppress them.

_Harijan, 19-1-1947_

248. MESSAGE TO B. S. MURTHI

[On or before December 25, 1946]¹

My blessings to the temple-entry movements should be presumed. I am working here single-handed against odds.

_The Hindu, 28-12-1946_

249. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

_Srirampur, December 25, 1946_

CHL. VALLABHBHAI,

Your letter addressed to Pyarelal reached me direct yesterday. Pyarelal and all the rest are engrossed in their own duties and are staking their lives. He could, when we were together at one place, write or send you something. He cannot do so now. Your letter went to Kazirkhil; so Satis Babu forwarded it to me here. Pyarelal does not know about your letter. He comes to see me occasionally and will read it when he comes here next.

I am dictating this at 3 a.m. I shall have a wash at 4 a.m. and prayers after that. This is the present routine. I shall carry on only if such is God's will. However, there is no need to worry about my health. The body responds to the demands made upon it, but I am being tested. My truth and non-violence are being weighed in a balance which is much more accurate than any pearl merchant ever used. It is so sensitive as to register the difference of even a hundredth fraction of a hair. Truth and non-violence themselves can never be imperfect. If anything is to be found wanting, it may be I who have constituted myself their representative; if so, I at least hope that God will take me away and work through some other agent. I am sorry that I cannot myself do the work which Pyarelal used to do for me and I have not yet been able to arrange with the two men who are with me to do it. But both are intelligent. I therefore hope to be able to arrange it. In this, your letter will afford me encouragement. Jaisukhlal left Manu here at her own wish three or four days ago. I allowed her to come and stay with me on her terms, as she was prepared to live and die with me if necessary. And now I am dictating this to her, lying with my eyes closed so as to avoid strain. Sucheta¹ is also in the room. She is still asleep and I am dictating this letter in a low voice, lying on the wooden bedstead. The bedstead is of a size on which three persons can easily sleep. I do all my work on it. The telegram you have forwarded to me has no substance. There is no limit to exaggeration here. Not that people exaggerate intentionally; they simply do not know what exaggeration means. The imagination of the people runs riot like the local vegetation which grows like grass on all sides. All around us I find huge coconut and betelnut palms, and a large variety of greens grow in their shade. The rivers are all [big] like the Indus, the Ganges, the Jumna and the Brahmaputra. They empty their waters into the Bay of Bengal. My advice is that if you have not already replied to the correspondent who sent you the telegram, you should ask him to furnish proof for his statements so that the Central Government may try to do something about it though they have no power to interfere in terms of the Constitution. And add: ‘Gandhi is there in your midst and it is impossible that he would not listen to you. But he is an apostle of truth and non-violence and it is therefore likely that you are disappointed with him. But if he disappoints you, how can we, who were trained under him, hope to satisfy you? But we shall do what we can.’ Don’t tell anyone that since I am here, he need not bring his problems to you. Tell him that he may write to you nevertheless and that it will be your duty to afford relief to him even by going against me, for that is what I have taught you.

¹ The message was sent "in connection with the temple-entry movement that has been launched" by Andhra Harijan Sevak Sangh, of which the addressee was Secretary. The Report appeared under the date-line Srirampur, December 25.

² _ibid_

The situation here poses many difficulties and problems. Truth is nowhere to be found. Violence masquerades as non-violence and heinous crimes are committed in the name of religion. But truth and non-violence can be tested only in such conditions. I know this and that is why I am here. Do not send for me. If I run away from cowardice that will be my own misfortune; but I do not yet see such a misfortune befalling the country. I am here to do or die. News came over the radio yesterday that Jawaharlal, Kripalani and Deo are coming to have consultations with me. That is good. What is the use of my meeting everyone? However, if anyone among you wants to ask me anything, he is welcome. What I wrote about Assam was not meant for immediate publication. If you know how it came to be published, please let me know. But rest assured that I am right on that point. I am in the furnace here. I, therefore, am in a good enough position to testify what is happening in it and what the truth is. [Sardar Jivan Singh] often comes to me, asks for suggestions and assures me that he will implement them to the letter. I think I can trust him. I had a wire from [Sardar Niranjan Singh] saying that he had not been able to win you over. But I did not understand what he actually meant. Tell him this if he is there and if you happen to meet him. And if you have been able to understand what he wants to ask me, let me know.

¹ Sucheta Kripalani

You will have seen the report of the Bihar [Muslim] League. I have written to Rajendra Babu about it and have asked him to acquaint all of you with my views. I have written to the Chief Minister also. It is dreadful even if half of it is true. I have no doubt at all that an impartial commission of inquiry, which is above reproach, should be immediately set up. There should not be delay of even a single day. Whatever is true in the allegations must be admitted straight away and the rest should be referred to the commission. Discuss this with your Muslim League colleagues in the Cabinet also. I am in correspondence with Suhrawardy. It is continuing. I will send it all to you when it is completed. Jawahar and others will see what has passed between us so far. If you are not doing so already, please read the summaries of my postprayer speeches which are sent to the newspapers. Or go through the cuttings which Mani may give you. I know even from here the great pressure under which you are working, but there are certain things which have got to be done despite the pressure. To keep yourself informed of what I say, is one

---

1 The reference presumably is to “Talk to Assam Congressmen”; vide “Interview to Assam Congressmen”, 15-12-1946
2 From Pyarelal Papers, Niranjan Singh Gill was conducting relief operations with his headquarters at Kazirkhil. In his letter dated December 19, he had requested the addressee to approve his budget for the relief work, and had also requested that the number of workers be increased from 100 to 300 and the programme be made for longer period. On December 22, the addressee had replied that the budget amount was too lavish to be approved by Gandhiji and that for the present the number of workers be limited to 100 and only for a period no longer than three months.
3 ibid
4 Vide “Letter to H. S. Suhrawardy”, 24-12-1946
5 Manibehn, addressee's daughter of them.

How can I say you will be well? I will assume that you are well enough to carry on the work. I am sure you can improve your health. I would still advise you to send for Dinshaw\(^1\). I have no doubt that he is a good and a sincere man with an altruistic outlook. What if he is not so efficient? You ask about Sushila\(^2\). I cannot say that she is in very good health. She too is in an inhospitable village and is doing good work. Even a quack is a rarity in these parts; so naturally people make much of someone like her. Do not, therefore, be anxious for any of us here. And when everyone of them is here, ready to die, their falling ill should be of no great concern. If one dies, it is as well; only let the death be pure and earn commendation.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

_Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhaïne, pp. 336-40_

---

250. LETTER TO MEMBERS OF FENI SUB-DIVISION MUSLIM LEAGUE

December 25, 1946

GENTLEMEN,

I have just received your postcard\(^3\) scribbled out in ink and thank you for your advice. I am unable to follow your advice which is definitely based on ignorance of facts. In the first place, I know that the situation is not normal here and that in so far as I can contribute to the Bihar problem, I have to inform you that such influence as I have on Bihar can be and is being efficiently exercised from Srirampur.

_Yours sincerely,_

M. K. GANDHI

My Days with Gandhi, p. 122

---

1. Dr. Dinshaw K. Mehta
2. Dr. Sushila Nayyar
3. According to N. K. Bose, it contained a copy of the resolution passed by that body, which read: “It is appreciated that Mr. Gandhi’s presence in Bihar is much more useful than at Noakhali where the situation is normal. He is therefore requested to leave for Bihar.”
251. LETTER TO JAISUKHLAL GANDHI

December 25, 1946

CHI. JAISUKHLAL,

Manudi suggested to you that you might meet Shankarlal’s need from her money which is in your custody. I like the suggestion very much. She deserves to be encouraged in her generosity. Shankarlal, moreover, is not begging for an outright gift. He may even pay some interest. There is, therefore, no risk. And even if the sum is lost, how will it matter? You can even procure the amount from some other source. But why look for other sources when the best is at hand?

Manudi is doing very well. The result is in God’s hands. Think over my suggestion concerning you.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./XXIV

252. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

SRIRAMPUR,
December 25, 1946

Sailen Chatterjee who appeared to Gandhiji more as a fellow-worker in the cause of independence than a journalist, asked him whether he would, in his post-prayer remarks, say something about Christianity because it was Christmas Day and reminded him that he had done some such thing on the previous Christmas Day. Gandhiji said he had not thought of it though he should have.

He said he was thankful for the reminder and he informed the audience that he had accepted the suggestion without the slightest hesitation. Then he had to think about what he should say. He was baffled about his choice for he said that it was almost universally realized that everywhere irreligion masqueraded as religion.

Whilst he was searching for something apposite for the occasion he thought of two beautiful note-books in which Rajkumari had copied out gems from the Bible and Christian hymns. Rajkumari had been chosen by Pandit Nehru, their Foreign Minister at the Centre, as a member of the deputation on behalf of the Government of India to represent it in the Educational Conference that was held in Paris. She was a member of the ruling family of Kapurthala. Her father would have occupied the gadi, but for his being a Christian.

Rajkumari was proud of being considered a Sikh, a Hindu and a Christian and had chosen to throw in her lot with those who were downtrodden. He would invite the audience to give thought to the best from Christianity which he had selected from Rajkumari’s collection. Only a few days ago he commended to their attention two of the best sayings from Prophet Mohammed.

He believed in equal regard for all religions. Mere tolerance was not of much value. No religion worth the name stood in need of patronage. It should command respect. He added that Jesus Christ might be looked upon as belonging to Christians only but he really did not belong to any community inasmuch as the lesson that Jesus Christ gave belonged to the whole world. So saying, he asked Prof. Nirmal Bose to translate the following from the New Testament on love, which he preferred to render as ahimsa.

_Hindustan Standard, 30-12-1946; and Harijan, 26-1-1947_

253. ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS

_December 26, 1946_

QUESTION 1. Would it not be better to have pure joint electorate with reservation of seats, than the half joint and half separate electorate which we have today?

Answer 1. The answer to your Ist question is yes. Second is very difficult.

Q. 2. When you speak about the removal of untouchability among Harijans, to whom do you refer? Which section among us? For many among us, scheduled people, consider themselves higher than the rest.

A. 2. I agree with you that the removal of untouchability among the so-called untouchables is more difficult than its removal between caste Hindus and non-caste Hindus, i.e., untouchables.

Q. 3. Will not our condition truly improve only when Congressmen take up Harijan service in earnest, rather than leave it to the fitful efforts of political adventurers among Scheduled Caste people?

A. 3. The answer to your 3rd undoubtedly yes.

Q. 4. Could not men like Sarat Babu, Kiran Babu do something to spread the message

1 This sentence is reproduced from _Harijan_, 26-1-1947.

2 _1 Corinthians_, XIII. 1 to 7, not reproduced here

3 The questions were asked by Vidyadhar Mandal, President, Namashudra Hitaishi Samiti.
of the Congress among the Scheduled Castes?
A. 4. I thing the gentlemen you name have done their best to spread the message. Many others who have more leisure have been doing for a long time the class of work referred to by you.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

254. LETTER TO MANILAL B. DESAI

SRIRAMPUR,
December 26, 1946

CHI. MANILAL,

I got your letter and the supplement. I cannot recollect the letter which you mention, and am not bothering to search for it. Strictly speaking, the suggestion about cows does not fall within the scope of the Trust. You can establish contact with the Goseva Sangh. If you try to do that work, you will not be able to do the work you have undertaken. In attempting an ambitious plan, you may fail in both the tasks like the sadhu who lost both this world and the next. Or you may undertake the work in consultation with somebody who knows it. The idea of making the Arogyabhavan self-supporting is not a bad one. But if you engage two persons for that work, no work will be done and your plan for starting cultivation will have to be abandoned. The difficulty about money can be met. It is not necessary to employ some persons specially for that purpose. As soon as I know the final decision, I shall be able to find the money. You will of course need a well. Get one sunk. I think you mean a deep well to be sunk at a cost of Rs. 4,000. I am inclined towards a well of that type. Or, we can have the type of water-works constructed by the military and can draw the water in the same way as they do. I think we can get enough water from the water-works built by them. We cannot have a buffalo in the goshala. I have no doubt on this point. If we do not insist on having cows only, you may rest assured that they will die out. And the cow will always be followed by the buffalo. Animal husbandry experts have finally come to this conclusion. I cannot judge about buying the plot belonging to Patangiya. All that I can say is that you may do what you think best.
I think this answers all your questions. It is, therefore, not necessary for you to travel all this distance.

I am dictating this letter after waking up at three in the morning. I don't have the courage, therefore, to try to write to Dr. Bhagwat, Dhirubhai and others, as it is nearing four o'clock now and I have to start preparing for the prayer. I understand about Dhulia. If Maganbhai cannot stay there regularly and take active interest in the work of the Trust for a few months in the year at least, there will be no point in making him one of the Trustees. I think I have written to you about this in a previous letter. I will [not], therefore, [write more in this].

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W.2736. Courtesy: Manilal B. Desai

255. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

SRIRAMPUR,
December 26, 1946

BAPA,

I have your letter. Two persons are certain to come on behalf of the Sikhs. I am not going to send them back in a hurry. I must admit that I cannot command the pace at which you go. I don't have the time to find out why. Today I am up since 2 o'clock. It does not harm me. Nowadays I have made it a practice to get up at 3 o'clock. Yet, I cannot say that I am able to finish the day's work. I don't want you to come when Jawaharlal comes. It will be strenuous. Considering that you have just recovered from fever you should not strain yourself so much. If you go to Delhi fairly late, I hope I shall be there when you are there. If this cannot be, I am sure to be there during your absence. I wish we could meet before you went to Delhi. I have had a good deal of talk with Abha who has grown wings. She is now prepared to live in a village and has, in consultation with Satis Babu, selected Chandigram, which is five miles from here. Here, too, she has met a number of Muslim families. She even took me to a place in the hope of introducing me to the women who, however, never came out. Abha had her object-lesson. I already knew that the women would not come out but I agreed to go with her because they had made a promise to Abha. Abha spoke to me about the two girls whom you have selected to be sent to the Mahila Ashram. Shantabai also has been consulted. The younger one is to be sent to the Mahila Ashram and the older one to the Balika Ashram. Both will thus have different experiences. I see advantage in it.

Are you sure you are not being hasty in organizing the people's programme in different places? But for this doubt I have nothing to say on the matter.

Now, if you agree to my suggestion about Abha, I would further suggest that you send her soon so that she takes up the work, because [Chandigram] will be my first camp during the tour. She would like to be there before that, and so would I. If Malati¹ has already arrived there. I have nothing to say. But don't send for her if she does not come for the present.

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

256. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

SRIRAMPUR,
December 26, 1946

CHI. VALLABHBHAI,

This I am dictating to let you know about a person called Dr. Filchner concerning whom Dinshawji wrote to me. I just cannot cope with the work. Something or the other always remains in arrears. So I do not know what is going to happen to me. Whatever does happen will happen here. I am very happy. Though there is total darkness before me, I remain cheerful and consider my health to be excellent. Do not worry on my account in the least. If the person whom Dinshawji recommends can be allowed to remain, he should, in my opinion, be granted the permission. That, of course, only if you can let him stay consistently with your duty to the State. Not knowing the facts, I cannot say any more.

¹ Malati Chowdhary

Do be careful about your health.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
_Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, p. 340_

257. LETTER TO PYARELAL

_Develop 26, 1946_

CHI. PYARELAL,

It was fortunate I did not have to go to Comilla. But I must say that as long as we are living independently in separate villages, it is good to give up the temptation of going anywhere—even to the Working Committee meetings. For the present, all attention must be concentrated on our respective villages. Then only can we hope to succeed. it is a difficult task. But that alone is worth doing. I am also not interested in attending the Working Committee. But it may be my duty to attend. Even for that I would not like to go far. You will understand this more when you come here. I hope you have not allowed the hand pricked by thorns to become septic.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

258. LETTER TO BALVANTSINHA

_Srirampur, December 26, 1946_

CHI. BALVANTSINHA,

Lying in bed I am unable to write to you myself.

Those who were doing such work for me have been sent to different places. Manu alone is with me out of attachment and does all work for me. I won't be able to dictate a full reply to your letter. I do not even remember all your queries.

As for your coming here, if I have not already written to you I want you to stay on there for the present. That alone is your duty. Be composed, restrain your anger and live like a sthitaprajna.

Blessings from BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 1968

259. LETTER TO GIRDHARI

SRIRAMPUR, December 26, 1946

BHAI GIRDHARI,

I have your letter. The news is very vague. Something can be done upon receiving more details. However, I am arranging to get further information.

Blessings from BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

260. LETTER TO HOSHIARI

SRIRAMPUR, December 26, 1946

CHL. HOSHIARI

Your letter. I like it. The reason for my not writing to you is that I am confident that if you are fully engaged in your work, you will not worry about a letter from me.

Blessings from BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

261. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

SRIRAMPUR, December 26, 1946

Gandhiji said that he had no doubt in his mind that the British would have to quit India. But if Indians were foolish enough to quarrel among themselves, he could

1 Extracted from “Srirampur Diary” which says “The speech was provoked... by the fact that when he asked some people offering to serve in Noakhali whether they would continue to serve, if necessary, for a lifetime even after he had left, they were reluctant to commit themselves. This reluctance led him to believe that people were anxious to come and serve in a manner which would attract his attention and that such people were not keen on service for the sake of service.”
very well visualize the destiny of the whole country. India would probably be placed under the United Nations which would mean not one but many masters, and, hence, goodbye to independence.

He was soon going to make the greatest experiment of his life. That would be perhaps his last experiment. He was not a holder of any Degree—B.A. or M.A. But if he succeeded in the examination he was taking in Noakhali, he would think he had received his highest Degree of life—his M.A. And if he succeeded in this examination of his, he would share all that he achieved together with his Degree with the forty crores of people of this country.¹

Continuing, Gandhiji said that the task he had undertaken in Bengal was most serious. Here a community which had been friendly to him previously now looked upon him as its enemy. He was out to prove that he was “a real friend of the Muslims”. So he had chosen for his greatest experiment a place where the Muslims were in a majority.

For the fulfilment of his mission it would suffice if he toured the countryside alone, and the presence of the workers from outside soliciting his advice and direction raised fresh problems for him instead of assisting him to solve the already complicated task he had undertaken. Much of the misunderstanding could be removed if those really keen on serving the people of Noakhali would directly approach the Bengal Ministers with their plan of work and obtain not only their written permission to carry on their work but also their approval of the plan.

Gandhiji gave this advice to some doctors who came from Bombay yesterday for rendering medical aid to the refugees in the affected areas. To some people who sent him letters and telegrams offering to come to Noakhali for service, Gandhiji had replied that they could serve the cause by carrying on constructive work around their own places. To those who sought directions as to how best to serve in Noakhali, Gandhiji said that he himself was groping in darkness and a blind man could not be the best guide.

_Harijan,_ 26-1-1947; and _The Hindu,_ 29-12-1946

262. EXTRACT FROM DIARY

December 26, 1946

Everything seems to be going awry. There is falsehood all round.

_Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase,_ Vol. I, Book II, p.114

¹ This paragraph is reproduced from _The Hindu._
DEAR HAMIDUDDIN SAHEB,

Nirmal Babu read to me your writing in the Azad of the 14th instant. It staggered me and I asked him kindly to give me its literal translation. If there is any incorrectness, you will please send me your correction. I say it staggered me, because you had left an impression on me that you had entirely realized my sincerity and my usefulness not merely for the Hindu inhabitants of the district but equally for the Muslim inhabitants. Assuming the accuracy of the translation, your article is an indictment against me. Indeed, most of us were under the impression that while Shamsuddin Saheb was leaving for a few days to meet the Chief Minister, You would be staying behind to continue his work and help the Peace Committees that were just then being formed. But the next day, I learned with sorrow that owing to some affliction of your eyes you had to leave abruptly with Shamsuddin Saheb. What had happened in the meanwhile to warrant what I have called your indictment I do not know. Why do you in common with many advisers advise me to leave Noakhali and go to Bihar or somewhere else?

I have not come to East Bengal to hold an enquiry. I have come to make my humble contribution to a lasting and heart peace between the two communities. I think that I made this statement during the speeches I had made in your presence. Why then the sudden change betrayed by the article in question? Do you not think that after the exuberant regard you showed for me, I had the right to expect from you a friendly and personal enquiry from me, to inform me of the change and giving the grounds for the change? Perhaps, on reflection, you will discover in your very article valid reason for my longing to be in Noakhali in preference to Bihar. How can I test the efficacy and soundness of my ahimsa except in a place where even the loudest protestations of trust in my professions can be so short-lived as in your case?

You are right when you say: "In Mr. Gandhi's opinion, the

---

1 Parliamentary Secretary to the Minister for Commerce, Government of Bengal

2 Vide also “Letter to Members of Feni Sub-Division Muslim League”, 25-12-1946

198
condition in Noakhali is not yet such that Hindus can shoulder the responsibility of returning to their homes." I have chapter and verse to show why the Hindu refugees who proved themselves deficient in personal courage are reluctant to go back to their homes. The peace Committees which you left in the process of formation are not in working order.

The Ministers and Parliamentary Secretaries would not return to their work of seeing the Committees doing their duty. I urge you for the sake of the League Ministry in whose efficiency and goodness I am at least as much interested as you ever can be. Believe me, I have not come to East Bengal for the purpose of finding fault with the League. I have come in order to induce it by my conduct to shed its complacency and give solid work for the sake of itself and India. For I believe that if you and I can produce in Bengal the right atmosphere, the whole of India will follow.

You say, again: "If he (Gandhi) had issued a statement about the real nature of the happenings, perhaps the atmosphere would have cleared to a large extent. His silence with reference to this matter raises suspicion in the minds of many." Why this insinuation when the fact stares you in the face that I am not in a position to speak in praise of what has been and is being done on behalf of the Bengal Government? If you will care to study the thing, you will appreciate restraint instead of coaxing me to speak.

You are again right when you say: "Mr. Gandhi does not wish to leave for Bihar." But your reasons for reluctance are wholly wrong. My "trusted Bihari followers" have indeed kept me informed of the happenings there. The information they give is wholly contrary to what you believe. In common with all, the Bihar Government deplore the tragic happenings. But they claim that they have acquired control over the turbulent elements and are straining every nerve to give satisfaction to the afflicted.

It will not serve the cause of peace if I went to Bihar and found the Bihar Muslim League’s report to be largely imaginary and the Bihar Government’s conduct substantially honourable, humane and just. I am not anxious to give them a certificate of good conduct as I am to give you, much though you may not want it. My spare diet and contemplated fast, you know well, were against the Bihar misdoings. I could not take such a step in the matter of Noakhali misdoings. It pains me to think that you, a seasoned lawyer, should not see the obvious.

I assure you that I am not guilty of “importing numberless volunteers from outside to serve his (mine) object”. In the first place, I have not imported numberless volunteers. In the second place, my object is not what you have been pleased to insinuate in the same paragraph. Let me tell you that for the fulfilment of my object, I do not need any volunteers here except myself. If you really think that their presence is a menace to the peace of Noakhali, the Government have but to say that they are a danger and to serve a notice on them to quit, and I assure you that without a murmur they would leave this district. From this undertaking, I and one of my company, whose name I need not disclose at this stage, are excepted. You will be astonished to learn that, dear as they are all to me, and valuable as I count their services to the nation, I told them in this mission of mine I had no need to have any associate with me; for the quickest way to fruition required no protection or co-operation save what God sent. Such is my conception of the working of ahimsa. I hope that before the Government takes the adumbrated action they will depute an officer of their choice or trust to find out from me or them the kind of work they are doing. Their life is an open book. There is nothing hidden or underground about their activities.

Permit me to give you my impression that your writing bristles with unprovable and reckless statements without regard to facts. I have noticed only some of them.

As it is, my letter has become much longer than I had sketched in my mind but as I proceeded I could not shorten it if I was to give you some conception of my deep grief. If you will know more, I suggest to you that you should take the trouble of coming to me and passing with me half an hour or so and cross-examine me on the charges you have framed against me.

This letter is not an open letter as yours is. I have written only for you, cherishing the hope that it may perhaps appeal to you as coming from a well-wisher open to conviction.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

My Days with Gandhi, pp. 123-7
264. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

December 27, 1946

DEAR DAUGHTER,

Harilal gave me your letter. He is here till the 3rd. He is a gentleman. He says he may probably stay on longer. Keep me informed daily. Use boiled tepid water for the enema and add two or three grains of potassium permanganate so that the water becomes pink. Drink boiled water and take juice of half a mosambi. Take such water every two hours. I am sending you a bottle of honey. Take it whenever you like.

Apply a mud-pack on the abdomen. Use the mud slab direct without spreading it on a piece of cloth. You will be cured. There is no one here whom I can spare; but if you remain ill, I will find someone. Do not ask for anything from Borkamta. Keep me informed. Postpone your fast for the present. We shall think of it after you get well.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 546

265. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

December 27, 1946

DAUGHTER,

You have fallen ill. How is it? Your companions have asked for a doctor's assistance and a thermometer. I have told them you need neither a doctor nor medicine. Your medicine is earth, water, sky, sun and air, and along with it Ramanama. Stand up in the open air, with Koran in hand, and absorb as much bright sunlight as you can tolerate and take in clean air and water. If God does not want service through you, He will take you away.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Write to me or ask someone to write.

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 547
266. LETTER TO BELA MITRA
SRIRAMPUR, NOAKHALLI,
December 27, 1946

DEAREST BELA,

Haridas has come back. He is full of hope but at the same time what a burden of anxiety he carries! Will you still remain bed-ridden? I send you my hearty blessings. Recover soon and help your husband in his work, giving him courage and strength. I stop here.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Bengali: C. W. 1471. Courtesy: A. K. Sen

267. DISCUSSION WITH SWAMI JNANANANDA

December 27, 1946

There was nothing tangible to be shown yet, but non-violence sometimes worked in unexpected ways.

Gandhiji’s advice to the Swamiji was that violence should be eschewed altogether. There should not even be a trace of it among the workers entrusted with organizations. He emphasized the need for constructive work which could bring food to the hungry millions as well as anti-untouchability work to remove the disabilities which had crippled the Hindu society to a very large extent.

Hindustan Standard, 28-12-1946

268. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

SRIRAMPUR,
December 27, 1946

Gandhiji in his address said that a friend had been telling him that his reference to “darkness” surrounding him was very confusing to many. The friend thought that people at a distance saw light shimmering through his plan, and there was enough proof that the confidence was slowly returning in that affected area.

1 The report said: “Swami Jnanananda of Shakti Math, Dacca . . . discussed with Gandhiji the situation prevailing in rural areas of Dacca and also the possibilities of constructive work in those places.”

2 Extracted from “Srirampur Diary”

3 Vide “Extract From Diary”, 26-12-1946

202 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
Gandhiji said he would tell this friend and others who thought like him that they had misunderstood him to some extent. The darkness in which he was surrounded was of a character the like of which had never faced him before. It was indeed now a vital test that his ahimsa was passing through. He would not be able to say that he had come out successful until the object was reached.

It was true that night was darkest before dawn. He himself felt that and although friends at a distance could see glimpses of the breaking dawn, he himself felt that he was surrounded by complete darkness.

Gandhiji said that many years ago a friend of his used to carry Patanjali's Yugasutra constantly in his pocket. Although Gandhiji did not know Sanskrit yet the friend would often come to him to consult about the meaning of some of the sutras. In one of the sutras it was stated that when ahimsa had been fully established it would completely liquidate the forces of enmity and evil in the neighbourhood. Gandhiji felt that the stage had not been reached in the neighbourhood about him and this led him to infer that his ahimsa had not yet succeeded in the present test. That was the reason why he was saying that there was still darkness all round him.¹

Referring to a statement of Mr. Suhrawardy, Premier of Bengal, Gandhiji said it seemed to him that he was beginning to see glimpses of light. The Bengal Premier had said that he hoped Mahatma Gandhi's mission would be successful and bring results beneficial not only to Bengal but to the whole of India. The Bengal Premier had also said that he must provide escort to protect Mahatma Gandhi on his walking tour. Gandhiji said that Mr. Suhrawardy had only been doing his duty in offering him protection. He knew that military and police had been posted round about his cottage. He sometimes exchanged greetings with them. Beyond that he thought none could do so if God willed it otherwise.

Referring to his walking tour Gandhiji said in a couple of days details would be settled. As soon as the programme was ready he would communicate it to the Bengal Premier, for he felt he should do nothing without his knowledge.

Gandhiji said that his plan was to proceed with the least number of companions on his march, and that he would prefer to stay in the houses of Muslim friends. He had reduced his needs and these could be met even by the poorest villagers. He would like to go absolutely unprotected if it was to prove that in his heart he had nothing but love and friendship for the Muslims.²

Gandhiji said that if he was absolutely alone on his mission his services would have gained considerably in quality. He would also have been able to assess in that case his ability for facing the present problem of Bengal.

¹ The following three paragraphs are reproduced from Hindustan Standard.
² What follows is reproduced from The Sunday Hindustan Standard.
Numerous friends had for some years past placed their services unreservedly at Gandhiji’s disposal. When he first came on his mission to Noakhali, he had intended to dispense with the services of those friends. His idea was to place himself absolutely in God’s hands. Of course God helped his devotees through human agency but in that case it would come naturally and without his asking.

If the original plan of coming here alone had been followed to the letter, complaints that were now being made against him would have been neutralized to a large extent. Even now his advice to anyone who wished to serve in Noakhali would be not to seek his advice, far less to depend on his directions.

Those who would like to come here should instead contact the League Ministry and secure their written permission. Moreover, they should place before the Ministry in detail the nature of work they propose to do and while working here they should confine their activities within that scheme and on no account go beyond it. He was suggesting this course, because it was the League Ministry’s authority which prevailed in this Province.

Today he was regarded as enemy number one by the League and if people from outside came to help him they were bound to be regarded as helping an enemy. But he was very anxious that this should be avoided.

There were men and organizations who were of the opinion that Hindus who were numerically weak should learn self-defence in terms of violence. Muslims on the other hand also felt that they could swamp Hindus by means of their overwhelming numbers. But he had no doubt about it that both of them were not only injuring their own communities but also acting against the interests of India as a whole.

Concluding, Gandhiji prayed to God that he might be successful in cementing differences between the two communities which had unhappily been estranged from one another and said that in this great experiment he would like to march all alone with God as his sole guide.

_Harijan, 26-1-1947; and The Sunday Hindustan Standard, 29-12-1946, and Hindustan Standard, 30-12-1946_

269. EXTRACT FROM DIARY

_December 27, 1946_

Got up at 2 a. m. Woke up Manudi at 2.15 a. m. Made her understand about... Spoke to her about simplicity in clothes and hair styles and about not wasting time in talking to... or others and convinced her that many times one’s company affects one’s character.

Omissions as in the source
Explained to her the importance of [my] signature. She understood everything quite well. Talked with . . . after prayers. Devoted a fairly long time to it. Did my Bengali lesson. It was 5.45 a. m. by then . . . is ill. Wrote to her that she need not call any Vaidya or doctor from outside. She should rely on God or the five elements and do as she pleases.

[From Gujarati]

_Eklo Jane Re_, p. 34

270. _TELEGRAM TO AMRIT KAUR_

RAMGUNJ

_Deckember 28, 1946_

RAJKUMARI AMRIT KAUR
MANORVILLE
SUMMER HILL
[SIMLA]

YOUR LETTER. AM WELL. HOPE FAMILY WELL AND HAPPY. SUSHILA WRITING FULLY. LOVE.

BAPU

From the original: C. W. 4187. Courtesy: Rajkumari Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 7823

271. _TELEGRAM TO SHANTI GHOSH_

RAMGUNJ

_Deckember 28, 1946_

SHANTI GHOSH
9 WINDSOR PLACE
NEW DELHI

BOTH OR ONE MAY COME. LOVE.

BAPU

Sudhir Ghosh Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

1 Amtussalaam; _vide_ “Letter to Amtussalaam”, 27-12-1946
2 Wife of Sudhir Ghosh
272. LETTER TO T. PRAKASAM

SRIRAMPUR,

December 28, 1946

MY DEAR PRAKASAM,

I have now your letter enclosing papers. I hope you have my reply to your telegram, copy of which is enclosed herewith. I have nothing to add to what I have said. I regard Central Government’s reply as a challenge to your faith in yourself, the charkha and the dumb masses of Madras. If the latter are really with you, as I hope they are, you can accept the challenge and you will benefit not only Madras but the whole of Indian humanity.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

273. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

December 28, 1946

DAUGHTER,

I have your letters. Jawaharlal is here with me. What you say is right. Fast and be happy. Some attendant, male or female, ought to be with you. After all He, the Master of us all, is omnipotent. More some other time.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 548

274. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

SRIRAMPUR,

December 28, 1946

Introducing Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, Gandhiji said that he was one of the two Rashtrapatis present. Panditji occupied the position of Vice-President in the

1 Premier, Madras province
2 The reference is to the Madras Government’s khadi scheme and the Premier’s announcement that no new textile mills would be started in the Madras province. The scheme had met with criticism from many quarters.
Cabinet, where he represented the Indian people. The other, namely, Acharya Kripalani, was now at the head of the Indian National Congress. The former was at the helm by virtue of Government office. The latter had nothing but moral authority.

Mr. Shankarrao Deo, the present General Secretary, and Miss Mridula Sarabhai, the outgoing one, were also in their midst. All the four were servants of the Indian National Congress and through it of the nation.

There were some who described the Congress as a Hindu organization. They only betrayed their ignorance of the political history of India. At one time the Hindu Mahasabha was in the hands of the Congress and so was the Muslim League and others. Congress was not a Hindu organization. It did not serve Hindu interests to the exclusion of the other communities.

It was hinted that the Congress leaders had come to consult him with regard to the interests of the Hindus. Had they done so they would have lowered the stature of the Indian National Congress in the eyes of the world. They had come to consult him, as an expert on the Hindu-Muslim question, as to how best to serve the national cause in the present crisis. The reins of Government had come in the hands of the people’s representatives; the nation was well on the way to independence, but it had yet to be achieved. It was sure to come if we made wise use of our strength. The leaders were determined to do without British aid in solving our problems. One single step might injure the national cause.

On the previous evening, the speaker added, he had said something about Suhrawardy Saheb. If the people respected democracy, they could not disregard the Ministry. If anyone wished to serve the afflicted people of Bengal then nothing should be done without the knowledge and sanction of the Ministry.

There should be no mental reservation.

Gandhiji concluded by saying that he had come to prove by his action that he was a sincere friend and a well-wisher of the Muslims. Restoration of the feeling of amity and brotherhood was his sole concern.

The Hindu, 2-1-1947; and Harijan, 26-1-1947

275. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

December 29, 1946

DEAR DAUGHTER,

I have your letter. Why do you write yourself? An antiphlogistine tin is being sent. Ma will send you someone to work for

1 The following two sentences are reproduced from Harijan.
2 Vide “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 27-12-1946
3 Hemprabha Das Gupta
you according to your instructions. Dictate your letters. Drink plenty of water.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 549

276. LETTER TO JWALA PRASAD

SRIRAMPUR,
December 29, 1946

BHAI JWALA PRASADJI,

I have your letter. I cannot take up any other work at the cost of the work here. I do only what I cannot avoid; therefore, please excuse me. I got the issues of J. K. Review sent by you but I have not been able to read them. I do not read even the daily newspapers. I make do with the news given me by others

Yours,
M. K. GANDHI

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

277. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

Sunday, [On or after December 29, 1946]¹

CHI. AMTUL SALAAM,

I have your letter. I never persuade anyone to give up a fast. I quite understand that you alone have to arrive at a final decision in this matter. Once I have done my duty, I am content.²

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 573

¹ The first Sunday after the addressee had begun her fast fell on December 29.
² Vide also “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 21-1-1947.
278. INSTRUCTIONS FOR CONGRESS WORKING COMMITTEE

SRIRAMPUR,
[December 28/30, 1946]¹

During its unbroken career of sixty years, the Congress has been invariably and progressively representative of all the communities—Hindus, Muslims and others. It has been also progressively representative of the masses. That it has always had a number of hypocrites is but an ode to these two among its many virtues. If those who represent these two virtues are found to be in a hopeless minority, they should lodge their protest and leave the Congress and influence public opinion from outside. Then only will they be true servants of the nation. Therefore at this critical period I hold it to be necessary for the Working Committee to give the proper, unequivocal lead to the Congress by laying down these propositions:

1. It is now perhaps late to cry off the Constituent Assembly though I still hold it to be the best course to make the Congress position absolutely clear.

2. The second best is to accept the Cabinet Mission’s statement with the joint interpretation of it between themselves and Qaid-e-Azam Jinnah.

3. It must be clearly understood that it is open to any Congress individual or unit to declare his or Group’s or Province’s secession from the Congress stand which the Congress should be free to accept whilst still openly guiding the seceding elements. This will be in accordance with the Cabinet’s position that they will not compel any Group or Province.

The result of this would be that the members of Section A would prepare a full constitution in terms of the Cabinet Mission’s statement and B and C Sections would have to frame what they can in spite of the seceders, i.e., as at present conceived, Assam in the East and Frontier Province in the West, the Sikhs in the Punjab and may be Baluchistan.

¹ From My Days with Gandhi, p. 128, in which N. K. Bose explains: “During these three days the Congress leaders held long discussions with Gandhiji. . . . After discussion with the leaders, Gandhiji prepared instructions for the Working Committee. This was . . . handed over to Jawaharlal Nehru and others.”
It may be that the British Government will recognize or set up another Constituent Assembly. If they do, they will damn themselves for ever. They are bound when a constitution is framed in terms of the Cabinet Mission’s stand to leave the rest to fate, every vestige of British authority being wiped out, British soldiers retiring from India never to return.

This position of the Congress is in no way to be interpreted as playing completely into Qaid-e-Azam Jinnah’s hand. And if this he considers to be what he meant, the Congress will be thanked by the world for giving Qaid-e-Azam Jinnah a universally acceptable and inoffensive formula for his Pakistan. The Congress dare not shirk the right thing because it completely coincides with his view.

The constitution will be for whole India. It will have to contain a specific clause showing in what way it will be open to the boycotters to avail themselves of the constitution.

From a photostat: C. W. 10539. Courtesy: N. K. Bose

279. NOTE TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

December 30, 1946

Your affection is extraordinary and so natural! Come again, when you wish, or send someone who understands you and will faithfully interpret my reactions... when, in your opinion, consultation is necessary and you cannot come. Nor is it seemly that you should often run to me even though I claim to be like a wise father to you, having no less love towards you than Motilalji.

Do not depart from the spirit of the draft you showed me yesterday... Somehow or other I feel that my judgment about the communal problems and the political situation is true. I have no doubt now about the wisdom of what I had said in Delhi when the Working Committee accepted the Cabinet Missions statement. This does not mean that what was done by the Working Committee should

1 According to Pyarelal, “Jawaharlal Nehru’s plea with Gandhiji to return to Delhi did not succeed.” This was “scribbled at 3 o’clock that morning”.
2 Omission as in the source
3 Vide “Jawaharlal Nehru’s Draft of Congress Working Committee Statement”, 22-12-1946 not have been done. On the contrary, I had completely associated myself with all that the Working Committee did. I could not support with reason what I had felt so vaguely.

This time it is quite different. My reason wholly supports my heart. I notice daily verification. So, I suggest frequent consultations with an old, tried servant of the nation.

280. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

SRIRAMPUR,

5.15 a. m., December 30, 1946

CHI. VALLABHBHAI,

I have your letter. Jawahar and others will be able to tell you about what happened here.

I hold strong views about . . . The work being done here cannot be carried on with the Congress funds or funds collected by you. He should collect the money publicly both from Hindus and Muslims. I am also getting more convinced from experience that all activities which are carried on with the help of money alone are sure to fail. You also should give up any idea of getting things done with money. It is essential that . . . should not deviate even an inch from what is agreed to between him and me. I am resolved that I will get out of it as soon as I see even the slightest impurity. This mission is most delicate and the biggest that has fallen to my lot. God has sustained me so far. I wake up and start work at 1.30 a. m., standard time, and there has been no difficulty yet. About tomorrow, God alone knows.

I have heard many complaints against you.¹ If there is any exaggeration in “many”, it is unintended. Your speeches tend to be inflammatory and play to the gallery. You have lost sight of all distinction between violence and non-violence. You are teaching the people to meet violence with violence. You miss no opportunity to insult the Muslim League in season and out of season. If all this is true, it is very harmful. They say you talk about holding on to office. That also is disturbing, if true. Whatever I heard I have passed on to you for you to think over. The times are very critical. If we stray from the straight and narrow path by ever so little, we are done for. The Working Committee does not function harmoniously as it should. Root out corruption; you know how to do it. If you feel like it, send some sensible and reliable person to explain things to me and understand my point of view. There is no need whatever for you to rush down here. You are no longer fit to run about. It is not good that you do not take care of your health.

¹ Denying the charges in his letter dated January 7, 1947, Vallabhbhai Patel, inter alia, said: “The complaints are false of course but some of them do not make sense. The charge that I want to stick to office is a pure concoction. I was opposed to Jawaharlal’s hurling idle threats of resigning from the Interim Government. They damage the prestige of the Congress and have a demoralizing effect on the services. . . . Not even any Leaguer has said that I insult the League time and again. . . . It is my habit to tell people the bitterest truths. . . . The remark about meeting the sword by the sword has been torn out of a long passage and presented out of context. . . . If any of my colleagues has complained to you about me, I should like to know. None of them has said anything to me.”

I will stop here. It is now 5.35, Calcutta time, and there are heaps of arrears to be disposed of.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabh'bhaime, pp. 341-3

281. LETTER TO SHARDA G. CHOKHAWALA

December 30, 1946

CHI. BABUDI,

I got your letter today. I had made all arrangements for Calcutta. If Anand1 gets constant fever, Gordhandas should give up his attachment, or Anand himself should be trained to live with him. But I think all this advice is useless. What is in store for you will happen

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 101075. Courtesy: Sharda G. Chokhawala

1 Addressee’s son

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
282. LETTER TO PYARELAL

December 30, 1946

CHI. PYARELAL,

You certainly should have proper food. A soldier must keep his body fit. You must always keep with you roti or biscuits. If you take with it some coconut it makes a complete diet. If you add to it some gur it will make a complete diet (I have tried all this). So, even while being on the march, it can be eaten at fixed times. You will have read in the History of [Satyagraha in] South Africa that during the march to the Transvaal, I ate while walking. If you do this you will never have to depend on anyone. You can take whatever fruit is locally available.

You have agreed that you and I should never talk keeping Manu apart. You cannot entertain any doubt about her at all. Hence I advise you to convey to her the purport of our talk. Show this also to her. Then whatever bad feelings she may be having will automatically come to the surface. Affection can never last till the end. It certainly did not last in this case. Hence you must be cheerful and confident and inspire in her as much confidence as possible. Letting her know of your doubt will be an act of loyalty. Then you must do whatever you can without entertaining any doubt. God belongs to everyone. He will do as He wills. I am doing only that. I am having her sleep close to me. She sleeps naked but sleeps soundly. She has to be woken up whenever there is work, be it at 2 o’clock or 3 o’clock. I consider it a very good sign that she is able to sleep like that. I have known it since the Aga Khan Palace days that she is quite unself-conscious. The main thing was that she should be with me, in my care and associate with you and learn. That has happened. Now we must all wish that only what spontaneously occurs to her will happen. Only then will she be completely free from fear.

That you want to conquer is my own expression. You must learn to understand my language. The English word ‘conquer’ is of no use to me. I can never utter the word in that sense. The conquest that I am talking about has to be achieved by everyone. It is religion. We have to conquer untruth by truth, violence by non-violence. How nice if you could unlearn English reading and English thought! What I am asking for is that you narrate to Manu all the incidents you have mentioned. It would be nice if you could let me know. I should follow it better in the written form. This would be an act of service to Manu.
It would never mean betrayal of her.

For the present we cannot all three of us hope to be together. What is possible is that when you come, the three of us may occasionally sit together.

It is not proper that I would keep you with me right now. The present sadhana consists in our being apart. The most glaring example of this is Abha. Abha has risen thereby and I think she will rise still higher. Bapa is happy and looks happy. As we absorb ourselves in our work, God will bring us together. And even if we have to sacrifice ourselves while being apart, no harm will be done. I shall not feel sorry in the least if Amtussalaam passes away while she is fasting. She is brave and it seems what she has done now has been after proper thought.

I agree that you are missing something by being away from me at this time. But what you are gaining in the process is much greater.

Hence, you must know that the time of disappointment is now past. I do not think I have anything more to say now.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

283. LETTER TO PYARELAL

SRIRAMPUR, December 30, 1946

CHI. PYARELAL,

If I have understood correctly what Sushila has said is startling. I get the impression that you have been terribly disappointed. You have not told me everything about Manu. You are not even eating properly. If you have concealed anything from me for whatever reason, it is all over for me. I think there is some misunderstanding. Atleast it is clear to you that I have brought Manu for your sake, is it not?

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar
284. NOTE TO PYARELAL

Srirampur,
December 30, 1946

It is amazing you do not realize that this is impossible. I am no God. I have no doubt that you are telling the unadulterated truth. But I am not in a position to compel. Had I not believed you why would I have bothered so much? You do not know how much I have talked to her and how much I have tried to persuade her. You may speculate but you seem to be having doubts about the propriety of my efforts. How can I dispel your doubts? Try to depend on God if you can.

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

285. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

December 30, 1946

DEAR DAUGHTER,

I have your letter. Two men—a Muslim and a Sikh—are being sent to you. They will read the Koran to you and render whatever other service they can.

I do not approve of your giving up water. Do you want to escape from sorrow and commit suicide? Your duty is to pray to God and remain calm. You had hoped that the fast would cure your cough, but it did not. I would only say that in the name of God do whatever you wish. The cough stays because God is absent from your heart. What can you do about this?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 550

286. LETTER TO SAMPURNANAND

December 30, 1946

Bhai Sampurnanandji,

How can I ignore your letter? I trust the silver jubilee will be

1 U. P. Congress leader who succeeded G. B. Pant as Chief Minister of U. P.; earlier Minister of Education and Finance
2 On January 27, 1947; the institution was founded by Gandhiji in 1921.

VOL. 93: 7 NOVEMBER, 1946 - 16 FEBRUARY, 1947 215
celebrated in fine style. May Kashi Vidyapeeth bring forth true workers.

Yours,
M. K. GANDHI

From a copy of the Hindi: C. W. 10428. Courtesy: Kashi Vidyapeeth

287. LETTER TO HORACE G. ALEXANDER

December 30, 1946

MY DEAR HORACE,

Your good letter received only today.

I understand all your points. Do come whenever you can. My movements are uncertain. Add to this the fact that I am compassing a walking tour of the affected villages. But you need not worry about it. The newspapers will keep you informed of my movements.

This I am writing at night.

Love.

BAPU

[PS.]

For the peace meeting you will make the choice. My partiality will be for Santiniketan, not that Sevagram has no advantages. The balance I think is in favour of Santiniketan.

From a photostat: G. N. 1442

288. EXTRACT FROM DIARY

December 30, 1946

Jawaharlal had about ten minutes talk before leaving. It was to the effect that I ought to be with them at Delhi.

289. LETTER TO BULSARIA

SIRAMPUR, NOAKHALI

December 31, 1946

BHAI BULSARIA,

I got your postcard of the 20th. I hope you have the wire I sent you. His death has caused profound grief in Panchgani. How did he suddenly pass away? Please convey my grief to his widow. Who will look after his work? I am held up here.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

290. LETTER TO MOHANLAL M. SHAH

NOAKHALI,
December 31, 1946

Bhai Mohanlal,

Bulsaria informs me that Vachharaj is no more. The passing away of a good, silent worker is a painful thing. Who will now look after his work? What will they do about his Panchgani estate? Please think over it and do what is necessary. For my part I am stuck here and I see no possibility of my getting out.

I hope you are all right.

Blessings from
BAPU

Sheth Mohanlal
Gadhada

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

291. LETTER TO KUNVARJI K. PAREKH

SRIRAMPUR,
December 31, 1946

Chh. Kunvarji,

I got your letter. You did well in writing to me. I came to know about the late Vachharaj from Bulsaria. As you say, Panchgani will miss him very much. But no institution has the exclusive privilege of losing its true workers. God picks up impartially any worker He likes. Why, then, grieve over such a death? I have met Vachharaj’s wife, but as I do not recollect her name I did not write to her. But I

\footnote{Vachharaj Tribhovandas Doshi}

\footnote{Vide also the following two items.}

VOL. 93: 7 NOVEMBER, 1946 - 16 FEBRUARY, 1947 217
have written to Bulsaria. You did well in giving me the information about Vachharaj’s brother. I am not writing to him, either. What purpose will it serve? Send him a copy of this letter. Or do what you think right. To write a letter of condolence will mean observing a customary formality. I do not wish to do that. I only want that both of them should bring honour to Vachharaj’s memory and wipe the tears of all those in Panchgani who believe themselves widowed; serve them and lighten the burden of their widowhood. The passing away of a man widows not only his wife but all those, whom he was serving, for instance, myself. I, therefore, liked your resolution to make up for the loss yourself. It is wholly worthy of you. If Jugatram¹ can spare you without inconvenience and agrees to your leaving, the climate of Panchgani is bound to suit you very well.

If the sanatorium authorities are fully agreeable and if Jayabehn and Vachharaj’s brother are unable to shoulder the burden of the work and, therefore, desire you to go, I can only say that you should go as early as possible. You should certainly go there if you wish to serve everybody without distinction of caste or creed, irrespective of whether he is poor, of a low caste or a Muslim. The sanatorium should pay you enough to meet your daily needs. I think they should bear that expenditure. You may show this whole letter to the proprietor of the sanatorium or anybody else in charge there.

I hope that all of you are in good spirits and that you enjoy good health. About the situation here Manu will write in this very letter. If you go, I will be greatly relieved and our enterprise there will shine forth.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S. N. 9754. Also C. W. 733. Courtesy: Navajivan Trust

292. LETTER TO SYED MAHMUD

SRIRAMPUR,
December 31, 1946

Bhai Syed Mahmud,

I have your letter. From what the Bihar Muslim League has reported and what is being conveyed to me, ² I can’t make out the truth. Write to me how many things are false in the Muslim League report. I have written 1 to Srikrishna Sinha. I have already received a telegram that he will send the report. But you send me yours. Also write what the condition is at present.

¹ Jugatram Dave

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 5101

293. TALK WITH FRIENDS

SRIRAMPUR,
December 31, 1946

If the Hindus and Muslims cannot live side by side in brotherly love in Noakhali, they will not be able to do so over the whole of India, and Pakistan will be the inevitable result. India will be divided, and if India is divided she will be lost for ever. Therefore, I say that if India is to remain undivided, Hindus and Muslims must live together in brotherly love, not in hostile camps organized either for defensive action or retaliation. I am, therefore, opposed to the policy of segregation in pockets. There is only one way of solving the problem and that is by non-violence. I know today mine is a cry in the wilderness.
But I repeat that there is no salvation for India except through the way of truth, non-violence, courage and love. To demonstrate the efficacy of that way I have come here. If Noakhali is lost, India is lost.

294. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

SRIRAMPUR,
December 31, 1946

The basis of their talks was Hindu-Muslim unity. The leaders 2 did not come for any proposals. They had read about my work for Hindu-Muslim unity in the newspapers but they wanted to come and see personally how I was working.

The leaders wanted to avoid what had happened in Noakhali happening in all India and, therefore, they wanted help and advice on how to prevent quarrels among Hindus and Muslims in regard to the

1 Vide “Letter to Srikrishna Sinha”, 21-12-1946
2 The reference is to the visit of Jawaharlal Nehru, Kripalani and others; vide also “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 28-12-1946
Constituent Assembly. The Congress was never against any community.

The leaders have not taken any proposals but have taken my written suggestions¹ about the approaching constitutional problems in terms of unity between the Hindus and the Muslims. With these suggestions they will make decisions in the Working Committee².

_Hindustan Standard,_ 3-1-1947

295. SILENCE-DAY NOTE TO N. K. BOSE

[December 1946]

If this is not quite correct, you should show me the correct form.³

From a photostat: C. W. 10538. Courtesy: N. K. Bose

296. MESSAGE TO INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL

1946

It is my earnest wish that all the boys and teachers of this Harijan Nivas and the members of their families may become true Harijans, that is, true devotees of God.

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 1089

297. NOTE TO G. D. BIRLA

1946

My heart is sore but not because of what is happening. I have to consider where my place is. My voice carries no weight in the Working Committee. If I leave the scene, the soreness will go. I do not like the shape that things are taking and, I cannot speak out. In these circumstances, I can do some quiet work if I

¹ Vide “Instructions for Congress Working Committee”, 28/30-12-1946
² To be held in Delhi from January 4 to 7, 1947
³ Below this note Gandhiji had written the Bengali alphabet; vide also “Silence-Day Note to N. K. Bose”, 23-12-1946
⁴ For its eighth convocation held in Harijan Colony, Delhi. Gandhiji had presided over the first convocation on July 27, 1939.
withdraw. Today I feel like Trishanku. Is it really time for me to retire to the Himalayas? Many people have started suggesting this. They say it from ignorance but what they say has merit. Bihar and Noakhali are of course there. I cannot explain to you all this through the written word. I can do so only when we meet and talk.

You will admit, won’t you, that Malaviyaji was not a brahmachari. ‘Where is the need for it?’ The ideal has never been realized. It can only be approached. I agree. I am repeating the same thing in what I am writing today for Harijan. This is no matter for faith. Malaviyaji confessed it to me and so did Shraddhanandji. In their later years, they had come very close to me. I affirm that, if I attain to the state of sthitaprajna today, I should certainly live to 125 years. It is not just a matter of faith. It is like two and two making four. It is a different matter that we do not come across such a man. If we attain to that state, it is still possible.

I am not sure, but I may have added at least three pounds.

What news about Gopa? Has the operation been performed? I have wired that the operation should be undertaken if considered necessary. It is good even if one life can be saved.

From the Hindi original: C. W. 8085. Courtesy: G. D. Birla

298. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

Unrevised 5.25 Local Time, January 1, 1947

CHI. AMRIT.

I have been sending you messages. Sent you a wire¹ through J. Though I did not write because I could not, you were never out of my mind.

Hope you found Shummy, Maud and Beryl quite well and the old servants our friends. Of course I had all your letters.

I have studied your programme. You will go through it. Now you need not come to me to discuss your programme. The journey is long and tedious. You may get a special plane if you will waste a lot of money. Even so you cannot avoid a wretched motor journey of a few hours. It is not worth it. So you must not come except when you must.

¹Vide “Telegram to Amrit Kaur”, 28-12-1946
I suppose you know all about the accident to Renuka.¹ She was so anxious to do substantial service. But cruel fate would not let her. Such is life. She has come nearer to me.

My trek will take a few days yet. I change my abode tomorrow. You may address letters at Noakhali. They will send my letters wherever I may be.

Love.

BAPU

From a original: C. W. 4188. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 7824

299. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

January 1, 1947

DEAR DAUGHTER,

I have your letter. You should hope to remain alive for service and also be prepared to die. Herewith a letter to Harilal. I do wish to send Manu [to you] but [cannot do so] because of ignorant attachment. I am sending home-made antiphlogistine.²

I have already told Harilal. He will leave on the 3rd.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 571; also Bapuke Patra—8: Bibi Amtussalaamke Nam, p. 266

300. ADVICE TO WEAVERS³

Srirampur,

January 1, 1947

Gandhiji advised them to depend on hand-spun yarn from the charkha which would be available at cheaper rates and in any quantity.

The hand-spun yarn he said, suffered from mill competition, but while the latter produced one very low grade and another very fine grade, hand-spun yarn could be varied to intricate designs to meet the change of fashion.

Gandhiji further told them that if they wanted to survive, they must depend on hand-spun yarn.⁴

¹ Renuka Ray
² Vide also “Letter to Amtussalaam”, 2-1-1947
³ According to The Hindu, the weavers had sought Gandhiji’s “intervention” as they could not get “enough mill-made yarn to keep the looms going”.
⁴ What follows is reproduced from The Hindu.
He had suggested that they should be spinners themselves and teach others also to spin. When there were enough of such people in the village, there would be no longer any need for dependence on mill yarn. In this way they could lay the foundation of real independence to the masses.

_Hindustan Standard, 3-1-1947; and The Hindu, 14-1-1947_

301. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

_SRIRAMPUR, January 1, 1947_

Gandhiji began by saying that his stay in that village had been amply enriched by the abundance of love showered upon him by the members of the household in whose midst he had been living. But God had so designed that he had never had the fortune of staying at any one place for a very long time. His travels had now been crowded by experiences both bitter and sweet. He added that the people were requesting him to prolong his stay in this village because they said that they were gaining courage by his continued presence in their midst.

As a matter of fact both contact and separation were normal parts of a man’s life. So the daily prayer of the Ashramites was that God should give them strength enough to pass through life’s varying experiences in a state of equipoise. Verses from the second chapter of the _Gita_ which were recited every evening described the characteristics of the man who had actually attained that mental state. Its appeal was not to men of any particular status or calibre alone, but the lesson was of universal significance.

That he was going to leave the village of Srirampur on the following morning was because his duty now called him away from that place. He had now to roam from one village to another in order to contact people in their homes and carry the message of love and friendship to them. On other occasions, such as that of Dandi march, he had been followed by lakhs of people, but this time he would be going alone. It was his heart’s prayer that when he left any place, people should be able to say of him that now one had left them who was their friend and not an enemy.

Today was the New Year’s Day for the Christians. It was curious that they celebrated this day in India with more enthusiasm than they did the coming of Samvat or Hijra era. That was due to their long association with the ruling class who were Christians by faith.

But as he looked upon all religions as equal, being derived from one source, there was no harm in observing the Christian New Year’s Day. At first Gandhiji’s idea was that he would give them a reading of two choice sayings from Prophet Mohammad. But later he changed his mind and thought of presenting portions from Christian hymns which had been collected and presented to him by Rajkumari Amrit Kaur.
There was another matter which had exercised his mind for some time past. Friends, he added were friends only when they helped a person to progress in life. If they discovered any faults in him, it was their clear duty to acquaint him with them so that he might be able to correct himself. But this had to be done in a sweet manner and with a spirit of helpfulness.

It was the beginning of the New Year and his prayer was that the audience and he might be ushered into it free from impurities of the lower self, and thus rendered fitter instruments of service to a common cause.

Hindustan Standard, 3-1-1947 and 4-1-1947

302. EXTRACT FROM DIARY

January 1, 1947

Woke up at 12 at night. Talked to Manu for one hour. Letter writing and Bengali exercise from 3.15 till the prayer time. At 6.15 a.m. fell into a doze and had a very sweet nap for four or five minutes after which woke up greatly refreshed. . . . More letter writing. . . . Dozed off again while dictating a letter.

303. LETTER TO PARASURAM

January 2, 1947

CHI. PARASURAM,

I have read your letter with great care. I began it at 3 a. m.; finished reading it at 4 a. m. It contains half truths which are dangerous. You wronged me, the parties you mention, yourself and the cause by suppressing from them and me your opinion about them. I am sorry that Sushilabehn without my knowledge and consent has read your letter to me. No harm has been done. I shall respect your wish and shall not show the document to the journalists of whom you spoke to me. Nor shall I publish it. To Pyarelal I am bound to show it. You should trust me to do the right thing.

I cannot concede your demands. The other points you raise do not make much appeal to me.

Since such is my opinion and there is a conflict of ideals and you yourself wish to be relieved, you are at liberty to leave me today. That will be honourable and truthful. I like your frankness and

1 These are in Devanagari.
2 ibid
boldness. My regard for your ability as a typist and shorthand writer remains undiminished and I was looking forward to taking a hand in bringing out your other qualities. I am sorry that it cannot be.

My advice to you is that you should confer with Pyarelalji and Sushilabehn. You should take Kanubhai’s guidance in shaping your future. I shall always be interested in your future and shall be glad to hear from you when you feel like writing to me. Finally let me tell you that you are at liberty to publish whatever wrong you have noticed in me and my surroundings. Needless to say you can take what money you need to cover your expenses.

Yours,

BAPU

From a photostat: G. N. 5860. Also C. W. 3074

304. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

CHANDIPUR,

January 2, 1947

DAUGHTER AMTUL SALAAM,

I had your letter read out to me. I am dictating this letter with a mud-pack on my eyes. What I sent to you serves exactly the same purpose as anti-phlogistine. It must be applied well. I had only one tin of imported anti-phlogistine, which I sent to you. You must still be having the earth which I sent to you. Use it. Today I have come to Abha’s village. I hope I shall not have to go right up to that place. It is very good that you drink water. If you have to take an enema, you should take it with someone’s help. You need not, if the bowels move naturally. If you feel heaviness in the head, use a mud-pack, just as I am lying now with a mud-pack [on the eyes]. This cures heaviness of the head. In the same way it would be good if you applied a mud-pack on the stomach also. If you feel cold, keep a hot-water bottle in the bed. Ramanama, of course, does everything, but it should come from the heart. Then nothing else is needed. Whether the person who helps you with the enema is a man or a woman, it should make, and I am sure it will make, no difference to you at all. As for my tour, it will really begin after three or four days. Satis Babu has brought me to Chandipur for five or six days before the tour begins.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 551
305. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

CHANDIPUR,
January 2, 1947

Gandhiji said that his mission was for the establishment of friendship between the sister communities living here and not to organize any one community against the rest. So far the non-violence which had been practised was the non-violence of the weak but the new experiment in which he had been engaged here was the non-violence of the strong. If it were to be successful, it should succeed in creating a moral atmosphere helpful to both the communities around him. Only when the Hindus and Muslims shed their fear and mutual suspicion could real unity of heart come. There should not be any cause for hostility when their hearts were one.

Referring to the task of village reorganization, Gandhiji said that East Bengal was a land of gold but unfortunately the life of the people was not as it should be. The water in the tanks was so dirty that he could not dare even wash his hands in them. The villages were also unclean. The rich were growing richer and the poor were getting poorer. That was not forced upon them by nature. That was a Satanic state of affairs. But although the social arrangements were Satanic, individuals were not so. Individuals should raise their organization and shape it according to new ideas of equality and comradeship.

Gandhiji pointed out that the rule that they were going to establish in India in the near future should be free from defects which marked the old system. Hindus and Muslims today found themselves estranged from one another here, but if both of them devoted themselves to the noble task of reorganizing the village life and improving their economic conditions through development of their cottage industries, they would find themselves working in a common task and unity would grow among them.

Workers who had been sent here by Satis Babu, Gandhiji said, had faced many dangers. Gandhiji’s advice to all workers was that they should shed fear of death from their hearts and try to win over those who opposed them. In that attempt some might die, but Gandhiji had the faith that however impossible it might appear, the oppressor’s heart would surely be touched if love and courage from their side was of an unfailing character.

To workers as well as to villagers Gandhiji would like to say that they should render a proper account of every single minute of their life. They should devote all their time to selfless service of common humanity.

Gandhiji, continuing, said that he would personally like to live for 125 years,

1 Extracted from “Srirampur Diary”
2 The following three paragraphs are reproduced from Hindustan Standard.
not with the help of medicines but by natural ways, in which he would be able to serve the nation and humanity.

He exhorted the audience to carry on his eighteen-point constructive programme which would be a life-giving influence for the entire countryside.

_Harijan, 26-1-1947; and Hindustan Standard, 4-1-1947_

306. EXTRACT FROM DIARY

_January 2, 1947_

Have been awake since 2 a.m. God’s grace alone is sustaining me. I can see there is some grave defect in me somewhere which is the cause of all this. All around me is utter darkness. When will God take me out of this darkness into His light?

307. LETTER TO CHHOTUBHAI

_Chandipur, Chetgram, January 3, 1947_

CHI. CHHOTUBHAI,

I got both your letters. I have formed a high opinion of Shivabhai. If I feel that I shall be staying fairly steadily at one place, I shall be able to utilize the services of many persons like him. It will be a pleasure to do so. What you say about cultivating fearlessness may be realistic, but it does not become you. If known criminals are going about at large, people must learn to cultivate fearlessness. We shall remain mere animals till we digest this teaching. Forget about violence and non-violence in this matter. Let those who believe in violence use the violence of the brave and die. Those who believe in non-violence will be able to demonstrate its power only in situations like the present one. By describing the non-violence of cowards as genuine non-violence, we bring discredit on the latter. It would be more correct to describe it as a device of the coward. We learnt the trick and that is why I have begun to feel a doubt about myself, whether all that

---

1 Pyarelal explains: “On the day of his departure from Srirampur, Gandhiji woke up at 2 a.m. once more to ask himself the question: ‘Why does it not work?’ . . . He woke up Manu, too, and told her to remain alert and wide awake all the time in view of the ordeal that lay ahead of them. . . . Referring to the atmosphere around him, he muttered to himself: ‘There must be some serious flaw deep down in me which I am unable to discover. . . . Where could I have missed my way? There must be something terribly lacking in my ahimsa and faith which is responsible for all this.’”
I have learnt, and taught others to do, is to use a device of the coward. I, therefore, have come here to know the measure of my strength and let myself be tested. I am accompanied by the police, etc., and now some Sikh brothers also have joined. And Nirmal Babu has been here all the time. May it be because of them, I wonder, that I go about with a show of fearlessness?

“That state of mind cannot be affected even in dire circumstances or at the moment of death.”

This is what Raychandbhai sang and, at the age of 20 or 21, it became my dream to attain such a state. I can go on in this strain, but, as the saying is, “What need of many words before the wise?”

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

I am sending this letter for your information. Keep it in the file.

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./XXIV

308. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM
January 3, 1947

DEAR DAUGHTER,

Last night Satis Babu, Daroga Saheb and others had come. Daroga Saheb says that if you postpone your fast for fifteen days, he will trace the culprit within that time and if the matter is not settled satisfactorily, you may resume your fast. I think this is quite fair and if Daroga Saheb gives this in writing, you should give up your fast. Later on we shall see. If you break the fast, live on fruit-juice and glucose for the first two days and after that take milk and water. Of late you have become very thin. Get yourself restored by constantly keeping Ramanama in the heart and by remaining calm. I do not worry at all. I remain satisfied by doing what I can from this place. Daroga Saheb has said this as a Muslim.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

Abha is coming there to serve you. Get back your health soon and send her back. And it you listen to what Daroga Saheb says, then you too will be able to come here in four or five days’ time.¹

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 577

309. NOTE TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA²

CHANDIPUR,
January 3, 1947

Now give up the hope of a letter in my hand. Get well.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 2507

310. SPEECH AT WOMEN’S MEETING³

CHANDIPUR,
[January 3, 1947]⁴

Gandhiji said that women should depend on God and on their own strength and not on others. They should be more courageous and should have more confidence in their own strength. If they were afraid, they would fall easy victims to the onslaugths of the miscreants.

Indian women are not abalas. They are famous for their heroic deeds of the past, which they did not achieve with the help of the sword, but of character. Even today they can help the nation in many ways. They can do some useful work by which they can not only help themselves, but also the nation as a whole, thereby taking the country nearer her goal.

Gandhiji told them that not the men of Noakhali only were responsible for all that had happened, but women too were equally responsible. He asked them all to be fearless and have faith in God like Draupadi and Sita of the past.

Gandhiji also asked them to eschew untouchability. He said that if they still went on disowning the untouchables, more sorrow was in store for them. He asked the audience to invite a Harijan every day to dine with them. If they could not do so, they could call a Harijan before taking a meal and ask him to touch the drinking water or ¹ In Bapuke Patra—8: Bibi Amtussalaamke Nam, the addressee explains that, after discussing the matter with the Daroga for several hours, she decided not to give up the fast.

² This was a postscript to Manu Gandhi’s letter to the addressee.
³ Extracted from “Srirampur Diary”. The meeting was held at the courtyard of the house where Gandhiji was staying.
⁴ From The Hindu, 6-1-1947
the food. This, Gandhiji said, would go a long way to cement the gulf created between different classes of people by artificial caste barriers. Unless they did penance for their sins in that way, more calamities and more severe ones would overtake them all.

Harijan, 26-1-1947

311. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

CHANDIPUR,
January 3, 1947

Gandhiji began by saying that what he had undertaken was comparable to pilgrimage which people undertook to places like Kashi or Badrinath. God did not reside in any particular place to the exclusion of another but in the heart of man. If one undertook pilgrimage in the right spirit, one would grow purer and purer.

What did it matter to them, said Gandhiji, if their house had been burnt and their properties looted so long as they had the will to face any calamity with courage and determination to build up their lives once again on their own labour? Refugees should bravely face the reality and learn some craft by which they could maintain their families and earn their bread.

Gandhiji said that those who did not labour but lived on the toil of others were thieves. No man was free from obligation of voluntary labour in order to support himself. One might feel tempted to ask what a few individuals could do. The speaker’s answer was that if 40 crores of small bits of wood were tied together, it would be enough to build a bridge over which the mightiest army could pass. Similarly, if in India 40 crores of men developed new bonds of sympathy and mutual help, they would be able to build a new life in which every man, woman and child could prosper.

Fear of hard work and of sudden calamities being thus removed from their hearts, they would march a long way towards freedom. If they could shed fear, they would be able to stand up before their assailants.

Gandhiji added that the fulfilment of his mission would come only when those who were left behind were able to say that now they had got rid of impurities which had been corrupting their lives so far and would go forward to rebuild their own lives on the basis of labour courageously and joyfully undertaken.

Hindustan Standard, 7-1-1947

---

1 The Hindu, 6-1-1947, reported that the meeting was held at the Ramajusbagh Ashram in Tamaltala, about one mile from Gandhiji’s residence.
312. EXTRACT FROM DIARY

January 3, 1947

While walking, saw the ravages in the colony of Namasudras. The mind started thinking: how could anyone stoop so low as to perpetrate such havoc in the name of religion or for selfish gain.

[From Gujarati]
Eklo Jane Re, p. 44

313. MESSAGE TO INDIAN NATIONAL ARMY

January 4, 1947

My message to I. N. A. people is that they must serve the country and die, if necessary, in achieving their goal. If they do so sincerely, they will be doing real work of Netaji Subhas.

Amrita Bazar Patrika, 7-1-1947

314. LETTER TO T. PRAKASAM

AS FROM KAZIRKHIL,
RAMGANI POST,
DISTT. NOAKHALI,
CAMP: CHANDIPUR,
January 4, 1947

DEAR PRAKASAM,

I have your two letters dated 10th and 11th [ultimo] and telegram sent from New Delhi. At the time of dictation they are not in front of me. I am dictating this in the small hours of the morning. I am glad the fast of Sriramulu² ended in the happy manner you describe. He had sent me a telegram immediately he broke his fast. I know he is solid worker though a little eccentric.

I am glad too that Shri Daniel Thomas³ never delivered the speech attributed to him.

About the Madras quota spindles I am absolutely clear. If I were the Government of Madras as you are and I had the backing of ¹ According to the report Debnath Das, Secretary, I. N. A. Peace Committee, Bengal, had met Gandhi and asked for a message to the I. N. A. personnel in India.

² Potti Sriramulu had been fasting to secure temple-entry for Harijans in Madras Province; vide “Letter to Potti Sriramulu”, 19-12-1946
³ Minister of Prohibition, Madras.
public opinion in the shape of mass opinion I would do this in spite of the manufactured opinion of interested parties and, if the worst happened, I would pay for the spindles of my quota and yet not use them. I regard mill-owners’ and Chamber of Commerce’s opinion to be interested in the sense that they and their supporters have made up their minds that what is good for them is good for the whole of India. It is not a question of honesty and dishonesty, it is a question pure and simple of conflict of ideals. Of course, it is open to these gentlemen to retort that in my sense the opinion of the masses may also be called interested. If such be the argument I would hold that the interest of the masses as conceived by them must prevail over that of the classes. It is conceivable that in certain cases the opinion of the classes may be intrinsically right and that of the masses intrinsically absurd. This to my mind is the crux of democracy. Hence, as the Government, if I am confident about the backing of the masses, I would tell the Centre that my Government would pay damages for breach of contract if that be the legal result. I must serve the masses to the best of my ability.

Jajuji tells me that the scheme you have announced has not been put into operation.¹ If you do not strike the iron while it is hot the whole thing might become stale and might not produce the anticipated result. Of course, I am utterly out of court here because I do not know full facts.

_Blessings from_

_BAPU²_

SHRI T. PRAKASAM
PREMIER
MADRAS

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

315. LETTER TO MUNNALAL G. SHAH³

CHANDIPIUR,
_Saturday, January 4, 1947_

What you say is correct, but I have got so deeply involved in this problem that I cannot say when I shall be able to come out of it. Kanchan should take proper care of her health. Never mind what expense has to be incurred for that purpose. It has got to be incurred.

¹ Vide also “Letter to T. Prakasam”, 28-12-1946
² In Devanagari
³ This was dictated to Manu Gandhi who appended it to her own letter to the addressee.
You may draw it from Kanchan’s account. We shall adjust all that afterwards. In the last resort there is the Ashram. Do not, therefore, worry on that account. Keep me informed about Kanchan’s health.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 5619. Courtesy: Munnalal G. Shah

316. LETTER TO MUNNALAL AND KANCHAN M. SHAH

[January 4, 1947]¹

CHI. MUNNALAL AND KANCHAN,

The building for the office about which Pyarelal wrote to you is not to be constructed. If we return alive from here, we shall see. Go on devotedly with your work as if it was the work of service. To me both of you remain what you were. Do full justice to whatever task comes to you unsought.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

I may not be able to write to you any more for some time now.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 5620. Courtesy: Munnalal G. Shah

317. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

January 4, 1947

DEAR DAUGHTER,

I have your letter. I am not worried. I can’t feel at ease as long as your cough persists. There is fever too. Ramanama should cure both. I will not compel you to break the fast.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 552

318. SPEECH AT OPENING OF SCHOOL²

CHANGIRGAON,

January 4, 1947

At the school, Gandhiji enquired as to what subject were taught and especially whether any craft was taught.

Gandhiji pointed out that he would not like schools to be run on the same old

¹ From the G. N. register
² Extracted from “Srirampur Diary”. The report explains that the village was about a mile from Chandipur. Gandhiji opened the school in the morning.
lines and he advised the introduction of crafts. The school should ask for a grant for the introduction of crafts and if a grant was not sanctioned, it should carry on without it.\(^1\)

If the school wanted his advice, Gandhiji said, he would advise Nai Talim (new education) which gives training in crafts. The aim of education should be to make the students self-supporting.

Harijan, 26-1-1947: and Amrita Bazar Patrika, 7-1-1947

319. DISCUSSION WITH MEMBERS OF CHANDIPUR-CHANDIRGAON GRAM SEVA SANGH \(^2\)

January 4, 1947

QUESTION: What should the Sangh do to appease the aggressive mentality of the majority community?

ANSWER: Appeasement has become a word of bad odour. In no case can there be any appeasement at the cost of honour. Real appeasement is to shed all fear and to do what is right at any cost. Blood for blood is a played-out game and non-violence of the brave is the only real approach to the problem.\(^3\)

In answer to a question whether the refugees should accept monetary assistance from the Government even if it was quite insufficient for the erection of temporary shelter, Gandhiji said:

Refugees must honestly find out what they need for the least kind of temporary shelter. If their basic requirements are not covered by the proposed Government grants, they should refuse to accept them but should still return to their homes even if it meant no cover over their heads. This has to be done in a spirit of sportsmanship

Q. In the course of rehabilitation, should the members of the minority community be lodged together in sufficient numbers for the purpose of safety?

A. Such concentration of population is an unthinkable proposition. It would imply that the whole country would be divided into hostile sections, perhaps enjoying a sort of armed peace. The manly thing to do is for every individual, of whatever sect, whether young or old, to derive protection from his inner strength which comes from

---

\(^1\) This sentence is reproduced from Amrita Bazar Patrika.

\(^2\) Extracted from “Srirampur Diary”. The Hindu, 6-1-1947, reported that the Gram Seva Sangh was organized by Souren Bose, in accordance with Gandhiji’s instructions.

\(^3\) This sentence is reproduced from Hindustan Standard.
God.

Asked what arrangements for the safety of the refugees could be made in view of the fact that miscreants were moving freely in the affected areas, Gandhiji said:

No place in the world today is free from miscreants. So villagers should fall back on their own strength for protection. The strength which will give them lasting protection is the strength of the heart. For those who accepted God as their protector, what did it matter if miscreants roamed about? People should do what was right for them and leave the rest to God.

His immediate advice to the refugees would be that they should brave all risks and come back home. It did not matter to him that some might suffer in the attempt due to exposure or shortage of supplies, but the attempt was still worth while.¹

Q. If Government and private relief is stopped, what work can we give to the refugees so that they can earn their daily bread?

A. Although personally I should be tempted to suggest hand-spinning as a universal occupation, I would not necessarily do so in the present case. Instead, I would suggest that the workers should find out on the basis of detailed local enquiries what occupation could be undertaken in each village. And when such information is available, I would love to give advice in greater detail. It is certain that the work must be done in co-operation.²

Gandhiji said that there were a number of tanks in this part of Bengal but he had not yet seen a single tank sufficiently clean to wash his hands in. This villagers were in the habit of using the same tank for all purposes without any scruple whatsoever. A clean water supply was the prime necessity of life. He suggested there should be natural filters sunk near the tanks and also artificial filters for corporate use. Certain tanks could also be reserved for drinking purposes only. If no suggestion was found workable, tube-wells should be sunk in every village. A second alternative would be to have filters in each household made with a number of earthen vessels, set one over another, some of them half-filled with charcoal and sand as was done at some big railway stations. The third alternative was tube-wells. He did not favour the last so much as it could not be prescribed for the rich and the poor alike. It was, however, all right as an expedient and should be resorted to at once in this area. If there were any difficulties with regard to the supply of materials, he would try to help them in securing these from the Government.

Harijan, 26-1-1947; Hindustan Standard, 7-1-1947; and Amrita Bazar Patrika, 9-1-1947

¹ This paragraph is reproduced from Hindustan Standard.
² What follows is reproduced from Amrita Bazar patrika.
KAZIRBAZAR, January 4, 1947

Gandhiji began his speech by stating that the two sister communities had become estranged from one another today and he was even looked upon as enemy number one by some members of the Muslim community. His object in confining himself to Noakhali was to test himself. In all his long life he had never harboured enmity against Muslim community. In fact plenty of the best years of his life had been spent among Muslim friends in South Africa.

Gandhiji said that it was continually being impressed upon him that his place was no longer in this Province but in Bihar where infinitely worse things were alleged to have taken place. The audience should be aware that he had all along been in correspondence with the popular Government in Bihar and all influence possible was being exercised by him over that Government from here; but he did not want to leave Noakhali because his task there was of an entirely different order. He had to prove by living among the Mussalmans that he was as much their friend as of the Hindus or any other community. This could evidently not be done from a distance or by mere word of mouth.

A Bihar Minister and several responsible officials who had come to him yesterday had placed before him all the facts within their knowledge without any reservation. They had admitted that brutal things had taken place in the course of one fateful week and that they were prepared to bear all justifiable censure passed on them on that account.

They knew their duty as a responsible Government. The charge of complicity or failure in doing all that was humanly possible was denied by them and they said they were prepared to undergo any ordeal in order to prove their innocence. They had been trying to answer the charges made by the Muslim League against them. Gandhiji said he would like to assure the audience that he would not rest until he was satisfied personally about the Bihar case and had done all that was humanly possible.

Gandhiji thought ‘that the attendance of both Hindus and Muslims at prayer meetings was dwindling and one day he would be left without anybody to listen to him at all’. But he said that even then there would be no reason for him to give up

---

1 Extracted from “Srirampur Diary”. The date-line and the first paragraph are reproduced from Hindustan Standard, which reported that the meeting was “specially held at the request of a local leader, Maulvi M. Fazlul Huq”.

2 In Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase, Vol. II, Book II, p. 135, Pyarelal explains that this was a reference to a statement by Hamiduddin, Parliamentary secretary.
his mission in despair. He would then roam from village to village taking his spinning-wheel. With him it was an act of service to God. Such labour undertaken with an unselfish mind would speak for itself among those who were around him. A worker, he said, who travelled from village to village teaching the people how to clean their ponds effectively and teaching them other arts and crafts so as to enrich the life of the villagers, should be able to make the villagers long for his company rather than shun him.

Continuing, Gandhiji said that news had just reached him that the evacuees were now returning in fair numbers and the question of rehabilitation was becoming more and more acute. His advice to the evacuees would be that they should brave all hardships and return home quickly. By means of their own labour they must determine to rebuild their homes as well as their own lives. Government should extend all necessary help and they should be approached by the evacuees. He was aware of the fact that various relief organizations were prepared to help the evacuees with finances and other material assistance. But why should they undertake a task which rightly belonged to the Government set up by the people themselves? If the Government failed to extend it either quickly enough or to a satisfactory extent, then it was for them to say so and seek supplementary aid of public charities in order to rehabilitate the people. But whatever shape these arrangements might take, the evacuees must be prepared to return home in the face of all possible dangers and difficulties.

_Harijan, 26-1-1947; and Hindustan Standard, 8-1-1947_

321. DRAFT TELEGRAM TO MAHOMED YAMIN

[On or after January 4, 1947]

MAHOMED YAMIN SAHEB
LIAISON OFFICER
PUNJAB MUSLIM LEAGUE
PATNA

YOUR WIRE. HAVE GIVEN NO OPINION. SEND ME CUTTINGS. HAVE MINIMIZED NO MUSLIM SUFFERINGS. I MAKE NO DISTINCTIONS. DON’T SEE MY WAY GO BIHAR ALLEVIATE DISTRESS. FEEL I DO THAT BETTER FROM HERE.

GANDHI

From a photostat: G. N. 10526

---

1 The telegram was in reply to one from the addressee dated January 4, in which he had described Gandhiji’s statement of December 23 as “unfair” and had urged him to visit Bihar.
322. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

Friday, January [5], 1947

DEAR DAUGHTER,

I have your letter. You were bound to get cured. Recite Ramanama. Today Sushilabehn has gone there to see you.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 553

323. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

CHANDIPUR,
January 5, 1947

I have not come here to talk politics.

His purpose, Gandhiji said, was not to reduce the influence of the Muslim League or to increase that of the Congress, but to speak to the people of the little things about their daily life, things which, if properly attended to, would change the face of the land and create a heaven out of the pitiable conditions in which they were all living today.

Bengal, said Gandhiji, was a land full of verdure, with plenty of water and fertile soil. Nature had showered her abundance on Bengal, but through ignorance, the people were suffering from poverty and disease. They appeared to be content with what little could be earned from betel-nut and coconut gardens and a little of agriculture. But with more knowledge, they could increase the productivity of the land many times and convert their villages into cleaner abodes of peace and prosperity. If all the villagers joined together, the face of the land would be changed in no time.

Referring to the evacuees, Gandhiji said that they must come back home and face all dangers and difficulties. Anyone who had committed a sin should likewise make a clean confession to God, and then depend upon God for whatever He might choose to do. Truly religious men who made a confession to God did not repeat their errors.

Gandhiji said that only in the morning he had visited a house where the owner had been assured that if he divulged his secret hoard of gold, his life would be spared.

1 This is a slip—January 5 was a Sunday.
2 Extracted from “Srirampur Diary”. The date-line and the last paragraph are reproduced from Hindustan Standard, which reported that “the meeting was held near Harishchar School, a mile from Chandipur”.

238 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
But when the man did so, the miscreants killed him and looted the gold. No man is free from sin and his advice to the miscreants would be to come forward and depend on God and live like brave honest men

_Harijan, 26-1-1947; and Hindustan Standard, 8-1-1947_

324. LETTER TO MIRABEHN

AS FROM KAZIRKHIL, RAMGUNJ POST, NOAKHALI DISTRICT, CAMP: CHANDIPUR, January [2/6]¹, 1947

CHI. MIRA,

Your registered letter is in front of me. The news will be given to you by Parasuram together with this letter. I simply dictate to say that the position you adumbrate is the correct thing. Everything depends upon one’s purity in thought, word and deed, using the word ‘purity’ in its widest sense. Then there may be no cause for even so much as a headache. Only get hold of this fundamental fact. We often loosely use the word ‘purity’ and excuse all sorts of lapses. Do not ever worry how I am faring or what I am doing here. If I succeed in emptying myself utterly, God will possess me. Then I know that everything will come true but it is a serious question when I shall have reduced myself to zero. Think of ‘I’ and ‘O’ in juxtaposition and you have the whole problem of life in two signs. In this process you have helped me considerably for, though at a distance, you seem to be doing your duty to the fullest extent possible in your field² of work.

This was dictated four days ago when I was resting in bed. But it remained untyped. Meantime your another letter and samples of khadi have been received. Have you any khadi to spare for sale? I make this inquiry for the sake of the refugees. Do not overdo things. Do not overwork. “Be careful for nothing.”³ The pilgrimage on foot commences tomorrow. There may be then no letter to you. A bulletin will be sent to you. This I am scribbling in the

---

¹ Inferred from the contents; the source, however, has “January 4, 1947”.
² Up to here the letter is typewritten; what follows is in Gandhiji’s hand.
³ Philippians, iv, 6
early morning. “Blessed are they that expect nothing.”

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C. W. 6521. Courtesy: Mirabehn. Also G. N. 9916

325. LETTER TO M. A. ABDULLAH
January 6, 1947

DEAR ABDULLAH SAHEB,

I have carefully read your letter. The answer is obvious. My non-co-operation was purely non-violent in conception as also in effect. This does not mean that practice was always perfect. Theory and practice hardly ever coincide even as Euclid’s line in practice never coincides with his theoretical definition.

The non-fraternization policy of the Allies led to disastrous results, which he who runs may see and the pity of it is that the disaster is not yet completed. No one knows where it will lead to.

I thought it better to send you the reply of which you may make any use you like. But if you prefer that I should send a public letter in answer to your letter used as an anonymous letter, I shall gladly do so.

I hope you are doing well in your new place.

H. ABDULLA SAHEB, I.P.
C/O. KHAN SAHEB,
SUPERINTENDENT OF POLICE, NOAKHALI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

326. LETTER TO PYARELAL
January 6, 1947

CHL. PYARELAL,

Read the enclosed letter from Nirmal Babu, have Sushila read it and then return it. I advise you not to come here for the present. I have had a long talk with Dev. I am taking a lot of work from him. He will write more. Manu has developed a terrible dislike for things. If you come it will only be aggravated. I came to know about it from

---

1 From Alexander Pope’s letter dated September 23, 1725 to Fortescue
2 Nirmal kumar Bose
3 Devprakash Nayyar
Nirmal Babu’s letter afterwards. Manu has lost her equanimity. Kishorelal’s letter has played a great part in it. If instead of worshipping her, you worship God—if it is possible for you to do that—then everything will become easy. If you cannot do that, then everything will go awry. Maybe even this yajna will come to nothing. And if that happens I shall be the main culprit, not any of you. But this is all too long to tell. I can see that you will not be able to have Manu as wife. If God wills otherwise, it is another matter. But if you on your own try to accomplish your design, Manu, who is with me, may be lost to you and she will certainly never learn anything from you. But if you pray to God to grant her as your wife, you will be able to have her as a pupil. This is a hard situation. Do what you can. I cannot see anything else.

Dev will write the rest. It will be good if you share all this with Sushila. Do show her Nirmal Babu’s letter.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

327. SILENCE-DAY NOTE TO N. K. BOSE

January 6, 1947

Tell him in Bengalee that if the complaint is true, it should be reported at once to the police. I would esteem a copy of the statement with permission to make what use I like of it. As it is I am making private use of the letter under reply to find out the facts. If the complaint states the truth, it is undoubtedly bad. The evil must be nipped in the bud.

From a facsimile: Mahatma, Vol. VII, between pp. 384 and 385

1 This word is in Hindi.
328. A LETTER

[January 6, 1947]

Bhai,

[The money] has not come as yet. It is my firm belief that the work here cannot be done with money. I don’t want a single cowrie from the Congress. The work is to be done only with whatever money is collected at Johar. Even if they give nothing, I shall have to carry on. True service cannot be rendered here otherwise.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Hindi]

Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, p. 344

329. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

CHANDIPUR,
January 6, 1947

CHI. VALLABHBHAI,

I feel concerned about your health. You must get better. There is so much work to do.

The situation is very delicate. Watch the developments here. I am in complete darkness but my hope burns as bright as ever.

I am writing to...³ The letter is enclosed, it may please be passed on to him. By regarding money as our God, we forget the true God. I forget to write about so many things whenever I sit down to write to you at the last moment; and I cannot be ready to write till then. Hence Sudhir will tell you the rest.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 343-4

¹ This was an enclosure to “Letter to Vallabhbhai Patel”, 6-1-1947; vide the following item. The name is omitted in the source.
² ibid
³ Vide the preceding item.
330. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

January 6, 1947

DEAR DAUGHTER,

I have your long letter. Did you get my yesterday’s letter? I had written two letters. Why do you wish to die in my lap? Have you decided to die? All this is against dharma. I cannot go there specially [to see you]. I do whatever I can from here. You have to die or live as God wills. Give up any other thought. Your village is also there in my itinerary. If you are alive till then, we shall certainly meet.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 454

331. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

CHANDIPUR,

January 6, 1947

My weekly silence will come to an end at about 7 o’clock. Therefore, I am writing down whatever I want to say. I pray to God that the tour which I begin tomorrow may be duly completed and produce the intended result. All of you should join me in this prayer. But before offering the prayer you should know why I have undertaken this tour. There is only one purpose behind this tour and it is very clear. May God cleanse and purify the hearts of Hindus and Muslims and may the people of the two communities give up mistrust and fear of each other. All of you should join me in this prayer and say that God is our Lord and may He give us success.

One may ask, where is the need for a tour to achieve this object? How can one whose heart is not pure tell others to be pure? How can one who lacks courage, inspire courage in others? How can one who is himself fully armed, advise others to give up arms? These are all relevant questions, and such questions have also been put to me. During this tour I shall try my best to convey to every villager that there is no impurity in my heart at all. I can prove all that only when I live and move among those who distrust me. The third question is difficult to answer because I myself move under police protection.

1 Vide “Letter to Amtussalaam”, 5-1-1947
2 This appeared under the title “Why Walking Tour?” with an editorial note that it was written by Gandhiji in Hindustani and rendered into Bengali by N. K. Bose.
Fully armed police and military personnel are with me. They are alert and always respectfully guard me. All this is entirely in the hands of the Government. Our Government is of the view that it is its duty to provide me police protection during my tour. How can I stop this? I can only say that none but God is my protector. I do not know if you will believe me. I am speaking the truth. God alone knows a man’s heart; none else can know it. It is the duty of every believer in God to obey the dictates of his heart. It is my claim that I act in this way. But the Sikhs have not been deputed by the Government. Can I not prevent their accompanying me? You should better know that they are also accompanying me on my tour with the permission of the Government. They have not come here with the intention to fight. They have even left behind their kirpans. They have come here to serve the two communities without any discrimination. The first lesson of the Indian National Army, which Netaji had formed, was that people belonging to all religions, Hindus, Muslims, Christians, Parsis, etc., should regard India as their own country and should all work in such a way as to bring about unity. The Sikhs want to serve both the communities and they wish to do so under my guidance. How can I reject such friends, and why should I? They are serving because they have vowed to serve and not to show off. If I refuse to accept their service, I shall go down in my own estimation and shall prove a coward. It is my request to you that you also should trust these brothers of ours and, by treating them as brothers, take advantage of their help. They can help a lot; they have a great deal of experience. God has given them health and honesty.

If what I have said about them is proved false, they will go away from here; and if I am keeping them here with any evil intention, I shall myself be doomed and the experiment for which I have come here will fail.

During this tour, I want to teach you a few essential things, as for example, how to get pure water in the villages, how to keep ourselves clean, how best to utilize the soil from which we have sprung, how to breathe in life’s energy from the infinite sky above our head, how to draw fresh life from our surroundings and how best to use the sun’s rays. Our country has become impoverished. I shall try and teach you so that you may, be making proper use of these resources, convert this into a land of gold. I pray to God that during this tour I may succeed in performing such service to you.

[From Hindi]
Harijan Sevak, 26-1-1947
332. FRAGMENT OF A LETTER

CHANDIPUR,
Tuesday, January 7, 1947

. . .1 Don’t worry about my health. It permits my doing a lot of work these days. God alone knows for how long it will be so. It was due to my own folly that I fell sick in Kaira. I knew nothing of dietetics and pampered the palate. I realize every moment that if I submit to its cravings, it may undo all that I have methodically done till now, whether I eat five items of food or only one. Moreover I tell . . . and . . . not to worry about me. It is enough that one Almighty Physician is above us all to take care of me. I had your letter about . . . Don’t ask for a reply. I do write a few letters but that is because I get up very early. I just cannot cope with the work here. But I do not worry about that either. I am ashamed to admit that though I do get Harijan, I am not able to read it . . . are in their respective villages. I will certainly speak up whenever I find things going wrong. The task here is a difficult one. I have to make my way through darkness. But “one step enough for me”. All this is just introductory.

[From Gujarati]

Eklo Jane Re, pp. 51-2

333. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

January 7, 1947

DEAR DAUGHTER,

I have your letter. Now it is time for prayer. I am sending a thermos flask. Keep me informed. I shall be happy if you are cured.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 555

334. TALK WITH SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA2

January 7, 1947

I cannot afford the luxury of having a folding hut being carried from place to place for my use during the journey.

1 Omissions as in the source

2 Pyarelal explains: “At 9 o’clock, the party reached Masimpur. Satis Chandra Das Gupta had put up for Gandhiji’s accommodation a small, neat-looking, comfortable hut . . . made of light, detachable panels of split bamboo, cane and grass. . . . But Gandhiji pronounced the hut to be ‘palatial’. . . .”
I can make myself comfortable anywhere and everywhere. If there is no one to receive me under his roof, I shall be happy to rest under the hospitable shade of a tree.

335. TALK AT MEETING OF MASIMPUR-MEROA GRAM SEVA SANGH

MASIMPUR,
January 7, 1947

People should try to purify themselves and their religion from within and not indulge in outward show, said Mahatma Gandhi.

Replying to a question regarding the wearing of the sacred thread which, the questioner said, the Arya Samaj wanted every Hindu to wear, Gandhiji said that anyone who liked might wear the sacred thread but there should not be any movement or propaganda in this behalf. No good would be done by wearing the sacred thread alone as it could not remove the defects of the Hindu religion.

Replying to another question as to whether there was difference between his ideals and those of the Arya Samajists, as the latter were telling the people, Gandhiji said there were differences in Arya Samaj itself, as there were several branches of it. Some of their ideals tallied with his, but with regard to others he differed from the Arya Samaj. For instance, while he had no difference as to ideals with Arya Samajists like Ghanshyam Gupta, Speaker of the Central Provinces Assembly, the same could not be said of every Arya Samajist.

Asked for his advice as to how people should earn a living, Gandhiji said his advice was spinning for all people. He would also suggest weaving and carpentry. The people should devote themselves more and more to these professions, thereby leading a pure life.

Gandhiji again stressed the importance of supply of pure drinking water in every village.

The Hindu, 9-1-1947

1 The meeting was held in front of Gandhiji’s mobile cottage, soon after his arrival.
336. DISCUSSION WITH A. ZAMAN

January 7, 1947

Gandhiji said that if people did not accept this grant, namely Rs. 250 per family, Government should step in and build suitable houses without distinction of rich and poor and ask people to live therein. These houses must, however, be inspected by a competent engineer. No building but huts would do for the present.

Mr. Zaman said that he had recommended to Government that the amount of loan should be increased to a maximum of Rs. 1,000 and these loans should also be interest free, to be payable in ten equal instalments. Moreover, an artisans’ grant of Rs. 200 should be granted. He had also recommended a utensils grant of Rs. 10 for each member of a family with a maximum limit of Rs. 100 to a family, this grant being free for members of a looted family. And finally he had recommended a cattle purchase grant of Rs. 250 for every farmer.

Gandhiji, in his reply, said that he did not see why interest should be charged for these loans. He added that if Government did not charge interest it would be very much appreciated by the people.

Amrita Bazar Patrika, 10-1-947 and 19-1-1947

337. DISCUSSION WITH ANNADA SHANKAR CHAUDHURY

January 7, 1947

The displaced persons should be trained to be self-reliant in order to maintain themselves and not depend upon charities. Some amount in charity will, of course, have to be distributed. But total dependence on it will encourage idleness and aversion to earning a living.

[From Gujarati]
Eklo Jane Re, p. 55

338. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

MASIMPUR, January 7, 1947

Gandhiji said that some Muslims had left the prayer ground. On enquiry he had come to learn that they had left because Ramdhun was being sung. He was glad that it occurred on the very first day of his pilgrimage. It was a matter for deep regret that his

1 Additional District Magistrate of Noakhali, who was in charge of relief and rehabilitation. According to the report, he met Gandhiji in the afternoon regarding the quantum of grant to the refugees about which there was disagreement the different relief organizations and the authorities.

2 Congress leader and member of Bengal Legislative Assembly

3 Reports of the speech in the various sources have been collated.
Muslim friends should have been upset at the singing of Ramdhun. It indicated the nature of obstacles that must be faced and overcome if the country was to make progress. The nature of propaganda carried on here has been such that the Muslims could not even bear to hear Ramdhun sung by Hindu devotees.

I am sorry because some of my friends had not been able to bear any name of God except Khuda but I am glad because they have had the courage of expressing their dissent openly and plainly. This small incident probably gives an inkling of the mentality which had prevailed during the fateful October disturbances in the district. I am extremely careful not to wound the susceptibilities of anyone unnecessarily. It is essential that my Muslim brethren should realize as also the Hindus that it does not matter by what name God is addressed. It is the same Creator whom people worship through many tongues. I appeal to the Muslim brethren to assure me of that freedom which is true to the noblest traditions of Islam. Even from the Muslim League platforms it has been repeatedly said that in Pakistan there will be full tolerance of the practice of their faiths by the minorities and that they will enjoy freedom of worship equally with the majority.

Gandhiji observed that Pakistan did not and could not mean that Hindus in Bengal and Sind should give up their religion and follow the practice of the majority community in order not to rouse the latter’s displeasure. God could be approached through namaz as well as Ramdhun and there could not be a quarrel among branches of the same tree.

Gandhiji said that there was nothing to quarrel over the Hindus, Muslims and Christians. When Gandhiji started from Chandipur, it was proposed that all through his way Ramdhun would be sung. But he thought better of it lest it displeased the Muslims. Although Ramdhun was very dear to him he did not like the idea that his Muslim brothers should think their Hindu brothers to be so arrogant as to march singing Ramdhun because of Gandhiji’s presence.

Gandhiji added that he had been very careful in his speeches and deeds not to offend his Muslim brethren. He would desist from anything that displeased their sentiments or offended their religion. But he could never give up his Ramdhun which brought him so much mental peace. He had come to Noakhali to serve all communities, to help them to live together peacefully and in healthy atmosphere. Every day during prayer, he not only recited from the Bhagavad Gita but also from the Koran, and religious differences simply did not exist for him.

He had come to Noakhali, Gandhiji said, to serve Hindus and Muslims alike. But he would be helpless if Muslims wanted him to forgo the name of his God in exchange. As he did not like to parade his religion, so also he could not forgo his religious belief. It was the unity of God and religion that he had come to preach. He could not give it up, Gandhiji said, so long as he lived.

Concluding, Gandhiji pleaded for tolerance from the majority community and urged and minority community not to give up reciting Ramdhun in all humility and without any feeling of hostility towards others. With proper understanding of each other’s religion, Gandhiji said, Muslim progress would be repaid and certain.¹

Hindustan Standard, 9-1-1947; The Hindu, 9-1-1947; and Amrita Bazar Patrika, 20-1-1947

339. LETTER TO SHRIKRISHNADAS JAJU

Wednesday, January 8, 1947

CHI. JAJUJI,

Your letter of December 9 reached me around the 19th. Manu read it out to me. But it remained unanswered for lack of time. In the meanwhile I received another letter yesterday—it is dated December 30—and it was also yesterday that I embarked on my walking tour. During the tour the correspondence is to be reduced to the minimum. For the past few days, I have been waking up daily at 2.30 or 3 in the morning and writing or dictating. In no other way can I cope with my work. I know that this method of working is wrong but I have no choice. If God wishes to save me, He will. If I restrict myself to the work here and completely stop letter-writing, there will be no need to wake up too early. Maybe I shall have to do that. Another way is that I should appoint old workers and sit back myself. But this seems wrong to me. There is no doubt that it was the proper thing to entrust independent work to the old co-workers. A great deal depends on how much burden Manu can bear. Enlisting someone else will go against my resolve. Throughout the tour I have to face the conflict between dharma and adharma. Manu sleeps in the same bed with me. When I get up I wake her up and dictate to her. So far she too is pulling along well. So much for the background—it was necessary to give some, otherwise I could have saved this much time.

Now I come to the letter of December 9. From the latest I heard about your health from V. Lal it would seem that it is improving. Keep up the improvement and remain fully absorbed in your work.

¹*The Hindu* report concluded: “Towards the close of prayer, a large number of Muslims who had left earlier returned and sat down in silence to hear the Bengali translation of Gandhiji’s speech.”
My work should not be a hindrance to anyone. You may ask me whatever you wish to. I am carrying on a pleasant correspondence with Prakasam about the work in Madras; whatever will be will be. I am rendering some help. We ourselves will have to act as experts. He will not be able to do it. What he can see to is that there will be no obstruction from the Government machinery. The Textile Commissioner it would appear is a competent man. The final result is in the hands of God. Regarding Saraladevi what I want is that she should be appointed without delay. She is a very neat and efficient worker. I believe Dastaneji is already carrying on some correspondence with her. If I am unable to give a final verdict, obviously the Board of Trustees must do what it deems proper. About the Punjab developments I feel that if things reach the point of fighting we should fight. But I think the occasion will not arise. You should keep writing to Rajkumari. If there is an opportunity I shall write something.

Your second letter is brief. There is nothing more to be said about the exhibition in Madras. I say this much for the future that if the Provincial Government or the Central Government or even the Congress itself adopts a policy contrary to that of the A. I. S. A., we must follow our khadi policy even at the risk of leaving the Congress. There is no doubt that we shall render true service to the Congress and the nation by acting in this manner. We are entitled to hold an independent opinion, which means that the public is quite awakened and enlightened regarding our policy.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]
I have gone through the statement of the A. I. S. A. I got up at 3 o’clock, had it read out to me and read some of it myself. I am sending a wire today. You will have got it. I do not think that the statement needs to be revised. On the whole it reads well. You should regard me as useless for such work till my work here is completed. On reading it I was convinced that we should have decentralization as soon as possible. I think I did write upon this matter. We must

1Vide “Letter to T. Prakasam”, 28-12-1946 produce experts. We had better grant Dhiren Mazmudar the amount he wants. Rajkumari is probably in Delhi. She will not come here now.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

340. LETTER TO RAJENDRA PRASAD
MASIMPUR,
January 8, 1947

CHI. RAJENDRA PRASAD,

I have your letter of . . . 1 It is futile to worry. Not only I but we all are in the hands of God. We shall act as He moves us. I cannot have Kanu with me. I have given everyone independent work. Chi. Manu has come of her own accord. She was keen to come only to work under me and I agreed to it and she is working with zest. She is not as capable as Kanu, but where faith and purity exist talent and strength must follow. Manu has to prove this. Let us see what happens.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

341. LETTER TO MADHAV BIRLA
FATEHPUR,
January 8, 1947

CHI. MADHAV,

Don’t spoil me. Hariram is devoted to me. He has given me much service. But I am being well looked after. I am eating well. Therefore I am sending both back. You may send me what I ask for; anything more will be an excess. Write to Ghanshyamdasji. Don’t worry.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 Omission as in the source
342. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

DEAR DAUGHTER,

I was glad to have your letter. Nothing but dharma can help you. If it is God's will that we should meet in person while doing our duty, we shall certainly meet. Not otherwise. How does it matter even if we don't? We have never been separate spiritually nor shall we ever be. Whatever happens, remain happy.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 584

343. A TALK

If you don't treat the Hindus as your kith and kin, you will land yourselves in trouble. It is the easiest thing to harass the Hindus here, as you Muslims are in the majority. But is it just as honourable? Show me, please, if such a mean action is suggested anywhere in your Koran. I am a student of the Koran. Besides, I have many friends among the Muslims. And even today many Muslim girls are as much my daughters as this girl1 is. One of them is Amtussalaam, who is on a fast here. You must be knowing her. She is the kind of girl who will sacrifice her life for me. So in all humility I appeal to you to dissuade your people from committing such crimes, so that your own future may be bright.

[From Gujarati]

Eklo Jane Re, pp. 57-8

344. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

FATEHPUR,

January 8, 1947

I am so happy to see so many of you here this evening. It is a grand day for me.

1 Manu Gandhi

1 The reports in the various sources have been collated.
When he reached Fatehpur in the morning, Gandhiji said, he had been surrounded by affection all round, and among the messages received were also some from sisters. They wanted to present him with sweets specially prepared by them, but Gandhiji had replied that he was hungering not for sweets for the tongue but for sweets for the heart. He was grateful for the accommodation offered by the village, that was all that he needed. Gandhiji did not want to be a burden on any village through which he was passing. His own food was carried along with him while the expenses of the whole party had already been defrayed by loving friends.

Some Muslim friends had asked him why a feeling of estrangement was growing between the two communities in spite of the able leadership around, more specially in the Congress and the League. Gandhiji confessed that it was indeed true that the people in general always followed the lead which came from above. Therefore, it was not enough that leadership was able but it was necessary that there was accurate knowledge of the wants of the people. For himself he was only trying to depend wholly upon God and work at the task which came naturally to him. He commended the same course to everyone.

Today I am going through the greatest test of my life. I am now to find if the road that I follow is really the true road for all people of this country. I will not leave Noakhali unless I am assured by members of both communities that they would live like brothers in perfect unity. If success does not come to me, I will not go away from Noakhali a defeated man, but would rather die in the achievement of my mission.

Gandhiji told his audience that some Muslims had come to him to seek his advice as to which was the right road he should ask them to follow. He told them that he himself was in darkness and was searching for the right road and unless he found the same, he could not show them that path. The road that he was searching today was the road of unity but he could not tell them how to reach that road. He wanted them all to pray for success of his mission so that he might show to the country the right road to follow.

Harijan, 26-1-1947; Amrita Bazar Patrika, 11-1-1947; and The Hindu, 10-1-1947

345. LETTER TO H. S. SUHRAWARDY

KAZIRKHIL,
RAMGANJ P. S.,
NOAKHALI,
January 9, 1947

DEAR FRIEND,

As you are aware I am on the move from day to day and this is the third day¹. I have had varied experience on the first two days

¹ Of a village-to-village walking tour; Vide, “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 6-1-1947

VOL. 93: 7 NOVEMBER, 1946 - 16 FEBRUARY, 1947 253
which is worth noticing. On the first day at Mashimpur at the evening prayer there was Ramdhun as usual. The Muslim part of the audience stayed there during the Ramdhun and then some of them withdrew at half-past five without saying why they were going. I observed that it was not time for evening namaz because the sun was still shining. So I asked one of my co-workers to enquire why they had gone. They quickly replied that they did so because Ramdhun was recited at the meeting. I, therefore, spoke about the withdrawal, a report of which you must have seen in the papers.¹

Yesterday was a pleasing contract. I was accommodated at Fatehpur by Maulvi Ibrahim Sahib in his madressa. He and his fellow-Muslims were very kind and very attentive. The Muslims attended the prayer meeting in large numbers. I had enquired beforehand whether they had any objection to the Ramdhun and they said they had none. But they would like us to have no tabla or accompaniment because the meeting would be held practically in front of the mosque. I at once saw the point and without a murmur told my companion, who was in charge of the tour, not to have any such accompaniment. The Muslim part of the audience sat out the whole meeting and Maulana Ibrahim Sahib took part in it and spoke affectionately about the programme.

Today however, at at Dashpara, I observed that at first a poor Muslim had consented to have me on his farm. But later on he recanted and said he would not like to run the risk of the resentment of fellow-Muslims. And so I am on a plot of ground owned by a Hindu. The population in this village is overwhelmingly Muslim, there being 350 Muslim families to sixteen Hindu families.

I do not mention this by way of complaint. I had expected varied experience both pleasant and unplesant. I bring this to your notice in order that, if you felt like it, you might use your influence in the direction you must consider right as a man, not as the Chief Minister. You will readily do so if you realise that I am engaged on purely a mission of peace and as an equal friend of both the parties.

I enclose herewith a copy of a statement made by Dr. Varadarajan Pillai. It seems to be an extraordinary thing if it is true. I have asked Prof. Nirmal Kumar Bose, whom of course you know and who is with me, to write to the Magistrate. But I felt that I should bring this matter to your notice.

¹Vide “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 7-1-1947
There are other things that have come under my observation. But I am anxious not to tax your energy more than necessary. For the time being therefore I forbear.

One thing more I had forgotten to mention earlier. In this village (Dashpara) Muslims told some Hindu friends that all my attempts at bringing about real friendship between the two communities must fail so long as I go about fully protected by armed police or military, by whatever name these guards may be called. The fright of the military keeps them from coming to me and asking all sorts of questions for the resolution of their doubts. I do see some force in their argument. There will be none if either community was really brave. Unfortunately both lack this very necessary human quality. I would, therefore, like you to reconsider the position and if you feel convinced, to withdraw this escort. I do not need it. I even feel embarrassed and it certainly interferes with my sadhana. If you think that a firm and unequivocal written absolution from me will solve your difficulty I would be quite prepared to consider any draft that you may send me for signature. Failing that I suggest your making a declaration that on a satisfactory assurance being given to you by the Muslims in the area through which I may pass regarding my safety, you will withdraw the escort. If this happens it will be a dignified procedure. I will certainly appreciate it and it will produce a good effect all round. I hinted at some such thing at the prayer meeting this evening.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

346. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

January 9, 1947

DEAR DAUGHTER,

Chi. Abha has become like a daughter to you. Now you should wish to live for her sake. How is it that no treatment is able to cure your fever and why does the cough persist? It is now time you got rid of both. Do you use mud-packs? Do you not apply antiphlogistine? Do you take inhalation? Do so. Do you know the method? Take whatever service you need from the gentleman who is there, at least for some days. It will be all right if he leaves after a few days.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 556

347. TALK WITH KRISHNA KUMAR CHATTERJEE

January 9, 1947

I am still in darkness. I hope I shall see light soon. This light is sure to come if my work goes on without any interruption and if all coopurate in making my present mission a success.

Amrita Bazar Patrika, 12-1-1947

348. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

DASPARA, January 9, 1947

Gandhiji said he had been assured of a large Muslim gathering at Daspara as the village was predominantly Muslim but very few had assembled and he was told that many Muslims had left and that others did not come through fear of the police accompanying him. He felt ashamed that even one Muslim should have absented himself due to fear.

Gandhiji said that at the previous village he had lived in the house of Moulvi Ibrahim and a large number of Muslims were present at the prayer. He had always intended that he should live in Muslim houses during his tour in Eastern Bengal. His hosts would not have to spend anything as his needs regarding food would previously have been arranged for. From his Muslim friends he only wanted shelter.

He was pained to learn that many people in the village had left as they heard that Gandhiji had with him military and police. He would not like to depend on the military or the police for protection but the Bengal Government had decided to give him this protection. After all who could protect him if he fell ill or was otherwise to die. Only God could give real protection. Innocent people need have no fear. If people had done anything wrong they should repent before God and pray for His forgiveness.¹

One who is afraid of God should shed all fear of man. Those

¹ The report said that Krishna Kumar Chatterjee met Gandhiji in the afternoon, “after his recent visit from London where he had fasted for five days for a declaration of India’s independence”.

² The meeting was held in the compound of the local school.

³ What follows is from Amrita Bazar Patrika, 20-1-1947.
who are guilty must take refuge in God. No man on earth can say of himself that he has never erred in life. It is only when one realizes one's mistakes, makes a clear confession of all one's crimes before God and takes a solemn pledge that one will not repeat them that one may expect mercy from God. But in any case, the sinner should humbly stand before God and be prepared to accept whatever punishment He may bestow.

I would suggest one course to Muslim friends assembled here. You must tell the Bengal Government, which is guided by public opinion, that my tour of the villages in the district means no harm to anyone and that I should be taken at my word. You must assure the Government that you could not possibly do any harm to a sojourner in your midst and that you regard it as an affront that the Government should fear any mischief on the part of the local Muslims and decide to send an escort for me. If you write in that vein to the Ministry, then my own request to the same quarter to withdraw military protection from me is likely to be entertained.

The Hindu, 12-1-1947; and Amrita Bazar Patrika, 12-1-1947 and 20-1-1947

349. LETTER TO DISTRICT MAGISTRATE, TIPPERA

GANDHIJI'S CAMP,
NOAKHALI,
January 10, 1947

DEAR FRIEND,

Under instructions from Gandhiji. I beg to draw your attention to an incident which happened in Gandamara village on the 2nd instant. He is personally very much interested in the case, and would be anxiously awaiting any information received from you. The statement of Dr. Varadarajan Pillai speaks for itself. You will surely agree that as long as the mentality revealed is not changed, things will not return to normal.

Hoping to hear from you soon.

I remain,

Yours sincerely,

NIRMAL KUMAR BOSE

DISTT. MAGISTRATE

TIPPERA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

1 Vide "Fragment of Letter to H. S. Suhrawardy", 8-1-1947
350. LETTER TO MANILAL GANDHI

DASPARA,

[January 10, 1947]¹

CHI. MANILAL,

I got your letter of December 16, 1946. I am advising² Sushila to go at the earliest opportunity. The education of children will be disturbed, but that seems to me inevitable. I had a letter from Sushila, too. I therefore, think, that she will start at the earliest. You should now wait for her and put up with the hardships till she arrives. It is no use at all worrying about me. God is taking the utmost care of me and protecting me. These days I get up daily at 3, and there has been no trouble so far. But I feel unhappy that, though I am able to eat my normal food, I cannot attend to all the work. However, that problem also will be solved. I am now arranging the work with that end in view. Do not worry in the least. And, moreover, I have so arranged the work that it is desirable to have the fewest possible co-workers with me just now. Sushila Pai and Sushila Nayyar have been posted separately and are working independently. With me are Nirmal Babu and Manu and a person named Ramachandran. He works hard but I cannot use him much. The man has come to me in distress, and I have kept him because I could not turn him away. I had thus planned the work so as to be able to do it with very few workers, and I still adhere to that plan. I had, therefore, decided to attend to no outside work. But I have not been able to stick to it fully. That is why I feel hard pressed for time. I am now thinking of forcing myself not to attend to such work. If I succeed in that, I shall get enough free time.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 4998

351. LETTER TO SUSHILA GANDHI

January 10, 1947

CHI. SUSHILA,

I need not write at length as I am enclosing herewith my letter¹ to Manilal. You have to prepare yourself for going. You are not to worry on my account. I will consider it a great achievement if I can do without having to get up at 3 o’clock. You should be perfectly calm

¹ From the G. N. Register
² Vide the following item.
³ Vide the preceding item.
till you reach South Africa. And now that Vasant had come over you don’t have to worry about Akola. It is certainly regrettable that Vasant and Kanti do not wear khadi but can we make all, or even a few, into replicas of ourselves? Besides, but for our capacity for self-deception the world would come to a standstill. We should therefore be more than satisfied if all live according to their own fancies but within certain limits. We should be satisfied if both of them preserve their health and participate in voluntary work as much as they can.

Blessings from
BAPU

SUSHILABEHN GANDHI
NANABHAI MASHRUWALA’S HOUSE
AKOLA

352. LETTER TO RAMDAS GANDHI

DASPARA,
January 10, 1947

CHI. RAMDAS,

I got your letter. I do believe that you will prove worthy of your responsibility. It will be enough if you maintain your health. Don’t at all worry about me. I am not starving. I allow myself the necessary facilities and also get them wherever I go. Manu has taken up a lot of work and I expect her to take upon herself further responsibilities as the days pass. I have asked her to write about her sharing the bed with me. I am dictating this letter after getting up at 3 o’clock. I am also preparing to introduce changes in this programme. I am still surrounded by darkness. I have no doubt whatever that it indicates a flaw somewhere in my method. Take it as though I had confined myself to this place to detect that flaw. It must lie somewhere in my practice of ahimsa. Could it be that I am nurturing only weakness in the name of non-violence! Weakness can take a number of forms, but it is meaningless to plunge into a discussion about it. That alone is true which we realize by experience. You may not therefore bother with it but try to do your own work as best as you can. That is enough for me. Kanu seems to be making good progress. He is gradually

1 Wife of Kanti Mashruwala, addressee’s brother maturing. He must get rid of the cold; and I believe he will. I had a long letter from Nimu but now I shall not write to her. She should content herself with the understanding that a letter to you is [also] to her. If she attended to all her work there and still maintained her health, I would consider that she was doing my work.

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyareal

353. LETTER TO KANAM GANDHI

[January 10, 1947]¹

CHI. KANU,

I have your nice letter. I am keen on writing to you but I must restrain myself. It will soon be 4 o’clock and I must brush my teeth and wash. Get rid of the cold. Did you not learn that from Vinoba? Learn to do pranayama². Learn a few yogic exercises also and find out the right diet for you. The result of your examination will surely be in your favour as you are so energetic and also growing in wisdom. May God grant you long life.

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyareal

354. LETTER TO G. V. MAVALANKAR

FATEHPUR,

January 10, 1947

BHAII MAVALANKAR,

I am sure you don’t expect a letter from me but I may as well drop you a postcard. According to my definition I would regard you and Kaka as Gujaratis and nothing else. Therefore the question of Gujarati and non-Gujarati has no relevance for me. I have written to Kaka that he can implement his suggestion if the Sardar is fully agreeable to it. There are other things also about which I will say nothing just now. Since I am inextricably caught up here you will have to see to the work of the Kasturba Gandhi National Memorial

¹ Addressee’s wife, Nirmala Gandhi
² In the source the letter appears below the one of this date addressed to Ramdas Gandhi; vide the preceding item.
³ Yogic breathing exercises
Trust yourself, and I know you will do it quite well. You must thoroughly recoup yourself.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

355. LETTER TO MANIBEHN

FATEHPUR,
January 10, 1947

CHL. MANIBEHN.

I regard you as my own daughter. But, for the time being, I have stopped all my sons and daughters from coming to me. If I see some light I might send for a few. I am sure, however, that just now I must not ask anyone to come. And then you are not unoccupied. You are certainly acquitting yourself creditably in the work you have undertaken. And I am of the view that those who do full justice to their own self-chosen activities fully participate in the yajna.

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

356. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

January 10, 1947

DEAR DAUGHTER,

You don’t have to die; we should hope to live and be prepared to die. Give up the desire that I should come there. I am already with you. I must be occupied with my work and you with yours; this precisely is our tapascharya and our dharma. Sushila is trying to persuade me to visit you. I think it would not be proper. I wish you also to think likewise.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 557

357. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

January 10, 1947

DEAR DAUGHTER,

I do what one as a human being should do after leaving the thing in the hands of God. Then I don’t worry about it. Take inhalation. Your fever must go and also the cough. Send away Gunasindhu if you don’t need him any more. The Sikh brothers are there for any service needed. I don’t feel any need to inform your brothers. But I shall do as you wish.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 558

358. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

JAGATPUR,
January 10, 1947

Gandhiji said he had been hearing for some time—and more insistently since yesterday—that if Muslims asked Hindus to accept Islam if they wanted to save themselves or their property, and if the latter responded, there was no compulsion. Gandhiji said he was not concerned for a moment with the truth or otherwise of that statement. What he wanted to say was that this was acceptance of Islam under all the threat of force.

Conversion, Gandhiji held, was made of sterner stuff. The statement reminded him of the days when Christian missionaries so called used to buy children in days of famine and bring them up as Christians. This was surely no acceptance of Christianity. Similarly, acceptance of Islam, to be real and valid, should be wholly voluntary and must be based on proper knowledge of the two faiths—one’s own and the one presented for acceptance. Gandhiji could not conceive of the possibility of such acceptance of Islam by the women in front of him or children. This was the view Gandhiji had held all his life. He did not believe in conversion as an institution. He would not ask his friends to accept Hinduism because he happened to be a Hindu. Those who came to him with such a mind were recommended proper study of Hinduism and were told to incorporate in their own religion what was considered good in Hinduism. He called himself not merely a Hindu but a Christian, a Muslim, a Jew, a Sikh, a Parsee, a Jain or a man of any other sect, meaning thereby that he had absorbed all that was commendable in all other religions and sub-religions. In this way, he avoided any clash and expanded his own conception of religion.

What he had said might not commend itself to everybody. But he would like every Muslim to consider whether from what he had said it was not possible for them to see that Islam was much superior to what had been described to him during his pilgrimage. He had prayerfully studied as much as he could in his busy life of Islam’s

1 Muslim gentleman sent by Gandhiji to look after the addressee history written by Muslim divines and he had not found a single passage in condonation of forcible conversion such as he had described. Real conversion proceeded from the heart and a heart conversion was impossible without an intelligent grasp of one’s own faith and of that recommended for adoption.

Concluding, Gandhiji said that he was not going to be satisfied without a heart understanding between the two communities and this was not possible unless the Hindus and Muslims were prepared to respect each other’s religion leaving the process of conversion absolutely free and voluntary.

Amrita Bazar Patrika, 14-1-1947

359. LETTER TO MARWARI RELIEF SOCIETY, RAMGANJ

CAMP LAMCHAR,
NOAKHALLI,
January 11, 1947

DEAR FRIEND,

Mr. Hashmar Ullah Khan came to see Gandhiji with a request to expedite certain payments which are due to him on account of rice supplied to your relief camp at Chatkhil. His letter in original as well as enclosures are being sent to you. Gandhiji wishes you to enquire into the matter and say how far the case is true. After receiving your reply, he will pursue the matter further if necessary.

Yours sincerely,

NIRMAL KUMAR BOSE

THE OFFICER-IN-CHARGE
MARWARI RELIEF SOCIETY
RAMGANJ CAMP

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

360. LETTER TO MADHAVDAS

JAGATPUR,
January 11, 1947

CHI. MADHAVDAS,

I am glad to read your long letter although at the moment I have no time to read long letters, nor to have them read out to me. And Manu read out your letter to me. In order to cope with the work to some extent, I have to get out of bed before 3 o’clock, just as I have done today, and am now dictating this. Please don’t worry on my account. You have settled down in the right place. Serve as much as you can and acquit yourself with credit. Blessings to all brothers and sisters who are there.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

361. LETTER TO CHAMPA R. MEHTA

JAGATPUR, January 11, 1947

CHI. CHAMPA,

I have your letter. Vachharajbhai of Panchgani has passed away. However, arrangements can be made if you must go. But from what you write it seems there is now no need for you to go. I wish Shashi to recover completely. Sarala has been slightly indisposed. She seems to have a great capacity for work. You must not take upon yourself any worry. We should fulfil our dharma and not bother about anything else. God alone awards the fruit [of action]. There cannot be any question of worrying on my account. I am doing God’s work. He will take care of me as long as He wills. I am quite well.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

362. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM AND ABHA GANDHI

January 11, 1947

DEAR DAUGHTER,

Day by day try to get better and when the time comes to die, die with a healthy body. If you don’t get rid of the cough and fever it will not be a sacrifice of the purest type. But what can you do in this? Let it be as God wills.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

CHI. ABHA,

Continue making progress. I am sending the tooth-powder.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 559

1 Addressee’s son
363. LETTER TO MANILAL T. DOSHI

JAGATPUR,
January 11, 1947

CHI. MANILAL,¹

I have your letter. Bulsaria from Panchgani had promptly given me the news about Vachharaj. Panchgani has sustained a great loss. Can you bring lustre to the work left behind by Vachharaj?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

364. LETTER TO DAMODAR MUNDADA

JAGATPUR,
January 11, 1947

CHI. DAMODAR,

I have your letter. I have not heard what Suchetabehn said. But no such situation has arisen that I should send for some other men or women workers. The circumstances today are such that I must work alone. Only if the local Government [appreciates]² our work, can we ask others to come here. One alternative is there, viz., that we should apply to the Chief Minister that he should grant our request; but I don’t feel the need for this course. Certainly, you have my blessings for the annual function. May the work of the Mahila Ashram always grow and may the sisters learn simplicity and know their own worth. I have received a letter from Shantabehn³ but I am not writing to her. Please inform her.

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ Brother of Vachharaj Doshi
² One word here is illegible.
³ Shantabehn Raniwala, founder of the Mahila Ashram at Wardha
365. LETTER TO SADHU

January 11, 1947

CHI. SADHU,

I have your letter. There is no need for anyone to come here. We shall think of it when the need arises. Stay where you are, doing your duty with perseverance.

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

366. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

LAMCHAR,

January 11, 1947

Gandhiji began his after-prayer speech at Lamchar by saying that he would confine himself to a question that had been facing him for the last few days. He gathered that a large number of artisans had lost both their homes as well as their instruments of trade which had either been destroyed or stolen. What was going to be done about these people?

There was a time, he said, when our villages had a full complement of artisans serving farmers. The latter were the centre of gravity of village economy. Payment was then made in kind, and it was in conformity with the needs of the producers, just as production itself was strictly related to the needs of the people. Different occupations were knit together by a bond of interdependence into an integrated whole. This was India’s village economy in pre-British days and in it all communities, including the Mussalmans shared to the fullest extent. Under its dispensation, no man could go without food, shelter and clothing in a village.

But the problem which faced the villagers in this part of the country today was what should be done about the artisans whose life had been dislocated by riots. Gandhiji expressed his hope that it would even now be possible to restore village economy to a sufficient extent to cope with the problem of unemployment. It was the first duty of the Government to provide the artisans with dwelling houses as well as to supply them with instruments and raw materials needed for plying their trade. Cash loans may be arranged; these should be free of interest and the payment spread conveniently over a long term. Naturally the question of security should not arise. The Government should be prepared to lose their money if any artisans died before full recovery of loans.

But if the Government did not perform its obvious duty, then moneyed men should come forward for the same purpose. They should help the artisans on the same terms as sketched above. Indeed, it was their duty to do so. The bond of co-operation which would thus be created between different classes of population, was a necessary factor if our object was once more to restore healthy village life.¹

He advised the evacuees to brave all hardships and return home quickly. By means of their own labour they must be determined to rebuild their ruined homes as well as their lives.

The Hindu, 14-1-1947; and Amrita Bazar Patrika, 20-1-1947

367. TELEGRAM TO KAFI KHAN

[January 12, 1947]²

KAFI KHAN³
POST BOX 653
BOMBAY
AMTUSSALAAM FASTING AGAINST MUSLIM MISCREANTS.
SEVENTEENTH DAY. NO CAUSE ANXIETY. ONE OF YOU MAY COME IF YOU THINK NECESSARY.

GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

368. LETTER TO SUMATI MORARJI

January 12, 1947

CHI. SUMATI,

I am dictating this while spinning. I get little time during the day to write. It is only after the morning prayer that I can do some writing. Moving daily from one village to another does take time.

It was only yesterday that I learnt from Lilavati’s⁴ letter about the passing away of your brother. I decided to write immediately, but could not find the time. Meanwhile, Manu read out to me Shanti-kumar’s⁵ letter to her. I can understand your grief. But if we can offer to God both happiness and sorrow, the sorrow comes to an end. I

¹ What follows is reproduced from Amrita Bazar Patrika.
² From the reference to the seventeenth day of the 25-day fast by Amtussalaam; she began her fast on December 27, 1946 and ended it on January 20, 1947; vide “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 21-1-1947
³ Brother of Amtussalaam
⁴ Lilavati Asar
⁵ Addressee’s husband know that you do have enough knowledge to understand this. Use that knowledge and remain calm. The blood-pressure was but an instrument. Death spares nobody.

Blessings to both from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 845

369. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

KALPATALI, EAST BENGAL,

January 12, 1947

CHI. LILI,

Either I must dictate or give up the idea of writing. I do not like to do the latter, and hence I dictate, even though you had only asked for a few lines from Manu. I had you in mind in regard to the Harijan girl. However, consult Lilavati Munshi and if she knows of any educated Harijan girl who would be ready to marry a non-Harijan, ask her to write to me. I am glad that the other girl’s problems has been solved and that she will now be able to complete her study. Complete your course, too. Avail yourself fully of the services of the excellent professors you have. That will be as good as your coming to me. You will later get abundant opportunity for service. If you had not taken up the course at all, it would have been a different matter. But having once taken up a project, one must see it through. Yes, if one has made a mistake in taking up something, one may rectify the mistake at any time. But you have committed no mistake in deciding to study. Had you done so, do you think I would have given my consent? I not only gave my consent, but also arranged for the necessary facilities. For there is no shame in becoming a doctor. You should not, therefore, in the least degree feel bad. Manu will tell you the rest.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 9606. Also C. W. 6578. Courtesy: Lilavati Asar
370. LETTER TO MANILAL T. DOSHI

January 12, 1947

BHAI MANILAL,

Your letter of December 16, 1946 reached me as late as yesterday. Such are the vagaries of the postal department. I, however, had the news of his death from Bulsaria. Later, other letters also came. It is difficult to fill up the void created by his death. Are you going to do your part?

Blessings from
BAPU

MANILAL TRIBHOVAN DOSHI
PANCHGANI

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

371. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM AND ABHA GANDHI

January 12, 1947

DEAR DAUGHTER,

I have your letter. Satis Babu related everything to me. He is pleased with your penance. If you cannot decide whether or not to take anything through the rectum, you can take lemon and salt. These two things you can take through the mouth also. But if anything is to be taken through the rectum, then why not glucose also? But whatever you decide about these things I would consider it right. No one should stand in the way of your deciding for yourself.

Blessings from
BAPU

CHI. ABHA,

Your letter is fine. Keep on writing like this.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 560
372. LETTER TO TULSIRAM
January 12, 1947

BHAI TULSIRAMJI,

I have your two letters and also the three books. But Sanskrit Shikshika is not among them. A Hindi, English or Bengali edition ought to be available in Calcutta. The Bengali must be available there. Bapa has written that you looked after him extremely well.

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

373. LETTER TO SHRIKRISHNA SINHA
January 12, 1947

BHAI SHRIKRISHNA SINHA,

Bapa writes that Jaglal Choudhari has refused to become Excise Minister because the Ministry has decided not to implement prohibition till 1948. I know nothing of this matter nor could accept the decision. I have written to Bapa that I would correspond with you. What shall I write to you?

It is bad that the enquiry commission has not yet been appointed. I think that it should be appointed immediately. Many letters of complaint are coming in. Only the commission can answer these letters.

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

374. LETTER TO OM PRAKASH GUPTA
January 12, 1947

CHI. OM PRAKASH,

I have your letter. You grieve for nothing. If you continue to be infatuated of a degree, and you have admitted the infatuation in the past, you should complete your thesis and obtain the degree. In the meanwhile you are certainly doing some work there and all that is not useless. I feel sorry to hear about Govindji. Nothing will happen till December, I hope. At least that is some relief. In the meanwhile some way might be found.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
375. INTERVIEW TO AN EX-ARMY OFFICER

January 12, 1947

The All-India Congress Committee by its Delhi resolution\(^1\) had accepted the December 6 statement\(^2\) of the British Government and had gone to its “farthest limit consistent with its principles” to declare its friendly attitude to the Muslim League.

Gandhiji is reported to have added that he could not say what would be the League’s attitude to this friendly gesture, but he could only hope that they would reciprocate.

Harijan, 2-2-1947

376. INTERVIEW TO A MUSLIM VISITOR

KARPARA, January 12, 1947

The visitor had asked which of the two alternatives for a solution of the present situation in India would be preferable—Pakistan or civil war.

Gandhiji is reported to have said that he would approach the problem differently. Neither of the two suggested solutions would be good. It was wrong to think that Pakistan could be achieved through civil war.

The interviewer asked what kind of Government would be good for a free India.

Gandhiji’s reply to this was that it was not a question for him to answer. The question would be ripe for answer after freedom had been achieved.

Amrita Bazar Patrika, 16-1-1947; also Harijan, 2-2-1947

377. SPEECH AT KARPARA

January 12, 1947

I have come to bring about heart unity between the two communities and if necessary to lay down my life in that attempt. The Hindus and Muslims should remember that they are nourished by the same corn and live under the same sky, quench their thirst by the same water, in calamities that overtake the country are afflicted in the same way, irrespective of their religious beliefs. It is very essential that both the communities should bury their differences and live in peace.

Those who have imbibed the true spirit of religion cannot hate

---

\(^1\) Extracted from “Srirampur Diary”. This appeared as reported by the Hindustan Standard special correspondent.

\(^2\) Vide “A. I. C. C. Resolution”

\(^3\) Vide “British Cabinet’s Statement of Grouping”, 6-12-1946 any man for his faith. Hinduism has undoubtedly sinned gravely through its custom of untouchability. All my life I have struggled for the eradication of that evil. But if the Muslims hate the Hindus because they worship the one God by a different name and in a different way, then the Muslims are practising the untouchability which is against the teachings of Islam. I am working for the day when the Muslims will be able to say to their Hindu neighbours that it does not matter by what name or in what way they worship God.

Amrita Bazar Patrika, 20-1-1947

378. NOTE TO M. A. ABDULLAH

SHAHPUR,
Monday, January 13, 1947

You should simply do what duty demands and nothing more. If she is obstinate and dies, let her die and be disgraced. If she is right and the right is not vindicated in her lifetime, her death will be a fit atonement. I shall certainly bring all these things to her notice.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

379. NOTES TO PYARELAL:

January 13, 1947

You must bear whatever comes. We must accomplish what we have set out to do. We must experience everything. When we have abandoned all fear, why worry?

* * *

In my view you must draw comfort from her happiness. If you trust her, I consider it your duty to do as she says. But if you do not think it is your duty, you should certainly not give up your fast. I shall bear everything. But Manu’s case is different. This thing is clear to me. For the present, your duty is to forget her and be absorbed in

---

1 Gandhiji wrote this on a slip after hearing the addressee’s report about Amtussalaam’s fast. She, however, broke the fast on January 20. Pyarelal explains: “Police officials declared their helplessness in the matter. They even accused Amtussalaam of ‘obstinacy’ and ‘wilfulness’ in making a major issue out of a trifle.”

2 The following notes to Pyarelal, all bearing the same date, were scribbled on separate bits of paper, presumably at different times of the day as it was a silence day for Gandhiji.
your work. And that is the way of winning her. Be the result what it may. Understand, if you can, that there is no other way of being absorbed in the thought of the loved one.

* * *

This is not something mechanical. It should spring from the heart. A parrot utters the name of Rama. What the parrot does is mechanical and hence useless. In the work that I am doing, my work itself is the name of Rama. That is how I am proceeding and that alone is correct. If you can understand this, give up your fast and feel happy. If this is not convincing, then keep the fast.

* * *

You are unable to give up the idea of having her as your wife. Whether or not you can give it up only God knows. What is to be done when you do not understand what I write? I have compared her to Ramanama. We utter the name of Rama to find Rama. But we must do His Work to find Him. If even now you do not understand, think over it. Do not take my time.

* * *

In this way the situation will further deteriorate. When did I rebuke you? If you see rebuke in what I said can we go on? I do not even know if she talked to you before or after my suggestion. Now from what you say it seems you are beginning to have doubts about her purity. You are not able to forget her in spite of my writing so much. I appeal to you that even if you cannot forget her leave me out of it. All this is included in my letter, which you said, you have understood.

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

380. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

January 13, 1947

DEAR DAUGHTER,

What shall I do? Yesterday I sent a letter to you. Satis Babu who worries so much took it with him. But I got the letter back. Now I am sending it again. I did not complain of your obstinacy¹. I do not know what Sushilabehn said. It is enough for me that you have faith. I shall be happy whether you die reciting Ramanama after getting rid of your ailments, or are saved.

¹ The word is in English

You yourself told me to inform Kafikhan\(^1\) and that is why I did so. I had not thought of it. Now I do not want to do anything. You can send a telegram asking him not to come.\(^2\) It will be all right even if you don’t.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 561

---

381. LETTER TO SUCHETA KRIPALANI

KARPARA,

January 13, 1947

SUCHETA,

I have your letter. You are bound to accomplish something wherever you go. You are not spoiling your health, I hope. Do you take work from the refugees? Do you teach them anything? Every camp should be a hive of industry. It should be clean and well organized with perfect lavatory arrangements.

Can I make public use of the reports you have sent in English? Have you sent them to the Magistrate and the Associated Press? Amtul Salaam is brave; her fast is continuing. She is of course weak but otherwise all right.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

---

382. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

SHAHPUR,

January 13, 1947

Gandhiji said that want of real education was the root cause of differences between Hindus and Muslims. He observed that there was much to be said about this village, but he had purposely avoided that today. This much he would say that after all

---

\(^1\) Addressee’s brother

\(^2\) According to a report in Amrita Bazar Patrika, 16-1-1947, Gandhiji had sent a telegram to her brother at Bombay saying that though there was no cause for anxiety if they thought it necessary one of her relatives might go to Sirandi.
Hindus and Muslims had to live side by side and all had to work towards that end. They must remove internal weaknesses which stood in the way of their unity.

_The Bombay Chronicle_, 16-1-1947

383. LETTER TO SHRIKRISHNA SINHA

[After January 13, 1947]

BHAI SHRIKRISHNA SINHA,

People’s bullocks have been killed here and the farmers cannot do anything without bullocks. People tell me that they used to get bullocks from Bihar prior to the war but they cannot get them now. Is this true? Cannot people here get bullocks even after paying for them? I was to get a note on Bihar. I have not received it, nor has a single well-informed person from Bihar come to me. It does not matter if someone cannot come but the note must come. What happened about the Commission?

_Blessings from_
BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

384. LETTER TO JIVANJI D. DESAI

ON TOUR,
6.10 a. m., January 14, 1947

CHI. JIVANJI,

I send herewith an article received from Valji. I found it between the pages of a book. It contains the sayings of Prophet Mohammed.

Is there any improvement as regards subscribers?
I wrote to you asking you to inquire why Professor Edmond Privat does not get his copies of Harijan. Let me know the outcome.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 9974. Also C. W. 6948. Courtesy: Jivanji D. Desai

---

1 In the source, this letter is placed between two letters of January 13 and January 26.
2 Valji G. Desai
385. LETTER TO SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA

BHATIALPUR,
January 14, 1947

CHI. SATIS BABU:¹

Your prohibition is wrong. The Sikhs prevention was tactless. The man who prevented you is a good man. You should have laughed at his prohibition and appreciated it. You should have been satisfied when Sardar Jivan Singh and Niranjan Singh made amends. We cannot afford to resent personal affronts. Therefore I propose to take the Sikhs unless you satisfy me to the contrary.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G. N. 8716

386. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

SHAHPUR,
January 14, 1947

CHI. VALLABHBHAI,

...² Now about the proposed Bihar commission of inquiry. It was some gentleman from Bihar who gave me the information. I did not note down his name. Is it not a fact that you, the Governor and the Viceroy are against the appointment of a Commission and that this is sufficient to stop the Chief Minister from appointing one?³ In spite of all this, I am strongly of opinion that if no commission is appointed, the League’s report will be accepted as true. I alone know what pressure is being put on me.

This is my view regarding Sudhir. If the League Ministers and the Viceroy also agree, I do not see any harm in appointing⁴ him. If he is to work under the High Commissioner, the post also will have to be approved by you three. Moreover, it is the members of the Cabinet who are suggesting Sudhir’s appointment. If so, they should invite him publicly. If this point is not made clear beyond any possibility of

¹ The superscription is in Devanagari.
² Omission as in the source
³ Vide also “Letter to Vallabhbhai Patel”, 5-2-1947.
⁴ As Public Relations Officer at the Indian High Commission in London doubt, Sudhir will lose whatever value he now has. You may now do what all of you think fit. I saw just now that Sudhir’s name has appeared in the statement.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

[From Gujarati]
_Bapuna Patro—: Sardar Vallabhbhaine_, pp. 344-5

_387. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM AND ABHA GANDHI_
_January 14, 1947_

DEAR DAUGHTER,

I have your letter. Forget about Kafikhan. If he wants to come, he will come. Just think of God alone. You will have taken an enema with lemon and salt. Remain cheerful.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

CHI. ABHA,
God will reward you for your dedication.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 562

_388. SPEECH TO WOMEN_
_BHATIALPUR, January 14, 1947_

Emulate Sita and Savitri. Be courageous.

Gandhiji observed that it was often said that women were naturally weak—they were _abalas_. His advice to women was that they should not believe such things. Women, in his opinion, could be as hard as men. Could anybody think of Sita or Savitri as less courageous than any man in any country? No woman, therefore, should think that she was naturally weak and thus demean herself.

_Amrita Bazar Patrika_, 16-1-1947
Gandhiji thanked them and said:

If your words come from your heart and not merely from your lips, then their effect will not be confined merely to India but will spread over the whole world.

They asked what his objection was to the setting up of a separate Muslim State after the events in Bihar. Gandhiji replied:

If a Muslim State implied freedom to make unfriendly treaties with foreign powers to the detriment of the country, then obviously it cannot be a matter of agreement. No one can be asked to sign an agreement granting freedom to another to launch hostilities against himself; it would be suicidal policy.

On the young men asking whether Gandhiji did not think it advisable to concede Pakistan since it was holding back the issue of Indian independence, Gandhiji said:

Only after independence has been won can there be a question of granting Pakistan. To reverse the process was to invite foreign help. Azadi and Pakistan require the exclusion of all foreign powers. Until and unless India is free, there cannot be any other question.

When you think of establishing Pakistan first you think in terms of getting it with the aid of a third power. When I think of the freedom of India, I think in terms of achieving it without any foreign aid, be it Russian, Chinese or any other, but on the basis of our own inner strength. Then only will freedom be real and lasting. Once freedom is secured for the country as a whole then we can decide about Pakistan or Hindustan.

Gandhiji was then asked why he should not go to Bihar where the tragedy was on a colossal scale compared to Noakhali. His reply was:

What has happened in Bihar is shameful enough. But the people

---

1 According to Amrita Bazar Patrika, as Gandhiji was returning home from his evening walk, a number of Muslim youths joined him and expressed gratification at his work in Noakhali. They assured him that nothing that had happened in the past was going to be repeated and that they would stand guarantee for it. The reports in the various sources have been collated.
there are said to have realized their mistake. By going there I cannot do anything more than what I can do from here, for I am able to affect the Government and people of Bihar from Noakhali.

The last question put to Gandhiji was: After the recent disturbances there is neither Pakistan nor peace. What is your solution to this situation? Gandhiji replied:

That is exactly what I am searching for in Noakhali. As soon as I discover it the world shall know it.

While taking leave of Gandhiji the Muslim youths asked for Gandhiji’s blessings to enable them to fulfil the promise made. Gandhiji said that so long as they spoke from their hearts and honestly tried to give effect to their promises, God would be on their side. Gandhiji told the youths that they must discuss what he had said with friends and meet him again if they had more questions to ask.

The Hindu, 17-1-1947; Harijan, 2-2-1947; and Amrita Bazar Patrika, 19-1-1947

390. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

Bhatialpur, January 14, 1947

It has been said that Pakistan did not imply curtailment of liberty to practise one’s own religion and pursue trade or profession after one’s own heart. Therefore, it would be wrong on your part to think in terms of boycotting the minority community and thus making it impossible for them to carry on their normal life.

Gandhiji further observed that boycott implied intolerance and the assumption of an attitude of superiority by some over others and said:

We are sinners because we look down upon Harijans as untouchables. But Islam is great because it made no distinction whatever between man and man. If, however, you look down upon Hindus because they worship the same God under other names, then you are practising the same untouchability which is definitely a violation of a fundamental principle of Islam.

The number of Muslims who attended the meeting, Gandhiji said, was not in direct proportion to their population in the locality. When women were not afraid of him, he was puzzled why men should be afraid to meet him. Islam, Gandhiji emphasized, taught fear of only God and not man. One should be afraid to commit sin, but having committed it, one should surrender oneself to God and cheerfully bear any punishment that might be meted out. Gandhiji made a passing reference to the purdah system and urged that it should be scrapped. The system kept women in complete darkness in every respect. The women of both communities should mix more freely and get to understand each other.¹

Gandhiji repeated his request to the Muslims to write to H. S. Suhrawardy, the Bengal Premier, for withdrawal of Military and Police giving him protection.

Gandhiji made a reference to his visit to Muslim houses that morning. He found that the Muslim women hesitated to come out in his presence. He recalled the days of the Ali Brothers. At a Muslim women’s meeting the Ali Brothers had tied their eyes with a piece of cloth and delivered their lecture but Gandhiji was allowed to address the meeting with open eyes. Gandhiji added that real purdah was not of the body but the mind. What was needed was real education among women, more so among Muslim women. If darkness of their mind was not removed they could not do anything with outward purdah. Gandhiji also asked the audience to realize that Khuda and Rama were one, only called by different names. He had heard that many Muslims were afraid of punishment and had fled from their homes. A true Muslim, he said, should be afraid of sin and not punishment that might be inflicted due to that sin. Hindus also must learn that Khuda and Rama were one. This was the lesson he would impress upon the audience.

The Hindu, 17-1-1947; and Amrita Bazar Patrika, 17-1-1947

391. TELEGRAM TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU²

January 15, 1947

PANDIT JAWAHARLAL NEHRU
NEW DELHI

PATHETIC TELEGRAM RECEIVED FROM PESHAWAR ABOUT MURDER ARSON AND LOOT. RECEIVED SIMILAR WIRE [FROM HAZARA].³ PLEASE REPLY ABOUT TRUTH ALLEGATIONS.⁴

BAPU

Prime Minister’s Secretariat: File No. 388-PS/46

¹ What follows is reproduced from Amrita Bazar Patrika.
² An identical telegram was also sent to Vallabhbhai Patel.
³ Vide “Letter to Vallabhbhai Patel”, 24-1-1947
⁴ Nehru’s reply of January 16, 1947, read: “Owing to false and exaggerated propaganda about Bihar, several serious incidents took place in Hazara district involving attacks on Hindus, Sikhs, arson and loot. Number of persons killed probably not considerable. Large numbers refugees. Frontier Government has taken strong action against miscreants, also helping refugees. Situation now quiet. We are keeping in close touch and will take all necessary steps.”
KAZIRKHIL,
RAMGANJ P. S.,
NOAKHALI DISTT.,
January 15, 1947

I see from the papers that you are in Bihar exactly as I am in Noakhali, only, if the newspaper reports are correct, you are literally alone. My being alone is a fraud. Do let me have a line from you about what you are doing. I suppose it will be too early to enquire what success you are meeting with. Here the task is tough. My ahimsa is being weighed on the balance. Have I represented throughout life real ahimsa of the brave? If so, it ought to find response from the Muslims at least of Noakhali. I cannot give you any forecast yet. I am acting as, according to my belief, God guides me from moment to moment.

I enclose herewith a copy of a telegram received from Peshawar.¹ Can you at all say whether the version given is likely to be true? I have telegraphed to Dr. Khan Saheb and the friends in New Delhi.² In order to save time I am dictating this letter through the good offices of friend Rangaswamy whom you know as one of the important reporters of The Hindu (Madras). I cannot write Urdu as yet with facility. Pyarelal and Sushila I must not fall back upon although I see them often. They have their village-work cut out for them and neither they nor I should be exposed to any temptation.

KANH ABDUL GHAFFAR KHAN SAHEB
C/O CHIEF MINISTER
BIHAR GOVERNMENT
PATNA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

¹ The telegram dated January 11, from some Akali Sikhs in Peshawar reported deterioration in the communal situation in N.W.F.P., with murders of Hindus and Sikhs, looting of property and desecration of temples and Gurudwaras.

² Vide “Letter to Amtussallam and Abha Gandhi”, 15-1-1947
393. LETTER TO ABUL KALAM AZAD

AS AT KAZIRKHIL,
RAMGANJ P. S.,
NOAKHALI DISTT.,
January 15, 1947

DEAR BROTHER,

Here is a copy of a telegram received by me. I know you are in Calcutta in Dr. Bidhan Roy’s good and able hands. At this time you ought to be spared all the trouble from friends who seek your assistance and advice. But I thought that you would perhaps know the facts much more than anybody else and give truer guidance. Hence, this trouble.

I have telegraphed to Jawaharlal, Sardar, the President of the Congress and Dr. Khan Saheb. I purposely refrained from sending a wire to you in Calcutta. This too will be delivered to you by hand.

I have seen your statement to the Press about your acceptance of office in the Interim Government. It is quite good and I have not the slightest doubt that your presence in the Cabinet will be of great service at this very critical juncture.

I hope you will make rapid and solid recovery. Please do not hurry over the treatment. A medical adviser is entitled to consideration from a patient. That he happens to be a close friend of the patient should prove no disqualification from title to consideration if only because consideration shown to a medical adviser is really consideration shown to oneself.

About movement here I dare say you glance at the newspaper reports of my words at the prayer meetings. I have put myself on trial as to whether I am an exponent of true ahimsa or only ahimsa so called. I am not relying upon Pyarelal or Sushila for my Urdu work though I see them often enough. Pyarelal is with me today, this being the last of the fifth village within his beat. If I do not follow this rule, the whole superstructure will come to pieces and the distribution of the party in affected villages will be a mockery.

Yours,
GANDHI

MAULANA SAHEB
CALCUTTA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

282 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
394. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM AND ABHA GANDHI

January 15, 1947

DEAR DAUGHTER,

I have your letter. Keep up your strength by reciting Ramanama. Pass as many days as possible in peace. That way God will be pleased and the work will progress. There is no need to write more.

Blessings from

BAPU

CHI. ABHA,

Remain cheerful.

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 563

395. STATEMENT TO THE PRESS

NARAYANPUR,

January 15, 1947

The public should know that all that is humanly possible is being done in connection with the fast. Bibi Amtussalaam is in great peace and all attendance needed is being given to her. She is calm, cheerful and resigned. She does not want the fast to be advertised for her. It is a pure spiritual effort and she feels that in the prevalent atmosphere of fear, distrust and suspicion, her invocation of Divine intervention can only be emphasized by readiness for supreme sacrifice.

This statement has become necessary because of the appearance in the Press of the news about her fast which can only be terminated happily by the discovery of a weapon which is reported to have stood for several murders and all that that discovery means [sic].

The Bombay chronicle, 18-1-1947

---

1 The report said the statement was issued by Nirmal Kumar Bose “on behalf of Gandhiji”.

VOL. 93: 7 NOVEMBER, 1946 - 16 FEBRUARY, 1947 283
396. SPEECH AT GRAM SEVA SANGH MEETING

NARAYANPUR,
January 15, 1947

Gandhiji said that it was their primary duty to remove untouchability. Unless this virus was removed from their society, there could not be any real progress in this country. Secondly Hindu-Muslim unity should be effected. Both the Hindus and the Muslims should be eager to achieve this end. They took water from the same tank and rice from the same paddy fields. For the time being, they should forget politics and devote their sole attention to improve villages, spread education, develop industries and other constructive work. For this purpose, workers must be prepared to die.

Replying to a question whether the refugees should now return home, Gandhiji said that they must return home at the earliest. They must, however, shed fear. Spinning also should form an important part of the duty of the workers. If they span at least one hour a day, they could supply yarn to weavers who were now looking up to the Government for such supply for their handlooms. The cloth problem would consequently be easier in this way.

_Harijan_, 2-2-1947

397. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NARAYANPUR,
January 15, 1947

At the beginning of his prayer speech at Narayanpur, Gandhiji expressed his happiness at having been able to spend another night under the roof of a Muslim friend in the course of his walking tour. In spite of the fact that he had been trying to reduce the size of his entourage, his efforts in that direction had so far not been very successful. And he was glad that his host had proved equal to the occasion and had not been baffled by the size of his party.

Then Gandhiji referred to an incident that had occurred a short while ago. The elders of the house wanted him to meet the _zanana_ ladies. He had made an attempt, but without success. It was true, he continued, that Hindu women attended the prayer in large numbers. In this respect they were more advanced. But as such it became their duty to befriend their Muslim sisters and rescue them from the thraldom of the _purdah_. If they neglected this neighbourly duty, there was obviously some defect on their part.

India, Gandhiji said, was aspiring to be free. But if half the population was to remain in a paralysed condition, the type of freedom the people would attain could

---

1 This and the following item are extracted from “Srirampur Diary”.

284 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
never be perfect. Therefore, with utmost humility, he once more appealed to the elders among the audience to examine the effect of the purdah system and do away with it in the shortest possible time. For, in his opinion, the system, as he saw in his peregrination, was quite contrary to what the Prophet had preached.

_Harijan_, 2-2-1947

398. TELEGRAM TO BAQI KHAN

_January 16, 1947_

BAQI KHAN¹
CARE TATA CRAFT
TATA GARH
CALCUTTA

YOUR WIRE. SENT WIRE TO KAFI KHAN² REPORTING FACT AND SUGGESTING THAT IF ANY OF YOU WISH TO SEE HER YOU SHOULD COME THOUGH SHE HERSELF IS PERFECTLY AT PEACE AND DOES NOT WANT ANY BROTHER TO COME.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

399. LETTER TO GLYN

_KAZIRKHIL,
RAMGANJ P.S.,
NOAKHALI DISTT.,
January 16, 1947_

MY DEAR GLYN,

Pyarelal has shown your letter to me as also your letter to him. Your statements are good and I find no inconsistency in your attitude. I have always held that one’s wife being really the better half is entitled to full consideration and equal share in all one’s undertakings. This is specially true in your case. I have no doubt that she will share your wish to the fullest extent. But in any case this is not a matter you can decide through mere exchange of letters. Therefore, your desire to go to her and discuss your projects with her was quite correct.

¹ Brother of Amtussalaam
² Vide “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 11-1-1947

I do not think I need say more at this stage. There will be time enough I expect for an exchange of letters between us and of course Pyarelal will write to you more fully.

My love to you and yours.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

400. LETTER TO S. WOLFF

KAZIRKHIL,
RAMGANJ P.S.,
NOAKHALI DISTT.,
January 16, 1947

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter which Pyarelal read to me. As you know, he and others of my co-workers are distributed in the affected villages of Noakhali. Therefore, it is not possible for me or him to overtake all the correspondence. But your letter could not be ignored. Hence, this hurried reply.

Distance lends enchantment to the scene. Let India remain the enchanted island of your imagination. I do not think that you need to come to India in order to learn yoga in practice. My own Ashram is no exception to the general statement I have made. India has its full share of bad men if she has also her share of good men. Yoga in India of which you read in books is not much in evidence today. What it was like in her palmy days, I do not know. Therefore, I cannot encourage you to come to India.

I would advise you strictly to remain where you are and perfect by practice and discipline the system you have found so attractive. The field of service is limitless and I have no doubt whatsoever that it is no less so in Palestine where terrorism appears to be the order of the day.

Yours sincerely,

S. WOLFF, ESQ.
PALESTINE

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar
401. LETTER TO R. R. DIWAKAR
KAZIRKHIL, RAMGUNI P. S., NOAKHALI DISTRICT,
January 16, 1947

MY DEAR DIWAKAR¹,

Sucheta has given me your letter to her about Tendulkar. Of course I know him so well. He needs no introduction nor recommendation. But I must not have him in Noakhali. He is too much Westernized to appreciate the fact that those who leave me in perfect peace serve me and the cause whereas those who seek to advertise this effort do positive harm. I want you to enter into the spirit of this remark and support my decision.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the original: D. G. Tendulkar Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

402. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM AND ABHA GANDHI
January 16, 1947

DEAR DAUGHTER,

I have your letter. I am writing this on Baqui’s³ telegram. I have sent him a telegram saying that, if he wants to come, there is no objection. Remain calm. I have given a short statement.⁴ I will send you a cutting when it is published.

Blessings from

BAPU

CHI. ABHA,

I shall start the silence day on Sunday at 12 noon. I shall end it there on Monday at 12.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 564

¹ Karnataka Congress leader; Member Constituent Assembly; served as Minister in Union Government 1948-52; President, Gandhi Smarak Nidhi and Gandhi Peace Foundation
² This is in Hindi.
³ Addressee’s brother
⁴ Vide “Statement to the Press”, 15-1-1947
Gandhiji said that he had received certain questions from some Muslims while he was in Narayanpur yesterday.

[The first question was:] How could he advise Assam and the Sikhs in the Punjab to stay out of Groups if his aim was Hindu-Muslim unity and how, after this, was it possible for the Muslim League to join the Constituent Assembly?

Gandhiji said there was no “if” about his aim. Hindu-Muslim unity had been his aim from his youth upward, that is, for an unbroken period of 60 years. He saw no contradiction between his aim and his advice to the people of Assam, the Sikhs and, for that matter, the Frontier and those who felt like it, to stay out of Groups or from the Constituent Assembly. The Cabinet Mission’s Paper was of a voluntary nature and no party could be compelled to join the Constituent Assembly. They had no force to back their resolution or wishes except the force of public opinion.

He had, therefore, given no advice which should make it impossible for the Muslim League to join the Constituent Assembly. So far as he had read the resolution passed at the recent A. I. C. C. meeting, the Congress had completely identified itself with the Cabinet Mission’s Paper.

Gandhiji hoped that the Muslim League would join the Constituent Assembly in which it was open to it to make good its position by an appeal to reason. Otherwise the Constituent Assembly, because it was a voluntary organization brought into being by the only party that had force behind it, was like a house of cards. It could only become a solid structure if it was backed by the opinion of the Indian masses. Staying out by certain provines or groups could not and should not be a hindrance to the proceedings of the Constituent Assembly, if it was otherwise good.

Gandhiji would ask: Why should Assam be absorbed in Bengal against its will or the Frontier Province or the Sikhs into the Punjab and Sind? The Congress or the League, as the case may be, should make their programme and policy intrinsically attractive so as to appeal to the reason of the recalcitrant Province or Group.

The second question put to him was: Gandhiji claimed to be a friend of both the communities, but he had been nursing back his own community for the last two months in Noakhali. What about the Muslims of Bihar, who have lost their all?

He would say the question ignored facts. He was not “nursing back” his own

---

1 Extracted from “Srirampur Diary”
3 Vide “A. I. C. C. Resolution”
community. He had no community of his own except in the sense that he belonged to all communities. His record spoke for itself. He freely admitted that he was trying to bring comfort to the Hindus of Noakhali, but not at the expense of the Muslims. If there was a sick member in his family and he seemed to attend to the sick member, it surely did not mean that he neglected the others.

He had had repeated an insistent advice from Muslim friends that his place was more in Bihar, where the Muslims were, in point of numbers, much greater sufferers than the Hindus in Noakhali. He was sorry that he had hitherto failed to make his Muslim critics see that he had sufficiently affected the Hindus of Bihar in favour of the Muslim sufferers. If he listened to his critics against his own better reason and went to Bihar, it was just likely that he might injure the Muslim cause rather than serve it.

Thus, for instance, he might not find corroboration for the many charges brought against the Bihar Hindus and the Bihar Government and, in order to be able to make such a declaration, he had accepted the better course, namely, to advise the Bihar Ministry, which had accepted his advice, that they should jointly with the Bengal Government or by themselves, appoint an impartial commission of inquiry.¹

[The third question was : ] Why cannot the apostle of non-violence, the modern Buddha stop internecine war and blood-bath in the country?

Gandhiji, replying to this question, acquitted himself from the charge of being the modern Buddha. He was and claimed to be a simple man having extensive experience at his back, but on that account claimed to be no better than any member of the audience. He was an equal servant of both the communities or all the communities of India. He wished he had the power to stop ‘internecine war’ and consequent ‘blood-bath’. The Buddha or the prophets that followed him had gone the way they went in order to stop wars. The fact that he could not do so was proof positive that he had no superior power at his back. It was true that he swore by non-violence and so he had come to Noakhali in order to test the power of his non-violence. As he had repeatedly said ever since his arrival in Bengal, he had no desire to leave Bengal unless both the communities showed by their action that they were like blood-brothers living together in perfect peace and amity.

Gandhiji also dealt with a question that was raised by the Muslim friends who had seen him before the prayer meeting. They had asked him how he expected friendly relations between the two communities when the Hindus agitated for the arrest and trial of those who were guilty of murders, arson and loot during the disturbances. The speaker confessed that he did not like these complaints. But he sympathized with the complainants so long as the wrongdoers avoided arrest and trial and so long as Muslim opinion in Noakhali did not insist upon the guilty parties disclosing themselves. He would be glad to see Muslim opinion working actively to bring the offenders not before the court of justice but before the court of public opinion. Let the offenders show contrition and let them return the looted property. Let them also show to those against whom offences were committed that they need fear no molestation, that the days of frenzy were over. Muslim public opinion should be such as to guarantee that miscreants would not dare to offend against any individual and only then could Hindus be asked to return safely to their villages. The speaker was sure that such purging before the court of public opinion was infinitely superior to a trial before a court of law. What was wanted was not vengeance but reformation.

¹ What follows is reproduced from Harijan, 9-2-1947.

_Harijan_, 2-2-1947 and 9-2-1947

404. LETTER TO T. PRAKASAM

_KAZIRKHIL,_
_RAMGANJ P.S.,
_NOAKHALI DISTT.,
_January 17, 1947_

DEAR PRAKASAM,

I got yesterday your air mail letter of 9th instant. This means six days and you will know for your information how far I am from the haunts of so-called civilization. I got also your telegram yesterday saying that you would be sending a special representative with documents and instructions. I shall await them.

Meanwhile, I have hurriedly read through your Advocate-General’s opinion. In the place of his signature there is a blank. The opinion is very elaborate and instructive. Will you, however, tell the Advocate-General that it would have been very helpful if he had summarised his conclusions and also if he had framed questions he has answered? Better still would have been if you had stated a case for his opinion. Then you could have sent to the Press for public information the question and his answers. The public would not be interested in the elaborate legal argument with which he has backed his conclusion.

_Yours sincerely,_

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

---

1 In the dispute with the Government of India in regard to supply of spindles to Madras, which the Madras Government decided not to use, in keeping with its policy not to promote mill production of cloth.
405. LETTER TO HAMIDUDDIN AHMED

KAZIRKHIL,
RAMGANJ P.S.,
NOAKHALI DISTT.,
January 17/19, 1947

DEAR HAMIDUDDIN SAHEB,

I thank you for your letter of 10th instant received by me only yesterday. I understand the cause of delay that took place in replying to my letter. I do not propose to enter into any controversy with you. But I propose to confine myself to removing misunderstanding that lurks in your letter.

A statement of mine about the happenings in Noakhali would have been premature, for the impressions formed have been damaging and facts that come to me even now are disturbing, if they are true as at least some of them seem to me to be. The volunteers who are working are not under my guidance or discipline. Their removal is surely the function of the Government. I can only remove those whom I have brought with me. I have already told Saheed Saheb that if for any reason whatsoever he finds the presence of anyone of them to be harmful to the country, he has but to serve a notice on them and they will go away without a murmur. I have excepted from the category only myself and a grand-daughter of mine who is with me. Of course I know nothing of the subversive activities of any of the volunteers. But if the report received by you is true and I were in your place I would certainly see to it that those responsible for such activities were summarily removed. I have no recollection of your having ever suggested to me to get rid of any volunteer. I would like you to tell me what I have said in public about the Bihar Government or the report of the Bihar Muslim League. I have been most reticent about these things. I have certainly entered into correspondence with Saheed Saheb and others. But I am not aware of having said much in public.

I am sorry that I cannot accept your advice about Bihar nor can I endorse your estimate of the situation if I were in Bihar. My firm opinion is that I could not do service to the Muslim cause by going to Bihar. Immediately I feel that I could, I assure you that I would not wait for any prompting from you or any other friend. I have been in correspondence with friends who know and they dissuade me from going to Bihar, and that for very good reasons. But I must not go into it at this stage.

1 Parliamentary Secretary, West Bengal Government

You astound me when you tell me that you found Hindus were not the least enthusiastic about peace committees. When we last parted, you left me under the impression that you at least were going to stay in the district and see through the working of the peace committees and you then appeared to be very enthusiastic about all that was happening at the formation of the peace committees.

Of course I should like you to visit this district again irrespective of whether I still “require any explanation”.

Yours sincerely,

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

406. LETTER TO PYARELAL

January 17, 1947

CHI. PYARELAL.

I am writing this with a trembling hand at 6.35. I do not have the letter before me. I have of course signed the letter to Glyn.¹ You can send away the Sikh if you wish. Everybody has gone from here yesterday. I have kept only Sardar Jivan Singhji.

I have given your letter to M. It is in his box. He will at least write a couple of lines. You must be absolutely calm. I shall follow your suggestion as far as I can.

You say you have sent the books. They have not reached me. The bearer of the letter did not give me the books. I remained in my bed till late in the afternoon. More later. A lot remains to be said.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

I have a long letter from Sushila. I want to send it to you. That too later. If she is there, tell her I cannot write right now.

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

¹Vide “Letter to Tulsiram”, 12-1-1947

292 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
407. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

January 17, 1947

DEAR DAUGHTER,

I have your letter. Now good-bye. Two Sardars are with me. I cannot write to Abha separately.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G N. 565

408. SPEECH TO WOMEN

PARKOTE,

January 17, 1947

What has happened in Noakhali is God’s curse, not only for Bengal but for the whole of India and it is high time that our outlook was changed.

Gandhiji said that Hindu women should give up the habit of differentiating between high and low and between caste and caste. They should move with all women on a basis of equality. In particular Gandhiji advised Hindu women to mix freely with their Muslim sisters. If the women of the two communities had been on terms of friendship and if Hindu women were in close touch with their Muslim sisters, much of what happened in Noakhali could have been prevented.

Gandhiji also advised women in the villages not to waste any of their spare time but to take to spinning and other subsidiary work, such as keeping their villages clean and the water in their tanks pure.

Gandhiji also said that his advice to the Hindu women applied to the men also and they should move as friends among the Muslims. By friendly contact misunderstandings were cleared and chances of quarrels were eliminated.

Amrita Bazar Patrika, 20-1-1947

409. SPEECH TO GRAM SEVA SANGH VOLUNTEERS

PARKOTE,

January 17, 1947

The sword can be met by the sword but that will lead to nothing. Remain non-violent and harbour no fear. If every one of you sheds fear, then the forty-two of you will be as strong as 4200.

After the talk Gandhiji asked the volunteers whether they were free from fear.
One of the volunteers said they felt no fear—but only when all forty-two of them were together.

That means that each of you is still possessed by fear, which means that all of you are.

Volunteers should have no fear even individually. Whatever may happen, you should never bow down your heads and succumb to fear and dishonour.

Gandhiji asked the volunteers to engage themselves in work beneficial to the village. They should mix with the Muslims as brothers and friends. He deprecated the taking up of the lathi to fight the lathi and said this would never solve the problem. He said:

You cannot defeat anyone with the help of the lathi, but only with love.

When the volunteers asked Mahatma Gandhi to give them his blessings, Gandhiji said:

You have my blessings, but only if you follow my advice.

Amrita Bazar Patrika, 20-1-1947

---

410. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

PARKOTE,

January 17, 1947

At Parkote, on the morning of the 17th, Gandhiji had read a speech delivered by the Qaid-e-Azam on the occasion of the foundation ceremony of a Girls’ High School by his sister, Miss Fatima Jinnah. During the after-prayer speech in the evening, he translated a portion of that speech in which Mr. Jinnah was reported to have said that Muslims should develop a high sense of responsibility, justice and integrity. Wrong was not to be imitated. If after consulting one’s conscience one felt that a contemplated action was wrong, one should never do it irrespective of any consideration or influence. If people acted up to this rule, no one would be able to prevent them from attaining Pakistan.

Commenting upon this, Gandhiji said that as there was no question of force here and if Pakistan was going to be established by sterling qualities of character, everybody would welcome such a State, no matter by what name it was called.

No one could agree, he said, that loot, arson or forcible conversion,

---

1 Extracted from “Srirampur Diary”

2 The following three paragraphs are reproduced from Amrita Bazar Patrika.
no matter where committed, could ever be supported by the awakened conscience of man.

Gandhiji referred to the fact that the celebration was in connection with a girls' school and recalled that Mr. Jinnah had advised the Education Minister in Sind to launch a determined drive against illiteracy. In this lay the secret of future peace and unity. Literary education by itself did not carry one far for there never had been any dearth of literary men. What was needed was education for life. Men and women, he continued, were two limbs of the social body and if one limb was atrophied then the whole body would suffer in consequence. It was, therefore, very unfortunate that our sisters should be left in darkness and ignorance.

Hindu women joined the prayer in large numbers. Why should not Muslim girls, if not women, find it possible to join the prayer? The obvious duty of the Hindu sisters, Gandhiji continued, was to go to their Muslim sisters purely in a spirit of service.

Gandhiji added that they ought to remember Qaid-e-Azam Jinnah's advice and act up to it; for it was advice not confined to any particular community; it was of universal significance. The qualities which he had advised people to develop were not combative but a sense of justice and truth; and this implied that whenever justice was at stake, people ought to appeal to reason instead of taking recourse to barbarous methods of settling disputes whether private or public.

_Harijan_, 9-2-1947; and _Amrita Bazar Patrika_, 20-1-1947

411. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

KAZIRKHIL, RAMGUNJ P.S.,
NOAKHALI DISTRICT,
January 18, 1947

CHI. AMRIT,

I had your letter. I indulge in the luxury of dictating it as our friend Rangaswamy has volunteered to do all shorthand work that may be necessary, Parasuram having gone, let us hope only for the time being. Of course if he retains his strong opposition to some of the things I stand for, naturally I do not expect him to return. He is such a good man that I have left it open for him to return if ever his mind is clear and he wishes to come back.

Whatever opportunity for service that may be offered to you and which you feel you should undertake, you will always have my

1Vide “Letter to Parasuram”, 2-1-1947
approval. You know my own reaction to the visits to the West. At the same time I do not altogether discount the service of those who feel that they have a mission abroad. Of course the condition is that you keep well and do not work yourself to death. I do hope that Sardar will take care of his health.

I enclose herewith a letter from Madeleine Rolland\(^1\) received by Pyarelal. It has reference to you also. In any case you would like to see the letter. You can return it to Pyarelal after you have read it.

_Blessings from_

_BAPU\(^2\)_

From the original: C. W. 4189. Courtesy Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 7825

---

412. FRAGMENT OF LETTER TO ALI HUSSAIN

_January 18, 1947_

Are you not my old tireless correspondent to whom I could carry no conviction? You have started with an emphatic statement of opinion without caring to inquire how I am passing my time and telling me on what grounds you have come to a conclusion. You have condemned me guilty without even hearing me, the accused. You have also laid down the law that Bihar needs my presence more urgently than Noakhali. Since I am in a position to know more fully than any other person whether I am wasting my time in Noakhali or not, it is fair for me to assume that your conclusion about Bihar is as erroneous as about Noakhali.\(^4\)

The second paragraph of your letter is as disappointing as the first. You could have no knowledge whatsoever of the information that (the Bihar deputation)... could have given me and yet you pronounce judgment and say that (they)... gave me “all wrong information” and that Mr. Houlton was party to it... So far as I am aware, an impartial commission of inquiry is to be held and if it is, I think it is up to you and me to suspend our judgment.

---

\(^1\) Sister of Romain Rolland

\(^2\) The subscription is in Hindi.

\(^3\) A barrister of Patna

\(^4\) Pyarelal explains that “Gandhiji got the Bihar Government to send him a detailed reply... dealing with all the points raised in the [addressee’s] letter” and gave “his considered verdict after a painstaking scrutiny of all the evidence that had been brought to him in Noakhali.”

Relief Commissioner, Bihar

---

296  THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
I am firmly of opinion that whilst the Bihar Ministry may not be accomplices in the crime committed by the Bihar Hindus, to their shame and disgrace, as responsible Ministers they could not be acquitted of responsibility for the behaviour of crowds within their jurisdiction.

413. LETTER TO KRISHNA VALLABH SAHAY

KAZIRKHIL,
RAMGANJ P.S.,
NOAKHALI DISTT.,
January 18, 1947

DEAR KRISHNA VALLABH BABU,

I enclose herewith a copy of Barrister Ali Hussain’s letter and my reply.¹ What about the newspaper report of your opinion? For ready reference I send you also the cutting sent by the Barrister. Please favour me with a reply.

What about the promises you made to me when we met? The enclosure is by no means the first of its kind. But the other things I did not consider it important enough to worry you about.

_Blessings from_

BAPU²

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

414. LETTER TO PYARELAL

January 18, 1947

CHI. PYARELAL,

You sent a whole pile yesterday. Do not do it. Leave everything to God. Let us do our duty and then leave everything to God. Your letters indicate something else. I do not think it is correct. Manu is agitated. She is trying very hard. She works the whole day. How will she manage everything? Leave her also to God’s mercy. Her legs are better. Whatever treatment was given was given only by me. I am taking care of her food, etc. You continue giving her lessons. Let me

¹ In his letter Ali Hussain had criticized the Bihar Government and ministers for their mishandling of riots and their leniency towards rioters.
² In Devanagari
know if you have any particular suggestion regarding her diet.

You persist in your attitude that secrecy should be maintained.

This is a great obstacle. This restriction is not right. I know it.

Inabiding by it even my diary becomes soiled, and I have the feeling that I should discontinue writing it. I am sending today Sushila’s long communication. That will give you some idea. As for me, I have fully abided by her wish despite my disinclination. But do not be impatient to know about it. You will know it when she tells you.

_Blessings from_

_BAPU_

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

415. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

_January 18, 1947_

DEAR DAUGHTER,

Today there is no letter from you. Sushila has given all the news. Amtul¹ has sent a wire from Lucknow. I will send a wire in reply. I hope to meet you on Monday by 8.30.

_Blessings from_

_BAPU_

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 566

416. TALK WITH JOURNALISTS

_January 18, 1947_

Even if my mission here should fail, it will not be the failure of ahimsa itself. It will be the failure of my ahimsa.

What he was testing here was his own ahimsa, Gandhiji added.

_Amrita Bazar Patrika, 20-1-1947_

¹ Addressee’s niece
417. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

BADALKOT,

January 18, 1947

Gandhiji’s answer was that he did not maintain illusion and never ascribed to himself any superior powers. He had met Mr. Jinnah many times, as they knew, and their meetings had been marked by nothing but friendliness. Yet the results were negative as they all knew.

The fact was, continued Gandhiji, that a leader was made by his followers. He reflected in a clearer manner the aspirations lying dormant among the masses. This was true not only of India but of all the world. What he would therefore suggest to both Hindus and Mussalmans was that they should not look to the Muslim League or the Congress or the Hindu Mahasabha for the solution of their daily problems of life. For that they should look towards themselves; and if they did that then their desire for neighbourly peace would be reflected by the leaders. The political institutions might be left to deal with specifically political questions but how much did they know about the daily needs of individuals? If a neighbour was ailing, would they run to the Congress or the League to ask them what should be done? That was an unthinkable proposition.

On the previous evening Gandhiji had quoted Mr. Jinnah’s advice that women should rapidly be rescued from illiteracy. But Gandhiji said that that was not enough. Was the condition of the literate men any better for their literacy? Were they not, he asked, subject to the passing fashions of the political world? Germany, which had lain so long under Hitler, proved what he meant; as all knew it was in a sorry plight today. It was not literacy or learning which made a man, but education for real life. What did it matter if they knew everything but did not know how to live as brothers with their neighbours?

Gandhiji continued that if some people had committed grievous mistakes in their dealings with their neighbours, they should repent and ask God to forgive them. If He forgave them but the world did not, even then it did not matter to a man who had learnt to depend on God; such punishment nobly borne served to elevate a man. Gandhiji then said that in a book of sayings of the Prophet he had found that a man should never leave an error uncorrected. If he did, he would be hauled up on the Day of judgment and find no favour in the eyes of God.

1 Extracted from “Srirampur Diary”. The report explains: “A short while before prayer the Muslim friend at whose house Gandhiji had halted on his way to Badalkot, approached him and said that if there was a settlement between Mr. Jinnah and him, peace would be established in the country.”
It was not enough that they acquired the art of reading, writing, etc. It was necessary that they should learn the art of living on friendly terms with their neighbours. They should rescue the womenfolk, who formed half their numbers, from the thraldom of ignorance and superstition. Men should live in co-operation and work for the common good. For this, they should not look up to political parties for direction, but to their own souls or God.

Personally, Gandhiji said, he had addressed himself wholly to that task. He would not leave this part of the country alive if the work remained unaccomplished. If he succeeded in overcoming the distrust of his Muslim brethren, and in establishing the fact that, after all, it was the daily things of life such as he had mentioned which mattered most, then its effect would be felt not merely in this part of the country but over the whole of India; and as such might even deeply affect the future peace of the world.

Harijan, 2-2-1947

418. NOTE TO R. R. DIWAKAR

January 19, 1947

I am becoming more and more convinced that the four-anna membership should go. The membership of the Congress should be forty crores, the whole of the population, no matter to what sect, religion or Province or State or the so-called independent possessions a particular individual belongs. The members have an equal right with all to service by the Congress Organization. These forty crore member will exercise no privilege by reason of their recognition as such by the Congress.

The organization will be worked by those who have been habitual wearers of khaddar one year before the date of commencement, who have renounced untouchability in all its forms and who are not dealers in foreign cloth or intoxicants, who have full belief in the constructive programme of the Congress and who are prepared and willing to do work referred to in schedule A hereto and who have passed a probation period of six months in doing that work.

All committees and sub-committees shall be formed from the workers above named.

The schedule to be prepared by you.

From a photostat: G. N. 6211

1 This was an enclosure to a letter to the addressee, vide the following item.
419. LETTER TO R. R. DIWAKAR
KAZIRKHIL, RAMGUNJ P. S., NOAKHALI DT.,
January 19, 1947

MY DEAR DIWAKAR,

I have hurriedly glanced through the note left with me by the President¹, of principles discussed and decided upon by the Congress Constitution Committee. There are other clauses which I do not want to touch. I have dealt with the foundation. No one is bound to attach the slightest importance to what I have said in the enclosed note unless it makes a forcible appeal to his head and heart.

Blessings from
BAPU²

From a photostat: G. N. 6211

420. LETTER TO PYARELAL

CHI. PYARELAL,

January 19, 1947

There is no time at all to write to you at length. I am now finding the burden of work too heavy. I am hoping to lighten it. I have interpreted the word ‘secret’ just like you have done. I am pondering over what my duty is. Kanu may do anything. If Manu is right and you are right, Kanu too will understand. Manu’s intrepidity deserves to be encouraged. If you must fast whatever the circumstances, let it be on Saturday. You should give it up after full understanding. Keep giving lessons to Manu. Good lies in surrendering wholly to God.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

¹ J. B. Kripalani, Congress President, who along with Jawaharlal Nehru, met Gandhiji in the last week of December
² The subscription is in Hindi.
421. NOTE TO MANU GANDHI

January 19, 1947

If a hot bath agrees with you, why don’t you take it? Unless, of course you don’t like it. I shall be happy if I know whether you will accompany me on the walk in the morning or in the evening or at both times.

I intend to write to Jaisukhlal. He expects me to do something about you. But I don’t know how I can help if you are scared all the time.

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./XXIII

422. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

January 19, 1947

DEAR DAUGHTER,

I am glad to get even two lines from you.

Amtul’s address is not legible. Give it to me tomorrow.

I wanted to reach there tonight. But it has not been possible. I had to go to two places and there were other difficulties also. By the grace of God we shall meet tomorrow.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 567

423. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

ATAKHORA, January 19, 1947

Whatever I have been trying to say in these days, is contained in the sayings of the Prophet. The following passages are therefore culled for your benefit:

No man is a true believer unless he desireth for his brother that which he desireth for himself.

He who neither worketh for himself nor for others will not receive the reward of God.

1 Extracted from “Srirampur Diary”. Since Gandhiji had started his silence on Sunday, the speech was read out.
He is not of me, but a rebel at heart who when he speaketh, speaketh falsely, who when he promiseth, breaketh his promises and who when trust is reposed in him, faileth in his trust.

Muslims are those who perform their trust and fail not in their word and keep their pledge.

Whoever is kind to His creatures, God is kind to him.

A perfect Muslim is he from whose tongue and hands mankind is safe.

The worst of men is a bad learned man and a good learned man is the best.

When a man commiteth adultery iman leaveth him.

He is not a Momin who commiteth adultery or stealeth, or who drinketh liquor or who plundereth or who embezzleth; beware, beware.

The most excellent jehad is that for the conquest of self.

Assist any person oppressed, whether Muslim or non-Muslim.

The manner in which my followers become eunuchs is by fasting and abstinence.

Women are the twin halves of men.

Learned are those who practise what they know.

The most valuable thing in the world is a virtuous woman.

Give your wife good counsel; if she has goodness in her she will soon take it; leave off idle thinking and do not beat your noble wife like a slave.1

Gandhi said that certain Muslims had asked him: ‘Who is this Muslim woman Amtussalaam who is fasting at Sirandi?’ Gandhi said Amtussalaam had been with him for a long time. She was a true Muslim. She always had Koran-e-Sharif with her and she was never without it. She also read the Gita. After giving her noble family connections, Gandhi said:

But this pious and noble lady is now on the road to death for the cause of Hindu-Muslim unity.

He wished Amtussalaam to be successful in such a great cause.

Harijan, 9-2-1947; and Amrita Bazar Patrika, 22-1-1947

---

1 What follows is reproduced from Amrita Bazar Patrika.
424. DRAFT PLEDGE FOR MUSLIMS

January 20, 1947

With God as witness, we solemnly declare that we bear no antagonism towards the Hindus or members of any other community. To each one, to whatever faith he might belong, his religion is as dear as Islam is to us. There can, therefore, be no question of interference by anybody in the observance of the religious practices of others. We understand that Bibi Amtussalaam’s object is the establishment of Hindu-Muslim unity. The object is gained by the signing of this pledge. We wish, therefore, that she should give up her fast. We realize that if we are found to have acted with any mental reservations in this matter we shall have to face a fast on Gandhiji’s part. Our endeavour for the recovery of the remaining sword shall continue.

425. STATEMENT TO THE PRESS

A correspondent writes to me to say that the strained relations between the Hindus and the Muslims bid fair, if timely warning is not taken, to replace Nagari and Urdu scripts with Roman. There are undoubtedly protagonists of the Roman as the universal script. It seems to me that it would be a great human tragedy if such a result comes about. Time-saving devices are good up to a certain point. But they take the form of a mania when they destroy human relations and desirable restraints. I must not tarry to examine what they are. Suffice it to say that lovers of the Nagari script, which is scientifically almost perfect, and the Urdu script, which is so graceful, will not be carried away by the lazy craze for the Roman script. Would that both the communities will be sane enough to realize that the mutual dislike is not allowed to replace the two Indian scripts. But if that happy consummation does not take place, let those few or many who have regard for sacred human understanding assiduously learn both the scripts and thus enrich the Indian national language, Hindustani, as the 1 According to Pyarelal, a large gathering of local Muslims had met Gandhiji at Sirandi on the day of his arrival and told him that they had tried their utmost to recover the sword but had failed. They had asked what assurance on their part would satisfy Amtussalaam and induce her to give up her fast. Gandhiji drafted this pledge for them to sign.

2 Amtussalaam broke her fast at 9.30 p. m. after the “pledge” was explained to her by Gandhiji.
easy fusion of Hindi and Urdu. Let the Provincial Governments beware of the lure of the Roman script. Let it not be said of India that it is so degraded as to become the blotting sheet of civilization.

KETHURI (NOAKHALI), January [21],¹ 1947

Harijan, 2-2-1947

426. LETTER TO CHIMANLAL N. SHAH

KETHURI,

January 21, 1947

CHI. CHIMANLAL,

I have your letter. I understand about Madhu. I am happy that she has got her freedom, and also that she is staying in the Ashram without fear. I have always believed that we can take much work from the girl. Dhiren wants to live in the Ashram and do khadi work there. Read the postcard I have written to him. If you see any difficulty in his staying in the Ashram in the manner suggested, don’t hesitate to say so. I should, however, be pleased if you could admit him. If he keeps good health there, I am sure he will work very hard. I understand your reason for sending money to Anna². He will continue to be a cause of worry to you. Neither Jajuji nor you need worry about me. I have stopped getting up at 3. I take all possible care of my health. Walking daily is of course tiring. But if I can preserve my health or if it remains unimpaired on its own, I think I shall survive. But all that is in God’s hands. He will solve all difficulties if He wants to take service from me and wants my efforts to succeed. If Dev arrives, I shall see.

Amtul Salaam broke her fast yesterday. We spent the whole day in talks with Muslims. On the face of it the result is good. Everything is reduced to writing.³ You will read it in the papers. She displayed great fortitude and courage.

Send Bapa a cheque for Rs. 25,000 for the Adivasis. One cheque for the same amount has already been sent. It was decided to send Rs. 50,000. I do not know what amount was earmarked for this purpose. However, whatever is received in future will be credited to that account. But whether or not we receive any money, the above sum ¹ Gandhiji was in Kethuri on this date. The source has “24”, a misprint.

² Harihar Sharma
³ Vide “Draft Pledge for Muslims”, 20-1-1947 is to be paid to him from the money that stands in my name. Please, therefore, send it.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10657

427. LETTER TO PYARELAL

January 21, 1947

CHI. PYARELAL,

I have your letter. It is all right that you played a trick with God and sent it just at the time of breaking the fast. I do understand why . . . 1 is taken away. It is certainly not with me.

I assure you it will be no hardship for me to send the blanket. I am sending it along. Manu will manage about the milk powder. The diary is going with this letter. You can return it at your convenience. Why should I be in a hurry?

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

428. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING2

KETHURI,

January 21, 1947

Gandhiji explained the reasons which actuated the twenty-five days’ fast of Bibi Amtussalaam and the reasons which brought it to an end. The fast was broken at 9.30 last evening after the recital of the Al Fateha in a powerful and melodious voice by a Muslim gentleman who happened to be at the meeting. Many Muslim friends including Abdulla Saheb and his lieutenant exerted themselves during the day to find out how the fast could be ended while Gandhiji was present in Sirandi. It was common cause that the khadag for which the fast was said to have been undertaken could not, in spite of strenuous and honest efforts by many persons, be traced. And if Amtussalaambaehn persisted in wanting the production of the khadag, she must die. But Gandhiji had explained to her that that could not be the real object of the fast; it must be a symbol of something behind it. Gandhiji then said that the lady’s whole

---

1 One word here is illegible.
2 Extracted from “Srirampur Diary”
life was devoted to a heart unity between the Hindus and the Muslims. Therefore if there was a real prospect of such unity at least within the area where she was working, there was every prospect of the fast being ended.¹

After full and complete deliberation, a document was signed laying down the principle that to each one his religion was equally dear with any other person’s and that therefore different religions were to be mutually respected. To this end the signatories to the agreement have pledged themselves. Naturally, any wilful breach of the promise would implicate me in a fast. On the document being interpreted to Amtul Salaambehn, the lady broke the fast as said before.

Gandhiji assured the signatories that he would help to the best of his ability in the matter of preserving the just rights of each community even as he expected them actively to implement their promise.

Gandhiji also expressed his desire that any development of any kind within the area mentioned in the document must be brought to his notice and convinced them that he would actively assist in the settlement of all disputes. Gandhiji told the Hindus and Muslims of his dislike of matters being rushed to police and law courts. Any surrender of its legitimate rights by the majority community or even the minority community for the sake of reaching an agreement, Gandhiji warned, would not lead to a lasting peace.

Harijan, 9-2-1947; and The Hindu, 23-1-1947

429. FRAGMENT OF LETTER TO HARILAL GANDHI
January 22, 1947

How delighted I shall be to find that you have turned over a new leaf! Just think of the affection I have lavished upon you! Mine is an arduous pilgrimage. I invite you to join in it if you can. . . . If you purify yourself, no matter where you are, you will have fully shared it. Take it on the authority of the Bhagavata that you will then also cease to look prematurely old as at present.

¹ What follows is reproduced from The Hindu.
430. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

AT A MEETING,
January 22, 1947

DEAR DAUGHTER,

I have your letter. Do not be in a hurry. Everything will be all right if you go slow. If you like goat’s milk, then certainly keep a goat. It is my wish and hope that by whatever means you will get well in all respects.

The cough must be cured.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 568

431. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

January 22, 1947

DEAR DAUGHTER,

Though your fast has ended, still I want you to keep writing to me. We shall see after you start moving about. I hope you are all right.

I was expecting Sushila to come in the morning today, but in my heart I was praying that she would not turn up too early. I do not think she stayed behind because of you.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 569

432. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

January 22, 1947

DEAR DAUGHTER,

I have your letter. I understand about Sushilabehn. The copy1 which you want is enclosed herewith.

Amritlalji wants to call Abha back after she is relieved of attendance on you. She may remain as long as she is with you.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 570

1 Of the pledge signed by the Muslims; vide “Draft Pledge for Muslims”, 20-1-1947
433. LETTER TO SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA

January 22, 1947

CHI. SATIS BABU,

I did not like the attack on the Press reporters in the Shanti Patrika. I have not read it, but I have read their rejoinder. They have sent a copy to me. If there has been a mistake it is your duty to issue a clarification.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 8723

434. LETTER TO SYED MAHMUD

KETHURI,

January 22, 1947

BHAI MAHMUD,

Give me a clear picture of Bihar. I want from you detailed information. Is everything being done for the Muslims who have been ruined? Are those who were spared quite satisfied? Give me all the details.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 5108

435. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING\(^1\)

PANIALA,

January 22, 1947

Gandhiji was happy that at last he had been able to visit the village of Paniala.\(^2\) But that was not enough; he would feel happier still if the Hindus and the Mussalmans succeeded in establishing unity and friendship between themselves.

Amtussalaam had undertaken her fast, as they all knew, with the same object. And the assurance that the villagers in her neighbourhood had given to her should go a long way in healing the wound which tore the face of Bengal.

\(^1\) Extracted from “Srirampur Diary”. The report explains that the “gathering was . . . of the largest size so far encountered”.

\(^2\) Gandhiji had desired to visit Paniala in December; vide “Message to the People of Paniala Union”, 22-12-1946
One problem, continued Gandhiji, which had been recently exercising him was in connection with the families of those who had lost their all in the course of the disturbances. There were many families which had lost their earning members. The survivors had to be looked after, while the children had to be educated and given adequate protection. That undoubtedly was the duty of the Government. Both he and they if they wanted heart peace should look at the question from a broader standpoint. In his humble opinion, where the wrong was done by some Muslims, reasonable arrangements for the above purpose should be made by the Muslims of the neighbourhood.

Government would only act through force while the common citizen would act through persuasion and agreement. Through the establishment of good human relations, citizens should try to tide over the disasters which might overwhelm the social body. It was not good to depend on an organization based on force like the State for the above purpose.

Gandhiji then referred to two more matters, namely, the duty of volunteers and the rehabilitation of artisans. With regard to the volunteers his advice was that they should never discriminate between one type of duty and another, have no preferences, but should stick to their post even at the cost of their lives. It was the quality of discipline and sacrifice which made small things great in organized action. Then, referring to the problem of the artisans, he continued, they ought not to depend upon charity however well-intended but on their own resources in order to tide over their present difficulties. In this connection he referred to his view supported by the scriptures of the world that he who ate his food without returning its equivalent by means of body labour was no better than a thief. Permanent peace would come in the world only when the bond of labour shared in common held together different units of the social body.¹

The first question was: “You said that Muslim majority provinces if they so chose had Pakistan already. What did you mean by this?”

Gandhiji replied that he fully meant what he had said. Whilst there was an outside power ruling India there was neither Pakistan nor Hindustan, but bare slavery was their lot. And if anybody maintained that the measure of provincial autonomy they enjoyed was equal to independence, they were unaware of the contents of Independence. It was true that the British power was certain to go. But if they could not patch up their quarrels and indulged in blood-baths, a combination of powers was certain to hold them in bondage. Those powers would not tolerate a country so vast and populous as India and so rich in potential resources to rot away because of internal disturbances. Every country had to live for the rest. Days when they could drag on the frog-in-the-well existence were gone. Even before the Congress had taken up non-violent non-co-operation as the official policy for the whole of India, that is, before 1920, a resolution to that effect was passed in Gujarat under the chairmanship of the late Abbas Tyabji Saheb. The speaker had said that it was open even to one province to vindicate its position and become wholly independent of the British power. Thus supposing that following the prescription, Bengal alone became truly and completely independent, there would be complete Pakistan of his definition in Bengal. Islam was nothing if it did not spell complete democracy. Therefore, there would be one man one vote and one woman one vote irrespective of religion. Naturally, therefore, there would be a true Muslim majority in the Province. Had not Jinnah Saheb declared that in Pakistan minorities would, if possible, be even better off than the majority; therefore, there would be no underdog?

¹ Gandhiji then answered questions by Muslim Leaguers.

Gandhiji reiterated that if such a State was established by sheer merit and so long as the qualities of truth and justice were emphasized, as had been done by him (Gandhiji), nobody would raise any objection, call it Pakistan or by any other name. If the Muslims felt that in their contemplated Pakistan, Muslims alone would be allowed to remain, Gandhiji thought he must say that it was something un-Islamic. Islam, he said, was based on the fundamental principle of democracy and toleration of other faiths. If any individual, be he Hindu or Muslim or Christian, disobeyed the fundamental basis of others’ religion, it was he who fell, and not the religion. If Pakistan meant anything more, the speaker did not know; and if it did, so far as he knew, it would make no appeal to his reason.

The second question was: “How did your ahimsa work in Bihar?”

Gandhiji said that it did not work at all. It failed miserably. But, if the reports received by him from responsible quarters were to be relied upon, the Bihar Government was making full amends and the general population in Bihar also had realized the heinousness of the crimes committed by large masses of Biharis in certain portions of that Province.

One of the Bihar Ministers came to Noakhali with the promise from the Bihar Government that they would spare no pains for rehabilitating the people. Gandhiji said he was receiving letters and resolutions passed by the Muslim League and he was conversant with the case referred to by them. He sent every case for immediate attention and thorough investigation by the Bihar Government. To the Bihar Government Gandhiji had suggested the setting up of an impartial tribunal to enquire into the happenings and the Bihar Government had promised to abide by its findings in toto.

The third question was: “Why are you silent about the eviction of Bengalis by

1 The following paragraph is reproduced from The Hindu.
2 This paragraph is reproduced from The Hindu.
Gandhiji said that he was not deliberately silent. The question was not new for him. Gandhiji said that he had it in his programme during his last visit to Assam. So far as his information went, Assam Government’s objection was to those who had settled in different parts of that Province without permission of the Assam Government.

When some years ago he went to Assam he was taken to the very spot where Muslims from Mymensingh had migrated and taken possession of vacant lands. He had then given his opinion and held it even now that it was not open to persons to usurp vacant land wherever it may be, that is, whether in their own Province or in another. For him it was not a Hindu-Muslim question. What he had said was of universal application. If Assam attempted to evict lawful possessors, it would be guilty of crime against humanity. What he had heard was quite the contrary. But if there was a question of unlawful eviction, the Assam Government would not be above law and it was open also to the Bengal Government to vindicate the position of evicted Bengalis, here happening to be Muslims.

Gandhiji said that if the friends here had another tale to narrate he was ready to hear it. Most he could do was to advise the Assam Ministry to set up an impartial commission of inquiry as in Bihar and refer the whole subject to it. As a matter of fact the present Ministry of Assam was pursuing a policy chalked out by the Ministry previously in office.

The next question was: “What in your opinion is the cause of communal riots?”

Gandhiji said that in his opinion the riots were due to the idiocy of both the communities.

No one party could create a riot, he said, if the other party remained non-violent and honest. Referring to the recent outbreaks in Bombay and other places, Gandhiji said he had seen how an “eye-for-an-eye and a tooth-for-a-tooth” policy had been pursued to its bitter end in these places. One day one Muslim was stabbed and the following day a Hindu was found stabbed and vice versa. What else could it be called, Gandhiji asked. It was the same outlook that lay at the root of all communal riots. Gandhiji asked:

We are children of the same soil and have the same origin and if any of my brothers provoked me to commit some evil act, why shall I submit to him? If anybody tried to force a change of religion or if

---

1. The rest of the paragraph is reproduced from Hindustan Standard.
2. This paragraph is reproduced from Hindustan Standard.
3. The following three paragraphs are reproduced from The Hindu.
anyone tried to molest a woman, why should he or she submit before this brute force?

He added it was incumbent upon anyone to court death non-violently in resisting such force. How long would an oppressor continue in acts of violence if he found non-violent people who were determined to face death instead of surrendering? Retaliation, according to Gandhiji, was not the remedy and it was non-violence alone which could counteract wrong and put an end to the madness that was inherent in communal riots.

The fifth question was: “Do you think that you would be successful in bringing peace to Noakhali without having it at the Centre?”

Gandhiji replied that if by the Centre was meant a pact between Jinnah Saheb, President of the Muslim League and Acharya Kripalani, President of the Indian National Congress, he certainly held that such a pact was not necessary in order to bring about harmonious relations between the Hindus and the Muslims in Noakhali. So far as he knew neither the President of the Congress nor the President of the Muslim League desired discord between the two. They had their political quarrel. But the disturbances in India whether in Bengal, Bihar or elsewhere were insensate and hindered political progress. He, therefore, felt that it was open to the Hindus and the Muslims in Noakhali to behave like men and cultivate peaceful relations among themselves.

The last question was: “Who according to your opinion have saved the Hindus and Hindu property in Noakhali? Do you not think that Muslim neighbours saved them?”

Gandhiji replied that the question assumed a subtle pride. What was wanted was a spirit of humility and repentance that there were enough Muslims found in Noakhali who had lost their heads to the extent of committing loot, arson and murder and resorting to forcible conversions, etc. If more mischief was not done, God alone was to be thanked, not man. At the same time the speaker was free to confess that be it said to their honour, there were Muslims who afforded protection to Hindus.

436. LETTER TO PYARELAL

January 23, 1947

CHI. PYARELAL,

I have your letter.

No new man is needed. Ramachandran suddenly arrived and I did not think it proper to turn him away. Parasram insisted. He stayed on. Now he has gone but it means no loss. Manu is getting the help she needs. She has to learn to solve problems. A new person will be an obstacle in her education. Besides, so far as possible we must engage only a Bengali. It is only proper. Now if this new man turns out well, train him. Do not send anybody to me.

It has to be considered whether or not Jivanji will have Parasram. It does not quite suit me. If his place is not with me, then he is certainly free. This is a point to be understood. If you have not understood it, there is no time at present to explain.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

437. LETTER TO SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA
Thursday, January 23, 1947

CHI. SATIS BABU,

Bhopal Babu has been taken away from Pyarelal. Has no one been appointed in his place who is conversant with the work?

The work here is obviously enormous. To manage all these things is a big job. You must go about the work taking care of your health.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 8721

438. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING
DALTA,
January 23, 1947

Gandhiji announced that the Chowdharis of the village had decided to give him the plot of ground on which the meeting was being held. He congratulated the Chowdharis on their generous action. The gift to him carried no meaning beyond that it was presented for public use irrespective of caste or party. Naturally there would be a proper document setting out the grant. He hoped that the donors would carry out the full purpose of the gift. The further cause for congratulation was that he was accommodated in the house of Rai Mohan Mali. He did not consider himself to belong to any caste. He belonged to the lowest rung of the Hindu ladder. In reality there was no ladder; no high, no low. All were equal in the eyes of God as of law. It was a happy conjunction of events that it happened to be Netaji’s birthday. What could be happier than that the Chowdharis should make their gift on this day and that a Scheduled Class friend, Rai Mohan Mali, should provide him habitation? In the speaker’s opinion the great and most lasting act of Netaji was that he abolished all distinctions of caste and class. He was not a mere Hindu, nor a mere Bengali; he never thought of himself as a caste Hindu. He was Indian first and last. What was more, he fired all under him with the same zeal so that they forgot in his presence all distinctions and acted as one man.

1 Extracted from “Srirampur Diary”

No doubt there was much else to be credited to Netaji. Thus he had sacrificed a brilliant career for the sake of the country’s service and enlisted himself under the late Deshbandhu Chittaranjan Das. He suffered various imprisonments, twice became President of the Congress and at last by great strategy gave the slip to the guard put over him by the then Government of Bengal and by sheer courage and resourcefulness reached Kabul and passed through European countries and finally found himself in Japan, collected from scattered material an army of brilliant young men drawn from all communities and from all parts of India and dared to give battle to a mighty Government. A lesser man would have succumbed under the trials that Netaji went through; but he in his life verified the saying of Tulsidas that “all becomes right for the brave”.

Gandhiji ended by saying that the Hindus should progress by forgetting all distinctions of caste and both the communities should develop unity of heart. He was reminded of a saying of the Prophet in which it was said that a man would be judged on the Day of Judgment not by what he professed by his lips, nor by whom he followed, but by what he had himself done to implement the teachings received by him.

_Harijan, 9-2-1947_

439. LETTER TO J. C. KUMARAPPA

KAZIRKHIL, RAMGUNJ P. S.,
NOAKHALI DISTRICT,
January 24, 1947

MY DEAR KUMARAPPA,

Whilst preparations are being made to massage me, I want to devote a few minutes to letters about things with which I am intimately connected. Yesterday I wrote to Aryanayakam. Today it is your turn.

How is the village work flourishing? Are all kindred activities correlated with one another? Or is there still the jarring note? The work I am doing here is the most difficult of all I have hitherto undertaken and I know that those who are working for the country take an effective part in the work here if they do their best in their respective spheres. The village work that has been your lot can contribute probably the most to the fruition of what is being done here. At the same time I know that it is the most uphill work, as I find walking from village to village and putting before them sanitation, the spinning-wheel, weaving and the craft peculiar to the particular village. They listen, nod, assent but beyond that they will not go. Add to this the local differences and troubles.

What is Bharatan¹ doing? Who has taken his place? Are you overworked? What about your blood pressure?

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G. N. 10186

440. LETTER TO MAHOMED TAYABULLA²

KAZIRKHIL,
RAMGANJ P.S.,
NOAKHALI DISTT.,
January 24, 1947

CHI. TAYABULLA³.

I have your recent letter. I cannot understand this panic on the part of the Assamese. It is panic which always unhinges man, much more so when it seizes a large number of people. The resolution passed by the A.I.C.C.⁴, if it is correctly reported in the papers, gives enough if not clear guidance to Assam for it will not compel Assam to act against the declared wish of the people through the Legislative Assembly. Second, naturally Assam has to watch the future developments and act as occasion requires. It would be unwise to take any precipitate action. Whatever action is taken must always be taken so as not to impair the autonomous character of the constitution of Assam. There need be no confusion in anybody’s mind.

You will please write to me further if what I have written is not quite clear to you.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

¹ Addressee’s brother
² This was in reply to the addressee’s letter apprising Gandhiji of Assam’s dissatisfaction at the A.I.C.C. resolution and seeking guidance from him.
³ President of the Assam Provincial Congress Committee
⁴ “Vide Appendix A.I.C.C. Resolution”.
441. LETTER TO PREMA KANTAK

DALTA,
January 24, 1947

CHI. PREMA,

I have preserved your postcard. I am writing this while on my way to another village. Sushila distributed the tilguls exactly on the Sankranti Day\(^1\) for all to eat. I also accepted my share. Shankarrao gave the dhoti, too. I put on that also. I shall now meet you when you can find the time to come. But let me say this. Save yourself the trouble. Save that much money and go on doing your duty. That will amount to participation in this yajna. You will not receive here what you get from staying there. But do as you please.

I hope you are calm.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10451. Also C. W. 6890. Courtesy: Prema Kantak

442. LETTER TO SHARDA G. CHOKHAWALA

MURIYAM,
January 24, 1947

CHI. BABUDI,

I am dictating this while spinning. There is no other way. It is no easy matter to change one’s house every day. I am convinced that your good lies in respecting Gordhandas’s wishes. You must, therefore, stay in Surat till he desires otherwise. From one point of view his plea that you should depend entirely on what he can provide for you, is just. But from another point of view it is not just. Whatever arrangement I make is bound to be within limits of propriety and reason. You need, therefore, feel no hesitation in accepting it. However, I have no doubt at all that in this matter too, you should respect Gordhandas’s wishes. That is the only way for both of you to rise. I hope Anand is well. Persuade him to write to me sometimes.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a Gujarati original: C. W. 10076. Courtesy: Sharda G. Chokhawala

\(^1\) January 14, 1947
443. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

DALTA,
January 24, 1947

CHI. VALLABHBHAI,

I have both your letters. I am dictating this while spinning. A messenger has come and I must send this with him. I get no information about what is happening in other parts of the country. I had heard about Hazara and so I sent the wire.¹ The work here takes up all my time. It is no easy matter to change one’s house daily. God has somehow sustained me so far. Let us see what He does now. The poison [of communalism] is public knowledge. Non-violence has to make its way through it. That is the only way in which it can be put to the test.

The letter from the Nawab of Bhopal contains nothing new. He has not answered my question. Notes were taken of my conversation with him when I was in Delhi. I did not have a copy, and he has now sent one. I have not read them, but I assume that they are all right. The question which I had put to him is bound to come up.

I was glad to learn that your health was better and that you had called in a naturopath though not Dinshaw. In my view, nature cure is the only thing for you.

Parasuram the typist has left. His departure has made no difference. He has lost his balance. But I do not need any substitute.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 345-6

444. TALK TO REPRESENTATIVES OF KRISHAK SAMITI

MURIYAM,
January 24, 1947

Representatives of the Krishak Samiti, Hashnabad People’s Relief Committee, informed Gandhiji about the way in which Hindus and Muslims of Hashnabad raised a

¹ Vide “Telegram to Jawaharlal Nehru”, 15-1-1947
² This appeared under the title “Self-help to Avoid Food Crisis”.
A volunteer corps of about twelve hundred strong to defend the area from an onslaught of communal riots. Gandhiji remarked:

I heard of Hashnabad some time ago as the bright spot of Hindu-Muslim unity during the riot period.

The interviewers then told him of a food crisis developing in that area and asked him if he would say something about it in his speeches so as to draw the attention of the Bengal Government. Gandhiji replied:

Though I am not saying anything about the coming food crisis, I am aware of the situation. I am trying to solve it in my own way. I do not see why the people should depend upon Government or other agencies for help. We hear nowadays of people trying to secure foodstuffs from foreign countries. As a matter of fact if people will help themselves, then the Government is bound to move and this is what I will call real democracy, which is built up from below. Bengal possesses rich lands. They can produce edible roots. But again it is difficult to induce people to revise their tastes and old habits. Look at these coconut trees. Coconut makes a good nutritious food. I am trying to accustom myself to it. Of course, I extract the oil from it and the remaining portion as you know, contains good protein. Then take the many kinds of roots in the soil of Bengal which belong to the potato tribe and these can be used as good food. Then again, you have abundance of fish. Fish, coconuts and these roots can easily take the place of rice.

Incidentally Gandhiji mentioned the general supineness of the people. As an instance he mentioned the water hyacinth which, if the people en masse volunteered their services for a week without any aid from Government, they could get rid of within a week’s time, causing a saving of thousands of rupees.

Gandhiji was asked his opinion about the Tebhaga Movement1 in Bengal. Gandhiji confessed his ignorance about the movement and asked for a note on the subject which the questioners have undertaken to supply.

QUESTION: Can we not build up Hindu-Muslim unity through a concrete political programme?

GANDHJI: Probably you can. But I have got my own ways. I think if people help themselves, then politics will take care of themselves.

1 The movement was for reduction of the landlord’s share in the produce of land. For Gandhiji’s views on the movement, vide “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 31-1-1947
Q. This Tebaga Movement of the Bengal Kisans expects blessings from you.

G. Yes, yes, all good movements have my blessings.

Harijan, 9-2-1947

445. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

MURIYAM,

January 24, 1947

Gandhiji began by saying that he felt much pleasure in being housed in a Muslim house. He and his party had received every attention. The Muslim friends went so far as to find a maidan large enough to hold the largest number of visitors possible. And it so happened that the meeting was the largest of all during his pilgrimage. He attributed the largeness of the meeting to the fast of Bibi Amtussalaam which had a happy ending because of the sincere labours of Abdullah Saheb and his assistance and that of the leading Muslims of the villages concerned. Whether his inference was justified or not, he flattered himself with the belief he had expressed.

He was sorry that there was poison administered to the public by some newspapers. Newspapers today had almost replaced the Bible, the Koran, the Gita and the other religious scriptures. It was wrong but the fact had to be faced. Such being the case, he held it to be the duty of newspapermen to give nothing but facts to their readers.

He was also of opinion that the movement of minorities to the majority provinces was an impracticable proposition. He knew the time when the late two Imam brothers and the late Mazharul Haq Saheb led both the communities and the leading Hindus, such as the late Brajkishore Prasad and Dr. Rajendra Prasad gladly worked under them. Muslims of that Bihar must not leave Bihar. It was true that some Bihar Hindus had acted inhumanly but that aberration ought not to deflect the Muslims from their clear duty bravely to stick to their homes which were theirs by right. And the Bihari Hindus had to make all possible amends for the misdeeds of the Hindus who had become insane. He would say the same to Noakhali Hindus and Muslims. It was therefore a good omen that there were Muslims in the village to harbour him. It was their duty to make even a solitary Hindu absolutely safe in their midst and Hindus should have faith enough to stay in Noakhali.

Harijan, 9-2-1947

---

1 Extracted from “Srirampur Diary”
2 Habibullah Saheb Patwari
3 Sir Ali Imam, who died in October 1932, and Saiyed Hassan Imam, who died in April 1933
4 A barrister of Patna; fellow student of Gandhiji in England
446. TELEGRAM TO JIVARAJ MEHTA

[On or after January 24, 1947]¹

DR. MEHTA
16 ALTMOUNT RD.
BOMBAY

YOUR LETTER TO SUSHILABEHN.¹ SHAKUNTALA SHOULD NOT COME EAST BENGAL.

BAPU

From the original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library.
Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

447. MESSAGE TO SOUTH INDIA

[On or before January 25, 1947]³

I am glad to learn that several temples, including the ancient Srirangam Temple, are being thrown open to Harijans. But a great deal more remains to be done in order to remove this age-long iniquity.

The Hindu, 26-1-1947

448. LETTER TO PRESIDENT, MONGHYR DISTRICT
MUSLIM LEAGUE

January 25, 1947

Your letter . . .⁴ is . . . hysterical . . . I would like you to tell me how I can serve the Muslims better by going to Bihar. Whilst I do not endorse your remark that the atrocities committed by the Hindus in Bihar have no parallel in history, I am free to admit that they were in magnitude much greater than in Noakhali . . . I would urge you, as ¹ This was in reply to the addressee’s letter to Sushila Nayyar dated January 24, 1947.

² The addressee in his letter had recommended a young woman, Shakuntala
Shrinagesh who was keen to work in Bengal with either Sushila Nayyar or Sucheta Kripalani.
³ According to the report Gandhiji had received a telegram from the Srivaikuntham Taluk Congress Committee stating that from February 20 about forty temples within the taluk were being thrown open to Harijans.
⁴ The message was reported under the dateline Hirapur, January 25.
⁴ Omission in the source.
President of the Monghyr District Muslim League, to confine yourself to proven facts which, I am sorry to say, you have not done.

449. LETTER TO SYED NASIRUDDIN

_KAZIRKHIL,_
_RAMGANJ P.S.,
_NOAKHALI D.T.,
_January 25, 1947_

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. You belong to a great University and hold the degree of M.A. But I am sorry to have to tell you that your letter is wholly unbalanced.

You will let me serve Hindus, Muslims and others in the best manner I know. If fail I shall feel sorry. But I cannot change my programme according to an opinion which does not appeal to my reason.

As to your note about the Noakhali Muslims, I should think that you should take your complaint through the proper channel. Have you written to the Provincial Government? If not, I would suggest your doing so at the earliest moment.

I refuse to draw the distinction between aggressive and non-aggressive communities. This I say apart from the merits of the Pakistan controversy. It is enough for me to claim to belong to India, irrespective of caste or creed. Religion is my personal concern. It ought not to interfere with my duty as a citizen of India.

_Yours sincerely,_

SYED NASIRUDDIN SAHEB
ADVOCATE
ALIGARH (U.P.)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

---

1 This was in reply to one date January 11, which said that ‘as the leader of the aggressive community’ Gandhiji ought to have toured those places where ‘appalling and horrible atrocities have been committed by your community’.

2 Of January 11, in which the addressee had said that, as the leader of the aggressive community, Gandhiji ought to have toured those places where “appalling and horrible atrocities have been committed by your community”.
450. LETTER TO SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA

January 25, 1947

CHI. SATIS BABU,

This is surprising. Yes, do file (the case), but did I not say that we should pass on the case to Su. and say that we on our part wanted to do everything but some letters from Chowdhury Saheb have not come? Consider what is appropriate.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

451. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

January 25, 1947

DAUGHTER AMTUSSALAAM,

Read this telegram1. Your letter shows you are making very good progress. If the cough is cured and there is no fever you will do a lot of work. You will write, if you need anything.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 572

452. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING2

January 25, 1947

Gandhiji first drew attention to the fact that the tal3 given was out of tune. He suggested that all they did in the name of God should be in tune. If they were out of tune outside, they were likely to be out of tune within. He then alluded to two telegrams received from the Jamiat-ul-Ulema-e-Islam in Madras and Bombay respectively. They said that he, an unbeliever, had no right to interfere in the Islamic Law. He submitted that the telegrams were based on ignorance of facts. He had not interfered at all in the practice of religion. He had neither the right nor the wish to do so. All he had done was to tender advice and that based on his reading of the Prophet’s sayings, etc. What was more, he had observed in many cultured Muslim families total

1 Dated January 23, from Sushil Sarkar to the addressee, which read : “The Hindus request you to give up the fast. The nation expects better service from you.”
2 Extracted from “Srirampur Diary”
3 Rhythmic beat disregard of the purdah as it is observed today. But that did not signify less observance of the purdah of the heart, which was the reality, in his opinion, aimed at by Islam. Whatever it was, it was open to the Muslim hearers to reject his advice if they felt that it was in conflict with the tenets of Islam. The critical telegrams received by him betrayed, in his opinion, grave intolerance of other opinion than that of the critics. Let them not forget that the courts of law including the Privy Council, which were often composed of non-Muslims, interpreted the Islamic Law and imposed its interpretation on the Islamic world. He, on the contrary, sought merely to give an opinion. If he could not do so for fear of criticism or even physical punishment, he would be an unworthy representative of non-violence and truth.

_Harijan_, 9-2-1947

453. FRAGMENT OF LETTER TO MAHOMED TAYABULLAH

January 26, 1947

I cannot understand the panic on the part of the Assamese. Panic unhinges man, much more so when it seizes a large number of people. The Resolution passed by the A. I. C. C., if correctly reported in the papers, gives enough, if not clear, guidance to Assam, for it will not compel Assam to act against the wishes of the people, declared through the Legislative Assembly.

Naturally, Assam has to watch the future developments and act as occasion requires. It would be unwise to take any precipitate action. Whatever action is taken must always be taken so as not to impair the autonomous character of the constitution of Assam. There should be no confusion in anybody’s mind.

_The Hindu_, 2-2-1947

454. LETTER TO MANILAL B. DESAI

January 26, 1947

CHI. MANILAL,

I am reaching your letter somewhat late. But it is difficult to attend to outside work in the midst of a tour in the course of which I keep on moving from one village to another every day.

1 The report said that this was in reply to the addressee’s letter apprising Gandhiji of Assam’s dissatisfaction at the A. I. C. C. resolution and seeking guidance from him.

2 Vide “A. I. C. C. Resolution”

3 According to the report, Gandhiji concluded his letter by asking the addressee “to write to him again if the letter was not clear”.

324 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
Why did Dr. Bhagawat have to give up that diet? Has he also accepted defeat? I do not, of course, suggest by this that, if he has not accepted defeat, he should resume the whole food experiment. One should eat only such food as helps one to keep good health. If Datar refuses to put up the building, is anybody else willing to do so? Discuss the matter with the people there and let me know. Does Datar permit the use of his bungalow? Or does he seem reluctant to do so? You should not trouble Jehangirji in regard to shortage of funds. If needed, you may call for an additional five thousand from the Ashram. Ultimately, however, the expenditure on that place will have to be found by the village. If it cannot be done, we will have to consider whether we should stay on there permanently. We shall not succeed in propagating nature cure in villages by obtaining money from outside. I am certainly not unaware of the fact that Dr. Dinshaw is not able to attend to village work. This need not frighten you. There will be no harm if the Trust is made into a sub-trust of the Poona Trust, nor if it is made an independent one. However, even if it is a sub-trust, it must include some residents of the village. We should also ascertain what the residents themselves desire.

I am glad that Gangabehn pays occasional visits to the place. Will the lady whom Appa Saheb has sent stay there permanently? Has she become friendly with the other women? I was happy to learn that Gokhale had calmed down still further. Can you say that Purushottam had been fully restored? I hope Paramanand’s eczema has been completely cured. I should advise him to get married immediately, for it is most uncertain when I shall be able to leave here. It is indeed a question whether I shall return alive from the place. The best course, therefore, would be to go through the marriage immediately. As far as I understand, this marriage is not intended to be a means of pleasure. This is not the time for such marriages. I believe that it is intended as a help in self-control. If my assumption is correct, it need not matter where I am.

The problem of the well seems to be a difficult one. If a deep well can be successfully, sunk, it will be a great achievement. But such efforts do not always succeed. You have written that you are going to think over it further. It will be good, however, if the Government people guide you in your deliberations in the matter. Ask Morarjibhai.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

---

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 2734. Courtesy: Manilal B. Desai

455. LETTER TO MADALASA

HIRAPUR, January 26, 1947

CHI. MADU,

You have become irregular in writing letters. I hope it is not a sign of lack of orderliness. Be that as it may; remain cheerful and calm. I would like to send for you and Ramakrishna¹. But I consider it a false attachment. If you eliminate 50 per cent of what you read in the newspapers you will be able to assess the situation to some extent. Haven’t you heard that the hills appear beautiful from a distance? And when I daily move from one village to another those who are just idle on-lookers become a burden. I say ‘No’ to so many of them. Then how can I say yes to you two? I know that the two of you won’t be a burden in anyway. Still, try to restrain yourself. I will consider you as having taken part in the _yajna_ to the extent that you serve from there. Look after the children. Look after yourself. I trust Ramakrishna is all right. Has he come to a decision about himself?

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

---

[From Gujarati]

_Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad_, p. 331

456. LETTER TO PYARELAL

At night, January 26, 1947

CHI. PYARELAL,

I have your letter. It is all right about the man from England. He will work well if he comes. Write to him.

In my view it will be good if as far as possible you check your desire to come. I am saving time. I do not like to talk. There is a pile of work. I am not able to do justice I should to the villages. The body is unable to give more work. I must be content with whatever service it gives.

¹ Ramakrishna Bajaj, addressee’s brother

Ramachandran came yesterday. He says he is now calm, physically and mentally. A bed was made for him on the floor of my hut. The place is now becoming smaller. I like it.

Hunnar has come. Let us see how he turns out. He is quiet. You will find everything in the diary. I am trying to fill it as much as possible. There are shortcomings and they irk. Once that feeling disappears it would be almost perfect. If that does not happen, the fault will be mine.

Manu is doing a lot of work. She has no time left for reading. I cannot give time for that. But it would seem she is shaping up. You had promised to send her some Sanskrit lessons. Send them.

Now it is 5.30 in the morning.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

457. LETTER TO MRIDULA SARABHAI

January 26, 1947

CHI. MRIDU,

Tendulkar casually gave me your letter. Tomorrow a telegram will go to you: “My opinion adverse.” It is 7.45 in the evening now. There is no post office or telegraph office here. Everything will be carried by someone to a telegraph office tomorrow. This letter too will be posted tomorrow.

If you do not wish to live with me or near me what will you do? The work here is complicated. You may gain something by being with me. But I do not see any good in that. If it is granted that I stay here, then I would like your coming. Right now it is with great difficulty that I am able to keep even the few who are already here. Troubles are endless.

You will know more when Tendulkar gets back.

How could the letter written to you have been lost? I still feel that you will get it. I do not even remember the contents now to enable me to write again.

I cannot swallow the idea of abortions. I can understand the argument about the children thus conceived having to be brought up. If you can convince me about the advantages of abortion it will be another matter. Western sisters who were considered great failed to convince me. In this respect I am impervious.

Are you keeping good health? Are you taking care?

Sardar is deliberately spoiling his health.

Jawaharlal is very careless. It is amazing how he is able to carry on. Who can harm those whom God protects?

I heard today that Jayaprakash has reached here. He may pay me a visit tomorrow. I am told he is at Kazirkhil.

I see from the newspapers that Major General Shah Nawaz is in Calcutta. I do hope he will come to visit me. Niranjan Singh Gill came today and has gone back. His work also is incomplete.

My boat is being propelled only by faith.

I think I have written to you that Manu is here and sleeps with me, seen by all and with the knowledge of all. This has nothing to do with the experiment. The experiment is stopped; though I still have no doubt as to its relevance. It is stopped only because of the colleagues.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C.W. 11259. Courtesy: Sarabhai Foundation

458. LETTER TO A. K. BHAGAWAT

January 26, 1947

Bhai Bhagawat,

There is no letter from you. Manibhai¹ writes that the work is going on well. How is it that you have given up the whole-food experiment? Have you found it to be unwholesome? And what is lacking in it? Is Appa Saheb completely cured?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: C. W. 2732. Courtesy: Manilal B. Desai

¹ Manilal B. Desai
459. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

January 26, 1947

CHI. BRIJKRISHNA.

I have your letter. I was glad to know about the gentlemanliness of the vaidya. Continue his treatment for three months and have confidence in him. As for the rest of the matter in your letter there must be another side to it. Have you had a heart-to-heart talk with Rajendra Babu? If you allow me to mention your name, then I can write to Sardar and Jawaharlal. Neither of them would swerve from duty. Amtul Salaam and Manu will write the rest.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 2506

460. REPLY TO SAILEN

January 26, 1947

To me, this sacrifice which I have begun is itself a continued celebration of the Day. But to cheer up the spirit of the local people, you all (Pressmen and others) may certainly go ahead with your idea.

[From Gujarati]
Eklo Jane Re, p. 94

461. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

BANSA,

January 26, 1947

Today is the 26th of January, the day of our freedom. When Congress was born, India obtained a new lease of life. Only a few Indians at the time were aware of the political significance of this, but gradually the Congress grew strong and it awakened freedom-consciousness in every village by starting mass agitation. In the days when there was no communal hatred no one cared whether a person

1 According to Manu Gandhi, an A. P. I. representative who came up with a proposal for celebration of independence. The flag salutation was performed by Niranjan Gill and Gandhiji merely attended the function. Vide also the following item.
was a Hindu or a Muslim. It is a sad thing to have to say that there are two opinions now where there was only one before. But for the poisoned atmosphere prevailant here, I would have unfurled the tricolour flag myself. Some friends suggested that I should perform the ceremony, but I refused. Had an English officer, however, decreed that there should be no flag-hoisting here, I would certainly have unfurled the flag, even if it cost my life. But to whom may I appeal today. Suppose I unfurled the flag and even my Muslim brothers accepted it but in sullen silence, I would not want that. At the same time, I must say what is in my heart. When the question of our having a flag of our own came up, I thought it unjust to have only one colour for it, as there are not one but many communities in India. A day there certainly was, when all the communities of India—Hindu, Muslim, Parsi and others—cherished this flag as their own. Even lives were sacrificed for it. Today many flags have come into being. But the tricolour should stand alone as the Union Jack did at one time. But that golden day of unity unfortu- nately now belongs to the past. But to whom shall I appeal. With whom shall I fight? We are all sons of India and hence are brothers. What is our freedom worth if it accentuates internecine strife and hatred? But proclaiming unity is as absurd as building castles in the air.

There can be only one call at present that we shall not rest till freedom is won. Today brother is fighting brother. How can there be a Pakistan before we win our freedom? Is it the British who will grant Pakistan? And who knows what kind of freedom we shall have? The Britisher is certain to quit. But America and Russia are not yet out of the picture. If we are not alert we are lost. Only a little while ago you all sang “Jana-gana-mana”. What an ennobling song! And we have many such. We can be united if we but sing them sincerely, from the heart. And if we don’t unite we shall be considered fools by the rest of the world. If you feel at heart that you should heed this warning of an old, experienced man, you must start from today to change your thoughts and deeds in accordance with my advice.

I did not unfurl the flag today but the Pressmen with me unfurled it. It was for this same freedom that that great man of Bengal, Subhas Chandra Bose, laid down his life. If even for his sake we can’t perform the yajna, for whom shall we do it?

[From Gujarati]

Eklo Jane Re, pp. 94-5
Q. What is a woman to do when attacked by miscreants—run away or resist with violence? Have boats in readiness to fly or prepare to defend with weapons?

A. My answer to this question is very simple. For me there can be no preparation for violence. All preparation must be for non-violence if courage of the highest type is to be developed. Violence can only be tolerated as being preferable always to cowardice. Therefore I would have no boats ready for flight in emergency. For a non-violent person there is no emergency but quiet dignified preparation for death. Hence whether it is a man or a woman he or she will defy death even when he or she is unassisted; for the real assistance is from God. I can preach no other thing and I am here to practise what I preach. Whether such an opportunity will come to me or be given to me I do not know. If there are women who when assailed by miscreants cannot resist without arms they do not need to be advised to carry arms. They will do so. There is something wrong in this constant enquiry as to whether to bear arms or not. People have to learn to be naturally independent. If they will remember the central teaching, namely, that the real effective resistance lies in non-violence, they will model their conduct accordingly. And that is what the world has been doing although unthinkingly. Since it has not the highest courage, namely courage born of non-violence, it arms itself even unto the atom bomb. Those who do not see in it the futility of violence will naturally arm themselves to the best of their ability.

In India, since my return from South Africa, there has been conscious and constant training in non-violence with the result we have seen.

Q. Can a woman be advised to take her own life rather than surrender?

A. This question requires a definite answer. I answered it in Delhi just before leaving for Noakhali. A woman should most certainly take her own life rather than surrender. In other words, surrender has no room in my plan of life. But I was asked in what way to take one’s own life. I promptly said it was not for me to prescribe the means and behind the approval of suicide under such circumstances was and is the belief that one whose mind is prepared for even suicide will have requisite courage for such mental resistance and such internal purity that her assailant will be disarmed. I could not carry the argument any further because it does not admit of further development. It requires positive proof which, I own, is lacking.
Q. If the choice is between taking one’s own life or that of the assailant, which would you advise?

A. When it is a question of choice between killing oneself or the assailant, I have no doubt in my mind that the first should be the choice.

PALLA, January 27, 1947
Harijan, 9-2-1947

463. LETTER TO S. G. A. AGHA

KAZIRKHIL,
RAMGANJ P.S.,
NOAKHALI DISTT.,
January 27, 1947

DEAR FRIEND,

This is in answer to your question.

1. It is a fact that I was hurt at the behaviour of many Muslims who sat out during the prayer and left when I commenced my address.

2. I did say that I could not give up Ramanama at the bidding of any person or even if the kingdom of the world was offered to me; for Ramanama was to me the same as Allah, Khuda or God.

3. I do hold that the God of Hindus, Muslims, Christians, Parsees, Jews and others is one and the same, no matter by what name a votary mentions Him or recognizes Him. The idea is not my own. But I have learnt to believe that it is universal.

4. I do believe that all religions have equal status and that they are like leaves of the same tree. No two leaves are identical though they are from the same source.

5. It is a fact that in my daily prayers the Gita, the Koran and the other religious texts find place. You have but to procure a copy of the prayer book published by the Navajivan Press, Ahmedabad and others to find what they are. Nothing is my composition.

6. My religion embraces Hinduism, Islam, Christianity, etc., for the simple reason that I believe them to have an equal status. It is not a combination sweet or otherwise. Every religion has its own place even as every leaf has. If I believe in the equal status of all the leaves of a tree, it is not a combination of my make but a recognition of a scientific fact.

Yours sincerely,

ADVOCATES. G. A. AGHA
ZAMINDAR
DADY (SIND)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

464. LETTER TO KODANDARAMAYYA
January 27, 1947

BHAI KODANDARAMAYYA,

I could reach your letter only today. Your meeting was to be held on the 19th. I hope it went off well.

Blessings from

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 9109. Also C. W. 9198

465. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING
PALLA,
January 27, 1947

I am really happy that I am staying with a Harijan weaver. He looks after me with such love and care! A place where love is not is a prison; and a hut where love abides is more than a palace. The fact is that I am charmed with all these huts of Bengal. How can you get light and air in a closed room? The tragedy is that while the style of living here is so simple and Nature has lavished her gifts so abundantly the Hindus and Muslims here do not treat one another as brothers. Shall we debase ourselves simply because our creeds differ? But I have every hope that we shall forget all this very soon and understand our responsibilities. Even now shops continue to remain closed in areas affected by the riots, and people look at each other with suspicion. But this harms only ourselves and no one is the gainer. On the one hand there is danger of a famine from failure of crops on the other we are harming ourselves by our ignorance and inertia. We are only digging

1 It being Gandhiji’s silence day, the speech was read out.
our own graves if we continue to behave as we are doing now.

There are so many things we can do without troubling the Government. We can easily do many things ourselves; for instance, improving general health and sanitation, insisting on cleanliness, cultivating fresh fruit and flower plants, making good manure and compost, etc. Several such matters are awaiting our attention. If we use our brains to this end what a stupendous gain it will be to us all! And I guarantee that then we will not have a moment to spare for quarrels. But we can attain this happy state only if we have wisdom. It is my constant prayer that God may grant us good sense as this girl here has just been singing and endow us with the strength to do things purposeful.

[From Gujarati]

_Eklo Jane Re_, pp. 97-8

466. LETTER TO H. S. SUHRAWARDY

KAZIRKHIL, RAMGUNJ P. S.,

NOAKHALI DISTRICT,

January 28, 1947

Sardar Niranjan Singh Gill has told me of all the talk he had with you. He says whilst you do not mind his men working in Noakhali you would doubt his _bona fide_ until he with his men worked in Bihar just as assiduously as in Noakhali. In the circumstances I have told him that he should first go to Bihar and work there and in order to be able to do so effectively he should take from you a note\(^1\) of recommendation to the leader in Bihar of the League Party. Unless he is so armed, I have told him, his work might, from the League point of view, fall flat. I added that he should keep himself in touch with you regarding his work there.

As to his work in Noakhali, I have told him that, regard being had to your views as interpreted by the Sardar, he should withdraw his men from Noakhali unless you approved of his work in Noakhali. It is not enough that you tolerate his men’s work. It should have your written approval. His men can only be here as accepted friends of both Hindus and Muslims. I cannot entertain them on any other terms. I have told him too that he should find financial support not from private sources, including funds at my disposal, but should, in order to be above board, depend upon open public support. Therefore I have suggested to him too that, if you approve of his activity here, you should subscribe to his appeal even if it be a token rupee. But there may be difficulty in this of which I could have no knowledge even though you might approve of his activity in Noakhali.

\(^{1}\) The addressee sent a letter to Jafar Imam in Patna on February 4, 1947.

Sardar Patel's Correspondence, Vol. IV, p. 225

467. LETTER TO J. B. KRIPALANI

Confidential January 28, 1947

MY DEAR PROFESSOR,

Your letter and enclosure. You cannot sit still if you find that even justice is not done. You have to discuss things with Pantji¹, Kidwai² and finally with Jawaharlal and Sardar. If nobody listens to you, you should resign. If these steps are not taken and if what you say is true, the Congress will collapse. You can show this to the parties I have named.

About your health I accept your assurance and hope that you are well.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: C. W. 10871. Courtesy: J. B. Kripalani

468. LETTER TO ASHRAFUDDIN AHMED CHOWDHURY

KAZIRKHIL, RAMGANJ P.S., NOAKHALI DISTT., January 28, 1947

DEAR FRIEND,

I am sorry. I reached your letter only today. In the constant movement I feel called upon to do from day to day the letter was mislaid and it was discovered yesterday by chance in my unassorted and undocketed papers whilst I was searching for another document. From the trend of my answer you will see that nothing has been lost

¹ Govind Ballabh Pant
² Rafi Ahmed Kidwai
by the delay for which I must hold myself responsible.

You have done well to give me your views briefly. Having had such views before me often enough I have no difficulty in giving you my reply.

1. I do not think that leaflets and pamphlets can do any good at the present moment. Unfortunately for the country those who have any influence over the masses have already made up their minds and closed them against any criticism. In such a state of society I feel that the kind of activity you suggest must fall flat. You should know also that such an attempt has been made before and is even now being made, in my opinion without producing any appreciable effect.

2. A volunteer corps such as you have in view could not be formed. If by any chance it is formed its effort will be discounted. Before that happy time comes it is necessary for each party or community to form its own corps of sincere Muslims and Hindus who will work for peace without any mental reservations. Out of such a band of selfless workers of Hindus and Muslims a combined corps is bound to come into being. Unfortunately we have not such men in any appreciable measure.

3. I doubt if there are many Muslim missionaries. But if there are even a few, there is nothing to prevent them from doing this valuable mission work. You say it is necessary to secure such service. My experience covering a period of sixty years tells me otherwise. Such services are not secured. They are freely given.

4. Of course it is possible to organize a volunteer corps of Muslims only. The pity of it is that it has not been done up to now in a proper friendly manner.

5. I have already said that a combination will be premature. Of course I have no knowledge of what the Congress organization is doing here and indeed elsewhere except such knowledge as is of no use being vague. I hope you realize your suggestions do not require money but men and women of the right type. Are they available?

Yours sincerely,

ASHRAFUDDIN AHMED CHOWDHURY SAHEB
97-A SOUTHERN AVENUE
CALCUTTA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

1 The source has “done”.

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
469. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

January 28, 1947

DAUGHTER AMTUSSALAAM,

I have your letter. You should get quite well. If plenty of spinning and weaving could be done there, then everything would be accomplished.

As for Abha, I am writing to her.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 575

470. INTERVIEW TO MUSLIM DEPUTATION

PANCHGAON,

January 28, 1947

I have come here with the greatest goodwill in the world. I know if I fail in Noakhali my whole non-violence fails.

Gandhiji said that he had always been a man of the masses and a man for the masses and he wanted to identify himself completely with the masses. If they could tell him the way how he could reach more effectively the hearts of Muslims, he was ready to listen. But on no account could he leave Noakhali.

So far as others working in Noakhali were concerned it was the duty of the Government to find out if they were really standing in the way of restoration of peace.

Referring to the question of his going to Bihar, Gandhiji said that he knew that it was the opinion of the Muslim League circles that he should go to Bihar. He was, however, doing his best for the Muslims of Bihar from Noakhali. He was in constant touch with the Bihar Government in this respect and a representative of that Government was now travelling with him. If he went now to Bihar and found that the Bihar Government had left nothing undone, he would have to say it without any reserve which in his opinion might not help the Muslim League case.

With reference to the question of large-scale arrests of Muslims here, Gandhiji said that the duty of a reformer was to try to replace corporal punishment by awakening of the conscience. He had tried to do it in his life and succeeded though not

1 The deputation, which was led by Mujibur Rahman, Secretary, Noakhali District Muslim League, met Gandhiji in the evening. The report said that the deputationists wanted Gandhiji to visit Bihar. They also pointed out that Gandhiji being a Hindu, recitation from the Koran at his prayer meetings was not appreciated by the Muslims.
in many cases. Their duty also should be to try to awaken this conscience so that culprits would come forward and own up their guilt. So long as this was not done, the ring-leaders should be arrested.

With regard to conducting of prayers, Gandhiji said that if there was so much intolerance that one could not hold one’s prayers as one liked he did not know what lay in store for poor India. It was at the request of a devout Muslim friend that he had included verses from the Koran in his prayer. Of course, he never wanted to go against the tenets of Islam but he could not also listen to one particular person or half a dozen persons to whom they might refer him as to whether he was going against Islam by reciting from the Koran.

_Hindustan Standard, 30-4-1947_

471. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

PANCHGAON, January 28, 1947

On my way here I was taken to three homes, one Hindu and two Muslim. It gave me very great pleasure as all I crave for is love. I was not informed in advance of the places I would be taken to, but I saw love in the eyes of those who invited me, and so I went. At all the three places I was offered something or other to eat, but it was not the time when I usually ate, so I said I would gladly accept some fruit if they sent any to my next halt. My granddaughter accompanies me. The women welcomed her with love and an old lady embraced her on knowing who she was. A Muslim sister who had made fish curry and rotis at the time, pressed her to partake of the fare. What was the poor girl to do? She refused the offer on the ground that she did not take anything at that early hour. The Muslim women thereupon suspected that this Hindu girl was not willing to eat, because at heart she felt she would be polluted. So, to allay their suspicion, she broke a piece from their roti and ate it. The sisters were satisfied. Neither I nor those who associate with me make any distinctions of caste or creed and we have no inhibitions against dining with anybody. But I appeal to my Muslim friends to look kindly upon those Hindus who think they would lose their religion if they ate at the hands of a Muslim. I understand that that belief is wrong. But the test of brotherly love does not lie only in eating together. This erroneous belief is sure to wear off with time. Much has been achieved already in this direction. But till that attitude changes please learn to appreciate love wherever you find it. Only in this way will you come near one another.
The Pressmen who follow me had arranged a mass dinner of all castes and creeds. Muslim brothers did not join in it. But the host of the Pressmen begged them earnestly not to insist on his participation in the common dinner. ‘You will leave me in a day’, he said ‘but calamity will beset me after you go. The people here will bring pressure to bear upon me saying that I had lost caste by eating with you and so I must become a Muslim.

I felt that the man’s fear was well founded. So I had to request the Pressmen not to hold the common dinner in the poor man’s hut. I don’t know when Hindus and Muslims will shed their weakness and come close to one another. But I am prepared to give up my very life, if need be, to see this object realized, and I appeal to you all to pray with me: “O! God! bring that golden day soon.”

[From Gujarati]

Eklo Jane Re, pp. 100-1

472. LETTER TO PUSHPA DESAI

PANCHGAON,

January 29, 1947

CHI. PUSHPA,

I got your letter. I am glad that you are devoting yourself whole-heartedly to weaving. I myself do not know whether or not I shall be able to leave this place. I cannot go anywhere without solving the problem here. Why do you remain confused? With a man like Bhansalibhai to guide you, why do you feel physically or mentally lethargic? Understand fully Chapter XII of the Gita. We should surrender to the Lord all that we do. The mind will not then waver. It is as clear as daylight that we cannot cease even for a moment from action in some form or another. If nothing else, breathing goes on, does it not? Wisdom, then, lies in surrendering to the Lord everything we do. Keep writing to me.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 9279
473. LETTER TO PYARELAL

January 29, 1947

CHI. PYARELAL,

I forgot to reply to your note concerning Shahpur. I am having to work in such rush.

Join Dr. Gupta’s committee. But Gupta himself should be told that the local Muslim doctor should not be boycotted. Why should the local doctor not be on the committee? You may also consult the Muslims.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

When should I send the diary?

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

474. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

PANCHGAON,

January 29, 1947

DEAR DAUGHTER,

I have your letter. I feel sorry to hear about Abha’s illness. Why trouble Abha for anything? Ask in writing. It is not good to go or send anyone needlessly. In my view you should not start or run a small dispensary. For some time do not even talk of moving about. I do not get any letters from Bihar. I am sending herewith a report of the Muslim League. Return it after perusal.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 574

475. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

JAYAG,

January 29, 1947

Gandhiji at the outset dealt with a question that was raised by some Muslim friends. Did he want Muslims to attend his prayer meetings? The reply was that he insisted on neither the Muslims nor the Hindus attending the prayer meetings. If the questioner meant to ask whether he would like the Muslims to attend such meetings, he had no hesitation in saying that he would certainly like them to attend. What was more, numerous Muslims had attended his prayer meetings which had gone on for years. The next question was whether he, the speaker, did not consider it wrong for him, a non-Muslim, to recite anything from the Koran or to couple Rama and Krishna with Rahim and Karim. They said it offended Muslim ears. The speaker replied that the objection gave him a painful surprise. He thought that the objection betrayed narrowness of mind. They should know that he had introduced the recital from the Koran through Raihana Tyabjee, a devoted Muslim with a religious mind. She had no political motive behind the proposal. He was no avatar as was suggested. He claimed to be a man of God humbler than the humblest man or woman. His object ever was to make Muslims better Muslims, Hindus better Hindus, Christians better Christians, Parsis better Parsis. He never invited anybody to change his or her religion. He had thought, therefore, that the questioners would be glad to find that his religion was so expansive as to include readings from the religious scriptures of the world.

1 Extracted from “Gandhiji’s Walking Tour Diary”

The next thing was that some friends had said that all prosecutions initiated by the Hindus against the Muslim offenders interfered with the progress of the work of peace between the two. It surprised him. What had peace between gentlemen to do with the prosecution of criminals. He could understand the objection if it meant that false prosecutions should be withdrawn. He would be whole-heartedly with the objectors. He went further and said that all such persons should be brought to book as perjurers. He said also that the proper course to avoid court procedure was for the guilty persons in all humility to make an open confession of their guilt and accept the judgment of the public. He would gladly help any such movement.

The third thing was that young men who had gone to Calcutta and other places in search of a career were bound to give a portion of their time to the villages. The easiest thing for them to do would be to meet together and make an arrangement by which, say, half of them would take leave from office and serve for a stipulated number of months, at the end of which their place would be taken by the next batch. If they had a will, there would surely be some way also for serving the cause of the villagers. Those who did not find it possible to offer personal service might help by cash.

Gandhiji ended by citing the example of England, Russia and other countries where every family had sent as many able-bodied men and women as possible for the defence of their country. This was how unity of heart was actually achieved in the world and he hoped that we in our country would be able to rise above small selfish considerations and create that unity without which life itself would not be worth living.

Harijan, 23-2-1947
476. FOREWORD TO “SELECTIONS FROM GANDHI”

The following pages represent a labour of love. Professor Nirmal Kumar Bose first published his selections in 1934¹ and they contained extracts from my writings up to 1934. But my writings have never ceased and so the Professor felt that he should bring up his selections to as late a date as possible, i.e., up to 1942 with isolated later additions. Though therefore this is called a new edition, it is in reality a new book. The earliest and most elaborate attempt was made by the late Amulakhrai in Gujarati. But that was years ago. He covered my writings in Gujarati and Hindi too. The volumes being in Gujarati never attracted much attention. Such is our disregard of our own languages. But I have known nothing so thorough of its kind as these volumes.

Professor N. K. Bose’s is such an attempt. He gave me his manuscript early in 1946 when I was in Bengal to do with it what I liked. But my preoccupations left me no time to look at them till for very shame I was compelled to do so. The selections made by the author show the thoroughness with which he has gone into his subject. Those who are interested in my writings will not fail to appreciate the author’s labours.

M. K. GANDHI

AMKI, NOAKHALI, January 30, 1947

Selections from Gandhi

477. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

KAZIRKHIL,
RAMGANJ P.S.,
NOAKHALI DISTT.,
January 30, 1947

DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

I have yours of the 20th instant about Shri Bhargava’s offer² from Katni. The gentleman wrote to me probably at the same time that he wrote to you and I replied promptly. I cannot lay my hands on a copy of what I wrote. But the purport was that there would be no

¹ It was published under the auspices of the Navavidhan Publication Committee, Calcutta.

² B. K. Bhargava had made an offer to maintain and find a home for a 100 to 200 Hindu families from East Bengal.
ladies [willing] to go so far. I think I told him also that I did not like his laying stress upon Hindus.

In my wandering I did not find that there is any inclination on the part of the sufferers to go out of Bengal. Nor do I think it wise. For it they cannot, out of fright, return to their village homes, they will all be accommodated in other parts of Bengal. A large number are already in Assam. Some have gone to Bihar because there is a large Bengali settlement there. My own effort is to send them to their villages, to make them shed all fear and to dissuade them from forsaking their ancestral homes. Nevertheless, if there are any who would like to go to Katni, of which there seems to be no likelihood, I would of course bear Shri Bhargava’s offer in mind.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

478. LETTER TO MADALASA
January 30, 1947

CHI. MADALASA,

I have your letter. I would like you to go to Gulbehn because her company is what I call satsang. Moreover the climate of Poona is very good for you and the children. If you go to Poona, do visit Uruli-Kanchan also. You must have got my earlier letter.3

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, p. 331

---

1 In Devanagri
2 Company of the good
3 Vide “Letter to Madalasa”, 26-1-1947
479. A LETTER

January 30, 1947

There is only one unfailing cure on earth and that is Ramanama. Of course one who repeats it must observe certain essential rules. But, how many of us make use of this remedy!

[From Gujarati]

Eklo Jane Re, p. 109

480. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

January 30, 1947

DEAR DAUGHTER,

I have your letter. I feel sorry about Abha. Why did she fall ill? Sushilabehn is here. She intends to see Abha on her way back from here. I had sent for Kulranjan, a Bengali naturopath, for you; he has arrived here today. He met on the way. He should call on you today. Have a full and frank talk with him and listen to what he says. If he tells you anything new and you find it worth trying, do so. He does not work only for the sake of money. So if you find something worth knowing from him which is useful to villagers, pay attention to it. Ask him all relevant questions. I am very glad to know that you are keeping good health. As for my health, so far it has been going on well. So long as God wants me to live he will keep me well.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Blessings to Abha.

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 576

481. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

AMKI,

January 30, 1947

Gandhiji began by apologizing for the fifteen minutes’ delay. It was due to his having been occupied with Zaman Saheb and Yusuf Saheb. These officers took him to a model cottage they had had erected. It was a good house but in his opinion unfit for 1 According to the source, this was addressed “to an ailing sister”.

2 Extracted from “Gandhiji’s Walking Tour Diary”

344 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
human habitation in the Indian climate. Such a house could well be described as a box. The inmates would be baked as in an oven and they would be suffocated when they closed their doors and windows as had become their habit. He, therefore, suggested comfortable cottage of bamboo, straw and thatch. Such cottages will be airy, cool and artistic in the Indian setting, especially in the midst of stately palms of coconut and supari.

He was also pleased when these officers informed him that the refugees had commenced to return from the places where they had taken refuge. He hoped that this return would continue with unabated zeal. He was of opinion that the people should dismiss all fear from their minds and feel safe in the midst of their own countrymen, whether Hindus or Muslims. When they learnt to fear their Maker alone they would cease to fear their fellows. They would find that there were none to frighten them if they were not afraid themselves. This had been his uniform experience in the course of the last sixty years of his life.

The third question taken up by him was in connection with some fishermen who had met him on the previous evening. They had complained that in this country where fishing was confined to privately owned ponds for the major part of the year, it was impossible for them to live if they were boycotted by the majority community. Gandhi ji expressed his surprise at this state of affairs and suggested that unless the Hindus and Muslims could rise above their present political differences and reasserted their common humanity and common brotherhood, life would become an impossibility where nature had designed otherwise. He hoped, therefore, that the alleged conditions would be corrected by the joint efforts of the people concerned and real peace restored in the countryside.

Harijan, 23-2-1947

482. LETTER TO M. ISMAIL

KAZIRKHIL,
RAMGANJ P.S.,
NOAKHALI DISTT.,
January 31, 1947

DEAR SIR,

I have your letter of the 21st January, enclosing copies of your telegrams1 to Suhrawardy Saheb and me. In this age of reason why do you want to shelter Islam from reasoned criticism, especially when it is

1 Which read: “Madras Ulemas’ meeting held under auspices of Primary Muslim League, Royapettah, Madras, says Islamic Code ideal. Please desist from pronouncement against Islam. Muslim nation will not tolerate interference with Islamic tenets.”
from a friend of Islam that I claim to be? What I have said is, I claim, in consonance with the Prophet’s teachings. Purdah as it is practised today in many parts of India is a mockery. Real purdah is purdah of the heart of which I spoke at the meeting referred to by you.

You will not make me responsible for everything that may be attributed to me in the Press, which I do not even get time to read. Let me inform you that what I said at the meeting I have believed and said for over half a century. Let me also inform you that what I have said I have learnt from Muslim friends.

Yours sincerely,

M. ISMAIL SAHEB
MADRAS

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

483. LETTER TO MANILAL B. DESAI
January 31, 1947

CHI. MANILAL,

I have your letter. You must have received my long letter1. I believe that Maganbhai should be included among the Trustees. Show this to Dinshawji and Jehangirji. If possible, I shall write to them separately. Otherwise use this letter. I am writing to Maganbhai.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 2733. Courtesy: Manilal B. Desai

484. NOTE TO MANU GANDHI
January 31, 1947

How long you detained me! I just sat there holding the coconut. Then I got tired and put it down. For me this was heavy going. Besides, you held up my work. You should have waited a little, or, kept a vessel handy. Then the floor too was dirty.

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

1Vide “Letter to Manilal B. Desai”, 26-1-1947

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
485. SPEECH AT WOMEN’S MEETING¹

NABAGRAM,
January 31, 1947

An old lady asked Gandhiji what they should do in case they were threatened with conversion.

Gandhiji said that to him the answer was simple:

Religion is the breath of one’s life and as no one could agree to forgo the right of breathing under any threat or compulsion, so no one should forsake his faith even if it be an alternative to death.

Be it man or woman, if one forsook one’s faith at anyone’s command, one had no religion. Unfortunately, Gandhiji continued, India had come to such a stage that some Indians easily abandoned their supposedly cherished faith. Religion was one’s breath of life. If anyone agreed to forgo his religion under threat, he would reduce himself to a brute.²

One of them asked what a woman, whose husband had turned a recluse, should do. Gandhiji said:

Such a woman should lead a very chaste life. She should work for her livelihood. She should not hoard anything but only keep that which is absolutely necessary. It is wrong to assume that a person is a true hermit simply because he wears an ochre robe. If the desolate woman is at a loss to know what to do, she could take to spinning. I have called the spinning-wheel the kamadhenu. She should also chant God’s name as she spins. In my opinion this type of renunciation will surpass that of her husband. She should constantly keep herself occupied in altruistic work such as sweeping the village streets, giving bath to dirty children, etc. There is a proverb saying an idle mind is the devil’s workshop. There must be a similar proverb in Bengali. If we sit idle, doing nothing, a thousand unhealthy thoughts will crowd our mind. So one should never be without some sort of work at all times. This is the best solution for the problem.

The Sunday Hindustan Standard, 2-2-1947; and Eklo Jane Re, p. 110

¹ The meeting was held in the afternoon in the courtyard of the house where Gandhiji was staying.
² What follows is translated from Eklo Jane Re.
Gandhiji congratulated the audience, which was exceptionally large, on the perfect quiet they observed throughout the prayer. He then referred to two communications he had received from Muslim writers who consoled him against his critics who questioned his right to speak about the purdah or other things pertaining to Islam. The writers asserted, quoting from the Koran, that Islam was broad-based and was exceptionally tolerant. It welcomed criticism and invited the world to study the Koran. One of them also held that no group or nation had remained without a prophet or teacher. He mentioned these communications to show that all Muslims did not hold what he considered to be intolerant views. He hoped too that the audience which contained a large number of Muslims would appreciate the testimony of the two writers who did not appear to be biased.

He then dealt with the following question addressed to him by some of the workers:

The Muslims were boycotting Hindu artisans and craftsmen and were taking to occupations like fishing, fir trade, pan cultivation, etc. Workers who desired to bring about peace between the two communities did not know what to do under the circumstances.

Gandhiji said he hoped that the news was exaggerated and that the boycott was confined to the fewest Muslims possible. He thought that it could not be sustained. The logical result was that any such move would be a compulsory exodus of the Hindus from the Muslim majority provinces, a result he had not heard a single leader encourage or contemplate. He invited his informants to bring the matter to the notice of the authorities, not with a view to having anyone punished but with a view to having an authoritative pronouncement from them. He further advised the audience to pray for wisdom to both the communities.

The second question was: There is a movement for reducing the share of the owner from half to one-third of the agricultural produce. What is your opinion about this?

Gandhiji welcomed the move for the reduction of the landlord’s share from half

---

1 Extracted from “Gandhiji’s Walking Tour Diary”
2 Betel leaf
3 Popularly known as Tebhaga movement; vide also “Talk to Representatives of Krishak Samiti”, 24-1-1947 to one-third. He thought the move was substantial.\(^1\) He was prepared to go further and concede the entire produce to the tillers of the soil. He believed that no one could claim ownership of land, which belonged to God alone. He further believed that no one who did not till the land had any claim to the produce. Only those who toiled should have a share in the output. But in no case should anybody claim proprietorship of the land itself. The land belonged to the Lord of all and therefore to the worker on it. But till that ideal state of things came about, the movement towards the reduction of the landlord’s portion was in the right direction. But he warned the people against the use of compulsion or violence. He could have no part or share in violence. It was a reform to be brought about only by the cultivation of healthy public opinion. The reformers must have patience. He believed implicitly in the aphorism: ‘As the end so the means’. In his opinion it was pernicious to hold that so long as the end was good any means, however violent or unjust, were justified. Many movements had come to grief by reliance on doubtful means.

Harijan, 23-2-1947; and Hindustan Standard, 2-2-1947

487. TELEGRAM TO VINAYAKRAO CHANGOLE

[After January 31, 1947]\(^2\)

VINAYAKRAO CHANGOLE
SECRETARY
DEPRESSED CLASSES LEAGUE
NAGPUR

WIRE RECEIVED YESTERDAY. DO NOT KNOW FULL FACTS. CONSULT VINOBA OR VALUNJKAR.

GANDHI

From the original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library.

Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

488. LETTER TO ATINDRA MOHAN ROY

February 1, 1947

DEAR ATINBABU\(^3\),

I have no such trainer you ask for.\(^4\) My work lies in the opposite direction. Non-violent defence is the supreme self-defence, being

\(^1\) The following five sentences are reproduced from Hindustan Standard.

\(^2\) This was written on a telegram postmarked January 31, 1947.

\(^3\) Secretary and Treasurer of Tippera District Central Relief Committee

\(^4\) The addressee in his letter dated January 20 had asked for a trainer to “train villagers in self-defence”.

VOL. 93: 7 NOVEMBER, 1946 - 16 FEBRUARY, 1947 349 infallible. No trainer is required for the purpose. And in this part of the country, self-defence through training in some kind of arms is suicidal. Anyway I am the wrong person to look to for the purpose.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G. N. 10530

489. LETTER TO SATIS CHANDRA MUKERJI
February 1, 1947

DEAR SATISBABU1,

Your lovely letter.2 I endorse all your propositions though probably I would put them differently and comprise them into one.
But that does not diminish the value of the propositions. Alas I am far as yet from that state! At the same time, I am hastening towards it. If I attain that state or even come near enough to it (and probably that is all that a human being can reach), this problem of Noakhali will be easily solved. Let us see what happens.

Please do not hesitate to write to me or dictate a letter for me whenever you feel like telling me something. Know that your messages will never be a strain on me.

And now I put before you a poser. A young girl (19) who is in the place of granddaughter to me by relation shares the same bed with me, not for any animal satisfaction but for (to me) valid moral reasons. She claims to be free from the passion that a girl of her age generally has and I claim to be a practised brahmachari. Do you see anything bad or unjustifiable in this juxtaposition? I ask the question because some of my intimate associates hold it to be wholly unjustifiable and even a breach of brahmacharya. I hold a totally opposite view. As you are an experienced man and as I have regard for your opinion, I put the question. You may take your own time to 1 (1865-1948), one of the pioneers in the field of swadeshi and national education; edited Dawn, a monthly published from Calcutta, 1897-1913; in 1922, following Gandhiji’s arrest, came to Sabarmati and spent two months helping in bringing out Young India; later took to spiritual pursuits and came popularly to be known as ‘Nanga Baba’

2 For extracts from the addressee’s letter, vide “Letter From Satis Chandra Mukerjee”, 14-1-1947
answer the question. You are in no way bound to answer it if you don’t wish to.

Hope you are well.

Yours,

BAPU

From the original: C. W. 10557

490. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

February 1, 1947

CHI. VALLABHBHAI,

These two friends have told me the tale of their woes. What can I tell them, or do for them? If what they say is correct, it is a painful matter. They asked for an introduction to you; so I am giving this to them.

I hope you are well.

Blessings from

BAPU

SARDAR VALLABHBHAI PATEL
1 AURANGZEB ROAD
NEW DELHI

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, p. 347

491. LETTER TO MANILAL GANDHI

February 1, 1947

CHI. MANILAL,

I got your fine letter. You seem to have made good changes in your diet. I like them. My tapascharya is like the hills which seem beautiful from a distance. I undergo no suffering. People come and see me daily. My ahimsa is being severely tested. You need not worry, however. Remain absorbed in your duty. Do not let the fact of Manu sleeping with me perturb you. I believe that it is God who has prompted me to take that step. If, however, you cannot understand, do not get upset and bear with me. I write this because Kishorelal and others have got upset. I see no reason for that at all. I think Sushila will go there at the earliest opportunity.

Blessings from

BAPU

From Gujarati: C. W. 1445. Courtesy: Sushila Gandhi
492. LETTER TO SUSHILA GANDHI

February 1, 1947

CHI. SUSHILA,

I got your letter. I think it is desirable now that you should go to Phoenix as early as you can.

Give up the desire to see me. It is no joke to come and see me here. It will take a lot of your time and mean much waste of money. Moreover, I shall be touring from village to village. In such circumstances, what discussion can we have about personal matters? And in that case, what would you gain by coming?

I should like you not to get upset by the fact of Manu sleeping with me. But I do wonder whether you can help being upset when a man like Kishorelal could not.¹

From Gujarati: C. W. 1444. Courtesy: Sushila Gandhi

493. INTERVIEW TO “THE HINDU”

NABAGRAM,

February 1, 1947

I will consider my mission fulfilled if I see heart unity among Hindus and Muslims and until this is achieved, I must be moving about in this area.

Gandhiji emphasized to me that this was the first opportunity he had had of testing whether the ahimsa he had been practising was really of the brave. He said that in the past he had successfully tested the efficacy of his non-violence in his struggle with the British Government but he felt that his ahimsa was really not of the brave as somewhere in the background lurked the feeling that superiority in numbers would tend to sway the balance in such a struggle. Gandhiji does not think that real bravery has ever been brought into full play so far in his practice of ahimsa.

Noakhali, Gandhiji said, offered an almost ideal situation for testing whether ahimsa could effectively be used by a small number of people against an almost sullen if not hostile majority all round. The problem here was also complicated by the fact of the existence of a popular Government controlling the destinies of the people. Even if he differed from the politics of those running the Bengal Government he was definite that if democratic Government was good for one Province it was equally good for another and, therefore, he must not do or say anything which would in any way

¹ The letter is incomplete.
derogue from the prestige and authority of the Government. A straight fight with the alien ruling power was one thing for him, but a struggle with his own countrymen, however recalcitrant unwilling they might be in doing the right thing by those under their care, was a thing too difficult for him to contemplate. It was this difficulty that had induced him to keep the Bengal Premier posted with everything he saw or did in and about Noakhali.

Ever since the commencement of his walking tour, Gandhiji has been moving amidst a sullen population on the one side and a frightened one on the other. He is, therefore, engaging himself in the dual task of infusing courage into the frightened Hindus and at the same time convincing the majority community of the right to protection of the minorities. He is placing before both communities his ideal of brotherly living and also a programme of sanitation and rural economy calculated to help both communities to better and healthier living.

Asked if he would regard the return of all refugees to their villages as a sign of success of his ahimsa, Gandhiji replied in the negative and said that it would not be impossible to persuade all refugees to return home within a few days. But this would not be any indication of the success of the ahimsa of the brave; for the refugees would then be relying for protection on those who persuaded them to return. It would be real success if men and women picked up courage and decided of their own accord to return, willing to face cheerfully even death and starvation in preference to surrender or fight. It was towards achieving this that Gandhiji had been addressing Hindus.

_The Hindu, 2-1-1947_

494. TALK WITH A DOCTOR

AMISHAPARA,

_February 1, 1947_

Gandhiji said that he wished to live up to the age of 125 and humorously enquired of the doctor if he could suggest any recipe for that.

In reply to a suggestion by the doctor that he should spend some time in Calcutta to recoup his health, Gandhiji said that he could not leave Noakhali until communal amity had been established there.

_Hindustan Standard, 2-2-1947_

1 He had accompanied Gandhiji from Nabagram to Amishapara.
495. TALK WITH BRITISH ARMY OFFICERS

February 1, 1947

Gandhiji laughingly said that journalists were dangerous people-and he was saying so as a journalist himself. Gandhiji also humorously said that Australia had not only become the white man’s preserve for the present but also, it appeared, for posterity. Gandhiji said that India was, in that respect, too hospitable.

Hindustan Standard, 3-2-1947

496. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

AMISHAPARA,

February 1, 1947

Gandhiji drew the attention of the audience to the fact that the universal law applicable to all meetings was that the visitors should be perfectly still and observe silence no matter how vast the audience was.

Yesterday evening a Maulvi had wanted to speak for a short time. Gandhiji had sensed what he wanted to say. He therefore, contrary to his wont, allowed him to speak for the five minutes which he wanted by the watch. The Maulvi took no more than three minutes but said what he had wanted to say. He resented Gandhiji’s remark on the purdah system in vogue in Bengal as according to him, Gandhiji had no right to speak on the Islamic Law.

Gandhiji thought this was a narrow view of religion. He claimed the right to study and interpret the message of Islam. Gandhiji said that throughout his long life he had had the privilege of mixing with many. Muslims in and out of India but he had nowhere heard anybody say that. Denouncing the system of purdah, which varied from country to country, Gandhiji said that he was certain it had little to do with the Koran. He was not inclined to believe that Islam was so susceptible to damage as to be confined within a narrow space beyond other people’s view. Gandhiji was sure that it was contrary to Islamic teaching.

The Maulvi had further resented coupling of the name of Rama, a mere young king, with Rahim, name of God; similarly of Krishna with Karim. Gandhiji said this was a narrow view of Islam. This erroneous view had emanated from his wrong notion that Rama and Krishna were names of ordinary human beings. Man worshipped the same God under different names and the Koran was not opposed to it. Rama and 1 Eight British Army officers met Gandhiji in the afternoon to convey their good wishes on his peace mission in Noakhali.

2 One of the officers was a young Australian, who introduced himself as a journalist.

3 The reports in the various sources have been collated.

354 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
Krishna were names of God and there was no bar in worshipping God as such, it certainly did not offend Islam. Islam was not a creed to be preserved in a box. It was open to mankind to examine it and accept or reject its tenets. He hoped that this narrow view was not shared by the Muslims of Bengal or India.

Purity of heart was the criterion of a religious man but persons who looted other people’s properties, killed fellow-beings and took God’s name at the same time were irreligious. In this connection Gandhiji wanted to draw the attention of the audience to the work. Dr. Sushila Nayyar was doing in Changirgaon. She wanted to go to Sevagram to attend to the hospital for whose management she was responsible, but her Muslim patients would not let her go till they were restored to health. She had also mentioned that in the village those, who had shared in the loot of October last were of their own accord bringing back some of the looted property. He was of opinion that this was a happy omen. If the infection spread, the courts would have no work to do so far as public loot was concerned. He for one would ask Government to waive the right of prosecution if the looted property was returned. But he said the return must be sincere and full, whether by the guilty one or the public, and not a mere token to avoid prosecution. What he aimed at was a change of heart and not a truce superimposed by the military or the police. A popular ministry could not impose its will on the people. Gandhiji said:

I shall most gladly leave Noakhali when I am certain that all are acting with amity and sincerity, but I shall lay down my life here for the fulfilment of my mission.

Gandhiji then answered the following question:

You have asked rich men to be trustees. Is it implied that they should give up private ownership of their property and create out of it a trust valid in the eyes of the law and managed democratically? How will the successor of the present incumbent be determined on his demise?

In answer Gandhiji said that he adhered to the position taken by him years ago that everything belonged to God and was from God. Therefore it was for His people as a whole, not for a particular individual. When an individual had more than his proportionate portion he became a trustee of that portion for God’s people.

God who was all-powerful had no need to store. He created from day to day. Hence men also should in theory live day to day and not stock things. If this truth was imbibed by the people generally, it would become legalized and trusteeship would become a legalized institution. He wished it became a gift from India to the world. Then there would be no exploitation and no reserves as in Australia and other countries for white men and their posterity. In these distinctions lay the seeds of a war more virulent than the last two. As to the successor, the trustee in office would have the right to nominate his successor subject to legal sanction.
Gandhiji referred to “small-talks, whispers and innuendos” going round of which he had become aware. He was already in the midst of so much suspicion and distrust, he told the gathering, that he did not want his most innocent acts to be misunderstood and misrepresented. He had his granddaughter with him. She shared the same bed with him. The Prophet had discounted eunuchs who became such by an operation. But he welcomed eunuchs made such through prayer by God. His was that aspiration. It was in the spirit of God’s eunuch that he had approached what he considered was his duty. It was an integral part of the yajna he was performing and he invited them to bless the effort. He knew that his action had excited criticism even among his friends. But a duty could not be shirked even for the sake of the most intimate friends.

497. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

AMISHAPARA,

February [1/2]1947

CHI. VALLABHBHAI,

Please go through this letter.

Frydman’ is the same as Bharatanand; Please see if you can grant him Indian citizenship.

* * *

I want you not to be unhappy. Please leave me in the hands of God.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

_Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine_, p. 347

---

1 Gandhiji was at Amishapara on February 1 and 2. The source however has “4”, obviously a slip.

2 Maurice Frydman, a Polish engineer who came to Sevagram in 1938; the inventor of _dhanush takli._
498. TELEGRAM TO KISHORELAL G. MASHRUWALA

[February 2, 1947]

KISHORELAL
HARIJAN ASHRAM
SABARMATI
YOUR LETTER. SEE PUBLIC STATEMENTS′MADE YESTERDAY. WRITING.

BAPU

From a photostat: C. W. 10559

499. LETTER TO ATINDRA MOHAN ROY

SATGHARIA,
February 2, 1947

DEAR ATINBABU,

I have your note. I think you are unnecessarily agitated. I refuse to tax my mind even as to the proposed section until it becomes part of the constitution. And in any case there is no harm in your corresponding with the President of the Congress.

I am destroying your note.

ATINDRA MOHAN ROY
SECRETARY
TIPPERAH DISTRICT CENTRAL RELIEF COMMITTEE
COMILLA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

500. A LETTER

February 2, 1947

DEAR A . . . BABU,

I thank you for your written message conveyed through you by the District Muslim League Secretary.

My answers to the three points’ are as follows :

1 According to My Days with Gandhi this telegram was sent on the day following Gandhiji′s prayer speech referring to his experiments in brahmacharya; vide “Letter to Vallabhbhai Patel”, 1/2/-2-1947.

2 ibid

3 Mujibur Rahman, who had met Gandhiji on January 28, had demanded that all the leaders and volunteers from outside should quit the district, that local Muslims and Hindu leaders should be “left alone” and that Gandhiji′s presence was no longer necessary and as such he should discontinue his prayer meetings in public; vide “Interview to Muslim Deputation”, 28-1-1947

4 ibid
1. If the presence of anyone is a bar to the restoration of normal conditions, such a person or persons should be dealt with by the Government under its powers.

2. Of course, the responsibility for the restoration of peace rests as it must on the local Hindu and Muslim leaders. I should think however that they would not disdain the help of others when it is proffered.

3. If my prayer meetings are disliked by Muslims, they have but to abstain from attendance. I hope it does not mean that non-Muslims may not offer public prayers in the manner they know best. Whilst I must give what weight I can to the opinion of District Muslim League, I must be allowed to judge for myself whether my presence is necessary and whether I must move from place to place or not.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G. N. 10532

501. TALK WITH RIOT VICTIMS

February 2, 1947

My heart weeps not to man but to God. I have not come here to make people weep.

Gandhiji said that man could do nothing but surrender himself completely to the will of God, as everything happens by His will. Great empires had crumbled down. Hitler had desired to conquer the world. What had become of him? People here, as elsewhere, sometimes went mad, but on that account there should be no ill-will between Hindus and Muslims, because they were brothers.

The Hindu, 3-2-1947

502. A TALK

February 2, 1947

No one should come to see me without urgent work or without my sending for him. Therein lies the good not only of myself and the yajna but also of the worker. Everyone should use his discretion and act accordingly.

[From Gujarati]

Eklo Jane Re, p. 113

---

1 Gandhiji visited a ruined house during his walk from Amishapara to Satgharia. The inmates of the house told him that they had nothing to offer him except ashes, for they had lost nine members of the family in the riots.
Gandhiji deliberately referred to his private life because he had never thought that the private life of individuals did not affect the course of the public activities of those individuals. Thus he did not believe that he could be immoral in private life and yet be an efficient public servant. His public conduct was bound to be affected by his private. He held that much mischief was made throughout the world by divorce between public and private conduct. And when he was engaged in the supreme test of non-violence in his life, he wished to be judged before God and man by the sum total of his activities, both private and public. As he had said years ago, non-violent life was an act of self-examination and self-purification whether by an individual, a group or a nation.

This led him to the answers of some questions addressed to him and arising out of his remarks on trusteeship.

Q. Was it possible to defend by means of non-violence anything which could only be gained through violence?
   A. It followed from what he had said above that what was gained by violence could not only be defended by non-violence but the latter required the abandonment of the ill-gotten gains.

Q. Was the accumulation of capital possible except through violence whether open or tacit?
   A. Such accumulation by private persons was impossible except through violent means but accumulation by the State in a non-violent society was not only possible, it was desirable and inevitable.

Q. Whether a man accumulated material or moral wealth he did so only through the help or co-operation of other members of society. Had he then the moral right to use any of it mainly for personal advantage?
   A. No, he had no moral right.

Q. How would the successor of a trustee be determined? Would he only have the right of proposing a name, the right of finalization vested in the State?
   A. As he had said yesterday, choice should be given to the original owner.

---

1 This appeared under the title “Gandhiji on Trusteeship”. Gandhiji began his weekly silence as the prayer started. His written speech was rendered into Bengali and read out by Nirmal Kumar Bose.

2 Vide “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 1-2-1947 who became the first trustee, but the choice must be finalized by the State. Such arrangement puts a check on the State as well as the individual.

Q. When the replacement of private by public property thus took place through the operation of the theory of trusteeship, would the ownership vest in the State, which was an instrument of violence or in associations of a voluntary character like village communes and municipalities, which might of course derive their final authority from State-made laws?

A. That question involved some confusion of thought. Legal ownership in the transformed condition vested in the trustee, not in the State. It was to avoid confiscation that the doctrine of trusteeship came into play retaining for the society the ability of the original owner in his own right. Nor did he, the speaker, hold that the state must always be based on violence. It might be so in theory but the practice of the theory demanded a State which would for the most part be based on non-vioence.

_Harijan_, 16-2-1947

504. LETTER TO SECRETARY, BIHAR PROVINCIAL MUSLIM LEAGUE

SATGHARIA,
[On or before February 3, 1947]

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter of 15th [ultimo]. It came into my hands on the 31st. The Prime Minister of Bengal did send me a copy of the resolutions of your working committee, but I did not know that those were sent to me at your instance. If I had understood so I would undoubtedly have sent you an acknowledgement. So far as I know I have made no public statement with reference to resolutions of your report. But I do confess that they do not bear the impress of sobriety.
And many statements appear to me to be unbelievable. Nevertheless, as you should know, I have made strong recommendation that the Bihar Government should appoint an impartial commission of enquiry into the whole of the painful episode.

1 Gandhiji was at Satgharia on February 2 and 3 1947.
2 The source has “instant”. The addressee had informed Gandhiji about the “unimpeachable instances of human monstrosities in which the Hindus indulged during the period of Bihar carnage”. He had criticized the Congress for its indifference towards riots.
I should be very sorry if your statement about Dr. Mahmood is proved to be true. I am, however, enquiring into the matter.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

THE SECRETARY
BIHAR P. M. LEAGUE

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

505. A NOTE

SATGHARIA,
February 3, 1947

There is a lunatic here.
Manu prescribed the right medicine. It is Ramanama. If a believer repeats it before him rhythmically long enough, he will surely get out of his insanity. Please tell the inmates this much. More from me latter.

From a photostat: C. W. 10558

506. LETTER TO PYARELAL

February 3, 1947

CHI. PYARELAL,

I am sending to J. your letter to him. I think it is better to send also Vinod’s letter to him. The letter you wrote to Vinod, I am sending to him (Vinod). I am enclosing herewith Manu’s letter to you. She should not be hurt anymore. Let her talk to whomsoever she desires. In a way she is tied down at the moment as you are tied down. Even though you are tied down at my bidding, there is continued harmony between the two of you. Future should be entrusted only to God. You are still not doing it and because you are not doing it, Manu is becoming agitated too. This is not right. Either God exists and only His wish is done or He does not exist. There is no middle course. If He exists, there is no question of your breaking down. Even if you have Manu’s good at heart, she must be entrusted to God and must be allowed to shape herself. What more should I write? Wake up if you can.

1 Vide “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 5-2-1947
2 Gandhiji was requested to help an insane patient in the house in which he was put up.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

507. LETTER TO CHANDRAGUPTA VIDYALANKAR
February 3, 1947

BHAI CHANDRAGUPTA,
I do not remember if I have already written to you regarding your scheme. I am sending you Kakasaheb’s opinion which I found lying in my papers here. At present I am unable to do anything more than this.

Blessings from
M. K. GANDHI

[PS.]
Return Kakasaheb’s opinion after reading it.

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 7210. Also C. W. 4866. Courtesy: Chandragupta Vidyalankar

508. TALK WITH A CORRESPONDENT
SADHURKHIL,
February 3, 1947

A pilgrim has to bear every kind of life. Whether rain or water, he must continue on his journey to reach his goal. And I am a pilgrim today. Why should I be afraid of rains or water.

Amrita Bazar Patrika, 6-2-1947

509. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING¹
SADHURKHIL,
February 3, 1947

At the outset, Gandhiji said that what he had said about his private life was not for blind imitation. He never claimed to have extraordinary powers. What he did was for all to do if they conformed to conditions observed by him. If that was not done, those who pretended to imitate his practice were doomed to perdition. What he was doing was undoubtedly dangerous, but it ceased to be so, if the conditions were rightly observed.

¹ Extracted from “Gandhiji’s Walking Tour Diary”. The first paragraph is reproduced from Amrita Bazar Patrika.

Gandhiji referred with hesitation to the resolution passed by the Muslim League on the Constituent Assembly. It considered the Congress resolution to be dishonest and that it did not mean what it said. It was also said that the elections and other dealings of the Assembly were illegal. The speaker pleaded that there should be no imputation of dishonesty by one party to the other. It was not good for the great organization which they both were. There was no reason why they should regard each other as enemies. That practice would not lead them to independence. If the elections and proceedings were illegal their legality should be challenged in a court of law. Otherwise, the charge had no meaning. If they did not wish to recognize the courts as he did in 1920 and later, then the talk of illegality should cease. He would plead with the League that they should go into the Assembly and state their case and influence the proceedings. But if they did not, he would advise them to test the sincerity of the Assembly and see how it dealt with the Muslim problem. It was due to themselves and the rest of the country unless they wanted to rely upon the law of the sword which he was sure they did not wish to do. Then the League had said that the Assembly represented only the caste Hindus. Surely there were in the Assembly the Scheduled Classes, the Christians, the Parsis, the Anglo-Indians and all those who considered themselves sons of India. Then Dr. Ambedkar was good enough to attend the Assembly, not to mention the other large number of the Scheduled Classes. The Sikhs too were still there. It was open to the League to put up their fight within the Assembly.

As to the British Government who the League contended should dismiss the Assembly, he entertained the hope, though he admitted it was somewhat shaken, that they would honestly carry to the end the voluntary document. He submitted that the British Government was bound to act according to the State Paper even if a few Provinces chose to establish their independence in accordance with the Paper. He hoped that the British would not forfeit all credit for honest dealing with India.

Gandhiji concluded by saying that whilst he felt obliged to refer to League politics, he warned the audience against inferring that the Hindus and Muslims were to regard each other as enemies. The League had made no such announcement. Let the political quarrel be confined to the politicians at the top. It would be a disaster if the

---

1 On January 31, in Karachi
2 B. R. Ambedkar (1891-1956); leader of the Depressed Classes, jurist and author; in 1942 formed the Scheduled Castes’ Federation; member, Constituent Assembly; Chairman, Drafting Committee for the Constitution of India quarrel permeated in the villages. The way to Indian independence lay not through the sword but through mutual friendship and adjustment. He was in Noakhali to show what real Pakistan could mean. Bengal was the one Province in India where it could be demonstrated. Bengal had produced talented Hindus and talented Muslims. Bengal had contributed largely to the national struggle. It was in the fitness of things that Bengal should now show how the Muslims and the Hindus could live together as friends and brothers. Then there would be no reason for Bengal to remain a deficit province. It ought to be a province of plenty.

_Harijan, 23-2-1947; and Amrita Bazar patrika, 6-2-1947_

510. LETTER TO GADIYA, HAJIRA AND M. M. NAGDEE

P. O. RAMGANI,
NOAKHALI,
February 4, 1947

DEAR FRIENDS,

Gandhiji is in receipt of your letter dated the 22nd of January, 1947, in which you have spoken about Abdul Hamid Nagdee. He has not, however, heard from Nagdee Saheb as yet. But that is not of much moment. If you are in touch with Abdul Hamid please let him write directly to Gandhiji. Gandhiji wrote several letters to him but had no reply from him. If Abdul Hamid is ready to go to South Africa, Gandhiji would gladly find his passage on behalf of Abdul Hamid’s father.

Yours sincerely,

NIRMAL KUMAR BOSE

GADIYA NAGDEE
HAJIRA NAGDEE
M. M. NAGDEE

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library.
Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

511. LETTER TO HASHMI

February 4, 1947

BHAI HASHMI,

What a thing for you to teach me Hindustani lesson in English! You too have written to me in anger like those who have graduated from the Aligarh University. One does not care for facts while in anger. You have not even cared to ascertain the facts. You write that I can make the Congress do anything. The fact is quite the contrary. You say that Congress has done nothing about the Nagari and Urdu scripts. The truth is that the resolution passed by the Congress at Kanpur. . . .

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

512. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

SADHURKHIL,
February 4, 1947

At the time of Gandhiji’s speech some Muslim friends wished to read an address in Bengali which Gandhiji said might be read if it pleased the friends. It referred to the music before mosques, cow-slaughter, etc. Gandhiji said he was not concerned with these questions. They were questions of law. He wanted to capture their hearts and see them welded into one. If that was attained, everything else would right itself. If their hearts were not united, nothing could be right. Their unfortunate lot would then be slavery. He asked them to accept the slavery of the one Omnipotent God no matter by what name they addressed Him. Then they would bend the knee to no man or men. It was ignorance to say that he coupled Rama, a mere man, with God. He had repeatedly made it clear that his Rama was the same as God. His Rama was before, is present now and would be for all time. He was Unborn and Uncreated. Therefore, let them tolerate and respect the different faiths. He was himself an iconoclast but he had equal regard for the so-called idolaters. Those who worshipped idols also worshipped the same God who was everywhere, even in a clod of earth, even in a nail that was pared off. He had Muslim friends whose names were Rahim, Rahman, Karim. Would he therefore join on to the name of God when he addressed them as Rahim, Karim or Rahman?

Let them beware of the thought that all was well in Noakhali or the neighbouring parts. If the reports he received were at all true, things had not quite settled down. He did not refer to these things or the destruction that had been wrought because he did not wish to excite passion. He did not believe in retaliation. He had lived with Pathans. Badshah Khan⁴, being tired of retaliation which had descended from generation to generation, had learnt the virtue of non-violence. He did not claim perfection for him. He could be angered. But he did claim for his friend the wisdom that dictated to him restraint on one’s love of vengeance. He wanted the same thing in Noakhali. Unless they sincerely believed that without real peace between the communities there was neither Pakistan nor Hindustan, slavery was their lot.

---

¹ Presumably the reference is to the resolution passed by the Congress in 1925.
² The letter is incomplete.
³ Extracted from “Gandhiji’s Walking Tour Diary”
⁴ Abdul Ghaffar Khan
He had a visit from four Muslim friends who deplored the fact that he had not corrected the exaggeration about the number of murders in Noakhali and the adjacent parts. He had not done so because he did not wish to bring out all he had seen. But if it at all mended matters he was free to declare that he had found no evidence to support the figure of a thousand. The figure was certainly much smaller. He was also free to admit that the murders in number and brutalities in Bihar eclipsed those in Noakhali. But that admission must not mean a call for him to go to Bihar. He did not know that he could render any greater service by going to Bihar than from here. He would not be worth anything if without conviction he went there at the bidding of anybody. He would need no prompting, immediately he felt that his place was more in Bihar than in Noakhali. He was where he thought he could render the greatest service to both the communities.

_Harijan_, 23-2-1947

513. LETTER TO EDMOND AND YVONNE PRIVAT

SRINAGAR CAMP,
ADDRESS AS AT KAZIRKHIL,
P. O. RAMGANI, NOAKHALI,
_February 5, 1947_

MY DEAR ANAND AND BHAKTI,

It was a perfect delight to receive your letter.

It is interesting to hear about Mr. R.’s views. What you said was perfectly true, namely, without purity of heart real non-violence was impossible. If Mr. R. is of opinion that purity of heart is not an essential of non-violent conduct I would like to know the reason why he thinks so.

That the real non-violent conduct of a person may well be followed in practice by the multitude is perfectly true. Such was my case and is today. But the prime mover has to be _au fait_ with the science of non-violence.

That Mr. R. may be an atheist would not matter if his conduct corresponds to that of a man of God. Such for instance was Bradlaw’ [sic]. His atheism was only so-called. He had faith in the moral

---

1 The name is omitted in the source.
2 Charles Bradlaugh (1833-91); an English free-thinker and radical government of the world and his conduct was so straight that his funeral was attended by several clergymen. I was an eye-witness because I attended the funeral myself.\(^1\) His body was cremated at Woking\(^2\).

I wonder if this answers your question. If this does not you must tax me again.

My walking pilgrimage is going on steadily and it certainly gives me immense peace of mind. The upshot I do not know, nor do I care to know. Man has no control over results. That is the sole prerogative of God. Hence I can sing with Cardinal Newman:

\begin{quote}
One step enough for me
I do not choose to see the distance scene
Lead Thou me on.
\end{quote}

You know the hymn, don’t you? The initial verse of the hymn is: “Lead Kindly Light, amid the encircling gloom.”

I hope you will soon get your Harijan. I am exceedingly sorry that you have been without it all these months. I say “months” \([as]\) it was revived only recently.\(^3\)

I hope both of the babies are looking as young as when we first met.

Tell me when you think you will be ready to pay another visit to India.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G. N. 2341

514. LETTER TO C. P. RAMASWAMY IYER

February 5, 1947

DEAR FRIEND,

I have very hastily glanced through the Press communiqué which you have been good enough to send me. Is there not a discrepancy between para 2 and para 45?

The reservation powers seem to me to be so great as virtually to neutralize the liberality of the promised constitution. Further than this

\(^1\) Vide “An Autobiography”
\(^2\) The source, however, has “Geoking”.
\(^3\) On February 10, 1946
I dare not go. Naturally I would like yours' to be the most progressive State in the whole of India.

C. P. RAMASWAMY

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

515. LETTER TO JOHN HAYNES HOLMES
February 5, 1947

DEAR DR. HOLMES,

You have given me not only exciting but welcome news. The news appears to be almost too good to be true and I am not going to believe it in its entirety unless you are physically in India.

Of course we shall, as we must, meet, no matter in what part of India I happen to be at the time. My pilgrimage is the longest part of my life. I am only hoping and praying that God will give me the strength to go through the fire. “Do or die” was the motto given in 1942. It is the motto, having given it then, I must endeavour to live it myself.

I am glad you are to come via London and that for many reasons, besides seeing Lord Pethick-Lawrence. Many things will have happened here between now and October.

I have no doubt about your ability to do full justice to the challenge that has come your way.

COMMUNITY CHURCH OF NEW YORK

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

516. LETTER TO M. A. ABDULLA
February 5, 1947

DEAR KHAN SAHEB,

It is due to you to inform you that Sri Ramachandran who is an ex-air man and who had absconded and changed name and who ultimately took shelter under me has suddenly left me. I do not know whether you need or can do anything against him. But it is well for you to know that such a man is at large in Noakhali. He belongs to Malabar. I am sorry for him. He can be a good worker if he is steady.

S. P.

NOAKHALI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 Namely Travancore, where the addressee served as Dewan SRINAGAR (BENGAL),
February 5, 1947

CHI. VALLABHBHAI,

I got your letter. I made a long speech1 about the League. A report of it has been sent to the Press. You may have read it in the newspapers. It summarizes my views on the subject.

I take the Cabinet Mission statement to mean that there is nothing to fear if even the Princes do not join the Constituent Assembly. Nothing will be lost even if they do not interpret it in the same way. And if they do, it will only be worthy of them and we shall be able to work without obstruction. It is as clear as daylight to me that there is no need to put up with shortages in food and cloth. It is another matter if I cannot convince others about it. In such circumstances it makes no difference whether or not I come there. My place is here only. I am satisfied with what I can do here. I believe that I am bringing some little solace to the people here and may be able to bring more if I continue the work. But that is in the hands of Providence.

I hear that your opposition is reported to be the reason why the Bihar Ministry does not appoint an inquiry commission.2 I do not believe the story, but I bring it to your notice. If a commission is not appointed, it will do great harm. The Ministry will be regarded as guilty. If their work has been above board, what harm can the Commission do to them? Considerable pressure is being exerted on me, but I do not go because I have reposed confidence in the Ministers. But if a Commission is not appointed after all, I shall have no choice but to go to Bihar.

1 On February 3; vide “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 3-2-1947
2 In his reply dated February 10, the addressee wrote: “Who told you I have a hand in the non-appointment of a Commission of Inquiry in Bihar? I do hold the opinion that there is no gain but only harm if the Commission is appointed. If in spite of it a Commission is appointed, how can I prevent it? . . . . The Bihar Governor is behind the non-appointment of the Commission. The Viceroy, too, does not want it.”
I hope you are taking sufficient care of your health.

Blessings from

BAPU

SARDAR VALLABHBHAI
HOME MINISTER
NEW DELHI

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 348-9

518. LETTER TO ASHRAF ALI
February 5, 1947

BHAI ASHRAF ALI,

I have your letter written in a beautiful hand. Is it for me or for you to say which Rama I worship? If only I am entitled to say what I do or believe in, I may tell you that my Rama is not a human being. My Rama is present today, was present in the past and will be present in the future too. He is invisible and formless. That is why to me Rama, Krishna, Rahim and Karim are all names of the same Being.

How is it that you invite me to visit your school while you are yourself in Bombay?

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

519. LETTER TO SHRIKRISHNA SINHA
February 5, 1947

BHAI SHRIKRISHNA SINHA,

I am sending you the letter and the papers received from Jamiat-ul-Ulema in connection with Monghyr. You may send the reply to me in Urdu or English and return the papers.

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

520. LETTER TO ABDUL HAMID AZMI
February 5, 1947

BHAI ABDUL HAMID AZMI SAHEB,

I have your letter and copy of the Press statement enclosed therewith. If all that you say is true, I should give serious thought to the matter. I am making enquiries. ¹ I shall write to you again if I have anything to communicate. You have obliged me by writing to me. I suppose you know that I have advised the Bihar Government to appoint an impartial commission to look into the events in Bihar.

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

521. LETTER TO SYED MAHMUD

KAZIRKHIL CAMP

P. O. RAMGUNJ, NOAKHALI,

February 5, 1947

BHAI MAHMUD².

The secretary of the Muslim League has written to me. An extract from that letter is as follows:

I have reports that the Hindu mentality is so strong in the Congress Cabinet of the Bihar Government that even a Muslim colleague is avoided. I am told that Maulana Abul Kalam Azad and Dr. Rajendra Prasad decided that Dr. Mahmood be entrusted with the relief operations in Bihar to inspire the lost Muslim confidence, still he is kept at arms length. ³

Please write to me whether this is correct and if it is what you have done in the matter. The Secretary further writes:

One of your Ministers who undertook tour of the affected areas is Dr. Mahmood. He can give you a true idea of the brutalities and damages. We do not want to exaggerate the facts. They are of such enormity that no one can honestly minimize their impact. Even now the Government is callously indifferent. They have lost the confidence of the Bihar Muslims. ⁴

Please let me know all the facts.

From a photostat of the Urdu: G. N. 5100

¹ Vide the following item.
² Minister for Development and Transport, Bihar
³ The quoted paragraphs are in English.
⁴ ibid
522. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

SRINAGAR,
February 5, 1947

Gandhiji began his remarks by asking the volunteers to refrain from providing decorations and a kind of ornamental shade where he sat. He was averse to all these things. It was a waste of labour and money. All that was needed was a raised seat with something clean and soft to rest his fatless and muscleless bones. He wanted to deal with that evening with a question that arose out of the meeting of the third instant but he could not deal with on the fourth as he had to deal with the statement read to him by the Muslim friends. The question was as follows:

You have asked those provinces which have the necessary courage to frame their own constitutions and then ask the British army to quit their territory as proof of the attainment of independence. What, in your opinion, should be the basis of the franchise in those free Provinces of India? Should communal electorates be replaced by functional ones in the Assemblies? Should there be functional instead of communal representation? Should there be joint electorates with reservation of seats for communal minorities or functional groups? Should there be favoured representation of any group for the time being? If so, of what group? Should we have joint electorate, and full adult franchise?

Gandhiji’s answer was unequivocal. Even one Province could frame its own constitution and enforce it, provided that it was backed not by a majority of one but by an overwhelming majority. Gandhiji held that no power on earth could resist the lovers of liberty who were ready not to kill opponents but to be killed by them. This was the view that he had enunciated at one time. But today they had made considerable progress. He put a favourable interpretation on the Cabinet Mission’s State Paper. So far as he could see they could not resist the declared wish of a single province. If that was true of one province, say Bengal, how much more was it so for a number of provinces which the Constituent Assembly undoubtedly represented? But he was indifferent as to what the British Government said so far as India’s independence was concerned. That rested with the people and with no outside power. Nor was there any question as to what India would do if the State Paper was withdrawn. India had been accustomed to a life in the wilderness. When Pandit Nehru and his friends accepted office he had said that it was not a bed of roses but a bed of thorns. Their goal was liberty and liberty they would have no matter what happened.

Naturally he could speak with confidence when the people had only non-violence in view as a steadfast simple policy without reservation. If, on the other

1 Extracted from “Gandhiji’s Walking Tour Diary”
2 Amrita Bazar Patrika, 8-2-1947 here has “in 1919”.

372 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
hand, they thought they could drive away the English by the sword they were vastly mistaken. They did not know the determination and courage of the British. They would not yield to the power of the sword. But they could not withstand the courage of non-violence which disdained to deal death against death. He knew no other power higher than non-violence. And if they were still without real independence, it was, he was sure, because the people had not developed sufficient non-violence. Anyway, the State Paper in his opinion was in answer to the non-violent strength that India had so far developed.

If they contemplated the last War, they would plainly see that whilst the enemy powers so-called were crushed, the Allied Powers had won but an empty victory. Apart from the wanton destruction of human heads, they had—between the Allies and the enemies—succeeded in draining the world of its food materials and cloth. And the former seemed to be so dehumanized that they entertained the vain hope of reducing the enemies to helotry. It was a question whom to pity more—the Allies or the enemies. Therefore he asked the people bravely to face the consequence whatever it was, feeling secure in the confidence born of non-violence, be it as an honest policy.

As to the franchise he swore by the franchise of all adults, males and females, above the age of twenty-one or even eighteen. He would bar old men like himself. They were of no use as voters. India and the rest of the world did not belong to those who were on the point of dying. To them belonged death, life to the young. Thus he would have a bar against persons beyond a certain age, say fifty, as he would against youngsters below eighteen. Of course, he would debar lunatics and loafers. Of course, in India free, he could not contemplate communal franchise. It must be joint electorate, perhaps with reservation of seats. Nor could he contemplate favouritism for anyone, say Muslims, Sikhs or Parsis, for example. If there was to be favouritism he would single out physical lepers. They were an outcome of the crimes of society. If moral lepers would ban themselves, the physical lepers would soon be extinct. And they, poor men, were so frightened of modern society that they put forth no claims. Educate them truly and they would make ideal citizens. Anyway, side by side with adult franchise or even before that he pleaded for universal education, not necessarily literary except perhaps as an aid. English education, he was convinced, had starved their minds, enervated them and never prepared them for brave citizenship. He would give them all sufficient knowledge in the rich languages of which any country would be proud. Education in the understanding of the rights of citizenship was a short term affair if they were honest and earnest.

_Harijan_, 2-3-1947
523. TELEGRAM TO KISHORELAL G. MASHRUWALA

[On or after February 5, 1947]

KISHORELAL
HARIJAN ASHRAM
AHMEDABAD

CANT DECIPHER NATHJI'S ADDRESS. HE IS WELCOME IF HE CAN COME THOUGH I HAVE PUBLICLY DECLARED MY VIEWS.

BAPU

From the original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

524. QUESTION BOX

INTELLECTUAL AND MANUAL WORK

Q. Why should we insist on a Rabindranath or a Raman earning his bread by manual labour? Is it not sheer wastage? Why should not brain workers be considered on a par with manual workers, for both of them perform useful social work?

A. Intellectual work is important and has an undoubted place in the scheme of life. But what I insist on is the necessity of physical labour. No man, I claim, ought to be free from that obligation. It will serve to improve even the quality of his intellectual output. I venture to say that in ancient times Brahmins worked with their body as with their mind. But even if they did not, body labour is a proved necessity at the present time. In this connection I would refer to the life of Tolstoy and how he made famous the theory of bread-labour first propounded in his country by the Russian peasant Bondaref.

DHARAMPUR (NOAKHALI) February 6, 1947

Harijan, 23-2-1947

1 This was in reply to the addressee's telegram of February 5, 1947 which read: “Guess statement being reconsidered. Suggest invite Nathji for discussion before taking irreconciliable step. Nathji’s address Shanti Kunj, Bazar Dadar.”
2 Kedarnath Kulkarni; vide also “Letter to Amtussalaam”, 22-1-1947
3 Vide “Letter to Vallabhbhai Patel”, 1/2-2-1947
4 Rabindranath Tagore
5 C. V. Raman, the physicist
6 Amrita Bazar Patrika, 10-2-1947, published this as Gandhiji’s answer given at Prasadpur, on Friday, February 7, to a question by Bina Das, a Congress worker in a neighbouring village.
525. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

February 6, 1947

I know that if I were free I could take my share in trying to solve the various problems that arise in our country. But I feel that I should be useless unless I could do something here. . . . We are all in the hands of Power which we call God.

* * *

Very great pressure is being put upon me to go to Bihar because they all say that things are not properly represented to me on behalf of the Bihar Government. I am watching.

526. LETTER TO MIRABEHN

February 6, 1947

The way to truth is paved with skeletons over which we dare to walk.

527. A NOTE

February 6, 1947

I had your wire, but I have not sent you a reply back by wire. That does not mean that I do [not] want your khadi. I shall be able to take every yard of what you have. I think you have not sent me the price list. Send me the price list. I may take some time before I send for your khadi. You are at liberty to sell what you have if there is any importunate customer. Otherwise you can reserve what you have for me, and not worry about the sale of what you had when I wrote. I have yet preserved a sheet of your writing “Septic Tank v. Earth Latrines”. Are you going to rewrite it as you said you would?

Whether I succeed in writing to you or not you keep me informed of your movements and your health.

1 Nehru in his letter dated January 30, 1947, had written: “I know that we must learn to rely upon ourselves and not run to you for help on every occasion. But we have got into this bad habit and we do often feel that if you had been easier of access, our difficulties would have been less.” Vide also “Extract from Letter to Abul Kalam Azad”, 12-2-1947
The pilgrimage on foot is going on according to time-table. Satis Babu has given me no more than four miles at the most. What I do in the evening depends largely on me. I think it comes to . . .

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

528. LETTER TO PYARELAL

February 6, 1947

CHI. PYARELAL,

I have gone through your letter, as also your letter to Manu. Come if you must. I do not see any good in it. That will show that you have no trust in God – I still say that you should leave Manu and yourself in the hands of God. I am giving it a lot of time. The more you try the more complicated the situation will become. There is nothing for you to explain. But if you are convinced that you cannot keep away for the present then come. You can serve Manu better from there if you so decide. Understand that I am not preventing you, but if the picture I have presented can help you to check yourself then stay back.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Manu says: “I would not know. You can write what you want.”

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

529. LETTER TO TULSIRAM

February 6, 1947

BHAI TULSIRAMJI,

I have your letter, and also the two books. They are very good but too long for a beginner. Send me a small book in Sanskrit if you can find one. If you cannot, I shall manage. Sharmaji met me. Why does he keep indifferent health? He ought to regain his health through nature cure.

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

\(^1\) Incomplete in the source
530. LETTER TO EKANATH

February 6, 1947

BHAI EKANATH,

I have your letter. I am glad to learn that you try to provide treatment to both Hindu and Muslim patients and they accept your services. I have already spoken about cleanliness in my speeches. But I shall keep your suggestion in mind and will say something about it.\footnote{Vide also the following item.}

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

531. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

DHARAMPUR,

February 6, 1947

Gandhiji referred to a letter he had received from the Medical Superintendent of the Marwari Relief Society. The doctor said that he treated both Hindus and Musalmans without any distinction. Muslim men and women gladly accepted his services. He noticed that in this part of the world the Muslims were poor. There was dirt and insanitation wherever he went. Would he (Gandhiji) say something about it?

He (Gandhiji) would gladly do so. For he had been a lover of cleanliness and sanitation for over fifty years. He had to speak much in disparagement of the West. It was therefore a pleasure to him to be able to say that he had learnt the laws of cleanliness from Englishmen. He was pained to see the same tanks in Noakhali used for drinking and cleaning purposes. It was wrong. The people thoughtlessly dirtied the streets, lanes and footpaths by spitting everywhere and clearing their noses. This was the cause of many diseases in India. No doubt, their chronic poverty was responsible for the diseases. But their chronic breach of the laws of sanitation was no less responsible. It was surprising that India lived at all. But it was worst in point of high death rate. America was probably the first in the list. And then those that lived were specimens of living death. The sooner therefore the inhabitants of Noakhali attended to the laws of sanitation the better for them. Poverty was no bar to perfect sanitation.

Then there was an invasion of Pressmen from far and near. The expression, Press Camp, was an attractive expression. But this Press Camp was in keeping with the village surroundings and that too with his. His surroundings were inconsistent with pomp. The Pressmen who accompanied him were living under difficult conditions. They had to live in such huts as the villagers were able to provide. They had no unlimited accommodation. He would advise them not to venture out but be satisfied with the news that the five or six were able to provide. His barefoot walk need not provide sensation. It ought not to excite people. It was no difficulty for him. The earth of Noakhali was like velvet and the green grass was a magnificent carpet to walk on. It reminded him of the soft English grass he had noticed in England. It was wholly unnecessary to wear sandals to be able to walk on the Noakhali earth and grass. He could not probably have done it in Gujarat, and then he had inherited the traditions of his country. A pilgrimage was always performed barefoot. For him this tour was a pilgrimage pure and simple. But that should be no attraction to Pressmen and others. He considered it as no strain on him. And if God willed it, He would allow him to pull through it.

\footnote{Extracted from “Gandhiji’s Walking Tour Diary”}

Let the Pressmen save the time and money; the latter they could contribute to the Noakhali Relief Fund or the never-to-end Harijan Fund.

He then came to the questions put to him.

Q. Supposing one or the other of the provinces wishes to declare its independence, what kind of constitution would you advise them to prepare? In 1925, you declared that in the Free India of your dreams only those would have voting rights who had contributed by manual labour to the service of the State. Do you adhere to that advice today with regard to the above provinces?

A. Independence could be the same as for the whole of India. He adhered to what he had said in 1925, viz., that all adults above a certain age, male or female, who would contribute some body labour to the State would be entitled to the vote. Thus a simple labourer would easily be a voter whereas a millionaire or a lawyer or a merchant and the like would find it hard if they did not do some body labour for the State.

Q. If contiguous provinces in India do not declare such independence but scattered ones do so, would not the presence of the non-federating units create difficulties for the rest in the matter of common action?

A. He saw no difficulty if the society was of his conception, that is, based on non-violence. Thus supposing populous Bengal with its gifted Tagores and Suhrawardys framed a constitution based on independence and Assam with its opium habit dreamed away life, Orissa with its skeletons had no wish and Bihar was occupied in family slaughter, they would all three be affected and covered by Bengal. Such infectiousness was inherent in his scheme of independence which was friend to all and enemy to none. It might well be that his was a voice in the wilderness. If so, it was India’s misfortune.

Q. Do you expect the constitution of the free provinces to be made so attractive that others would voluntarily be drawn into it?
A. Attractiveness was inherent in everything that was inherently good.

Q. Supposing the whole of Group A forms a common constitution, do you think provinces which are now under Group B or C will be able to join A if they so desired?

A. It went without saying that if the Group A succeeded in framing a good constitution not only would it be open to B and C to join, they would irresistibly be drawn to it.

Q. What about the States? Who will decide whether a State should join the Union or not: the present rulers or the people? If it is to be the latter then what changes would you expect to be first made in the constitutions of the present States?

A. He was a mere humble ryot but he belonged to the many crores. The Rajas were nominally 640, in reality they were probably less than 100. Whatever the number was, they were so few that in an awakened India, they could only exist as servants of the ryots not in name but in actual practice. He did not share the fear underlying the question that the British would be so dishonest as to play the Rajas against the ryots. That was not the note of the Cabinet Mission Paper. But why should India depend upon the British Cabinet? When India was ready, neither the British nor the Rajas, nor any combination of the Powers could keep India from her destined goal, her birthright, as the Lokamanya\(^1\) would have said.

Harijan, 2-3-1947

532. LETTER TO N. K. BOSE

February 7, 1947

CHI. NIRMALBABU,

I never succeeded in writing to you on your first personal letter. The second on B’s relation with A now comes. I must undertake this second today. I sent your letter to A. You left it open for me to do so. My loyalty to him demanded that I should.

B has led you into doing an injustice to A. I discussed it with her. She saw the truth of it. A’s love is wholly free from animal passion. I have called it poetic. It is not a perfect adjective but I can find no better. He loved once a girl with the same passion with which he loves B. In either case, it was philanthropic. The first came in a flash, the second took practically two years to discover. He thought he would give B the best of him in point of education. In his opinion both cases went wrong because of my initial aversion. In the first, I relented when, as A thinks, it was too late. In the second, it is almost too late. The first girl is married. He is entitled to hope till B is married elsewhere, if she is. So far as B knows herself, it is a sealed book. Now mark the beauty of it. A says so long as B does not change her mind, she will be as sister or daughter to him and [that he] would never make any other advances to her. B believes this assurance, what she objects to is his shadowing her as she calls it.

\(^1\) B. G. Tilak

If he does not get B as wife, he will never think of making love to another woman. He is too pure to think of any such thing. If you accept my analysis, you will render justice to A and lead B aright.

I do wish you could see that in non-violent conduct, whether individual or universal, there is an indissoluble connection between private, personal life and public. You may be as generous and charitable as you like in judging men, but you cannot overlook private deflections from the right conduct. If you are convinced about this proposition, you should pursue my connection with Manu and if you find a flaw, try to show it to me.

I have written in order to save your time and to let you think. But I shall welcome discussion, if you like it.

Asirbad

BAPU

My Days with Gandhi, pp. 156-7

533. LETTER TO PYARELAL

February 7, 1947

CHI. PYARELAL,

Your agitation disturbs me. My mind works in a way contrary to yours. In such a situation, one must follow one’s own counsel. So come. Sushila Pai has just arrived unexpectedly.

What more should I write?

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

1 Blessings
534. LETTER TO KRIPANATH

February 7, 1947

BHAI KRIPANATH,

I have your letter. I have not wholly understood it. But I shall be able to say something if you tell me what your wife is doing.

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

535. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

PRASADPUR,

February 7, 1947

QUESTION: You have always been against charity and have preached the doctrine that no man is free from the obligation of bread-labour. What is your advice for people who are engaged in sedentary occupations but lost their all in the last riots? Should they migrate and try to find a place where they can go back to their old accustomed habits of life or should they try to remodel their life in conformity with your ideal of bread-labour for everybody? What use shall their special talents be in that case?

In reply, Gandhiji said that it was true that for years he had been against charity as it was understood and that he had for years preached the duty of bread-labour. In this connection he mentioned the visit he had had from the District Magistrate and Zaman Saheb along with a police officer. They wanted his opinion about giving doles to the refugees. They had already decided to put before them the work of removal of the water hyacinth, repair of roads, village reconstruction or straightening out their own plots of land or building on their lands. Those who did any one of these things had a perfect right to rations. He said that he liked the idea. But as a practical idealist he would not take the refugees by storm. A variety of work should be put before the people and they should have one month’s notice that if they made no choice of the occupations suggested, nor did they suggest some other acceptable occupation but declined to do any work though their bodies were fit, they would be reluctantly obliged to tell the refugees that they would not be able to give them doles after the expiry of the notice. He advised the refugees and their friends to render full co-operation to the Government in such a scheme of work. It was wrong for any citizen to expect rations without doing some physical work.

He could never advise people to leave their homes. He would like even one solitary Hindu to feel safe under any circumstances and would expect the Muslims to make him perfectly safe in their midst. He should welcome them to worship God in the way they knew.

1 Extracted from “Gandhiji’s Walking Tour Diary”

He certainly did not consider money got through speculation as rightly gained. Nor did he consider it impossible for man to shed bad or evil habits at any time. If everybody lived by the sweat of his brow, the earth would become a paradise. The question of the use of special talents hardly needed separate consideration. If everyone laboured physically for his bread, it followed that poets, doctors, lawyers, etc., would regard it their duty to use those talents gratis for the service of humanity. Their output will be all the better and richer for their selfless devotion to duty.

_Harijan_, 2-3-1947

536. PREFACE TO “ASHRAM BHAJANAVALI”

It is with sadness that I write this preface to the new edition of _Ashram Bhajanavali_. Its compiler was the late Shri Khare Shastri.

I do not feel myself equal to the task. But this much I can say that the primary aim of the collection was to sustain right conduct. Let it also be remembered that it has brought together a group of people who for years have been reciting these hymns with great devotion. And, thirdly, it has not restricted itself to any particular sect or religion. Gems available from all places have been collected. Therefore many Hindus, Muslims, Christians and others, recite from it with pleasure and derive whatever moral sustenance they can.

Shri Kishorelal Mashruwala has taken great pains to translate the Sanskrit verses.

M. K. GANDHI

PRASADPUR, February 8, 1947

[From Hindi]

_Ashram Bhajanavali_

537. LETTER TO E. F. McINERNY

_February 8, 1947_

This is the letter I promised you when you were good enough to see me yesterday.

I am quite clear that you should not abruptly stop rations until

---

1 Narayan Moreshwar Khare, who died on February 6, 1938
2 For their rendering into English by Gandhiji.
3 N. K. Bose explains: “. . . there was a proposal for closing down refugee camps, Gandhiji woke up at night and wrote the . . . letter to the Magistrate of the District.”
due notice (at least one month) of their stoppage is given to the refugees that they will be stopped unless one of the specified items of work is done by them against the rations which should be adequate and medically fit for consumption. The items should include:

1. Road construction or road repair for at least two hours per day, Sundays excluded.

2. Removal of water hyacinth for the same period as in (1), under supervision.

3. House building on their own vacated lands for the same period as in (1), with material and tools supplied by the Government.

4. Village reconstruction for the same period as in (1).

5. Cleaning of tanks for the same period as in (1).

6. Hand-spinning for four hours per day, cotton and wheel or takli being supplied by the Government; spinning to include ginning, carding or tunai or punai.

7. Weaving for the same period as in (6), tools and accessories and yarn, double-twisted in the case of hand-spun, being supplied by the Government.

8. Dhenki-husking, same period as in (1), dhenkis being supplied by the Government.

9. Oil-pressing out of coconut or seeds supplied by the Government.

10. Any other village craft chosen by the Government or refugees, approved by the Government for the period as in (1) or (6) as the case may be.

Efficient working of the foregoing is wholly dependent upon a well-thought-out scheme capably managed by the Government. This is no famine measure. It is conceived wholly in the spirit of the maxim, no labour no food.

No breakdown in transport or other Government machinery should stop the supply of rations to the helpless unfortunate sufferers.

I would suggest that refugees who are not willing or are otherwise incapable may be supplied rations against payment at fixed rates.

The time for ploughing for the next crop is soon ebbing away.
Therefore agricultural implements, bullocks and seeds have to be supplied at once or disaster may have to be faced.

This was written at 2 a. m. and has not been seen by Shri Satis
Chandra Das Gupta of Khadi Pratishthan. I would suggest your seeing and consulting him since I am wholly ignorant of local conditions.

_My Days with Gandhi_, pp. 141-2

538. LETTER TO NIRANJAN SINGH GILL

_CAMP: PRASADPUR, February 8, 1947_

DEAR SARDARJI,

I have your letter and enclosures. The Chief Minister’s letter seems to me to meet the case. You will now go to Patna and see what the League members have to show and meet the member[s] of the Ministry. Please do not fail to see Dr. Mahmud, Prof. Bari and the other Muslim Minister. Make written notes of what they say. Test accurately what the refugees are getting in the way of food and clothing. Examine the condition of the sanitation of the refugees camps. Thus you will be able to prepare a fairly exhaustive report. Do not make any statement to the Press. Do not be in a hurry to return nor take unnecessary time over the work.

Hazara business is a sorry affair. I have not reached the bottom yet. But of this when we meet.

Things here are not as they should be. That too later.

_Yours,

BAPU_

From a photostat: G. N. 807

539. LETTER TO PYARELAL

_February 8, 1947_

CHI. PYARELAL,

I have your letter. The diary is not ready today. I do not want to detain the courier. I also want to read your letter carefully. Hence, both the diary and the reply will be sent tomorrow. Be completely at _Vide “Letter to H. S. Suhrawardy”, 28-1-1947. Suhrawardy had written to Zaffar Imam of Bihar Muslim League recommending Gill for work in Bihar._

_Vide “Letter to Amtussalaam and Abha Gandhi”, 15-1-1947_

384 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
peace and let us stop discussing this subject altogether. Let us only talk about work.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

540. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NANDIGRAM,
February 8, 1947

Q. The Mussalmans are boycotting the Hindus. Those Hindus who possess more land than they can till themselves are in a serious difficulty. What is your advice to them? What will they do about the surplus land which they hold but cannot till themselves, even if they take up the plough themselves?

A. In answer Gandhiji said that he had heard of the boycott and had made some remarks at previous meetings. He hoped, indeed he knew, that the boycott was not universal in Noakhali. It was probably confined to a few. Whatever the extent, he had no doubt that it was wrong and would do no good to the boycotters as it could not to those against whom it was directed. That opinion was held by him for a large number of years, say sixty. But there was a condition in which he would conceive it possible, i. e., if the Muslims regarded the Hindus as their enemies and wished to avoid their presence in Noakhali. That would amount to a declaration of war from which every Indian would recoil with horror. In isolated cases, his opinion was emphatic. The Hindu under the boycott would allow his land to lie fallow like the Australians or he would sell the surplus land. What was best was that nobody should possess more than he could himself use. That was the ideal the society should strive to reach.

Q. You have been working here for the last three months. Has there been any appreciable change in the mentality of the Hindus?

A. The question could best be answered by the Hindus concerned. He flattered himself with the belief that the Hindus had, at least for the time being, shed their cowardice to an extent.

Q. There is certainly a peace-loving section among the Mussalmans. After your presence in their midst, have they been influenced to such an extent that they are able to assert themselves against the worse element in their own community?

A. As to this third question he was glad that the questioner admitted that there was a peace-loving section among the Muslims of Noakhali. It would be monstrous if there was not. Whether they had developed courage to oppose the bad and mischievous element in Muslim society, he would give the same answer that he gave to the second question. The Muslim friends could reply with certainty. But he was vain enough to believe that several Muslim friends had been so affected. As for instance, the Muslim witnesses in Bhatialpur declared that the destroyed mandir\(^1\) he had opened\(^2\) they would defend against destruction in future with their lives. There were other consoling instances he had met with during his tour.

1 Extracted from “Gandhiji’s Walking Tour Diary”

Q. Several workers are engaged in village work according to your direction. what had been the result of their work on the local Hindu or Muslim population? If you had not been here, would their influence have been equal to what it is at present? Will the present influence of your workers be of a lasting character?

A. As to this fourth question Gandhiji said that if he was pure and meant what he said, his work was bound to survive his death. He believed that there must be perfect correspondence between private and public conduct. Similarly, if his associates were actuated purely by the spirit of service and were pure within and without and were not dominated by the glamour that surrounded him, they would work on with unabated zeal and their joint work would flourish with time. He had never subscribed to the superstition that any good work died with the worker’s death. On the contrary, all true and solid work made the worker immortal by the survival of his work after his death.

_Harijan_, 2-3-1947

541. LETTER TO PYARELAL

_February 9, 1947_

CHI. PYARELAL,

The lessons you give to Manu tend to be very long. I have read them today. Today’s lesson is also long. She cannot digest such long lessons. She must be given short lessons and the handwriting should be big and beautiful like beads. Even I am not able to read these. There should not be so much scratching. She has made this complaint twice or thrice before. I have asked her to write herself. What I have written is only on my behalf. But Manu has seen it and she approves of it. Her grasp is slow. Moreover, right now she does not even wish to

\(^{1}\) Temple
\(^{2}\) On January 14
see all the letters that are received concerning her. Even so they affect her.

Now Shailen has come to read the newspaper. So, I should stop.

\[ \textit{Blessings from } \]
\[ \textit{BAPU} \]

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

\[ \textit{542. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM} \]
\[ \textit{February 9, 1947} \]

DEAR DAUGHTER,

It is now 6.30 a. m. I understand about Abha. It is true that I have no time at all. Then why do you ask for letters from me? I am there with you, if you can understand.

Don’t be in a hurry. Work only according to your capacity. It is enough if you can sit and spin and continue to double the threads.

\[ \textit{Blessings from } \]
\[ \textit{BAPU} \]

[PS.]

Manu sleeps with me. If you want to say anything about it, you may.

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 578

\[ \textit{543. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING}^{1} \]
\[ \textit{BIJOYNAGAR,} \]
\[ \textit{February 9, 1947} \]

Q. It has been our experience that a worker becomes power-loving after some time. How are the rest of his co-workers to keep him in check? In other words, how are we to preserve the democratic character of the organization? We have found that non-co-operation with the party in question does not help. The work of the organization itself suffers.

A. This is not your experience alone; it is almost universal. Love of power is usual in man and often it only dies with his death.

\[ ^{1} \text{This appeared under the title, “Some Important Questions” with the following editorial note: “Gandhiji dealt with some questions that were sent to him during the day. It being his day of silence, he wrote out the answers which were read out at the prayer meeting.”} \]
Therefore, it is difficult for co-workers to keep him in check, if only because they are more likely than not to have the same human frailty; and so long as we do not know a single completely non-violent organization in the world, we cannot claim to know the utterly democratic character of an organization because, as can be definitely proved, no perfect democracy is possible without perfect non-violence at the back of it. The question would be proper if non-co-operation was violent as it often, if not invariably, is. Claiming to know somewhat from experience the non-violent character of non-co-operation, I suggest that given a good cause, non-violent non-co-operation must succeed and no organization can suffer through offering non-violent non-co-operation. The questioner labours under the difficulty of having experience of non-co-operation, at best partially non-violent, at its worst bare-faced violence sailing under the name of non-violence. The pages of the Harijan and Young India are filled with instances of abortive non-co-operation, because of these two vital defects, non-violence being partial or totally absent. During my long experience, I also noticed that those who complain of others being ambitious of holding power are no less ambitious themselves, and when it is a question of distinguishing between half a dozen and six, it becomes a thankless task.

Q. In almost all villages there are parties and factions. When we draft local help, whether we wish it or not, we become involved in local power politics. How can we steer clear of this difficulty? Should we try to bypass both parties and carry on work with the help of outside workers? Our experience has been that such work becomes entirely contingent upon outside aid and crumbles down as soon as the latter is withdrawn. What should we do then to develop local initiative and foster local co-operation?

A. Alas for India that parties and factions are to be found in the villages as they are to be found in our cities. And when power politics enters our villages with less thought of the welfare of the villages and more of using them for increasing the parties’ own power, this becomes a hindrance to the progress of the villagers rather than a help. I would say that whatever be the consequence, we must make use as much as possible of local help and if we are free from the taint of power politics, we are not likely to go wrong. Let us remember that the English educated men and women from the cities have criminally neglected the villages of India which are the backbone of the country. The process of remembering our neglect will induce patience. I have never gone to a single village which is devoid of an honest worker. We fail to find him when we are not humble enough to recognize any merit in our villagers. Of course, we are to steer clear of local politics and this we shall learn to do when we accept help from all parties and no parties, wherever it is really good. I would regard it as fatal for success to bypass villagers. As I knew this very difficulty, I have tried rigidly to observe the rule of one village one worker, except that where he or she does not know Bengali, an interpreter’s help has been given. I can only say that this system has so far answered the purpose. I must, therefore, discount your experiences. I would further suggest that we have got into the vicious habit of coming to hasty conclusions. Before pronouncing such a sweeping condemnation as is implied in the sentence that ‘work becomes entirely contingent upon outside aid and crumbles down as soon as the latter is withdrawn’, I would go so far as to say that even a few years’ experience of residence in a single village, trying to work through local workers, should not be regarded as conclusive proof that work could not be done through and by local workers. The contrary is obviously true. It now becomes unnecessary for me to examine the last sentence in detail. I can categorically say to the principal worker: ‘If you have any outside help, get rid of it. Work singly, courageously, intelligently with all local help you can get and, if you do not succeed, blame only yourself and no one else and nothing else.’

Q. If we are to start khadi work in the devastated areas in Noakhali, should we begin with financial and technical aid from outside or slowly build up the whole structure with local men and money alone?

A. I will say in your own words: ‘Slowly build up the whole structure with local men and money’ taking care to make yourself sure that you know the whole art of spinning in the widest sense I have given to the term. What that sense is you should learn from my writings in the Harijan which you will do if you have the requisite eagerness.

Q. The cultivators and land-owners who used to have their land tilled by Muslim labour have lost two crops namely mircha (long pepper), til seeds and mustard seeds owing to the loot of agricultural implements and bullocks and want of labour from Muslims. The time for ploughing fields for the next boro and aus crop is impending and unless the cultivators get these within fifteen days, they will almost lose that crop also.

A. This is most unfortunate if it is true. I have no doubt that all such land should be put under cultivation not only for the sake of the owners but also for the State, which is or should be more concerned with the cultivation of food crops even than the owners. Therefore the owners should ask the authorities for this assistance and the State should see to it that all such land is beneficially cultivated. It is the duty of the State to ask and encourage Muslim labour to render this essential service whether the owner be a Muslim or a Hindu. The State should certainly see that all labour is adequately paid by fixing the wages.

_Harijan_, 2-3-1947

544. TELEGRAM TO JIVANJI D. DESAI

[On or after February 9, 1947]¹

SIMILAR WIRE RECEIVED FROM KISHORELALBHAI.² SORRY BUT HELPLESS. SURE THEY WILL GIVE NECESSARY HELP TILL NEW ARRANGEMENT MADE. YOU ARE A TRUST. YOU AND TRUSTEES HAVE TO DECIDE WHETHER MY HELP CAN BE TAKEN CONDUCT NAVAJIVAN PAPERS. I SHALL NOT MISUNDERSTAND ANY OF YOU DISSOCIATE FROM MY ACTIVITIES. IF YOU AND TRUST CONSCIENTIOUSLY DESIRE MY ASSOCIATION I SHALL RESUME EDITING FROM HERE. SHOW THIS TRUSTEES OTHERS AND WIRE.

BAPU

_My Days with Gandhi_, p. 158

545. TELEGRAM TO KISHORELAL G. MASHRUWALA

[On or after February 9, 1947]

KISHORELAL
HARIJAN ASHRAM
SABARMATI

SORRY YOUR DECISION. YOU ARE ENTITLED. REGARD IT HASTY. ANY CASE YOU WILL RENDER NECESSARY HELP TILL NEW ARRANGEMENT MADE. WIRED JIVANJI.

BAPU

_My Days with Gandhi_, p. 158

¹ According to the source, this and the following telegram were sent on receipt of the addressee’s telegram late at night on February 9, 1947.
² ibid
³ Vide the following item.
⁴ _Harijan_ papers and correspondence. Charge against Jaisukhlal withdrawn in second letter on learning our misunderstanding. Writing Kishorelal, Narahari.”

390 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
February 10, 1947

CHI. VINOBA,

I do not at all feel happy in having to take your time, but you are being drawn into this.

The friends in our circle have been very much upset because of Manu’s sleeping with me. Kishorelal’s agony is difficult to bear. He is so upset that he is on the verge of breaking down. The same is the case with Narahari and Swami. I do not know how the women at Sevagram and elsewhere must be suffering. Here, on the contrary, everybody knows what is happening but I see no sign of its having any effect. Maybe that prevents me from feeling the full impact of people’s reactions. I keep playing with such fancies, for the co-workers’ pain makes me lose confidence in myself. My own mind, however, is becoming firmer than ever, for it has been my belief for a long time that that alone is true brahmacharya which requires no hedges. My experiments arose from this belief. I did make mistakes in them. Unthinking imitation may also have harmed the persons concerned. But I am not conscious of myself having fallen.

Manu’s sleeping with me is not a part of my experiment, but is a part of the present yajna. My mind daily sleeps in an innocent manner with millions of women, and Manu also, who is a blood relation to me, sleeps with me as one of these millions.

If she stops doing that out of deference to custom or to please co-workers, would I not be a hypocrite of the type described in chapter III [of the Gita]? If I do not appear to people exactly as I am within, wouldn’t that be a blot on my non-violence? I go to this length: Suppose that non-violence has no effect on the people here and I die. If I don’t let Manu sleep with me, though I regard it as essential that she should, wouldn’t that be a sign of weakness in me, and in that case would not my death, since I would have failed to realize perfect ahimsa, be the best thing for me? In other words, would not my experiment in ahimsa and truth remain incomplete or be tainted? Perhaps I have not expressed this last thought clearly. I referred to the subject in three speeches of mine. Fuller reports

1 Swami Anand
2 Of February 1, 2 and 3
appeared in Hindi. I myself drafted the English versions for newspapers. They do not seem to have been published in full. I have, therefore, sent to co-workers copies of the extracts which have appeared. I am sending one to you also. Please let me have, your view.¹

How is Krishnachandra doing? Ask him to write to me.
How are you?

I finished this letter at 6.15 a.m. local time, that is, 5.15 a.m. according to our own time.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C. W. 10545. Courtesy: Vinoba Bhave

547. NOTE TO MANU GANDHI

BIJOYANAGAR,
Monday, February 10, 1947

You must discover a remedy for this cold of yours. Ramanama is an unfailing remedy. If so, it must cure the cold. Remember you had to admit this only a little while ago. I think you should wrap something round your chest and throat. Whatever it may be there is a law concerning Ramanama which brooks no exception, namely, that Nature’s laws must not be violated. Learn to bear this in mind.

[From Gujarati]
Eklo Jane Re, p. 128

548. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING²

BIJOYANAGAR,
February 10, 1947

At the outset Gandhiji referred to the fact that he was to go to Gopinathpur and was assured that it was no more than one and a half miles. He began his trek but Gopinathpur seemed to be receding from view. When they had walked for forty-five minutes he said he should go no further if he was not to collapse. He therefore, retraced his steps. It took full one hour and twenty minutes which was too much for him. In future, those who invited him to walk to a place should measure the time taken by a leisurely walk. He tendered his apology to the Hindus and Muslims of Gopinathpur and they owed an apology to Noakhali for not having been accurate and precise in their speech. He incidentally mentioned that the people were found to have blown their noses on the path. This was dangerous and dirty, especially for a people who had the habit of walking barefoot.

¹ The addressee in his letter dated February 25, 1947, replied that he did not agree with Gandhiji on this issue, as any consciousness of the difference between man and woman was contrary to ideal brahmacharya. But he did not wish to argue.
² Extracted from “Gandhiji’s Walking Tour Diary”

A friend had told him that he found a Muslim trader who had proper scales and a Hindu who had improper scales and asked him whether it was not true that the Muslim traders were honest and the Hindu traders dishonest. He was sure that the inference was wrong. In this imperfect world no community was wholly honest or dishonest. All he could say was that a man who sported false scales for deceiving his customers was a criminal. But he could not take it upon himself to condemn the whole group or community.

Q. You have said that you will stay here as long as perfect peace and amity between the two communities was not established and that you will die here if necessary. Do you not think that such a long stay here will unnecessarily focus Indian and world attention on Noakhali, leading people to think that excesses still continued to be committed here, whereas on the contrary no unseemly acts have been committed by Mussalmans for sometime now?

A. No impartial observer could draw the mischievous inference from his presence. He was there as their friend and servant. His presence had certainly advertised Noakhali as a beautiful place which would be a paradise on earth if the Hindus and the Muslims lived in hearty friendship. It may be that at the end of the chapter he might be noted down as a failure who knew very little about ahimsa. Moreover, it was impossible for him to stay in Noakhali if the Hindus and the Muslims satisfied him that they had established hearty friendship between themselves. He was sorry to tell them that he had evidence to show that things were not quite as they should be.

Q. Don’t you think that the Hindus are artificially keeping up the appearance of tension by staying away from their homes in spite of promises of good behaviour by the Mussalmans which they have also made good in cases where they have been given an opportunity?

A. He did not think that many Hindus were wilfully staying away from their homes. No one would want to be away from his home without attractive inducements. He had heard nothing of such inducements. But he knew that fright and the absence of the wherewithal were keeping them back. Nevertheless, he was assured by the officials that the number returning was satisfactory. They could not cope with a greater number. When these obvious causes were present there was no occasion to draw far-fetched inferences which could not be proved. If, however, there were any instigators keeping them back, the law was there to punish them. The proof of the pudding was in the eating. If it was true that the general body of the Muslims really wanted the refugees back, he was quite sure they would gladly return. But the picture was not so rosy as was painted by the questioner.

Q. Don't you think that the dictates of non-violence and friendship to all demand withdrawal or dropping of cases against the Mussalmans?

A. He did not know that there was much non-violence in the air. Even non-violent conduct could not arrest the course of law. And non-violent conduct on the part of the frightened injured party could not operate until the culprits declared themselves and were penitent. The fact was that not only was there no penitence on their part, but they were absconding. He was averse to mass arrests. And he was for severe punishment of those who were proved to have manufactured complaints.

Q. Is not the double-faced policy of the Cabinet Mission at the root of the present trouble between the League and the Congress and ultimately between the Muslims and the Hindus?

A. He would not accuse the Cabinet Mission of double-dealing. They had honestly suggested a solution which in their opinion was fair. The beauty of the Paper was that it contained no compulsion. Naturally, after acceptance the clauses became obligatory for the accepting party. But any party could refuse acceptance. Thus if Assam in the east and Baluchistan in the west rejected the Grouping, no power on earth could compel them under the Cabinet Mission Paper. Lastly, assuming that the Cabinet Mission Paper was a trap, why should the Congress and the League fall into it?

Q. Pakistan means complete independence for the Muslims in the Muslim majority Provinces and for the Hindus in Hindu majority Provinces. Why then does the Congress object to it?

A. The answer was simple. If Pakistan meant independence only to the Muslims in the Muslim majority provinces and vice versa, it was summarily rejected. Happily not one Muslim leader, certainly not the Qaid-e-Azam, had ever given that meaning. Were the Hindus in Bihar to be independent and the Muslims helots? Or were the Hindus to be helots in Bengal? He hoped not.

Q. Can there be any hope of establishing Hindu-Muslim unity here in spite of the Congress-League differences which are at the root of all the troubles everywhere? Even if it is established, how long can it be expected to last?

A. He admitted that Hindu-Muslim unity could not be sustained in the face of Congress-League differences. He hoped, however, that apart from party politics, whilst there was time, the Hindus and the Muslims in Noakhali would act together as real friends. They should set an example to all India and especially to the League and the Congress. Anyway, that was the mission that brought him to Noakhali. He wanted to pass his examination in pure ahimsa. If it was pure, it must result in establishing that friendship which he desired at heart. Therefore, if it was not established, the failure would be his. And as ahimsa knew no failure, he had said he would do or die in Noakhali. Let the questioner and those who thought like him help the fruition of the effort.

Harijan, 9-3-1947

549. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

HAMCHANDI,
February 11, 1947

QUESTION: A Bill\(^1\) has been introduced in the Bengal Assembly which contemplates reduction of the landlord’s share from one-half to one-third of the crop in certain cases. According to the new proposal, a farmer who has been in service on his master’s land on or after December 22, 1946 cannot be ousted from the land for a term of three years. Muslim farmers on the char lands have suddenly developed extraordinary enthusiasm for securing land on the barga system from Hindu landowners. Many of the so-called owners in char lands are in fact farmers themselves, only they left the land in charge of the bargadars (tenants) when they fled during the riots in October last. Muslim farmers cannot just now be ousted from the land as the crop will not mature till about the month of June. Hindus will, therefore, lose possession of the land for the next three years at least if the Bill becomes law. Now that Hindu farmers are once more coming back to their lands, what should they do in order not to lose their agricultural occupation through the vagaries of the law?

ANSWER: It is improper to die before one’s death. Let them wait till the Bill becomes law. Yet, I would advise them to welcome reduction of the landlord’s share from one-half to one-third. The time is coming when all lands will belong to the State, that is, to the labourer on the land. This is not to be looked upon as a communal question. It may be that the landlords are Hindus in Noakhali. But if the legislation is sound, it should not matter whom it affects. I have serious doubts as to the propriety of not ousting labourers for a period of three years. I would want to see the proposed legislation. As to the alleged usurpation of land by the Muslims, in my opinion, that is indefensible, if true. Let there be authentic instances and I have no doubt that the grievances would be remedied. No Government of the people can, for a moment, tolerate usurpation. If there are Muslims who had tilled the land that was unoccupied by reason of the disturbances, all that the tiller could claim is wages for the work done on the land. In reality, if he tilled the land for his neighbour who was in adversity, it would be a neighbourly act for which there could be no remuneration. Any such proved usurpation has to be reported to get remedied.

\(^1\) Bargadars (Land Tenancy) Bill

Q. You have advised both men and women to turn into voluntary labourers to hold no more land than they can till themselves. But under our present social system in which the State does not take responsibility for the education of the young and the maintenance of the aged and the infirm when there is none else to look after them, these expenses are paid out of rent received from the land or from profits derived from private ownership. What will happen to the above persons when land and capital are taken away from them? Could not suffering be avoided and adequate provision made for the education of the young and the maintenance of the aged or infirm?

A. I admit I gave the advice and I still adhere to it. I laid down a universal proposition for an ideal society. In the present case it is a virtue of necessity for it is said that they cannot get labour which is principally Muslim. The question about the education of the young and maintenance of the old and the infirm should not arise. The young would get education at home and persons who work willingly will find that the old and infirm would be supported.

I am, however, free to confess that it is the business of the State to provide suitable education for the young and support for the aged and infirm. It should also be remembered that I have not suggested that owners should give up their land free of price. They would sell it on suitable terms or hold on to it and let it lie fallow. It will not hurt.

_The Hindu, 14-2-1947_

550. EXTRACT FROM LETTER TO ABUL KALAM AZAD

_February 12, 1947_

If the ahimsa about which I have written so much and which I have striven to realize in practice all these years does not answer in a crisis, it ceases to have any value in my eyes. Your affection prompts you to say that if only I were near you, all would be well.¹ The truth however is that so long as I cannot make good here, I can be of no use anywhere.

¹ The addressee, had suggested to Gandhiji to make Calcutta his headquarters if he could not go and stay at Delhi.
551. LETTER TO A. ZAMAN

KAFILATOLI,

February 12, 1947

DEAR ZAMAN SAHEB,

Herewith I enclose report of an extraordinary situation. On the strength of declaration made on behalf of the Government, refugees have returned or are prepared to return. There seems to be no doubt whatsoever that grants are due to these people; and yet through some bungling between the C. O. and the President of the Union Board, the thing is held up.

I do hope that you will act quickly, for in such cases quickness is the essence of the thing if a breakdown is to be avoided.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

552. LETTER TO PYARELAL

February 12, 1947

CHI. PYARELAL,

Your handwriting is good on the first page. After that it has deteriorated. Even if it takes time, if you wrote just like on the first page, you would learn to write well. It would save a lot of time and one would like to read merely for the handwriting. It was for the sake of the handwriting that I read Jain’s interesting account. I also learnt a new meaning of the word ‘locust’. Now I shall also test Manu with interest on the same thing. It would be nice if you sent a story and a sloka on alternate days. It would be better that instead of Manu I think in the matter. Right now I am shaping her and I shall continue to do so as long as she does what I say.

Kishorelal, etc., are continuing their attacks. It is better that you do not involve yourself in the matter. Only I should bear that burden.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

1 Additional District Magistrate of Noakhali, who was in charge of relief and rehabilitation.

2 Gandhiji had been facing up to a barrage of criticism from friends over his experiment of having Manu Gandhi sleep with him; vide also “Letter to Vallabhbhai Patel”, 1/2-2-1947 and “Letter to Vinoba Bhave”, 10-2-1947
Gandhiji said that when he was studying in London over 45 years ago, he had read of the bravery of the Manipuris. The members of the delegation, Gandhiji said, had complained to him that although caste Hindus in Assam considered the Manipuris part of themselves, yet they did not look after the interests of the Manipuris who had a separate language, a separate culture and a separate tradition of their own. The caste Hindus, the delegation had complained, took advantage of the presence of the Manipuris in their midst only to swell their votes. But none either understood or cared for the Manipuris' interests. Therefore, they thought, some arrangement should be made for safeguarding their interests.

Gandhiji said that all that he wanted to say on this was that if Hinduism was to survive, it would have to be casteless. He had long since forgotten that he belonged to any caste. Therefore, he delighted in calling himself a Bhangi and acting like one. He did not believe in any artificial divisions.

If caste Hindus meant Brahmin, Kshatriya and Vaishya, these three were a hopeless minority which, when the British had wholly withdrawn and independence was truly established would, as the three superior castes, be wholly extinct. Gandhiji hoped that all inequalities would be a thing of the past. Then the so-called downtrodden would come into their own.

Gandhiji said that, when untouchability was really gone, there would be no caste. But while the caste system was in vogue, the untouchables would naturally want to belong to the higher castes. But that was an impossibility. Therefore any such attempt, according to Mahatma Gandhi, meant war among caste members on the one hand and the untouchables on the other. But when castes disappeared, all would be Hindus pure and simple. What he would say to the untouchables was that they should abolish all distinctions among themselves and observe the laws of cleanliness better than the so-called caste Hindus. And instead of working for separate treatment for themselves they should endeavour to merge themselves in the ocean of Hindu humanity.

Gandhiji, replying to a question, said he was emphatically of the opinion that the Hindus of Noakhali should not live in a special centre in Noakhali and erect factories where they could work. Apart from his views on cottage industries, he could

---

1 The delegation which met Gandhiji on February 11 had come from Cachar District; it claimed for the two Lakhs of Manipuris in Assam minority representation in the Assam Assembly.
not contemplate separate quarters and separate industries for them. That was the way to establish poisonous Pakistan all over India.

He could not approve of the idea anywhere in India. That was the way to create wars among themselves. It was not the way to independence. He could not approve of separate “quarters”, for communities professing different religions.

Independent India, as conceived by me, will have all Indians belonging to different religions living in perfect friendship. There need be no millionaires and no paupers; all would belong to the State, for the State belonged to them. I will die in the act of realizing this dream. I would not wish to live to see India torn asunder by civil strife.

554. NOTE ON TERMS OF REFERENCE FOR INQUIRY COMMISSION

   [Before February 13, 1947]

   To examine and report upon the cause of the recent communal disturbances beginning on . . . and the measures taken by the Government of Bihar to deal with them; also to state what steps still remain to be taken by the Government of Bihar in order to restore confidence among the injured Muslims.

   2. The enquiry shall be open to the public and the Judge shall have all the powers required in law to call for records and to summon witnesses.

   3. The Judge is to present his report to the Government on or before . . .

   Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase, Vol. II, p. 28

---

1 This note was sent to the Bihar Ministers. On February 13, Shrikrishna Sinha, Chief Minister of Bihar, while replying to the debate in the Assembly on the no-confidence motion against his Ministry, announced the Government’s decision to appoint a Commission of Inquiry to report on the communal disturbances in Bihar.

2 ibid

3 Omissions as in the source

4 Justice Reuben of Patna High Court was to be the one-man Commission. Ultimately however, on 30th October, 1947, the Bihar Cabinet decided to drop the idea of appointing the Commission.
555. A LETTER

KEROA EAST,
February [13]¹, 1947

One should not associate with a man who follows immoral ways. . . ² He deserves no respect, no matter how highly placed a person he might be. So far God has protected my honour. . . ³ As for condemnation by man I have become thick-skinned.

[From Gujarati]
Eklo Jane Re, p. 138

556. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING⁴

EAST KEREA,
February 13, 1947

After congratulating the audience on the manner in which they had kept time during the Ramdhun, Gandhiji dealt with the two questions which had been put to him in course of the day.

Q. We agree that intrinsically a movement for reducing the share of the owner from half to a third of the crop is justified.⁵ But could not the present Tebhaga movement in Bengal be postponed until such time as when the affected persons can be smoothly absorbed in other occupations according to some long-term plan sponsored by the State? We know you have said that the only way to effect such a radical transformation in society is through non-violence. But interested parties will sleep over that portion of your advice and parade your moral support to their demand and carry on the movement in their own violent way. Hence is it not wrong for you to lend support to the Movement under the present circumstances when there is every chance of the entire middle class of Bengal being completely ruined as a result? The common villager will also suffer no less because he will also be deprived of the services now being rendered to the village economy by them.

A. In reply, Gandhiji uttered the warning that he only dealt with principles as he knew them. He had not studied the local question. Therefore, the questioner ran the risk of his ignorance causing injustice.

He felt that the question betrayed exaggeration on the part of the questioner.

¹ The source has 14, which appears to be a printer’s error.
² Omissions as in the source
³ ibid
⁴ Extracted from “Gandhiji’s Walking Tour Diary”
⁵ Vide “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 11-2-1947
There was no ruin impending for the landlord. His land was not being confiscated. His portion, which he could take even if he was in Timbuktu, was merely to be reduced from 50% to 33%. He could see no ruin in the proposal. He was afraid they were too much obsessed by the communal question. They should rise above it and examine every problem strictly on merits. Then they would never go wrong. Therefore they should accept the moral principle underlying the demand for reduction of the owner’s share and work for solid amendments in which they were likely to succeed. Let them not face confiscation rather than moderate reduction. Let them remember that for years past India had lived through confiscation. Industry after industry had been ruined and both the artisans as well as the farmers of India had been progressively reduced to poverty.

If the desired changes were brought about through non-violent means, the world would not be deprived of the talents of the classes, but then the latter would not exercise them at the expense of the labourers. In the non-violent order of the future, the land would belong to the State, for had it not been said ‘śabhi bhumi Gopalki’? Under such dispensation, there would be no waste of talents and labour. This would be impossible through violent means. It was therefore a truism to say that the utter ruin of the land-owners brought about through violence would also involve the ruin of the labourers in the end. If the land-owners, therefore, acted wisely, no party would lose.

Q. Some women workers who earn part of their living by weaving mats were advised by you the other day to work on co-operative principles. Bengal’s agriculture has been reduced to an uneconomic proposition through extreme fragmentation of holdings. Would you advise farmers also to adopt co-operative methods? If so, how are they to effect this under the present system of land-ownership? Should the State make the necessary changes in the law? If the State is not ready, but the people so desire, how are they to work through their own organizations to this end?

A. Replying to the first part of the question, Gandhiji said that he had no doubt that the system of co-operation was far more necessary for the agriculturists than for the mat weavers. The land, as he maintained, belonged to the State; therefore, it yielded the largest return when it was worked co-operatively. Let it be remembered that co-operation should be based on strict non-violence. There was no such thing as success of violent co-operation. Hitler was a forcible example of the latter. He also talked vainly of co-operation which was forced upon the people and everyone knew where Germany had been led as a result.

Gandhiji concluded by saying that it would be a sad thing if India also tried to build up the new society based on co-operation by means of violence. Good brought about through force destroyed individuality. Only when the change was effected

---

1 All land belongs to God.
through the persuasive power of non-violent non-co-operation, i. e., love, could the foundation of individuality be preserved and real abiding progress be assured for the world.

_Harijan, 9-3-1947_

557. LETTER TO PYARELAL

_February 13, 1947_

CHI. PYARELAL,

Do whatever you can about Shahpur. The task is very difficult. But it has to be so. Manu’s lesson is as short is it should be. The handwriting is not big and beautiful. There is also shortage of space. It should not be so. Today this much is enough.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

558. TELEGRAM TO HINDI TATWAJNAN PRACHAR SAMITI

[On or before _February 14, 1947_]¹

I CANNOT LEAVE HERE. OTHERWISE TOO I WOULD NOT WISH TO PRESIDE.²

_The Bombay Chronicle, 15-2-1947_

559. LETTER TO SHANTI GHOSH

_February 14, 1947_

CHI. SHANTI,

Sudhir has told me everything about you. Of course he had also written to me. I congratulate you and Sudhir on having taken the decision independently. It is a different thing that I do not approve of your decision. I have written this letter in order to congratulate you,

¹ The telegram appeared under the date-line Ahmedabad, February 14.
² Over the all-religion’s conference to be held in Ahmedabad in April not to stress our difference of opinion. Sushila' is going to Delhi for two days.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From the Hindi original: Sudhir Ghosh Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

560. _SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING_
_WEST KEROA,_
_February 14, 1947_

Gandhiji read two passages from Abdullah Suhrawardy's collections of the sayings of the Prophet. Three Muslim friends of the place had come to him and asked him to pray that God might make both [Hindus and Muslims] live in peace and friendship. When these friends came he was reading the sayings which he proposed to read to them. They were as follows:

> Be in the world like a traveller, or like a passer-on, and reckon yourself as of the dead.

He considered it as a gem of gems. They knew that death might overtake them any moment. What a fine preparation for the event if all became as dead. The very next question was who was the best man and who was the worst. The Prophet considered him to be the best who lived long and performed good acts and him the worst who did bad acts. It was a striking saying that man was to be judged by what he did, and not by what he said.

These sayings were for all men and women and not merely for those who called themselves Muslims. Was the Hindu part of the audience doing good acts? Was untouchability a good act? He had shouted from the house-tops that it was a blot on Hinduism. So long as that blot remained, there was no peace and freedom for India. The British would go but their freedom would not come without the complete removal of untouchability.

_Harijan, 9-3-1947_

---

1 Sushila Nayyar
2 Extracted from “Gandhiji’s Walking Tour Diary”
561. LETTER TO MADALASA

RAIPURA,

February 15, 1947

CHI. MADALASA

I got your letter. You have not asked for a reply but I am writing one because I find that you still remain too much concerned with small matters. If the fact of Manu sleeping with me has not upset you and you have not lost faith in me, you should take my advice and merge yourself in Shriman. I have observed that he is all adoration for you. You also adore him, but you lack his wisdom. I see nothing wrong in your telling Vasanti everything. She is a wise woman, but I don’t think she is capable of guiding you. I have no doubt that your happiness lies in merging yourself in Shriman. If you were a woman of spiritual knowledge, I would have advised you to oppose Shriman. But you admit that you have no such knowledge. If this advice appeals to you, act upon it whole-heartedly. If you have the slightest doubt, show this letter to Vinoba and abide by his advice. Even otherwise you should show this letter to Vinoba. Show it to Vasanti, too. I understand about Ram’s betrothal. I did not take any interest in the affair. May both be happy and, by dedicating themselves to selfless service, bring still greater lustre to Father’s name. Convey this to Ram.

I got your second letter.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 5853

562. LETTER TO PYARELAL

February 15, 1947

CHI. PYARELAL

I received your letter just now. The lesson for Manu is attractive from the point of view of handwriting. It needs more meticulousness. As you become more meticulous, your handwriting will become as beautiful as pearls. Then I shall not only read it myself, I shall also make Manu read it. This time there are four pages. My suggestion is that just two pages will be sufficient. Manu will not be able to take in

1 Daughter of Jamnalal Bajaj, married to Shriman Narayan
2 Ramkrishna Bajaj, addressee’s brother more at present because she has a heavy load of work and she does not wish to give up any of it. So she has no time left. I have not even asked her what she herself has in mind. I am not asking her even while dictating this. I am stealing even this little time. I am quite fatigued mentally and physically. The body wants to relax. Not so the mind. The mind is absorbed in Bengali. But the memory having become blunted, the progress is slow. Swamiji is not here. As such, I am the only one left to teach Sanskrit. And I cannot spare time. One cannot say that even Swamiji was giving much time. Manu’s development does not depend on learning all that. It largely depends on me. And so, it will depend on my efficiency and patience. I have not even in my dream considered keeping Kishorelal’s letter, or any letter, secret from you. But I do wish to spare you mental anguish. But if you cannot check your curiosity it would be only proper that you should see it. So I am sending you the letter. Return it after reading. From my point of view, it contains as much ignorance as love. From his point of view, there is a whole group of people who believe that my practice is impelled by lust. How can I say that the view of this group is altogether wrong? For, man does not know himself. You will not find any open accusation made in these letters, though in Devdas’s letter it is openly made. Whether or not I am free from physical desire will probably be known only after my death. The term ‘probably’ is deliberately used, because it does not always happen that we are able to correctly judge a man after his death. Only God understands the heart of man. When I cannot say with any certainty about myself that I do not feel the weight of whatever is happening, who can say that about Manu? She appears to be unconcerned, but she herself may not be fully aware of the turmoil in her mind. I am not bothering her about it. I am carrying on, leaving everything in the hands of God. For me, all this is an inseparable part of the yajna and it remains to be seen how far my non-attachment can carry.

I have read both your papers. I am sending them back, though you have said that it is not necessary to return the second paper. Your reply to Satis Babu is correct. The reply about Dr. Chandra Shekhar is also correct. He must certainly be given medicines, etc. If possible, persuade him to reduce the use of medicines. More than medicines, what is needed is nursing and reassurance.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar
CH. GHANSHYAMDAS,

RAIPURA,

February 15, 1947

I sent you a letter through Sushila. But I have been upset somewhat by Sardar’s letter. Devdas’s letter is still ringing in my ears. I do not remember what I wrote to you, for I have not kept a copy of it. All I wish today to write is that you should give up your attitude of neutrality. Sardar is quite clear in his mind that what I look upon as my dharma is really adharma. Devdas of course has written as much. I have great faith in Sardar’s judgment. I have faith in Devdas’s judgment too, but then, though grown up, in my eyes he is still a child. This cannot be said of Sardar. Kishorelal and Narahari too are grown-ups; but it is not difficult for me to understand their opposition. The link between you and me is your faith that my life is pure, spotless and wholly dedicated to the performance of dharma. If that is not so, very little else remains. I would, therefore, like you to take full part in this discussion, though not necessarily publicly—for I certainly do not want your business to suffer. But if I am conducting myself sinfully, it becomes the duty of all friends to oppose me vehemently. A satyagrahi may end up as a duragrahi if he comes to regard untruth as truth—that being the only distinction between the two. I believe that is not the case with me; but that means little, for after all I am not God. I can commit mistakes; I have committed mistakes; this may prove to be my biggest at the fag end of my life. If that be so, all my well-wishers can open my eyes if they oppose me. If they do not I shall go from here even as I am. Whatever I am doing here is as a part of my yajna. There is nothing I do knowingly which is not a part and parcel of that yajna. Even the rest I take is as a part of that yajna.

I am dictating this with a mud-pack over my eyes and abdomen. Shortly afterwards I shall be going to the evening prayer meeting. This business about Manu is taking up a lot of my time, but I do not mind it because even her presence here is for the sake of that yajna. Her test constitutes a part of that yajna. I may not be able to explain it to you—that is a different matter. The point I must make my friends grasp is this: When I take Manu in my lap, do I do so as a pure-hearted father or as a father who has strayed from the path of virtue?
What I am doing is nothing new to me; in thought I have done it over the last 50 years; in action, in varying degrees, over quite a number of years. Even if you sever all connection with me, I would not feel hurt. Just as I want to stick to my dharma, you have to stick to yours.

To come to another matter, the Hindu weavers here—known as tantis—are very angry. Their spinning-wheels and houses have been for the most part burnt. If they do not get a supply of yarn they have either to be idle or take to earth work as labourers. The officer in charge here tells me that the Government cannot provide them yarn unless the Central Government helps. I told him I might be able to obtain the needed supply if they were prepared to pay for it. He has agreed. Can you supply the yarn? If yes, then how much, when and at what price? Will it be necessary to obtain the sanction of the Interim Government? Please let me know in detail.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Hindi original: C. W. 8086.Courtesy: G. D. Birla

564. A TALK

RAIPURA,
February 15, 1947

Give that welcome address to me here and now. How can I receive a welcome address at a time like this? And love is a thing of the heart. There is no need to make a show of your sincere feeling. And after all, what have I done? Whatever good has come is entirely due to God’s grace. Keep your love for me in your hearts and carry on. If you have love for me do the work I have undertaken. It is as good as having given me an address. Don’t frighten others or be afraid of them.

[From Gujarati]

Eklo Jane Re, p. 141

1 Manu Gandhi explains that four or five representatives of Muslims, Hindus and weavers of the town met Gandhiji.
565. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

RAIPURA,
February 15, 1947

The first question was: All over the district of Noakhali there is talk that the Muslim population should boycott the Hindus in every way. Some Muslims who have worked for the Hindus recently or helped them during the riots report that they are under threat of boycott. In this context what should be the duty of those Muslims who genuinely desire peace.

Gandhiji replied that he had heard of the boycott before. But he entertained the hope that such was not the case on any extensive scale. He had one case brought to his notice three or four days ago by a Muslim traveller from Gujarat who had come to see him. He was rebuked for daring to want to see him. The traveller stood his ground and came out of the ordeal safely. Another poor Muslim who had come today was threatened with dire penalty if he dared to go to him. He did not know what truth there was in the report. The speaker then instanced printed leaflets that were pasted on the walls in the name of the Muslim pituni Party. These instances gave colour to the question. He would say to the Muslim friends and others that these things should not frighten or disturb them. They should ignore these things if they were isolated instances. If they were on an extensive scale, probably the Government would deal with the situation. If unfortunately boycott became the policy of the Government, it would be a serious matter. He could only think non-violently. If they gave proper compensation he would probably advise acceptance. He could not think out there and then the pros and cons. If, on the other hand, they resorted to confiscation, he would advise people to stand their ground and refuse to leave their homesteads even on pain of death. This he would say of all provinces whether Muslim majority or Hindu majority. He however hoped that no Government would be mad enough to subscribe to the policy of boycott whether with or without compensation. Those who belonged to the land for ages could not be removed from their homesteads merely for the reason that they found themselves in a minority. That was no religion, Hindu, Muslim, Christian or any other. It was intolerance.

The second question was: At East Keroa you advised peasants to work co-operatively in their fields. Should they pool together their land and divide the crop in proportion to the area of the fields they held? Would you give us an outline of the idea of how exactly they are to work in a co-operative manner?

Gandhiji said that the question was good and admitted of a simple answer. His

1 Extracted from “Gandhiji’s Walking Tour Diary”
2 Violent
3 Vide “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 13-2-1947
The notion of co-operation was that the land would be held in co-operation by the owners and tilled and cultivated also in co-operation. This would cause a saving of labour, capital, tools, etc. The owners would work in co-operation and own capital, tools, animals and seeds etc., in co-operation. Co-operative farming of his conception would change the face of the land and banish poverty and idleness from their midst. All this was only possible if people became friends of one another and as one family. When that happy event took place, there would be no ugly sore in the form of communal problem.

_Harijan, 9-3-1947_

566. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

RAIPURA,

February 16, 1947

Gandhiji referred to the two visits and expressed his gratefulness for being able to pay them. He then referred briefly to the speech reported to have been made by the ex-Premier Maulvi Fazlul Huq. He was reported to have said that as a non-Muslim Gandhi should not preach the teachings of Islam, that instead of Hindu-Muslim unity he was creating bitterness between the two communities and that had he (Gandhiji) gone to Barisal he would have driven him into the canal. He also wondered how the Muslims of Noakhali and Tippera could tolerate Gandhi’s presence so long.

Gandhiji said that he had grave doubts about the accuracy of the report. If it was the correct summary of the speech, he would consider it to be most unfortunate coming from a man holding the responsible position that the Maulvi Saheb held and aspiring to be the President of the Muslim League. He was not aware of having done anything to create bitterness between the two communities. The speaker had never claimed to preach Islam. What he had undoubtedly done was to interpret the teachings of the Prophet and refer to them in his own speeches. His interpretation was submitted for acceptance or rejection.

In the same speech Fazlul Huq had said that when Gandhiji returned from South Africa he had asked him (Gandhiji) to embrace Islam, whereupon Gandhiji had said that he was a Muslim in the true sense of the term. Mr. Huq had requested him to proclaim it publicly, but Gandhiji refused to do so. He said that he had no recollection whatsoever of the conversation and he was never in the habit of suppressing from the public what he had said privately. The audience, however, knew that he had stated in

---

1 Extracted from “Gandhiji’s Walking Tour Diary”
2 Gandhiji had attended a community dinner and had visited a mosque in Raipur.
3 Fazlul Huq’s home town

VOL. 93: 7 NOVEMBER, 1946 - 16 FEBRUARY, 1947 409
various speeches in the district that he considered himself as good a Muslim as he was a Hindu and for that matter he regarded himself as an equally good Christian or Parsi. That such a claim would be rejected and on some occasions was rejected, he knew. That, however, did not affect his fundamental position and if he had said what was attributed to him by Fazlul Huq, Gandhiji would gladly declare his repentance if he would believe what was represented to him. Indeed he had put forth the claim in South Africa to be a good Mussalman simultaneously with being a good member of the other religions of the world. He would repeat for the sake of the ex-Premier of Bengal that he was misreported and he would welcome the correct version from him.¹

_Harijan, 9-3-1947_

¹_Vide_ also “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 19-2-1947
APPENDICES

APPENDIX I

TALK WITH HINDU WORKERS

November 21, 1946

Your proposal that these demands should be satisfied before the Peace Committees can be formed, virtually means a summary rejection of the peace offer. This will only succeed in embittering feelings still further. The Government offer should be accepted on grounds of expediency. I do not however plead for peace at any price, certainly not at the price of honour. Let us act on the square, and let us put them in the wrong. It was exactly in this way that Indians were able to gain the silent sympathy of a large number of Europeans in South Africa. If, after a fair trial, the Committees are found unworkable, you can come out with your honour intact. That sense of honour will give you a courage which no man can beat.

If I succeed cent per cent in my own plan, then conditions will improve. But of this, there does not seem to be any prospect at the present moment. Yet, as a man of hope, I continue to hope against hope. In the present case, I confess through bitter experience that there is no sign of change of heart, but certainly there has been a change of plan. Considerations of expediency demand that the proposal should therefore be accepted.

He also added that hitherto our non-violence had been non-violence of the weak; but now that we had to apply it against a section of our own countrymen instead of against the British, it had to be non-violence of the strong.

The demands were now examined one by one. In place of the demand that certain Muslim officers should be replaced by Hindu officers, Gandhiji remarked that it was unreasonable and a communal demand.

While putting forward such a proposal, you should ask yourself if the Muslims of Bihar can reasonably make a similar demand. In my opinion, the present demand is absurd and I would personally never countenance it. You can, of course, substitute in its place, “impartial officers in place of biased ones”; that would be fair.

Then there was a demand for the removal of the Superintendent of Police. Gandhiji was against it also. In his opinion, the guilt lay elsewhere. The Chief Minister’s wishes might have been carried out by this officer, for he could not

1 Vide “Letter to Devprakash Nayyar”, 21-11-1946 obviously act on his own initiative. Someone remarked that Abdullah Saheb was a man without conscience. Gandhiji immediately replied:

I have yet to see a Police Superintendent who has a conscience. Mr. Suhrwardy was perhaps the fulcrum. He wanted to show the whole world what he was capable of doing. But he over-reached himself.

Someone then pointed out to Gandhiji that the Ministry in Bihar had employed Muslim armed soldiers to quell the disturbances, the suggestion being that this was for the appeasement of the Muslims. Gandhiji was clearly of opinion that such a thing, if true, was surely a sign of weakness.

The last point raised was in connection with the Hindu members of the Peace Committees. Manoranjan Chaudhuri pleaded for postponement, as most of the leading Hindus had left the district and only poor weavers, blacksmiths or farmers remained behind. If these were to be on the Committees, they would be no match for the more intelligent and educated Mussalman representatives. Gandhiji said with some warmth that if many had fled, leaving neighbours to their own fate, they did not deserve to be called leaders. The seats would have to be occupied by barbers, washermen and the like, who were as much interested in the preservation of their life and property as the rich. It was not unlikely that they might submit to the influence of Muslim members. But the risk had to be run if true democracy was to be evolved. Gandhiji then referred to the history of democracy in England, and expressed his admiration for the manner in which the common people of England had fought every inch of the ground for the preservation of their rights; and in this connection he mentioned the name of Wat Tyler.

My Days with Gandhi, pp. 60-2

APPENDIX II

BRITISH CABINET’S STATEMENT ON GROUPING

December 6, 1946

The conversations held by His Majesty’s Government with Pandit Nehru, Mr. Jinnah, Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan and Sardar Baldev Singh came to an end this evening, as Pandit Nehru and Sardar Baldev Singh are returning to India tomorrow morning.

The object of the conversations has been to obtain the participation and co-

---

1*Vide “Extract from Diary”, 2-12-1946 and “Interview to a Muslim Visitor”, 12-1-1947*
The main difficulty that has arisen has been over the interpretation of paragraph 19(v) and (viii) of the Cabinet Mission’s Statement of May 16, relating to the Meetings in Sections which run as follows:

Paragraph 19(v): These Sections shall proceed to settle provincial constitutions for the Provinces included in each Section and shall also decide whether any Group constitution shall be set up for those Provinces and if so, with what provincial subjects the Group should deal. Provinces should have power to opt out of Groups in accordance with the provisions of sub-clause (viii) below:

Paragraph 19(viii): As soon as the new constitutional arrangements have come into operation, it shall be open to any Province to elect to come out of any Group in which it has been placed. Such a decision shall be taken by the Legislature of the Province after the first General Election under the new Constitution.

The Cabinet Mission have throughout maintained the view that the decisions of the Sections should, in the absence of agreement to the contrary, be taken by simple majority vote of the representatives in the Sections. This view has been accepted by the Muslim League, but the Congress have put forward a different view. They have asserted that the true meaning of the Statement, read as a whole, is that the Provinces have a right to decide both as to Grouping and as to their own constitutions.

His Majesty’s Government have had legal advice which confirms that the Statement of May 16 means what the Cabinet Mission have always stated was their intention. This part of the Statement, as so interpreted, must, therefore, be considered an essential part of the scheme of May 16, for enabling the Indian people to formulate a constitution which His Majesty’s Government would be prepared to submit to Parliament. It should, therefore, be accepted by all parties in the Constituent Assembly.

It is however, clear that other questions of interpretation of the Statement of May 16 may arise, and His Majesty’s Government hope that if the Council of the Muslim League are able to agree to participate in the Constituent Assembly, they will also agree, as have the Congress, that the Federal Court should be asked to decide matters of interpretation that may be referred to them by either side and will accept such a decision, so that the procedure both in the Union Constituent Assembly and in

\[1 \text{Vide “Statement of Cabinet Delegation and Viceroy”, 16-5-1946}\]
On the matter immediately in dispute, His Majesty's Government urge the Congress to accept the view of the Cabinet Mission in order that the way may be opened for the Muslim League to reconsider their attitude. If, in spite of this reaffirmation of the intention of the Cabinet Mission, the Constituent Assembly desires that this fundamental point should be referred for the decision of the Federal Court, such reference should be made at a very early date. It will then be reasonable that the meetings of the Sections of the Constituent Assembly should be postponed until the decision of the Federal Court is known.

There has never been any prospect of success for the Constituent Assembly, except upon the basis of agreed procedure. Should a constitution come to be framed by a Constituent Assembly in which a large section of the Indian population had not been represented, His Majesty's Government could not, of course, contemplate—as the Congress have stated they would not contemplate—forcing such a constitution upon any unwilling parts of the country.

The Transfer of Power, Vol. IX, pp. 295-6

APPENDIX III

CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY RESOLUTION

1. This Constituent Assembly declares its firm and solemn resolve to proclaim India as an independent sovereign republic and to draw up for her future governance a Constitution;

2. wherein the territories that now comprise British India, the territories that now form the Indian States, and such other part of India as are outside British India and the States, as well as such other territories as are willing to be constituted into the independent sovereign India shall be a Union of them; and

3. wherein the said territories, whether with their present boundaries or with such others as may be determined by the Constituent Assembly and thereafter, according to the law of the Constitution, shall possess and retain the status of autonomous units, together with residuary powers, and exercise all powers and functions of government and administration, save and except such powers and functions as are vested in or assigned to the Union, or as are inherent or implied in the Union or resulting there from; and

4. wherein all power and authority of the sovereign independent India, its

---

1 Vide "Speech at Workers Meeting", 16-12-1946. The resolution was moved by Jawaharlal Nehru on December 13, 1946 and was unanimously passed on January 22, 1947.
constituent parts and organs of government, are derived from the people; and

5. wherein shall be guaranteed and secured to all the people of India justice, social, economic and political; equality of status, of opportunity, and before the law; freedom of thought, expression, belief, faith, worship, vocation, association and action, subject to law and public morality; and

6. wherein adequate safeguards shall be provided for minorities, backward and tribal areas, and depressed and other backward classes; and

7. whereby shall be maintained the integrity of the territory of the republic and its sovereign rights of land, sea and air according to justice and the law of civilized nations; and

8. this ancient land attain its rightful and honoured place in the world and make its full and willing contribution to the promotion of world peace and the welfare of mankind.

The Transfer of Power, Vol. IX, pp. 343-4

APPENDIX IV

TALK WITH N. K. BOSE

Srirampur,

Thursday, December 19, 1946

In the morning, while I was administering his daily bath, Gandhiji spoke to me of his own accord about the happenings of the 17th. Ever since that day, no word had passed on this subject between him and me.

He wished to learn from me as well as from Parasuram ‘if Sushila Nayyar had fallen in our estimation’ (Tumhari nazar me gir gi hai?) on account of that day’s incident. I said I could speak for myself, not for Parasuram. She had undoubtedly fallen, and the reason was this. No person however great had the right to disturb him as Sushila had apparently done. Gandhiji then said, ‘Supposing she did so with a good intention, perhaps to help me in my own work? She may have been suggesting certain steps even for my sake, not for her own; even then, would you say she was wrong?’

I said, ‘Yes, even then. If she felt that you were contemplating a wrong step, she might have offered her suggestions and then left you free to decide.’

Gandhiji said, ‘She is against my plan of tour on foot in the present condition of my health. she thinks that at least one old companion who knows all about my personal needs should accompany me, and she offered her own services. She

---

Vide “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 17-12-1946 and “Silence-Day Note to N. K. Bose”, 23-12-1946
suggested that it would not be safe to depend on new workers like you and Parasuram, who know so little about my physical requirements."

I said, ‘If I had been in her position, I would have placed my views fully before you and left you free to decide. If the decision had not been favourable, I would have waited patiently until you discovered your error.’

After I spoke, Gandhiji repeated the substance of my views in his own language in order to make sure that he had understood me rightly.

My Days with Gandhi, pp. 114-5

APPENDIX V

LETTER FROM DR. SUSHILA NAYYAR TO N. K. BOSE

SRIRAMPUR,

Sunday, December 22, 1946

At night while reading Bapu’s diary I read “I had a curious dream”. I casually asked him what it was. He did not say and I kept quiet.

At three o’clock the next morning, I woke up with the noise of Bapu jumping in bed. He said he was very cold and was taking exercise to warm up. After that, he asked me if I was awake and started telling me of his curious dream. After the dream he started explaining how his present step was a tapascharya (penance) for him, and how he was going through inconveniences. On the previous day, I had remarked that God did and would send him helpers in whatever he did. . . . In a short note I asked him if I would be allowed to come with him. I mentioned that what he had said about tapascharya and what I had said about God sending him help were not contradictory and tried to explain it. He answered with irritation that he had tried to explain things to me but had not succeeded. . . . I could see that he was getting worked up. So . . . I walked away. Suddenly I heard him slap his forehead. I rushed back and stopped him. . . .

I am completely unnerved . . . . I came yesterday with great trepidation. Bapu had asked me to come for Gita. . . . He again raised the topic this morning and I found that my self-control has not returned as yet.

My Days with Gandhi, pp. 119-20

¹Vide “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 17-12-1946

416 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
APPENDIX VI

JAWAHARLAL NEHRU’S DRAFT OF CONGRESS WORKING COMMITTEE STATEMENT

December 22, 1946

The Working Committee have given careful consideration to the statement issued by the British Government on December 6, 1946, as well as other statements made recently on their behalf in Parliament. These statements, though made by way of interpretation and elucidation, are clearly additions to and variations of the British Cabinet Mission’s Statement of May 16, 1946, on which the whole scheme of the Constituent Assembly was based.

2. The Statement of May 16, 1946, laid down in paragraph 15(iii) as basic principles of the constitution “all subjects other than Union subjects and all residuary powers should vest in the Provinces”, and that “Provinces should be free to form Groups with executives and legislatures”. The Provinces were thus intended to be autonomous, subject to the Union controlling certain specified subjects. Paragraph 19 laid down, inter alia, the procedure for Sections to meet, for decisions to be taken as to whether Groups should be formed or not, and for any province to elect to come out of the Group in which it might have been placed.

3. In their resolution of May 24, 1946, the Working Committee pointed out what appeared to be a divergence between the basic principles and the procedure suggested, in that a measure of compulsion was introduced which infringed the basic principle of provincial autonomy. The Cabinet Mission, thereupon issued a Statement on May 25, 1946, in which it was stated that “the interpretation put by the Congress resolution on paragraph 15 of the Statement, to the effect that the provinces can in the first instance make the choice whether or not to belong to the Section in which they are placed does not accord with the Delegation’s intentions. The reasons for grouping of the provinces are well known and this is an essential feature of the scheme and can only be modified by agreements between the two parties”.

4. The Congress made it clear later that their objection was not to provinces entering Sections but to compulsory grouping and the possibility of a dominating province framing a constitution for another province entirely against the wishes of the latter. This might result in the framing of rules, franchise, constituencies etc., for elections and otherwise which might seriously prejudice or even nullify the provision for a province subsequently to opt out of a Group. We pointed out that this could never be the intention of the Cabinet Mission as it would be repugnant to the basic principles and policy of the scheme they had propounded. Our own approach to the problem of constitution making has all along been that coercion should not be exercised and that the constitution of free India should be drawn up by the co-operation and goodwill of all parties concerned.

\(^1\) Vide “Note to Jawaharlal Nehru”, 30-12-1946

5. In a letter dated 13th June, 1946, from Lord Wavell to Maulana Azad, the President of the Congress, it was stated that “The Delegation and I are aware of your objections to the principle of grouping. I would, however, point out that the Statement of 16th May does not make grouping compulsory. It leaves the decision to the elected representatives of the provinces concerned sitting together in Sections. The only provision which is made is that the representatives of certain provinces should meet in Sections so that they can decide whether or not they wish to form Groups”. Thus the principle which was emphasized again was that grouping was not compulsory and in regard to Sections a certain procedure was indicated. This procedure was not clear and could be interpreted in more than one way and in any event a point of procedure could not override a basic principle. We pointed out that the right interpretation should be one which did no violence to that principle. Further, in order to smooth the way to the co-operation of all concerned in the working of the proposed scheme we suggested that if our interpretation was not accepted, we would be agreeable to a reference on this point to the Federal Court.

6. It is well known that the proposal in regard to grouping affected injuriously two provinces especially, namely, Assam and the North-West Frontier Province, as well as the Sikhs in the Punjab. Their representatives expressed their strong disapproval of this proposal. In a letter from Master Tara Singh to the Secretary of State dated 25th May, 1946, he gave expression to the anxiety and apprehensions of the Sikhs and asked for clarification in regard to certain matters. The Secretary of State sent an answer to this letter on 1st June, 1946, in the course of which he said, “I have considered carefully the detailed points you raise at the end of your letter. I fear the Mission cannot issue any additions to, or interpretation of, the Statement.”

7. In spite of this explicit statement, the British Government have, on December 6th, issued a statement which is both an addition to, and an interpretation of, the Statement of May 16, 1946. They have done so after more than six and a half months, during which period many developments have taken place as a consequence of the original Statement. Throughout this period the position of the Congress was made repeatedly clear to the British Government or their representatives, and it was with full knowledge of this position that the British Government acted. That position was in conformity with the basic principles laid down in the Statement of May 16, 1946, which Statement the Congress had accepted in its entirety. Further, the Congress had expressed its willingness to refer, if necessity arose, the point of interpretation to the Federal Court, whose decision should be accepted by the parties concerned.

8. When the invitation of the British Government was received by the Congress at the end of November last to send its representatives to London, the Congress position was clearly indicated again. It was on certain assurances of the Prime Minister of Great Britain that a representative of the Congress proceeded to London.

9. In spite of this assurance and of previous assurances to the effect that no additions to, or interpretations of, the Statement of May 16, 1946, were going to be made, the British Government have now issued a statement which clearly, in many respects, goes beyond the original Statement, on the basis of which progress has been made till now.

10. The Working Committee deeply regret that the British Government should have acted in a manner which has not been in keeping with their own assurances, and which has created suspicion in the minds of large numbers of people in India. For some time past the attitude of the British Government and their representative in India has been such as to add to the difficulties and complexities of the situation in the country. Their present intervention, on the eve of the meeting of the Constituent Assembly, and the manner and tone in which this has taken place, has lessened the chances of a peaceful and co-operative transfer of power in India, for which the Congress has been working. This has created a new situation which is full of peril for the future, and because of this, the Working Committee have been anxious and given prolonged thought to it. Many of the speeches made recently in the British Parliament, which abound in wrong statements and inferences, are in tone and content representative of the authoritarian and aggressive traditions of British Imperialism. The India of today cannot tolerate this approach from any outsider and resents alien interference and intervention.

11. The Congress, however, cannot be diverted from its path by provocative utterances and external intervention. It seeks to frame, through the Constituent Assembly, a constitution of a free and independent India with the willing cooperation of all elements of the Indian people. The Working Committee regret that the Muslim League members of the constituent Assembly have refrained from attending its opening session. The Committee, however, appreciate and express their gratification at the presence in the Constituent Assembly of representatives of all other interests and sections of the people of India, and note with pleasure the spirit of co-operation in a common task and a high endeavour which has been in evidence during the sessions of the Assembly. The Committee will continue their efforts to make the Constituent Assembly fully representative of all the people of India and trust that members of the Muslim League will give their co-operation in this great task. In order to achieve this, the Committee have advised Congress representatives in the Assembly to postpone consideration of controversial issues to a subsequent meeting.

12. In their Statement of December 6, 1946, the British Government in giving their interpretation of a doubtful point of procedure have referred to it as a “fundamental point”, and suggested that the Constituent Assembly may refer it to the Federal Court. Subsequent statements made on behalf of the British Government have made it clear that they are not prepared to accept the decision of this court should it go against their own interpretation. On behalf of the Muslim League also it has been stated that they will not be bound by the decision of the Federal Court. While the Congress has always been willing to abide by such a reference and decision in regard to this matter, any reference now, when none of the other parties are prepared to join in it or to accept it, becomes totally uncalled for and unbecoming, and unsuited to the dignity of either the Congress or the Federal Court. By their repeated statements, British Statesmen have ruled this out.

13. The Working Committee are still of opinion that the interpretation put by the British Government in regard to the method of voting in the Sections is not in conformity with provincial autonomy, which is one of the fundamental bases of the proposed constitution. Nevertheless, the Committee are anxious to avoid anything that may come in the way of the successful working of the Constituent Assembly. To ensure this they will endeavour to seek and obtain the largest measure of cooperation, provided that no fundamental principle is violated. They are, therefore, advising Congress representatives in the Constituent Assembly to accept the procedure suggested. But they cannot be parties to any coercion of a province against its will or to the interests of the Sikhs being made to suffer by a majority in a Section. In particular, any attempt to impose the basic structure of a provincial constitution, such as franchise, constituencies etc., against the wishes of the majority of representatives from the province concerned will have to be resisted. Such an imposition would render nugatory the right to opt out which has been given to a Province.

14. The Working Committee earnestly hope that their efforts to gain the cooperation in the Constituent Assembly of those who have so far denied it will meet with response and success, so that the great work that has now begun may proceed rapidly and end in the framing of a constitution which does justice and gives freedom and opportunity to every man and woman in India. In any event the Constituent Assembly must go on till it has accomplished its task and a free, democratic, and sovereign republic emerges from its labours.

A. I. C. C. File No. 1499-I, 1946-47. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library
The A. I. C. C. having considered the events that have taken place in the country since the Meerut Session of the Congress in November last, the statement issued by the British Government on December 6, 1946, and the statement of the Working Committee of December 22, 1946, advises Congressmen as follows:

The A. I. C. C. endorses the statement of the Working Committee of December 22, 1946, and expresses its agreement with the views contained therein.

While the Congress has always been agreeable to making a reference to the Federal Court on the question of interpretation in dispute, such a reference has become purposeless and undesirable owing to recent announcements made on behalf of the British Government. A reference could only be made on an agreed basis, the parties concerned agreeing to abide by the decision given.

The A. I. C. C. is firmly of opinion that the constitution for a free and independent India should be framed by the people of India on the basis of as wide an agreement as possible. There must be no interference whatsoever by any external authority, and no compulsion of any province or part of a province by another province. The A. I. C. C. realizes and appreciates the difficulties placed in the way of some provinces, notably Assam, the N. W. F. P. and Baluchistan and the Sikhs in the Punjab, by the British Cabinet’s scheme of May 16, 1946, and more especially by the interpretation put upon it by the British Government in their statement of December 6, 1946. The Congress cannot be a party to any such compulsion or imposition against the will of the people concerned, a principle which the British Government have themselves recognized.

The A. I. C. C. is anxious that the Constituent Assembly should proceed with the work of framing a constitution for free India with the goodwill of all parties concerned, and, with a view to removing the difficulties that have arisen owing to varying interpretations, agrees to advise action in accordance with the interpretation of the British Government in regard to the procedure to be followed in the Sections. It must be clearly understood, however, that this must not involve any compulsion of a province and that the rights of the Sikhs in the Punjab should not be jeopardized.

\[1\] Vide “Interview to A Muslim Visitor”, 12-1-1947 and “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 16-1-1947. The resolution, moved by Jawaharlal Nehru, was passed after four days of discussion.

\[2\] In place of this and the following two sentences, “the draft prepared under Gandhiji’s guidance” had: “5. The consequence of this may be that a province or group might prefer to keep out of the Constituent Assembly or any of its Sections in the event of any attempt at such compulsion, a province or part of a province has the right to take such action as may be deemed necessary in order to give effect to the wishes of the people concerned. The future course of action will depend upon the developments that take place and the A.I.C.C., therefore, directs the Working Committee to advise upon it, whenever circumstances so require, keeping in view the basic principle of provincial autonomy.

APPENDIX VIII

LETTER FROM SATIS CHANDRA Mukerjee

January 14, 1947

Longevity can be prolonged indefinitely if only the utterance of Ramanama (the lord’s name) becomes with the sadhaka, not an act of conscious will or choice, but gets to be an automatic, inward process, springing from within and expressing itself outwardly, consciously or sub-consciously. This, in my view, is only possible when the utterance of the Lord’s name gets tacked on to, or better, becomes a part of the sadhaka’s breathing-movement.

Therefore my second point is that the Lord’s name or Ramanama is no more an outer sound emitted by the sadhaka, but is verily a form of spiritual or Divine Energy.

My third point is that when the utterance of Ramanama gets to be intimately associated with the breathing-movement of the sadhaka, it is bound to react on the whole of the sadhaka’s external system, including the mental apparatus, scripturally known as the Lingasharira or the sukshma sharira.

My fourth point is that when the Spiritual or Chit Energy of the Divine so reacts, then the whole apparatus sthula and sukshma, gets to be impregnated with the Spiritual or Chit Energy derived from, or inhering in, Ramanama. Therefore when that happens, what is to us at present material (whether of grosser or the finer variety), becomes so energised by the Spiritual or Chit Energy (which is the essence of Ramanama), that the laws of matter manifesting themselves in material disinte-

---

1 Vide “Letter to Satis Chandra Mukerji”, 1-2-1947

(Sardar Patel’s Correspondence, “Indians in Ladysmith”)
Integration and decay become, for the time being, suspended so to say. As the result of such suspension, the sadhaka could go on existing on the objective plane (as an objective entity), immune from the operation of the force which tends towards disintegration and decay.

Lastly and fifthly, at this stage equanimity, a term which you have used, cannot be termed mental, that is, born of the control of the mind-stuff. Then it comes to be a function of the sadhaka’s soul life, and may therefore be called soul-born. At this stage the equanimity in question comes to be natural, deep, and spontaneous.

The above point may be made clearer by saying that the type of equanimity which comes to be born of the process of utterance of Ramanama along with every exhalation and inhalation of the sadhaka’s breath, far transcends in its very nature the kind of equanimity of which we cannot at present conceive. The reason for it, as already pointed out, is that the type of equanimity in question is no longer mind-born, but is essentially an apparatus of soul-life or spirituality. This higher type of equanimity is scripturally termed as shanti. Of this type of shanti there are higher and higher grades of which the Gita speaks as, for example, (IV. 39) para shanti and (V. 12) naishthiki shanti.

Nangababa Satis Chandra Mukerjee aur Gandhiji, pp. 82-6
1. A LETTER

DEVIPUR,
February 17, 1947

My reply to your previous letter was still pending when I got this second one from you. But there was nothing in your first letter that needed immediate reply. At present there is great strain on me, both physical and mental. My work here instead of getting easier is becoming more difficult each day, as opposition is increasing. All the same, my faith and courage are steadily growing. After all, I am here to do or die, am I not? There is no middle course here. . . .1 It is not certain when the third stage of my tour will begin. I have to reach Haimchar on the 24th. . . .2 The further programme will depend on how exhausted I feel. I shall be satisfied if God sustains me through the programme even up to the 24th.

[From Gujarati]

Eklo Jane Re, p. 144

2. ADVICE TO A CONGRESS WORKER

DEVIPUR,
February 17, 1947

Did you realize that by indulging in this vain display you would acerbate communal passions? This display means nothing to me. . . .3 but it will leave a legacy of ill-will behind which will continue to poison the communal relations in this village for a long time to come. You are a Congressman. Did not it occur to you, knowing my strong views on khadi, that ribbons and buntings made of mill cloth would only hurt me?

I wouldn’t have felt so hurt if, instead of floral decorations, you had presented me with garlands of yarn. They are decorative, and

1 Omissions as in the source
2 Ibid
3 A grand reception had been arranged for Gandhiji at Devipur. The village had been decorated with flags, buntings, streamers and garlands of yarn. It jarred on Gandhiji. As soon as his weekly silence was over, he sent for the principal worker.
4 Omission as in the source afterwards can be used for making cloth also. So nothing is wasted. It seems there is a lot of money in this village. Otherwise you would never have thought of making such costly ephemeral garlands in these hard times. You are mistaken if you have done this to express your love for me. That does not show your love at all. It is enough if, out of love for me, you do as I say. I just cannot imagine how after this terrible massacre of your own people you could ever think of spending anything over these flowers.¹

The day’s experience has set me thinking furiously. Would my colleagues, too, if they ever became Ministers, betray the same weakness for garlands and the like? I claim no extraordinary virtue for my workers. But this much I do expect of them that even as Ministers they would never forget the ideals that the Congress has professed and fought for all these years. What I have seen today, however, makes me wonder whether I am not living in a fool’s paradise. It seems that God has woken me up with a rude shock to enable me to see where I stand.

Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase, Vol. I, Book II, p. 191; and Eklo Jane Re, p. 146

3. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING²

DEVIPUR,

February 17, 1947

Gandhiji drew attention to two things that had been brought to his notice. The first was that a complaint, in sending which he was unfortunately an instrument, had been found on enquiry by the officers to be without foundation. The articles which were reported to have been looted were mostly found in the very place from where they were said to have been looted. This was a serious matter. It was the second case that had come under his notice. Yesterday some Muslim friends had come to him and admitted that the Muslims had undoubtedly gone mad in October last but though they had not been so bad as the Hindus had been in Bihar, the Hindus were making up for it by putting the Muslims to inconvenience by lodging false complaints against some of them. They said that false complaints were far larger in number than true ones. That was not the way to bring the two together. He said that all those who lodged false complaints should be prosecuted and severely punished on conviction. If he was the Superintendent of Police or a Minister, he would certainly institute proceedings and bring the perjurers to justice. As for himself, as a citizen desirous of serving his country he would only be able to do something if the names and addresses of perjured complainants were given to him. So far he had received no such names. The only case that was sent to him could not be supported when the complainant was requested to support his complaint. Generally he would say that the Hindus who lodged false complaints injured themselves, their co-religionists and the whole country.

¹ This paragraph is translated from Eklo Jane Re.
² Extracted from “Gandhiji’s Walking Tour Diary”

The other thing he wished to draw attention to was a letter he had received from a responsible person who was doing the work of bringing about peace between the two, that a Hindu lad was molested by some Muslims and that the latter had threatened the Hindus that they were to expect more drastic measures than last October’s after he had left Noakhali or, which was the same thing, after his death. He would like to think that this statement was untrue, but he feared it was not. But he did hope that the poison was restricted to a few illmannered persons. Whether, however, it was restricted to a few or whether it was a widespread trait, he ventured to think it was wholly against Islam. This he said with apologies to Fazlul Huq but no less firmly on that account. It would be an evil day for Islam or for any religion when it was impatient of outside criticism. He did not believe himself to be an outsider. He respected Islam as he respected every other religion as his own and therefore he claimed to be a sympathetic and friendly critic. It was up to every good Muslim to take up a firm and unequivocal stand against what he believed to be vicious propaganda.

_Harijan_, 16-3-1947

4. A NOTE

_ALUNIA_,

_February 18, 1947_

I was very much upset today. Such is my nonattachment. I felt disgusted with myself. I even wonder whether I am really going to pass the test of my ahimsa. It is God’s infinite kindness that He bears with me and sustains me.

Be vigilant.

_BAPU_

[From Gujarati]

_Eklo Jane Re_, p. 148

---

1 Gandhiji wrote this in Manu Gandhi’s diary just after the morning prayers.
5. LETTER TO M. A. ABDULLA

NOAKHALI,
February 18, 1947

When all parties become displeased with one it is generally a sure sign of one’s having done one’s duty. May it be so with you.

Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase, Vol. II, p. 399

6. LETTER TO HARI SINGH GOUR

KAZIRKHIL,
RAMGANJ P.S.,
NOAKHALI DISTT.,
February 18, 1947

DEAR SIR HARI SINGH GOUR,

I have yours of the 5th February delivered to me only today. Please do not ask me to make any public statement. With the support of so many distinguished men whom you mention you should find no difficulty. My own way of thinking always tells me that everything which has intrinsic merit succeeds sooner than later because it is like a straight line which is the shortest distance between any two points. If you have the League support your project will have plain sailing. But I see that you had not even an acknowledgement from Quaid-e-Azam Jinnah at the time you wrote to me. I hope you will secure his approval.

Your sincerely,

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

1 The addressee, Superintendent of Police, who was transferred from Noakhali to Murshidabad District, had, in his letter dated February 11, said: “. . . Some Calcutta Muslims told me that the Chief Minister got annoyed with me because I did not take action to prevent police and military zulum (oppression) upon the Muslims. . . . Another source informs . . . that my differences . . . with some British officers were the real cause. . . . Government . . . gave different statements to different parties . . . I do not bother . . . as long as I am sure that my conscience is quite clear.”
7. LETTER TO RUKMINI DEVI ARUNDALE

KAZIRKHIL,
RAMGANJ P.S.,
NOAKHALI DISTT.,
February 18, 1947

I have yours of the 6th instant delivered to me today. Much as I should like to have you here you can have no idea of the trouble you have to undergo in coming here unless you travel by air transport. Even so I am in a part of the country where there are no motor-roads worth the name. I am at a far distance from the nearest aerodrome which is in Comilla. I am in no mood to shoulder any burden whilst I am carrying the one in Noakhali.

I am in full agreement with you that the worthy project that Dr. Arundale initiated has to be carried to fruition and that most of all by you. Of course I love to see you, veena in hand, leading the people into the way of truth and peace.

SHRIMATI RUKMINI DEVI
PRESIDENT
KALAKSHETRA
ADYAR
MADRAS

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

8. LETTER TO MANILAL B. DESAI

February 18, 1947

CHI. MANILAL,

Your letter of November 14, 1946 reached me only three or four days ago. Such is the confusion here. You have, of course relieved me of my worries and so I feel completely at ease.

I think almost all the questions in your letter have been answered in my last letter to you. Jehangirji and Dr. Dinshaw must be among the trustees, for they are completely loyal and were members of the original Trust. It might be objected that they did not fully agree with my views. But I think that cannot be helped. I am sure they will not do or order anything there against my wishes. The other trustees to be selected will be persons who will have to be there. I approve of Gulbai’s name. About Maganbhai also I have written to you. If you can be sure that the well can be sunk for anything up to four or five thousand rupees, the expense is worth incurring. But let me know first if anybody is prepared to give such assurance.

---

1 Eminent dancer and wife of the English Theosophist George Sydney Arundale; founder of Kalakshetra, Madras

I would approve of a partner-cultivator, but not of loaning him money for buying bullocks and other requirements. We are not property-owners, but trustees. A trustee can be appointed only for a specific purpose. Our object is Nature Cure. we cannot incur such expenditure in pursuit of that object. We may do what is possible with our own labour. In either case, however, we will need water. If, therefore, you can obtain an assurance that the scheme will succeed, we will incur the expenditure. About crops, we may grow only what we can with our own labour. We can raise the vegetables and fruits we need. We cannot grow foodgrains. We do need milk, and therefore the provision of cows is essential. We have got to incur the expense necessary for that purpose. If and when a building is ready, we shall have to spend some money for buying mattresses, etc. If Datar himself undertakes to look after the construction of the building, I shall take it that the problem has been solved. There has, of course, been some misunderstanding in regard to the woman whom Appasaheb has sent, but if she is otherwise good and ready for hard work, we have no option but to overlook her not wearing khadi. You may gradually persuade her to change over to khadi. If you want, I am prepared to write to Appasaheb. But think over the matter carefully and let me know. I will wait till I hear from you.

I understand about Paramanand.

Parasuram has left me. At present he is working for Harijan. Sushila (Dr.) has gone to Sevagram to look into the affairs of the hospital there. Sushila Pai, Amtussalaam, Abha, Kanu and Pyarelal have been working in different villages and I am camping at some distance from them. Therefore, we are unable to meet one another often. A map of my tour has been published in the newspapers there too. I suppose you consult it from time to time. Manu sleeps with me. She is as a granddaughter to me, for her grandfather is the son of my father’s elder brother. She is, therefore, really a granddaughter to me.
She came to stay with me at Sevagram when she was just a little girl. I have written about this matter to Balkoba. He knows her. If you have any comments to make after reading that letter, you may write to me. I want you to write frankly and say what you feel.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 2731. Courtesy: Manilal B. Desai

9. LETTER TO BALKRISHNA BHAVE

February 18, 1947

CHI. BALKRISHNA,

Your letter of November 14, 1946, reached me only three days ago. Such is the confusion in the postal arrangements here. It is also true, of course that I am, from the point of view of postal communication, in a rather inaccessible place. Your health seems to be sufficiently restored now. Do you experience any difficulty in singing? If you do not, you should freely use your gift for the service of the people. But of course not at the cost of your health.

You will see the letter I have written to Manibhai. The problems there are quite complicated and you will be able to play an important part in solving them.

Probably you do not know that Manubehn (Jaisukhlal's) sleeps with me. This has pained Bhai Kishorelal, Narahari, Swami and others and they have, therefore, stopped their connection with Harijan. Sardar also is very angry with me. For me Manu's sleeping with me is a matter of dharma, and I am resolved to drive home the lesson that a person cannot give up what is a matter of dharma to him for the love of those who are dear to him or out of fear of anybody. If in a situation like this I give up what I believe to be my dharma through false regard for friends or fear or love, my yajna would remain incomplete and bear no fruit. This is my side of the case. Kishorelal's side, as far as I can understand it, is the opposite. He thinks that I have come to regard adharma as dharma and that, therefore, my practice dishonours my brahmacharya and sets a bad example to people. The thought that a man like me should set a bad example is intolerable to them, and, therefore, these friends have started non-co-operation with me. They are free to take whatever further step they choose. I do not know what Vinoba thinks. But the friends named above have corresponded with him and therefore I also have written to him and asked for his opinion. Either be guided by Vinoba's reply to my letter or think for yourself and write to me what you think. I have discussed this matter in three of my speeches. I send copies herewith. You need not return them. Show them to the friends there.

1 Balkrishna Bhave; vide the following item.

As regards Gokhale, I have already written to him. I had assumed that he had not joined the Uruli experiment and, therefore, did not mention his name. I had no intention at all of ignoring him. But this is merely in reply to your query.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 820. Courtesy: Balkrishna Bhave

10. LETTER TO SARLA

February 18, 1947

CHI. SARLA,

I got your letter. The characters are well formed and the words well spaced out, and the handwriting, therefore, is pleasing to the eye. However, your composite letters are not correct. You have misspelt 'gram'.

I am glad you wish to come to me. But there are bound to be all kinds of problems when I am daily on the move and moving from one village to another. Touring through villages involves several inconveniences: insufficient accommodation, very bad water, and so on. In such circumstances I simply don't have the courage to ask you to come. I, therefore, advise you to have some patience. God willing, the time will come when you will be able to stay with me. I can see from the account given by you that you are doing excellent work. Go on with it and continue your progress. Master the art of weaving. If in spinning also you acquire firstclass skill you can make yourself an indispensable worker, for your services will then be in demand everywhere. I am sure you will have improved your Marathi.

1 Vide “Letter to Vinoba Bhave”, 10-2-1947
Complete your study and learn everything about nature cure. Acquire the highest proficiency in the Urdu script and language. Learn Sanskrit. And all this you should do as if you were merely amusing yourself. If you do so, you will not even know how time passes. Keep up contact with me through letters. I am not happy that Shashi's fever has still not left him. If you study nature cure all over again—and it is easy to study it—you yourself will be able to cure it. All that is necessary is to be careful about his diet and give him hipbath and frictionbath and treat him with mud-packs. If this is done, he will soon get well. He should of course remain calm.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 1052. Courtesy: Champa R. Mehta

11. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING ¹

ALUNIA,
February 18, 1947

Q. Do you support evacuation of the Hindus from the affected areas if the League Government or the majority community agrees to give us due compensation?

A. He had supported the proposition from the non-violent standpoint. It was applicable to all Provinces whether the majority was Hindu or Muslim. What could the Government do if the majority had become so hostile that they would not tolerate the presence of the minority community? In his opinion it would be improper for them to force the majority into submission, nor could they undertake to protect the minority at the point of the bayonet. Suppose for instance that the majority would not tolerate Ram.

Harijan, 16-3-1947

¹ Son of Ratilal Mehta
² Extracted from "Gandhiji's Walking Tour Diary"
12. TELEGRAM TO A. FAZLUL HUQ

[On or after February 18, 1947]

THANKS FOR YOUR WIRE. DO OVERTAKE ME AT ANY STAGE OF SETTLED PROGRAMME PUBLISHED AND WE SHALL RENEW OUR OLD ACQUAINTANCE AND IF YOU CONVINCE ME I SHALL DO YOUR BIDDING.

The Hindu, 21-2-1947

13. LETTER TO MRIDULA SARABHAI

ALUNIA,

February 19, 1947

CHI. MRIDU,

I got your two telegrams, and that was yesterday. I am today sending you a telegram in reply. You are worried but there is no cause at all for worry. So far my life has been running its course smoothly. More and more each day I see that it is all to the good. What I did at Sevagram was by way of an experiment. An experiment may be stopped any time. So for the sake of the colleagues, I had postponed it. I did not publish the statement for your sake or Bapa’s sake. Here the situation is totally different. Sleeping with Manu is for me an inseparable part of the yajna. Why it is so need not be explained here. I shall explain when you come. Since this act of mine has caused an uproar, a great deal of my time is taken up with arguing with colleagues and pacifying them. But inasmuch as I consider this act part of the yajna, sparing that much time does not irk me. So you should carry on your work without getting upset. If you want to come only for this thing, I would urge you not to come. Kishorelalbhai by himself should be sufficient to persuade me to desist. But you wanted to come even otherwise, so I shall not stop you. Whatever it is, write to me freely. Ask me anything you want.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 1260. Courtesy: Sarabhai Foundation

1 The addressee, in a telegram, dated February 18, had requested Gandhiji for an interview after February 23 and added: “Go to Bihar and bring about friendly relations between the two communities and then hurry up to Delhi to save India.”
14. TELEGRAM TO MRIDULA SARABHAI

[February 19, 1947]¹

MRIDULABEHN
CONSTITUTION HOUSE
NEW DELHI

RECEIVED BOTH WIRES YESTERDAY. NOTHING LOST BY PUBLICATION WHICH WAS INEVITABLE. FELT COMPELLED TO WRITE FRIENDS BUT COME WHEN YOU CONVENIENTLY CAN AND DISCUSS. IF I PERCEIVE THAT I HAVE ERRED SHALL GLADLY RETRACE STEP. MEANWHILE DO NOT FEEL UNEASY.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

15. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING²

CHARDUKHIA,
February 19, 1947

Q. What should a Hindu worker do when he is being deliberately misrepresented by interested parties in Noakhali?

A. The answer in terms of ahimsa, generally, would be that acts should be allowed to speak for themselves. Whilst this was good as a general proposition there were occasions when to speak and explain was a duty and not to speak would amount to falsehood. Therefore wisdom dictated that on occasions speech must accompany action. Of course, one could conceive the possibility of mere thought taking the place of speech and action. Such was the attribute of the Almighty and might be almost possible for one in a billion, but he knew no such instance.

Q. You have advised evacuation if the majority become irrevocably hostile. But you have also maintained that a truly nonviolent man should never give up hope of converting his opponent by love. Under these circumstances, how can a nonviolent man accept defeat and evacuate?

¹ Vide the preceding item.
² Extracted from “Gandhiji’s Walking Tour Diary”
³ Vide the preceding page.
A. As to this question, it was perfectly correct that a non-violent man would not move out of his place. For such a one there would be no question of compensation. He would simply die at his post and prove that his presence was not a danger to the State or the community. He knew that the Hindus of Noakhali made no such pretension. They were simple folk who loved the world and wanted to live in the world in peace and safety. Such persons would consult their honour if the Government honourably offered them compensation in order to see the majority living in peace. If the mere presence of the Hindus irritated the Muslims who were in the majority, he would consider it to be the duty of the Government to offer compensation as it would be of the Government in a Hindu majority province to offer compensation to the Muslims if their presence irritated the majority community.

Q. In case of evacuation, under advice from the Government, should the evacuees ask for compensation for (a) all their movable and immovable property, (b) loss of business? In other words, what would you consider to be adequate compensation?

A. Gandhiji said that the Government would be obliged to compensate for both immovable and movable property when the latter could not be or were not carried away with him by the evacuee. Loss of business was a ticklish question. He could not conceive the possibility of any Government shouldering the burden of such compensation. He would understand the proposition that asked for a reasonable sum for enabling the person concerned to start business in a new place.

Whilst he examined and admitted the possibility of evacuation, his experience of all India told him that the Hindus and the Muslims knew how to live at peace among themselves. He declined to believe that people had said goodbye to their senses so as to make it impossible to live at peace with each other as they had done for generations. For he believed with the late poet Iqbal that the Hindus and the Muslims who had lived together long under the shadow of the mighty Himalayas and had drunk the waters of the Ganges and the Jamuna had a unique message for the world.

_Harijan_, 16-3-1947
16. EXTRACT FROM THE DIARY

February 19, 1947

On this day¹, and exactly at this time (7.35 p. m.) Ba quitted her mortal frame three years ago².

17. A LETTER³

BIRAMPUR,
February 19, 1947

Ba passed away on this day and at this time at 7.35 p. m. The recitation was attended by the guests who had recently arrived. I vividly recalled this fact during the yajna today, one reason being Manudi herself. She completed the recitation quickly, all by herself. In the Aga Khan Palace, too, were we not alone? When, therefore, after the Chapter VI I stretched myself and dozed off a little, I felt as if Ba was lying with her head on my lap.

[From Gujarati]
Eklo Jane Re, p. 154

18. LETTER TO M. A. ABDULLAH

NOAKHALI,
February 20, 1947

According to the letter⁴ under reply there is not much to choose between the two districts. I suppose a police officer having to deal with crimes, will naturally spot first the weakness of the society to which he goes. It flatters me to think that you will miss my association in Berhampore. I am sure that would be a temporary phase only, and in any case it can be well made up by correspondence.

Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase, Vol. II, p. 399

¹ Mahashivaratri Day, Magha Vad Chaturdashi, traditionally observed with fast and worship of Lord Shiva. Gandhiji observed it as “a day of fasting and prayer”.
² On February 22, 1944
³ This was addressed to one of Manu Gandhi’s sisters.
⁴ In his letter dated February 15, the addressee had said: “I miss here nothing except your valuable and instructive association, which I enjoyed so long at Noakhali.”
19. LETTER TO E. STANLEY JONES

KAZIRKHAL,
RAMGANJ P.S.,
NOAKHALI DISTT.,
February 20, 1947

DEAR DR. STANLEY JONES¹,

It almost appears as if you had never gone to America. Trains and steamers have very effectively reduced distances. Air transport marks a further stage in that reduction. Nevertheless, I am not satisfied that it has increased the real happiness of mankind.

You have kindly referred to my tour in Noakhali. The result is in God’s hands. You have mentioned Bihar in the same breath. I do think that the Bihar crime was much greater than that of Noakhali in magnitude. Man became brute, I hope temporarily only in both the places. But I haven’t yet seen the light leading me to Bihar. If I can see that, I should have no hesitation in going there. I am in constant touch with the ministers and the people of Bihar. So far as I can see there is real repentance. But I cannot positively swear that I am not being misled. Immediately I feel the call I should interrupt my work in Noakhali and hasten to Bihar. All I can say today is that I am on the watch. One thing I would add. I have come here to put my Ahimsa to test. I have no misgiving as to the effect of Ahimsa. But I am fully conscious that I may not know the whole technique and may not even be living up to what I do know. Therefore, I have submitted myself for examination here. Hence, if that examination demands my presence in Bihar I shall go.

I am glad you are organizing vigils of prayer. As to the letter you have enclosed² I do not know that I can render any service in the shape of sending a contribution. I do not think that I can send anything effective.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

¹ American missionary, author of The Christ of the Indian Road, etc.
² Vide the following item.
20. LETTER TO ROBERT A. FANGMEIER

KAZIRKHIL,
RAMGANJ P.S.,
NOAKHALI DISTT.,
February 20, 1947

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter through Dr. Stanley Jones. Please do not ask me for any article at the present moment. Whilst I am shouldering the present burden, I have neither the time nor the inclination to go outside the present task. Remuneration would have been no consideration for I never write for remuneration.

Your sincerely,

ROBERT A. FANGMEIER, EBSQ.
1236 11TH STREET, N.W.
WASHINGTON 1, D.C.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

21. LETTER TO P. N. BANERJEE

AS FROM KAZIRKHIL,
RAMGANJ P.S.,
NOAKHALI DISTT.,
February 20, 1947

DEAR FRIEND,

Dr. Amiya Chakravarty has handed me your affectionate letter1. Much as I should like to give you a decisive answer I cannot do so and, therefore, I would not trouble you to come to this part of the country to fix up the programme and to appoint a convenient date. My hands are tied up here and I dare not leave this place until real peace is established which may never be during my lifetime. In that case, as I have said repeatedly, I should finish the rest of my life in the attempt here. But of course man can only propose. God disposes. It is just possible that I might have to go to Bihar so as to be better able to do the work here. But I do not think ahead of the future. In the words

---

1 In which the addressee had requested Gandhiji to preside over the Annual Convocation of the University of Calcutta.
of Cardinal Newman ‘one step is enough for me’. For the rest Dr. Chakravarty will be able to tell you all for I had a long conversation with him.

Your sincerely,

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

22. LETTER TO GOPINATH BARDOLOI

AS FROM KAZIRKHIL,
RAMGANJ P.S.,
NOAKHALI DISTT.,
February 20, 1947

DEAR BARDOLOI,

Your letter of the 14th instant. Nirmal Babu who saw your letter suggested that one of his pupils might be induced to do the work mentioned by you. He will write to you as soon as he has heard from his pupil.

I hope all your troubles will dissolve.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

23. LETTER TO CHANDRANI

February 20, 1947

CHI. CHAND,

I had a talk with Dev today. The subject was whether or not you two may write to each other. He says that he would rather that I wrote to you and gave him news of your health than that he should write to you. Hence this letter. Otherwise I had no intention of writing to you today.

Now please write to me what you feel about this matter. Give me full news of your health. You should never neglect your health. How is your work progressing?

You should know well Gujarati, Marathi and Urdu. You do

The verse by Newman in his hymn “Lead Kindly Light” runs thus: “One step enough for me I do not choose to see the distant scene Lead Thou me on.”

Vide “Discussion with Amiya Chakravarty”, 20-2-1947

Prime Minister of Assam

Dev Prakash Nayyar
understand the reason.

Sushilabehn will give you all the news from here. Dev is doing all the work that Pyarelal used to do for me. He shares a room with me.

I hope your sister is steadfast in her vow.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: Chandrani Papers. Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library

24. DISCUSSION WITH AMIYA CHAKRAVARTY

February 20, 1947

Even if I fail, truth will not have failed. I must strive and carry this issue towards light. I live or perish in the attempt. Noakhali and Tipperah are not an isolated problem but it is a problem which India must solve for herself and for humanity. Fortunately or unfortunately I have had success in the most difficult ventures of my life. But I do not know what will happen this time. The greatest trial is given to us but it is never beyond our power to overcome it.

Truth is God. And He is discoverable only to non-violence and all it means. Here will be decided the clear issue. Those who think of separation must know where we stand. Let the facts be faced. If people will not tolerate differences in religion, usage, food, dress or individuality and will insist on boycott, then they cannot do so without the help of the Government which represents the people.

If boycott is the policy of the Government, we must know about it. A community cannot take action by itself. Bengal as well as other provinces must understand this.

As to changeability of human nature to normality, if opportunity was given, Mahatma Gandhi said:

If I did not believe so, I would not be here.

Amrita Bazar Patrika, 24-2-1968

---

1 Professor at Calcutta University; at one time served as secretary to Rabindranath Tagore
25. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

CHAR LARUA,
February 20, 1947

Q. If you think the Government may boycott, i. e., remove the minority community after giving adequate compensation, may not people take time by the forelock and go?

A. As to this he said that those who felt that they would take time by the forelock and form a Hindu corporation to take the Hindus away, he had nothing in common with them. He could not be party to any such scheme. The burden lay entirely on the majority community and the Government. He merely meant that when they declared bankruptcy of wisdom, the minority should go if they were adequately compensated. The other way was the way of violence, i. e., civil war, not of non-violence.

Q. You have said castes should go. But then will Hinduism survive? Why do you thus mix up Hinduism with the progressive religions like Christianity or Islam?

A. He maintained that caste as it was understood must go if Hinduism was to survive. He did not believe that Christianity and Islam were progressive and Hinduism static, i. e., retrogressive. As a matter of fact he noticed no definite progress in any religion. The world would not be the shambles it had become if the religions of the world were progressive. There was room for varna, as a duty. This was true of all religions whether the name used was other than varna. What was a Muslim Maulvi or a Christian priest but a Brahmin if he taught his flock its true duty not for money but because he possessed the gift of interpretation? And this was true of the other divisions.

Q. As you are an advocate of the abolition of caste, are we to take it that you favour intercaste marriages? Many occupations are now the monopoly of specific castes. Should not this be abolished?

A. He was certainly in favour of intercaste marriage. The question did not arise when all became casteless. When this happy event took place, monopoly of occupations would go.

Q. If there is only one God, should there not be only one religion?

A. This was a strange question. Just as a tree had a million leaves similarly though God was one, there were as many religions as there were men and women though they were rooted in one God. They did not see this plain truth because they were followers of different prophets and claimed as many religions as there were prophets. As a matter of fact whilst he believed himself to be a Hindu, he knew that he did not worship God in the same manner as one or all of them.

_Harijan_, 16-3-1947

1 Extracted from “Gandhiji’s Walking Tour Diary”
26. LETTER TO E. W. ARYANAYAKUM\(^1\)

February 21, 1947

You have given me a cutting from the Hindustan Standard purporting to report the views of Maulana Abul Kalam Azad\(^2\) on education. Assuming the correctness of the report I say categorically that it is inconsistent with the line followed by the Hindustani Talimi Sangh. It is in the villages of India where India lives, not in the few Westernized cities which are the citadels of a foreign power.

I do not believe that the State can concern itself or cope with religious education. I believe that religious education must be the sole concern of religious associations. Do not mix up religion and ethics. I believe that fundamental ethics is common to all religions. Teaching of fundamental ethics is undoubtedly a function of the State. By religion I have not in mind fundamental ethics but what goes by the name of denominationalism. We have suffered enough from State-aided religion and State Church. A society or a group, which depends partly or wholly on State aid for the existence of its religion, does not deserve or, better still, does not have any religion worth the name. I do not need to give any illustrations in support of this obvious truth as it is to me.

The second point deserving attention in the report in question is regarding the replacing of the Urdu and Nagari scripts by the Roman script. However attractive the proposition may appear to be and whatever is true of the Indian soldiers, in my opinion the replacing would be a fatal blunder and we would find ourselves in the fire out of the frying pan. In this connection, I would like you to read my statement\(^4\) on the subject issued to the Press on January 21 last.

The third thing that pained me was the reference to military education. I think that we have to wait a long time before a nationwide decision on the point is made. Otherwise, we are likely to become a curse rather than a blessing to the world. Leaders are not made, they

---

\(^1\) Secretary, Hindustani Talimi Sangh. This appeared under the title “Religious Instruction, Military Training and the Roman Script.”

\(^2\) Member, Education and Arts in the Interim Government. He was reported to have said: “It is likely that under State supervision even denominational teaching can be imparted in a more liberal spirit than under private control. The aim of all religious teaching should be to make men more tolerant and broad-minded and it is my opinion that this can be more effectively done if the State takes charge of the question than if it is left to private initiative.”

\(^4\) Vide “Statement to the Press”, 2-2-1947
are born. Should the State be in a hurry over this matter even before full independence is established? Therefore, I am surprised that the Central Advisory Board should be party to such a sweeping recommendation as they have made.¹

_Harijan_, 23-3-1947

27. LETTER TO P. R. CHENGALVAROYA CHETTIAR

KAZIRKHIL, RAMGANJ P. S.,
NOAKHALI DISTRICT,
February 21, 1947

DEAR CHENGALVAROYAN,

Many thanks for your letter. Real forgiveness accrues to him who is truly penitent. Harilal² knows that when he has shed his evil habits he will be welcome in Sevagram. All those good people who, out of mistaken kindness, nurse [his] evil habits are his enemies.

Here is a letter³ for him.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

P. R. CHENGALVAROYA CHETTIAR
40 VENKATACHALA CHETTY STREET
TRIPLICANE, MADRAS

From a photostat: G. N. 102

¹ The recommendations of the Central Advisory Board of Education were as follows: “The Central Board of Education has endorsed the view of the Working Committee of the National War Academy that residential schools, where boys may obtain adequate facilities for developing the character and powers of leadership, should be started by provinces and States to act as ‘feeders’ for the National War Academy. The Board is of opinion that the new type of schools contemplated in the scheme of National Post War Education will provide the necessary training for the leadership, character, intelligence, courage and physical fitness required by the military authorities for the Army, Navy and Air Force. It directs the attention of provincial authorities to the necessity of developing their schools on these lines which will actually serve as the kind of schools which the military authorities have in mind....”

² Harilal Gandhi, eldest son of Gandhiji

³ The letter is not available
28. LETTER TO MUNNALAL G. SHAH

February 21, 1947

CHI. MUNNALAL,

I got your long letter yesterday. Manu \(^1\) read it out to me in the evening.

What you say about cultivation is absolutely correct. We should grow as much grain as we can and give it to the people. We did this once at Sabarmati. Were you there at that time? We raised a bajra \(^2\) crop out of season and gave potfuls of it to the poor people. We did, of course, charge them something. Vrajla\(^3\) used to spend the whole day in distributing the grain to labourers. Something like that should be done at Sevagram too, and that on a much larger scale. Money should be no difficulty. You may show this to anybody you like.

I was indeed very happy to learn about Kanchan\(^4\). May her delivery pass off without difficulty. I cannot judge whether her plan of going to Vyara is right or not. Sushila\(^5\) is going there and she might be able to guide you better. It is very good that Kanchan’s sister has arrived there. It is as well that you are looking after the building work. That work also had to be done by somebody. You are an expert at the job.

My fate lies entirely in God’s hands. If I am able to accomplish my mission here\(^6\) and leave Bengal, I will certainly go there. But I do not know whether I shall succeed. If I should die in my attempt here, I would welcome such a death. Your running down here will serve no purpose. If you have learnt anything from me, build further on it. If you happen to come to this side and call on me incidentally, that would be another matter. I had an excellent letter from Kanchan, but have had no time to reply to it. Now lying in bed I dictate letters to Manu and to others if the letters are in other languages. I am thus able to give sufficient rest to the body and cope with the correspondence to a certain extent. There are some newspaper correspondents with us and they also help. Their help partly makes up for Parasram’s\(^7\)

---

1. Daughter of Jaisukhlal Gandhi
2. An Ashram inmate
3. Addressee’s wife
4. Sushila Nayyar
5. Gandhiji had gone to Noakhali on November 6, 1946 and had been touring on foot from village to village from January 2, 1947 to establish peace and communal harmony.
absence. I dictate Urdu letters to Dev\(^1\) and Bengali letters to Nirmal Babu\(^2\). Thus my correspondence work seems to be well arranged now and I am able to spare both my hands and eyes. That I do not write to Kanchan should not mean that she need not write to me.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 8628. Also C. W. 7210. Courtesy: Munnalal G. Shah

29. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

KAMALAPUR,

_February 21, 1947_

Gandhiji congratulated the audience on having come from the surrounding villages. He however sympathized with them for being exposed to the sun. He also hoped that they were not afraid of the Indian sun, perhaps the greatest gift from God. Happy was India which had clear blue sky for the larger part of the year.

He then referred to the fact that he had gone to Chandpur more than once whilst India’s grand old son Shri Haradayal Nag\(^4\) was alive. He was then his guest. He knew, therefore, what importance Chandpur had. He was glad that Chandpur had played its part in looking after the refugees. But he deplored the disregard of the laws of sanitation and cleanliness. If they rigidly carried out these rules they would not have to live in constant dread of the plague and other diseases which were the brood of insanitation.

He then told them that they must not harbour ill will against their Muslim neighbours. He appealed to both the parties to live at peace with each other. But he held that even if the Hindus alone harboured no ill will against the Muslims, or vice versa, strife would abate. If however both harboured ill will, one against the other, strifes were bound to be the result. There was a _mantra_ in the Upanishads [which says] that man became what he thought.\(^5\) How true it was found in every walk of life! Let them beware of harbouring an evil thought.

---

1. Devprakash Nayyar
2. Nirmal Kumar Bose, a professor of Calcutta University, was touring with Gandhiji as his “companion and interpreter”. Vide “Silence-Day Note to N. K. Bose”, 18-11-1946 and “Statement to the Press”, 20-11-1946
3. Extracted from “Gandhiji’s Walking Tour Diary”
4. (1853-1942); participated in the non-co-operation movement and Salt Satyagraha; devoted his life to constructive work
5. “According as one acts, according as one behaves, so does he become. The doer of good becomes good, the doer of evil becomes evil. One becomes virtuous by virtuous action. Others, however, say that a person consists of desires. As is his desire, so is his will; as is his will, so is the deed he does, whatever deed he does, that he attains.” _Brihadaranyakopanishad_, IV. 4.5
He then came to the two questions before him. The first was:

Q. You advocate inter-caste marriages. Do you also favour marriages between Indians professing different religions? Should they declare themselves as belonging to no denomination, or can they continue their old religious practices and yet inter-marry? If so, what form should the marriage ceremony take? Is it to be a purely civil function or a religious function? Do you consider religion to be an exclusively personal matter?

A. Though he admitted that he had not always held the view, he had come to the conclusion long ago, that an inter-religious marriage was a welcome event whenever it took place. His stipulation was that such a connection was not to be a product of lust. In his opinion [if it was a product of lust] it was no marriage. It was illicit intercourse. Marriage in his estimation was a sacred institution. Hence there must be mutual friendship, either party having equal respect for the religion of the other. There was no question in this of conversion. Hence the marriage ceremony would be performed by priests belonging to both faiths. This happy event could take place when the communities shed mutual enmity and had regard for the religions of the world.

Q. Should religious instruction form part of the school curriculum as approved by the State? Do you favour separate schools for children belonging to different denominations for facility of religious instruction? Or, should religious instruction be left in the hands of private bodies? If so, do you think it is right for the State to subsidize such bodies?

A. As to this question he said that he did not believe in State religion even though the whole community had one religion. State interference would probably always be unwelcome. Religion was a purely personal matter. There were in reality as many religions as minds. Each mind had a different conception of God from the other. He was also opposed to State aid, partly or wholly, to religious bodies. For he knew that an institution or group, which did not manage to finance its own religious teaching, was a stranger to true religion. This did not mean that the State schools would not give ethical teaching. Fundamental ethics were common to all religions.

Harijan, 16-3-1947

---

1 From a report in Amrita Bazar Patrika
30. LETTER TO H. S. SUHRAWARDY

KAZIRKHIL,
RAMGANJ P.S.,
NOAKHALI DISTT.,
FEBRUARY 22, 1947

DEAR FRIEND,

Sardar Niranjan Singh Gill was with me yesterday having returned from Bihar. He has prepared a memorandum which I have glanced through. I suggested that he should submit it to you. As it was he had not shown it to the Prime Minister of Bihar. I told him that the memorandum was incomplete without its being seen by the Prime Minister. He perceived the appositeness of my remark and said that he was going to send a copy to the Prime Minsiter. If he feels that any of his inferences require correction he would make the correction and pass it on to you.

There is one thing which he has recommended, namely, that I should go to Bihar if only for a few days. As you will see Dr. Mahmud also, if his report is correct, thinks likewise. I am in constant correspondence with Dr. Mahmud. I want to check up the statement with him. I am also writing to the Prime Minister. If he also thinks likewise I will then interrupt my work here to go to Bihar.

I have seen in the newspapers a statement attributed to you which reads like a jibe at me. I would not expect that from you. Therefore, I give you the credit for believing that I have the “Inner Voice” to which I listen. My belief is that all mankind has it. But the outside din and noise have practically deadened it for the vast majority of people. When that voice speaks I shall find myself in Bihar without any further prompting.

While I am sending this to you I feel I ought not to omit mention of the fact that things are not as good as they might be and ought to be. I continue with some caution to worry the officials immediately concerned.

BENGAL PREMIER

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

1 An extract from this letter has been reproduced in “Letter to Amrit Kaur”, 22-2-1947
2 Of the Indian National Army, under whom a group of I.N.A. men were working in Noakhali.
3 The addressee had made a frivolous reference to Gandhiji’s “inner voice”
31. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

KAZIRKHIL, RAMGANJ P. S.,
NOAKHALI DISTRICT,
February 22, 1947

CHI. AMRIT,

Just as I am dictating to friend Rangaswamy I get your letter and I have interrupted the dictation in order to see your letter. I have now read it and hasten to dictate my answer.

I have received all the letters referred to by you and I have sent replies also. I can’t recollect just now but I will see if I can give you the dates. I do hope that by the time this reaches you, you will have recovered your voice fully.

Of course there is every chance of your getting back your Hindi and Roman-Urdu dictionary. I don’t think I carry it with me. I will enquire and send it to you, care of Sardar as soon as I trace it.

There is no cold here but there is still a freshness in the air. Real hot weather has not set in. Nights are quite cool and I use all my blankets. But there is no need to worry about me. I am keeping good health and have been able hitherto to go through my programme with clockwork regularity.

The second stage of the pilgrimage ends in Haimchar on Monday, the 24th instant. It is Thakkar Bapa’s headquarters. I want to watch myself for a few days in Haimchar before resuming the third stage. It may also be that I might have to hurry to Bihar. Sardar Niranjan Singh Gill, who was in Bihar for three days, gave me the impressions of his tour and had strongly recommended that I should go to Bihar if only for a few days. I have put myself in

---

1 Correspondent of The Hindu
2 Vallabhbhai Patel, Member, Home and Information and Broadcasting in the Interim Government
3 The first stage of Gandhiji’s walking tour had begun at Shrirampur on January 2 and the second stage commenced from Srinagar on February 5.
4 A. V. Thakkar (1869-1951); President, Gujarat Antyaja Seva Mandir; Secretary, Harijan Sevak Sangh; General Secretary, Kasturba Gandhi National Memorial Trust; established Bharatiya Adimjati Sevak Sangh.
5 Where communal riots had broken out on October 25, 1946, which was celebrated as Noakhali Day
6 Of the Indian National Army, under whom a group of I. N. A. men were working in Noakhali.
communication with the Prime Minister of Bihar and await his reply.

I begin the pilgrimage every day at 7.30 or 7.35 and the stages are so divided as not to require me to walk more than one hour and fifteen minutes at the most. The least I have been called upon to walk is thirty minutes. Once and only once has it been one hour and thirty minutes.

I see that this dictionary business causes a lot of worry and takes away much of your time. Would you like to be relieved of that work? If you would, I would then like to keep your dictionary for the time being.

I am glad that the licensing clause in regard to khadi has been removed. How I would love to think that you have carried conviction to the Prime Minister of the Punjab about vanaspati; Pyarelal is in his village, now about twenty miles from here, and doing excellent work. Sushila has gone to Sevagram in order to put matters straight about the maternity home and hospital. It is growing by leaps and bounds and has become very popular. She may return to her village work here as soon as she has finished her work in Sevagram. Renuka is here with me at the village. Her village is less than two miles from here. In appearance she looks just as she was. She has had to take great care of herself. But she is all right otherwise. Only this morning she enquired about you. I told her that I heard from you fairly regularly but that you were trying to save my time as much as possible. She asked me whether you were ever coming to this part of India. I told her not whilst I was moving from day to day but that if I stayed for any length of time in one place and if you are well and available from your work in the Assembly or otherwise, I would like you to come for a few days, and she was happy. She is doing her work steadily with her little band of workers.

Manu I have reserved to the last. Everybody here knows everything about her. Therefore I would love to say a word or two for

---

1 Shrikrishna Sinha
2 The reference is to the English-into-Hindustani dictionary published fortnightly in Harijan, from September 1, 1946. It was originally intended to be the joint effort of a few co-workers but had subsequently to be taken up by the addressee herself at Gandhiji’s instance; vide “Plucky Stand”
3 Khizar Hyat Khan Tiwana
4 Hydrogenated vegetable oil
5 The workers accompanying Gandhiji had spread themselves out in the villages of Noakhali. Vide “Statement to the Press”, 20-11-1946
6 Renuka Ray
your information. But I must forbear for it is now towards one o’clock and I must have a little bit of rest and grease on the soles of my feet.

Love.

BAPU

[PS.]

Keep both the shawls with you. Give them to me when we meet.
Have you given your consent to the Central Advisory Board’s recommendation regarding military training?

Blessings from

BAPU

From the original: C. W. 4190. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 7826

32. LETTER TO SHRIKRISHNA SINHA

KAZIRKHAL, R. P. S.,
RAMGANJ P. S.,
NOAKHALI DISTT.,
FEBRUARY 22, 1947

SHRIKRISHNA SINHA,

I dictate this to you in English in order that it might be easier for you to make public use of my letter which I hope will never be necessary.

Sardar Niranjan Singh Gill saw me yesterday and gave me a report which he has prepared with reference to his summary visit to Bihar. I suggested that he should send you a copy so as to enable you to correct any mis-statement into which he might have been betrayed.
I advised him too to send a copy to the Prime Minister of Bengal, advising him at the same time that he should mark the copy as confidential till it has been checked by you and your corrections, if any, had been accepted by him and the Memorandum accordingly corrected. I hope you have got the Memorandum.

There is one thing in it which refers to me. Dr. Syed Mahmud and others would like me to visit Bihar. Sardar Niranjan Singh Gill endorses the suggestion. Do you feel likewise? Please tell me unhesitatingly what you feel.

Now that you have announced your Ministry’s decision to appoint an impartial enquiry commission as soon as possible I remind

1 Vide footnote 1, “Letter to P. R. Chengalvaroya Chettiar”, 21-2-1947 you of the proverb “he gives twice who gives in time”.

BIHAR PREMIER

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

33. A LETTER

February 22, 1947

I say you cannot tread this path (the path of brahmacharya) if you fight shy of the thorns, stones and pitfalls in the way. Maybe we shall stumble, our feet will bleed, we may even perish. But we dare not turn back.

* * *

If I am successful, the world will be enriched by my venture. If on the other hand I am found to be a fraud or a misled fool, the world will reject me and I shall be debunked. In either case the world will be the gainer. This is as clear to me as two and two make four.

34. LETTER TO PYARELAL

February 22, 1947

CHI. PYARELAL,

It is 6.15 now and I must stretch myself. And if I feel sleepy, I must sleep. That is why I am dictating this letter. I read your lessons and I like them. It would not do your spoiling your handwriting and then asking to be forgiven. Asking forgiveness every now and again would be like following the English practice. That would not be proper. Your handwriting should be such that you do not have to ask forgiveness at all. You may write less. If you resolve that whatever you write will be in a beautiful handwriting, writing Manu’s lessons in a beautiful handwriting will not be burdensome to you. Duty should never be a burden. And it is one’s duty to make one’s handwriting beautiful like beads. In spite of knowing this I myself do not follow this. You should consider it a failing on my part, and not imitate me in this.

I have sampled your other roti too. It was harder and there must be something lacking in it. If you have started making roti and if you have decided to do it, why not do it the way you formerly did? In other words you had started mixing in it lime or tamarind juice or tomato juice. If you do that, the roti will be lighter and easily morespongy. In case you do not do that, I have already suggested bhakhri. It would turn out nice if you add sufficient oil in the dough. Do not think that you have to send it to me. You may send it whenever it is convenient to do so.

Sushila’s letter is enclosed. I am very much impressed by it. If she is able to act according to the wish she has expressed in it, I shall consider it a great triumph in this yajna. You must also encourage her. Have I not told you that you, Sushila and Manu could play the greatest role in the success of this yajna. And even there, Manu would be undergoing the severest test. The indications so far are good. Its complete success would no doubt depend very largely on my own efficiency. On the one hand is the gravest doubt on the part of Kishorelal and others and on the other my stubbornness. My mind is oscillating between the two. But it bends more towards action.

There is only to act, not to think about the reward.

My letter to Parasram could go only yesterday. It was merely negligence on my part. What could I do? Once the letter goes in the file, it is immediately forgotten. The moral of the thing is that everything should be promptly attended to. Whatever comes later, should also be taken up later. The diary came into my hand only yesterday. I am sending the previous one today.

At night, February 22, 1947

I have your second letter. I have already told Dev to send the roti tin. I do not know if it has been sent or not. And Dev is not here at present. I shall send William’s letter. It would be a great feat on your part if Kalu Mian recovers. It is of course good that you are writing to him. I am writing about him to Kul Ranjan. He may be able to suggest something. You try applying mud-pack even on the eyes. I am doing it everyday. I am not using a piece of cloth now but applying the earth direct. Needless to say that the eyes must be kept closed. Jaya’s letter is enclosed.

February 23, 1947

I am in a great hurry. Hence, I am sending this without revising. Now, send the papers about my subject.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar
35. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

CHAR KRISHNAPUR,
February 22, 1947

At the outset Gandhiji said that he had received from a Muslim friend in Baluchistan a printed sheet containing what he thought were the sayings of the Prophet and the teachers. The whole selection was good but he was attracted by the following from Prophet Mohamed’s sayings:

When God made the earth it shook to and fro till He put mountains on it to keep it firm. Then the Angels asked, O God, is there anything in Thy creation stronger than these mountains? And God replied, iron is stronger than these mountains for it breaks them.

And is there anything in Thy creation stronger than iron?
Yes, fire is stronger than iron, for it melts it.

Is there anything stronger than fire?
Yes, water, for it quenches fire.

Is there anything stronger than water?
Yes, wind, for it puts water in motion.

O our Sustainer, is there anything stronger than wind?
Yes, a good man giving alms. If he gives it with his right hand and conceals it from his left, he overcomes all things. Every good act is charity. Your smiling in your brother’s face, your putting a wanderer on the right road, your giving water to the thirsty, is charity. A man’s true wealth hereafter is the good he has done to his fellowmen. When he dies people will ask, what property he had left behind him? But the Angels will ask, what good deeds has he sent before him?

Gandhiji then dealt with the following questions.

Q. Why should there be insistence on temple-entry? Of course, we understand that in case of objection, there is scope in it for satyagraha. No-caste dinners have a limited value; for those who join do not shed untouchability in their homes or during social ceremonies. They look upon these dinners, organized by Congressmen or other progressives, as special occasions when caste rules are held in abeyance; something comparable to what one does when one goes to Jagannath Puri and partakes of cooked rice offered to Jagannath without reference to one’s caste. Anti-untouchability has not yet gone deep enough to affect the normal social life of individuals. What can be done to break down barriers in private homes? Even with regard to temple-entry there is one question. Do you think that priests in public service in free India will be drafted from among competent men and women without any reference to their former castes?

A. Gandhiji said that it was an apt question in this part of Bengal where there were the largest number of Namasudras. He welcomed the question doubly because he had occupied the lowest rung of the Hindu ladder and because he did not believe in the ladder of castes. He invited all to occupy that lowest rung. Then there would be no occasions for such questions as were addressed to him. Meanwhile, he was bound to deal with them. He entirely endorsed the proposition that untouchability would be doomed and totally abolished when there was no prohibition applied against anyone by reason of his caste. The only universal prohibition would be against insanitation, degradation, etc. But he clung to the belief that temple-entry took the first place in the programme of removal of untouchability and he made bold to say that social public dinners would precede as they were preceding the final conquest over the demon of untouchability. He prophesied that Hinduism would be destroyed if untouchability was not destroyed, even as the British race would lose its name if British rule was not destroyed in toto, as it was certainly being dissolved before their very eyes.

1 Extracted from “Gandhiji’s Walking Tour Diary”

Q. You wrote about economic equality in 1941. Do you hold that all persons who perform useful and necessary service in society, whether farmer or Bhangi, engineer or accountant, doctor or teacher, have a moral right only to equal wages with the rest? Of course, it is understood, educational or other expenses shall be a charge of the State. Our question is, should not all persons get the same wages for their personal needs? Do you not think that if we work for this equality, it will cut sooner under the root of untouchability than any other process?

A. As to this Gandhiji had no doubt that if India was to live an exemplary life of independence which would be the envy of the world, all the Bhangis, doctors, lawyers, teachers, merchants and others would get the same wages for an honest day’s work. Indian society may never reach the goal but it was the duty of every Indian to set his sail towards that goal and no other if India was to be a happy land.

_Harijan, 16-3-1947_

36. A SILENCE-DAY NOTE

_February 23, 1947_

Difference between defensive and aggressive is wholly unconvincing and meaningless. You can’t blow hot and cold. Either have hate or love. I have already said how to deal with the want of seeds and instruments.

M. K. G.

From the original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library.Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar
37. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

CHARSOLADI,
_February 23, 1947_

Q. Namassudra girls are usually married off at the age of 12 or 13; formerly the usual age was 8 or 9. The bridegroom has to pay a dowry of Rs. 150 for the bride. The average difference between the two is about 12 to 15 years. As a result of this the number of widows in the Namassudra society is rather large. Among one section of the caste widow-marriage was prevalent. But in imitation of another section which was looked upon as superior, the former are giving up that practice. What is your advice regarding child-marriage and widow-remarriage?

A. Dealing with the question Gandhiji said that his opinion was definite. In the first instance there should be no possibility of child-widows. He was averse to child-marrriages. It was an evil custom which unfortunately the Namassudras had perhaps taken from the so-called higher castes.

Gandhiji was also against the system of dowry. It was nothing but the sale of girls. That there should be castes even amongst Namassudras was deplorable and he would strongly advise them to abolish all caste distinctions amongst themselves. And in this they should bear in mind the opinion the speaker had often expressed that all caste distinctions should be abolished, and there should be only one caste, namely, Bhangis, and all Hindus should take pride in being called Bhangis and nothing else. This applied to the Namassudras as well.

When child-marrriages were abolished, naturally there would be few, if any, young widows. As a general rule he was for one man one wife for life, and one woman one husband for life. Custom had familiarized women in the so-called higher castes with enforced widowhood. Contrary was the rule with men. He called it a disgrace, but whilst society was in that pitiable condition, he advocated widow-remarriage for all young widows. He believed in equality of the sexes and, therefore, he could only think of the same rights for women as men.

Q. You say that you are in favour of inter-religious marriages but at the same time you say that each party should retain his or her own religion and, therefore, you said, you tolerated even civil marriages. Are there any instances of parties belonging to different religions keeping up their own religions to the end of their lives; and is not the institution of civil marriage a negation of religion and does it not tend towards laxity of religion?

1. Extracted from “Gandhiji’s Walking Tour Diary”. It being Gandhiji’s silence day the questions and answers were read out.
2. _Vide_ “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 21-2-1947
A. Gandhiji said that the questions were appropriate. He had no instances in mind where the parties had clung to their respective faiths unto death because these friends whom he knew had not yet died. He had, however, under his observation men and women professing different religions and each clinging to his or her own faith without abatement. But he would go so far as to say that they need not wait for the discovery of past instances. They should create new ones so that timid ones may shed their timidity.

As to civil marriages he did not believe in them but he welcomed the institution of civil marriage as a much-needed reform for the sake of reform.

_Harijan, 16-3-1947_

---

38. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

KAZIRKHIL, RAMGANJ P. S.,
NOAKHALI DT.,

_February 24, 1947_

Today being silence day I am writing this. But it will be typed for your easy reading. I have read Attlee’s speech\(^1\). Lest I might embarrass you by an untoward word or phrase I am not saying anything just now.

Evidently I had anticipated practically the whole of it in my speeches here, i.e., if I am interpreting the speech correctly. My interpretation is this Independence will be recognized of those parts which desired it and will do without British protection.

The British will remain where they are wanted.

This may lead to Pakistan for those provinces or portions which may want it. No one will be forced one way or the other. The Congress provinces if they are wise will get what they want.

Much will depend upon what the Constituent Assembly will do and what you as the Interim Government are able to do.\(^2\)

If the British Government are and are able to remain sincere the declaration is good. Otherwise it is dangerous.

Now about Sardar Niranjan Singh Gill. He has been to Bihar and has produced a report which somewhat reflects upon the Sinha

\(^1\) In the House of Commons on February 20; for excerpts from it, _vide_ Appendix I.

\(^2\) The addressee was Vice-President, Member-in-Charge, External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations, in the Interim Government.
Ministry. You should see him and his report. It has gone to Suhrawardy and Sinha under my advice. He and Sardar Jiwan Singh have not hit it off. The whole thing is bad. I. N. A. seems to have split up. Probably you know all this.

In view of the above report I might have to go to Bihar. God knows. You may show this to friends.

Hope you are well.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

I take it that you have a cable from Durban about orders against Drs. Dadoo and Naicker. I trust you have taken prompt action. I have cabled F. M. Smuts.

BAPU

From the original: Jawaharlal Nehru Papers (M. O. Mathai). Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

39. LETTER TO J. B. KRIPALANI

KAZIRKHIL,
RAMGANI P.S.,
NOAKHALI DISTT.,

February 24, 1947

This is a very personal letter but not private.

Manu Gandhi, my grand-daughter as we consider blood relations, shares the bed with me, strictly as my very blood, not to give me animal satisfaction but as part of what might be my last yajna. This has cost me dearest associates, i.e., Vallabhbhai, Kishorelal, probably C.R. and others. This includes Devdas. I have lost caste with them. You as one of the dearest and earliest comrades, certainly before Sardar and Kishorelal, should reconsider your position in the light of what they have to say. Perhaps Sucheta will help you somewhat. She knows something of this episode. Am I worthy of the

1 Vide “Letter to Niranjan Singh Gill”, 8-2-1947
2 The subscription is in Hindi.
3 It had been reported that the Government of South Africa had refused passports to Yusuf Dadoo and G. M. Naicker and impounded their certificates of identity.
4 (1888-1982); Principal, Gujarat Vidyapith, 1920-27; General Secretary, Indian National Congress, 1934-45; elected its President in 1946 but resigned in 1947; Member, Constituent Assembly; resigned from Congress in 1951 companionship of so many old associates? I have given the deepest thought to the matter. The whole world may forsook me but I dare not leave what I hold is the truth for me. It may be a delusion and a snare. If so, I must realize it myself. I have risked perdition before now. Let this be the reality if it has to be.

I need not argue the point. I have simply conveyed the intensity of my thought.

I suggest your discussing with Sardar and Rajaji. And then come to the conclusion and let me know. You have to think out your relationship not merely as a friend but as President. Of course you can share this with Jawaharlal and Maulana. Do not consider my feelings in the matter. I have none. All I want is to do the truth at all cost, as I see it.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

40. LETTER TO PYARELAL

February 24, 1947

CHI. PYARELAL,

Herewith is a copy of the letter to the Professor.² You will learn from it what is happening. My association with Harijan now seems to have ended. I am not worried in the least. I am anxious about Manu’s state of mind. All this is an ordeal for me. May truth alone triumph.

Blessings from

BAPU

[P.S.]

Send the papers about me.

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

¹ In Devanagari
² Vide the preceding item
41. DISCUSSION WITH A. V. THAKKAR.
February 24, 1947

BAPA: Why this experiment here?

GANDHII: You are mistaken, Bapa; it is not an experiment but an integral part of my yajna. One may forgo an experiment, one cannot forgo one’s duty. Now if I regard a thing as a part of my yajna — a sacred duty — I may not give it up even if public opinion is wholly against me. I am engaged in achieving self-purification. The five cardinal observances are the five props of my spiritual striving. Brahmacarya is one of them. But all the five constitute an indivisible whole. They are inter-related and inter-dependent. If one of them is broken, all are broken. That being so, if in practice I resile in regard to brahmacharya to please Mrs. Grundy, I jettison not only brahmacharya but truth, ahimsa and all the rest. I do not allow myself any divergence between theory and practice in respect of the rest. If then I temporize in the matter of brahmacharya, would it not blunt the edge of my brahmacharya and vitiate my practice of truth? Ever since my coming to Noakhali, I have been asking myself the question, ‘What is it that is choking the action of my ahimsa? Why does not the spell work? May it not be because I have temporized in the matter of brahmacharya?’

B. Your ahimsa has not failed. Do not miss the wood for the trees....

G. If I accept your contention, then it would amount to this that I should give up what I hold to be right for me, for fear of displeasing the world. I shudder to think where I should have been if I had proceeded like that in my life. I should have found myself at the bottom of the pit. You can have no idea, Bapa, but I can well picture it to myself. I have called my present venture a yajna—a sacrifice, a penance. It means utmost self-purification. How can there be that self-purification when in my mind I entertain a thing which I dare not put openly into practice? Does one need anyone’s approval or permission to do what one holds with all one’s being to be one’s duty? Under the circumstances, there are only two courses open to friends. Either they should have faith in me, in the purity of my motives and my bona 1 From Amrita Bazar Patrika, 27-2-1947. The source, however, has “February 25”.

2 Omission as in the source
fides, even though they are unable to follow or agree with my reasoning, or they should part company with me. There is no middle course. I dare not shrink from putting into action the logical implications of my conviction when I am launched on a sacrifice which consists of the full practice of truth. Nor must I hide or keep my convictions to myself. That would be disloyalty to friends. Let X, Y and Z, therefore, go the way they choose, but how can I run away from the test? My mind is made up. On the lonely way to God on which I have set out, I need no earthly companions. Let those who will, therefore, denounce me, if I am the imposter they imagine me to be, though they may not say so in so many words. It might disillusion millions who persist in regarding me as a Mahatma. I must confess, the prospect of being so debunked greatly pleases me. Thousands of Hindu and Muslim women come to me. They are to me like my own mother, sisters and daughters. But if an occasion should arise requiring me to share the bed with any of them I must not hesitate, if I am the brahmachari that I claim to be. If I shrink from the test, I write myself down as a coward and a fraud.

B. What if your example is copied?

G. If there is blind imitation or unscrupulous exploitation of my example, society will not and should not tolerate it. But if there is sincere, bona-fide honest endeavour, society should welcome it and it will be the better for it. As soon as my research is complete, I shall myself proclaim the result to the whole world.

B. I for one cannot imagine anything base in you. After all, Manu is in place of a grand-daughter to you — flesh of your flesh and bone of your bone. I confess, I had my mental reservations in the beginning. I had come in all humility to press upon you my doubts. I did not understand. Only after our talk today have I been able to have a deeper understanding of the meaning of what you are trying to do.

G. Does that make any real difference? It does not and it should not. You seem to make a distinction between Manu and others like her. My mind makes no such distinction. To me they are all alike—daughters.¹

¹ According to the source the conversation had an unexpected sequel. Manu told Gandhiji that she saw no harm in conceding to Thakkar Bapa’s request to suspend the practice for the time being, provided Gandhiji agreed. Gandhiji readily agreed. Vide also “Letter to Vinoba Bhave”, 10-3-1947
42. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

HAIMCHAR,
February 24, 1947

This being the last stage of the second part of his pilgrimage, Gandhiji thanked God for the happy ending of the second part. He referred to the intense wish that Bapa, whom he described as the chief priest and servant of the Harijans, had expressed that he should include Haimchar in his programme. He referred also to the origin of the distribution of workers in the villages that had suffered and how Bapa had instinctively selected the Haimchar area as the field of his service.

He then referred to the communications, telegraphic and otherwise, he had received for his opinion on Mr. Attlee’s statement. He said there were the Congress and the League, not to mention other associations, which would express authoritative opinions. He would however permit himself to say that the statement had put the burden on the various parties of doing what they thought best. It had declared that British rule would end before or during the month of June, 1948. It was up to the parties to make or mar the situation. Nothing on earth could overturn their united wish. And so far as he was concerned, he was emphatically of the opinion that if the Hindus and Muslims closed their ranks and came together without external pressure, they would not only better their political condition but they would affect the whole of India and probably the world.

It was an easy descent to what was uppermost in the mind of his audience composed mostly of Namasudras. He warned them against considering themselves as fallen or untouchables. Those so-called higher castes were the guilty ones; they were responsible for what they had become. If they realized the fact, they would never make the mistake of imitating the evil customs and habits of the higher classes.

He was sorry to hear that there were child-marriages amongst them and that child-widows were compelled in imitation of the higher castes to abstain from remarrying. The result, he had learned, was that diseases which resulted from promiscuity were prevalent among them. Their betterment would not come from the legislatures or from any other outside agency. It depended on their own efforts. They should remember what the late Malaviyaji used to say, that children of God should confine themselves to earning an honest cowrie and eat what it could procure. Then there would be happiness for them and untouchability would be a thing of the past.

1 Extracted from “Gandhiji’s Walking Tour Diary”
2 Vide Appendix I.
3 Madan Mohan Malaviya (1861-1946); President, Indian National Congress, 1909 and 1918; Member, Legislative Assembly; founder of the Benares Hindu University and its Vice-Chancellor from 1919 to 1939
The higher castes so called would be ashamed of their sin against them.

Bapu pointed out the destruction that had been wrought. He was sorry for it but he would not shed a tear for it nor harbour ill will against the destroyers. Let them not bewail their lot. They were used to hard labour or should be. They might plead with the Government to do justice and that in time. But they would not give in if that assistance did not come. They must trust their hands and feet to set them up again in life. God always helped those who helped themselves. Their reliance must be on the living God and on the ever-toiling masses.

Harijan, 16-3-1947

43. FROM THE DIARY

February 24, 1947

After the morning prayer, tried to study the outline of Bengali numeral one and to improve the outline of the second numeral. Next struggled unsuccessfully for about ten minutes to understand the distinction between nio and nao (future imperative and present indicative respectively of the Bengali verb ‘take’). In the meantime Manu brought orange juice. Put the same question to her. She too failed to give a satisfactory explanation. That accounted for another ten minutes. Sent for Nirmalbabu. Put the poser to him in turn. He fared a little better but in the end he, too, gave up perplexed. In between he handed Sardar Gill’s file. That started a conversation about Gill. This went on till 6:35. Wrote a letter to A. Then lay down to rest for about ten minutes; got up at 7:25, inspected the trench latrine and set out on the day’s march.

44. TELEGRAM TO KEDARNATH KULKARNI

HAIMCHAR,

[On or after February 24, 1947]

NATHJI

SHANTIKUNJ NAIGAM

CROSS ROAD, DADAR

BOMBAY-14

READ YOUR LETTER WITH ATTENTION. IT CONTAINS MISTATMENTS. OBSERVE THAT WIDE DIFFERENCES EXIST BETWEEN US. NEVERTHELESS COME IF YOU CAN CONVENIENTLY AND WITHOUT INJURY TO HEALTH OWING LONG AND TIRESOME JOURNEY.¹

GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

45. TELEGRAM TO KISHORELAL MASHRUWALA

HAIMCHAR,

[On or after February 24, 1947]

YOUR WIRE SENT LONG WIRE NATHJI.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

¹ Gandhiji was in Haimchar from February 24 to March 2, 1947.
² The addressee, along with Swami Anand, came to Bihar on March 14 and held discussion with Gandhiji on March 15 and 16; vide “Discussion with Swami Anand and Kedar Nath”, 15/16-3-1947
³ Vide the preceding item.
46. NOTE TO S. HAQ

[After February 24, 1947]²

I have your note. I am a simple man, no reader of visions. “Fear God and no other and love your neighbour as thyself” is my motto.²

From a photostat: C. W. 10231. Courtesy: Basant Apte. Also G. N. 11398

47. LETTER TO MAHENDRA PRATAP

KAZIRKHIL,
RAMGANJ P.S.,
NOAKHALI DISTT.,
February 25, 1947

DEAR RAJA SAHEB,

I have your wire. You are probably almost right not for the argument you have used but for deeper reasons. I have advisedly used the adverbs ‘probably’ and ‘almost’.

Yours sincerely,

RAJA MAHENDRA PRATAP
BRINDABAN

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

48. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

February 25, 1947

DEAR DAUGHTER,

Your two letters are lying with me. Owing to heavy work I was not able to write to you. Even this I am writing very early in the morning.

I have read your Bengali letter. I had a talk with Satis Babu³.

¹ The addressee in a letter in Bengali dated February 24, 1947, had written to Gandhiji about a dream in which he had seen Gandhiji preaching Islam.
² This is followed by the instruction “Render this into Bengali and I shall sign it.”
³ Satis Chandra Das Gupta
You do not need money. This is not Borkamta.¹ Who are the spinners? Are they Hindus or Muslims? You have made no mistake in breaking the fast.² God alone knows if you have not got a new birth. If you can come just for a day in a jeep, do come. I will explain to you what you have to do. Satis Babu can bring you. I will be in Haimchar for six days. Don’t be in a hurry. Come if you can stand the strain. I will explain fully. But don’t mind if you do not like to travel by jeep. In that case I will write and tell you what I wish to say. Jeep is also a temptation. I do not want to lure you into it.

_Blessings from_

_BAPU_

[PS.]

The _dhoti_ that you have sent is very good. I wore it immediately. Today also I am wearing it. My blessings to the weavers.

_BAPU_

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 579

49. QUESTION BOX

_[February 25, 1947]¹_

Q. What is the difference between your non-co-operation and the non-fraternization of the Allies?

A. The answer is obvious. My non-co-operation was purely non-violent in conception as also in effect. This does not mean that its practice was always perfect. Theory and practice hardly ever coincide even as Euclid’s line in practice never coincides with his theoretical definition.

The non-fraternization policy of the Allies led to disastrous results which he who runs may see, and the pity of it is that the disaster is not yet completed. No one knows where it will lead to.

_Harijan, 16-3-1947, and The Hindu, 27-2-1947_

¹ The addressee had worked in the Kasturba Seva Mandir, Borkamta from 1944 to 1946.
² Amtussalaam who had been working in Noakhali from October 1946, had undertaken a fast for the return of the sacrificial swords to Hindus. She broke her fast on January 20, the twenty-fifth day of the fast, on Gandhiji’s advice. _Vide “Speech at Prayer Meeting”_, 21-1-1947
³ From _The Hindu_
50. TALK WITH DEB NATH DAS¹

February 25, 1947

Netaji² will remain immortal for all time to come for his services to India.

_The Hindu, 27-2-1947_

51. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING

HAIMCHAR,

February 25, 1947

Unity between Hindus and Muslims is the first thing to be achieved to facilitate the work of village reconstruction and no work will be done without this.

Gandhiji said that instead of making schemes of great projects they should start in a humble way the construction of good roads for peasants and destruction of water hyacinths in tanks. Cleanliness was the one thing necessary in villages in order to prevent diseases. If the officers engaged in village uplift task wanted to work in co-operation with the people they must let the latter know that they were their servants. Concluding, Gandhiji said that as he was a servant of the people he would be glad to render all possible help in this regard.

_Amrita Bazar Patrika, 28-2-1947_

52. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

HAIMCHAR,

February 25, 1947

Gandhiji drew the attention of the audience to the meeting he was invited to attend by the Relief Commissioner, Nurannabi Chowdhury. He asked them to follow the advice he had given without waiting to know what others would do. He said that he ¹ Secretary, Indian National Army Peace Committee. He met Gandhiji in the morning and apprised him of the work done by the Peace Committee camps in Tipperah and Noakhali.

² Subhas Chandra Bose (1897-1945); General Secretary of Indian National Congress, 1927, its President, 1938 and 1939; founded All-India Forward Bloc; organized the Indian Independence League and the Indian National Army
³ Held in the afternoon on the grounds of Haimchar Bazar, the meeting was arranged by the Rehabilitation Commissioner, Chittagong Division.
⁴ Extracted from “Gandhiji’s Walking Tour Diary”
⁵ Vide the preceding item.
wanted the Kingdom of God on earth. Surely we did not want to wait for anyone else to do so.

Then he dealt with the questions that were addressed to him.

Q. Do you not think that a strict enforcement of the purdah system would improve the moral condition of women?

A. He was warned by some Muslim critics against speaking on the purdah. He had therefore some hesitation in speaking about it. But he took heart when he turned round and saw that many Hindu women observed it and that numerous Malaya Muslim women among whom he had many friends did not observe the purdah. He also knew many distinguished Muslim women of India who did not observe it. Lastly, the real purdah was of the heart. A woman who peeped through the purdah and contemplated a male on whom her gaze fell violated the spirit behind it. If a woman observed it in spirit, she was truly carrying out what the great Prophet had said.

Q. To those who had lost all their trade your advice is that they should voluntarily turn themselves into labourers. Who will then look after education, commerce and the like? If you thus dissolve the division of labour, will not the cause of civilization suffer?

A. The question betrayed ignorance of his meaning. If a man could not carry on his original mercantile business, it was not open to him but obligatory on him to take to physical labour, say, scavenging or breaking stones. He believed in the division of labour or work. But he did insist on equality of wages. The lawyer, the doctor, or the teacher was entitled to no more than the Bhangi. Then only would division of work uplift the nation or the earth. There was no other royal road to true civilization or happiness.

Spirit giveth life, the letter killeth. A Ganapati with an elephant’s head was a monster but as a representation of Om was an uplifting symbol. Ravana with ten heads was a fabled fool but if it meant a man who carried no head about him and was tossed to and fro by fleeting passions, he was a many-headed demon.

Q. How can the caste Hindus look after the interests of the untouchables? How can they realize the feelings of the classes who have suffered so long at their hands? Is it not then better to entrust the interests of the untouchables to men of their own caste?

A. He was of the opinion that the caste Hindus owed a sacred duty to the so-called untouchables. He must become a Bhangi in name and action. When that happened the untouchables would rise at a bound and Hinduism would leave a rich legacy to the world. If that happened, the system of cleaning closets would undergo a transformation. In England the real Bhangis were famous engineers and sanitarians. That could not happen in India so long as society was sluggish and slothful.

_Harijan_, 23-3-1947

1 The sacred syllable or Pranava
53. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

February [26]1, 1947

The last week of March next is at present for me a far cry. If God wills He will find a way for me to attend the Conference.2

Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase, Vol. II, p. 89

54. STATEMENT TO THE PRESS

HAIMCHAR, February 26, 1947

Referring to the news about the Union Government’s refusal of passports and impounding the certificates of identity for Drs. Dadoo and Naicker, Gandhiji said:

The Union Government will not be able to sustain their anti-Asiatic policy by such an action.

He added that the action was wholly unwarranted and arbitrary if the facts stated in the cablegram he had received in this connection were correct.3

Gandhiji hoped that either there were some justifying peremptory reasons for the refusal and impounding or that second thoughts would convince the Government that it was a hasty step and therefore it would be cancelled.

Amrita Bazar Patrika, 28-2-1947

55. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING4

HAIMCHAR, February 26, 1947

Q. When things are all going wrong at the Centre, what can common people do to restore unity?

A. There was a law of science which enunciated that two forces were simultaneously at work: the centripetal and the centrifugal. He wanted to apply the law to life also. The centre, therefore, of the Government attracted us all to it and in good government we would respond to that centripetal force. Similar was the centrifugal force in obedience to which we, the villagers of Haimchar, attracted the

1 The source has “6”, obviously a slip, since this letter was in reply to the addressee’s letter dated February 24, soliciting Gandhiji’s presence at the Inter-Asian Relations Conference which was to be held in New Delhi from March 23.

2 Gandhiji ultimately did attend the Conference on April 1 and 2.

4 Extracted from “Gandhiji’s Walking Tour Diary”
centre. Thus, where these forces worked well there would be ordered and orderly government at the centre and the circumference. When, however, the centre was going wrong, it should be pointless to dominate the seven hundred thousand villages. On the other hand, the villagers would live in perfect amity if they were wise in leaving alone the centre to look after its so-called high politics?

Q. A man who sacrifices self-interest for the sake of his community is at least unselfish to that extent. How can the heart of such a man be affected so that he will sacrifice communal interests for the interest of the nation?

A. A man whose spirit of sacrifice did not go beyond his own community became selfish himself and also made his community selfish. In his opinion the logical conclusion of self-sacrifice was that the individual sacrificed himself for the community, the community sacrificed itself for the district, the district for the province, the province for the nation and the nation for the world. A drop torn from the ocean perished without doing any good. If it remained a part of the ocean, it shared the glory of carrying on its bosom a fleet of mighty ships.

Q. In free India whose interest shall be supreme? If a neighbouring State is in want, what should free India do?

A. Gandhiji said that the first part of the question had been answered in the above. A truly independent free India was bound to run to the help of its neighbours in distress. He instanced Afghanistan, Ceylon and Burma and said that the rule also applied to the neighbours of these three and thus, by implication, they became India’s neighbours too. And thus, he said, if individual sacrifice was a living sacrifice, it embraced the whole of humanity.\(^1\)

Gandhiji gave to his ideal society the name Ramaraja.

Let no one commit the mistake of thinking that Ramaraja means a rule of the Hindus. My Rama is another name for Khuda or God. I want Khudai raj, which is the same thing as the Kingdom of God on earth.

The rule of the first four Caliphs was somewhat comparable to it. The establishment of such a rajya would not only mean welfare of the whole of the Indian people but of the whole world.

\(^1\) What follows is reproduced from _Mahatma Gandhi — The Last Phase_.

46 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
56. TELEGRAM TO SUDHIR GHOSH

February 27, 1947

SUDHIR GHOSH
1 AURANGZEB ROAD
NEW DELHI

GOD BE WITH YOU.\(^1\)

BAPU

Sudhir Ghosh Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Also Gandhi’s Emissary, p. 200

57. TELEGRAM TO SYED MAHMUD

Express February 27, 1947

MINISTER SYED MAHMUD
PATNA

YOUR WIRE. NEWSPAPER ANNOUNCEMENT UNAUTHORISED. WROTE SHRI BABU\(^2\) IF YOU ALL CONSIDER MY PRESENCE NECESSARY IN INTERESTS INJURED PARTY PREPARED COME EVEN EARLIER THAN EIGHTEENTH. WOULD LOVE TO STAY WITH YOU UNLESS YOU ALL DESIRE OTHERWISE.\(^3\)

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

\(^1\) The addressee had been appointed Public Relations Officer at the Indian High Commission in London.

\(^2\) Vide “Letter to Secretary, Muslim League”, 28-4-1947

\(^3\) Late in February Gandhiji received a report from Dr. Syed Mahmud, Minister for Development and Transport, Bihar saying that the situation in Bihar was indeed serious and required his personal attention; vide also “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 28-2-1947
58. LETTER TO LUDWIG BORSCH

KAZIRKHAL,
RAMGANJ P.S.,
NOAKHILI DISTT.,
BENGAL,
February 27, 1947

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter of the 11th ultimo.\(^1\) Distance lends enchantment to the scene. I would, therefore, warn you against visiting India for the enrichment of your life. Life, as it is found in India, is wholly different from the life described in the best books on ancient wisdom in the East. I wish I could give you definite guidance on the selection of your diet. We in India, not excluding myself, have learnt much from English and American literature on the diet question. The ordinary Indian diet is unbalanced and is heavily spiced. Therefore, I would advise you to consult the many American and English textbooks written on vegetarianism and more especially on the kind of diet. You will gain much more than I could give from this literature if you used discretion.

LUDWIG BORSCH, ESQ.
66 TENIMORE STREET
BROOKLYN
NEW YORK

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

59. LETTER TO PYARELAL

February 27, 1947

CHI. PYARELAL,

I have your two letters. If you send me the prescription for Satis Babu and anything else that is required, I shall do the needful. Pay the doctors fee if it must be paid. But you must know the way I feel, the way I acted in Bihar. Let us render such help as we can and be content. What you are doing for Kalu Mian is an ideal thing in my view. We should provide him personal service, give him proper diet and be content with that. For that purpose, a doctor is not needed.

\(^1\) In which the addressee had expressed his desire to visit India “to find and learn about those things, which in the material-minded West one regarded with a sort of pitying contempt” and sought Gandhiji’s advice on diet.
followed this practice in Champaran from beginning to end. The doctors and the teachers were Ba, Durga, Manibehn Parikh, etc. It was very impressive and very rewarding. This is just to suggest what in my view would be the ideal thing.

I am convinced your good lies in controlling your desire to come. A.S. and Kanu arrived yesterday. I shall send the letter you have asked for. There is no hurry about it. Kanu and A.S. will also read it.

What you have written about Harijan is correct. It all depends on what Sardar finally does. It is hardly possible that he will now run it independently. But if he does, we shall remove your name. We have so far entirely depended on our sadhana, particularly mine. I am without fear. I am unconcerned. But it irks me that I have not yet cultivated non-attachment to the extent I should have. But in the end there must be the grace of God behind human effort. Without that, human effort is futile.

If Kalu Mian feels hot in the soles, I know the usefulness of a mud-pack. I think it should be used.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.] I received another letter just while this was going. It is a lovely letter. I have not been able to read the account of your activities and the lesson for Manu. I shall arrange to send the letter which you are so eager to read. I had completely forgotten what you wrote about Rajaji. If you write a letter about it and send it to me, I shall send it on to him. You can write to anyone from among Rajaji, Kishorelal, Narharibhai, Jajuji, etc. Do not worry at all about my health. Should not a person having faith in God be free from worry?

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

60. TALK WITH FAZLUL HUQ

February 27, 1947

GANDHIJI: Oh, don’t stand up. You were the Chief Minister when I met you last!

HUQ: I shall be frank with you. It is no use saying one thing and having something else up your sleeve.

Gandhiji nodded complete agreement.

The Maulvi Saheb began: Gandhiji had not gone to Bihar; his place was in Bihar rather than in Noakhali; Noakhali Muslims, far from being aggressors, were the victims of police repression. Hindu police officers were harassing innocent Muslims and implicating them in false cases—they should be withdrawn; Muslims were not criminals, abductors of women, etc.; Islam never taught that.

Gandhiji again agreed so far as the teachings of Islam in the abstract were concerned.

HUQ: Very few understand Islam. They call it the religion of the sword. The minorities in the Muslim State were the special responsibility of the majority. The non-Muslims were zimmis.¹

The Maulvi Saheb’s last point was that far from the Hindus having cause to be afraid of the Muslim majority in Noakhali, it was the latter, in fact, who were afraid of Hindu domination. The Hindus should shed their fear and accept Pakistan. His Majesty’s Government’s statement² of 20th February, 1947, would only bring civil war to India.

G. (In a tone of light banter): So, if I come to Barisal, there is only the khal³ for me, is it not?

HUQ: No, no, Mahatmaji, you are always welcome. That was only a joke. I never can let go a joke—even at the expense of my father. That is my nature!

Gandhiji said that he had always asked Jinnah to convince him of the meaning and implications of Pakistan. His formula⁴ was before the Muslim League leader and the country and so far as he was concerned the offer still stood. As regards withdrawal of criminal cases, it rested with the Bengal Government. Regarding Bihar, he continued:

I may shortly go there. But it will not be to oblige you.

He was awaiting Dr. Mahmud’s⁵ reply, he told the Maulvi Saheb, but if the latter could assure him that the majority community in Noakhali would stand guarantee for the safety and security of the minority community, he would feel free to leave Bengal immediately. Could he give that assurance?

To this the Maulvi Saheb gave no straight reply. Instead, he began to talk

¹ Who were required to pay a tax called jazia for protection by the State
² Vide “Clement Attlee’s Statement”, 20-2-1947
³ A canal. Fazlul Huq was reported to have said that as a non-Muslim, Gandhiji should not preach the teachings of Islam, for, instead of Hindu-Muslim unity, he was creating bitterness between the two communities. Had he been to Barisal, he would have driven him into the canal. Vide “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 16-2-1947
⁴ Presumably the Rajaji Formula. Vide “C. Rajagopalachari’s Formula”
⁵ Syed Mahmud, Minister for Development and Transport in Bihar about a coalition Government in Bengal as the only remedy for Bengal’s ills!

At this point one of Fazlul Huq’s companions broke in: “I was a worker in the Khilafat movement; you were the first leader who taught me politics.”

G. If you had taken your politics off me, you would have given a much better account of yourself.

G. (TO HUQ): What is this quarrel between you and Suhrawardy? I do not like it.

But the Maulvi Saheb again avoided the issue and talked instead of his profession and his chronic trouble—lack of finance! Gandhiji thereupon twitted him for his spendthrift nature and sent him away laughing.

61. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

HAIMCHAR, [February 27, 1947]

Q. Can a man serve his immediate neighbours and yet serve the whole of humanity? What is the true meaning of swadeshi?

A. Gandhiji said that the question had been answered by him on the previous evening. He believed implicitly in the truth that a man could serve his neighbours and humanity at the same time, the condition being that the service of the neighbours was in no way selfish or exclusive, i.e., did not in any way involve the exploitation of any other human being. The neighbours would then understand the spirit in which such service was given. They would also know that they would be expected to give their services to their neighbours. Thus considered, it would spread like the proverbial snowball gathering strength in geometrical progression, encircling the whole earth.

It followed that swadeshi was that spirit which dictated man to serve his next-door neighbour to the exclusion of any other. The condition that he had already

1 Which was launched in 1919 “against the threatened dismemberment of Turkey and removal of the holy places of Islam from the Caliph’s control”

2 According to “Gandhiji’s Walking Tour Diary” from which this has been extracted, Gandhiji offered prayers in a temple which was destroyed during the riots and was rebuilt by the Government. The idol in the temple, however, escaped destruction because the resourceful priest had put it away in a safe place. Gandhiji hoped that the old and rusty tins used in rebuilding the temple would be painted so as to prevent further deterioration.

3 Vide “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 26-2-1947

VOL. 94 : 17, FEBRUARY, 1947 - 29 APRIL, 1947 51
mentioned was that the neighbour thus served had in his turn to serve his own neighbour. In this sense swadeshi was never exclusive. It recognized the scientific limitation of human capacity for service.

Q. The Government has been introducing schemes of industrializing the country for the maximum utilization of her raw materials, not of her abundant and unused man-power which is left to rot in idleness. Can such schemes be considered swadeshi?

A. Gandhiji remarked that the question had been well put. He did not exactly know what the Government plan was. But he heartily endorsed the proposition that any plan which exploited the raw materials of a country and neglected the potentially more powerful man-power was lopsided and could never tend to establish human equality.

America was the most industrialized country in the world and yet it had not banished poverty and degradation. That was because it neglected the universal man-power and concentrated power in the hands of the few who amassed fortunes at the expense of the many. The result was that its industrialization had become a menace to its own poor and to the rest of the world.

If India was to escape such disaster, it had to imitate what was best in America and the other Western countries and leave aside its attractive-looking but destructive economic policies. Therefore, real planning consisted in the best utilization of the whole man-power of India and the distribution of the raw products of India in her numerous villages instead of sending them outside and rebuying finished articles at fabulous prices.

After the questions had been answered, Gandhiji touched upon the fact that he had a visit from some members of the Scheduled Classes. He had told them that his mission was to teach people how to be really brave. They need not be afraid for their lives because the so-called high-caste men had not yet returned to their places. If they shed their fear they would have no enemies. The Muslims would be their friends when they recognized bravery in them. Cowards were ever exposed to the enmity of all, whether Muslims or others. The way to the attainment of that courage lay not in the possession of the sword and the efficiency to kill one’s opponent, but in the refusal to recognize in any other human being an enemy, along with the determination to lay down one’s life and yet not surrender at the point of the sword.

Gandhiji then referred in detail to some of the abuses current in local society, like child-marriage, absence of widow-remarriage, etc., which resulted in the lowering of the moral stature of the people. If they could shed these weaknesses, they would gain the power to die for their faith and honour.

_Harijan_, 23-3-1947
62. TELEGRAM TO SHRIKRISHNA SINHA

February 28, 1947

Dr. Syed Mahmud and others would like me to visit Bihar . . . .² Do you feel likewise? Please tell me what you feel.

63. TELEGRAM TO C. RAJAGOPALACHARI

HAIMCHAR, TIPPERA DISTT.,

February 28, 1947

MINISTER RAJAGOPALACHARI
NEW DELHI

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

64. TELEGRAM TO SECRETARY, NATAL INDIAN CONGRESS

February 28, 1947

SECRETARY
NICELY
DURBAN

Have made public statement supporting step about royal visit.³

GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

¹ This was sent the day after Fazlul Huq’s departure, i.e., February 27. Vide “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 28-2-1947
² Omission as in the source.
³ Vide Vol. LXXXII, p. 28.
65. LETTER TO RAMDASIA MAZHABI SIKH FEDERATION

KAZIRKHIL,
RAMGANJ P.S.,
NOAKHALI DISTT.,
February 28, 1947

DEAR FRIENDS,

I have your letter signed by eleven members of your group. The names are typed instead of there being original signatures. I must confess my ignorance of the existence of this group. I do not know what I can do to remedy the difficulty you complain of. I feel helpless.

Yours sincerely,

THE RAMDASIA MAZHABI SIKH FEDERATION
THROUGH THE PRESIDENT
MISTRI HARNAM SINGH
P.B. SAMRALA
DISTT. LUDHIANA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

66. LETTER TO BUTT KRISTO PAUL & CO., LTD.

KAZIRKHIL,
RAMGANJ P.S.,
NOAKHALI DISTT.,
February 28, 1947

GENTLEMEN,

I thank you for your prompt attention to my suggestions with regard to the first-aid box. I have examined the contents of the few box[es] sent by you. Whilst I was about to send you my considered opinion Shri Satis Chandra Das Gupta was with me and so I handed the box to him to examine it and give his expert opinion on the contents and the make-up of the box. Naturally I cannot hurry him. He is such a busy man. I will therefore advise you not to multiply the new pattern and await my considered reply. I have some what I think valuable suggestions. But having taken advantage of Satis Babu’s presence I want to fortify myself with his expert assistance.

Yours sincerely,

BUTT KRISTO PAUL & CO., LTD.
CALCUTTA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

67. LETTER TO A. J. MUSTE

KAZIRKHIL,
RAMGANJ P.S.,
NOAKHALI DISTT.,
February 28, 1947

DEAR FRIEND,

Muriel Lester has sent me your letter of the 27th September last which has remained on my file for some time. She has also given me a brief description of your selfless labours. How I wish I could send you some useful suggestions by way of help in what you very rightly term as crisis! The aftermath of the last war is in reality much worse than the war itself if only because its bloodiness is so hidden from view that man deceives himself into the belief that he is at last safer than when the war was on.

I wish too that I could give you the assurance that India, when she has come to her own completely, will not join the race for the increase of armaments. I can only say that whatever I can do to prevent any such misfortune will not be left undone.

Yours sincerely,

A. J. MUSTE, ESQ.

From a photostat: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi and Dr. Sushila Nayyar
68. LETTER TO T. HAYES

KAZIRKHIL,
RAMGANI P.S.,
NOAKHALI DISTT.,
BENGAL,
February 28, 1947

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter 1 of the 16th ultimo. I do not know that I can send you anything useful beyond saying that you should glean my writings on fasting in the columns of Young India later transformed into Harijan. Mr. Richard Gregg (The Putney School, Putney, Vermont, U.S.A.) might be able to help you in getting hold of copies of this weekly.

Yours sincerely,

ED. T. HAYES, ESQ,
7622 ROBIN ROAD
DALLAS 9, TEXAS, U.S.A.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

69. STATEMENT TO THE PRESS

HAIMCHAR,
February 28, 1947

I have received a cablegram from the ex-Natal Indian Congress which says that the Congress, the Transvaal Indian Congress, the Coloured People’s Organization and the African National Congress have decided on their part to refrain from taking part in or in any manner assisting in the celebrations in honour of the Royal visit to the Union of South Africa. They feel that in view of the disabilities imposed upon the Asiatics and Africans and other coloured people it would be improper on their part to share in the rejoicings of the white people of South Africa. The cablegram asked me to endorse the abstention which they describe by the name of “boycott”. I take this opportunity of publicly endorsing the abstention as a natural and dignified step by any self-respecting body of people.

The Hindu, 1-3-1947

1 In which the addressee had requested Gandhiji to send him scientific or spiritual treatise on fasting.
SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

HAIMCHAR,
February 28, 1947

Gandhiji took up the thread of his remarks of the previous evening about the Namasudras. He had no time to refer to the question of education. The blame for the neglect of education among them must lie solely upon the so-called high-caste Hindus. It was preposterous to expect that those who were deliberately suppressed by Hindu society would themselves take to education. What he, however, deplored was that there were men among them who taught them not to accept good things from the so-called high-caste Hindus. He was of the opinion that it was mischievous propaganda. Therefore, he expected the Namasudras to give definite assurance about land [for school] and the attendance of boys and girls. In that case he had no doubt that there were enough penitent Hindus who would gladly take up the duty of educating these neglected children. He invited the Namasudras to send the required assurance to Thakkar Bapa who might be trusted by them to do the rest and he hoped that there were enough local Hindus who would offer their money and ability for the performance of the honourable duty of educating these children.

He then referred to the prospect of his having to go to Bihar and to the atrocities that had been committed by the Hindus of Bihar before which the happenings in Noakhali or Tipperah paled into insignificance. He had enough pressure put upon him by the Muslims in Bengal to go to Bihar. He had refused to listen to the advice because he had the hope that he could work with equal effect among the Bihar Hindus without having to go there. But he had a visit from the secretary of Dr. Syed Mahmud. He had brought a long letter from Dr. Mahmud. They should know that Dr. Mahmud was a valued friend of his. He was himself Development Member of the Bihar Ministry. In answer to his question, Dr. Mahmud had written to him asking him to visit Bihar as soon as he could. He had said that all was not as rosy as it should be and that his presence in Bihar would ease the situation and reassure the Muslims that he was equally concerned about the welfare of the Muslims as of the Hindus. He could not resist Dr. Mahmud’s letter. He had, therefore, sent an urgent wire to Bihar and it was highly likely that he might have to hurry to Bihar. In that case, he would have to interrupt the tour in Noakhali and Tipperah. But the message he would leave for the Hindus and Mussalmans here, during the short period he expected to be absent, was that they should live with one another as brothers. This they could only do if they shed internal weaknesses and were prepared to lay down their lives without retaliation for the defence of what they considered sacred.

1 Extracted from “Gandhiji’s Walking Tour Diary”
2 Vide “Telegram to Shrikrishna Sinha”, 28-2-1947
3 The following two paragraphs are reproduced from Amrita Bazar Patrika.
Gandhiji said that he was in constant communication with the authorities concerned on the Bihar situation and had been speaking unequivocally against the madness of Bihar Hindus. He was sure that he was there where he could serve both the communities. He had come to Noakhali to serve both the communities and not to create bitterness between them.

He had come here to create fearlessness among the affected people. He asked them not to despair and told them that his associates would be working here as usual. People here must not quarrel among themselves. They must not antagonize Muslims but they must not also yield to threats. They should rather lay down their lives. Gandhiji emphatically said that he had decided to go to Bihar, not for the relief of Muslims, but to effect a change of mentality among the Hindus of Bihar. He hoped that Hindus and Muslims would live together in amity all over India.

Gandhiji then passed on to a question which had been referred to him that evening. It was with regard to the partition of Bengal into two provinces, one having a Hindu and the other a Muslim majority. Bengalis had once fought against and successfully annulled the partition of their province.¹ But according to some, he proceeded, the time had now come when such a division had become desirable in the interest of peace. Gandhiji expressed the opinion that personally he had always been anti-partition. But it was not uncommon even for brothers to fight and separate from one another. There were many things which India had to put up with in the past under compulsion, but he himself was built in a totally different way.

In a similar manner, if the Hindus, who formed the majority in the whole of India, desired to keep everyone united by means of compulsion, he would resist it in the same manner as before. He was as much against forced partition as against forced unity.

Gandhiji then proceeded to say that whatever might have been the history of British rule in the past, there was no shadow of doubt that the British were going to quit India in the near future. It was time, therefore, that the Hindus and the Muslims should determine to live in peace and amity. The alternative was civil war which would only serve to tear the country to pieces. One did not know what the future had in store for them. If the people really and sincerely, and with a pure heart, wished unitedly for a particular thing, speaking in human language, it could be said that God, being the servant of His servants, would Himself carry out that will.

_Harijan, 23-3-1947, and Amrita Bazar Patrika, 2-3-1947_

¹ The partition of Bengal in 1905 was annulled in 1911.
71. A NOTE

February, 1947

Let Nirmal Babu examine my replies for the style as well as the manner. Are they satisfactory?

From a facsimile: Mahatma, Vol. VII, between pp. 384 and 385

72. NOTE TO DHIRUBHAI B. DESAI

[February 1947]

Where is Madhuri?

It should be done immediately.

I have never forgotten Bhulabhai’s ability. I know that he entered politics at my instance. The difference which arose between us was one of love. There are innumerable people who drink. There are many such in the Congress, too, and I could say nothing to them. But Bhulabhai’s addiction pained me and I told him about it. Afterwards he even wept before me. I could not bear his being a slave to the drink habit. And it was with him that I first discussed the matter. Let me tell you that I had a great share in his being taken up on the Working Committee. I had to fight for his inclusion. I was behind his inclusion in the Constitution Committee also. Need I say more? I also knew about the proposal to appoint you ambassador. Calm down and acquit yourself well in your job with patience and self-control. Send me Madhuri’s book.

[From Gujarati]

Bhulabhai Desai Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

---

1 Son of Bhulabhai Desai
2 The note is written on the reverse side of a letter dated “February 1947”.
3 Address see’s wife
4 (1877-1946); eminent lawyer; member, Liberal Party; joined Congress in 1930; Leader of Congress Party in Central Assembly
73. LETTER TO H. S. Suhrawardy

Kazirkhil,
Ramganj P.S.,
Noakhali Distt.,
March 1, 1947

Dear Friend,

I hope you heard from the S.D.O. Chandpur, Tipperah District that I am endeavouring to leave for Bihar tomorrow. I wish I could say that I am trying to go because of your pressing advice to Fazlul Haq Sahib who spoke publicly the other day and repeated the same thing, though very courteously, on Thursday last when he was good enough to call on me. The memorandum of Sardar Niranjan Singh Gill about which I wrote to you on February 22, had predisposed me towards a temporary visit to Bihar. What decided me however was a long letter from Dr. Syed Mahmud who has sent it with his Private Secretary. In order to come to a final decision I sent a peremptory message yesterday through the good offices of Khan Sahib, the S.D.O. of Chandpur, asking whether the Bihar Chief Minister had any objection to my immediately proceeding to Patna. The reply may be received any minute. If I go I would like you to give me hints as to what I should see. The desire to go has arisen because suspicion has been created in my mind that all is not well in Bihar so far as the Hindu behaviour towards the Muslims of Bihar is concerned. The cause in either case, in Bihar or Bengal, is identical.

There was consternation among the Hindus yesterday when I announced my intention of immediately proceeding to Bihar. They said they were afraid of being molested as in October. I hope that the fear will prove groundless and that you will do all you can to allay the fear. It is said that all aid in the shape of rations will be stopped from the 15th instant. If this information turns out to be true there would be widespread avoidable distress. The machinery provided for relief is very slow.

Sufficient material for building is not there. Weavers have got no yarn for weaving. Fishermen have got none for making nets. Carpenters have got no tools. Agriculturists have no bullocks. There are no seeds for sowing. Thakkar Bapa mentioned the difficulty of merchants in Haimchar for a loan in order to enable them to start business. He has prepared an application to be sent to you. It makes a business like proposition. I should have thought that people who have lost their all would be entitled to adequate grants for starting business. On the contrary, however, he offers even interest if it is required for the loan he proposed. I hope there will be no delay in granting the loan. I would strongly urge that interest should not be asked in such cases.

There is a strong belief that there is boycott by the Muslims of Hindus so far as labour for them is concerned. Of course I have said that no government can compel any community to labour for another. Critics have no difficulty in agreeing to my proposition against compulsion. They however suggest that boycott is approved, even encouraged, by your Government. I hope that my information is wholly wrong.

I am leaving a copy of this letter with Satis Babu of Khadi Pratishthan who is at present stationed at Kazirkhil and who will represent me during my absence which I hope will be only temporary and will be attended by success. Though my absence will be temporary, I cannot omit to mention that so far as I am personally concerned, the whole of the official world has been courteous and considerate to me and in this mention I include the police whom you have put to guard my person.

H. S. SURIHRAWRDHY SAHIB
PRIME MINISTER
BENGAL

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

74. LETTER TO ALI HUSAIN

March 1, 1947

I am surprised at your asking me to condemn the Bihar Ministry unheard. I am ashamed that at this time of day you should think of the application of Section 93. There are many honourable ways of exposing the corruption no matter where it exists. The application of Section 93 is not among them.

1 This was in reply to the addressee’s letter dated February 18, 1947, which read: “To save Bihar from further calamity I hope you will have the courage to declare that the Bihar Ministry should be dismissed, Section 93 be applied, and the present Governor may also be changed with this corrupt Ministry.”
75. INTERVIEW TO WORLD YOUTH DELEGATION

March 1, 1947

Gandhiji told the World Youth Delegation that youth in India was influenced by foreign ideologies too much. They had no living contact with the real life of India.

The Hindu, 3-3-1947

76. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

HAIMCHAR,
March 1, 1947

Gandhiji said that he would try to cover Bajpati also on his return. He could not fix the time. He was not leaving Noakhali or Tipperah without the establishment of heart unity. There was time for satisfying all reasonable expectations.

I hope to leave for Bihar tomorrow afternoon. I will leave Haimchar at about three in the afternoon. I will go to Calcutta and from there proceed to Bihar.

He did not expect to stay there long. He would not be able to hold the prayer meeting [tomorrow] in Haimchar but would like to have it in Chandpur.

Q. You have referred to numerous social abuses prevalent among us. They are there; but then if the men are unwilling to effect the necessary social changes what can we women do about it?

A. Gandhiji said that there was no occasion for women to consider themselves subordinate or inferior to men. It was proclaimed that woman was half of man and by parity of reasoning man was half of woman. They were not two separate entities but halves of one. The English language went further and called woman the better half of man. Therefore, he advised women to resort to civil rebellion against all undesirable and unworthy restraints. All restraints to be beneficial, must be voluntary. There was no possibility of harm resulting from civil rebellion. It presupposed purity and a reasoned resistance.

Q. Those who have lost their dear ones, or the homes which they built up

1 The members of the delegation had asked Gandhiji the reason for differences in the youth movement in India.
2 Extracted from “Gandhiji’s Walking Tour Diary”
3 People from Bajpati had complained that Bajpati had been dropped from Gandhiji’s programme.
4 This paragraph is from Amrita Bazar Patrika. through years of patient care, find it extremely difficult to forgive and forget. How can they get over that feeling and look upon the community from which the miscreants came with a feeling of brotherhood?

A. The speaker said the one way to forget and forgive was to contemplate Bihar which had done much worse than Noakhali and Tipperah. Did they want the Muslims to take dire vengeance for the Hindu atrocities there? They could not. From this they should learn to forget and forgive, if they did not wish to descend to the lowest depths of barbarity. Moreover, they must not harbour an inferiority complex.
They should be brave. And forgiveness was an attribute and adornment of bravery. Let them be truly brave. True bravery refused to strike; it would suffer all infliction with patient cheerfulness. That would be the truest way of disarming opposition.

Q. Speaking about the proposed partition of Bengal, one of the proposals is that there should be only two separate administrative divisions without any exchange of populations taking place. This arrangement would keep each community in its place in peace. What is your objection to such a proposal?

A. Gandhiji considered two administrative divisions to be as impracticable as exchange of populations. That would result in an armed neutrality which was bound to kill all healthy growth. The leaders of both the communities must come together as friends and reduce their differences and suffer them. Any other way was the way of barbarism and subordination to a third power.

_Harijan_ , 23-3-1947, and _Amrita Bazar Patrika_ , 4-3-1947

77. LETTER TO SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA

CHANDPUR,
_March 2, 1947_

CHI. SATIS BABU.¹

I had a long talk with Sardar Jiwan Singhji². If you think that his men are really required for service wanted, you should discuss the thing with him and do what you wish. If in your opinion they are not really required, you should pay them out to date plus Rs. 30 each for passage to their destination. Sardarji will show you the detailed [expen]diture³. He himself proposes to render service in every case.
His case can be considered separately on my return or even by correspondence.

_Blessings from_

BAPU⁴

From a photostat: G. N. 8717

¹ The superscription is in the Devanagari script.
² Of the Indian National Army. _Vide_ p. 36.
³ The source is damaged here.
⁴ The subscription is in Hindi.
78. NOTE TO MANU GANDHI

March 2, 1947

Bapa was pleased with you in Haimchar. He spoke to me about it. But what pleased me particularly was that, during my week’s stay there, I could convince him in regard to many things and he revised many of his views. He is a man of great self-sacrifice and humility. Didn’t you observe that during all these days he took some of my time only on one day? On the other days he didn’t come at all to take my time. Such is his consideration for others. He is a class by himself. If he realizes that he has made a mistake, he corrects it immediately without the slightest hesitation. I also felt happy that you could be of some service to him. That is why I encouraged you in your attempt. I have still to read the last two days’ entries in your diary. Leave it with me tomorrow. I will go through it in the morning after prayer.

[From Gujarati]
Eklo Jane Re, p. 181

79. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

CHANDPUR,
March 2, 1947

Gandhiji explained why he had to interrupt his work in East Bengal and hurry to Bihar. He had turned a deaf ear to pressing requests made to him by the Bengal Premier and Mr. Fazlul Huq to go to Bihar.

Their statements could not find an echo in my heart. I had flattered myself with the belief that I would be able to affect the Bihar Hindus from my place in Bengal. But Dr. Syed Mahmud has sent his secretary to me with a long letter which showed me that I should go to Bihar for the sake of the Muslims of Bihar.¹

He expected to return to his chosen scene of service — Noakhali — as soon as

¹ Vide “Discussion with A. V. Thakkar”, 24-2-1947
² This was Gandhiji’s last prayer meeting in East Bengal and was attended by over 30,000 people.
³ The following paragraph is reproduced from Mahatma Gandhi — The Last Phase.
possible. Dr. Mahmud’s secretary had said they would not detain him for more than a fortnight. Meanwhile Gandhiji hoped that the Muslims would belie the fears of the Hindu refugees that they would not be allowed to live in peace.

Gandhiji, in conclusion, appealed to Hindus and Muslims to live in peace as brothers and friends and exhorted the officials and the police to conduct themselves in such a way that the public would look upon them as their friends and servants who by their selfless service and tact helped the communities to act as friends.

_The Hindu, 4-3-1947, and Mahatma Gandhi — The Last Phase, Vol. I, Bk. II, p. 255_

80. _NOTE TO JIWAN SINGH_
March 2, 1947

I do not want to lose you personally.²

81. _A NOTE_
[March 2/3, 1947]³

You should see to it that all who are on the steamer on our account pay the legitimate fare and expenses. Either they pay the Government or we collect and send. It looks ugly if we all travel free.⁴
Show it to Nirmal Babu. Let Mridulabehn⁵ also see it.

From a facsimile: _Mahatma, Vol. VII, between pp. 384 and 385_

¹ According to the source Gandhiji’s party boarded the steamer at 9.30 p. m. Col. Jiwan Singh was the last to take leave. His contingent of the I. N. A. could not fit into Satis Chandra Das Gupta’s scheme. As Gandhiji scribbled out his orders that he should send away his men, Jiwan Singh felt hurt and unhappy, thinking it was a sort of dismissal for him. He was about to bid good-bye with a heavy heart when Gandhiji wrote this note on another slip of paper. _Vide_ also “Letter to Satis Chandra Das Gupta”, 2-3-1947
² The addressee stayed on in Noakhali even after Gandhiji’s death.
³ From the reference to the steamer. Gandhiji boarded it at Chandpur on March 2 and reached Goalando the next day.
⁴ What follows is in Gujarati.
⁵ Mridula Sarabhai, daughter of Ambala Sarabhai
82. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

ON THE STEAMER FROM CHANDPUR,

March 3, 1947

CHI. VALLABHBHAI,

I got your letter yesterday in Chandpur. I am not happy about your ailment getting worse. It was possible to check it in the past and it may be so still. If you do not think much of Dinshaw¹, I have other [naturopaths] in view. But who can persuade you? You always do what you like. Do you realize how many people are dependent on you?

I understand about Sudhir. There was a wire from him. . . .²

I may not be able to convince you about the necessity of my work here, but I am sure it is of the utmost importance.

I leave today for Bihar. There was a letter from . . .³ and now there is another from Dr. Mahmud. Both are shocking and so I am going. You are all stalwarts there and carrying on the work. In these parts I am something of a giant among pigmies. So let me remain here. If anything is accomplished, it will benefit the country. If nothing can be done, nothing will be lost.

I was pained to hear about Dr. Kanuga’s illness. We should learn to live as God ordains.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

BAPUna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhaione, p. 350

¹ Dinshaw K. Mehta
² Omissions as in the source
³ ibid
83. TELEGRAM TO J. B. KRIPALANI

CALCUTTA,
March 3, 1947

ACHARYA J. B. KRIPALANI
PRESIDENT, CONGRESS
NEW DELHI

YOUR WIRE³. REGRET INABILITY. SEND MESSENGER BIHAR.

BAPU

From the original: A. I. C. C. File, 1946-48. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

84. LETTER TO PYARELAL

March 3, 1947

CHI. PYARELAL,

I have your letter. You are unnecessarily worrying yourself. One for whom Ramanama is the unfailing cure would not beget [problems of] blood-pressure and would not hear the drumming noise in his ears. However, if both these do occur, he would bear them patiently and die while doing so. I have no doubt about the truth of this point. I do get [high] blood-pressure and get buzzing in the ears. This shows that I should depend on Ramanama rather than take medicines, thinking that Ramanama is not serving any purpose. It is true that this is not easily done. In the matter of the sacred task here, we should have recourse only to Ramanama. Even so, I did take sarpgandha yesterday. I do have doubts about its efficacy. My duty is to die in peace if it is necessary to die. Why should you be disturbed when I die? You should work harder in that event. I still hope to recover only with the help of Ramanama. But if I have ceased to be of any use, it would be best to go.

I liked your bhakhri very much.

I have instructed Dev to send you all the papers that he can. Still I shall look into it.

1 Which read: “We all consider your presence here next Working Committee meeting sixth essential. Kindly postpone Bihar programme till ninth.”
I shall be leaving for Patna today. I want to stay there only for a few days. Dev, Hunar, Manu and Nirmal Babu will accompany me.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

85. INTERVIEW TO UNITED PRESS OF INDIA

[March 3, 1947]1

To a question whether Gandhiji’s stay in Noakhali had improved the situation there, Gandhiji said:

This question should rather be addressed to the interested parties — people who have suffered. I worked among the people and preached my message of love and communal amity.2 Personally I feel the situation has improved and there is more self-confidence among the people today, but the sufferers alone can tell you whether the situation has really improved. It is they who matter most.

Asked about the duration of his stay in Bihar, Gandhiji said:

I cannot exactly say how long I shall be there. I am going to Bihar after a long time. I shall be working among the Bihar sufferers and shall discuss the problem with the local leaders. I hope it will not be too long.

Gandhiji expressed his resolve to go back to Noakhali.
I shall continue my work there after my return.

Amrita Bazar Patrika, 5-3-1947

---

1 The Indian Nation, 6-3-1947, reported that the U. P. I. representative had met Gandhiji in the “evening immediately on his arrival at Sodepur”. Gandhiji reached Sodepur on March 3 at 9.30 p.m.

2 Gandhiji had visited 40 villages in Noakhali district and seven in Tipperah during his walking tour, covering a distance of 116½ miles.
86. TALK WITH AMIYA CHAKRAVARTY

SODEPUR,
[March 4, 1947]

I am going to Bihar but my work lies unfinished in Noakhali and Tipperah. I am going back to the Noakhali furnace and if I come out alive I shall have something to tell Noakhali and Bihar and I can think of nothing else. I am going to Bihar to find out what is happening there. I shall come back as soon as I am satisfied.

The Indian Nation, 6-3-1947

87. FROM THE DIARY

SODEPUR,
March 4, 1947

About Manudi. . . . She has still not ceased to be childish in some ways. She must learn to behave like a mature girl. I am quite hopeful she will do that before long. She is very simple-hearted. She looks after me with the utmost devotion. She is wholly absorbed in that work. But she is not careful about her food and rest, and as a result her health suffers. I am very much pained by this. . . . But otherwise I am quite satisfied with her work.

[From Gujarati]

Eklo Jane Re, p. 185

---

1 Rabindranath Tagore's secretary, who, according to the source, met Gandhiji in the morning.
2 Gandhiji had reached Sodepur at 9.30 p. m. on March 3 and left for Patna in the evening of March 4.
3 Omissions as in the source.
4 Ibid.
88. LETTER TO ARUNA ASAF ALI

ON THE RAIN TO PATNA,
March 5, 1947

CHI. ARUNA ¹,

I have your letter.

I am glad. What was there to mind in your not accompanying Asaf Ali ²? Go on doing what you regard as true service.

Here I am learning the lesson of absolute non-violence. I do not know how far I shall succeed. Let us see what happens.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Hindi original: Brijkrishna Chandiwala Papers. Courtesy: National Gandhi Museum and Library

89. INTERVIEW TO RAJENDRA PRASAD ³

PATNA ,
March 5, 1947

Gandhiji told him that he was not yet ready with his plan. On one or two points, however, he had come to a definite decision. He would allow Muslim concentration under certain conditions but he would neither give arms nor Muslim military and police. Instead, he would give them effective protection. Dr. Rajendra Prasad agreed. . . .

¹ (b.1909); Member, Congress Socialist Party; President, Delhi Pradesh Congress Committee, 1947; joined Socialist Party in 1948; elected first Mayor of Delhi in 1958
² Addressee’s husband, who on being appointed Ambassador to the United States of America had left Karachi for Washington on February 8
³ (1884-1963); joined Gandhiji in 1917 during the satyagraha in Champaran; President of Indian National Congress, 1939 and 1947; Member, Food and Agriculture in the Interim Government; President, Constituent Assembly; Minister, Food and Agriculture, Government of India; President of India, 1950-62
90. INTERVIEW TO C. P. N. SINHA

March 5, 1947

SINHA: Well, now that you have come, our burden is lightened.

GANDHIJI: I have come to lighten it. I have also wired Badshah Khan² to come.

s. What did Badshah Khan think of the work that is being done here?

G. He said that the Ministry were agreeable to everything he told them but the officers would not be able to cope with the problem. People alone can do it. He further suggested that there should be a committee for the purpose but it should be purely non-political. I also feel the same way.

s. There are many Hindus who did good work during the disturbances. Where there were such workers, very little damage was done. The Muslims still have faith in them.

G. All this should never have taken place.

s. People forgot themselves for a while. Where some care was taken, nothing happened. Congress workers did not check the disturbances at all places as they ought to have done.

G. That is the truth. Advantage lies in admission. Then alone can the remedy be applied.

s. At places Hindus did their best to protect the Muslims. But the problem calls for whole-hearted active co-operation of all sections. They are ready to give it.

91. DISCUSSION WITH RAJENDRA PRASAD AND BIHAR MINISTERS

March 5, 1947

We should make a public confession of our mistake. No commission of inquiry has been appointed to date. If we are not quick

¹ Chandreshwar Prasad Narain Sinha, Vice-Chancellor of the Patna University
² Abdul Ghaffar Khan (b. 1891), popularly known as “Frontier Gandhi”; founder of the Red Shirt or Khudai khidmatgar movement; Member, Congress Working Committees; was detained by Pakistan Government for demanding Pakhtoonistan about the matter, it will lose its effect. If we do not appoint a commission, we shall be held to have admitted the League’s case.

The Chief Minister, Shrikrishna Sinha, expressed the fear that the League would make political capital out of it. Gandhiji admitted that that was not improbable. But justice never paused to consider if it would be exploited.

[GANDHJI:] My sixty years’ experience has taught me nothing if not that. That is also the lesson of my three months of travail in Noakhali. I was groping in the dark but I said just what seemed to me to be the truth. Those who regarded me as their enemy could exploit it. But I had faith that sooner rather than later they would see their mistake. Be that as it may, my only strength lies in my ahimsa. The same applies to you also. If you grasp that, you will get over your fear and, undaunted by extraneous considerations, do justice.

Again and again Gandhiji tried to clear his old friend of unmerited suspicion.\textsuperscript{1} Dr. Mahmud’s letter which had brought him to Bihar was in reply to his (Gandhiji’s) peremptory inquiries; the Doctor had not acted disloyally towards his colleagues. Dr. Rajendra Prasad explained that there was really no difference. The Bihar Ministers were never opposed to Gandhiji’s coming earlier. But they had judged that the situation might call for the employment of drastic measures; how could they call Gandhiji in that context? The Chief Minister put in that they had never tried to “minimize” the atrocities.

GANDHJI: From what I have been hearing, it seems to me that the Bihar massacre was like the Jallianwala Bagh massacre\textsuperscript{2}. Dr. Mahmud’s wife today brought some Muslim women to me. I had no reply to their tears.

Dr. Rajendra Prasad . . . repeated what he had already told Gandhiji that many Biharis thought that they had done well.

Gandhiji replied that it was to save them from that sin that he had come. He had told Nawab Ismail\textsuperscript{3} that he would “do or die” in Bihar.

RAJENDRA PRASAD: I have full faith we shall succeed. Give us orders.

GANDHJI: In Champaran nobody ordered anybody.\textsuperscript{4} It was \textsuperscript{1} Dr. Syed Mahmud had incurred the displeasure of his colleagues by inviting Gandhiji to Bihar without consulting them.

\textsuperscript{2} At Amritsar on April 13, 1919
\textsuperscript{3} Muslim League Member in Bihar Assembly
\textsuperscript{4} Gandhiji had launched satyagraha in Champaran in 1917 to get the grievances of the peasants redressed. As a consequence the Tinkathia system under which peasants were required to grow crops on 3/20 of their holdings at the will of the landlords was abolished.
spontaneous loyalty. You saw the miracle. If that happens here, we shall win over even the League.

92. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

PATNA,
March 5, 1947

Gandhiji apologized for having come in a motor-car instead of walking to the prayer meeting. This was, he said, a reflection on the Biharis who should know the art of welcoming people in a quiet and dignified manner instead of the present embarrassing manner. They should have had consideration for his old age, he said, and spared him the shouts, however well-meant they were but which were too much for his ears.

He complimented the vast audience on their exemplary silence, but expressing his regret over their half-hearted participation in chanting the Ramdhun, he said:

An earnest prayer is very effective. If God is a Power, which indeed He is, then people must pray. Devotees of every religion pray according to their practices in their respective places of worship. It would be more beneficial if all of them prayed together in a common congregation.

It would be terrible if people should ‘Victory to India’ and work for her annihilation. Such action will bring no glory to India. If we wish victory for India, we ought to work to that end. If we merely repeat ‘Jai Hind’ or ‘Sitaram’ without the appropriate sentiments it would be mere parrot-like repetition. Please do not think that I do not want victory for India. In fact I have staked everything I possess for the sake of bringing glory to India.

I am visiting Bihar after many years. It is not as though I did not wish to come earlier. It was Bihar that made me known to the whole of India. No one knew me earlier. I had almost become a Negro after staying in Africa for twenty long years. Then I came to Champaran and the entire country woke up. Earlier I did not even know the location of Champaran; but when I arrived here I felt as if I had known the people of Bihar for centuries and they too seemed to know

1 At the Bankipur Maidan where over one hundred thousand people had assembled. All the Ministers were present.

The Urdu version of the speech has been collated with the report in Harijan published under “Gandhiji’s Bihar Tour Diary”.

VOL. 94 : 17, FEBRUARY, 1947 - 29 APRIL, 1947 73
This Bihar of ours has today committed a heinous crime. The atrocities perpetrated on a handful of Muslims have no parallel, so say the Muslims, in the annals of history. I too have read some history. I know that the world has witnessed greater brutality by man on man. But it is no use repeating them here. We must not compete in doing evil and that too against whom? Those who cry for avenging Noakhali in Bihar do not know the meaning of vengeance. Is it manliness to return barbarism for barbarism? We ought to overcome violence by love.

At present I have no evidence to say that Congressmen have committed these crimes. Tomorrow I may have to admit so. I must, however, say that Bihar has sullied the fair name of India. When I heard in Noakhali the reports of atrocities committed in Bihar, I decided to undertake a fast.\(^1\) It had been reported to me that some Congressmen had a hand in these crimes. It would be wrong even today to say that there was not a single Congressman involved in the mad upheaval. In India the Congress has to accept the responsibility for the misdeeds of all communities and all individuals. I had claimed in London\(^2\) on your behalf that the Congress represented the whole of India by right of service. Hence any sin committed by India comes to the door of the Congress. You who are listening to me may not have done any evil, yet you have to accept the responsibility. I have become hard-hearted now. I have not come here to shed tears or to make you cry. I would rather wish to steel your hearts. I could make you cry if I chose. But I do not wish to do so. We should not disown responsibility by saying that our hands are clean. India consists of many communities. We have the tribal people among us. We are responsible for them as well. If we disown responsibility for them, we have no right to claim that India belongs to us.

The way to achieve independence consists in all Indians saying with one voice that unless they gave to the whole world all that was good in them, their survival would be meaningless. Are we going to compete in [making] atom bombs? Are we going to match barbarism

---

1. In his appeal to Bihar is dated November 6, 1946 Gandhiji had expressed his intention to go on a fast unto death unless the madness in Bihar ceased. His appeal had an immediate effect on the situation in Bihar and the contemplated fast was not undertaken. His partial fast, however, as a penance for the Bihar tragedy commenced on November 6. Vide “To Bihar”, 6-11-1946

2. At the Round Table Conference in December, 1931. Vide “Speech at Plenary Session of Round Table Conference”, 1-12-1931
with even more barbarous acts? India has placed before the world a new weapon. I adopted the way of non-violence in 1920-21. We have been insisting that we will attain independence through non-violence. I do not claim that all Indians have accepted non-violence as a matter of creed. But even when we accept anything as a matter of policy, it becomes our duty to act upon it.

Dr. Rajendra Prasad told me today that some people believed that the Bihar riots had arrested the crimes in Noakhali, otherwise. Hindus everywhere would have suffered a similar fate. This is not correct. If Hindus had to suffer similar atrocities everywhere I would say that they were a cowardly lot. Who can frighten a person who has shed all fear? While touring in Bengal I used to tell the people that Hindus as well as Muslims of Noakhali had admitted that the miscreant was a coward and the victim who feared him a greater coward. Those who are under the illusion that Bihar has saved other people by committing these barbarities are talking nonsense. This is not the way to attain freedom. If Muslims believe that they would annihilate the Hindus or if Hindus believe that they would annihilate the Muslims, I should like to ask them what they would gain thereby? Muslims will not serve Islam if they annihilate the Hindus; rather they would thereby destroy Islam. And if the Hindus believe that they would be able to annihilate Islam it means that they would be annihilating Hindu dharma.

I consider myself a follower of Islam, Christianity, Zoroastrianism and every other religion because I am a true Hindu. All religions are equal and they are founded on the same faith. Various religions are like different leaves on the same tree, with slight differences in shades and shapes. Scriptures have said that one who condemns other religions, condemns one’s own religion. I consider myself a representative of all the true religions.

We should not gloat over the massacre of Muslims by Bihar Hindus. There can be no greater shame for India. Dr. Syed Mahmud told me that this had brought humiliation to him and to all Congressmen. He wrote to me to come and see the madness in which the people of Bihar, who claim to follow me, were indulging and asked me to stop their madness. Earlier I had wondered, what I could do by coming here but Dr. Mahmud’s letter compelled me to come here. The Hindus of Bihar have committed a grave sin. They will raise the head of Bihar much higher if they do honest reparations, greater in magnitude than their crimes. There is an English saying: “The greater the sin, the greater the saint.” I went to Noakhali with the determination to do or die. I have come here with the same resolve. If our thoughts are not right our actions are bound to go wrong. As soon as there is an opportunity, we commit a crime. Why should all of us not unite? After all we are servants of the same God, by whatever name we may call Him. We may call him Rama or Rahim, Krishna or Karim.

I had also been summoned to Delhi. ‘Come here’, they said, ‘what are you doing in Noakhali? We need you here’. But I did not leave Noakhali. But when I received Dr. Mahmud’s letter regarding Bihar, I came over here. Muslim Leaguers used to abuse me and say ‘go to Bihar’. It had no effect on me. But how could I ignore Dr. Mahmud’s appeal? I felt that I would become worthless if I did not go to Bihar even now. When I came and saw the conditions here I realized that we had, indeed, committed a great sin here. It is our duty to atone for our sin and do reparations. Those who have committed these misdeeds have done great harm to India. Those who think that this massacre in Bihar has saved India are really mad. This is not the way to free India; such methods would delay the day of India’s deliverance. May God grant us wisdom as Manubehn has just now sung before you:

हरज़ अल्ला तेरे नाम ।
सबको सम्पत्ति देभेंगिन न।

Gandhijike Dukhe Dilki Pukar — I, pp. 1-6, and Harijan, 23-3-1947

93. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

PATNA,
March 6, 1947

Gandhiji began his post-prayer address by complimenting the audience as well as Bari Saheb, the President of the Provincial Congress Committee and his comrades

1 Ishwar, Allah
both are your names,
Oh God, grant wisdom to us all.

2 The Urdu version has been collated with the report in Harijan published under “Gandhiji’s Bihar Tour Diary”.

3 Gandhijike Dukhe Dilki Pukar has “7”, obviously a slip, for Holi, which Gandhiji observed “will be celebrated tomorrow”, fell on March 7.

4 Abdul Bari
for the orderliness which had been successfully maintained during the evening.\textsuperscript{1} While the \textit{Ramdhun} was being sung there were some beats out of time. His advice was that they should practise more until both the tune and the time were in perfect unison.

A note had been handed to him reminding him that Holi was on the following day and people would like to hear his opinion as to how it ought to be celebrated. Gandhiji began by saying that he had no doubt in his mind that a religious ceremony like the Holi should never be marked by wild revelry, but by a disciplined effort to put oneself in communion with God.

Holi will be celebrated tomorrow. If we wish to celebrate it in a religious spirit, we must meet and greet each and every Muslim in the true spirit. With our overflowing love we should reassure the Muslims that the Hindus are their brothers and that there can be no difference between us.

Dr. Mahmud is a Congress Muslim; but I have been meeting Muslims belonging to the League too. We meet one another with great affection and talk in the most friendly manner. Houses of Muslims have been burnt down and their fathers, brothers, sons, innocent children, womenfolk and friends have been done to death. We should not disclaim responsibility for these acts by saying that some other people are responsible for them. Whoever might have actually done it, we cannot escape the responsibility. Muslims say that they live in great terror here. Hindus in Noakhali also used to say that they lived in terror of the Muslims.

We should not terrorize each other. If at all, we should overawe each other with our love and affection. Some Muslim friends say that the Ministry here may allot some houses or lands to the Muslims under political compulsion. But this will not do much good so long as the Hindus and Muslims do not sincerely love or trust each other. They say that Hindus and Muslims have been living together here for centuries, used to refer to one another as paternal or maternal uncles and attend wedding and funeral ceremonies. Today, however, they have turned into sworn enemies. How could the Muslims live here if this enmity persisted? I had to hand my head in shame when I heard this from Muslim friends.

I have heard that Hindus here start shouting and threatening when they see Muslims. They raise the slogans of \textit{Jai Hind Vande Mataram}. It is all very well to shout slogans; but we must make sure that they do not terrorize, or intimidate our upset other people. We are guilty of a great sin. Do we intend to announce through our slogans that we are proud of these acts? Our that we regard them as right actions? Hindus in Noakhali were also afraid of the slogan Allah O Akbar raised by Muslims. The slogan merely means ‘God is Great’ and no one need be afraid of this slogan. But when slogans are used for a wrong purpose, their meanings too are misunderstood and they become curses instead of boons.

\textsuperscript{1} On the previous evening, in their eagerness to go near Gandhiji and have his \textit{darshan} a large section of the assemblage had become quite unruly.

Jai Hind does not mean victory to Hindus and defeat for Muslims. But nowadays the Muslims take it in that light because we have put it to wrong use and threatened them with it. When we hear the slogans shouted by another person we think that the other fellow is preparing for a fight, and we also start getting ready for it. If we go on fighting like this and wreak vengeance for one place upon another, rivers of blood will flow all over India and still the spirit of vengeance will not subside. Hindus should behave so affectionately that even if a Muslim child comes into their midst, they should wash and clean him, dress him well and shower him with such love that the child should feel entirely at home. Only when this happens will Muslims realize that Hindus have become their friends.

Gandhiji was firmly of the opinion that this could never be our fate if we were determined to have it otherwise. His hope lay more in women who, he had ever maintained, were the living embodiment of ahimsa and of self-sacrifice, without which ahimsa could never be a reality. Gandhiji wanted everyone to celebrate the Holi in such a manner that every single Muslim felt that the Hindus had not only repented what had been done to them but had also gathered love for them to an extent which outdid their previous sentiments. If the Holi was marked by this revival of the old friendly relations then indeed it would be a truly religious celebration.

A gentleman remarked to me that they had always regarded Hindus as a very noble people, incapable of kidnapping anyone’s wife or daughter, since it was immoral and barbarous to do so. But the Hindus had stooped to such things. Many Muslim girls are missing. That gentleman also stated that it was difficult to tell the exact number of such girls, because whole families were missing. Muslims think that many of their girls have been forcibly kept in Hindu houses. “If we say this,” these friends say, “no one will pay any heed; but if you make an earnest appeal, it may produce a serious response.”

I had made a similar appeal to Muslims in Noakhali and I repeat it here to the Hindus. If any Muslim girl is held by any Hindu, he should release her. If he is afraid of returning her to the court or to the Police Station, let him take her to Dr. Mahmud or to his wife or to me or to Dr. Rajendra Prasad. I can assure the abductors that no harm will come to them, if they approach me. In fact, they should not be afraid of suffering punishment for their crime. He is brave who confesses his crime and is prepared to suffer due punishment.

Another thing which the gentleman told me was that the Muslims were afraid that the Hindus did not want the Muslim refugees to return to their homes. I have heard the same story in Noakhali from Hindus and now I am hearing it from the Muslims in Bihar. Our behaviour should be so exemplary that even if an Englishman lives amidst us we should not let him feel that we are his enemies.

I repeat here what I said in Noakhali. As long as the Hindus and Muslims together do not assure me that their hearts have been cleansed and that I could leave them without any anxiety, I will not leave this place. I shall continue to stay here as long as the Muslims do not come to me and reassure me that the Hindus have become better than what they were in the past. I use the word “better” on purpose. In a way, all of us are filled with evil intentions. But every heart which has evil traits also possesses noble impulses. And now we have to overcome our evil traits with our nobler qualities.

You should contribute liberally to the funds raised for Muslim victims. But more than giving money, you have to cleanse your hearts. We have to win over the hearts of Muslims. We must realize that politics leads to all sorts of things. But even Muslim Leaguers have conceded that had Jawaharlal not arrived in Bihar the fate of Muslims would have been much worse. They have undertaken to tell the whole world that some Hindu Congressmen have at the risk of their lives saved the Muslim Leaguers.

\[Gandhi\text{ji}ke\ Dukhe\ Dilki\ Pukar—1, pp. 9-12, and Harijan, 23-3-1947\]

94. INTERVIEW TO NATIONALIST MUSLIMS

*March 7, 1947*

Gandhiji assured them that he would not leave Bihar until he felt that cordial relations between the two communities had been restored.

*The Hindu, 9-3-1947*

---

3 Jawaharlal Nehru and Vallabhbhai Patel accompanied by Liaquat Ali Khan and Abdul Rab Nishtar had reached there on November 3, 1946.

4 This was reported to the United Press of India by one of the members of the deputation which had met Gandhiji in the morning and discussed matters concerning relief and rehabilitation work.
95. DISCUSSION WITH KHAKSARS—I

PATNA,
March 7, 1947

Gandhiji told them that while the Bihar Government would naturally welcome help from any organization which was willing to work on their terms, he could not advise them to abdicate any of their functions in favour of a private organization. The Khaksar leader proceeded hyperbolically to praise their own past record of selfless service which was without the “slightest communal bias”. Gandhiji told them to spare themselves that trouble, for they were not meeting him for the first time; he knew them well enough!

96. TALK WITH MANU GANDHI

PATNA,
March 7, 1947

You did notice, didn’t you, that even a beggar made a specific donation to the Muslim relief fund instead of using it for himself. In my eyes his four annas are more valuable than four crores of rupees. This is true charity! These are the people of Bihar. Today is only the third day of my arrival here. A gesture of this kind so soon after my arrival has deeply moved me. It is God’s grace that my voice has reached so far. The more pure and true we grow — the more God enables us to see these virtues reflected in others. Think deeply over this incident.

[From Gujarati]

Biharni Komi Agman, pp. 15-6

1 The Khaksars who had come to Bihar to render service to the riot victims stipulated certain demands which included that (1) bona-fide refugees attested to by them should be allowed a grant of Rs. 1,000 per man; (2) they should be empowered to settle disputed matters with Chief Minister; (3) resettling refugees should be at their discretion; (4) immovable properties belonging to settlers should be disposed of at the discretion of Khaksar Relief Committee; (5) they should create an organization of engineers and Bihar Government should pay for their services; and (6) their proposal for levy of cess to make relief scheme effective should be considered favourably by the Government.

2 The source here adds: “The subtle irony was lost on the sturdy soldiers. ... Their leader jumped at the remark and said that as Gandhiji knew them, he was sure he would stand guarantee for them and “compel” the Government to “accede” to their demands. ... They met him again a few days later.” Vide: Discussion with Khaksars-II, 7-3-1947

1 A blind beggar had given four annas to Gandhiji for the Muslim relief fund. Gandhiji, patting him on the back, had asked him to give up begging, for even a blind person could do a lot of work — he could at least spin.
Gandhiji began his address this evening by saying that just before starting for the prayer-ground he had taken a brief rest.

Today also I was wondering all the time whether we have realized that we had committed a great crime, a sin, and whether we had atoned for it. All my waking hours during the day have been spent in listening to the reports brought in by many Muslim and Hindu friends. All of them narrated the grievous wrongs done by us. None of them has been able to assure me that things have now settled down to complete normalcy. While I experienced the impact of these reports on me, I also wondered about the nature and intensity of the impact which these crimes and atrocities must have produced on the hearts of those who witnessed them.

The ideal of the sthitaprajna (man of steadfast wisdom) described in the second chapter of the Gita was always before him and he was ceaseless in his efforts to reach that ideal. Whatever others might say of him, he knew he was yet far from it. When one really reaches such a state, his very thought becomes charged with a power which transforms those around him. But where was that power in him now? He could only say that he was a common mortal, made of the same clay of which others were made, only ceaselessly striving to attain the lofty ideal which the Gita held before all mankind.

While speaking yesterday, I had quoted an English proverb. It means the greater the sinner, the greater the saint he becomes if he really repents and decides to reform himself. Bihar has committed a monstrous sin. It must now make reparations of the same magnitude and become nobler. Bihar is a land where the verses of the Ramayana are always on the lips of the people. I have moved widely in Bihar and I know the people here very intimately. They live a simple life and their voice ever rings with the music of the Ramayana. Their misdeeds are of terrible proportions; but their capability for making reparations is also equally great. I have been a witness to this. Then why should

---

1 The Urdu version has been collated with the report in Harijan published under “Gandhi’s Bihar Tour Diary”.
2 From Harijan and The Hindu. Gandhiji ke Dukhe Diki Pukar, however, reports it under “March 6”.

VOL. 94 : 17, FEBRUARY, 1947 - 29 APRIL, 1947
they not confess their sins and atone for them? I do not know whether my voice does reach the people who have actually committed these crimes. Those who are sitting here in the audience and who had no hand in these crimes may also wonder how people could go berserk. I don’t know whether or not I shall be able to reach those people who had done wrong to their Muslim brethren. But I want to reach them. They are unlettered; they do not read what appears in newspapers. I think I must go to their homes and stay with them.

I have heard that these people shouted Mahatma Gandhiki Jai while carrying out the massacre. I do not consider myself a Mahatma. But I cannot understand how people who consider me a Mahatma dragged in my name for committing such heinous crimes. I learnt of these terrible riots in Bihar while I was trekking the villages in Noakhali and attempting to unite the hearts of Hindus and Muslims. Now that I have come to Bihar, I think I must visit the scenes of actual massacre. I have not yet decided whether I should go to these places by car or whether I should travel there as in Noakhali, on foot. In any case, I must make myself heard by those people whom my words do not reach and, even when they do reach, they do so in a distorted form.

I said it yesterday and I repeat today that all those Hindus who kidnapped Muslim women should return them. I am staying at the house of Dr. Mahmud. It will indeed be a brave thing if the miscreants come forward and openly confess their sins and are prepared to undergo due punishment. But if such courage is lacking, they can at least restore the girls to me without any fear of harm coming to them. I shall not hand them over to the police.

There was however one thing more he would like them to do. It had been reported that property worth about a crore of rupees had been looted or destroyed. It did not matter what the exact figure was. For, if a man was deprived of a couple of rupees when he had only that amount it meant that he had lost his all.

It is the duty of everyone who has looted the properties of Muslims to return the stolen goods. Many families have been completely wiped out. But some of their relatives may be alive. And even if no one is left behind, the return of stolen goods will convince the Muslims that the Hindus have undergone a change of heart and they will begin to trust the Hindus.

I shall once again appeal to you that those of you who have understood my message, should certainly co-operate in this noble work and convey my message to the culprits. I can say nothing more at present. But I have resolved to go to each and every affected village and to strive to reach the ears of every man.

_Gandhijike Dukhe Diki Pukar—1, pp. 6-8, and Harijan, 23-3-1947_

98. DISCUSSION WITH KHAKSARS—II

[After March 7, 1947]

They said they wanted freedom to work in their “own way”—the Government should provide the finance.

Gandhiji was, however, clear that they had to work under the Government and carry out its policy. He reminded them that the Government had to consider other parties as well. For instance they were bound to try to secure the co-operation of the Muslim League in the first place. If the League refused to co-operate then only could it negotiate with other parties.

The Khaksars talked of the desirability of raising an “auxiliary force” drawn from the refugees for affording protection to those who returned. Gandhiji was opposed to this also. Nor was he agreeable to the proposal for forming a trust of the properties of those who had left the province. He would instead advise the Government to declare their terms. Such refugees as returned should have all the protection and help which they needed, but the Government could not undertake any responsibility in respect of those who chose to stay away. [Gandhiji said:]

If in this way only five return and they are well treated, they are bound to draw another five after them. If the Government implements its trust fully, I am sure, all the refugees would return.

99. INTERVIEW TO MOHAMMAD YUNUS

March 8, 1947

Mohammad Yunus agreed that those who had prompted or taken part in the disturbances could be no friends of the Congress even though they might carry the Congress label.

GANDHIJI: Could Jinnah be left out of the picture? Was it not up

1 Vide footnote 4, “Interview to Nationalist Muslims”, 7-3-1947
2 Chief Minister of Bihar before the Congress accepted office in 1937 to those Muslims who thought that he was going the wrong way to try to correct him?

MOHAMMAD YUNUS: Alas! That cannot be. Either you follow Jinnah or you get out of the Muslim League.

G. Then the future is dark indeed for Islam and for India — more for Islam than for India.

In reply to the question as to how long he expected to be in Bihar, Gandhiji said that he had set no time limit. Islam had not yet forgotten the Karbala, where brother’s arm was raised against brother, although it had happened 1,300 years ago. How could he forget his Karbala that was Bihar?

_Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase, Vol. I, Bk. II, pp. 262-3_

100. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

PATNA, _March 8, 1947_

Gandhiji said at the prayer meeting that he hoped the audience would forgive him for speaking always and exclusively on the theme which had brought him to Bihar. It had become his duty to listen to the tales of woe that the Muslim sufferers unfolded before him from day to day. One of them had come to him and complained that even so recently as two days ago, things were pilfered from the Muslim houses. If such was the case it was most unfortunate and it betrayed a lack of the spirit of repentance without which there was no possibility of concord between the two communities in Bihar, indeed, in the whole of India.

Whenever any new matter comes to my knowledge in connection with the work I have undertaken these days, I state it frankly before the public. Yesterday I referred to one matter. Today I heard something more about it. I shall report it to you frankly. “We had imagined that your arrival would put a stop to all mischief,” I was told, “but it is now four days since you came here and yet the mischief goes on unabated.” I am witnessing here what I saw in Noakhali. No one should say: ‘Why should we not do what they are doing there? We are in a greater majority here.’ Even if we have been

---

1 A town in Iraq, which was the scene of battle between the Sunni and the Shia Muslims in A. D. 680. As a consequence, Imam Hussain, the leader of the Shia sect, and his followers were put to death.

2 The Urdu version has been collated with the report in Harijan published under “Gandhiji’s Bihar Tour Diary”.
wronged, does it mean that we should try to compete with each other in goondaism?

We behave decently not for the sake of anyone else. An English scholar has said that one who does good deeds only performs his duty. If we do a good deed, we do nothing extraordinary. We do only what we ought to, and we shall be failing in our duty if we do not do so.

We have our newspapers here. It is their duty and that of the Chief Minister to remind the people constantly that they have committed a shameful crime, that Hindus and Muslims have to live together and all of us are Indians. Everyone of us is equally guilty of what anyone of us has done. We can achieve freedom only if we act in this spirit.

Riots are raging in the Punjab. The administration in that province is being run under Article 93. This is no fault of the British that it is under the Governor’s rule. They have to run the government as long as they are here and no one else is prepared to undertake the responsibility. It is India’s misfortune that we cannot co-operate amongst ourselves and act unitedly. It would be wrong for a Bihari to excuse himself on the plea that others have perpetrated greater crimes. Let us admit that we are the greater sinners. Only then can we hope to reform ourselves.

Let us try to tread the straight path. I have received a telegram from a Hindu brother. It says that I must not condemn the Hindus in Bihar. It warns me that due to my influence over them I may mislead them and prevent them from taking revenge. Look at the cheek of this gentleman who is trying to teach me my duty! He calls himself a Hindu but does not act like one. I claim to be a sanatani Hindu and therefore represent the best things of all the religions created for the worship of God. Every one of you, if you are honest, must feel likewise. We have committed a dirty crime and I have come here to cleanse the dirt and brighten the image of Hinduism. Am I going to flinch from my duty if someone beats me up or abuses me for doing it? It is my duty to speak out the truth and if I withhold it, I shall be disloyal to Hindus, to Muslims and to India. I shall therefore advise you not to listen to those who incite and misguide you.

Following the resignation of the Coalition Ministry, Hindus and Sikhs staged “Anti-Pakistan” demonstrations in Lahore on March 4 and communal riots broke out in the province. The Governor of the Punjab promulgated Section 93 in the province on March 5.
I wish to tell you one thing more. It is now four days that I have been here. I have been collecting money for Harijans every day and I have already collected a lot. But today an idea crossed my mind. The Hindus in Bihar have committed a grave error, they have been very unjust to Muslims. Hence they should do their duty by contributing to a fund for the relief of Muslims by way of repentance. No one should think that he need not lift his little finger since there is already a Congress ministry with a Congress majority here, which will do everything that needs to be done. The ministers have to work under great stress in making use of public finances. You should realize that this is your responsibility. If you donate money to me, you will be giving it to a miser who has been on this job for the past sixty years. I have collected lakhs of rupees; but no one can say that I misappropriated the funds. Otherwise no one would have entrusted his money to me. I shall therefore appeal to you to donate the money not for my use, not for any other cause, but for the sake of the Muslim sufferers. Give with an open heart. A wealthy landlord has promised to give land as well as money for the Muslims. He will look after all the Muslims who would be placed under his care. Many more people should come forward with such offers.

I did not beg for money in Noakhali because I received unsought about three lakh rupees. Today I thought I should hold out the begging bowl here and awaken the conscience of the people. I should take everyone’s help. What can I do by myself? And this is indeed your work; I can only remind you of your duty. I cannot perform your duty. Hence you must contribute generously to the Bihar fund. A Muslim child must feel entirely safe in a Hindu locality and the Muslims should be convinced of this change of heart. A friend came to me and asserted that there was a time in Bihar when Hindus and Muslims lived together and called each other uncles. Today it is no longer like that. We must atone for this.

_Gandhiike Dukhe Diliki Pukar —I, pp. 136, and Harijan, 3031947_

101. INTERVIEW TO UNITED PRESS OF INDIA

PATNA,
March 9, 1947

When the United Press of India’s special representative read out a message from New Delhi regarding Mahatma’s contemplated fast, Gandhi burst out laughing and said:

Of course, there is just a little bit of truth in it.

But he strongly disapproved of the practice of making a mountain out of a molehill.

Gandhiji told him that there was no present intention of fasting but circumstances might arise of which he had no present knowledge, which might compel him to undertake a fast.

The Indian Nation, 10-3-1947

102. DISCUSSION WITH BINODANAND JHA

March 9, 1947

Binodanand Jha protested that the Government was falsely accused of slowness in dealing with the situation. Immediately after the riots broke out, the Chief Minister had sent him to Gaya and then to Bhagalpur. The disturbances were the result of a “joint conspiracy” between the political opponents of the Congress, . . . and the British officials in the services. In proof he produced a pamphlet issued by the Hindu Mahasabha and another by the zamindars. Still another pamphlet asked people to organize themselves and take revenge for Bengal as the Congress seemed to be unconcerned about the insult to Hindu women in Noakhali and Calcutta. In Bhagalpur, the Minister complained, the disturbances were precipitated by the Muslim League’s propaganda. It was they who after getting the Muslims to congregate in large numbers had set the ball rolling. The Government had information that the arms they had allowed for Muslim defence had reached the Muslim National Guards.

GANDHIJI: I am against the giving of arms.

After the riots, the Minister continued, the League had deliberately implicated important Hindus. The League did not want things to settle down.

G. In the same way in Noakhali the Muslims complained that the Hindus were accusing wrong persons. I told them we should not be afraid of false cases. But we should not hide true ones. I do not want a single criminal to remain unpunished. The people should themselves come forward and confess their faults.

J. It was all a reaction against the happenings in Bengal.

G. We should not allow anything to deflect us from doing our duty.

---

1 Minister, Local Self-Government and Medical in Bihar
103. DISCUSSION WITH P. C. C. MEMBERS

PATNA,
March 9, 1947

Gandhiji told them that the more he heard of the Government spokesman’s apologia, the more he felt the need for turning the searchlight inward. He wondered if behind his earlier determination to stay on in Noakhali was not “sheer obstinacy” on his part.

ONE MEMBER: Tell us how we can wash off our sin. What are your orders?

Gandhiji replied that he was ever averse to issuing orders. In Noakhali he could not. In Bihar he could but did not want to. The very nature of the work precluded it. What he wanted was to awaken their conscience and win their reasoned co-operation. Since the advent of power, Congressmen had forgotten the path of duty. In a way Muslims had come to believe Jinnah’s charge that the Congress did not belong to all, that the Muslims that were with the Congress were there as mere puppets of the Congress with an axe to grind to the detriment and ruin of Islam. If the Hindus were sincere and brave, even the few Muslims that were with them could give the lie to that calumny and enable the Muslim masses to see that they were being misled, and perhaps save them from being so misled.

He had served Bihar before. He had now come to them on what might be his last pilgrimage. If he died striving there, he would have done his duty. All things hung on truth, courage and knowledge. If none of these virtues was there, the future was dark indeed for Bihar and for India.

A Congressmen got up to say that some Congressmen had taken part in the riot. He was interrupted by another Congressman who emphatically declared that no Congressman had taken any part in the riot. Gandhiji felt hurt. The gentleman, he cut in, did not seem to know what he was talking about. Even their own colleagues had admitted that some Congressmen had taken part [in the riot]. If their confession was half-hearted they would not gain anything by it. He had said enough. They were all responsible people. They should search their hearts.¹

The Chief Minister explained the genesis of the trouble and how his Government had tried to do all they could before, during and after the outbreak. They were caught unprepared. The Governor² was absent. The Chief Secretary and the Inspector-General of Police, both Englishmen, had let them down. British officers were having their revenge for 1942. He was sure, the inquiry would fully vindicate the Bihar government. Of course, they could not act with the strength of Pandit Nehru, who gave a thorough shaking to the officers. If it could be proved that the Government had intentionally allowed a single Muslim to be killed, said Chief Minister, they would have no right to remain in office.

¹ After this all except the Chief Minister and a few others left.
² Sir Hugh Dow
Then, put in Gandhiji, it had to be admitted that there had been lack of foresight. They should not bring in the Governor or the English officers. The popular Ministers had to act as if the Governors did not exist. Granting that they (the Ministers) had not been guilty of any wilful neglect of duty, still something was owing for what had actually happened. That needed intelligence, courage and purity of heart. Never had he been confronted with such a stupendous task in his life. Everything turned on what he could do with Bihar and the Biharis. If he succeeded in Bihar, India would be saved, the situation in the Punjab would be controlled, and the Frontier Province, Sind and Baluchistan would come into their own.

104. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

PATNA,
March 9, 1947

It is good that I have one day of silence in the week. How beautiful it would be if everyone could spend at least a few hours in the day in silent introspection if it were not possible for them to spend a whole day in complete silence. If people were accustomed to such spiritual exercise, then their hands could never have been stained by deeds which have actually taken place in Bihar. But this is not the occasion for dilating upon the benefits of the practice of silence.

Today I wish to indicate in brief the duty of those who did not personally participate in the shameful killings which took place in this province. Their first duty is to purify their own thoughts. When thoughts are not pure, one’s actions can never be purified. Pure action can never come from imitation. If one tries to become good by merely imitating the good conduct of others, such conduct never succeeds in radiating any influence upon others; because it is after all not the true stuff. But one whose heart has become really pure along with his actions, can at once sense the true character of the thoughts which influence the behaviour of his neighbours. When thoughts and actions have both become pure there can be no repetition of the deeds which have marred the fair face of Bihar. But the world never progresses in a straight line. The thoughts and actions of men never follow a parallel and uniform course. For all men these two can never be completely purified at any single point of time.

Therefore, I would wish to indicate this evening only that ideal

---

1 It being Gandhiji’s silence day, his written speech was read out.
of duty, which the workers should keep before themselves. If workers are available in sufficiently large numbers, it should be their first duty to explain clearly to the miscreants the full consequence of their misdeeds. It should be explained to the wrongdoers that such deeds can never be of any good to them personally, nor can they serve the cause of Hinduism or that of the country in general. It should be explained to them that they have not been able to serve those whom they intended to serve. They should also be induced to come forward and make a clean breast of their misdeeds before the public. They should also restore looted property and abducted women to the proper quarters.

A change of heart can never be brought about by law. It can only be effected through conversion of one’s thought. When that is accomplished, there is no longer any need of compulsive laws.

I had asked you to help in the relief of Muslim brothers and sisters who have suffered during the last riots. Yesterday you did not come prepared for that purpose. I expect of you today to contribute to your fullest extent in this noble cause.

The Indian Nation, 11-3-1947

105. FROM THE DIARY

PATNA,
Sunday, March 9, 1947

Explained to Manudi her duty quietly. She must learn to do everything in an orderly fashion. I would never abandon her as long as I am alive. This is the assurance I gave her at Shrirampur. But she is at liberty to leave me. It seems sinful to me that she should neglect her health for the sake of my work. On who desires to follow the path of service must first look after one’s own health. It was 1 a.m. by the time she finished counting the fund money, and yet she did not sleep a wink in the afternoon. This hurt me and I had to make her cry.

[From Gujarati]

Biharni Komi Agman, p. 24
106. A LETTER

PATNA,
Monday, March 10, 1947

CHI . . .

I have just received your pathetic letter. Luckily today is my silence day. Why should you cry? It is your duty to resist. Crying should be totally forbidden. Fight as hard as . . . did. I have already said that . . . is not putting up a tough fight and is feeling miserable. Why this misery? Let ... abandon me if I have come to regard adharm as dharma. If there is the slightest room for doubt, let me have the benefit of your opinion and see what happens. I am not big, nor are you small. We are all fellow-workers working in the same field. . . . My ideas are becoming firmer. How can I know whether it is [my] good sense or bad sense? In my view it is good sense. But it is similar to “appearance of silver in the mother of pearl”.

To conclude, do not despair. Carry on your work without giving any room to despair. By all means, leave me. Right now I am in the midst of the sacred fire. I would either be burnt or saved. Though you are far away from me, pray for me that I may have good sense. May you all be well.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Biharni Komi Agman, pp. 28-9

1 Omissions in the letter are as in the source.
2 Dated February 22
3 A verse by Tulsidas which means: “Appearance of silver in the mother of pearl and that of a sheet of water in the mirage, though non-existent at all times, are yet perceived. Such is this illusion which none can dispel.”
107. LETTER TO HARSHADABEHN

PATNA,
March 10, 1947

CHI. HARSHADABEHN,

I got the cheque for Rs. 55 sent on the occasion of Hemendrabhai completing 55 years. My blessings to you both. The way you celebrated Ba’s anniversary was but expected. Send the yarn, etc., at your convenience. These days I am wandering from place to place. With God to protect me, what more do I need?

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI HARSHADABEHN
RASIK VILLA
15TH ROAD
Khar
BOMBAY

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 10431

108. LETTER TO VINOBA BHAVE

PATNA,
March 10, 1947

CHI. VINOBA,

I have your frank letter.¹ Somehow I am not convinced by your argument. Nowadays Manu does not sleep in my bed. It is her own wish and is due to a pathetic letter from Bapa.² But according to my view it does not make any difference in the situation even if I am practising adharma. But at the moment I am not going to take any more of your time. In my daily prayers I earnestly pray to God to lead me from untruth to truth. Isn’t the same idea conveyed in “Lead kindly light”?³

Carry on your Bhangi work at Surgaon.
Take care of your eyes. Let someone read out [Dr] Agrawal’s book to you. Haven’t you heard of it?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C. W. 10546. Courtesy: Vinoba Bhave

¹ Vide “Letter to Vinoba Bhave”, 10-2-1947
² Vide also “Discussion with A. V. Thakkar”, 24-2-1947
³ A hymn by Cardinal Newman
109. LETTER TO ANAND T. HINGORANI

March 10, 1947

CHI. ANAND,

I read your letter addressed to Dr. Mahmud. Don’t worry if you have not been able to write to me.

Gangi will not be able to do anything here. It is enough if she looks after you and does whatever she can from there. I think I have already written to you.

May you both be happy.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI ANAND HINGORANI
7 EDMONSTONE ROAD
ALLAHABAD

From a microfilm of the Hindi. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

110. LETTER TO CHANDRANI

March 10, 1947

CHI. CHAND,

I got your letter only today. Dev is all right and does a lot of work. He is not physically strong but he will become so. He is learning quite a few new things.

Do you get any news from Amritsar? Are Father and Mother still there?

Mehboob is to be married on the 15th. He is still like a fakir. He wanted to invite you but I told him you would not be able to come, though he could send you an invitation if he so desired.

I am all right so to say. Touring is inescapable even here.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: Chand Rani Papers. Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library

1 Addressee's wife
2 Syed Mehboob, eldest son of Dr. Syed Mahmud; vide also “Blessings to Syed Mehboob”, 14-3-1947
111. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

PATNA,
March 10, 1947

As the audience took some time to settle down during this evening’s prayer, Gandhiji remarked at the beginning of his address that it would be difficult for him to tell them all that he wanted to if they continued to behave in that manner. He expected that they had come to the prayer-ground with an earnest desire to pray and then do the work of God, not for mere sight-seeing.

I have been accused of utilizing the prayer meetings for the propagation of my political ideas. My detractors will continue to criticize me and those who have made it a habit to abuse me will continue to indulge in their pastime. I speak of political matters in a religious spirit. A person who leads a religious life cannot divide it into different compartments. As unscrupulous person who accumulates huge wealth through fraud and deceit, and thinks that he can wash off his sins by chanting the name of God at home, is deceiving himself. God is not such a simpleton.

Indeed, it might even be said, continued Gandhiji that the Law which held together the universe was indistinguishable from the Law-maker. Speaking in human language, one might even go so far as to say that God Himself was subject to the wheel of the Law. We were used to the saying that “the king can do no wrong”. But in God’s universe even such a distinction was hardly permissible. One could only say that ‘there could be no wrong in the Law, for the Law and the Law-maker were one and the same’. There was no scope for even the least little blade of grass to be free from the operation of God’s laws.

God is Himself the Law and the Law-giver. He does not transgress the Law laid down by Himself nor does He allow others to transgress it. You should understand that in our prayers we do not merely remember him but also undertake to do His work. If you realize this, then the meaning of my words will be easy to grasp.

A friend has written to me a frank and honest letter and that is why I like it. He wonders why I cannot see that the quarrel between Hindus and Muslims is not on account of religious differences but is essentially political in origin. The Hindus want a united India. The Muslims want Pakistan so that Muslims will rule in Pakistan and Hindus in Hindustan. I really do not understand its implications. One thing is very clear. Religious or political differences should not lead to

1 The Urdu version has been collated with the report in Harijan published under “Gandhiji’s Bihar Tour Diary”.

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
a total war.

But what he wanted to impress upon the audience was that supposing it were only a so-called political struggle, did it mean that all rules of decency and morals should be thrown to the winds? When human conflicts are divorced from ethical considerations, the road can only lead to the use of the atom bomb where every trace of humanity is held completely in abeyance.

It is wrong to imagine that, in political warfare, one could slaughter men, women and children, innocent and guilty alike, without compunction. This is sheer brutality. Will forty crores of human beings descend to the level of beasts? Will such brutality secure us freedom? This is absolutely impossible.

We do not know what is actually happening in the Punjab. As long as we do not get full and reliable reports, let us hope that they have not descended to the beastly level of slaughtering innocent women and children. But even at present we must admit that brutality is very much in evidence in the Punjab. But to what extent, will be known later on. Brutality can neither secure Pakistan nor preserve India. It will destroy both Pakistan and India, leaving abject slavery behind. I used to regard Punjabis as a brave people. I can no longer regard them as such. Those who are burning houses, looting properties and slaughtering the innocent, do not even know why they are perpetrating these crimes and atrocities. In a regular war both the sides know what they are fighting for. We are all slaves and our civil war will harm only ourselves. We should realize the teachings of our religions and act according to them. Our politics also should be consistent with our religion.

You should contribute generously for the relief of Muslims. I shall stand up myself and collect the money. If you ask me whether Muslims in Noakhali contributed funds for the sake of Hindus, I have to confess that I did not get much. The reason is I am now looked upon as an enemy by the majority of the Muslims. Even then, some Muslims and Christians in Comilla had contributed more than Rs. 800 along with a box containing vermillion and conch-shell [bangles] for distribution among women who had been forcibly deprived of these auspicious symbols.

_Gandhijike Dukhe Dilki Pukar—I, pp. 18-20, and Harijan, 30-3-1947_

---

1 At this stage the audience near the dais became rather noisy and Gandhiji had to cut short his speech.
112. A LETTER

PATNA,
Tuesday, March 11, 1947

I listened to your long letter to the end. I liked it, but it pained me none the less. We must be hard and sharp with ourselves but generous with others. Let us not take the view that all three... of them are at fault. No one is without fault; so who can blame whom? Should I write to them about those faults of theirs which you have mentioned? It is your duty to talk with these people politely. Look within. When pride enters the mind of a sadhaka, his progress is hampered. This is what I fear from the way you have written. Go deep into the matter and write to me. This will do for the present.

[From Gujarati]

Biharni Komi Agman, p. 32

113. A LETTER

PATNA,
Tuesday, March 11, 1947

... I have your affectionate letter. I would have been happier if I had found in it as much knowledge as affection. My relationship with Ba was not merely physical. For me, Ba is alive even today. She is by my side. Ba was aware of everything I did. Nobody could have known Ba as intimately as I did... [From Gujarati]

Biharni Komi Agman, p. 32

114. A LETTER

PATNA,
Tuesday, March 11, 1947

I have your letter. Now you and Shantilal have to worry about Panchganis. I don’t think I can leave this place in the near future. I must do or die. God alone knows the final result. I understand about Bhangis. As regards village industries consult Kumarappa.

[From Gujarati]

Biharni Komi Agman, p. 33

1 Omission as in the source
2 Seeker
3 Omissions as in the source
4 Ibid
5 J. C. Kumarappa, Secretary, All India Village Industries Association
115. A LETTER

PATNA,
Tuesday, March 11, 1947

I have your letter. Why should I feel hurt when you have stated facts? Write if you know something more.

[From Hindi]

Biharni Komi Agman, p. 33

116. LETTER TO B. G. KHER

PATNA,
March 11, 1947

Bhai Kher,

I don’t think I can leave this place in the near future. It is either “do or die”. What are you doing about Hindustani? I hope the Government will clarify its policy regarding it. Today we are falling from our stand. Someone ought to remain steady in the circumstances.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Hindi original: B. G. Kher Papers, File No. 26.Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

117. TALK WITH MUSLIM LEAGUE MEMBERS

PATNA,
Tuesday, March 11, 1947

In your own interest please do not exaggerate. I admit that whatever has happened here is really deplorable. But in Noakhali also [the Hindus] are full of fear. Volunteers amongst you should go there and convince the people that we haven’t yet attained independence and ask them why they are fighting with each other. You should go and declare that even a little Hindu girl or boy is just like your

---

1 This was addressed to a student who had complained against a girl studying in his college who was known to Gandhiji.

2 Omission as in the source

3 (1888-1957); Chief Minister, Bombay, 1937-39 and 1946-52; member Constituent Assembly; High Commissioner in Britain, 1952-54; Chairman, Gandhi Smarak Nidhi, 1956-57 daughter or son and that they [Hindus] should not worry at all. If you go and do this much, peace will automatically return to the Punjab and Bihar. At the same time your name will shine forth in the world. Everyone is liable to make mistakes; but if they are rectified in time with a sincere heart, they will be forgotten.

[From Gujarati]

Biharni Komi Agman, p. 35

118. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

PATNA,

March 11, 1947

Gandhiji began his address by saying that that was perhaps his last evening prayer for the time being in the city of Patna, because his tour was going to begin on the following day. For the next few days, he would tour with the city as the centre and return to it every night for rest, the prayers being naturally held elsewhere. He expected, however, that the spirit in which the previous evening’s contributions to the fund for the Muslim sufferers had been made would continue unabated. The collections had amounted to nearly Rs. 2,000, besides some ornaments which yet remained to be auctioned. He was glad that women had given their ornaments, and he reminded them in this connection that the true ornament of woman was a pure heart, the place of which could never be taken by any physical adornment.

A friend said to me today that what the Hindus had done was no doubt very wrong, but that they had acted under great provocation. How could they remain peaceful after such incitement and provocation? Well, we should not try to minimize our guilt. The above argument would mean that if someone abuses or beats you, you will also return the abuse and hit back. Is it good to do the very thing which angers you? You in your turn will provoke further anger. The world has reached the stage of atomic warfare in returning violence for violence. Let us pray to God that He may save us from this atom bomb mentality. I have been persuading everyone to observe silence in reply to abuse or violence.

The whole world tries to suppress the coward. Even God does not help the coward. He says, ‘A person who is afraid of anyone except me, lacks faith in me.’ The brave man who has learnt the lesson of non-violence does not return abuse for abuse, nor does he slaughter innocent children and women under any provocation.

1 The Urdu version has been collated with the report in Harijan, published under “Gandhiji’s Bihar Tour Diary”.

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
If I am starving and you feed me, the contentment in my eyes will brighten your face too. But take another instance. Suppose I am starving and demand food from you by abusing you. You will drive me away, saying: ‘Go and starve yourself to death.’ My abuses will not get me food. They will, however, make me feel that I am a brave man. Again, if you ask your gate-keeper to beat me up for my abuses, that will sow the seeds of hatred against you in my heart. I will say, ‘You may deny me food if I abuse you; but why did you beat me?’ The next day I shall gather a few friends and retaliate. Or, if you manage to kill me, it will create among my relations and friends a feeling of revenge against you. This will aggravate the quarrel. I look upon all this as cowardice. Even if the Muslims had incited the Hindus, they should have remained peaceful.

An evil returned by another evil only succeeded in multiplying it, instead of reducing it. It was a universal law, he said, that violence could never be quenched by superior violence but only by non-violence or non-violent resistance. But the true meaning of non-violent resistance had often been misunderstood or even distorted. It never implied that a non-violent man should bend before the violence of an aggressor. While not returning the latter’s violence by violence, he should refuse to submit to the latter’s illegitimate demand even to the point of death. That was the true meaning of non-violent resistance.

I shall now discuss Pakistan. Jinnah Saheb is my friend. I have gone to his house many a time. If Jinnah Saheb says to me: ‘Concede Pakistan or I will kill you,’ I will reply: ‘You may kill me if you like; but if you want Pakistan, you should first explain it to me. If you convince me that Pakistan is a worthy ideal and Hindus are maligning it for no reason, I shall proclaim to the Hindus from the house-tops that you should get Pakistan.’

But if the demand was backed by force, then the only course open to the non-violent man was to offer non-violent resistance against it as long as he was not convinced of its justice. One was not to return violence by violence but neutralize it by withholding one’s hand and, at the same time, refusing to submit to the demand. This was the only civilized way of getting on in the world. Any other course could only lead to a race for armaments interspersed by periods of peace brought about by exhaustion, when preparations would be going on for violence of a superior order. Peace through superior violence inevitably led to the atom bomb and all that it stood for. It was the complete negation of non-violence and of democracy which was not possible without the former.

The non-violent resistance described above required courage of a superior order to that needed in violent warfare. Forgiveness was the quality of the brave, not of the cowardly. Gandhiji here related a story from the Mahabharata: one of the Pandava brothers¹ was accidentally injured while living in disguise in the home of King Virata. The brothers not only hid what had happened, but for fear that harm might come to the host if a drop of blood touched the ground, they prevented it from doing so by means of a golden bowl. It was this type of forbearance and courage which Gandhiji wished every Indian to develop, whether he was a Hindu, Mussalman, Christian, Parsi or Sikh. That alone could rescue them from their present fallen condition.

A friend has written to me eulogizing the sword. The Muslims came here, says he, hurling abuses and unfurling Muslim League flags. We tried to dissuade them, continues the friend, but they did not listen. When, however, we pulled out the swords, asserts the friend, they came to their senses and became our friends. I tell you this was no true bravery. The persuasion was backed by the threat of the sword. Threats do not produce true friendship. If you were honest, you should have told the Muslims: ‘Look here, you are only a handful and we are in a vast majority. You are abusing us. You want to unfurl your flag. And yet we shall not say anything to you nor return your abuses. But we shall not allow you to unfurl the flag nor shall we salute the Pakistani flag.’ If the Muslims had seen that, in spite of your vast majority, you do not wish to fight them, but that on the other hand you wish to be friendly with them, their conscience would have awakened and they would have become your true friends. The weapon of non-violence is mightier than the weapon of violence. The last Great War also proves this truth.

The lesson of non-violence was present in every religion but Gandhiji believed that perhaps it was here in India that its practice had been reduced to a science.

Hindu religion prescribes great tapashcharya² for the realization of ahimsa. It is said that innumerable Hindus had shed their blood in the cause of ahimsa until the Himalayas became purified in their snowy whiteness by means of that sacrifice. The Hindus of today pay only lip service to ahimsa. You must demonstrate true ahimsa in this land of Ramachandra and King Janaka. True bravery consists in true ahimsa. At the moment you are guilty of committing very cowardly acts.

Gandhijike Dukhe Dilki Pukar —I, pp. 20-2, and Harijan, 30-3-1947

¹ Yudhishthira
² Penance
119. CABLE TO “CAVALCADE”¹

Unrevised March 12, 1947

RECEIVED WIRE REGARD DECISION WITHDRAWAL
BRITISH POWER AS PERFECTLY SOUND. NO
ORGANIC PEACE POSSIBLE WITHOUT COMPLETE INDEPENDENCE INCLUDING WITHDRAWAL OF
BRITISH TROOPS AND INFLUENCE FROM INDIA. IMPOSED
PEACE DISTURBED HUMAN RELATIONS. HENCE ESTABLISHMENT OF ORGANIC PEACE IN INDIA INEVITABLY INVOLVES SENSELESS STRIFE AS IN BENGAL, BIHAR AND NOW PUNJAB. THIS WILL END QUICKER WHEN NO PARTY IS ABLE TO LOOK TO BRITISH
POWER FOR PROTECTION. FORCED EMASCULATION
OF A GREAT NATION WAS BOUND TO HAVE THIS SAD RESULT. NO DOUBT MUCH WILL DEPEND UPON INDIAN WISDOM FOR MINIMIZING MISCHIEF.
WHILE CONNECTION [REMAINS]¹¹ HONESTY AND SAGACITY OF BRITISH STATESMEN AND BRITISH RESIDENTS IN INDIA
[EQUALLY]² NECESSARY. MUST REGRETFULLY SAY THAT DISTRUST OF BRITISH STATEMENTS AND PROMISES HAS GONE TOO DEEP AND THAT PERHAPS LEGITIMATELY. THEREFORE BRITISH DEALINGS HAVE TO BE STRICTLY FRANK AND ABOVE SUSPICION AT THIS CRITICAL MOMENT.
GIVEN THESE CONDITIONS I EXPECT NO DIFFICULTY ABOUT HEALTHY ECONOMIC AND CULTURAL RELATIONS BETWEEN TWO COUNTRIES. PLEASE
 REGARD THIS AS MY INDIVIDUAL OPINION.
ENDS.

GANDHI

From a photostat: C. W. 10560. Also a facsimile: Mahatma, Vol. VII, between pp. 416 and 417

¹ The British news magazine had sent a cable asking for Gandhiji’s message.
² Here follow the words “When perfect severance British”, which appear to have been struck off.
³ Illegible in the source
⁴ Ibid
Gandhiji referred, in the beginning of his address, to the decision of the British Government to quit India. The British were a nation with a strong sense of reality: and when they realized that it did not pay to rule, they did not hesitate to withdraw their power over a country. This had been the course of British history in the past. If the British were going, as they surely were, what should be the duty of Indians at the same time, asked Gandhiji. Were we to return blow for blow among ourselves, and thus perpetuate our slavery, only to tear up our motherland, in the end, into bits, which went by the name of Hindustan and Pakistan, Brahministan and Achhutistan? What greater madness could there be than what had taken place in Bengal and Bihar, or what was taking place in the Punjab or the Frontier Province?

Today I visited a village where Hindus had caused great damage. An old Muslim showed me his own house and those of his relations with broken door-frames where bricks were removed from the door-sill. I was shocked and shaken to see that the Hindus had caused these depredations. I had wept when I saw the ruins caused by Muslims in Noakhali. Today also I might have wept. But my tears cannot render any succour to the sufferers. What I witnessed today does not behove human beings. We are all responsible for this vandalism so close to the city of Patna. Even if you did not participate personally in the loot, you cannot escape the charge of abetting the marauders. A mosque was also damaged in the village Kumarahar. This also I consider to be a devilish deed. It is no justification to argue that the Hindus damaged the mosque because the Muslims were desecrating the temples. Hindus worship idols, while the Muslims do not. But every human being does worship something or other.

God resides everywhere; not only in the Bible and the Koran, in a mosque or a temple, but in the nose, ear, nail or even a single hair of the body of man. I have been taught ever since my childhood that God resides everywhere. He is subtler than the air. It is one and the same thing whether one worships Him in a mosque, a temple or a church. I am as much an idol-worshipper as an idolbreaker. Still when I go to a temple, I am happy if I find it neat and clean.

Those who desecrated the mosque were not men but devils; because mosques, temples or churches are all houses of the Lord. I have come here today to convey to you my grief. You may perhaps

---

1 The Urdu version has been collated with the report in Harijan published under "Gandhiji's Bihar Tour Diary".
be smiling and thinking that whatever happened was all very good. But I assert that this is potent injustice. I am grieved when I hear that Muslims have desecrated a temple. Should I retaliate by damaging a mosque? How can such damage save the temple or benefit the Hindu religion? If Muslims are about to desecrate a temple, it becomes my duty to prevent them from their vandalism, irrespective of my not being an idolworshipper. I should hug the idol and request them not to demolish the temple. I should lay down my life to protect the idol but refuse to hand it over to them. My entreaties will impress them, they will realize that I mean no harm to them and then they will become my friends.

Muslims are demanding Pakistan. They should therefore explain its advantages. No one will oppose it if he sees its advantages. But if they want to establish it forcibly, it will be a Napakistan (impureland) instead of Pakistan (pureland).

Badshah Khan is sitting by my side. He is a fakir by nature. But people, out of affection, call him Badshah because he rules the hearts of his people through love. He comes from a tribe whose tradition is to return a blow for a blow, and blood feuds are handed down from sire to son. But Badshah Khan has full faith in nonviolence. I asked him how an expert swordsman like him came to believe in nonviolence. He said that they had come to realize nonviolence. He said that they had come to realize non-violence as the only road to their national freedom. If the Pathans do not give up the policy of blow for a blow and do not adopt nonviolence, he said they would perish in their internecine feuds.

When he took to nonviolence, he realized a kind of transformation coming over the Pathan tribes. It did not mean that every Pathan had undergone the transformation or that Badshah Khan had himself reached the highest goal of nonviolence. As far as he, the speaker, knew, he (Badshah Khan) was every day nearing the goal because he realized the truth of it. It was this type of brave nonviolence which Gandhiji wished the audience to imitate.

If we continue to fight among ourselves, the shackles of slavery will never be removed. The British are bound to quit this country. They are a nation of businessmen. They calculate the profit and loss from every transaction. They have realized that it is no longer profitable to rule India. But what good will that freedom be to us if we continue to fight among ourselves after the British leave?

Gandhiji continued that he had come to Bihar in order to make the people realize the extent of the madness to which they had stooped. His object was to induce them to repent and thus undo the wrongs which had been perpetrated.

1 Emperor
I have been told that a storm is still raging in the hearts of the citizens of Patna. I wish to remind you today that Bihar is the hallowed land of Lord Buddha and King Janaka. Lord Ramachandra had also once walked on this soil. It will be a great shame if this sacred land continues to witness the devilish dance of violence. You can retrieve the ancient glory of Bihar by means of nonviolence. I do not want the bravery of swords or words. Today we need that nonviolence which was exemplified by the people of Champaran in 1917.

Gandhiji added that, in his opinion, the departure from the straight path of nonviolence they had made at time in 1942 was very probably responsible for the aberration to which he had referred. He instanced also the spirit of general lawlessness which had seized them inasmuch as they dared to travel without tickets, pulled chains unlawfully or in senseless vindictiveness, burnt zamindari crops or belongings. He was no lover of the Zamindari system. He had often spoken against it; but he frankly confessed that he was not an enemy of the zamindars. He had no enemies. The best way to bring about reform in the economic and social system, whose evils were admittedly many, was through the royal road of selfsuffering. Any departure from it only resulted in merely changing the form of the evil. Violence was incapable of destroying the evil root and branch.

Lastly, Gandhiji referred to a letter he had received from the Harijans, asking him to visit their quarters and to live with them. He would have loved to do both the things; but he had to restrict himself to the mission that had brought him to Bihar. But having made himself a Bhangi in thought and deed, he could never forget the Harijans. He was sorry to say that the latter were still suffering from disabilities and that they did not get ready redress of their grievances.

Gandhijike Dukhe Dilksh Pukar—I, pp. 23-5, and Harijan, 30-3-1947

121. LETTER TO K. M. MUNSHI

PATNA, March 13, 1947

CHI. MUNSHI

I got your note. I was sure that you would be able to win over Panditji. He admires hard work and intelligence. You have both in good measure. And you have got work in which you can shine. May

---

1 (1887-1971); lawyer, educationist and man of letters; member Constituent Assembly; Food Minister, Government of India, 1952; Governor, Uttar Pradesh, 1953-58; resigned from Congress in 1960 and joined Swatantra party; founded Bharatiya Vidya Bhawan
2 Jawaharlal Nehru
3 The addressee was on the Experts Committee appointed by the Congress Working Committee in July 1946, to prepare the material and draft proposals for the Constituent Assembly.

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
your heath be preserved and may you go on serving all your life.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]
I cannot say how long I shall have to stay here. According to me, the Bihar and Bengal problems are really one problem. It is going to be “do or die”. Let God’s will prevail.

Blessings to you both from
BAPU

[PPS.]
This paper is made from linseed reeds.

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 7702. Courtesy: K. M. Munshi

122. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA
March 13, 1947

CHI. BRIJKRISHNA,

I have your long letter. It is good that you wrote in detail. What shall I write to you? I don’t have full information of what is happening in the Punjab. In my view what I am doing is right. I am trying to transform both [the communities] from beasts to human beings. It is in God’s hands to grant success. We have to do our duty. I have no time to write more.

How is it that you have written nothing about your treatment? I have not received your earlier letter.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 2505

123. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

PATNA,
March 13, 1947

Today too I was a witness to heart-rending scenes. This seems to be my destiny. We have indeed committed a great sin. We had lost our sanity. Even now we are not aware of its root cause. You can ask me whether you should not retaliate for what happened in Calcutta or Noakhali. But I have told you that this is not a healthy reaction. We should never think in terms of retaliation. If the sequence of retaliations goes on snowballing, India will be in ruins. Why should Muslims in Bihar be killed because some Bihari Hindus were killed in Calcutta?

If we seek freedom, it should be for the whole of India. It is not proper to seek separate freedom for Hindustan, Pakistan, Achhutistan or Sikhistan. For, such a mentality may even lead a person ultimately into demanding freedom for his own village above everything else. This tendency is wrong. We are all Indians and an evil deed committed anywhere in India is the concern of every Indian. I shall stick to my pledge of “Do or Die” so long as the whole of India does not become free.

We should not spread poison; on the other hand we should try to prevent it from spreading. If someone commits murder, we should be sorry because the murderer after all is our own brother. There must be something wrong in us; that is why our brother could stoop to such a sin. We should not become murderers to put an end to the murderer. If our hearts are filled with ill will, we must not hide that fact. We must openly confess it. We should think over our sins and repent for them. Sincere penitence reduces the incidence of sin. If we do not realize this truth, freedom of India will recede still further.

The British are leaving India; but if we continue to hate one another even after they leave us, then that freedom will bring us no benefit; someone else will come and snatch the freedom from us. If we look upon everyone as our brother, then only can we reap the full gains of freedom. Whatever is happening in the Punjab or the Frontier today is a matter of grave concern and regret. But we should not try to imitate the gangsterism of the Punjab. People say that Bihar has made enough amends for its sins and the Government here is also very alert and that I should now go to the Punjab. But what shall I do? I can go to the Punjab only when the Hindus and Muslims of Bihar tell me with one voice that they need me no more and that I may safely go to the Punjab. That will also give me strength enough to tackle the Punjab. It lies with you to strengthen my hands. If you do not give me strength, how can I go? You will yourself accuse me of running away from my pledge of “Do or Die”. God is the source of all strength. If He commands me, I shall go to the Punjab. I am only an humble instrument in His hands. If my voice can reach the Hindus, Muslims and Sikhs of the Punjab, I would tell them that the happenings in their province are doing good to no one. If the wild fire that is raging in the Punjab is not controlled, it will vitiate the climate in the whole of India.

Today I visited the ruined and deserted villages in the neighbourhood. I hung down my head in shame. The people who perpetrated these crimes should also feel ashamed. Those who have looted Muslim properties should return them. If they dare not surrender to any authority, let them come to me or to Dr. Mahmud. They should not apprehend punishment. We will not tell the police. But one should not be afraid of undergoing punishment for one’s sin. It would be praiseworthy indeed if you confessed your guilt even when there is fear of punishment. Those who have caused damage to others should pay compensation for the same.

While I was returning from my tour today, the villagers of Siparah stopped my car and presented me with a purse. The purse also contained a letter which stated that the villagers were sorry for what they had done. They assured me that they would try to resettle their Muslim brothers in the village. I appeal to all of you to atone for your sins as honestly as the brothers at Siparah. The amount which that small village has contributed and the manner in which they have expressed their sentiments deserve praise. It will be yet more commendable if they come forward to return the looted property.

I shall report to you something which I saw in a village today. One of your Ministers, Anugraha Babu\(^1\), is sitting here. I wish to report to him also and to ask him why there is so much delay in atoning for that sin. Why are these villages still wearing a forlorn look? You will say this is a job which the Government ought to do. I am asking you, why should the Government do this job? Did you seek Government’s permission while ruining the villages? It is your responsibility to rebuild the villages. You must remove the debris and clean the villages. The Government will be thankful to you and will send you experts who can guide the work of sanitation. This is a job wherein even women and children can participate. You should help the Government and the Government will help you.

The village I visited today was more unclean than the one I visited yesterday. Rains will make it even worse. Someone has

---

\(^1\) Anugraha Narayan Sinha, Minister, Finance, Labour, Supply and Price-Control recorded that India is strewn with excrement. One cannot contradict him if one visits the villages. Every corner in the village we visited was dirty. The lanes were very filthy and the roads were in a shabby state. I would call upon you to clean up these villages so that they reflect the cleanliness of your hearts. Besides contributing money you should be prepared for the work of sanitation. If you do not clean up the villages, how can I ask the Muslims to return to their homes? It is your duty to start the cleanliness drive from today. If your hearts are clean, the Muslims will surely return. I myself wish to undertake sanitation work. I have done this work in my time; but now I do not have the physical strength to do it. You must make your villages clean and beautiful. You should grow flowers and maintain a garden where women and children can walk about. The lanes should be spotlessly clean. The roads even if they are narrow, should be so well-maintained that even a blind man should be able to walk on them. This alone can turn the villages of India into heaven on earth.

[From Urdu]
Gandhijike Dukhe Dilki Pukar—I, pp. 27-9

124. LETTER TO PRESIDENT, SAIVA PARIPALAN SANGAM

PATNA,
March 14, 1947

DEAR FRIEND.

The draft you have sent will be used as suggested by you. Though I am in Bihar at present, the headquarters for Noakhali continue to be Kazirkhil, Noakhali.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

PRESIDENT
SAIVA PARIPALAN SANGAM
BADULLA, CEYLON

From a photostat: G. N. 779

108 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
125. LETTER TO SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA

PATNA,
March 14, 1947

CHI. SATIS BABU,

There has been no letter from you and none from Pyarelal or others. What is the reason? How is everything going on there?

I gather from Rajagopalachari’s letter\(^1\) that we will not be able to get yarn from that source. How are you managing at present? What will you do about obtaining yarn?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 8963

126. LETTER TO GANGI A. HINGORANI

PATNA,
March 14, 1947

CHI. GANGI,

I have your letter and also Anand’s telegram. You and Anand can come over just to see me but you will not be able to go with me wherever I go. In this tour the fewer the people the better it is. So my advice to you is not to come. I shall not be in PATNA after Monday. What is the use of just meeting me?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Hindi: Courtesy : National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

\(^1\) C. Rajagopalachari, who was member Industries and Supply, in the Interim Government, in his letter dated March 5, 1947, had written: “Your telegram about 1,900 bales per month came as a surprise. It is unlikely that we shall be able to secure more than about 100 to 200 bales of yarn for this purpose. It would be possible for the Government of India to arrange for a regular monthly quota of yarn to Noakhali.”
127. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

PATNA,
March 14, 1947

DEAR DAUGHTER,

I am unable to forget the last day of our meeting¹. I do not find any mistake in my observation. If there is, tell me.

There is no letter from you. How is the work going on? How is your health?

I am well. The task is a difficult one.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi : G. N. 580

128. BLESSINGS TO SYED MEHBOOB²

March 14, 1947

I would give you anything you like just for the asking.

The Hindu, 16-3-1947

129. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING³

KHUSROPUR,
March 14, 1947

I wish that whatever I tell you now should touch your hearts. The scene I witnessed today after my tour of two days was very painful. I do not suggest that my visits to villages earlier were not painful. Large houses of Muslims have been razed to the ground. Women and children had been slaughtered. I just cannot describe it in detail. Although I have hardened my heart, I am incapable of describing all the details even if I wish to do so. Muslims were your brothers and they are so even now. I have been hearing that Muslims in Bihar were particularly gentle. There used to be occasional disputes

¹ The addressee, at Gandhiji’s instance, had come to see him at Haimchar on February 26. Vide “Letter to Amtussalaam”, 25-2-1947
² On the eve of the addressee’s marriage Gandhiji presented him with two yarn garlands, one for him and the other for his bride.
³ The Urdu version has been collated with the report in Harijan published under “Gandhiji’s Bihar Tour Diary”.

110 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
between Hindus and Muslims. But such disputes are bound to occur as long as the world lasts. But they should not tear heart from heart. Unfortunately this has happened now. I am fated to witness worse scenes than what I have seen during the last three days. What is happening in the Punjab is heartrending. God alone knows how long such riots will continue. The people who are fighting in the Punjab do not even know what are the likely consequences of their action. If we go on fighting among ourselves in this manner, a third party may impose itself on us as an arbiter, and all sorts of witnesses, honest or dishonest, may come forward. It is better to have an arbitrator from among ourselves rather than allow an outsider. But the best thing is that the need for arbitration should not arise at all. I wish that Hindus and Muslims should cleanse their hearts and live like brothers.

Those who have committed crimes should come forward and confess their guilt with God as witness. No one should do so in a spirit of bravado. If someone has misbehaved in imitation of others, he too should own his mistake. I want a genuine feeling of repentance and an honest atonement for the atrocities committed by thousands of Hindus on a handful of Muslims.

Referring to the method of violence, Gandhiji said that some sort of peace might perhaps be established in the province by means of force. He would hope, but it could never be said with confidence, that the evil would not spread throughout India, as it happened in the case of 1857. Similar things, as we know, had happened during the Sepoy War when it was quelled by means of superior arms. Outwardly, things quieted down but the hatred against an imposed rule went deep underground with the result that we were even today reaping the harvest of what was then sown. The British Government took the place of the East India Company. They established schools and law courts and Indians took to these with enthusiasm; they even co-operated in the diffusion of Western culture; but, in spite of all this, they could never bear the insult or the degradation involved in political subjugation. Similarly, but in a worse manner, if the Punjab quietened down by reason of superior force used against the people of the Punjab, the seed of further conflict and bitterness between brothers that the Hindus and the Muslims were, would go still deeper. Violence, continued Gandhiji, thus could never be ended by counter-violence. The only effective answer to it was the way of non-violence.

People had adopted ahimsa in Champaran at my instance. I now feel that it was the ahimsa of the weak. The British, who were our adversaries, were a mighty power. That is why we seem to have adopted non-violence in facing them; but we could nor remain non-violent in our dealings with one another. We should feel sorry that we resorted to violence in dealing with our brothers. The mothers and sisters of Muslims are like our own mothers and sisters. If we have behaved with them like devils, it is our duty to atone for that sin.

Hindus and Muslims in Bihar should come closer than ever before. The followers of the two religions should never be afraid of one another. We should be afraid only of being overpowered by one another’s love and affection. It is for you to consider whether you prefer to live in amity or wish to convert the whole of India into a boiling cauldron like Bihar or the Punjab.

Women have had a great hand in the growth of ahimsa. They can, if they choose, play a big role in Bihar. The events in Noakhali, Bihar and the Punjab are most unfortunate. If you have made up your mind to torture Gandhi, I cannot complain. In spite of my services to the country and to you, you have every right to say that Gandhi has cheated you and, but for him, you would have slaughtered all the Muslims — although you could not have done so. I would plead with you to pay attention to what I have to say. I do not wish anyone to be swayed by my personal influence; I want you to think calmly and act on my advice only if it appeals to your head and heart.

The Secretary of the Provincial Muslim League who had been good enough to come to him had complained that although the Government had made arrangements for repatriation, the mental attitude of the Hindus was not sufficiently reassuring. Gandhiji firmly said that the reality had to be faced and a determined effort made by every one of them to root out the least trace of the feeling of hostility and make it possible for their Muslim neighbours to live in brotherly love once more.

Hindus, Muslims and Sikhs are all engaged in a bitter feud in the Punjab. Sikhs have always claimed that one Sikh is equal in fight to a lakh and quarter of men. They arm even their children with kirpans. Many people are embracing Sikhism, lured by the kirpan. If you sincerely think that the way of the Punjab is the proper answer to the challenge of the times, you are free to follow it. I plead with you in all earnestness to tell me frankly that you do not approve of my way. I will not be hurt by your honesty.

Gandhiji would rather not live than see the day when the weapon of nonviolence was given up. It did not matter where he laid down his life for achieving his cherished aim; anywhere in India would still be India for him. But he still hugged the hope that nonviolence would surely be crowned with victory in the end; for in the example which Bihar might set in this line today lay the hope of peace and progress for our unhappy land.

I shall not say that Bihar has ignored my past services. I do not want you to do anything for my sake. I want you to work in the name of God, our Father. Confess your sins and atone for them with God alone as witness.

_Gandhijike Dukhe Dilkar_ — I, pp. 31-4, and Harijan, 30-3-1947

130. LETTER TO DR. B. S. MOONJE

PATNA,
March 15, 1947

DEAR DR. MOONJE,

I got only today your letter of the 17th ultimo. You will appreciate my difficulty when I tell you that at present I have no time to read anything outside the scope of my present activity. But I have no hesitation whatsoever in saying that if we succeed in driving out the twin demons of untouchability and the so-called caste, we shall have gone a long way towards removing the third demon, i.e., communalism.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

131. DISCUSSION WITH RELIEF COMMITTEE MEMBERS

March 15, 1947

QUESTION: Will you advise Muslims to return to their villages in the prevailing disturbed conditions?

ANSWER: If you have the courage and if you have the requisite faith in God, I shall advise you to return to your villages. I do realize that it is a difficult task. If I had undergone such harrowing experience, perhaps I myself would not have been able to go back; it would have made me a raving lunatic. The memory of murdered men and women would have haunted me. But I aspire to reach a stage when I shall have such abiding faith in 1 Some members of the Muslim League Relief Committee had met Gandhiji and asked him several questions on behalf of the Muslim refugees of Phulwari Sharif.

God that I would go and stay in the midst of people who had become my enemies.

Q. If there is no change of heart in the majority community, what should the suffering minority do? Should they live in small pockets or leave the province for ever?

A. If you do not return and since it was the fault of the Hindus, the Government is bound to compensate you for the loss of your property. But I do not understand your demand that the Government should allot land somewhere else. Well, if you can arrange mutual exchanges, no one can prevent you. But if the Government arranges this, it will not lead to a purification of hearts. Many people are talking of pockets. I simply do not understand this. If those villages where the Muslims are in majority welcome you, who can prevent you from going there? Similarly, no one can prevent you from leaving the province if you decide to go in spite of my promises of affection. There is a law in the U.S.A. that anyone wanting to migrate from that country has to obtain Government’s permission. I do not approve of such a law.

Q. Should or should not those who have committed murder, rape, arson and other heinous crimes receive appropriate punishment? If you think they should, how will you advise the Government of Bihar?

A. Of course, those responsible for devilish deeds must be punished. The Government of Bihar has not abjured the principle of punishment. There is no such government anywhere in the world today. When such a government comes into being, I shall listen to their argument. But a government which believes in the theory of crime and punishment but does not punish the criminal has no right to call itself a government.

Q. Should the Government of Bihar make adequate Provision for the relief of orphans and widows who have no one to support them? If some organization has undertaken such work, what will you advise the Bihar Government on this?

A. They are the responsibility of the State. If some organization wants to render relief in its own manner, it will not be justified in expecting assistance from the Government. This work has to be done either by the Government itself or in a manner approved by the Government.

Q. How will it be possible to make good the historical, cultural, social and religious damage done by the madness of the majority?

A. This has been a cruel and terrible tragedy. Such holocausts... have shaken the world earlier and will do so even in the future. Only when we are reformed and tolerant enough to realize that all religious lead to the same God called by various people by various names, will the world change for the better. Till then the earth not be a habitable place. Till that change comes about, it is impossible to prevent such barbarity and the irreparable losses resultant from it.

Q. What should be done with those officers who openly helped the rioters and deliberately helped one side against the other?

A. Those officers against whom such charges can be proved can have no place in the government.

Q. What do you propose to do to prevent the repetition of riots at place where the Muslims have suffered? Even now the houses and properties of Muslims are being damaged.

A. I am doing my best to prevent a repetition. I shall continue to stay here till I succeed in my effort. I have already declared that I shall do or die. God will either grant me success or put an end to my life. I believe that a change of heart is essential if I am to succeed. As I have been telling the Hindus in Noakhali, this is not a work where the army or police can be of much help. You must gather courage and fear on one except God. I shall advice the Ministers to frame a law making Hindus responsible for the safety of the Muslim minority. Such laws will not in fact be needed where hearts have been purified.

Q. Can the cruelties and injustices meted out to us detain you for long in Bihar? Your prolonged presence is needed for the help of the refugees.

A. You need not worry on that account. I shall not leave Bihar so long as Hindus and Muslims do not jointly allow me to do so on the basis of their brotherly feelings.

Q. Will you call them Congressmen who organized and led the recent riots? If not, what action will be taken against them to preserve the prestige of the Congress?

A. How can those who participated in riots be called Congressmen? Before condemning them, I must listen to their versions of the story. I am a devotee of truth and shall lay down my life in serving truth.

[From Urdu]

_Gandhijike Dukhe Dilki Pakar_— I, pp. 35-8
132. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

PATNA,
March 15, 1947

I have been absent from here for the last three days. During these three days I visited a few villages. The villagers there have contributed their mite for the relief of Muslims. They gave more small coins than notes. Rich and wealthy people live here. You donated one thousand rupees on the first day and two thousand on the next day. When the gathering is large, it becomes very difficult to collect the donations.

When Gandhiji began his address he first referred to his visit1 and said that people might naturally be interested to learn why he had gone there. For him it was a courtesy call because he could not go expecting any favours or services from the Governor as of yore. Under a responsible government, which theirs was, services and favours he could expect only from the Ministers who were the representatives of the people. The Governor had undoubtedly powers with reference to the minorities but these too he could exercise only with great restraint. What they discussed it was for the Governor to communicate to his Ministers. One thing, however, the speaker was free to tell them. To his agreeable surprise, the Governor had said that those who were responsible to the people had to begin with themselves. If they did not begin with their individual lives and show relative perfection, they could not be real reformers or servants of the people.

Gandhiji wanted the people also to disabuse themselves of any thought that they had usurped any power from the British. Nonviolent noncooperation did not admit of any such assumption. What they performed was a simple duty. The result undoubtedly was that the British naturally and voluntarily divested themselves of much authority and power and it was up to the people to do their duty along the lines of non-violence, if they were to have complete power as and for the people.

We have only partly recovered what we had lost through our folly. There is on doubt that we shall regain the power in full measure. I have already explained to you the way to complete freedom.

The recent events in Bihar were a departure from that right conduct and, if the

1 The Urdu version has been collated with the report in Harijan published under “Gandhiji’s Bihar Tour Diary”.
2 Gandhiji had gone to meet the Governor about an hour before prayer time and had returned five minutes late for the prayer.
truth was not recognized and if the infection of the Punjab spread, he had not a shadow of doubt that they would lose what was within their grasp. He, therefore, expected Bihar to recognize the fact and do its duty honourably and well.

You must not fight among yourselves and should not kill women, children and old men. You must put a complete stop to these internal feuds. If you think that these feuds will bring freedom, you are sadly mistaken. The belief that through internal fight we will attain freedom is like expecting a barren woman to give birth to a child.

During the last three days I saw that houses had been razed to the ground, roofs pulled down and a lot of destruction had been caused. I hear that old men, children and women had been slaughtered. Our first duty therefore is to repent for our misdeeds. We should resolve not to commit these horrors again and to prevent others from doing so. The same thing applies here also. We must first reform ourselves and then try to reform others.

It was painful for him to find the houses in the same condition in which the rioters had left them. If they wanted their Muslim neighbours to come back, it was necessary that proper conditions should be restored and the debris completely cleared. Every individual who felt it was his duty to make the return of the refugees smooth, could at once lend a hand in rendering the broken homes habitable once more.

Some poor Muslims had also come to see me today. I advised them to return to their homes. I assured them that the Ministers were looking after their interests. I have given them an assurance on your behalf and asked them to return to their homes. The Muslims can be safe amidst you, if it is your wish. You should now start living together as before and always remember that I gave the assurance to the Muslims in your name and on your behalf. I have assured a flourishing Muslim merchant that he should not be afraid of restarting his business in full confidence, for I am sure that the Bihari Hindu would honour that pledge.

I am confident that the recent tragedy will never be repeated. I shall appeal to the Ministers to keep the interests of Muslims at heart. I cannot order them. I have never ordered anyone in my life. I only wish to appeal to everyone.

When nonviolence finds expression through a person, it influences other people too. I am not a great man. I am just the same today as I was when I came to Bihar for the first time. Of course there has been one change. My heart has been steeled now. I have assured the Muslims on your behalf that no Hindu will abuse them or hurt them or think of doing any such thing. Bihar should set an example of ahimsa which could be followed by other provinces. Rather than imitating Bengal or the Punjab, you should build a Bihar which Bengal and the Punjab would like to emulate. I have come to Bihar from Noakhali, but my heart is still in Noakhali. I used to say there that I was working for Bihar in Noakhali. Similarly, I have not lost sight of the work in Noakhali while I am in Bihar.

_Gandhijike Dukhe Dilki Pukar—I, pp. 39-41, and Harijan, 30-3-1947_

133. FROM THE DIARY

_March 15, 1947_

Talked with . . . for an hour. Received . . . ’s letter. Since I took time to explain why I was not moved by . . . ’s letter though it was very loving, I could go to bed only at 11 o’clock. Got up at 2.30 to visit the toilet. The rest of my time was spent in deciding how I could convince him about my point. Still, I do not feel exhausted.

[From Gujarati]

_Biharni Komi Agman, p. 53_

---

1 Omissions in the item are as in the source.
134. DISCUSSION WITH SWAMI ANAND AND KEDAR NATH

[March 15/16, 1947]

QUESTION: Why did you not, according to your wont, take your co-workers into confidence and carry them with you before embarking on this novel practice? Why this secrecy?

GANDHIJI: No secrecy was intended. Everything was fortuitous. Previous consultation with friends was ruled out by the very nature of the thing. Besides, I hold that previous consent was unnecessary. At the same time I should have insisted on ventilating the matter thoroughly at the very start. If I had only done that, much of the present trouble and commotion would have been avoided. The omission was a serious flaw. I was asking myself as to what would be an appropriate penance for it when Thakkar Bapa came. You know the rest of the story.

Q. The irreparable harm, if you weaken the foundation of the moral order on which society rests and which has been built up by long and painful discipline, is obvious. But no corresponding gain is apparent to us to justify a break with established tradition. What is your defence? We are not out to humiliare you or to score a victory over you. We only wish to understand.

G. No moral progress or reform is possible if one is not prepared to get out of the rut of orthodox tradition. By allowing ourselves to be cribbed by castiron social conventions, we have lost. The orthodox conception of the ninefold wall of protection in regard to brahmacharya is in my opinion inadequate and defective. I have never accepted it for myself. In my opinion even striving after the true brahmacharya is not possible by keeping behind it. For 20 years I was in closest touch with the West in South Africa. I have known the writings on sex by eminent writers like Havelock Ellis and Bertrand Russell and their theories. They are all thinkers of eminence, integrity

1 According to My Days with Gandhi, Swami Anand and Kedar Nath came to Bihar on March 14, 1947. Their discussion was entirely private and continued the next two days. Vide also footnote 1, “Letter to Nirmal Kumar Bose”, 17-3-1947

3 On February 24, 1947; vide “Discussion with A. V. Thakkar”, 24-2-1947
and experience. They have suffered for their convictions and for giving expression to the same. While totally repudiating institutions like marriage, etc., and the current code of morals—and there I disagree with them—they are firm believers in the possibility and desirability of purity in life independently of those institutions and usages. I have come across men and women in the West who lead pure lives although they do not accept or observe the current usages and social conventions. My research runs somewhat in that direction. If you admit the necessity and desirability of reform, of discarding the old, wherever necessary, and building a new system of ethics and morals suited to the present age, then the question of seeking the permission of others or convincing them does not arise. A reformer cannot afford to wait till others are converted; he must take the lead and venture forth alone even in the teeth of universal opposition. I want to test, enlarge and revise the current definition of brahmacharya, by which you swear, in the light of my observation, study and experience. Therefore, whenever an opportunity presents itself I do not evade it or run away from it. On the contrary, I deem it my duty—dharma—to meet it squarely in the face and find out where it leads to and where I stand. To avoid the contact of a woman or to run away from it out of fear, I regard as unbecoming of an aspirant after true brahmacharya. I have never tried to cultivate or seek sex contact for carnal satisfaction. I do not claim to have completely eradicated the sex feeling in me. But it is my claim that I can keep it under control.

Q. We are not aware of your ever having put before the people at large these ideas of yours. On the contrary we have all along known you to have put before the public ideas with which we are familiar, and which we have associated with your striving. What is the explanation?

G. Even today, so far as the people in general are concerned, I am putting before them for practice what you call my old ideas. At the same time, for myself, as I have said, I have been deeply influenced by modern thought. Even amongst us there is the Tantra school which has influenced Western savants like Justice Sir John Woodroffe. I read his works in Yeravada prison. You have all been brought up in the orthodox tradition. According to my definition, you cannot be regarded as true brahmacharis. You are off and on falling ill; you suffer from all sorts of bodily ailments. I claim that I represent true _brahmacharya_ better than any of you. You do not seem to regard a lapse in respect of truth, nonviolence, nonstealing, etc., to be so serious a matter. But a fancied breach in respect of _brahmacharya_, i.e., relation between man and woman, upsets you completely. I regard this conception of _brahmacharya_ as narrow, hidebound and retrograde. To me truth, _ahimsa_ and _brahmacharya_ are all ideals of equal importance. They all call for an equal measure of striving on our part, and lapse in respect of any of them is to me a matter of equal concern. I maintain that my conduct in no way constitutes a departure from the true ideal of _brahmacharya_. As against it, _brahmacharya_ which reduces itself to a system of prescriptive do’s and don’ts and which is in vogue amongst us today has a baneful effect upon society; it has lowered the ideal and robbed it of its true content. I deem it my highest duty to put these prescriptive conventions and taboos in their proper place and to release the ideal from the fetters that have been put upon it.

Q. One last question. If your attitude and practice constitutes such an advance in the cultivation of true selfrestraint, why does not its beneficial effect show in your surroundings? Why do we find so much disquiet and unhappiness around you? Why are your companions emotionally unhinged?

G. I know well the shortcomings as well as virtues of my companions. You do not know their other side. You jump to hasty conclusions from superficial observation, which is unbecoming in a striver after truth.

I am not so lost as you seem to think. I can only ask you to have faith in me. I cannot give up at your bidding what to me is a matter of deep conviction. I am sorry, I am helpless.

Q. We cannot say we have been convinced. We feel unhappy. We cannot leave the matter here. We shall continue to strive with you. Should you again feel prompted to go against the established rules, just think of your sorrowing friends.

G. I know. But what can I do when I feel impelled by duty? I can imagine circumstances when I may feel it my clear duty to go against the established rules. In such circumstances I cannot allow myself to be bound down by any commitment whatsoever.

135. LETTER TO J. C. KUMARAPPA

PATNA,
March 16, 1947

MY DEAR KU,

I have your letter¹. I have seen the power of attorney which I enclose herewith. I suppose you know that it displaces your Chairman and other members of the Board² and enables you to play ducks and drakes with the assets of the Board. So long as you know and realize the immensity of the power you are taking, I feel quite safe.

I see from the papers that you have become a member of the Congress Working Committee. There is much to be cleaned in those stables. I have no doubt that you will count no cost too dear to perform the cleansing operation. I shall watch your career with considerable interest.

Send my love to Bharatan’ wherever he is. Do you ever hear from Sita⁴? Or, has she entirely disappeared from the village life such as it was?

You will pass on to me all the titbits that you may consider I should be aware of.

It is just discovered that you do not need my signature at all. I had thought that I was the President of the Association. But if I am not, I am glad of it because so much burden is off my shoulders.⁵

Love.

BAPU

SHRIJ. C. KUMARAPPA
MAGANWADI
WARDHA

From a photostat : G. N. 10188

¹ Dated February 1, 1947
² Of Management of the All-India Village Industries Association
³ Addressee’s brother
⁴ Bharatan Kumarappa’s wife
⁵ On March 26, the addressee replied : “Thanks for the power of attorney which reached me at Madras. You are still our President but not a Trustee. Only the Trustees have to sign it. We shall not leave you off so easily from the Association. . . .”
136. LETTER TO SOLOMON ALEXANDER

PATNA,
March 16, 1947

DEAR FRIEND,

Of course I knew your brother very well indeed. But I plead with you to spare me at the present moment. I must not divide my attention for things great or small. It will be time for me to consider others if I come out safe from the fire which I am trying to quench. The odds are so great that the fire may quench me, instead of my quenching it.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

SOLOMON ALEXANDER, ESQ.
BARRISTER-AT-LAW
25 RUE TALAAT HARB
ALEXANDRIA
(Egypt)

From a photostat : G. N. 8037

137. LETTER TO T. R. VENKATARAMA SASTRI

PATNA,
March 16, 1947

DEAR VENKATARAMA SASTRI,

I have your precious letter about the proposed Sastriar Memorial.¹

Let me tell you that I have not identified myself with the Malaviyaji Memorial although I am deeply interested in the doings of the Kashi Vishwavidyalaya.

As for the proposal, whilst I am deeply concerned with everything about Sastriar I wonder if it is necessary to have an institution in memory of the deceased for political education. Isn’t that function performed by the Servants of India Society for which he gave his life? Political education is today being given by so many parties in which I may mention the Socialist Party and the Communist Party. However much one may differ from their way of thinking, it is not possible to withhold admiration from them for drawing to their fold people of learning, industry and self-sacrifice. I intensely dislike destructive criticism unless it is accompanied at the same time with constructive suggestions. I claim no exemption for my criticism. Strictly speaking mine is no criticism. I have simply thrown out a thought for your consideration. As at present equipped I would say that it might be a good thing to make an appeal for sustaining and expanding Sastriar’s last and best beloved institution. That it needs expansion I have no doubt. I haven’t thought out how. I will add however that the donors should earmark their donations for the object to be particularized in the general appeal. At this juncture when everything is in the meltingpot and institutions are undergoing rapid transformation it may be necessary to take the precaution. If you think that my suggestion is worthy of consideration you will have to consult the present President1 of the Society.

¹ In memory of V. S. Srinivasa Sastri who had died on April 17, 1946

The fact that I have taken deep interest in your project should not be taken to mean that I shall identify myself with that or any other project. My views about memorials have undergone change for some years and experience is daily strengthening them. But this is not for engaging you in considering them.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

SHRI T. R. VENKATARAMA SASTRI
“KAUSTUBHA”
EDWARD ELLIOTS ROAD
MYLAPORE
MADRAS

From the original: T. R. Venkatarama Sastri Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

1 Hriday Nath Kunzru
138. LETTER TO GEORGE WINTROPLE

PATNA,

March 16, 1947

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. Of course I am interested in everything about Thoreau and Emerson. My knowledge of Thoreau is confined to Walden and Civil Disobedience and some stray writings of his. Civil Disobedience was the work that gripped me. But I do not consider myself worthy enough for the purpose of identifying myself with any Thoreau Society.

GEORGE WINTROPLE, ESQ.

CONCORD

MASSACHUSETTS

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

139. LETTER TO TARABEHN JASANI

PATNA,

March 16, 1947

CHI. TARA,

It is a great calamity for Manu, you and other members of the family. I learnt about it only from Satish’s wire. I never expected such an end to Mohanlal. But do we not see every day that the most unexpected things happen? He who is born must die. Knowing this, we should learn to remain calm.

What more need I write. Write to me.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 8788
140. ADVICE TO MUSLIM REFUGEES

PATNA,

Sunday, March 16, 1947

You have my sympathy in your misery. What has happened should never have happened. But I believe that everything is futile unless there is a change of heart. I would suggest that you should go to Noakhali. Go there and find out for yourself if the Hindus have not been oppressed. If you are convinced about it, engage yourselves in relief work and service in that place. Impress upon the minority that they are your brethren, that they cannot leave the country, and that they may do so only over your dead bodies. Tell even the oppressors — let me say they are the members of the [Muslim] League — that such tyranny would neither bring any benefit to their party nor would it protect it in any way. And if the tyrants still continue to oppress, you must lay down your lives to protect your brethren. You must courageously tell them that they should first strike you before striking the innocent. Even if there is one such person among you, your fame would be matchless in all the world and God would shower flowers over you, and that fragrance would spread in the entire country. I am merely showing you your duty, since you have come to seek my advice. I would be the happiest man to see you rising high and to see Pakistan becoming really pak. And, if you do this people would come to you to learn the lessons of nonviolence and love.

[From Gujarati]

Biharni Komi Agman, p. 63

---

1 The refugees, accompanied by S. N. Maulvi, Dr. Azad Hussain and Hakim Tasadduq Hussain, called on Gandhiji at 2.15 p.m.

2 Pure
141. ADVICE TO MUSLIM WOMEN

PATNA,

Sunday, March 16, 1947

You should have faith in God. He is the one who looks after everyone. I am only striving [to do my duty]. You mix with the Hindu women. Tell the children in your families things which promote love [among the two communities]. What you can do, men can never do. Tell your husband, son or father, or whoever is there, that he should rush to the rescue of the Hindus if they are terrorized by the Muslims anywhere in the country. Protect the Hindu women and inspire confidence in them that they are your own sisters. I have described women as the very embodiment of nonviolence. God has given to woman a loving heart which man does not possess. You should put it to good use. It is as clear to me as daylight that as long as women do not acquire qualities of refinement and do not realize their duty, the country can make no progress. Women from numerous such Muslim families have come to me. So many of them are just like daughters to me. One of them is right in Noakhali. Amtussalaam is just skin and bones, but she is putting up a brave fight. She undertook a number of fasts. Raihana who comes from the family of Abbas Tyabji is just as brave. She is a devotee of Krishna. She reads the Gita and the Koran together. She understands the meaning of the Gita as much as she understands the meaning of the Koran. I believe that she has more Hindus than Muslims among her friends. There are many girls who have given up distinctions of caste and creed. My advice to you is that you should forget distinctions of caste and community if you want to be happy. It is one God who has endowed us with human life. We are all human beings, all men and women belonging to the same country. Let us justify our religion as human beings.

[From Gujarati]

Biharni Komi Agman, p. 64

---

1 The Muslim women came clad in burqas. Gandhiji asked: “Why do you observe purdah from me? Women do not observe it with me. The real purdah should be of the heart.” The women then removed their burqas.
142. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

PATNA,
March 16, 1947

I did not find time to write my speech for this silence day. I had told you yesterday itself that Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan would speak to you today. He will therefore address you today instead of me.

[From Urdu]
Gandhijike Dukhe Dilki Pukar—I, p. 42

143. FROM THE DIARY

PATNA,
Sunday, March 16, 1947

Today I was wide awake as it struck two. I did not seem to get sleep. Then all at once I heard Manudi reciting the shlokas of the morning prayer. I was startled. I called her a couple of times. Then she was quiet. She did not say anything, but she was frightened. She lifted my mosquitocurtain and held my hand. I stroked her for a few minutes and asked her to be calm. Now she became conscious and withdrew her hand. I asked her to go to sleep without worrying. I told her not to worry about the prayers and assured her that I would wake her up [in time]. That girl is worrying so much about me! She is just like an innocent child. It is only because of that quality in her that she has remained with me in such a trying yajna. I started thinking about it. I am not happy about the bleeding from her nose. I have asked her to keep a mud-pack on the back of her neck. I started thinking about . . . I did not like the manner of . . .’s questions and the grin on his face. I started thinking about my dharma and it was already 3.30 a.m. I started cleaning my teeth and then woke up Manudi . . . Got the prayers started at 3.55 a.m.

Held talks between 7.30 and 9.30 a.m. I explained to them my point of view. In the light of my present views about brahmacharya I felt that their ideas about brahmacharya were faulty and imperfect. It is very necessary for them to improve those ideas along my line. I have never sought the company of a woman with a view to satisfying my passions. Of course I mentioned one exception. I have made progress by my actions and expect to advance further. I am not in any way bound to... They may continue to write letters. I shall try to reply. It would be better if only one of them wrote.

1 Omissions in the item are as in the source.

[From Gujarati]
Biharni Komi Agman, pp. 60-1

144. LETTER TO SIR HUGH DOW

PATNA,
March 17, 1947

DEAR FRIEND,

I was so struck by your reference (strange for a bureaucrat) to individual conduct that I referred to it on Saturday at my after prayer speech.¹

Yesterday evening I met your Ministers and gave them the purport of our talk of last Saturday. I told them that
1. you considered them to be dilatory about placating the Muslims who were so much the injured party;
2. permanent officials interpreted this to mean that the Ministers did not want them to be prompt in taking energetic action to restore confidence among the Muslims;
3. the guilty ones were not properly dealt with;
4. the League demands were turned down not on merits but because they were League demands.

The Ministers present totally refuted all these imputations and the Chief Minister expressed considerable surprise. The Chief Minister said that he and his colleagues had often differed from you on several questions including the minorities. He added, however, that on behalf of himself and his colleagues he had given you the assurance that in their handling of the minority question they would readily accept your advice even though there were differences between you and them.

I am showing this to the Chief Minister to check up my version of what the Ministers had said.

My only reason for writing this is not to advertise differences between you and your Ministers but to remove misunderstandings and to assist, wherever I can, in promoting goodwill between the retiring British official world and the Indian politicians who are, and are becoming growingly, responsible for the well being of the people whom they guide and serve.

¹ Vide “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 15-3-1947

I casually referred to the condition of the working men in the mica industry. But I shall await your promised note before I can pursue it fully.¹

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

H. E., THE GOVERNOR OF BIHAR

Gandhiji’s Correspondence with the Government, 1944-47, pp. 228-9

145. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

PATNA,
March 17, 1947

CHI. VALLABHBHAI,

Please read the enclosed papers about Paul and do what is necessary. I am sorry to have to put you to all this trouble but I cannot help it. However, if you can find no time at all to read them, forget about the matter and return the papers. If you do anything about it, you need not send them back.

Nathji and Swami had been here. We talked at great length.² They themselves will write to you.

Sushila writes that you are not keeping good health; please be careful.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—2 : Sardar Vallabhbhaine, p. 351

¹ For the addressee’s reply, vide ”Letter from Sir Hugh Dow”, 17-3-1947
² Vide”Discussion with Swami Anand and Kedar Nath”
146. A LETTER

PATNA,
Monday, March 17, 1947

You seem to believe that after thousands of years I am the one born (as an incarnation of God). But I don’t think so. I claim that all those who work with the same earnestness as I do can certainly do what I have been able to. It should be possible for everyone to be always vigilant and go on trying ceaselessly. But if what you believe is true, should I not be able to realize even the physical impurities in me?

Our definition of brahmacharya is imperfect. I am trying to make it perfect. Even the sharp intelligence of . . . is incapable of [understanding] brahmacharya. It was clear from the conversation between us that . . . also does not know the meaning of brahmacharya. I cannot express the pain I feel as I write these words. I am steeling my heart to write this. . . . I claim that except on one occasion I have not been a victim of passions and that is why I write the harsh words above.

[From Gujarati]
Biharni Komi Agman, pp. 67-8

147. LETTER TO SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA

ON THE TRAIN
March 17, 1947

CHI. SATIS BABU.

I have your letter. Write and tell me how the whole work is going on. I understand about Sardar Jiwan Singh. I had written that the accounts should be checked first.² But it does not matter if the money has already been given. Now the balance should tally. Sardar Jiwan Singh must be staying with you. If he needs special diet, arrange for it. He requires meat and fish. Let him have these. Everything will be set right with love.

¹ Omissions in the letter are as in the source.
² Vide “Letter to Stis Chandra Das Gupta”, 2-3-1947
Now how do you manage for the cloth? Could you get handspun yarn? Do the weavers weave it? They are our true support. Where is Hemprabhadevi? How is she? She should not worry. Nathji and Swami had come. They discussed Manu with me at length.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi : G. N. 8964

148. NOTE TO NIRMAL KUMAR BOSE

March 17, 1947

You may post it if you wish. There are errors of facts in the letter. There are other defects to which I would draw your attention. I would therefore advise you to wait till you have seen my opinion. But do just as you please.¹

My Days with Gandhi, p. 175

149. LETTER TO NIRMAL KUMAR BOSE

March 17, 1947

CHI. NIRMAL BABU,

Your letter is full of inaccuracies and unwarranted assumptions. I had asked you to discuss the thing with me. You could not do it. The result is bad. I do not mind what opinion you hold, only it must be well fortified

You should have ascertained my views from me before accepting second-hand evidence however honest it might be.

I go beyond the orthodox view as we know it. My definition does not admit of laxity. I do not call that brahmacharya that means

¹ Addressee’s wife
² According to the source, after their discussion with Gandhiji, Kedar Nath and Swami Anand asked the addressee his views since Gandhiji had mentioned that “his immediate personal associates did not see anything wrong in his acts”. The addressee stated his views in a letter and gave it to them for communication to other friends. Afterwards he placed before Gandhiji a copy of the letter along with the post-script. As Gandhiji was observing silence, he wrote this note in reply. For extracts from the addressee’s letter, vide “N. K. Bose Letter to Kedar Nath and Others”, 16-3-1947
³ Vide also the following two items.
⁴ This was written on the train to Masaurhi and handed over to the addressee who was accompanying Gandhiji.
not to touch a woman. What I do today is nothing new for me. So far as I known myself, I hold today the same view I held when about 45 years ago I took the vow. Without the vow in England as a student, I freely mixed with women and yet I called myself a brahmachari for the period of my residence there. For me, brahmacharya is that thought and practice which puts you in touch with the Infinite and takes you to His presence.¹ In that sense Dayanand Saraswati² was not. Most certainly I am not. But I am trying to reach that state and, in accordance with my belief, I have made substantial progress in that direction.

I have not become modern at all in the same sense you seem to mean. I am as ancient as can be imagined and hope to remain so to the end of my life. If this displeases you, I cannot help it. Let me appear to you and others as naked as I can.

You have not done justice to A, B or C. You do not know them fully. Have you any right to judge them before you have taken the trouble of knowing them as fully as possible? That you may not want to or that you have no time, I would appreciate. But that very fact should prevent you from passing judgement on them.

I am amazed at your assumption that my experiment implied any assumption of woman’s inferiority. She would be, if I looked upon her with lust with or without her consent. I have believed in woman’s perfect equality with man. My wife was ‘inferior’ when she was the instrument of my lust. She ceased to be that when she lay with me naked as my sister. If she and I were not lustfully agitated in our minds and bodies, the contact raised both of us.

Should there be difference if it is not my wife, as she once was, but some other sister? I do hope you will acquit me of having any lustful designs upon women or girls who have been naked with me. A or B’s hysteria had nothing to do with my experiment, I hope. They were before the experiment what they are today, if they have not less of it.

The distinction between Manu and others is meaningless for our discussion. That she is my grand-daughter may exempt me from criticism. But I do not want that advantage.

“Experiment” or prayog is an ill-chosen word. I have used it. It differs from the present in the sense that the one could be stopped by

¹ Vide also “Letter to Amrit Kaur”, 18-3-1947
² Founder of Arya Samaj me, the other being dharma could not be. Now comes the stop.

That I should take the public in my confidence before I do anything new is [not] novel to me. In the present case there is nothing new.

BAPU

My Days with Gandhi, pp. 176-8

150. NOTE TO NIRMAL KUMAR BOSE

March 17, 1947

When must you go? There is no immediate hurry, is there? Let us wait till the three days’ tour is over.

My Days with Gandhi, p. 178

151. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

MASAURHI,
March 17, 1947

It is not necessary, perhaps, to tell you that I have undertaken this tour not for pleasure but out of sorrow. I visit only those places where Muslims have suffered in some way or the other at the hands of Hindus. Everywhere I appeal to Hindus to atone for their sins.

A large number of Hindus attacked a handful of Muslims and killed women and children. This is not bravery but cowardice. It is cowardly to kill a person even under an apprehension that he is likely to kill us. We have to show true repentance for whatever has happened. If a brother of ours commits a crime, we cannot escape the responsibility. I include myself when I say “we”. No one should think that he has committed no crime and this old man is unnecessarily implicating him. When one man commits a crime, all mankind becomes responsible for it. Hence even if a single Hindu has misbehaved here, all the Hindus will be put in the dock.

What the Muslims have done in Noakhali or what the Hindus

1 After receiving the letter dated March 17, vide the preceding item, the addressee told Gandhiji that he “might have to leave him earlier than by the end of the month”. Vide also “Letter to Nirmal Kumar Bose”, 18-3-1947

2 The meeting was attended by more than thirty thousand people. A very large number of people participated in the Ramdhun for which Gandhiji congratulated them.
have done in Bihar brings no benefit to India; on the contrary it is an obstacle to India’s independence. I have been told that people shouted Mahavirjiki jai and Gandhijiki jai while committing these heinous crimes. Such people have not understood me. I am appealing to Hindus here that whoever has committed a crime should confess it. Those who have committed robbery, arson or murder should come to me and make a confession. I am no police officer; nor have I come here to prosecute you. You should not hesitate to make a confession before me at any rate. I shall not report the names of the criminals to the Ministers here, even though they are my friends. You should display your courage by confessing your guilt and ennoble your soul by atoning for it.

Hindus have written to me that they have indeed committed the crimes; but they plead that they have had enough provocation. According to them, the Muslims took the offensive and the Hindus retaliated in self-defence. Now, I pose this question before you. Suppose a man speaks ill of me or abuses me, should I retaliate by abusing him and soil my own tongue? If a man turns into a devil, should I confront him by becoming a devil myself? One who attacks another person is a coward, but it would be an act of bravery to refuse to be provoked even in the face of an attack. One should realize that if the aggressor commits a shameful act one should not oneself commit a similar act.

I know the people of Bihar very well and I have visited this province very often. I had built great hopes on Bihar but this time the people here have dashed them to the ground. The only thing left to us now is to confess honestly that we are guilty of a serious crime. We should atone for the crime and declare that it would never be repeated. A Hindu friend has said, “I agree that you should have fought with those Muslims who had provoked you; but what is the justification for thousands of Hindus killing innocent women and children? Even if you had resorted to violence, you should have done it in a brave manner.”

Muslims complain that the Provincial Government’s hands are also not clean and the Ministers participated in the atrocities committed on the Muslims. It is difficult for me to believe this; I cannot also believe that the Chief Minister had a hand in this. Hindus
152. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

PATNA,
March 18, 1947

CHI. AMRIT,

I had your letter. I wanted to write to you at once but never got the chance. It is a very strenuous time I am having here. But do not worry.

You remember those two notebooks containing rich treasures from the Bible and other Christian literature. If they have not taught you and me to be anxious for nothing and nobody, they have taught nothing worth learning, for our faith in the living God is to be measured by the extent of freedom from anxiety of any kind whatsoever and full faith in God requires an accurate knowledge of His laws and corresponding obedience thereto. This is the sum total of nature cure. The supreme law, making others superfluous, is heart-assimilation of Ramanama in every fibre of our being. The truth of this is verified in everyday experience.

I note what you say about your suffering and about Dr. Jacob’s treatment. I hope to be able to learn some day that you have shed all your illnesses.

Tell Shummy\(^1\) that he belies the teaching of the Bible which among our company he seems to know best.

Sardar\(^2\) must not have any swelling whatsoever. But his obstinacy is very great.

I have asked you to pay me a brief visit. You might be of some use in the work that is being done here. That means your sparing a fortnight at the most. But I do not want you to neglect the duty you have undertaken, of course with my full consent.

Who told you that I had consented to take some rest? That rest must certainly come some day. Meantime I am learning day by day, though little by little, that all work, without any the slightest trace of anxiety, is true and living rest.

Jajuji\(^3\) has sent me a copy of your letter about the Secretaryship. I want you to give me a full and accurate account of the big tragedy that is going on in the Punjab.

Surely you cannot be called “Her Highness” as Catlin calls

---

1. Shumshere Singh, addressee’s brother
2. Vallabhbhai Patel
3. Shrikrishnadas Jaju, Secretary, A. I. S. A.
Lastly about myself. I had an affectionate but mournful visit from Nathji and Swami Anand. I gave them as much time as I was capable of giving. Our discussions were full, frank and cordial. You will have no difficulty in accepting at its face value my statement that not one of our company knows the full value and implications of brahmacharya, and that among these ignoramuses I am the least ignorant and the most experienced. With one solitary exception I have never looked upon a woman with a lustful eye. I have touched perhaps thousands upon thousands. But my touch has never carried the meaning of lustfulness. I have lain with some naked, never with the intention of having any lustful satisfaction. My touch has been for our mutual uplift. I would like those who have felt otherwise, if there are any, truly to testify against me. Even the one solitary instance referred to by me was never with the intention of despoiling her. Nevertheless my confession stands that in that case my touch had lustfulness about it. I was carried away in spite of myself and but for God’s intervention I might have become a wreck.

My meaning of brahmacharya is this:

One who never has any lustful intention, who by constant attendance upon God has become proof against conscious or unconscious emissions, who is capable of lying naked with naked women, however beautiful they may be, without being in any manner whatsoever sexually excited. Such a person should be incapable of lying, incapable of intending or doing harm to a single man or woman in the whole world, is free from anger and malice and detached in the sense of the Bhagavadgita. Such a person is a full brahmachari. Brahmachari literally means a person who is making daily and steady progress towards God and whose every act is done in pursuance of that end and no other.

You say K.¹ and N.² had agreed to withdraw their boycott. From the letters I have, such is not my impression. Nor did I gather that impression from N[athji] and S[wami].

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C. W. 3702. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 6511

---

¹ Kishorelal Mashruwala and Narahari Parikh; vide “Telegram to Kishorelal G. Mashruwala”, 9-2-1947
² Ibid
153. LETTER TO NIRMAL KUMAR BOSE

March 18, 1947

CHI. NIRMAL BABU,

If you must leave today I must not stand between you and your duty as you conceive it. You made me so used to you that I shall miss you. Pyarelal I cannot have just now. He must be in his place. If you leave today, I suppose you have arranged to hand over all papers in perfect order. The only one who can take charge is Dev.

Your explanation does not give me satisfaction. But I must not argue. If you want me to do so, I could do it through correspondence which perhaps better suits your nature. Of course you are at liberty to discuss the whole of me and my writings with anybody you like. This applies equally to the three letters. I simply drew your attention to what appeared to be a hasty decision and that too in order to see as much perfection in you as possible.

“Haste is waste”.

BAPU’S
blessings

My Days with Gandhi, p. 181

154 LETTER TO JAG PARVESCH CHANDAR

PATNA,
March 18, 1947

DEAR JAG PARVESCH CHANDAR,

I have tried desperately to overtake your letter received on the 26th ultimo. It is remarkable that you have not dated your letter.

I did get your book Is Grouping of Provinces Compulsory? and

1 This was in reply to the addressee’s letter written after a long discussion with Gandhiji. For extracts from the letter, vide Appendix V.

2 Vide “Letter to Nirmal Kumar Bose”, 17-3-1947; also “Letter to N. K. Bose”, 7-2-1947

3 The addressee explains: “At a quarter to three in the afternoon I bade good-bye to Bapu. . . . He blessed me and said, “You have taken your decision in haste.”

4 This was in reply to the addressee’s undated letter which read: “Ever since December 22, 1946 I am confined to bed due to nervous breakdown. All my limbs are tied with the strings of fear. I am under the treatment of expert doctors but a few words of advice from you will carry more weight than anything else. Once the late Shri Mahadev Desai suffered from nervous breakdown and he was under your care. Please do spare a few minutes and let me know the treatment that Shri Desai underwent.”
I noticed that you have answered the question in the negative. A trained lawyer in Nagpur has done likewise.

Mahadev I suppose did not have the same malady that you seem to have. In any case unless I know more fully I can’t guide you. Moreover, Mahadev had put himself under an Ayurvedic physician at that time, staying in bed. Of course he did so with my consent. Therefore you will see that I cannot appropriate full credit for such recovery as Mahadev had.

You will see that I am just now in Bihar for the same cause which took me to Noakhali which means that I have to attend to two. I would like you to tell me all about the tragedy that is still going on in the Punjab. Has your portion of Lahore also been affected?

SHRI JAG PARVESH CHANDAR
8 J BLOCK
MODEL TOWN
LAHORE

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

155. LETTER TO VINODINI

PATNA,
March 18, 1947

CHI. VINODINI¹,

How is it that you have still not sent to Chi. Jaisukhlal the letters regarding Pyarelal? He is perturbed and is drawing unfavourable conclusions against you both and Pyarelal. Pyarelal of course has written to say that all the letters should be sent. What objection can you have, then? And that, too, when you have to show the letters to your own father? I would advise you to send the letters immediately to Jaisukhlal and apologize to him for the delay.

I trust both of you are well.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

For the present I shall have to stay on in Bihar. I shall be touring the different parts, but the headquarters will be at Patna. Manu is well. She also is angry with you, but will of course calm down.

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./XXIV

¹ Daughter of Jaisukhlal Gandhi
156. LETTER TO JAISUKHLAL GANDHI

PATNA,
March 18, 1947

CHI. JAISUKHLAL,

I got your letter. I have written to Vinodini again.¹ There must be some misunderstanding. That she would deliberately withhold the letters is not the impression I have of her. However, I have written quite strongly to her.

Manu is getting on quite well. She wins everybody’s heart by her spirit of service. I am quite hopeful that her health will become perfectly normal. She is being treated with my remedies only—earth, water, ether, fire and air. If Ramanama sinks deep into her heart, it will be easy enough for her to benefit from these five elements. She is quite regular, of course, in her lessons.

You need not worry at all regarding Pyarelal. I do not see the slightest need for Manu to give up her lessons, etc., owing to this. Manu’s good will be Pyarelal’s good. Manu is firm in this matter. There will be reason for fear only if I am proved mistaken.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./XXIV

157. DISCUSSION WITH MUSLIM REFUGEES

MASAURHI,
March 18, 1947

REFUGEES: Please give us an assurance that our lives, property and honour will be protected.²

GANDHJI: Efforts are being made in this direction. I shall advise the Government to hold all the Hindus in a village responsible for any harm to its Muslim minority and to punish them strictly according to law.

R. Securities should be taken from gangsters and influential people in the locality so that they may not foment riots again.

¹ Vide the preceding item.
² Most of the houses in Masaurhi were razed to the ground during the riots and all but 25 out of a population of 1,000 had fled from the village.
G. Those persons who had led the riots should be held responsible for law and order in the locality to prevent recurrence of riots. As it is not right to hold everyone responsible for the riots, it would not be right to punish everyone for the riots; nor would it be easy to do so. But if you can recognize and prove anyone’s participation in the riots, the law will certainly punish him.

R. We should be issued licenses to possess arms for self-protection.

G. It is strange that I am hearing the same arguments here which I used to hear in Noakhali. I shall certainly oppose this. I can never understand why some or all of you should be given arms. This is not the way of creating an atmosphere of friendship. I had told the Hindus in Noakhali that they could not live there nor could the local Government protect them if the entire Muslim population was hostile to them. Should the Government kill 80 per cent of the population to protect them? No government can do this today. I would like to tell you that my ways are different. I believe that a man should become brave but bravery consists not in killing but in getting killed and that too without hatred for the killer. Muslims were no cowards, but they are terrified today and that too on account of us—this makes me hang my head in shame. If my staying here has any meaning, you should shed your anxiety. I shall not go away till you yourself ask me to go, and assure me that Hindus and Muslims are living like brothers again.

R. There should be some arrangement so that all Muslims can live together.

G. This talk of ‘pockets’ is not new to me. As soon as I arrived in Bihar, I went to see the leader of the Muslim League, Barrister Abdul Aziz of Patna. He explained to me everything. Earlier I used to oppose the idea of ‘pockets’; but now I understand the logic behind the demand. I can very well understand that one just cannot stay at a place where one’s relations and friends have been massacred. Hence if people want to shift to villages where there is a large number of Muslims, they can migrate there with mutual consent.

I have advised the Government to build houses for displaced persons or give them funds for the purpose if they so choose. If you demand, however, that the Government should provide you everything, it may not be in a position to do so because it would mean acquisition of some people’s lands. And this would lead to all sorts of complications. If there is any vacant piece of land and you can settle there, you may certainly do so. A big landlord from North Bihar was ready to take as many Muslims as would like to stay on his lands. If you agree I shall write to him.

R. We should receive compensation for whatever we have lost.

G. Even the Government would go bankrupt if it agreed to this. Some people claim they have lost lakhs, some others claim they have lost crores. How can we evaluate the actual loss? I think the Government would not be in a position to pay even one-fourth of the claims. It can only provide shelter or give money to enable people to stand on their own feet. In Noakhali, many weavers and fishermen had practically nothing to support themselves. There I had suggested that the local Government should advance them loans which could be repaid in easy instalments. Money alone has no value. You are all farmers, a hard working lot. If you take courage in both hands, you will forget in no time what you have undergone. Moreover a commission is being set up. Its object is not only to record whatever has happened, but also to examine the steps that are being taken and to recommend measures for the future.

R. 50 per cent of us should be taken in the police force.

G. I am totally opposed to such demands. I told Hindus in Noakhali: “I will not put in a word for a Hindu police officer. Does it make any sense that an officer is removed just because he is a Muslim? Of course, he should certainly be removed if he is inefficient. And after all, the officers are going to carry out only what the Chief Minister of Bengal, Shaheed Suhrawardy Saheb, wants them to do. If Shaheed Saheeb is good, the officers will be good; but if he himself is bad, how can they remain good?”

R. The Government or the Congress should pay us compensation or loans in proportion to the size of our business.

G. The Government should only advance loans and not pay compensation.

R. Stolen goods are being recovered. This work should be done swiftly and firmly. Aid should be given to those who want to buy looms and yarn. They should be given free rations as long as they do not earn enough for their sustenance.

G. All efforts must certainly be made to recover looted property. To those whose tools and properties have been totally destroyed Government must provide shelter and foot till they can stand on their own feet. But if someone argues that the Government should go on providing everything free, then that will not be feasible. It will mean the Government should provide everything free to an exmillionaire until he starts earning his millions. This is a ridiculous proposition.

R. Adequate arrangements should be made for recovering abducted girls.

G. Certainly. Please give the names and addresses of such girls to me. I shall immediately try to trace them. Hindus have been writing to me to let them know even if there is one such girl; and they will move heaven and earth to recover her.

R. We should have complete freedom to practise our religious rites, as we used to enjoy before the riots.

G. Certainly, it should be so.

R. The Government should make early and adequate arrangements to repair or rebuild before the rainy season such houses as were damaged during the riots.

G. Certainly, this work should be finished early.

The following decisions taken at the meeting of the refugees were placed before Gandhiji for his comments:

1. The relief camps should be situated near police stations instead of inside the towns. Gandhiji should be requested to depute two special workers for each camp.

G. I agree.

2. We shall, besides Government help, raise volunteers with the cooperation of Hindus for our protection, clearing of our houses and so on.

G. Right.

3. Panchayats will be formed which will perform such functions as scotching false rumours, settling internal disputes, returning mortgages and striving to recover stolen goods and so on.

G. Formation of panchayats is welcome. If people cooperate among themselves, I shall help them in every possible way.

4. The loans for relief should be advanced in a spirit of mutual help.

G. Right.

5. Women volunteers should also be recruited from among the Muslims as well as Hindus and they should, in addition to other work, strive to recover abducted women.

G. Right.

6. After constructing the houses, essential things like utensils, cots, small tables, etc., should also be provided.

G. Right.

7. Licences for arms should be issued on the recommendations of the panchayat. They should not be issued to persons who do not need them or who want them for sport.

G. That’s right.

[From Urdu]

_Gandhijike Dukhe Dilki Pukar_— II, pp. 4-9

158. _SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING_

_BIR_,

_March 18, 1947_

I saw today the wreckage caused by us at Masaurhi. I had read in newspapers the Muslims League version of the happenings at Masaurhi, and I confess that I thought the version was grossly exaggerated. I did not believe that man could be so depraved or that Biharis could stoop so low. But today I witnessed it with my own eyes. When Muslims fled you either looted their property or destroyed it. They had not harmed you in any way. I have come here with the resolve or serving the Muslims. I am a servant of God and therefore consider it my duty to serve all human beings.

It is very unfortunate that our hearts have not yet been cleansed. I concede that the Muslims behaved very viciously in Calcutta and Noakhali. But how can that be avenged in Bihar? It was a very wrong decision to observe a Noakhali Day here.¹ Had I known it, I would never have allowed such an observance in Bihar. I am very sorry that my name was falsely dragged into this affair and I was maligned.

My statements were presented to the public in a twisted and distorted form. When Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru constituted the Provisional Government at Delhi,² people wished to celebrate the occasion like Diwali. When I heard this, I said we should do no such thing because Jawaharlal and his colleagues had put on a crown of thorns.³ The Muslim League had not joined the Government and it was a pity that riots had broken out in Noakhali. But my statement was

¹ On October 25, 1946
² On September 2, 1946
³ Vide “Speech at Prayer Meeting”, 2-9-1946 distorted and people were told that Gandhi wanted them to observe a Noakhali Day. I had never even dreamt of this. And when the Noakhali Day was observed, people were so much excited that they thought they were expected to settle the Noakhali scores with the Muslims.

Hindus and Muslims used to live here as good neighbours. They had mutual love and affection. They might have quarrelled occasionally, but that did not affect their relations. They used to become friends again soon. It is an altogether different story now.
Today celebration of any Day leads to fratricide. I have said that this must not happen while I am alive. I can never be a witness to fratricide. If this thing is repeated in Bihar I shall perish in that conflagration. I have heard that the Muslims here are panicstricken over the Punjab Day to be observed on the 23rd. I hope this is a false alarm. I assert that we must not observe a Punjab Day. If we do this, it will lead to dreadful consequences. The freedom of our country will become a distant dream. I pray to God that He must never let me live to witness that day. I am awakening the whole of Bihar through these words addressed to you.

While I was coming to the village of Bir, the residents of two villages stopped me on the way and handed over to me two letters.
The first letter was addressed jointly by the Hindus and Muslims of Sain. They also contributed Rs. 55 for the relief of distressed Muslims in Bihar. I wish to read out to you their letter. They write:

   We the residents of Sain are pained to see you in anguish which has been caused by our foolishness. We are extremely sorry for what has happened. Here, however, we Hindus and Muslims lived like brothers despite the prevailing lawlessness and we are happy and proud to tell you that we are living as brothers even today. We seek your blessings that we may continue to live in love and affection.

The other letter was given to me by the residents of Barni. They write:

   When the riots were going on all around we formed a peace committee.
   No one was harmed here and no disturbance was caused in our area. There is absolutely no difference between Hindus and Muslims. We are working on the same lines even today, and we assure you that we will always continue to live like brothers.

   The residents of this village also were not involved in any riot;
and yet they are feeling sorry. This has made me very happy.
Some of our Muslim brothers have said that they are afraid of returning to their homes. Thieves and dacoits have carried away their goods. According to me, even the thieves and dacoits are our brothers. It would be ideal if they gave up their profession. But if that is not possible, they should at any rate not rob the innocent people whom we have beaten away from their homes.

Now you should contribute as much as you can for the relief of the Muslims in distress. I cannot collect the donations myself, because that exhausts me, besides I shall have to work during the night also. Volunteers are going round for collection. Please donate the maximum amount you can and thereby earn the merit for it and at the same time atone for your sins.

[From Urdu]

Gandhi ke Dukhe Dil ke Pukar—II, pp. 10-2

159. TELEGRAM TO SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA

PATNA,

[March 19, 1947]¹

SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA

KAZIRKHIL

RAMGANJ

IF YOU CAN SPARE BISEN² AND IF HE WISHES HE CAN JOIN ME PATNA IMMEDIATELY.

GANDHI

From a photostat: G. N. 7713

160. LETTER TO NIRMAL KUMAR BOSE

BIR,

March 19, 1947

CHI. NIRMAL BABU,

Now that you are gone, I must say I did not like your abrupt departure. Manu was disturbed and Y asked if she had been the cause of your sudden departure. I told her I did not think so; but there was an uncertain ring about my ‘no’. If you went without any other cause

¹ From the reference to the telegram in the letter to the addressee; vide p. 128.
² Shiv Balak Bisen than the call from the University, I have nothing to say.

What is Freudian philosophy? I have not read any writing of his. One friend, himself a professor and follower of Freud, discussed his writings for a brief moment. You are the second.

I do not want to emphasize my impression that you jump to hasty conclusions. You ought to know the three more fully. You are not just to them.

Have you in the light of my letter and discussion accepted my position that I am not guilty of modernity? If you hold on to the view you have expressed in your letter to K. you owe it to me to explain your standpoint and enable me to understand myself more fully than I do.

Blessings from
BAPU

My Days with Gandhi, p. 183

161. DISCUSSION WITH CONGRESS WORKERS

BIR,
March 19, 1947

Shah Uzair Munimi, President of the District Congress Committee, described the devastation in Patna district. According to him the district of Patna was the worst-hit in Bihar. After listening to his report, Gandhiji said:

What should we do now? Have you thought of something?

Shah Saheb replied that if they could get even a few honest men, things could be set right. Thereupon Gandhiji asked:

Is it or isn’t it a fact that quite a large number of Congressmen took part in the disturbances? I ask this question because people are making this allegation. But the Congressmen assembled here can themselves tell the truth. How many of the 132 members of your Committee were involved? It would be a very great thing if all of you assert that none of you was involved. But this assertion cannot be made. These 132 are supposed to be the elected representatives of the people. But I learn there is a lot of fraud involved in this. There are many in the Congress who register bogus members by paying four

1 As stated by the addressee in his letter dated March 18; vide Appendix V.
2 Vide “Letter to Nirmal Kumar Bose”, 18-3-1947
3 Vide “Letter to Nirmal Kumar Bose”, 17-3-1947
4 Vide “N. K. Bose’s Letter to Kedar Nath and Others”, 16-3-1947
5 This was held in the morning.
annas from their own pockets and thus become elected representatives. I have also worked in the Congress. Today I am not even a fouranna member. But there was a time when I was a member of the Working Committee and I was virtually all in all. Hence I know the Congress inside out. This Police Station has jurisdiction over 300 villages which have elected 132 representatives. They can do substantial work if they so choose.

I wish to ask you, how could you live to see an old woman of 110 years being butchered before your eyes? How could you tolerate it? I do not wish to talk about anything else. I have vowed to do or die. I will not rest nor let others rest. I would wander all over on foot and ask the skeletons lying about how all that had happened. There is such a fire raging in me that I would know no peace till I have found a solution for all this. You know what happened when I reached Sodepur. I had not gone there for rest. Hence I left for Kazirkhil and Chaumuhani. Chaumuhani is a big Station. What was the use of waiting there? Kazirkhil had been devastated. But the station-master there had transformed it into some sort of an ashram. So I requested him to take me to some place where there were no amenities. Hence I proceeded to Srirampur. It was a predominantly Muslim area with only a sprinkling of Hindu houses which had been burnt down. The Muslims welcomed me. Even then I hurried from there and wandered from village to village. I am afraid I will have to go through the same ordeal in Bihar. If I find that my comrades are deceiving me, I will be furious and I shall walk barefoot on and on through hail or storm. I would throw away the soft seat and other amenities which you have offered me. After all, it was in Bihar that I had renounced similar comforts earlier. When I came to Champaran in 1917, though Rajendra Babu and other leaders were my friends, they used to have their meals in separate kitchens. I asked them why we should eat separately when we were all engaged in rendering service. Then I set up a common kitchen. My wife Kasturba, Mahadev Desai’s wife Durgabehn, and Narahari Bhai’s Manibehn all of them together used to cook and all of us had our meals together. I would never get more loyal and hearty co-operation in the whole world than what I got from Rajendra Babu, Brijkishore Babu, Janak Babu, Dharani Babu and Gorakh Babu. As a result of this there was a transformation in Champaran. The British indigo planters lost their hold. But I am told the Indian planters today have become even more powerful. The lesson we learnt in Champaran was the result of the hardships

1 On October 29, 1946
2 On November 20, 1946
3 Narahari Parikh
undergone by the people of Bihar. Without them I could not be what I am nor could my achievements be worth much. I am a bird of passage. God has not allowed me to stay at one place. We have to work in the same spirit today with which Brijkishore Babu had worked. Today I do not find that honesty or loyalty. I once again appeal to you to work only if you can do so truthfully. My words may sound harsh, but you must realize that even if you forsake me, I shall not leave Bihar. It is difficult to force me out of Bihar. During the Champaran satyagraha, the Commissioner of Tirhut notified me that I, being an outsider, should leave the area.¹ I told Brijkishore Babu and Rajendra Babu that I wished to challenge the Government and that they would have to give up their legal profession and become my clerks or interpreters if they decided to back me up. I gave them a night’s time to think it over. Rajendra Babu had been offered a judicial post. But the next morning itself he and Brijkishore Babu announced that they had decided to give up their legal practice and to become my clerks and interpreters. The Bihar of today is the result of the transformation of their hearts. It is now for you to decide whether I should go in the car or travel on foot. Of course I prefer walking. When Muslims in Noakhali taunted me to go to Bihar, I used to feel hurt. Some Muslims look upon me as an enemy of Islam. Some people expressed doubts whether I could achieve what I wanted to in Noakhali. But I had no doubts. Even today I believe that I can work for Noakhali and the whole of India from Bihar. The non-violent fight which I had launched against injustice and oppression in Champaran had sent new life pulsating throughout India. The work in Bihar this time is far more difficult and significant. This time it seems I will have to strive to the utmost to prove that Hinduism and Islam can exist side by side. This is being put to test today. Many people believe that they cannot and one will have to remain subordinate to the other. I do not think so. If the Hindu Mahasabha insists that Muslims should remain subordinate to Hindus or if the Muslim League insists that Hindus should subordinate themselves to Muslims, this will not do. No one need live as subordinate to another. All have to live together as equals. Even Jinnah Saheb has now declared that the minorities will be shown greater consideration in regions where Muslims constitute the majority.

Q. All people lived like brothers in Bihar before the trouble started in Bengal. Later on Noakhali turned everyone’s head. The events in the Punjab are also casting their shadows. It is necessary that we go and live among the people to prevent the outside evil influence from spreading and to maintain cordial relations. But today many Congressmen do not wish to serve the people; they want power for themselves. They join the Congress for their own selfish ends and indulge in intrigue and groupism. How shall we get out of this mire? If we strengthen the Congress in Bihar we can check the evil. The people of Bihar have behaved badly, we have become vicious, the whole atmosphere has been vitiated. In this atmosphere, many Congressmen kept quiet and could not stem the tide, and some of them were carried away by it.

¹ Vide “Letter to District Magistrate, Champaran”, 16-4-1917 and Appendix “N. K. Bose’s Letter to Kedar Nath and Others”, 16-3-1947

A. It was easy to wrest power from British hands but it is very difficult to overcome our own weakness and to set up an efficient administration. You should tell me whether you can cooperate with me in this work or not. If you cannot, I request you to leave me. There are people today who declare that I am out of date and that I should give up all politics. I do not agree with this. This region is teeming with Hindus. We will not rely upon the police for our work although they are our police. We must do this work ourselves. Suhrawardy Saheb had developed the police in Noakhali to protect me from Muslim fanatics; but I made friends with Muslims there. The Government here have also deployed the police. I ask them, what is the police for? Muslims are not going to kill me here; the Hindus may probably think of doing so. That is why I wish that the task of establishing peace should be undertaken by you all and not only by the Government although it is our Government. You should either achieve success in your mission or die in the attempt.¹

[From Urdu]

Gandhiike Dukhe Dilki Pakar — II, pp. 13-6

162. TALK WITH VILLAGE REPRESENTATIVES

BIR,
March 19, 1947

Great care should be taken while constituting the panchayats, otherwise gangsters may get into them. The British Government by appointing revenue and police functionaries for every village has

¹ According to Mahatma Gandhi — The Last Phase, Gandhiji was visibly agitated. In a low, impassioned voice he shared his anguish with Badshah Khan, who sat listening with a grave face. Soon Badshah Khan also left and only one of Gandhiji’s secretaries remained in the room. Sadly Gandhiji turned to him and remarked: “You see where I stand!”

² Shah Uzair Munimi had reported that, from among the representatives, an eleven-member committee had been formed and it had agreed to ameliorate the conditions in the six affected circles as also to form volunteer corps and panchayats.
strengthened the hands of the goondas. This has undermined the inguity of the village panchayats. While exercising centralized cpower over the country, the British Government has polluted the atmosphere in the villages. The petty village officials have become masters instead of being servants. So great care has to be taken to ensuring that these gangster elements do not get into the panchayats. It will be a good procedure to elect the panchayat by ballot. Let everyone secretly write on blank pieces of paper five names of persons whom he or she may like to form the panchayat. The first five persons who get the maximum votes should be elected to the panchayat.

Those who have committed murders and taken part in riots, or those who are suspected of such acts, should be debarred from membership of the panchayats. They should themselves keep out of these bodies. If we are not able to cultivate this spirit we shall not be able to do anything well. Even a government cannot function unless the people are organized. The committee that has been formed will wield real power and do some useful work if it works honestly.

At this stage, Gandhiji was asked: “Can those Congressmen who have allegations against them remain office bearers in the Congress?”

Suppose I am innocent but the Muslims suspect my bona fides and want me to stay out of it, I shall stay out but still I will continue to serve them. I shall advise even leaders like Jagat Babu and Murli Babu to keep out if they have been so accused. This is the convention in Britain too. If there is a false accusation against you even when you are absolutely innocent, you should keep out of any committee and continue to serve the Muslims. If you work in good faith, believe me, the Muslims who are suspicious today will give up their suspicion and cooperate with you.

There are many thugs in the Congress. Thugs are in the ascendancy everywhere today. Those Congressmen who are suspect should leave the Congress and serve the Muslims if they so choose.
But one should never carry a dagger in one’s sleeve while pretending to chant the name of Rama. Some people ask how any work can be done where there are a number of gangsters. The volunteers can tell the gangsters that they are not afraid of them and continue to work. If they say this and courageously go ahead with their work, no one dare displease them. We have to be brave and honest. Wherever there are goondas there are good people as well and they should tell the goondas that they would rather die than run away in the face of an attack. Today there are more goondas than honest people in a village.
The problem is how to remedy the situation.

[From Urdu]
Gandhijike Dukhe Dilki Pukar—II, pp. 17-8

163. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING
GORI AKHARHI,
March 19, 1947

I shall say after the prayers the few things that I wish to tell you.
Since there is some time yet for the prayers to commence, I wish it to be utilized for collecting money for the relief of afflicted Muslims.
We have committed a great sin by killing and robbing innocent
Muslims. We can do some atonement through such donations. Hence
I appeal to you to contribute your maximum.

After the prayers Gandhiji continued:
I have seen signboards put up at the prayer ground to indicate separate enclosures. Some of them are in English and some in Hindi. I was amazed to see the English boards. For whom are they written?
The newspaper correspondents are all Indians and they can read Hindi. Are the English signboards then intended for Badshah Khan?
Or did you think that I had stayed away from India for many years and had therefore been denationalized?

This is very objectionable. I am not an enemy of the English language or script. But I believe that a thing in the wrong place is ugly. I can be honoured only by being kept in my proper place.
Similar is the case with the English language and script. They are not appropriate for the Indian people. I have said it time and again, and I repeat it, that Hindustani alone can become the common language of all Indians. Neither Hindi nor Urdu can take that place. I do not claim to be proficient in Hindi; but I do understand Hindi well and to some extent Urdu also. I used to attempt conversation in Urdu with my friend Maulana Abdul Bari of Firangi Mahal, Lucknow and other friends; and even now I try to speak chaste and correct Urdu with Muslim friends.

Till all the Hindus and Muslims in our country willingly accept one language and one script, it is essential that we learn both Hindi and Urdu. Whether or not the Muslims learn Hindi and Devanagari, we must learn the Urdu language and script. At the moment we have also to atone for our crimes against the Muslims. Hence it is all the more necessary that we demonstrate our affection and sympathy for them by learning their language and script. From tomorrow onwards I wish to see signboards in Hindi and Urdu wherever I go. Brijkishore Babu and Rajendra Babu who accompanied me during those early days in Champaran normally used to write in Urdu only.

We should try our utmost to rehabilitate the Muslims who used to live in our neighbourhood. We should appeal to them to forget the past. We should bring them back to their homes. We should tell them that they can kill us if they want to, but must come back to their homes. The volunteers should become Khudai Khidmatgars. They should respectfully appeal to the people to follow the dictates of their religion which taught them that their outward behaviour should be in keeping with their conscience and that they should tread the path of truth. Those who have committed crimes should honestly confess them and atone for them. All those who have taken part in the riots are sinners and they should atone for their sins.

[Form Urdu]

Gandhijike Dukhe Di Ki Pukar—II, pp. 19-20

164. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

March 20, 1947

I would like you... to tell me what you can about the Punjab tragedy. I know nothing about it save what is allowed to appear in the Press which I thoroughly distrust. Nor am I in sympathy with what may be termed by the old expression of “hush hush policy”. It is amazing how the country is adopting almost the every measures which it criticized during the British administration. Of course, I know the reason behind it. It makes no appeal to me.

* * *

1 Literally, servants of God
2 Omissions in the letter are as in the source.
I have long intended to write to you asking you about the Working Committee resolution on the possible partition of the Punjab. I would like to know the reason behind it. I have to speak about it. I have done so in the absence of full facts with the greatest caution. Kripalani said in answer to a question in Madras that it was possible that the principle might be applied to Bengal also. I was asked by a Muslim Leaguer of note... if it was applicable to the Muslim-majority provinces, why it should not be so to a Congress-majority province like Bihar. I think I did not know the reason behind the Working Committee’s resolution, nor had I the opportunity. I could only give my own view which was against any partition based on communal grounds and the two-nation theory. Anything was possible by compulsion. But willing consent required an appeal to reason and heart. Compulsion or show of it had no place in voluntariness.

165. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

MASAURHI,
March 20, 1947

You know I have returned after a two days’ stay at Bir. I could see within these two days the damage wrought by us. Today also I saw a village which had been deserted, and where a large number of women and children had been killed. I cannot narrate the whole story,

1 Passed at its meeting held in New Delhi on March 6, 7 and 8. For the text of the resolution, vide “Congress Working Committee’s Resolution on the Punjab”

2 The addressee on March 25, replied, “About our proposal to divide the Punjab, this flows naturally from our previous decisions. These were negative previously, but now a time for decision has come and mere passing of resolutions giving expression to our views meant little. I feel convinced and so did most of the members of the Working Committee that we must press for this immediate division so that reality might be brought into the picture. Indeed this is the only answer to partition as demanded by Jinnah. I found people in the Punjab agreeable to this proposal except Muslims as a rule. For the present it means an administrative decision without any change in law.”

3 Gandhiji had visited Andari and Garriakhari the previous day. Out of 168 there was not a single Muslim in Andari. At Garriakhari out of 400 Muslims 119 were killed, 11 injured and 12 were missing. The houses were all in ruins.

4 Harla
because my heart is so full that I might burst into tears if I tried to tell it. One who wants to see things for himself can still go there. We have not been able to do anything by way of reparations during all these months. The devastated villages continue to wear a deserted look. Even now thieves and dacoits haunt the place and carry away goods since no Muslim stays there. And how can the Muslims stay at a place where their brothers and sisters, parents and children have been slaughtered? The mere memory of the massacre will stun them. I myself, perhaps, could not have stayed there. You might argue that the Government should rebuild or repair the damaged houses. But I ask you, ‘Did you seek permission from the Government, when you resorted to murder, loot and arson?’ You have to atone for the sins, not the Government, because, after all, the Government is your own and not imported from England.

If you rebuild Muslim houses and clean up their villages, they may think of returning to their homes in the confidence that Hindus had become their brothers, forgetting and forgiving the death of their relatives, who, after all, had to die one day or other. But this can happen only if you rebuild their houses with your own hands, clean their wells, sink new wells to replace the old ones filled with corpses of massacred Muslims. Muslims will trust you only when you do all this; and then they will return to their villages on their own. I appeal to every Hindu brother and sister to participate personally in undoing the damage. Those who are convinced that this is their duty should enter their names in the list with me or with Mridulabehn. Those who cannot come to me here or at Patna, should send their names by post. Much work remains to be done at Masaurhi too. You should render service wherever necessary, preferably in your own neighbourhood. There is no need for outsiders to come over to Masaurhi for the work of resettlement. Put up beautiful houses in place of the debris so that one who looks at them will hardly believe what ruins were there. When you do this it is bound to influence the other provinces too and its fragrance will spread all over India.

I would request you not to think of celebrating a Punjab Day. Never make the mistake of avenging the Punjab in Bihar. Just as the Muslims here are in panic, so are the Hindus trembling in fear in Noakhali at the talk of a Pakistan Day. I wish to reach the ears of Janab Suhrawardy Saheb, the Chief Minister of Bengal. I wish to remind him that he had called upon me, as a Hindu, to go to Bihar where Hindus had perpetrated many atrocities, and that I came to Bihar at his bidding. The Hindus here have indeed committed many sins which need to be atoned for. I am myself undergoing penance. That is why I am here in Bihar although I have many tasks awaiting me at Sevagram, and in Delhi. If Suhrawardy Saheb wishes that I should remain in Bihar, he should prevent the observance of a Pakistan Day in Bengal. I do not want to prevent the Muslims from demanding Pakistan; but they should do so by explaining the advantages of Pakistan. Even if they want to observe a Pakistan Day, they should do so by convincing the Hindus so that they don’t get nervous.

Hindus have been writing to me and confessing their guilt. I am also receiving letters written by Hindus and Muslims that because of the fraternal feeling there had been perfect peace in their villages and that they will never turn into each other’s enemies. Such sentiments make me happy. I am also happy that people are contributing generously for the relief of afflicted Muslims. But now I would appeal to you to donate not merely money but also your own hard labour; take up the trowel and get down to reconstructing the homes of Muslims which you have destroyed.

[From Urdu]

Gandhijike Dukhe Dilki Pukar—II, pp. 19-20
166. TELEGRAM TO H. S. SUHRAWDY

Confidential

CHIEF MINISTER, BENGAL.

March 20, 1947

KHADI PRATISTHAN REPORTS THAT CASES ARSON
LOOT ETCETERA INCREASING, FURTHER STATES THAT IT IS RUMOURED THAT 22ND INSTANT TO BE OBSERVED AS PAKISTAN DAY AND THIS HAS CREATED CONSTERNATION. I EXPECT RUMOUR BASELESS.
I HAVE MADE PUBLIC APPEAL ALSO AT THIS EVENING’S PRAYER MEETING. I SUGGEST YOUR PERSONAL ATTENTION AND COMING IN TOUCH WITH SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA. I AM PLUNGED INTO THE WORK HERE, THEREFORE DO NOT WANT RUSH
NOAKHALI AND EXPECT YOU TO ACT NOBLY AND CORRECTLY.¹

GANDHI

From a Photostat: G. N. 8967

167. LETTER TO SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA

PATNA,
March 19/20, 1947

CHI. SATIS BABU,

I must dictate this to save time. The dictation can only be in English because Rangaswamy is not an efficient Hindustani writer.

The first thing is to give you the sad news that Nirmal Babu abruptly left yesterday. He had prepared me for the news two days ago. He was wanted by his University. He had some private work too.
And so he was to leave. But he suddenly took it into his head to leave yesterday. I had not the heart to detain him against his will and to come between him and what he thought was his dharma at the time.

¹ “The addressee in response to this “issued orders prohibiting the holding of ‘open air meetings, demonstrations and processions’ in areas in which prohibitory orders were already in force and sent one of his colleagues to Noakhali to restore confidence.”

² From the reference to the telegram to Suhrawardy in the post-script it appears the letter was completed and despatched on March 20; vide the preceding item.
Kakasaheb wrote to me three days ago that he would like me to have Bisen by my side. I was thinking what to do and though I know that he could not in any way be a substitute for Nirmal Babu the latter’s absence has made me come to a hurried decision that if Bisen is not wanted by you he should join me. He is a handy man who knows Gujarati as well as his mother tongue. He is a willing worker. So if you can spare him and he wants to come you can send him. Let him go to Patna and report himself at Dr. Mahmud’s place. I sent you a telegram today about sending Bisen here.²

I am here touring in Patna district and looking at the awful scenes of destruction wrought by human beings gone mad. I had hoped that I would be able at the outside, in a fortnight, to go back to Noakhali and its velvety earth and soft grass. I very much fear that I must now do Noakhali work from here as I had flattered myself while in Noakhali that I was also doing Bihar work. Having come here I see how vitally necessary it was for me to come. I do not know that I won’t have to undertake a pilgrimage on foot here also. Probably I shall not be able to do so on foot. But everything is in the lap of God.

It is quite clear to me that whatever be my fate you should all, including the Sevagram party, stick to your posts.

How is Sardar Jivan Singhji shaping himself?

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.] I had your wire. I have sent a wire to Suhrawardy.¹ Sent . . . ² also a wire.

SHREE SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA
KAZIRKHIL
RAMGANJ P. S.
NOAKHALI

From a photostat: G. N. 8966

¹ D. B. Kalelkar (1885-1981) ; Educationist, litterateur and a close associate of Gandhiji ; Vice-Chancellor of Gujarat Vidyapith, 1928-36; Principal, Gujarat National College; President, Hindustani Prachar Sabha.
² Vide “Telegram to Satis chandra Das Gupta”, 19-3-1947
³ Vide the preceding item.
⁴ Illegible in the source
168. \textit{FROM THE DIARY} \\
\textsc{Masaurhi}, \textit{March 20, 1947} \\
It was 1 a.m. when Manudi completed counting the money. She should have gone to bed soon after the collection. She could have written the \textit{shlokas} some other time. Or, I should relieve her of some of my work. It distresses me very much that she is not getting enough sleep. I wonder what I should do about it. Let her tell me if she can think of something. She can help me a lot in this matter if she wishes to. But she is unwilling to free herself from any work whatever. The collection was a thousand.

[From Gujarati]

\textit{Biharni Komi Agman}, p. 80

169. \textit{LETTER TO SIR HUGH DOW} \\
\textsc{Patna}, \textit{March 21, 1947} \\
DEAR FRIEND, \\
I have your three letters for all of which I thank you. As you know at present I am touring in the affected parts of Bihar. But I shall bear in mind your kind offer about making use of your beautiful garden to rest a little from the din and noise that surround me.

The word “bureaucrat” was used\footnote{\textit{Vide “Letter to Sir Hugh Dow”, 17-3-1947}} by me in its original sense. You do not represent autocracy. Certainly not democracy. But, as I hold, you essentially represent bureaucracy. Several English friends, some holding as high a place as you do, told me frankly that, representing as they did a big corporation of bureaucrats, they were unable to give effect to the full man in them. With this thought at the back of my mind I could not help admiring your remark that experience had taught you that after all the true reformer must begin with himself.

\footnote{\textit{Vide “Letter to Sir Hugh Dow”, 17-3-1947}}

In his reply dated March 22, the addressee about this said: “I suppose, I am a bureaucrat in the sense used by you: it is not a term that I resent. The complexity of modern life ties most rulers to their desks more than they like, and this must be true even of yourself. But I look forward to the early day when neither half of this word will have much application to me.”
As to the rest of your letter of March 17 which you were kind enough to send so promptly, I gladly accept your correction and the presentation of your position. I am hoping that something will come out of this frank interchange of views.

I got your letter of the 18th instant only this morning. It was delivered some time yesterday. But it came into my hands only today. The note referred to in your letter to the Prime Minister of Bihar has not yet come into my hands. I suppose it will be received by me tomorrow when I hope to reach Patna if I do not receive it earlier.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

H. E. SIR HUGH DOW
GOVERNOR OF BIHAR
PATNA

Gandhiji’s Correspondence with the Government, 1944-47, pp. 233-4.

170. LETTER TO H. S. SUHRAWARDY

March 21, 1947

DEAR SUHRAWARDY,

Pardon the somewhat familiar style. I hope you got my wire yesterday and that there was no justification for the fears expressed to me. I have a right to expect you to act on the square. The heart is too full to enable me to say more.

I am just now in a little village in the devastated area.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G. N. 8968

1 Vide “Letter from Sir Hugh Dow”, 17-3-1947
2 The addressee had prepared a note on the plight of child labour in mica factories, a topic which had cropped up during his talk with Gandhiji. The note said that the Bihar Government had recommended strict enforcement of the Employment of children (Amendment) Act of 1939, and that “in no circumstances should children below the age of twelve be employed in mica factories.”

1 Vide “Telegram to H. S. Suhrawardy”, 20-3-1947
HANSDIH,
March 21, 1947

I have been constantly trying to make everyone understand that they should give up fear. There is no fear in my heart and I advise you to fear no one but God. But how can people go and stay in houses which have been burnt or destroyed? I shall be glad if the Government builds houses for them or advances money for the purpose. When a man turns into a devil, he is neither a Hindu nor a Muslim.

I do not know what arrangement has been made regarding rations. I believe it should not cause anyone any inconvenience. People should remove every trace of fear from their hearts. Who can protect man better than God? We should have full faith in Him and muster up courage. He is not brave who perpetrates atrocities. That man is brave who boldly faces any calamity. I wish to reassure you. I have been unequivocally saying that any Hindu who harms or as much as touches a Muslim, would be causing my death. I am going everywhere. Patna district has been the worst-affected. Hence it may take a little more time. Subsequently I shall tour other districts; but I shall not go out of Bihar. Badshah Khan had planned to go to the Frontier, but he has postponed his departure and will remain here for some time. He believes that the climate all over India will improve if Bihar improves its ways. Shah Nawaz Saheb has also arrived. His presence will be a great help. Mridulabehn has been accompanying me. She may go to Delhi for a couple of days, but will return immediately. She is working very hard, and she does not discriminate between a Hindu and a Muslim.

I have thrown in my lot with you here. I do not get time even to read the newspapers. Friends read out some news to me. I have written to Pandit Nehru and sought information about the general conditions. From what we hear, neither the Punjab nor Noakhali is yet entirely peaceful. But I shall stay on in Bihar till you are satisfied and until Hindus and Muslims on their own reassure me and tell me that I can leave without any anxiety.

1 Who had come to meet Gandhiji from the neighbouring villages.
2 Shah Nawaz Khan of the Indian National Army
3 Vide “Letter to Jawaharlal Nehru”, 20-3-1947
Only tents have been erected at Masaurhi; the camp will start functioning soon. But it would be better if you built your own houses, because the whole atmosphere is reeking with corruption and black-marketing and the contractors are after unlawful gains. You should therefore try to build your own houses. I have been calling upon Hindus to help Muslims in every possible way, by cleaning their houses, streets, and removing the debris. I am going to make the same appeal to Hindu Congressmen and representatives of villages today.

[From Urdu]

Gandhijike Dukhe Dilki Pukar—II, pp. 24-5

172. TALK WITH VILLAGE REPRESENTATIVES

HANSDIH,
March 21, 1947

Q. Is it [not] difficult to stop riots so long as the system of zamindari continues? The landlords are the persons who incite riots and will continue to do so.

A. I think it is foolish to connect riots with zamindari. The problem of zamindari is very old. How is it rational to kill Muslims to solve that problem? And many of the zamindars are themselves Hindus. The Maharaja of Darbhanga is a very big zamindar. Should he and his wife be killed? I am very friendly with him. He respects me like a father because his late father was a good friend of mine. A Hindu zamindar from North Bihar has promised to provide land to the Muslims. It is not proper to link the problem of Hindu-Muslim riots with the zamindari system. The latter is an altogether different problem and we have to consider ways and means of abolishing the system.

Then Gandhiji was informed of the talk that the property lost by the Muslims here would be restored to them only when what was lost by the Hindus in Noakhali and the Punjab was restored to them. There would be friendship only when cases in Bihar as well as in Bengal were withdrawn simultaneously.

Has the time arrived when the Muslims in Bihar must obey the dictates of Hindus? Must they stop going into mosques or reciting the Koran if Hindus prohibit it? No one has yet shown the courage to say this. But the demand that Muslims should live at the mercy of Hindus

1 The meeting was held at 2.30 p.m.
boils down to this. Those who are demanding Pakistan also seem to think on these lines. I ask those who see no harm in imitating the Punjab and Bengal whether Hindus should also turn ruffians if Muslims choose to do so. After all, how should a Hindu devoted to ahimsa or brahmacharya carry himself? I do not intend to suggest that nothing untoward happened in Noakhali. But there women, children and old persons were not murdered the way it happened here, nor was it on such a large scale. As it is Satis Babu has again invited me to Noakhali. But I think if I have to die in the attempt to restore communal harmony, it is better to die here than in Noakhali.

Nor is it right to demand withdrawal of prosecutions. Our non-violent methods are altogether different, but the Governments functioning today are based on the theory of punishment. Why then should they not arrest and punish the culprits? If the culprits in Noakhali are not being arrested, it is the fault of the Government there, which is not following the tenets of Islam. If the present trends continue there, Bengal will not become free, nor will Muslims there be free. Your proportion in the population is much greater here. In Bengal, the proportion of Muslims to Hindus is 51 to 49. Here, only 12 persons in 100 are Muslims. What sort of bravery is it to kill the 12? The Ramayana says that even a dog should be given a hearing. Rama abandoned Sita in response to the argument of a washerwoman. Devotees of the Ramayana ought to fall at the feet of every guilty person and appeal to him to come forward and confess his crime. When he pleads guilty and repents or atones for it or begs to be given due punishment for his crime, we may then let him go with a mild chastisement in view of his honest penitence.

I wish to give vent to the fire that is raging within me in the course of my answers to your questions. Why should we behave in this manner? Neither you nor I have a correct picture of what is happening in the Punjab. Anyway, whatever it may be, it is indeed deplorable. But we have to keep our houses clean. We need not make our houses filthy because another person fills his house with filth. If you [do not] act according [to my advice], remember you will be sorry for it. You will regret that you did not listen to this old man’s advice. There are people, I know, who say that Muslims are like serpents and that just as we would kill a snake we should also kill Muslim women and children along with their menfolk. I tell you such people are mad. They are not Hindus; they do not know what is Hinduism. There are similar fanatics among Muslims too; but they are not true Muslims. In the beginning the protagonists of Pakistan used to insist that Hindus in their region would have to live like Muslims. But now they concede that minorities will have to be protected. I remind you again that those who hurt Muslims will be hurting me. I am camping here simply to put an end to this fratricide or die in the effort.

Q. What should we do if Muslims do not trust us even when we reassure them?

A. If you speak to them earnestly and reassure them, they will certainly come, because no one likes to leave his home on his own. Give us the names of the villages whose Muslim residents are not ready to return to their homes in spite of assurances from the Hindus so that we may trace those people and persuade them to return to their villages.

[From Urdu]

Gandhijike Dukhe Dilki Pakar-II, pp. 26-8

173. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

CHORHUAN,
March 21, 1947

I wish that those who have assembled here would think of the damage done and the number of men, women and children brutally done to death in this village, and sit in mournful silence in memory of the deceased. This will do you good. You will consider for yourselves why those who committed these crimes did so. Was it to save their religion? I would rather say that they did not thereby save any religion but harmed it. No religion teaches anyone to kill his neighbours. Righteous wars do take place, but I do not approve of them either. In the Bhagavadgita, too, oppressors and tyrants were resisted in a righteous war. It is the work of ruffians to kill innocent children and blameless men and women. A marauder wreaks destruction on others out of selfishness or ignorance. Whatever has happened here is, in my opinion, the work of oppressors and barbarians. Many houses have been burnt down and many others have been reduced to debris. The houses which a few months ago were full of life, are now desolate.
Why we turned into such barbarians will be revealed only in future. But the immediate problem is what you should do next. It is the duty of all men and women, I think, to clean the ruined houses and make them neat and habitable. We can always render some service, however poor we may be. Mere bathing in the Ganga does not wash away our sins. We should undertake honest cleansing. We can keep our bodies clean by bathing in clean water. But all men and women should cleanse themselves in every other way also. They should render all service honorarily and in a spirit of expiation. Did those who committed arson do it for any payment? We must wipe out the stains of their demoniac deeds with the water of human kindness. You should go to the Muslim brethren and tell them to forget the past, that it will never be repeated and persuade them to return and live peacefully as before. Tell them that their misery is your misery, that you are their brothers, that both Hindus and Muslims are sons of the same soil, both eat and drink from the same source and breathe the same air, hence there should be no ill will between them. Tell them that you will not get any peace of mind until they return to their homes. It is possible that the Muslims may turn round and ask how they can go back and live in the houses where their kith and kin have been done to death. They will be justified in saying so. But if the guilty persons go to the Muslims with truly penitent hearts, I am sure, they will be persuaded. Human hearts melt before love. When the murderers themselves go to them in sackcloth and ashes and promise them never to repeat such deeds, even a stony heart will melt.

You should not depend on the Government to do this work. The Government will of course lend a hand. But it is mainly your task. The Government can give you tools and materials; but the cleaning has to be done by you.

Amidst this mad upheaval there were some Hindus, like oases in a desert, who risked the wrath of the violent mobs and saved the lives of many Muslims and gave them shelter. They deserve congratulations though they do not need any. They have done their duty and acquired punya. Punya contains all congratulations. Since we have become strangers to human sentiments these days, we are impelled to congratulate any evidence of human love. Those who gave shelter to Muslims did not do so from any selfish motives. If I have not gone to meet them, let them not think that I have no regard or respect for them. I would love to meet them and know how they saved the lives of Muslims. I have been unable to go to them in spite of my admiration because I have come here like a physician who goes only to those who are suffering. I have come to lighten the sufferings of Muslims in Bihar.

\(^1\)Merit acquired from good acts.

I have been told that the Hindus have also suffered in the riots at some places. If there are any such Hindus, they too will be given relief. But I pay more attention to Muslims because there are quite a few of them here who are willing to help the Hindus.

I have been told that about fifty persons, who were wanted in connection with riot cases, surrendered themselves the day after my arrival at Masaurhi. I welcome this and hope that others who had taken part in the riots will also surrender to the appropriate authorities, making a clean breast of the crimes they had committed and taking whatever punishment might be given to them. If they do not have the courage to surrender to the authorities, let them come to me or to Badshah Khan or to Major-General Shah Nawaz with their confessions.

A friend from Bengal had recently come to me and told me that the Hindus in Noakhali are apprehensive about the preparations being made by the Muslims to observe the Pakistan Day and wish that I should return to Noakhali. I have asked the friend to return to Bengal without insisting on my going there. I am doing the same work here that I was doing in Bengal. If the Hindus in Bihar become honest and convince the Muslims that no harm will be done to them and if Muslims too do not want to take revenge in view of the Hindus’ promise to look after them well, it will have its effect on the whole of India. As a result of this Muslims in Noakhali may also assure Hindus of their safety. There is no question of abandoning my post of duty till the Hindus and Muslims from both these regions assure me that they do not need my services. The Muslims of Bihar and the Hindus of Bengal should accept me as security for the safety of their lives and property. I shall suffer if they are made to suffer in any way.

I have repeatedly said that I have come here to do or die. If communal peace is not established, I shall pray to God to hasten my end, because, in that event, I shall not be in a position to serve anyone.

[From Urdu]

Gandhijiye Dukhe Dilki Pukar—II, pp. 29-32

1 According to Harijan, from Khadi Pratishthan
174. LETTER TO H. S. SUHRAWARDY

PATNA,
March 22, 1947

I have seen your press note\(^1\) and I am glad that you had anticipated my request to you. I must confess that it does not give me much satisfaction. May we hold Pakistan Day celebration meetings in parts of Bengal where Section 144, Criminal Procedure Code is not in action or where there is no other prohibitory order? And if meetings can be held indoors, are they not likely to be far more dangerous than public meetings?

I hope you got my note\(^2\) sent you through Arunanshu Babu last night.

H. S. SUHRAWARDY SAHIB
PRIME MINISTER
BENGAL
CALCUTTA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

175. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

PATNA,
March 22, 1947

CHI. AMRIT,

This is a mere love letter. Mridula asked me if I did not want to write to you and I at once said of course, I do. Hence this note.

How are you now? Tell me all you can about the Punjab.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C. W. 4191. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 7827

\(^1\) For the press note, vide footnote on “Telegram to H. S. Suhrwardy”, 20-3-1947

\(^2\) Vide “Letter to H. S. Suhrwardy”, 21-3-1947
176. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

PATNA,
March 22, 1947

CHI. VALLABHBHAI,

If you can, please explain your resolution1 about the Punjab. I cannot form any judgement.

I trust you are well.2

Blessings from
BAPU

[ From Gujarati ]

177. TALK WITH WOMEN REFUGEES

PIPALWAN,
March 22, 1947

I am sad as well as glad to meet you all. There are many sisters here whose husbands, sons and relations have been killed. Their tragic tales make me sad. I was very glad to hear that the S. D. O. acted very promptly and prudently to prevent riots here, and that refugees from other places were given shelter here. Hindus from this place have written to me saying that they did not participate at all in the riots.

I have seen with my own eyes how much people have suffered because of the riots. I have seen houses which were burnt or looted, and I was told that the residents had been killed. The aggrieved people, the people whose houses have been destroyed, wish to resettle

1 Vide “Congress Working Committee’s Resolution on the Punjab”
2 On March 24, the addressee replied: It is difficult to explain to you the resolution about the Punjab. If was adopted after the deepest deliberation. Nothing has been done in a hurry or without full thought. That you had expressed your views against it, we learnt only from the papers. But you are, of course, entitled to say what you feel right. The situation in the Punjab is far worse than in Bihar . . . . The military has taken over control. As a result, on the surface things seem to have quietened down somewhat. But no one can say when there may be a flare-up again. If that happens, I am afraid, even Delhi will not remain unaffected. But here of course we shall be able to deal with it.
3 While returning to Patna Gandhiji met some Muslim women refugees at Pipalwan in the morning.
at some other place. Personally, I do not approve of this. Why should we lose heart? We should keep up courage. The Hindus have committed a sin. What have they gained thereby? You do not trust them. But if their hearts are cleansed, if they clean your houses, if they build new houses for you and if they sincerely atone for their sins, why should you then not return to your homes? True bravery on the part of Hindus consists in confessing their guilt and changing their hearts. I shall be only too glad if they do this.

People should return to the houses where there had been no killing. If the residents don’t feel like going to murder-haunted houses they may shift to another place. It would be good if lands can be exchanged by mutual consent. It may not be possible for the Government to arrange such transfers. In any case whether they return to their own villages or shift to some other place, Muslim brothers and sisters should eschew all anger and bear no ill will towards Hindus. You should not think of taking revenge against those who have oppressed you. That is true bravery.

How transitory is this life? Everyone has to die one day. It is difficult to comprehend the ways of God. Is there any place where He is not present? Some people hold God responsible for whatever has happened. Who can understand His ways? God cannot be talked about disparagingly. Why should we, then, blame Him for these happenings? I do not wish to hear such talk from the lips of those who recite the kalma. In fact, no one should even speak in this vein.

I wish to reassure all of you that I am wandering from place to place to prevent a repetition of what has happened so that Hindus and Muslims may live like brothers. I shall stay and strive here as long as hearts are not cleansed and fraternal feelings are not revived. I shall do or die; I shall either succeed in my mission or perish in the effort.

[ From Urdu ]

_Gandhiyake Dukhe Dilki Pakar_—II, pp. 33-4
178. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

PATNA,
March 22, 1947

I have returned to Patna today after a five-day tour. You would have learnt from newspapers where I went and what I said. I liked the attitude of the villagers. They are genuinely penitent. Liberal contributions are being made by them for the relief of their Muslim brethren. I was very happy to see this. Many persons have also written to me that they will not misbehave again.

In a number of places, Gandhiji said, due to the bravery of the local Hindus, no incidents had occurred. He was told by the Muslims themselves that in Dinapore Sub-division no trouble occurred though the Muslims were greatly nervous.

Gandhiji said that he had addressed the Muslim women refugees in the morning at Pipalwan.\(^2\) He did not wish at present to enter into a description of the feelings of these women and their present condition. His heart was too heavy and he did not wish to shed tears. He only wanted to tell them how to repent. He tried as best as he could to console them and persuade them to pick up courage and return to their villages, placing reliance on God. At this meeting he was told that Muslim women and men dreaded the approach of March 22, as it had been reported that Punjab Day would be observed in Bihar on that date. He had told them that the Bihar Government had banned the observance of any kind of day, be it Pakistan Day or Punjab Day. The Minister who was present also gave the assurance that no celebration of any kind would be permitted and that the ban would be strictly enforced throughout the province. The Bihar Government, Gandhiji said, had banned the \textit{kisan} rally also.

It is a different thing that the rally should not have been tarred with the same brush. But the situation is very delicate today. Our people’s hearts are not clean. Hence even a \textit{kisan} rally should be abandoned. I shall appeal to the people concerned not to celebrate either a Punjab Day or a Pakistan Day. The Ministers have issued the order after much deliberation; hence the order must be obeyed. If one wishes to disobey a law as a satyagrahi, one can do so. When we have the voting right we can remove the Ministers if we do not approve of their policies. But so long as they are in authority, we must carry out

\(^1\) The Urdu version has been collated with the report in \textit{Harijan} published under “Gandhiji’s Bihar Tour Diary”.

\(^2\) \textit{Vide} the preceding item.
their orders.

A true satyagrahi should implicitly obey the directions of those he had himself put in power. What Gandhiji said did not refer only to March 22. It applied to the future also and at no time should these celebrations be indulged in, so long as the atmosphere remained as it was that day.

There is a conflagration in every quarter today. A kisan rally is not advisable in these circumstances. You can write to the Government about the difficulties you are facing. You can agitate through newspapers. Rallies are intended to awaken the kisans and to organize the people. I have been leading such activities for the past sixty years and am quite an expert in these matters. Conditions today are not conducive for such activities. The Gita speaks of action in inaction and inaction in action.\(^1\) If I apply this to the present-day context, it means we can do a lot of good by keeping quiet. We should discriminate between dharma and adharma. There are occasions when keeping away from adharma becomes the dharma. It is no doubt our duty to awaken the kisans. But this is not the time for it. It is the duty of every Hindu to follow the teachings of the Gita, although anyone in the world can derive benefit from the Gita. No one can say that we should repeat the same action in season and out of season. We are subserving our waking hours even when we sleep; but if we go on sleeping all the time we will be as good as dead. This only means that every action has its appropriate time. Desisting from an inopportune action is as good as timely action.

The 22nd March has passed off peacefully. It is a good thing. We should now forget all about it. We don’t have to celebrate a Punjab Day or a Pakistan Day. These days are intended only to make us fight. But our Muslim brothers here do not wish to fight. Why should we then celebrate a Punjab Day?

I concede that a kisan rally stands on a different footing. But the times are not propitious even for a kisan rally. Every action should be undertaken at an appropriate time. This is an occasion for penitence. We should first atone for our sins. It is part of the atonement to realize that the atrocities committed on Muslim brothers and sisters constitute grave sins. If we are convinced that the Hindu heart has been cleansed through such atonement, then we can organize a kisan rally.

\(^1\) IV. 18
Major-General Shah Nawaz Khan has arrived here. Badshah Khan who intended to leave, has postponed his departure. A scheme is being prepared to rehabilitate the Muslims who have suffered at our hands. Every Hindu brother and sister should go to villages and put in hard labour, not for the sake of wages but in a spirit of service. We should clean up Muslim villages and rebuild their houses to convince them that once again we have become their brothers although for a time we had gone berserk.

Some officials have informed me that about fifty persons have confessed their crimes. They have admitted that they are guilty. They are prepared to undergo any punishment meted out to them. This is a welcome development. But thousands have committed such crimes. All these thousands should confess their crimes. Then the Muslims will not be in a position to say that the criminals have not been arrested. Whoever has committed a crime should frankly say that earlier he was afraid of prosecution, but having made a confession he is now prepared to undergo any punishment. This would not only enhance their own prestige but also that of Bihar as a whole.

_Gandhijike Dukhe Dilki Pukar—II, pp. 35-7, and Harijan, 6-4-1947_

179. LETTER TO SHIV BALAK BISEN

_March 23, 1947_

CHI. BISEN,

Your letter was frank. That your views about the Ashram inmates are not correct does not matter. As for your desire to stay with me, we shall think about it when I return there. I cannot decide just now. Normally I would have welcomed your services, but at present I have to consider what [my] dharma is. We are going to meet before long, aren’t we?

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 7726
180. LETTER TO JAISUKHLAL GANDHI

March 23, 1947

CHI. JAISUKHLAL,

The reply you gave to Narandas is perfectly correct. I have written to him, too.

You need not worry about Manu at all. She is still forgetful, of course, and indifferent about herself. I have explained to her that those who are free from all impure feelings or desires are indifferent about nothing, nor do they forget things. She understands this, but is unable to act upon it.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M. M. U/III

181. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

PATNA,
March 23, 1947

CHI. BRIJKRISHNA,

I read both your letters and gave them to Khan Saheb for reading. He says he is watchful and will go when it is necessary. If I ask him to go he is ready to leave today. But I do not feel the need for it. Your anxiety is meaningless. You must have received my previous letter.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 2504
182. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

PATNA,
March 23, 1947

CHI. BRIJKRISHNA,

After sending a letter today I received your letter of the 20th and also the paper cuttings.

If you have stopped Dubeji’s treatment, my advice is that you should go to the Nature Cure clinic in Calcutta. You can come over here to see me. You can come wherever I am or come after my third tour.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 2503

183. DISCUSSION WITH WOMEN WORKERS

PATNA,
March 23, 1947

QUESTION: Can women take part in politics while they are working in the Kasturba Memorial Fund?

GANDHIJI: This question can be answered in two ways: they can and cannot take part in politics. If they want to serve, they should not take part in politics. There is Congress rule in the country at present (it may be socialism or communism in future). Now, supposing it is necessary to sell spinning-wheels or khadi for the sake of propaganda in the villages, women can take part in such activities. But supposing the intentions of the Congress go wrong and instead of khadi it wants to sell liquor in the villages, the sevikas would certainly not take part in such an activity. Rather, they would start a satyagraha campaign against it if it became necessary. Women can take part in any activity which is in the interest of the country irrespective of the ‘ism’ of the ruling party.

1 Vide the preceding item.
2 Of the Kasturba Gandhi National Memorial Fund who met Gandhiji at 4 p.m.
3 Women workers
Q. When we raise slogans in the villages the Muslims do not join us. What should be done about it?

G. You must keep quiet and try to persuade them. If they still do not come forward, you must give up raising slogans. As for me, I do not give importance to slogans any more. People have been stabbed while cries of Bharatmataki jai and Gandhijiki jai were being raised. That is why slogans have become so repugnant. It is easy to understand such feelings.

Q. Women do not still seem to give up untouchability and purdah. What should we do?

G. If they do not give them up they must be persuaded to do so. You must carry on your work. You should not worry about the results. Those who want to serve should continue to work more and ever more, and firmly hold on the truth.

A. HARIJAN WOMAN: Nobody is willing to sit by my side. What should I do?

G. (Smiling): There are so many women sitting around you. You must forget that you are a Harijan. Things would automatically smoothen out if you do that.

[From Gujarati]

Biharni Komi Agman, pp. 89-90

184. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

PATNA,
March 23, 1947

BROTHERS AND SISTERS,

I request you and those others whom my voice could reach to understand the aim of life. The sole purpose of life is that we should serve the creation of the Power which has created us and on whose mercy or, say, kindness, depends out very breath. Let us not destroy this creation. But today, in our arrogance we have either lost sight of this cause or we tend to forget it and are either fighting each other or preparing to do so. If we cannot avoid this calamity, you may be sure that India’s independence is an impossibility. If you think you can achieve independence by the simple fact of the British quitting the land, you are sadly mistaken. If we continue to fight amongst ourselves even after their departure some other power would step in. To think that we can fight the world with its own weapons is like expecting a barren woman to give birth to a child.

1 As Gandhiji was observing silence his written speech was read out at the meeting held at the Bankipur Maidan.

A friend has written that a semblance of peace appears to have been established in the Punjab. But this peace and tranquillity has come through military occupation. Everyone is preparing openly for a fight and is busy collecting arms. If these preparations continue the peace established through the army or the police will ultimately turn out to be the peace of the grave. Real peace will come about only when one party at least silently adopts the course of true bravery. Bihar has realized through its own experience that there can be no bravery in killing women and children, or old and innocent people, that it is sheer cowardice. What a grand thing it would be if Bihar could show the real power of non-violent bravery and thus guide India and the whole world on the path of true life.¹

[ From Urdu ]

Gandhijike Dukhe Dilki Pukar—II, pp. 38-9

185. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

PATNA,
March 23, 1947

CHI. AMRIT,

I sent a love note¹ yesterday thro[ugh] Mridula. I have yours of 21st.

When I get the time to write, your letters are not before me. Hence the omissions.

Tell me whether you have the dictionaries² you wanted.

I fancy that I wrote¹ to you twice about paying me a brief visit but never at the sacrifice of your duty undertaken there. Mine may be regarded as a selfish wish. We shall exchange thoughts about it when the 4th April is on us.

I was satisfied with your answer about Aryanayakum.

¹ According to Harijan, at the end Gandhiji informed the audience that the prayer meeting on Monday would be held near Poonpoon.
² Vide “Letter to Amrit Kaur”, 22-3-1947
³ Vide “Letter to Amrit Kaur”, 22-2-1947
⁴ Vide “Letter to Amrit Kaur”, 18-3-1947
I think now I have answered all your questions, your letter was in front of me.

I have taken the Monday silence. It is now 6.10 [p.m.] when I finish this.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C. W. 4192. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 7828

186. LETTER TO JAIKRISHNA BHANSALI

March 23, 1947

CHI. BHANSALI,

I do not like the change in your diet. Even a person of self-control may not disregard nature’s laws. You cannot eat \textit{kodra}, \textit{banti}, etc. uncooked. You may, if you wish, make your food moderate or even abstemious. I should advise you to eat cooked \textit{kodra}, take a moderate quantity of milk and fruit and eat such green vegetables as can be eaten raw.

I think you should now stop going out. People are exploiting you.

According to me, your work is to keep a watch over the Ashram in a spirit of non-attachment. In any case it will do no good to take Pushpa out.\(^3\) She is still immature. She ought not to give up khadi work. Her knowledge is very imperfect. Explain all this to her. She must not visit Raju.

\textit{Blessings from}

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 10441. Courtesy: Munnalal G. Shah

187. LETTER TO PUSHPA K. DESAI

PATNA,

March 24, 1947

CHI. PUSHPA,

You feel tempted to go out with Bhansalibhai, but that is not proper. Your dharma lies in completing the khadi work and learning

\(^1\) Cereals
\(^2\) \textit{Ibid}
\(^3\) \textit{Vide} also the following item.
to see God in that work alone. You have a long way to go yet. You must learn to be steady in your mind. Do not think of going out anywhere.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 9278

188. LETTER TO CHIMANLAL N. SHAH

March 24, 1947

CHI. CHIMANLAL,

You are writing to Dev, but he cannot read Hindi with ease. Ultimately I have to strain myself. It would be better if you write in Gujarati. He finds it difficult to decipher your Nagari characters.

Bhansali may go [out], but Pushpa ought not to. Read what I have written to them.¹

I am surprised about Gomati.²

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10658

189. A LETTER³

PATNA,
March 24, 1947

I have not read your letter to . . . but I have read the reply. The reply seems correct to me. And so long as he has faith in me what else could he write? Moreover, there is no question of practising it just now. But where there is no pretence, is it not thought itself that matters most? And therefore what all of you have to consider is whether it is proper to remain with me if my thoughts are unconsciously impure. If they are so, all of you who have firmly stood by me should withdraw your co-operation. As far as I can see . . . agrees on this point. At least I hope so. Copies of the letters written to . . . must have been sent to ¹ Vide The preceding two items.

² Wife of Kishorelal G. Mashruwala
³ Omissions in the letter are as in the source.
all of you. Ask for the copies if you have not received them. Do not hesitate to write to me anything you may wish to write . . . is in a great dilemma. I have written him a letter and passed it on to . . . for posting . . . is very much perturbed. You had better meet and talk with him. The situation is such that no one can remain neutral. There can hardly be any scope for compromise when it is a matter of determining what is dharma and what is adharma.

[ For Gujarati ]

Biharni Komi Agman, pp. 91-2

190. LETTER TO SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA

PATNA,
March 24, 1947

CHI. SATIS BABU,

I find that it is difficult to leave Bihar. The work here seems to be easier than it was there. But it is difficult all the same. This much is clear that if I am able to do something here, it will have its impact everywhere. Think over it and send me your opinion.

Never give up the work in Noakhali even if you have to die.

Tell Sucheta' and Annada' if they have done anything against [your wishes]. I have received Dinlipi'.

Cholera must have completely subsided by now.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 8969

---

1 (1908-1975) ; wife of J. B. Kripalani ; Secretary, Kasturba Gandhi National Memorial Trust; Member Constituent Assembly; Chief Minister of U. P. in 1963

2 Annada Choudhary

3 A cyclostyled daily bulletin, issued by the Gandhi Camp in Noakhali for circulation among workers and friends
191. NOTE TO GLADYS OWEN

March 24, 1947

1. Dr. Gopichand is Gopichand Bhargava. Initials I do not know. I shall give you a letter. He is well known to everyone of note.

2. Answered above.

3. No reply necessary. You will feel your way when you reach there. Of course You should go quickly.

4. My confidence is a little shaken because I have begun to fear that I might not quickly reach the requisite state of detachment described in the Gita. Read if you care the last 18 verses of Chapter II of the Gita in Edwin Arnold’s translation. I become impatient and irritated. It is not conducive to a life of utter consecration without which a long life of 125 years is neither possible nor desirable.

5. I am not particular about your seeing anything here. You may go to Ramzanpur now. But I would like you to return to take my letter to Dr. G. and see what I write to Horace. This I may not do now. I must go to the massage table. But you should please yourself.

6. I shall write to Catlin and give him a date.

Note: Give me a copy of answer 4. If you go away now you may send a copy at leisure.

From a photostat: G.N. 6201

192. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

RAJGHAT,
March 24, 1947

It is well nigh impossible for me to say anything amid such noise. I can say something only when you are quiet. In the first place, I wish to address a few words to the men and women volunteers. I

1 The addressee, a Quaker educationist and teacher, explains: “On March 23, 1947, I went to Patna to see if there was anything Bapu wanted me to do and this is part of Bapu’s conversation with me on his silence day, March 24, 1947, when he asked me to go to . . . ”

2 (1889-1966); Chairman of Punjab Branch of Harijan Sevak Sangh; Chief Minister of Punjab, 1947-51

3 The Song Celestial

4 Vide “Letter to Horace Alexander”, 25-3-1947
have told them before also what they should do during the tours. It is the duty of women volunteers to guide women as to how they should sit and conduct themselves at public meetings. For this they should distribute leaflets beforehand and should read them out for their benefit. The men who are either standing or sitting are keeping quiet, but because the women are not quiet, they cannot also hear anything. In fact, it is not women alone who are to be blamed for this. They are over-worked, poor and illiterate. They behave as they are told by their menfolk. If we have to take work from them, we should make them understand things and educate them. It is the duty of the women volunteers first of all to tell women the rules to be observed at public meetings.

Today I saw a village\(^1\) where Hindus too have suffered losses. I had been asked earlier to visit that village. I realize the Hindus have suffered but that in no way mitigates their guilt. I did not visit the place with the thought of the Hindus who have suffered there. But that does not mean that I am hurt only at the loss of Muslims and that Hindus’ sufferings do not move me. I am equally pained at the sufferings of all persons. In the words of Sir Syed Ahmed Khan, founder of the Aligarh University, I would say that the Hindus and the Muslims are like the two eyes of Mother India. Just as the trouble in one eye afflicts the other too, similarly the whole of India suffers when either Hindus or Muslims suffer. If you realize this, I would think my purpose has been fulfilled.

[ From Urdu ]
Gandhijike Dukhe Dilki Pukar—II, p. 40

193. LETTER TO HORACE ALEXANDER

PATNA,
March 25, 1947

MY DEAR HORACE,

Gladys has given me your letter and I had a fairly long discussion\(^2\) with her as a result of which she has written to you a letter which I enclose herewith. She has gone to see the Friends’ Unit\(^3\) and she is expected to return tonight. I think her presentation of my

\(^1\) Behrawan
\(^2\) Vide “Note to Gladys Owen”, 24-3-1947
\(^3\) Friends’ Service Unit

VOL. 94 : 17 FEBRUARY, 1947-29, APRIL 1947. 181
position is fairly correct. But let me put it in my own language.

What I feel is that however much detached we may want to be from our surroundings and the unseen atmosphere about us, we cannot but be affected by it. Hence I am not sure whether, whilst the British military forces are in India, we can possibly be in real Indian atmosphere of peace and tranquillity, if these are ever to be her lot during our generation. The present distemper may continue beyond January next and if it does not I am afraid it won't be because of sanity regained by the communities but because of the fear of the military. What is the use of our meeting under the protection of the bayonet, whether it is British or Indian? May it not be wise therefore for sincere peace-lovers to pray in their own homes, every day if you like, even for five minutes at the same time throughout the world? It will be easy enough for everyone to find out the hour which should correspond with the time, say, in Calcutta or any place in India. We can even make the calculations and publish the different times for the different centres. The value would lie in finding the exact time. If you still think that a meeting should take place here, I suggest postponement till after the withdrawal of British arms.

These are my random thoughts, not for you to act upon unless they fully appeal to you, because in this matter I have yielded to your judgment. If you propose to go on with your idea and want to have the meeting at the time you have conceived, send me the thirty names and I shall send you my suggestions as to whether I want to add to the list.

With reference to milk distribution in Madras you have another Ministry there now.¹ I wonder if it will make any difference. I hold on to my suggestion.

About my own private affair I have done and am doing all I can. I suppose you already know that Manu no longer sleeps in the same bed with me. This departure was made by her with my full approval in order to please Bapa who, though he saw absolutely nothing wrong, would appeal to her not to continue [it] whilst I was in Bihar and whilst I was engaged in this important work. I do not agree with the conclusion. But I did not wish to argue and therefore I promptly agreed.

Whilst I am dictating this letter I see that you could not know

¹ The Ministry headed by T. Prakasam had resigned on March 14 and the new Ministry assumed office on March 23, under the leadership of O. P. Ramaswami Reddiar.
this because the decision was made on the last day of my stay in Haimchar. What, however, is the subject of examination is my mental attitude, whether it is correct or whether, as Kishorelal and some other Indian friends consider, it is a remnant of my sexuality however unconscious it might be. My whole mental outlook will be changed immediately I saw this defect in me. Only then, the weakness was coeval with the time when I took the vow of brahmacharya which was probably in 1902\textsuperscript{1}. It may be that their definition of brahmacharya is different from mine.

I return the draft with very slight corrections if it is to go at all.

Love.

Yours,

BAPU

HORACE ALEXANDER, ESQ.
1 UPPER WOOD STREET
CALCUTTA

From a photostat: G. N. 1443

194. LETTER TO SIR HUGH DOW

PATNA,
March 25, 1947

DEAR FRIEND,

Many thanks for your letter\textsuperscript{2} of the 22nd instant. I have to deny myself the pleasure of writing in my own hand for the sake of sparing you the infliction of bad handwriting, of which I am really ashamed. Whenever you feel that you want to discuss anything with me please do not hesitate to tell me so and I shall be at your disposal.

I am going on my third tour tomorrow morning. I return on the 28th instant.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

H. E. SIR HUGH DOW
GOVERNMENT HOUSE
PATNA

\textit{Gandhiji's Correspondence with the Government, 1944-47}, pp. 234-5

\textsuperscript{1} Gandhiji took the vow some time in August-September, 1906 after his return from ambulance service during the Zulu revolt in Natal; \textit{vide} "An Autobiography"

\textsuperscript{2} \textit{Vide} footnote 1, "Letter to Sir Hugh Dow", 21-3-1947
195. LETTER TO AMRITLAL T. NANAVATI

PATNA,
March 25, 1947

CHI. AMRITLAL,

I got your letter. Enclosed is a letter for Dhiren'. Read it and then pass it on to him. I have merely given in it my opinion, but I think it will be enough for you. All the same, if you on your own wish to keep him, you may do so. I could not train him, nor could Satis Babu. This would be a charitable view. If we take an uncharitable view, we might say that both Satis Babu and I kept him with us for his own good, but he could not stay with either. However, sooner or later he is bound to stay somewhere. He does have a certain kind of ability, and will be able to earn enough for a living. Those who wish to get married can certainly do so. Dhiren, therefore, will miss nothing. I now look upon him as completely free.

You may now do what you think fit. Kakasaheb will of course see this. Give the accompanying letters to the two brothers.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10813

196. LETTER TO TARABEHN JASANI

PATNA,
March 25, 1947

CHI. TARA,

As soon as Satish' told me about Mohanlal, I wrote2 to you at Wankaner. Now Bal3 writes and tells me that you are there and feel very much depressed. Why are you so weak? Have you ever known anybody’s dear one to have lived for ever? The way Mohanlal has gone, you, I and all others have to go. Why, then, rejoice or grieve over things? Is it not our selfishness that we do so? You have to shed lustre on Mohanlal’s name, and you have the ability to do that. If you

1 Dhirendra, son of Amrita Lal Chatterjee. The letter is not available.
2 Sons of D. B. Kalelkar
3 Vide “Letter to Tarabehn Jasani”, 16-3-1947

Sons of D. B. Kalelakr

184 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
do not have it, cultivate it. Arise, awake, open your eyes and see. Do your duty.

Blessings to you both from

BAPU

CHI. TARABEHN
C/O SHRI G. JASANI
36 DOCTOR RAJENDRA ROAD
BHAWANIPUR, CALCUTTA

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 8789

197. LETTER TO SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA

PATNA,
March 25, 1947

CHI. SATIS BABU,

I have your three letters. It can be said that the danger about which you have written in two of them does not exist now. But no one can say what will happen in the end.

I think it is better to store paddy after obtaining a permit.

I am enclosing herewith the two cheques, one for Rs. 400 and the other for Rs. 182 with the letters received along with them.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 8970

198. LETTER TO NAGEN BABU

PATNA,
March 25, 1947

BHAI NAGEN BABU,

I got your letter. Bhai Kalipada will give you all the news. I can only say that my heart is in Noakhali, and whatever I do here is bound to have some effect there. No one need be scared and no one should be a coward. What God wills will be done.

Yours,

M. K. GANDHI

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
PATNA,
March 25, 1947

My third tour will commence tomorrow. I shall go to Jahanabad and return on March 28. The prayer meeting will again be held here on the 29th.

I saw the destruction in the village which I visited and met the Hindus and the Muslims there. Today also I have been meeting people throughout the day. One Muslim friend said that it was very good indeed that I visited them. Now they were convinced that nothing of this sort would recur. But I was pained by what another Muslim friend told me. He said that the Hindus were now boycotting the Muslims. Sometimes boycott could be a welcome thing but it is bad if it is directed against one’s own brother. Suppose we have been under the treatment of a Muslim doctor till today, as for instance I used to be treated by Dr. Ansari, Hakim Ajmal Khan or Dr. Abdul Rehman. Should we stop being treated by him as soon as a Hindu-Muslim riot breaks out? Boycott had an important place in our struggle against the British. But if it is adopted amongst ourselves it will amount to violence. The Hindus have committed a sin in Bihar and today they are the guilty ones; do they now want to persist in doing wrong? The case of the doctor was cited only as an example. The gentleman mentioned by me is a businessman and landlord. Both Hindus and Muslims had their shops on his land and did business there. It was a source of income for him. But now the Hindus have stopped going there; this is a pernicious boycott. It so happens sometimes that one who is engaged as a tailor does not like anyone else to take up that profession. There was a time when a tailor’s son took to tailoring only. But now a tailor’s son can also become a head clerk. Such ill will and feeling of animosity should be given up.

1 M. A. Ansari (1880-1936); physician and surgeon; Member, Congress Working Committee; President, Indian National Congress, 1927; Chancellor, Jamia Millia Islamia, 1928-36
2 (1863-1927); Chief Physician to the Nawab of Rampur, 1892-1902; President, Indian National Congress, 1921; first Chancellor of Jamia Millia Islamia, 1920-27
Let me give you some good news too. Today some League friends met me and expressed their wish to live with the Hindus amicably and wanted the Government to listen to them. I said to them that though the League represented a large number of Muslims I did not agree that those who were outside the League were not Muslims or that the League was the sole representative of the Muslims. The boycott of the League would not do. I even asked the Noakhali Muslims to obey the orders of the League. So long as they were in the League, it was their duty to carry out its orders. But if the League misguided them and asked them to slit the throats of the Hindus, they should refuse to obey it and quit the League.

The League friends also said: “Though we belong to the League still we are friends of the Hindus. If the Government does not take us into confidence, how can the Muslims trust it? If we plead with the Muslims who had run away, they will come back. But if we do not co-operate how many Muslims can you bring back? Maybe a few of them would return. But all of them will not. The Government should consult us.” I told them it was a good and straightforward suggestion. Each should co-operate with the other and do his duty. When we work unitedly it will have its impact on India as well as on the world. It will purify our hearts. We should act only with a pure heart. What is the use of our being together without unity of hearts?

I also heard some Muslims say that there were ten crore Muslims and even if one crore perished the remaining nine crores would fight for founding a nation of their own. I told them that if they had such notions they would not serve Islam in any way. On the contrary they would destroy it. I had told the Hindus also in Noakhali that they should get rid of all fear. We should fear God alone. It is cowardice to agree to something or to bow our heads before others out of fear.

The friend from Noakhali has informed me that after my return from Noakhali the situation there has deteriorated again. I told him that if the Hindus in Bihar co-operated with me, I could work for Noakhali while I was still here. I would appeal to the Muslims of Noakhali, if my voice could reach them, to live in unity with Hindus, wherever they may be. Hindus should do likewise. I do not know what will happen in Noakhali in future—whether the surviving Hindus will be killed, their houses looted or burnt. But if this happens, the Muslims will dig their own graves. Even here I hear voices are being raised that scores will be settled once Gandhi goes away. This is a bad omen. I beseech you not to become cowards, but to be truthful and have faith in God. It is folly to agree to anything out of fear. Today some Domes came to see me. They told me that it was not only caste Hindus who boycotted them but even the Bhangis among Harijans boycotted them. They said that the Domes were normally engaged in bamboo work, only the poor ones did scavenging. They are not even aware of the exact strength of their community. Only one boy from the community goes to college. The Domes invited me to stay with them. I told them that, though I would like it, I was at the moment engaged in other very important work. I was grieved to know that the Bhangis did not allow them to draw water from their wells. Bhangis and other Harijan friends should not discriminate amongst themselves. I fail to understand why others regard Harijans as inferior. I have myself become a Bhangi. If I swept your lanes and cleaned your latrines, and you hurled abuses at me and I tolerated them, how would I then become low? Those who are engaged in scavenging are not inferior but it is those who abuse others that are low. Those who do the cleaning for us and serve us should be treated with love by all of us.

[From Urdu]

Gandhijike Dukhe Dilki Pakar—II, pp. 41-4

200. LETTER TO LORD MOUNTEBBATTEN

PATNA,
March 26, 1947

DEAR FRIEND.

I thank you for your letter of the 22nd instant received by me yesterday.

You have rightly gauged my difficulty about moving out of Bihar at the present moment. But I dare not resist your kind call. I am just now leaving for one of the disturbed areas of Bihar. Will you therefore forgive me if I do not send you the exact date of my departure for Delhi? I return from this third Bihar tour on the 28th instant. My departure will therefore be as quickly as I can arrange it after the 28th.

In order that this may be in your hands as early as possible I

1 The addressee had taken over as Viceroy and Governor-General of India on March 24, 1947.
send this through His Excellency the Governor of Bihar.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

H. E. LORD LOUIS MOUNTBATTEN OF BURMA
NEW DELHI

[PS.]
I expect to leave for New Delhi on the 30th instant.

M. K. G.

From a photostat: G. N. 10832

201. LETTER TO SYED ZAFAR IMAM

PATNA,
March 26, 1947

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter of the 25th instant. It will be a matter of pleasure to me if someone on behalf of the League accompanies me during the tour¹. I think Mridulabehn has already told the local League in the same strain. You will certainly be informed when the date for the visit to Tilhara is fixed.

In the second paragraph you refer to my ‘inner voice’. Is this a gibe, a compliment or an unthought remark? I ask this question purposely because I want all the help that the local League can render sincerely in the difficult task in front of me.

S. ZAFAR IMAM SAHIB
PATNA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

202. INTERVIEW TO THE PRESS

PATNA,
March 26, 1947

Gandhiji’s attention being drawn by the A. P. I. to a report in a section of the Press (not The Indian Nation) about a letter said to have been received by him from the new Viceroy and his alleged reply thereto, he said that it was packed with half-truths which he always held as more dangerous than full untruths and therefore, characterized half-truths as “a lie and a half”.

¹ To Tilhara, to ascertain the true extent of damages caused to the Muslim lives, properties and holy places of worship during communal riots in Bihar.

Pressed for clarification Gandhiji said that he had no desire to run into the trap, however unconscious it might be. He added that whoever had concocted the message had done no service to the cause of Indian independence or to honest journalism. He would like Indian journalists not to copy the worst features of journalism of the West with which unfortunately it was reeking. But if there was to be imitation it should be of the best in Western journalism of which he was happy to be able to testify. Gandhiji said:

There are several brilliant examples in journalism and as a journalist of long standing, though an amateur, I must conclude by the warning that journalism which is rightly called the Fourth Estate should never degrade itself by becoming a means of making money. This caution is doubly necessary at the present critical time in the history of the country.

The Indian Nation, 27-3-1947

203. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

IJEHANABAD, March 26, 1947

Gandhiji began his post-prayer speech by referring to the common weakness of misunderstanding opponents, attributing to them motives which could not be proved. Such behaviour often led to untoward results which prudent people would avoid. Such misunderstanding was responsible for differences between the Congress and the League. Both the organizations had a large following. The responsibility resting on them was all the greater for their popularity. Their conduct towards each other had to be above suspicion.

Gandhiji next referred to his visit to Kako Relief Camp and the village of Saistabad. Men and women burst into tears when they saw him. He told them that to break under one’s sorrow did not become brave people. All religions taught that sorrow should be bravely borne.

As he watched crowds of sturdy men pursuing him, mobbing his car and

1 Extracted from “Gandhiji’s Bihar Tour Diary”
2 Gandhiji had offered to stay in Jehanabad with some members of the Muslim League who had called on him at Patna. Not knowing this, one of his secretaries arranged for his stay with the authorities. When Gandhiji came to know of it, he tried to contact the members of the Muslim League but could not. The latter, however, accused him of breach of promise.
3 Where 500 refugees had taken shelter shouting vociferously Mahatma Gandhiki jai, etc., he could well imagine the havoc they must have wrought when they attacked a handful of Mussalmans. The Hindus should be ashamed of the act. They should take a vow never to succumb to the madness again. Nor should they think of taking revenge for the incidents of the Punjab or the like. Would they themselves become beasts simply because others happened to sink to that level? If ever they became mad again, they should destroy him first. His prayer in that case would be that God may give him the strength to pray to Him to forgive his murderers, that is, to purify their hearts. He prayed that God may enable him to show by example what true bravery was. No one could mistake arson and murder of innocent women and children as a brave act. It was cowardice of the meanest type.

Gandhiji next referred to a complaint that he had received from the Hindus of Kako enumerating their sufferings at the hands of Muslim zamindars. He interpreted it as intended to minimize their own offence against the Mussalmans. It was not manliness to attempt to do so.

Again Gandhiji referred to a report that he had heard of the Hindus threatening the Mussalmans that they would wreak vengeance on them when he (Gandhiji) was gone. It ill became the votaries of the Ramayana to try to suppress the fourteen or fifteen per cent of the Muslims in their midst. Men aspiring to be free could hardly think of enslaving others. If they tried to do so, they would only be binding their own chains of slavery tighter. It became their duty to go and beg forgiveness of the Mussalmans, and by their true repentance they should try to persuade them to go back to their homes. They should rebuild their houses. They should make their sorrow their own.

Harijan, 13-4-1947

204. TELEGRAM TO CHOATHMAL

CHOATHMAL
SECY. PROVINCIAL SWEEPERS’ FEDERATION

[On or after March 26, 1947]

YOUR WIRE 1. DIFFICULT ADVISE FROM HERE. SEE VINOBAJI, VALUNJIKAR. ACT AS THEY ADVISE.

GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

1 From the postmark
2 The addressee had requested Gandhiji’s intervention in the ill-treatment of leaders of sweepers in jail.
GHOsi, jEHANABAD,
March 27, 1947

Chi. ChimAnLAL.

you may make whatever arrangement seems best to all of you regarding Kanchan. it is essential that her delivery pass off without any difficulty.

Kanchan’s own desire in this matter should get the first priority. if she wants to have the delivery at her mother’s, please arrange it that way.

it is for you all to decide whether you can arrange for the delivery in the old hospital building. i will raise no objection if you decide that. i cannot say more than this from here.

i understand about hoshiariben 1.

i trust Mohan 2 and Anasuya 3 are doing well. how long will they stay there?

tell Bhansalibhai that he should stop eating cereals and pulses until the fever disappears completely. he should till then live on milk, butter-milk and fruit. if he does that, the body will recover its normal health quickly. raw kodra is taboo. we are not strong enough to digest it. 3 tell Prabhakar that he must get rid of his weakness.

if Shashi 4 takes friction-bath regularly and observes the necessary restrictions on diet, i am sure his fever will disappear. it will of course be good if he goes to Panchgani.

i understand about Kausambi’s 5 illness.

why does Nayakumji get severe attacks of cold so often? tell him that he must get rid of the disease once for all with the help of rural remedies, that is, by nature-cure methods. this is also part of basic education.

If Sharda 6 can do without Shakaribehn 7, I think it would be

1 Niece of Balvantsinha
2 Son and daughter-in-law of Narahari Parikh
3 Vide also “Letter to Pushpa K. Desai”, 24-3-1947
4 Son of Ratilal Mehta
5 Dharmanand Kausambi, who had been Professor of Buddhist Literature at the Gujarat Vidyapith, was suffering from a severe skin ailment.
6 Addressee’s daughter, married to Gordhandas Chokhawala
7 Addressee’s wife
good for her to return to the Ashram. Let her do what keeps her happy and contented.

Parnerkar’s leg must have got all right now. Manohar also, I hope, is all right. This is my third tour. I am in a village today. I have to leave for Delhi on the 30th to meet the Viceroy there. I shall be staying there for two or three days.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10659

206. TALK WITH MUSLIMS

AMTHUA, March 27, 1947

Gandhiji said that the style in which the memorandum had been written, it could not represent the views of the people who surrounded him there because when he himself understood so little of it he was sure the illiterate friends around him could not understand what it conveyed. He asked how could the reader of the memorandum claim to represent the views of those for whom he spoke.

Referring to the complaints against the Hindus, Gandhiji said it was his mission to make people brave whether they were Hindus or Muslims and he asked the people who had submitted the memorandum not to preach cowardice among the Muslims. He gave the example of South Africa where he led the Indians, a bare handful of 13,000 in the entire sub-continent, against great odds and those Indians were courageous enough today to fight their oppressors. In Bihar the Muslims were in a much greater majority than the Indians in South Africa and therefore they should be brave.

Gandhiji reaffirmed that he was not disloyal or unfaithful to the Muslims and that his one aim in life was to help the Muslims as long as he was alive and he would try to help them even by dying.

Before he left he invited the Muslims to come and see him and place fore him all the difficulties in their way.

The Indian Nation, 29-3-1947

1 Y. M. Parnerkar, a dairy expert
2 Gandhiji visited Amthua at 8 a.m. where Muslims presented to him a memorandum written in highly Persianized Urdu. It stated among other things that Gandhiji’s visit was likely to do more harm than good and that the Government had helped rioters and Congressmen who were in league with them.
Gandhiji uttered the warning that Indians might lose the golden apple of independence which was almost within their grasp, out of insanity, which had caused scenes of desolation and destruction, and stated that the peace that reigned in the land was only on the surface. He said this while referring to his visit during the morning and afternoon to some riot-affected villages.

Gandhiji added that they knew the very first pronouncement that the Viceroy had made when he assumed office stated that he was sent as the last Viceroy to wind up the British rule in India. They must have noticed that the pronouncement was deliberate, unconditional and unequivocal. He said that we must trust British promises for it would be cowardice to say that all Britons were dishonest. That, he explained, would mean that we were ourselves dishonest. Gandhiji added that the jar of British sins was full and they must go but it was not right to abuse them while they were departing. He knew that it had become a fashion, though not without cause, to distrust every British declaration. He for one would advise the acceptance of every declaration at its face value without qualifying it in the light of past experience to the contrary. His experience was that it was the deceiver who always lost and never the dupe if he was honest and brave. But he very much feared on account of what had happened in the country that by their folly or, what was worse than that, insanity, they might let slip out of their hands their hard-won prize before it was strongly locked in their unbreakable fist.

Gandhiji referred to Bihar and the Punjab and said that he had wisdom enough to see that they themselves might tempt the Viceroy to eat his own words, uttered solemnly on a solemn occasion. Heaven forbid that such an occasion should arise, but, if it did, even though his might be a voice in the wilderness, he would declare that the Viceroy should firmly and truly carry out his declaration and complete the British withdrawal.

Gandhiji then referred to his tour today in villages Amthua, Belai and Ghosi, this morning and Abdul Chak, Zulfipur and Abdalpur. He said that the same stories of atrocities were repeated the whole day. He advised the Congressmen who had approached him and said that innocent men were in jail as a result of communal cases, that they should produce those who were guilty and if they failed they should cease to be Congressmen. Gandhiji also advised the guilty to confess to him, for he would not give them away to Government but then they thought to atone for their sins. Gandhiji also requested Hindus to return all abducted women and girls, if any in their possession, at once.

1 The reports in Harijan and The Indian Nation have been collated.
2 In the afternoon
Gandhiji referred to the police strike\(^1\), and said that the police, like the scavengers, should never go on strike. Theirs was an essential service and they should render that service irrespective of pay.

There were many other effective and honourable means of getting grievances redressed. If he were a Cabinet Minister, he would offer the strikers nothing whatever under the threat of a strike, which implied force. He would give them the choice of an impartial arbitration, without any condition. He said:

It will be a bad day for India if the military, including the police, rule India.

He hoped the police would call off their strike unconditionally and request the Ministry to appoint an impartial arbitrator to investigate their case.

Gandhiji also appealed to the policemen not to behave in the manner in which they were behaving then. Every policeman, he said, was a servant of the people and his duty was to behave like the Khudai Khidmatgars. Policemen were the custodians of law.

Continuing, Gandhiji said that if every man, woman and child tried to understand his or her duty and if there was no theft or dacoity, there would be no need for policemen. Everyone could then become a policeman and help each other.

Gandhiji expressed regret that the Bihar Government had employed British soldiers to deal with the strikers. No matter what the cause was, and wherever it was, the Indian Governments must never requisition the services of British soldiers to deal with civil disturbances. Otherwise it would mean that the Indian Governments were helpless without British arms.

_Harijan, 13-4-1947, and The Indian Nation, 29-3-1947_

---

\(^1\) On March 20, 1947, a police havildar was convicted of contempt of court by the Sub-divisional Officer, Gaya. The Gaya police then gave notice of strike unless redress was given to the havildar and the Sub-Divisional Officer punished. An immediate inquiry was ordered by the District Magistrate. The strike commenced on March 24 and the strikers refused to return to duty in spite of the inquiry which began the same day. From Gaya the strike spread to Patna and Monghyr.
208. TELEGRAM TO ANAND T. HINGORANI

JEHANABAD,
March 28, 1947

ANAND HINGORANI
7 EDMONSTONE ROAD
ALLAHABAD
LEAVING THIRTIETH MORNING.

GANDHI

From a microfilm. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

209. LETTER TO MANILAL AND SUSHILA GANDHI

JEHANABAD,
March 28, 1947

CHI. MANILAL,

I got your long letter of March 7. You have given sufficient details. You need not hesitate to write to me out of compassion for me because of the pressure of work on me. I have not known a father who would not welcome a letter from his son or daughter. On the contrary, every father looks forward to such letters. It is true, of course, that if my sons were to write silly and sentimental letters, I would be pained to read them. But I have never taught any of you to be sentimental or to write such letters, nor is it in the nature of any of you to be or act so. I, therefore, have no fear on that score.

I understand what you say regarding me. It is enough for me that you do not worry about me but leave me in God’s hands. It is also true that, if what I am doing is wrong, I alone will have to suffer the consequences. If it is good, its benefit will be shared by millions.

If refusal to extend a welcome to the Prince' is likely to do us any harm, we should endure it. When we accorded a welcome in our time the circumstances were different, and moreover we extended the welcome jointly with other people.¹ Keep on sending me newspaper cuttings which you think I should read. I rarely read your journal². And moreover in the midst of all this touring, how can I even get it?

1 Vide “Statement to the Press”, p. 28.

Dadoo and Naicker called on me³ as soon as they arrived. I was in Patna then. I had only a brief talk with them. They said they would come back and call on me again. They didn’t say a word regarding you. Nor did I ask them. I didn’t think it advisable to do so. And, moreover, your letter gives me all the information, and so really speaking I had nothing to inquire about.

One thing seems certain, namely, that now the struggle will be carried on through selfless and elected representatives. I cannot say how long I shall be detained in Bihar and Noakhali.

I have to leave for Delhi the day after tomorrow to meet the new Viceroy. I think I will have to stay there for two or three days and then return here.

Don’t worry at all about Sita⁴. I do whatever is necessary.

Blessings from

BAPU

Despatch this letter to Manilal. You may add whatever you wish

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 4997

210. TALK WITH MUSLIM REFUGEES⁵

JEHANABAD,
March 28⁶, 1947

One memorandum suggested that Gandhiji’s reference to the Noakhali incidents in his speeches instead of suppressing the feeling of Hindus here would aggravate them.

¹ The reference appears to be to the visit of Duke of Cornwall and York to South Africa; vide
² Indian Opinion
³ On March 20
⁴ Addressee’s daughter
⁵ The report in Harijan, reproduced from The Searchlight, 30-3-1947, has been collated with the version in Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase. Gandhiji was replying to a written memorandum submitted by the Muslim refugees.
⁶ Biharni Komi Agman however gives this talk under March 26.
Gandhiji answered that the inference was not correct for he had not spared the Hindus. In fact there was a time when he used to be equally plainspoken with the Muslims, too. He had even fasted for twenty-one days for what they had done in 1924. 1 The Muslims did not then regard him as their enemy.

Gandhiji said that as the Muslims today generally considered him as their enemy, he was sometimes obliged to speak with restraint. In the Punjab worse things were happening and at first he did not believe the newspaper stories but his subsequent enquiries made him believe that far more excesses than the newspapers reported were being committed in the Punjab. Because it was the doing of a particular community, should he not speak about it? His mission could not be successful by such suppression, he said.

As far as possible I have refrained from discussing the affairs in Noakhali in my speeches. But whenever I have had occasion to speak about Noakhali, I claim that I have spoken with great restraint. Do the Muslims want that I should not speak about the sins committed by them in Noakhali and that I should only speak about the sins of the Hindus in Bihar? If I do that, I will be a coward. To me the sins of the Noakhali Muslims and the Bihar Hindus are of the same magnitude and equally condemnable.

Gandhiji thereafter replying to another memorandum, which stated that the signatories had no confidence in the present Ministry, said:

I told the Hindus of Noakhali, who also expressed lack of confidence in Mr. Shaheed Suhrawardy, that they could not remove Shaheed Saheb from the Ministry as he was returned by the separate electorate system. So long as Shaheed Saheb enjoys the confidence of the community he represents, no one can remove him. Similarly, how can you remove the Ministers when they have been returned by the Hindu electorate? This unfortunate situation has been created by the communal electorate system which, you know, I have always condemned. Dr. Khan Saheb 2 also said the same thing the other day that so long as he enjoyed the confidence of the Pathans there was no question of his resignation. Moreover, what will happen if the Ministry goes out? There will again be the rule of the bureaucratic Government. That apart, I can take good work from these Ministers as my relationship with them is most friendly.

The Bihar Ministers have told me that if I asked them to resign, they would do so. But it would be wrong on my part to ask them to

1 Vide “Statement Announcing 21-Day Fast”, 18-9-1924
2 Premier of the North-West Frontier Province resign. I can ask them to do only what is reasonable.

Referring to the demand that fifty per cent of the officers and constables put in charge of new thanas ¹ should be Muslims, Gandhiji replied:

I disapproved of the very same demand of the Noakhali Hindus. This demand cuts across my peace mission. If conceded, this will mean so many small Pakistans and a division of Bihar. After all, wherever you live, you have to live by creating mutual goodwill and friendly relations with your neighbours. Even the Quaid-e-Azam once said that in the Pakistan areas the majority must so behave as to win the confidence of the minority. In the same manner, I am urging upon the Hindus here to win your confidence. Either Pakistan or Hindustan, whichever is established, it must be based on justice and fair play.

Referring to another demand that the Muslims may be allowed to resettle in certain exclusive areas, Gandhiji said:

You cannot force the Government to keep you in certain exclusive areas. Could I tell that to Shaheed Saheb for the Noakhali Hindus? I never gave any encouragement to the Noakhali Hindus for such a move. I told the Hindus of Noakhali that if they were afraid, they could go anywhere if they got compensation. And why should the Government not pay compensation when they got the properties? Similarly, I will tell you to go anywhere provided you get adequate compensation. But I must tell you that it is not my heart’s desire. Leaving your homestead in such a manner is nothing but cowardice. If the Government is not prepared to pay compensation, I should say it is unworthy of them and the Government cannot refuse it. Moreover, if the Ministers who have been returned by the Hindu votes say that the Hindus here have gone beyond control, it is better for them to consume themselves in the flames of the Hindu rage than to continue in office. The Government has to do justice and cannot afford injustice in any manner.

Referring thereafter to the Muslim grievances regarding the reported appointment of Mr. Justice Reuben to conduct the Bihar Riots Enquiry, Gandhiji said, the memorandum suggested that the Muslims had no faith in Mr. Reuben. But they never suggested whom they wanted. To hold anyone as a suspect simply because he was a non-Muslim was not right. Personally he would have liked the Judge to be a Muslim provided he was acceptable to all. Unfortunately in the vitiated atmosphere of the times, Hindus did not trust the Muslims and the Muslims the Hindus.

¹ New police stations that were being set up to create confidence among the refugees.

We must have faith in some non-Muslim such as Mr. Justice Reuben. There is no harm in the one-man Commission. If the Muslims want, they can submit a panel of names from amongst which the commission should be appointed. Then I can inform the authorities. I am not one of those who would refuse to do anything simply because the League wants it. Truth alone should be our criterion, no matter who utters it.

With regard to the demand of restoration and finding out of abducted women, Gandhiji said:

Since my arrival in Bihar I have been telling all those Muslims who told me about the abducted girls to give me the names and the family connections of such girls in order to help find out if they were still alive. But till now not one name has been submitted to me. I again ask you to submit the names of the unfortunate girls.

In the meeting . . . was also present Mahant Bhagwat Das, M.L.A, against whom Muslims brought forward charges that he infuriated the Hindu mob during the riots. Bhagwat Das then stood up and told Gandhiji that he was innocent and asked the Muslims to bring forward specific instances to prove the charges.

It was further alleged that he was related to a notorious dacoit. The member of the Assembly denied that he was related to the dacoit in question. As for the allegations against him, he was prepared to face an inquiry by a body of Muslim Leaguers themselves. If they found him guilty, he would submit to any punishment. Even otherwise, he would carry out Gandhiji’s orders.

Gandhiji remarked that if the dacoit referred to was still at large, every effort should be made to arrest him and all should co-operate with the Government to that end. Gandhiji said:

It is a challenge to the Government. If the Government fails to arrest the culprits it will stand discredited.

Turning to the member of the Assembly in question, he told him that a special responsibility rested upon him, he being a member from the locality. If the Muslims suspected him of complicity in the riots, he should resign his seat even though the suspicion against him was unfounded. To the Muslims Gandhiji said that they should seek God’s truth only, prove their charges and if they could not be proved, unreservedly withdraw them.

211. TALK WITH MUSLIM REFUGEES AND VILLAGE REPRESENTATIVES

March 28, 1947

Gandhiji agreed with them that where the Muslims had in panic sold their property at ridiculously cheap prices they should be able to get the same back at those very rates. Police outposts should be opened at places where looting and destruction of property was still going on. An inquiry should be held into the conduct of the officers who were guilty of gross neglect of their duty during the disturbances, and those against whom the charges were established should be dismissed. It was further suggested to Gandhiji that attention should be paid to the irresponsible and communal-minded section of the Congress. Gandhiji replied that unlike the Muslim League and the Hindu Mahasabha the Congress was meant to serve all. If it belied its nationalist character, it would destroy itself.

QUESTION: Does the experience that you have had and the atmosphere that you find around you lend you any hope of success in your mission of re-establishing lost confidence between the Hindus and Muslims?

GANDHIJI: Man can only try. The result is in the hands of God.

Addressing the village representatives, Gandhiji exhorted them to cleanse their hearts. If they told him they were innocent, he would not believe them. If a single Hindu had committed the crime, they were all responsible for it. Could he reassure the Muslims on their behalf, he asked, that the realization of their sin had been brought home to them and their hearts had been thoroughly cleansed by genuine repentance? If, on the other hand, they felt that in butchering the Muslims they had done the right thing, they should say so plainly, so that he might know exactly where he stood and decide his future course of action accordingly. For, he had sworn to “do or die” in Bihar.

1 In the afternoon Gandhiji met representatives from the surrounding villages and Muslim refugees. Gandhiji’s answers to questions that had been asked at the meeting of the Muslim Refugees in the Morning were read out to them. They then proceeded to ask further questions. Vide also the preceding item.
212. TALK WITH CONGRESS WORKERS

March 28, 1947

QUESTION: It is being said that Congressmen have taken quite an active part in the riots and there is an increasing tendency among the workers to take bribes.

GANDHIJI: I do not know whom I shall hold responsible for this. My faith in God, however, is not a whit shaken by it, rather it is strengthened. These incidents have shown me the persons I trust in their true colours. I will not be losing anything if they prove to be false, because they will be shunned wherever they go. I am not anyone’s master, I am only an humble servant. When the dawn of independence is on the horizon, our people are indulging in such madness.

Q. The Muslims who fled their homes are trying to sell their properties at cheap rates and the Hindus naturally want to buy them. Should they do so?

G. Honesty demands that the deal should be fair. The Hindus should pay the Muslims a fair price for their properties. As a matter of fact, instead of buying, they should hold them in trust.

Q. Should we ask the Hindus not to buy their properties?

G. Yes. But it should not develop into a boycott as in Noakhali. We should not take advantage of the Muslims’ distress.

213. TALK WITH POLICEMEN

JEHANABAD, March 28, 1947

Gandhiji told them that their strike was ill-advised and there was no convincing argument in favour of continuing it. They were not mere wage-earners. They were members of an essential service. Limbs of the law were expected to put duty before self-interest. If they continued their strike until their demand was conceded, it would jeopardize their case. They should, therefore, immediately and unconditionally call off the strike. The Government of the day was their own and there was no loss of dignity in surrendering to it. But they should follow his advice only if their leaders

1 The account in Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase has been collated with the Gujarati version in Biharni Komi Agman.

2 The policemen who were on strike came to see Gandhiji at 1.15 p.m.
accepted it. While they belonged to their organization, loyalty demanded that they should consult their leaders before they acted upon his advice.

Gandhiji deprecated the growing rift between the Hindu and the Muslim policemen and told them that Hindu policemen should treat their Muslim colleagues as their brothers. Their conduct should be such that both Hindus and Muslims should have equal faith in them and the Muslims should not feel that for their protection they needed Muslim policemen and vice versa.

Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase, Vol. I, Bk. II, p. 313

214. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

ALLAHGANJ, March 28, 1947

Gandhiji began by saying that he had passed a very full and heavy day. The day was begun with a long meeting with the members of the local Muslim League at the bungalow of Mr. Azharul Haq, local League leader. He was with them for over an hour and had a hearty chat with them answering all kinds of questions. Then he had a meeting at his residential quarters with Hindus and Muslims belonging to JEHANABAD and the surrounding villages. He had then a meeting with the Congressmen which included members of the various Congress Committees. Later he met the members of the local Hindu Mahasabha. Finally he had a heart-to-heart talk with over 25 members of the police force on strike. Then at half past three again he visited the villages of Malathi, Gangasagar, Bola and Allahganj, in which Muslims had suffered badly.

Referring to his visit to the villages, Gandhiji said that naturally he was full of topics on which he wanted to speak and bespeak their attention. He was sorry to say that Hindu repentance was not open and sincere enough to inspire confidence among the Muslims. He had told the afternoon meeting that it was open to the representative Hindus who were present at the meeting to disabuse the Muslims of their suspicion. He was sorry to say that not one Hindu got up to give the needed assurance. He had not the heart, therefore, to ask his Muslim hearers whether they (the Hindus) had cleansed their hearts. Muslims were the injured party in Bihar and it was not open to anyone to expect a satisfactory answer from them unless the guilty Hindu party had led the way.

1 The reports from Harijan, The Indian Nation and The Hindu have been collated.

2 Vide “Talk with Muslim Refugees”, 28-3-1947

3 Vide “Talk with Muslim Refugees and Village Representative”, 28-3-1947

4 Vide “Talk with Congress Workers”, 28-3-1947

5 Vide the preceding item.
by repentance. There were, yet, ring-leaders like Mathura Singh at large and successfully evading arrest. There was, therefore, little cause for wonder if the Muslims were afraid to return to their respective villages. Gandhiji said that he could not help feeling that the culprit could not long remain at large if the Hindu population did not give him shelter. He asked Mathura Singh’s friends and sympathizers to advise him to discover himself and face the consequences of his action. He would also like to tell him that it was no act of bravery for him to evade arrest. He was thus rendering a disservice to himself, his religion and his country. He suggested to the Congressmen, in whose midst the inhumanities were enacted, that they could not absolve themselves from the guilt, unless they made every effort to induce all the culprits to come out into the open and to wash their guilt as publicly as they had committed the crimes.

Continuing, Gandhiji said that he had visited a mosque in the village Bola which was damaged during the disturbances. He was told that on the day of Holi the mosque was again desecrated by some villagers who played Holi inside the mosque premises. If it was true, Gandhiji said, it was undoubtedly a notice given by them to the Muslims not to enter their homes even when they were rebuilt, not dare to visit the mosque. If this reported desecration on Holi day was a fact, it was a bad omen for the Hindus, for Bihar and for the whole country. He regretted the reported action of the local Hindus and warned them to respect all places of worship alike. He called upon the culprits to confess. But, Gandhiji regretted, new parties and new leaders had risen who believed in all sorts of crimes and perhaps nobody was prepared to listen to him. He recalled the theme of today’s bhajan and prayed to God for help and hoped Bihar would come out of the difficulty now facing the province.

Gandhiji went on to say that he had heard at the Muslim League meeting in the morning and at the meeting of the Hindus and the Muslims in the afternoon that Mahant Bhagwat Das who was a member of the Bihar Legislative Assembly was himself a participator in the crime and was himself present at both the meetings. The speaker advised him whilst he was under suspicion to give up his membership. He was glad to say that Mahant Bhagwat Das, without a moment’s hesitation, welcomed the advice and promised at once to act up to it. He also added that Bhagwat Das was in no way a participator directly or indirectly in the crime and that he was quite ready to face an open, impartial enquiry to be made by the Muslim League itself. If it was a sincere declaration, Gandhiji said, it was certainly a refreshing thing at a time when there was no real sign of sincere sorrow and repentance on the part of the Hindus in the affected areas. This he was obliged to say in spite of welcome letters of repentance to which he had made reference at the previous evening’s meeting.

His attention has been drawn, Gandhiji said, to the fact that the Government lorry which had accompanied him in his tour was forcibly boarded by passers-by as if they had a right to travel in it even as the authorized occupants. He was sorry at the unmanly exhibition of authority and lawlessness. Such licence could not be tolerated even in the freest country in the world. Those who defied the law were digging the grave of Indian independence before it was in their hands.

Gandhiji fervently appealed to all Bihar and through Bihar to the Indian people not to plunge the country into a turmoil in the prelude to the dawn of freedom over this land which he called the arunodaya of the new age. Gandhiji warned the nation to awaken before the day of freedom dawned, just as all good men were up from slumber and prayed before sunrise.

Gandhiji set at rest all speculation about his visit to Delhi in response to Lord Mountbatten’s invitation by announcing that he was leaving Bihar for three or four days. Gandhiji said he was determined to stay in Bihar and see the work he had taken up through and no man could prevent him from doing it. God alone could keep him away if He so desired.¹

Harijan, 13-4-1947, The Indian Nation, 30-3-1947, and The Hindu, 31-3-1947

215. LETTER TO J. C. KUMARAPPA

PATNA,
March 29, 1947

MY DEAR KU.,

I wrote to you thoughtlessly a few days ago.² But having now got your letter of the 22nd instant³ I feel that the healthy rule which prevents the members of constructive organizations from becoming members of the Working Committee should not be tampered with however tempting a particular offer may be. What the President can do however is to invite you and such other members when expert advice is wanted on village matters. If you were a fullfledged member you would be obliged to give your thought to many other matters which did not fall within your jurisdiction as a village scavenger. Hence my opinion is that we must resist this temptation. However, I am likely to see the President during the next few days. I shall discuss the matter with him and if there is anything to change my view I shall write again.

Yours sincerely,

BAPU

SHRI J. C. KUMARAPPA
WARDHA

From a photostat: G. N. 10192

¹ With this Gandhiji concluded the third part of his tour in Bihar.
² Vide “Letter to J. C. Kumarappa”, 16-3-1947
³ In which the addressee had sought Gandhiji’s advice regarding the Congress President’s request to him “to serve on the Working Committee in the place of Jayaprakash Narayan”
216. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

PATNA,

March 29, 1947

At the outset Gandhiji told the audience that he would be leaving for Delhi the next day and hoped to return in about four or five days.

Gandhiji then feelingly referred to the death on the previous evening of Prof. Abdul Bari, President of the Bihar Provincial Congress Committee, under tragic circumstances. Prof. Bari was a disciple and co-worker of Dr. Rajendra Prasad. Dr. Rajendra Prasad has built for himself a unique and undisputed position and influence in the province by his service and sacrifice. Prof. Bari had also by his service in the cause of the workers in Jamshedpur and other places endeared himself to the people and risen to occupy the position of the President of the Provincial Congress Committee. A fearless fighter, Prof. Bari was with the Congress during the different phases of its struggle for freedom.

Gandhiji referred to his visit earlier in the day to Prof. Bari’s house to console the members of the bereaved family and ask them not to grieve and to hearten them for the work that had specially descended upon the weak shoulders of his children. Gandhiji said that as he entered the house he was struck with its simplicity and the simple life Prof. Bari had led. The house was located in an ordinary narrow lane and what he saw inside the house fully bore out what everyone had said about Prof. Bari, that he was a poor man and that though he had opportunities he scrupulously maintained his integrity as far as public finances were concerned. At a time when the administration of the country was in the Congress hands and crores of rupees had to be administered, men of Prof. Bari’s honesty would have been of invaluable help. He had hoped on his return from the third tour just finished, to be more closely associated with him and to make an effective appeal to him to modify, if not altogether get rid of, his short temper which went ill with the very high office, in fact the highest in the province of Bihar, especially when there was a nationalist ministry at the head of affairs which naturally had to be influenced by the premier provincial Congress organization. Gandhiji said that he had had full faith in Prof. Bari and had known that his word carried great weight with him. But God had willed otherwise and He had deprived Bihar of the great service of a very brave man with the heart of a fakir. But men like Bari never died, and it was for those who remained to carry on the noble work he had left behind.

Gandhiji then referred to the circumstances of Prof. Bari’s death and said that

1 Extracted from “Gandhiji’s Bihar Tour Diary” in an unfortunate altercation that had ensued between him and one Gurkha member of the anti-smuggling force and a former member of the Indian National Army, the latter shot him. He warned the audience that there was no politics of any kind in the death and that it would be wrong and unjustified to associate the whole I. N. A. organization with the death of Prof. Bari because of what one single individual did.

_Harijan_, 13-4-1947

217. LETTER TO SYED ZAFAR IMAM

_PATNA_,

_March 30, 1947_

DEAR FRIEND,

I see upto the time of writing you have not acknowledged my letter of 26th instant.¹ As unfortunately I have to go to Delhi, I hope only for a few days, I must refer to the first paragraph of your letter of 25th instant. I wish you would disabuse your mind of the impression that anything hangs on my actually witnessing all the damage done during the wretched carnage. I have, therefore, advised the ministers to be as speedy as possible in clearing all debris and rebuilding all damaged property. This essential work ought not to stop for a single day especially because of the impending rains. If there is anything, [any] particular damage which you would like me to see I would suggest your taking Shrimati Mridulabehn Sarabhai with you to see it. It would be as good as my seeing it.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy:
Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

¹ Vide “Letter to Syed Jafar Imam”, 29-4-1947
218. NOTE TO ANAND T. HINGORANI

ON TRAIN,
March 30, 1947

What do you two want to do in Delhi? I shall have little time to talk. I have become perfectly useless for such things now. If success attends my effort in Bihar and Noakhali I shall live.

Where would you want to stay in Delhi? Who are they? What is he doing? I do not know what is going to happen in Delhi. I have only two with me this time. Let us see.

Supposing that your hearing is restored, why not the million deaf people also should have the restoration? And how would it benefit humanity? Do you know that Beethoven the great musician was deaf? You are worrying about nothing. But that is my view. You must do what you think is best for you.

In your place I should welcome this deafness. You are spared much useless hearing. There is no harm in friends writing what they wish to tell you.

From a microfilm. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

219. A NOTE

ON THE TRAIN,
March 30, 1947

Meet the prisoners if they permit you to do so. But offer them only as much as Jayaprakash suggests. I do not want that he and I should differ on this issue. The real work is to be done by him. I have no doubt at all that my policy is absolutely correct. The Chief Minister should grant you permission to meet them. He should not even think that you will help any party of Socialists. If any political gain is made out of it, it would be a poisonous legacy of the British rulers. A volunteer cannot be in a party. As far as possible the police

---

1 The addressee and his wife Gangi Hingorani
2 The addressee had sought Gandhiji’s approval to proceed to the United States for treatment of his deafness.
3 According to the G. N. register this was addressed to Dr. Syed Mahmud. But from the form of address it appears to have been written to a lady. The note carries the remark: “Regarding the Police”.
4 The Government
prisoners should be released. The cases of those charged with murder will have to be considered separately. The duty of the police is to remain faithful to the government of the time. Today’s Government is counted as the people’s Government. Here the question of capitalist and labour does not arise. A solution can be found to the problems. The police should keep aloof from them.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Urdu: G. N. 5099

220. INTERVIEW WITH LORD MOUNTBATTEN

April 1, 1947

Gandhiji asked the Viceroy if Manu could in the meantime roam about the garden so that they could proceed with their talk uninterrupted.

“Certainly”, replied the Viceroy. Then addressing Manu he added: “All this is yours; we are only trustees. We have come to make it over to you.” Gandhiji put in laughing:

You can search her person for any hidden arms.

“I am perfectly satisfied there can be no need for that in a disciple of yours,” replied the Viceroy with a smile.

The Viceroy told Gandhiji that it had always been the British policy not to yield anything to force, but the Mahatma’s non-violence had won. They had decided to quit as a result of India’s non-violent struggle. Towards the close, on being invited to do so, Gandhiji placed before the astonished Viceroy his solution to the Indian deadlock.³

He reiterated what he had said often before, that he did not mind Jinnah or the Muslim League turning the whole of India into Pakistan, provided it was done by appeal to reason and not under threat of violence. But while he had previously held that this could be properly done only after the British had quitted, and while in principle he still adhered to that view, the crux of his present proposal was that he was now prepared under Mountbatten’s umpireship—not as Viceroy but as man—to invite Jinnah to form a government of his choice at the centre and to present his Pakistan plan for acceptance even before the transfer of power. The Congress could ¹ Gandhiji called on the Viceroy at 9 a.m. At their meeting the previous day, the talk had mostly centred round Gandhiji’s early life, his sojourn in England and subsequent struggles in South Africa and India.

² Who along with Brijkrishna Chandiwala had brought in Gandhiji’s lunch.

³ For the outline of Gandhiji’s plan, vide “Outline of Draft Agreement”, 4-4-1947.
give its whole-hearted support to the Jinnah Government. At the same time since the Muslim League would now be the Government, it would have no further excuse for continuing the movements of organized lawlessness, which it had launched in some of the provinces. These must be called off. Further, since the Viceroy had declared that he was out to do justice only and nothing would be yielded to force, if the League did not accept the offer, the same offer mutatis mutandis should be made to the Congress. The old policy of trying to please both the parties must be given up.

Gandhiji told the Viceroy that the system of British policy of “divide and rule” had brought about a situation in which the only alternative to a continuation of the British rule, which they had found was no longer feasible, was to accept the logic of the “Quit India” demand and retire unconditionally, leaving India to her fate. The role of peace-maker in the “communal triangle” which they had themselves helped to create was not for them.¹

Mahatma Gandhi—The Last Phase, Vol. II, pp. 77-9

221. DISCUSSION AT INTER-ASIAN RELATIONS CONFERENCE ²

April 1, 1947

The Azerbaijan delegate, Mr. Yousotoff, who was presiding at the Plenary Session, requested Gandhiji to say a few words.

Gandhiji replied that he would be attending the closing session of the Conference on April 2 and would speak then. For the present, he would answer any questions that the members might like to put to him.

In answer to a question whether he believed in the theory of one world and whether it would succeed under the present conditions, Gandhiji declared:

I would not like to live in this world if it is not to be one world. Certainly I should like to see this dream realized in my lifetime.

I hope that all the representatives who have come here from the different Asian countries will strive their level best to have only one world. They will have to think out ways and means for achieving this goal.

If you work with fixed determination, there is no doubt that in

¹ For an account of the interview as recorded by the Viceroy, vide “Interview with Lord Mountbatten”, 1-4-1947
² The Conference, attended by 250 delegates representing 22 Asian countries and 10,000 visitors, had been inaugurated on March 23, 1947, at the Red Fort by Jawaharlal Nehru.

The report in Harijan under the title “Strive for One World”, has been collated with the version in The Hindu.
our own generation we will certainly realize this dream.

Dr. Han Liwu from China asked him his views on the proposal to set up an Asian institute. Gandhiji replying said:

The question is certainly very nice. Let me confess my ignorance. I have really to apologize to you. Pandit Nehru had asked me long before this Conference was scheduled to take place whether it would at all be possible for me to attend it. It has proved to be a much more important conference than it was expected to be. I was obliged to say at that time that I was very sorry and would not be able to come.\(^1\) When Lord Mountbatten, the new Viceroy, invited me to meet him, however, I could not say ‘No’. It would have been foreign to my nature to do so. The Viceroy had already told me that the credit for bringing me to Delhi during the Asian Conference was really his. And I told the Viceroy: “I am your prisoner. But I am also Pandit Nehru’s prisoner, for, after all, he is your Vice-President!”

Through correspondence I know almost all parts of the world and naturally, therefore, of Asia, though I know very few of you personally—perhaps none of you. I am doubtful whether I can say anything useful but the question is one after my heart. Some portions of the question put to me now were discussed by Pandit Nehru yesterday. It is a great event that for the first time in our history such a conference takes place on the Indian soil. I am sorry that I have to refer to the conditions that we see today. We do not know how to keep peace between ourselves. We have so many differences which we cannot settle between ourselves in a humane and friendly manner. We think we must resort to the law of the jungle. It is an experience which I would not like you to carry to your respective countries. I would instead like you to bury it here.

India is now on the threshold of complete independence. India wants to be independent of everybody who wants to own this country. We do not want a change of masters. We want to be masters on our own soil, though I am not quite sure how it will come about. All that we know is that we should do our duty and leave the results in the hands of God and not in the hands of man. Man is supposed to be the maker of his destiny. It is only partly true. He can make his destiny, only in so far as he is allowed by the Great Power which overrides all out intentions, all our plans and carries out His own plans.

I call that Great Power not by the name of Allah, not by the\(^1\) Vide “Letter to Jawaharlal Nehru”, 26-2-1947 name of Khuda or God but by the name of Truth. For me, Truth is God and Truth overrides all our plans. The whole truth is only embodied within the heart of that Great Power—Truth. I was taught from my early days to regard Truth as unapproachable—something that you cannot reach. A great Englishman taught me to believe that God is unknowable. He is knowable but knowable only to the extent that our limited intellect allows.

You, gentlemen, have come here from different parts of Asia, and having come with eagerness and zest you should all have yearly meetings or two-yearly or three-yearly conferences. You should carry away sweet memories of the meetings and make every effort to build the great edifice of Truth.

All the Asian representatives have come together. Is it in order to wage a war against Europe, against America or against non-Asiatics? I say most emphatically ‘No’. This is not India’s mission. I am free to confess that I will feel extremely sorry if India, having won independence through essentially and predominantly non-violent means, was going to use that independence for the suppression of the other parts of the world. Europeans have hitherto exploited different races inhabiting this vast continent called Asia. It will be a sorry thing if we go away from this Conference without a fixed determination that Asia shall live and live as free as any Western nation. I just wanted to say that conferences like the present one should meet regularly, and if you ask me where, India is the place. You will forgive me for this partiality for India.

_Harijan,_ 20-4-1947, and _The Hindu,_ 2-4-1947

222. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI, April 1, 1947

Today as soon as Manu Gandhi uttered the first word of the _Kalma_ from the Koran a young man stood up, marched right up to the stage where Gandhiji sat and said, “You go away from here. This is a Hindu temple where we will not allow a Muslim prayer. You have been repeatedly telling this thing to us but our mothers and sisters continue to be slaughtered. We cannot tolerate it any longer.” Gandhiji told him:

You are free to go. If you do not want to pray let the others do it. This place does not belong to you. This is not the right way.¹

You did not do the right thing. You forcibly removed the young man from the meeting. You should not have done such a thing. It would give him a sense of triumph. He was very excited. He did not wish to listen to the prayer. But I know that you all wish to listen to it. I do not wish to hold the prayer in spite of protests. Now I intend to give up the rest of the prayer. You are all familiar with the prayer I offer. You have heard it even before I went to Noakhali. In my sequence of prayers, the Muslim prayer is followed by the Parsi prayer. After that this girl would have sung to you a bhajan in her melodious voice and then there would have been Ramdhun. But now I am leaving out the Parsi prayer and also the Ramdhun. Auz-o-Billahi is the beginning of one of the verses of the Koran. You think that uttering this expression is an insult to Hinduism. But I am a true sanatani Hindu. My Hinduism tells me that along with the Hindu prayer I should also offer the Muslim prayer and the Parsi and Christian prayers. True Hinduism lies in offering prayers of all religions because only he is a good Hindu who is also a good Muslim and a good Parsi. The young man said that this was a Hindu temple and such prayers could not be held here. But that is wild talk. This temple belongs to the Bhangis. Even a single Bhangi can throw me out of this place if he so desires. But these people love me. They know that I am a Hindu. Jugal Kishore Birla, on the other hand, is my brother. He is a big man in terms of money but he regards me an elder. He has put me up here because he considers me a pious Hindu. He also takes me to the big temple built by him. If in spite of all this the young man insists that I should go away and I cannot pray here, it is merely his arrogance. But you should have won him over with love. You threw him out by force. What is the point in offering prayers by resorting to force? The young man was in a rage and in his anger was talking wild things. It was out of such talk that all those things happened in the Punjab. This rage is what starts all the fanaticism.

The shlokas just recited by this girl say that when a man broods on objects of the senses—that is, all the five senses—he is caught up in craving. Then he is possessed by wrath which leads to stupefaction.

¹ But the young man could not be silenced. He came close to Gandhiji. People tried to pull him back but he stood firm and persisted in arguing. A lady put herself between Gandhiji and the young man. Gandhiji asked her to keep away, saying, “Let no one stand between me and him.” But the people removed the young man from the meeting.
i.e., insanity.¹

Driven by such frenzy the simple folk of Bihar have indulged in such acts as make me hang my head down in shame. In the same mad fury the people of Noakhali indulged in excesses. But the law of the jungle was more in evidence in Bihar than in Noakhali and it was even more so in the Punjab.

If you are true Hindus, you should not act in such a manner. If in a meeting something is being said which we do not like to hear we must get up and leave the meeting. There is no need to shout and make a row. Moreover, this is a matter of religion. Leave alone religious discussion this man would not even allow people to pray. Prayers should not be disturbed as was done by this young man. Such acts help no one.

None of those who have died in the Punjab will ever come back. Ultimately all of us have to go the same way. If is true that these people met their death by being slaughtered whereas others die of cholera or in some other way. He who is born is destined to die. In being born there is, to an extent, some human responsibility, but in the matter of dying, none but God has any hand. Death cannot be avoided on any account. Death is our companion, our friend. If people have died with courage, they have lost nothing. Rather, they have gained something. But the great problem is how to deal with those who committed these murders. True, to err is human. After all man is but a bundle of errors. But we ought to rectify the errors. God will not overlook our acts. When we go to Him He will look into our hearts. He knows our hearts. If there is a change of heart in us, he will pardon all our lapses.

I have many friends in the Punjab who call themselves my devoted followers. But who am I that they should describe themselves as such? All these friends insist that since I have already come as far as Delhi I should go over to the Punjab at least for one night, so as to comfort the people there. It would take only a few hours if I fly. But how can I go at somebody’s bidding? I shall go there only at God’s bidding or at the bidding of my own heart. I did not go to Noakhali at someone else’s call. Before leaving this place I had said that I was going there because my heart urged me to do so. People had been for long asking me to go to Bihar but I had not gone there at anyone’s call. I went when Dr. Mahmud Saheb wrote to me that my going there would alone clear the minds of the Biharis.

¹ Bhagavadgita, II. 62 and 63
Bihar is a province where Hindus and Muslims can live together [in peace]. But there too women and children have been subjected to outrages no less violent. Blind with fury, people killed innocent children; they slaughtered the womenfolk and threw the bodies into the wells. I am not talking in the air. All these are facts that can be proved by evidence. After that the Muslims are bound to say that they would not live there. But once they are assured that they would not be treated like that again, they would come back. The Bihari Muslims had nearly come to appreciate this; so much so that if we could have reassured them, I was confident that the Muslims who had fled to Asansol and Sind would have come back. They were on the point of returning. But now, should the atrocities in the Punjab be avenged in Bihar? Then, will it be repeated in Madras? And where will this end? Will all of us become barbarous in this way? The Congress fought a non-violent battle against the British. Should we now start killing our own brethren? True, Muslims are perpetrating atrocities, but should we also do the same? Was there an act of atrocity that the British did not commit?

But now the British are going. The Viceroy told me that they had never retreated, but they were leaving India, as a result of her non-violent struggle. You might say that they are doing it for show, because in any case they had got to go. But, if anyone comes to us with honest intentions, why should we interpret his honesty as wickedness? I have learnt to accept honesty on the face of it till I have experience to the contrary. Just at the moment of the departure of the British should we present the spectacle of pleading for the retention of their army although they are leaving? In the Punjab today we are protected solely by them. But can we call it protection? I wish we could protect ourselves even if only a handful of us survived. Let us not be afraid of dying. If we are to be killed, would we not rather be killed by our Muslim brothers? Would a brother cease to be a brother because he has changed his religion? Moreover, do we not indulge in the same acts as they do? What have we not done to the women in Bihar? The Hindus have done it, which means I have done it. It is a matter of shame. Do you think I should hurl two abuses in return for one? But that is exactly what both the Hindus and the Muslims are secretly doing and they are possessed by a mad frenzy.

Here is Badshah Khan sitting right beside me. Who can remove him from here? How much prayer did I leave unfinished because of that young man? I did so because I wanted to demonstrate, I wanted to proclaim to one and all that I would be a good Hindu only if I am a good Parsi, a good Muslim. Would it be religious to abuse other religions? For me, there is nothing like different religions.

All these people who have come from all over Asia talk very lovingly to Jawaharlal. They are all very pleased with him. By the grace of God, we have a gem of a man in our midst who wants to embrace the whole world. Should we not maintain peace if only to honour him?

Now let me say a few things about the Viceroy. I was with him yesterday for more than two hours, and therefore could not come for the prayers. Fortunately the girl started the prayers as I had instructed her. Today also I talked with the Viceroy for two hours. He said that he was making an honest effort. He assured me that he was the last Viceroy. He said he never wanted to come to India. He wanted to be on the seas but he came here because he was prevailed upon.

He was sent here when the Labour Government of Great Britain decided to quit India, since he belongs to the royal family. The British want to depart from India with grace. He said he was eager to hand over this country even to a single Parsi if he came forward to take it, not to mention a Hindu or a Muslim. Why should I not listen to one who comes to me with such honest intentions? The British have done us enough harm in the past. But Lord Mountbatten has done us no harm. He says that he would like to be a servant right from today if it were possible. But it is not proper that he should run away while we are fighting with each other. He, after all, belongs to a brave race. Why should he run away? He is thinking of the manner in which he should leave the country. He is making good efforts. He is proceeding honourably. If we too proceed accordingly, what has never before happened will happen now. If anyone wants to accommodate a fellow who would not conduct himself honourably but would act barbarously, let him learn from me how to do it. I am a prisoner of the Viceroy till Friday. Jawahar also wants to detain me here. After three days I shall tell you everything. I do not want to hide anything. But what can possibly happen? Whatever the Congress decides will be done; nothing will be according to what I say. Mr writ runs no more. If it did the tragedies in the Punjab, Bihar and Noakhali would not

---

1 For the Inter-Asian Relations Conference
2 Vide “Interview with Lord Mountbatten”, 1-4-1947, and “Interview With Lord Mountbatten”, 1-4-1947 have happened. No one listens to me any more. I am a small man. True, there was a time when mine was a big voice. Then everyone obeyed what I said; now neither the Congress nor the Hindus nor the Muslims listen to me. Where is the Congress today? It is disintegrating. I am crying in the wilderness. Today everyone can forsake me but God will not. He has His devotee tested. An English poem\(^1\) describes God as the “Hound of Heaven”. He is the retriever of dharma, i.e., He seeks out dharma. It would be enough if He hears me. When God rules your hearts you will do only as He bids. We should therefore behave like rational creatures. We ought not to let loose our tongues at the slightest provocation.

[From Hindi]

Prarthana-Pravachan—Part I, pp. 5-11

223. TALK WITH MANU GANDHI

April 1, 1947

It is here that my non-violence will undergo its true test. But you are in charge of conducting the prayer. The purity and sincerity with which you conduct the prayer is sure to have its impact on the general public. The people will learn a new lesson through it. Your responsibility in this regard is indeed great. And if the recitation of Ramanama is from the heart Rama will himself inspire right-mindedness in all. I have no doubt about it.

[From Gujarati]

Biharni Komi Agman, p. 118

\(^1\) By Francis Thompson (1859-1907)
224. A LETTER

April 2, 1947

I have come here but I could see the Sardar only for a few minutes. His field of work has grown so vast that I do not like to engage him in talks. I would rather not encroach upon his time even to know his views about me and about Harijan. When I look at the work-schedule of the Cabinet I feel as if I had more time than they. It looks surprising, yet it is true.

[From Gujarati]
Biharni Komi Agman, p. 120

225. ADVICE TO MAHARAJA OF KAPURTHALA

April 2, 1947

All you can expect to hear from me is that you should cease to be a ruler and become a servant of the people. I can say no more.

[From Gujarati]
Biharni Komi Agman, p. 121

226. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

DELHI,
April 2, 1947

BROTHERS AND SISTERS,

If there is anybody who intends today to object to the prayers, as was done yesterday, I should like to be informed so that I may not begin the prayers at all. I do not wish to hold the prayers in the face of opposition by anyone.

Two persons stood up and said, “If you wish to have your prayers you should hold them in the grounds outside this Hindu temple.”

GANDHIJI: This temple belongs to Bhangis. I too am a Bhangi. It would be a different matter if the Trustees object. I shall hold the prayers in this very place if you would let me do so.

A YOUNG MAN: This temple belongs to the public. We have seen what has

---

1 This was given to Sir Jagatjit Singh Bahadur, who met Gandhiji and sought his advice.
happened in the Punjab. We shall certainly not allow you to hold the prayers.

GANDHIJI: I do not wish to enter into an argument. Let me tell you with due respect that you can’t represent the Bhangis. I am a Bhangi by choice. I have removed night-soil. If I ask you, you will not be able to do so. Even so if you object I shall not hold the prayers.

“We wish to hear the prayers. We want to have the prayers”, people shouted.

GANDHIJI: Among these thousands of people you are the only two persons who are putting an obstruction. If does not behove you. I know you are full of anger. I shall have the prayers, but not unless you calm yourselves and try to understand.

The young man shouted: “If you want to recite the verses of the Gita in a mosque, will the Muslims allow you to do so? We have witnessed so much in the Punjab.”

GANDHIJI: It is not necessary to shout. You are not protecting Hindu dharma by doing so, in fact you are murdering it. I am not postponing the prayer out of fear. If anybody wants to stop me once I have started the prayers I shall not stop even if I am killed. And you will see I shall be reciting Rama Rahim and Krishna Karim when I breathe my last. I have told you that I am a Bhangi, a Christian, a Muslim, besides of course being a Hindu. How can you stop me when Badshah Khan is here with me? But you may stop me, even a child can do so.

YOUNG MAN: Go to the Punjab.

GANDHIJI: What shall I do by going there? I am straining every nerve to do what service I can for the Punjab, Bihar and Noakhali even while remaining here.

Some persons tried to remove the young man.

GANDHIJI: Please do not push him. Be patient.

YOUNG MAN: Give us four minutes, we would like to talk to you.

GANDHIJI I don’t have the time and I don’t want to enter into an argument. I would only urge upon you respectfully to tell me in the affirmative or negative [whether I should hold the prayer or not].

YOUNG MAN: We shall not allow you to hold the prayers.

---

1 According to the source after his return from Noakhali, Gandhiji replaced the refrain Bhaj man pyare  Sitaram by Bhaj man pyare Rama Rahim, bhaj man pyare Krishna Karim.
GANDHIJI: Everyone should remain seated peacefully. I am going. No one should molest these persons. You may consider this to be your triumph but is it so? Is it bravery to stab anybody in the back? I must say that by doing so you are murdering Hinduism. You must try to think and understand. I will put the same question to you tomorrow and if you object to the prayers I shall go away.

[From Hindi]
Prarthana-Pravachan—Part I, pp. 11-3

227. SPEECH AT INTER-ASIAN RELATIONS CONFERENCE

April 2, 1947

I do not think that I should apologize to you for having to speak in a foreign tongue. I wonder if this loud speaker carries my voice to the farthest end of this vast audience. If some of those who are far away are unable to hear what I may say, it will be the fault of the loud speaker.

I was going to tell you that I do not wish to apologize. I dare not. You cannot understand the provincial language which is my mother tongue. I do not want to insult you by speaking in my own language (Guja-rati). Our national speech in Hindustani. I know that it will be a long time before it can be made into an international speech. For international commerce, undoubtedly, English occupies the first place. I used to hear that French was the language of diplomacy. I was told when I was young that if I wanted to go from one end of Europe to the other, I must try to pick up French. I tried to learn French in order that I may be able to make myself understood. There is a rivalry between French and English. Having been taught English I have naturally to resort to that language.

I was wondering as to what I was to say to you. I wanted to collect my thoughts but, let me confess to you, I had no time. Yet I had promised yesterday that I would try to say a few words. While I was coming with Badshah Khan I asked for a little piece of paper and pencil. I got a pen instead of a pencil. I tried to scribble a few words. You will be sorry to hear from me that that piece of paper is not by my side though I remember what I wanted to say.

1 The version in Harijan entitled “The Message of Asia”, has been collated with The Hindu report. More than 25,000 persons attended the concluding session presided over by Sarojini Naidu. Gandhiji spoke in Hindi.
You, friends, have not seen the real India and you are not meeting in conference in the midst of real India. Delhi, Bombay, Madras, Calcutta, Lahore—all these are big cities and are, therefore, influenced by the West.

I then thought of a story. It was in French and was translated for me by an Anglo-French philosopher. He was an unselfish man. He befriended me without having known me because he always sided with the minorities. I was not then in my own country. I was not only in a hopeless minority but in a despised minority, if the Europeans in South Africa will forgive me for saying so. I was a coolie lawyer. At that time we had no coolie doctors, not coolie lawyers. I was the first in the field. You know perhaps what is meant by the word coolie.

This friend—his mother was a French woman and his father an Englishman—said: “I want to translate for you a French story. There were three scientists who went out from France in search of truth. They went to different parts of Asia. One of them found his way to India. He began to search. He went to the so-called cities of those times—naturally this was before British occupation, before even the Moghul period. He saw the so-called high-caste people, men and women, and he felt at a loss. Finally, he went to a humble cottage in a humble village. That was the cottage of a Bhangi and there he found the truth that he was in search of.”

If you really want to see India at its best, you have to find it in the humble Bhangi homes of such villages. There are 7,00,000 of such villages and 38 crores of people inhabit them.

If some of you see the villages, you will not be fascinated by the sight. You will have to scratch below the dung heap. I do not say that they ever were heavenly places. Today they are really dung-heaps. They were not like that before. What I say is not from history but from what I have seen myself. I have travelled from one end of India to the other and have seen the miserable specimen of humanity with lustreless eyes. They are India. In these humble cottages, in the midst of these dung-heaps, are to be found the humble Bhangis in whom you find the concentrated essence of wisdom.

Again, I have learnt from books—books written by English historians. We read books written in English by English historians but we do not write in our own mother tongue or in the national language—Hindustani. We study our history through English books rather than through the originals. That is the cultural conquest which India has undergone.

Stating that wisdom had come to the West from the East, Gandhiji said:

The first of these wise men was Zoroaster. He belonged to the East. He was followed by the Buddha who belonged to the East—India. Who followed the Buddha? Jesus, who came from the East. Before Jesus was Moses who belonged to Palestine though he was born in Egypt. After Jesus came Mohammed. I omit any reference to Krishna and Rama and other lights. I do not call them lesser lights but they are less known to the literary world. All the same I do not know of a single person in the world to match these men of Asia. And then what happened? Christianity became disfigured when it went to the West. I am sorry to have to say that. I would not talk any further.

I have told you the story in order to make you understand that what you see in the big cities is not the real India. Certainly, the carnage that is going on before our very eyes is a shameful thing. As I said yesterday, do not carry the memory of that carnage beyond the confines of India.

What I want you to understand is the message of Asia. It is not to be learnt through the Western spectacles or by imitating the atom bomb. If you want to give a message to the West, it must be the message of love and the message of truth. I want you to go away with the thought that Asia has to conquer the West through love the truth. I do not want merely to appeal to your heads. I want to capture your hearts.

Of course, I believe in “one world”. How can I possibly do otherwise, when I became an inheritor of the message of love that these great unconquerable teachers left for us? In this age of democracy, in this age of awakening of the poorest of the poor, you can redeliver this message with the greatest emphasis. You will complete the conquest of the West not through vengeance because you have been exploited, but with real understanding. I am confident that if all of you put your hearts together—not merely heads—to understand the secret of the message these wise men of the East have left to us, and if we really become worthy of that great message, the conquest of the West will be complete. This conquest will be loved by the West itself.

The West is today pining for wisdom. It is despairing of the multiplication of the atom bomb, because atom bombs mean utter destruction not merely of the West but of the whole world, as if the prophesy of the Bible was going to be fulfilled and there was to be a perfect deluge. It is up to you to tell world of its wickedness and sin—that is the teaching your teachers and my teachers have taught Asia.

Harijan, 20-4-1947, and The Hindu, 3-4-1947

228. TELEGRAM TO SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA

PATNA,
April 3, 1947

SATISH BABU
KAZIRKHIL
CAMP NOAKHALI

SEND BULLETIN IN ENGLISH.

GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

229. A TALK

April 3, 1947

We must project ourselves in a better light in foreign countries. Foreigners observe us with a view to learning something from us. But we, in our turn, come under their spell. As a matter of fact we should try to impress them with what is our own. For instance, while there we should insist on wearing khadi, should ply the charkha regularly, abstain from smoking, drinking and taking tea and should have vegetarian food if possible. We must live as simply as possible, conforming to our way of life. If we do this, we shall be able to impress the people there and enhance our country’s glory. We should demonstrate to them the advantages of our way of life. What is the true meaning of appointing our ambassadors in those countries or their ambassadors in our country? It means that these ambassadors, through their conduct and manner of dressing and their food habits, should reveal their own cultural heritage to the other country so that it can benefit from it. Such mutually advantageous exchanges would spread friendliness which in turn would promote world peace, and this

1 On the conduct of Indian ambassadors abroad would enable people to live in harmony and peace and make progress. In my opinion this is the basic purpose of appointing ambassadors in every country. No doubt there are distinct international advantages accruing from this in the commercial and economic spheres, but the most significant is the former advantage. Hence we must take great care to see that our representatives exhibit no undesirable trait. Then alone would we shine forth and rise from our present backward state. There is a saying in English that if wealth is lost nothing is lost, if health is lost much is lost but if honour is lost everything is lost.

[From Gujarati]
Biharni Komi Agman, pp. 130-1

230. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

NEW DELHI,
April 3, 1947

BROTHERS AND SISTERS,

Yesterday there were only two or three persons who wanted to stop the prayers, but today the matter has gone further. I have received a letter written by the president of some scavengers’ union. It says that I must not stay here. Just look at the ordeal an old man like me has to go through. But the president of the scavengers’ union here is another person. After all I am a scavenger myself and all my scavenger friends here listen to me. I have been staying here after consulting them and will continue to stay. Moreover, Jugal Kishore Birla is the boss here. He has put me up here. When the person who has accommodated me does not ask me to leave, why should I go?

Again today I shall ask you whether I should hold the prayer or not. But before that I would like to ask if you have understood what I said to you yesterday. If you have, you would have realized why I stopped the prayer yesterday. If somebody tells me not to hold the prayer or that, if I did, I may not include the recitation from the Koran, should I accept defeat and continue the prayer? I am not going to give up the prayer even if I have to lose my life. Those who stop the prayer in this manner do not advance Hinduism but harm it. Yesterday there were only two or three such persons; today there are many.

I am disturbed by what I heard today. I hope it is not true—namely, that the persons obstructing prayers belong to a big organization.

But those who do physical exercises and drill here every morning and are members of that organization love me. If they do not want me to stay here there is no point in my staying on. I must not remain here. But I had a talk with their leader. He said that it was not their intention to harm anyone. The Sangh was not formed to oppose anyone. True, they had not accepted my method of non-violence; but they were willing to confine themselves within the Congress discipline. So long as the Congress rules non-violently they would remain peaceful. He thus talked with me very cordially.

If you still want to stop me, then kindly do not come here from tomorrow. I do not wish to hold prayers in this manner. I am made of different stuff. If I am a Hindu, I am also a Muslim. And the Sikhs are almost Hindus. I have seen the Granth Sahib. In many parts it is Hinduism to the letter—the religion I follow. Hence, with great humility I request you to remain peaceful because I would stop the prayer even at a child’s wish. If you want to recite God’s name by creating a row you would be acting like a devil although you may be uttering the name of God. And I can never do the work of the devil. I am a devotee of God alone.

Please do not take it as cowardice on my part. Had you been in large numbers and had all of you insisted that I should not hold the prayer, I would certainly have carried on. I would have asked you to cut my throat and continued the prayer. But here in the presence of so many of you, a handful of persons want to stop me. If you suppress them and insist on my continuing the prayer it would be the act of a devil and I cannot follow the devil. He who is God’s enemy is the devil. I cannot co-operate with the devil. My method of resisting is like Rama’s. During the battle between Rama and Ravana Vibhishana asked Rama how he would fight against Ravana without a chariot. Rama then pointed out how one could fight a war with the help of qualities like truthfulness, valour and so on. Rama was a devotee of God and talked like one. I have regarded Rama not as God but as a devotee. Later on from a devotee he came to be regarded as God. Tulsidas too has described Rama as without a body. This One without form pervades all forms. Him we worship. I am a worshipper of this Rama. How can I ever worship Ravana? You may kill me, spit in my face but I shall go on repeating _Rama Rahim_ and _Krishna Karim_ till my last breath. And even at the moment you shower blows on me I shall not blame you. Nor shall I complain to God whatever may be done to me. I am His devotee. I shall accept His wish.

1 The Rashtriya wayamsevak Sangh

But today, even if a child wants me to stop, I shall stop the prayer. I shall leave the place. Please remain seated in silence and do not indulge in arguments. Silence is also a form of prayer, and my prayer is not meant for the world to see. It is for peace of mind, for cleansing the heart. In the present circumstances we cannot cleanse our hearts by praying while they are full of anger. Hence, let us consider silence itself as prayer.

If people forced me down from all sides, stopped me from praying and under pain of bodily injury I discontinued the prayer it would be irreligion, not religion. It would not cleanse our hearts. What face would I have to go and tell the Hindus of Noakhali not to be afraid and to go on repeating Ramanama? That is why I ask you to understand this peaceful method of mine. How can I carry on the prayer if all of you want to stop me? But I would continue the _Ramdhun_ and _Rama Rahim Krishna Karim_, and so on and leave the place if a child wants me to do so.

Now I ask you to reply ‘yes’ or ‘no’. Do not argue. Shall I conduct the prayer?

Some thirty persons stood up and said: “Do not hold the prayer, we do not want your prayers.”

GANDHIJI: Well, so, all of you are against it?

Two to three hundred persons cried out: “No, all of us are not against it. Do hold the prayer.”

G. No, there are too many people against it. I am defeated, you have won. Tomorrow more people can raise their hands. Even now your number is considerable. I can hold the prayer, but I have no desire to be killed at your hands. I want to live and work.

PEOPLE: Not all, only a few are not in favour.

G. That’s all right, there need not be more! Even these few can kill me if they want.

This was followed by shouting from both the sides and there was a great deal of noise. Gandhi stood at the edge of the dais and said:

Please listen. Do not get so excited. You are all Hindus. A Hindu ought to think calmly and speak after great thought and consideration. Please go home and think how the wound of the Punjab can be healed. I am also thinking about it as best as I can. But the wound is not going to be healed by getting angry.

With this Gandhiji finished his speech. But a voice came from the crowd: “Please answer one question before leaving. Why did you stop Ramdhun at Noakhali?" Stop it here too and hold your prayers in your room.”

G. I do not wish to give any answer here. Please leave this place and do not quarrel even after you have left.

Gandhiji then started to leave. In the meantime the police tried to restore order. This created confusion in the meeting. Then Gandhiji returned to the dais. People asked him to start the prayer. They offered to pacify those who were protesting. They said they would all sit down, and that they were all ready to lay down their lives for him, but he should not abandon the prayer.

G. If you are going to die let it be on my condition. Allmy life I have been teaching the art of laying down life and learning it myself. If you want to lay down your lives, you should not do it boiling with rage. You should meet death with the strength of coolness. Right now these people are confused. They think that it is only Gandhi who is going about doing all the harm. So, for the present, consider only my silence as my prayer. I know at present everyone's blood is boiling because of the events in the Punjab. Isn’t my own blood boiling? There is a fire raging even in my heart. I understand the problem of the Punjab fully well. The Punjabis are all my brothers. Right now they are all enraged. They must calm down. The people of Bihar were also angry. I have contained their anger. In the present situation we can make any headway only by containing our anger.

The police have taken away those few persons. How can I hold the prayer when they have been removed? Let them return to this place and sit here in silence and then we shall all pray together.

Just now, I am using my energy in thinking how to prevent what is going on. What else? Do you think I visit the Viceroy for dinner parties? We are both putting our heads together and trying to find out

1 According to the source Ramdhun was never stopped during prayers at Noakhali. A few Muslims did leave the prayer meeting when the Ramdhun started, but the prayer did not stop.

2 For reports of the interviews with the Viceroy on April 2 and 3, vide “Interview With Lord Mountbatten” and “Interview With Lord Mountbatten”, 3-4-1947 a way. He is more eager to put an end to all this chaos than I am. It is just as well that he should. I request you again to remain quiet. Silence by itself is prayer. I do not like those who protest being stopped by force.

When Gandhiji turned to go, people stopped him for the third time and said: “Why do you listen to those few persons who are causing obstruction? Actually, they have suffered nothing. It is we who have suffered in the Punjab—who have been wronged. But we are not preventing you. We request you to hold the prayer, if only for some time.”

G. You are right. But you must give them a chance to understand.

Some people said: “Will you answer our question?”

G. You just think. I am an old man. Can I keep standing and talk? I tell even the Viceroy that he should not expect me to talk standing. Do I have all that energy? But God makes me talk. He gives me strength. I am having [high] blood-pressure these days. Still He is pulling me along. Tomorrow I shall talk more provided there is no opposition.

Let those who are at the root of this opposition at least come to me and talk. If all they want is that I should not stay here I shall go away. There are many people who would have me stay with them. But I am a Bhangi, and am content to put up in the Bhangi Colony. I could even have all this accommodation here. They have only small holes to live in. I cannot stand it. I insist on cleanliness. If God grants me the strength, I shall start living in one of them.

May God be kind to all and grant independence to India.

[From Hindi]

Prarthana-Pravachan—Part I, pp. 14-9

231. OUTLINE OF DRAFT AGREEMENT

April 4, 1947

1. Mr. Jinnah to be given the option of forming a Cabinet.

2. The selection of the Cabinet is left entirely to Mr. Jinnah. The members may be all Muslims, or all non-Muslims, or they may be

1 At the end of his interview with the Viceroy on April 4, Gandhiji dictated this to Lord Ismay, Chief of Staff. Vide “Letter to Lord Ismay”, 5-4-1947 and “Interview with Lord Mountbatten”, 4-4-1947

2 Ibid
representatives of all classes and creeds of the Indian people.

3. If Mr. Jinnah accepted this offer, the Congress would guarantee to co-operate freely and sincerely, so long as all the measures that Mr. Jinnah’s Cabinet bring forward are in the interests of the Indian people as a whole.

4. The sole referee of what is or is not in the interests of India as a whole will be Lord Mountbatten, in his personal capacity.

5. Mr. Jinnah must stipulate, on behalf of the League or of any other parties represented in the Cabinet formed by him that, so far as he or they are concerned, they will do their utmost to preserve peace throughout India.

6. There shall be no National Guards or any other form of private army.

7. Within the framework hereof Mr. Jinnah will be perfectly free to present for acceptance a scheme of Pakistan even before the transfer of power, provided however, that he is successful in his appeal to reason and not to the force of arms which he abjures for all time for this purpose. Thus, there will be no compulsion in this matter over a province or a part thereof.

8. In the Assembly the Congress has a decisive majority. But the Congress shall never use that majority against the League policy simply because of its identification with the League but will give its hearty support to every measure brought forward by the League Government, provided that it is in the interest of the whole of India. Whether it is in such interest or not shall be decided by Lord Mountbatten as man and not in his representative capacity.

9. If Mr. Jinnah rejects this offer, the same offer to be made mutatis mutandis to Congress.\footnote{1}

\footnote{1} A volunteer corps organized by the Muslim League

\footnote{\textit{Gandhiji’s Correspondence with the Government, 1944-47}, pp. 238-9}

\footnote{For further developments, \textit{vide} letters to Lord Ismay, “Letter to Lord Ismay”, 5-4-1947 and “Letter from Lord Ismay”, 6-4-1947 and “Letter from Lord Mountbatten”, 7-4-1947}
232. TALK WITH MANU GANDHI

April 4, 1947

Whatever has been lately happening during the prayer meetings is a measure of my own purity. I shall succeed to the extent that I am pure. The responsibility lies as much on you. The success of my action depends on you. We might have left Noakhali; but the yajna is the same. I am being tested no doubt. But you are being put to a greater test because the person conducting the prayers has his own influence. If there is not the slightest negligence, the frequent bleeding of your nose must stop. You must look after yourself as much as you look after me and my belongings, for you too are one of them. Then alone would you succeed.

[From Gujarati]

Biharni Komi Agman, p. 137

233. TALK WITH REFUGEES

April 4, 1947

Q. You tell people to discard arms, but in the Punjab the Muslims kill the Hindus at sight. You have no time even to go to the Punjab. Do you want us to be butchered like sheep?

