I did hear about the death of Jack Hoyland’s son. Andrews was then here. We sent a joint cable of condolence, and I had a full account of the death from Hoyland. It was a sad thing. Mira returns on the 22nd bringing with her Khan Saheb’s daughter who was having her education in London. Mary Barr is here from her village home and has brought a friend just arrived from England. Mary has taken wonderfully to the Ashram life. The weather here just now is superb. Ramdas returned with Ba four or five days ago. He is very weak, but I think he will pick up strength here. Andrews is likely to be here in December, for a fortnight or so. How is Menon doing? Love to you all.

BAPU

MRS. ESTHER MENON
TANJORE

From a photostat: No. 132. Courtesy: National Archives of India. Also My Dear Child, pp. 108-9

398. LETTER TO SHANKERLAL BANKER

November 14, 1934

MY DEAR SHANKERLAL,

I have gone through the papers in connection with the prize competition. Without prejudice to his right to get the prize on fulfilling the conditions laid down, it strikes me that the machine seems to be otherwise useful. We might ask Kirloskar Brothers to let us buy some machines so as to enable us to experiment on them and find out by experience their workability, also defects if any, and determine finally whether we can declare the machine as the prize-winner or whether we can, without giving the prize, provide a market for the machine. From all the descriptions I have received of the machine it appears to me to be complicated and too unworkable to win the prize. But we might be able to make use of the machine in order to supply the hand-spun yarn to our depots and to those who may desire to take in hand-spun yarn. We might also by making extensive experiments find out whether the yarn is equal to the mill yarn from the point of view of weavers. If you think that this may be done, I would send for a representative of Kirloskar Brothers and talk to him unless you think that the time is not ripe for such conversation or that if the conversations are carried on they should be carried on by you. Kirloskar Brothers did write to me offering to send a machine and Sjt. Kale so as to enable me to watch its working. I send you a copy of my reply\(^1\) to them. But after having read the papers sent by you I feel that I ought to invite him to send the machine and Sjt. Kale\(^2\) and I must make time to watch the working of the machine and put someone also at the machine.

1 This is not available.

Encl. 1

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

399. LETTER TO G. SITARAMA SASTRY

November 14, 1934

DEAR SITARAMA SASTRY,

I have gone through your report on hand-pounded rice. I would like you to send me a sample of the rice and corresponding sample of the same quality of milled rice. Have you inquired about the difference in nutritive value between unpolished rice from the mills and unpolished rice pounded by the hand? Will you also describe the village instruments for husking the rice? What use do you make of the husk? What is the daily wage earned for husking for eight hours and the wage for spinning for the same time in the same area? What is the difference between the price of mill-husked rice and that of hand-husked rice? Is there any difference in the quantity eaten by rice-eaters of mill-husked rice and hand-husked rice? Is this activity self-supporting?

SHRI SITARAMA SASTRY
CHANDOLE (GUNTUR DT.)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 Not available
2 Vide “Letter to Kirloskar Brothers”, 24-11-1934.
400. LETTER TO FRANCISCA STANDENANTH

November 14, 1934

I have not been able to reply to your letter of 23rd September up to now, though I often think of you both. Of course, 2nd October was the birthday, as it always is, according to the Christian calendar. How are you both keeping? I hope you are regularly getting your copy of Harijan. Mira is expected here on the 22nd. As you know, she went to America for a fortnight and did very good work there as also in England.

MRS. FRANCISCA STANDENATH
TRAUTMAUSDORFGASSE NO. 1
GRAZ STYRIA, AUSTRIA, EUROPE

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

401. LETTER TO HARIDAS T. MUZUMDAR

November 14, 1934

MY DEAR HARIDAS,

Please do not expect me to give you any messages. I have simply run-dry just now, and have no desire to send any messages anywhere.

Yours sincerely,

HARIDAS T. MUZUMDAR, PH.D.
“INDIA TODAY AND TOMORROW”
20 VESEY STREET, NEW YORK, N. Y.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 The reference is to the addressee’s husband Frederic.
402. LETTER TO KESHAV

November 14, 1934

MY DEAR KESHAV,

I have just seen No. 21 of The Servant of Christ. It would appear that the Christa Seva Sangh has now altered its scope and has become a proselytizing agent. It seems to me to be unfortunate.

Yours sincerely,

BROTHER KESHAV

CHRISTA SEVA SANGH, AUNDH

KIRKEE

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

403. LETTER TO HAREKRUSHNA MAHTAB

November 14, 1934

MY DEAR MAHTAB,

I have your letter. I think you have to put up with your wife. You have to take her with you.

With reference to your proposed gift I would like you to think it over well before you do the thing. But if both you and your wife have decided to make the gift, I shall thankfully accept it provided that you would work at the place in conjunction with a committee.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI HAREKRUSHNA MAHTAB

KARMA-MANDIR, AGARAPARA

BARHAT-TIRLCHANPUR P. O., via BHADRAK (ORISSA)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
404. LETTER TO DR. S. C. ANAND

November 14, 1934

DEAR DR. ANAND,

I appreciate your offer to assist the All-India Village Industries Association that is being formed. I would like you also to tell me what work you and the two friends whom you mention will do. Can Mr. Goyal give me the comparative food values of gur and sugar? I am passing on your letter to Sjt. Kumarappa.

Yours sincerely,

DR. S. C. ANAND, M.B.B.S., LIEUT. I.M.S. (RETD.)
DASSAN STREET
DELHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

405. LETTER TO BISWA MOHAN SANYAL

November 14, 1934

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter. The Association that is in course of formation will undoubtedly take whatever service you can give. But I would not think of advising you to give up your present occupation in becoming a whole-time worker for the Association. I do not yet know how many and on what scale paid workers would be taken.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI BISWA MOHAN SANYAL (KAVIRAJ)
5/3 A MADHU GUPTO LANE
BOWBAZAR, CALCUTTA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
406. LETTER TO G. MUKERJI

November 14, 1934

Dear Friend,

Your letter and copies of your prospectus. The prospectus has made no appeal to me. I shall be glad to know what work you can do. I am passing on your letter to Sjt. Kumarappa.

Yours sincerely,

Shri G. Mukerji, M.Sc. (California, U. S. A.)
Bansberia P. O.
Dh. Hughly

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

407. LETTER TO C. HANUMANTRA RAO

November 14, 1934

My dear Hanumantha Rao,

I have your letter. You cannot use mill-yarn even for making tapes. Those who want to make tapes may well devote a little time to spinning the yarn required for tape.

Yours sincerely,

Shri C. Hanumantha Rao
Goutami Satyagraha Ashram
Sitanagaram, via Kovvur

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

408. LETTER TO PURNA CHANDRA SARMAH

November 14, 1934

My dear Purna Chandra Sarma,

I have your letter which you did well in writing to me. I would like you to give me your accounts up to date.

I hope that Annadababu has been to you to guide you regarding spinning.

Yours sincerely,

Shri Purna Chandra Sarma
Secretary
The Congress Relief Committee
Nowgong (Assam)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
409. LETTER TO V. BHASHYAM IYENGAR
November 14, 1934

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter. Of course, I shall make full use of your generous offer. I am passing on your letter to Sjt. Kumarappa.

Yours sincerely,

DEWAN BAHADUR V. BHASHYAM IYENGAR
"VARDHANI"
KILPAUK, MADRAS

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

410. LETTER TO TEJ RAM
November 14, 1934

DEAR RAI BAHADUR,

I have gone through your scheme of improvement of villages. You will pardon me for saying that it does not appeal to me as practical. What are the improved tools that you have made? I would like you to follow the progress of the Association that is being formed and then say whether you can make any contribution to it. I am passing your letter on to Sjt. Kumarappa.

Yours sincerely,

RAI BAHADUR TEJ RAM
RETIRED EXECUTIVE ENGINEER
SANDA ROAD, LAHORE

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

411. LETTER TO M. D. SHAHANE
November 14, 1934

MY DEAR SHAHANE,

I was delighted to receive your offer on behalf of the Society’s C. P. Branch. You may know that I am already in correspondence with Dravid.¹ He will see me at the time that will most suit him. And So far as I am concerned, all the members can join him when he Comes.

The earlier the better. Meanwhile, I am passing your letter on to Sjt.
Kumarappa.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI M. D. SHAHANE, B.A.
SERVANTS OF INDIA SOCIETY
CRADDOCK TOWN, NAGPUR

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

412. LETTER TO N. R. KOLARKAR

November 14, 1934

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. Yours is an ambitious programme. It reads well. Of its possibilities, I, as a layman, can say nothing.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI N. R. KOLARKAR
KURLA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

413. LETTER TO DUNCAN GREENLEES

November 18, 1934

DEAR DUNCAN,

I was glad to receive your letter. I shall follow the development of your idea of rural school with great interest. Of course, I know your love for India. You may depend upon my exploiting it as much as I can. At the present moment Frontier is on the horizon. When a corporate fast comes, you will certainly find your name in the list of the Brotherhood. Both the Marys\(^1\) are doing well.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

---

\(^1\) F. Mary Barr and Mary Chesley
414. LETTER TO PRIVATE SECRETARY TO VICEROY

November 15, 1934

DEAR FRIEND,

His Excellency has probably seen the public statement¹ I have made of my intention to visit the Frontier Province as soon as possible consistently with my preoccupations. I am likely to be free after the middle of December. My object in wishing to visit the Frontier Province is to be with its people, to know them at first hand and to understand how far the teaching of non-violence by Khan Saheb Abdul Ghaffar Khan has permeated his followers. It is also my intention to help them in the development of their village industries. I need hardly say that I have no desire whatsoever to inculcate among the Frontier people the spirit of disobedience (civil or otherwise) of authority.

Though I know that there is no legal bar against my entering the Frontier Province, I have no desire to do anything that may bring me in conflict with the Government. It is my earnest effort to avoid such conflict in so far as it is humanly possible.

Will you kindly ascertain His Excellency’s wishes in the matter and let me know them?²

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

Home Department, Political, File No. 4/8/35, pp. 57-9. Courtesy: National Archives of India. Also The Bombay Chronicle, 12-12-1934

² On November 25 E. C. Mieville, Private Secretary to the Viceroy’ replied: “His Excellency is glad that you have consulted him in this matter and notes that you have no desire to do anything that may bring you into conflict with the Government. He has discussed the question with the Government of the North West Frontier Province and with his Council and regrets that he and they are unanimously of opinion that it is not desirable for you to pay a visit to the Frontier Province at the present time. He trusts that you will act in accordance with his wishes.”
415. LETTER TO AGATHA HARRISON

November 15, 1934

DEAR AGATHA,

I have your letter together with a copy of your letter to Dr. Ansari. I understand all you say. Whatever is possible and desirable shall be done on the publication of the Joint Committee’s Report.¹

I have not yet sent my letter about Utmanzai². It is cooking itself, but pressure of work serves as a good excuse for putting it off.

If I don’t write a separate letter to C. F. Andrews you please give him my love and tell him I have received his letter. I endorse his plan about coming here on a flying visit. In these days of actual flying, a flying visit through the fastest steamers afloat is, I suppose, a tame affair, though even the tame affair is too fast for me. Here is a copy of my letter to the Viceroy.³

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 1482

416. LETTER TO RABINDRANATH TAGORE⁴

November 15, 1934

DEAR GURUDEV,

The All-India Village Industries Association which is being formed under the auspices of the Indian National Congress will need the assistance of expert advisers in the various matters that will engage its attention. It is not intended to trouble them to meet together or even the members of the Association, but merely to advise the Association whenever reference is made to them in matters in which they possess special knowledge, e.g., in chemical analysis, food values, sanitation, distribution of village manufactures, improved methods of

¹ Joint Parliamentary Committee’s Report on constitutional reform
² Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan’s village
³ Vide the preceding item.
⁴ Similar letters were addressed to M. Vishvesvarayya, Purushottamdas Thakurdas, G. D. Birla and others.

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
developing village industries, co-operation, disposal of village waste as manure, methods of village transport, education (adult and other), care of infants, and many other things too numerous to mention here.

Will you please allow your name to appear among such advisers of the All-India Village Industries Association? Naturally I approach you in the belief that the object of the Association and the method of approach to its task have your approval.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G.N. 4643

417. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA
November 15, 1934

CHI. SHARMA,

I was expecting you to come; Narahari gave [your] message today. I have already answered your letter. How can I say that all are reassured? Vinoba however has no fears and wants you to come over here. You yourself have to put everyone at ease. I have heard of the Surendra episode; it is rather painful. I can understand how the mistake occurred but it is not very significant. Even if you had read the letter I would not have taken it to imply your acceptance of his suggestions. You will see his suggestions when you come here. But of what use could other people’s suggestions be to you? only what appeals to your heart is the right thing for you. Come over; pleases do. You should delay no more.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, facing p. 116
418. INTERVIEW TO “THE MANCHESTER GUARDIAN”

[November 15, 1934]

[GANDHIJI:] I am ready for your questions.

[CORRESPONDENT:] Does your retirement from the Congress mean that you take no more interest in politics?

[G.] No.

He had no intention of immediately returning to active politics, but it certainly did not mean retirement for the present, he explained, in guiding the new Village Industries Organization, in solving the Hindu-Moslem problem, and continuing the campaign against untouchability. He said:

All these movements will be non-political in the narrow sense of the term.

[c.] Supposing that the Joint Committee’s report gives even less than the White Paper, what will be your reaction to it?

He was quite prepared to believe that the forecast was correct, but did not seem willing to commit himself. He contrasted the procedure actually followed by the British Government in regard to the reforms with that outlined by Mr. MacDonald in the House of Commons soon after the termination of the second session of the Round Table Conference. The Prime Minister had spoken of a settlement with India’s representatives (though, Mr. Gandhi pointed out with emphasis, the Round Table delegates were only nominees of the British Government) to be initialled by both parties, and that settlement would then be the basis of Parliamentary legislation.

[c.] The same thing had happened in Ireland.

[G.] Yes, the Irish parallel does hold good—but not just yet.

At this point, I drew his attention to a recent statement by General Smuts in Britain. General Smuts had said that it was an act of faith on the part of the British to have conferred self-government on South Africa, and a similar act of faith in regard to India would, in his view, be justified by subsequent results.

1 In the introductory paragraph the correspondent states that the interview began after Gandhiji signed the letters seeking assistance from “experts” to become advisers of the All-India Village Industries Association. Vide “Letter to Rabindranath Tagore”, 15-11-1934.

2 Held in 1931.
[G.] I was in South Africa at the time and can see no similarity between the two cases. In the case of the Boers, it was not an act of faith, but making a virtue of necessity.

[c.] How?

[G.] The Boer War was a virtual defeat for the British. They were sick and weary of the fight, and their resources were getting exhausted. of course, as an Imperial Power, they could have carried it on; but the tide was rising fast in favour of Campbell-Bannerman. King Edward’s instructions to Lord Milner were to conciliate the Boers. I will grant that whatever was done was done not grudgingly but handsomely.

[c.] And so?

[G.] And so, I go back to the statement\(^1\) I made some weeks ago to the Con,ress in Bombay—that is, no constitutional agitation will ever achieve freedom for a country.

Nothing was ever gained that way, according to his reading of French or British history, and he had put that point to Lord Lothian and a few others with whom he had discussed the Indian problem at Oxford three years ago.

Mr. Gandhi made it clear beyond doubt that his conviction was that Britain would never grant to India self-government of the kind South Africa enjoys today so long as she has “nothing to act upon”.

She does not feel that civil resistance has been successful; there is a sense of exultation that the movement has been paralysed.

Pursuing the point further, I asked him whether apart from the circumstances under which self-government was granted to South Africa (and which do not, according to him, exist in India), the contents of that measure would satisfy him—in other words, what is the independence he aims at?

He did not seem disposed to discuss the question in detail. But he said the goal, for him, was defined in the concluding portion of his statement\(^2\) at the second Round Table Conference; if membership of the British Commonwealth was forced upon India, he would resist it; but if it was voluntary partnership, terminable at will, he would have no objection to such an association. So far as he was concerned, it was the statement of an “eternal position”.

But at present he is “immersed” in the building-up of the Village Industries Organization. His recent walking tour through the villages in connection with the

---

\(^1\) Vide “Speech at subjects committee meeting A.I.C.C.”, 23-10-1934.

\(^2\) Vide “Speech at plenary session of round table conference”, 1-12-1931.
anti-untouchability campaign was a revelation to him. The village people seemed to him “inert and despondent’. Their poverty-stricken conditions have been making “a more and more forcible appeal”. The revival of village industries would infuse life into occupations that are now dying out. He remarked

Uninteresting it may be for some people, but it will be most solid work.

He is visualizing to himself the 700,000 villages of India, and his ambition is to spread out his workers in as many as possible.

Spinning, on which he has set his heart for many years, he confessed, is the lowest paid of rural occupations. But that will not come under the new organization, since it is being directed by the All-India Spinners, Association More food for the villagers—and food of the right kind—is his principal aim. He makes no secret of his intention to start a campaign against mill-polished rice and mill-ground wheat. In this, he said, some distinguished research workers in diet problems agree with him.
He will also encourage the use of coarse sugar (gur) as against the factory refined article. He will also give rural sanitation and hygiene a prominent place in his programme.

[1] Again, there must be no exploitation of the movement either by politicians or by anyone else—not even in a distant fashion.

_The Hindu, 25-11-1934_

419. LETTER TO S. SATYAMURTI

[Before November 16, 1934]

Your wire. My congratulations. These brilliant Congress victories fill me with delight.

_The Bombay Chronicle, 17-11-1934_

420. LALAJI ANNIVERSARY

When politics so called are forgotten, when many other transitory things which absorb public attention are also forgotten, Lalaji’s great love for Harijans and his equally great services born of

---

1 The report has the date-line “Madras, November 16”.

2 In elections to the Legislative Assembly

3 Lajpat Rai died on November 17, 1928.
that love will be remembered, not only by the millions of Harijans, but by the many more millions of caste Hindus—indeed by the whole of India. Lalaji was a great humanitarian, and his humanitarianism covered the whole of humanity. Each succeeding anniversary should make Lalaji live more truly in our lives than the previous. Death for reformers like Lala Lajpat Rai is mere dissolution of the body. Their work and their ideas do not die with the body. Their power grows with time. We feel it more, as with the march of time it is seen outside of its setting in the weak flesh. The impermanent in man dies with him. The permanent part of him triumphs over the ashes and appears clearer to us for their removal. Let us cherish Lalaji’s memory in that light and let Harijan Hindus and caste Hindus make a fresh resolve in Lalaji’s memory to cleanse society of the curse of untouchability—the former by ridding themselves of the defects arising out of their suppression, and the latter by shedding the sin of the feeling of superiority, which belief in natal untouchability implies.

Harijan, 16-11-1934

421. VILLAGE INDUSTRIES

As the author of the Congress resolutions\(^1\) on village industries and as the sole guide of the Association that is being formed for their promotion, it is but meet that I should, as far as possible, share with the public the ideas that are uppermost in my mind regarding these industries and the moral and hygienic uplift that is intimately associated with them.

The idea of forming the Association took definite shape during the Harijan tour as early as when I entered Malabar. A casual talk with a khadi worker showed to me how necessary it was to have a body that would make an honest attempt to return to the villagers what has been cruelly and thoughtlessly snatched away from them by the city-dwellers. The hardest hit among the villagers are the Harijans. They have but a limited choice of the industries that are open to the villagers in general. Therefore, when their industries slip away from their hands, they become like the beasts of burden with whom their lot is cast. Let the doubting reader peruse Prof. Malkani’s article reproduced elsewhere¹ and he will realize the truth of my statement.

\(^1\) Vide “Speech at Subjects Committee Meeting, A. I. C. C”, 24-10-1934.

But the villagers in general are not much better off today. Bit by bit they are being confined only to the hand-to-mouth business of scratching the earth. Few know today that agriculture in the small and irregular holdings of India is not a paying proposition. The villagers live a lifeless life. Their life is a process of slow starvation. They are burdened with debts. The moneylender lends, because he can do no otherwise. He will lose all if he does not. This system of village lending baffles investigation. our knowledge of it is superficial, in spite of elaborate inquiries.

Extinction of village industries would complete the ruin of the 7,00,000 villages of India.

I have seen in the daily Press criticism of the proposals I have adumbrated. Advice has been given to me that I must look for salvation in the direction of using the powers of nature that the inventive brain of man has brought under subjection. The critics say that water, air, oil and electricity should be fully utilized as they are being utilized in the go-ahead West. They say that control over these hidden powers of nature enables every American to have 33 slaves.

Repeat the process in India and I dare say that it will thirty-three times enslave every inhabitant of this land, instead of giving everyone thirty-three slaves.

Mechanization is good when the hands are too few for the work intended to be accomplished. It is an evil when there are more hands than required for the work, as is the case in India. I may not use a plough for digging a few square yards of a plot of land. The problem with us is not how to find leisure for the teeming millions inhabiting our villages. The problem is how to utilize their idle hours, which are equal to the working days of six months in the year. Strange as it may appear, every mill generally is a menace to the villagers. I have not worked out the figures, but I am quite safe in saying that every mill-hand does the work of at least ten labourers doing the same work in their villages. In other words he earns more than he did in his village at the expense of ten fellow-villagers. Thus spinning and weaving mills have deprived the villagers of a substantial means of livelihood. It is no answer in reply to say that they turn out cheaper, better cloth, if they do so at all. For, if they have displaced thousands of workers, the cheapest mill cloth is dearer than the dearest khadi woven in the villages. Coal is not dear for the coal-miner who can use it there and then, nor is khadi dear for the villager who manufactures his own khadi. But if the cloth manufactured in mills displaces village hands, rice mills and flour mills not only displace thousands of poor women workers, but damage the health of the whole population in the bargain. Where people have no objection to taking flesh diet and can afford it, white flour and polished rice may do no harm, but in India, where millions can get no flesh diet even where they have no objection to eating it, it they can get it, it is sinful to deprive them of nutritious and vital elements contained in whole-wheat meal and unpolished rice. It is time medical men and others combined to instruct the people on the danger attendant upon the use of white flour and polished rice.

¹ It appeared in Harijan, 23-11-1934, under the title “The Story of the Desert of Sind”.

354 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI

I have drawn attention to some broad glaring facts to show that the way to take work to the villagers is not through mechanization but that it lies through revival of the industries they have hitherto followed.

Hence the function of the All-India Village Industries Association must, in my opinion, be to encourage the existing industries and to revive, where it is possible and desirable, the dying or dead industries of villages according to the village methods, i.e., the villagers working in their own cottages as they have done from times immemorial. These simple methods can be considerably improved as they have been in hand-ginning, hand-carding, hand-spinning and hand-weaving.

A critic objects that the ancient plan is purely individualistic and can never bring about corporate effort. This view appears to me to be very superficial. Though articles may be manufactured by villagers in their cottages, they can be pooled together and profits divided. The villagers may work under supervision and according to plan. The raw material may be supplied from common stock. If the will to cooperative effort is created, there is surely ample opportunity for cooperation, division of labour, saving of time and efficiency of work. All these things are today being done by the All-India Spinners’ Association in over 5,000 villages.
But khadi is the sun of the village solar system. The planets are the various industries which can support khadi in return for the heat and the sustenance they derive from it. Without it, the other industries cannot grow. But during my last tour I discovered that, without the revival of the other industries, khadi could not make further progress. For villagers to be able to occupy their spare time profitably, the village life must be touched at all points. That is what the two Associations are expected to do.

Naturally they can have nothing to do with politics or political parties. The Congress, in my opinion, did well in making both the Associations autonomous and wholly non-political. All parties and all communities can combine to uplift the villages economically, morally and hygienically.

I know that there is a school of thought that does not regard khadi as an economic proposition at all. I hope that they will not be scared by my having mentioned khadi as the centre of village activities. I could not complete the picture of my mind without showing the inter-relation between khadi and the other village industries. Those who do not see it are welcome only to concentrate their effort on the other industries. But this, too, they will be able to do through the new Association, if they appreciate the background I have endeavoured to give in this article.

Harijan, 16-11-1934

422. LETTER TO DR. M. S. KELKAR

November 16, 1934

I have your letter. I have already told you that Satavlekar’s letters were destroyed by me because I was not interested in them. You are unnecessarily harsh on Satavlekar. He has nothing personal against you. After all, you went to Aundh because of his interest in you. You can’t help a man forming honest opinions although they may be baseless. I would, therefore, advise you strongly to dismiss the matter from your mind and simply concentrate on proving your fitness for the job you have undertaken.

1 Shripad Damodar Satavlekar
Ramdas had lost weight terribly. I have put him on unfertilized eggs obtained from Coimbatore. Do you know where I can get unfertilized eggs without difficulty? I have some addresses in Ahmedabad and Poona. If there is a nearer place that you know, I would like to get them from that place.

I return the correspondence with the Chief of Aundh.

DR. M. S. KELKAR
C/o J. G. GADRE, ESQ.
BHATWADI, BOMBAY 4

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

423. LETTER TO DAMODAR M. DAMLE

November 16, 1934

DEAR FRIEND,

I do not remember your thesis on “Damage to Crops by Wild Animals in India”. It must have escaped my attention either because I was travelling when your thesis was received or I was fasting. I understand your different experiments. At the present moment my aim is nothing so high as yours. I have no special knowledge of the methods of growing rich crops and it would be beyond the scope, at the present moment, of the Association which is in the process of formation. As to the destruction of crops by wild beasts it is essentially a matter for the Government and the legislators. This again falls outside the scope of the Association.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI DAMODAR M. DAMLE, B.A., LL.B.
WUN (BERAR)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
424. LETTER TO S. S. PANDE

November 16, 1934

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. Scheme or no scheme, if you have understood the seriousness of the resolution¹ and appreciate the method of approach to the work, I would like you to tackle the four things that are already before the public: pounding of rice by the hand, grinding of flour through the village chakki, purification and popularization of gur and restoration of better processes of tanning of hides in the villages.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI S. S. PANDE, B.A., LL.B., PLEADER
KHANDWA (C. P.)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

425. LETTER TO SUDHIR CHANDRA GHOSH

November 16, 1934

DEAR FRIEND,

Did I know anything about your Ashram when I was in Orissa? How long have you been working? Are you in touch with Gopabandhubabu? Who are your workers?

Yours sincerely,

SHRI SUDHIR CHANDRA GHOSH
ARULO SEVASHRAM, VILL. USUMA
FULNAKHARA P. O., CUTTACK DT.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ Vide “Speech at Subjects Committee Meeting, A. I. C. C.”, 24-10-1934.
426. LETTER TO DR. B. SUBRAHMANYAM

November 16, 1934

DEAR DOCTOR,

I had expected your letter and it has come, of course, I expect you to do a great deal in the direction of village work. Have you already begun the work of re-introducing the chakki, the hand-pounding of rice, the village kolu for pressing oil, and such other obviously simple things? You should take a census of the industries of villages served by you and make them busy hives of small industries instead of being full of drones as they have become.

Yours sincerely,

DR. B. SUBRAHMANYAM
HARIJANA SEVASRAMAM
SITHANAGARAM, via Kovvur
WEST GODAVARY Dt.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

427. LETTER TO HILDA CASHMORE

November 16, 1934

DEAR SISTER,

I have your undated letter. I shall be delighted to see you and Miss Dorothy Hersey on 4th December next at 3.30 p.m. I hope the time will suit you.

Yours sincerely,

MISS HILDA CASHMORE
FRIENDS CENTRE
ITARSI (C. P.)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
428. LETTER TO GOVERNING DIRECTOR,
PRINCE PEOPLE & CO.

November 16, 1934

GENTLEMEN,

I thank you for your letter of 11th instant. I would like to know what work you have already done and what you think you can do in respect of introducing the use of chakki-ground flour, hand-husked rice and village gur in your own lives and in the villages under your care. I would like also to see the constitution of your company.

Yours sincerely,

GOVERNING DIRECTOR
PRINCE PEOPLE & CO.
DARBHANGA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

429. LETTER TO DR. GOPICHAND BHARGAVA

WARDHA,
November 16, 1934

DEAR DR. GOPICHAND,

I shall be obliged if you would kindly answer the following questions:-

(1) Do you consider that unpolished rice is superior to polished rice from the nutritive standpoint?

(2) If unpolished rice is better than polished rice, is there any difference between unpolished rice turned out from mills and unpolished rice hand-pounded?

(3) Is there any difference in nutritive value between stone-ground whole wheatmeal on the indigenous chakki and whole wheatmeal ground in the ordinary mills?

(4) Is gur produced in the village kolus superior to the sugar manufactured in the sugar mills? And if it is, what are the contents of gur which make it more desirable and nutritious as an article of food than refined sugar manufactured in the sugar mills?

(5) Is oil pressed in the village kolus superior to the oil pressed in the oil mills?

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From the original: Dr. Gopichand Bhargava Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

430. LETTER TO RAJARAM R. BHOLE

WARDHA,
November 16, 1934

DEAR RAJARAM,

All people have to wander in the jungle some time or other in their lives. You are, therefore, no exception. Truth will dawn on you if you will patiently persevere. If we were God, we would know the ways of God. But we wisely regard them as inscrutable because of our awful limitations. A drop of water partakes of the nature of the ocean, but it is nothing compared to the ocean. If God may be likened to the ocean, we are infinitely less than ocean drops.

Yours,

BAPU

SHRI RAJARAM R. BHOLE
P.K. T. SANATORIUM
VONTIKOPPAL
MYSORE

From the original: R. R. Bhole Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library
431. LETTER TO MANEKLAL AND RADHA KOTHARI

November 16, 1934

CHI. MANEKLAL AND RADHA,

I got the letters from both of you. May the New Year prove prosperous for you. Ramdas has returned here. He can be said to be a little better.

Blessings from

BAPU

SIT. MANEKLAL
KHIRASRA, VIA RAJKOT
KATHIWAR

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./III

432. LETTER TO S. SRINIVASA SASTRI

November 17, 1934

DEAR BROTHER,

Though our hearts are one we seem to be living in different worlds of thought and action. This knowledge has been oppressing me of late. Just now I have an offer from the Servants of India Branch in Nagpur of full co-operation in the village industries work. I do not know how far this will materialize. But the offer is full-hearted and I shall make the most of it if we agree when the time for execution comes. But I am not sure that such co-operation will have your full approval. I do not know how far the movement for return to the village chakki and the rice husking mill and the like appeals to you.

This is merely to share my thoughts with you and to tell you how I long for your co-operation at some point of my many activities. And yet I want nothing from you that does not command the full approval of your reason. You are too true to act otherwise than in accordance with your reason. Your truthfulness is far more precious for me than your mere co-operation in my activities.
With love.¹

Yours,
M. K. GANDHI

Letters of Srinivasa Sastri, p. 272

433. LETTER TO MANZAR ALI

November 17, 1934

DEAR MANZAR ALI,

My postcard and your letter have crossed each other. Very strange! I never dreamt that you had prompted Sundarlal. Do I not know his effusiveness? His letter gave me the impression that he also offered his services together with yours. So I told him that I have no faith in either of you doing plodding manual work, but that if my fear was proved to be baseless I should be delighted. In reply he wrote saying that he had never any intention of offering his services. He simply wanted to come if it was so required to facilitate your approach. So I wrote to you the postcard which I hope you received. I sent it care of Uma Nehru not knowing your Unao address. If you will do plodding work without being fatigued, I would be delighted to inspan you and if you feel the need to come here to understand what is required you can come. If, however, you have understood the thing, begin operations at once as many have done on reading my statement². In the four things I have suggested I have given an ample preliminary which, if it was taken up enthusiastically, would put a few crore rupees into the pockets of the villagers without any very great effort or spectacular demonstration.

¹ In his reply dated November 23, the addressee wrote: “I have sent copies of your letter to a few intimate associates. If their replies indicate any more hopeful lines of co-operation than are now perceptible I shall address you again. To my unaided mind, you appear to be opening the first campaign of an endless and quixotic war against modern civilization. Long ago you proclaimed yourself its sleepless enemy, and now you would, if you could, turn it back on the course it has pursued for several millennia. I reel at the mere thought.

A deep-lying affinity calls us together occasionally, but life is heedless and draws us apart with no non-violent hands.”

² Vide “Statement to the press”, 8-11-1934.

SHRI MANZAR ALI
DOODH KI KOTHI”
GANGAGHAT, (UNAO Dt.)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

434. LETTER TO JAIRAMDAS DOULATRAM
November 17, 1934

MY DEAR JAIRAMDAS,

I have your letter. I shall await your further letter or your arrival before I write to Seth Shivratan.

From your letter I infer that Santram did not meet Kamalani at all, and he has sailed with Mirabehn before he could meet Kamalani. I am glad Anand is free.

I have bad news about Gidwani¹. Gangabehn wrote a pathetic letter. I sent a telegram in reply, and I have now full particulars from Gidwani. There seems to be no danger, but he is bed-ridden.

I hope Kumarappa gave you all the particulars about the proposed Board of the Association

I do hope that the publication of the constitution will now be expedited.

SHRI JAIRAMDAS DOULATRAM
BOMBAY 6

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ Choithram Gidwani
435. LETTER TO J. C. PANDIT

November 17, 1934

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. I am afraid I can render no help.

Yours sincerely,

J. C. PANDIT, B.SC., C.E.
EX-ENGINEER, BAREILLY DT. BOARD
DABBI BAZAR, MOHALLA SARIN, KUCHA ZARGAN
LAHORE

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

436. LETTER TO TARA SINGH

November 17, 1934

DEAR MASTER TARA SINGH,

I was delighted to have your letter. I am here till 15th December. I hope. The earlier you come the better. Khan Saheb, his brother and his son would be leaving here on the 24th for a brief tour in U. P. They may return about the 4th December. Khan Saheb after staying with me for about four days is likely to go to Bengal.

Yours sincerely,

MASTER TARA SINGH
22 ELPHINSTONE CIRCLE
BOMBAY

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
437. LETTER TO PANCHANAN BASU

November 17, 1934

MY DEAR PANCHANAN,

I was glad to have your letter of 13th November. I expect to hear further from you. Of course, I shall take from you all the work that you can give. I am passing your letter on to Sjt. Kumarappa.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI PANCHANAN BASU
KHADI MANDAL
E 75 COLLEGE STREET MARKET, CALCUTTA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

438. LETTER TO S. M. MUNSHI

November 17, 1934

BHAJ MUNSHI,

You have spared no effort. See that you do not fall ill. I hope you did not have to spend much. It will be a great achievement if both win. Your victory seems certain.

I am looking forward to Lilavati’s visit.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

I should like the constitution to be finalized as soon as possible.

SHRI K. M. MUNSHI, ADVOCATE
VASANTVILAS
RIDGE ROAD, BOMBAY

From Gujarati: C.W. 7561. Courtesy: K. M. Munshi

1 In the election to the Central Legislative Assembly
439. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

November 17, 1934

CHI. SHARMA,

You have the following alternatives:
(1) To live at Nimu’s place.
(2) To live at Janakibehn’s place.
(3) To live in a room on Jamnalalji’s farm.
(4) To live in one of the surrounding villages.
(5) To live with Surendra if he agrees.
(6) To live with Narandas.
(7) To live in Khurja with your brothers.

You can choose from amongst these. Possibly the seventh is the best. And it is the most natural of course. But maybe it is in your best interest to live away from your family. Send the enclosed letter to your brother.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, between pp. 116 and 117

440. LETTER TO BEHARILAL SHARMA

November 17, 1934

BHAI BEHARILAL,

You have sent Rs. 100 telegraphically to Sharma. I totally disapprove of it. There could have been no difficulty in meeting all his expenses from here and there is none even now. But I do not wish to throw away so much money if you can shoulder the burden without being inconvenienced. I want even more funds from those who can give. Have no worry for Sharma though his case

1 Vide the following item.
2 Before leaving Sabarmati for Wardha, Hiralal Sharma had requested his brother to send some money to enable him to go to Khurja.
is undoubtedly a difficult one. But it is all right as he is a sincere man. Tell me, why did you have to send the money telegraphically?

_Blessings from_
BAPU

[PS.]

Give me news of Draupadi and the boys.

From a facsimile of the Hindi: _Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha_, between pp. 118 and 119.

441. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

November 17, 1934

CHI. SHARMA,

You may give your answer 1 tomorrow evening or even later. Where is the figure ‘8’ that you want to be changed to indicate the month ‘11’? Whatever it is, you may take it as done. 2

I have added a little more to the letter to your brother and you may do the rest.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

From a facsimile of the Hindi: _Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha_, facing p. 118

442. LETTER TO H. P. MODI

November 18, 1934

DEAR MR. MODY,

Here is another appeal for help which only mills can render. This time it is from afflicted Assam. The enclosed speaks for itself. You will find a summary of the contents attached to the full statement from Assam. I do hope that blankets will be sent on behalf of the Association.

_Yours sincerely,_

Encl. 1

H. P. MODY, ESQ.

MILL-OWNERS, ASSOCIATION

BOMBAY

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

2 _Vide_ the preceding item in which the month ‘8, was corrected to ‘11’.
443. LETTER TO J. L. GOHEEN

November 18, 1934

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter. I have now received the parcel of eggs for which I thank you. Though you have sent me no bill for the eggs, I shall thank you to tell me at what price they are sold. I shall send the container back as soon as possible.

I have your second letter. Please give my regards to your pupils who, I hope, will be discharged as competent workers. If you will render me a regular bill, I should like you to send me eighteen eggs per week till further instructions. You can make the commencement on the receipt of this.

Yours sincerely,

J. L. GOHEEN, ESQ.
SANGLI INDUSTRIAL AND AGRICULTURAL SCHOOL
AMERICAN PRESBYTERIAN MISSION
SANGLI (M. S. M. RLY.)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

444. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

November 18, 1934

CHI. NARANDAS,

Read the accompanying letters and give them to Harilal. Give him from time to time what you think proper.

If you have any comments to offer on the new scheme for village industries, please do so. How are things there?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./I. Also C.W. 8423. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi
CHI. JAMNALAL.

Your ear [causes] worry . . . ¹. Something will have to be thought about it. I do not know how this has happened. I am not unhappy, nor do I worry. I see darkness all around. I shall be satisfied if it disappears. Apart from that, I do not worry about what will happen. Though I have had letters sent to both the doctors, how is it that there has been no reply at all from either?

And now about the Industries Association. . . . So far as I remember, I do not know what you desire at present concerning the buildings you had intended for the Maganlal Memorial [sic]. . . . I see that the Memorial . . . consistent with this plan. In every village . . . for at many . . . in Wardha . . . only villages in the area, very much. . . . The air also is good. Geographically it is the centre of India. It has the facility of a railway line. From this point of view, I like Wardha. Your being here also is a temptation. I do not wish to involve you in this. All the same, I am acting on the assumption that all of you will be here. Think over the matter from this point of view and let me know how you feel.

There is a wire from Rameshwar regarding Ghani. . . .

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

My letters . . .

[From Gujarati]

Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, p. 142

¹ Omissions in this letter are as in the source.
446. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

November 18, 1939

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

I see from your three letters that you have not got a clear picture of the Village Industries Association in your mind. The idea behind it is that we should exclusively buy from villages whatever articles they can produce. We can thereby repay a little of the debt that we owe to them. Whether or not we shall be able to do this is another matter. We need not proceed on the supposition that we shall not. What was started by only six or seven of us has now spread all over the country. If it is our duty to do what I am suggesting, then all of us should use pens, ink, knives, soap, jaggery and sugar manufactured in villages and flour and rice ground or milled in villages. I have mentioned these things only as examples. Maybe we shall not carry out this idea in respect of many of the things enumerated; if, however, we believe that it is our moral duty to use such articles, we shall be putting crores of rupees into the pockets of villagers and the importance of villages will increase. only then shall we be able to establish the swaraj of our dreams, devoted to the welfare of villages, and only then will it be non-violent swaraj. All other things can be deduced from this.

The Association can function only if it gets five or six full-time workers. We are trying to attract for it some Congress-minded persons who are not regular Congressmen. of course some of the workers will have to be Congressmen. I am trying to persuade Jairamdas, hoping that Rajendrababu and you will be able to spare him and that he will agree to be released. If he cannot do this work, he will be of no service. I am discussing the same problem with Khan Saheb. I don’t know what Jalbhai’s attitude will be. If he refuses, I intend to invite Khurshed. Such at any rate are my dreams. I am indifferent whether or not they are realized. They help to preserve my peace of mind. If you are now free please come over. The treatment of your nose must get priority, of course. How many workers from Gujarat may I engage in this work? Raojibhai has written to me and expressed his willingness. I have replied to him saying that, even if he can be free, he can come only if permitted by you.

We shall also have to think about the headquarters.

The election results were really wonderful.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 141-2
447. NOTE TO H. L. SHARMA

[November 18, 1934]¹

CHI. SHARMA.

You should put off going today.²

Blessings from
BAPU

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, fazing p. 120

448. NOTE TO H. L. SHARMA

[After November 18, 1934]¹

I am not angry.⁴ So long as I consider you to be my son it is a sin to be angry with you. of course, I was unhappy and realized my responsibility.

As is my wont, [I hold that] for me your case¹ is as important as the question of swaraj.

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, between pp. 118 and 119

¹ As indicated by the addressee
² The addressee had sought Gandhiji’s permission to leave for Khurja.
³ This was written after the preceding item.
⁴ The addressee had asked his brother for money which had made Gandhiji unhappy. Vide “Letter to Beharilal Sharma”, 17-11-1934.
⁵ The addressee had asked what Gandhiji meant by ‘case’; vide “Letter to Beharilal Sharma” 17-11-1934.
449. LETTER TO P. N. RAJBHOJ

November 19, 1934

MY DEAR RAJBHOJ,

I have your letter. I have nothing more to add to what I have already written to you. I cannot advise you to enter the Poona Municipality. I repeat what I have told you that you should do some constructive work yourself and with that end in view master a trade.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI P. N. RAJBHOJ

207 Ghorpade Peth

POONA 2

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

450. LETTER TO K. S. VENKATARAMANI

November 19, 1934

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. Of course, I had your book Kandar— the Patriot in Yeravda. But there was no copy here. All the books received in Yeravda went to the Ahmedabad Municipality. I remember having read several chapters of the book. Is it not the proper thing for you to translate your own convincing argument into action?

Yours sincerely,

SHRI K. S. VENKATARAMANI, M. A., B. L.

ADVOCATE, SANKARAPURAM

MYLAPORE, MADRAS

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
451. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

November 19, 1934

CHI. JAMNALAL,

I got your letter about your birthday. You need fear no ill fortune in your life. You are destined to live long and do much service. I asked Radhakisan and learnt from him about a less expensive place as an alternative to the garden at Wardha. I think it will do.

Blessings from

BAPU

SIT. JAMNALAL BAJAJ

BIRLA HOUSE, MOUNT PLEASANT ROAD

MALABAR HILL, BOMBAY 6

[From Gujarati]

Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, p. 142

452. LETTER TO PRABHUDAS GANDHI

November 19, 1934

CHI. PRABHUDAS.

I got your letter. The pipal tree will get cut down when the right time arrives. You should go on with your work. Vinoba has carefully gone through the article you sent me. I of course had read it. All of us feel that your figures are exaggerated. You state that foreign cloth costs four annas a yard, swadeshi three annas a yard and that khadi is even cheaper than that. How can that be? Think over this. Moreover, you say that khadi is more durable. Is this true? Also, is it true that foreign cloth is less durable than the swadeshi mill-cloth? Think over all this.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: S.N. 32996

1 Maganwadi
453. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

November 19, 1934

BHAIGHANSHYAMDAS,

I have your letter.

How can I say what I need? Whenever there is a question of a hundred or two or a thousand I ask you for it. But by taking up the huge work of village industries I have increased my own commitments. Thus I can only say that you may give me whatever is left after making other essential donations.

The formation of a board for village industries presents some difficulties. I want the board to be very small, to consist of a minimum of three members and a maximum of ten. I want men who have full faith in its aims and can devote more or less their full time to it. And this precisely is giving me some trouble. Have you any ideas in this respect?

Do you know Rajkumari Amrit Kaur?

I have for a long time desired to go and live in Utmanzai, the village of Khan Saheb. I have sent a letter to Delhi on Thursday. Vide “Letter to Private Secretary to Viceroy”, 15-11-1934.

When is the operation to take place?

Blessings from
BAPU

From Hindi: C. W. 8001. Courtesy: G. D. Birla

454. LETTER TO RAJENDRA PRASAD

November 19, 1934

BHAIRAJENDRABABU,

Your letter. If you can get away from there, do come here without going anywhere else. The weather is fine and you will have rest and of course peace.

Vide “Letter to Private Secretary to Viceroy”, 15-11-1934.
The veracity of Agatha Harrison’s statement can be determined only when the Report\(^1\) comes in. Satyamurti has wired that the Working Committee should meet somewhere for this very object. It might be good to announce the meeting just now. We too will of course have to say something but I cannot participate in it as I would not like to say anything publicly.

I am sending a wire just now about your coming.

\textit{Blessings from BAPU}

\[\text{[From Hindi]}\]

A. I. C. C. File No. 3-a 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

\textbf{455. LETTER TO G. V. MAVALANKAR}

\textit{November 20, 1934}

BHAI MAVALANKAR,

You cannot be permitted to engage yourself exclusively in minting money. I hope you will agree to shoulder the burden of the Harijan Ashram and the dairy. We must find the expenses of the Harijan Ashram and of Harijan work in Gujarat from Gujarat itself. I am sure in my mind that the burden of begging this sum should not have to be borne by Sardar. He will contribute something voluntarily, but refuses to put himself to trouble on that account. My purpose in inviting you, Ranchhodlal and Shankerlal is that either all of you should pay the expenses or beg for them. I hope you will not want me to beg from outside Gujarat. And, besides, how far can I be depended upon? Before long you and I will know where I am. Please, therefore, spare some time from the business of money-making and give a little of it to Harijan work and a little to the service of the cow. If, however, my guess is wrong and if at present you cannot spare a single moment for philanthropic work from the task of earning money to pay off your debt, in case you are in debt, tell me frankly and I will not then pester you. I have now reached my 66th year making people work beyond their capacity. How can the old hardened habit leave completely, although I have now grown somewhat indifferent? I am leaving the Congress, yielding to the feeling that no one should work beyond his capacity but I have not yet parted company from my personal co-workers. To achieve this I must stop wielding my pen and resort to silence or I must work only through our journals. But I am not yet powerful enough to work in this manner. I have not yet completely got over my infatuation, and so I am driven to write letters such as this. But I warn you not to have any false sense of shame on my account. I shall be content if you do whatever you can as a matter of dharma. I have written, much to the same effect, to Ranchhdal and Shankerlal.

\(^1\) 2 of the Joint Parliamentary Committee

376 \textit{THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI}

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N.

456. LETTER TO S. SATYAMURTI

[Before November 21, 1934]

Your suggestion appeals to me, but am I now any good as an adviser in these matters? My mind is shunted off these things. You have Sjt. Rajagopalachariar nearby. Then you have the President, and Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel who is as good. Then, of course, Dr. Ansari too is there. Don’t misunderstand. I attach great importance to these. But I am not a man just now. Do save me from having to tax my mind about such political affairs.

The Bombay Chronicle, 22-11-1934

457. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

[Before November 21, 1934]

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

Mirabehn will land in Bombay on Wednesday. Please make what arrangements you think proper for her reception. And in any case send her off on the same day. If you can come with her, please do so. The problem of constituting the Board has still not been solved.

---

1 The report has the date-line “Madras, November 21”.
2 The addressee, according to the report, had suggested in a telegram that an early meeting of the Congress members of the Assembly be called to consider prompt action on the Joint Parliamentary Committee Report. Vide also “Letter to Rajendra Prasad”, 19-11-1934.
3 The source has the date November 29, 1934 but Mirabehn landed in Bombay on November 21, 1934.
Selection of the President is presenting serious difficulties. As regards the office, I am inclined towards Wardha—I mean the head office. There will have to be many other centres, of course, one for each province or district or even taluk. This will depend on how the work progresses. For Gujarat, the decision will also depend on how far you can go along with the idea. But this when we meet.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhbhaie, P. 142

458. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

November 21, 1934

DEAR SISTER,

I have your very frank and precise letter. I regret to know that you were in frail health. I want a band of persons who would devote themselves and their time purely to the work, move about and would go to the villages and try progressively to supply their own needs through the villages unlike as we do now. I see that I must not expect these things from you and must therefore deny myself the privilege of your close association. Nevertheless, I will avail myself of your offer to do whatever you can in the Punjab. Do you keep yourself in touch with what is being written in the pages of Harijan? If you do not, please let me know and I shall see that you are supplied with copies.

I fear I shall not be in Karachi at the time of your conference. I shall however hope that having come all the way from London Dr. Maude Royden will not leave without seeing me but I wish you could come with her.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

From the original: COW. 3514. Courtesy: Emirate Chair. Also G. N. 6323

1 All-India Women’s Conference
459. LETTER TO G. NARASIMHACHARI

November 21, 1934

MY DEAR NARASIMHACHARI,

I have your letter. Students can help by visiting villages in their neighbourhood and studying the industries of those villages, by doing sanitation work themselves, by organizing the industries which they can easily handle, and by using such articles as are manufactured in their villages in the place of articles turned out in cities.

I cannot contemplate degeneration prevailing in the Congress ranks, nor have I the slightest feeling that, if it sets in, I can prevent it.

With reference to your remark on the Norway paper for typing, it was inevitable. When you want multiple copies, we have nothing suitable to be had in the swadeshi line. Therefore, so far as typing is concerned, I freely take the paper that is to be usually had. For writing and other purposes nothing but swadeshi paper is being used, and I am now arranging to get hand-made paper.

Yours sincerely,

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

460. LETTER TO G. MUKERJI

November 21, 1934

DEAR FRIEND,

You should follow what appears in the Press from time to time and guide yourself accordingly. I would not trouble you to come here, at least for the time being.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI G. MUKERJI, M.SC.
BANSBERIA P. O.
HOOGHLY DT.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
461. LETTER TO BENODE PAUL

November 21, 1934

DEAR FRIEND,

The duty of village workers will be to study the industries of the villages they cover and help the villagers to revive or introduce such industries that would utilize their idle hours and put a few coppers in their pockets. Of course, part-time workers will be quite welcome, and those who cannot contribute by way of work will contribute cash wherever they can.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI BENODE PAUL
15 BRAJANATH MITTER LANE
CALCUTTA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

462. LETTER TO SATISH MITTER

November 21, 1934

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your warm letter and a copy of your book which, I know, I shall read with interest and profit. If you have anything new in the supplement of your book, you will please pass it on to me. I see you have missed the most important conchshell bangles of Bengal.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI SATISH MITTER
2 LOUDON STREET
CALCUTTA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
463. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

November 21, 1934

CHI. NARANDAS,

I hope you have returned after inspecting the dairy. A letter for Harilal is enclosed.¹ Read it and pass it on to him. Give him a room in the school if you can spare one. Give him enough to meet his needs. We cannot pay more than Rs. 50 a month just now. By and by we want to accustom him to living within even less than that. It is not necessary that he should save anything for repaying his debts. If he overcomes his weakness of mind and you feel that he can be trusted, we will pay off his debts. But that will be after some time. What has been done about his eyes and teeth?

N.² has turned out to be a worthless woman. She was begging for help from all sorts of people in Bombay. V. She had set herself up as a public worker. I didn’t like her ways at all. L.³ has done the same. There was nothing but show in the whole thing. L.’s aspirations are quite high. But she is unsteady and has a good measure of pride too. She lacks strength of mind to keep her word. She is always full of plans. Now she is eager to stay on here for a month or so. I have categorically refused my consent. She will leave this place on the 7th at the latest and go to Bombay. I shall be here for this month at any rate. I don’t know what will happen after that.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./I. Also C.W. 8424. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

¹ The letter is not available.
² The names have been omitted.
³ ibid.
464. LETTER TO ASAFL ALI

[Before November 22, 1934]

MY DEAR ASAFL ALI.

God is great. I can trace nothing but the hand of God in all these successes. May we deserve them? How I-wish your success will lead to heart unity between the two brothers—Hindu and Mussalman.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

The Hindustan Times, 23-11-1934

465. LETTER TO M. V. ABHYANKAR

[Before November 22, 1934]

MY DEAR ABHYANKAR,

Your precious wire. The Congress is not dead. Your trial commences now. You must keep yourself in a fit condition.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

The Hitavada, 22-11-1934

466. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

November 22, 1934

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

I sent you a letter some days ago simply inquiring about your health. Mummy who came in yesterday tells me you do not get letters except what is sent in Kamala’s packet. I should like to know the rules regulating your correspondence. Please let me know how you are doing and how you are passing your time.

Love.
BAPU

Gandhi-Nehru Papers, 1934. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Also A Bunch of old Letters, p. 119

1 The addressee had been elected to the Assembly from the Delhi Joint Constituency on the Congress ticket.
2 The letter was released to the Press at Delhi on Thursday, November 22, 1934.
3 The addressee had been elected to the Assembly.
467. LETTER TO B. SHIVA RAO

November 22, 1934

MY DEAR SHIVA RAO,

I have your letter and a copy of the Madras Mail. I will return the paper to you after I have read it. I think you know the scope of the Association and the v method of achieving its object. Would you care to serve on the Central Board? If you will, have you got a living belief in the formula underlying the object, namely, that we must go to the villages in search of all the articles of daily use, and not make villages look to the cities for the supply of such articles? That is to say, do you recognize the necessity, so far as it is possible, of eliminating the city factories and mills which are fast displacing the village industries, and supplying the daily wants of the villagers thereby confining 90 per cent of the population of India to bare agriculture? Do you consider the realization of this object worthy of your making it the main business of your life, and will you give the Board most of your time? If you will, I would like you to serve on the Board. The idea that we are evolving is to make the Board as small as possible, consistent with its efficient working, and to make it consist of practically whole-timers. Will you please wire your reply to this letter?

SHRI B. SHIVA RAO
MADRAS

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

468. LETTER TO AGATHA HARRISON

November 22, 1934

MY DEAR AGATHA,

It was quite like you to have put your whole soul into sending little Mehrtaj to Brindisi.¹ It was a fine contribution to Indo-British understanding. The Khan Brothers are a rare type of humanity. The more I see them, the more I love them. And inasmuch [as] you have done this little and yet great thing for them, you have done it for all India. That simple bit of service is its own reward. Thanks or any outward expression is a poor substitute. Mira is working well and so is her ward.

¹ At the top of the letter the addressee has noted: “The Frontier Gandhi’s daughter Mehrtaj was in London with her aunt. She was to travel from Brindisi with Mirabehn. . . . Mehrtaj lost her passport just before she was due to sail. I went to the India office and asked their swift help in securing another one.” (G.N. 1481)

Well, the preliminary acknowledgement from Delhi has come.¹ If there is any development I shall use the cable.

About the J[oint] Gommittee’s report, you must have seen my opinion.² One who has retired from Congress can have no opinion for public consumption. You do not need my private opinion.

I am coming closer to Amrit Kaur.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 1481

469. LETTER TO S. RADHAKRISHNAN

November 22, 1934

DEAR SIR RADHAKRISHNAN,

I thank you for your letter and the copy of your Convocation address to the Allahabad University. I have read in the papers your address containing your generous reference to myself.

I had your last letter as also a copy of Contemporary British Philosophy. I had hoped to be able to send you something in acknowledgment of your letter and to return your book. But I have not had a moment to spare. Fortunately you have given me ample time, and I expect to send you something by that date.

PROF. SIR S. RADHAKRISHNAN
ANDHRA UNIVERSITY
WALTAIR

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ Vide “Letter to Private Secretary to Viceroy”, 15-11-1934.
² Vide “Interview to Associated Press”, 22-11-1934.
470. LETTER TO SADULLAH KHAN

November 22, 1934

MY DEAR SADULLAH KHAN,

I have your letter. I am looking forward to receiving and testing the gur sent by you.

You have all worked wonders in connection with Dr. Khan Saheb’s election.

SHRI SADULLAH KHAN
DR. KHAN SAHEB’S ELECTION BOARD OFFICE
QISSAKHANI BAZAR, PESHAWAR CITY

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

471. INTERVIEW TO ASSOCIATED PRESS

November 22, 1934

I haven’t read the J. P. C. Report.¹ I hope to be able to read that at an early date, but I don’t propose to make any public reference to it.

Having retired from the Congress, it would ill become of me to pronounce any opinion upon it at the present juncture. My opinion on the White Paper is well known and I have seen nothing to change it. Beyond this I may not go.

The Hindustan Times, 23-11-1934

472. IN THE THROES OF BIRTH

The All-India Village Industries Association takes a long time to be born. All the consolation I can give the public is that all the available time at the disposal of J. C. Kumarappa and myself is being devoted to the task. Three questions confront us: location of the Central Office, composition of the Central Board and agencies.

¹ The Joint Parliamentary Committee Report was released to the Press on November 22, 1934.
Though all these questions worry us, that of the composition of the Board causes the greatest trouble. The task is tremendous. The goal is great. Rejuvenation of villages in the face of the current fashion of highly developed mechanization and centralization is no easy job. We have, therefore, come to the conclusion that the Board must be composed of only a few earnest persons who have a living faith in the programme of the Association, who have an aptitude for the task and who will give the Board much, if not the whole, of their time. We are trying to find persons, irrespective of parties, who will shoulder the burden.

So far as branches are concerned, we have tentatively come to the conclusion that the districts should be the units directly responsible for the Central Board. Since the British official districts are not all equal in area or population, we will not hesitate to subdivide them where necessary. The predominant consideration will be decentralization and creation of a living touch with the villagers.
There will be direct connection with the States wherever they will permit it. We want to serve all the villages of geographical India.

There is difficulty, too, regarding choice of the Central office.
We would gladly establish it in a village, if that is possible. But our choice is limited by two considerations. We do not want to invest the meagre funds, that have been promised or have already come, in land and brick and mortar. We have, therefore; to confine our selection to such places where we can get the required accommodation for the asking. The second limitation is that the Central office should be near the main line of the railways and should be easily accessible from all the parts of India. But let me not anticipate events. I have shared enough with the public to enable those who will to guide us with advice. We invite the prayers of all who are in sympathy with our difficult mission.

_Harijan, 23-11-1934_

473. VILLAGE INDUSTRIES IN GUNTUR

Sjt. Sitarama Sastry of Vinaya Ashram, Repalle, Guntur District, Andhradesha, in offering the services unreservedly of the whole of his Ashram to the All India Village Industries Association, says:

The following items of work suggest themselves to me and I commend them to you. (1) Shoe-making, (2) hand-ginning of seed cotton, (3) preparation of jaggery from the juice of palmyra tree, (4) improved pottery, (5) hand-made paper, (6) stone-dressing, (7) hand-made groundnut kernels, (8) extracting oil and other products from the outer rinds of oranges, (9) preservation of palmyra fruits.

The second item will also help in the khadi industry; the third will help in the solution of the drink problem. Palmyras are grown in large numbers in this district, and the ripe fruit of these trees has been analysed and found to contain valuable elements of food. Oranges are also grown on a large scale in this district and are cheap. The outer rind is thrown away as useless, but it is really useful from the commercial point of view. It contains an inflammable oil and is also sold in the market as orange peel. Kondaveedu is a village in this district which has long been famous for hand-paper. The District Congress Committee tried to revive this industry in 1921, but the attempt was given up, owing to the indifference of the workmen. A special stone is available in Palnad which is locally dressed and is used for paper weights, for flooring and walls and table slabs. It is ordinarily called Palnad marble. Hand-made groundnut kernels are sold in the South and are cheaper than machine-made kernels. Groundnut crop is raised in several parts of the district. Mr. T. Ramaswamy Gupta of Bezwada, a vakil who gave up his profession for spiritual sadhana, is responsible for improved pottery, and the earthenware prepared under his directions are far superior to the articles made by the country potter!

This is not the only or the first offer. It is a matter of great joy to me that many such offers have been received from almost all the parts of India. This happens to be the latest and contains the information which other workers would value. I would recommend all the workers who are offering services to commence work without waiting for directions. The idea behind the village industries scheme is that we should look to the villages for the supply of our daily needs and that, when we find that some needs are not so supplied, we should see whether with a little trouble and organization they cannot be profitably supplied by the villagers. In estimating the profit, we should think of the villager, not of ourselves. It may be that in the initial stages, we might have to pay a little more than the ordinary price and get an inferior article in the bargain. Things will improve, if we will interest ourselves in the supplier of our needs and insist on his doing better and take the trouble of helping to do better.

_Harijan_, 23-11-1934
DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your prompt reply. I see that we hold perhaps diametrically opposite views. My conviction based upon extensive experience of village life is that in India at any rate for generations to come, we shall not be able to make much use of mechanical power for salving the problem of ever-growing poverty of the masses. We are too many and we have so many idle hours at our disposal that it would be suicidal to make use of mechanical power and allow human power to run to waste. The question of leisure after toil comes into being when people learn the art of making effective use of their waste hours. Such being my view the extract that you have sent me from Stalin has no appeal for me at all. The more expressive extract from Lenin makes matters worse for me. It is like much cry and little wool. I could be no party to engaging the villagers in producing army machinery and army stores. If India has no desire to take part in the gory exploitation of unmechanized regions of the earth, she has no need to fear aggression from foreign countries. My dream may remain wholly unrealized and India may become a willing or unwilling partner in the sin of exploitation. Nevertheless I would use the whole of the power that God may vouchsafe to me in stemming the onrush of the violent current. I should take delight in perishing in the attempt.

In spite of the strength of my conviction, I entertain great regard for your fine abilities and love of the country, and that shall be unabated whether I have the good fortune to secure your co-operation or face your honest opposition.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

SIR M. VISVESVARAYYA, K. C. I. E.

46 F WARREN ROAD

BOMBAY

From a photostat: C.W. 9726. Courtesy: Government of Mysore

1 This was displayed at the Mysore Pavilion of the Gandhi-Darshan Exhibition held in New Delhi in 1969-70.
DEAR SISTER,

I have your letter. I have gone through your draft proposal for the training of social service workers. I am inclined to think that the District Boards cannot open the centres you contemplate without the permission of the Government. But that is a legal point on which I cannot write with any confidence. I have, however, a deeper objection to your scheme. District Boards as they are constituted in India have no interest in things of permanent value such as you have proposed. Their very constitution perhaps disables them for taking such interest. What you contemplate is pioneer work. It is essentially meant for reformers. Therefore it has got to be taken up by private agencies, and when they make of such training centres a success the thing becomes easy for District Boards and the like to take up. If I have understood your object correctly, you want to rejuvenate the villages. The trend is in the opposite direction. Hence neither District Boards nor the Government as such will handle the thing in the manner you and I would have them do. I wish we could meet early.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

From the original: C.W. 3515. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6324

MY DEAR MASEKAR,

I thank you for your letter. The Village Industries Association will not be concerned exclusively with the industries of the depressed classes, but will be concerned with the industries of the villages as a whole. Naturally [the] depressed classes will figure prominently in its scheme; but that will figure among the villagers who have been exploited by the city people. The scheme is still in process of formation. If you have any advice to give, I shall appreciate it. No one will be involved in or committed to any political movement. People belonging to different political schools will be welcome as helpers or advisers or as associates provided that they fall in with the central idea of encouraging village industries through their own act and propaganda to the exclusion of corresponding mechanized industries, whether in India or outside.

I hope that this answers your questions fully.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI C. S. MASEKAR
HON. SECRETARY
THE GUJARAT DEPRESSED CLASSES ASSOCIATION
31 LAMINGTON ROAD, BOMBAY 7

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

477. LETTER TO DURGABAI JOSHI

November 23, 1934

DEAR DURGABAI,

I see I have put my feet into it. I should have written to you directly. Then there would have been no misunderstanding. But as I knew that you enjoyed intimate relations with Jamnalalji and as I was overwhelmed, as I am still, with work, I felt that I was safe in asking Radhakisan to write to you, not at all officially but as a fellow-worker in the cause. But you are my unreserved apology for unconsciously departing form the proper procedure. My approach to you is one more illustration of short-cut being the longest in the end. You will now please excuse me. I understand your explanation and I am happy to be able to inform you that the young man who was reported to have lost his one full year after all did not do so. Fortunately, at the same time that I asked Radhakisan to write you I sent an inquiry to the Secretary of the local Sangh of Vile Parle. He saw the young man and satisfied himself that by a stroke of good fortune, what might have been a loss of one year was averted. All is well that ends well. Therefore I would like you to dismiss from your mind my seeming impertinence.

Yours sincerely

SMT. DURBAGABI JOSHI
BERAR PROVINCIAL HARIJAN SEVAK SANGH
AKOLA (BERAR)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

390 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
478. LETTER TO M. S. KELKAR

November 23, 1934

I have your letter. If you know the comparison between milk and eggs, I would like you to inform me about it. When you administer eggs, what is the mode? If I remember right, in the case of Manu you used to dilute the contents of raw eggs with water. What is the effect of eggs on the system? Are they too heating, and what is the quantity?

I am afraid the Harijan Sevak Sangh would not donate Rs. 500 to you.

The paragraph about Satavlekar does not carry weight. Has he any reason for damaging you?

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

479. LETTER TO KONDA VENKATAPPAYYA

November 23, 1934

MY DEAR VENKATAPPAYYA,

The oranges sent by Mr. Jangiah have already arrived. Please give him many thanks for the parcel. I shall gladly receive fruit from his garden whenever he feels inclined to send it. As you know, we are here a big family and we can do justice to fruit whenever it comes our way.

Yes, the Assembly elections have been a perfect revelation. The South has easily topped the list with its 100 per cent victories and overwhelming majorities. It is a further demonstration of the unfailing victory of Truth and sacrifice.

I hope you and yours are keeping well.

Yes, the Assembly elections have been a perfect revelation. The South has easily topped the list with its 100 per cent victories and overwhelming majorities. It is a further demonstration of the unfailing victory of Truth and sacrifice.

I hope you and yours are keeping well.

Since dictating this, I have learnt that what you call oranges are not oranges but sour limes. These are not of so much value as sweet oranges.

Yours,
BAPU

SHRI KODNA VENKATAPPAYYA
GUNTUR (M.S. M. RLY.)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

VOL. 65 : 16 SEPTEMBER, 1934 - 15 DECEMBER, 1934 391
480. LETTER TO G. D. KULKARNI

November 23, 1934

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. It seems to me to be self-contradictory. You first of all want me to push further my programme of self control and you want me at the same time to be committed to self-indulgence. Nothing that I have as yet seen has moved me from the view that birth-control methods as at present adopted must ultimately lead to degeneration and inertia. Though I have a very great regard for Upton Sinclair and his philosophy of life I dread his unabashed encouragement of birth-control methods.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI G. D. KULKARNI
HONORARY ORGANIZER
BIRTH-CONTROL LEAGUE, POONA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

481. LETTER TO EASTERN STEAM NAVIGATION CO. LTD.

November 23, 1934

GENTLEMEN,

I am now able to tell you that the forty-two packages of dates sent by goods train were safely received day before yesterday.

Yours sincerely,

THE EASTERN STEAM NAVIGATION CO., LTD.
24 MANGALORE STREET
FORT, BOMBAY

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
482. LETTER TO M. G. DATAR

November 23, 1934

DEAR DATARJI,

Jamnalalji has arrived earlier than was expected. He is most anxious that he should be left undisturbed between the 26th and 1st December as he will be having numerous guests during those days. He wants me not to entertain anybody during those days. Therefore you should either come here before the 26th or after the 1st December.

Yours sincerely,

M. G. DATAR

TILAK VIDYALAYA

NAGPUR

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

483. LETTER TO D. N. SARMAH

November 23, 1934

MY DEAR SARMAH,

I have your letter. It would be a great thing if you can remove the indebtedness of sweeper families.

The judgment you have sent me in the matter of a sweeper defendant is very interesting.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI D. N. SARMAH

SECRETARY, H. S. S.

JORHAT, ASSAM

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
484. LETTER TO SIR ROBERT MCCARRISON

November 23, 1934

DEAR MAJOR-GENERAL,

I thank you for your letter of 20th instant. As soon as the scheme of the Association is complete a copy shall certainly be sent to you.

I thank you for allowing your name to appear among the advisers of the Association.

Yours sincerely,

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

485. LETTER TO PIERRE CERESOLE

November 23, 1934

DEAR CERESOLE,

Enclosed please find Mrs. Emma Harker’s letter. She is an elderly widow. She is anxious to do some work. She has her own means. Therefore she will pay her way. Can you take her in as a worker? of course, so far as I can judge, she won’t be able to take up the spade and work as a labourer pure and simple.¹ But you shall judge.

Yours sincerely,

Encl. 1

PIERRE CERESOLE, ESQ.

PATNA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

486. LETTER TO EMMA HARKER

November 23, 1934

DEAR SISTER,

I have your letter. I am passing it on to Pierre Ceresole. I will let you have his answer. Copy of my letter¹ to him herewith.

Yours sincerely,

Encl. 1

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

487. LETTER TO AN ENGLISHMAN

November 23, 1934

You have misunderstood my retirement from the Congress. I have not left it in disgust. Congressmen as individuals are both good and bad. But Congress is uniformly good. God’s creatures are both good and bad. Is God therefore less good? I have retired to give it greater strength. I had become a dead weight. Have you ever anywhere seen the wonders it has worked during the elections with the least amount of expenses? No, in this matter, your prejudice had got the better of your judgment. Remember that Rajendra Prasad, Vallabhbhai, Rajagopalachari, Ansari, Mahadev, and many others, of whom humanity may be proud, are in it, of it, and would die for it.

Incidents of Gandhiji’s Life, pp. 324-5

¹ Vide the preceding item.
488. LETTER TO BALIBEHN M. ADALAJA

November 23, 1934

CHI. BALI

I have a letter from you after a long time. When it just seemed possible, against all hope, that Harilal had turned over a new leaf, I didn’t think it wise to write to you. I thought that on no account should there be unpleasantness. Why did you take that to mean that you were not a daughter to me? Did you forget that, though Harilal was my son, I did not yield to him for years? But since you have been embittered in many ways, I can understand your feeling hurt by any small thing that somebody may do. Let Harilal live alone and learn from experience.

What shall I say about Kamu? She has suffered much. Fate has not been kind to either of you. You should, therefore, learn the art of finding happiness in suffering. That can be done only by constant repetition of the Lord’s name.

Do you have any proposal in view for Manu? I myself am in no hurry of course.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 1535. Courtesy: Manubehn S. Mashruwala

489. LETTER TO K. M. MUNSHI

November 23, 1934

BHAISHRI MUNSHI,

Do not take it to heart.

I would have sent you my congratulations if you had won. I send them even now, even though you have been defeated. “It is a blessing that the net has snapped, Shri Gopal has now come to me

1 Harilal Gandhi’s wife’s sister
2 Kumibehn Tulsidas Maniar, addressee’s sister
3 Harilal Gandhi’s daughter, later married to Surendra Mashruwala unsought.” You have escaped from the net. Now devote your time to earning a little money by honest means. Improve your health. Your coming to the help at a critical time was in itself your victory.¹

Blessings from
BAPU

From Gujarati: C.W. 7562. Courtesy: K. M. Munshi

490. LETTER TO LILAVATI MUNSHI
November 23, 1934

CHI. LILAVATI,

Remember, no weakness. Labour is its own reward. Victory or defeat is a matter of chance, and very often he who loses wins and he who wins loses. I completely forgot to write to Gosibehn. I am writing now.²

Blessings from
BAPU

From Gujarati: C.W. 7562. Courtesy: K. M. Munshi

491. LETTER TO GOSIBEHN CAPTAIN³
November 24, 1934

Lilavati was here for two, three days. She discussed village work very thoroughly. She seems to be deeply interested in it. She left on my mind the impression that she would like to work with you and other sisters. Most probably she would talk to you and try to gather together all those who might be interested in the village work. I would like you all sisters to try to produce a harmonious blending if it is at all possible. You know best what to do and how to do it.

Jamnalalji was telling me that Perin⁴ was suffering from cold and cough. She ought to give herself rest and get rid of the cough and cold. even if it is to be by going to Panchgani.

SHRI GOSIBEHN CAPTAIN
BOMBAY

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ The addressee had agreed to contest the election when K. F. Nariman withdrew-his candidature at the last minute.
² Vide the following item.
³ Granddaughter of Dadabhai Naoroji
⁴ Addressee’s sister
492. LETTER TO KIRLOSKAR BROTHERS

November 24, 1934

GENTLEMEN,

You offered to send your machine with Sjt. Kale. I then discountenanced you from sending the machine and Sjt. Kale. But I have been pressed by friends to test the machine myself and under Kale’s observation. If, therefore, your offer abides, I would like you to send one machine for me to test. I would also like someone who is an expert in village tools to accompany Sjt. Kale unless the latter is able to attend to such tools himself. I would like to suggest some improvements. If you send the machine and mechanic both should be here as early as possible after the 1st December. 2nd December would be the most suitable day for me.

Yours sincerely,

MESSRS KIRLOSKAR BROTHERS

KIRLOSKARWADI
(SATARA DT.)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

493. LETTER TO DEVDAS GANDHI

November 25, 1934

CHI. DEVDAS,

Your letters are few and mine almost nil.

I am not sure when I shall read Malkani’s articles. You should not entrust such work to me. Maybe, my capacity to work has decreased or the burden of work has increased. Whatever it is, I Sam writing this after getting up at 2.15 in the morning. I daily get up at this hour and start work. I might be going to sleep at about 9 o’ clock.

I do wish to go over there but my going depends upon the developments in Uttambhai’s case. Soon many people will gather here. My work regarding the Association is moving slowly. There is a 99% possibility of Wardha becoming the headquarters. Vallabh bhai is arriving; so also Raja. The matter will be decided after their arrival.

Ramdas is recovering—gradually. Let us hope he gets back his health. Ba keeps him company by staying with him. He is at Jamnalalji’s bungalow. It may be said that I am treating him; but in fact he is treating himself. He has started taking eggs. They are unfertilized and therefore there is nothing wrong in taking them. I receive letters from Harilal. At present I am meeting his expenses. He is holding out great hopes and I too am hoping. You might be receiving letters from Kanti. You [should write to] Harilal and Ramdas. . . .

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

494. LETTER TO TULSI MAHER

November 25, 1934

CHI. TULSI MAHER,

I have both your letters, for Ba and for me. This time again you have been very late. You should write at least once a month. What is the cost of the Nepali Paper? We are all well. Does Harijan reach you intact?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 6546

495. STATEMENT TO THE PRESS

November 26, 1934

During the Harijan tour I discovered that the salt concession, which was part of the Irwin-Gandhi Pact, was not being availed of by the people. I observed also how much poor people suffered because of want of salt, although it was lying in front of them in areas adjoining the sea. In Mangalore, the fishermen brought the thing prominently to my notice. I thereupon entered into correspondence with Government as early as last March. The then Finance Member, Sir George Schuster, promptly replied to my query, and I discovered

1 The letter is incomplete.
2 This appeared under the title “Free Salt for the Salt of the Earth”.

VOL. 65 : 16 SEPTEMBER, 1934 - 15 DECEMBER, 1934 399
to my joy that the clause had not suffered wreck. I ought to have published the correspondence between Sir George Schuster and myself much earlier than I am now doing. I need not go into the causes for this delay. I now publish the correspondence, together with the clause and the communiqué\(^1\) based upon it and setting forth the conditions of operating the clause. When the Pact was published, in commenting upon it, I had described this as the humanitarian part of the document. It was the humanitarian appeal that had found ready response from Lord Irwin. Those who now avail themselves of the concession will bear this fact in mind and will, therefore, refrain from making any commercial use of the concession, either directly or indirectly, and work it strictly within the four corners of the communiqué. All those Congressmen and others who are interested in villagers concerned making full use of the concession will bear in mind the list of areas from which concession for free manufacture and collection of salt has been withdrawn. The workers will also bear in mind that it is open to all concerned to make application to the local officers for the restoration of the concession. In no case should the concession be worked without sanction being previously obtained.

Harijan, 30-11-1934

496. LETTER TO ANAND T. HINGORANI

SEGAON, WARDHA,

November 26, 1934

DEAR FRIEND,

Matriculates and others should labour with their hands and earn an honest livelihood.

A student should refuse to marry and brave all difficulties till he has the urge for marriage.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a copy: C. W. 11071. Courtesy: Anand T. Hingorani

\(^1\) Not reproduced here. For letters to Sir George Schuster dated March 28 and April 14, 1934. For the text of clause 20 and the communiqué, vide “Provisional settlement”, 12-3-1931 and “Salt”, 28-5-1931.
497. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

November 26, 1934

CHI. NARANDAS,

I got your letter. The money belonging to the Cow-protection Society which has been spent may be taken as lost. It will not be proper now to ask for it. Ambalalbhai’s attitude has changed. If we can[not] get that amount from any source, I suppose the loss will have to be made good from the funds of the Cow-protection Society. Let us see now what Mavalankar and Ranchhodbhai can do. If they can collect some amount, we shall not have to pay much from the Society’s funds.

Aren’t the Bal Mandir and Kumar Mandir parts of the school? Don’t they meet a need?

I understand what you say about Harilal. I don’t have independent accommodation for myself here. Nor can we keep him in Jamnalalji’s house. It seems proper, therefore, that till he gets properly trained and learns to observe the rules he should continue to stay there.

I am afraid we cannot have a joint office for the Spinners, Association and Village Industries Association. The latter will include a great many small activities, and so it seems to me desirable that the two offices should be separate for the time being. The fields of work of the two bodies will of course be complementary to each other. It seems that the headquarters of the Village Industries Association will be fixed at Wardha. Probably when you wrote your reply you had not received my letter, in which I had asked you whether you can be free from there.

My respectful greetings to Father and Mother. It is good news that they are able to keep good health.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi
498. LETTER TO HARIDAS T. MUZUMDAR
November 26, 1934

BHAI HARIDAS,

You have sent a 20-page preface for your ten points; what violence is this! Moreover you have praised Mirabehn; is it for lending respectability to your censure of her? What violence is this too! And you crown both with your violent pride.

You have refuted what you imagine to be my views with the help of your points. But I think between my views and what you consider to be my views there is as much difference as between a horse and a donkey. How then can I satisfy you?

O God! Save me from my friends, followers and flatterers. Your 26-page letter has made me utter this prayer. I was under the impression that after our meeting in England, your pride would have gone down; but my calculation has gone wrong. But man must err endlessly.

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

499. LETTER TO V. V. GIRI
November 27, 1934

DEAR GIRI,

Your wire. When almost all win', who should receive congratulations? The policy of the Congress has been vindicated. Let us deserve the great trust.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

V. V. GIRI

VIZAGAPATNAM

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 In the Assembly election held in 1934. The final party-wise position of seats won was: Congress 44, Nationalist Party headed by Madan Mohan Malaviya 11, Independents 22 and the European group 11.
500. LETTER TO K. NAGESWAR RAO

November 27, 1934

MY DEAR NAGESWARAO,

You have outdone everybody in the race for votes. But even you had to spend money? What a tragedy! How much were you out of pocket? Without his opposition the Congress could not have shown its hold over the people.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

K. NAGESWAR RAO

MADRAS

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

501. LETTER TO KAMAKOTI NATARAJAN

November 27, 1934

MY DEAR KAMAKOTI,

Singer machine does not replace the needle woman, it gives her a better needle. We have village rice-pounding and flourgrinding machines. If someone were to give me an effective substitute, I will take it today. What I resist is flour and rice mills which put thousands of women out of work and rob them of health. My regards to your sister in Delhi.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

KAMAKOTI NATARAJAN

BANDRA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
Your letter. You have again been hasty. How did you conclude that Mogheji wanted you to go away for good or that he was happy at your leaving thus. This too is mere suspicion. If people are afraid of you it is because you lose no time in making allegations and entertaining all sorts of fanciful ideas. It I were to ask Kamalnayan, he will, I am sure; have a different story to tell. To the best of my knowledge no one doubts your honest desire to serve. But I am myself observing that you are misunderstood. You should stick to your resolution. You belong to the Ashram, you have to return to it and must prepare yourself to do so. Forget about the incident at the station\(^1\) and all that you have written to me.

Dr. Shirlekar has sent nothing. I shall send for [your books]. I shall write to Dr. Ansari and send you a copy of the letter. I am trying to send you the books.

The account of Krishna’s health pains me. Now you have to concentrate on her recovery. By all means take a separate house. Do write to me if your brothers are in any way inconvenienced in meeting your expenses.

It cannot be said that Ramdas is all right but he has progressed to the point of taking three eggs. If you have anything to say about him do say it.

My weight is 108 lb. which is good but it may not go up further. I feel I have gained some strength as a result of fresh milk and raw vegetables. A reduced diet [uncooked food] is giving me as much strength as I derived from a larger quantity of milk and vegetables. Obviously, the expenditure has considerably gone down and time is saved. I must have more experience to say anything further.

\(^1\) Regarding this the addressee explains that, while bidding him farewell at the Wardha station, the Ashram Manager had observed, “You sulked and we are spared!”
Amtussalaam seems to be well enough but she cannot digest milk.

Mirabehn has written to you. A bundle belonging to the office containing some of my very important papers, my spectacles and such other things was placed in the room where your luggage was stored. Some things from it were sent there earlier. Did this bundle reach [you] along with those things? Can it be located? The bundle was tied in a white khadi sheet. Find out and if you can lay your hands on it, send me a wire. I am anxious about the papers.

Draupadi’s weight must surely increase.

I shall not worry about you as you have given me an assurance.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Your notice can appear in the coming issue of Harijan; your letter was received too late.

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, between pp. 122 and 123

503. LETTER TO PRIVATE SECRETARY TO VICEROY

November 28, 1934

DEAR MR. MIEVILLE,

I must thank you for your prompt reply to my letter of the 15th instant. But I cannot help saying that the decision come to in regard to my contemplated visit to the Frontier Province is painful and places me in a very awkward position. In that sense perhaps the decision may be regarded as unfortunate.

The only ray of hope I see in your letter is that the undesirability of my visit refers to “the present time”. Could you please give me a definition of the expression? Could you please also tell me, if my enquiry is not inappropriate, why it is considered undesirable for me to visit the Frontier?

1 Vide “Notes”, 14-12-1934.
2 Vide footnote 1, p. 349.
Whilst it is my earnest desire to abide by His Excellency’s wishes, I may be pardoned for repeating what I have said in my letter of the 15th instant—that I could do so in so far as it was humanly possible. This is a point which your letter under reply seems to have overlooked.\footnote{On December 2, the addressee replied: “... the expression ‘at the present time, implies that His Excellency’s decision will hold good till he is satisfied that conditions are such as to render a visit unobjectionable. His Excellency’s decision was arrived at after a full consideration of the events of recent years and present conditions.”}

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

Home Department, Political, File No. 4/8/35. Courtesy: National Archives of India. Also, The Bombay Chronicle, 12-12-1934

504. LETTER TO S. GANESAN

November 29, 1934

MY DEAR GANESAN,

Before I got your note through H. Sharma, I had intended to tell you on reading your “Congressman’, that it was a waste of effort. Your writing was unbalanced and betrayed ignorance and bias. Your attack on Rajaji was ungracious. You will be surprised to know that he had no hand in the drafting of the resolutions. They were my drafts and he had no suggestions on the resolution to which you have so ignorantly referred. You simply judge him from your own unhappy experiences. But otherwise, too, your criticism of men and measures is not of the right type. The majority of journalists spoil things by judging things. They will discharge their function well, if they will give unvarnished versions of events. When they criticize they must base their judgment on facts strictly within their knowledge. If you are going to become a good constructive worker, you must not waste your time after conducting newspapers. Choose one vocation or another. Harihar Sharma will tell you more about my suggestions and so will Kakasaheb who is probably coming there.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
505. LETTER TO DR. M. A. ANSARI

November 29, 1934

DEAR DR. ANSARI,

This is about a naturopath named Sharma. He belongs to Khurja. He owned and conducted a sun-treatment hospital in Delhi. Through Amtussalaam whom you met here, I came to know him now three years ago. There was much show about his hospital and more about the books he wrote. Now he has humbled himself. He has given up the hospital and burned his books. He wants at my instance to put his knowledge on a more solid foundation and therefore wants to know things about the [human] body which should be common to all whether they are allopaths or naturopaths or any other. But he cannot afford to go to a medical college and begin studies there. He has sufficient knowledge to be able to pursue private studies, if he had some guidance. What I would like you to do is to tell me what he should read and what accessories he should require. And could you lend him one after another the books he should read? If you are sufficiently interested in him he will call on you. I do not want or expect you to give much of your time to this work. If you can easily jot down the books he should read in their order, I should be thankful. I shall procure or buy the books, if you have none to lend. I do want to help Shri Sharma as I believe him to be [an] earnest seeker who wants to dedicate his knowledge and all for the alleviation of human suffering.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
506. SPEECH AT GANDHI SEVA SANGH

[On or before November 30, 1934]

Some of you here perhaps know how the Village Industries Association came into being. During my extensive Harijan tour last year it was clearly borne in upon me that the way in which we were carrying on our khadi work was hardly enough either to universalize khadi or to rejuvenate the villages. I saw that it was confined to a very few and that even those who used khadi exclusively were under the impression that they need do nothing else and that they might use other things irrespective of how and where they were made. Khadi was thus becoming a lifeless symbol, and I saw that, if the state of things was allowed to go on, khadi might even die of sheer inanition. It is not that a concentrated, intensive effort devoted exclusively to khadi would not be conducive to success, but there was neither that concentration nor intensity. All did not give all their spare time to the charkha or the takli, and all had not taken to the exclusive use of khadi—though their number was larger than that of the spinners. But the rest were all idle. There were multitudes of men with quantities of enforced leisure on their hands. That I saw was a state which could lead only to our undoing. ‘These people’ I said to myself, ‘could never win swaraj. For, their involuntary and voluntary idleness made them a perpetual prey of exploiters, foreign and indigenous. Whether the exploiter was from outside or from the Indian cities, their state would be the same, they would have no swaraj., So I said to myself, ‘Let these people be asked to do something else; if they will not interest themselves in khadi, let them take up some work which used to be done by their ancestors but which has of late died out. There were numerous things of daily use which they used to produce themselves not many years ago, but for which they now depend on the outer world. There were numerous things of daily use to the town-dweller for which he depended on the villagers but which he now imports from cities. The moment the villagers decided to devote all their spare

---

1 Published in Harijan under the title “A.I. V. I. A. —Its Meaning and Scope”. This is a “brief resume” of Gandhiji’s “third talk”. Reports of the first two speeches are not available.

2 According to a report in The Bombay Chronicle 6-12-1934, the annual session of Gandhi Seva Sangh was held in the last week of November 1934.
time to doing something useful and the town-dwellers to use those village products, the snapped link between the villagers and the towndwellers would be restored. As to which of the extinct or moribund village industries and crafts could be revived, we could not be sure until we sat down in the midst of the villages to investigate, to tabulate and classify. But I picked up two things of the most vital importance: articles of diet and articles of dress. Khadi was there. In the matter of articles of diet, we were fast losing our self-sufficiency. only a few years ago, we pounded our own paddy and ground our own flour. Put aside for the time being the question of health. It is an indisputable fact that the flour-mill and the rice-mill have driven millions of women out of employment and deprived them of the means of eking out their income. Sugar is fast taking the place of jaggery, and ready-made articles of diet like biscuits and sweetmeats are freely being imported into our villages. This means that all the village industries are gradually slipping out of the hands of the villager, who has become producer of raw materials for the exploiter. He continually gives, and gets little in return. Even the little he gets for the raw material he produces he gives back to the sugar merchant and the cloth merchant. His mind and body have become very much like those of the animals, his constant companions. When we come to think of it, we find that the villager of today is not even half so intelligent or resourceful as the villager of fifty years ago. For, whereas the former is reduced to a state of miserable dependence and idleness, the latter used his mind and body for all he needed and produced them at home. Even the village artisan today partakes of the resourcelessness that has overtaken the rest of the village. Go to the village carpenter and ask him to make a spinning-wheel for you go to the village smith and ask him to make a spindle for you,- you will be disappointed. This is a deplorable state of things. It is as a remedy for it that the Village Industries Association has been conceived.

This cry of “back to the village” some critics say, is putting back the hands of the clock of progress. But is it really so? Is it going back to the village, or rendering back to it what belongs to it? I am not asking the city-dwellers to go to and live in the villages. But I am asking them to render unto the villagers what is due to them. Is there any single raw material that the city-dwellers can obtain except from the villager? If they cannot, why not teach him to work on it himself, as he used to before and as he would do now but for our exploiting inroads?
But this reinstating the villager in what was once his natural position is no easy task. I had thought that I should be able to frame a constitution and set the Association going with the help of Sjt. Kumarappa within a short time. But the more I dive into it, the more I find myself out of my depth. In a sense, the work is much more difficult than khadi, which does not in any way offer a complicated problem. You have simply to exclude all foreign and machine-made cloth, and you have established khadi on a secure foundation. But here the field is so vast, there is such an infinite variety of industries to handle and organize, that it will tax all our business talent, expert knowledge and scientific training. It cannot be achieved without hard toil, incessant endeavour and application of all our business and scientific abilities to this supreme purpose. Thus, I sent a questionnaire to several of our well-known doctors and chemists, asking them to enlighten me on the chemical analysis and different food values of polished and unpolished rice, jaggery and sugar, and so on. Many friends, I am thankful to say, have immediately responded, but only to confess that there has been no research in some of the directions I had inquired about. Is it not a tragedy that no scientist should be able to give me the chemical analysis of such a simple article as gur? The reason is that we have not thought of the villager. Take the case of honey. I am told that in foreign countries such a careful analysis of honey is made that no sample which fails to satisfy a particular test is bottled for the market. In India we have got vast resources for the production of the finest honey, but we have not much expert knowledge in the matter. An esteemed doctor friend writes to say that in his hospital, at any rate, polished rice is taboo and that it has been proved after experiments on rats and other animals that polished rice is harmful. But why have not all the medical men published the results of their investigation and experiment and joined in declaring the use of such rice as positively harmful?

I have just by one or two instances indicated my difficulty. What sort of an organization should I have? What kinds of laboratory research shall we have to go in for? We shall need a number of scientists and chemists prepared to lay not only their expert knowledge at our disposal, but to sit down in our laboratories and to devote hours of time, free of charge, to experiments in the direction I have indicated. We shall have not only to publish the results from time to time, but we shall have to inspect and certify various products. Also we shall have to find out whether the villager who produces an article or foodstuff rests content with exporting it and with using a cheap substitute imported from outside. We shall have to see that the villagers become first of all self-contained and then cater for the needs of the city-dwellers.

1 Vide “Letter to Dr. B. C. Roy”, 8-11-1934.

For this purpose we shall have to form district organizations, and, where districts are too big to handle, we may have to divide the districts into sub-districts. Each of these—some 250—should have an agent who will carry out a survey and submit a report in the terms of the instructions issued to him from the head office. These agents shall have to be full-timers and whole-hoggers, with a live faith in the programme and prepared immediately to make the necessary adjustment in their daily life. This work will certainly need money, but, more than money, it will need men of strong faith and willing hands.

Q. Will not this programme swamp the khadi programme which has yet to be fulfilled?

A. No. Khadi cannot be moved from its central place. Khadi will be the sun of the whole industrial solar system. All the other industries will receive warmth and sustenance from the khadi industry.

Q. What exactly are the industries we must revive or promote?

A. I have indicated the lines. We must promote every useful industry that was existent a short while ago and the extinction of which has now resulted in unemployment.

Q. Have we to declare a boycott of the rice and the flour mills?

A. We have to declare no boycott, but we shall ask the people to husk their own rice and to grind their own flour, and we shall carry on persistent propaganda in favour of hand-pounded rice and hand-ground flour as better articles of diet from the point of view of health. Let us declare a boycott of idleness.

Q. Shall we use the Congress Committees for this purpose?

A. Of course. We shall use and take help from any source. We have no politics as such and no party.

Q. The formation of the Central Board means centralization?

A. Not quite. The districts will be the working centres. The Central office will be only a watch tower for the whole of India issuing instructions, but not a board of administration. It will be a sort of correspondence school through which the various agents will carry on mutual exchange of thought and compare notes. We want to avoid centralization of administration, we want centralization of thought, ideas and scientific knowledge.

_Harijan, 7-12-1934_

507. ‘WHY NOT LABOUR-SAVING DEVICES’

A fair friend who was enthused over the contemplated formation of the All-India Village Industries Association, on reading my Press message¹ on the preliminary programme, writes:

The very idea of the revival or encouragement of the hand-husking of rice and _chakki_ grinding even for villages has scared me from, and abated my enthusiasm for village work. It seems to me an enormous waste of one’s time and energy not to take advantage of labour-saving devices in the uplift scheme. If the villagers, and along with them the-uplift workers, have to husk and grind, there will hardly be leisure left for them to attend to anything else for their improvement. Besides, if the primitive methods were revived, the men will take up the work in the first flush of enthusiasm; but ultimately the brunt of the whole work, I mean husking and grinding, will fall on us, women, and there will be a setback to the little progress we have already made.

Underlying this argument is a fallacy. There is no question of refusing to take advantage of labour-saving devices. If the villagers had enough to eat and to clothe themselves with, there would be no cause for home-grinding or home-husking, assuming that the question of health was not of any importance or, if it was, there was no difference between home-ground flour and millground, or home-husked rice and mill-husked. But the problem is that the villagers became idle when they left off husking and grinding even for their own use, and made no good use of their idle hours whether for uplift or otherwise. A starving man or woman who has time on his or her hand will surely be glad to earn an honest anna during that time, for, he or she will resent being advised to save his or her labour when either can turn it into a few pice to alleviate starvation. My correspondent is wrong in thinking that the uplift worker has either to grind or husk. He has certainly to learn the art and know the tools, so that he can suggest improvements and understand the limitations of the tools. She is wrong, again, in thinking that in the first flush of enthusiasm men will be called upon to grind or husk or will perform these tasks of their own accord and ultimately let the brunt fall on the shoulders of women. The fact is that husking and grinding was the prerogative of women, and tens of thousands made a living out of this task, which was both dignified and invigorative. Now they are perforce idle, because the vast majority of them have not been able to find another employment in the place of these two, which we have snatched away from them.

¹ _Vide_ “Statement to the Press”, pp. 303-4.

When the fair friend writes about the “little progress” that the women have already made, she has undoubtedly the citydwellers in mind, for the village life is entirely untouched by uplift workers. The majority of them do not even know how the women or men live in the 70,00,000 villages of this vast land. We little know how they have deteriorated for want of nourishing food and protective clothing. And we little know how, being fed on innutritious rice or flour, which are their staple, they and their children lose stamina and what little vitality they have.

I have no partiality for return to the primitive method of grinding and husking for the sake of them. I suggest the return, because there is no other way of giving employment to the millions of villagers who are living in idleness. In my opinion, village uplift is impossible, unless we solve the pressing economic distress.

Therefore, to induce the villagers to utilize their idle hours is in itself solid uplift work. I invite the fair correspondent and those who feel like her to go to some villages, live there for some time in the midst of the villagers and try to live like them, and they will soon perceive the soundness of my argument.

_Harijan_, 30-11-1394
508. WHAT IS IT?

An esteemed friend wrote the other day saying, among other things, that he had not before his mind’s eye a full picture of what I meant by village industries work. It was a good question. It must have occurred to many people. This is the purport of what I wrote to him:

In a nutshell, of the things we use, we should restrict our purchases to the articles which villages manufacture. Their manufactures may be crude. We must try to induce them to improve their workmanship, and not dismiss them because foreign articles or even articles produced in cities, that is, big factories, are superior. In other words, we should evoke the artistic talent of the villager. In this manner shall we repay somewhat the debt we owe to them. We need not be frightened by the thought whether we shall ever succeed in such an effort. Within our own times we can recall instances where we have not been baffled by the difficulty of our tasks when we have known that they were essential for the nation’s progress. If, therefore, we as individuals believe that revivification of India’s villages is a necessity of our existence, if we believe that thereby only can we root out untouchability and feel one with all, no matter to what community or religion they may belong, we must mentally go back to the villages and treat them as our pattern, instead of putting the city life before them for imitation. If this is the correct attitude, then, naturally, we begin with ourselves and thus use, say, handmade paper instead of mill-made, use village reed, wherever possible, instead of the fountain pen or the penholder, ink made in the villages instead of the big factories, etc. I can multiply instances of this nature. There is hardly anything of daily use in the home which the villagers have not made before and cannot make even now. If we perform the mental trick and fix our gaze upon them, we immediately put millions of rupees into the pockets of the villagers, whereas at the present moment we are exploiting the villagers without making any return worth the name. It is time we arrested the progress of the tragedy. To me, the campaign against untouchability has begun to imply ever so much more than the eradication of the ceremonial untouchability of those who are labelled untouchables. For the city-dweller, the villages have become untouchable. He does not know them, he will not live in them, and if he finds himself in a village, he will want to reproduce the city life there. This would be tolerable, if we could bring into being cities which would accommodate 30 crores of human beings. This is much more impossible than the one of reviving the village industries and stopping the progressive poverty, which is due as much to enforced unemployment as to any other cause.

Hanjan, 30-11-1934

509. TELEGRAM TO H. L. SHARMA

November 30, 1934

SHARMA
CARE NATHMALDAS
DANGANJ, KHURJA

YOUR WIRE. YOUR DUTY THERE FOR PRESENT. WRITE AND GUIDE. CHANGE RESIDENCE FINE FRESH AIR DRAUPADI CHILDREN.

BAPU

From a facsimile: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, facing p. 125

510. LETTER TO A GIRL

November 30, 1934

SEGAON,

CHI. LAMBOOS,

Lambodar means a large-bellied one. It is a name of Ganapati. I should have named you Lamboos. I suppose I must think it a favour from you that you wrote to me after such a long time.

1. This was in reply to the addressee’s telegram dated November 29, 1934, which read: “Mirabehn’s and your letters bear great difference. Papers question increases my anxiety. Perhaps ‘R’ ‘P’ or ‘G’ can honestly trace bundles. Put them directly in my charge then I trace your things. Wire I come otherwise writing tomorrow.” Also vide “Letter to H. L. Sharma”, 27-11-1934.

2. Nickname for a tall, thin person
Amtussalaam, Lilavati and Sharda are here. They are all quite well.
You girls seem to be doing good work.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1752

511. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

November 30, 1934

CHI. SHARMA,

Your letter, the samples¹, the books², Rs. 20³ in notes and the stamps⁴ have all been received. I have not understood the account of this sum returned. A copy of my letter⁵ to Dr. Ansari is enclosed herewith. I shall write to you when I get his reply, you must not write to him before that. You ought to shift to some other house. The account you have given of the vaids is true enough.⁶ If you cannot find a house you can erect a thatched hut on some plot of land that is available. Do away with purdah for Draupadi or else leave Khurja.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]
I have your wire.⁷ I do agree that your presence will help in locating the papers. But this is not to be. Your duty is to look after Draupadi and the children⁸. Change your residence. I am searching [for the papers].

[From Hindi]
Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, pp. 126-7

---

¹ On ghee from Khurja
² Belonging to the Kanya Ashram
³ For the Ashram khadi used by the addressee
⁴ Borrowed from the Ashram office
⁵ Vide “Letter to Dr. M. A. Ansari”, 29-11-1934.
⁶ The addressee had found from experience in the case of his daughter that most of the vaids were quacks.
⁷ Vide footnote 1, “Telegram to H. L. Sharma”, 30-11-1934.
⁸ The source has “boys”.
512. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

December 2, 1934

CHI. GHANSHYAMDAS,

Your telegrams to Vallabhbhai and to me have been received. Even this minor operation is proving troublesome. I have a letter from Dr. Bidhan too which says that you are improving, though I do not gather the same impression from your wires. I am awaiting a further telegram.

Writing to the Viceroy for an interview does not seem proper just now. I have anyway written to him a second time and asked what he meant by ‘not at the present time’. I have also asked for the reason of the refusal. Let us see what happens. Whosoever happens will be for the good.

If you are well and can go to Delhi I shall try to leave for Delhi by the 20th. I am preparing for it.

Blessings from
BAPU

From Hindi: C.W. 8002. Courtesy: G. D. Birla

513. LETTER TO JAYAPRAKASH NARAYAN

WARDHA,
December 2, 1934

CHI. JAYAPRAKASH,

I have your letter. It pains me that you are distressed. You have misinterpreted my advice about forgetting Prabhavati. All I had meant was that you should forget her for just one year, as you had to do while you were in America. I knew nothing about leave of absence.

Prabhavati is not here for a job. If you cannot feed her and nor can I, Brijkishore Babu certainly can. If she is staying here, it is for future service.

1 Vide “Letter to Private Secretary to Viceroy”, 28-11-1934.

VOL. 65 : 16 SEPTEMBER, 1934 - 15 DECEMBER, 1934 417
Maybe I am to blame for Prabha not being free in her thoughts. But our society is more to blame. However, how many people are free in their thinking? The poor Hindu woman never considers herself a free person. I have rarely seen a woman, even an old widow, who thinks of herself as free. Then why do you blame Prabha and why do you blame me?

Since our ideals are different I can understand your finding the Ashram routine repugnant. In fact I am pleasantly surprised that you nevertheless permit Prabha’s remaining in the Ashram.

I am in a quandary. Prabha does not wish to leave either me or the Ashram. How then can I push her out? I want that Prabha should follow you about and the differences which have cropped up between you two should be patched up. But if Prabha cherishes certain ideals, those ideals are apparently different from yours. For this I am certainly responsible. Having lived with me, my ideas and my conduct have certainly made an impression on her. Now I do not know what it is right to do.

Swaroopraniji asks for Prabha’s services. If Prabha returns there you will have a talk with her. The matter of her returning I have left to her and Jamnalalji. I write this at 3.30 in the morning. In the course of the day Prabha will discuss the issue with Jamnalalji and decide.

Your must understand that I do not consider myself a Mahatma and I do not think of the Ashram as something great. I am fully aware of the faults of the Ashram and of those who reside here. There certainly is some work being done. But it hardly deserves any special acclaim on that account.

It does not seem possible that I shall be able to help you in the matter of your loan. I had thought of engaging you in some activity and thus helping you repay the loan. But it does not appear likely that you will be agreeable to this. It has never seemed to me right for anyone to go begging for loans. I had explained to you certain suggestions I had and also written to you. Please tell me what you would have me do.

It will be good if you can improve your health while you are there. There is someone who practises nature cure there. Would you like to try his treatment? If you are so inclined you may write to me.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Hindi original: Jayaprakash Narayan Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library
514. LETTER TO G. V. MAVALANKAR

BHAISHRI MAVALANKAR,

December 3, 1934

I got your letter. It fully satisfies me and relieves me from worry. If the dairy does not succeed even after we have borne so much loss for five years, it will be wound up. I fully accept what you say regarding Trustees of the Harijan Ashram. They should be completely free to manage it in their own way consistently with the basic principles.

Find some time and discuss all the points with Narahari.

I know I am imposing a burden on you, and that too when your health is not good enough to shoulder it all. But, then, burdens can be imposed only on those who come forward and seek them. But please warn me as soon as you feel that it is becoming too heavy.

You also will be free from the bonds of caste when you become a beggar like me, but won’t your capacity for begging also have increased then? Shall I see that happy day in my lifetime? However, I shall die with the faith that one day you will embrace complete poverty.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1241

515. LETTER TO NARAHARI D. PARIKH

CHI. NARAHARI,

December 3, 1934

Give the accompanying letter to Mavalankar. It is in reply to his letter. The latter is for your file. That much assurance should be enough for us. You should continue to make whatever other collections you can. Let me know if you have any suggestion to make regarding either. Increase your work only to the extent of your capacity.

I hope everything else is all right.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9067
516. LETTER TO ANnapurna

December 3, 1934

CHI. ANnapurnA,

I had your letter as well as your mother’s, but I could not reply on account of lack of time. Father came but I could hardly talk to him. I could not even enquire after you all. Tell me now about your activities and how everybody is.

Blessings from
Bapu

Smt. Annapurna Kumari
C/o Shri Gopabandhu Chowdhry
BARI, DISt. Cuttack

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 2780

517. LETTER TO PREMABeHN KANTAK

Unrevised

December 4, 1934

CHI. PREMA,

I got your letter. If I gave wise replies to your questions, would they necessarily be a sign of real wisdom in me?

None of you would know the [strength of] anger in me. I alone can know it. I wouldn’t describe as anger what Lilavati or Gangabehn may have observed in me.1 I suppress most of the anger which I feel. Gangabehn and others could have seen only what remained of it. If I did not let them see even that, I would be a hypocrite or ruin my health and become a mere skeleton. That does not happen because I make a conscious effort to control my anger and tread my way through the problems. Because I don’t think it necessary to be careful with people who are intimate with me they occasionally get a glimpse of the anger in me, but, being kind to me, they forget it.

1 Gandhiji had refused both of them permission to attend the Congress session.
Prabhavati will send to you whatever yarn is still lying with me.¹ My calculation has turned out to be wrong. Prabhavati is in Bombay at present. She has gone there to be of help to Swaruprani and to meet Jayaprakash.

What you believe about . . . ² is probably not correct. Be extremely careful about believing any story against a person. It would be better not to listen to such a story at all.

What can be done about a worker like Dr. Hardikar?³ His views and aims are different from ours. The Government will not permit him to carry on the activity which is dear to his heart, and he cannot take interest in the other activities which are going on. A person can participate in popular activities only if he can adjust himself within their framework. A person like Dr. Hardikar should take up some occupation and do what service he can while engaged in it. I have been advising many people to do this.

People who follow an occupation honestly also serve the country. Those who claim to be servants of the people may in fact be a burden on them whereas people who earn a livelihood by following an occupation may be true servants.

You are right in what you say regarding your letters. You can write “Private” on letters intended exclusively for me. As regards letters which you leave to me to deal with, I shall dispose of them as I like. I rarely preserve the letters which I receive.

You may do what is possible regarding crafts.

I hope Deo will not change your place of work too frequently.⁴ You can do some work only if you remain steady in one place. If the place where you are living now is but a suburb of Poona’ you will not be able to do much useful work there. However, since you have been working there, I hope you will not be asked to leave it too soon. But ¹ The addressee had asked for yarn spun by Gandhiji in Yeravda Mandir from the slivers supplied by her.

² The name has been omitted.
³ Dr. Hardikar’s co-workers who had given up their professions, etc., at the time of the Civil Disobedience Movement were in a miserable plight when the movement was withdrawn and Hardikar himself could be of no help.
⁴ Shankarrao Deo wanted to move his Ashram to a small village as Saswad where it was established was the headquarters of a taluk.
don’t attach much importance to my advice in this matter. If you think that it was a mistake to have gone there, you certainly need not cling to the place. A mistake must be rectified when it is realized.

Who am I to secure swaraj for the country through ahimsa? If I have real ahimsa in me it cannot but prove infectious. I have little faith in myself, but my faith in ahimsa is unshakable. The world has recognized it as a great principle, but it has rarely been acted upon. I daily get a fresh experience of its sweetness, for to me it is the only wish-fulfilling tree. No other way is possible for me, for I have found no other means of attaining Satyanarayana¹ and life without the prospect of attaining Him has no meaning for me. Hence the path of ahimsa, whether difficult or easy, is the only one that I can follow. If violence breaks out after my death, you may conclude that my ahimsa was very imperfect or was not real at all—but not that the principle of ahimsa was wrong, or it may also be that we shall have to cross the river of blood in which the wicked suffer for their sins before we reach the goal of ahimsa. Ahimsa came into politics in the 1920s. But didn’t the Chauri Chaura² and other outrages occur after that, and hasn’t the Government gone to extreme lengths of repression? I am sure, however, that despite all this violence, ahimsa has had a profound effect on people. But it has been no more than a drop in the ocean. My experiment continues and is ever growing in its scope. May your faith never waver!

Our senses do not always perceive the truth. Very often what they perceive is utterly false. That is why the path of non-attachment was discovered. To cultivate non-attachment means to rise above the senses. one can do that only by overcoming one’s attachment to objects of the senses. If we believe the evidence of the eyes, would it not prove that the earth was flat? And doesn’t the sun seem to be only a golden disc? If the Prema that my eyes see was the true Prema, what a wretch would I be! And suppose you believed all that you heard against me!

I think I have written enough. Mirabehn’s alarm has sounded. The bell for prayer will soon be given. You may draw from this whatever picture you can [of my state of mind]. I am thinking of going to Delhi after the 15th. I intend to stay there for a few days in the Harijan Ashram.

¹ God in the form of Truth

So far as I can see at present, I think I shall be in jail at last.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 10363. Also C.W. 6802. Courtesy: Premabehn Kantak

518. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

December 4, 1934

CHI. SHARMA.

I got your letter yesterday. That might possibly help in locating the articles. All that you have written is enough to institute a search. How can I call you here for this task? one strong reason for your going there is to be with and serve Draupadi and the children. This is the beginning of your training and this is how naturopathy starts. And now you write that you would live in a room in Dr. Ansari’s house if he agrees to it. That too leaving behind Draupadi and Krishna who is reduced to a mere skeleton! No, your education, your duty today lies in doing whatever is possible while living with Draupadi and the children.

Take them away to some village near Khurja and live there. If not there then somewhere else in the countryside. Krishnan Nair lives at Narela near Delhi. He is a good man, you can live with him too, i.e., he might keep you with him or find some place for you. In any case you are not going to live with your brothers in Khurja.\(^1\) Your brother who is helping you will continue to do so wherever you might live. Let me know his income.

Amtul wants to undertake some work in collaboration with you. If you can live in a village, this wish of hers can also be fulfilled. She wants to serve Draupadi and the children but this has nothing to do with your living in the countryside.

I hope you will not tell me that your studies have been interrupted because you have not received your anatomy books. No matter when you get the books, by leading a well regulated life, you are certainly going ahead with your training. Giving up all suspicion also does help. Look, the reason why Jnanoba was not brought before me was to save me [the trouble]. As the shawl was already found, there was no need to see him. I had myself sent Kishorelal down to you. Similarly, the incident involving Kamalnayan and Mogheji. Amtul was present during their conversation, she heard all. She says that Kamalnayan and Mogheji were simply jesting and they did not mean to express pleasure at your departure.\(^1\) Possibly they were neither sorry nor pleased at your leaving. One desirous of becoming a naturopath is not suspicious of anyone, is not hasty and does not brood over another person’s fault. He should daily ponder over this couplet of Tulsidas:

\(^1\) The family house lacked air ant sunshine.

> God has endowed this world of sentient and insentient beings with good qualities as well as bad. Good men take in only the good qualities leaving behind the impurities like the swan that drinks only milk leaving behind the water mixed with it.

Only then can he treat other people or correctly diagnose their ailments.

If Ramdas comes along he will travel with me. I shall see what happens.

How are you spending your time these days? What are you reading? You have plenty of books, I suppose.

I have received a prompt refusal from Delhi; now further correspondence is going on. Let us see what happens.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Hindi]

_Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha_, pp. 127-9

\(^1\) Vide footnote on “Interview to The Bombay Chronicle”, 15-2-1922.
519. LETTER TO C. F. ANDREWS

December 5, 1934

MY DEAR CHARLIE,

I have your last letter just received. I need say nothing save to welcome you. I expect you here on 7th unless you are wanted there for any peremptory purpose.

The Viceroy’s letter¹ has been received asking me not to go to the Frontier. Hoyl[and] comes here on 17th on his way to Bihar. I should like to leave for Delhi on 18th to pass a few days at Harijan Ashram and then . . .².

Amrit Kaur comes here on 11th expecting to find you here.

The rest from Mathuradas.

Love from us all.

Mohan

From the original: C.W. 9685. Courtesy: Viswabharati Library, Santiniketan

520. LETTER TO PATTABHI SITARAMAYYA

December 5, 1934

DEAR DR. PATTABHI,

I have your letter. I know your hands are fairly full. What I want you to do is without interference with your work to tell me:

(1) What are the capabilities in your part of the world of revival in the direction indicated by me?

(2) Who can, in your opinion, take charge of the various districts? They must be practically wholetimers and yet able, if possible, to pay their way and make the agency self-supporting. This concern should not be run at a loss.

(3) Do you want to take up your own district?

(4) What is your opinion of khadi bhandars or centres taking up

¹ Vide footnote 1, “Letter to Private Secretary to Viceroy”, 15-11-1934.
² Omission as in the source surplus village goods for sale on credit on terms to be mutually agreed? If the answer be in the affirmative, what should be the terms?

Yours sincerely

M. K. GANDHI

DR. PATTABHI SITARAMAYYA
MASULIPATAM

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

521. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

December 5, 1934

I am getting ready for jail. I see that it is difficult to avoid it any longer. “Make the best of today, for who has seen tomorrow?”

If you have copies of the Samkshipta Balakanda which I had brought out in Natal and Gatulalji’s Subhashit Lahari, send them with Andrews. The latter is needed for Gatulalji’s verse translation of the Gita which it contains.

[From Gujarati]

Bapun Prasadi, p.154

522. LETTER TO N. R.. MALKANI

Unrevised December 5, 1934

MY DEAR MALKANI,

Gandhi Seva Sangh is framing a new constitution. It has decided to incur no fresh obligations. It will enlist workers who hold common ideals without needing to share a common purse. Jamnalalji has taken up burdens which he, the sole collector, cannot hope to discharge for all time. The Sangh itself will crumble to pieces under such a weight. You must therefore draw from the Harijan Sangh so long as you are in it. And there is nothing wrong in it when you are giving the whole of your time to it. Draw your dependents also in it and what you are taking will never appear heavy. More when we meet, if we do. The ‘if, is there, because there is no certainty about Ghanshyamdas’s coming there even after 15th. And I do not come if he is not there.

Love.

BAPU

From a photost at: G.N. 903

426 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
523. LETTER, TO SHANKERLAL BANKER

December 6, 1934

MY DEAR SHANKERLAL,

If you have got a copy of the Maganlal Memorial appeal¹ and the names of the Trustees that were announced, please send it to me. The idea is to have the Memorial opened here as, you may remember, was the suggestion made by Jamnalalji. There should be a Hall in which all the processes from picking of cotton to ginning would be on view as the centre, and the village industries surrounding these things. The idea would be also to have the office of the Village Industries Association there, and if possible the A. I. S. A. office also on the same ground. How does the whole thing appeal to you?

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

524. LETTER TO CHITRAVSHASTRI

December 6, 1934

DEAR CHITRAVSHASTRI,

I had your telegram. I know nothing of Muslim demonstrations in Sind-extolling Nathuram’s murder. My horror of any murder is well known. Undoubtedly the murder of Nathuram was bad, and doubly bad in the manner it was committed. But my disapproval, and for that matter yours, is surely of no consequence. Any disapproval to be effective must surely come from Mussalmans.

Yours sincerely

SHRI CHITRAVSHASTRI

PRESIDENT, MAHARASHTRA HINDU MAHASABHA

PSSOONA CITY

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ Vide “Maganlal Gandhi Memorial”, 17-5-1928.
525. LETTER TO NORA MORELL

December 6, 1934

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter for which I thank you. It was received some time ago, but pressure of work has prevented my replying earlier.

The best way you, living in Germany, can serve India is to befriend those Indians who are living in Germany, and secondly to live up to the doctrines that you approve.

Yours sincerely

MADAME NORA MORELL
BERLIN-WILMERSDORF
RUDESHEIMER PLATZ 6

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

526. LETTER TO JAIRAMDAS DOULTRAM

December 6, 1934

I have now come across the letter from the German friend. I have written to her. Here is a copy of it so that you too can send a reply if you like. The reply is belated, but better late than never.

Encl. 1

SHRI JAIRAMDAS DOULATRAM
MARKET STREET
HYDERABAD (SIND)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 Vide the preceding item.
527. LETTER TO UPTON SINCLAIR

December 6, 1934

DEAR FRIEND,

I was thankful to hear from you after a long time. You have mailed your books to Ahmedabad. My headquarters just now are Ashram, Wardha. Therefore probably the books are still somewhere in transit. I am looking forward to receiving both The Cry for Justice and, Epic Campaign. If you don’t mind, I would like you to send a fresh parcel so that if the parcel already sent miscarries I may not be without the books.

Yours sincerely

UPTON SINCLAIR, ESQ. STATION A. PASADENA
CALIFORNIA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

528. TELEGRAM TO PRIVATE SECRETARY TO VICEROY

December 7, 1934

WHILST I AM PRAYERFULLY CONSIDERING MY DUTY REGARDING THE CONTEMPLATED VISIT TO THE FRONTIER, SEEING THAT GARBLED REPORTS OF OUR CORRESPONDENCE HAVE APPEARED IN THE PRESS UNLESS HIS EXCELLENCY HAS OBJECTION I WOULD LIKE TO PUBLISH THE SAME.¹

GANDHI

Home Department, Political, File No. 4/8/35. Courtesy: National Archives of India. Also The Bombay Chronicle, 12-12-1934

¹ On December 10 the addressee replied: “His Excellency has no objection to the publication of the correspondence.”
529. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

December 7, 1934

CHI. AMALA,

Your letters have been received. I shall be glad if you get something in Santiniketan. Do not be greedy in stating your terms. The rest through Mahadev.

Love.

BAPU

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

530. LETTER TO BHAGWANJI P. PANDYA

December 7, 1934

CHI. BHAGWAN JI,

I got your letter. From where can I find the cash for Bhai Dhulji? How can I pay it either? I have one foot in jail and one outside. He ought not to have left Vijapur. But since he has left, he should now take up some work somewhere.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

You should not obstinately cling to milk and fruit diet. You can try to live on fresh milk and such leaves and tubers as can be eaten uncooked.

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 373. Courtesy: Bhagwanji P. Pandya
531. LETTER TO MANUBEHN GANDHI

December 7, 1934

CHI. MANUDI,

Why did you fall ill? Is it to enjoy the privilege of being nursed by your father? But get all right and don’t let him nurse you very long.

Blessings from

BAPU

From Gujarati: C.W. 1536. Courtesy: Manubehn S. Mashruwala

532. DISCUSSION WITH ABDUL GHAFFAR KHAN

December 7, 1934

[GANDHI:] Khan Saheb, this is not an occasion when we may not offer defence. We must engage our own lawyer and offer defence.

The Khan Saheb said, “That may be, but I am averse to defending myself in a law-court. Ever since 1919 you have taught us not to recognize the law-courts and I should hate this time to do otherwise.”

I quite see, but we do not want to go to jail now if we can help it and hence I would urge you to engage a lawyer.

“Just as you please”, said the Khan Saheb, and got ready to accompany the officials.

The Bombay Chronicle, 9-12-1934

1 This brief discussion took place just as Abdul Ghaffar Khan was leaving after his arrest. The Bombay Chronicle reports, “. . . today at about 5.15 p.m. when the D. S. P. of Wardha accompanied by a police officer from Bombay visited the Satyagraha Ashram asking for Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan, he was sitting upstairs with Mahatma Gandhi and the arrival of visitors was announced by Mirabehn. Gandhiji asked her to bring them upstairs.

“The D. S. P. came up and told Gandhiji that he had a warrant of arrest for Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan from the Presidency Magistrate of Bombay. Gandhiji asked for the warrant and read it out to Khan Saheb. It was on a charge under Section 124-A, there being no mention of any speech or writing in question. on the D. S. P. asking Khan saheb as to when he would be ready he said he was quite ready. But Gandhiji said that if the D. S. P. did not mind Khan Saheb would see his brother and children at Seth Jannalal’s place. . . .”
533. LETTER TO ABDUL GHANI

December 7, 1934

MY DEAR GHANI,

I am posting a letter to you [in a] separate cover written by Father. After he had written the letter, he was arrested in my presence and taken to Bombay. There he would be tried under Section 124-A. You would not be disturbed by the news. Prisons are our second or rather real home.

I expect a long letter from you telling me how you are doing there. Did you receive the letter I sent to you at Lucknow?

Love.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

534. LETTER TO CHOITHRAM GIDWANI

December 8, 1934

MY DEAR CHOITHRAM,

I have your letter. I am not sure that any propaganda will be of any service to you. In any case you cannot have Khan Saheb now. He is under arrest. Remember we do not want to court arrest just now. We have to become speechless manual labourers working in the villages. Speech-making must be reserved for the few in the Assembly and therefore it must be confined to a few. I hope you are keeping yourself fit.

Yours,

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 85
535. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

December 8, 1934

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I have your letter. It arrived today. Since it is dated the 6th, I should have got it yesterday. You will probably read what I have written to Mummy¹. I have told her that she should discuss the matter with you and come to some arrangement convenient to you both. Whatever the circumstances, you ought to be sent for a few days to hand over charge.

The rest when we meet. I hope Jayaprakash is all right:

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

Andrews arrived today. Khurshedbehn will arrive on Monday. There was a letter from Gopi for you, saying that she was all right. You must have read about Khan Saheb’s arrest.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3445

536. MESSAGE TO PRABHASHANAR PATTANF

December 8, 1934

I understand your difficulties. It will certainly be very good if you censure the Municipality, but even if you supersede the Municipality which does nothing but indulge in speechmaking, nobody will describe that as “fascism”.

*   *   *

Instead of carrying the whole load of worries on your own head, I shall be happy if you send some of it here.

¹ Swaruprani Nehru; the letter is not available.
² The message was conveyed to the addressee by Mahadev Desai in a letter dated December 8, 1934.
³ Omission as in the source
537. LETTER TO NARAHARI D. PARISH

December 8, 1934

CHI. NARAHARI,

I have your letter.

The money given by Bhai Mavalankar and Ranchhodbhai for the dairy is welcome. I had a letter from Ambalalbhai saying that he did intend to pay the loss up to December 31. You may, therefore, spend just now from the money received from Mavalankar and Ranchhodbhai, but credit the sum to next year’s account. Similarly, when you get the money from Ambalalbhai, you will have to return to me the Rs. 1,000 which I sent. The account will balance then. Send the figure of the loss up to December end to me first and then to Ambalalbhai. If I am in jail by that time, follow the instructions given in this letter. When drawing up the account to determine the amount of the loss, let me know the sums, if any, that you may have received from other sources. We should not include any of them in the amount to be paid by Ambalalbhai. One such sum, for instance, is that received for the Goseva Sangh and [utilized for the dairy] as suggested by yourself. I have written briefly about this to Narandas also. He doesn’t know about your last letter.

Ratilal indeed has had a narrow escape. I hope the thief will be caught. Advise Prabhashankar to strengthen a little the guard at the bungalow. He may ask for legitimate help from the police. If Ratilal feels afraid, spare a room for him in the Ashram. It should be given on rent. If any cash or valuables are being kept in the bungalow, I have already suggested that they should be removed.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9066
538. STATEMENT TO THE PRESS

December 9, 1934

I regret that Press correspondents have circulated unauthorized reports about the correspondence between the Government and myself regarding my contemplated visit to the Frontier Province. I would caution the public against believing such reports. I expect shortly to make a statement.

The Bombay Chronicle, 10-12-1934

539. LETTER TO KIRLOSKAR BROTHERS

December 10, 1934

GENTLEMEN,

I got your letter yesterday afternoon in the midst of an important interview. I was able to read it only at 3 a.m. today. I have taken the deepest interest in your invention. I have great regard for Mr. Kale both as a mechanic and a man. I felt drawn to him when he was at the Ashram. Being a fairly busy man, I had not much time to give to the examination of the machine, but I have kept myself in touch with the progress of the examination by the Judges. When you offered to send it to me I told you of my own difficulty. But I was pressed by a friend to give the machine a trial myself. I, therefore, wrote to you again asking you to send the machine with Mr. Kale and another who might know all about tools in general. I had intended to keep the machine here for some time so that the Director of the Ashram Shri Vinoba might also try it. The prize of Rs. 1,00,000 is at the disposal of him who would earn it. I am personally anxious to give it, if the machine of my dream can be had. The highest speed attained on the ordinary wheel is over 700 yards per hour. Besides yours, there are two machines of promise. They are also undergoing improvements.

1 Vide “Statement to the Press”, 11-12-1934.
2 Satis Chandra Das Gupta, Lakshmidas Purushottam Asar and C. Rajagopalachari.
3 Vide “Letter to Kirloskar Brothers”, 24-11-1934.
I expect to leave for Delhi on or about the 18th inst. My movement becomes uncertain thereafter. I shall gladly try the machine myself if I succeed in returning to Wardha and if you will then entertain my request to send your machine. I intend to interest you in the Village Industries scheme and help it through your organization by suggesting or making improvements in the village tools, especially the indigenous village chakki for grinding wheat, etc., the rice-pounder, the oil-press and the cane-crusher.

If, however, you will entertain my request, I would like you to do so as comrades in a common humanitarian cause and not as commercial men suspecting the bona fides of public men who seek to tempt houses like yours to interest yourselves in inventions of benefit to millions of starving villagers.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy. Pyarelal

540. LETTER TO J. N. SAHNI

December 10, 1934

MY DEAR SAHNI,

I wonder how far you have answered the “National Call” and respected private friendship by publishing unfinished and unauthorized garbled version about the correspondence I am carrying on with the authorities. If you think you have advanced the national cause thereby, I have nothing to say. It would have been wise, if you had referred the matter to me as sometimes even strangers do.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

SHRI J. N. SAHNI

“NATIONAL CALL”

DELHI

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai
541. LETTER TO M. VISVESVARAYYA

December 10, 1934

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter. Fortunately I have your book also sent to me for which too, kindly accept my thanks.

Your letter gave me great joy in that there was in it promise of your support to my humble effort on behalf of the villagers. I have no difficulty whatsoever in endorsing your remarks about heavy industries. I know that the heavy industries cannot be organized without power-driven machinery. I can have no quarrel with such use of machinery. My objection comes in when such machinery displaces human labour without providing displaced hands with a substitute at least as good as displaced labour.

Yours sincerely

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: C.W. 9727. Courtesy: Government of Mysore

542. LETTER TO CARL HEATH

December 10, 1934

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter of 19th November. I have not been able to understand it, in spite of the help I sought from Charlie Andrews.

I have no hesitation in agreeing with you that any solution of the present deadlock should be just and creative, and that it should be neither imposed nor extorted; in other words, it should be an agreed solution honourable to both the countries. I know too the suffering of India and the suffering of Lancashire. But if the juxtaposition of the two is meant to imply that the cause of the suffering of either is identical I would dissent from any such view. The suffering of India is imposed upon her; the suffering of Lancashire is due partly to world causes and partly to its own shortsightedness and selfishness. So far as it was possible for me to suggest an alleviation of the suffering of Lancashire through India’s help I had made a definite offer when I was in England in 1931. But my offer proved to be of no avail. The offer was this: If there was a free settlement between England and India, a favoured-nation clause was quite possible, in so far as India might need any foreign cloth in order to supplement her output of cloth, whether through the village spinning-wheel or through her mills. I do not know how far such treatment is possible today for, even during the short period that has elapsed since the meeting of the Round Table Conference, India has become better organized for the manufacture of all her clothing requirements, in spite of the fact that she is importing fine-count calico both from England and Japan. The chief point, however, is not how Lancashire can send its calico to India, but how the whole of England can benefit in every way by the benefit that India must derive from attainment of complete freedom, political and economic. The more I study the villages of India the more intensely do I realize that India has no need to be a pauper country if she can get the chance to grow without the fetters that today prevent her natural growth.

\[1\] This letter was displayed at the Mysore Pavilion of the Gandhi Darshan Exhibition held in New Delhi in 1969-70.

Your last paragraph seems to imply that there is no longer any repression in India. I can only tell you that repression is there to be seen by anyone with the naked eye. I do not know of any single repressive law that has been repealed. The Press is effectively gagged, there is no such thing as freedom of movement in Bengal as also in the Frontier Province. If you hear nothing of imprisonments and lathi charges it is because civil disobedience is suspended and the Congress has resolved, in furtherance of the spirit of non-violence, to submit to repressive laws in so far as it is humanly possible to do so. on the top of all this comes the Parliamentary Committee’s proposals for a new constitution. It is, as I read it, a barefaced denial of freedom. I see in it no scope for expansion. I would any day prefer the existing state to the crushing burden that threatens to overwhelm India and tighten the British hold upon her. My own power of endurance is being tested beyond my capacity. My way to the Frontier Province is blocked.

But, in spite of the blackness of the horizon, I have no sense of despair in me. I believe in the existence of a beneficent Power that overrides and upsets all human plans. It ever produces order out of chaos, and redresses wrongs in spite of the tyranny of tyrants.

---

\(^1\) Vide “Interview to unemployed workers’ deputation” and “Statement to the Press”, 27-9-1931.

India must come to her own one day. But she will do so chiefly if her own sons and daughters behave themselves and prove worthy of her freedom. We must exert our utmost to prove our worth, and you, friends of the Conciliation Group, will, I know, do your level best according to your lights to help a just solution.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

CARL HEATH, ESQ.
INDIAN CONCILIATION GROUP
FRIENDS HOUSE
EUSTON ROAD, LONDON, N. W. 1

From a photostat: G.N. 1027

543. LETTER TO STEEN

December 10, 1934

DEAR COL. STEEN,

I was glad to receive your letter. I did indeed collect a fair amount during my Harijan tour. The funds are in the hands of the Harijan Sevak Sangh, Delhi. The Board considers all applications for grants. My collections are mostly allocated for disbursements in the districts or places in which they were collected. You will be glad to know that several thousand schools and boarding houses are being conducted under the aegis of the Board or supported partly or wholly by it throughout India.

I need hardly tell you that I have known your institution and its work for many years. Shri Shinde was kind enough to interest me in it. Undoubtedly it is much older than the H. S. Sangh.

Wishing you all success,

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
544. LETTER TO MASNILAL AND SUSHILA GANDHI

December 10, 1934

CHI. MANILAL AND SUSHILA.

I got your letters. You should not expect any article from me just now. I can’t even think what to write. I do not know the situation there. I do believe, however, that the Agent should stay. Whether he is a good or a bad one will depend on our luck. But if there were to be no Agent, nothing could be done. What is to be done if none of you knows the art of using the Agent well? Or probably experience will teach you that art. It will be enough if you yourself keep away from intrigues. Should I take it as certain now that you won’t send a permit for Ramdas?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4828

545. LETTER TO RAOJIBHAI N. PATEL

December 10, 1934

CHI. RAOJIBHAI,

This is no time to ask me to send messages. It would be best to let me do my work and deduce what message you can from it. It is better to demonstrate one’s message through one’s work rather than say it in words Who else will take up the work of reviving village industries if not Patidar young men and women? What can be better education than such work? He is an educated man who multiplies one pie into two by honest means and does for the country work of greater value than the cost of the khadi that he wears. I wish the Conference’s success.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 9592. Courtesy: Raojibhai N. Patel

1 Patidar Conference
546. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

December 10, 1934

Bhai Vallabhbhai,

Pass on the accompanying letter\(^1\) to Khan Saheb. The rest Mahadev will write. After receiving Rajendrababu’s letter, I was left with no option. I have received no wire from Delhi-so far.

Blessings from

Bapu

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, p. 143

547. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

December 10, 1934

There is no possibility of your finding a copy of my Samkshipta Balakanda. You may find Gatulal’s book Send it to me if you do. Perhaps Munshi may have a copy. Balakanda may be found only with some Indian who was in South Africa. You may make inquiries.

Why should we waste our time In guessing the reasons for Khan Saheb’s arrest? There is one obvious reason. They cannot put up with his dynamism.

My jail-going will be postponed. It seems, however, that ultimately there will be no alternative to it.

I intend to leave Wardha on the 18th or the 19th.

Wherever they lodge me, at the moment I feel that they must give me facilities for Harijan work.

... is thinking things out for himself at the moment. I am hopeful, however, that after he has stumbled often enough he will come round. His mind has become extremely unsteady. The Lord will do as He pleases; He knows better. This knowledge relieves me from worry.

[From Gujarati]

Bapuni Prasadi, pp. 154-5

\(^1\) The letter is not available.

\(^2\) The name is Qmitted in the source.
548. LETTER TO RAMESHWARDAS NEVATIA

December 10, 1934

CHI. RAMESHWAR,

Let me have a full report about Ghani. Pay him at least Rs. 30. I will write more tomorrow. What arrangements have been made for his meals? Can you not find a Muslim with clean habits? If you can find even a Christian cook, he will do. If there is a big railway station nearby, Ghani can go there daily for one meal. What is the Climate of the place like? What is the size of the population?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 3040

549. LETTER TO RAJENDRA PRASAD

December 10, 1934

BHAJ RAJENDRA PRASAD,

Your letter. I have had an exhaustive account from Lakshmidades too. A copy of the letter I sent to Maulana Saheb is enclosed herewith. I expect to reach Delhi during the last week of this month. The Working Committee will of course meet there and we may defer our decision till then. I hope everything will be settled at that time. We should not be scared into taking a decision contrary to our principles. Whatever step we may take can be taken only on its own merit.

My programme is at the moment fixed only up to my Delhi visit. Correspondence with the Viceroy will continue. So far as is possible I want to avoid going to jail but the future rests with God. May you maintain good health.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: C.W. 9733. Courtesy: Rajendra Prasad

1 The letter is not available.
550. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

December 10, 1934

CHI. SHARMA,

Your letter. It is a pity that no two letters of yours are alike. All are full of your moods. For my part there is no question of any suspicion. For me the foremost task is to see you well-adjusted. You are the one who harbours suspicions. What have I written that you read my suspicion in it? I am in every way trying to arrange for your training. I have already written to Dr. Ansari. Tell me what more I am to do. You are indeed undergoing true training. What does it suggest when you say that you cannot get a house even in a village? What does Krishna’s wasting away and your falling ill indicate? What happened to your research talents? Where is your self-control gone? You had written that your presence might cure Krishna. What are you doing now? I had taken it that you would be all right after having gone there. Your last letter pains me; it seems that you are passing the days in great distress. Have you made any arrangements for your children’s education?

Give me a clear picture of what is happening there. As all are now under your control I get no letters either from your brothers or from Draupadi.

Ramdas is not progressing well. He is extremely worried and moreover unsteady. He is assailed by varying moods. God’s will prevails, what can we do?

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

I might reach Delhi about the 20th.

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, between pp. 130 and 131
551. LETTER TO T. RAMACHANDRA

[Before December 11, 1934]¹

Mahatma Gandhi has addressed a letter to Brahmachari T. Ramachandra² asking him to suggest names for occupying the position of agents for pursuing the activities of the All-India Village Industries Association in Mysore for each of the several districts in the State. Gandhiji has hinted that the workers so selected should be “who e-hoggers”.

The Hindu, 12-12-1934

552. STATEMENT TO THE PRESS

December 11, 1934

It is unfortunate that Press correspondents have thought fit without reference to the parties thereto to publish garbled reports of the correspondence that has been going on between His Excellency the Viceroy and myself with reference to my contemplated visit to the Frontier Province.

I was pressed by several editors to contradict or confirm the reports.

The best thing I could do was to seek His Excellency’s permission to publish the correspondence in so far as it has gone. Having just received this permission,¹ I release the correspondence to the Press.

But I would warn the public against thinking that the correspondence is closed and that I am waiting for the first opportunity to court arrest by proceeding to the Frontier in the teeth of His Excellency’s advice to the contrary.

I have no desire to offer civil disobedience at the present moment. My object is as a humble servant of God to meet those in the Frontier who call themselves Servants of God and to know them. The urge has become all the greater now that their brave leader is under ¹ The report has the date-line “Bangalore, December 11, 1934”.

² M. L. C. and Secretary, Mysore State Harijan Sevak Sangh
³ Vide “Letter to Upton Sinclair”, 6-12-1934.
arrest. But my immediate object cannot be served by defiance of authority. Therefore, I propose to try all possible constitutional means to obtain the necessary permission.

If suspicion of my motive is the cause of refusal, I shall try to disarm the suspicion. My endeavour is to avoid every occasion for civil disobedience of authority, in so far as it is humanly possible to do so.

I would therefore ask the public in general, and the friends of the Frontier in particular, to hold themselves in patience. They will know in proper time what is to happen finally. And I would urge the editors of newspapers to respect my wish that they publish nothing concerning my contemplated visit to the Frontier without authority.

Here is the correspondence:

The Bombay Chronicle, 12-12-1934

553. LETTER TO S. SRINIVASA IYENGAR

December 11, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I purposely refrained from sending a reply to your previous letter as it did not call for any. The letter received two days ago did require a reply. But I was waiting for the arrival of your good wife. It was a privilege for me to meet her here. The advent of Ambujam has been a blessing to me. [She] renews old sweet memories and brings me nearer to you as a member of the family. I have not had a long chat with her. I hope to some time today. I have a heavy meeting before me amidst an otherwise heavy programme for the next two days. Ambujam is well and happy.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat of the original. Courtesy: S. Doraiswami Iyer and Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

1 Not reproduced here; vide “Letter to private secretary to Viceroy”, 15-11-1934; 28-11-1934 and “Telegram to private secretary to Viceroy”, 7-12-1934.
554. LETTER TO S. SRINIVASA IYENGAR

WARDHA,
December 11, 1934

DEAR FRIEND,

I am thankful for your letter. It is a matter of great joy to me that in the opinion of both of you, Ambujam has benefited by her stay with me. Her only ambition in life seems to be to make herself a useful instrument of service. I regard it a privilege to be able to help Ambujam in any way I can. And I shall always welcome any suggestion you may make in furtherance of my effort to guide her.

With my regards to both of you,

M. K. GANDHI

Builders of Modern India, p. 53

555. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

December 11, 1934

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I got both your letters together. I will probably leave on the 19th. I had thought that you would arrive here on Sunday. What can my influence avail? You alone can judge how much your presence is necessary there. Is it your job, or mine from this distance, to please Mummy? It is not as easy to send for you here now as it was to relieve you. For myself, I am eagerly awaiting your arrival, and your work also remains unattended to. I shall write to Mummy today again,

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3436
556. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

December 11, 1934

BHAIZ GHANSHYAMDAS,

I see that you are endeavouring to reach Delhi under any circumstances before the 20th. There is no need for all this trouble if it is only for my sake. You must not rush at the cost of your health. One more point arises about my visit. Would not my staying with you be risky in view of my recent correspondence with the Viceroy, a garbled version of which has appeared in the Press? And the third point: Would you not be subject to pressure of work immediately on your reaching there? If you think I must go to Delhi I can go only after four or five days. As far as I can see now I can set- out on the 19th, reaching there on the 20th. Mahadev is writing to you about the rest.

I have Gopi’s letter which I am enclosing with this. Could she benefit from a trip to Europe?

Blessings from
BAPU

From Hindi: C.W. 8003. Courtesy: G. D. Birla

557. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

December 12, 1934

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

I got your letter. I am sending a fresh statement¹ altogether for Khan Saheb. I think it is the only proper statement for him to make, and he should make it. I am writing to him. Read that letter. I need not write anything more here. The apology offered in the statement seems absolutely essential to me. But you are the final judge about that and about the whole statement. I can say nothing positively from this distance. I also feel that a lawyer should be engaged.

He may read out the statement. He should not plead either guilty or not guilty. The lawyer should not plead for a lighter sentence, but may, if he wishes, analyse the speech or may only watch the proceedings. There is no need at all to cross-examine the witnesses. But these are my personal views only. The final decision about everything rests with you.

¹ To be submitted to the court

VOL. 65 : 16 SEPTEMBER, 1934 - 15 DECEMBER, 1934

As for me, you know what the position is. Andrews has left for Delhi today on that very business. He has asked me not to proceed further in the matter meanwhile. Details will be given to you by Mathuradas. Nothing more need be done for the present regarding Rajendrababu. I have received a wire from Ghanshyamdas saying that the doctors do not permit him to leave till the 30th. I need not, therefore, reach Delhi on the 20th, unless Andrews advises otherwise. The meeting of the Working Committee can be called now only in January.

If you think it proper to attend Balvantra’i’s Conference, you may do so. I can’t judge about that.

Tell Abhyankar on my behalf, too, that he should get all right.

Pyarelal must have arrived there. If you require more help, please ask for it. If it is possible, send away Prabhavati to Swaruprani. Pyarelal also should pay her a visit.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhohaine, pp. 143-4

558. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAII PATEL

December 13, 1934

Bhai Vallabhbhai,

I got your letter. Manilal’s and . . .’s problem seems to have been solved satisfactorily. I feel unhappy about Karnataka. But what can we say to a leader like Gangadharao? Do what you can.

I am now wholly occupied with the village Industries Association. Rajaji is here. He came the day before yesterday evening and wants to leave today. Jamnalal will go there in a few days. The rest you will know from Mahadev.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati].

Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, p. 145

1 The name is omitted in the source.
559. LETTER TO MRIDULA SARABHAI

WARDHA,
December 13, 1934

CHI. MRIDULA,

I have your letter. I had been awaiting it. Most probably I shall be here till the 27th. Then in Delhi. I advise you to come and meet me here. Would you be interested in the work of the Village Industries Association? It would be good if you could meet me early for that.

I keep worrying about Saralabehn. Write to me in detail. It would be better if you talked in person.
Ba is here because Ramdas is here.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 11192. Courtesy: Sarabhai Foundation

560. LETTER TO RANI VIDYAVATI

December 13, 1934

CHI. VIDYA,

I have your letter. I have one from Jang Bahadur too. I was sorry. You must have received my telegram. If an operation is necessary, everything can be done at the Seva Sadan at Calcutta. Why should the poor be harassed? It is improper to delay such matters. Keep me informed. You are of course entitled to come to me any time you choose. My staying here or anywhere else has now uncertain. As such, plans are afoot for my Delhi visit.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]
I am not writing separately to Jang Bahadur.

From the Hindi original: Rani Vidyavati Papers. Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library
561. HARIJAN WORK IN ASSAM

The Secretary, Harijan Sevak Sangh, Assam, has sent me a copy of the report of the Sangh’s work during the year. From the report I abstract the following interesting particulars:

The Sangh runs 72 schools for boys and girls with 2,365 pupils on the rolls. Of these, 21 are mixed schools and 4 for girls only.

The total amount spent on the schools during the year was Rs. 4,495-1-4-O.

The Sangh recruited 328 boys and girls for the ordinary schools.

Scholarships totalling Rs. 864-9-0 for Middle English and High English schools were given to Harijan students.

The total value of books, slates, soaps, clothes given came to Rs. 206-2-6.

23 Namghars (prayer houses) were thrown open to Harijans.

The Jorhat Committee built a common prayer house for Rs. 1,196-9-3.

The Sangh employed 11 Harijan teachers, including two mistresses.

A co-operative society was organized at Dibrugarh for Bhangis. 81 Bhangis have taken up shares. Rs. 920 have already been realized.

The Sangh has organized 9 District Committees. These have organized 22 sub-committees of Harijans.

Free medical relief was given, costing Rs. 16-7-0. 40 spinningwheels and ten maunds of cotton for spinning were distributed among poor Harijans.

132 villages were toured for anti-opium and anti-drink propaganda. As a result, 154 took pledges, giving up drink, and 15 hemp smoking.

Municipal Boards of the Province were requested to make better arrangements of housing, drainage and water supply for their employees, especially the sweepers. But it is sad to note that none of them took up the work. Gauhati and Dibrugarh were the worst offenders.

By way of contrast, it is pleasurable to note that, at the instance of the itinerant workers, some villages constructed their own roads and cleaned their own tanks.

246 villages were surveyed during the year, and statistics of Harijan families as to their condition, professions, disabilities, drinking and opium habits, etc., were collected.
The President, His Holiness the Satradhikar Goswami of Garmur, toured through most of the important places including the ex-tea-garden coolie centres.

In Assam, opium is a very serious problem. It ruins the addict physically, morally and materially. It has been found that, in 8 districts, the average consumption among 64,459 addicts is nearly 1Ω tolas per head per month. In Nowgong, excepting the Mikir Hills, the consumption is about 18 Srs. per 10,000, in Lakhimpur it is 62 Srs. per 10,000 In Mikir Hills it is even over 62 Srs. per 10,000. Harijans are the worst sufferers in Lakhimpur, Sibsagar and Nowgong.

The main professions of indigenous Harijans are fishing, pottery and goldsmithy. The revival movement should result in helping these artisans.

This encouraging record is marred by the knowledge that over one-fourth of the expenses were incurred for administrative and propaganda purposes. The total expenditure was Rs. 11,966. of this, Rs. 3,664 represents administration and propaganda, and Rs. 8,302 welfare. Administrative staff absorbs Rs. 1,149 and propagandists Rs. 1,020. I have omitted annas and pies. Now this expense for welfare work of Rs. 8,302 is much too much in my estimation. As I have repeatedly said, constructive work is its own and the best propaganda. Administrative staff should also be reduced to a minimum. I know that Assam is a difficult province to work [in]. Nevertheless, the fact that Harijan Sevak Sanghs are an organization of penitents or debtors should ever be borne in mind.

_Harijan, 14-12-1934_

562. NOTES

AN ASPIRING NATUROPATH

Being myself a half-baked naturopath, I draw to myself similar cranks, of whom Shri Sharma of Khurja is one. He had to his credit a Sun and Light Hospital and some well advertised books. I had a hand in the disappearance of the Hospital. The sequel is told as follows in his own words:¹

. . . I would like . . . to inform . . . those who may be interested in nature-cure methods that, having become, of late, more acquainted with the ways of Nature, that is of Truth, I have discovered that all my books on sunlight and colour cannot be held to be reliable beyond doubt. . . . I would, therefore, like all those who possess my books, or who might have heard of them, for the time being to dismiss them from their consideration and not to rely upon what I have written therein or upon the invention which I have advertised therein. I hope some day . . . to re-write the books and place them before the public with confidence based upon verifiable experiments. I wish the other naturopaths will take a lesson from Shri Sharma’s example. I have written and spoken much against the modern treatment of diseases. But I have a sneaking regard for the comparative sanity of allopaths. They do not make pretensions. The best among them do not refuse to learn from others, and they are humble enough to own their mistakes among themselves, though not to their patients. They try to know all about the human body and as much as is possible of the drugs they use. Naturopaths use few drugs. But an accurate knowledge of the body is surely essential for all who would tamper with it under the pretence of curing it of the many ailments to which it is a prey. Shri Sharma has a burning passion for becoming a true naturopath. He is, therefore, determined to acquire a working knowledge of anatomy, physiology and whatever is necessary for all who will deal with diseases, whether in the name of allopathy, homoeopathy or naturopathy. His notice is a confession and a warning. Let all concerned take note.

¹ Only extracts are reproduced here.

_Harijan, 14-12-1934_

563. A HARIJAN SEVAK GONE

I tender my respectful condolences to the family of Shri V. P. Madhava Rao who died the other days at Bangalore at the ripe old age of 85. He was Dewan of Travancore, Baroda and Mysore. After his retirement he used to devote his time to social service. And though so old, he had allowed himself to be nominated as Chairman of the local Harijan Sevak Sangh. His was an influence always-exerted on behalf of the Harijan.

_Harijan, 14-12-1 934_

---

1 On December 1, 1934
564. MOTHER OF INVENTION

Shri J. K. Mehta, Secretary, Indian Merchants, Chamber, Bombay, writes:

... In 1917 my services were borrowed from the Chamber by the Government of India for purposes of the War. I was at Simla for about a year and a half with the Munitions Board. ... It was found that horseshoes could not be made available from the United Kingdom. It proved to be a great and complicated problem, as there was no factory in India making horseshoes. ... Ultimately the solution was found in getting supplies from hundreds of villages. The village smith came to the rescue of the Government of India, ... who got horseshoes from different villages and sent them up for the Army requirements. ...

Truly, necessity is the mother of invention. Why should not we be able to accomplish in our war against enforced idleness and unemployment what had become possible in the time of the great War? Instances such as Shri J. K. Mehta has given can be endlessly multiplied. The whole face of the great continent of Europe was changed during those days of mutual slaughter, and men and women, boys and girls had to work with their hands, in order that they might be able to keep body and soul together.

Harijan, 14-12-1934

565. A. I. F. I. A.—OBJECT AND CONSTITUTION

[WARDHA, December 14, 1934]

As the idea was to form a Board of Administration of the policy and programme of the All-India Village Industries Association of persons who thoroughly believe in its policy and the practicability of its programme and who will, in effect, be wholetimers, both Mr. Kumarappa and I have given considerable time and thought to the formation of the Board.

1 Only extracts are reproduced here.
2 The Association was formed on this date; vide Vol. LX, “The New Baby”, 21-12-1934. The constitution was released to the Press along with a statement on December 15.
3 ibid.
The Congress resolution in the matter contemplates the question of a self-acting, independent and non-political organization consisting of men and women whose primary aim in life would be identification with the villagers and promotion of their welfare.

The following friends, having understood the implications of their obligation, have consented to form the Association of which they become both the foundation-members and the first Board of Management:

- Shri Shrikrishnadas Jajooji, President and Treasurer
- [Shri] J. C. Kumarappa, organizer and Secretary
- Shrimati Gosibehn Captain
- Dr. Khan Saheb
- Shri Shoorji Vallabhdas
- Dr. Prafulla Ghosh
- Shri Lakshmidas Purushottam Asar
- Shri Shankerlal Banker

They will have power to add to their number.

The function of the Board will be to define the programme of village reconstruction work from time to time, to co-ordinate the policy followed in different centres, to collect, collate and circulate information gathered from workers or agents as to the actual condition of the existing village industries, both those that may be flourishing and those that may be perishing, also as to the economic, moral and physical condition of villagers, to carry on research work with the help of specialists and experts and to discover and create a market for surplus village manufactures.

The Board will collect such funds as may be required for the due discharge of its functions. As the secret of the success of the policy of this Association will be in making the villagers selfreliant and self-supporting, its programme must not be costly. The idea is, therefore, to work with as little outlay as possible.

It follows, therefore, that decentralization must be the keynote of the Board’s policy, and India will be divided into as many areas as there may be workers or agents, who will work, organize and be responsible to the Board for the carrying out of its programme in their respective areas.

---

1 Vide “Speech at subjects committee meeting, A.I.C.C.”, 24-10-1934.

The workers or agents will be selected from those who, consistently with their preoccupation of earning their livelihood, will give their whole time to the work of the Association. So far as possible, the agents will be honorary. They will collect what funds may be necessary for the organization of their areas. It may be that the Board will not get many unpaid agents. It will be satisfied, for a start, even with a few districts which are thoroughly organized and demonstrated to be economically and otherwise successful. A list of agents will be published from time to time.

The Board cannot carry on research work without the help of experts. And since experts cannot be expected to give their whole time and thought to the work of the Association, I have sent requests to several friends if they would allow their names to appear on the Board of Advisers. So far the following friends have kindly consented to be on it:

Dr. Rabindranath Tagore
Sir J. C. Bose Sir
P. C. Ray
Sir C. V. Raman
Shri Ramdas
Pantulu Jamal Mohamed Sahib
Shri G. D. Birla
Sir Purushottamdas Thakurdas
Sir S. Pochkhanawalla
Prof. Sam Higginbottom
Dr. Jivraj Mehta
Dr. M. A. Ansari
Major-General Sir Robert McCarrison
Dr. Rajabally
V. Patel
Dr. S. Subba Rao
Dr. B. C. Roy
Dr. Purushottam Patel

Wardha has been chosen as the Headquarters because of being centrally situated, being a junction station and being rather a glorified village than a city.

Though I have several names before me of friends who have undertaken to act as agents to the Association, I would request these correspondents as well as others to offer their names to the Organizer and Secretary, Mr. J. C. Kumarappa, Wardha. I have transferred to him all the names and papers received by me.

THE CONSTITUTION OF THE ASSOCIATION

The Association contemplated: by the resolution regarding village industries passed by the Indian National Congress at its session held on the 27th October, 1934, at Bombay, and known as the All-India Village Industries Association, i.e., the Akhil Bharat Gram Udyog Sangh, is hereby formed.

OBJECT

The object of the Association shall be village reorganization and reconstruction, including the revival, encouragement and improvement of village industries, and the moral and physical advancement of the villages of India.

ACTIVITIES

For the due fulfilment of its object, the Association shall raise funds to carry on research work, publish literature, organize organic establish agencies, devise measures for the improvement of village tools, and do everything that may be necessary for the furtherance of its object.

The Association shall work under the guidance and advice of Gandhiji.

The Association shall consist of: (i) A Board of Management, (ii) Members, (iii) Agents, (iv) Honorary workers, (v) Paid, wholetime workers and (vi) Associates, and shall also have a board of advisers.

MEMBERSHIP

Any person who subscribes to the pledge hereto annexed and is recommended by a member, or any one of the duly authorized agents of the Association, and whose admission is approved by the Board of Management shall be a Member.
Any person who sympathizes with the object of the Association and pays an annual subscription of not less than Rs. 100 shall be an Associate, and any person who pays a lump sum of Rs. 1,000 may be enrolled as a Life Associate.

Advisers shall be those who, consistently with their preoccupations, agree to give the free benefit of their special knowledge to the Association whenever they are consulted.

BOARD OF MANAGEMENT

The following foundation-members shall be the first Board of Management to hold office for three years:

- Shri Shrikrishandas Jajoo
- [Shri] J. C. Kumarappa
- Shri[mati] Gosibehn Captain
- Dr. Khan Saheb
- Shoorji Vallabhdas
- Dr. Prafulla Chandra Ghosh
- Shri Lakshmidas Purushottam Asar
- [Shri] Shankerlal Banker

Thereafter the members shall elect the Board of Management to hold office for a period of three years.

The Board of Management shall be in full charge of the affairs of the Association, hold funds and properties for it, and shall have power to add to their number from among the duly enrolled members, provided that the total strength does not exceed twenty.

The Board of Management shall maintain proper books of accounts which shall be duly audited and which shall be open to public inspection.

The Board of Management shall have the power to frame bye-laws for the carrying out of the object clause.

It will be open to the Board of Management to alter or amend or add to this constitution by the consent of three-fourths of the then existing members of the Board of Management.

The Board of Management shall have power to appoint trustees to hold funds and properties on behalf of the Association.

Pledge for Members
Having read the constitution and rules of the All-India Village Industries Association, I offer to be a member thereof and, God helping, promise to devote the best part of my energy and talents to the furtherance of its object, which is the all-round welfare of the villagers of India.

So long as I remain a member of the Association, I shall not take part in any campaign of Civil Disobedience.

In the discharge of my duties, I shall seek the assistance and cooperation of all those who may be willing to give them, irrespective of differences in politics.

To the best of my ability, I shall strive to live up to the ideals of the Association and prefer the use of village manufactures to any other.

In the prosecution of my obligations to the villagers, I shall recognize no distinction between man and man.

_Harijan, 21-12-1934_

---

566. LETTER TO J. N. SAHNI

_December 14, 1934_

MY DEAR SAHNI,

Your letter. I do not read Hindustan Times. The cutting you send me I see for the first time. It is just now 3 a.m. Devdas is here but I see him rarely. I am sending the cutting to him with a note of disapprobation. Although it was a Press agency report, he had no right to publish it without reference to me. You or he or anybody would be justified in publishing exclusive news provided it was authorized by the party affected. There are today in India English journalists who, though not well disposed towards me, observe the rule with reference to me, not for my sake but for their own journalistic reputation. I know that you did not err wittingly, but you have erred, now I can say, both as a soldier and [as a] journalist.¹ The injury started with the U. P. wire from Patna. But I have done. I draw the attention of those who, I believe, are amenable to influence from me. You must forget all about it, but learn the lesson that it is better not to print anything about me in which public interest is involved, without reference to me.

¹ Vide also “Letter to J.N. Sahni”, 10-12-1934.
You shall certainly see me when I come to Delhi and you will incidentally know what injury has been caused by the premature publication of news that was only half true, not by you only but others also. But others, lapse does not excuse yours.

Yours sincerely,

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

567. LETTER TO SAHEBJI MAHARAJ

December 15, 1934

DEAR SAHEBJI MAHARAJ1,

I have kept your previous letter of 6th September by me. I read your “Cows Help Cows” only last week. It is beautifully written. But I want to complain as a humble representative of the cow. Some experts tell me that mixtures such as you contemplate are not wholly successful. What, I find, is needed are experiments that would serve the villagers in their own villages. If we do not find anything in that direction the majority of cows have to die so that the minority in off places like Dayalbagh may live!

I shall want your help in the village industries work.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G.N. 2161

568. LETTER TO VERRIER ELWIN

December 15, 1934

MY DEAR VERRIER,

I am afraid your undertaking2 covers my visit. You have to take permission. You have to observe it in the letter and the spirit. When in

---

1 Head of the Radhaswami sect in Dayalbagh, Agra
2 At the time of the renewal of his passport to India, the addressee had to give the following undertaking: “That I would confine myself entirely to work among the Gonds;
   “take no part in civil disobedience or any other political movement;
   “refrain, as far as possible, from associating with any persons engaged in political agitation;
   “refrain from writing articles against the Government; and would observe the undertaking in the spirit as well as the letter.”
doubt, conscience demands reference. If they do not give an unequivocal answer, you may not have me there. So long as the undertaking lasts, the more honourable course is to refer all doubtful matters to the authorities. If it was well to give the undertaking, it is well also to leave oneself in the hands of those who have taken it.

Andrews was here the other day. He is in Delhi now. I shall meet him again. He will leave for England on 5th January (D.V.).

Love to you all.

BAPU

SHRI VERRIER ELWIN
GOND SEVA MANDAL
KARANJIA (C. P.)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

569. LETTER TO H. P. MODY
December 15, 1934

DEAR MR. MODY,

The Assam Relief Committee write to say that they have not received any blankets from you.

Yours Sincerely

M. K. GANDHI

SHRI H. P. MODY
MILL OWNERS ASSOCIATION
BOMBAY FORT

From the original: H. P. Mody Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library
APPENDIX I

TALK WITH MARS CHESLEY

[On or before December 15, 1934]1

MARY CHESLEY: Do you believe your guidance comes from subconscious reasoning or from God?

GANDHI: From God—but subconscious reasoning may be the voice of God. Often, after seeing the way I consciously reason out why that is the best way, Mahomet was like this, very sure his voices were of God and he was no impostor.

M. C. Then does following conscience lead to mystical experiences?

G. It may or it may not. But one thing is sure that the humility which feels itself nothing before God is necessary for mystical experiences, such as those of Saint Francis and Saint Augustine. On the other hand, a Bradlaw or a Marcus Aurelius, though following conscience, felt themselves to be self-made men and not dependent on God, and so they could get no mystical experiences or joy. To me, following conscience is following a living force, not an ethical code.

M. C. How do you understand what is God’s guidance for you when it is a question of choosing between two good things?

G. I use my intellect on the subject and if I don’t get any strong feeling as to which of the two I should choose, I just leave the matter, and before long I wake up one morning with the perfect assurance that it should be A rather than B. Always, of course, it is necessary to be utterly humble and go wherever the decision should take you, even though it should be to difficulties and suffering.

M. C. Is it not necessary to lead a disciplined life in order to receive these assurances as to what to do and not to do?

G. Yes, of course, one’s mind must be attuned to the five necessary rules of love, truth, purity, non-possession and fearlessness.

M. C. Do you include bodily discipline such as fasting?

G. If you follow the five rules already mentioned, you will find that bodily discipline follows automatically. You should read Rajayokga by Swami Vivekananda on this point.

1 According to the source the talk took place at the close of one of the sessions of the All-India Village Industries Association held at Wardha on December 14 and 15, 1934.
Just then word was brought to Gandhi that a certain rich man had donated a large sum of money to the All-India Village Industries Association fund, and joy was expressed by the little group, Gandhi remarking quietly . . . that loving service was receiving its reward. He had been saying previously that we who believed in non-violence should win the rich to serve the poor by our own devoted service and by showing our contentment and happiness in a position of less wealth and prestige than we might demand. He spoke about this again now.

G. If rich people could see us poorer ones really content instead of hankering after wealth, it would become the fashion to dispense with wealth. The fashion for brown bread grew because a few enthusiasts showed that they really believed in it and liked it. Unfortunately the higher castes have failed to identify themselves with their humbler fellows. This is the darkest hour of Hinduism. I have no excuse to offer for it.

M. C. What is your remedy?

G. Everything I am doing, village industries, khaddar, Harijan work, etc.

M. C. From what sources do you get your conception of God?

G. From my childhood, remembering my mother's constant visits to the temple. Sometimes these were as many as four or five a day, and never less than two. Also my nurse used to tell me I must repeat the name of God if I felt afraid.

M. C. Are not your own experiences sources of your conception too?

G. Yes, but they did not begin until later, in South Africa. Before that I had a period of doubt and it was during that time that I began to study Islam and Christianity.

M. C. How far have these two religions coloured your conception of God?

G. I began with a prejudice against Christianity because in my youth it had meant to me drink, eating meat and Western clothes. I had no such prejudice to overcome against Islam. Later when I met some fine Christian people my prejudice went, and for a year I studied Christian books voraciously, attended the Keswick Convention, met famous divines and generally absorbed Christianity, honestly seeking to know if I should do as some of my friends were always begging me to do—become a Christian. But in the end I honestly felt I could not do so. I believe in the historic Jesus, for the four gospels bear the stamp of the real experience of devotees.

M. C. Is the conception of God as Father only to be found in Christianity?

1 At this point Kasturba and others came with Gandhiji's food. Mary Chesley left and joined him again during his evening walk.
G. No, it is also to be found in Hinduism. Read the second chapter of the Gita in which the conception of God, not only as Father, but also as Mother is to be found. This is not the case with Islam, for among all its ninetynine names for God, ‘Father’ is not one. Mahomet, like Christ, had the authoritative note of God-consciousness. If you judge a religion by the changed lives of its adherents, Islam seems to me to have as much to show as Christianity. Anyway, two thousand years is a very brief time in which to judge the merits of a religion.

M. C. I know some people who are praying that you may become a Christian.

G. (Laughing) ... Many are—

M. C. But wait until you hear the reason—it is because they feel that you can give a truer interpretation of Christianity than any yet given to the world.

G. There are others who feel that too. But if they wish me to say that Christianity is the only true religion, I cannot do so. I can truly say, however, that Christianity is a true religion.

M. C. What do you think is the special contribution of Christianity, Islam and Hinduism to the world?

G. I think Christianity’s particular contribution is that of active love. No other religion says so firmly that God is love, and the New Testament is full of the word. Christians, however, as a whole have denied this principle with their wars. The ahimsa of Hinduism is a more passive thing than the active Christian love.

The great contribution of Hinduism is its recognition of the unity of all life. Like Christianity, Hinduism has not lived up to its teaching. If either had done so, there would have been no need for Islam, for whatever is fundamentally good in a religion for the part of the world in which it has arisen is certainly good for the whole world.

Islam’s contribution has been the brotherhood of all men. Later this idea was limited to the Islamic brotherhood, so Muslims too have failed to live up to the teaching of their religion. Khan Saheb, with his teaching of the service of all humanity, is bringing them back to the original idea.

M. C. You once said that the idea of Jesus as the Son of God was a mystical conception. Would you enlarge upon that, please?

G. I believe that Jesus was a man born in the natural way, and that people, seeing the wonderful things he did, ascribed divinity to him, and then described it mystically by saying that he was the Son of God.

M. C. Do you think such writers were impostors?

G. No. I hey were just expressing their conception mystically. The whole Book of Revelation is a description of mystical experiences. For example, it does not mean literally that streets were to be paved with gold. Many mystical expressions would be gross if they meant literally what they said.
M. C. Have you had any mystical experiences?

G. If, by mystical experiences, you mean visions, no. I should be a fraud if I claimed to have had such. But I am very sure of the voice which guides me. Of course, some unbalanced people have claimed to hear voices too—but I do not think anyone has suggested that I am unbalanced.¹

M. C. You have spoken of your sense of uneasiness which preceded your twenty-one days’ fast² last year, and also said that generally when obeying your inner voice, you find a reason for your action afterwards. Did you find a reason for the twenty-one days’ fast?

G. It is true that a sense of uneasiness drove me to that fast. Usually, even under the greatest strain I can remain quite buoyant but when I lost that buoyancy and could not even sleep, I decided to fast and immediately found peace. Yes, I did discover a reason for it, one which the fast itself brought to light; for several people, both at the time and afterwards, wrote to tell me of sins which they had committed and which they had now put right to the best of their ability. They said that the fast had brought them to a knowledge of the truth about themselves and that they would not allow such faults to occur again.

M. C. You have said sometimes that consciousness of sin brings a feeling of separation from God. Did you feel any such separation before your fast?

G. No. I felt only great uneasiness and restlessness. I could not joke even in my usual way.

During the discussion on the organization of Village Industries’ Association Gandhi made it clear that ‘rural-mindedness’ was to him not a mere detail, but the prime necessity. When the name of a certain woman was suggested as a member of the Board, he remembered that she had, in all seriousness, thought it impossible to use tooth-sticks in a town, because there was nowhere to throw them.

We could not have anyone of such mentality on the Board. To begin with, we do not want in our Village Industries to try to compete with the West in making tooth-powders, etc.

_Bapu_, pp. 114-22

¹ This remark was said in such a droll way that all burst into laughter.
² From May 8 to 28, 1933.
1. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

December 16, 1934

CHI. PREMA,

Your letters I shall send on to Narandas. Today also I got up at 1.45 a.m. and started writing letters. It has become a habit with me now to wake up at about 2. I go to bed before 9 p.m. During the day, I take a nap once or twice and get half an hour to one hour. That seems to be enough for me.

By writing “not revised” I ensure—and do—justice to myself and to the person to whom the letter is addressed. If by chance I have written “aaj mar gaya” instead of “Ajmer gaya”, the other party may correct the mistake or, in case of doubt, ask me. A letter which has not been revised should always be regarded as incomplete. But I would prefer, and so would you, that I write an incomplete letter to you rather than not write any.

Most probably I shall be going to Delhi on or about the 27th. Continue to write to me at the Wardha address till you hear from me or you read in the papers.

The atonement for any violation of a vow in a dream is generally greater vigilance and Ramanama on waking up from the dream. Such violations of vows or moral rules in dreams are signs of our imperfection. Unconsciously we harbour deep in our hearts the desires which we gratify in dreams. We should not despair because of such dreams, but should become more and more vigilant. Despair may be a sign of the person being attached to the senses; it is certainly a sign of his lack of faith. If a person tires of repeating Ramanama—despairs about its usefulness—shouldn’t we say that he has lost faith in it? When Columbus’s companions lost faith, they wanted to kill him. But with his eyes of faith Columbus could clearly see the coast and he asked his companions to give him some more time, and he reached America! ! ! If a person dreams that he is eating forbidden food, such a dream also means what I have explained above. There may be external causes for such dreams and, whenever we discover any, we should remove them. “I am the spotless Brahman that is witness of all the states.” This is what we sing. We can sing thus only if we strive ceaselessly to be that. The dreams that we get are a sign that we have not succeeded in becoming spotless. They are a warning light for us.
Not a leaf can stir without God’s grace, but we cannot dispense with human effort either, which is the means through which God’s grace works. Realization means nothing but pure and selfless service of all living creatures.

It is very good indeed that Kisan has decided to stay with you.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 10364. Also C.W. 6803 Courtesy: Premabehn Kantak

2. LETTER TO SHIVABHAI G. PATEL

December 16, 1934

CHI. SHIVABHAI,

I got your letter. Give your wife the freedom that you have reserved for yourself. In matters in which both do not agree, each must be free to go his or her own way. She should, therefore, get training for using her freedom well. I see the good of you both in that.

Take the fullest interest in village industries work. And do not forget that khadi is the center of such work.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9513. Also C.W. 429. Courtesy: Shivabhai G. Patel

3. LETTER TO VENILAL A. GANDHI

WARDHA, December 16, 1934

CHI. VENILAL,

Who are the five members in your family? Give me their ages, etc. I think you should be content with only so much education as the poor can hope to provide their children. Can you do ordinary reading with your eyes? Do you maintain good health in other ways?

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From Gujarati: C.W. 920. Courtesy: Venilal A. Gandhi

1 Kisan Ghumatkar

2 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
4. LETTER TO LABHUBEHN A. SHETH

December 16, 1934

CHI. LABHU,

If I had included your name in my letter to Amritlal, I would have been made a fool by your letter, wouldn’t I? This is the plight of one who leaves the trodden path. Who can tell whether your letter conveys your genuine desire for knowledge or is mere idle prattle? But I want to look great in your eyes, hence I must measure up to your yardstick! If anything, I am at least four times older than you. Am I not?

How can I tell you where you can find steadiness, as though it were some commodity to be bought in a shop? If I were running a grocer’s shop here, this being my ancestral business, I would have sent it over to you without your asking for it. You have even sent an advance of one anna. You have wasted your years. Amritlal is no more worthy of being your father because he has failed to show me something that you have within you. But hasn’t the poet said, “The dear ones of the embodied soul are all selfish.” After all isn’t he only your embodied father? The one without a body that is your real Father dwells in your own heart. Know Him and you will not have to spend even an anna. Your learning is illusory if it does not lead you to Him. But if you are learning with this aim, you will be able to secure the release of Khan Saheb, Sheikh, Jawahar and the others. But if you want to indulge in idle talk and play as with dolls then you must cast away the idea of greatness you associate with me or humbly confess that you never had genuine thirst for knowledge. Remember in this connection the story of Indra and Virochana. If you don’t know it yourself, ask Amritlal and let him also enjoy it and add to your knowledge.

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

5. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

December 17, 1934

DEAR SISTER,

I do hope that your meeting in Karachi will be a full success and that the sisters assembled there will rise above the petty quarrels of men by setting the example of refusing to divide themselves into

1 Khan Saheb Abdul Ghaffar Khan
2 The reference is to the All-India Women’s Conference.
various groups. Surely religions are not made to set up quarrels among ourselves. I hope too that the meeting will give full support to the activities of the newly-formed Village Industries Association. It is essentially women’s work. Let it not be said of the city women that they cared not for their millions of sisters living in the 700,000 villages.

Here is a letter for Dr. Maude Royden.

Your note has just come in. The cutting is interesting. C.F. Andrews comes in today.

It was a great joy to meet you both. I hope you were physically none the worse for your stay.

Love.

BAPU

[PS.]

I find that I shall not be in Delhi on 20th as I had intended to be. I am likely to be there between 27th-29th. Having gone there, I am supposed to stay there two weeks at least and four at the most.

M. K. G.

RAJUMARI AMRIT KAUR
4A STAFFLINES
KARACHI

From the original: C.W. 3516. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6325

6. LETTER TO BARINDRA KUMAR GHOSH

December 17, 1934

I have glanced through your book. It has proved a severe disappointment. You have lost yourself in the exuberance of your own language. You have missed the spirit of non-co-operation and civil resistance. You have glorified slavery; our vice has become virtue in your estimation. I may not argue with you. Time will show us the true way. What does it matter so long as we pursue the path that seems to us to be right?

Yours sincerely,

M. K. G.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

1 The letter is not traceable.

2 Wounded Humanity
7. LETTER TO DR. GOPICHAND BHARGAVA

WARDHA,
December 17, 1934

DEAR DR. GOPICHAND,

Is it not time you gave your decision about yourself and Jagannath? I want the names of the others whom you would recommend as agents.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

DR. GOPICHAND BHARGAVA
VACHWADI
LAHORE

From the original: Dr. Gopichand Bhargava Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

8. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

BHAI THAKKAR BAPA,

I got your letter. In my wire I only asked you to send Rs. 5,000 for research. Didn’t I say in it that the budget itself would be passed in Delhi?

Nrisinhaprasad’s example must be said to be an excellent one. How many sanatanists like him did you come across in Kathiawar? I have no time to write about other things.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1149

9. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

I got your letter. I am not surprised that the lawyers did not like Khan Saheb’s statement. We should be satisfied if our lawyers

1 This is not traceable
2 In the court during his trial on a charge of sedition; vide,”Letter to Vallabhabhai Patel”,12-12-1934

VOL.66 : 16 DECEMBER, 1934 - 24 APRIL, 1935 5
approved of it. It was the only one which could serve our purpose. The Government is not likely to understand anything at present.

Deenabandhu is arriving today and we shall know from him what happened.

I think Jamnalalji will leave here on Thursday. Please do stay on there till then at any rate.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]

10. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

December 17, 1934

CHI. NARANDAS,

If Keshu succeeds, it will be a great achievement. Jamnalalji can utilize your services in many ways—to control the accounts, to examine things, to think out new ways and so on. The office is not going to be a small one. If you are here, I also can use your services in a good many ways if I am free.

What you say regarding Shankaran is true. What can we do if Vijaya herself has become impatient to get married. According to me, she is not as yet at all fit to get married. Try to dissuade her. Most probably I will be leaving for Delhi on the 27th. Give Rs. 30 to Harilal.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: S.N. 33676

\[1\] C. F. Andrews
11. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

December 17, 1934

CHI. SHARMA,

I feel apprehensive in writing to you. I got your letter just now. I had written nothing that could have provoked you to write such a letter. How can a son suspect his father? Perhaps I am not worthy of being a true father!

If no one is keeping well in Khurja, why do you stay on there? Go to the Harijan Ashram [Delhi] and live in a separate house there. It will not be very expensive. Or stay in a village here. I cannot put up with your falling ill and continuing to be ill.

Ramdas will not stay with me. He no longer has faith in my treatment though he consults me occasionally. He has given up eggs and takes ordinary diet. Since yesterday he has resumed living with Nimu. He is preparing to go to Bombay, for which he has my permission. He has gained a fair amount of strength and moves about by himself. I am not worried on his account. In the end it will be all right for him.

Amtul left for Bombay the day before yesterday and will probably reach Delhi by the end of this month.

May be I shall be able to go to Delhi only after the 27th.

Your note appeared in last week’s Harijanbandhu and in this week’s Harijan. Owing to an oversight it was delayed for a week. As soon as your letter came I sent instructions for a copy of the Harijan to be sent to you.

I got a letter today from Dr. Ansari and among other things he writes this about you:

As regards Dr. Sharma, I would like to see him and find out his exact requirements and then I may be able to help him.

It would be good if you went to Delhi. If you wish you may go there after my arrival. You yourself told me that you were responsible for your brothers not writing to me. Can they be so lacking in manners as not even to reply to me? If you have not seen them so far, is it not an instance of your haphazard ways? But if you do not yourself realize this, I can hardly make you see it. I see nothing but lack of coherence in your talk, your actions and your letters. I was under the impression that you were conscious of it. Well, we need not worry about it. All will be well. Your heart is good and my effort is as vigorous as it can be. I always have your good at heart and nothing else, I hope to take much service from you. Ask Draupadi to write to me in detail.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, between pp. 136 and 137

12. LETTER TO KANTI GANDHI

December 18, 1934

CHI. KANTI,

I have had no letter from you for some time. I should like you to observe some rule. I for my part did reply to your last letter. How are things with you? Ramdas is here at present. He is fairly well. Devdas came and stayed for two days. Lakshmi has gone with Rajaji. Kakasaheb is in Madras. He has gone there to help in the Hindi work. Ba is all right. For the rest, read Harijan.

Most probably I shall have to go to Delhi at the end of this month.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 7291. Courtesy: Kanti Gandhi

13. LETTER TO JUGALKISHORE BIRLA

December 18, 1934

BHAJ JUGALKISHOREJI,

The enclosed letter is for your perusal. If the land required by Kshitishbabu is not of use to you and is not too valuable either, you may give it away to him and take back Rs. 1,500. If, however, it is valuable, I have nothing to say.

You must be reading Harijan and Harijansevak.

Blessings from
BAPU

From Hindi: C.W. 8004. Courtesy: G. D. Birla
14. LETTER TO HATIM ALVI

December 19, 1934

Of the many happy memories of the late Maulana, the one that persists most with me, is the gift by him, on the conclusion of my fast of 21 days at Delhi, of a cow as an earnest of his intense desire to see heart-unity among Hindus and Mussalmans. If he had been with us, he would have raised his voice against the recent deliberate murder of the two Hindus who foolishly criticized the Prophet of Islam. Now—alas!—one hears these murders being extolled publicly as if they were meritorious acts.

I wonder whether you and your League have taken any steps to educate the public along the right path.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

15. LETTER TO DR. PATTABHI SITARAMAYYA

December [19], 1934

DEAR DR. PATTABHI,

This is village paper. The ink is village-made, and the pen is made of village reed. Do the villagers manufacture paper there? If so, at what price?

I have your full letter. Yes, we must meet. Since you have time, you have to be humble enough to ask for the responsibility you can shoulder — work of the highest order, with or without office, whichever is better for your work. In this service of the destitute, there is no room for ceremony.

And this business of rice, flour, gur, oil, ghee, etc., is a vast business. You have to revive your knowledge of medicine.

1 The addressee had asked Gandhiji to send a few words of tribute to Mahomed Ali.
2 In 1924; vide, “Message to the press on fast “,9-10-1924
3 At Karachi and Lahore
4 The source has ‘29’, but in the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary the last paragraph of this letter is entered under December 19, 1934 which appears to be the correct date since Gandhiji left Wardha on December 28.
There are two ways of doing the thing — by compulsion through State organization, or voluntary effort, i.e., organized honesty or non-violence . . .

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

Incidents of Gandhiji’s Life, p. 224

16. LETTER TO G. SITARAM SASTRY

[December 19, 1934]¹

MY DEAR SASTRY,

I do hope that the Jayanti function will be a success and that it will result on the one hand in a greater appreciation of your effort by the public and on the other in a greater devotion to their duty by the workers.

You will see the . . .² papers.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

SHRI SITARAM SASTRY
VINAYA ASHRAM, KALYANAKAVOOR
CHANDOLE P. O., GUNTUR DIST.

From a copy: C.W. 9176. Courtesy: G. Sitaram Sastry

17. BYE-LAWS OF THE ALL-INDIA VILLAGE INDUSTRIES ASSOCIATION

[Before December 20, 1934]³

(1) The ordinary general meeting of the Association shall be held once every year, and at any time an extraordinary meeting may be convened by the Secretary with the consent of the President, and shall be convened upon a requisition being received by him from not less than one-sixth of the members on the roll. One-fifth the number of members on the roll, with a minimum of seven, shall form a quorum.

(2) The first financial year of the Association shall be from the 14th December, 1934 to 31st December, 1935, and thereafter the

¹ Omission as in the source
² From the postmark
³ Omission as in the source
⁴ The rules framed under bye-law 10 were issued to the Press on this date.
calendar year.

(3) Meetings of the Board of Management may be summoned by the Secretary, as and when necessary, or when required to do so by one-third the number of members on the Board.

The Secretary may circulate a proposition amongst the members of the Board, and when all the members have agreed to it, such shall have the force of a resolution passed at a meeting of the Board.

For a meeting of the Board of Management one-third the number of members, with a minimum of four, shall be the quorum.

Any member of the Board of Management who is absent at three consecutive meetings without leave shall be deemed to have vacated his office.

(4) Proper records shall be kept by the Secretary of all proceedings of the general meetings and the Board meetings, with the attendance of the members there, and such minutes shall be signed by the President at the meeting at which they are confirmed.

(5) This Association shall not be responsible for any obligation, financial or other, entered into by any person without written authority signed by a person duly authorized thereto on behalf of the Association.

(6) The Board of Management shall have power to remove any member from the roll by a resolution of the Board passed by at least three-fourths of the number of members on the Board at a meeting, of which due notice had been given and this matter had been placed on the agenda.

(7) Every member shall send to the Secretary a report of the allotted work done by him for every quarter so as to reach the Central Office not later than one month after the expiry of that quarter.

If no reports are received for three consecutive quarters from any member, such member will cease to be a member and vacate his office, if any.

(8) Institutions which undertake to abide by the rules and regulations laid down by the Board of Management for affiliation may be on application affiliated by the Secretary.

(9) It shall be competent for the Board to issue certificates to persons who may be prepared to deal in village manufactures coming within the province of the Association.
(10) The duties of agents may be prescribed by the Board from time to time.¹

AGENTS’ DUTIES

The Board of Management has framed a set of rules defining the duties of agents under bye-law No. 10. They are as follows:

(1) To begin with, the agent will be expected to attend to the programme already drawn up by the Central Office. After he has made a fair start with the Central Office programme, he will be expected to make a survey of all such industries that may be revived, improved or introduced in his area and shall forthwith report to the Central Office results of his investigations and submit a programme of work based thereon for examination by the Office.

(2) Every agent will be expected to attend to the sanitation and hygiene of the villages within his area.

(3) With a view to finding markets for the surplus products of the villages, he should induce reliable merchants to store village products for sale, at prices mutually fixed between the merchants and the agent and so as to ensure the genuineness of such products.

(4) He should carry on an intensive propaganda to create a favourable public opinion for the programme in his area.

(5) He may invite and receive subscriptions and donations to meet the expenses in connection with his work and should not expect any financial aid from the Central Office. But he shall not utilize any part of the funds so collected by him for his own personal requirements.

(6) He may appoint, whenever necessary, and if funds at his disposal permit, paid workers needed for his work.

(7) He shall keep accurate accounts of all receipts and disbursements, which will be subject to audit by the Central Office.

(8) His work will be subject to the inspection and supervision of the Central Office.

(9) He shall submit a report of his work and an abstract of receipts and payments for every month so as to reach the Central Office not later than the 15th of the month following.

(10) Any neglect in submitting the monthly report and statement of accounts, or in carrying out instructions from the Central ¹What follows was also issued in a statement to the Press.

Office, will involve cancellation of the agency.

I have the names of some workers who have volunteered to act as agents for the Association. I would like those whose names I have already got and others to send in their names to Sjt. Kumarappa at Wardha, with sufficient details, so as to enable the Board to make its choice. The chief thing to bear in mind is that no one should take charge of more villages than he can manage, with or without the help of co-workers whom he has to find, and that the Board is to undertake no financial responsibility. It is felt that the Board can never cover all the seven hundred thousand villages of India, if it is to employ paid agency. It has started work with the belief that there are self-sacrificing men and women enough who realize the necessity of serving the villages, which have remained long neglected, though everyone knows that city life would be impossible if there were no villages to serve them.

_Harijan, 28-12-1934_

18. LETTER TO AGATHA HARRISON

December 20, 1934

MY DEAR AGATHA,

I have your doleful letter. The situation does not disturb us here as much as it disturbs you. The thing is you do not know Sir Samuel Hoare. The Indian Government has always been a one-man rule. Sir Samuel Hoare’s philosophy demands that Indian wishes should not be consulted, much less respected, except when they reflect those of his advisers. The latter have made up their minds that the White Paper¹, now the J. P. C.² Report, is the last word. The Congress has decided that nothing is acceptable unless its wishes are taken into account. The Congress also recognizes that Sir Samuel holds the power and that the Congress must not use the little power that it has got. Therefore you friends on your side should, if you can, resolutely say that the existing state should remain till time has arrived for a change by consent of the ‘governed’. Not that even your effort will succeed. But you will at least have the satisfaction of knowing that you had done the right thing. If, on the other hand, the friends over there think that they cannot conscientiously take up that attitude and that they must accept the Report if it cannot be changed, you must prosecute that plan. If I were they, I should sit silent, since I could not represent the Indian view. The friends at least may be no party directly or indirectly to ‘imposing’ by force a constitution on India, which would be the case if the constitution is passed. Read Chintamani’s warning enclosed. Not that it means much. The Home Member was quite clear on the point. But his being clear was a cruel reminder of India’s present helplessness.

¹ Embodying the British Government’s proposals for reforms based on the discussions at the Round Table Conferences in 1931-2
² Joint Parliamentary Committee which examined the White Paper and endorsed its proposals with some modifications

My case is pending. There also the story is the same. They have made up their minds. But I may not anticipate. C. F. Andrews is in Calcutta. He is fighting like a Trojan against the heaviest odds and he will presently give you all the latest news. Meanwhile you and other friends should rest assured that I shall take no hasty step. Ample warning will be given of my intentions. But what are my intentions worth! Man proposes, God disposes. Let His will be done, not mine, nor yours.

I have no time to tell you the story about the paper or the ink or the pen in which and with which this is written.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 1483

19. LETTER TO HARIBHAU UPADHYAYA

December 20, 1934

BHAU HARIBHAU,

I have your letter. I see from the newspapers that there is again some trouble. I shall look into the scheme of Hindi Vidyapith when I get it.

Correspondence courses have been introduced in the Mahila Ashram. I wish, if I may, to include your name among the teachers to be appointed for it.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: C.W. 6081. Courtesy: Haribhau Upadhyaya
20. EXPANSION OF “HARIJAN”

Some readers have taken exception to the way in which the columns of Harijan are being occupied with the development of the village industries scheme, and some others have welcomed the change in what they had thought was monotony of presentation. Either opinion is probably hasty. Any problem connected with the welfare of villages as a whole must be intimately related to the Harijans, who represent over a sixth part of India’s population. If villages get good rice and flour, Harijans will benefit by the change as much as the rest of the population. But there is a special sense in which Harijans will benefit. Tanning and the whole of the raw hide work is their monopoly, and economically this will occupy perhaps the best part of the new scheme. Indeed, Harijans, in so far as they have given their opinion, have welcomed the expansion. Those who were tired of monotony were also in my opinion wrong. The pages of Harijan could not be filled with matters that had no connection, direct or indirect, with those in whose interest it was being published. Those who complained of monotony were perhaps not sufficiently interested in the cause.

No doubt it would be true criticism if I were told that the columns of Harijan were not as interesting as they might be made. There are causes for this which are inherent in the movement itself. It must be confessed that removal of untouchability is not a popular cause in the sense in which great political movements have been and become popular all over the world. Removal of untouchability is a mighty social reform. But it cannot furnish sensations. It is a plodder’s work. And record of the work of plodders requires editorial gifts of a high order to make it interesting. Plodders can only attract plodding editors. Therefore, the only way before those who are intimately connected with the Harijan movement is to continue to work with an ever increasing faith in the cause and leave the result to take care of itself.

A little time ago there appeared in the Press a paragraph that the Gujarati edition of Harijan known as Harijanbandhu was about to be stopped, because it was being run at a loss. The news was premature and unauthorized. There was indeed a talk about it. But when Thakkar Bapa heard of it, he soon smashed it by saying that none of the three editions, Hindi, Gujarati and English, could be stopped. The remedies available for avoiding losses on these weeklies are three:
(1) Raising of subscription;
(2) Voluntary reduction by the printing and editorial staff in the remuneration they receive for their labours;
(3) An appeal for increase in the number of subscribers.

The second remedy has been, and is still being, tried. Reduction in the expense of publishing the papers is being steadily pursued. There is limitless scope for increase in the number of subscribers. And now that village industries and general village uplift is to occupy a fair portion of Harijan, there should be an automatic increase in the number of subscribers.

Harijan, 21-12-1934

21. THE NEW BABY

The much-talked-of All-India Village Industries Association was born amid calm surroundings and without any fuss or ceremony on the 14th instant at Wardha, which will be its headquarters by reason of the munificence of Sheth Jamnalalji, who has set apart ample ground with buildings for the use of the Association. Of this, however, hereafter.

Let us make the acquaintance of the foundation members who are the first Board of Management. Shri Shrikrishnadas Jajooji, the President, is a lawyer who had a distinguished career during his school and college days. He left a lucrative practice long ago. He has been identified with the philanthropic activities of Sheth Jamnalalji and is the President of the All-India Spinners’ Association, Maharashtra Branch.

Shri Kumarappa, the Organizer and Secretary, is a Chartered Accountant, who years ago left a growing practice in Bombay and took up under Kakasaheb Kalelkar honorary appointment as Professor at the Gujarat Vidyapith. He served, with Sjts. Bhulabhai Desai and D. N. Bahadurji, ex-Advocate Generals, on the Public Debts Committee appointed by the Congress, and has been the financial adviser of the Bihar Central Relief Committee.

Shri Gosibehn Captain is one of the four indefatigable Naoroji sisters who have for years been completely identified with khadi and been responsible for conducting khadi embroidery classes for poor girls in Bombay started by Shri Mithubehn Petit, who has dedicated herself to the service of the poor in the villages of Gujarat.
Sheth Shoorji Vallabhdas is a well-known merchant of Bombay. He has been organizing khadi centres and has brought into being the Swadeshi Bazaar, of which the dividend, if any, is to be devoted solely to the promotion of village industries.

Dr. Khan Saheb (ex-I. M. S.) is the elder brother of Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan. He takes the place of his brother who, but for his incarceration, would have been a member of the Board.

Shri Lakshmidas Purushottam was a well-known merchant in Malabar before he gave up his business to join the Satyagraha Ashram at Sabarmati. It was he who organized khadi in Gujarat, became the right-hand man of Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel during the terrible floods of Gujarat in the year 1927 and has been likewise to Rajendrababu in the earthquake relief work in Bihar.

Dr. Profulla Ghosh (D. Sc.) is among the favourite early pupils of Dr. P. C. Ray, who, leaving a high post at the Government Mint, has for years been living on a mere pittance and has devoted his life to public service.

Shri Shankerlal Banker (M. A.) studied advanced chemistry in England and on return entered public life in 1916. He is the Secretary and soul of the All-India Spinners’ Association and possesses an all-round knowledge of khadi and, therefore, of the condition of villages, possessed, perhaps, by no one in the same extensive manner as he does.

Thus, with the exception of Sheth Shoorjibhai, the Board contains members who have no private finance or business to look after and whose sole concern would be in one way or another to consult the welfare of the villagers in everything they do. They are all on the Board solely to shoulder the tremendous responsibility of striving to carry out the object of the Association. The reader will study the simple constitution of the Association.1 If it is assisted by the public in a tangible manner, it will give hope to the millions of villagers; it will turn the city-dwellers who are today their exploiters, into real helpers and servants; it will establish a living link between the intelligentsia and the illiterate masses; it will be instrumental in abolishing all distinctions between man and man, and it will turn the villagers from being mere creators of raw produce, which they have practically become, into self-sustained units and caterers for most of the requirements of city-dwellers. In a task such as this, naturally political differences are sunk, all who will assist are invited to join as members, agents, workers, associates or advisers, according to their wishes and capacity.

The task is tremendous. Nothing but Divine Grace can fulfill the expectations raised about the work of the Association. And Divine Grace only attends intelligent, tireless effort. The members of the Board are pledged to such effort. Their past record is an earnest of the future.

The Association, though it is a creation of the Congress, has been deliberately made non-political and autonomous. Its members are pledged, whilst they remain such, to abstain from any campaign of civil disobedience. As its adviser and guide, I can say that the Association has no further aim than that of bringing about the economic, physical and moral betterment of the villagers.

The reader will observe that the work of the Board of Management is to be done through honorary agents, at least in the first instance. The agents have to select their own areas of operation, and they will be expected to confine themselves to, and to concentrate their attention on, those areas only. There may thus be an agent even for one single village. The Association may, therefore, have as many agents as there are villages in India. Therefore, no honest person, however humble, need be deterred from offering his or her services. The idea is to decentralize the work as much as possible. Thus alone can intensive work be done with the utmost economy consistent with efficiency. I hope that willing and honest workers will be found all over the country to take part in this glorious work of voluntary village reconstruction.

_Harijan_, 21-12-1934

22. LETTER TO JOHN HAYNES HOLMES

_December 21, 1934_

I have your very kind and full letter. Yes, Mirabehn did extraordinarily well both in Great Britain and America. Truth gives a power that nothing else can. And Mira wanted to express through her speech nothing but what she believed to be the whole truth. She will certainly come to you whenever she feels the call.
As for me I have no call at all. I feel that my work lies here and I can best speak to the world through my work in India.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

23. LETTER TO AN ITALIAN

December 21, 1934

The interior signification of truth for me is that it gives me a peace which passeth understanding. The exterior consists in rendering me a fitter instrument of service.

The value of missionary effort lies, in my opinion, in their having roused in us the spirit of inquiry and in inducing heartsearching.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. G.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

24. LETTER TO P. V. KRISHNA REDDI

WARDHA,
December 21, 1934

DEAR REDDI,

Your letter to hand. Please tell me what you are getting there and what are your needs. If you leave the business, who will look after it?

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

P. V. KRISHNA REDDY
C/O KHADI BHANDAR
SADAR BAZAR
RAIPUR, C. P.

From the original: C. W. 10831. Courtesy: Gandhi Darshan, Rajghat, New Delhi

25. LETTER TO K M. MUNSHI

December 21, 1934

BHAI MUNSHI,

Do take proper rest. In my view Khan Saheb is a real bhakta.
I have nearly finished your last chapter1. The other chapters I

1 Of Gujarat and Its Literature

VOL.66 : 16 DECEMBER, 1934 - 24 APRIL, 1935 19
will read now. For whose benefit did you write all this in English? I do not know if you have explained your aim in the earlier chapters.

Please do not expect a long foreword from me.

Blessings to you both from
BAPU

ADVOCATE K. M. MUNSHI
PANCHGANI

From Gujarati: C.W. 7565. Courtesy: K. M. Munshi

26. LETTER TO ANnapurna

December 21, 1934

CHI. ANnapurna,

I had your letter. Find out the count, evenness and strength of the yarn spun by the villagers. Get the weaving done soon. Do not neglect their other occupations. What kind of rice [polished or unpolished] do they eat? Sow some seeds of cotton and leafy vegetables in your courtyard. It is better for one to do one’s own manual work, as far as possible.

All are well, I hope.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 2784

27. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

December 21, 1934

CHI. AMBUJAMMAL

I have your letter and also Father’s. You have given me no trouble at all. You had and you will always have the right to tell me everything. Indeed how can I help you if you do not tell me all without any reservations?

Now please steady your mind and do what service you can. Some hand-made paper has been sent for you. It is rather expensive; the bill will be sent to you. It will be paid here; some money belonging to you is lying here, is it not?

Do not give up your study of the Ramayana.

1 Daughter of Srinivasa Iyengar
Keep writing to me.
Janamall you had any difficulty in reading this.
Keep your parents happy should write to me.
Let me know if.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: C.W. 9598. Courtesy: S. Ambujammal

28. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR
December 22, 1934
DEAR SISTER,
I read your draft resolutions only last night. They were received at noon. I like the first. The last I like the least. I hope you duly received my letter containing my message1 and a letter to Dr. Maude.
You must not overstrain yourself. I take it the Colonel accompanies you wherever you go. He should receive the reply by now.
Love.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 3517. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6326

29. LETTER TO HOMI MODY
December 22, 1934
DEAR MR. MODY,
I thank you for your letter of 19th instant about blankets sent to Assam.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: C.W. 4881. Courtesy: M. R. Masani

1 Addressee’s niece
2 For the All-India Women’s Conference; vide “Letter to Amrit Kaur”
30. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

December 22, 1934

CHI. JAMNALAL

Why is there no news from you yet about the condition of your ear? Kishorelal and Gomati are laid up with illness. Gomati is better now. Kishorelal still has a temperature. It is coming down, however. Preparations are under way for shifting the Industries Association to the garden. It has been planned to add two rooms on the top of the building. Radhakisan had suggested one. Now they are thinking of two. The plan involves an expenditure of about Rs. 2,000. It is not absolutely necessary of course to build the rooms. They will be useful mostly during the monsoon. During day-time I can remain on the ground floor. But at night I would certainly go up to sleep. These rooms should be built only in view of their usefulness for the future. Since the suggestion was made, I was tempted to give my consent. If you refuse yours, the matter will end and Rs. 2,000 will be saved. You know that the money is no longer yours. As I write this, I feel that I myself ought to be firm and forbid the construction of the rooms for the present at any rate. I will do so. Please treat as cancelled what I have written above.

Krishna has written again on behalf of Sarup Rani gently requesting that Prabha be sent over. I have replied that she is entrusted with such duties here that she cannot be easily spared, but that some other good woman from there can be sent. I think we can find somebody who will be a suitable companion for her. If you can, help Sarup Rani. Otherwise you may leave the matter to me.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2947

31. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

December 22, 1934

Bhai Vallabhbhai,

It is difficult to restrain brother Charlie. If a person like him does some harm, I think we should suffer it. But I am vigilant. I have spoken frankly to him. Please do not worry on this account. People

1 This letter is not traceable.
2 C. F. Andrews
also have realized that his comings and goings signify nothing.

Kripalani’s case is different. He didn’t do well also in relieving Rajaram. I don’t think that Krishnadas will be able to do justice to the work. But I don’t know all the facts of the case. Why don’t you write to Kripalani? I have not read his statements. Has he said anything indiscreet in them? If he has, I also may write to him. If I write, he will immediately correct himself.

The way you controlled that meeting was perfect. Personally I liked your speech very much. It was very necessary to tell the people all that.

For the present Ramdas will go to Bombay. He will leave with Swami on the 27th or the 28th. He will stay in Manibhuvan.

Why should we feel sorry about what Muslim friends do? We should do our own duty. I wrote to Maulana and to Dr. Ansari about the murders in Sind and Lahore. I have received their replies in which they tell me that they will try to do something. It is an extremely difficult problem. Since our outlooks are completely different, we have no option but to endure things. We should be satisfied if we do the best we can.

I shall leave this place on the 28th for Delhi. At the most I shall stay there one month. The meeting of the Village Industries Association has been fixed for January 31. I am sure you will come to Delhi. It will be convenient if the Working Committee meeting is fixed around 15th January. I should like to come away from Delhi as early as possible.

How is Abhyankar? What did you do about your nose?

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 146-9

---

1 From the post of the paid secretary of the A. I. C. C.
2 To protest against the sentence of two years’ imprisonment given to Abdul Ghaffar Khan on a charge of sedition; vide, ”Discussn with Abdul Ghaffar Khan”, 7-12-1934
3 The letters are not traceable.
32. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

December 22, 1934

CHI. SHARMA,

I am not pained by your fast’. You will come through it safely. Tell me at Delhi about its conclusion. I shall be there on the 29th. Tell me your experiences too during the fast.

It will be a big achievement if Krishna recovers her health. My papers are still untraced.

I have no knowledge of any newspaper reproducing the notice. Ramdas will write to you. He has no peace of mind here. Now he observes no restrictions on food.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha,

33. LETTER TO MIRZA ISMAIL

December 23, 1934

With regard to the visit to the Frontier Province I hope you saw the statement I issued to the Press.¹ I shall strain every nerve to avoid a clash. With me it is not a matter of sacrificing anything for anything else. Is not the vast meaning of sacrifice self-purification? So long as my submission to the Viceregal will does not harm the cause it shall continue. You may depend upon it that I shall take no hasty step.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

34. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

December 23, 1934

CHI. NARANDAS,

I got your letter. Harakhchand and Vijaya passed through here today. Kanu’ met them at the station.

¹ The addressee had undertaken a fourteen days’ fast.
² Vide, “Statement to the Press”, 11-12-1934
³ Addressee’s son
You must have observed that Jamna¹ is not happy at the thought of your leaving the place. It is for you to decide. If your presence there is essential, then I would not think at all of drawing you away from there. I once put this question to you. Think over it again if necessary.

Ramdas is very eager that his two children should secure admission to an infant school somewhere. If that is done, Nimu should stay with them. Ramdas thinks that Bhavnagar will suit very well. But, then, where would Nimu stay in Bhavnagar? What would happen if any of them was taken ill? I, therefore, have advised him to send the children to Rajkot and the idea has appealed to Nimu. I have told him that the Bal Mandir there will continue to run whether or not you remain. Am I right? Send me a report about its affairs and let me know whether you would advise Nimu to bring the children there. Address the reply to me at Birla Mills, Delhi. Drop a brief note to Nimu as well. I think Ramdas must have gone to Bombay. He cannot be said to have fully recovered yet. He is following a treatment of his own choice at present. He can move about a little. Nimu also wants to learn. She is taking lessons in playing on the sitar and learning English. I have told her that it can be done even there.

A letter for Aunt² is enclosed. She has lived to a ripe old age indeed.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./I. Also C.W. 8426. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

35. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

December 23, 1934

BHAII VALLABHBHAI,

You must have seen the mill-owners’ resolutions. See that they don’t quarrel among themselves. If any of them listen to you, advise them. I have written to Kasturbhai and Chamanbhai.

¹ Addressee’s wife.
² Raliatbehn, Gandhiji’s elder sister; the letter is not available.
I do hope that wherever you go you will tell the people about the Village Industries Association. It has great potentialities.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhzhaine, p. 150

36. LETTER TO VENILAL A. GANDHI

December 23, 1934

CHI. VENILAL,

I think your problem is a difficult one. Your minimum need will be Rs. 50. I think it will be difficult to pay so much from the funds which are for Harijan work. I am of the view that grown-up children should be permitted to study in accordance with their wishes. You have, therefore, no choice but to find out some business. Please do not expect any help from me.

Blessings from
BAPU

SIT. VENILAL GANDHI
C/O MANEKLAL AMRITLAL GANDHI
RANAVAV PORBANDAR STATE, KATHIWAR

From Gujarati: C.W. 921. Courtesy: Venilal A. Gandhi

37. LETTER TO DR. JAMES HENRY COUSINS

December 24, 1934

DEAR FRIEND.

Surely the friends have perpetrated a joke. I am no representative of the domain of literature. I have no University qualifications. I cannot write after my name even a “a failed B. A.”, having never gone beyond the London Matriculation. Nor can I call myself a literary man by training. I am no judge of prose, much less of poetry. Some of the latter I cannot understand. My ignorance is really appalling in the domain of literature. I had therefore to send you a negative telegram\(^1\) which I hope you received in time. Though therefore I cannot propose your name, I can at least hope that you will win the prize.

---

1 The addressee had requested Gandhiji to recommend his name for the Nobel Prize.

With greetings of the season and regards to you and Mrs. Cousins.

\(\text{Yours sincerely,}\)
\(\text{M. K. G.}\)

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

38. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

\(\text{December 24, 1934}\)

\(\text{DEAR SISTER,}\)

I have your several letters. My prayers are certainly with you in your noble endeavour.

C. F. Andrews should be here on 26th.

Here is the message duly signed.

Love.

\(\text{BAPU}\)

From the original: C.W. 3518. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6327

39. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

\(\text{December 24, 1934}\)

\(\text{DEAR DAUGHTER,}\)^2

You have kept me in great anxiety by not writing earlier. But you will not be you if you did otherwise. Thank God however that I have your card and letter received yesterday. All well here. Lali’\(^3\) is playing in Bombay. Mehr\(^4\) is here studying a little and playing. She seems to be happy. We leave for Delhi on 28th.

Hope you are eating well. No more today.

Love.

\(\text{BAPU}\)

From a photostat: G.N. 312

\(^{1}\) The telegram is not traceable.

\(^{2}\) This is in Urdu.

\(^{3}\) Abdul Ghaffar Khan’s son

\(^{4}\) Mehrtaj, Abdul Ghaffar Khan’s daughter
40. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

December 24, 1934

CHI. JAMNALAL,

I got your letter regarding Gangadharrao. It is a difficult matter. I don’t think we can give money in this manner. I can’t give my final decision, however, without discussing the matter with Gangadharrao. I am writing to him. I will say this same thing in my letter.

I am returning with this Gangadharrao’s letter.

Get your ear completely cured.

I suppose you know about the plan to let Kamalnayan go to Colombo.

I have told Khan Saheb about Abdul Ghani. He will write to the latter. He has offered to pay all the expenses himself. He has called Ghani to Delhi for treatment of his tonsils, but it is not certain whether Khan Saheb himself will be able to go. He has been prohibited from entering even the Punjab. The question is whether he can pass through the stations inside the Punjab boundary on his way to Delhi. He has sent a wire to the Punjab Government.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

If Madanmohan is there, please ask him to write to me and give me an account of his experiences in the Frontier Province. He could get no opportunity at all to talk with me.

A wire has been received today saying that the order has been withdrawn.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2948

41. LETTER TO MANILAL AND SUSHILA GANDHI

December 24, 1934

CHI. MANILAL AND SUSHILA,

I have had no letter from you, though it is time I had one. I hope all of you are well

1 Prohibiting Khan Saheb from entering the Punjab

28 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
You will now be having a new Agent. Let us wait and see whether he proves his worth.

Did your Diwali number sell more copies?

Ramdas is getting on fairly well. Should I assume that you will not be able to send a permit?

I am going to Delhi for a month at the most. I will leave this place on the 28th. Ba will accompany me.

I am getting ready for jail. But it will be some time yet. It won’t happen before February.

Have you met Rees Jones? He is a very good man. He was here for a few days.

Lakshmi has gone to Madras with Rajaji. Devdas is getting along very well.

Kishorelal and Gomati were bed-ridden for two or three days. They are better now. There is nothing to worry about.

I have been keeping good health. For the past three months, I have been taking fresh milk, uncooked vegetables and fruit. Hot drinks include only warm water with honey or heated sugarcane juice. This regimen has had no ill effect at all.

What crops do you currently raise in the fields there? What is the total number of residents? Are all the buildings being used?

How is Sam?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4829

42. LETTER TO SAHEBJI MAHARAJ

December 25, 1934

DEAR SAHEBJI MAHARAJ,

Your prompt and full reply came in yesterday with the stainless steel nibs. They give me pleasure and pride. I shall try them. But my soul just now resides in the villages. The paper on which I am writing is village-made and so is the reed village-grown from which my pen is made. Economic laws like many others appear to be of two kinds, good and bad. Good laws should be good for all. Just now men, like the cows, seem to be a burden on the land. Do the majority need to die, so that the few city people may live? My humble attempt is to show that the villagers do not need to die and that they have an inherent capacity to live if they would but shed their laziness and make a corporate effort to live. City people have no such inherent capacity. Hence like Genghis they have to produce human hecatombs.

1 Syed Raza Ali

You will forgive me for arguing with you. I do, because I want to discover the flaw, if there is one, in my method of approaching the common object—all-round happiness.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. Gandhi

My dear Anand,

Father has just seen me. He has decided to work for the A. I. V.
I. A. He is full of hope. He offers to build for you a floor over the present house wherein you can live your own independent life, and wishes to support you too. I want you to accept the proposal. I hope you will take care of yourself and be thoroughly restored. Vidya must write. No more just now.

Love to you both.

Bapu

Shri Anand Hingorani
C/o A. S. Bhagchand Kewalramani
Cosmopolitan Vishin Cottage Colony
Sarojini Naidu Road
Sukkur (Sind)

From a microfilm. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand
T. Hingorani

44. Letter to F.L. Brayne

Dear friend,

For some years I have been a student of your rural reconstruction work. I had occasion to publish a critical study of your Gurgaon experiment*. As I am doing the same kind of work, I would love to profit by your experience, if you will give me the benefit of it. What I should appreciate is a detailed description of your scheme and the result so far attained of its working.²

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

F. L. BRAYNE, ESQ., I.C.S.
COMMISSIONER, RURAL RECONSTRUCTION
LAHORE
PUNJAB

From a copy: Brayne Collection, MSS. Eur. F 152/36. Courtesy: India Office Records Library

45. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

December 26, 1934

CHI. JAMNALAL,

Please do not insist on the construction of the two rooms just now. I have refused my consent after thinking about the matter very carefully. Isn’t all your money a Trust now? It will continue to yield sufficient income only if we save every pie that we can. This is true whether the property belongs to a private firm or to a Trust for the poor. In fact, we should exercise more care in the case of the latter. I have not been able to prepare a draft for the Maganlal Memorial. Most probably I shall draw up one.

I shall be very happy if nothing happens to Abhyankar. Tell him when you meet him that I frequently think of him.

Khan Saheb is going to Delhi with me. Mehr too will be there. She also is doing well. At present Anand’s father and Vaikunth Mehta are here. The latter has returned after a world tour. He will take great interest in the Industries Association.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2949

¹ Vide ,” Village Improvement”
² Vide ,”Manure Pits”
46. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

December 26, 1934

BHAISHRI VALLABHBHAI,

I got your letter.

I have written to Gangadhar Rao. Jamnalal had sent me his letter. I was not convinced by his argument. I have, therefore, asked him to come to Delhi. How long can we go on meeting the deficit in this manner? And from whom are we to beg the money?

You must have read Brelvi’s article about the murders in Karachi and Lahore. I will see now what can be done in Delhi.

There was a letter from Andrews. He is hopeful. He is expected today. I don’t think his being hopeful means anything.

Dr. Khan Saheb was served an order by the Punjab Government too. But he had to go to Delhi. So he asked me what he should do, since he would have to pass through the Punjab on his way. I, therefore, sent a wire to the Punjab Government asking whether the order also covered the railway stations. A reply to that has been received saying that the order was being withdrawn with effect from the 28th. And the Frontier order is expiring on the 29th in the natural course. If, therefore, they don’t renew it, Khan Saheb will be able to enter the Frontier Province also. Mehr, as has already been arranged, is coming along with me. She will have no company—except mine, of course.

Vaikunth Mehta is here in connection with the Village Industries Association. He will stay for two more days yet.

I understand what you say regarding the nose. Since the doctors forbid you, we are helpless. Be quite firm about the constructive work. If the people do not overcome their lethargy and attend to the essential tasks, there will be no Satyagraha movement and no swaraj. We must learn mutual co-operation.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 150-1

47. LETTER TO HARIBHAU UPADHYAYA

December 27, 1934

BHAII HARIBHAU,

I have received your letter. I see from the newspapers that there is some trouble again.
I will go through the scheme of Hindi Vidyapith when I get it.

A scheme for imparting education through correspondence has been introduced in Mahila Ashram. I wish to include your name among the teachers to be appointed for the purpose. Shall I do so?

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI HARBHAI UPADHYAYA
CONGRESS OFFICE
AJMER, RAJPUTANA

From the Hindi: Haribhau Upadhyaya Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

48. VILLAGERS’ HANDS

Dr. Ansari’s is the latest reasoned opinion received on unpolished rice, whole wheatmeal and gur. I share it with the readers. The same kind of categorical replies have been received also from other eminent medical men. A digest of these is being prepared by Sjt. Kumarappa and will be duly published in these columns. Meanwhile let workers and others ponder over the following:

\[1\] In the process of polishing rice, all outer coverings of the grain are removed, consisting of the husk as well as the pigmented covering containing Vitamin B, fat and protein, which are necessary for health and growth. It has been proved that the absence of Vitamin B from polished rice has been instrumental in causing beri-beri. Unpolished rice, on the other hand, not being subjected to the boiling process used in polishing rice in the mills, retains Vitamin B as well as the protein, fat and mineral matter.

\[2\] The wheat grain consists of bran or outer envelope, mainly composed of cellulose, the kernel consisting of starch and the germ consisting of soluble starch, protein and some fat.

In the process of milling, the germ and the bran are rejected, and with it undoubtedly are discarded some of the most useful chemical constituent of the wheat, for with the germ a considerable amount of protein and fat are lost, and with the bran are lost mineral matter as well as some protein.

Gur, jaggery or molasses is produced as by-product in the manufacture of crystallized sugar. Gur, consisting of cane-sugar and fruitsugar in the proportion of 2 to 1, would be assimilated more rapidly than cane-sugar alone taken in the same quantity. Therefore, the nutritive value of gur is at least 33 p.c. superior to refined sugar.

\[1\] Only extracts are reproduced here.

The truth of the opinion can be tested by everybody for himself by trying pure gur, chakki-ground whole wheatmeal and hand-pounded unpolished rice.

_Harijan, 28-12-1934_

49. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

WARDHA,

_December 28, 1934_

CHI. AMBUJAM,

I got your letter. Tell me what you want. Should I write in English or Hindi? You may write in whichever language you prefer.

Whenever you want slivers, get them from here. But do try to gin the cotton there.

Take curds instead of milk if food produces wind. Take a little rice instead of chapatis. Do not give up leafy vegetables and fruit.

I will see about Dev’s Lilavati when the ashram is about to be opened.

We are leaving for Delhi today.

I am writing to Janammal on the back side of this so as to save postage and stationery.

_Blessings from_

_BAPU_

From the Hindi: Ambujammal Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

50. LETTER TO PRABHUDAS AND AMBA GANDHI

WARDHA,

_December 28, 1934_

CHI. PRABHUDAS,

I have dictated acknowledgment of your letter long before. The figure of thirteen yards as average consumption per person, is quite correct. That figure certainly includes the consumption by the naked millions. It would not therefore be surprising if in Guleria where persons like you can live, the average figure comes to fifty yards per person. It is possible that the quantity purchased by the families you surveyed was higher. What surprised all of us was that according to your figures, Japanese calico is dearer than Indian calico and khadi is cheaper than any variety of calico. In the towns and all over Gujarat, the situation is quite the reverse of what your figures suggest. In Ras, khadi will certainly be dearer than mill-cloth. Look further into this matter. After ascertaining what the Harijan Sangh can do for Tikaramji write to me again. I will arrange something for him. Why should not the Harijan Sangh itself give him all he needs? Write to me, after arranging for the agency for that place. We are today leaving for Delhi. We will return any day between the 20th and the 29th. Write to me at Delhi.

If Kashi finds the cold unbearable, send her away soon. If the daughter is to be named with a word beginning with the letter ‘I’ and if she has not already been given a name, I think ‘Indumati’ will be quite good. But my choice has no value.

CHI. AMBA.

I got your letter. You have drawn a good picture of the life there. Even in such hard conditions, we have to live cheerfully.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: S.N. 33051

51. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

BIRLA MILLS, DELHI,

December 29, 1934

CHI. SHARMA,

Your fast should be completed today. Give me a full account soon. I reached here this morning.

Ramdas has gone to Deolali with Swami and will proceed from there to Bombay.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, facing p. 140

1 This note is in Hindi.
52. A MESSAGE

December 29, 1934

The thought of Hindu-Muslim unity filled the whole being of Hakim Saheb. As we remember him today the best thing would be to cleanse our hearts and make all the effort we can to strengthen this unity.

M. K. GANDHI

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Dillika Rajanaitik Itihas, Part II, p. 213

53. INTERVIEW TO ASSOCIATED PRESS

December 29, 1934

Mahatma Gandhi said that he hoped to leave Delhi on January 28, 1935, as he must be at Wardha positively on the 29th. His work here is primarily concerned with Harijan uplift in this area, and also the promotion of village industries nearabouts.

He wished to make it perfectly clear that his visit had no connection with the work in the new Assembly, which begins on January 21. It was by pure accident that the Assembly work of Congressmen commences at a time when Mahatma Gandhi is here in connection with Harijan and village uplift work.

Questioned about his proposal to visit the Frontier in view of the Viceroy’s advice against it, Mahatma Gandhi said:

It is beyond me and I have nothing to say at present.

The Hindustan Times, 30-12-1934

54. DISCUSSION AT HARIJAN HOME,
KINGSWAY CAMP, DELHI

[December 29, 1934]1

[GANDHIJI:] Is this the hut that I was told was being hurriedly erected for me? Why this height of 16 feet, and these heavy pillars and this high plinth? A simple cutcha hut with grass-thatched roof was the one I had in mind and had expected to find here. It should not have cost more than Rs. 500, whereas this has cost Rs. 2,500.

[MALKANI:] The thing had to be hurriedly arranged. We have not had more than two rooms, we thought we should have a small terrace where we could have a little

---

1 Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Not Hut but a Palace”
2 On this date Gandhiji arrived at the Harijan Home.
shamiana and where you might get plenty of sun and privacy as well. We went in for iron beams and rafters, as wooden ones would have taken much time.

[G.] No excuse at all. If you knew that this thing was going to cost so much, why did you not give up the idea altogether? I should have been perfectly comfortable in a tent. The pity is that you for got that you were the representative of Harijans and villagers. You acted as Sjt. Ghanshyamdas’s representative. If you had engaged some villagers to put up a genuine, bonafide village hut, you would have had a sample of the work that our villagers can still do, and it would have conformed to our standard. And why this spiral staircase? You might easily have procured a wooden staircase!

[M.] No Bapu, it has been borrowed and will be returned as soon as we do not need it.

... In the evening, to cap the tale of our woe, came a newly-bought spittoon, and it was placed on his table by an unwary friend. That was the signal for a final explosion.

[G.] Who ordered this end why was it purchased?

[BRIJKRISHNA:] I had asked for one. I thought it would be borrowed.

[G.] But did you not also know that if it could not be immediately borrowed, the friends in the town were sure to purchase it?

[B.] I knew, but I had not thought that a thing costing a rupee and a half would be purchased. I should have gone in for one costing four annas or so.

[G.] And you would not have minded four annas! Well, send this back at once. I should have gone in for one costing four annas or so.

... It was bed-time. Beds were being brought, and immediately Gandhiji said:

No bed-stead necessary. The cotton mattress over the mat is quite enough. Not that I should not use it if health made it imperative, but I should do without it as long as I could.

But, Bapu, even the poorest villagers have got their charpais.

[G.] I know, I know. Does that mean that we should imitate them in that convenient matter, when we cannot possibly imitate them in other things? If we cannot live like them, must have better food and better clothing, let us at least have the poor consolation of doing without a bed-stead.

_Harijan_, 11-1-1935
55. LETTER TO SWAMI ANAND

DELHI,
BIRLA HOUSE,
December 30, 1934

SWAMI ANAND,

I have been able to read your letter only today after I started my silence. You may get the Trust Deed for the Thana land registered in your, Jabirali’s and Shrilal’s names or in the names of any other persons suggested by you as soon as you are ready with the necessary arrangements. Meanwhile you may use the land for purposes of village industries, khadi, service of Harijans and such other work of public service. Continue to pay the revenue dues of the land. Send copies of this letter to Narandas and Chhaganlal so that they may know what is happening. If you think I should write anything more besides this, ask me. The pit in which water collects should either be filled up or the space surrounding should be dug up and levelled to form a drain. If we work with our own hands, this is an easy and cheap way of doing the thing. But this can be decided only after inspecting the land. This method is not practicable in the case of every type of land.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: S.N. 33115

56. SPEECH AT HARIJAN INDUSTRIES EXHIBITION, DELHI

December 30, 1934

Crores of women who can spin and weave are starving at present. We should wear khadi so that they may get a piece of bread, if nothing more. We regard it as a matter of dharma to treat crores of Harijans as untouchables. By boycotting Chamars, Dheds, etc. we alienate them from our culture. No industry or profession through which one tries to earn an honest livelihood, can be regarded as degrading. It will be impossible to protect the cow if we do not win over the Harijans. Hides worth crores of rupees are exported from our country. It is our folly that we export more hides than any other country in the world. By doing that, we deprive the Harijans of a means of livelihood.

It is a great sin, a crime, to consider any human being as inferior to ourselves.

[From Gujarati]

Gujarati, 6-1-1935

57. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

BIRLA MILLS, DELHI,
December 31, 1934

CHI. PREMA.

It is about 6 a.m. now, but it is pitch dark outside. My hands are stiff with cold. It is waste land all around where I am staying. A Harijan Ashram is to be established here. Two rooms have been built for special use. In addition there are three or four tents.

I got your letter. You may go on asking me any questions that you like. I will reply to as many of them as I can when I get time.

How is Kisan? She was to come and stay with you for some time. What happened about that?

I am sure your work will go on and you will receive monetary help as and when needed.

Since you have unshakable faith in the power of Ramanama, you will certainly experience the truth of your faith. Go on repeating it even if you see darkness all around. If you do that, all will be well with you.

The small size of land holdings is a big problem. It will present difficulties even when we have power in our hands. Just now our experiments are intended to find out what we can do without power. Even small plots can be profitable if they are cultivated intelligently. We can demonstrate this only through experiments. But our own superficial knowledge in this field is a handicap. That is why we do not take up directly problems relating to agriculture. Our present aim is to popularize such crafts and industries as we can think of and as would be easy for the villagers to learn, so that we may teach cultivators to shed their lethargy and may also promote the application of intelligence to crafts. The rest will follow.

I am certain that the people’s condition was better formerly than it is today. This can be proved. In the past, the country drew wealth from outside. Land holdings had not become fragmented to the extent that they have today, and wealth was not drained out of the country as it is today. Nature did her work in her own way. Now we interfere with her work without full knowledge of her laws, and we do this in an organized manner. The result is that we are completely impoverished.

Ramarajya is certainly an imaginary ideal, but it can also be proved that something approximating to it did exist in former times. It is true, however, that at no time in the past were untruth and poverty completely absent and they are not likely to be so at any time in the future.

The practice of retiring into mountain caves was undoubtedly inspired by despair about the world. It may have had some use in the past, but it has none today. To give one’s life in the service of one’s fellow-beings is as good a thing as living in a cave.

Our attitude towards other people should be the same as towards ourselves. Though we may remain unattached to things concerning ourselves, we shall certainly feel cold and heat and try to relieve cold with heat and heat with cold. If we don’t succeed, however, we shall not sit down and start crying. That is non-attachment. Our attitude to others shivering with cold should be the same. We must try to relieve their suffering. Seeing them shivering, we will give them or share with them what we have. If they still continue to shiver, we will suffer with them but will not lose our patience and resort to violence or untruth. That will be non-attachment on our part.

Khadi both is and is not a means of livelihood. It has been described as Annapurna1.

Excepting violence, I think there are many things in Russia which seem worth accepting. It is possible, however, that the changes which now seem realizable only through force will not be accepted by people voluntarily in the very same form. But, then, it is not right to draw inferences, as all of us do, from what we read. We should think about our problems independently for ourselves. The person who is affected by a problem can solve it best.

It is impossible to eliminate inequality completely. But we can bring about the maximum measure of equality only by following

---

1 Goddess Parvati, literally one who overflows with food
the path which I have shown. It is not a new truth I am holding up before the country but an old one (though perhaps in a new manner).

Cultivators can derive great hope from the fact that, by engaging themselves in subsidiary industries in their spare time, they can add considerably to their income.

The economic interests of cultivators should be safeguarded through proper organization. We can explain to them that economic betterment will not be possible unless they learn to organize.

The law of karma is easy to understand. It is similar to the law which we learn in mechanics. When several material forces operate simultaneously, we see only one result of their operation. That is also how karma operates.

You may, if you wish, go to a very small village. But it will be enough if you stick to the present place. If you can achieve complete success in one place, it will have the same effect that a right angle has.\(^1\) At present we have no right angle.

I shall be here up to the 20th.

\textit{Blessings from}

\textit{BAPU}

---

58. \textit{LETTER TO VIDYA R. PATEL}

\textit{December 31, 1934}

CHI. VIDYA,

I got your letter. You do not seem to be writing to anybody in the Ashram. Have you kept up any study there? If you become lethargic, you will not be able to run your home when you have one. Do not, therefore, remain idle a single minute. You should spend some time in good reading and some in doing useful work.

I shall be pleased if you write to me regularly.

\textit{Blessings from}

\textit{BAPU}

---

\(^1\) In a parallelogram, where if one angle is made a right angle the remaining angles also will be right angles.
59. LETTER TO RAMESHWARPRASAD NEVATIA

December 31, 1934

CHI. RAMESHWAR,

I had your letter. You did well in writing at length. Keep up the practice. Teach Bhai Ghani to be as simple as possible. Let him come here if he wishes to. We shall have his tonsils examined by Dr. Ansari. I have sent through Swami a letter about the workers of the sugar mill. Send me a reply to it.

I shall be in Delhi till the 20th. Address the letter to Birla Mills though I am staying on the new plot purchased for Harijans.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 3041

60. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

December 31, 1934

CHI. AMBUJAM,

Your letter. You should see Kakasaheb from time to time. Krishnan Nair says that both the Devakis can come when the Ashram is opened. There is nothing to say about Lilavati. Inform me when everything is ready.

I expect you got the articles from Bardoli.

The stay in Delhi will extend up to the 20th at least. Keep writing to me. Ba, Mirabehn, Marybehn and Khursheidbehn are with me. Lilavati too is in Delhi. It is pretty cold here. Ramdas has gone to Bombay and Prabhavati is in Wardha. Mehrtaj is here living at Dr. Ansari’s.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.] You can take curds instead of milk and rice instead of wheat; the quantity of milk should be the same.

From a photostat of the Hindi: C.W. 9599. Courtesy: S. Ambujammal
61. INTERVIEW TO “THE HINDUSTAN TIMES”

DELI,
January 1, 1935

It is true that I enjoy friendly relations with General Smuts.\(^1\) We even met in London during the Second Round Table Conference and had discussions about India’s goal. It is true also that he had advised acceptance of the proposals adumbrated in the White Paper, as distinguished from the J. P. C. Report. General Smuts had given that advice with certain reservations. I might state that to General Smuts’ letter I had sent no reply. His was an informal private letter calling for no reply.

I would advise the public not to attach any importance to a matter of purely personal concern, carrying no public significance, especially when my opinion\(^2\) on the White Paper proposals remains unchanged.

On his attention being drawn to recent newspaper reports suggesting that Mr. Andrews’s recent visit to India was in connection with the J. P. C. Report, Gandhiji emphatically stated that it had nothing to do with the Report, nor was Mr. Andrews the bearer of any letter from General Smuts.

His visit was predominantly in connection with his forthcoming broadcast this month. So far as the J.P.C. Report is concerned, we had the briefest casual conversation, not extending over a few minutes, during which I gathered that Mr. C. F. Andrews was in substantial agreement with my opinion that the proposals are utterly unaccept-able.

The Hindustan Times, 2-1-1935

---

\(^1\) Gandhiji was asked to comment on the report that General Smuts “had impressed on Gandhiji the necessity of co-operating with Government in face of the strong rebellious Tory die-hard group which desires to sabotage and so destroy the whole scheme of constitutional reforms”.

\(^2\) Vide “Letter to Agatha Harrison”
DELHI, January 2, 1935

CHI. MANILAL AND SUSHILA,

I got your letters as also the cable regarding Ramdas and Nimu. I wanted something like this, but I had not asked for a cable. It is difficult to say if Ramdas will go [to South Africa]. At present he is looking for an opening in some business in Bombay. Anyway Manilal has, though belatedly, discharged his obligation.

Harilal has for some time now settled in Rajkot. He seems to have undergone a metamorphosis.

I have noted what Sushila writes about Sita. It will be enough if she is educated as you four brothers were educated by me. I don’t repent it. It does not matter that they had no formal schooling. They have lost nothing thereby. Harilal was stubborn and did eventually go to school, doing himself harm. What children get in the loving company of their parents they can get nowhere else. Sita need not be sent here. Know that you have a duty towards Sita as you have your other duties. When you try to discharge this duty you will learn the lesson of pure brahmacharya. Just by her trying to pick up your calling she will train herself. She will pick up your speech whether decent or indecent. If you know your grammar she will learn it. If you can keep your accounts, she will learn her arithmetic. She will dust, cook, fetch water, tend the plants, learn press work. In this way by learning yourselves and helping others learn, you will all rise higher and higher. When she grows up you can send her elsewhere where she can learn more. This is the purport of the varnashrama-dharma and there is economics underlying it. This is true education. Give up your fondness for schools. It is my firm belief that although the schools may offer you a free play for the intellect they do little towards character-building. I myself know many who have suffered in character by going to school. I do not know of many people who could add luster to their character by attending schools. I for one believe that those parents who send their children to school do not observe their dharma. Yes, when the children grow up, that is, say, attain the age of sixteen, they can do whatever they like. Hence, let Sitaremain under your personal care till she is sixteen so that she turns out an accomplished girl and may not suffer any kind of handicap. To achieve this she should participate in all your activities and play her part intelligently. With this you will have observed your dharma.

The purport of all that I have said is only this: Forget for the time being your obsession with schooling for Sita. Let her have as much English, Hindi, Gujarati as you two can give her. Teach her your calling. You can impart to her plenty of knowledge through everyday conversation. In this way she will be making rapid progress. The right thing for her is to stick right there. Teach her the prayers, bhajans, etc. She should learn the Ramayana and other stories. Let her know about the Gita and other books. Some books you and Sushila have to read just for Sita’s sake. None of you need think of the country for the time being. When you come you should all come together. Having thought over all this “do as you like”.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4831

63. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

January 2, 1935

CHI. SHARMA,

I have your letter. Certainly I am responsible but I had understood that you had nothing to hide. Do not read the letters that you get or don’t let them affect you. Amtussalaam has not come here so far, she is probably at Indore. It is a great thing that Krishna has recovered. What is your diet these days?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, between pp. 140 and 141

1 Bhagavad Gita, xviii. 63
2 For other people learning about the addressee’s fast
64. DISCUSSION AT CENTRAL BOARD, HARIJAN SEVAK SANGH

[January 2, 1935]

‘Why’, some of them asked, ‘should this be put into a pledge?’ And this pledge seems more sociological than humanitarian. Eradication of untouchability is one thing, but this levelling of status seems to be altogether a different thing. Are we to regard our servants as equal to us in status? You seem to be driving us slowly to social and economic revolution.

[GANDHIJI:] I am surprised that the truth dawns upon you so late. You are very much mistaken if you feel that Harijans expect anything less from you. You may be quite ready to treat a few Harijans on terms of equality, but unless you are prepared to treat—all—the sweeper and the scavenger—and not merely a Harijan Judge sitting on a Court Bench—you have not rid yourselves of the evil. The very idea of superiority is most loathsome. It is at the back of most of the race feuds in the world. The thing is universal, I am afraid, but among us, it is in its cruellest form, because it is claimed to have got a religious sanction.

‘You are right, Mahatmaji,’ said one of the members, ‘there are some members on our Board who feel that Brahmins are superior to Vaishyas.’

[G.] They have no business to be on our Board. Removal of untouchability means one thing for a Harijan, another thing for a caste Hindu, and quite another for a Harijan Sevak.

‘I quite see the thing,’ said Shrimati Rameshwari Nehru, ‘but how can I sign the pledge when I know that I do not treat my servant as equal to me in status? My peace of mind will go.’

[G.] It need not go. You will treat him as a member of your family.

[R. N.] It is easier said than done, Mahatmaji. How can I claim to treat him as a member of my family when I sleep on a cot or a sofa, and he stands at the door?

[G.] You can, for the simple reason that you will sleep on your feather-bed, not because you are superior to him, but because it has become a need with you. No, no. You are unnecessarily afraid. It is more a mental adjustment than physical. I shall give you just one or

---

1 Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Self-introspection week”
2 The pledge which was a part of the constitution was discussed and adopted on January 2.
3 It read: “I do not consider any human being as inferior to me in status and I shall strive my utmost to live up to that belief.”

46 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
two instances. When I went to Lady Astor’s, she brought out all her servants to shake hands with me. They hesitated, but then they saw that they did not need to do so. Lloyd George, when I was his guest for a few hours, encouraged all his servants, as he would his own children, to hand me their autograph books for my signature.

[R. N.] I know, Mahatmaji, I know. Bertrand Russell also treats his servants as equals.

[G.] Well, then, why should you be any less than Bertrand Russell? You have a father who will place no obstacles in your way and a husband who will go the whole length with you.

No, no. This pledge is absolutely essential. You cut at the root of the movement if you do not have it, and you will justify the attitude of the sanatanists. As you have to discharge the financial obligations, you have to discharge the moral also, and I must say that, just as I should rue the day on which I collected money if I found that the money was ill-spent, in the same way I should feel guilty if I found that I was not discharging the moral obligation. You ought to have realized the implications of the movement when you joined it. I am not after extinguishing all differences. Who can destroy natural differences? Is there no difference between a Brahmin, a dog and a dog-eater? And yet the Gita says:

विभवविन्यसंपने ग्राहायो गति हस्तिनि ।
शृण्या च शवंशक्ते स पंडितं समपंशः। ॥

i.e., ‘The men who have realized the Truth look with an equal eye on a learned and cultured Brahmin, on a cow, an elephant, a dog and a dog-eater.’ There is a difference between them but the man who knows the science of life will say that there is no difference between them in status, as there is none between an elephant and an ant, a savage and a savant. Of course, the savage may be awe-struck before a savant; but the latter should not have any sense of superiority. No, we are all equal in the eyes of the law and God. That is the ideal we have to live up to.

But, then, there should be no master, no servant?

No. There is a beautiful Latin saying—Primus inter pares— first among equals, and the Master or the President will be the first among equals. I can see that it is difficult to practise the thing; that is why you will say in your pledge that you will strive your utmost to live up to your belief. That we cannot practise it at once, or fully, does not show that the pledge is wrong; it shows that human nature can be despicable. No, you have got to understand that this is a fundamental thing of the movement. Otherwise, you will justify the charge that it is a dodge.

_Harijan, 11-1-1 935_

65. SPEECH AT HARIJAN COLONY, DELHI

January 2, 1935

The whole idea originated with Sjt. Ghanshyamdas Birla, and he had now donated the grounds for the Colony. As President of the Board and as a moneyed man, he was always thinking of ways and means for the economic uplift of the Harijans, and his ambition was to make this Colony a centre from which would radiate inspiration and all kinds of activity.

However, it is no use talking of one’s ambition. Everything will depend on us, workers. No work will suffer for want of money, that much I can say, from my own experience of several institutions. Remember that we are debtors and Harijans are creditors. We have until today delighted in mounting on their backs, like ‘the old man of the sea’. We have exacted labour from them and have not scrupled to belabour them, and even to kill them, when they raised a voice of protest. A Meerut zamindar is said to have seriously injured [some Harijans] and one has died. In Kathiawar, a similar thing happened, and there, too a Harijan died. The poor folks would seem to have been born in order to toil and moil for us! We have been guilty of a heinous sin, and it is time we expiated it. It is for that purpose that the Sangh was created. It is a stupendous task, but it has to be done. I have said it several times, and shall repeat it today, that, unless we discharge our debt, Hinduism will perish. Untouchability must be destroyed, or else it will destroy Hinduism. That is why I am giving myself no rest. Not that I do not need it. I may say that I have several years of arrears of rest to cover, but how can I have rest? How can one have rest with a raging fire within? How can any Hindu, knowing that Hinduism is on the brink of an active volcano, afford to have a moment’s rest? Not, surely, until the volcano is extinguished. In a stupendous task of this character, a gift of Rs. 3,500, like the one given by Ghanshyamdasji today, is as a drop in the ocean. Hundreds of millionaires like him will have to empty their treasures for this sacred task. If only you are consumed with a passion for it, the task will be done. There is no lack of money, as Ghanshyamdasji said. There will be none. All that is needed is the will and passion for it. The service of the Harijans is the service of Hinduism, and the service of Hinduism is the service of humanity. Hinduism is no exclusive religion, it tolerates no

1 Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “The Self-introspection Week” intolerance. Intolerance it holds to be a sin. But unless and until we befriend the Harijan, unless and until we treat him as our own brother, we cannot treat humanity as one brotherhood. The whole movement for the removal of untouchability is a movement for the establishment of universal brotherhood, and nothing less.

_Harijan_, 11-1-1935

66. TELEGRAM TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

[On or after _January 2, 1935_]¹

ABHYANKAR’S DEATH GREAT TRAGEDY. CONSOLE HIS WIFE AND FAMILY. TELL HER SHE MUST BE BRAVE IF SHE WOULD BE WORTHY OF A BRAVE HUSBAND. I EXPECT HER TO KEEP UP THE TRADITIONS OF SERVICE ABHYANKAR HAS BEQUEATHED.

_The Hindustan Times_, 4-1-1935

67. LETTER TO CARL HEATH

_January 3, 1935_

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter of 21st ultimo. Your previous letter was read by Mirabehn, Mahadev and later by Andrews. All of them puts independently of me, the same construction that I had. Of course, I unreservedly accept your correction. I simply want to say that it was after carefully reading your letter more than three times that I sent you the reply² I did. Andrews also read my reply to you, and he had nothing to suggest by way of alteration. Of course, you knew the existence of the repressive laws. But you did not know, nor do you know now, what their continuance meant or means to us here. A strange confirmation of this comes from Dr. Maude Royden who is reported to have said at Karachi that the people in England knew nothing, through the daily Press or otherwise, of the amazing things which she heard during the two or three days she found herself amongst the very sober women of India. Andrews will be able to give you first-hand testimony of what he saw and learnt in Bengal.

You seem to regard the possibility of withdrawal of the forthcoming Bill¹ as a calamity. In my opinion, if the withdrawal comes even at the last moment, it will be a blessing both for England and India, for the simple reason that persistence in the measure in the face of an almost unanimous Indian opposition to it would mean an unbending attitude on the part of the British Parliament and utter contempt for Indian public opinion. I hope you have seen the bitter comment made by Rt. Hon. Sastri, who was at one time a persona grata at the India Office whose complete confidence he enjoyed, and the equally bitter comment of Hon. C. Y. Chintamani, who has been regarded as a moderate among moderates and who has, in season and out of season, condemned the Congress attitude in unmeasured language.

¹ M. V. Abhyankar died on January 2, 1935.
² Vide, “Letter to Carl Heath”, 10-12-1934

Now for the briefest summary of my own personal objections to the J. P. C. Report. I read that Report and the White Paper as one document. Whatever new there is in the former is not regarded at this end as an improvement, but quite the contrary, and it is the last straw which has broken the back of the Liberals. They had cherished the fond hope that the Joint Memorandum signed under the leadership of the Aga Khan would receive the favourable consideration of the Joint Parliamentary Committee and that some, if not all, of its recommendations would be accepted by it. The contemptuous dismissal of that Memorandum, beyond a mere courteous reference to it, has extorted the following remark from Sastri:

No, Sir, it is impossible for the Liberal Party to give an atom of co-operation. Co-operation with friends that wish well of us will be worth while, but co-operation with those who have displayed the utmost distrust of us, who do not care for our views and demands, and who enact a constitution in utter disregard of our wishes, what is co-operation with them, I ask? I should call it a suicide.

SUMMARY

1. There is no suggestion in the J. P. C. Report that there should be a clause in the constitution providing for automatic advance to complete independence or whatever the elected representatives of India may decide to have.

2. The contemplated constitution saddles India with a greater financial burden than she is bearing today without any prospect of economic or political betterment.

¹ The Government of India Bill on a new constitution for India. It received Royal assent and became an Act on August 2, 1935.
3. At the centre, 80 per cent of the revenue is reserved out of any popular control.

4. There is no popular control over the military, whether as to policy or as to expenditure.

5. There is no popular control over the currency or the exchange of the country.

6. Even the control over the 20 per cent proposed to be left in the hands of the Finance Minister is subject to suspension by the Governor-General.

7. The provincial autonomy adumbrated in the Report is purely nominal, as the Governors of the provinces have such wide powers that they can, whenever they choose, make an end of responsibility. It would be utterly wrong for any Britisher to infer from Colonial precedents that these powers will be rarely, if ever, exercised. Indian past experience is quite the contrary.

8. Responsible Ministers have no right even to transfer any member, either of the all-India service or of the provincial service.

9. The so-called autonomous legislatures will have no right to amend the Police Acts or even Police Regulations.

10. British exploitation is made firmer than ever.

The overwhelming effect of all the foregoing objections considered together leaves an indelible impression upon the mind that, bad as the existing constitution is, the threatened new one will be infinitely worse. And what is more, if the threatened new constitution is passed, it would be most difficult for years to come to undo the mischief that will be done under it.

To clinch the whole of the objections, it is well to remember that the constitution is sought to be imposed upon the people who are already groaning under repression, such as, perhaps, has not been equalled in British Indian history. I am making this statement with the full sense of my responsibility. I have a vivid memory of Jallianwala Bagh. I have read Kaye and Malleson’s volumes on the Sepoy Revolt, as it has been called, of 1857. Both make gruesome reading. Then, it was the naked sword. The repression represents the gloved fist, but deadlier on that account.

You may make whatever private use you wish of this letter. Nobody else is responsible for the opinion I have expressed in this. It has been shown to no friend beyond Mahadev, Mira and the typist.

My writing may seem bitter; but I would like to warn you against putting any such interpretation upon it. The language represents the truth and nothing but the truth as I have seen and felt it. It does not represent the whole truth. If I had the time and the capacity to give you the whole truth, the version would be even worse than it is.

In spite, however, of the black picture that I see in it, I have no bitterness in me against a single Englishman. I believe that the English Ministers are pursuing what they believe to be an honest policy to be adopted in the interest of India. It is their honest belief that British rule in India has been, on the whole, for her good. They honestly believe that under it India has advanced in economic progress and in political capacity, and that if India received the constitution that the vast number of the intelligentsia wish for, it would be a bad day for her. It is difficult to combat an honest belief, however erroneous it may be, as, in my opinion, it is in this case. But it would also be wrong to be angry over an honest belief of any person. Whilst, therefore, I hold the strong opinion that I have expressed in the foregoing summary I would ask you to believe me implicitly when I give you my assurance that, God helping, I shall take no step in haste or in anger.

I have retired from the Congress because, among other reasons, I want to impose silence upon myself, so far as it is humanly possible, about the political measures of the Government. I want, in my voluntary isolation, to explore the yet hidden possibilities of non-violence. Every action I am taking, no matter in what department of life, is being taken with that end in view. The only axe that I have to grind on this earth is to try to understand the ultimate truth of things which, at present, I seem to see only dimly. And after a laborious search I have come to the conclusion that if I am to see it in any fullness I can only do so by non-violence in thought, word and deed. What this search will lead me to, I really do not know myself, nor have I the slightest desire to see it before its time. For me, therefore, it is an incessant waiting upon God to show me the next step, and I shall be grateful if any of you friends can, with your full hearts, help me in that search.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

CARL HEATH, ESQ.
LONDON

From a photostat: G.N. 1028
nor have I the slightest desire to see it before its time. For me, therefore, it is an incessant waiting upon God to show me the next step, and I shall be grateful if any of you friends can, with your full hearts, help me in that search.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

CARL HEATH, ESQ.
LONDON

From a photostat: G.N. 1028

68. LETTER TO MRS. LINDSAY

January 3, 1935

DEAR SISTER,

A happy New Year to you all. Your letter reached me just in time to enable me to send you this little note.

I often think of you and my Oxford visits but the work in hand crowds out all love letters.

We have very difficult times here in every way. But I don’t lose hope. I know that winter must be followed by summer.

It is loving thought to regard one’s cats and dogs as members of one’s family.

You know that Andrews was in our midst for a few days. He expects to return in April. Dr. Maude Royden is in Karachi. I expect to see her in Delhi where I am just now and where I expect to be for over three weeks.

Mira, Mahadev and Devdas are here. Pyarelal is away near Bombay.

With love to you all from us all,

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: C.W. 9743. Courtesy: British High Commission in India

1 Wife of Dr. Lindsay, Master of Balliol College. A photostat of the original of this letter was displayed at the U. K. pavillion of the Gandhi-Darshan Exhibition held at New Delhi in 1969-70.
69. INTERVIEW TO THE PRESS

January 3, 1935

In Mr. Abhyankar, a brave and intrepid man has passed away. His death is a distinct loss to the nation. My own relations with him were growing day by day so intimate that his passing away I feel like a personal loss.

The Hindustan Times, 4-1-1935

70. NOTES

A CORRECTION

In reference to the figures of production and sale given by the Secretary, A.I.S.A., in the self-sufficiency report published in our issue of the 9th November, he writes:

In Harijan dated 9-11-34, on page 312, figures of khadi production and sale of A.I.S.A. branches have appeared. Therein, with reference to Karnatak and Utkal Branches, it has been stated in the footnote that ‘the production of the branches being inadequate, khadi had to be imported from [other] branches to meet the demand’. This remark does not apply to Utkal... The purchases of the Utkal Branch from other branches during 1933 amounted to only Rs. 557, and not over Rs. 17,000 as would appear from the remark made. We regret the error.

HARIJAN REPRESENTATION

At the request of a correspondent, I had asked Thakkar Bapa to tell me how many Harijans there were in Harijan Sevak Boards in all India. The returns so far received show, for ten provinces, 171 Harijan members against 1,158 non-Harijans. I give the figures by way of information only. It would be wrong to infer that these figures are a sign of solid work. They are undoubtedly evidence of two things:

1. The Boards have tried to take as their co-members as many Harijans as they could find to help them.

2. There are enough Hindus of standing who are prepared to lend their names to the Boards, whose avowed object is to seek for Harijans equality with the rest of their fellow Hindus in matters social, economical, political and religious.

I wish it were possible for me to add also that the number of so many caste Hindus and Harijan Hindus on the Boards is a sign of solid progress. Indeed, the large number of members on the Boards adds to the expenses of administration without increasing efficiency or the output of work. Means are being devised to increase efficiency and output, even if it should involve reduction of the number of members. In the service of the poor and the down-trodden, limitation of overhead expenses to a minimum is absolutely necessary. For the helpless can exercise no check on the extravagance, be it unconscious, of their helpers, no matter how benevolent, and the latter, unless they would put checks on their unconscious extravagance in the name of better management, are likely to spend more than they need. A critical examination of the administration of many charitable organizations would either reveal woeful extravagance or hopeless mismanagement and a criminal neglect of their trust by the trustees. Harijan Boards have to escape both misfortunes, if they are to render a good account of themselves to the Harijans, whom it is their sole aim to serve.

Only extracts are reproduced here.

_Harijan_, 4-1-1935

71. _NOTES

BENGAL HARIJAN SEVAK SANGH

Here is a summary of the work of the Bengal Provincial Harijan Sevak Sangh for the months of October and November last.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Description</th>
<th>Details</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Expenditure in 2 months</td>
<td>Rs. 2,305</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sangh’s branches and organizations exclusively</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>devoted to Harijan seva and attached to</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Provincial Sangh, or aided</td>
<td>9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Whole-time honorary workers</td>
<td>33</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hospital</td>
<td>1 with 6 b</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dispensary</td>
<td>1 attended</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>monthly by 1000 patients</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Medicines distributed from</td>
<td>6 centres</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Schools entirely financed, also partly helped</td>
<td>65</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Number of pupils</td>
<td>1,900</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Scholarships given</td>
<td>36</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Industrial Institute</td>
<td>1 Cottage Tanning</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
I must deal with some of the details of this work in a future issue.

_Harijan_, 4-1-1935

72. ITS MEANING

To my unaided mind you appear to be opening the first campaign of an endless and quixotic war against modern civilization. Long ago you proclaimed yourself its sleepless enemy, and now you would, if you could, turn it back on the course it has pursued for some millennia. I reel at the mere thought.¹

This is from an intimate letter from a dear friend who wrote in reply to my letter, inquiring if he could extend his co-operation in the effort. As the view expressed so frankly by the friend is, I know, shared by quite a number of friends, it is well for me to explain my position. It would be impertinent for me to do so if my position was not also that of the A.I.V.I.A.

In seeking to revive such village industries as are capable of being revived, I am making no such attempt as the friend ascribes to me. I am trying to do what every lover of village life, everyone who realizes the tragic meaning of the disintegration of villages, is doing or trying to do. Why am I turning back the course of modern civilization when I ask the villager to grind his own meal, eat it whole, including the nourishing bran, or when I ask him to turn his sugar-cane into _gur_ for his own requirements, if not for sale? Am I turning back the course of modern civilization when I ask the villagers not merely to grow raw produce, but to turn it into marketable products and thereby add a few more pies to their daily income?

And surely modern civilization is not millennia old. We can almost give its birth an exact date. If I could do it, I would most assuredly destroy or radically change much that goes under the name of modern civilization. But that is an old story of life. The attempt is undoubtedly there. Its success depends upon God. But the attempt to revive and encourage the remunerative village industries is not part of such an attempt, except in so far as every one of my activities, including the propagation of non-violence, can be described as such an attempt. The revival of village industries is but an extension of the khadi effort. Hand-spun cloth, hand-made paper, hand-pounded rice, home-made bread and jam, are not uncommon in the West. Only, there they do not have one-hundredth of the importance they have in India. For, with us, their revival means life, their destruction means death, to the villagers, as he who runs may see. Whatever the machine age may do, it will never give employment to the millions whom the wholesale introduction of power machinery must displace.

¹ Vide, footnote 1“Letter to V. S. Srinivasa Sastri”, 17-11-1934

56  THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI

_Harijan_, 4-1-1935

73. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL JOSHI

January 4, 1935

CHI. CHHAGANLAL,

See the accompanying postcard. Venilal is a fine man. Harilal knows him. It would be a good thing if Jaisukhlal’s brother could be drawn into Harijan work. He seems to be more in need of work than of income. Meet him. If you are satisfied with him, if Narandas agrees and if such persons are required near Rajkot, accept him.

Bapa seems to be very much pleased with you. How is Rama? How are Dhiru and Vimu faring?

Ramdas’s ship is in mid-ocean. He is in Bombay now.

I am here at any rate up to the 20th. You will know from _Harijan_ the activities here.

If any Harijan workers can take up other work besides khadi and arrange it round the latter like the planets revolving round the sun, there could be no objection at all to their doing so. On the contrary, it is desirable. If you have grasped this principle, follow it.

Panditji is here. He is going to Sabarmati and will live there now. Lakshmibehn’ will stay in Wardha for the present.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5528

---

1 Vide “Letter to Venilal A. Gandhi”, 23-12-1934
2 Narayan M. Khare
3 Wife of Narayan M. Khare
74. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

January 4, 1935

CHI. VASUMATI,

I have your letter. It is all right if you take boiled milk when fresh milk is not available. You must not discontinue uncooked vegetables or fruit. The menu should also include bhakris of whole wheat flour and roasted wheat. It is very cold here. Yet I have not stopped my morning and evening walks. As usual the whole army moves with me. Amtul came yesterday. Ambujam enquires about you regularly. Her ashram will be ready by the Samkrant. Keep in touch with Ramdas. I shall be here till the 20th if not longer.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9390. Also C.W. 635. Courtesy: Vasumati Pandit

75. INTERVIEW TO DEPUTATIONS

January 4, 1935

The deputation . . . led by Mr. Raghbir Narain Singh . . . pointed out to Gandhiji the various difficulties which faced them in reviving village industries and sought his help and guidance, to which Mahatmaji replied:

My first aim is to change the mentality of the people, not to coerce them as Roosevelt, Hitler or Mussolini are doing in their countries. As the mentality of the people has changed today towards khadi, so I hope to turn their mind in favour of indigenous industries.

My efforts are to keep up our civilization, and I will do my best for it.

He advised the deputationists to mobilize public opinion against mill products, so that the cottage industries might be revived.1

Another deputation waited on Mahatmaji consisting of Chamars of the village of Kotana within the Baraut Tahsil in Meerut . . . . They wanted financial assistance from the Harijan Fund for conducting a case which has been instituted by the injured

1 Thick chapatis of wheat flour
2 January 14
3 It was decided that Gandhiji would receive the deputation again on January 11, to discuss the various points raised by them.
Chamars\footnote{Who were alleged to have been ill-treated by the zamindar of the village}. Gandhiji advised them to effect a compromise and try to raise money locally.

The Bombay Chronicle, 5-1-1935

76. MESSAGE TO PUBLIC MEETING, DELHI

[January 4, 1935]

The best way wherein his countrymen could respect his memory was to emulate the fearlessness and devotion of the late Mr. Abhyankar whose death was a sad thing for the country.

The Hindustan Times, 5-1-1935

77. LETTER TO ESTHER MENON

DELHI,

January 5, 1935

MY DEAR CHILD,

If this letter can intensify the wishes, then this is to reciprocate your wishes. It is freezingly cold here. The 4 o’clock prayer bell has gone.

Of course, Harijans need ever so much more than mere temple-entry for their spiritual satisfaction. Temple-entry is not so much their spiritual need, as its grant is that of the arrogant caste Hindus. They can have no spiritual grace so long as they deny to their fellows in faith the same right of worship that they claim for themselves. Is not this quite clear?

With love and kisses added for the children,

Yours,

BAPU

[PS]

In Delhi till 20th at least, 28th at the most. Then Wardha.

From a photostat. Courtesy: National Archives of India. Also My Dear Child p. 109
It is impossible to over-estimate the value of meticulous detail in your estimates. The path of service to the Harijans is strait and sharp as the razor’s edge, simply because the goal is that of complete self-purification. We can never be too critical of ourselves and every pie we get must be received as a dedication to God and used as a sacred trust. Broad heads, therefore, will never do, there is no room in your estimates for ‘etceteras’ and ‘sundries’. For instance, I could not tolerate the item ‘books, slates, etc., given free’. Supposing someone gave us a free gift of intoxicating drugs? Would they come under the item? No ‘post, telegrams, etc.’, either, nor newspapers, nor expenditure on rent. For you should be in a position to say: ‘We do not need to spend money on telegrams, we send messages through kind messengers who will take them; we need spend nothing on rent, for we have persuaded some good friends to give us a house.’ Expenditure on administration I can tolerate only to a certain extent, and I do not see any need for separate propaganda. Actual solid work is the most eloquent propaganda. I confess I allowed myself to be used for the purpose in that I suffered Thakkar Bapa to carry me about in his circus for about a year; but though I went from place to place under his directions, I must say that the best and the only part I could reconcile myself to was the walking tour in Orissa. Emulate me there if you can. The mutest servant is the most eloquent propagandist. Run a school yourself for Harijans, open a well or temple, help in digging a well or building a village school-house for Harijans. That will be true propaganda. I would ask you to copy the example of Mr. Frazer Hoyland, a schoolmaster from South Wales, who has come to work with his own hands in the Bihar earthquake area under M. Pierre Ceresole. He has worked among the unemployed people in England and Wales, and knows that writing books and pamphlets is no propaganda, but that manual work and sharing in the toil of people one would serve is true propaganda. I should, therefore, not hesitate to drop the column for propaganda. You have a column showing office expenses. I can understand that in our poor country we cannot run our offices free of cost, but even there, run it through Harijans. If we must have peons, have only Harijans for the purpose, not treating them as peons but as your sons or members of your family. Expenditure on ashrams is a thing I must strongly warn you against. Let us drop the name of ‘ashram’ for it cannot be run without a solid fund of moral and spiritual capital. One of the branch Sanghs has budgeted Rs. 8,000 for an ashram. Well, I should rule it out, unless they can show that they are doing work worth 8 lacs. Broadly I might say that you should not spend a rupee until you are sure that you are getting ten rupees’ worth of work out of it.

_Harijan, 11-1-1935_

79. LETTER TO UMADEVI BAJAJ

[Before January 7, 1935]

CHI. OM,

I write this letter with a pencil since I am writing while having my meal.

It is a bad habit to write while eating and it is equally bad to write with a pencil. Please don’t copy my example in these respects.

It seems that your ear is still giving you trouble. You must go to Bombay. I am thinking of sending you a wire.
Write to me about Madalasa also.

_Blessings from BAPU_

[From Gujarati]

_Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, p. 341_

80. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

DELI, January 7, 1935

CHI. AMBUJAMMAL,

Your letter. Yes you can start with the girls who may come from Wardha. But all this you should do only if you and Janammal are sure of sticking to your work. You must not rely upon others helping you. They may come and afterwards leave you. Of course if you go in for the ashram you have to adopt the ashram life more or less. You may

---

1 Vide the following item.
2 Addressee elder sister
3 This is in Hindi.
relax some rules to suit local circumstances.

As for your food, you should make such changes as may be necessary. Green leaves, curds and unpolished rice well boiled must suit you. In selecting the diet, the primary consideration with me has been your health. You will therefore unhesitatingly make such changes as your health demands.

Love.

BAPU

From the original. Ambujammal Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

81. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

DELHI,

January 7, 1935

CHI. JAMNALAL,

The Delhi cold, instead of helping me to work harder, makes me do less work when so much work has piled up. What you say about Abhyankar is indeed what has happened. His loss is bound to be felt.

It seems that your ear is taking quite a lot of time to be fully cured. It will not matter at all if you cannot come. Nothing should be done which may interfere with the cure of your ear. Kamalnayan¹ cannot be sent to Ceylon now, not as long as malaria is raging there.

The discharge from Om’s ear persists. Last week, I had sent her a wire and asked her to go to Bombay immediately and consult a doctor there. She doesn’t seem yet to have done so. I would advise you to call her and get her ear examined by some doctor.

Lali seems to have settled down.

Mehr’s case is difficult. She has been staying at Dr. Ansari’s place from the day she arrived here. She just dropped in casually once. She has come to develop a feeling of revulsion against the Ashram. We shall have to leave her here. Fortunately, Dr. Khan Saheb’s wife is arriving here. Mehr will perhaps stay with her. I wish to return to Wardha on the 22nd, and in any case on the 29th at the latest. Shankerlal² and Gulzarilal³ have arrived here today.

Blessings from

BAPU

¹ Addressee’s son
² Shankerlal Banker
³ Gulzarilal Nanda
Ramdas is thinking of going to Bardoli and Lakhtar to bring away his papers, etc., to go through them. Please give him the fare, etc.

BAPU

Dev Sharma came and saw me. He says that he is prepared to take charge of the Shail Ashram if he is given the entire expenditure that is incurred there at present. Let me know what you think about this.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2950

82. LETTER TO VALJI G. DESAI
January 7, 1935

CHI. VALJI,

I have not yet been able to write about the incidents in the Ramayana. In fact I have forgotten all that I was told about them. Now I shall have to write anew. I therefore want to consider some incidents. We must find that essay of Shastri on cow-protection. If you can find another secretary devoted to the cow, I shall entrust this task to him. If you cannot, you should start doing some work yourself instead of being there merely in name. Here again what is required is strength of character, not physical strength. How are your eyes? Try wet-sheet packs soaked in fresh milk when you go to sleep at night—whether or not your eyes are all right—will you? There is no harm in it. I have your Ramakatha in front of me and I am going to read it.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 7468. Courtesy: Valji G. Desai

83. LETTER TO RAMDAS GANDHI

DELHI,
Id, January 7, 1935

CHI. RAMDAS,

As you addressed your letter via Wardha, though dated 1st, it reached me as late as yesterday, the 6th. I will be here up to the 20th at least. As for the question where you are to stay, it would be highly improper for me to write to Manibhai while you are still there. Ask him yourself. If you see any sign of unwillingness on his part, write to me. Still if you feel that you cannot talk to him, use the accompanying letter.

You may go to Lakhtar or Bardoli whenever you feel you should do so. I am writing to Jamnalalji about the expense.

Since you say nothing about your health, I assume it is good enough. I have had a letter from the Vaidyaraj which is enclosed. As for the particulars about your health, it is for you to supply them. If you do feel the need to put yourself under somebody’s treatment, it would be advisable to meet Kuvalaynand or Gaurishanker. You may then go for treatment to whichever of the two places you like. I take it that you will get yourself X-rayed by Dr. Jivraj.

Nimu does not seem inclined to leave Wardha, for the present at any rate. She herself must have written to you about Narandas’s letter.

It is quite cold here, so much that one is unable to write as much as one would want to. We are camping in the countryside. The air is pure. Both the place and the air are ideal for physical work. Except for one building, there are only tents for all our needs.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

I think the Vaidyaraj’s letter has been passed on to you. Still, I am asking them to enquire.

From the Gujarati original: Mrs. Sumitra Kulkarni Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

84. LETTER TO DUNICHAND

DELIHI,
January 8, 1935

DEAR LALA DUNICHAND,

I have your letter. Your suggestions are good but nothing can be done by the Association that will bring it in conflict with the authorities. Relief of the kind you mention is surely political and has to be tackled by political bodies. There are however some items which will be taken up as the work progresses.

1 Vide, “Letter to Jamnalal Bajaj”, 7-1-1935

64 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI

Surely villages won’t require any inducement when they are helped to get some remunerative work for their idle hours. So far as the industries are concerned, they won’t be called upon to make any sacrifice.

The difficulty will come in when sanitary work and moral reform commence.

But in any case I take it you are going to do what you can to advance the village industries.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G.N. 5591

85. LETTER TO VERRIER ELWIN

January 8, 1935

MY DEAR VERRIER,

The two suggestions had come to me before, though not exactly in the form you suggest. I am passing your letter on to Kumarappa. The suggestions coming from you acquire an added significance. Let us see.

Love to you all.

BAPU

[PS.]

Happy New Year.

[PPS.]

Delhi up to 20th.

FATHER ELWIN
GOND S. MANDAL
KARANJIA P.O., MANDLA DIST. (C. P.)

From a photostat: G.N. 8930

86. LETTER TO MANILAL AND SUSHILA GANDHI

January 8, 1935

CHI. MANILAL AND SUSHILA,

I have your separate letters. I understand what you write about Ramdas. I did want a permit issued from there. But never mind if we cannot have it. I shall myself see about it here if Ramdas is willing.
I had a tersely worded letter from Mama about Medh', which I am enclosing along with one from Harilal. If you wish, you may let Medh read the letter. There is a great difference between what you recommended and what I find in this letter. Now Pragji alone remains to be consulted.

The new Agent came to see me. He has visited South Africa once. You will surely meet him. Keep me informed about your experience. I have of course asked him to bring about a reconciliation.

I am in Delhi these days. Ba, etc., are with me. We shall be here for a few more days. At any rate we must return by the end of this month. It is pretty cold here.

I hope you are all well.

Sushila seems to have acquired wide knowledge.

What Kallenbach says is on the whole true. Good Jews do not oppose us. Narandas’s Kanu is with me.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Tell Medh I am not writing a separate letter to him.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4830

87. LETTER TO NANDLAL

January 8, 1935

BHAII NANDLAL.

In your poetic fancy, you seem to have been engaged in debunking the Village Industries Association. And yet you sign yourself “Yours faithfully”. Only a poet can do that. Do not give any cause to Lilavatibehn for being unhappy. Untruth does certainly follow truth; but ultimately it is left behind. Certainly even indigenous mills will render thousands of people unemployed, so only hand-pounded rice should be used. Your mind is full of so many things that unless you act spiritedly, you won’t be able to achieve anything. It is better if you ponder over it and do what you feel is necessary.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 Surendra Medh
88. LETTER TO CHAND TYAGI

DELHI,

January 8, 1935

Bhai Chand Tyagi,

Your letter gave me much pleasure. If possible you should come here with Raj Kishori. Only after meeting her can I suggest the right course. You must be keeping well. I am glad to learn that you find Balbir satisfactory.

Blessings from

Bapu

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 6630. Also C.W. 4278. Courtesy: Chand Tyagi

89. ADVICE TO AHMEDABAD DEPUTATION

January 8, 1935

Gandhiji advised them to preserve the cordial relations that were existing between Labour and Capital in Ahmedabad for the last 15 years and evolve a permanent scheme for an amicable settlement of all labour disputes in future.\(^1\)

The Bombay Chronicle, 9-1-1935

90. A LETTER

January 8, 1935

Dear Sister,

I was glad to hear from you after so many years.

I am keeping myself in touch with Shantilal. I shall do what I can to help him. But to give personal attention to anybody has become almost impossible for me. That chapter of my life seems to have closed altogether.

Khurshedbehn is here. I am afraid she can’t go to you. She is

\(^1\) Kasturbhai Lalbhai, Vice-President, Ahmedabad Mill-owners’ Association, Shankerlal Banker, Vice-President and Gulzarilal Nanda, Secretary of the Labour Association called on Gandhiji in connection with a wage dispute.

\(^2\) As a result of this meeting it was decided to convene a bigger conference of the representatives of the two Associations.
in . . . with the village work. She has seen your letter. Or course, if you go to the Frontier, you can help the Frontier people in a variety of ways.

I dare not tempt you to come. For I can only give you a few moments if you come.

 Yours sincerely,
 M. K. GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

91. INTERVIEW TO MRS. C. KUTTAN NAIR

January 8, 1935

MRS. NAIR: It is my feeling, especially after attending the All-India Women’s Conference at Karachi, that the women’s movement in India is not a representative one. It only represents the aristocracy and upper middle class. Can you suggest practical measures to make it a real mass movement?

GANDHI: The obvious remedy would be for the existing members to throw themselves in the khaddar and other village industry movements and thus develop the village instinct and take pride in depending on villages for all their wants.

MRS. N. Do you not think that co-education from very early days till the end of the educational career will help a great deal in removing the sex obsession that we see in our midst today?

G. I cannot definitely state as yet whether it would be successful or not. It does not seem to have succeeded in the West. I tried it myself years ago when I even made boys and girls sleep in the same verandah with no partition between them, Mrs. Gandhi and myself sharing the verandah with them. I must say that it brought about undesirable results.

MRS. N. But do not worse things happen in purdah-ridden communities?

G. Yes, of course, but co-education is still in an experimental stage and we cannot definitely say one way or the other as to its results. I think that we should begin with the family first. There, boys and girls should grow together freely and naturally. Then co-education will come by itself.

1 Omission as in the source
2 A leading social worker of Cochin. The notes of the interview prepared by the interviewer were revised by Gandhiji.
MRS. N. As a teacher who has moved rather intimately with her students I have had occasion to come across some who, through ignorance and through information gathered from unhealthy sources during the period of adolescence, resorted to practices that were not conducive either to their physical or moral well-being. Will not the teaching of sex hygiene in schools in the most scientific and informal manner be really beneficial to our boys and girls.

G. Yes. And there should be no reason why one should not be able to talk freely on this matter.

MRS. N. On discussing very freely the question of birth-control with many a married woman, I find in many cases, specially in the case of those with large families, that motherhood is often thrust upon them. Woman has no freedom in the real sense of the word if she has no right over her body. So for the sake of the mother, whose health is drained away by the bringing forth of too many children and for the sake of children themselves, who should be a joy to us, but who now come forth unwanted in such large numbers, may not birth-control through contraceptives be resorted to, as the next best thing to self-control, which is too high an ideal for the ordinary man or woman?

G. Do you think that the freedom of the body is obtained by resorting to contraceptives? Women should learn to resist their husbands. If contraceptives are resorted to as in the West, frightful results will follow. Men and women will be living for sex alone. They will become soft-brained, unhinged, in fact mental and moral wrecks, if not also physical. Then, while I believe man to be the worse sinner, woman is not very far behind him. Both sin, on the whole. Woman is not always the victim. She should realize her majesty and train herself to say “No” when she means it.

MRS. N. But is there not too much of sex indulgence even now and is the introduction of contraceptives going to make so much difference in the sex life of the individual?

G. Undoubtedly there is already much of sex indulgence and even sex perversion. But contraceptives would be putting the cap on them. They will give a status to intemperate connection which it does not enjoy now.

MRS. N. Even in exceptional cases where a woman is too weak for child-bearing or where either of the parents is diseased, cannot this method be resorted to?

G. No. One exception will lead to another till it finally becomes general. In the cases stated above, it is better that the husband and the wife live apart. Contraceptives which are being tried in the West are leading to hideous immorality and I am sure after a few years, the Westerners themselves will realize their mistake. Do you not know that Mussolini in Italy is giving donations to parents with large families?
MRS. N. Perhaps Mussolini wants more fodder for cannon.

G. What about the English and the Dutch among whom contraceptives are popular? Are they against war?

MRS. N. Can a poor country like India afford to have its present vast population, which seems to increase at a tremendously rapid pace?

G. Nature will solve the problem for us, if we allow Nature to have free play. Contraceptives are an unnatural interference with her laws. If people want to multiply like rabbits, they will have also to die like rabbits. If we become licentious, there will undoubtedly be Nature’s punishment descending upon us. It will be a blessing in disguise.

MRS. N. But is self-control possible for the ordinary man and woman?

G. Yes, under well-regulated conditions. Contraceptives are really for the educated people, who are the “sick” of humanity. I call them “sick” because their food and drink and the exceedingly artificial life that they are leading have made them weak-willed and slaves to their passions.

MRS. N. Do you then suggest, Mahatmaji, as a practical remedy for the over-indulgence in sex today, the releasing of the creative energy in man, through channels other than sex, by concentrating on matters like art, science, literature, etc.?

G. That is true so far as it goes. You have to be very careful in the choice of your food and drink and to keep both mind and body clean. Just as it is important to know what goes to the mind it is equally necessary to know what goes into the body. These are simple things, which will help you a great deal in the matter of self-control.

MRS. N. You know that in India there is no bar for physically unfit people to marry and bring forth children. Moreover, Hindu religion enjoins that none could get salvation without there being some male member to perform shraddha ceremony. This in normal circumstances is resulting in degeneration of the Hindu race. Are you, under these conditions, in favour of sterilization as is being done in Germany under Hitler?

G. There are crores of Hindus, especially untouchables who do not perform the shraddha ceremony. As regards sterilization I consider it inhuman to impose it as a law on the people. But in the case of individuals with chronic diseases, it is desirable to have them sterilized if they are agreeable to it. Sterilization is a sort of contraceptive and though I am against the use of contraceptives in the case of women, I do not mind voluntary sterilization in the case of man, since he is the aggressor.

MRS. N. Mahatmaji, you say that a woman should not allow motherhood to be thrust upon herself but that she should be able to assert herself and definitely say “No” to her husband. Have you considered the fact that a Hindu woman especially has no economic status, and her defying her “Lord and Master” may result in disastrous consequences for her, and according to law she may be denied even maintenance, not to speak of a second home?

G. If you study statistics, you will find that what you say about the economic condition of a Hindu woman holds good only in the case of a microscopic minority. Do you not know that in Indian houses it is the woman that is generally the real master?

MRS. N. May I know how far your experiments in self-control in the Sabarmati Ashram have been successful?

G. It is very difficult to say. We have had individual cases of terrible tragedy, but those who visited the Ashram were much impressed by the general atmosphere of freedom, without sex consciousness, that prevailed there.

The Hindustan Times, 11-1-1935

92. INTERVIEW WITH HALIDE EDIB ADIVAR

January 9, 1935

[HALIDE EDIB:] How will you fight the curse of mechanization, Gandhiji? How will you keep human beings human souls?

[GANDHJI:] It is all implied in my non-violence, Hindu-Muslim unity, the removal of untouchability and giving back to the villagers what belongs to them. The Harijan activity and the movement for the revival of village industries come naturally to me because of non-violence. It is cruel, it is sinful, to think of mechanization in a country of 350 million human beings. Every human being is a machine, only it should be kept oiled and in proper trim. That is what

1 Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Notes”. The interviewer was a Turkish lady who had taken a leading part in the Turkish Revolution. She was visiting India at the invitation of Jamia Millia to deliver a course of lectures. Mahadev Desai reports: “She came and sat down near Gandhiji and said, ‘I have come to learn from you and take what I can for my own people’.”

2 From The Hindustan Times, 10-1-1935
I am trying to do.

Political freedom, I am sure, you are going to win but mechanization, I am afraid, might get hold of India.

Then, there is no escape from violence. I saw it as long ago as 1908, and ever since I have shaped all my activities in terms of non-violence. Complete mechanization is impossible in India without its resulting in violence in some shape or other.

I know, I know. But it’s so difficult. The soul has to be preserved. I have written a play called Masques and Souls. There are more masques than souls, but if you will prepare a nursery of souls, it would be all to the good.

Oh yes, if we can find even one true witness to the Truth.

I am not very optimistic, for the opposite side is very strong.

I have never lost my optimism. In the seemingly darkest hours, hope has burnt bright within me.

You cannot kill your own hope, I know.

You are absolutely right. I cannot kill the hope myself. I must say I cannot give an ocular demonstration to justify the hope. But there is no defeat in me.

There will never be, I am sure, there will never be.

_Harijan_, 25-1-1935

93. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

DELHI,

January 10, 1935

CHI. AMALA,

I had your pencil note. I do not think that you will need another passport from Germany. That would be necessary if you wanted to go back to Germany. I am sure it is unnecessary for remaining here. At the same time, any foreigner is liable to be turned out at any moment without any reason being assigned. And now there is hardly any difference between a foreigner and one born in the country, because any person can be turned out of the country under the Ordinances law.

You must let me know how you are feeling in Santiniketan. We are here probably till the 28th inst., certainly up to 20th.

Blessings from
BAPU

SMT. AMALABEHN
(DR. MARGARETE SPIEGEL)
SANTINIKETAN

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

94. INTERVIEW TO SOCIALISTS

January 10, 1935

The socialists met him again and discussed the village industries problem from the socialist point of view. They are stated to have said that the first step in village programme should be to improve the condition of kisans who were being downtrodden by the zamindars and propaganda should be carried on amongst the kisans not to submit to the unfairness they are at present subjected to.

Gandhiji, it is understood, did not agree with this view and opined that attempts should be made to retain cordial relations between the two parties. Any split should be avoided and zamindars’ sympathies should not be alienated in order to make the present programme succeed. He said that the time was not ripe to bring about a complete change all of a sudden, though that stage might be reached after some time. He said that the socialists’ idea to revolutionize the present state of things might result in the zamindars seeking shelter with the third party.

The Bombay Chronicle, 11-1-1935

95. INTERVIEW TO THE PRESS

January 10, 1935

What do you think about the latest move of the Government regarding your Village Industries scheme?

I should be very glad if Government were to take the wind out of my sails. Much of the work that I propose doing is what Government ought to do. Let Government do whatever they can do, only let not anything be superimposed on the people. If Government helped me, I could produce magical results; but it could be possible

---

1 The subscription is in Gujarati.
2 The Government had proposed allotment of one crore of rupees to the provinces for the economic development and improvement of the rural areas in order to forestall Congress activities in the villages and had issued a confidential circular in this connection.
only if they helped me in the right spirit. In other words, the Government should understand and appreciate the secrets of the programme.¹ There are so many ways in which they could help. They could help with the necessary legislation. But pray don’t ask me to express any opinion on what Government are doing. I do not want to criticize their work. If it were necessary, I should write to them. So far as I am concerned my life is an open book, and there is absolutely nothing that I would keep secret from them. I have necessarily chosen items to which nobody’s attention has been drawn and where I do not trench on ground covered by others. Thus, in my campaign for unpolished rice, hand-ground flour and village made gur, I am simply asking people not to pay for undermining their health. For that is what they are at present doing, and I am thankful to say that I am supported in my view by the highest experts in the land. I dare not think of land improvement and improvement in the methods of agriculture, for I know my limitations, and I want people to do all that they can do without any outside help. My only object is to abolish idleness, to help people to turn their time to good account, to prevent misfeeding and to stop all economic waste. The whole of my campaign for unpolished rice, for hand-ground flour, for gur, for hand-pressed oil and for the economic disposal of carcasses should be looked at in that light.²

The village uplift programme is not a new idea though the Congress, at its Bombay session recently, adopted it as one of the channels of its constructive programme of work.³ I have spoken of it to the public during the last eight months.

Gandhiji spoke eloquently on the powers of takli and said that recently a spinner from Manchester had examined it and testified to its potentialities. The takli which once hardly exceeded the speed of a hundred yards per hour now operated at four hundred yards:

It is a marvellous thing and with intelligence applied to it can produce an enormous change for the better.

Proceeding, Mahatmaji emphasized that the Village Industries Association had excluded politics from its ken.

Questioned as to the progress he had made in his work at Delhi Gandhiji said he was presently going slow in collecting materials and liked to see its great potentialities. The Spinners’ Association had distributed one and a half crores of rupees among 160,000 people of which 120,000 were spinners, 24,000 washermen, and the rest weavers. From the competitive point of view there was no reason why the village industries meant to promote villagers’ welfare should not hold their own against mechanized industries, provided it was clearly understood that village production was for its own consumption.

¹ This sentence is from a report in The Hindustan Times.
² What follows is from The Hindustan Times report.
³ In the circular the Government had described the Bombay session of the Congress as the greatest personal triumph of Gandhiji.

This policy had been recognized as economic even outside India and if followed would do great good to India. It was important not only from the general economic point of view but from other considerations so far as rice, wheat and sugar were concerned, for village products contained more vitamins and proteins whereas in industrialized products these were absent.

_Harijan, 25-1-1935, and The Hindustan Times, 11-1-1935_

96. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

DELI,

January 11, 1935

CHI. AMBUJAMAL1

I have your letter. You must put your body in perfect order by taking the food that suits you best. You should be the best judge of what suits you if you choose your food for health and not for the pleasure of the palate. I have no fear that you will make your choice from the latter standpoint. We have here a good variety of bhaji—pea leaves, mustard leaves, carrot leaves, fine radish leaves, _palak_. It is good you are taking butter. Are you taking enough exercise?

It will not do for you to open an ashram without Janammal. If, therefore, she can’t come to the village, you should fix your ashram in Madras, unless Father desires otherwise.

I like the idea of Father settling down in a village, even if it be for a time.

We are sleeping in an open verandah with a roof on it. There is danger of morning dew here and there is not convenience enough for me here to try the experiment of sleeping right under the sky.

It is good you saw Kakasaheb and discussed with him the question of the best method of learning Hindi. Do come in close contact with him. He will be a good guide in educational matters.

The bill for the paper and envelopes amounted I think to nearly Rs. 22. I thought it was sent to you. I shall inquire. Do not send me any envelopes. I have some myself. But I am using those made by us out of waste paper so long as it lasts.

1 This is in Hindi.
Nirmala is in Wardha. Bibi Amtul is with us.
Love.

BAPU

From the original. Ambujammal Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

97. LETTER TO UMADEVI BAJAJ

January 11, 1935

CHI. OM,

When will you shed your lethargy? The handwriting in your letter was not as beautiful as pearls. Though the letter is long, you haven’t given much news in it. I still feel that it would be better for you to go to Bombay once and consult an ear specialist. It is very cold here. We seem to be camping in a jungle, but we enjoy our stay. As I have to see many visitors, I cannot cope with my work.

Ask Madalasa to write to me. What does she eat? What is her weight?

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Mehrtaj has forgotten you, me and everybody else. She is at Dr. Ansari’s and enjoying herself.

[From Gujarati]

Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, pp. 340-1

98. TELEGRAM TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

January 12, 1935

JAMNALAL
BIRLA HOUSE
MOUNT PLEASANT ROAD
BOMBAY

JUST LEARNT SWARUPRANI UNCONSCIOUS. SEND FULL DETAILS.

GANDHI

Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, p. 146
99. TO THE MILL-HANDS

DELI,
January 13, 1935

I hope you will gladly welcome the compromise arrived at in the dispute that was going on regarding your wages. . . . It will be in your interest to accept willingly the cut in your wages—that will enhance your credit too, I have no doubt about it. I do not consider it a small matter that the main principle of the policy which we wanted to adopt years ago has been accepted in this compromise. Now we have to make a scheme at our earliest convenience to implement it. I need not tell you that its success mostly depends on your pure intentions and conduct. The welfare of both the employees and the employers lies in the mill continuing to function. He who understands this will never find it difficult to understand this compromise. I have been telling you from the very beginning of our acquaintance that the industry exclusively belongs neither to the mill-owners nor to the labourers. The capital of the owners is money while yours is labour. Both of these are useless unless there is unity between the two. If you have grasped what I am saying you will realize that the good of both lies in this compromise. You will also know how much progress we have made and how near we are towards the realization of the dream that we had been cherishing all along. I therefore hope that all the sisters and brothers will unanimously accept the compromise.

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

100. A DISCUSSION

[Before January 14, 1935]

Your campaign is taking away from the Missionary’s popularity.

[GANDHI:] I see what you mean but I do not know why it should disturb them. We are not traders trenching on one another’s province. If it is a matter of serving oneself, I should understand their attitude, but when it is entirely a matter of serving others, it should not worry them or me as to who serves them.

1 Omission as in the source
2 Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Notes”, dated January 14, 1935
3 Against untouchability
But, perhaps, the authorities in charge of a Mission hospital would rightly feel worried if you sent your people to go and open a hospital in the same place.

But they should understand that ours is a different mission. We do not go there to afford them simple medical relief or a knowledge of the three R’s; our going to them is a small proof of our repentance and our assurance to them that we will not exploit them any more. I should never think of opening a hospital where there is already one; but if there is a Mission school, I should not mind opening another for Harijan children, and I would even encourage them to prefer our school to the other. Let us frankly understand the position. If the object is purely humanitarian, purely that of carrying education where there is none, they should be thankful that someone whose obvious duty it is to put his own house in order wakes up to a sense of his duty. But my trouble is that the Missionary friends do not bring to bear on their work a purely humanitarian spirit. Their object is to add more members to their fold, and that is why they are disturbed. The complaint which I have been making all these years is more than justified by what you say. Some of the friends of a Mission were the other day in high glee over the conversion to Christianity of a learned pandit. They have been dear friends, and so I told them that it was hardly proper to go into ecstasies over a man forsaking his religion. Today it is the case of a learned Hindu, tomorrow it may be that of an ignorant villager not knowing the principles of his religion. Why should Missionaries complain if I open a school which is more liked by Harijans than theirs? Is it not natural?

But does it mean that you would say the same thing about a Christian who embraces Hinduism?

I would. Here is Mirabehn. I would have her find all the spiritual comfort she needs from Christianity, and I should not dream of converting her to Hinduism, even if she wanted to do so. Today it is the case of a grown-up woman like her, tomorrow it may be that of an European child trusted to my care by a friend. Take the case of Khan Saheb’s daughter entrusted to my care by her father. I should jealously educate her in her own faith and should strive my utmost against her being lured away from it if ever she was so inclined. I have had the privilege of having children and grown-up persons of other faiths with me. I was thankful to find them better Christians, Mussalmans, Parsis or Jews by their contact with me.

But if it was a pure case of conscience?
I am no keeper of anybody’s conscience, but I do feel that it argues some sort of weakness on the part of a person who easily declares his or her failure to derive comfort from the faith in which he or she is born.

_Harijan_, 25-1-1935

101. FOREWORD TO “TWO SERVANTS OF GOD”

DELHI,
January 14, 1935

Though I had always longed for it, I was never able to be with Khan Saheb Abdul Ghaffar Khan for any length of time before the closing months of last year. Good fortune, however, brought me not only the younger brother but also the elder, Dr. Khan Saheb, very soon after their discharge from Hazaribagh prison. As luck would have it, they were under orders not to enter the Frontier Province till 28th December last. They were under discipline not to offer Civil Disobedience. And so they accepted the hospitality of Seth Jamnalal Bajaj in Wardha. I was thus privileged to come in intimate touch with the brothers. The more I knew them the more attracted I felt towards them. I was struck by their transparent sincerity, frankness and utmost simplicity. I observed, too, that they had come to believe in truth and non-violence, not as a policy but as a creed. The younger brother, I found, was consumed with deep religious fervour. His was not a narrow creed. I found him to be a universalist. His politics, if he had any, were derived from his religion. The Doctor had no politics. This privileged contact led me to the conclusion that the brothers were much misunderstood. I, therefore, asked Mahadev Desai to note all he could from them of their lives and prepare for the public a sketch introducing them as men. He was to leave politics alone and avoid criticism of the Government. The result is this character-sketch. Let the reader judge whether the brothers’ claim to be known as simple Khudai Khidmatgars (i.e., Servants of God) is vindicated by the following pages, assuming that they give an accurate and truthful recital of the events of their lives as the brothers gave them to Mahadev Desai.

M. K. GANDHI

Two Servants of God

102. LETTER TO NIRMAL KUMAR BOSE

January 14, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

Your article has been simply waiting for my note on it. Your postcard has therefore come in time. I am glad you have reconsidered your position. You can publish your notes of the interview if you send it to me first for revision.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

[PS.]

Delhi till 23rd inst.
SHRI NIRMAL K. BOSE
6/1A BR. INDIAN STREET
CALCUTTA

From a photostat: G.N. 10518 and 10521

103. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ
January 14, 1935

CHI. JAMNALAL,

I understand why you will not be able to come. It is desirable that you should stay on there till the doctors permit you to leave. Do not overstrain yourself.

Ramdas feels that Manilal¹ is not very eager that the former should continue to stay at Manibhuvan². It is best, therefore, that he should leave the place. He wishes to rent a separate room for himself and has asked for Rs. 25 as rent for it. I think we should let him have it. I know that all this is wrong. But Ramdas’s illness is of such a nature that in his case wrong seems right. I do not know how far a father’s love is misleading me in this matter. If you disapprove of this demand of Ramdas, by all means tell him so. You earned the privilege of doing so many years ago. Do what seems proper to you.

I understand what you say about Swaruprani. Sarup wires to me from time to time.

I must stay on here till the 25th at any rate, although we must leave here latest by the 28th.

Rajaji is coming tomorrow with Lakshmi.

Do you see Jayaprakash?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2951

¹ Son of Revashanker Jagjivan Jhaveri
² Revashanker Jhaveri’s house in Bombay
104. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

January 14, 1935

CHI. LILAVATI,

I have your letter. You are economizing very well. You must no more fall ill. Accept Narandas’s advice in matters of food, studies, etc. I obviously cannot guide you from this distance. Always remember that fruits of patience are sweet.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9330. Also C.W. 6605. Courtesy: Lilavati Asar

105. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

January 14, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

I got your three letters. I had asked Mahadev to reply to the first. I understand about Aunt¹. I shall be happy if she feels satisfied. It was good that the leg was operated on. Send me separately the figure of the expenditure incurred on this treatment. Pay the money from the balance of the Ashram funds with you. I think the monthly allowance is paid by Behcharlal. Am I right? I have a faint impression that it is so. Inquire and let me know. Is Aunt calm? Does Manu go to help her? Is Phuli² there? Does she faithfully follow her dharma? If we understand the real meaning of illness, it is a test of the person who is ill as also of his neighbours and relations. If God had ordered an even life for all, who would have tested whom? Who is Dr. Jadavrai?

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.] There was nothing serious with my feet. The skin had cracked because I had been careless during the cold. Stopping walks and proper care of the wound have cured it.

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8427. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

¹ Raliatbehn
² Daughter of Raliatbehn
106. LETTER TO RAMDAS GANDHI

January 14, 1935

CHI. RAMDAS,

I have your letter. One ought not to stay where one feels oneself to be a burden on the hosts. I understand what you say about your having to find a separate room. I see that the Rs. 25 per month shall not now be sufficient to meet your needs. You need not mind that. Your peace of mind is what matters most. I am writing to Jamnalalji but at the same time you also should talk to him frankly. He will immediately understand your need. Pyarelal writes and tells me that you are much better than you were at Wardha. I was pleased indeed to hear that. You must have got my letter in which I mentioned the suggestion made by the Delhi tailor. You need not get agitated by such a letter from me. You may do what you yourself wish to do. I will be perfectly satisfied with that. Your good lies in following the inclination of your own nature. You alone can know what will satisfy your nature. There was really nothing. . . .

Does one talk about the chilblains one suffers from in winter? But then, I am a Mahatma as they say, and so I must be an exception. But now there is some relief even from that. I had been somewhat careless and had therefore to stop going out for a walk for about four days. Today I took one.

Your aunt has been ailing rather badly in Rajkot. Harilal looks after the nursing. I will probably be able to leave here on the 25th; if not on 25th, then on the 28th certainly. Do you visit Mathuradas? I am sure you know that you can have a place in Jamnalalji’s store.

I should like you to be more regular in writing to me.

I had a letter from Sharma. He is better now. He has arranged for a separate house for himself. He will come over by about the 20th.

I went and saw the school run by Giriraj. It did not appeal to me. He is of course working hard, but how can he show the concern that a mother or a father would?

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Mrs. Sumitra Kulkarni Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

1 Vide ,”Letter to Jamnalal Bajaj”, 14-1-1935
2 A word here is illegible in the source.
3 That is, Delhi, which Gandhiji left for Wardha on 28th.
107. LETTER TO RAMDAS GANDHI

WARDHA,

February 14, 1935

CHI. RAMDAS.

I got your letter. I too believe that your medicine will be your work. In what direction are you trying these days? Do those on whom you had pinned your hopes fulfil them?

How is Kalyandas faring? At Kevalram’s, do they maintain the degree of cleanliness I insist on being maintained? How many customers does he get?

How do you go there and return? The eating house must be quite a distance from Manibhuvan.

I have already written and told you that Kanti¹ is here, haven’t I? I have written to Harilal² to come over here. Now-a-days I have taken charge of the kitchen at the new quarters. Some new experiments are being tried.

Write to Manilal.

Do you write to Sharma?

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Mrs. Sumitra Kulkarni Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

¹ Son of Harilal Gandhi
108. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

January 14, 1935

CHI. SHARMA,

We were both awaiting your letter. It has come just in time. You did well in renting a new house. I have seen the account of your expenses. The amount spent on postage is perfectly justified. You need not reply to anyone. Your notice published in Harijan has been reproduced in many newspapers. Some have even written to me on the subject.

I cannot say when I shall leave here but I am booked for a three days’ tour of the countryside after the 20th. Afterwards I rush off to Wardha.

What is the rent of the new house? Have you taken it on lease? I shall understand things better when you come here. Ramdas and the children too will come, I suppose.

Ramdas is in Bombay.

I have not understood what you say about borrowing Rs. 200 on mortgage. Who has mortgaged whose house, and why?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, between pp. 142 and 143

109. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

January 15, 1935

CHI. AMBUJAMMAL.

I am glad the whole thing went off so well. I hope K.’s wound is now completely healed. I have the 3 bottles of good honey and almonds. Just now I have not been eating them. Now I must try. You will come whenever you can. When anybody comes next time, you send me a cooker like the one Janammal had. You should let me pay for it as I want it for Khurshedbehn. I had a sweet letter from Father

1 Dated December 14, 1934
2 This is in Hindi.
3 Krishnasamy, addressee’s son after the marriage. I hope he has gone back to Kodai. You should induce him to do so. Go with him yourself and take K. with you.

Love.

BAPU

From the original. Ambujammal Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

110. LETTER TO RAMDAS GANDHI

[About February 14, 1935]\(^1\)

CHI. RAMDAS,

I got your letter. Personally I like your taking your meals in Kevalram’s eating-house. I should like to know what you eat, but I am not particular about it. All that I wish is that you may eat whatever pleases you and agrees with you and build up your body.

Of Dhiru, it is as you write. You may certainly go whenever you wish to. You have kept your bedding at Kalyandas’s place, but for sleeping you surely go to Manibhuvan, don’t you? How much distance do you cover in your walks every day?

If you like to help Kevalram in his work in the eating-house, doso. I quite understand your being disinclined to go to Natal. You must have written to Manilal accordingly.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Tell Nirmala that she has done well to decide that she and all others should take their meals in the eating-house. It is very good indeed that she makes herself so helpful in the eating-house work. . .\(^2\)

From the Gujarati original: Mrs. Sumitra Kulkarni Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

---

\(^1\) From the contents; vide the preceding item.

\(^2\) The rest of the postscript is illegible.
111. LETTER TO GANGABEHN VAIDYA

January, 15, 1935

CHI. GANGABEHN,

This, being hand-made paper, is more expensive than ordinary paper and I, therefore, use it economically. Since I started using it, consumption of paper has gone down to one half, just as consumption of khadi cloth has gone down to one-tenth or even lower than that. Everything indigenous is always cheaper in the end. I am writing with a reed pen.

You are a keen observer. Examine everything in your surroundings carefully. Every article of food and clothing must, as far as possible, be indigenous.

Learn to eat fresh leaves uncooked, to drink milk without boiling it, to use wheat flour without sifting it and rice without polishing it. If you learn only this and no more and teach the villagers to do likewise, crores of rupees will be saved.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-6: G. S. Gangabehnne, p. 84. Also C.W. 8817. Courtesy: Gangabehn Vaidya

112. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

DELHI,
January 16, 1935

CHI. VASUMATI,

I got your letter yesterday. I am writing this reply the first thing in the morning, that is at 3.15.

If it is your own wish to help Chandubhai, do so with pleasure. I have no right to stop altruistic actions. Pay him whatever sum you wish to without expecting that it will be returned. No one would be at fault if it is not returned. Business is like that. Sometimes the dice throw is in one’s favour and then it goes on; and when it is not, it persists against one. But then can we know what is good and what is bad for us? Don’t therefore hesitate to do what your own atman bids you do. The inclination to give away is always worth cultivating. Do we really own what we regard as our own?
Don’t believe what you might hear regarding my feet or any other newspaper stories. Great men’s boils become magnified into tumours. We should therefore give no thought to the boils of mahatmas. I am as well as I was in Wardha. I shall be leaving behind a bad tooth! Or maybe it returns with me. I may leave here on the 25th.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9392. Also C.W. 637. Courtesy: Vasumati Pandit

113. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

January 16, 1935

CHI. AMALA,

I have your letter. The only thing for treating chilblain is to keep the affected parts warm, even to the exclusion of open-air exercise. The newspapers are too amusing. You must not put any faith in what you read in the newspapers, especially about events in the life of mahatmas. Their pimples are turned into carbuncles and a simple headache becomes a sign of hastening end.

I am glad you like Santiniketan so well and the people in it. I am glad too that you are adding Bengali to your knowledge of languages. You should ask Indira to write to me. Get her mother’s address in Almora and write to her mother that you are teaching Indira French. How many girls are you nursing? What are they suffering from? What is your time-table? Are you cooking your own food or are you taking only bread, raw vegetables and milk? If you are taking raw vegetables, what are they?

Love.

BAPU

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

1 The letter being damaged here, one sentence following this is illegible.
114. LETTER TO RAJARAM R. BHOLE

DELIHI,

January 16, 1935

MY DEAR RAJARAM,

I have your letter. Seeing that you have put on weight I would advise you not to leave the sanatorium if the authorities still want to continue the treatment and do not mind your prolonged stay. It is of no use your going to Poona and becoming worse. He who passes time in rendering himself fitter for the service, which he cannot do otherwise, is also doing service. Therefore, staying in Mysore need not be regarded as waste of time.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

Shri Rajaram Bhole
P. K. T. SANATORIUM
VONTIKOPPAL
MYSORE

From the original: R. R. Bhole Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

115. LETTER TO MADALASA BAJAJ

CHI. MADALASA,

January 16, 1935

I have your letter. It is surprising that your weight is not increasing. But that does not matter. Since you are all right in other respects, leave things as they are. Milking cows is very good work indeed which you have started. I hope you drink the milk as soon as it is extracted.

Is the vessel kept quite clean? Do you wash the udders first with a solution of potassium permanganate and then with clean water? Do you wash your hands before milking?

Do you rub the cow’s body gently with a gunny-bag? Do you feed the cow yourself with your own hands? This is really good work which you have started doing. Write to me again.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, p. 316
116. LETTER TO HARIBHAU PHATAK

DELI,

[January 17, 1935]¹

MY DEAR HARIBHAU,

I have your letter. I can’t remember the letter you are referring to. It is just likely that the tremendous pressure at which I am dealing with my correspondence has put your letter out of my mind and it is lying buried in the heap before me.

I have not said that there should be no propaganda. Propaganda there must be. I have said, and I still maintain, that there should be no paid propaganda or if there is, there ought to be a separate collection about it. It is the business of savarna Hindus to organize such propaganda. Therefore funds should be raised, if funds are necessary, earmarked for that purpose. My own impression is that paid propaganda creates no effect whatsoever. We conduct schools and hostels with a definite object, which is to discharge the obligation we owe to the Harijans. It is wholly different in scope, therefore, from the establishment of schools, etc., under the old regime. Every school we open is a fresh nail in the coffin of untouchability, and having travelled all over India in that cause you will let me judge the result. It is therefore that I have said that the opening of schools and hostels [is]² the best propaganda for conducting the campaign against untouchability. We have plenty of money; but where are the schoolmasters to be had? Savarna schoolmasters are not to be picked up in the streets. Now, reverse the process. If you utilize 90 per cent of the funds for propaganda and reserve 10 per cent for schools, how will you measure the success you would have attained in the conversion of savarna Hindus as we are able to measure the result by the number of schools and hostels that we succeed in opening and conducting? Daily I have letters from Harijans complaining of our spending money for purposes other than opening schools, hostels and the like. I have no letter from anywhere complaining that we do not carry on enough propaganda. Yours is the first letter received by me.

¹ The source has ‘17-1-1934’ which is evidently a slip. In January, 1934 Gandhiji was on tour in the South.
² The source has ‘are’.
In Maharashtra I do not know what you will do in the matter of propaganda even if the whole of the collections were to be used by you for propaganda work. Show me a programme and I am prepared to examine it on its own merits. I have no bias. One way or the other, my sole concern is to see that untouchability is removed. I wonder if I have made my point perfectly clear. If not, you must write again developing your views.

The complaint you make about the composition of the Maharashtra Provincial Board is, of course, your own speciality. It has nothing to do with propaganda. You have simply to get Deodhar to give you a minimum of time or ask him to retire in favour of one who can give the time, or have him as the ornamental head but have a Vice-Chairman who would conduct the proceedings and actually organize the work from month to month, and even from day to day. If you suggest any such Vice-President, I will discuss the thing with Thakkar Bapa in the first instance.

Now about mill rice and hand-pounded rice. When you say that mill-pounded polished rice is [not] dearer than hand-pounded, I know that there is a flaw in your statement. Hand-pounded rice is as much polished as mill-pounded polished rice. You have to test the thing for yourself. If you will take hand-pounded unpolished rice, it would be any day and everywhere cheaper than mill-polished rice when we compare the prices of unpolished mill-pounded rice and unpolished hand-pounded. But you will never have the mills to produce unpolished rice in large quantities. From the health standpoint, I have universal medical testimony that mill-pounded unpolished rice suffers in vitamin when compared with hand-pounded unpolished rice. To remove the outermost husk is a very simple and expeditious process. It is the polishing process by the hand which sends up the price of labour which I obliterate in my calculation because I do not want to go beyond the process of removing the outermost husk. Make the investigation for yourself and then give me the prices. You are not the only person who have committed the error if you have committed it. It is most natural because we have never investigated these processes nor have we ever troubled to know the distinction between polished and unpolished rice. Unpolished rice is a most beautiful grain. It is either yellow, red or dark white, never white like the polished rice. The red variety is the best, and sweet to taste, and cheaper withal. I opened out one grain from the paddy and showed to those around me the full unpolished grain. I had not seen it before. But in a heap of half-polished rice I saw a whole paddy grain. I immediately removed the husk with my finger nails. Out came the beautiful red grain from its husk. I would defy anyone to show that such unpolished rice is dearer than mill-polished rice. Test again for your satisfaction and then tell me if you still claim to be right in your supposition that polished rice is cheaper than hand-pounded unpolished rice.

Yours,
BAPU

SHRI HARIBHAU PHATAK
62 SADASHIV PETH
POONA CITY

From a photostat: G.N. 1374

117. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

January 17, 1935

MY DEAR SISTER,

I must dictate if I am to write to you at all today. You must not overwork yourself. You must give yourself proper rest and build up your body to the extent it is possible. As a confirmed believer in the natural mode of living, I think that we can rebuild shattered bodies by conforming to the laws of nature. Very often I have known persons who have succeeded in getting better where medical assistance has failed. This is no reflection on the doctor brother.

I hope you got copies of the A.I.V.I.A. constitution and have sent in your form to Kumarappa.

I would like the Raizada to convince me that it is proper for ourselves to prosecute poor Harijans for breach of the Sarda Act. In the mean time, I am certain, we must not undertake these prosecutions. Prosecutions must be preceded by educative propaganda.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 3519. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6328
MY DEAR CHILD.

I have your letter and the children’s. Tangai is a wise girl and so she has learnt to resign herself to the sorrows that come to her. The spirit of resignation is bad when sorrows come out of our conscious errors; but when they come for reasons we do not know and cannot know, resignation is the proper thing. In other words, constant endeavour and surrender to the will of God have to go hand in hand.

Your description of your visit to Porto Novo and Maria’s losing herself in her work is very good.

My feet won’t let me walk, because immediately I try, the crack reopens.

C. F. Andrews could not write to you as he had no time whatsoever. It was touch-and-go whether he would be able to catch the steamer he did.

Both A.I.S.A. and A.I.V.I.A. are absolutely non-political associations.

You must come to Wardha some day. Delhi is too far for you. What is Menon being paid for hospital work? We leave here, at the latest, on the 28th instant. We have been passing through a very severe spell of cold weather.

Love.

BAPU

MRS. ESTHER MENON

“THE VISION”

TANJORE (S. INDIA)

From a photostat. Courtesy: National Archives of India. Also My Dear Child, p. 110

1 Addressee’s daughter
2 Vide the following item.
119. LETTER TO TANGAI MENON

January 17, 1935

MY DEAR TANGAI,

You are a very brave girl cheerfully going through the illness you get from time to time. You must ask Daddy this question: ‘Why do I get these sores when you are yourself a doctor? You should find a way of helping me.’ I hope you are much better now.

Love and kisses.

BAPU

My Dear Child, p. 121

120. LETTER TO NAN MENON

January 17, 1935

MY DEAR NAN,

You have written a very good letter in good steady hand. You were quite right in wishing me a Happy [New] Year because you wrote your letter on the 27th December. But there is no use now in my returning the wish, for the New Year is well on its way.

You must tell me how you felt when you began your spinning on the new wheel. Do you know how to spin on the takli?

Love and kisses.

BAPU

My Dear Child, p. 121

121. WORKING COMMITTEE RESOLUTION

[On or before January 18, 1935]¹

Official announcement has been made that the Silver Jubilee of His Britannic Majesty’s reign is to be celebrated in India. It is necessary for the Working Committee to guide the public as to the attitude to be adopted on the occasion.

¹ The Working Committee of the Congress met on January 16 and 18, 1935, during which time Gandhiji had discussions with the Committee and also drafted this resolution in connection with the Silver Jubilee celebrations of the Coronation of King George V
The Congress has and can have nothing but good wishes for the personal well-being of His Majesty, but the Congress cannot ignore the fact that the rule in India with which His Majesty is naturally identified has been a positive hindrance to the political, moral and material growth of the nation. It now threatens to culminate in a Constitution which, if enforced, promises to exploit the Nation, to drain her of what she still possesses of wealth and to harden her political subjection as has perhaps never been attempted before.

It is, therefore, impossible for the Working Committee to advise any participation in the forthcoming celebrations. At the same time, the Working Committee has no desire by hostile demonstrations to wound the susceptibilities of Englishmen and others who will want to take part in the celebrations. The Working Committee therefore, advises the general public, including Congressmen who may be members of elected bodies, to be satisfied with mere abstention from the events that may be arranged for celebration.

The Working Committee trusts that the authorities and responsible Englishmen will recognize and appreciate the honest and inevitable attitude of the Working Committee and refrain from unnecessarily wounding national self-respect by compelling, directly or indirectly, participation in the forthcoming celebrations.

122. LETTER TO MURIEL LESTER

January 18, 1935

MY DEAR MURIEL,

You have been moving from place to place with such rapidity that I have not known where to send you my letters. Hence my silence.

I believe that I have received all the letters you have written — not more than four, not less than three. Of three I have a distinct recollection.

I have forwarded your cheque to Thakkar Bapa for Harijan funds.

I am dictating this letter in Delhi where I have come in order to pass a few days at the Harijan Home for which Shri Ghanshyamdas Birla has donated 20 acres of land costing Rs. 30,000. I am living on... that piece of ground. I expect to return to Wardha on the 28th instant, at the latest.

You see I have not yet gone to jail, and you can depend upon my not forcing the pace. My application for permission to go to the Frontier Province has been turned down. That, of course, is not the last word.

Even if you do not hear from me, you have to continue to write.

Love from us all.

BAPU

MISS MURIEL LESTER
LONDON

From a photostat: G.N. 6562

123. LETTER TO DUNICHand

DELIHI,
January 18, 1935

DEAR LALA DUNICHand,

I have your letter with the enclosure. I have glanced through it. It was unnecessary, in my opinion, to publish it. Dr. Satyapal needs no defence from you; and if he does, I think your letter has spoiled his case. Public workers have to possess the hide of a rhinoceros. They cannot afford to be sensitive to the extent of being thin-skinned. But I must confess to you that though I have not talked to more than two or three persons and that too when the talk became relevant, I have laid the blame of the Punjab defeats at Dr. Satyapal’s door. His inexhaustible energy, courage and suffering are undeniable. But he has a knack of often estranging good people from him. I intended to talk to him about it, but unfortunately he went to jail before I could do so. It is my opinion that if Dr. Satyapal had been wise and judicious, not one of the Punjab seats would have been lost.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

LALA DUNICHand, B.A.
KRIPA NVAS
AMBALA CITY

From a photostat: G.N. 5592
124. LETTER TO JAGDISH SHASTRI

January 19, 1935

BHAJ JAGDISH SHASTRI,

A list of the chapters of the essay on cow-protection is enclosed herewith. You can add to it, you may even change the order.

2. The position in the Vedic Age.
3. The position in the Age of the Smritis.
4. The position in the Age of the Epics.
5. The attitude of other religions.
6. Origin of dispute with the Muslims.
7. Is cow-protection an essential feature of Hinduism? If it is, then what does it signify? Does the tradition date back to the ancient times? Difference between the attitudes of the Arya Samajists and sanatanists and its critical appreciation.
8. The present position—census of goshalas. Difference between Jain pinjarapoles and Marwari goshalas and feasibility of cow-protection through them.

From a Copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

125. SPEECH AT SANSI BASTI, DELHI

January 19, 1935

I had promised to Thakkar Bapa that I would visit this Harijan Colony some time for half an hour. Today I have the opportunity to come here. It is deplorable that first Hindu society has sinned against these Sansi brethren, regarding them as untouchables and then the Government on its part has declared them a criminal tribe. It is a matter of shame for us Hindus that because of negligence on our part these people were left without work, and since they must make a living some of them adopted crime as a profession. But not every one of them is a criminal, nor can it be so. Nevertheless the whole community came to be called a criminal tribe. I would ask the Sansi brethren to eschew the evil that has crept into their midst due to our indifference. You should give up drink and gambling, and carrion too, if anyone takes it. You should also give up stealing, etc., so that you can be recommended for exemption from reporting at police stations. May God grant you the good sense to follow my advice.

[From Hindi]

Harijansevak, 25-1-1935
126. DISCUSSION WITH A DONOR

HARIJAN HOME, DELHI,

January 19, 1935

He was taken upstairs as soon as Gandhiji was free to see him. The neatly dressed old man placed before Gandhiji ten neatly arranged wads of currency notes and said: “This is for the poorest and the most deserving. You know them better than anyone else.”

[GANDHIJI:] That’s very good. But how many years’ savings does this mean?

Many years. But I sent a hundred for the earthquake and a hundred to Assam, and in Allahabad four years ago I gave Rs. 500 for the peasants.

Oh, then tell me what was your salary and what is your pension? And what were you?

I was a schoolmaster. When I retired after many years’ service, my salary was Rs. 52 a month. I get no pension, but I was given a gratuity of Rs. 2,700.

And how long ago did you retire?

Five years ago.

And how much do you spend on your own living?

Oh, my living! Hardly much.

But still one has to live. Tell me how much you need.

A little dal-roti does not cost much. I can do with Rs. 10 a month. I have no one to take care of. I used to have nephews whom I supported and educated, but now I am free. I have also a Sanskrit school to which I devote most of my time now. It is a free school.

So you saved a few thousands out of your small salary and have been devoting it to the service of the poor. A great thing. How I wish everyone could learn the art from you.

Yes, Mahatmaji, I have spent very little on myself and I have often been able to give away what I had to the poor.

Admiring his padded clothing, which did not need to be supplemented by shawls or blankets, Gandhiji asked: And where did you get this khadi?

It is home-made khadi.

You make me envy you.

“I have still some savings left, Mahatmaji,” said the old man, his face suffused

According to Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Notes”, from which this has been extracted, the discussion took place on the day on which Gandhiji spoke at Jamia Millia; vide the following item.
with the joy of giving. “I shall bring all that, some other time. I do not know where to give the money. I know you, and you know the poorest who deserve help. I am deeply thankful.”

_Harijan_, 1-2-1935

127. SPEECH AT JAMIA MILLIA, DELHI

January 19, 1935

I do not know whether, while you listened to the story unfolded by the Begum Saheba, you were, like me, drawing a comparison between the history of Turkey and India. I could not fail to draw many a parallel between the two stories. No birth comes without agony, and as I listened to the story, not yet finished by the speaker, and not yet finished in action, I found that all is in the melting pot, all is transitory in this transitory world. One could not say what would be the end of the world in which Turkey and India were but insignificant spots. But it is best to know that what matters to India and to everybody is his or her own individual action. For we must know that true history is not the history of kings and dynasties, but of individual men and women in general. Some who died in utter neglect and misery were great heroes and heroines, not great kings, however big the empires they had founded and whatever the destruction they wrought on the face of the earth.¹ The history of man and woman is still in the making. What are a thousand or even a million years in the limitless cycle of time? They are but a speck, and as I listened to the story of Turkey, I derived hope that, if we modelled our action according to the Right and nothing but the Right, there would be nothing but a bright future for us all.

There is an indissoluble tie that binds India to Turkey, not because we have suffered alike, but because Turkey has a Muslim population which has so much in common with India because of her millions of Muslims, who are flesh of our flesh and blood of our blood and bone of our bone. May Begum Saheba’s coming in our ¹ Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Notes”. Gandhiji presided over the lectures delivered by Halid Edib Adivar on January 18 and 19, 1935.

² From _Gandhijini Dinwari_

³ _The Hindustan Times_, 20-1-1935 reports Gandhiji as having said: “Those who die in utter distress and suffering are the real heroes and heroines and not the monarchs and kings, however high their empires might be.”
midst result in binding Hindus and Muslims in an indissoluble bond.

_Harijan_, 1-2-1935

128. LETTER TO ANAND SWARUP GUPTA

DELHI,

_January 20, 1935_

BHAI ANAND SWARUP

Do come, except on Monday. You will be shown the new way of plying the _takli_. I shall give you a few minutes if possible. It takes half an hour to teach the new way to those who bring their own _takli_. Afterwards it is only a matter of practice. You can come on or before the 27th.

M. K. _GANDHI_

SHRI ANAND SWARUP

VAISHYA SCHOOL

MEERUT, U. P.

From a photostat of the Hindi: C.W. 9744. Courtesy: Anand Swarup Gupta

129. DISCUSSION WITH EDITH HOWE-MARTYN

[Before January 21, 1935]

She talked of her experience of the British slums and put in a strong plea for the “poor woman” who had to submit to the strong man.

[GANDHI: ] There is no _poor_ woman. Poor woman is mightier than man, and I am quite prepared to demonstrate it to you if you come to the villages of India. Any woman there would tell you that, if she did not want it, there was no man born of woman who could compel her. I can say this from my own experience in relation to my wife, and mine is no solitary instance. If the will to die rather than to yield is there, no monster can make the woman yield. No, it is a mutual affair. Men and women both are a mixture of the brute and the divine, and if we can subdue the brute, it is well and good.

But what is the woman to do, if the man for the sake of not having more children goes to another woman?

So now you are shifting your own ground. If you misconceive

---

1. Assistant Director, Purana Department, Ramnagar, Varanasi
your premises, you are bound to come to wrong conclusions. Don’t assume things and try to unman man and unwoman woman. Let me understand the basis of your gospel. When I said your birth-control propaganda was sufficient introduction, there was some seriousness behind the joke, for I know that there are some men and women who think that in birth control lies our salvation. Let me, therefore, understand the basis from you.

I do not see in it the salvation of the world, but what I say is that without some form of birth-control there is no salvation. You would do it in one way, I would do it in another. I advocate your method as well, but not in all cases. You seem to regard a beautiful function as something objectionable. Two animals are nearest to the divine when they are going to create new life. There is something very beautiful in the act.

Here again you are labouring under a confusion. The creation of a new life is nearest the divine, I agree. All I want is that one should approach that act in a divine way. That is to say, man and woman must come together with no other desire than that of creating a new life. But if they come together merely to have a fond embrace, they are nearest the devil. Man unfortunately forgets that he is nearest the divine, hankers after the brute instinct in himself and becomes less than the brute.

But why must you cast aspersion on the brute?

I do not. The brute fulfils the law of his own nature. The lion in his majesty is a noble creature and he has a perfect right to eat me up, but I have none to develop paws and pounce upon you. Then I lower myself and become worse than the brute.

I am sorry. I have expressed myself very badly. I confess that in a majority of cases it is not going to be their salvation, but a factor which will conduce to higher life. You understand what I mean, though I am afraid I have not been able to make myself quite clear.

Oh, no. I do not want to take any undue advantage of you. But I want you to understand my viewpoint. Do not run away with misconceptions. Man must choose either of the two courses, the upward or the downward, but as he has the brute in him, he will more easily choose the downward course than the upward, especially when the downward course is presented to him in a beautiful garb. Man easily capitulates when sin is presented in the garb of virtue, and that is what Marie Stopes¹ and others are doing. If I were to popularize the religion of indulgence, I know that men would simply clutch at it. I know that, if people like you in selfless zeal cried themselves hoarse upholding your doctrine, you might even ride to apparent victory, but I also know that you will ride to certain death, of course totally unconscious of the mischief you are doing. The downward instinct requires no advocacy, no argument. It is there embodied in them, and unless you regulate and control it, there is danger of disease and pestilence.

¹ English advocate of birth-control; author of Contraception: Its Theory, History and Practice and various other works on sex and marriage

Mrs. Howe-Martyn, who until now seemed to accept the distinction between the divine and the devilish, contended that there was really none and that they were much more allied than people imagined.

So you think the devil and the divine are the same? Do you believe in the sun? And if you do, don’t you think you must believe in the shadow?

Why should you call ‘shadow’ devil?

You may call it ‘no-God’, if you like.

I do not think there is no-God in the shadow. There is life everywhere.

There is a thing like absence of life. Do you know that Hindus will reduce the body of the dearest one to ashes as soon as life in it is extinct? There is an essential unity in all life, but there is diversity, too, and one has to penetrate it and find the unity behind—but not by intellect, as you are trying to do. Where there is truth, there must be untruth; where there is light, there must be shadow. You cannot realize the wider consciousness, unless you subordinate completely reason and intellect, and the body, too.

Mrs. Howe-Martyn looked puzzled, and time was fast running against her. But Gandhiji said:

No. I am prepared to give you more time. But for that you must come to Wardha and stay with me. I am as great an enthusiast as you, and you must not leave India until you have converted me or converted yourself.

Harijan, 1-2-1935
130. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

HARIJAN HOME, DELHI,
January 21, 1935

DEAR SISTER,

I have sent in your application to Kumarappa. You shall be your own judge as to the enforcement of rules 9 and 10 in your own person. What I expect you to do is not a visit to every village in your district, but acquisition of a right knowledge of the villagers’ wants and organization of the effort to meet them. For this you are fully fitted in spite of your dilapidated body of which we must talk when we meet.

I leave on 28th which is my silence day. Come if you easily can between 26 and 27

The cold spell has meant more than the loss of a crore of rupees for the starving millions.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 3520. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur

131. LETTER TO RAJENDRA PRASAD

January 21, 1935

I see no harm in going. I think you should discuss everything but making it clear that you have no mandate. You could only convey the purport of the conversations to the Committee and its decision. It should be strictly understood that though you would meet as representatives, the talks must be regarded as informal till they reach the stage of some concrete proposal to be discussed by the respective committees. At the end of the conversations the agreed

---

1 Framed under bye-law 10 of the All-India Village Industries Association; Vide Bye-Laws of the All-India Village Industries Association, 20-12-1934
2 As Congress President the addressee was to negotiate with M. A. Jinnah, President of the All-India Muslim League, “for an agreed settlement between the communities which could replace the so-called Communal Award”. The talks started on January 23 and continued with a short break up to March 1, but without any tangible result.
3 Congress Working Committee purport should be reduced to writing and no report should be given to the Press of the conversation.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

132. LETTER TO SHUAIB QURESHI

January 21, 1935

Give my kind regards to the Nawab Saheb and tell him that I am still paying the penalty of having said that when I found you in your surroundings I was reminded of the great Omar.

There is talk of communal peace, but I fear there is no time yet. It can come only out of a heart unity and we must wait for it. No patched-up peace can last.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

133. LETTER TO KHALIQ

January 21, 1935

There seems to be nothing in the coming interview between Jinnah and Rajenbabu. Let us have real unity, even if we have to wait. In the Assembly much will depend upon the correct behaviour of Congressmen on every occasion.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

134. A LETTER

AS AT WARDHA,
January 21, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I need not repeat what I have said in my letter to Shri Ranganayaki Ammal.

I hope that you have completely recovered.

Delhi cold does not worry me. Only a chilblain crack prevents me from having my daily walks which I miss.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From the original. Ambujammal Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

1 It is not clear whether any portion of the letter has been left out here.

2 Vide “Letter to Rajendra Prasad”, 21-1-1935
135. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

January 21, 1935

CHI. AMBUJAM1,

Your letter to hand.

I think that the parental affection was there all the while. Only you were not ready to want or receive it. Anyway now that you feel the warmth of it, you should never let it cool down. The best way is not to resist them. Resistance may become a duty when obedience has been implicitly volunteered and cheerfully rendered in a systematic manner. Knowing as I do both Father and Mother I cannot imagine any occasion when you might have to cross their path. Their one concern is to see you and help you to be happy.

I tried to sound Ba. She does not like the idea of leaving me just now even for a few days. But I shall tempt her again, though I do not expect success. You may write to her.

Vasumati can come when you are quite ready.

The name of the ashram may be Sevashramam or Sevikashramam. You know the distinction.

I think you should not worry about your husband. Think of him purely as a friend. Let Father and Mother do what they think is proper. When you know that you can render no help, where is the use of worrying? If you were of any service in bringing him to his senses, it would be your primary duty to look after him and set aside every other task. But I have understood that this is not possible. Hence my advice to you to forget him altogether and devote your whole energy to such service as it is possible for you to render. You should learn to derive joy from service. Universal selfless service absolves one from special service. For the greater includes the less. Of course one has to be careful to see that there is no selfishness behind universal service. It must be self-evident. These are my views. But I advise you to discuss this matter freely with Father and Mother and be guided by them.

You must get rid of constipation. It generally means more proteid than necessary. You may therefore omit dhall and then if necessary reduce the quantity of milk or curds. What bhaji are you taking? Palak or luni is excellent. Even tender cabbage leaf may serve the purpose.

1 This is in Hindi.

Love

BAPU

[PS.]

You may now send your letters to Wardha which I hope to reach on 29th.

[PPS.]

You should meet Kakasaheb who can give much help about the ashram.

From the original. Ambujammal Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

136. LETTER TO MRS. SRINIVASA IYENGAR

AS AT WARDHA,

January 21, 1935

DEAR SISTER,

I was delighted to have your letter and to find that Ambujam was giving you both satisfaction and that you were interesting yourselves in her mission of service. If she settles down to it, I am sure her moroseness will go and she will have an ennobling occupation.

Please dismiss from your mind the thought that Ambujam can ever be a burden on my mind. It is a matter of deep joy to me that I enjoy your confidence and her affection. I draw no distinction between such personal service and public service.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From the original. Ambujammal Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library
137. LETTER TO G. V. MAVALANKAR

January 21, 1935

BHAI MAVALANKAR,

I have your letter and the papers pertaining to the Vidyapith’s books. I cannot swallow your opinion. But I regard my opinion as of no worth.

Do invite Sardar to join both the organizations. I shall also speak about it tomorrow, if, that is, I don’t forget. Do as you think proper about the finances. On my part I have relieved myself of the worry after I had your letter. By all means do pay from the Gujarat Sabha’s funds to compensate for the loss caused by frost. If you still need my sanction, send me a draft.

Blessings from

BAPU

138. LETTER TO PADMA

January 21, 1935

CHI. PADMA¹,

I have your letter after many days. You never acknowledge mine. The itch is a disease contracted through carelessness and unhygienic habits. How did you get it and how could it become aggravated in this season?

I have not seen any of Father’s articles. He had sent me [some] many months ago. So much frost has since accumulated.

You have not given an account of your activities. Does Father do anything besides writing articles?

We shall leave Delhi on the 28th.

Blessings from

BAPU

¹ Daughter of Sitla Sahai, an ashram inmate from U. P. and an active worker of the All-India Spinners’ Association

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1242

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6150. Also C.W. 3506. Courtesy: Prabhudas Gandhi*
139. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

January 21, 1935

CHI. VASUMATI,

I have your letter. You can certainly stay with Gangabehn. I should like it if you settled there. Yes, your visit to Madras is still to come off. Ambujam’s Ashram is ready. She expects you there. Go to Bochasen when you return from there. You may like to go to Madras via Wardha. I expect to reach Wardha on the 29th.

How did Gangabehn’s finger come to have abscess?

I hope Ramniklal¹ has recovered his strength. Let him write to me when he feels impelled. How is Tara²?

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

I just got word about the arrival of the parcel of ink. I shall write about it after examining it.

SMT. VASUMATIBEHN
HARIJAN ASHRAM
SABARMATI

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9391. Also C.W. 636. Courtesy: Vasumati Pandit

140. LETTER TO JETHALAL G. SAMPAT

January 21, 1935

CHI. JETHALAL,

I disposed of your letter soon. We are bound to have such experiences. When you are all right, write to me from time to time about the developments. For the present at any rate let us not take the matter to the Press. I have suggested to Jamnalalji to solve the question at a domestic level. Let me know if anything has happened since then. Keep Jamnalalji also informed about it. Even if the police do not give us the number, we may answer them as often as they may ask us. In my first year while I was travelling by a train from Delhi to Madras,

¹ Ramniklal Modi, an ashram inmate
² Wife of Ramniklal Modi
they came to question me seven or eight times. Since I looked like a fakir, there was no question of their enquiring about my name, although they would persistently ask for my ticket number. When I reached Madras their vehicle would invariably follow mine. Others used to be annoyed; I was only amused. The law says that people are in duty bound to give their name, address, etc., to the police as often as they might ask for them. When we are fighting we may do anything that the rules permit.

How is your work going on otherwise? Have you done anything regarding [village] industries?

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

[PS.]
I am writing this from Delhi. Reply to Wardha.

From Gujarati: C.W. 9848. Courtesy: Narayan J. Sampat

141. INTERVIEW TO UNITED PRESS

January 21, 1935

QUESTION: When do you think you will be able to give an actual start to the work of the Village Industries Association?

GANDHIJI: It is difficult to say what is meant by start. But if by it is meant actual work through different agencies in villages, I am unable to fix the exact date, because we are moving very cautiously—cautiously in the sense that we do not want to make any mistakes so long as it is possible to avoid them—because of the varied nature of the work to be done. This work is like sailing on an uncharted sea.

The Central Board is meeting in Wardha on the 1st of the next month, when perhaps a definite step will be taken. Meanwhile, not a moment has been lost. We have been collecting valuable information, and we are having promises of support from many quarters.

Q. Do you intend to start branches of the Association in all the provinces simultaneously, or do you intend to make a beginning in a few selected places? Which will be the headquarters of the Association? Will a branch be established here before you leave?

G. We aim at having no branches, but agencies all over India, the ideal being to have as many agents as there are villages, so as to ensure perfect distribution of work. The secret of success of this effort lies in decentralization. I do not know if an agency will be formally established in Delhi before I leave. But I am collecting all the information that is available. The final appointment will be made by the Central Board. The headquarters are in Wardha, where Seth Jamnalalji has given a valuable garden with a large bungalow in it, and he has promised more land, if it is required for subsequent arrangements.

1 The report of the interview was revised by Gandhiji.

Q. Is the Association likely to depend on its unaided strength for all information, statistical or otherwise, in respect of the dead or dying industries you seek to revive, or will it invite the co-operation of all official and non-official agencies operating in India at present?

G. The Association will do nothing unaided, so vast is the work to be done. Therefore it will invite and receive co-operation of all agencies, not excluding the official agencies.

Q. Will the Association seek to revive only those industries whose revival is not reasonably calculated to come in conflict with the various world economic and commercial forces now acting and reacting on India; or will the Association try to revive the dead industries irrespective of such considerations and merely because in their ancient flourishing condition they used to give food to millions of villages?

G. The Association will certainly seek to revive and encourage as many industries as are necessary for the moral and material growth of village life. It will not be deterred by the so called conflicting world forces.

Q. It is generally agreed that the cotton mills of India have not taken very kindly to the khadi industry. If the Association attempts to resuscitate those dead, dying or unorganized industries which are likely to clash with the interests of more organized, indigenous industries, is it not your apprehension that the Association will meet with opposition?

G. It is likely that the Association will meet with opposition from mechanized industries, such as sugar mills, rice-mills and flour mills. It is for us to find a way out of the difficulty. I have every hope that we shall be able to overcome these difficulties.

Q. Take, for instance, the question of sugar versus gur. Sugar is a protected industry and is now fairly well-organized. It was stated in the Press some time ago that the Association will try to increase the consumption of gur. If it is true, do you not think that by doing so it will evoke the opposition of the sugar industry?

G. That may be so. If the consumption of gur increases and the consumption of sugar decreases, it would be a blessing for India, because medical testimony goes to show that gur is superior to sugar in nutritive value; and it is the business of the Association, as also of the public, to see to it that no mechanized industry is allowed to interfere with the health of the people.

Q. May I have your views on whether or not the Association should supplement the existing large-scale industries, without antagonizing them?

G. The answer to it has already been given.

Q. Am I wrong in suggesting that, from the resuscitation of dead village industries, such as you contemplate, to the industrialization of India on human, rational and intelligent lines (as opposed to greedy capitalism), it is but a step?

G. I do not know if a vast country like India, with her millions of people having four months of enforced idleness on their hand, can afford to have large-scale industries and yet live a life of tolerable comfort. . . . Large-scale, centralized industries in India, except such industries as cannot be possibly carried on in villages, must mean starvation of millions, unless honourable employment is found for the displaced millions.

Q. If what the Press says about the Government circulars\(^1\) forestalling the activities of the Village Industries Association is true, do you think there is any chance of the Association coming in conflict with the Government?

G. There is no possibility of the Association coming in conflict with Government, because the ideal that the Association has set before it appears to me to be different from that of the Government effort if I have understood it rightly, except, perhaps, in the matter of sanitation. We should certainly not take up the work of sanitation in villages where the Government agencies might be doing it.

There is no idea whatsoever to supplant the Government agency. It may be to supplement the work.

Q. I suppose you have read the Government circular.

G. Yes.

Q. You must have noticed that the Government suspect that through this Association you will have greater opportunities of coming in closer contact with the villages, which you will utilize to prepare for organizing civil disobedience on a far more gigantic scale.

G. It never crossed my mind; I have never worked it in that indirect fashion. It would defeat the very end that I have in view. I want the material and moral growth of the villages for itself, and if it is achieved, it would be a full satisfaction of my ambition.

\(^1\) Vide “Interview to the Press”, 10-1-1935
Similarly, if ever I should have to organize civil disobedience, it would be organized independently of any other activity. If full effect is given to the word “civil”, all this suspicion should be dispelled. But I have patience enough, and I am convinced that, if what I have said is true, all the suspicion will be dispelled without any further effort on my part.

Q. I. would ask another question. You said that you could show a miracle if Government understood the spirit of your village industries scheme and lent its help to you. What do you mean by help? Is it financial assistance?

G. I simply say that, if Government understand the secret of my methods and give me complete co-operation in the work I am doing, I undertake to show miracles. I do not want financial co-operation. I want moral, enthusiastic endorsement from Government.

The Hindustan Times, 22-1-1935, and Harijan, 8-2-1935

142. LETTER TO R.¹

January 22, 1935

CHI. R.,

Panditji² writes to me that you have exceeded all limits. You have been incurring debts in spite of your good income and you also steal. You behave as it pleases your own sweet will. If all this is true, it is painful. You would remember what I had told you in Bombay. You had taken a pledge before me not to practise deceit—do you remember?

Panditji is likely to reach there in a day or two. Wake up from your swoon and see that you do not tarnish Panditji’s reputation and that of the Ashram. Remember your promises. Satisfy Panditji.

Write to me in detail. Wrongdoing is not as great a sin as trying to hide it. We all sin but one who confesses and wipes it away is sure to be blessed. It is enough if one undoes the wrong that one might have committed.

[From Gujarati]

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

¹ The name has been omitted.
² The addressee’s father
I have been asked by Sir S. Radhakrishnan to answer the following three questions:

(1) What is your religion?
(2) How are you led to it?
(3) What is its bearing on social life?

My religion is Hinduism which, for me, is religion of humanity and includes the best of all the religions known to me.

I take it that the present tense in the second question has been purposely used instead of the past. I am being led to my religion through Truth and Non-violence, i.e., love in the broadest sense. I often describe my religion as religion of Truth. Of late, instead of saying God is Truth I have been saying Truth is God, in order more fully to define my religion. I used at one time to know by heart the thousand names of God which a booklet in Hinduism gives in verse form and which perhaps tens of thousands recite every morning. But nowadays nothing so completely describes my God as Truth. Denial of God we have known. Denial of Truth we have not known. The most ignorant among mankind have some truth in them. We are all sparks of Truth. The sum total of these sparks is indescribable, as-yet-Unknown Truth, which is God. I am being daily led nearer to it by constant prayer.

The bearing of this religion on social life is, or has to be, seen in one’s daily social contact. To be true to such religion one has to lose oneself in continuous and continuing service of all life. Realization of Truth is impossible without a complete merging of oneself in and identification with this limitless ocean of life. Hence, for me, there is no escape from social service; there is no happiness on earth beyond or apart from it. Social service here must be taken to include every department of life. In this scheme there is nothing low, nothing high. For all is one, though we seem to be many.

Contemporary Indian Philosophy, p. 21

1 The questions and answers have also been reproduced in F. Mary Barr’s Bapu, International Book House, Bombay, 1949, with slight variations.
2 According to Mary Barr Radhakrishnan’s questions came at the time when Gandhiji was about to set out on a village tour from Delhi where he was camping. This Gandhiji did on January 23, 1935.
3 Mary Barr’s version does not include this sentence and the one preceding.
4 “Are” in Mary Barr’s version
5 Mary Barr has “may seem”.

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
144. LETTER TO KANTI GANDHI

January 23, 1935

CHI. KANTI,

I got your letter yesterday evening. Devdas had told me nothing earlier. Yesterday I asked him about it and learnt that he had told me nothing because he had wished to spare me. He had spoken to Mahadev yesterday morning. I have passed on your letter to Devdas so that he can study it in the context of your earlier letters and guide me accordingly. Since Mahadev had come to know everything before I did he will read this. He has not read your letter received yesterday. Have no fears about your letters. No one will read anything surreptitiously without my permission. Nor have I around me anyone who would do such a thing. But I do wish you would learn to shed this reserve soon. This reserve is an obstruction to your progress. But then I would of course not insist on it.

The alliance you contemplate is not a great shock to me. I shall surely not be shocked if you choose your partner from Kerala. I have only to examine the reason for your choice. We have to think whether you can do anything staying in Ramachandran’s house. It is not proper to decide this question or your future programme on the basis of your letter. It no doubt involves some expense but I wish you to come to Wardha and see me. I shall arrive there on the 29th evening. It will do if you come on the morning of the same day. This letter will reach you only on Saturday morning, not leaving you much time. You have no reason to be uneasy. I am not likely to forsake you. I trust you. You have found the noble company of Maganbhai, Kaka, etc. You have respect for Devdas. You yearn for my blessings. All will surely be well with you. I am writing this before the prayers.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 7292 Courtesy: Kantilal Gandhi

---

1 This is followed by the instructions: “No one but Mahadev may read this. Kaka may.”
145. LETTER TO VITHAL L. PHADKE

January 23, 1935

Bhai Mama,

Shouln’t we say that you are but a luckless fellow? I had your letters all right and I had also replied to them. The answer to your first is Congress; the second I had asked Mahadev to answer. As I am short of time and so that you may have it promptly here is my answer to your third. Your treatment should consist of water-cure, hip-bath, sitz-bath; but in your diet you should have milk, uncooked vegetables and wheat. The sun-bath should be had with full exposure of the body. And rest. Your health must improve. How is Saheb? I discontinued my [daily] walks because I developed cracks on the skin of my feet owing to the cold and partly also owing to carelessness on my part. I am better now and the cold too had abated.

. . . I will stay on in Madras for some time now.

Blessings from

Bapu

Sjt. Mamasahib
[C/o] Sjt. Deshpandesahib
At The Barrister’s, Shankar Tekdi, Baroda

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3828

146. HOW TO BEGIN?

Correspondents have been writing, and friends have been seeing me, to ask me how to begin the village industries work and what to do first.

The obvious answer is, “Begin with yourself and do first that which is easiest for you to do.”

This answer, however, does not satisfy the enquirers. Let me, therefore, be more explicit.

Each person can examine all the articles of food, clothing and other things that he uses from day to day and replace foreign makes or city makes by those produced by the villagers in their homes or

The source is illegible here, but presumably it was “Kaka.”; vide “Letter to Narahari D. Parikh”, 26-1-1935 fields with the simple inexpensive tools they can easily handle and mend. This replacement will be itself an education of great value and a solid beginning. The next step will be opened out to him of itself. For instance, say, the beginner has been hitherto using a tooth-brush made in a Bombay factory. He wants to replace it with a village brush.

He is advised to use a babul twig. If he has weak teeth or is toothless, he has to crush one end of it, with a rounded stone or a hammer, on a hard surface. The other end he slits with a knife and uses the halves as tongue-scrappers. He will find these brushes to be cheaper and much cleaner than the very unhygienic factory-made tooth-brush. The city-made tooth-powder he naturally replaces with equal parts of clean, finely-ground wood-charcoal and clean salt. He will replace mill cloth with village spun khadi, and mill-husked rice with hand husked, unpolished rice, and white sugar with village-made gur. These I have taken merely as samples already mentioned in these columns. I have mentioned them again to deal with the difficulties that have been mentioned by those who have been discussing the question with me. Some say, with reference to rice for instance, ‘Hand-husked rice is much dearer than mill husked rice.’ Others say, ‘The art of hand-husking is forgotten, and there are no huskers to be found.’ Yet others say, ‘We never get mill-husked rice in our parts. We can supply hand-husked rice at 19 seers to the rupee.’ All these are right and all are wrong. They are right so far as their own experience in their own district is concerned. All are wrong because the real truth is unknown to them. I am daily gathering startling experiences. All this comes from beginning with oneself. The following is the result of my observations to date.

Whole unpolished rice is unprocurable in the bazaars. It is beautiful to look at and rich and sweet to the taste. Mills can never compete with this unpolished rice. It is husked in a simple manner. Most of the paddy can be husked in a light chakki without difficulty. There are some varieties the husk of which is not separated by grinding. The best way of treating such paddy is to boil it first and then separate the chaff from the grain. This rice, it is said, is most nutritious and, naturally, the cheapest. In the villages, if they husk their own paddy, it must always be cheaper for the peasants than the corresponding mill-husked rice, whether polished or unpolished. The majority of rice found ordinarily in the bazaars is always more or less polished, whether hand-husked or mill-husked. Wholly unpolished rice is always hand-husked and is every time cheaper than the mill-husked rice, the variety being the same.

Subject to further research, the observations so far show that it is because of our criminal negligence that rice-eating millions eat deteriorated rice and pay a heavy price into the bargain. Let the village worker test the truth of these observations for himself. It won’t be a bad beginning.

Next week I must take up gur and other articles of diet and another part of village work.

_Harijan_, 25-1-1935

147. HIS ECONOMIC FAITH

Professor Sam Higginbottom, Director of the Agricultural Institute, Allahabad, and a member of the Board of Advisers of the All-India Village Industries Association, writes in the course of a letter:

I enunciate my economic faith which is at the base of all my economic and spiritual efforts for India.

The two primary factors of production are land and labour. These are united or married, and the offspring is all material things needful and desirable for man’s physical well-being. We call it ‘capital’.

Capital is the offspring of the union of land and labour. India has land and labour in great abundance. Both need wise use and guidance to be most beneficial to India. This they have lacked very largely up to the present. Hence I stress the training of village workers who will not waste all their time complaining of what they do not have, and, therefore, get discouraged and beaten at the start; but workers who will take the village as it is, with all its resources or lack of them, and, by making better use of the existing resources and the potential resources that are within the present financial grasp of the villager, create, with the land and their labour, the capital within the village suited to the village needs. This is a long, slow, educative process that means hard work, but certain success. . . .

The details of the programme will include proper use of all village wastes for soil enrichment; the prevention of erosion; the right system of rotation of crops; the selection of better seed, methods and implements; cattle improvement through selective breeding and proper feeding; co-operation for purchasing and marketing of village products, for road improvement;

---

1 Only extracts are reproduced here.
development of existing village industries that process village products and, wherever necessary, the introduction of new village industries to round out the village life.

There is a great deal in this with which every lover of the movement for the restoration of village life to its proper status must heartily agree.

Harijan, 25-1-1935

148. NOTES

ANOTHER HARIJAN-SEVAK GONE

Acharya Gidwani was a staunch Harijan-sevak. He was deeply interested in Harijan work. He was bringing up a Harijan girl as a member of his own family. With him there was none low none high. Love of Harijan service was an integral part of his nature. I had known him fight for Harijans when he first came to me. He never hesitated whenever the call to service came. Such servants of humanity never die. They live through their service. The deceased leaves a brave widow and a large family. I tender them my respectful sympathy.

CREDIT v. CASH

The question repeatedly arises in the management of the numerous khadi bhandars of the All India Spinners’ Association whether khadi should be sold on credit. For years past I have held the opinion that it is a wrong principle to have credit sales in businesses conducted on purely philanthropic lines. Such philanthropic management should be able to teach the public that credit sales mean an advance upon the prices that would be asked for cash sales. Only such sales can become an index of public patronage of a business run on philanthropic lines. I have found in the end that, whilst there may be some heart-burning in the beginning, there is a decided advantage. Philanthropy has to be detached from immediate results. It has got to work on simple, unchallengeable faith. I would, therefore, strongly advise all managers of stalls under the All-India Spinners’ Association and allied organizations, and the All-India Village Industries Association, which will be presently at work, to adhere to the principle of cash sales, and elimination of credit altogether.

Harijan, 25-1-1935
DEAREST SISTER,

Prof. Malkani just brings me the news of your loss. I know that death has no terror for you. You regard it as a firm friend. I do not therefore send you any condolences. But if you are in need of a companion at this moment, then you know that you are to count me as one among many who would be silently sharing with you whatever it may be called—grief, separation, loss, etc. I do not come to pay a ceremonial visit. Prof. Malkani takes this note and being a valued worker represents me.

Love.

M. K. GANDHI

BEGUM SAHEB HALIDE EDIB
DARYAGANJ

From a photostat: G.N. 911

DEAR KUMARAPPA,

You know that I am bringing w[ith] me a large party. Ba, Mirabehn, Mahadev, Manu, Devraj, Balwantsingh (new), Rajkishori (new), possibly one or two more. We must see how the thing is to be managed. My account must not be mixed up with the Industries Association. It will have to be a separate department so far as the expenses are concerned.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 10107
151. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

January 26, 1935

CHI. JAMNALAL,

I have your letter. Khan Saheb is here today. I read out your telegram to him. You must have received the long telegram of blessings which he sent after reading it. You appear to be specializing in arranging marriages. This marriage will be remembered as a historical event. Poor Sophia could never have thought that she would marry a Pathan. Nor could Saadulla have imagined that he would marry a Khoja girl. I like your selection very much. Both will be happy and Sophia will be able to do public work as much as she wishes. All of us will reach Wardha on Tuesday. There will be no new face in our party. A nice girl engaged to Chand Tyagi’s Balbir is with us. Both Marys will get down at Betul.

It seems that Sardar, Rajaji and Rajenbabu will have to stay on till February 8. The discussion on the Bill will be over by then.

Kamalnayan has become impatient to go to Ceylon but he should wait for some time.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2952

152. LETTER TO NARAHARI D. PARIKH

January 26, 1935

CHI. NARAHARI,

I have not been able to reply to your letters. It would do if Shankerlal collects the sum due from Ambalalbhai under dairy account. Examine carefully how much the dues amount to and let me know the figure too.

You may if you wish start a tannery. Would you like to take on an expert Chamar? I shall see if I can persuade Surendra to take the training. Obtain the Trustees’ sanction for the double loss sustained by the dairy.

It would be worth while to have the Trust-deed executed.

I expect to reach Wardha on the 29th.

Kaka¹ is still in Madras and will stay on for two months if not more.

Blessings from

BAPU

¹ D. B. Kalelkar

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9068
153. LETTER TO VALJI G. DESAI

January 26, 1935

CHI. VALJI,

I have your letter. Why this distress over your resignation? If we cannot cope with a thing and have to leave it as a matter of dharma, should we be happy or unhappy about it?

Didn’t this idea of willingly leaving office come from you? You may, if you wish, continue to hold the office of secretary, such as it is, for the present. Leave it if you feel it is your dharma to do so. I shall not take any steps till your reply comes.

Chitre is still with me and I have a wish to take him to Wardha. His cough persists. He had a temperature too which has since returned to normal. I got your article.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

What you write about Jagadish Shastri is not what happened. I had respected your opinion.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 7469. Courtesy: Valji G. Desai

154. ACHARYA GIDWANI MEMORIAL

Acharya Gidwani’s death has left a void among good workers in the Harijan cause. It is not one which can be easily filled. Acharya Gidwani made no distinction whatever between high and low. He never believed in exclusiveness as between Harijans and non-Harijans. He was a born worker. For the last few years, he had a Harijan girl in his house brought up as his own daughter.

This is not the occasion to describe his other services. His capacity for renunciation was very great. He was the first Principal of the Gujarat Vidyapith. He had the knack of stealing the hearts of his students. In order to perpetuate his sacred memory, the Gidwani Memorial Fund is being instituted under the chairmanship of Shri Parshottamil Majmudar. Shrimati Indumati Chimanlal, Shri Vadilal Lallubhai Mehta and Shri Jethalal Jivanlal Gandhi are its secretaries. It is my hope that one and all will help to raise a good sum. The fund which was collected when Acharya Gidwani left Gujarat, was used for the service of Harijans. I hope it will be the same again. I think no other use of the amount would give his soul the same satisfaction.

---

1 Vide “Letter to Narandas Gandhi”, 27-1-1935

Contributions should be sent to Harijan Ashram, Sabarmati or Congress House, Bhadra, Ahmedabad, or Navajivan Karyalaya, Gandhi Road, Ahmedabad.

[From Gujarati]
Haridanbandhu, 27-1-1935

155. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ
January 27, 1935

CHI. JAMNALAL,

I have your letter. Why is your ear not behaving? What reason does the doctor give? Do you need a change to a dry climate? Are you regular in your food and exercise and rest? Write in detail to me at Wardha. It does not matter if you can not go to Wardha for the present. We shall make do with correspondence.

Vallabhbhai, Raja, etc., will have to stay on here for the time being. Your two meetings will therefore stand postponed. Send for Shankerlal and dispose of the important matters pertaining to the Charkha Sangh.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2953

156. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT
January 27, 1935

CHI. VASUMATI,

You will not give me your programme and then throw the responsibility on me. I had sent a reply to your letter at Bochasan all right. For the present you have to go to Madras. After that you can join Gangabehn at your pleasure. You should go to Madras via Wardha.

I am writing to Chandubhai about the ink.
Write to me in detail about your experiences.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]
We shall reach Wardha on Tuesday.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9393. Also C.W. 638. Courtesy: Vasumati Pandit

VOL.66:16 DECEMBER, 1934-24 APRIL, 1935 121
157. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

DELHI,
January 27, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,
I have your letter. Read the accompanying letter and give it to Keshu. This match seems good to me if you all approve it. Whatever the final decision, inform me at Wardha immediately.

Let me know what changes you noticed in this year’s budget for the dairy.

Valji has sent in his resignation as Secretary because he doesn’t have the necessary knowledge for looking after the dairy and the tannery and is not inclined to take the trouble to acquire it.

Kanu is happy here. Panditji is here just now and Kanu is even learning a little music with his help and English with Marybehn’s help. Since his needs are few and simple, he gets along all right.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8428. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

158. SPEECH AT M.L.A.S’ MEETING, DELHI:

January 27, 1935

Facing the mild afternoon sun, Mahatma Gandhi referred to the twin legislations sought to be promoted in the last Assembly, and said:

As regards the Temple-entry Bill, this need not be pursued at the present moment, because obviously public opinion must be sufficiently cultivated in its favour. The Harijan workers are doing this, the mass mind of the Hindu is passively in favour of it. Yet the intelligentsia among sanatanists, especially the pundits are still against it.

In a matter of this kind, they could not force the pace by a majority of votes alone. Those interested in the subject might meanwhile make a special study of the subject.

As for the Removal of Untouchability Bill, Mahatma Gandhi advised, this could be pursued to the end. It concerned the civic rights of the Harijans and so could be taken by all legislators, whether Hindus, Mussalmans or others. Even if the whole body of Hindu opinion were to be against the removal of untouchability, still he would advise a secular legislature like the Assembly not to tolerate that attitude, for in this matter there was no interference with religious rights or religious observance, but simply the removal of untouchability from the statute law of this country. Take for instance the use of public wells which was the sorest point with the Harijans. Cattle could approach these wells and tanks, but not the Harijans. It bordered on inhumanity when it was known that in Rajputana thousands of rupees had to be spent for boring wells, and yet there the Harijans were not allowed to use them. Similarly about schools. He could quote chapter and verse on this matter. There was the Bill promoted by Mr. M. R. Jayakar1 and another Bill recently drafted by Mr. C. Rajagopalachari. Such a Bill could be further elucidated and amended, if necessary, but it should be pursued as quickly as possible. It was the bounden duty of the Hindus after the resolution passed2 by the Conference in Bombay under the chairmanship of Malaviyaji, to support a Bill of this kind and for the Hindu members of the Assembly to actively pursue it.

1 Held in the Harijan Colony, Kingsway Camp. Thirty-five M. L. A.s attended the meeting at the invitation of G. D. Birla.

The services of Harijan Sevak Sangh would be available to the members in this matter.

There were other directions in which the Assembly could help in the Harijan welfare. No doubt provincial Governments were wide awake and trying to do several things for the Harijans. The activities of the Harijan Sabha perhaps stimulated their efforts. All that was for the good of the Harijans. The Harijans should take aid from whatever quarter it came, provided it in no way compromised their essential interests. But the Government could give only according to regulations and no more. The Harijan Sevak Sangh however was not bound by such restrictions.

The Assembly was a fit enough body for exercising legitimate pressure upon the Government to see that funds were allotted for the purpose of the Harijan uplift. This could be done perhaps by moving a resolution. They could also consult Mr. M. C. Rajah and give him any help he might require.

Lastly, Mahatma Gandhi referred to the cruel treatment of the Harijans in certain parts of India recently. He instanced a case of recent assault by zamindars in Meerut on the Harijans over the begar (forced labour) question in which one Harijan was reported to have died. There was yet another report of tragedy from Cawnpore the full facts of which are not known yet. Then there was the ancient quarrel in Chettinad between the Nattars and the Harijans, the latter of whom were not allowed to wear the cloth they liked. Some of the Nattars were very unreasonable and tried to defend their attitude on the ground of custom. On these and other instances of cruel treatment, the Assembly members might put questions and try to do something.3

The Hindustan Times, 28-1-1935

1 Published in Harijan, 18-2-1933; vide also “Sjt. Jayakar on Untouchability”
2 On September 25, 1932, vide “Resolution at the Hindu Leaders’ Conference, Bombay”, 25-9-1932
159. ADVICE TO STUDENTS

DELHI,

[Before January 28, 1935]

We propose doing medical work there. How shall we go about our business, Mahatmaji? Could you give us some hints?

GANDHIJI: I have experience of this work since my early days in South Africa. Let me then begin with a warning. By taking a little medical aid to them, you do not really help them. You must teach them sanitation and hygiene, which alone can prevent malaria. Quinine does seem to subdue malaria, but will not root it out. What is essential is the preventive treatment and the after-care of patients. They do not know that careless diet often prepares the breeding ground for malaria germs. They eat anything and everything. But a malaria patient must eschew starch, too much protein, and live mainly on milk during convalescence. That is what you have to tell them. Teach them how to prevent disease. I will not congratulate you if you tell me that you have distributed a thousand quinine pills. Give them practical lessons in sanitation if you can. Go there with spades and shovels, fill up stagnant pools, see to the drainage, see that their wells are properly dredged and that their tank is not contaminated. The late Principal Rudra, under whose hospitable roof I have had the privilege of living, used to tell me how Delhi had fought a successful battle against the swamps and mosquito-breeding pools around Delhi. We have now to teach the people to do what the municipality or the local boards may not do, for want of funds or any other reason.

Above all, teach them to rid their village of filth and dirt. It is the most difficult part of your work, unless you would be willing scavengers. For days you must sweep the streets and teach them to preserve health and conserve their golden manure at one and the same time. Poore’s Rural Hygiene used to be a precious little book on this subject. You have to teach them to bury their night-soil in nine-inch deep pits and cover it up with earth, the principle being that such earth is full of life and that the sun’s rays penetrate that depth. In a little

---

1 Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Notes”, 28-1-1935. Prof. Winsor of St. Stephen’s College along with a dozen students had called on Gandhiji one evening.
while the whole will be converted into rich manure, and you can grow the finest vegetables on this ground.

I had better tell you about internal hygiene, too. You must study the problem of food from the point of view of health; know the foods charged with vitamins and persuade them to eat hand-husked unpolished rice, whole wheatmeal, whole sugar, greens grown on their own patch of ground, and oil fresh-pressed in the village oil-press. Every doctor nowadays insists on prescribing a few green leaves to be eaten raw. Every peasant could grow all kinds of bhaji for nothing and eat it raw as part of his normal diet. It was discovered during the War that compressed and dried vegetables were harmful and that, not lime-juice, but the juice pressed out of fresh limes, was the preventive of scurvy.

We are very thankful. Could you tell us what we should teach in a little Harijan school we are running?

All that I have told you. Let me assure you that education in three R’s is as nothing compared to a sound grounding in the elements of hygiene and sanitation. I happened to see a number of Harijan girls learning in a Daryaganj school. As soon as I saw them, my eyes caught sight of their dirty nails, dirtier noses and dirt accumulating little trinkets on their noses and their ears. This thing had apparently never struck the good woman who was in charge of them. Teach them first the lessons of cleanliness. Literary training by itself is not of much account. Take care of the essentials I have told you. Remember that unlettered persons have found no difficulty in ruling over large States. President Kruger could hardly sign his own name. Teach them the three R’s by all means, but don’t make a fetish of them.

One more question. We have a little Cold Weather Fund. How are we to find the most deserving folk for this?

Well, hand it over to me or to the Harijan Sevak Sangh.

No. We would administer it ourselves,

Well, then, go to the slums of the city, seek out the poorest and give them.

To the slums?

Certainly. Surely not the Viceregal quarters, for you will find the stables there warmer and cleaner and more comfortable than our hovels. No, you need not go very far. You will find people around you wanting the things which you can spare and they most need.
Mirabehn, for instance, noticed that the chowkidar here was shivering in the cold. She gave him her blanket, as Dr. Ansari had given her his shawl in England.

But, Sir, sometimes these people pretend to be poor when they are not. How are we to find out the bona-fide cases?

So you must be God! Pray don’t think you have a monopoly of honesty.

Concentrate on one village—Wazirabad; make it a model village and then ask me to come and inspect your work. Take my blessings and come to me later on for my certificate.

Harijan, 8-2-1935

160. DISCUSSION WITH A SHROFF3

[Before January 28, 1935]

“My heart’s desire is fulfilled”, he uttered in ecstasy and gave the hundred-rupee note and yarn to Gandhiji. Gandhiji asked him:

What are you doing? I remember to have seen you before.

Where have you come from?

[s.] I am coming from Madras. I am doing nothing. I am happy taking your name.

[G.] But if you are doing nothing, where did you get the hundred rupees from?

Oh, Mahatmaji, I have something more.

Then, why not give that, too?

He pulled out another hundred-rupee note and handed it to me.

But let me know what you are doing?

I was a shroff. But I am one no longer. I divided the property between my three sons and am now free, free to do your work. Have me as your scavenger, I want nothing else.

So you divided all the property between your sons and left no share for me?

Oh, no. Everything is yours. I had thought of bringing a thousand rupees for you. My son did give thousand rupees, but he did so reluctantly. He had lost something this year and would not cheerfully part with a big amount. I said: ‘Take back half of it, and send it to me when I ask for it.’

1 Prof. Winsor and the student hat done relief work in Wazirabad after the floods the previous year.

2 Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Notes”, 28-1-1935
And with this he took out all the rest of the notes and gave them to me. Laughing heartily Gandhiji said:

But how will you go back? Keep something for your fare.

No. I can send a telegram for money. I do not need anything. Take it all, Mahatmaji, it is all yours.

What do you propose to do now?

Nothing. Have me as your humblest servant. If not, let me stay here a couple of days and then I will go to my home in Rajputana.

Gandhiji gave instructions for putting him up and gently said:

Mahadev, return to him all the notes. How can we take all that? Or have one and return the rest.

“Nonsense,” said the proud donor. “I will not touch again what I have given. Mahatmaji, believe me, all is yours. I wanted to bring a thousand, but could not.”

If you will give me all I want, give me a crore.

I will, but I must send the hundi to God, and if I were saint Narasinha Mehta, God might cash it.

Well, well, I wish all Marwaris were like you. You are giving me all you have, whereas millionaires give me a paltry hundred or a thousand.

Gandhiji said, in childlike mirth, which he simply could not repress:

But, why not, why not ask your sons also to give me something? Why must they enjoy their wealth?

They will give, you may be sure. I have still kept some silver. It is yours. Naught is mine. All my desires have had their full fruition today, now that I have seen you and touched your feet.

Harijan, 8-2-1935

161. LETTER TO RAMNIKLAL MODI

January 28, 1935

CHI. RAMNIKLAL,

I got your letter. It will satisfy me if you spend three pice1 once every month. Spend as much time with Nathji as necessary. It will not have been wasted. You are not going to be scared because the work in the villages is new to you, just as we are not to be discouraged whether the eleven vows2 are new or old. We will not see the shore till we learn to be content with whatever the villages offer to meet our needs Tell

1 For writing a postcard to Gandhiji
2 Observed in the Ashram; they were of non-violence, truth, non-stealing, brahmacharya, non-possession, body labour, control of the palate, fearlessness, religious tolerance, swadeshi, removal of untouchability Vide, “Satyagraha Ashram”
Gangabehn that the work of dispensing medicine is not the end of our journey. Our destination is farther. She should write to me when she is ready.

Blessings from

BAPU

SJT. RAMNIKLAL MODI
SATYAGRAHA CAMP
BOCHASAN, via ANAND
B.B. & C.I. RLY.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4182

162. LETTER TO NARAHARI D. PARIKH

January 28, 1935

CHI. NARAHARI,

I have your letter. I shall obtain opinions on cow’s milk and buffalo’s. There is bad news from every place about the damage by frost. Are the papaya trees blighted or have we lost only the season’s fruit? Does any one of us know about the kind that can withstand frost? Learn about it from the local agricultural department if it can be done without difficulty.

To what do you attribute the increase in the cow’s milk?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9069

163. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

January 28, 1935

CHI. VASUMATI,

My letters appear to trail behind you. I am writing about the ink directly to Chandubhai.

You must get ready by the 10th February to go to Madras. You should earmark five years for Bochasan. I only wish you would settle somewhere.

Today we are leaving for Wardha.

Blessings from

BAPU

SMT. VASUMATIBEHN
C/o RASIKLAL BHOGILAL
VISNAGAR, via MEHSANA

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9394. Also C.W, 639. Courtesy: Vasumati Pandit
164. LETTER TO VALJI G. DESAI

January 28, 1935

CHI. VALJI,

As far as I can how far it is effective. The dietetic experiment I mention is quite well-known. In children it is soon cured.

I have come to know Jagadish Shastri intimately. I have gone through the synopsis of the thesis he has written. I spoke to him about the opinions of Anandshankarbhai and Vaidya. The young man is fairly painstaking. I have suggested to him to try to rewrite his thesis with a new approach along the lines suggested by me. I have rearranged the chapters for him, and I hope he will try to conform to the titles. I have also indicated sources from where he could obtain literature on the subject. Now let us see what Fate has in store—for mother cow and for us.

I got your articles. The one about Kagawa’s friend I have made shorter. I have pruned down a little the portion relating to the missionaries since that is not the subject of our journal.

I had not carried with me the article on cow-protection during the march.

How is your health nowadays? What is the condition of your eyes?

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]
We take the train to Wardha this evening. Chitre went to Hardwar yesterday.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 7470. Courtesy: Valji G. Desai

165. LETTER TO VIDYA A. HINGORANI

January 28, 1935

CHI. VIDYA,

I have your letter. You have not written anything about your health. You both have to live with Father and show him great affection. Is Anand fully restored? Write to Wardha. I shall continue to write to Gangabehn.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Hindi. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

2 Joseph Kagawa, a Japanese Christian missionary
3 The Dandi march in March-April, 1930
166. ADVICE TO CONGRESSMEN

NAGPUR,
January 29, 1935

I insist on the industrial education of girls. That will make them independent. They will not have to depend on others if they are not married. If married, they can lend a helping hand at home. If widows, they can earn their own living.

The Hindu, 30-1-1935

167. LETTER TO DINSHAW MEHTA

January [29]², 1935

MY DEAR DINSHAW,

I have not been able to reach your letter to Mahadev earlier. I do not know how I can make your appeal bear fruit. The only scheme that I can suggest for the financial management of the institution apart from its trust is your almost cent per cent success. But that does not depend purely upon skill. There must be the hand of God in it also. If He blesses you with success, that would be sufficient scheme. If He does not, nothing that you can do personally will avail. I know that this can give you little satisfaction. But what you call my mature judgment makes me say this without any hesitation.

I was grieved to hear about Khambhatta.³ I hope that he is gaining ground quickly. Your advice for a radical change is certainly sound. He should surely adopt it. I entirely agree with you that he should leave Bombay at any cost. You can show this letter to him.

Please write to me at Wardha. This is being dictated on the train that is taking us to Wardha.

SHRI D. K. MEHTA
THE NATURE CURE CLINIC
6 TODIWALLA ROAD, POONA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ A large number of Congressmen met Gandhiji at the railway station when he passed through Nagpur en route to Wardha.
² The source has January 30. Gandhiji however was in the train on the 29th.
³ Behramji Khambhatta; vide “Letter to Behramji Khambhatta”, 30-1-1935.
168. LETTER TO HARIBHAU PHATAK

WARDHA,
January 29, 1935

MY DEAR HARIBHAU,

I have your postcard. Evidently you have not been reading Harijan. I have reproduced the testimony of Dr. Ansari and other doctors in its pages.¹ Medical testimony in favour of unpolished rice is universal. It is being eaten even now in Sambalpur and many parts of Bengal. Proof of the pudding is in the eating. You should try the thing yourself. You are quite right in saying that unpolished rice is harder to cook. But it is not harder to digest if it is well cooked. It must take longer to cook for the simple reason that unpolished rice contains organic salts and protein. Polished rice is practically starch. Starch always takes less time to cook. Unpolished rice is like unskinned pulses or vegetables. If you skin your dal and your vegetables they are easily cooked, but they are also less nutritious. A nutritious article takes a longer time to digest, as it must, but it is not on that account considered to be indigestible. If you say that you cannot eat the same quantity of unpolished rice as that of polished, you will be quite right. Our object, however, is not to fill the belly with as much as can be put into it, but to take a proper proportion of balanced foods. The habit of eating polished rice is waste of national health and wealth.

You will remember you sent me medical opinion which you thought was in favour of cow’s milk in preference to buffalo’s milk. I think I showed to you that the authority you sent was not conclusive. The authority in question merely showed that cow’s milk was better for infants than buffalo’s milk. I want decisive opinion in favour of cow’s milk to buffalo’s milk even for adults if that opinion can be honestly sustained.

Yours,
BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 1373

¹ Vide “Villagers’ Hands”
169. A LETTER OF INTRODUCTION
January 29, 1935

TO MY AMERICAN FRIENDS:

Sjt. Kodanda Rao has been in America for some time. He is a member of the Servants of India Society founded by the late G. K. Gokhale whom I have regarded and often described as my political guru. Sjt. Kodanda Rao was private secretary to the Right Hon. Srinivasa Sastri when he was appointed the Agent-General of Government of India in South Africa. He was editor of the Servant of India when he left for America. He is a moderate in politics and an ardent social reformer holding advanced views on many social problems. He rendered me great assistance whilst I was permitted to carry on the anti-untouchability movement from the Yeravda Prison. I have no doubt that he will receive a patient and courteous hearing wherever he goes. Any assistance rendered to him will be deeply appreciated by me.

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G.N. 6299

170. LETTER TO G. SITARAMA SASTRY
January 29, 1935

MY DEAR SITARAMA SASTRY,

I had your three letters, two of which do not call for any answer.

Have you sent Kumarappa your form duly filled in? If the experiment that is being made in the use of groundnut oil for lighting purposes is successful, it will have far-reaching consequences. I hope that whoever is carrying on the experiment will persevere in spite of failures. I am sorry that you could not collect much funds. But the absence of response ought not to cause any worry to you. You should simply cut your coat according to the cloth.

Yours,
BAPU

SHRI G. SITARAMA SASTRY
VINAYA ASHRAM
CHANDOLE P. O., GUNTUR DT.

From a copy: C.W. 9738

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
DEAR KHAN SAHEB,

By the courtesy of the authorities I was able to get your prompt reply. I have now come to Wardha. Here I shall be for some time at least.

I was obliged to leave Mehrtaj with Dr. Khan Saheb in Delhi where he has taken a house for the Assembly session. Mrs. Khan Saheb has arrived. Both she and her daughter are quite well. Your letter was translated to Mehrtaj, but she will not come to Wardha. Her difficulty is this: She is so gentle and wants to be so appropriate that she would not take advantage of the facilities that are offered to her. She wants to live in Wardha as the others are living. She is physically and mentally unable to do so; and she won’t live as she would like to although she knows that she has the fullest liberty to do so. In Mariam she has a companion of her age and habits. So she would not leave her. And she had become fast friends with Zohra\(^1\) who has showered all her affection on Mehrtaj. She had under Dr. Ansari’s roof all the little things to which she was accustomed and she had no hesitation in taking them, because the whole family also did as she was doing. It was, therefore, impossible for Mehrtaj to tear herself away from the surroundings she liked and return to those which she did not like\(^2\). We all therefore felt that for the time being it was best to leave Mehrtaj with Dr. Khan Saheb. Urdu tuition will be provided for her. She has promised to write to me regularly. I hope that you will be satisfied with what I have done and that you will not worry about her. After all, God acts through children as through grown-up people, and we can but try gently to lead girls like Mehrtaj who are still growing.

Nor need you be anxious about Ghani. We are doing everything that is possible in the circumstances. You will be pleased to know that through Jamnalalji’s effort Sadullah Khan was engaged to Sofia Somji.\(^3\) The engagement was announced on the 26th instant. We have all wired our blessings.\(^4\) Sadullah is still in Bombay. Jamnalalji’s ear is

---

1. Daughter of Dr. M. A. Ansari
2. Vide also “Letter to Jamnalal Bajaj”, 7-1-1935
3. Vide also “Letter to Jamnalal Bajaj”, 26-1-1935
4. The telegram is not traceable.
not yet quite healed. Granulations continue to form. He will have to be in Bombay yet another month. You will please send me any instructions you wish to about Mehrtaj and Ghani. Lali is also with Dr. Khan Saheb in Delhi. I shall let you know later what is fixed up for Lali.

Khan Saheb Abdul Ghaffar Khan
B Class Prisoner
Central Prison, Sabarmati

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

172. LETTER TO R. M. MAXWELL

January 29, 1935

DEAR MR. MAXWELL,

By your kindness I have now received a letter from Khan Saheb Abdul Ghaffar Khan in reply to my letter, which you had kindly forwarded to him. Another letter is necessitated by Khan Saheb’s reply, and exchange of letters may have to be continued before the matter of his children can be finally fixed up. I now enclose herewith my reply\(^1\) to Khan Saheb’s letter which, I hope, will be delivered to him.

In the letter received from Khan Saheb there occur the following paragraphs:

The conditions here do not agree with me. If possible, I would like to be transferred to a Frontier Province or Punjab jail. Maybe that my health will improve as a result of the change.

There was a letter from Mrs. Dr. Khan Saheb to the Superintendent of the jail, for an interview with me. I wonder why those people did not afterwards turn up here. If Dr. Khan Saheb should come and see me, I shall tell him all about Mehrtaj.

I wonder if Khan Saheb Abdul Ghaffar Khan will be or can be transferred to a Frontier Province or Punjab jail. May Dr. Khan Saheb or any of his relatives see Khan Saheb Abdul Ghaffar Khan in the jail?

I am,

Yours sincerely,

Encl. 1

R. M. Maxwell, Esq.
Secretary To Government
Bombay

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

\(^1\) Vide the preceding item.
173. LETTER TO ABDUL GHANI

January 29, 1935

MY DEAR GHANI,

I have your letter. For the time being, you will draw what money you need from Rameshwar.

Here is a free translation of a letter I have received from Father. Just now Father’s dream about his children cannot be fully realized. As you will see from a copy of my letter¹ to Father, Mehrtaj won’t be educated as Father wants. Dr. Khan Saheb will do the best that is possible. Her natural inclination is to be where Dr. Khan Saheb is. I have, therefore, left her and Lali with the Doctor in Delhi. Lali will probably go to Dehra Dun. You are now the one who can, if you will, carry out Khan Saheb’s wishes. But there can be no compulsion, whether for you or for any other. I hope you will do the best you can to come up to Khan Saheb’s expectations.

You should send me regular letters, so that when I write business letters to Father, I can incorporate portions from yours.

ABDUL GHANI
HINDUSTAN SUGAR MILLS
GOLA GOKARANNATH

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

174. LETTER TO M. FARZAND ALI KHAN

January 29, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I was pleased to listen to you yesterday during my silence. So far as the Congress constitution is concerned, I can do very little in the matter. But I am of opinion that the Working Committee of the Congress will not favour any scheme of relaxing the constitution. The requirements are surely minimum.

As for the reflection cast upon the Ahmadiya community by Ahrars², I have absolutely no knowledge about it. If they have indulged in the language you brought to my notice, it is most

¹ Vide ”Letter to Abdul Ghaffar Khan”, 29-1-1935
² Belonging to Majlis-i-Ahrar, a nationalist Muslim party unfortunate. I exercise no influence over them. Would it not be better for you to mention this matter to Maulana Abul Kalam Azad or to Dr. Ansari?

Yours sincerely,

M. FARZAND ALI KHAN
HOME SECRETARY TO HIS HOLINESS HAZRAT KHALIFA-TUL-MASIH
QADIAN (PUNJAB)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

175. LETTER TO J. S. NAYAK
January 29, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I wish you could realize that your letter was written in anger. Every consideration was shown to you. Just imagine what would be my fate if everyone was to be allowed to sit near me whenever he liked. There are so many inquisitive souls today that I would not be able to satisfy their desire even if I sat in front of them for twenty-four hours.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI J. S. NAYAK, B.A., B.L.
RAHMAN MANZIL, NICHOLSON ROAD
CASHMERE GATE, DELHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

176. LETTER TO MOTILAL ROY
January 29, 1935

DEAR MOTIBABU,

I had your long letter. Surely I did not want you to give so much time to my letter. Of course, I understand you. There was nothing by way of complaint in my letter, and you may be sure that nobody has complained to me about the Prabartak Sangh. If I had written to you on the basis of any such complaint, I would have certainly given you the name or at least told you that I had such a complaint. What I wrote arose solely from your own letter. My view about debts remains unaltered. I think we who are immersed in the service of humanity have got to be more cautious than ordinary businessmen in dealing with finance. But I must not lengthen out this argument. I know that you will do whatever appeals to your inner self.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI MOTILAL ROY
PRABARTAK BHAVAN
61 BOWBAZAR STREET, CALCUTTA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

177. LETTER TO R. V. SASTRI

January 29, 1935

MY DEAR SASTRI,

I have not read your long report about Ganesan. But Mahadev has given me its contents. I propose to read the whole of it myself. Thakkar Bapa has read it. Here is a copy of my letter¹ to Ganesan. I want you to act with decision and firmness. We have to help Ganesan against himself. I have a very weak corner for him. But he is incorrigible about financial transactions. He must not be supported.

I am anxiously awaiting your letter about Harijan. I now find that by re-transferring it to Poona it is possible to save Rs. 2,400 per year—not a small thing; and if the estimate is correct, it will be sinful if we incur the additional expense of Rs. 2,400 per year for the luxury of publishing it in Madras. If you think it worth while to come down to Wardha for this purpose, you could do so. I am writing freely and briefly to you in this matter because I rely upon your capacity to look at things philosophically and detachedly, even where you are yourself concerned.

You should finish-off arrears of matter left over even though you may have to print a double number. We cannot afford to have much arrears. And now that the scope of Harijan is extended, demand on the space will be greater than before.

Encl. 1

SHRI R. V. SASTRI
MADRAS

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ This is not traceable.
178. LETTER TO R. S. VIDYARTH

DEAR FRIEND,

I am not interested in talkies industry. I have never attended a cinema in my life. I know [what] a harm it has done. Many of my friends tell me that it has an educative value. I can neither prove nor disprove that assertion.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI R. S. VIDYARTH
ANAND MATH
LUCKNOW

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

179. LETTER TO K. KRISHNA MENON

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter regarding the Panchama Night School in your neighbourhood. You should produce a certificate for efficiency from the Secretary of the Kerala Harijan Sevak Sangh and the Branch’s inability to help the School, and then make an application to the Central Board for help. If it is worthy of help, I doubt not that the application will be fully considered by the Board.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI K. KRISHNA MENON, B.A.
COOTIPURAM P. O.
SOUTH MALABAR

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy Pyarelal

180. LETTER TO RAYUDU RANGAIAH

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. I do not understand the burden of your complaint. You have made general statements. I would ask you to discuss whatever you have with Sjt. Bapineedu, Secretary of the local Sangh.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI RAYUDU RANGAIAH GARU
PRESIDENT
WEST GODAVARRY DISTRICT
ADI-ANDHRA ASSOCIATION, ELLORE (W.GODAVARY DT.)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
181. LETTER TO SECRETARY, THE NEW INDUSTRIAL AND COMMERCIAL EDUCATION SOCIETY

January 29, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. Your scheme does not make any appeal to me.

Yours sincerely,

SECRETARY
THE NEW INDUSTRIAL & COMMERCIAL EDUCATION SOCIETY
99 LAXMI ROAD, POONA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

182. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

January 29, 1935

DEAR THAKKAR BAPA,

I could not reach yesterday the letter about Kodanda Rao. I could only therefore dictate it today in the train and get it posted in the train. I was dead busy with visitors coming in even during my silence. All writing, therefore, had to be stopped at 10 o’clock. My consolation, however, lies in the fact that this letter will reach you well in time to catch this week’s ocean mail.

I have already written to Ganesan and Sastri. Copies of my letters herewith.

Encl. 3

SJT. A. V. THAKKAR
DELHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 Vide “A Letter of Introduction”, 29-1-1935
183. LETTER TO J. AWASTHI

WARDHA,
January 30, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I like your plain words. Of course, if it is not the same plate that was auctioned by me, you are entirely absolved. I am now asking for the return of the plate to you.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI J. AWASTHI
BRIJ NIVAS
NEW GANESHGANJ, LUCKNOW

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

184. LETTER TO THE EDITOR, “NISPRUHA”

January 30, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your printed appeal. Here is my message.

“I regard Abhyankar’s death as a personal loss for the simple reason that I had come to prize his association more and more, and I had great hopes of his rendering some signal service to the country. But God had willed otherwise.”

Yours sincerely,

THE EDITOR
“NISPRUHA”
NAGPUR

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers.Courtesy: Pyarelal

185. LETTER TO SURENDRANATH MAHEY

January 30, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. I am for the abolition of all castes as they exist today. I am in favour of abolition of all distinctions of high and low, but I am not in favour of abolition of varnashramadharma which to me is the antithesis of caste. I do believe that Hindu Marriage Law requires amending. If you can succeed in inducing legislators to interest themselves in the cause, it will be good. I cannot, because I believe that I am attending to things which are of greater moment at present than marriage reforms through legislation.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI SURENDRANATH MAHEY
10 TEMPLE ROAD
LAHORE

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

186. LETTER TO M. K. PANDURANGA
January 30, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your exhaustive letter. I have handed your book to a friend who is interested in food reform. As soon as it comes back to me, I shall go through the chapters mentioned by you. I understand all that you and your wife have gone through.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI M. K. PANDURANGA
BLISS CULT COLONY, AMBATTUR R. S.
VILLIVAKKAM P. O., MADRAS

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

187. LETTER TO ACHYUT PATWARDHAN
January 30, 1935

MY DEAR PATWARDHAN,

You have done well in bringing the weavers’ case to my notice. I had a similar case in Orissa during the walking tour. It was a question affecting 10,000 weavers. I have resolutely set my face against doing anything for weavers who weave mills-spun yarn, for they cut their own throat by weaving mill-spun yarn, and they know it. But they wrongly plead helplessness. As I told the weavers of Orissa, in a weaving family where there is one weaver, the rest of the members help in attending to the different processes through which yarn has to pass before it comes to the loom. My suggestion then is that every weaver family should spin its own yarn, that is to say, it should do the ginning, carding and spinning. Such a family should use for itself the khadi woven by it and put the surplus on the market. This will ensure spinning of a high order, because all the members of the family would be interested in spinning as strong and even yarn as is possible. Of course, the income of the weaver would increase in exact proportion to the skill employed in producing good yarn. With efficient management, I can show that such a family stands to gain by taking up spinning. The gain will be threefold. It will be independent of the middleman who sells yarn and the fluctuations of the yarn market, and save a portion of the money spent in buying cloth required for the family, for, except when the price of cotton goes down very low, the value of cotton required for domestic use will always be less than the price of cloth purchased in the market. Moreover, it has been found by experience that a man and woman use less yards of khadi than of mill-cloth, and less still where khadi and yarn are respectively hand-woven and hand-spun. And it is the universal testimony of practised spinners that when they have khadi woven out of their own yarn it lasts three times as long as manufactured cloth.

If this thing appeals to you, you can organize [the work]. A. I. S. A. can come to the assistance by purchasing the surplus khadi that these families will weave.

I am telling the weaver friend whose letter you have enclosed that you would explain my scheme to him.

If you like the scheme and any of the weavers will take it up under the conditions mentioned by me, you should, in order to save time, place yourself in touch with Gangadharrao, who, officially or unofficially, I do not remember which, represents the Karnatak branch of the A. I. S. A.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI ACHYUT PATWARDHAN
COURT ROAD
AHMEDNAGAR

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

188 LETTER TO M. MADIAH
January 30, 1935

MY DEAR MADIAH,

I have your letter. I think you have got to exercise patience. We have made great headway, and we shall do more if there is self-restraint. I do not believe in propaganda through pamphlets or in costly buildings. A Bhajan Mandiram is good. But you should be satisfied with an unpretentious humble building.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI M. MADIAH
ADI-KARNATAKA STREET NO. 1
MALVILLI TOWN, MYSORE DISTRICT

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
189. LETTER TO RAMACHANDRAN

January 30, 1935

MY DEAR RAMACHANDRAN,

I had your letter about Bhole. I see that Bhole has been now discharged. Was he discharged as cured, or because of any complaint in respect of him? I have a suspicion that it might be the other, because of Bhole’s letter just received.

I enclose herewith Madiah’s letter and copy of my reply. If there is anything for you to say in this matter, you will do so.

SHRI RAMACHANDRAN
DEENA SEVA SANGH
MALLESWARAM P. O., BANGALORE CITY

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

190. LETTER TO PURNACHANDRA SARMAH

January 30, 1935

MY DEAR SARMAH,

I have your letter. You have to fix up everything with Annadababu and get him to approach the A.I.S.A. if he has a workable scheme.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI PURNACHANDRA SARMAH
PRESIDENT
DISTRICT CONGRESS COMMITTEE, NOWGONG (ASSAM)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

191. LETTER TO T. T. SHARMAN

January 30, 1935

MY DEAR SHARMAN,

I have forwarded your letter to Kakasaheb Kalelkar who will go into the matter. He is just now in the South principally for the purpose of helping Hindi Prachar work. I would ask you to put yourself in touch with him. His address is: Kakasaheb Kalelkar, C/o Hindi Prachar Sabha, 107 Armenian Street, G.T., Madras.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI T. T. SHARMAN,
EDITOR
“VISWAKARNATAKA DAILY”
BANGALORE CITY

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 Vide the preceding item.
192. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

January 30, 1935

DEAR THAKKAR BAPA,

With reference to your question embodied in your letter of 21st instant, the only thing I can recommend is that the local reformers should zealously support persecuted Harijans as if they were their own blood brothers and sisters. If even this much cannot be guaranteed to them, we may not wonder that from motives of self-protection they go over to some other religion where they believe they can get some degree of protection.

Herewith a letter from Pratap Dialdas'. Inform Malkani that I have written to him. If the contribution has not been already used for Harijan work in Thar-Parkar District, please do so now.

Encl. 1

SHRI A. V. THAKKAR
GEN. SECRETARY
HARIJAN SEVAK SANGH, BIRLA MILLS, DELHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

193. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

January 30, 1935

CHI. JAMNALAL,

I got your letters on arrival here. Your ear seems to be giving you a good deal of trouble. All of us here feel anxious. Ghanshyamdas also is worried. He has great faith in his Jew doctor in Calcutta. His operation seems to have proved successful. That is another reason why he is pressing that if your ear trouble is not cured soon, you should consult that doctor. I have asked Dr. Jivraj to let me have his opinion in detail. You also may think over this suggestion. I do not like the repeated postponements. Would you like Janakidevi to come overthere? Last evening, it appeared as though she wished to do so. She also felt that perhaps you wanted her there. If that is so, she would certainly want to go. I have suggested that she should wait for your reply to this letter. If you wish you may send a wire in reply to this. Give all details about the pain.

I shall be here for the present. Please drop the idea of coming

1 A Sindhi philanthropist here immediately. Come only when the doctors positively permit you to do so.

I do wish you would follow my advice regarding food. Take milk, eat fruit, chapatis made of whole wheatmeal, exclude rice, potatoes, etc., and eat green vegetables regularly. Do not eat anything in between the meals. Scrupulously avoid eating anything except at fixed hours. The load on the stomach at every meal should be as light as possible. You should not go by doctors’ advice about food. Their experience, too, is very limited in this matter.

Just now I myself am sending Durgaprasad’s money. I had asked them to send it. I had no idea whatsoever that he had no money even to pay the fare to Bombay.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]
Mehrtaj did not come after all. Lali will probably go to Dehra Dun.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2954

194. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ
January 30, 1935

CHI. JAMNALAL,

After I wrote you a letter in the morning I met Janakidevi. She is no doubt restless and wants to go to you. Hence do send a wire tomorrow saying yes or no.

The Rs. 900 that Dr. Khan Saheb used to get has stopped. What Khan Saheb used to get has also as good as stopped. Both the brothers are definitely in straitened circumstances. He was telling me that at present you meet the expenses of the Doctor’s son. I think no money is likely to come from anywhere for Ghani either. Hence if anything is being given we should not expect it to be returned. Tell me if you want to suggest anything to me in this connection.

There is a letter from Khan Saheb written from jail. A translation of it will of course be enclosed.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2955

1 This is followed by the direction: “The translation of Khan Saheb’s letter should accompany this.”
195. LETTER TO BEHRAMJI KHAMBHATTA

January 30, 1935

BHAI KHAMBHATTA,

I hope you are now improving. You must give up your attachment to Bombay. Be content with what God has given you. Are you likely to find any difficulty in living in Poona? Do let me know.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6607. Also C.W. 4397. Courtesy: Tehmina Khambhatta

196. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

January 30, 1935

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

I forgot to tell you that Shah had been here to see me. He wishes to work for the Board but not like a twelfth man. I do feel that some use should be made of him. Can he not be appointed “Honorary Economic Adviser” or “Consultant”? He is not particular about fees.

I had hoped to be able to travel with you. We could discuss nothing in Delhi. In a way, however, it was good that you stayed back. On my arrival, I received another letter from Andrews. It contains nothing new. He is merely building castles in the air.

What a contrast between the cold there and the comparatively warm weather here!

Blessings from

BAPU

SARDAR VALLABHBHAI PATEL
NEW DELHI

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 151-2

1 Prof. K. T. Shah, the economist
197. MESSAGE TO AHMEDABAD MILL-WORKERS

[On or before January 31, 1935]

Tell workers that they are weakening their cause and that of labour generally by illegitimate strike. Let them not tarnish the good name they have earned for themselves. I hope they will regain balance and resume work.

The Hindustan Times, 1-2-1935

198. LETTER TO BHUJANGILAL CHHAYA

WARDHA,

January 31, 1935

CHI. BHUJANGILAL,

I had your letter. I do not mistrust you. What I wrote to you was in accordance with your nature as I know it. Your intentions are good but you are constantly obstructed in implementing them. Complete your study and do whatever service you can after that. Don’t do anything against your inclination. One should discriminate between what is worth while and what is worthless and then do whatever one can to the best of one’s ability. You should carefully examine where precisely you stand.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2593

199. LETTER TO MOOLCHAND AGRAWAL

Bhai Moolchand

January 31, 1935

Your letter. I hope no one will, in the first instance, bear malice towards the sanatanists and, again, mind the boycott imposed by them. In the event of a boycott we should bear with whatever hardships it brings.

Keep me informed of all the developments.

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 767

1 The report appeared under the date-line “Ahmedabad, January, 31”.
200. LETTER TO VIYOGI HARI

January 31, 1935

Bhai Viyogi Hari,

Herewith a small item for Harijansevak. If possible gather some more information about this matter there. I fail to understand this boycott.

What have you done about the Hindi lessons for Prabhavati?

Blessings from

Bapu

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1098

201. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

January 31, 1935

Chi. Brijkrishna,

You are pardoned—though such errors could have been easily avoided. We are susceptible to subtle faults such as anger and like from which it is not easy to escape. But everything will turn out well as you are ever on the alert.

Blessings from

Bapu

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 2441

202. LETTER TO RANI VIDYAVATI

January 31, 1935

Chi. Viyada,

I have your letter. If you want to be treated by a doctor then the Seva Sadan of Calcutta is the place for you. But I always prefer nature cure. There are water-cure experts in Lucknow too. You can seek advice from them and do what you can. I cannot advise you about earth-cure from here. Whatever I or anyone else says in this regard should be considered as of no account. You should do what seems good to you. I can write¹ to Dr. Bidhan Roy if you desire to go to the Seva Sadan. Your doctor in Lucknow can consult him and then you can go there. If you are planning to go immediately you can send me a telegram and I shall write at once.

¹ Vide “Letter to Dr. B. C. Roy”, 2-2-1935

There were some complaints against you. These were sent to you yesterday.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

203. ESCAPING THE OBVIOUS

When I was addressing a mixed conference of Harijans and non-Harijans the other day, I happened to deplore the fact that at railway stations one heard the cry ‘Mussalman milk, Mussalman water’; ‘Hindu milk, Hindu water’. ‘Hindu chapati’ and ‘Mussalman chapati’ I could bear, though I did not believe in anything like it; but Mussalman and Hindu milk, with the making of which man had nothing to do, I could neither understand nor tolerate. I added that those who believed in the total removal of untouchability had to be free from superstitions like ‘Mussalman and Hindu milk and water’.

I have already remarked in these columns that those who refuse to take water and the like touched by Harijans may not claim that they are free from the taint of untouchability. It would be preposterous to justify the practice of differentiating between Mussalman and Hindu water and milk, when we do away with the difference between Harijan water and milk and non-Harijan water and milk. The great movement for the removal of untouchability would lose all its charm if it became a mere salve for conscience without truth behind it. The virus of untouchability is all-pervasive, and those who believe in it cannot be said to be free till they have ceased to regard any single individual as untouchable or in any way inferior in status by reason of his birth, community or faith.

A letter has just come to emphasize the necessity of a proper understanding of the implications of the movement. It describes how there was a public dinner arranged over the celebration of the silver jubilee of a high school in Berar. Harijan students were invited to it. The letter informs me that the Harijan students were provided with separate seats, the guests drawn from all the other castes and communities sitting in one row. Here was a wanton insult needlessly offered to the cultured Harijan students, who could not be recognized as such from their appearance. Such insults at this time of the day at a high school function show that, though much headway has been made in the campaign against untouchability, the superstition persists even in the least expected quarters and in the least expected manner. It should be borne in mind that here there was no question of inter-dining, there was no question of mixed cooking, it was a question merely of sitting in the same row. If sitting on the same bench in the same compartment in a railway train and eating one’s food in that condition is not inter-dining, surely this was not. But in the dictionary of untouchability, inter-dining has a specific meaning which excludes sitting at meal-time in the same row with people.

_Harijan, 1-2-1935_

204. BEE-KEEPING

In answer to an inquiry, Shri J. N. Jayakaran of Y. M. C. A. Rural Reconstruction Centre, Ramnathpuram, Coimbatore, gives the following interesting information:

Krishnaswami Naidu, a small holder, knows, and demonstrates to his neighbours, that the total outturn from a coriander crop is represented not merely by the usual quantity of coriander which it can produce without the help of bees, but also by the increase in the quantity of production caused by better pollination by these busy insects _plus_ 42 pounds of A 1 golden honey, this latter alone bringing to his pocket a decent sum of Rs. 63.

He has but 10 hives of bees, which he has caught from nature and hived in cheap dealwood boxes.

Bee-keeping seems to me to possess immense possibilities. Apart from its village value, it may be cultivated as a hobby by moneyed young men and women. They will add to the wealth of the country and produce the finest health-giving sugar for themselves. If they are philanthropically inclined, they can distribute it as health-giving food among sickly Harijan children. There is no reason why it should be a luxury of the rich or an expensive medicinal vehicle in the hands of the hakims and vaidyas. No doubt, my hope is based on inferences drawn from meagre data. Experiments that may be made in villages and in cities by young men and women should show whether honey can become a common article of food or has to remain an uncommon article, which it is today.

_Harijan, 1-2-1935_

---

1 This appeared under “Notes”.

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
205. HOW TO BEGIN? - II'

Last week I dealt with rice. Let us now take up wheat. It is the second most important article of diet, if not the first. From the nutritive stand-point, it is the king of cereals. By itself it is more perfect than rice. Flour bereft of the valuable bran is like polished rice. That branless flour is as bad as polished rice is the universal testimony of medical men. Whole-wheat flour ground in one’s own chakki is any day superior to, and cheaper than, the fine flour to be had in the bazaars. It is cheaper because the cost of grinding is saved. Again, in whole-wheat flour there is no loss of weight. In fine flour there is loss of weight. The richest part of wheat is contained in its bran. There is a terrible loss of nutrition when the bran of wheat is removed. The villagers and others who eat whole-wheat flour ground in their own chakkis save their money and, what is more important, their health. A large part of the millions that flour mills make will remain in and circulate among the deserving poor when village grinding is revived.

But the objection is taken that chakki grinding is a tedious process, that often wheat is indifferently ground and that it does not pay the villagers to grind wheat themselves. If it paid the villagers formerly to grind their own corn, surely the advent of flour mills should make no difference. They may not plead want of time, and when intelligence is allied to labour, there is every hope of improvement in the chakki. The argument of indifferent grinding can have no practical value. If the chakki was such an indifferent grinder, it could not have stood the test of time immemorial. But to obviate the risk of using indifferently ground whole-wheat flour, I suggest that, wherever there is suspicion, the flour of uneven grinding may be passed through a sieve and the contents may be turned into thick porridge and eaten with or after chapati. If this plan is followed, grinding becomes incredibly simple, and much time and labour can be saved.

All this change can only be brought about by some previous

---

1 For the first instalment, vide “How to Begin”
2 Quern
preparation on the part of workers and instruction of villagers. This is a thankless task. But it is worth doing, if the villagers are to live in health and elementary comfort.

_Gur_ is the next article that demands attention. According to the medical testimony I have reproduced in these columns\(^2\), _gur_ is any day superior to refined sugar in food value, and if the villagers cease to make _gur_ as they are already beginning to do, they will be deprived of an important food adjunct for their children. They may do without _gur_ themselves, but their children cannot without undermining their stamina. _Gur_ is superior to bazaar sweets and to refined sugar. Retention of _gur_ and its use by the people in general means several crores of rupees retained by the villagers.

But some workers maintain that _gur_ does not pay the cost of production. The growers who need money against their crops cannot afford to wait till they have turned cane-juice into _gur_ and disposed of it. Though I have testimony to the contrary, too, this argument is not without force. I have no ready-made answer for it. There must be something radically wrong when an article of use, made in the place where also its raw material is grown, does not pay the cost of labour. This is a subject that demands local investigation in each case. Workers must not take the answer of villagers and despair of a remedy. National growth, identification of cities with villages, depend upon the solution of such knotty problems as are presented by _gur_. We must make up our mind that _gur_ must not disappear from the villages, even if it means an additional price to be paid for it by city people.

_Harijan_, 1-2-1935

---

206. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

WARDSHA, February 1, 1935

CHI. MARY,

I was expecting your letter today. I am glad Mary Junior had an enema. It must have given her considerable relief. Where have you put up? Are you comfortable there, and are you getting all you need? You will not hesitate to ask me to do anything that may be required

---

\(^1\) Jaggery

\(^2\) Vide “Villagers’ Hands” and that I can do. Mary has got to become strong and fit.

You have well put the result of your stay in Delhi.\(^1\) Blessed are they that expect nothing, but twice blessed are those that feel sure that they have got what they need.

I like the prayer too with which you have ended your letter. Do you remember it? It is: ‘May rural-mindedness increase.’ When that mindedness takes a firm hold of us we shall be only happy living in the villages and make villages infinitely more habitable than the finest city in the world can ever be.

I have already opened the conversation with the girls as to who is ready to join you for two or three months.

We had a perfect downpour yesterday. It is very fine today. But no such thing as cold here.

_Blessings to both of you from_
_BAPU\(^2\)_

MISS MARY BARR
C/O SETH DEEPCHANDJI
BETUL

From a photostat: G.N. 6037. Also C.W. 3367. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

207. LETTER TO B. MADHAVA BALIGA

_February 1, 1935_

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. I do not know what I have done with the verse sent by Sastri. Most probably they are still lying in the _Harijan_ file. There is a great deal of matter still lying awaiting attention. If you have a copy, you may send it to me. It may be that I might have examined the verse, and not finding it suitable for the columns of _Harijan_, might have destroyed it.

For the answer to your question I would refer you to my Introduction to _Anasaktiyoga_ published in Gujarati. I translated the Preface into English for the benefit of the readers of _Young India_. If you get hold of the old file of _Young India_, you will find the translation in it. The answer briefly is this:

\(^{1}\) The addressee had stayed with Gandhiji during his visit to Delhi in January.
\(^{2}\) The subscription is in Hindi.
\(^{3}\) Vide “Anasaktiyoga” sub-title “The Message of the “Gita”
The Gita was written not to establish ahimsa, but to show a groping world a way of acting truly in every conceivable circumstance. But nevertheless you can gather that the Gita leads you infallibly to ahimsa. Remember that Arjuna was not striving to follow ahimsa, but he was struggling to get out of the duty in front of him because of his partiality which he had suddenly developed for his kinsmen. The question before him was not whether to kill or not to kill, but whether to kill one’s kinsmen or not to kill them.

Then, again, nigraha 1 in the verse quoted by you means a fruitless fight against one’s fundamental nature. Fight against one’s weakness is repeatedly enjoined in the Gita, but where a weakness becomes settled nature with a person all fighting becomes vain.
Arjuna’s nature was that of a fighter, not because he was born to fight but because his own individual nature loved fighting. When, what may appear to us, weakness in a man becomes part of his being, it ceases to have the quality of weakness with him; and if at the behest of someone such a person begins to fight against his nature, he is bound to fail or else he would become a hypocrite. To ask such a person to go against his nature would be to expect a leopard to change his spots.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI B. MADHAVA BALIGA
VANI VILAS MOHALLA
VONTIKOPPAL P. O., MYSORE

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

208. LETTER TO FEROZE GANDHI

February 1, 1935

MY DEAR FEROZE,

I have your postcard. I hope that Kamala is now better and has got rid of the effects of the needle. I would like you to write to Poonamchand Ranka. He complains that he never got any acknowledgment of any of the parcels he sent. He tells me too that the oranges are none of the best in Nagpur at the present time.
Nevertheless, he will continue to send what he can get. I hope, too, that you are getting vegetables properly packed from Delhi. If not, you will tell me unhesitatingly.

SHRI FEROZE GANDHI
BHOWALI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 Restraint, vide Bhagavat Gita III 33.
209. LETTER TO RAMACHANDRAN

February 1, 1935

MY DEAR RAMACHANDRAN,

Herewith is a letter from the office of the Municipal-Commissioner regarding the complaint of Kuppachari. Please see the Chairman of the Reception Committee. The poor man ought to receive some compensation from whoever may be considered primarily liable.

Encl. 1

SHRI RAMACHANDRAN
BANGALORE

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

210. LETTER TO S. SUNDARESA IYER

February 1, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter with two books for which I thank you. I am conversant with the argument on birth-control. If the statements made are based on incontrovertible experience, the way of control described in the pamphlet is not half as bad as the artificial method. As to the second book, I wouldn’t have the time to go through it. The subject does not interest me. If people could change their colour and if the whole world became one colour, I think that we would have a sorry world. What mankind has to conquer is prejudice, whether it is against race or colour.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI S. SUNDARESA IYER, M.A., B.L.
ADVOCATE
MYLAPORE (MADRAS)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
211. LETTER TO MOHANLAL

February 1, 1935

MY DEAR MOHANLAL,

I like your very thorough report on the allegations of the Meghs of the Arya Nagar Colony. Can you now follow it up by seeing the members of the Sabha\(^1\), finding out how the negotiations go and do whatever is possible on behalf of the poor Meghs? I suppose the corresponding Salvation Army Colony is flourishing, well managed and that the Christian settlers or tenants, whatever they be, are quite happy.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI MOHANLAL
HARIJAN SEVAK SANGH
LAJPAT RAI BHAWAN, LAHORE

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

212. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

February 1, 1935

DEAR THAKKAR BAPA,

There was a long complaint from the Meghs of the Arya Nagar Colony of the Punjab. I had referred the complaint to Mohanlal. Herewith is his very thoughtful and complete report. You will also find a copy of my reply to Mohanlal.\(^2\) You do whatever you can from your end. Does Ghanshyamdas know the chief people of the Dalit Pratinidhi Sabha? I am speaking to Dr. Gopichand in the matter. He is here in connection with the Village Industries Association.

Encl. 2

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

---

\(^1\) Dalit Pratinidhi Sabha
\(^2\) Vide the preceding item.
213. LETTER TO MURARILAL

February 1, 1935

DEAR DR. MURARILAL,

Your letter is most businesslike and valuable. It will be very helpful. I am passing it on to Sjt. Kumarappa who will write to you fully about it. Those persons who require monthly assistance can be accommodated by the Agent or Agents who will be appointed. The idea is that the Central Board should have no financial responsibility in respect of paid workers. Agents will be expected to collect what funds they require from local donors and manage their agency. That is the only way in which we shall be able to run this Association efficiently.

Yours sincerely,

D R. MURARILAL, M.B.
UDYOG BHAWAN, CAWNPORE

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

214. LETTER TO C. SUBRAMANIAM

February 1, 1935

MY DEAR SUBRAMANIAM,

If the teachers are truly repentant, I suppose they must be allowed to remain. It is difficult for me to give you infallible guidance without knowing the parties and knowing the method under which the institution is being run. There can never be too much purity in teachers. And the problem of getting the right type of teachers and managers for institutions where boys or girls receive training is proving more and more baffling.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI C. SUBRAMANIAM
C/o SHRI L. K. MUTHUSWAMI
161 VICTORIA HOSTEL, TRIPICANE (MADRAS)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 Of the A. I. V. I. A.
215. LETTER TO AVINASILINGAM CHETTIYAR

February 1, 1935

MY DEAR AVINASILINGAM,

I enclose herewith a letter received by me from Subramaniam and copy of my reply¹. If the facts set forth in the letter are correct, I hope you will take energetic steps to overtake the evil.

SHRI AVINASILINGAM CHETTIYAR, M.L.A.
NEW DELHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

216. LETTER TO SECRETARY, PATIT PAVAN SABHA,
BHIWANI

February 1, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. I never interfere in Municipal or other elections.

Yours sincerely,

THE SECRETARY
PATIT PAVAN SABHA
BHIWANI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

217. LETTER TO K. RAMAMURTI

February 1, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

If the crucibles you mention are or can be a village industry which the villagers can carry on without power machinery or complicated hand-driven machinery the Agent of the Association, when one is appointed, for Rajahmundry, will be able to attend to your suggestions.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI K. RAMAMURTI
HON. SECRETARY
THE INDIAN INDUSTRIAL SYNDICATE, RAJAHMUNDY

From a copy: Pyarelal. Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ Vide the preceding item.
218. LETTER TO T. L. KANTA RAO

February 1, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter of 26th ultimo. I would refer you to Shri G. Sitarama Sastry, of Vinay Ashram, Chandole, who will be the Agent in charge of the Guntur District. I have no doubt that he will take all the assistance that medical men can give. Sanitation and hygiene are an integral part of the village uplift programme.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI T. L. KANTA RAO
SECRETARY
THE GUNTUR DT. L. I. M. ASSOCIATION, GUNTUR

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

219. LETTER TO KANTI GANDHI

February 1, 1935

CHI. KANTI,

You must have received my letter sent through Kakasaheb. It has neither been answered nor acted upon. It cannot be that you did not receive it. Devdas has forwarded to me your last letter to him. I am waiting for you as eagerly as a thirsty man would wait for water. I wish you would come and stand before me in answer to this letter. I do not want to scold you. I only want to know your heart. Maganbhai is also here. You are therefore bound to find the place convenient in every way. You should know that I do not at all want to take away your freedom.

Come soon.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 7293. Courtesy: Kantilal Gandhi
220. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

WARDHA,
February 1, 1935

CHI. MATHURADAS,

You have well discharged the duty of a watchman. I had not known about the demise of Husainbhai’s father. I have sent him a letter today.

How did you fare in the election? You have not written anything about it. How much did you have to spend? How is your health? What are your activities? Would you be interested in cottage industries?

Blessings from

BAPU

MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI
74 WALKESHWAR ROAD
BOMBAY

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

221. LETTER TO JAINENDRA KUMAR

February 1, 1935

BHAI JAINENDRA,

This may be the brief answer to your letter. You yourself have given it. For a belief in rebirth, it is necessary to believe in the existence of ‘I’. If I do not exist and God alone exists, then who is to be reborn and how? This realization itself is rebirth, isn’t it? The possibility of rebirth is there only as long as the ‘I’ exists. When you truly believe—merely saying it is not enough—that ‘God alone exists’, then there is no rebirth for you. The man who becomes one with God is liberated. This much your reason will certainly accept. But it will not be realized in experience. Realization may take even thousands of years. Realization comes through the heart. The head can provide only logic. But what is the worth of logic? Service alone can bring about realization.

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
DEAR AMRIT,

Here is my message for the Harijans who are troubled about child-marriages.

“In these days of self-purification, Harijans ought to know that they are to avoid all the bad customs of caste Hindus. They should therefore avoid child-marriages. But reformers may not be impatient. Sarda Act is, in my opinion, a wise step. But it may not be strictly enforced against Harijans when it is very laxly enforced against caste Hindus. There should be effective enlightened propaganda by Harijans among fellow Harijans on the evil of child-marriages and the bearing of the Sarda Act on them. And then when it is made certain that people wilfully ignore that Act, a few prosecutions may be undertaken. But even then they must be the sole concern of Harijans. They may not ask for or receive even financial assistance in this matter from caste Hindus. In any case at least one year should be given to concentrated propaganda.”

If this is not the message you want you may withhold publication and let me know what you want.¹

There is no cold here. We have been having rains instead.

I hope you are better.

Love.

BAPU

SHRI RAJKUMARI AMRIT KAUR
JULLUNDUR CITY

From the original: C.W. 3521. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6330

¹ For the message as modified, vide “Letter to Amrit Kaur”, 18-2-1935.
223. LETTER TO DR. B. C. ROY

February 2, 1935

DEAR DR. BIDHAN,

Rani Vidyavati is the wife of a poor broken-down zamindar in Hardoi district. I have known her for years as a staunch Congress worker. She has been to jail. She is now ailing from some disease which the local doctors opine requires special treatment, probably even an operation. They have advised her to seek the shelter of Chittaranjan Seva Sadan. Naturally the request came to me some months ago that I should write to you and inquire whether you could accommodate her at the Seva Sadan as a poor patient. But later, there seemed to be an improvement in her health, and therefore she postponed her going to Calcutta. Now, evidently, she has to undergo special treatment. If you find that she can be admitted to the Seva Sadan, please write to me and telegraph to her at Barua House, Wazir Hasan Road, Lucknow. It might be as well to telegraph to her directly even if you cannot admit her.

Yours sincerely,

DR. BIDHAN CHANDRA ROY
36 WELLINGTON STREET
CALCUTTA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

224. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

February 2, 1935

CHI. JAMNALAL,

I have your letter and wire. Janakidevi is leaving today. This letter will be sent with her.

I have explained to her, too, about food. I have no doubt that she will be of great help to you.

Please do not worry about Om. I will keep her with me.

Janakidevi’s heart is weak. Get her examined. She will not take any medicine, but still we had better ascertain what the trouble is. We shall also know what treatment they suggest.
Get the receipt for Ranchhodbhai’s money issued in the name of Narandas or any other person who is a trustee on behalf of the Udyog Mandir. I have forgotten the names of the trustees.

I shall remain here for the present. I am not at all harassed by mosquitoes. There are none on the terrace. Last night it was raining and so I slept downstairs. There was no trouble even there.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2956

225. LETTER TO KANTI GANDHI

February 2, 1935

CHI. KANTI,

I received your letter just now. I am surprised and pained by it. It gives an entirely different picture of you. But the best thing is to appear what you are. In your last letter to me you had yourself expressed your willingness to come here. Now when I call you here, why do you feel nervous? What would be the plight of a son who is afraid to go near his father? How fearsome his father or grandfather must be! I had called you here out of love. I wanted to guide you after knowing your mind. But I see that I would not be able to give you any consolation. Be at ease. Do not come. Look within yourself, be calm and good. Live independently and rise high. That is my hope and my blessing.

My letter must have reached you. You must have also received my letter sent to you along with Kakasaheb’s. I have destroyed your letter.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 7294. Courtesy: Kantilal Gandhi
226. LETTER TO SHIVABHAI G. PATEL

February 2, 1935

CHI. SHIVABHAI,

I have your letter. It seems that a beginning has been made. In my opinion there is no place for buffaloes or ghee made out of buffalo’s milk in our village industries. What shall we gain by interfering in the activities which are going on quite systematically? We do not want to make a business out of it. One who understands the dharma of cow-protection would not speak for the buffalo.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9515

227. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

WARDHA,
February 3, 1935

CHI. AMBUJAMMAL1.

You are being well tried. It is good for you if you will take this trial in good part. You must not be defeated. Shower your affection on Krishnasamy. Do not brood over his melancholia, never mind if he will not study. Give him some occupation. Let him spin, weave or learn carpentry. Walk with him. Play with him. Have joy in your countenance. It will infect him. Put him with Ramachandran for a time. Let him play games. Let him learn Hindi. In other words his mind and body must be joyfully occupied and all would be well.

The two Malayali girls and Silavati will not leave Wardha. I tempted them but they are so happy here just now that they will not move. It is no use my pressing them.

Vasumati will be ready in the middle of this month if you are. You do not want a formal public opening ceremony, do you? It should be a silent prayerful opening. Let it grow naturally and without any flourish of trumpets.

Ba is disinclined to move out just now. I do not want to press her. And since the opening must be strictly private, Ba’s presence is wholly unnecessary.

1 This is in Hindi.
My right hand being tired out, I have written this with the left hand. I hope you have no difficulty in deciphering the writing.

Love.

BAPU'

From the original. Ambujammal Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

228. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

February 3, 1935

CHI. PREMA,

I am very late this time in replying to your letter. I get no time at all.

I have been writing so much today that the right hand feels tired and I am now writing with the left hand.

The body must have lost some strength but I have no such feeling. The fast has not in the least led to an increase of weakness. Fasting never does if one knows how to return to normal diet afterwards.

I believe that the effect of my diet on my health has been nothing but beneficial. But I cannot give reasons for this belief.

I am very glad that Father, Mother and others came and saw you.

There is certainly a remedy for the frequent pimples which you get. For a few days live only on fruit and uncooked bhaji. Take steam treatment and the pimples will then immediately shrink. Having done this, bathe in cold water. The skin will probably clear up in three or four days. Then start taking milk or curd which is not sour along with fruit and uncooked bhaji. Among the different bhajis, fenugreek leaves, spinach, luni and lettuce are the best. I eat even the leaves and twigs of mustard.

To pray to God for anything means to aspire for it intensely. God is both different and not different from us. He is different because He is perfect, and He is not different because we are portion of Him. If a drop of water separated from the sea may not pray to the sea, to whom else may it pray? But does the sea have to do anything to

---

1 This is in Hindi.
2 From August 7 to 13, 1934, undertaken to atone for the beating up of Lalnath, an opponent of Gandhiji’s Harijan activities answer the prayer? Prayer is the anguished cry of one who cannot bear separation. The embodied soul cannot help uttering such a cry.

The key to the nation’s progress both is and is not in our hands. We can help in its progress if we reduce ourselves to a cipher. It is in our hands to do that. But the progress itself is not in our hands, because our reducing ourselves to a cipher means leaving ourselves entirely in the hands of God who alone is the digit of unity.

“O Udho, the secret of karma is beyond human understanding” is an absolute truth. We can know that there is a law of karma, but we do not know how it works. That is God’s mercy. We do not know the laws of even an earthly king. How then can we know the laws of God who is Law personified?

The appearance of victory in the early part of this struggle was an illusion, and the appearance of defeat also is nothing but an illusion. In the lexicon of one who has unshakable faith in the ultimate victory of truth, there is no such word as “defeat”.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 10366

229. LETTER TO SHIVABHAI G. PATEL

WARDHA,
February 3, 1935

CHI. SHIVABHAI,

I do not see any objection to your wanting to join a school. You alone can say whether you will be able to shoulder the responsibility of that work or not.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9514
230. LETTER TO BEHRAMJI KHAMBHATTA

WARDHA,
February 4, 1935

BHAII KHAMBHATTA,

I was very happy to read your letter and equally surprised. One may say you have risen from the death-bed. Your fasts were also very severe. Will the leprosy be cured also? Convey my thanks to Dinshaw. If the remaining troubles are cured as well, the result can be said to be marvellous. I am not at all surprised that Tehmina nurses you like Sita. I should be surprised and pained if it was otherwise. Write to me the details of your treatment when you get time.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI BEHRAMJI KHAMBHATTA
NATURE CURE CLINIC
6 TODIWALA ROAD, POONA

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6608. Also C.W. 4398. Courtesy: Tehmina Khambhatta

231. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

February 4, 1935

BHAII GHANSHYAMDAS,

I have your letter. Your account of the two interviews\(^1\) is good. I see it all now very clearly. Nothing more remains to be done. But I am toying with the idea of writing to Sir Henry Craik. If I do, of course I shall send the letter on to you. If you don’t like it, you need not forward it. Bhulabhai\(^2\) cannot sign his name in the visitors’ book. In these matters we gain nothing by swerving from the golden mean. Bhulabhai’s courteous rejoinder should be regarded sufficient. Time will do the rest.

\(^1\) With the then Viceroy Lord Willingdon and the Home Member, Sir Henry Craik
\(^2\) Bhulabhai Desai, an eminent lawyer and leader of the Congress Party in the Legislative Assembly.
The courtesy and goodwill of the Home Member are personal. The policy in the report of the Joint Parliamentary Committee is that of the bureaucracy. The policy of the bureaucracy shows no courtesy. There is in it deliberate discourtesy. I expect nothing good to accrue from it. When the policy of the bureaucracy changes, any sort of constitution can be made to do for a long while. Today the question is of a new thing being imposed, and that too by force. No one holds a good opinion of it. You may well stick to your attitude. I am writing at such length only to tell you that I see no ray of hope in the atmosphere. My personal optimism of course remains constant even in the face of darkness. It has no other basis save the truth of our position.

You may get Vallabhbhai to decide as to what attitude Bhulabhai should adopt.

Even as I am writing this, my desire to write to the Home Member is becoming less keen.

The dates must have arrived.

Blessings from
BAPU

From Hindi: C.W. 7970. Courtesy: G. D. Birla

---

232. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

February 4, 1935

CHI. SHARMA,

Being tired I am writing with the left hand. You must have received the dates sent to you. Amtul writes that you are both miserable. It is a matter of regret if it is true. Dr. Ansari had sent a list of Urdu books and some Hindi books too, which I rejected. Now he has promised to send the English. I do not worry except on your account. It is well if you are putting your time to good use. Send me the time table.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, facing p. 144

168 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
233. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

February 4, 1935

DEAR DAUGHTER AMTUSSALAAM,

I was pained to read your letter. What was the point in going to Khurja and rushing back? Anyway I shall reconcile myself to whatever brings you peace. The news about Sharma too makes me unhappy. He alone knows the sacrifices he has made. But it is not a happy state of affairs. I hope your health is better. This letter is written with the left hand as the right hand pains.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Urdu: G.N. 313

234. LETTER TO M. J. KANETKAR

WARDHA,
February 5, 1935

MY DEAR KANETKAR,

It is only when you remind me that I think of the printed card or letter. I hope I have never been found so churlish as to resent printed appeals by throwing at editors contemptible messages. I sent you from the train what I thought was the best I could do in the time at my disposal. If I have repeated myself in my message to your paper, it is again because what I had originally given was of the best. I am sorry I can't give you anything more or better. Better I shall never succeed in giving you; more I could give if I had the leisure to recall the past things between good Abhyankar and myself and weave them into a readable story. For that I have no leisure. Although I have been a journalist, so called, for nearly thirty years I have not acquired the knack of writing long things at will. I am a bad spinner. You should thank me that I have given to this letter so much of my time, every second of which, I assure you, is precious to me. But I have given it for the memory of an old co-worker and for your sake, as in sending the book you had sent me his introduction. I wish I could say even now that I have read your book. I took it up half a dozen times, and

1 Vide “Letter to the Editor, Nispruha”
DEAR DR. BIDHAN,

I send you herewith a questionnaire on milk which you will please answer at your early convenience.

I am now in a position to seek your concrete assistance for the A.I.V.I.A. The Board has been sitting for the last four days continuously and has given instructions to its members to prosecute the programme of inducing the villagers to take to hand-husking of unpolished rice and pressing their own oil and cane, and grinding their own corn wherever these four primary employments have been given up, and to attend to village sanitation and hygiene. Now, in all this work you can give the greatest assistance by securing the co-operation of medical men, medical students and other students. You can cover the whole of Bengal with an army of workers, paid or honorary; and if the workers are good, they will repay tenfold whatever they might get, in a visible and immediate improvement in the economic condition and health of the villagers. You can even produce a village literature that may become the model for the whole of India. I say this deliberately, because no province has so much chemical skill as Bengal; and is it not that which is principally required in the prosecution of this programme?

I have asked Profullababu to see you in this matter. I know you will help him.

Yours sincerely,

Encl. 1

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 Vide the following item.
236. A QUESTIONNAIRE

February 5, 1935

Ayurvedic physicians say that cow’s milk is the prince among milks from the health point of view. They give buffalo’s milk an inferior place. Does modern medical science sustain that view? If so, in what way?

One hears it stated often that all fats do not act alike on the system. Is there any distinction between butter extracted from cow’s milk and that from buffalo’s milk? If so, what is it? That pound per pound buffalo’s milk yields a larger quantity of fat or butter than cow’s milk is irrelevant to the inquiry.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

237. LETTER TO C. MUKERJEE

February 5, 1935

DEAR SISTER,

I have your letter. The best way you can help the Association is to carry on propaganda amongst the members advocating the use by them of village products and manufactures wherever they are available, and secondly to send out women workers to the villages near their place of residence to do sanitary work amongst the villagers and to induce them to take up hand-husking of rice, etc. If you are not reading or taking Harijan which gives information every week about the activities of the All-India Village Industries Association, I would recommend your going in for it. I would also ask you to put yourself in touch with Shrimati Gosibehn Captain who is a member of the A.I.V.I.A. Board. As she happens to be here just now for the Board meetings, I am asking her to write to you.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI C. MUKERJEE
HON. ORGANIZING SECRETARY
9 LOWER RAWDON STREET, CALCUTTA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
238. LETTER TO DR. M. A. ANSARI

February 5, 1935

DEAR DR. ANSARI,

Here is another questionnaire for you to answer at your early convenience.

Do please send me a list of the English books you want Sharma to read. You need not wait for giving me any exhaustive list. If you give me a preliminary list of the books that he must read in order to qualify himself for making experiments on this very complicated human machine, that is enough.

I hope you are not wearing yourself out with work so as again to necessitate your going to Europe just for a cure.

DR. M. A. ANSARI
I DARIAGANJ
DELHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

239. LETTER TO G. G. JADHAV

February 5, 1935

DEAR JADHAV,

I should never have thought that over there people are killing goats in the name of religion. Surely it is bad to have to kill them for food; but I hold it to be a blasphemy to kill any animal in the name of religion. It is bringing down God to our level when we think that He can possibly be pleased by our sacrificing dumb animals for our sins. The only way of pleasing God is, in my opinion, to sacrifice ourselves.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI G. G. JADHAV
EDITOR, “SEVAK”
KOLHAPUR

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 The reference presumably is to “A Questionnaire”, 5-2-1935
2 Vide “Letter to H. L. Sharma”, 4-2-1935, also “Letter to Dr. M. A. Ansari”, 29-11-1934
240. LETTER TO DR. S. SUBBA RAO

February 5, 1935

MY DEAR SUBBA RAO,

Here is another questionnaire¹ for you to answer when you can spare a moment for it.

Yours sincerely,

DR. S. SUBBA RAO
BANGALORE

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

241. LETTER TO N. R. DHAR

February 5, 1935

DEAR PROF. DHAR,

Dr. Mehta has kindly sent me your letter to him of 12th ultimo. Your accurate opinion on unpolished rice and the other articles of food has proved of great assistance to me. Can you throw light on the enclosed questionnaire?

Yours sincerely,

Encl.

PROF. N. R. DHAR
UNIVERSITY OF ALLAHABAD
ALLAHABAD

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

242. LETTER TO MESSRS JAFRI BROTHERS

February 5, 1935

DEAR FRIENDS

I thank you for the copy of the Life of the Prophet by Malik Ghulam Sarwar Khan. I have not even a minute to spare for reading literature. But I would love to read Malik Saheb’s books and when I have done so I shall gladly give you my opinion on it.

Yours sincerely,

MESSRS JAFRI BROTHERS
ANWAR AHMADI PRESS
287 SHAHGUNJ, ALLAHABAD

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ Vide”Letter to C. Mukerjee”, 5-2-1935
243. LETTER TO S. TIRUVENGADASAMI

February 5, 1935

MY DEAR TIRUVENGADASAMI,

I have your report of the working of your school. I hope that the school will more and more go in for industrial education.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI S. TIRUVENGADASAMI
TEACHER, H. S. S. SCHOOL
BAZAR STREET, MANNARGUDI (Tanjore Dt.)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

244. LETTER TO P. G. MATHEW

February 5, 1935

MY DEAR MATHEW,

I had already told you that you should not do anything at Thana. You are not built for any physical work. I wish you would stick to the family and serve it by getting an employment, however humble it may be.

SHRI P. G. MATHEW
CHEPPAD
HARIPAD (TRAVANCORE)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

245. LETTER TO M. SUCOSE

February 5, 1935

DEAR FRIENDS

I have your letter. It is not possible for me to send you Rs. 30 per month. I have no such funds to fall back upon. You have to make what effort you can there, or write to the Central office sending all your qualifications.

Yours sincerely,

M. SUCOSE, ESQ.
SAMADANAPURAM
PALAMCOTTAH P. O., TINNEVELLEY DT.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
246. LETTER TO RAJENDRA NATH BARUA

February 5, 1935

MY DEAR BARUA,

I have your letter. If you will carefully follow the instructions given in Kuhne’s Science of Healing, I have no doubt that both of you will be benefited.

Annadababu is to organize spinning in Assam. I would, therefore, ask you to put yourself in touch with him.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI RAJENDRA NATH BARUA, B.L.
PLEADER
GOLAGHAT (ASSAM)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

247. LETTER TO K. M. MUNSHI

February 5, 1935

BHAI MUNSHI,

I have your letter. It is indeed worth considering to what extent we can participate in swadeshi exhibitions. It may be an act of kindness to give a plate to the bullock-cart in an exhibition of aeroplanes but what would be the purpose of it? What would a giant intend to convey by lifting numerous dwarfs on the nail of his little finger? Considering this you may do whatever you think is in the interest of the villagers.

Blessings from

BAPU

From Gujarati: C.W. 7567. Courtesy: K. M. Munshi
248. LETTER TO M. J. KANETKAR

[After February 5, 1935]¹

MY DEAR KANETKAR,

I have just finished reading the chapter on population bogey. I must confess that it is not at all convincing. You have given away the whole of your case by saying that pestilence and other visitations will keep the growth under check. Their case is that modern science reduces the death rate. Every day produces new discoveries for conservation of life. Therefore the increase will be unbearable. This argument seriously brought has to be seriously answered. You have not even studied your subject. Able writers have combated the theory of Malthus and its later developments. If the other chapters are as bad, I can only ask you to study your subject and rewrite the book. I have now passed the book on to Prof. Malkani to read and give me his opinion. He knows nothing of this.

From. a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

249. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

WARDHA,
February 6, 1935

CHI. JAMNALAL,

I have your letter. I am satisfied with Dr. Jivraj’s letter. He has suggested some changes in your food. He asks you to increase the quantity of butter in food. Discuss the matter with him and take more butter if necessary. I fear that you talk too much and do very little exercise. If that is true, then you should change in both respects. Write to me in detail.

I had a talk with Kamalnayan. I am firmly of the view that, if he agrees, he should go to England only after getting married. But he should not take his wife with him. It will be almost impossible for him to study if he takes his wife with him. It is also improper for him to lead a family life while abroad. It would be a different matter if they were going only on a pleasure trip. But that is not so in this case. My opinion is this: he should get engaged just now, go to Colombo

¹ Vide “Letter to M. J. Kanetkar”, 5-2-1935
after the malaria there has subsided, pass at least one examination there and then go to England but get married before leaving. He may enjoy married life for some time if he wishes, but he should go to England alone. If he wants, he may pay short visits to India. I think the experience in Colombo will help him a lot. He has not cultivated studious habits yet. If he does that, there will be no difficulty whatever.

Six permanent trustees have been appointed in the Industries Association. Your name has been included among them, as that was necessary. You will, therefore, have to be enrolled as an ordinary member. The membership form is enclosed herewith. Fill it in and send it by return of post. You need not feel the slightest hesitation in this matter.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

It is time Krishnadas was engaged. Do you have any girl in view? If you have, please let me know.

BAPU

[PPS.]

The membership form is enclosed.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3035

250. LETTER TO N.¹

February 6, 1935

CHI. PANDITJI,

R. gives you quite a lot of trouble. But do not worry about it. Do not lend him any money to pay off his debts. He can very well pay them off from his salary. The creditors should get at least Rs. 25 directly from his employer. He must reform himself. Everything will be all right if he gives up his bad habits. The parents’ duty toward their grown-up children is limited to being their advisers only, so you do not have any financial responsibility for G. and Babu. G. has not kept his word. How he is going on with his studies?

¹ The names in this letter have been omitted.
Tell Mridubehn about R. I am writing to her in brief. However, it will be proper if you talk to her. Keep on writing to me.

I have not talked to L. I will give her some hints. However, it is not necessary for you to write. She cannot do anything about it and she will only be made unhappy.

Blessings from
BAPU

February 6, 1935

CHI. NARAHARI.

I received your letter. If unpolished rice is soaked in cold water for three hours as is done in the case of pulses, it will cook in very little time. We make rice poorer in food value by getting it pounded and spending money on it. Unpolished rice should become one mass after being cooked. As long as the grains remain separate, you must know that it is not cooked.

Do try snuff. You will have to inhale it only as a medicine, so take small pinches of it. The snuff for medicinal purposes should be perfectly pure. You may be knowing that the snuff available in the market is very much adulterated.

There is no harm in sending with Surendra one of the two men from Orissa.

Mahadev has gone to Calcutta.

Blessings from
BAPU

February 6, 1935

CHI. GANGABEHN (JHAVERI)

I was waiting for your letter. It is good that you are living the life of a student. Navin and Mahesh are bound to benefit immensely from your diligence.
The two brothers will grow wiser with the passage of time. Do not budge from there for some years to come. Study as much as you want to. Improve your health. Never forsake simplicity. I hope you are keeping up the spinning. Use village-made things as much as you can. Build up your health by keeping strictly to the rules regarding diet and rest. Keep writing to me now and then. And tell Mahesh to write.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3120

253. LETTER TO MRIDULA SARABHAI

February 6, 1935

CHI. MRIDULA,

You will have learnt that Rambhau\(^1\) has turned out to be worthless. He has been committing petty thefts. So he can be relieved. Or if you want to keep him on, you have to be careful. Talk to him if you want. Try to reform him if you can. What his father or I could not do, you may be able to do.

It was good that you two, father and daughter, came and met me.

I hope Saralabehn is keeping well. I have written this with the left hand as the right hand is tired.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 11193. Courtesy: Sarabhai Foundation

254. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

February 6, 1935

DEAR DAUGHTER AMTUSSALAAM,

I have your letter. As it takes too long to write with the left hand I am dictating this. What advice shall I give you? You should do whatever brings you peace of mind and it will have my approval.

\(^1\) Ramachandra, son of Narayan Moreshwar Khare; vide also “Letter to R.”, 22-1-1935
Sharma has written to me. I enclose his letter. I have no objection to his staying with you but I will not order you to let him do so, as I see no need of it. I shall certainly like it if you stay in a Harijan locality. If you live with your brother in Patiala and nurse Kudsia, that too will be good. If you can regain your health by living in Ambala with the Swami\(^1\) and perform whatever tasks of service come your way, though not at the cost of your health, that too will be fine, you will at the same time be of some service to your cousin who lives there. Bear in mind that to those who are keen on serving, the whole world is the field. They should do any service that falls to their lot anywhere, holding it as a boon from God. You should now resolve on some one thing and settle down somewhere. Taravati’s handwriting is good. Convey my blessings to her on the occasion of her wedding. I sent you a postcard at the Patiala address. You will have received it.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU\(^2\)_

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 314

_255. TELEGRAM TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ_
WARDHA,
_February 7, 1935_
SHRI JAMNALALJI
BOMBAY
IF YOU HAVE CONFIDENCE MAY ACCEPT BANK OFFER.
_BAPU_

_Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, p. 152_

_256. LETTER TO C. F. ANDREWS_
_February 7, 1935_
MY DEAR CHARLIE,
I have your letter. I must not write much. I entirely endorse your programme for West Africa.
You have not asked me to make any definite promise. But you may expect me definitely not to seek imprisonment until there is no other course open. Indeed ‘seeking imprisonment’ here is not the correct term. It will have to force itself upon me. What I am seeking now and shall continue to seek is avoidance of imprisonment. I can’t remove this suspicion unless I hasten slowly or not hasten at all. I have taken no further step in the way of sounding the Government as to alternatives. I am taking my own time. Meanwhile I am taking extraordinary precautions to avoid every possibility of a conflict between the Government and myself. Therefore, you will proceed to West Africa without the burden of any anxiety on your mind on this score.

---

\(^1\) Swami Umaprasad, a friend of the addressee’s brother
\(^2\) The superscription and subscription are in Urdu.

I am glad that your broadcast¹ was received so well. All the other news from the regular letters that are being written from this end by Mahadev and others.

Love.

MOHAN

From a photostat: G.N. 1297

257. LETTER TO S. GANESAN

February 7, 1935

MY DEAR GANESAN,

How unbusiness-like you are. You have given me a long letter which you could have finished in four lines, but failed to answer the very relevant question that I put to you in my letter. What is this purchase of a motor-car? Will you answer it now?

I shall be no party to making you stop publication of your newspaper against your will. I can simply say that Kodambakkam is mouthful enough. There is no room for any other. But if you think otherwise, you must pursue your own course and take the consequence. I have no desire to rob you of your initiative nor foist a colleague on you whom you do not like. But I am sure that you will not want others to do that which you would not have them to get done by you. Don’t you believe in reciprocity?

SHRI S. GANESAN
MADRAS

Form a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ In his broadcast over the B.B.C. in January, C. F. Andrews had severely criticized the report of the Joint Parliamentary Committee.
DEAR SISTER,

I have your letter just received. I could give you a walk tomorrow (8th) from 6 to 7 p.m. On the 9th I shall be engaged. On the 10th I am again free for the same walk. On the 9th you can walk out with me at 6.15. From 6.30 to 7.30 I have to attend a meeting on the anniversary of the opening of a private temple which is open to Harijans. We can walk again after 7.30. You have to reach Madras on the 11th. That probably means that we can walk only tomorrow or the day after. But I have given you three days’ programme. You can take any day you like.

MRS. EDITH HOWE-MARTYN
C/O DR. MARTIN
MURE HOSPITAL
NAGPUR

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

DEAR FRIEND,

This is my message:

I am sick of hearing the distinctions between Christian, Muslim, Hindu, Parsi, Jewish students. I have never understood these different species. I have known good students, clever students, bad students, dull students, and so on. They wore the marks of their class in their ways and in their speech. But I have often failed to distinguish a Muslim student from a Christian student. Your readers have a rare opportunity of identifying themselves with Indian humanity that lives in the villages of India by sharing the activities of the All-India Village Industries Association.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI S. J. DURAIYAMY
Y. M. C. A., MADRAS

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
260. LETTER TO DR. N. B. KHARE

February 7, 1935

DEAR DR. KHARE,

I have your letter. I knew you were coming to Delhi and I saw that we would be crossing each other without meeting.

I did send a message to Shri Kanetkar.¹ He complained that it was too brief. Little does he know how hard pressed I am to take any burden beyond the daily routine work. If I go to Nagpur, I shall certainly refer to the proposed memorial.

Yours sincerely,

DR. N. B. KHARE, M.L.A.
3 ELECTRIC LANE
NEW DELHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

261. LETTER TO GANANATH SEN

February 7, 1935

DEAR KAVIRAJ,

Can you answer the enclosed questionnaire in the light of Ayurveda and interpret it in terms of modern medicine?

Yours sincerely,

Encl. 1

KAVIRAJ GANANATH SEN
AYURVEDIC HOSPITAL
CALCUTTA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ Vide “Letter to the Editor, Nispraha”
262. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

WARDHA,
February 7, 1935

CHI. AMBUJAM¹.

I have your Hindi letter quite well written. I hope you had my letter about Krishnasamy redirected to you. You should be jovial with him and infect him with your joy. Put him on some work that he would like.

Vasumati will be here today. You will tell me when you are ready to receive her. I have told you the three girls who are here will not go to Madras. Of late they have made good progress in Hindi.

Love.

BAPU

From the original. Ambujammal Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

263. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

February 7, 1935

DEAR THAKKAR BAPA,

My point was not that Thar-Parkar had not enough money.² But the point was to satisfy the desire of Pratap Dialdas that this money should be spent on Thar-Parkar. All, therefore, that you need do is to make the necessary entry in the books transferring this small amount to Thar-Parkar and restoring the equivalent to the General Fund.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

264. A LETTER

February 7, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I have now read your long note dated December 27th last. Are you still rearing sheep which give you the quantity of wool as described by you? If you are, I would like you to correspond with Seth Ghanshyamdas Birla, Albuqurque Road, New Delhi, for he is making experiments in that direction.

¹ This is in Hindi.
² Vide “Letter to Amritlal V. Thakkar”, 30-1-1935

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
With respect to your desire to have a personal discussion with me, I shall be glad to see you any day during the month except Monday if you could come to Wardha and advise me of the day on which you will be coming.

Yours sincerely,

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

265. LETTER TO KHURSHEDBEHN

February 7, 1935

I have your two letters. I am giving rest to the right hand. I can write with the left, but it is a slow process. Therefore I must, in order to catch today’s mail, dictate this to you.

I can only say ditto to all the thoughts you have expressed in both your letters. I entirely agree that in an ideal condition there should be perfect correspondence between thought and action. Then and then only is it possible to see truth face to face.

Amtul Salaam is in Patiala. She is tortured by her own mind.

I wish you to overcome your objection to eggs. I think I told you that it was possible now to have sterile eggs. They are to be had from Sangli, Salvation Depot in Bombay, some place in Poona and Salvation Depot in Ahmedabad. These eggs are obtained without the hens having to be mated. As an article of daily food, from the spiritual standpoint, that would be perhaps objectionable. But as a medical agent, sterile eggs might not be objected to.

Perhaps you know that Kamala had a set-back and lost 2 lb. last week.

SHRI KHURSHEDBEHN
78 NAPEAN SEA ROAD
BOMBAY

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
266. LETTER TO G. S. NARASIMHACHARI

February 7, 1935

DEAR NARASIMHACHARI,

I have your letter of 30th ultimo. I can give you very little help in the matter. You should write to the member yourself Prof. Ranga did see me in the matter. He appreciated my difficulty.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI G. S. NARASIMHACHARI
C/O VICE-CHANCELLOR
ANDHRA UNIVERSITY, WALTAIR

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

267. LETTER TO D. N. SARMAH

February 7, 1935

MY DEAR SARMAH,

I have your letters enclosing-opinions on the Modino’s treatment. I shall make such use as is possible of these opinions.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI D. N. SARMAH
SECRETARY
HARIJAN SEVAK SANGH JORAHAT (ASSAM)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

268. LETTER TO FEROZE GANDHI

February 7, 1935

MY DEAR FEROZE,

Your postcard of the 2nd instant is somewhat disturbing. Kamala has no weight to lose. Yet I suppose there will be these ups and downs whilst she is still convalescing.

Are you getting the fruit and vegetables in the manner wanted?

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
269. LETTER TO C. VIJAYARAGHAVACHARIAR

WARDHA,
February 7, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your two letters. I hope you will excuse the delay. My time is not my own, and I never knew that there was any hurry.

I hold totally different views from yours. We have not to deal with the family of the great Queen as individuals, but we have to deal with them as representatives of a mighty government. We have to celebrate an event in connection not with the private virtues of an autocrat, but we have to deal with the events of an empire for a period of twenty-five years during which King George has been the nominal head but which as an individual he has perhaps no more power to influence than you or I, and infinitely less than the Collector of your district in his own district. I, therefore, feel that the resolution of the Working Committee¹ was the only correct thing to do. It preserves the self-respect of the nation without hurting the susceptibilities of anybody. Lastly I have to own to you that the resolution was drafted by me as I happened to be in Delhi at the time, not by design but by accident. They would not deal with such a delicate matter without conferring with me. Possibly, had I not been there the resolution would have been bitter and perhaps offensive. Everybody has owned that the present resolution is purged of any offence.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

SHRI G. VIJAYARAGHAVACHARIAR
ARAMA, SALEM (S. INDIA)

From a copy: G. Vijayaraghavachariar Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

270. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

February 7, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

I have your letter. Read the accompanying letter to Harilal. If you approve of his coming to me, give it to him and, if he is really willing, send him here. He may now perhaps improve more if he stays with me.

¹ Vide "Letter to Premabehn Kantak", 16-12-1934
I hope Gokibehn is all right.
I am enclosing a letter received from Prema. How is Lilavati?
How is Kusum’s health?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8429. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

271. LETTER TO RAJENDRA PRASAD
February 7, 1935

BHAI RAJENDRABABU,

I have your letter. If the kind of compromise you have outlined in your letter can be brought about, I would love it. I see little possibility of that. But an effort can be made. Have you done what was to be done at Chapra?
Mahadev has gone to Calcutta. He will be back by the 9th.

Blessings from
BAPU

From Hindi: C.W. 9745. Courtesy: Rajendra Prasad

272. A NOTE

[On or after February 7, 1935]

There is no need to send sandals for Raj, they are available here. For you it would be good to work under Jyotiprasad in a village.

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 6631. Also C.W. 4279. Courtesy: Chand Tyagi

273. ABYSMAL IGNORANCE

A Harijan sevak writes:
On the occasion of the Jaipur Rajya Sammelan, which was held on 25-12-34, a khadi exhibition stall was set up on the first floor of a building

1 The note, addressed to the brother of Rajkishori, the widowed daughter-in-law of Chand Tyagi, was written on a letter Rajkishori wrote to her brother on February 7, 1935.
overlooking the chowk, where the Sammelan was held. A Harijan boy was first in charge of the sales, and could be seen sitting in the gallery above by the _savarna_ Hindus who were assembled in the _chowk_. The fact that a Harijan boy was allowed to sit at a higher level than themselves was very much resented by the _savarna_ Hindus, who resolved at a _Panchayat_ meeting that:

1. No one from the village should attend the khadi exhibition on pain of excommunication.
2. No one should send his girls to the local Kanya Pathshala, as it was connected with the Rajya Sammelan people.
3. No one should permit teachers of the Harijan Pathshala to enter his home.

In spite of this ukase of the _Panchayat_, as many as 28 young men took part in the Sammelan. They were fined Re. 1 each, which they refused to pay. From three to four hundred persons used to dine together in the Sammelan kitchen without any distinction of caste. This fact has been seized upon by the reactionaries, who have raised the usual cry of ‘Religion in danger’.

The conduct of the orthodox section in this instance is only a proof of our abysmal ignorance. A religion that cannot get rid of such invidious and inequitous distinctions between man and man is doomed to perish. The fact that the _savarna_ reformers have remained undaunted by the threat of the boycott must be regarded as a happy augury. Let not those who may be affected by the boycott harbour any ill-feeling towards the orthodox party. At the same time, let no one be turned away from his duty by the threat of coercion. The reformers must proceed with their work with patient, silent determination, unaffected by anger or fear.

_Harijan_, 8-2-1935

274. HOW TO BEGIN? —III

I have dealt with some chief articles of food and shown what they mean to the villagers in health and wealth. There is, however, the equally important subject of sanitation and hygiene. Proper attention to these means increase in health, energy and wealth, directly and indirectly.

Some foreign observers have testified that, of all the nations of the earth, India comes, perhaps, to the top in the observance of personal cleanliness. But I fear that it is not possible to say the same of corporate, in other words, village cleanliness. In yet other words, we have not made much advance beyond the family interest. We would sacrifice everything for the family as distinguished from the village, i.e., in a sense, the nation.

Members of a family will keep their own home clean, but they will not be interested in the neighbour’s. They will keep their courtyard clean of dirt, insects and reptiles, but will not hesitate to shove all into the neighbour’s yard. As a result of this want of corporate responsibility, our villages are dung heaps. Though we are an unshod nation, we so dirty our streets and roads that for a sensitive person it is painful to walk along them barefoot. It is difficult to get clean, drinkable water in village wells, tanks and streams. The approaches to an ordinary village are heaped with muck and rubbish.

Village sanitation is, perhaps, the most difficult task before the All-India Village Industries Association. No Government can change the habits of a people without their hearty co-operation. And if the latter is forthcoming, a Government will have little to do in the matter.

The intelligentsia—medical men and students—can deal with the problem successfully if they would conscientiously, intelligently, jealously and regularly do the work in the villages. Attention to personal and corporate hygiene is the beginning of all education.

The things to attend to in the villages are cleaning tanks and wells and keeping them clean, getting rid of dung heaps. If the workers will begin the work themselves, working like paid Bhangis from day to day and always letting the villagers know that they are expected to join them so as ultimately to do the whole work themselves, they may be sure that they will find that the villagers will sooner or later co-operate. At least such is my experience of South Africa and Champaran, and even during the quick walking tour in Orissa last year.

Lanes and streets have to be cleansed of all the rubbish which should be classified. There are portions which can be turned into manure, portions which have simply to be buried and portions which can be directly turned into wealth. Every bone picked up is valuable raw material from which useful articles can be made or which can be crushed into rich manure. Rags and waste paper can be turned into paper, and excreta picked up are golden manure for the village fields. The way to treat the excreta is to mix them, liquid as well as solid, with superficial earth in soil dug no deeper than one foot at the most. In his book on rural hygiene, Dr. Poore says that excreta should be buried in earth no deeper than nine to twelve inches (I am quoting from memory). The author contends that the superficial earth is charged with minute life, which, together with light and air which easily penetrate it, turn the excreta into good, soft, sweet-smelling soil within a week. Any villager can test this for himself. The way to do it is either to have fixed latrines, with earthen or iron buckets, and empty the contents in properly prepared places from day to day, or to perform the functions directly on to the ground dug up in squares. The excreta can either be buried in a village common or in individual fields. This can only be done by the co-operation of the villagers. At the worst, an enterprising villager can collect the excreta and turn them into wealth for himself. At present, this rich manure, valued at lakhs of rupees, runs to waste every day, fouls the air and brings disease into the bargain.

Village tanks are promiscuously used for bathing, washing clothes and drinking and cooking purposes. Many village tanks are also used by cattle. Buffaloes are often to be seen wallowing in them. The wonder is that, in spite of this sinful misuse of village tanks, villages have not been destroyed by epidemics. It is the universal medical evidence that this neglect to ensure purity of the water supply of villages is responsible for many of the diseases suffered by the villagers.

This, it will be admitted, is a gloriously interesting and instructive service, fraught with incalculable benefit to the suffering humanity of India. I hope it is clear from my description of the way in which the problem should be tackled, that, given willing workers who will wield the broom and the shovel with the same ease and pride as the pen and the pencil, the question of expense is almost whollyeliminated. All the outlay that will be required is confined to a broom, a basket, a shovel and a pickaxe, and possibly some disinfectant. Dry ashes are, perhaps, as effective a disinfectant as any that a chemist can supply. But here let philanthropic chemists tell us what is the most effective and cheap village disinfectant that villagers can improvise in their villages.

_Harijan_, 8-2-1935

275. LETTER TO THE SECRETARY, NEW INDUSTRIAL & COMMERCIAL EDUCATION SOCIETY

WARDHA, February 8, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter for which I thank you. I should like you to discuss with Shri Haribhau G. Phatak of Poona who knows all about the activities regarding Harijans and village industries in general. His address is: Haribhau G. Phatak, Pioneer Dyeing House, 625, Sadashiv
THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
Peth, Poona 2.

Yours sincerely,

THE SECRETARY
THE NEW INDUSTRIAL & COMMERCIAL EDUCATION SOCIETY
99 LAXMI ROAD, POONA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

276. LETTER TO HARIBHAU PHatak

February 8, 1935

MY DEAR HARIBHAU,

Herewith correspondence1 between the New Industrial and Commercial Education Society and myself. If the Secretary writes to you, you will do the needful.

I have your letter enclosing Dr. Sahasrabuddhe’s letter and elaborate opinion on comparative study of cow’s milk and buffalo’s milk by Dr. Apte. I shall make use of both.2 I am writing to Dr. Apte.3

I hope you had my letter giving you full explanation about rice. Shankerlal Banker, who has already commenced experimenting in unpolished rice, has sent me a valuable record of his experiments which bears out what I have stated to you and which you will see in due course in Harijan.4

SHRI HARIBHAU G. PHATAK
POONA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

277. LETTER TO DR. N. G. APTE

February 8, 1935

DEAR DR. APTE,

Haribhau Phatak has sent me copy of your comparative study of cow’s milk and buffalo’s milk which will prove of great value to me. I propose to have the experiment you have suggested with friends who

1 For Gandhiji’s letters, vide the preceding item and. “Letter to Secretary, The New Industrial and Commercial Education Society”, 29-1-1935
3 Vide the following item.
4 It was published in the Harijan of 15-2-1935 under the title “All About Rice”.

192 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
have no scruples about taking cow’s milk or buffalo’s milk and record their experience.

Haribhau tells me that you have sent two books on the subject, for which too I thank you. I shall make good use of those books when they reach me.

Yours sincerely,

D. Apte
Vice-President
Gopalak Sangh, Sholapur

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

278. LETTER TO DR. JAWAHARLAL

February 8, 1935

Dear Dr. Jawaharlal,

I have your letter enclosing copies of correspondence about Angnu Chamar. I shall await advice of further developments.

Yours sincerely,

Dr. Jawaharlal
Civil Lines
Cawnpore

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

279. LETTER TO ADOLPH MYERS

February 9, 1935

Dear friend,

I have your letter. I shall keep the copy of your magazine by me. But it is hopeless for me to attempt to write anything for you. I have not a moment to spare.

Yours sincerely,

Adolph Myers, Esq.
Editor, “Swords and Plowshares”
C/o Times of India Press, Bombay

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
DEAR SATISBABU,

I have not heard from you for ages as it were. This I write to you to say that in spite of the pressure of work, I could not day after day face the two files of your book and yet pass them by. I have therefore taken up the first part, and I shall religiously devote a few minutes to it till I have finished. As it is unrevised, I see there are many errors. I shall not attempt to correct them all, because that will mean a great deal of time. But I will correct those which I can without having to give more time. I want to open a questions column in Harijan if you will answer them regularly yourself or by deputy. You can coin questions yourself, as, for instance, how to make soap out of crude village soda and seed oil. How can you substitute paraffin by some village oil? How can you make good durable ink out of village material? Many such questions will arise as the movement progresses.

Love.

BAPU

SHRI SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA
CALCUTTA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter of 6th instant. I shall be glad to see you whenever you can come.

Yours sincerely,

MRS. SERMA G. SHAPLEIGH
C/O AMERICAN EXPRESS CO.
BOMBAY

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
282. LETTER TO APRAKASH CHANDRA MEHTA

February 9, 1935

MY DEAR APRAKASH CHANDRA,

I had your telegram and then your letter. So you have made your final choice. You can come as soon as you can. The sooner the better. Therefore, if Kalibabu relieves you earlier, you should come at once so that I can allot your task whilst we are still settling down. At the same time, however, I would not think of your coming here now if your early disengagement causes any inconvenience to the Tribune office.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI APRAKASH CHANDRA MEHTA
C/o “THE TRIBUNE”, LAHORE

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

283. LETTER TO ABDUL ALIM

February 9, 1935

MY DEAR ABDUL ALIM,

I had your letter of 12th December last which was lying hidden in the file of letters left by Satisbabu for me to read. On taking up the file, I found your letter. I hope the effects of famine have lessened.

Though you say that a sound mind cannot be generally in an unsound body, we often see that mind triumphs over the body and becomes sound even though the body may not respond. Therefore you have to strive and achieve your triumph over the diseased body, and it may be that even the body will respond to the mind. But whether it does or not, your mind will be free.

I am glad Satisbabu has been supplying you with a bi-weekly.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI ABDUL ALIM
Haji Villa, Kamaura
Talshahar Tippora

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
284. LETTER TO JUGATRAM DAVE

February 9, 1935

BHAI JUGATRAM,

Where is the need for me to send a message' when Sardar is the President. In spite of his being there, you ask for a message and hope to get it! Then tell the Raniparaj that they are not dependent on cities but cities are dependent on them. If at all they want to preserve their self-respect, they should themselves meet all their requirements and be self-reliant. We rarely need the things which we are not able to produce in the villages.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Harijanbandhu, 3-3-1935

285. LETTER TO TARABEHN N. MASHRUWALA

February 9, 1935

CHI. TARA,

I have your letter. I understand your hesitation in taking the responsibility. However, that hesitation alone will give you the strength to bear it and bring you credit. You did not go in search of the responsibility which has fallen on you. On the contrary it has been thrust upon you. You have modestly accepted it as your duty and your good lies in the fulfilment of it. Moreover the work you have taken up is clearly defined. So you will have no difficulty. Read carefully what I write for Harijan and put into practice what you have been able to grasp. If there is any difficulty, ask me without any hesitation.

I hope your parents are well and Nanabhai is not harassed by asthma. Where is Surendra? If he is there, tell him not to give up writing to me. I am often wanting to ask Kishorelal when he comeshere but due to my preoccupation I forget to do so. That is why I have asked you about Surendra.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI TARABEHN NANAHBHAI MASHRUWALA
AKOLA
BERAR

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6696. Also G.W. 4341. Courtesy: Kanubhai Mashruwala

1 For the eighth Raniparaj Conference to be held on February 19, 1935
2 Addressee’s brother
286. LETTER TO MADHAVJI V. THAKKAR

February 9, 1935

CHI. MADHAVJI,

I was feeling uneasy as there was no letter at all either from you or from Mahalakshmi. But then I received your letter. I hope that both of you bear in mind that your present *sadhana*¹ is for gaining greater ability for service. Sadhana can never be service.

How are the children?

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI MADHAVJI

15 TANGAR, ENTALY
CALCUTTA

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6827

287. LETTER TO RAOJIBHAI PATEL

Unrevised

[Before February 10, 1935]²

CHI. RAOJIBHAI,

I understand what you say about Lalita. She can not be forced to do anything against her will. You have done your duty if you do not participate in extravagant and undesirable expenditure.

Send me a sample of the paddy. I want to look at it and examine it after removing the husk. It is not very necessary to have a man for pounding. The husk can be removed by grinding ordinary paddy in a small hand-mill and separating the husk. Anyone can do this. The necessity of a man for pounding arises only for polishing the rice. That needs a little skill. But we do not want to polish the rice.

There is a variety of paddy whose husk is so stuck to the grain that it can only be removed with great difficulty. The husk from such paddy can be easily separated by steaming it first as in the case of whole pulses. This is how it is usually done. For this purpose the

¹ Spiritual discipline
² From the contents; vide “Letter to Raojibhai N. Patel”, 10-2-1935 and “Letter to Jethalal G. Sampat”, 6-3-1935 paddy is not boiled fully. Rice cooked by fully boiling the paddy tastes the sweetest. That is the experience of those who have tried it.

We involve ourselves in these processes only in order to make our own experiments and to publicize the results.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9014

288. LETTER TO CARL HEATH

WARDHA,
February 10, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your very kind letter. My considered opinion on your suggestion is that if you still think that its publication is required in the common interest, you should refer the question to Sir Samuel Hoare and Lord Halifax. If both of them desire publication, as distinguished from merely permitting it, you may publish it with an adequate preface. At this end, my presentiment tells me that its circulation amongst the politicians whose opinion counts should be enough. Lovers of true peace and brotherhood of the heart have a tough job before them.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

CARL HEATH, ESQ.
LONDON

From a photostat: G.N. 1029

289. LETTER TO AGATHA HARRISON

By Air Mail
February 10, 1935

MY DEAR AGATHA,

I have just received and read your letter of 29th ultimo. Please send the enclosed1 to Mr. Heath. I am sending it under the same cover to save a few good annas. This letter will be airmailed to you.

1 Vide the preceding item.
One part of your letter, therefore, is answered in my letter to Mr. Heath.

Now for the non-attendance at Mr. Raza Ali’s tea party. Whenever such invitations have come to me by design, there has been intimation given to me of it. Here it was a most casual invitation. Two days before the receipt of it, Raza Ali himself had seen me and engaged me in a heart-to-heart conversation about his mission in South Africa. He had arranged for the party already before he came to me. But he did not even inquire whether I would attend it. If I had received the invitation when he came, I would have opened the conversation myself. But I knew nothing of the party then, naturally nothing therefore of the invitation. The invitation card was buried in a heap of papers unacknowledged. Suddenly, the evening previous to the function, I thought that I must at least acknowledge it. And so, early in the morning (it was bitterly cold) I sent the note of which you have a copy. It was delivered by Pyarelal personally to Raza Ali. It was so delivered and sent so early in order that if there was any meaning behind the invitation I should know. Pyarelal saw Raza Ali. The latter beyond expressing his regret that I was not going said nothing. I concluded that there was no meaning behind it, and I had no time to waste in going to a function in which I could have no interest, and the like of which I never attend except [those] with some honourable purpose behind them. Here there was none. Indeed I felt that the Viceroy and everybody might even be embarrassed if I responded to a courteous invitation which the sender felt bound to send but would be glad if it was not accepted. This is the whole of the reason behind my non-acceptance.

At the time I wrote the letter, so far as I can now recall, I knew nothing of the invitations to Congress M. L. A. s. In any case, my non-acceptance had no connection with their non-acceptance. For them there was no other way. I was consulted about their attitude and I had given the opinion that they could not accept the invitation. But had I known that I was wanted at the meeting for the purpose of breaking the ice, I would unhesitatingly have gone. I am no longer a Congress member; and whilst I do nothing that would compromise the Congress because of my past connection with it, I would not hesitate to take action that Congressmen could not possibly take without diminishing the prestige of the Congress. I hope this explains to you the whole of my position. I have since learnt that the Viceroy would have been glad if I had gone. But I do not know whether that was a thought after the event or before. If it was before, a mere hint would have sufficed to send me to the tea party. And previous hints have invariably been given to me on such occasions.

I have C. F. Andrew’s letter. If he is still there, you will tell him, if not there, you will write to him saying that I shall not act hastily in whatever I may do and that ought to free him from all anxiety complex.

Love.

BAPU

Encl. 1

MISS AGATHA HARRISON
2 CRANBOURNE COURT
ALBERT BRIDGE ROAD, LONDON, S.W. 11

From a photostat: G.N. 1484

290. LETTER TO R. V. SASTRI

February 10, 1935

MY DEAR SASTRI,

I have your long letter, but none too long for your argument. The only argument that will be decisive is about the desirability of publication in Madras from the Harijan point of view itself. From your letter I gather that the existence of Harijan in Madras is a good thing and has proved its usefulness during the time it has been published there. I would like you to develop the argument further and show me if you can, in a concrete manner, why you think that it would be good to retain it in Madras. You won’t say that publication in Poona will not, in any shape or form, influence public opinion. The question, therefore, will be one of degree only. But I would accept the validity of the argument even if you convince me that its usefulness is greater in Madras than in Poona. Since you have raised that question, for which I was not prepared, I am writing¹ to Dewan Bahadur Bhashyam Iyengar and Shri Venkatasubbayya. So far as your own emoluments and your connection with me are concerned, both will be unaffected. Your living connection will remain as it is whilst you are editing Harijan. Therefore that consideration has to be eliminated. But if you are to be paid as editor, then your expenses should come from the Harijan receipts, and you have to make your editorship a living factor, which, so far as I can see today, it is not.

¹ Vide “Letter to V. Bhashyam Iyengar”, 11-2-1935

Please send a bound copy of all the numbers of Harijan, if we have copies from the start or from the time that they are procurable, to Prof. Sam Higginbottom and send him the bill, and put him down on the subscribers’ list. I enclose herewith his letter.

What terrible suspense the specialists leave one in! Poor Vishalakshi!

Love to you both.

Encl. 1

SHRI R. V. SASTRI
8c PYCROFTS ROAD
TRIPLICANE, MADRAS

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

291. LETTER TO P. NARAYANA REDDY

February 10, 1935

DEAR NARAYANA REDDY,

I have your letter. I am sorry I can’t send your suggestion for publication in Harijan. You are altogether wrong in thinking that I have started the village industries work because I believe that Harijan work is finished or because I have now transferred my love to something else. Village industry is a natural consequence of intense Harijan propaganda and complementary of it. You will see from the items that I have taken up that they affect Harijans first and foremost. It is they who live only on rice or atta and salt. If they get wholesome atta and rice, surely it is good, and if I agitated that they alone should eat unpolished rice and whole ground wheats they won’t understand it and the proposition can never be carried. Then again, the majority of those who were engaged in the husking of paddy were Harijans. It is they who have been displaced by the monstrous mills. You ought to understand that if the movement for better sanitation succeeds, so far as the Harijan scavengers are concerned the problem is solved, as it can be solved in no other fashion. All the four items with which you would start your mission are having attention for over two years. I am loath to believe that up to now you have not been following the Harijan movement at all; and yet your scheme betrays woeful ignorance of what is going on about you.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI P. NARAYANA REDDY, B.A., B.L.
PEDDATIPPASAMUDRAM. (CHITTOOR DT.)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

292. LETTER TO DAMODAR M. DAMLE

February 10, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. Agricultural improvement, I am fully aware, is essential for the prosperity of India’s millions. But I see many difficulties in our way if there is no active State aid. Nevertheless, if you will send me your first bulletin, I will go through it, and if I find it to be suitable for the pages of Harijan, I will gladly publish it. It will have to be authentic, that is, with authority for every assertion made in it.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI DAMODAR M. DAMLE, B.A., LL.B.
WUN (BERAR)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

293. LETTER TO C. VIJAYARAGHAVACHARIAR

February 10, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

In my haste to send you my reply by return post I forgot to refer to one matter which you mentioned in your first letter, namely, your desire to be with me for some time, if not for the balance of the evening of your life. Of course, you will be welcomed, whether you come for a few days or whether you come and take up your abode permanently. As you may know, I am now living with the staff of the All-India Village Industries Association on a site that has been donated by Jamnalalji. We are running a common kitchen. We are trying to reproduce, so far as it is at all possible for us, the village life, and we content ourselves with what villages can produce. We are altogether far from the ideal, but it is there.

Yours sincerely,

C. VIJAYARAGHAVACHARIAR
ARAMA
SALEM (S. INDIA)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

294. LETTER TO FEROZE GANDHI

February 10, 1935

MY DEAR FEROZE,

I have your letter. I understand Kamala’s desire to see me. I will try. I do not know when I would be able to do so. Lest I forget you should continue to remind me.

SHRI FEROZE GANDHI
16 STANLEY ROAD
ALLAHABAD

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

295. LETTER TO RAOJIBHAI N. PATEL

February 10, 1935

CHI. RAOJIBHAI,

I have received your postcard. I am yet to receive the paddy. I see that paddy is first husked. Let me know what kind of mill-stones are used for it? We are not concerned with any other processes except husking. You are in a position to make the best experiments as you are in the land of rice. How many days does it take for paddy to dry for husking after it is harvested? Or can it be husked immediately after it has been harvested? How much is the husk? How much paddy can be husked in an hour? What is its cost? Over and above this give me as much information as you can. There was a letter from Nathabhai about Lalitabehn. You must have read it.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI RAOJIBHAI NATHABHAI

LIMBASI

(MATAR TALUKA)

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9004

296. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

February 10, 1935

DEAR AMTUSSALAAM,

I read both your letters and was distressed. I have not done a thing for you and what could I have possibly done? It was not right to go [and live] in the jungle. If you will but listen to me, you will come here. All your troubles will disappear. I have written to Devdas to send you here. It will be a great favour to me if you comply with my suggestion. You can go back when all the rest have shifted to Harijan Colony. What can you do by living there at present except cause me anxiety? If you are not agreeable to my suggestion, you may live with Devdas. But you must leave Harijan Colony whether or not you agree even to the latter course. And I reiterate that I cannot compel Sharma. Please come away, do come away. I repeat it. And if that is not possible for you, for God’s sake, let us part company.

The stock of dates is exhausted.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Urdu: G.N. 315
297. LETTER TO VAMANRAO D. BURHANPURKAR

WARDHA,
February 11, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter as also your report and your manuscript. I must tackle the manuscript only when I get the time. I do not favour the ideal of village dispensaries. What I would like is to give the villagers sound instruction in elementary hygiene and sanitation. It is easy enough to give them instruction in preventive measures. And side by side with that, they may be given a knowledge of bazaar medicines and their effective use. So far as the use of bazaar medicines is concerned, the more I understand village life the more I realize how much they know of the value of indigenous drugs. Dispensaries for the 7,00,000 villages of India is almost an impossible proposition unless we have State control. Drugs, whether allopathic or ayurvedic, are expensive even when they are sold cheap—I mean expensive compared to the cost of bazaar medicines.

Could you please tell me, quoting authorities, why ayurvedic physicians regard cow’s milk and cow’s milk butter as superior to buffalo’s milk and buffalo’s milk butter?

Yours sincerely

VIDYA VAMANRAO D. BURHANPURKAR
45 CATHEDRAL STREET
BOMBAY 2

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

298. LETTER TO JANAMMAL

February 11, 1935

Your Hindi writing is quite good. You have no difficulty in expressing yourself correctly. And why do you expect me to laugh at your English? It is a wretched habit we have cultivated of not merely wanting to write perfectly grammatical English but also criticizing those who do not, whereas the very best men on the Continent think nothing of their mistakes in writing English. They concentrate only on correctly giving their meaning.
I am glad you are arranging to have the device put up at the Ashram for the hand-pounding of rice. But evidently you are all still labouring under a mistake. You do not want the pestle and mortar that is required for polishing. The removing of husk is done by grinding on a very light chakki. I have now discovered that chakkis for grinding are made of wood or pure mud for the simple reason that it is only the outer husk we want to remove without damaging the inner grain which can’t bear much weight. It is, therefore, a performance which even a child can undertake without any strain. No further process is required for preparing the rice for cooking.

My food is tomatoes, milk, almond paste and some bhaji, ordinarily palak, methi or luni. I have given up fruit just to reduce the cost. It is purely an experiment. I am keeping up weight at 109 lb. We are now living in the garden which you once visited. Prabhavati comes here every evening and passes the night here. Ramdas is in Bombay trying to regain health and confidence in himself. He is not doing badly.

Ambujam must have told you that the three girls who were to come to Madras do not want to, and I do not want to force them. Therefore, if you are opening the Ashram, you should do so without any fuss or ceremony. In that case you can start even with one girl as I have said to Ambujam in my talks with her. Vasumati will gladly come if she is still required. She is here for the purpose of going to Madras. It may be inadvisable to bring her down there merely for the sake of two girls. They can have such carding and ginning as Ambujam herself knows. But if both of you require Vasumati, she will fulfil her promise.

I have just received Ambujam’s letter. She may have to give more attention to her son than she expected. In that case you should be prepared to take charge of the Ashram. Can you do so? I hope you can.

SHRI JANAMMAL
“NARMADA” MOWBREYS ROAD, CATHEDRAL P.O.,
MADRAS

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
299. LETTER TO GIRIJA BHUSHAN DUTT

February 11, 1935

DEAR GIRIJABABU,

I have your letter. I have never asked Harijans to give up their poultry or anything else but carrion, beef-eating and intoxicants. They are certainly at liberty to take poultry, goats, sheep and whatever else they like and whatever other Hindus can lawfully take.

It will certainly be a great thing if you succeed in getting Harijan weavers to do their own spinning amongst their families. Every one of such families will always be able to keep the wolf from the door if they will adopt this method of combining spinning with weaving. I suggested it to nearly 10,000 weavers during the march near Sakhigopal.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI GIRIJA BHUSHAN DUTT

ANGUL HARIJAN SEVAK SANGH

ANGUL (ORISSA)

From a copy. Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

300. LETTER TO H. J. KHANDEKAR

February 11, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your postcard. Whilst I am most anxious that every public place should be open to Harijans without let or hindrance, I am unable to find finance for you to undertake the demonstration that you are contemplating. It requires a great deal of thinking out and can only be done under very strict discipline.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI H. J. KHANDEKAR

GENERAL SECRETARY

C. P. MAHAR YOUTH LEAGUE, ITWARI, NAGPUR

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
301. LETTER TO MOTILAL ROY

February 11, 1935

DEAR MOTIBABU,

I have your letter. I understand what you say. You will please let me know what finally happens in connection with khadi.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI MOTILAL ROY
PRABARTAK BHAVAN
61 BOWBAZAR STREET, CALCUTTA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

302. LETTER TO MOTASINGH PATARA

February 11, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

Your telegram to the All-India Village Industries Association Board has been transferred to me. I am sorry that I cannot participate in your Conference.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI MOTASINGH PATARA
JULLUNDUR

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

303. LETTER TO RAM KRISHNA BHARDWAJ

February 11, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I am glad that the institution which you are having will be under the aegis of the Sanatan Dharam Educational Board and that it has been decided to have Harijan girls side by side with the others.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI RAM KRISHNA BHARDWAJ
GENERAL SECRETARY
SANATAN DHARAM SABHA
QILLA GUJAR SINGH, LAHORE

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
304. LETTER TO V. M. NAWLE

February 11, 1935

MY DEAR NAWLE,

So you have returned after your round-the-world tour. What you say about Japan is quite true.

Yes, send me by post Whispers from Eternity by Swami Yogananda.

Yours sincerely,

DR. V. M. NAWLE
EDITOR, “DINABANDHOO” AND “HINDI-VIJAYA”
RASTA PETH, POONA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

305. LETTER TO P. S. S. RAMA IYER

February 11, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. It is difficult for me to try to remove your doubts. They can only be solved by prayerful waiting.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI P. S. S. RAMA IYER
SANKESWARAM VILLAGE
CHITTUR (COCHIN)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

306. LETTER TO V. BHASHYAM IYENGAR

February 11, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

Thakkar Bapa forwarded your letter to me. You have raised such important questions that I thought I should deal with them publicly. I send you an advance copy of the article for Harijan. I hope you approve of the method I have adopted of answering your question. If you have still any doubt, please do not hesitate to write to me.

Vide “Meaning of ‘Status’ , 15-2-1935
A suggestion has been made that Harijan should be retransferred to Poona. This will save Rs. 2,000 per year. Sastri has examined the question impersonally and he thinks that the publication of Harijan in Madras is a distinct advantage to the cause. Will you and Venkatasubbayya apply your minds to the problem and let me have your opinion? You are free to confer with Sastri and Ganesan.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

SHRI DEWAN BAHADUR V. BHASHYAM IYENGAR

‘VARDHINI’

KILPAUK, MADRAS

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

307. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

February 11, 1935

BHAJ THAKKAR BAPA,

Enclosed is a reply to Dewan Bahadur Bhashyam and others like him. Pass it on to Viyogi Hari for Harijansevak after you have read it. I am also writing to the Dewan Bahadur and sending him a copy. I have not so far received a single copy of the constitution. Send me a few.

Go at the problem of Ganesan patiently.

I am in correspondence with Sastri regarding Harijan.\footnote{Vide “Letter to R. V. Sastri”, 10-2-1935}

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1151

308. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

February 11, 1935

DEAR DAUGHTER AMTUSSALAAM,\footnote{The superscription and the subscription are in Urdu.}

I have your letter. What can I write to you? Though I had forbidden it, you went away to Patiala before you had got well. Now

\footnote{Vide the preceding item.}

\footnote{Vide “Letter to R. V. Sastri”, 10-2-1935}
what is the point in rushing from there simply because of my admonition! For no reason at all you cause misery to yourself and to me.

Amina’s address is: Dhandhuka, via Ahmedabad. The tailor’s name and address is with Bapa. You must, for the time being, forget this matter. We shall see about it when you are fit.

Someone recently told me of a remedy for megrim. Clear, cool water should be drawn in through the left nostril and brought out through the mouth. Taking water in a bowl, one should close the right nostril and put the left into the water, keeping the neck bent and the mouth closed. The water will automatically be drawn in. There is no harm even if some of it enters the stomach but as far as possible one should spit it out. One should sleep at night on the left side, keep the mouth shut and breathe through the right nostril.

Sharma again writes to say that I should not believe what you say about him.

I shall regard it a great favour or kindness on your part if you will now get well.

Any news of the cousin living near Ambala?

I am perfectly comfortable.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 317

309. SPEECH AT LAKSHMINARAYAN DEVASTHAN

February 11, 1935

Even though the temple dates back to 1907 the real pranpratistha of Shri Laxminarayan, according to Gandhiji took place on the day when the trustees of the temple opened it to Harijans. Since that day, Shri Laxminarayan could as well be called Daridranarayana, meaning God of the most helpless, as untouchables are today.

With the word Daridranarayana, villagers who are at present most discarded and heavily oppressed, came before his vision. He said that service of villagers was service of God.

1 The occasion was the 28th anniversary of the founding of the temple.
2 Sanctification ritual
The A. I. V. I. A. had this service as its aim, and the Mahatma exhorted the audience to take up its present programme in right earnest. He especially invited the Wardha public to co-operate and do their bit.

He referred to the five items of the A.I.V.I.A. programme, and asked the people to use chakki flour, unpolished village husked rice, gur and country ghani oil.

He told them of the advantages of using hand chakki flour, etc., and convinced the audience that their use would benefit the village producers and consumers.

He also referred to village sanitation and its importance in relation to village health. He directed the attention of the public to the fact that people in Sindh, near Wardha, eased on roadsides, and said that they should refrain from this habit.

He concluded his speech with the hope that Wardha would co-operate with the A. I. V. I. A. in the village work undertaken by it.

The Hindustan Times, 12-2-1935

310. LETTER TO N. R. MALKANI

WARDHA,
February 12, 1935

MY DEAR MALKANI,

You must have thought that I had forgotten all about the bye-laws, or perhaps, having gone to Assam, you have forgotten them altogether. And if you did so, you would be quite right, for I had taken over the burden from your shoulders. But I had not forgotten them at all. I returned to them again and again, but could not do anything. I had to read up the whole of the constitution anew in order to reply to the three posers from Dewan Bahadur Bhashyam Iyengar. 1 And I realize why I could not frame them. There is nothing more to do than what you have done already. The constitution itself is so full that, beyond what you have drawn up about accounts and the like, no further provision is necessary. The function of bye-laws is to provide for certain routine work which cannot very well be provided for in the main law. Bye-laws, therefore, are framed from time to time as the necessity for them arises. They must not take the place of administrative instructions or of resolutions that may be passed from time to time.

Early this morning, I was reading your instructions on the

1 Vide "Letter to V. Bhashyam Iyengar", 11-2-1935 and "Meaning of ‘Status’ "

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
constitution. You will remember you gave a copy to me two or three days before I left Delhi. I was never able to read them before early this morning. Having read them, I felt confirmed that neither I nor you had to draw anything just now. Your instructions are good and very business-like. Even what you have drawn up in the name of bye-laws are hardly such. But if you want to have something which you should call by the name of bye-laws, what you have drawn up will pass muster. I take it that you have kept copies of your draft. If you have not, I can send it. It is not yet destroyed.

Did I write to you that I had already written to Dialdas, and asked Thakkar Bapa to transfer his donation to the account for which he wanted it to be used?¹

An account of your Assam experiences I expect in the form of a note for Harijan. When do you shift the office to the Harijan Home? What is it to be finally known as? Harijan Colony, Harijan Home or what else?

Love.

BAPU

SHRI N. R. MALKANI
BIRLA MILLS, DELHI

Copy to Bapa.

From a photostat: G.N. 912

311. LETTER TO JAYARAMDAS JAYAWARDHANE

February 12, 1935

MY DEAR JAYARAMDAS,

It was good to have something from you after so many years even though it was a telegram. You are surely very unpractical. Malaria has been raging in Ceylon for some months now. Why not a word from you up to now? And then, a telegram? You should know that I had made investigations, and I was told that there was no need to send anything from here, that all the relief work was being done by government and that there were enough doctors also. Of course, all this may be fully wrong. But what can I do? Those who sent me appeals have been able to send me nothing except newspaper cuttings.

¹ Vide “Letter to Amritlal V, Thakkar”, 30-1-1935
It means that they themselves know nothing of the affected areas. If you know something, you should give chapter and verse which I can publish. It must be the evidence of your own senses, not any hearsay. You must say also who are the villagers that are affected. Not that it matters who they are, but surely the public ought to know who are affected, why they are affected, why their neighbours were not affected, or is the disease universal in Ceylon? These are all relevant questions. After all, I have no money of my own. I call only make an appeal to the charitable public. I cannot do so unless I can certify the veracity of the statements that come to me. If you can do that thing for me, it will be good.

Yours,

SHRI JAYARAMDAS JAYAWARDHANE
PAROPAKARA MANDALAYA
92 SAUNDERS PLACE, COLOMBO (CEYLON)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

312. LETTER TO AMBUJAMMAL

February 12, 1935

I have your letter. I have already written to Janammal. If you devote your remaining time to your son, it will be the best service you can render to the country. He has got to be looked after by somebody as a member of the State as much as the tallest citizen, and therefore demands State attention. Who can be better fitted than his mother to give it? All this argument would be mischievous and hypocritical if he had a selfish mother. If, as a result of tender care, he turns out to be a good servant of the country, surely it would be no small gain. I should not mind, therefore, your making his welfare your main purpose at the present moment. That would not interfere with your other services. You will still be able to give some attention to Hindi, some attention to Harijans, some attention to khadi and some attention to village industries. Your whole personal life would be guided always in accordance with the principles underlying these things. If your son can remain with you in the proposed Ashram, he should be with you, for at the present moment it is wholly unnecessary for you to advertise the Ashram. You can quietly take in a few girls and look after them. But if a settled life is impossible and you have to travel about with your son, you should give up the idea of taking in the girls unless Janammal will shoulder the responsibility. In all circumstances you must keep cheerful. May God help you to discharge your responsibility.

Love.

BAPU

SHRI AMBUJAMMAL
MADRAS

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

313. LETTER TO G. SITARAMA SASTRY

February 12, 1935

DEAR SITARAMA SASTRY,

I have your letter giving me a full answer to all my points, and enclosing your report on the Khaddar Samstanam.

From the description I am getting of the treatment of rice from the first husking to the last polishing, I imagine that your rice also does undergo one polish. In order to set my doubt at rest, please tell me how your first process of removing the husk is done.

SHRI G. SITARAMA SASTRY
VINAYA ASHRAM
CHANDOLE P. O., GUNTUR DT.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

314. LETTER TO THEO DE LA TOUCHE

February 12, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

You remind me of a paper sent by you so long ago as December 2, 1932. As you know, I have had many vicissitudes since then. Many of my papers have gone astray, many are lying buried somewhere. I have no recollection of your paper. Even if I could trace it or if you send another copy to me, I will not be able to read it in the near future so as to be of any use to you. I am sorry for disappointing you, but I am helpless.

Yours sincerely,

MON. THEO DE LA TOUCHE
SECUNDERABAD (DECCAN)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

315. LETTER TO C. NARAYANA RAO

February 12, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. I have no doubt that we need some legislation in connection with untouchability, and it will some in its time.

You should not mind the loss of service. Many have suffered like you. You should have confidence in your ability to earn an honest livelihood.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI C. NARAYANA RAO
LATE HEAD CLERK, EXCISE DEPARTMENT
PEDDA WALTAIR, UPLANDS WALTAIR P.O.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

316. LETTER TO MEHRTAJ

February 12, 1935

DEAR MEHRTAJ,

You ought to have written to me long ago. Nevertheless I was glad to have your letter. I am awaiting a reply from Father to my last letter¹, which is due to reach me any day.

I had a cursory glance through Baba’s speech. I saw that it was well received and that it was to the point.

Did you get from Zohra or Dr. Ansari the shawl you wanted and I had promised? It was chosen by Zohra. If you got it, did you like it? Of course it was paid for by Zohra. That is how I fulfil my promises, for I have no money of my own. I can only beg. And now Father too has very little money of his own.

¹ Vide “Letter to Abdul Ghaffar Khan”, 29-1-1935

216 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
When you begin going to school, you will tell me all about it.
Do write to me regularly. Are you keeping good health? It is quite warm here now. We are not living in the Ashram.
We are living in the garden to which you had a pleasure trip. We often think of you and wish you were with us.
Love.

SHRI MEHRTAJ
13 WINDSOR PLACE
NEW DELHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

317. LETTER TO MARIAM

February 12, 1935

MY DEAR MARIAM,

I was glad to see the few words from you written at the end of Father’s letter to me. I hope you are getting on well. You should write to me regularly and tell me all about your doings. Do you hear from Sadullah and from Sofia?

SHRI MARIAM
13 WINDSOR PLACE
NEW DELHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

318. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

WARDHA,
February 12/13, 1935

CHI. SHARMA.

I have your letter. I liked it immensely. Mistrust had arisen because Amtussalaam had written very strongly. It is no ordinary matter to be my associate. To renounce everything, to renounce attachment and to rejoice in the renunciation is not within everyone’s power. You have given up numerous things but so long as you do not have inner realization how can you have inner joy? And one who lacks inner joy is prone to anger, to sickness and may be up to anything.

VOL.66: 16 DECEMBER, 1934-24 APRIL, 1935 217
I shall now consider all that you write as coming from the heart. You must understand that there is a little difficulty here and the reason for the difficulty is your hastiness, your anger, and if, in your haste and anger you should write something and I accept it as truly meant, it will not be right. But I see no alternative if I am to deal with you. I like your keeping a cow but bear in mind that you are not to incur any debt. Your contact with the Harijans is also to the good.

The thought of your medical studies occurs to me daily. I have written to Dr. Ansari but there is no saying when he will answer. And how can we complain? He takes up more work than he is equal to.

I do not know which is the better thing. I have no information regarding the curriculum in Madras but I can find out. It will not be possible for you to live with a surgeon. Would you be willing to go alone? I could not bear to have Draupadi living in Khurja all by herself. What appeals to me most is for her to be with me, work for me and put up with Ba’s temper. Your task and mine will become easier when she is prepared for this. I have built many hopes on you. I feel I can take much service from you once you have rid yourself of all your blemishes. After all even if you go to the West I could never agree to Draupadi and the children accompanying you, because I consider it unnecessary. If I am prepared to send you, it is only to disillusion you about the West. True nature cure is to be found in the villages. All the knowledge the West has to offer can be got from the books. The rest is to come only from the villages. And in the end the service we wish to render will be to the villagers. Think over all this and tell me what you consider it is best to do. Can Draupadi stay with me?

Your time-table is good. What books do you read and what do you teach the children?

Is the flour ground at home? Is the rice unpolished? I have only now learnt that unpolished rice does not come to the market at all. I hear that it is very easy to husk rice without polishing it. I have grown some paddy and intend to try and get it husked here.

Who is the Pandit teaching your children? I wonder if you will

---

1 Vide “Letter to Dr. M. A. Ansari”, 5-2-1935 be able to decipher this letter.¹ I write with the right hand only on Mondays. It needs a little rest.

_Blessings from_

_BAPU_

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 3154

319. LETTER TO MANILAL AND SUSHILA GANDHI

WARDHA,

_February 13, 1935_

CHI. MANILAL AND SUSHILA,

I have your separate letters. I will reply to Dool’s letter. You should both get acquainted with the new agent. I had a casual talk with him about you. I have most probably written to you about it. Manilal can be said to have done well in Rhodesia. Sushila has given a considerably good account of settlers there. What do the expenses of the two of you come to? You must be making up a statement of accounts every year or every six months. So send me a copy of the latest.

Sushila has asked me a question about sugar-cane juice. It has the same properties as jaggery, only in a larger measure. A man can retain strength and survive for some time on sugar-cane juice only. It is laxative if taken hot. One who takes sugar-cane juice does not need sugar or jaggery at all. Either hot or cold sugar-cane juice should be taken with a lemon squeezed into it. What its other qualities are over and above this I do not know.

You must have received a lengthy letter I wrote to you about Sita’s education.² Ramdas has completely given up the idea of going there. At present there is no question of my going to jail. One could say it is not likely till the month of May.

The German who called on you was Khuro. However, there was also an Englishman who stayed with me. His name is Rees Jones. He stays permanently in Durban and I had asked him to go to Phoenix. When he does you should get acquainted with him. He is a very nice man.

¹ The letter was dictated.
² The letter is not traceable.
Kishorelal and Gomati are still here. They meet me daily. Both are well. Tara had come to see me. She has chosen [All-India Village] Industries Association as her field of work.

Ramdas is keeping well. Devdas is well. Rajaji arrived only yesterday. He will return today. Kanti is here at present. He will stay with me only.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4832

320. LETTER TO BHAGWANJI P. PANDYA

February 13, 1935

CHI. BHAGWANJI,

I have received your letter. The previous one was also received. Perhaps it is still lying in the office. I am not able to cope with my daily mail every day, so I am dictating the reply to your latest letter immediately on receiving it.

You have done well in reducing the quantity of milk. You will get the necessary nourishment if you continue to take raw vegetables and fruit. By way of raw vegetables you can have spinach, luni, cabbage, radish, carrots, turnips, fenugreek leaves and mustard leaves. You can also have tender leaves of radish, turnips and carrots. You can increase the intake of raw vegetables gradually by an ounce every day, but do not take more than 8 ounces of it. You can have with it papawa, lemons, bananas, raisins, etc. Do not take more than four lb. of milk.

For pain get yourself massaged and take sun-bath by exposing the affected portion to the rays—you will be cured of it.

Write to me your programme again.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

Tell Ramji that Bapu wants him to do whatever is possible for cow’s milk. I cannot do anything from here.

SHRI BHAGWANJIBHAI
HARIJAN ASHRAM
SABARMATI (GUJARAT) B.B. & C.I. RLY.

From Gujarati: C.W. 374. Courtesy: Bhagwanji P. Pandya

220 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
321. LETTER TO RAJENDRA PRASAD

February 13, 1935

BHAI RAJENDRABABU,

I replied to your letter by a telegram but Rajaji arrived here yesterday. The fact is that on hearing the news I sent a wire and a letter too in reply to the correspondent’s wire. He has sent the following reply:

We have no further information than what has appeared in the newspapers which may be consulted. The funds are collected by the Government.

Upon this I telegraphed to Rajaji to send someone to Ceylon. He either wrote or sent a wire to his friend who answered that no outside help was needed. Since then I have been silent. In my opinion someone should be sent there before any appeal is issued and that we have to do. Only a man of standing should go. Anyway my mind is at peace. The day before yesterday a wire reached me from someone who had been at the Ashram. He too has supplied no facts. I have asked him to let me know what exactly happened and shall write to you further on hearing from him. I have had a talk with Rajaji. He expresses the same opinion as he did before. You will do what you think best.

I hope you are keeping well. We shall be meeting in March perhaps.

Blessings from

From Hindi: C.W. 9746. Courtesy: Rejendra Prasad

322. LETTER TO G. RAMACHANDRAN

WARDHA,
February 14, 1935

MY DEAR RAMACHANDRAN,

Devadas told me all about it. Then I read the correspondence and now Kanti is here. He will remain with me. So far as I can see it has been all a mental, one-sided affair, the poor little girl knowing nothing. Evidently your sister knows everything and when the girl is

1 Vide “Letter to Jayaramdas Jayawardhane”, 12-2-1935 fit to make her choice, she would like her to choose Kanti. Of course for me, Kanti has fallen from the ideal which I had hoped he would live up to. But what does his fall matter in the debris of many of my hopes? I do not blame him, for he could not go against his fundamental being. I do not know how far his conduct has hurt you. I know you have forgiven him. Good will come out of it if this discovery of his affection for the girl steadies him and makes him firm in his resolution that even if she makes another choice, he will love no other girl. I see no harm in Kanti harbouring her in his bosom. He is on corresponding terms with your sister. You will now tell me without reserve what you will have me or Kanti to do.

Love.

BAPU

From a copy: C.W. 9739. Courtesy: Kantilal Gandhi

323. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

February 14, 1935

CHI. JAMNALAL,

Rajaji had come and has left. I had written to you about Keshu. You appear to have forgotten to write about it. I am still carrying on correspondence with him.

I am unperturbed about Krishnadas. A letter¹ for Ramibai is enclosed herewith. If you think it proper, pass it on to her. I will be glad if you can reach here around the 20th. But come only if the doctor permits you.

Your ear should be completely cured by now.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

I have forgotten to write about Ghani’s expenses. He had asked for Rs. 60. Khan Saheb wanted him to manage with Rs. 30. What is Rameshwar’s opinion of him? Does he give him (Ghani) any work? Is he friendly with him?

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2957

¹ Not traceable
324. LETTER TO MADALASA BAJAJ

February 14, 1935

CHI. MADALASA,

You have been writing fairly regularly. I certainly like your having stayed on there. I want to see you glowing with health. Body and mind are so closely connected with each other that the purity of one is to a large extent dependent on the purity of the other. There is even a saying in English in support of this. In one Upanishad a similar thing is said about food. A man’s character is determined by the food he eats. Doesn’t the line in the Gita, which says that from food grow living beings, suggest the same thing? You should therefore become—you can become—perfectly healthy. Consider this also a part of your study.

Om sleeps by my side and spends the day at the Kanyashram.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, p. 316

325. LETTER TO HARILAL GANDHI

February 14, 1935

CHI. HARILAL,

I have received your letter. It is my earnest desire to have you with me if you can come willingly. I think of you every day. If you have come to have the same faith about the truthfulness of my life, your place from now on is with me. What you hope to get in Amreli can be had here and in the neighbourhood. And if you are in a position to do some work, I have plenty of it. Moreover you will have an unlimited number of good companions here. The most weighty argument is that there is no certainty about me. One cannot say when I may get the invitation to go to the temple\(^1\). I would therefore like you to be with me. Now you do whatever you deem proper. Kanti will write to you about the other part of the letter. Maybe we shall meet very soon.

\(^1\) Jail

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 1537. Courtesy: Munubehn S. Mashruwala

326. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

February 14, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

I am enclosing a letter for Harilal. You are not to remain neutral in this matter. You have to guide me, and Harilal too. You are near him whereas I am far away.

Kanti is here just now and will remain here for the present. See if anybody there has Gatulalji’s verse translation of the Gita. I need it, but can’t get a copy anywhere.

I hope you know that Kale’s machine is with me just now and I am testing it. We have started husking paddy here. I did it in an ordinary quern set up for light grinding.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8430. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

327. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

February 14, 1935

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

The right hand has struck work. I had got your letter. I also got afterwards the description of your meeting. It was good that you met. Keep up correspondence now.

I hope the nose does not give you trouble.

1 Vide the preceding item.
2 Spinning-wheel made for prize-winning competition
3 With Sir Henry Craik, Home Member of the Viceroy’s Executive council. G. D. Birla had arranged the meeting.
When do you plan to come here? Fix the date.

Have a discussion with Pyarelal.

I have assumed charge of the kitchen. My work has completely changed. It has become heavier than I had thought. But why complain about it? Mahadev is expected tomorrow.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

SARDAR VALLABHBHAI PATEL
89 WARDEN ROAD
BOMBAY

[From Gujarati]

_Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhai, pp. 152-3_

328. LETTER TO JETHALAL G. SAMPAT

_February 14, 1935_

CHI. JETHALAL,

Durgaprasad sent me a bill, and I paid up Rs. 30-10 as. It did give me a surprise. Now if that money has to be paid from the account there, please send me the amount. We need not publicize our activities in order to counter their false propaganda. It has yielded no results. From this people will have fully understood its nature.

I will know about Vinoba’s experiences from him only. They are bound to be good. Do the people of your region eat rice or wheat? What is the main crop of your region? I am making experiments in husking paddy and making them eat unpolished rice here. You will find the results in _Harijanbandhu_ and _Harijansevak_.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From Gujarati: C.W. 9849. Courtesy: Narayan J. Sampat
329. LETTER TO R.

February 14, 1935

CHI.

Read the letter for... and pass it on to her. If there has been a lapse, who are you and I to condemn or punish? We are all beggars for mercy and God is the only doer. Proper care must be taken if she is pregnant. Both of you should come here and we shall talk it over. In any case your passions must subside to nothingness.

I hope at least your health is good.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 207

330. GREEN LEAVES

Take up any modern text-book on food or vitamins, and you will find in it a strong recommendation to take a few edible green leaves uncooked at every meal. Of course, these should always be well washed half a dozen times to remove all dirt. These leaves are to be had in every village for the trouble of picking. And yet greens are supposed to be only a delicacy of cities. Villagers in many parts of India live on dal and rice or roti, and plenty of chillies, which harm the system. Since the economic reorganization of villages has been commenced with food reform it is necessary to find out the simplest and cheapest foods that would enable villagers to regain lost health. The addition of green leaves to their meals will enable villagers to avoid many disease from which they are now suffering. The villagers’ food is deficient in vitamins; many of them can be supplied by fresh green leaves. An eminent English doctor told me in Delhi that a proper use of green leaves was calculated to revolutionize the customary notions of food and that much of what was today being supplied by milk might be supplied by green leaves. That, of course, means elaborate research and examination in detail of the nourishing properties of the innumerable leaves that are to be found hidden among the grasses that grow wild in India.

1 The names have been omitted.
2 Ibid
For nearly five months I have been living entirely on uncooked foods. I used to take what appeared to me an enormous quantity of a vegetable every day. For the past five months I have been taking green leaves in the place of cooked leaves or other vegetable. It then seemed to me monstrous that I should have to depend upon the Wardha bazaar for the few ounces of leaves I needed. One fine morning Sjt. Chhotelalji of the Wardha Ashram brought to me a leaf that was growing wild among the Ashram grasses. It was _luni_. I tried it, and it agreed with me. Another day he brought _chakwat_. That also agreed. But before recommending these jungle leaves to the public, I thought I would have them botanically identified. Here is the result, through the kind courtesy of Prof. J. P. Trivedi. The quotations are from Watt’s monumental volumes on The Economic Products of India.

Since these were received, I had introduced to me the leaves of _sarsav, suva_, turnip-tops, carrot-tops, radish-tops and pea-plant leaves. Besides these, it is hardly necessary to state that the radish, turnip and carrot tubers are also known to be edible in their raw state. It is waste of money and ‘good’ taste to cook these leaves or tubers. The vitamins contained in these vegetables are wholly or partially lost in cooking. I have called cooking these waste of ‘good’ taste, because the uncooked vegetables have a natural good taste of their own which is destroyed by cooking.

_Harijan_, 15-2-1935

331. WANTED

People have been sending donations in cash for the All-India Village Industries Association. But there are other donations also required by the Association. There is the literature on village industries, on indigenous herbs found for the picking on village fields, and specimens of articles manufactured in villages. All these are things that are required for the museum which is being set up by the Association. There are also village _kelus_ in use in different parts of India for pressing oils and pressing cane. The two are different types,

---

1. The quotations, giving the various local names and properties and uses of _luni_ (Indian purslane) and _chakwat_ (white goose-foot), are not reproduced here.
2. This was published under “Notes”.

VOL.66: 16 DECEMBER, 1934-24 APRIL, 1935 227
and each type differs also according to the province in which it is used. If those who are interested in village industries would take the trouble of finding out the various instruments of production and send them to the Central Office, it will be the business of the Office to classify them, to experiment on them and to recommend those which may be considered to be the best by the experts. If anybody has in his possession Watts’s Dictionary of Economic Products of India, Lt-Col. Kirtikar’s Indian Medicinal Plants or Nadkarni’s Indian Herbs, which he does not use and is not likely to use, he will certainly put them to use by presenting these volumes to the Association.

Harijan, 15-2-1935

332. ALL ABOUT RICE

The problem of rice is daily presenting interesting features. Shri Shankerlal Banker has already commenced experiments unpolished rice. He writes:

1

The only comment I would like to offer on this letter is that I do not think that any further medical opinion will help. The opinion I have gathered and reproduced in these columns is emphatic in favour of unpolished rice. But so far as I am aware we have nothing in medical literature describing experiments on which Shri Banker has, like many of us, made the commencement. Proof of the pudding is in the eating; let everyone make the experiment for himself.

One caution, however, as a practised cook, I would like to utter. Among the many domestic quarrels I used to have with my wife was one over rice-cooking. She would have every grain separated. I had developed into a dietetic reformer and I knew that that rice was not half as good as that which was well and properly cooked. Not an ounce of water in which I cooked rice was thrown away. But at that time I knew no distinction between polished and unpolished rice. I simply took the ordinary bazaar rice and cooked it through till it became one mass. The reader will be glad to know that the quarrel ended in a victory for the reform, and the wife became a convert to properly cooked rice. The precaution about unpolished rice is all the

---

1 The quotation is not reproduced here. Banker had asserted that contrary to the opinion of some, unpolished rice was not difficult to digest and suggested that Gandhiji might elicit authentic information on the point.
more necessary, because the pericarp of rice, which contains all its richer constituents, requires to be cooked thoroughly. Therefore, if un-polished rice is soaked in cold water for at least three hours before cooking, and then well boiled, there is not only no danger of its proving indigestible, but it will be decidedly more palatable, as has already been found at Maganwadi, the abode of the Association in Wardha. We have been having here what may be called half-polished rice, not the perfect variety that is described in the foregoing letter. Nevertheless, the rice is well cooked. Nobody has complained about its indigestibility. But, being far more nutritious than polished rice, which is about pure starch, naturally unpolished rice cannot be, and must not be, eaten in the same quantity as polished rice. This is true of all conservative cookery.

_Harijan, 15-2-1935_

333. MEANING OF ‘STATUS’

A very valued Harijan sevak puts the following question arising out of the working of the recently passed\(^1\) new constitution.

The term ‘status’ in the pledges A and B. If by this term is meant that in the eye of God there is no superior or inferior human being, as in the eye of law there is none, our members are prepared to subscribe to it. That is to say, they accept it as a religious or philosophical doctrine, the status referred to being spiritual. But if by it is meant that no difference in worldly status should be recognized as between master and servant, teacher and pupil, husband and wife, judge and prisoner and so on, it is difficult for us to sign the pledge. Kindly let me know if it is spiritual and not worldly status that is meant here.

Here is the portion of the pledge referred to.

I do not consider any human being as inferior to me in status and I should strive my utmost to live up to that belief.

I should think that the answer is given in the pledge itself. Evidently, however, equality has been confused by the writer with obliteration of differences. If there were no differences or no varieties, there would be no phenomenal world, and the question of equality, i.e., inferiority and superiority, would not arise at all. But when God became many, differentiation became a necessity of the case, it would be surely rebellion against the Maker for any of the component parts to claim superiority over others. They must be all equal in status, though different in stature, colour, form, qualities, etc. Husband and wife, pupil and teacher, master and servant, judge and criminal, jailor and prisoner are undoubtedly different, but woe betide the husband who considers himself as superior to his wife, or the master as superior to his servant, of the judge as superior to the condemned criminal. All the misery in the world is born of the belief in inequality. Untouchability as Hindus practise it is its extreme form. And what can be more appropriate than that a Harijan sevak should, whilst purging himself of the ancestral taint, think inwardly and get rid altogether of the poison of inequality? But what is to be the mark of a master who considers his servant to be his inferior and of the one who considers him to be his equal? Well, the one has no consideration for his servant, for he has no interest in him save that he wants service from him against the pay he receives. The other treats him as a member of his family. Old servants in godfearing families take the place of parents to their masters’ children. The masters are sharers in their servants’ misfortunes and trials. The servants do not feel that they are any different from their masters, whom they will even upbraid if they go wrong. The difference between the superior master and the humble master is the difference between chalk and cheese. It is a difference in kind, not merely in degree. We are all far from the attainment of this equality, though it is natural and becoming to us as human beings endowed with reason and heart. But it is our duty, as also privilege, to strive to enforce that belief in daily life and not merely hope to live it in the world hereafter. If we do not make an honest effort, what can be the meaning of equality in the eye of the law?

---

\(^1\) The constitution of the Harijan Sevak Sangh was adopted on January 2, 1935.

This friend, who is a conscientious honorary and honoured worker in the cause, has also difficulty in understanding the implications of the expression ‘whole-time workers’ occurring in Rule 10 of the constitution, which provides for one-third of Provincial Boards being whole-time workers. His difficulty is real, because there is nothing to suggest in the rule that they should or may be paid workers. As I was present when the constitution was being patiently hammered into shape, I can easily fill in the gap which was purposely left there. A permanent paid service by whole-time workers is in contemplation. It is already in the process of formation. It will not exclude honorary whole-time workers who have means enough to enable them to give their whole time to the work. The word ‘paid’ seemed also to be offensive in this connection. Hence it was dropped.
But it is clearly contemplated that one-third of the workers should be drawn from paid whole-time workers wherever they might be available, always assuming that they possess other qualifications for the responsible office.

The friend has a third difficulty which he states as follows:

The members of our Board, and especially the Harijan members, desire that Rule 24 should be modified by inserting a minimum proportion of one-third in the place of “as many Harijan members as it is possible to secure”. In a place like Madras, it is easily possible to secure 15 Harijan members, and as the rule now stands, it would not be permissible to put any others on the Board. That would defeat the very object of the Sangh, which is the service of Harijans by non-Harijan Hindus.

The difficulty arises, perhaps, from his overlooking the clause consistently with its maximum”. Let me give the whole sentence in the rule. “Every Board or Committee shall have as many Harijan members as it is possible to secure consistently with its maximum.” The qualifying clause was intentionally put to avoid the interpretation sought to be placed upon the rule. The suggested alteration was considered by the Board at Delhi. But many members had experienced difficulties in securing suitable Harijans to make one-third of the membership of their Boards. The existing rule meets both the difficulties.

I must, however, reiterate my own faith here. I was opposed, as I am even now, to the inclusion of Harijans in Harijan Sevak Boards. If the Harijan Sevak Sangh is a society of penitent debtors, as it has been conceived to be, it can contain no creditors. Creditors are there. They will some day or other dictate their terms. Today the vast majority are helpless. Some even believe that they would commit a heinous sin if they regarded themselves as anything but the meanest and tabooed creation of God. The penitent caste Hindu has to render service in all humility. It may or may not be accepted. His repentance may be too late. But whether late or in time, he must perform it. He can’t have Harijans to do for him. No wonder, with the possible interpretation put upon the rule, the Harijan friends were frightened to shoulder the burden. Were they to do penance themselves or to impose it on caste Hindus, who would not be on the Board at all?

But the tangible difficulty of members from the different provinces who wanted some Harijans on their Boards overrode my opposition. My ideal had to recede before their hard experience. The proper, unstrained interpretation of the rule, therefore, is that the Harijan Sevak Boards are to contain as many Harijans as possible, but always containing a preponderating majority of caste Hindus who shall not be less than two-thirds of the whole Board. But they are not bound to have even one-third Harijans if duly qualified persons cannot be secured. The pledge to be signed by them has been purposely made extremely light and simple. There should, therefore, be no difficulty in securing one-third Harijan members. The rule being there, it must be honestly worked.

_Harijan, 15-2-1935_

334. LETTER TO KRISHNA KRIPALANI

_WARDHA_,

_February 15, 1935_

MY DEAR KRIPALANI,

You are voracious. What is the use of your asking me to contribute to the forthcoming quarterly? I have absolutely no time to spare. All friends in Santiniketan have known this and therefore have spared me. After all you will have no dearth of first-class contributors.

_Yours sincerely,_

_SJT. KRISHNA KRIPALANI_
_SANTINIKETAN_

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

335. LETTER TO SUSHIL KUMAR SEN

_February 15, 1935_

DEAR FRIEND,

I had your respected father’s letter. I was distressed to learn of his illness. I hope he will soon recover. Then you send your considered opinion on my questionnaire\(^1\). I would like you to quote the Ayurvedic text in support of your statement. I am aware of the modern scientists' opinion on the comparative qualities of different milks.

\(^1\) _Vide “A Questionnaire”, 5-2-1935 and “Letter to Gananath Sen”, 7-2-1935_

KAVIRAJ SUSHIL KUMAR SEN
KALPATARU PALACE
CHITTARANJAN AVENUE NORTH, CALCUTTA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

336. LETTER TO G. K. V. DEVAR

February 15, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

You must not believe all that may be reported of me. But I can say this much that the women of our villages are not slaves. They are mistresses of their households and I do say also that they are not compelled in the matter of child-bearing by their husbands.

SIT. G. K. V. DEVAR, B.A., B.L.
GUNTUR

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

337. A LETTER

WARDHA,
February 16, 1935

DEAR FRIEND.

I have your letter. I would advise you to confer with Lala Hardhyan Singh who has been appointed agent¹ for Delhi. He will certainly take all the assistance he can from you.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

338. LETTER TO DR. M. A. ANSARI

February 16, 1935

DEAR DR. ANSARI,

I was afraid that you were fast losing what you had gained when in Europe. If you go on like that, you will presently give India a bad

¹ Son of Gananath Sen
² Of All-India Village Industries Association
name and everybody, [who] wanted to be or remain well, will be going to Europe. For the sake, therefore, of the good name of India you have to show us a way of life whereby we may repair our bodies in India itself or keep intact. And before you entitle yourself to do so you will have to follow the prescription, “Physician heal thyself”. I hope you will not desert the Board or the Committee. You need not take any great active part requiring much strain. But your counsel cannot be dispensed with. That is my opinion.

Yours sincerely,

DR. ANSARI
DARIAGANJ
DELHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

339. LETTER TO DR. GOPICHAND BHARGAVA
February 16, 1935

DEAR DR. GOPICHAND,

Arjun Deo, the writer of the enclosed, has been in correspondence with me now for nearly a month. He wanted to come here. I wrote to him that was neither possible nor desirable. He should seek the assistance of places nearest his abode. He seems, therefore, to have come to Lahore. I have advised him to approach you. You will examine him, make his acquaintance, find out his credentials, and do whatever is needed. I hope the village work is getting on nicely.

Yours sincerely,

DR. GOPICHAND
LAHORE

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

340. LETTER TO AMIYA
WARDHA,
February 16, 1935

DEAR AMIYA,

Father tells me you are about to enter a new state. May you and yours lead a happy life of useful service to the country. Remember that marriage is a sacrament. You are therefore presently to take up a new and sacred trust in life. May God give you and yours strength to discharge it.

1 This is not traceable

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

341. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

February 16, 1935

CHI. BRIJKRISHNA,

I have your letter.

Can you not pursue your efforts from here? But you should follow your own inclination.

I shall see about Hardhyan Singhji. It is up to him to define his own sphere of work. In Delhi too I told him the same thing.

Let me know the title, etc., of the Hindi book that is with you.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI BRIJKRISHNA

KATRA KHUSHALRAI

DELHI

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 2440

342. LETTER TO RAMESHCHANDRA

February 16, 1935

BHAI RAMESHCHANDRAJI,

Your letter is pertinent. We cannot discriminate on the basis of different religious faiths such as Hindus or Muslim or any other. I know many Muslims who scrupulously follow the rules of cleanliness. A few of them are even vegetarians. Therefore it would suffice if we restricted ourselves to eating and drinking wherever the rules of hygiene are observed. For my part I dislike any kind of inoculation... but the ones involving blood, etc., are to be totally shunned. The ones involving vegetable or mineral substances are not to be avoided to that extent.

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 6093

343. LETTER TO SURESH SINGH

February 16, 1935

BHAI SURESH SINGH,

I have your letter. Whatever is possible should be done. Who is the custodian appointed by the Court of Wards? You should adopt all possible simplicity in your life. Keep writing to me. Serve villagers to the extent you can.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 8689

344. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

Unrevised

WARDHA,

February 18, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

Your letter of 5th instant is still before me.
A parcel of envelopes was sent to you the other day.
The writers’ cramp is still there. I wrote today for Harijan and a few brief letters. But that was about all I could do for the day with the right hand.

I know that your entry and that of women like you into the village movement will make it artistic and attractive.

I take it that Shummy’s name may now appear on the Board of Advisers. Never mind his ignorance. It takes a wise man to own his ignorance. And have not doctors to unlearn many things if they would serve villagers? Please tell me his full name and title for the Association Register. My love and thanks to him.

1 Addressee’s brother Lt. Col. Kanwar Shamsher Singh, a retired surgeon
I am glad you have commenced your visits to villages. I wish it were possible for you to lessen your desk work and increase concrete village work. But I see you have a special gift for writing work. Your organization perhaps can’t do without the quantity of work you are giving it. Only, please take care not to overwork yourself by reason of your having taken up village work.

I have passed on your message to Kumarappa. You are quite right in not taking member’s pledges indiscriminately.

Here is my message to Harijans:

“Please tell Harijans that in the movement for self-purification that is going on at present, they are expected not to copy the vices and errors of the so-called caste Hindus. I was therefore distressed to find that child-marriages were as common among them as among some caste Hindus. It is a cruel custom having nothing of good in it. They should also know that it has been declared illegal by special legislation. I hope therefore that Harijans will make a great effort to rid themselves of this evil custom.”

I hope this meets your requirements.

Mira had a bad motor accident. All her companions were hurt. One of them was very badly hurt. She was the least injured. The car was smashed to pieces. They were all thrown up in the air. It was a miraculous escape. The one who was seriously injured is lying in the local hospital. He is out of danger. No one dies without His will.

Love,

BAPU

SHRI RAJKUMARI AMRIT KAUR
JULLUNDUR CITY

From the original: C.W. 3522. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6331

345. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

February 18, 1935

CHI. SHARMA,

I have your letter. Even today my hand is not fit enough to write. But I have written for Harijan, so why not this too?

Are you prepared to leave Draupadi and the children with me

1 Vide also “Letter to Amrit kaur”, 2-2-1935
while you go abroad? What can Draupadi do there? And I would not like it either that a mother should leave behind her children. It is enough that I have agreed to send you.¹ Not that I see any benefit from it now but I feel that it is to your good. After all you are bound to gain something from the visit.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

There is no need to wait till Friday or Saturday to reply to me.

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 3152

346. TELEGRAM TO P. R. NAGU²

WARDHAGANI,
February 19, 1935

P. R. NAGU
BOGALE

HOPE YOU WILL REVIVE RIGHT KIND INDUSTRIES.

GANDHI

From a photostat: C. W. 11076. Courtesy: P. R. Nagu

347. LETTER TO BUDHABHAI AND JUTHABHAI

WARDHA,
February 19, 1935

BHAI BUDHABHAI AND JUTHABHAI,

You have given me good news. Send a sample of the salt you have obtained to Satisbabu at 15, College Square, Calcutta. Give him my name and also the details of the process by which you got the salt. Send him, and me as well, the samples of the soap you have made. We shall proceed further on receiving Satisbabu’s report.

¹ Some words of this and the preceding sentence are illegible.
² This was in reply to the addressee’s telegram which read: “. . . lakhs of artisans and agriculturists who had given shape to sky-reaching towers and fine beautiful sculptures to be wondered [at] and praised by the world, but had been set aside as daily coolies under the foreign rule, will certainly be benefited by the cottage industries scheme of your respectful and noble self.”
Many inventions like yours remained unutilized because of our foolishness. No one will have to starve if we know how to put to proper use the wealth lavished by God on this country. Go on doing whatever you are able to do.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4589

348. LETTER TO NARAHARI D. PARikh

February 19, 1935

CHI. NARAHARI,

I have been the defaulter. Every day I think of writing to you but have to postpone it. Today I have set aside other letters and have taken up yours. My right hand is out of form. That also is a handicap. What is one to do when life is so short and the things to do so many? Now I have again become a cook.

1. Take it that I have a right to appoint a Gram Seva Samiti and I appoint Jugatram a member as well as trustee of the Fund in place of Kakasaheb.

2. If Sardar also desires it, then let the Gram Seva Samiti and Jain Sahitya Prachar Samiti form a part of Vidyapith. I assume that Kakasaheb has no suggestions to make in this matter. I write this because I often forget what happened in the past.

3. I would definitely like it if the children of Ras and other places who are scattered over different places are brought to one place and a school is started for them. I shall concur if you all and Sardar do that.

4. The question of girls’ education is worth considering. Savarna Hindus should not dominate in a Harijan Ashram. Its buildings should never be used in a way which would put us to shame later. And who would look after that work? Do not involve yourself in any other activity. The person who went to Godhra Ashram found the work dull there. Bear in mind that so far that work has been most despised. I am, therefore, doubtful about starting something exclusively for girls. Raojibhai has started something. What about that? You may take me as being indifferent with regard to this enterprise.
Your four questions are covered in this. Pyarelal arrived today all of a sudden. I am increasing the population and there is a shortage of accommodation. God will look after everything.

Tell Parikshitlal that so far there is no one in my mind for Godhra.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9071

349. LETTER TO PARMANAND K. KAPADIA

February 19, 1935

BHAI PARMANAND,

You have done well in writing to me. There is no difference between what is addressed to you and what is addressed to me. Kakasaheb will have this experience with my full consent. It is better to have authoritative information about the place where so many Gujaratis and other Indians go and seem to get peace of mind. You and I must have no fear about Kakasaheb. It is good for him to have the experience.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI PARMANAND KUNVARJI
164 MUMBADEVI
BOMBAY

From the Gujarati original: G.N. 11588

350. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

February 19, 1935

CHI. SHARMA,

Dr. Ansari has sent a list of books. We have a new doctor here. He is an altruistic person. I had a talk with him about you. He is willing to give you lessons daily. Are you prepared to come here with Draupadi? If not, shall I procure some books, etc., and send them to you? I am awaiting the reply to my earlier letter¹ too. You have now three alternatives. Two involve Draupadi’s living in Wardha. And the third requires both of you to remain there and do what you can.

¹ Vide “Letter to H. L. Sharma”, 18-2-1935

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

What is the price of good quality ghee there? And what would be the railway freight on it for Wardha?

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, between pp. 149 and 150

351. LETTER TO SECRETARY, POLITICAL DEPARTMENT, GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL

WARDHA,
February 20, 1935

SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL
POLITICAL DEPARTMENT

DEAR SIR,

Sjt. Dhirendra Chandra Mukerji is a detenu in the Deoli Camp. He has been as son to Shrimati Urmiladevi, of 335 Jitendas Road, Calcutta, widowed sister of the late Deshbandhu C. R. Das. I know the lady well. She has motherly affection for my companion Sjt. Mahadev Desai. The latter had recently gone to Gosaba and was therefore able to pass a day with Shrimati Urmiladevi. She is most anxious about Sjt. Dhirendra Chandra Mukerji. She has not seen him for three years and not heard from him since June last. She is unable to see him, but would be delighted if Sjt. Mahadev Desai could be permitted to see one whom she calls her son. I may state that both Sjt. Mahadev Desai and I know Sjt. Dhirendra Chandra Mukerji, who was with me for some time at the late Sabarmati Ashram, and would very probably have joined it had he not been arrested.

I shall be obliged if you would kindly let me know if Sjt. Mahadev Desai could have permission to visit Sjt. Dhirendra Chandra Mukerji and if, he could, the conditions under which the visit could
DEAR ZAKIR,

It is a great idea to have the foundation of the Jamia laid by its youngest child. My congratulations on the originality of the conception. I know that the Jamia has a great future. Through it I expect the seed of Hindu-Muslim union to grow into a majestic tree. I therefore wish every success to the enterprise. I hope that the appeal for funds made by Dr. Ansari will meet with the success it deserves.

You have every right to expect me to do whatever is in my power. Jamnalalji is coming today. I shall share your letter with him.

Yours,

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

---

1. The Government of Bengal were against the request being granted as neither Mahadev Desai nor Urmiladevi was a relative of the detenu. They feared also that the detenu was “a dangerous terrorist” and the interview might be used for political purposes. However, on advice from the Government of India the interview was allowed.

2. Jamia Millia Islamia
353. LETTER TO RAMDAS GANDHI

WARDHA,
February 20, 1935

RAPRAMA,

I received your letter. I get time for writing letters only before the morning prayer. I therefore reply to you before the prayer.
Jamnalalji will of course see you today.

I cannot say that I like the printing press work you have taken up. I would have liked your tailor’s job more. But what pleasure can I take in what I like? My pleasure lies in what you like and can do. You like the work you have taken up and so does Jamnalalji. Swami has liked it, too. I am therefore content. You would not have made money quickly as a tailor, but may do so from the printing press. Patil is a good man and is intelligent. It is therefore likely that he will acquit himself well. Your need just now is not only to keep your mind occupied but also to earn enough money. By all means take up the work and make a success of it. It cannot but give me pleasure if your health is restored, you stand on your own feet, and acquire self-confidence. There is nothing demeaning in the printing press work. Take care of your health.

Harilal is arriving today. I thought it best to keep him under my care for the present. Quite a few are not convinced that he has reformed himself. He has been reassuring me and I felt that I should keep him with me.

My daily life is gradually returning to its former manner. I do not at all like to leave this place. I have taken over charge of the kitchen from today. All work is done by hand. Ba is helping me more than I had expected. She makes there rotlis for one meal every day, keeps all the grains clean and washes the utensils. She does not lack enthusiasm, does nothing unwillingly. Thus things are going on all right just now.

I am returning your letter.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Mrs. Sumitra Kulkarni Papers. Courtesy: Nehru
Memorial Museum and Library
354. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

WARDHA,
February 21, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

I have your letter. Harilal has arrived. Mavji’s letter is enclosed. Panditji is here.

Do you know what arrangement has been made for the marriage ceremony? The only other person we have is Jugatram. Can you get anybody from there? Qureshi has not written to me either. Ramdas wrote in his letter that he was in Bombay. Amina is probably in Dhandhuka. A letter for Lilavati is enclosed.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8431. Courtesy Narandas Gandhi

355. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

WARDHA,
February 21, 1935

CHI. LILAVATI,

I have received your letter. It is good to consider ourselves unworthy. However, at the same time, there should be a mighty effort, to make ourselves worthy. As you are making such an effort, all is bound to be well with you. Do not deceive yourself. Do not exert yourself beyond your capacity. Keep writing to me. Take care of your body and mind.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
356. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

February 21, 1935

DEAR DAUGHTER AMTUL SALAAM,

I had your letter.\(^1\) I find it difficult to write Urdu with the left hand. You did not come even after my wire. Your letter will explain what happened. Under the changed circumstances your letter does not need a reply. You should now follow Devdas’s advice there. Those who want to serve can always do so. Your impression that people here will resent your coming to me is totally unfounded. There are no such persons in my circle here. I am, of course, living in the garden house\(^2\) but you should follow your own inclination.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 316

357. LETTER TO RAJENDRA PRASAD

February 21, 1935

Bhai Rajendra Prasad,

Jayaprakash had been to see me. I do feel that the Congress should fix one day for the Bengal troubles. I have even drafted a resolution\(^1\) and given it to Jayaprakash. He will send it on if he likes it.

This letter should be shown to the Sardar as I have no time to write separately to him. I am leaving for Nagpur just now and shall be back tomorrow.

Blessings from

BAPU

From Hindi: A.I.C.C. File 1935. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

\(^1\) The superscription and this sentence are in Urdu.

\(^2\) Gandhiji was at this time living at Maganwadi, the garden-estate of Jamnalal Bajaj.

\(^3\) Not available
358. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

[After February 21, 1935]

CHI. NARANDAS,

Kale himself has brought the machine. It is being worked in front of me. It seems all right.

It is not good enough for a prize, but can be very useful. The owner is arriving today. I wish to have a long talk with him. One length of cloth has already been woven from its yarn. A second one is about to be ready. It can spin 16,000 yards in eight hours. The yarn is of 20 count.

If paddy is ground in an ordinary quern, the husk is separated. A large quantity can thus be husked with little labour. This may be said to be my discovery. The quern can be made as light as desired by fixing a washer to the axle. This saves a lot of time. The work has been rendered very easy. The rice obtained thus is always cheaper than mill rice. It tastes very sweet and one gets more satisfaction from a smaller quantity. Paddy is easier to preserve and one can, if one wishes, eat freshly husked rice every day.

Kanu tells me that respected Khushalbhai’s collection contains other translations of the Gita, too. If this is true, please send me a list of them. I required the verse translation to compare it with Kishorelal’s verse translation. It has nothing of special interest in regard to the meaning or anything else.

Harilal has made himself completely at home. Dhiru’s letter is enclosed. Keshu’s is under consideration.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8447. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

---

1 From the reference in the letter to Harilal’s being in Wardha; vide “Letter to Narandas Gandhi”, 21-2-1935
359. MEMBERSHIP OF ALL-INDIA VILLAGE INDUSTRIES ASSOCIATION

From the abstract of the proceedings, to be found elsewhere\(^1\), of the last meeting of the All-India Village Industries Association (Headquarters: Wardha, C. P.), readers will find out how one can become a Member or Associate of the Sangh. It is to be hoped that those who can fulfil the conditions of Membership or Associateship, will send in the forms duly filled in to the Secretary, Wardha. It will be wrong to wait for invitations. People await invitations when it is a matter of getting power or prestige. They do not, when it is a matter of seeking the privilege of service. Let the intending members realize that, unless they are registered as such before 31st March next, they lose in certain eventualities the opportunity of appointment as trustees. In the event of a trusteeship becoming vacant before the expiry of five years of the existence of the Association, the remaining trustees should have as long a range of choice as possible. This is not possible if many members are not registered before 31st March. Without a wide range of choice, the progress of the movement towards its ideal would suffer a check. For, the trustees are not merely custodians of the funds, but they are also custodians of the ideal for which the Association stands. But even they, however capable they may be of representing the ideal, will be a shaky foundation unless they have the knowledge that they have the support of a large number of men and women from whom they can draw inspiration and strength and on whom they can rely when they have to choose a successor or successors.

Trusteeship of the Association has been made a position of heavy responsibility by the trustees being made finally responsible for the protection of the ideal, in the remote but not altogether impossible event of its being lowered in the process of democratization of the Association. And yet democratization is as necessary for the growth of the movement as the permanence of the ideal, which must not be put in the melting pot. But the working out of the ideal is so put. For, it is made to rest solely in the hands of a Board which seven years hence becomes subject to election by voters whose sole qualification is subscribing to the creed of the Association. It is true that the application for membership is subject to rejection by the Board. That is a precaution merely to prevent an unbeliever becoming a member only to shatter the ideal to pieces. The franchise is more extensive than even adult franchise. Every villager who is conscious of the dignity of village life and its infinite capacity for promoting the happiness of mankind can belong to the Association. Let those, therefore, who believe in the policy and the ideal of the Association become members and work for the economic, moral and physical welfare of the villagers of India, irrespective of differences in political faith, religion, caste or race. The Association recognizes no caste, religious, political or racial differences.

\(^1\) Vide Appendix “Abstract of the Proceedings of the Board of Management of All-India Village Industries Association”, 22-2-1935.

_Harijan_, 22-2-1935

360. COW’S MILK v. BUFFALO’S

The question whether cow’s milk is superior to buffalo’s has come up for inquiry in considering that of village reconstruction. I have addressed friends on the subject. Shri Haribhau Phatak has forwarded to me a letter received by him from Prof. Rao Bahadur Sahasrabuddhe, which reads as follows:¹

> With regard to your enquiry about the differences between cow milk and buffalo milk, I have to say that the fat and casein of cow milk are more easily digestible than those of buffalo milk.

> The cow milk has also greater amount of vitamins than buffalo milk. These qualities affect children and adults equally, but an adult can digest buffalo milk while a child cannot. I think this is all that you want.

He has also received an opinion from Dr. S. K. Apte of Sholapur, Vice-President, Gopalak Sangh, which is reproduced below,² the names of those who sent replies to his questionnaire and some of the replies themselves being omitted.

The question whether cow milk is superior to buffalo milk is being discussed during the last three years, and this has had a good effect in attracting the public attention to the utility of cow milk. . . . The burden of proving that it is superior lies on those who assert so. There are several ways of proving this scientifically. They can be enumerated as follows:

¹ Only extracts are reproduced here.
² Only extracts are reproduced here.
1. To compare the merits and demerits of both milks by analysis of their components. It is possible chemically to ascertain the nutritive value of their components. Such an experiment has been made by Prof. Rao Bahadur D. L. Sahasrabuddhe of the Agricultural College, Poona, the details of which he has published in the Dhyanprakash dated 11-9-1934. He has made it clear therein not only that cow milk is very useful for the nutrition of young children but that buffalo milk is actually harmful to them.

2. To make two equal groups of boys or men live under the same conditions and to provide one batch with about a seer of cow milk and the other with an equal amount of buffalo milk for a certain period and to watch and record the physical, mental and intellectual development of each member of both the groups. . . . The Gopalak Sangh of Sholapur had written to the Hoard's Dairy-man for information as to which countries except India use buffaloes as dairy animals. The reply to this query shows that buffalo milk is used outside India only in the Philippine Islands and the southern part of China. . . . An experiment of the above nature is, therefore, not likely to be made anywhere outside India. This experiment will have to be made on some students residing in a boarding-house. . . .

3. This comparative experiment on human beings is a matter of great expense. It is possible to try this experiment on animals, especially rats and guinea-pigs kept in experimental laboratories. As the Gopolak Sangh has no material available for this sort of experiment, it has written to the Government Pasteur Institute at Coonoor to try such an experiment; but no reply has yet been received from the authorities there.

4. The Gopalak Sangh, Sholapur, took recourse to a fourth, and the easiest, way towards this end. A questionnaire regarding cow and buffalo milks was prepared and sent some six months back to various doctors, physicians, research experts, newspapers and periodicals, and Government officers in Medical and Health Departments in and outside India. About seven hundred copies in Marathi and English of this questionnaire were then sent out. . . . About fifty replies have been received so far.

The following are the conclusions deducible from the replies:

1. Buffalo milk is injurious to the development of children, and only cow milk is, in the absence of mother’s milk, useful to them.

2. Cow milk, being easily digestible, is more beneficial to patients than buffalo milk.

3. There is no definite evidence to show that the use of buffalo milk by adults is in any way injurious. Mr. Bruen, the livestock expert to the Government of Bombay, says that buffalo milk is hard to digest for a person of any age, because the excess fat in buffalo milk when it forms soap in the intestine, is hard to digest with the usual amount of salts, and it takes the deficient quantity of the mineral salts from bones, which are consequently weakened. This does not occur in the digestion of cow milk.

4. Cow milk is useful for intellectual growth, mainly of children. No definite conclusion can be drawn regarding better effect of cow milk on the intellectual growth of adults.

5. If, instead of rearing up buffaloes, cows are kept in the city, it will produce a beneficial effect on the general hygiene of that city, with less expense.

The experiment that Dr. Apte has suggested is worth making. The question of the comparative merits of the cow and the buffalo is of national importance from many points of view. In no other country in the world do these animals play the part that they do in the life of the nation in India.

Even without further experiment, the opinions collected by Dr. Apte of eminent medical men and dairy experts sufficiently prove the superiority of cow’s milk over buffalo’s.

_Harijan, 22-2-1935_

361. ALL-INDIA VILLAGE INDUSTRIES ASSOCIATION PROCEEDINGS

The following is an abstract of the proceedings of the Board of Management that met at Wardha on 1st to 4th February. It includes vital amendments of the constitution. The figures before paragraphs signify sections of the constitution.

_Harijan, 22-2-1935_

362. LETTER TO BHAGWANJI P. PANDYA

_WARDHA, February 22, 1935_

CHI. BHAGWANJI,

Increase the quantity of leafy vegetables and see what happens. Take either fenugreek leaves, spinach, white goosefoot or purslane. Along with radish its leaves can also be taken, also those of carrots. Radish might perhaps aggravate constipation. It is believed that leaves are very good as laxative.

For the text of the abstract, _vide_ Appendix “Abstract of the Proceedings of the Board of Management of All-India Village Industries Association”, 22-2-1935.
Do whatever you can in Vadaj by widening the contact with the people there. It requires unlimited patience.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI BHAGWANJI
HARIJAN ASHRAM
SABARMATI, B.B. & C.I. RLY.

From Gujarati: C.W. 375. Courtesy: Bhagwanji P. Pandya

363. SPEECH AT KITCHEN MEETING, WARDHA¹
[February 22, 1935]²

I have been a cook all my life. I began experimenting with my diet in my student days in London. I ran the kitchen throughout my stay in South Africa, and some of you know how much I had to do with the kitchen in Sabarmati. Now we have embarked on a mission the like of which we had not undertaken before. We have got to be ideal villagers, not the villagers with their queer ideas, or absence of ideas, about sanitation and giving no thought to how they eat and what they eat. Let us not, like most of them, cook anyhow, eat anyhow, live anyhow. Let us show them the ideal diet. Let us not go by mere likes and dislikes, but get at the root of those likes and dislikes. Don’t rest content with simply saying, ‘The food disagrees with me.’ Find out the reason why it disagrees. Whether you like a thing or not will depend on the ideal of village life that you have kept before yourselves. The bulk of the villagers, we know live on wheat, jowari, bajri, or rice and dal, but they don’t have green leaves and other vegetables. We have got to show them that they can grow their vegetables, their greens, without much expense, and keep good health. We have also to show them that most of the vitamins are lost when they cook the leaves. These are not my fads. I am simply trying to put into effect what all the doctors are saying and prescribing, and I am asking you to do what hundreds have done to their great benefit.

¹ Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Notes”. The meeting was held to discuss the changes introduced in the Ashram food by which spices were completely discarded and cooked vegetables were replaced by vegetable salad at least once a day, and to consider various suggestions.

² According to Mahadev Desai the meeting was held on the eve of Gandhiji’s departure for Nagpur. He was in Nagpur on February 23.
Therefore, if you agree with my reasoning that the villagers ought to eat the green stuffs raw, that they must cook their rice just husked and not pounded or polished, you must set them the example. But also remember that we have to show them an inexpensive way of getting all the best part of our food products and of thus gaining in health. We have to teach them how to economize in time, health and money. If I could carry you all with me, I could make even the present menu simpler. But I want your hearty and intelligent consent and I want you to feel that, in doing what we are doing, we are discharging a sacred trust. We want agents to carry on the work of the Village Industries Association. Well, in that case, we must start with becoming agents for our own surroundings. Lionel Curtis described our villages as dung-heaps. We have to turn them into model villages. Our village folk do not get fresh air, though they are surrounded by fresh air; they don’t get fresh food, though they are surrounded by the freshest foods. I am talking like a missionary in this matter of food, because my mission is to make villages a thing of beauty. Let all that we do be in consonance with our mission. Even jokes have a meaning hidden in them, and when Jamnalalji twitted Mirabehn with the remark that she was reconnoitring the villages driving in a motor-car, he certainly pointed our attention to glaring inconsistencies in our lives. People pardon inconsistencies in their own lives, but remember that they will not pardon them in us, their servants.

_Harijan_, 1-3-1935

364. SPEECH AT ITWARI KHADI BHANDAR, NAGPUR

February 23, 1935

In declaring the third Khadi Bhandar in Nagpur open, Mahatmaji hoped that the public would support the new Bhandar as they had done in the case of the two Bhandars already opened. He said:

Do not suppose that I will be elated with the opening of this Bhandar or that my hopes will be fulfilled with this. My expectations will be fulfilled only when everyone in Nagpur is clad in khadi and when no piece of cloth other than khadi is found in every house in Nagpur.

Proceeding Gandhiji said that khadi was the mainstay of the rural population and it was the duty of everyone to stand by them. The only way to help the rural population was to wear khadi so extensively that Khadi Bhandars would be opened in... every locality of Nagpur. He hoped that the day when Khadi Bhandars would be opened in every locality of Nagpur would not be far off. Concluding, he appealed to the audience not to leave the place after his departure but to purchase khadi from the newly opened Bhandar.

Hitavada, 24-2-1935

365. SPEECH AT OPENING OF SITABULDI KHADI
BHANDAR, NAGPUR

February 23, 1935

Mahatma Gandhi, in declaring the newly erected building of the Bhandar open, said that as it was his first visit to Nagpur after the death of Mr. Abhyankar, he thought it his duty to say a few words about him. It was no exaggeration that in Mr.
Abhyankar Gandhiji himself had lost a near relative. It was on the fitness of things that the Nagpur Congress Committee had decided to raise a suitable memorial to him and he hoped that everyone would contribute his mite towards the memorial fund.

He also appealed to the Memorial Committee to complete the work undertaken by them as quickly as possible. He thanked the Nagpur Municipality for allotting a piece of land on nominal rent and expressed the desire that not only its members but even its servants would become khaddar-clad. He reminded the audience that the Khadi Bhandar in Sitabuldi sold khadi produced in Maharashtra which was held in high esteem both for its price, durability and fineness.

Hitavada, 24-2-1935

366. SPEECH AT MEETING OF VILLAGE
WORKERS, NAGPUR

February 23, 1935

I am afraid I must repeat the gospel to you and remind you that, when you demand swaraj, you do not want swaraj for yourself alone, but for your neighbour, too. The principle is neither metaphysical nor too philosophical for comprehension. It is just good common sense.
If you love thy neighbour as thyself, he will do likewise with you.

What you say about the difficulties of a worker in the villages is too true, but we have got to falsify it. We have to be true villagers

1 Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Notes”. The meeting was held at the residence of Ganpatrao Tikekar.
2 A worker had said that he had found it very difficult to live like a villager in a village and make both ends meet.
without their shortcomings and failings, and I am quite sure that, when we do so, there would be no difficulty for an honest labourer to earn a living wage. But let no one come and tell me: ‘I have a mother, three widowed sisters, a brother who has to be sent to England to be called to the Bar, another reading in Muir College and a third to be sent to the Indian Sandhurst.’ Sure enough, work in the villages will not give such a one a ‘living’! But it is possible to earn a genuine living for all the members of one’s family, if all those members also will work, as do all the members in a peasant’s family.

There is a conflict of interest between capital and labour, but we have to resolve it by doing our own duty. Just as pure blood is proof against poisonous germs, so will labour, when it is pure, be proof against exploitation. The labourer has but to realize that labour is also capital. As soon as labourers are properly educated and organized and they realize their strength, no amount of capital can subdue them. Organized and enlightened labour can dictate its own terms. It is no use vowing vengeance against a party because we are weak. We have to get strong. Strong hearts, enlightened minds and willing hands can brave all odds and remove all obstacles. No, ‘Love thy neighbour as thyself’ is on counsel of perfection. The capitalist is as much a neighbour of the labourer as the latter is a neighbour of the former, and one has to seek and win the willing co-operation of the other. Nor does the principle mean that we should accept exploitation lying down. Our internal strength will render all exploitation impossible.

_Harijan_, 1-3-1935

367. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, NAGPUR

February 23, 1935

Gandhiji referred in feeling terms to the late Sjt. Abhyankar and asked those in charge of the memorial to collect quickly the money necessary for a memorial worthy of the departed leader: They did not seem to be definite regarding the shape it was to take, but Gandhiji said:

No memorial in these days can be a memorial in name. It must be such as would yield ten times the result of the money expended on it, and it must be such as would satisfy not only sentiment but the need

---

1 Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter”. The meeting was held at the Chitnis Park. Mrs. Kale presided.
of the city and the country.

It was during my walk in Orissa, in the course of my Harijan tour, that it was clearly brought home to me that the village industries must be revived if khadi is to be universal.

I could not have realized this in any tour by rail or car. As the late Madhusudan Das had said, our villagers were fast being reduced to the state of the brutes with whom they worked and lived as a result of the forced idleness in which they passed their days. If they continued in that state, not even independence would improve the state of India. I, therefore, decided that I must, even in the evening of my life, make a heroic effort to end this idleness, this inertia. This may be considered to be quixotic, but it is my firm faith that he who undertakes to do something in the name of God, and in full faith in Him, even at the end of his days, does not work in vain, and I am sure that the work I have undertaken is not mine, it is God’s.

The principles of economics are not, like the principles of mathematics, for instance, immutable, and for all times and climes. England will not accept the economics of France, nor France that of Germany, nor Germany that of America, and they would be wrong if they did so. A country which produces no food-stuffs and produces only minerals must have different economics from that which produces food-stuffs but has no mineral resources. India, therefore, cannot afford to go by the economics of France, England, America or Germany. India was once the land of gold. Not that it produced much gold, but it had such treasures of art, it produced cloth of such rich quality and spices of such value that other lands paid for them in treasures of gold. We have lost that proud position today and have become mere hewers of wood and drawers of water. But even now we can regain that proud position, for, our natural resources are unique and no other country in the world, excepting China, can boast of the crores of living machines we have. Now, how can a country with crores of living machines afford to have a machine which will displace the labour of crores of living machines? It would spell their unemployment and their ruin. We have to employ all these crores of human machines that are idle, we have to make them intelligent machines, and unless cities decide to depend for the necessaries of life and for most of their other needs on the villages, this can never happen. We are guilty of a grievous wrong against the villagers, and the only way in which we can expiate it is by encouraging them to revive their lost industries and arts by assuring them of a ready market. There is no one more patient and forbearing than God, but there comes a limit even to His patience and forbearance. If we neglect our duty to our villagers, we shall be courting our own ruin. This duty is no onerous one. It is incredibly simple. We have to be rural-minded and think of our necessities and the necessities of our household in the terms of rural-mindedness. The task does not involve much expenditure either. Volunteers are needed to go to the nearest villages to assure them that all that they produce would find a ready market in the towns and cities. This is a task which can be undertaken by men and women of all castes and creeds, of all parties and all faiths. It is in consonance with the true economics of our country. I have no time to expatiate on this, but I would ask you to read what is written in the columns of Harijan, English and Hindi, from week to week.

Harijan, 1-3-1935

368. UNPOLISHED RICE v. POLISHED RICE

Rice from which merely its husk has been removed is known as unpolished rice, whereas, that from which a part of the grain has been rubbed off, is known as polished rice. It seems that in Gujarat, ordinarily, the latter is consumed in greater quantities. Medical opinion, however, states that only the former should be used, the reason being that polished rice has no nutritional value. One doctor is of the opinion that eating polished rice is one of the causes of constipation. In all cases of constipation he has cured his patients by prescribing unpolished rice to them. However, rice-eaters will not give up their deplorable habit of eating polished rice on account of medical opinion alone. What they need is their own experience as well as that of others. And this is as it should be. A statement is meaningless to anyone whose experience contradicts it. Hence, I am collecting the experiences of those who are making experiments. Shri Shankerlal Banker’s experiment is the best amongst these. I have described it in the last issue.\footnote{Vide “All About Rice”, 15-2-1935}

Shri Banker has suggested that if necessary medical opinion should be sought to prove that unpolished rice is not harmful to the \footnote{Vide “All About Rice”, 15-2-1935}

digestive system. That, however, is not necessary. All doctors claim with one voice that only unpolished rice should be eaten. But this cannot be regarded as a statement based on experience. They should either give their own experience or that of their patients. There is little of such experience from them. Hence, we should rely on the experience only of rice-eaters.

Anyone undertaking the experiment should bear in mind that as unpolished rice contains all the nutritional elements, it should be properly cooked. We should give up the habit of keeping the grains separate. These may appear pleasing to the eye but there is no sweetness in them. Unpolished rice is cooked in the offices of the Village Industries Association in Wardha. Everyone eats it with relish. But this rice cannot be eaten in the same quantity as white, shiny, polished rice. A small quantity is enough to satisfy both the palate and the appetite. The monetary gain is obviously twofold. As husking is a simple operation, the cost of labour is much less. The pounding requires more effort and skill; hence the labour charges are higher. However, the greatest benefit lies in the maximum strength and satisfaction derived from eating unpolished rice in small quantities. Mill rice can never equal these benefits. No one could have a mill merely for the sake of husking rice. One cannot afford it. The experiments will be pure and productive of results if those making them observe the following rules:

1. Only the husk should be removed from the paddy. It should not be pounded at all.

2. Unpolished rice should be cleaned, little stones and other impurities should be removed from it and it should then be washed a couple of times in clean cold water. It should not be rubbed while washing. Rubbing is bound to remove some of the nutritious upper coating.

3. The washed rice should be soaked in cold water for three hours. Only a little water should be used.

4. This soaked rice, along with the water used for soaking, should be added to boiling water and allowed to cook on a slow fire and removed only after it acquires a homogeneous consistency. If too much water has been added, it should not be drained but allowed to be soaked up by the rice. The next time a more proportionate quantity of water should be used.
Those who undertake the experiment are requested to send in their experiences.

[From Gujarati]
Harijanbandhu, 24-2-1935

369. LETTER TO GOSIBEHN CAPTAIN

WARDHA,
February 24, 1935

DEAR SISTER,¹

I have your letter. You will come whenever you wish and can. If you can, wait until you can. I would like to hold over my opinion on the constitution. It will require some amendments. I return Shoorjibhai’s letter. I do not put the meaning upon it that you do. It reads perfectly harmless. It does not in any shape or form interfere with your initiative or responsibility. Your inherent right of making mistakes is unaffected if you accept his services. I think he is quite right in saying that there was no question of his making a contribution. You wanted a room or rooms in Cutch Castle. He offered to find some other rooms. And in addition, to give you such goods as you would care to take. There was no question of his controlling your activities in any shape or form. You would be either wholesale purchaser of goods that he might supply or his commission agent selling goods on his behalf or running your own shop wholly independently of him. There is no third way of conducting the store. That you may not wish to accept his offer and may dispense with his services is a separate thing altogether. But it should not arise from his letter. As a co-worker in the same line and as a co-member on the Managing Board, you should allow him the correctness of the attitude taken up by him in his letter. I await expectantly the information about the value of soya beans as food.

GOSIBEHN
BOMBAY

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ This is in Gujarati.
370. LETTER TO JAYARAMDAS JAYAWARDHANE

February 24, 1935

MY DEAR JAYARAMDAS,

I have your two letters just now. I hasten to reply at once. Though your letters are long, you do not give me the information I need. How many people are affected? Who are they? What is the private agency that is working? What funds have they collected? What is the relief that you want whether in men or money or both? If private agencies are in existence, give me the names of their committees and the collections done by them. Is disease still continuing in its epidemic form? What is the death rate? Why did you not write to me immediately you felt the need for outside assistance?

SIT. JAYARAMDAS
PAROPAKARA MANDALAYA
92 SAUNDERS PLACE, PELTAH (COLOMBO)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

371. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

February 24, 1935

CHI. AMBUJAMMAL

I have your two letters. Also almonds. I shall report on the latter later. I am glad you are going back to Bangalore. I have told Vasumati that she is now not required in Madras at least for some time.

Love.

BAPU

[PS.]

Mira and the others are all right. Theirs was a miraculous escape.

From the original. Ambujammal Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

1 This is in Hindi.
372. LETTER TO SUMANGAL PRAKASH

WARDHA,
February 24, 1935

CHI. SUMANGAL,

I have your distressing letter. Please come over. Ask Narendra Dev why he has not yet recovered.

Blessings from
BAPU

SUMANGAL PRAKASH
KASHI Vidyapith
BANARAS CANTT.

From a photostat of the Hindi: Sumangal Prakash Papers. Courtesy, Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

373. NOTE FOR RAMESHWARDAS PODDAR

February 24, 1935

We have no right to judge anyone a sinner as we are all full of imperfections. We have no reason or means to judge whether those we regard as greater sinners than ourselves are truly so. A person stealing a mere pice can be a greater sinner than a person indulging in sexual immorality. Possibly the thief committed a deliberate theft while the licentious person put up great but unsuccessful resistance against the temptation. Who can know of his good efforts? God alone knows the secrets of the human heart. Thus we must not make comparative reckoning of others’ sins but only increase the spirit of forgiveness. This is one of the aims of the doctrine of ahimsa.

M. K. GANDHI

[PS.]
All this I have written applies to everyone.

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 191
374. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

WARDHA,
February 25, 1935

DEAR DAUGHTER AMTUSSALAAM,

I had your letter. There was nothing worth wiring about. And does my wire carry any weight now? If you would heed me, you would

1. come to me or
2. go to Bombay or
3. to Indore or
4. to Patiala. Going or living anywhere else should be considered a sin. Otherwise you may do what you like. What can I say to you or do about you?

God alone can help you.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 318

375. LETTER TO N. R. MALKANI

February 25, 1935

MY DEAR MALKANI,

I have written to Dialdas.¹ Wrote in the train after leaving Delhi.

Why these proceedings although the H. Q. had given the permission?

If the building operations are to take more than a month to commence, you do not need to detain Brijkishen. As it is, he is not free to come immediately.

Supposing a man is bed-ridden, has all his people orthodox, he is able to pay and does pay a Harijan fund, that is not personal service. But I agree that it would be better to add “also by employing Harijans wherever possible”. By confining the mention to monetary contributions he has erred on the side of strictest honesty.

¹ The letter is not available.
I am sorry you have to have Amtul Salaam on your hands. My only excuse is that she is a fine and passionate servant of Harijans.

Here are two letters—for Devdas and Amtul.
Your article has gone to Madras.
Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 913

376. LETTER TO ESTHER MENON
February 25, 1935

MY DEAR CHILD.

Your letter. Why apologize for the length of your letter? You do not write too often.

Mrs. S. was here for a day. She is a good, well-meaning woman. She told me she was with you.

Yes, the children have to be in Kodai for their health’s sake. It grieves me to think that Menon has still to draw funds from Denmark. But of this we must talk when we meet.

So Maria cannot go home! It is no easy work to love India with all one’s heart.

Send my love to Nellie Ball when you write to her.

C. F. Andrews is in W. A. He expects to come to India in April.

Mira had a very narrow escape in a motor-car accident. She is all right now.

BAPU

From a photostat. Courtesy: National Archives of India. Also My Dear Child, p. 111

---

1 The source has “service”.
2 The full name is illegible.
3 West Africa
377. LETTER TO SHANKERLAL BANKER

February 25, 1935

MY DEAR SHANKERLAL,

Sjt. Kirloskar and his principal staff are with me today. They are all eager to have the decision about their machine one way or the other. I have told them that it is not for me to give a decision. That can be given solely by the judges. I have told them too that whatever the decision, it will be given effect to. If it is in their favour, they will get the prize money at once against the legal transfer of patent rights and the other necessary formalities.

They are anxious to have the decision as early as possible. Please, therefore, expedite the matter as much as possible. If the judges desire to hear Sjt. Kirloskar’s representative, he will gladly send him on receiving due information.

I need hardly say that the judges are not to be affected by anything I have said about it.

SRI SHANKERLAL BANKER
AHMEDABAD

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

378. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

February 25, 1935

BHAJ THAKKAR BAPA,

I did not like your letter regarding Surajbehn. What will I do if both you and Karsandas wash your hands of her? I have nothing to say if you feel that I am doing injustice to that woman, however slight it may be. My strength lies in my devotion to truth and my sense of justice. Remember that you are bound by your word to put an end to this episode. If the debt incurred by Ganesan is in connection with Kodamakam [Ashram] alone, then pay it off and hand over the charge with a clean slate to the new manager.

Advise me about taking Harijan to Poona. I am not able to see my way very clearly. I see it clearly that it is my duty to retain the services of Harijan Shastri but I cannot decide whether to entrust him with Harijan work or some other work. I did not like D. B.’s suggestions. We should not get involved with Tamil and Telugu [Harijan].

Do what you can about Nattar-Harijan problem.

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1152

379. LETTER TO S. D. SATAVLEKAR

February 25, 1935

BHAI SATAVLEKAR,

I have your letter. I learn from Devdas’s letter from Delhi that Kelkar is in Delhi and doing well.

The account of the yajna at Kurundwad is painful.

All the news about the Village Industries Association appears in Harijan and Harijansvak. If you are not getting them, shall I send them? Would it suit you to become a member and agent of the Association?

The silk industry has not been left out of the programme of the Association. That work is carried on through the Spinners’ Association.

Yours,

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat of the Hindi C.W. 4776. Courtesy: S. D. Satavlekar

380. LETTER TO RANI VIDYAVATI

February 25, 1935

CHI. VIDYA,

I have your letter. Be calm and get well. We shall talk about the complaints later. Forget that you are a Rani. Be a humble servant in thought, speech and action.

If it is malnutrition, consult your doctor. Is anyone accompanying you? Take eggs as medicine. If eggs alone could put things

---

1 Dewan Bahadur Bhasyam Iyengar’s right I would consider it an achievement.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Hindi original: Rani Vidyavati Papers. Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library

381. LETTER TO ESTHER MENON

[After February 25, 1935]

I have just finished reading your precious letter. My heart was weeping as I was reading it. Do you know this Tamil proverb—“Thikkatravanukku theivamay thunai”? It means God is the help of the helpless. He will help you and comfort you. You must not lose faith in His mercy and His healing power.

You should have written to me much earlier than you have done. But better late than never.

You should tell Menon all that the children feel. What is done is done. God had a purpose behind this marriage. You are neither spent nor bent.

You way is clear. You should take the children to Denmark or England if your expenses can be easily found. If you cannot stand that climate, you should return to India leaving the children to the care of those who would take them.

If this is not possible, you should live on a hill where you can be all the year round and bring them up as Indians in Indian surroundings. I think they are too good to resist this. To bring them up in India in a European school is fatal for their moral growth.

Of course I should love to have you and the children by my side. But they won’t stand the climate and probably the surroundings also. Do not hesitate to write to me as often as you need. I am well enough to attend to your letters.

I tried to secure something good for Menon but failed, i.e., I could not secure the salary he would need. But if he is freed of the care of the children and even you, he can take up an ill paid post but one in which he will have ample experience.

1 In My Dear Child this has been placed after “Letter to Esther Menon”, 25-2-1935.
Whatever the ultimate issue, you must not be anxious about anything. Remember that God takes the burden of all our cares on His broad shoulders if we will but let Him. This is as true as it is true that I am writing to you. Only His way is not our way, His shoulders are not like ours. But there is all the beauty in doing His will.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat. Courtesy: National Archives of India

382. LETTER TO MRIDULA SARABHAI

WARDHA,
February 27, 1935

CHI. MRIDU,

I have received your beautiful letter. Many young men today are not even prepared to listen to the words of their parents, whereas there are others who would not tolerate anything from their parents but would put up with a great deal from those whom they regard as their friends. Thus, everything depends on individuals and circumstances.

You have taken the right step. Rambhau will be leaving today. Panditji will discuss the matter with you. Do only what you think is in the interest of the organization.

Mummy must have gone away happy. Convey my blessings when you write to her. Also write to her that I always think of her. Let her come after complete recovery.

Come back when it is possible.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C.W. 11194. Courtesy: Sarabhai Foundation
383. LETTER TO MANILAL GANDHI

WARDHA,
February 28, 1935

CHI. MANILAL,

I have received your letter. There is a verse in Sanskrit. It means: “Speak the truth, speak the pleasant and do not speak unpleasant truth.” It means that the truth should always be non-violent. One should learn non-violent language for criticism. You or anyone else writing it could have expressed the same thing in a sweet language. One cannot acquire sweet language without getting rid of anger. In your article and letter I see marks of anger. I write this not as a reproach but only to caution you. Otherwise there is no point in criticizing you from this distance. I feel, however, that it is proper to tell you what impression your language creates.

Take it that Ramdas has settled here. He will be a partner in the press. He is keeping well.

Harilal and Kanti are with me.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

I am not able to finish my work. I just missed reading Sushila’s letter. Gomati, clever as she is, found out that I am arranging to get the cloth.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4833

384. LETTER TO RAJENDRA PRASAD

February 28, 1935

BHAI RAJENDRABABU,

As I am willing to do everything, why would I be averse to the joint electorate? If Muslims can accept even this, and if Sikhs and Hindus agree, I have no doubt it will be extremely good. To bring round Malaviyaji appears to be a difficult proposition, but he would put up no opposition if Sikhs could be persuaded. There is no

1 सर्वं ज्ञातं प्रत्येकं प्रभावं ज्ञातसंन्विवेकम् । occasion now for my writing to him though I shall do so if that is your wish. Ghanshyamdas is enough. After the others have agreed even Jamnalalji can go to Panditji.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Hindi: C.W. 9747. Courtesy: Rajendra Prasad

385. QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

[Before March 1, 1935]

Q. You do not seem to have regard to the question of leisure. Too much work leaves little leisure to the poorer classes for any intellectual thinking and recreation, and you are now seeking to make them work more.

A. Is that really so? I am trying to deal with people who do not know what to do with their enforced leisure. It is their enforced idleness that has made them like so many lifeless stones. There is such inertia that some of them do not want to be disturbed.

Q. You will certainly give employment where it is needed. But are you not putting an excessive emphasis on dull monotonous work when you ask them to grind their own corn and husk their own rice?

A. It is no more monotonous than the idle hours hanging heavy on their hands, and it will cease to be monotonous when they realize that they not only earn a few coppers but preserve their own health and that of their countrymen. It is certainly not more monotonous than working away in modern factories. Any work, however humdrum, which does not take away the joy of creating something, is not monotonous. You go to a huge shoe-making factory. Some people would be engaged in making soles, some in making the uppers, some in doing other parts. This is monotonous, for they work without intelligence, but there is no monotony about the work of the shoe-maker who makes the whole shoe himself. His work will bear the impress of his skill, and he will have the joy of having created

1 G. D. Birla was at this time acting as intermediary between Malaviya and Gandhiji.
2 Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Notes”. Desai does not identify Gandhiji’s interlocutor.

268

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
something himself. No, almost everything depends on the spirit in which a thing is done. I would not mind being my own drawer of water and hewer of wood, provided I am doing the work intelligently and not because someone compels me to do so. All labour when done intelligently and to some high purpose becomes at once re-creation and recreation.

Q. Pardon me, but when you insist on pure and simple physical work all day long, don’t you run the risk of making them intellectually dull? How many hours of physical work you think are necessary?

A. I would not mind working eight hours myself.

Q. I do not mean yourself. You have enough intellectual energy and creative talent to fill the rest of your hours. Yours should be regarded as an exceptional case. I know you can derive joy from eight hours’ spinning.

A. No, I want everyone to derive joy out of eight hours’ work. Everything depends on the spirit in which work is done, and an eight hours’ day of honest, clean labour leaves one enough time for intellectual pursuits. My object is to put an end to inertia and lethargy, and I would be immensely satisfied when I tell the world that every villager of India is earning Rs. 20 a month by the sweat of his brow.

_Harijan, 8-3-1935_

386. NOTE

ECONOMICS, FALSE AND TRUE

A friend has sent me the following extract from Dr. F. D. Farrell, President of the Kansas State College:

Social values must not be sacrificed for economic values. One of the greatest futilities is to progress economically and retrogress socially. We all need to recognize that we work and strive so that we may live better, rather than that we live solely that we may work and strive. If we live badly, we are poor, no matter how much money we have.

Adversity is impressing large numbers of farm people with this fact. Thus, it is laying the foundation for the acceptance of a rural philosophy that seems likely in the end to prevail. This philosophy holds that the chief objective of farming is not to accumulate monetary wealth, but to promote human happiness in the countryside that the farm should be regarded primarily as a home and only incidentally as a business enterprise.

Adversity is teaching many of us to enjoy the non-monetary wealth with which we are surrounded. This wealth includes an endless variety of things from which happiness and satisfaction may be extracted: things ranging all the way from gorgeous sunsets to the companionship of children. By living simply and depending largely on our non-monetary wealth, we may find not only health and happiness, but also a large measure of economic security.

Indeed, economics that ruins one’s health is false, because money without health has no value. Only that economy is true which enables one to conserve one’s health. The whole of the initial programme of village re-construction is, therefore, aimed at true economy, because it is aimed at promoting the health and vigour of the villagers.

A SHAME

A strongly-built young man of about 25 years presented himself to me only yesterday and asked me whether he could stay with me for two or three days. He hails from Bahraich. His people have a few acres of land. He attended the Bombay Congress. Ever since he has been travelling and living on the hospitality of strangers.
He mixes with Ramanujis. They, he tells me, give him food and something towards his railway fare. On my telling him that living as he was doing on charity was not right, his retort was: “I see nothing wrong in my begging for my food and expenses, as I expect to serve the people.” He could see no incongruity in demanding his maintenance first and then expecting, at some distant date, to render service against maintenance plus, of course wages. As he had come at the dinner hour, I invited him to share the meal with us. I told him after the meal that he could not stay with us any longer, unless he was prepared to labour with us the whole day long and do the work allotted to him. Up to the time of writing he has not been seen by any of us.¹

I wish it was possible to say that this was the first case of its kind that came under my observation. Young men and women should be ashamed of begging for the supply of their wants. If the sense of shame that wrongly attaches to physical labour could be got rid of, there is work enough and to spare for young men and women of average intelligence.

_Harijan_, 1-3-1935

¹ For further light on the case of the young man, whose name was Avadhesh, _vide_ “Notes”, 13-4-1935, sub-title, “Full Repentance”.
387. MANURE PITS

Mr. Brayne, Commissioner, Rural Reconstruction, Punjab has sent me, at my request, a parcel of literature published by him. This contains useful leaflets of general information to the villagers. From these, I propose to publish a selection from time to time. I take first the bulletin on Manure Pits:

One can subscribe to all that is said here. I know that the pits such as Mr. Brayne suggests are generally recommended. In my opinion, however, superficial burial recommended by Poore is more scientific and more remunerative. The cost of digging is lessened and that of removal avoided altogether or certainly lessened. Add to this the fact that the excreta are turned into manure in almost a week’s time, for the reason that the bacteria, which live within six or nine inches of the surface of the earth, and the air and the rays of the sun act upon the excreta and turn them into sweet manure much more quickly than when the refuse is buried deep.

But the chief thing to remember is not the various methods of disposing of refuse so much as the necessity of burying all the refuse for the double purpose of promoting the villagers’ health and their material condition through the better yield of their crops which the manure must produce. It should be remembered that organic rubbish other than excreta must be separately buried. Attention to hygiene is undoubtedly the first step to village reconstruction.

Harijan, 1-3-1935

388. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

WARDHA,

March 1, 1935

CHI. MARY.

This is being brought to you by Sumitrabehn. I am inclined to think that Chhotelal has made a wise choice. Sumitra is a good, hard-working woman. But you will test for yourself. If she is not the type you contemplated, you will send her back.

From a photostat: G.N. 6039. Also C.W. 3369. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

1 Not reproduced here. It emphasized the necessity of digging near the villages pits on which all the rubbish and dung could be collected to be fermented into manure.

2 Manager of the Wardha Ashram
389. LETTER TO MARY CHESLEY

[March 1, 1935]

MY DEAR MARY C.,

I have your very wonderful letter. You must shed this fear complex of your inability to earn your bread by the sweat of your brow. I am not going to criticize anything just now. You must continue to give me a vivid description of your labours and I will tell you whenever I think you are going the wrong way. Only both of you, all of you, must keep well.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 6039. Also C.W. 3369. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

390. LETTER TO NARAHARI D. PARIKH

Unrevised

MAGANWADI,
March 2, 1935

CHI. NARAHARI.

Mahadev left for Bombay last night. I am forwarding your letter there.

Do you know Hira Singh’s relatives? You must have informed them. I am sure he must have been cremated. Who attended the funeral? Where was Hira Singh sleeping? Is the place all right? Was he sleeping on the cot or on the ground?

I for one believe that everyone dies at his appointed hour. But since one does not know that hour and death is unpleasant, one has to take treatment. That being so, when one does not know what has bitten one, one should presume it was a snake and take remedies accordingly. Of course the patient can be taken to a doctor but if a doctor is not available there is always the remedy of stopping the flow of the blood in the vessel, making an incision over the bite thus letting out blood, filling it with potassium permanganate, covering it with a mud pack and making the patient keep awake. He can also be induced

---

1 A Canadian Quaker, she came to India to visit friends in the North and with the idea of doing some kind of village work. She joined Mary Barr at Khedi.
2 This is written on the same sheet as the letter to F. Mary Barr, the preceding item.
to vomit. It can be done by thrusting fingers into the mouth or making him drink hot water with salt in it. If plenty of salt is put in the water, vomiting will be instantaneous. If there are other remedies, find out from a doctor.

Tell Bhagwanji that I have received his letter. I do not remember his questions. He should write to me again.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI NARAHARI D. PARikh
HARIJAN ASHRAM
SABARMATI, AHMEDABAD

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9083

391. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

March 3, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

I have your two letters. Yes, the Khan Brothers are truly servants of God. I am glad you were able to go through the book at a single sitting. You should get some copies from Devdas, free if you like, and send them to your English friends.

The paper that Jugulkishore has sent you has the defect you point out. I am making investigations to see if improvement can be made. Envelopes should present no difficulty. They can be neatly prepared by hand. The making of them may by itself become an occupation. Do the ones I have sent you lack the finish?

You may not wait for adopting khaddar till you have used up all your mill-made saris. There is any amount of beauty to be found among hand-spun stuffs. Of course hand-spun silk is khadi.

Please give my love to Maharaj Singh and his wife. You may not know that my second son is editor of a S. A. paper called Indian Opinion. He is a good young man. He did net like Maharaj Singh’s policy and attacked him fiercely in his paper. Andrews and I reasoned with the boy for the manner of his attack but we failed to convince him of the error of his method. He is an obstinate boy. I told him I did not mind his criticism where he disapproved of a policy but I reasoned with him as to the manner of his approach. I am still trying.

I remain unconvinced by Mrs. B. Nehru’s argument. My point is that we as reformers may not do the work of prosecution. The sanatanists will pay the fines and put up the Harijans against us. I am quite clear in my mind that we have to begin with the so-called higher classes who are the real culprits. That Harijans know sometimes that they are contravening the Sarda Act does not affect my argument. They are still ignorant of the wrongdoing. Mere defiance of law has ceased to be a wrong in itself. My argument holds good even for the women’s organization. You may show this to Mrs. B. N. Naturally, if my reasoning does not convince you, you will ignore it.

I must inquire about linen.
You will come whenever you can. The earlier the better.
Love.

[PS]
This paper is especially bad. I hope you can decipher the writing.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 3523. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6332

392. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

WARDHA,
March 4, 1935

CHI. AMTUSSALAAM,

I have your very long letter. What am I to do if you twist the meaning of what I write? Now do whatever you think is proper. Be calm and improve your health by any means. That will make me happy, you may be sure. What is it that you have asked for? Is it a charkha or that solar instrument? Will it do if I send it with someone who is going there?

I am not surprised that Devdas and Lakshmi look after you and love you. If it was otherwise, I should have been surprised as well as unhappy.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 319

1 This is in Urdu.
393. LETTER TO PARIKSHITLAL L. MAJMUDAR

March 4, 1935

BHAI PARIKSHITLAL,

If we talk of ideals, the Harijan workers who participated in the Santaram celebrations can be said to have violated the rule. But it can be argued that perhaps it was proper under the prevailing circumstances there. This issue is not at all worth discussing in public. The workers had the right to do what they felt was proper in the situation existing there. We cannot set ourselves up as judges of the world.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4002

394. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

March 4, 1935

It will not be necessary for you to attend any function that may be arranged in connection with the Silver Jubilee celebrations. If it is clear, however, that your not attending will harm the Corporation, you ought to go. The same rule applies to social functions. You should remember that we are not practising non-co-operation these days. That part of the programme has been suspended. A municipal councillor, therefore, may serve the city in whatever manner he can consistently with his freedom, self-respect and popularity. Having said this, I need not give illustrations. If you want, however, I shall think up some. When you feel that you are not in a position to serve but on the contrary are likely to endanger your self-respect, it will be your duty to resign and give reasons for your action.

Do whatever you can in the fields of Harijan work, prohibition, khadi, village industries, etc. The Government it is true has not left much scope for such work. But we also are a good deal to blame for that. As you see, we are able to do nothing about Hindu-Muslim unity. However, this fact is not a reason for yielding to despair but for intensifying our efforts.

[From Gujarati]
Bapuni Prasadi, p. 157
395. LETTER TO G. V. MAVALANKAR

March 5, 1935

BHAI MAVALANKAR,

I have your letter. Thakkar Bapa’s terms were exactly similar. I can very well visualize from here the load on you. There are only a few workers, so they will have to bear the burden.

Do whatever you can.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1243

396. LETTER TO RAOJIBHAI N. PATEL

WARDHA,

[March] 6, 1935

CHI. RAOJIBHAI,

I have your letter and Lalita’s. Lalita may come whenever she pleases. If she is not in a hurry, she should come after the 18th. The meetings will continue till then.

Here everyone eats unpolished rice and with great relish. It cooks well. It is first soaked in water for twelve hours and then put in boiling water. Washing the rice vigorously two or three times has the same effect as pounding. Such washing, therefore, is tantamount to polishing, and is therefore harmful. I only wanted to point out this easy method to those who eat their rice polished.

Blessings from
BAPU

SIT, RAOJIBHAI PATEL
LIMBASI
MATAR TALUKA, B.B. & C.I. RLY.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9003

1 The source has “January”, but it seems to be a slip as the postal cancellation mark of Wardha bears the date March 6, 1935.
397. LETTER TO JETHALAL G. SAMPAT

March 6, 1935

It has been resolved
1. to have a congregational prayer in the evening;
2. to create among the wives of the workers interest in publicity work;
3. to promote among the wives of the workers feeling of mutual love and affection;
4. to take minimum help from servants for domestic chores;
5. to give up tea and sugar in our homes;
6. to help the workers make progress in spinning, etc.;
7. to provide hygienic lavatories, etc.;
8. to give systematic education to co-workers on free days;
9. to reduce the area of publicity;
10. to begin work with the processing of cotton;
11. to acquire an average of fifteen counts in spinning;
12. to propagate takli among the proper people;
13. to think also about the other industries.

March 6, 1935

CHI. JETHALAL,

Vinoba told me that all of you had resolved to put the above—mentioned things in practice with immediate effect. If you have already done so, bring the report with you or send it by post.

Vinoba has narrated to me his experiences there. It seems he has made a minute observation.

Blessings from

BAPU

From Gujarati: C.W. 9850. Courtesy: Narayan J. Sampat
398. MESSAGE TO “THE LEADER”

WARDHA,
March 7, 1935

I have time only to wish success to the Silver Jubilee function. This is assured to you when Panditji1 is there not only to grace the celebration but even to lead the function. You know that though I have not always been able to accept the political views propounded by The Leader, I have always had a very high regard for it. I have known it to be one of the best edited Indian dailies.

M. K. GANDHI

The Leader, 12-3-1935

399. LETTER TO AGATHA HARRISON

Thursday, March 7, 1935

MY DEAR AGATHA.

I have your letter of 24th ultimo. You are quite clear. I have no difficulty in reaching the heart of your letters. I know why you want me not to precipitate matters. Sometimes I may appear to others to do so, but it is contrary to my nature to act hastily; and at the present moment I am doubly circumspect, for the simple reason that my own ahimsa is on trial. It is not enough for me to protest my innocence. If I have it in me, it must be self-luminous even as the sun. I suppose even the blind, though they do not see the sun, feel the dawn when it is coming. The noon-day heat, of course, they cannot help feeling. And when a man is filled with love, it must be like the noon-day sun. I may fail to express such ahimsa during this lifetime. I shall proclaim that failure from the housetops rather than alter by a hair’s breadth the standard I have set before me. Just at the present moment, therefore, I can say that any action hastening Civil Resistance is highly improbable. But if it does come, I have no doubt that you will say that

1 Madan Mohan Malaviya

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
it was inevitable.

Love.

BAPU

MISS AGATHA HARRISON
2 CRANBOURNE COURT
ALBERT BRIDGE ROAD, S.W. 11

From a photostat: G.N. 1485

400. LETTER TO SATYA DEVA
March 7, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. It does not show that you have any knowledge of things going around you. From your writing I hardly think that you will be able to render any service to the Association as an accountant. But you can become a good village worker in your own district and if you will be that, I should like to ask you to correspond with Babu Brijkishor Prasad, Durbhanga.

Yours sincerely,

S J T. SATYA DEVA
C/O B. HARIBHAU SAHAY
SEGAULI SUGAR WORKS LTD.
SEGAULI, (CHAMPARAN)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

401. LETTER TO DR. GIRDHARILAL BATRA
March 7, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

There is no one here who can be sent to your village in Punjab. To train workers will be possible after a few months but I would like you to correspond with Dr. Gopichand who is the agent in general of the A. I. V. I. A. for the Punjab. He will be better able to guide you than I.

Yours sincerely,

DR. GIRDHARILAL BATRA
CALCUTTA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 All India Village Industries Association
2 Dr. Gopichand Bhargava; vide the following item.
402. LETTER TO DR. GOPICHAND BHARGAVA
March 7, 1935

DEAR DR. GOPICHAND,

Here is Dr. Batra’s letter and a copy of my reply† to him for your information.

Yours sincerely,

DR. GOPICHAND
LAHORE

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

403. LETTER TO N. G. APTE
March 7, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. There is an unfortunate history about the juices you sent with Sjt. Marathe. I could not tempt any person to try those juices as there were plenty of fruits and I could not try them myself for the simple reason that I limit myself to five articles per day and there can be found no room for any of the two juices.

I thought that I had returned the papers to Sjt. Marathe but now that you remind me I shall make a search.

What sample are you referring to?

Yours sincerely,

SJT. N. G. APTE
754 SHUKRAWAR
POONA 2

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

404. LETTER TO DR. MARTIN
March 7, 1935

DEAR DR. MARTIN,

I am thankful to you for your letter giving all the information about the Pendra Road Sanatorium. You may have come to know that I was recently in Nagpur. I am sorry I had not a moment left to visit your Hospital.

Yours sincerely,

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

† Vide the preceding item.
405. LETTER TO JOHN HAYNES HOLMES

WARDHA,
March 7, 1935

DEAR DR. HOLMES,

I have your letter of 25th January last redirected from Delhi by Devdas, I know you have been regularly receiving a diary of events from here. Therefore I need say nothing about them. I do remember a reference to your Church' having conferred upon me the Community Church Medal. You may send it to my address at Wardha duly registered and I shall get it.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

DR. HOLMES
N.Y., U. S. A.

1 The Community Church of New York

2 The addressee had written “You may remember that two years ago my Church conferred upon you our so-called Community Church Medal for outstanding service in the higher religious interests of mankind”, and had expressed his intention of sending the Medal safely and early enough.

406. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

March 7, 1935

CHI. PREMA.

Since I have gone into silence in order to clear the arrears of correspondence, I must write this little note with my own hand. As for your letter, it is lying by my side, but I will be able to take it up only when I can write with my right hand or when I get enough time.

If you can get even a small piece woven from the yarn with you, do so and send it directly to Manilal at Phoenix. Only so will it reach him before Arun’s birthday. It is for him that Sushila has asked for it.

If I cannot write to you for some reason, that does not mean that you should stop sending your regular reports. You are putting on good weight. That is as it should be.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 10367. Also C.W. 6806, Courtesy: Premabehn Kantak
407. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

March 7, 1935

BHAI GHANSHYAMDAS,

Go through this. Could there be anything in the man?

The purport of Mahadev’s letter was just this. You have laboured hard and arrived at this stage. Now when you get time, you should go to England and do what you can. Success can be proved only by an honourable compromise but there seems little possibility of it at this juncture. While a genuine Hindu-Muslim agreement has not been achieved, the achievement of the other appears well-nigh impossible. We can but make an effort.

What happened about the Ranchi Ashram?

Blessings from
BAPU

From Hindi: C.W. 8005. Courtesy: G. D. Birla

408. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

March 7, 1935

BHAI GHANSHYAMDAS,

Having taken silence for a short while, I reply to your letter myself.

You may write to him that such is my opinion. You will be going to England in a few months. It would be proper then to talk to Barlow and others. But it cannot possibly result in any rights being granted¹. At the same time it is also necessary to make clear that anything workable can be negotiated only with the political leaders. In the prevailing atmosphere no agreement unrelated to politics is possible.

Writing this will not lead to any misunderstanding.

Blessings from
BAPU

¹ The original here is not clear.
409. WELL BEGUN

A sister\(^1\) who in conjunction with another\(^2\) has just begun work in a little village in C. P. writes a deeply interesting and earnest letter from which I take the following extract:\(^3\)

There is much more that is valuable in the letter before me. But I resist the temptation to quote more. I must not divide with other items\(^4\) the emphasis which I wish to lay on the necessity for village workers of labouring like the villagers, which the quotation so clearly recognizes. If these two sisters are blessed by God with health and can stick to their work for long, if not for life, they will certainly make of their village a model—not merely because they have begun with physical labour, but also because of the propriety of their whole scheme of work and the selfless love of the villagers which fires them.

Harijan, 8-3-1935

410. A BAFFLING PROBLEM

An honours graduate writes:

I am a native of Rayalaseema\(^5\) now in the grip of famine. The reasons for the deplorable distress which should move the hearts of all the people of India are:

(1) The awful neglect of the minor irrigation works essential for water-supply for daily and irrigation purposes in this rainless-uplands region.

(2) Awful neglect of the domestic industries including hand-spinning and weaving, which were brought to life by your work in the other parts of the country but not in this region.

(3) Awful ignorance and want of education, ancient or modern, among the people and their everlasting engagement in factious fights and criminal litigation. Hence, more than famine relief work, famine protection work is absolutely necessary to making the life of the people of this region worth living at all.

The third is, perhaps, not a cause but a result of the first two causes. And if the first is substantial and cannot be or is not remedied,

---

\(^1\) Mary Chesley; vide “Letter to Mary Chesley”, 1-3-1935

\(^2\) Mary Barr

\(^3\) Not reproduced here. The correspondent had written about the manual labour she had been doing constructing a verandah in her house. She had further added that after completing the verandah she intended to take up gardening.

\(^4\) The source has “with her items”.

\(^5\) In Andhra Pradesh
the alternatives before the unhappy inhabitants of these regions are death from starvation or migration from that waterless land. It is, however, likely that the situation is not so hopeless as my correspondent describes. In any case, I expect that the improvement in the matter of water supply is beyond the ability of private workers.
But if the conditions of life are at all tolerable, much can undoubtedly be done by right and honest effort in the direction of finding employment for the people. There is so much waste material and waste labour in the country that if the two can be utilized, no one need starve. There is no doubt that relief measures without simultaneous preventive measures are worse than useless. They pauperise the people and turn them away from honest labour. Relief measures can themselves be preventive. Thus, instead of giving doles, organizers can organize local industries and invite the sufferers to engage in them.
No one who is not disabled should be fed unless he performs his allotted task. In my opinion, intelligent labour is for the time being the only primary and adult education in this land of starving millions.
Literary education should follow the education of the hand—the one gift that visibly distinguishes man from beast. It is a superstition to think that the fullest development of man is impossible without a knowledge of the art of reading and writing. That knowledge undoubtedly adds grace to life, but is in no way indispensable for man’s moral, physical or material growth. It is, therefore, to be wished that the graduate correspondent and all the workers whom we can muster together would live in the midst of the sufferers and apply themselves to the constructive task of finding work on the spot for them, so as to enable them to feel the dignity that belongs to the man who earns his bread honestly.

_Harijan_, 8-3-1935

411. LETTER TO DR. M. A. ANSARI

_March 8, 1935_

DEAR DR. ANSARI,

I understand your letter. I shall not strive with you but shall plead with Rajenbabu to release you. I can see quite clearly that if we are to have your services for many a year you should not have any regular responsibility to shoulder. I see too that you must go to Europe from time to time.
My love to you all.

Yours,

Ansari Papers. Courtesy: Jamia Millia Islamia Library

412. LETTER TO O. V. R. SESHAN

WARDHA,

March 8, 1935

MY DEAR SESHAN,

Better late than never. Your letter of 11th ultimo has lain with me all these many days. It is quite true that I do not appreciate the idea of raising funds by means of dramas. Those who stage plays should do so because it is a good thing in itself.

SJT. O. V. R. SESHAN
24 BUNGALOW
TATAPURAM (COCHIN)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

413. LETTER TO FEROZE GANDHI

March 8, 1935

MY DEAR FEROZE,

You have been lax this time in writing to me. I wish it was possible for me to give you the date. I have simply told you that I entertain the idea of being able to go there. I am glad Kamala has gone to live in the sanatorium. I am sure it is the proper thing.

Love.

SJT. FEROZE GANDHI
C/o KAMALA NEHRU
CHANDRA BHUVAN, BHIVANI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
414. LETTER TO JAYARAMDAS JAYAWARDHANE
March 8, 1935

MY DEAR JAYARAMDAS,

I have your letter of the 3rd instant. You have now given me what I can call definite information in as brief a form as possible. I have already put myself in touch with a medical man. I shall see what is possible to do. Meantime send me full particulars. How many volunteers are working in your Mandal?

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

415. LETTER TO PURUSHOTTAM BAVISHI
March 8, 1935

BHAI SHRI PURUSHOTTAM,

I have your letter. The custom prevalent among the Kanabis of consuming large quantities of sugar on such occasions as death is certainly bad. But who will pay heed to my writings? The local people should work to that end. It is better if they use jaggery instead of sugar, but why should even jaggery be put to unnecessary use? Send me the details of your village industry. What work do you do in the agriculture department? In what subject have you gained specialized knowledge?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 125. Also C.W. 4744

416. LETTER TO CHAND TYAGI
March 8, 1935

BHAI CHAND TYAGI,

I require from you an account of your work. I have detained Rajkishori here because they were not interested in their marriage. Neither was desirous of living with the other. The brother did not care. I placed a stiff condition before them and they cheerfully agreed to it. It seemed unfair to let you bear the burden of her care and also extract work from you. This was the reason for my detaining Rajkishori here. Her work is going on smoothly. She is inexperienced but a simple girl. Her health is good.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 3262

417. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

WARDHA,
March 9, 1935

CHI. AMALA,

I have your two letters. Unfortunately the receipt for Rs. 20 cannot be traced. But I am trying through the postmaster to find out how the money can be received. If you are hard up, surely you ought not to have sent me Rs. 20. Shall I send that back to you?

I hope the ailing Sparrow is restored to health. I hope you are now out of pain entirely. Why do you say you cannot cook? You will tell me in good time when the Russian sister is to come.

Blessings from
BAPU

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

418. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

March 9, 1935

MY DEAR THAKKAR BAPA,

I fear I have not acknowledged your letter of February 12 containing the reference to Miris. I have no objection whatsoever to Rs. 15,000 being set apart for work among them. I hope you will find the right man for it.

SIT. THAKKAR BAPA
MADRAS

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
419. A LETTER

March 9, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

You will please pardon me for not acknowledging your letter earlier. As you may know I have no funds. I have to beg for all the movements for which I make myself responsible. Why do you not get a contribution from the C. P. Government or from the Leper Fund which is controlled, I understand, by the Government of India?

Yours sincerely,

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

420. LETTER TO HATIM ALVI

March 9, 1935

MY DEAR HATIM,

I have your letter. The pamphlet you refer to has not yet been received. When I get it I shall certainly go through it for your sake if it does not require too much time. But tell me of what use can my opinion be in an essentially domestic quarrel of a family in which I would be considered an utter outsider?

Yours sincerely,

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

421. LETTER TO ABDUL GHANI

March 9, 1935

MY DEAR GHANI,

I hope you are doing well and have had no further trouble with your tonsils. Sardar Vallabhbhai and Sadullah very recently saw Father. He is very much reduced in health, though quite cheerful. It is just likely that he will be transferred to a place in the North. I have no definite information as yet.

You are quite right that in isolated factories people are prone to live upon one another and therefore petty jealousies and scandals are rife. I hope you will rise above all these and set a worthy example to everybody around you.
Are you doing any reading? You should give one hour to reading Urdu and you ought to learn Hindi script also.
Sadullah was here for a few days.
Love.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

---

422. LETTER TO HEMCHANDRA

March 9, 1935

DEAR HEMCHANDRA,

I have your letter. The authoritative guidance you can only get from the Working Committee. My own opinion, however, is that when a humiliating notice is served, a person may leave his district where that notice is to operate or submit to it. There are undoubtedly occasions when submission would be wrong and leaving the district would be impossible. In that case one would offer Civil Disobedience on one’s own responsibility. In this individual case there can be no guidance either from the Congress or from anyone else.

Yours sincerely,

SIT. HEMCHANDRA
GAYGHOR
FARIDPUR (DIST.)

[PS.]

An active office-bearer in the Congress cannot be an active worker in the A. I. V. I. A. for the simple reason that he has to neglect either the one or the other.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

---

423. LETTER TO J. C. AKARTE

March 9, 1935

MY DEAR AKARTE,

It is very difficult to guide you in the matter. It must be decided by you and you alone. If the incident you refer to can be proved, you can certainly file the information and ask the authorities to prosecute. I see nothing wrong in your publishing in the Press a statement which can be proved.
If the Buva comes here without any fuss and without announcing that he has been invited, I shall certainly receive him. But I have no desire to see him or to send him an invitation. If he comes, he must come alone.

Yours,

BAPU

SJT. AKARTE
MORSHI
AMRAOTI (DIST.)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

424. A LETTER

March 9, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. I think the letter from the secretary of the A. I. V. I. A. is quite proper. What we want to do is not to carry on a campaign of prohibition, which can only come through the State and which is the proper subject to be taken up by somebody. But what the A. I. V. I. A. seeks to do is to convert the drunkard to abstemiousness. After all you yourself do admit that your picketing could not produce a permanent effect. Picketing is a valuable thing up to a point and for a time. It cannot become a permanent institution and then according to the principle of the division of labour it cannot be done by one and the same organization. A. I. V. I. A. is purely constructive and therefore it must confine itself to teaching people abstemiousness. It cannot take up also the work of picketing and move the State to declare prohibition. For that another body has to be created. You have therefore to make your choice. Either work from without or work from within. Both are necessary and no rule can be laid down as to what a person should do. That choice has to be made by each one for himself.

Yours sincerely,

M. K G.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
425. LETTER TO ACHYUT PATWARDHAN

March 9, 1935

MY DEAR PATWARDHAN,

I have your letter. I am sorry that Sastri or Ganesan took all these many months to discharge a small amount. Of course I know that you would gladly take up the Harijan printing again for my sake. I am in correspondence with Sastri and Ganesan about it.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

Sjt. A. PATWARDHAN
ARYABHUŞAN PRESS
POONA 4

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

426. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

March 9, 1935

CHI. SHARMA,

See what happened to the wire I sent you. You had said just “Sharma” would suffice and so I thought I would save an anna. The telegram said: “Do come. No misunderstanding.”

My decision was not the result of a misapprehension. In view of your circumstances it seemed the correct thing. But do come if that is your wish. I have written to Dr. Bhaskar about the books. They should be arriving in a day or two.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, between pp. 130 and 131

1 Vide “Letter to S. Ganesan”, 10-3-1935
2 Gandhiji had addressed it “Sharma, Khurja”, but it was returned undelivered as the addressee had shifted in the meanwhile to a neighbouring village.
427. LETTER TO MESSRS KIRLOSKAR BROTHERS

March 10, 1935

GENTLEMEN,

Sheth Ambalal, who is one of the judges, says that he would like to know my views on your wheel before he can come to a conclusion. He proposes to sail for England about the 23rd April next. If the decision is to be arrived at before he sails, the matter has to be expedited. I am under promise to you not to give my opinion to the judges. I would strictly abide by that promise, so long as you wish me to do so, but if Sheth Ambalal represents the opinion of the other judges, there is just a danger of their either declining to give their decision, or give it against you on the grounds of insufficiency of evidence. I felt therefore that I should let you know what was happening. You will please let me know what you would like me to do. I cannot guide you, one way or the other, for the simple reason that I do not know what is best in your interest. You alone can judge for yourselves what is good for you.

Yours sincerely,

MESSRS KIRLOSKAR BROTHERS
KIRLOSKAR WADI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

428. LETTER TO DR. B. JAYARAM

March 10, 1935

DEAR DR. JAYARAM,

I thank you for your letter and I am glad that you consider Shri Bhole to be free from any disease. It is a great thing that he has put on weight. I am asking him to withdraw and adopt your advice to take up some work or continue his studies.

Yours sincerely,

DR. B. JAYARAM
MEDICAL OFFICER
PRINCESS KRISHNAJAMMANNI TUBERCULOSIS SANATORIUM, MYSORE

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 Vide “Letter to Kirloskar Brothers”, 24-11-1934 and “Letter to Kirloskar Brothers”, 10-12-1934
2 Vide the following item.
429. LETTER TO BHOLE

March 10, 1935

MY DEAR BHOLE,

Here is a copy of Dr. Jayaram’s letter just received. I have had your letters regularly but I was waiting for Dr. Jayaram’s letter before writing to you. It is quite clear now that you should withdraw and proceed to Poona or remain for some time with Sjt. Ramachandran at Bangalore.

Sjt Bhole
PRINCESS KRISHNAJAMMANNI
TUBERCULOSIS SANATORIUM, MYSORE

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

430. LETTER TO RAMACHANDRAN

March 10, 1935

MY DEAR RAMACHANDRAN,

I have now heard from Dr. Jayaram. He has come to the conclusion that Bhole never had any tuberculosis but whether he had any or not he is certainly now entirely free and that he should now leave the Sanatorium and take to some social work or continue his studies so as to take his mind off himself. I have, therefore, advised Bhole to withdraw and be with you for some time if he wishes to or proceed to Poona at once.

Sjt. Ramachandran
HARIJAN SEVAK SANGH
BANGALORE

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

431. LETTER TO S. GANESAN

March 10, 1935

MY DEAR GANESAN,

Here is Thakkar Bapa’s indictment. This is a most damaging letter. I am sending it to you. It has moved me also. Why have your debts gone on increasing on every inspection? And what can be the meaning of your having promised to sleep at the institution when evidently you will not be able to carry out the undertaking?

1 Vide the preceding item.

I have advised that if the liabilities were incurred properly on behalf of the institution and if in spite of irregularities dishonesty could not be imputed to you and if the institution is found to be necessary for the cause, the whole of the liabilities should be discharged. I have also said that if your honesty was questioned or your promises were proved to be entirely unreliable but the institution was useful, all the liabilities legitimately incurred on behalf of the institution should be discharged and you should be relieved of all connection with the institution. And if the institution was not useful, the Harijan Sevak Sangh should withdraw its support or connection with it altogether.

SIT. S. GANESAN
MADRAS

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

432. LETTER TO S. BANERJI

March 11, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. I am quite clear in my mind that the Sangh must not identify itself with any election campaign. Its service of the cause must be judged on its own merits. This does not mean that the public should not support deserving Harijan candidates or that parties which are interested in such things should not promote the election of suitable Harijan candidates to municipalities and local boards. My only point is that the Harijan Sangh has a much superior task to claim its attention.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

DR. S. BANERJI
NEW DRUGGISTS’ HALL
JUMMA MUSJID, DELHI

From a photostat: G.N. 2203
DEAR NIRMALBABU,

I have your note as also two numbers of Congress Socialist containing your articles which you will be glad to know I had already seen, Masani having brought them to my notice and given me the two copies.

I should not say that any of the articles contains an exposition of Varnashrama or non-violence but in so far as you have touched upon either I can say that you have given a fairly correct representation of the two doctrines as I have known them. As to the rest of the articles whilst you have made an endeavour to be fair to me, there are several things in them on which I do not agree that they are accurate. I don’t think they correctly set forth the true state of things. This is, however, of no importance. It is enough that you have made your best endeavour to examine my position in an impartial spirit.

You will be glad to know that I have not forgotten your questions and answers. I hope to finish the revision which I do at odd moments. I hope to send it to you as soon as I have finished it.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

SIT. NIRMAL K. BOSE
6/1A BRITISH INDIAN ST.
CALCUTTA

From a photostat: G.N. 10519

1 Quoting a part of this letter in My Days with Gandhi (p. 14) he says: “In February 1935, I had written two articles in the Congress Socialist, entitled ‘Is Gandhi a nationalist?’ The opinion had been expressed that he was after all, more of an internationalist, and more intimately tied to the poor people’s cause to be a ‘nationalist’, in the usual sense of the term. But for the sake of India’s freedom, there had come about an alliance between the radical Gandhi and the nationalist forces; and the prediction was made that as Gandhi became more and more radical in action, the nationalist forces would tend to drop away from his company.

Copies of these two articles were despatched to Gandhi who wrote back from Wardha on the 11th of March 1935.”
434. LETTER TO KRISHNA HUTHEESING

March 11, 1935

CHI. KRISHNA,

Prabhavati showed me your letter to her. It grieved me. I knew you had a temper but I had never imagined that you could get so angry without there being any occasion for it. I am the cause of your anger, am I not? After all Prabhavati only conveyed to you what instructions I had given her. You ought to understand that a vow if taken must be observed too. And why such contempt for the Ashram? Can anyone contemptuous of the Ashram have any respect for me? If there is no love for the Ashram, how can there be any love for me? But can one argue against anger? Anger is a kind of madness and when it subsides you will laugh at yourself. After all we can be angry only with our own people, and who am I if not one of your own people? The anger will have abated by now. You must tell me of Mummy’s condition. You will obey me in this at least, won’t you? The ayah’s work will be done by the ayah and what Prabha was doing can be done by some other girl like her. Just as you accepted Prabha on better acquaintance, so will you accept any other girl. Supposing Khorshed or even Ba herself comes in place of Prabha! Anyway I shall pull you by the ear and settle the score when we meet. You must now give me a frank account of Mummy’s health.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Hindi]

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

435. LETTER TO KHUSHALCHAND GANDHI

March 12, 1935

REVERED BHAI,

Narandas wrote to me about your illness. If you are at all inclined to take treatment, I have suggested an extremely simple one.

I do not expect a letter from you.

Respects from

MOHANDAS

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II
436. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

March 12, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

I got your letter. I learnt about Radha only from you. I have written to her.

We shouldn’t expect much improvement in Father’s condition now.

A new book has just been published in which it is stated that the left nostril should first be cleansed by drawing in water through it and throwing it out through the throat and that water should then be drawn in through both nostrils. This will keep the passage clean and open. The process is not very troublesome. If cold water cannot be tolerated, the washing can be done with lukewarm water. If Father is willing to try this remedy and take the necessary trouble, let him practise it. The only real means of purification, however, is Ramanama.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8432. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

437. LETTER TO NARAHARI D. PARikh

March 12, 1935

CHI. NARAHARI,

I have your letter. I find it is a difficult task to rescue Kesar. It is obviously impossible for you or for me to detain her against the wishes of her father. Kesar should live wherever Uttamchand lives. You should correspond with the person who intends to marry her. Perhaps he might be induced to give up the thought of Kesar.

I think it is not proper to put Kesar in the Kanya Ashram here. As for me, I am now in an entirely independent house. It can be said that I am doing wholly different work. How can a thirteen-year-old girl be accommodated in a place like the office where there is no provision for education and the like? Uttamchand can protect Kesar provided she remains firm; but if she falters, no one can save her.

It seems Bhagwanji is tired and wants to spend some time with me. If you can relieve him for a short time, the duration of which you can decide at your end, let him come. You alone should be responsible for the decision. I can have no preferences in the matter.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9072

438. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

March 12, 1935

CHI. SHARMA,

I think you gave me a list of the books belonging to the Ahmedabad Municipality that are with you. I have no recollection of the titles but The Earth and Colonial and Farm Sanitation, both by Poore, should be among them. If they are with you, send them on to me or bring them with you when you come.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Hindi]

Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, p. 152

439. LETTER TO N. S. HARDIKAR

WARDHA,
March 13, 1935

DEAR DR. HARDIKAR,

On inquiring of Kamala Devi about you, she told me that you were suffering from T.B. I was distressed. Please let me know how you are faring.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

DR. HARDIKAR
HOUBLI
KARNATAKA

From the original: N. S. Hardikar Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library
440. ADVICE TO VILLAGERS

[Before March 14, 1935]

Just a number of six inches wide and a foot deep trenches would do with open space in between, on which the earth dug out should be banked up in ridges, the people to use the two banks of the trench as seats. This is the simplest device. You have done the thing without any sense of shame all these years, and you may do without latrines. But if you do want them, we could easily help in building them for you out of your own village materials. All that you have to do is to cover the evacuations with the earth near by. In eight days you will see that it is converted into rich manure, and you can have a rotation of suitable fodder or vegetable crops all the year round. I am telling you from my own experience. Your crops will be increased without any extra expense or effort, your health will improve, for the flies will carry no disease germs, and your village will be turned into a clean spot. Come along, then, will you come with your spades and shovels, or not?

‘We will, we will,’ they exclaimed.

_Harijan_, 15-3-1935

441. ADVICE TO A FRIEND

[Before March 14, 1935]

I shall explain it to you in a minute. One of these _ghanis_ probably costs nothing less than 50 rupees to make. Now, if all stopped home-pressing, there would be over 100,000 _ghanis_ lying idle in the country. I have allowed one press to seven villages — surely, an underestimate.

Think what it means. Allow 30 rupees per _ghani_. That means

---

1 Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Notes”. In the course of a sanitation campaign in the neighbourhood of Wardha, Gandhiji and party visited Ramnagar and Sindi and found the streets littered with excreta. Gandhiji armed the party with shovels and buckets and began to remove the dirt. The villagers joined. He then addressed the villagers.

2 Vide “Letter to Premabehn Kantak”, 14-3-1935

3 Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Notes”. Gandhiji had advised purchase of an idle village _ghani_ (oil-press). But the friend who was asked to get this _ghani_ and to install it had failed to see the rationale of the whole adventure.

4 Vide the following item.
that three millions of rupees worth of capital is lying idle! Is it not a tragedy? How can we allow this to run to waste? And if we had all of them working, fancy the number of men they would employ, at the rate of only one man per each. And, then, the tons and tons of oil-cake that would be released for the half-starved cows and bullocks. The same is the case about our wooden sugar-cane crushers.

But will the people listen?

It is to make them listen to us that we are having this ghani on our own land, that we are husking our own rice and grinding our own flour. But even if they will not listen, what then? Supposing people will not listen to the gospel of truth and non-violence, shall we ask them, then, to take to untruth and violence? We have to go on doing what is the best thing for the nation and for the poor, who compose the nation, no matter what others do, or will not do.

_Harijan_, 15-3-1935

442. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

Unrevised
March 14, 1935

CHI. PREMA,

Now that there has been a second letter from you, I abandon the desire of writing in my own hand and dictate this.

Why should you apologize for the fact that the yarn with you is not enough? If the yarn I sent is not enough for the purpose, what can you do?

Arun’s birthday comes some time in April. I don’t remember the exact date. It was mentioned in Sushila’s letter.

Your hand can probably be likened to Mira’s. Of what use is a hand which has never become rough or developed sores through work?

No new car has arrived here at Jamnalalji’s place; he has only a horse-carriage and a bullock-cart.

Take unboiled milk, uncooked leafy vegetables and tamarind and see what happens. Perhaps all the pimples will subside.

An indigenous oil-press has been installed here and linseed oil is extracted. Ba and the other women clean the seed. There is no servant. All work is done by ourselves. I always eat with the others seated in a

---

1 The source has “pounding”.

300
THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
row.

About a mile from here there is a village named Sindi which Mahadev, Mira, Kanu, Jamnalal, Madalasa and Ramakrishna go and clean every day. I also went once. I am thinking of going again. The problem of cleanliness in villages can be solved only if we ourselves become scavengers.

The picture of the village which you have given is as pathetic as it is true. We have to transform such villages. The task can be accomplished neither by intellectual power nor by physical force but only through the power of love.

You should derive what comfort you can from so much today. I must have the account of your progress.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 10368. Also C.W. 6807. Courtesy: Premabehn Kantak

443. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHANA CHANDIWALA

March 14/15, 1935

CHI. BRIJKRISHNA,

May you live long. May all your noble aspirations be realized.

I consider your staying on here futile; I shall not be able to endure your illness. Go and stay where you can maintain your health. I deem it best that you leave today. If you have any questions to ask, ask them by post.

I certainly want to be a mother to you, but I have not the requisite ability. A mother serves; she never expects service. I have always taken service from you. I don’t remember ever having served you. A mother never commands; I have always commanded you. What reassurance can I then give you? Do go to the South with your mother. There is no harm in your going to Pondicherry. I do not like the idea of Banaras. Where is there any Rajayoga there? If not to Pondicherry, you may go to Dehra Dun, Almora, etc. For the present Delhi will do.

Do whatever service you like to in Delhi. Of course, anybody can serve the Village Industries Association without being a member. I have already spoken to you about the books. . . .

. . . 2 Nobody ever has two helpers. There is only one helper, that is God, the others are so only in name. . . .

Blessings from

BAPU

From Hindi: C.W. 10233. Courtesy: Brijkrishna Chandiwala

444. SCAVENGERS ALL

Untouchability is responsible for more things than we know. Now that attention is being drawn to village sanitation, it is becoming clear that the insanitation of villages and towns is chiefly due to the belief in untouchability. For fear of touching our own dirt and, therefore, cleaning it, we wallow in dirt and have consigned our obvious duty to a portion of our kith and kin, and because they are rendering what is the most important service of all, we have made them lepers of society, untouchable and uncared for.

The only remedy for the removal of this social evil and curse is for every one of us to be his own scavengers. We would then soon learn the art of cleanliness. We would miss many of the most common diseases which are due to filth. And we should at the same time serve an economic end. G. I. Fowler states, in his Wealth and Waste, that a proper disposal of human excreta would realize Rs. 2 per head per year. In the vast majority of cases, all this rich manure is being wasted and disease invited. He quotes Prof. Brultini, from his volume The Use of Waste Materials, who says that “nitrogen derived from the 282,000 residents of Delhi is sufficient to fertilize a minimum of 10,000 and maximum of 95,000 acres.” Because we do not know how to treat our scavengers, Delhi of ancient fame has pestilential spots of which we have to feel ashamed. If we all become scavengers, we would know how to treat ourselves and how to turn what today is poison into rich food for plant life. Thirty crores of the population of India should mean, according to Dr. Fowler, an annual gain of 60 crores of rupees to the country if we would but make a wise use of human excreta.

Let no one be appalled by the magnitude of the problem. Those who have the conviction have to begin with themselves in the full faith that everybody else is bound to follow their example if their faith

1, 2 & 3 Omissions as in the source
outlasts the first flush of enthusiasm. The word “faith” is, perhaps, not the proper word. For the proposition that human excreta are as valuable as those of cattle is not a matter of faith but of daily experience. What is required is eradication of age-long inertia. Sustained, intelligent application of a few today will be the common property of the many tomorrow.

_Harijan, 15-3-1935_

445. LETTER TO HARIBHAU PHATAK

_March 15, 1935_

MY DEAR HARIBHAU,

I have your letter. When I get the particulars from you, I shall try to write something on Paisa Mandal for the _Harijan_. I hope that you have made it clear that you are the donor, though it is likely that I may acquire the merit. You should not have had even a slight attack of dysentery from trying whole unhusked rice. If it was under-cooked, that rice should not have been eaten. This rice is not to be taken as an infliction, but as an aid to health. Every one of the workers if he honestly can, after thorough experimenting, must testify that whole rice is sweeter to the taste, that it requires to be eaten in smaller quantities than polished rice to produce the same satisfaction, and that it cannot in any way be injurious to the body. I have no doubt that you will be the better for taking your milk with _gur_. I hope you do not share the common superstition that _gur_ cannot be taken with milk. The situation of the Harijans in your part of the country has to be handled delicately and tactfully. There can be no doubt that unless we have the general principle of drawing our workers from the villages, we shall make no headway, and in my opinion real swaraj consists in successfully tackling this age-long problem. Where have you procured the paper on which you have written? What is the price?

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

446. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

_March 15, 1935_

BHAI THAKKAR BAPA,

I have received your letter. I have no objection to giving you some more time. But I will find it objectionable if you sleep over the matter. How much more time do you want? The work will not be finished unless you fix a time-limit. Surajbehn had asked for a maximum of six months when she had come here. She had told me that if it was possible she would vacate in only a month. As far as I remember I had this talk in November. Should I consider this the fourth month and May 31 as the final date? I feel that it is improper to give in to that woman’s persistence.

_Harijan’s_ Sastri is your responsibility. I will shift _Harijan_ to Poona and will see that the Sangh does not have to incur an expense of even one paisa on that. But is it not our duty to maintain Sastri after making him leave his job? He must be maintained if he is not a wholly useless person. I am proceeding in the belief that he is not a worthless person. Guide me, as you are my eyes as well as my ears.

I still adhere to what I wrote to you about Ganesan.

It will be a great achievement if you can settle the dispute between the Nattars and the Harijans.

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1153

447. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

WARDHA,

March 15/16, 1935

CHI. VASUMATI,

I have your letter. I had received the previous letter also but was waiting for the second one.

See that you do not have constipation. I hope you do know that leafy vegetables can be grown anywhere. The leaves certainly come up within seven days of the sowing. If you take a farmer to a field in the vicinity of Bochasan, he will show you a few varieties of eatable leafy vegetables. Some of these grow like grass—they are in fact grass. It will serve your purpose even if you get ten or twenty leaves. The people there are bound to have seeds of leafy vegetables. Which house will not have fenugreek, mustard and coriander seeds?

Who are the guests? What do you cook for them? Is the rice you use unpolished? How much time does it take to cook? Does it take more time than polished rice? You should measure time by a watch.
At what time are you supposed to get up? Do you have prayer?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9395. Also C.W. 640. Courtesy: Vasumati Pandit

448. LETTER TO GANGABEHN VAIDYA

March 15/16, 1935

CHI. GANGABEHN,

Why do you long for my letters? I do not write to you because I feel that you do not need my letters so much and that also saves time. I do write if there is anything to say. Moreover Kishorelal is here, so I get to know things from him and also let you know anything I want to convey through him.

I hope you are keeping well. Know it for certain that you are making a big mistake if you are spending too much time with the doctors. Medical science is not the greatest need of the people of India or that of the world. Perhaps you are aware that common experience does not prove that people are more healthy and freer from diseases where there are many doctors. But they are more healthy when they strictly observe the laws of nature, i.e., cleanliness. There was a Turkish woman here. She said that in Turkey villagers were told to shun six things and one of these was doctors. This does not mean that one should not make use of the knowledge one has obtained. It only means that it should be used very sparingly and even while doing that people should be taught to prevent diseases.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9395. Also C.W. 640. Courtesy: Vasumati Pandit
449. LETTER TO EDMOND AND YVONNE PRIVAT

March 16, 1935

MY DEAR ANAND AND BHAKTI,

Though you have given me a long love letter I can only dictate and then too be brief. Allow me to do so because I have hardly any time and because just now I can only write with the left hand. I have what may be called the writer’s cramp. You will be surprised to learn that I have never been able to read Utopia, though I have heard much in praise of it.

We are getting on with village work and trying to convert the 13 acres of ground that Jamnalalji has given us in Wardha into a model village. We are very far from it. But we are only just settling down. You must some day not very far revisit India. You know that third-class travelling is not so difficult and that it is comparatively cheaper.

I hope you are getting your Harijan regularly. Devdas is getting on very well: He and his wife are devoted to their baby.

Love to you both.

BAPU

DR. EDMOND PRIVAT
BELLAVISTA
LOCARNO, SWITZERLAND

From a photostat: G.N. 2339; also a facsimile: Mahatma, Vol. IV, Opp. p. 32

450. LETTER TO N. G. APTE

March 16, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I have now been able to trace the file you sent to me. I am returning it to you by registered book post. I have already expressed my sorrow for the destruction of the two samples that you had kindly sent me. If you would send them again, I shall try them and report to you. I would, however, say that preparation of these juices can hardly ever be part of any village industry. They are not of any great value from the health point of view. The latest researches show that these juices do not retain the vitamins of the fruits from which they are extracted. If your preparation retains the vitamins, that would undoubtedly be a gain.¹

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

451. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

March 17, 1935

CHI. MARY,

I wonder if I replied to your previous letter. Now I have your second letter. You cannot always make people pay for medicines. Always tell them that they ought to pay, whatever they can, not by way of fees but in order that people who cannot afford anything might be helped. Where you find that people are taking advantage of you, you should resolutely refuse to let them have any medicines without payment. Do not encourage people to come to you for medicines but lead them to a natural life and point out to them household nature-cure remedies.

Of course cripples are to be fed and clothed without being expected to do any work. They are a first charge on a well-ordered society.

I understand what you say about the coolie question. You were certainly entitled to ask your neighbour to help you without feeling dependent upon him. There was no principle at stake. Mary C.’s² method of doing everything herself even at the risk of losing time is not to be lightly disposed of. Local circumstances should determine the choice of a particular way where more than one are open to us.

If you have the slightest trace of dysentery it is absolutely necessary for you not to strain yourself in any way. You have to do only light work.

I am not doing physical work. What I am doing is the superintendence of the kitchen so as to bring it in line with village surroundings. All servants have been dispensed with. One only has been retained because he has undergone training enough himself to become one with us. He is a member of the family. He works side by side with everybody else. And whereas he was getting only 7 or 8

¹ Vide also “Letter to N. G. Apte”, 7-3-1935
² Mary Chesley
rupees per month he is getting here 8 rupees plus food which means at least 14 rupees per month.

Mary C. is quite wrong in holding that foreign industrialists are to be preferred to Indian industrialists. I admit that there is not much room for choice but such as there is in favour of the indigenous gentry, for the simple reason that they cannot drain the wealth of the country and it is easier to deal with them than with the foreign industrialists who do not hesitate to make good their position by force of arms which they are able to wield effectively. Their Indian counterpart is unarmed, and knows that he cannot play fast and loose with his dependents.

If you saw that your neighbours were in need of assistance during the harvesting season, it would certainly be your duty to offer your help without any expectation of return in the shape of helping you to build the verandah.

I have now your letter of 9th March in front of me. I have a vivid recollection of our discussion over Duncan’s two chapters. They had reference to the village worker. You told me in the course of our discussion whilst you endorsed his views generally there were portions about which you thought he was over enthusiastic and highly emotional. It was not a perfunctory discussion either. You laid special stress upon his suggestion of wandering teachers who would go from village to village. I think that this was the only point which would have been overlooked had I not come across your letter of the 9th.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 6095. Also C.W. 3365. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

452. LETTER TO R. S. PANDIT

March 17, 1935

MY DEAR RANJIT,

I hope you have received my wire regarding the purchase of Shaila Ashram in Almora. The Sangh Committee thought that they ought not to reduce the price to below Rs. 15,000. You can take possession at once. There is a public worker staying on the property. Perhaps you have no objection to his occupying a portion of the buildings till you require the use of the whole of the buildings. But he can be removed immediately when you are to take possession.

1 The source has “looked over”.

308

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI

You will now correspond with Jamnalalji or rather Shri Kishorelal Mashruwala, Chairman of the Gandhi Seva Sangh, about payment and legal transfer.

I understand what you say about Swaraj Bhavan.

[PS.]

A copy is sent to Jamnalalji also.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

---

453. LETTER TO JAYAPRAKASH NARAYAN

March 17, 1935

CHI. JAYAPRAKASH,

I had your telegram and tried to send you one in reply but the post office was closed. The service was available only on paying a higher charge. So I decided to reply by letter as there was no particular hurry about it.

Rajendrababu is going to Calcutta. He will form his opinion after consultations there. Rajendrababu had a complaint about your suggestion of joint action. How can it be “joint action”? It is for the Congress to fix or not fix a day. A joint meeting of non-Congressmen and Congressmen is understandable. The very name ‘Congress’ includes Socialists and all other Congressmen. Socialists are a part of the Congress, are they not?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 3449

---

454. TESTIMONIAL TO TULSI MAHER

March 17, 1935

On behalf of the Nepal Government Tulsi Maher, the Charkha Pracharak of Nepal, is making a study tour of India in connection with the charkha. I hope that all lovers of the charkha will give him all possible information and the requisite help in his research.

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 6548
455. SPEECH AT THE A. I .V. I. A. BOARD MEETING

[On Or before March 18, 1935]

The pledge does bear a spiritual stamp. The very fact that we are coming again and again to it indicates that the Board wants to discharge its duties strictly, consistently with the objects of the Association. The Pledge was arrived at after the fullest deliberation, and the question whether it will affect the number of our members need not worry us at all. The Board can go on with half a dozen members. All that we have to do is to explain the implications of the pledge and then it should be left to him or her who subscribes to it to find out whether he or she can satisfy all the conditions. The member will certainly ask himself at every step whether he is applying the best part of his energy and talent to the objects of the Association, that is to say, even whilst he is eating or travelling. If you think it is a vague pledge, you may make it more concrete, but I do not think it is vague. It is a gentlemen’s pledge, and each member is put upon his honour as to the interpretation of the pledge. We may not pry into the details of a man’s life. Let the man be his own judge. Let me tell you that it is possible for an active solicitor to give all his talent and energy to the objects of the Association. Thus he will give a different shape to his office. He will invest in reams and reams of hand-made paper and village-made ink and see that all the documents issuing from his office are on that paper and written in that ink. He has a large staff in his office. Whenever he has leisure, he will try to interest them in the Association and persuade them to confine themselves, as far as possible, to village made things. And so on and so forth.

Harijan, 22-3-1935

1 There was a prolonged discussion on the Membership Pledge at the A. I. V. I. A. Board meeting and the members had sought Gandhiji’s advice.
2 The meeting of the A. I. V. I. A. was held at Wardha from the 16th to 18th March, 1935
456. DISCUSSION WITH MEMBERS OF A. I. V. I. A.¹

[On or before March 18, 1935]²

A regular battle raged between Gandhiji and the scientist members from Bengal on the meaning of unpolished rice. Some of the members ate for the first time here the full unpolished rice of Gandhiji’s definition, and some had understood by it the hand-pounded, part-polished rice which is still to be found in our villages. But Gandhiji, who had taken his stand on medical opinion refused to yield an iota of his ground and contended that the pericarp, aleurone and embryo, containing vitamins that, according to medical opinion, were destroyed in mill-polished rice, were all retained only in unhusked rice and could be retained in no other. That they were so retained or could be so retained in once-pounded or twice-pounded rice had to be proved by the chemists and scientists.

[A MEMBER:] But rice pounded only once by the hand in the village dhenki is almost unpolished.

[GANDHIJI:] That is not how a scientist would talk. Do we talk of an almost complete right angle? A right angle is a right angle of 90 degrees, not less, not more.

But the people are so accustomed to the slightly polished rice that it is difficult to persuade them to take to the use of wholly unpolished rice.

A reformer will not argue like that.

It does not cook easily, and when cooked, it all becomes a lump and scares people away.

That it takes more time to cook is true, that it is delicious, and more delicious than the polished rice, has been proved beyond doubt; and after all, what is handsome to the eye may not be handsome after all. Handsome is that handsome tastes.

[GOSIBEHN:] Don’t you murder good age-old proverbs, Bapu, in the heat of your argument.

Well, what else can I do, when I am out to murder age-old prejudices and superstitions?

The scientist members were adamant too. Pericarp, they conceded, was lost in the part-polished, once-pounded rice, but was it essential to health?

¹ Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Notes”
² Vide the preceding item.
[G.] If you can prove that it is not essential to health, I shall readily capitulate.

But the problem of food does not simply consist in the calculation of vitamins and proteins. Biological experiments must also be made, and it is those experiments that should finally determine the matter.

It is for you to make those biological experiments. Don’t say off-hand that Bengalis need half a pound of rice every day and must digest half a pound. Devise a scientifically perfect diet for them. Determine the quantity of starch required for an average human constitution. I would not be satisfied until I have been able to add some milk and milk fat and greens to the diet of our common village folk, and I want chemists who would starve in order to find an ideal diet for their poor countrymen. Unfortunately for us, our doctors have never approached the question from the humanitarian standpoint, at any rate from the poor man’s standpoint.

The upshot of the discussion was the decision to suspend the issue of certificates and cancel the ones already issued, so far as unpolished rice is concerned, and the members were urged to carry on further inquiry and research, in order to place the matter beyond a shadow of doubt.

_Harijan_, 22-3-1935

457. LETTER TO MANILAL AND SUSHILA GANDHI

Unrevised
March 18, 1935

CHI. MANILAL AND SUSHILA.

You have given a good description of the agent. I am able to form an idea. You should write “Saiyed Sahib” and not just “Saiyed”. I do not want to annoy you by persistently criticizing you. I trust that you would do nothing with deliberate malice but I also know that you could be led astray or provoked into saying or writing thoughtless words. Moreover you do allow your opinions to be based on unconfirmed reports. But it is difficult to change your habit forthwith. Yes, if you regularly pray as in the ashram and recite Chapter XII [of the Gita] which both of you were made to memorize before your marriage and if you meditate on all this, your heart will soften without any effort and your words will be full of humility, love and truth. Then you will not sit in judgment upon what others do. You will rather examine your own conduct. God has not equipped us very fully with the faculty of judging others. Who has been able to penetrate the depth of the human heart and isn’t everything imperfect unless we know what is within us? That is why the sages have said that we should never sit in judgment over others. We will have done our duty if we can weigh our own deeds dispassionately. The maxim that if we are good, the whole world is good is but a corollary of this statement.

I have no time to write about other things. I will definitely send for Aruna khadi woven from yarn spun by me. But I am afraid you may not get it in time.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4834

458. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

March 18, 1935

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

It is difficult to advise. Ballubhai seems to have committed himself to some extent. If he has agreed to have prayers, why should he object to distribution of sweets? Are the conditions for free grants the same as for grants-in-aid? The Government’s demand makes no distinction between the two.

Be that as it may, Ballubhai should now consult friends. If they are all firm, they should send a reply to this effect: “The people’s fight against the Government has not stopped. It is not a private individual’s birthday, but a king’s reign which is being celebrated. The Government, therefore, would be rewarding hypocrisy on our part if we joined in the celebration of a rule which we denounce. Since civil disobedience has been suspended, the Government may issue any orders it likes and get them obeyed, but most people will do nothing willingly. It would hardly be proper for the Government to force the people to participate in such celebrations against their will. As far as possible, we don’t wish to hurt anybody’s feelings. The Government, therefore, should not force us to do so. We, on our part, will not start an agitation. Those who wish to join the celebrations will be free to do so. The Government should not write to the Municipality asking it do anything, and the Municipality would write nothing to the Government nor pass any resolution.”
I think that, even if the Government offers some special facilities to the Municipality on this occasion, the latter cannot participate in the celebrations. As for the larger question, Ballubhai ought not to raise it. This is only my general view. If the circumstances in Ahmedabad require a different policy, of course I can’t judge about it.

You may now advise Ballubhai as you think fit.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbaine, pp. 153-4

459. LETTER TO JOHARILAL MITTAL
[On or after March 18, 1935]

BHAI JOHARILALJI,

I have your telegram as well as letter. The deputation too is here. I require two lacs but I also understand the circumstances. Jamnalalji too is insistent. How can I resist so much love? God willing I shall reach on the 20th. Please do your best to collect the amount.

Leave out all pomp and show. Do this work as a religious duty. Send me a copy of the rules and regulations of the Sammelan, past addresses and the history of the Sammelan, etc.

Yours,
MOHANDAS GANDHI

[From Hindi]
Madhya Pradesh aur Gandhiji, p. 48

1 Jamnalal Bajaj’s diary contains an entry under this date regarding the deputation and Gandhiji’s assent to preside over the Hindi Sahitya Sammelan to be held at Indore in April 1935.
460. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

WARDHA,
March 19, 1935

CHI AMBUJAM1.

You are right. I have been too busy to write, though you have always been in my thoughts.

I have a huge parcel of delicacies. Honey and fruit alone may be sent. What is the use of your sending papar, murabba, etc. And as you know I get enough fruit locally. Therefore learn to save every pice. Put it by and send the savings to me for the poor. If there is anything I want, I shall surely ask for it.

Just now I am taking raw milk, raw leaves, honey, fresh tamarind and oranges. My weight last week was 108 lb.

Amtul is in Delhi with Devdas. Gomtibehn is here. Mira and her companions have completely recovered.

I hope Krishnasamy is getting on.

Your yarn was quite good.

If K. needs housekeeping, you have to keep it, not Mother.

You can do service there as well as anywhere else. You have Hindi, khadi and other village industries.

I know Kengheri Ashram. Do you interest K. in such things?

We had many sisters here for the A. I. V. I. A. meeting. Now we have Rajkumari Amrit Kaur.

I have accepted the invitation to preside at the Hindi Sammelan on April 20th. There will be at the same time a Mahila Sammelan. You should come if you can. You can bring K. with you, if he will come. Janammal will, I take it, accompany you.

Love.

BAPU2

From the original. Ambujammal Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

1 This is in Hindi.
2 ibid
461. LETTER TO SHANKERLAL BANKER

WARDHA,
March 19, 1935

MY DEAR SHANKERLAL,

I have already handed to you Messrs Kirloskar Bros. letter of 14th instant addressed to me.

I commend their letter to the earnest attention of the examiners.

As Messrs Kirloskar Bros. have permitted me to give my own opinion, I do so for the guidance of the examiners. The numbers against the following paragraphs refer to those in their letter.

(2) The trial at Wardha is not yet complete. In so far as it has gone, I can say that a capable worker did succeed once or twice in spinning over 8,000 yards in 4 hours. There never has yet been an output of 16,000 in eight hours at Wardha. No woman has worked at it for eight hours at a stretch here. My trial of it is still proceeding. I should like to try it for six months before pronouncing an opinion on its average capacity. But if the examiners are satisfied on this point, absence of a conclusive opinion from me need not in any way delay or otherwise affect the examiners’ award.

(5) I am unable to subscribe to the opinion that the machine “has fulfilled all the important and major conditions of the competition”. I have up to now only applied myself to two conditions, viz., 1st and 4th.

I do not regard the 1st condition as to handiness as a minor one. Indeed it is in my opinion the one unalterable condition. Without that condition, there would surely be no difficulty in producing a machine that would give more than 16,000 yards in 8 hours. Handiness has to be proved with reference to the crores of cottages scattered in 700,000 villages of India. Accepting Webster’s definition of ‘convenient’, a mere look at the machine would convince one who has any knowledge of Indian cottages and conditions that the machine cannot be called handy in any shape or form. For an Indian cottage it is without doubt a cumbersome piece of machinery.

As to conditions 5 and 6, I am wholly incompetent to pronounce an opinion.

As to condition 2, it is yet too early for me to pronounce an opinion.

I understand from Shri Kale as also from the machine of the firm who were good enough to visit me that the machine is not capable of being reduced in size any further than it is already. I am quite satisfied that the machine cannot be accommodated in an Indian cottage of the average size. The firm’s suggestion that cottages should be specially built in order to house the machine is too unpractical to need refutation. In my opinion, therefore, the machine does not satisfy what to me is one of the vital conditions of the prize. But it may not be considered as more than the evidence of a witness before the judges.

Yours sincerely,

SJT. SHANKERLAL BANKER
AHMEDABAD

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

462. LETTER TO L. K. KIRLOSKAR

March 19, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your exhaustive letter in reply to mine of the 10th instant. Sjt. Banker happened to be here when it came and I handed him a copy of your letter. I have now forwarded to him my opinion of which I enclose herewith a copy.

I was tempted to add a paragraph about the lower use which in my discussion with you I showed could be made of the machine. I avoided mention of it for I remembered your objection to it. But if you want me to give my opinion to the judges about the lower use, I will gladly send it to them.

Yours sincerely,

Encl. 1 Banker’s letter

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 Vide the preceding item.
463. LETTER TO NARAYAN M. KHARE

March 19, 1935

CHI. PANDITJI,

I got your letter. I was waiting for it. Do whatever you can for Rambhau. Do not be angry. Conciliate Mridulabehn. I had a very good letter from her. I do appreciate that you have started cooking separately. Teach Rambhau to cook also.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9073

464. LETTER TO NARAHARI D. PARIKH

March 19, 1935

CHI. NARAHARI,

I have your letter. I have already heard something about Neelmani. I shall know something more from Bhagwanji. I am afraid such things will go on happening and we have to overcome them as best we can. It is no doubt good to remove all young men without exception. Our safety lies only in young girls and responsible men remaining.

Bhagwanji will compete his thirty-five days there.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9073

465. LETTER TO SECRETARY, POLITICAL DEPARTMENT, GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL

[On or after March 19, 1935]

THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL
DEAR SIR,

I thank you for your letter (No. 8043x) of the 19th instant

1 This and the following item were written on the same postcard.
regarding my letter asking for permission to Shri Mahadev Desai to interview detenu Shri Chandra Mukherjea at present detained in Deoli Jail.

Yours truly,

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

466. LETTER TO DR. N. N. GODBOLE

WARDHA,
March 20, 1935

DEAR DR. GODBOLE,

I thank you for your letter enclosing your valuable note on the comparative merit of cow-butter fat and buffalo-butter fat. The carefulness with which you are approaching this question tempts me to put further questions. I am using tamarind as part of food, of course in measured quantities, for those who are suffering from constipation and who are on uncooked green leaves such as methi, chakvat and the like. The popular belief in these parts, however, seems to be that tamarind produces boils and induces rheumatism. Is there any warrant for these beliefs? Can you also tell me what leaves are edible in an uncooked state? I am using just now the bhajis one gets in the market including cabbage, cauliflower, in an uncooked state.

One thing more. If you are following the pages of Harijan, you must have noticed the opinion I have published on unpolished rice.¹ It seems that there is no such thing as whole unpolished rice to be had in the market. I had difficulty in procuring whole unpolished rice. And I am now grinding my own paddy and have now whole unpolished rice. Chemists, however, say that there is no proof to show that whole unpolished rice is meant by those who have given their opinion in its favour. I have, however, contended that in a matter of such importance medical men who have given me their considered opinion could not have used the expression ‘unpolished rice, in a loose unscientific manner. There can be degrees of polished rice but surely not of unpolished. They contend that it is highly likely that the pericarp which even a slight polishing removes, is unnecessary for the system if not also injurious. Of course they admit that they have no authority for their statement. They simply say that the testimony in favour of unpolished rice has reference only to the partly polished, hand-pounded bazaar rice which passes as unpolished. Can you throw any light on this controversy? Is the pericarp of rice Indigestible? Is it harmful to the system? Can it be that this matter has escaped investigation up till now?

¹ Vide “Letter to Secretary, Political Department, Government of Bengal”, 20-2-1935
² Vide “How to Begin”

Yours sincerely,

D. R. N. N. GODBOLE
HINDU UNIVERSITY
BENARES

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

467. LETTER TO KRISHNADAS

March 20, 1935

MY DEAR KRISHNADAS,

I have your letter. I think it is worth while incurring the air mail expense if we incur any expense at all in sending the weekly letter. I think that it is a good thing to send the weekly letter. Edith Hunter is a fine worker. She is the soul of the Society. They are publishing a weekly bulletin also. Do you not get it?

You have drawn a full and pathetic picture of Satisbabu’s life. I am quite clear in my mind that there is nothing to be done. There are men enough to take loving care of him in Benares. But he must be allowed to live out his life in the manner he likes best. After all God concerns Himself about the tiniest life. How much more so about those who are conscious of His power as also His benevolence. I think, therefore, you need not worry about him at all.

Love.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

468. LETTER TO DR. GOPICHAND BHARGAVA

March 20, 1935

DEAR DR. GOPICHAND,

Why should doctors get ill? And how are you going to discharge the tremendous burden you have undertaken if you will develop a weak body? I hope you are now completely restored.

We cannot be party to prosecution against Harijans who indulge in marriages in breach of the Sarda Act. It is a reform which Harijans must tackle for themselves. We have no right to undertake prosecution until savarna Hindus have proved themselves above reproach in this matter and until there is no distinction between savarnas and avarnas.

What is this complaint about a separate silk store being conducted under your patronage and supervision and by a man discharged by the A. I. S. A.? There is a long complaint made by three writers from Sialkot.

Yours sincerely,

DR. GOPICHAND
LAHORE

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

469. LETTER TO HARIVADAN

March 20, 1935

BHAJ HARIVADAN,

Neither you ever give me any trouble nor I you. But I am not ignorant of your whereabouts and your activities. Now today the time has come for giving you some trouble. A Harijan who is a favourite of Mama and whom Mama gives first rank in integrity and who shares half of your name—being called Haribhai—seems to have become your neighbour to satisfy your wishes. He is building a house under your inspiration. Now all this is beyond my comprehension. Leave aside Harijans. How many men of such integrity have we among non-Harijan workers? When there is such a shortage of workers why did you choose to bury such a worker as Haribhai by getting him build a house in Sachin? Mama has asked me to help him. Solve my problem to my satisfaction; and only after that the question of assistance can be thought of.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI HARIVADAN
HARIJANVAS
NAVSARI

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4006
470. LETTER TO RAMACHANDRA B. ATHAVALE

[March 21, 1935]

Prabhashankar told me that I had given sufficient cause to Nanalal Ravi to get angry with me. I do not know anything about it. However if I have given him any cause to get angry with me, I would, being a devotee of ahimsa, apologize a thousand times. If you have not so far found out the cause, please do so and let me know.

[From Gujarati]
From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

471. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

March 21, 1935

CHI. SHARMA,

I have your letter. I understand about the wire. If my advice is not in conformity with your experience, you need not act upon it. I have issued no command to you, simply left you free. You should come here only if you feel that for your study or for the sake of Draupadi or the children it would be best for you to come here. That is, I am not particular as to where you live.

The two books by Poore have been received. Whose biographies do you want? And should they be in English or in Hindi?

I did have quite a number of books on Indian drugs but now I have none as they have all been donated to the Ahmedabad Municipality.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Hindi]

Bapuki Chayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, pp. 152-3

---

1 Professor of Sanskrit first at Gujarat Vidyapith and then at S. L. D. Arts College, Ahmedabad
2 From the placing of the item in the source
472. LETTER TO TARADEVI

WARDHA,
March 21, 1935

CHI. TARA,

I have your letter. I do not know the rules of the Seva Sadan. But if you must go, I do not think there will be any difficulty. Your going will certainly please Mother. Do go if you feel so disposed. But your work should not suffer. I am writing to Mother. How far have you progressed in your studies?

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI TARAMATIBEHN
MAHILA VIDYALAYA
LUCKNOW

From the Hindi original: Rani Vidyavati Papers. Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library

473. LETTER TO RANI VIDYAVATI

WARDHA,
March 21, 1935

CHI. VIDYA,

Tara writes that you worry about her. What can you gain by worrying? What can you achieve by her being with you? Your concern at the moment is to regain your health. You will certainly be all right if you calmly pursue the treatment.

Blessings from
BAPU

RANI VIDYAVATI OF HARDOI
IN-PATIENT
CHITTARANJAN SEVA SADAN
148 RASSA ROAD
KALIGHAT, CALCUTTA

From the Hindi original: Rani Vidyavati Papers. Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library

1 Daughter of Rani Vidyavati
474. INTERVIEW TO A MISSIONARY

[Before March 22, 1935]

A missionary friend who was on a visit to us asked Gandhiji what was the most effective way of preaching the gospel of Christ, for that was his mission.

[GANDHIJI:] To live the gospel is the most effective way—most effective in the beginning, in the middle and in the end. Preaching jars on me and makes no appeal to me, and I get suspicious of missionaries who preach. But I love those who never preach but live the life according to their lights. Their lives are silent yet most effective testimonies. Therefore I cannot say what to preach, but I can say that a life of service and uttermost simplicity is the best preaching. If, therefore, you go on serving people and ask them also to serve, they would understand. But you quote instead John 3, 16 and ask them to believe it. That has no appeal to me, and I am sure people will not understand it. Where there has been acceptance of the gospel through preaching, my complaint is that there has been some motive.

[Q.] But we also see it and we try our best to guard against it.

[A.] But you can’t guard against it. One sordid motive vitiates the whole preaching. It is like a drop of poison which fouls the whole food. Therefore I should do without any preaching at all. A rose does not need to preach. It simply spreads its fragrance. The fragrance is its own sermon. If it had human understanding and if it could engage a number of preachers’ the preachers would not be able to sell more roses than the fragrance itself could do. The fragrance of religious and spiritual life is much finer and subtler than that of the rose.

_Harijan,_ 29-3-1935

---

1 Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s report of the interview published in, _Harijan_ under the title “The Most Effective Way”.
2 Gandhiji commenced his four-week silence on March 22. The interview, therefore, must have taken place before that date.
3 Mahadev Desai says: “But all this apparently failed to be of effect and the reverend gentleman retired with the imprecation, . . . . ‘Mr. Gandhi . . . soon there will come a day when you will be judged, not in your righteousness, but in the righteousness of Jesus.’”
475. INTERVIEW TO MISSIONARY LADIES

[Before March, 22, 1935]

Q. When you concentrate on the health and welfare of the villages, are you going in for medical relief to any extent?

GANDHIJI: We are not going in for medical relief but for prevention. Therefore we concentrate on sanitation and hygiene. I am of opinion that a good deal of medical help is given only in order to make people more helpless. Medical help, in most cases, is practically thrown at them, and so it is lost on them. Some of my co-workers are going to a village close by where the streets are covered with filth. No wonder if the eyes of the children there are bad and there are all kinds of diseases. Just now our workers’ efforts do not seem to make any impression on the villagers; but when they find that, as a result of their village having become cleaner and free from filth, they are also comparatively free from disease, they will appreciate the difference. Now, if you had a free dispensary there and were giving doses of medicine to all that came, you would make no headway. Tackling the village sanitation is the only really substantial work. There is an evil at our doors which is perfectly preventible, and yet we have suffered our villagers to tolerate it for scores of years. It is an uphill task, whilst the distribution of free medicines is much easier. But I am asking my co-workers to avoid the easy thing and cheap applause. We must first concentrate on the prevention of disease, we can tackle the disease itself later on.

Q. Then you won’t have doctors?

A. No, if you will not misunderstand me. I have done medical relief work myself. Only last month Harijans in Kathia-war were given free medical relief by doctors, who performed operations for cataract and other diseases of the eyes. But I am just now talking of measures for the preservation of general health, and even when my workers have achieved the preliminary task of cleaning the villages, I should equip them with just four things— quinine, castor oil, bicarbonate of soda and iodine. No fifth thing is necessary.

Q. You seem to give the last place in your programme to schools?

1 Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s report of the interview published in Harijan under the title “The Most Effective Way”. The missionary ladies had come from Nagpur.

2 Vide the preceding item.
A. No. We are conducting numerous schools for Harijans and giving numerous scholarships to Harijan boys. What is the use of my adding the school programme to the work of the Industries Association? It is intended to supplement the work of the Harijan Sangh and the Spinners’ Association. This last has a capital of Rs. 20 lakhs to operate upon, and the Harijan Sangh has also a fair amount of funds. I must now launch a campaign, I said to myself, which needs very little funds and which adds to the pockets of the poor. Thus, if I could simply ask the villagers not to waste the human manure but to turn it to good account, I should, without any capital outlay, help them to save Rs. 50 crores every year. This turning of human evacuations to rich manure by superficial burial I learnt from Dr. Poore, and it is the simplest and the most effective method, whereas the activated sludge plan and the septic tank are comparatively expensive things.

Q. Does your Harijan Sangh do anything for the spiritual welfare of the people?

A. With me, moral includes spiritual, and so my answer to your question will be ‘everything’ and ‘nothing’. Nothing, because we have no department to look after their spiritual welfare. Everything, because we expect the personal touch of the workers to transform the men among whom they are working. Even as it is, we are caught in the coil of hypocrisy; but when you set apart a department for the work, you make the thing doubly difficult. In my career as a reformer I have regarded everything from the moral standpoint. Whether I am engaged in tackling a political question or a social or economic one, the moral side of it always obtrudes itself and it pervades my whole attitude. But I admit I have no special department to look after the Harijans’ spiritual welfare.

Q. But we, Christians, feel that we, who have something to share, must share it with others. If we want consolation, we find it from the Bible. Now, as for the Harijans, who have no solace to get from Hinduism, how are we to meet their spiritual needs?

A. By behaving just like the rose. Does the rose proclaim itself, or is it self-propagated? Has it an army of missionaries proclaiming its beauties?

Q. But supposing someone asked us, ‘Where did you get the scent?’

A. The rose, if it had sense and speech, would say, ‘Fool, don’t you see that I got it from my Maker?’

Q. But if someone asks you, ‘Then, is there no book?’
A. You will then say, ‘Yes, for me there is the Bible.’ If they were to ask me, I would present to some the Koran, to some the Gita, to some the Bible and to some Tulsidas’s Ramayana. I am like a wise doctor prescribing what is necessary for each patient.

Q. But I find difficulty in getting much from the Gita.

A. You may, but I do not find any difficulty in getting much from the Bible as well as from the Koran.

Harijan, 29-3-1935

476. LETTER TO MADELEINE ROLLAND

[Before March 22, 1935]

DEAR MADELEINE,

I have just read your letter to Pyarelal. Thank God I am about to observe complete silence, thus I can reply to your letter immediately. Yes, I ought to write a complete letter in reply to the long letter of the Sage². But the very adjective “complete” frightens me. I have no time to compose a letter which will do sufficient justice to this letter from there. I must try to do it during my days of silence. Your question is simple. My opposition is to socialism as it is interpreted here in its official programme. I can have nothing to say against the theory or the philosophy of socialism. The programme as it is put here cannot be achieved without violence. The socialists here do not exclude violence under all circumstances whatsoever. They would take to arms openly if they saw there was a chance to usurp power by it. There are in the programme some details into which I need not enter. I wonder if this reply will answer your difficulties. However, you must write about your difficulties more concretely.

Love to you both.

BAPU

From a copy: C.W. 9737. Courtesy: R. K. Prabhu

---

¹ The source has “March 28”. However it is clear from the text that the letter was written before Gandhi had started his silence, which he did on March 22.

² Romain Rolland
DEPLORING ‘CONVERSIONS’

A Harijan sevak in Devakottah writes deploring the so-called conversions to Christianity of Harijans in that locality. The public know how they are systematically persecuted by the Nattars. If, afflicted by the persecution and losing hope of ever receiving help from the other savarna Hindus, the poor Harijans seek shelter in Christianity, we may not be surprised. And our grief is worse than useless if we cannot turn it into powerful energy. Conversion under the stress of physical discomfort is no spiritual conversion. But we may not grumble if Harijans change their faith in order to better their material condition and to secure protection from persecution.

What we need deplore is the cause of conversion. Let us realize and own that savarna Hindus are the cause. If the savarna Hindus of Devakottah were alive to a sense of duty by the Harijans of their locality the Nattars, who are themselves savarna Hindus, would not dare persecute Harijans as if the latter were not members of the same human family as the former. The correspondent suggests that some persons from outside Devakottah might go and work among the Nattars and the Harijans. It would be good if this happened. But I doubt if ever substantial results will be obtained by stray outsiders going there temporarily. Any such effort must be vain, as will be that of doctors going among and seeking to cure patients who would not help themselves with the medicines prescribed for them. Both the wings of the savarna Hindus, those who stand aloof and the Nattar savarna Hindus, are suffering from illnesses, the latter from hankering after the persecution of their fellows, and the former from criminal apathy. Outsiders can at best go among them, diagnose the disease and prescribe the remedy. It is for the patients to adopt the remedy. The young savarnas of Devakottah know the cause and the remedy. Will they apply it? Thakkar Bapa is in their midst or will be presently. Will they listen to his advice? Conversions are but one small result of the disease. Remove the cause, and the conversions will cease, as also many worse results.

‘TAKLI’ FOR VILLAGE WORKERS

I would request the several workers in various parts of India who have been seeking to deliver the message of self-reliance in the matter of cloth in villages, to pay their attention to the potentialities of the takli as a means of spinning. This subject has been referred to previously in these columns some time back, and it deserves to be studied with great attention. It has been demonstrated by the inmates of the Satyagraha Ashram and sister institutions of Wardha that for an average spinner the productive capacity of the takli, if rightly handled, is equal to that of the charkha in every respect. For a person who is not altogether weak and who wants to spin only during leisure hours, and not with a view to remuneration, the takli is capable of completely replacing the charkha. The workers should, therefore, learn the new method of plying the takli, and introduce it in the villages in preference to the charkha. For the aged and the weak the charkha would still be necessary. For, the charkha, according to the principles of mechanics, is but a takli worked by a system of levers. And as one whose muscles are not strong enough to lift up a weight by hand would need the help of a lever to do so, so one who cannot give the necessary momentum to the takli by the muscles of his palm, or cannot bear the strain of constantly raising and lowering the arm, would need the charkha.

A WORKER’S PILGRIMAGE

Shri Sitarama Sastry has been organizing what may be called pilgrimages of workers who convey the message of village service, among their surroundings. He sends me a brief report of the second pilgrimage from which I take the following:

The second ‘march, commenced on the morning of the 17th February and ended in the evening of the 4th March. The party consisted of 8 men led by Srijut N. Venkatachellapaty and Ramineni Appayya. Two worked for 4 days, one for 11 days, and the other 5 worked continuously.

They visited 13 villages in the Bapatla' taluq, one village in Tenali² taluq, and another in Repalle taluq, in all 15 places. They travelled by rail, motor, country carts and on foot; and the distance covered by them is 75 miles.

They delivered lectures in 4 villages with the aid of the magic lantern and gave gramophone performances in 5 villages.

¹ In Andhra Pradesh
² ibid
They sold

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Item Description</th>
<th>Rs.</th>
<th>As.</th>
<th>P.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1. Khadi</td>
<td>1,030</td>
<td>10</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>2. Swadeshi articles</td>
<td>135</td>
<td>15</td>
<td>9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>3. Potteries</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4. Taklis (2)</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>5. Razors (5)</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>13</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6. Bhringamalaka Tailam (Hair oil)</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7. Shoes and sandals (42 pairs)</td>
<td>34</td>
<td>14</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Total</td>
<td>1,212</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Razors were made in Cherukumpalem, Ongole taluq, and the tailam and shoes and sandals were made in the Vinayasramam. The sales commanded in this 'march' were greater than those in the first 'march'. The expenses incurred come to Rs. 36-3-3.

This is a step in the right direction. I would suggest that the pilgrims should avoid all travelling by rail, motor, or even village carts. If they will adopt my advice, they will observe that their work will be more effective and that the expenses will be practically nil. No more than two or three should form a party. I would expect villagers to house and feed the parties. Small parties will be no tax on the resources of villagers, as large ones are likely to be.

The work of the parties should be more in the nature of sanitary service, survey of village conditions and instruction of the villagers as to what they can do without much, if any, outlay of money to improve their health and economic conditions. If we seek to make villages self-dependent to the utmost extent possible, there is not much scope for sale, in the villages visited, of articles made in other villages, except where it is clear that villagers do not or cannot make such articles in their own villages. Village service as conceived by the A. I. V. I. A. has a unique mission. Town parties go out to villages to clean, instruct and purchase. Parties of villagers can be organized to go to towns to sell articles made in their villages and demonstrate their usefulness.

This village movement is one of decentralization and restoration of health and comfort and the skill of the artisan to villagers.

1 In Andhra Pradesh
COW’S GHEE V. BUFFALO’S GHEE

Dr. Profullla Ghosh has been examining the comparative value of cow’s milk-ghee and buffalo’s milk-ghee. He writes:

This opinion is too technical for the lay reader. Opinion about the two varieties of ghee is not as decisive as about the two milks. This much is, however, clear—that chemical analysis shows no superiority of buffalo ghee over cow ghee. It is impossible to support both the animals. We have, therefore, to make the choice. The balance of opinion, all things considered, lies with the cow which, with proper care and selective breeding, is capable of giving as rich and sweet milk as anyone can desire.

Harijan, 22-3-1935

478. TEMPLE-ENTRY

Readers of Harijan know that Thakkar Bapa has been touring in the South for the Harijan cause. Taking advantage of his presence in Travancore, the workers had arranged a conference at Aranmula, with Thakkar Bapa as President. The conference met on the 10th instant and was very largely attended. There were present as many Harijans as other caste Hindus. An address was presented to Thakkar Bapa on behalf of Harijans. It contained this important reference to temple-entry:

It is our deepest conviction that untouchability can and will never die as long as the temple doors are closed against us. Temple-entry is to us the acid test of success of the Harijan movement. All other efforts at our uplift are bound to appear to us insincere so long as temple-entry is denied to us. We implore you to employ all the strength of the Harijan Sevak Sangh to secure for us temple-entry.

Of course, there is no abolition of untouchability till every public temple is open to every Hindu precisely on the same terms as to the other Hindus. A common place of worship is the surest test of a common faith. No wonder all other efforts appear as insincere to Harijans. But they are not necessarily insincere because they appear so. There are hundreds of workers whose efforts to remove the blot of untouchability are not any the less sincere because they are unable

1 The letter is not reproduced here. Dr. Ghosh had stated that from scientific study it was not possible to pronounce which of the two varieties of ghee—buffalo ghee or cow ghee—was better from the dietetic point of view.
today to have every temple flung open to Harijans. The seed has beensown, never to die. It is bound to bear fruit in its own time. Seeds of hardy trees take long to sprout. None the less they are growing every minute. So is the seed of temple-entry growing. The reformers will not rest till every public temple is open to Harijans. All ameliorative measures are steps in the direction of temple-entry. The Harijan address is a timely reminder to every one of us desiring to serve the cause that we are not to think that the temple-entry question is shelved because there is nowadays no mention of it in the Press. While they may not carry on a public agitation in the matter, workers should do personal canvassing in their neighbourhood and persuade trustees and temple-goers to open the temples within their beat.

_Harijan, 22-3-1935_

479. INSTRUCTIONS TO THE MEMBERS OF A. I. V. I. A.

The Pledge\(^1\) was purposely drawn up as it is. It is of a general character. It is a gentleman’s pledge, each member being put upon his or her honour as to the interpretation of the expression ‘the best part of my energy and talents to the furtherance of its object, which is the all-round welfare of villagers of India’.

Members are also pledged, not only to work for the furtherance of the object, but also ‘to strive to live up to the ideals and prefer the use of village manufactures to any other’.

The recommending Member of the Board will, therefore, see to it that the candidate for Membership has, in everything he does, welfare of villagers at heart. It follows that such a person will give to village work at least some time every day, not necessarily in villages, but may be, for villages. Thus, a Member living in a city on a particular day, who sells to or induces a person to buy village manufactures, has done some village work for that day.

The Member recommending will also see to it that the candidate, wherever possible, uses for himself articles of village manufacture, e.g., khadi in the place of mill-cloth, village earthen pots instead of factory-made china, reed pen instead of steel pen, hand-made paper instead of ordinary paper, wholesome _babul, neem_ or such other twigs

\(^1\) _Vide_ Appendix “Forms of Undertaking to be given by Associates, Paid Workers and Honorary Workers of A.I.V.I.A”, 22-3-1935.
as tooth-brushes, instead of the very insanitary and injurious modern tooth-brushes, leather goods made in villages out of village-tanned hide, instead of ordinary bazaar articles, village gur instead of factory sugar, hand-pounded, whole rice, instead of mill-polished rice.

_Harijan_, 22-3-1935

480. LETTER TO HARIBHAU PHATAK

March 22, 1935

MY DEAR HARIBHAU,

Your letter of 10th came into my hands only yesterday. Mahadev had gone to Calcutta and some correspondence remained unattended to.

What is the date of the exhibition? In any case, if anybody there wants to attain the speed on the _takli_, he should be sent here for a week. Mere demonstration for a day or two in Poona won’t serve the purpose you have in mind.

What about rice? We are preparing unpolished rice ourselves.

Yours,

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 1370

481. LETTER TO R. S. HUKERIKAR

March 22, 1935

DEAR HUKERIKAR,

I think that when Congress village workers are invited, they should go and put their viewpoints at the meeting. If there is agreement on any items, we should work in co-operation. For a true village worker the question of prestige does not come in at all; he does not work in order to acquire influence or prestige. He works because he must. He cannot help serving the villagers.

What under certain definite circumstances one should do depends solely upon one’s own judgment based on those circumstances.

Yours sincerely,

SJR. R. S. HUKERIKAR
PROVINCIAL CONGRESS COMMITTEE
DHARWAR, KARNATAK

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
482. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

March 22, 1935

Bhai Vallabhbhai,

I am enjoying the sweetness of silence on the first day. I have left myself free to talk with Rajkumari. She has specially come to see me. How can I, therefore, displease her? She has been here for four days but I could have a real discussion with her only today.

I think it would be better if you wrote to Delhi to tell them what is happening on your side.

. . . 's is a painful case. I am writing to him. It would certainly not be advisable for you to call him to you. I will send you a copy of the letter which I intend to write to him. You will know from it what I do.

I will not write more today. Munshi has written to me. Mahadev will write more about that.

Blessings from

Bapu

Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel
Baroda

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhaine. p. 154

483. LETTER TO KOTWAL

March 22, 1935

Bhai Kotwal,

I have your letter. I hope the collection goes on daily. It will become difficult if it is not done regularly. I must have an account

1. Gandhiji observed silence for four weeks from March 22 to April 19.
2. The name is omitted in the source.
3. The original letter, which was in Gujarati, is not available.
4. Member of the Managing Committee appointed for the convention of Hindi Sahitya Sammelan at Indore
5. For the Hindi Sahitya Sammelan, Gandhiji had asked for Rs. 1,00,000 to be collected.
every day... Send me the literature.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Hindi]
Veena, Tributes Issue, April-May 1969

484. LETTER TO R.²
March 22, 1935
You ought to write to G. some time. She seems to be doing well. Her brother has come here and suggests that she should be sent to her mother. The mother is not well and wants the confinement to take place there. I have told him that I cannot send G. unless you agree to it. Let me have your opinion.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 208

485. CONDOLENCE MESSAGE ON T. A. K. SHERWANI’S DEATH ³

NEW DELHI
March 23, 1935
In Sherwani the nation loses a great good man and patriot. He has gone when he was most needed. Pray convey to his our sincere condolence.

The Bombay Chronicle, 24-3-1935

¹ Omission as in the source
² The names have been omitted.
³ T. A. K. Sherwani, Congress worker of U. P. died on March 22, Gandhiji sent the message to Dr. Ansari to be conveyed to the family of the deceased.
486. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

March 23, 1935

CHI. JAMNALAL,

I am sending all the papers herewith. A letter to Patel is also enclosed. Hold it back if you do not like it.

Sucheta is welcome. You may bring her whenever you like. We have to go to Kanyashram today for prayers.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 2958

487. LETTER TO VAIKUNTHLAL L. MEHTA

March 23, 1935

BHAISHRI VAIKUNTH,

I have read your letter addressed to Mahadev. Now I am writing to you. Do what your conscience bids you to do. It would not befit me to put pressure on you. You will not get justice. Your letter does not prick me if it is intended as a warning. If it is intended for me or Mahadev to arrive at a decision, then that decision you alone can take. A man knows his heart only partially. The Lord alone knows it fully.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1361

488. LETTER TO RAMDAS GANDHI

WARDHA

March 23, 1935

CHI. RAMDAS,

I got your letter. I have only now read Patilji’s letter to J. He has been very much hurt. I have consoled him. It would of course have been better if you had told him in advance. But do not worry about it now. Do not enter into partnership with anybody until you have become quite proficient. I would suggest that you should try to get a job in a big press. Personally I do not like press work. If, however, you do wish to take up such work, first take up a job in a press and learn the work. My own preference still is for a tailor’s or a cobbler’s profession. Both are first-class professions. They have great room for artistic skill. Nimu can give you all possible help in that work. You may execute ‘a deed of partnership’ with her. No loss is ever possible in these professions. But this is mere pretentious advice from me. Do only what pleases you. Go and visit Radha when you get an opportunity to do so.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Mrs. Sumitra Kulkarni Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

489. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

[After March 23, 1935]

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

One advantage of the vow of silence is that I can dispose of each day’s mail on the very same day. The work takes at least three hours. The remaining time is spent in clearing the arrears.

* * *

There is no need now to write to Delhi or Bombay. I hope you have informed Bhailal.

I have gone through the leaflet about the plague. I did not like the remark about the Government or the local boards. Don’t you think it is altogether inopportune at this time? In any case it will certainly not help us. The task in the U. P. is a rather delicate one. Do you think you will succeed in it?

Blessings from

BAPU

SARDAR VALLABHBHAI PATEL

SATYAGRAHA CHHAVANI

BORSAD

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, p. 157

1 Gandhiji has used the English expression.
2 Maganlal Gandhi’s daughter
3 The addressee arrived in Borsad on March 23 for plague relief work.
4 Omission as in the source
490. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

March 24, 1935

CHI. AMTUSSALAAM,
DEAR BIBI,

I have your letter. What can I say? You may go if someone else stays in the Harijan Colony and Malkani and Devdas give you permission. Do what will help you to keep well.

I am not able to write more with the left hand.

You must have received the spinning-wheel, etc. Write to me if you want anything else. I have given up insisting on anything with you. Do anything you like. Only be healthy in body and mind. Do what Dr. Ansari bids you to do. I hope you often go and see Dr. Khan Saheb and Mehrtaj. Do you? If not, you should. If you want, you may go to Sharma. But the pressure of work on him is too heavy. There is no room in his house, but I know he will not find you a burden. Take Dr. Ansari’s permission and go.

I sent you Id greetings. Did I not? I shall be at Indore on April 20 and will spend four days there. Would you like to come? There is a Hindi Sahitya Sammelan and an exhibition.

Now nothing is left unanswered.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

If Rs. 300 is not enough to complete your hut, it will not matter if you have to incur more expenditure later.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 320
491. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

March 24, 1935

CHI. JAMNALAL,

It would be good for Madalasa to join you at Kathgodam. We shall be able to know about her boils also by then.

Let the arrangement with Rajendrababu be a formal one. Ask for a mortgage or a sale deed and charge interest, though at the lowest possible rate.

Leave Bhowali immediately if you do not keep good health there. Lakshmi Narayan Gadodia had been sending parcels of vegetables to Kamala. She writes that as the vegetables were not of good quality, she has asked him to stop sending them. Enquire whether you can get vegetables and fruits there.

Inform Sarup about your going. Tell her about me what you like.

Madalasa will herself see about her diet.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2959

492. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

March 24, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

I have your letter.

Don’t mind if a second teacher also has left. Can’t you get anybody there for teaching English? Ask Bhujangilal Chhaya. He is the son of a lawyer in Porbandar. He writes to me occasionally. Or ask Nanabhai. What would you pay the teacher? Would you be satisfied if a person agreed to come and teach for an hour or two?

Santok did write to me.

Do you write to Amtussalaam? She is in Delhi with Devdas. She is ill.

This is the third day of my silence. I am making good progress in clearing the arrears.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8433. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi
493. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

March 24, 1935

CHI. VASUMATI,

I have your letter. You seem to be doing very good work. If you sow plenty of leafy vegetables, you will have enough for all the twelve months.

My weight is 109 lb.

Everything is being cooked by steam for the last two days, so plenty of time is saved.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI VASUMATIBEHN
UDYOG MANDIR
BOCHASAN (NEAR BORSAD)

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9396. Also C.W. 642. Courtesy: Vasumati Pandit

494. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

March 24, 1935

BHAIH GHANSHYAMDAS,

If Malkani and Viyogi Hari are dissatisfied with the Harijan work, then after Thakkar Bapa returns to the office they may all three of them prepare and submit a report. And if after due deliberation on it and possible amendments some scholarships can be granted to boys and girls, I would regard the expenditure justified. We may disapprove of the present education but that is all that is available to our young people. We have not so far presented any substitute before the public or the Harijans. Thus we have to grant scholarships till we have a living scheme to offer. There is ample scope for improvement in our own schools. As we do not have good teachers, the experiments at Delhi and Sabarmati are greatly to my liking.

I got the telegram regarding Rajendrababu. It has relieved us of anxiety. Now Jamnalalji goes to Chapra.

Blessings from

BAPU

From Hindi: C.W. 8007. Courtesy: G. D. Birla
495. LETTER TO VIYOGI HARI

March 24, 1935

Bhai Viyogi Hari,

The article “Sacrifice” is good. I shall go through the whole series.

What struck you in Satisbabu’s work? Tell me other things too that I ought to know.

Is it possible now for Prabhavati to commence her studies?

Blessings from

Bapu

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 1097

496. LETTER TO CHAND TYAGI

March 24, 1935

Bhai Chand Tyagi,

I have your letter, also Balvir’s.

Rajkishori is doing well. Do you not know weaving? If that is so, you should learn it as quickly as possible. It is much easier than spinning. You must be well versed at least in ginning and carding. And what about the new method with the takli? If you do not know that too, you ought to learn it.

Blessings from

Bapu

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 3268

497. LETTER TO DECCAN EDUCATION SOCIETY

March 25, 1935

Dear Friend,

Who can fail to be enthused over the noble record of the service rendered by the D. E. Society and the Fergusson College to the cause of education? I wish the forthcoming function every success.

This is all I have the time to send you.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. Gandhi

From a copy: C.W. 9735. Courtesy: Deccan Education Society, Poona

1 The Golden Jubilee celebration of the Society
CHI. PURATAN,

I have your letter. How can there be no feeling in renting out [the Ashram]? Were there no feelings when Harischandra sold himself and his wife? It in letting out the Ashram for the sake of Harijans it is not feelings that are respected, then what else is it? I was impelled by feelings when I left the Ashram.

Instead of so many houses getting eaten up by termites and going to ruin, how much nicer it would be if they were rented out and looked after. Do you know that the non-Harijans who are not Harijan workers now pay rent? I hope you do. A golden dagger may well adorn the waist, but what if it is thrust into the stomach?

I would certainly demand rent if any literature pertaining to the Ashram history, etc., is kept within the premises. That land is meant for the Harijans. If it is put to any other use, the sanctity of it can be preserved only by charging rent.

Is it difficult to understand all this?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9171

CHI. NARAHARI,

I have my own doubts about the success of the boys’ school. We should be content with introducing whatever changes we can in the institutions where our children study. That is my intention, but how do I know about the atmosphere there? I am not well equipped for taking a definite decision. That is why I agreed so readily to accept what Sardar wanted. All workers, therefore, should do that if they find that it is practicable. You cannot give your time to any activity other than Harijan work. The dairy is one of those activities. Give Titus Harijan assistants as far as possible. Do not rest so long as a good tannery is not set up there. We must learn to take possession of the carcasses and learn how to deal with them. Here Valunjkar is doing that work very effectively.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9074

500. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

_March 26, 1935_

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

Mahadev has gone to Yeotmal this morning to inspect an institution there. He will return in the evening.

A letter is enclosed on the question of vaccination.

Munshi writes that at present Lilavati does not even receive any commission. He informed me about the Rs. 50,000 only yesterday.

Narahari must now depend on simpler remedies to get well.

This hand-made paper is difficult to write on. It will be more than enough if you are able to read this.

I think you should accept Ranjit’s invitation. The thing is difficult, but I think it would be better to accept it.

I have gone quite deep into the problem and am determined to solve it.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

[From Gujarati]

_Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine_, p. 155

1 Ranjit Sitaram Pandit
501. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

WARDHA,
March 26, 1935

CHI. MATHURADAS,

Pyarelal is wholly free. If he had listened to me how could he be in the present state? He is at present blinded by lust. In such a state he expects to have a vision of God. None but God can rescue him from this situation. Do call him to you if you can persuade him. The address is: Gandhi Seva Sena, Bhadrak. Kaka has been to see him. He is studying Marathi in the land of Oriya. Mahadev has explained to me the reason of his silence. It is cent per cent correct.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

502. LETTER TO ANNAPURNA

March 26, 1935

CHI. ANNAPURNA,

I have your letter. “Bachchon ghoomte the” is incorrect, it should be “bachche ghoomte the”. You can study any text-book of Hindi grammar. Your account of the trip is good. I liked your distributing oranges among the Harijan children but it is not binding on everyone to do so. Tell me the count of the yarn spun from devakapas. What speed have you attained on the takli? What name has been given to the establishment at Bari.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI ANNAPURNA KUMARI
C/O GOPA BANDHU CHOWDHRY
BARI, DIST. CUTTACK

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 2779

1 A variety of cotton
503. NOTE TO SUMANGAL PRAKASH

[March 26, 1935]

Everyone cannot be prescribed the same diet. If health could be ensured without fruit I would never serve fruit. It seems, however, that fruit is necessary, be it in ever so small a quantity. You should therefore take whatever fruit you are given, considering it as medicine. If some particular fruit does not seem to suit you, you may give it up. Mirabehn thus takes fruit, Bhau takes it and so should you. Tell Bhau he may take five or seven tolas of leafy vegetables. He will know from experience exactly how much he should take. If it is necessary to cut down on bread you may do so. If the amount of milk, curd, etc., is increased you may not need as much bread. Here also experience will help you decide the quantity. You can have as much curd as you want. Tell Balvantsinha this.

From a photostat of the Hindi: Sumangal Prakash Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

504. LETTER TO AGATHA HARRISON

WARDHA,
March 27, 1935

MY DEAR AGATHA,

I must write though it be only a short note written with the left hand, the right needing rest.

Muriel complains of absence of any letter from you for a long time. Her address is Y. M. C.A., Shanghai.

Any move to establish human contact must be welcomed. I like your robust hopefulness when others find no warrant for it.

Your references to C. F. Andrews are good and well merited. He has his next step always guided and so can remain without any human help or direction.

The rest from the usual letters.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 1486

1 The note followed a talk that the addressee had had with Gandhiji after an attack of colic pain.
2 The date has been supplied by the addressee.
3 Bhau Panse
MY DEAR AMRIT.

You are as good as your word. You have given me a wire, a postcard and a good letter. Your overlooking Kumarappa’s notice is therefore excused. It was not meant for you. You were no guest of the Association. You came as a member of the family.

Among the commissions for Shummy please add the medicinal and food value of tamarind if I did not ask you to note it. As I am making extensive use of it and as there is a superstition against its use in these parts, I am anxious to have medical opinion as early as possible.

Heat is daily growing here. It does not worry me. The wet cloth on the head cools the whole system.

Love.

BAPU

SHRI RAJKUMARI AMRIT KAUR
JULLUNDUR CITY, PUNJAB

From the original: C.W. 3524. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6333

506. LETTER TO SUDHIR KUMAR RUDRA

March 27, 1935

DEAR SUDHIR.¹

C. F. Andrews has just written to me about your serious illness and your recovery from it. God be thanked for it. You have to serve for many a year yet to come. I hope you will soon regain all your lost strength.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

SHRI SUDHIR KUMAR
20 ALBERT ROAD
ALLAHABAD (U. P.)

From the original: C.W. 9740. Courtesy: Rajmohini Rudra

¹ Son of Principal Sushil Kumar Rudra
507. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

March 27, 1935

Bhai Thakkar Bapa,

Do argue with me over Ganesan. I can fully convince you. I have not given you advice, as you take it, to favour anyone. My only consideration was the welfare of the Harijans. I believe that it is more advantageous to get work from Ganesan. He has no talent for collecting money. But he has the talent for work and for looking after people. However, all this is useless if he is dishonest. The Committee alone will collect the funds, but that pertains to the future. Who will pay the past debt? If it was on account of Harijan, who has incurred it? Will Sastri pay it? We shall discuss all this when we meet. There will be a Hindi Sammelan in Indore from the 19th to 25th. I have to go there. If you come there, we shall do something about Harijan and have porridge together.

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 22752

508. LETTER TO SHRIPATRAO PATWARDHAN

March 27, 1935

CHI. SHRIPATRAO.

Those who wish to observe brahmacharya should not marry. But if a person does wish to marry, he should do so treasuring the thought of brahmacharya in his heart. He should then consult the wishes of his wife and observe as much self-control as possible.

The insistence on marrying outside the caste does not mean that one should not consider a girl belonging to the same caste. One should marry her if she is most suitable. It is natural that one who marries will beget children. I had known about Appa. Never mind what he has taken away. I won’t call it an illmatched marriage if a thirty-five year old man marries a girl of twenty-five. This answers all your questions, doesn’t it?

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRIPATRAO PATWARDHAN
P. O. PANVAS
DIST. RATNAGIRI

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
509. LETTER TO VIYOGI HARI

March 27, 1935

Bhai Viyogi Hari,

I read your letter to Mahadev. We have to devote four columns to the Charkha Sangh. I have written to Shankerlal about this, saying that he should either secure a certain number of subscribers or pay a certain sum. We should guarantee the columns but must not immediately raise the number of columns in the paper. Many items we publish are much too lengthy. The expansion should come about as we go along.

Do write to me regarding the Sammelan.

Blessings from

Bapu

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1077

510. LETTER TO RAJENDRA PRASAD

March 27, 1935

Bhai Rajendra Prasad,

The Bengal affair today is the most tangled and shameful one. Nothing can be accomplished by our forming a committee. None of the leaders of Bengal will co-operate in this and who will listen to other workers? Yet I feel that we ought to observe an all-India day. Other things can be considered when the report from Calcutta comes in.

We can do nothing in Ceylon. Whatever is done there is only through the Government. Poor Jayaramdas does his little bit but I do not see anything more being done. If you can catch hold of a doctor there, do send him. I tried to send Bhaskar, but he is unable to leave. Still I am trying to find someone.

Blessings from

Bapu

From the Hindi: C.W. 9748. Courtesy: Rajendra Prasad
511. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

March 27, 1935

CHI. SHARMA.

I had your letter. My present mood is such that I do not command even children. If I could form a judgment, I would even give orders but I find it impossible day by day to judge what would be best for others. For the present you may stay on there. The hunt for the book is going on. This is all part of the economy. But I may say that if you are both so inclined you are at liberty to come here. You may come also if that place does not suit every one’s health. There is no question of your going away once you have come here. Going to the West is, of course, another thing.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, facing p. 153

512. A NOTE

March 28, 1935

In that case he\(^1\) should put ten grains of soda to every eight ounces of water and drink it even if he feels sick. He should take hot water with salt or honey as he may relish it. He may also take starch from boiled rice. The honey should be of the best quality and taken with soda and hot water.

From the Gujarati original: Sumangal Prakash Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

513. LETTER TO HUSSAIN

March 28, 1935

In my opinion your plan must fail.\(^2\) When a house is on fire, the finest essay showing how to quench it would not abate the fury of the

---

\(^1\) Sumangal Prakash

\(^2\) The addressee had written from London to Gandhiji, Rabindranath Tagore and others for articles on the Hindu-Muslim problem.
fire. A bucketful of water, however clumsily handled, will somewhat affect the fire.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

514. LETTER TO KRISHNADAS

WARDHA,
March 28, 1935

Does a man need the solace of a mortal when he knows he has that of the Immortal God? Please tell those who may raise the question that the village service is nobody’s monopoly. The A. I. V. I. A. steps in where no one else is working along the same lines.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

515. LETTER TO G. C. TAMBE

March 28, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for the booklet on the Indore process. I have read it with much interest. As I am going to Indore on 20th, I would like to see the process at work. I would like you, too, to demonstrate it at the forthcoming exhibition if [it] is at all possible.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

SHRI G. C. TAMBE
FARM SUPT.
INSTITUTE OF PLANT INDUSTRY, INDORE

From a photostat: G.N. 7960
516. A LETTER

March 28, 1935

It is beyond me to translate into my own tongue what does not bear translating. But I can say that the truth of the two proverbs has been verified by me in my own life and that of many companions.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

517. A LETTER

March 28, 1935

In my opinion Shri T. Ramachandra Rao should receive nothing unless he promises never to repeat the performance he has gone through and unless the donors are satisfied that the money will be used for the purpose intended.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

518. LETTER TO PURUSHOTTAM BAVISHI

March 28, 1935

Bhai Purushottam,

I have your letter. I have read the pamphlet you have sent me. I liked it. Send me the book about your scheme. I shall reach Indore on the 20th and stay there for four days. Will it be possible for you to see me during those days?

1 The addressee, an American, has not been identified in the source. He had requested Gandhiji to send a translation of the following:
   “He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city.”

2 The source does not identify the addressee.

3 He had undertaken a fast for rural uplift and thereby brought about pressure on the rich people to donate money.
Keep on sending me anything which you feel would be useful to me.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI P. L. BAVISHI
SHAMPUR (MALWA)
GWAJIOR STATE

519. LETTER TO BHUJANGILAL CHHAYA

March 28, 1935

CHI. BHUJANGILAL,

The reply to your second letter is pending. There was nothing needing a reply in the first letter.

Since you have time to spare, meet Narandas Gandhi and ask him to give you some light social work.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI BHUJANGILAL CHHAYA
AT PORBUNDER STATE VAKIL’S
RAIKOT (C. S. KATHIAWAR)

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 24218

520. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

March 28, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

April is drawing near. I assume that you are still ready to come here. I have been discussing the matter with Jamnalalji. I discussed it today with Vinoba. All three of us are of the view that if you can come without endangering the work which you have been doing there and without hurting Father and Mother, you should come and take charge of the girls’ school. The moral responsibility will remain Vinoba’s. But running this girls’ ashram is a difficult job. It is with great difficulty that we can make up our minds to refuse admission to new applicants. All of us believe that you will be able to do that job well. And, moreover, if you are here, you can help me, and also Jamnalal, in a number of small ways.

Just now Babaji Moghe is in charge. Vinoba has entrusted him with this work as a last resort. He himself loves village uplift work and had even taken it up. But after the Ashram at Sabarmati was disbanded, we were suddenly faced with the necessity of running the girls’ ashram. Vinoba, therefore, entrusted Babaji with the job. If he can be released from this responsibility, Vinoba wants to use him for village uplift work. If you come, I assume that Jamna also will come.

Purushottam will look after Father and Mother, and he is also doing public work there. I also assume, therefore, that he will remain there. But if he can come too, I would certainly be happy.

Blessings from
BAPU

From microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8434. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

521. LETTER TO K. M. MUNSHI

March 28, 1935

Bhai Shri Munshi,

I have not forgotten about your preface. Your book is lying in front of me. It is for such work alone that I have taken to silence, but so far I have not been able to do it. Writing with the left hand takes quite a lot of time, so today I have started writing with the right hand. I shall see now how it works. My health is no doubt good.

Quite a lot of Hindi activities are carried on by the A.I.C.C. But who will engage the interest of the members? Is all our work carried on in Hindi? Do the people from the South and Bengal learn Hindi? A script conference will be held at Indore alone with the Sahitya Sammelan. Kakasaheb will preside over it. Will you be able to go? Whether you do so or not please send your suggestions. If you can close the mint for six days, both of you must come.

Blessings from
BAPU

From Gujarati: C.W. 7570. Courtesy: K. M. Munshi
I have received your detailed letter. I will pass it on to Vinoba.

You should train the women who are staying there. There is only one department of our work which needs to be understood. It will be difficult to evaluate our strength if we do not start the publicity work at home.

Vinoba has gone deep. My assessment of his work from the shortcomings he could discern, can never be proved wrong. We are all like castor-oil plants becoming important in the absence of other trees. In comparison, in my opinion, your work is outstanding. Take it that it is the end of your work if you are satisfied with it. However I am sure that such a thing will never happen.

Vinoba’s aim in staying here is that he can explain to us our shortcoming.

Both the departments those of self-sustained khadi and commercial khadi, are important for you. Commercial khadi, without self-sustained khadi will remain ineffective. The latter will not satisfy the poor. How much of it can they wear? They can certainly produce more than that. If the poor do not wear it, then there is a fear that they will even cease to produce commercial khadi.

It is possible that even if one has faith in prayer, one cannot sing well. In such cases it is all right if there are no bhajans and slokas. Ramdhun will certainly serve the purpose. The slokas should be correctly articulated if they are recited. Otherwise their translation should be read out. However, it should be dropped if it is found to be dull. For singing bhajans it is necessary to have a good voice. If that is not available, bhajans should also be dropped. Everyone would know how to sing Ramadhun. But that also requires a little practice.

Purbai will bring credit to herself if left alone. She will be a misfit in a group. It is unlikely that Gangabehn will leave Bochasan. We do not have so many trained women, so for the time being there is no other course for you but to manage your work alone.

It is likely that the urinal which you have devised underground will cause great damage one day, while it will serve both the purposes if instead you make it on heaps of mud which can be thrown into the fields daily. Urine is a valuable manure and the less we use it the greater is the harm done.

Blessings from
BAPU

From Gujarati: C.W. 9851. Courtesy: Narayan J. Sampat

523. SELF-SUSTAINED KHADI

Shri Shankerlal Banker has been travelling in the villages, in order to ascertain the possibilities of self-sustained khadi and of the development of other industries.

Self-sustained khadi means khadi spun and woven in the first instance by the villagers for themselves and, wherever possible, out of cotton grown, ginned and carded in the respective villages. This is the true mission of khadi. The end can only be achieved by persistent human contact with the villagers. They should know the dignity and value of work apart even from its economic value. Khadi under this scheme will be manufactured to suit the village taste. Bleaching, even washing, will be avoided, for every villager will wash for himself or herself. Khadi thus produced will be cheaper than any cloth if its durability is taken into account. The town khadi carries all the incidental charges, e.g., extra processes, stocking, transport, rents, commissions. The village khadi eliminates all these charges. The towns and cities should rely for their supplies on the surplus that may be saved after village use. Hence no khadi store should be run at a loss. A. I. S. A. stores should aim primarily at quality, never at mere show, masquerading under the name of art. Who knows what true art is? At best it is a relative term. A. I. S. A. stores should be original, should introduce village art in towns and have confidence that they will win the day. Every piece of khadi must be strong and durable. We must not procure fineness at the cost of durability Flimsiness will kill khadi in the end. If we cannot produce fine counts without sacrificing strength, we must own our inability. I have noticed, often enough to frighten me out of bleaching, that bleached khadi gives way almost at the first wear. It is not suggested that this is true in every case. It is enough for my purpose to be able to say that cases of bleached khadi having proved undurable have been frequent enough to cut out customers. Let all Khadi Bhandars, therefore, revise their standard in so far as it may be necessary in the light of what I have said here. And what is true of khadi is more or less true of tanning and other village industries. Workers must not, without considerable experience, interfere with the old tools, old methods and old patterns. They will be safe if they think of improvements retaining intact the old existing background. They will find that it is true economy.

_Harijan, 29-3-1935_

524. TEMPLE-ENTRY

A few days ago a conference of the Pallas of Kulitalai taluk in Trichinopoly District was held, at which the following two resolutions were passed:

1. That this Conference views with regret and great disappointment the attitude evinced by the Mahatma towards the Temple-Entry Bill in the Assembly and, therefore, requests him to withdraw his present views on the subject and to kindly see that this subject is brought into the Assembly at any cost, irrespective of results thereof.

2. That this Conference has intended to request all the members of the Depressed Classes of the country either to convert themselves as Muslims or Christians, if the Mahatma is not pleased to change his present views on the Temple-Entry Bill or to agitate for a separate electorate to the Depressed Classes as it has been awarded by the Premier of the British Cabinet.

I like the first resolution. I wish all Harijans will take the same interest in the temple-entry question as this conference seems to have done. Then my task would be less difficult than it now is. Whether it is difficult or easy, I shall pursue the course I think best in order to have every public Hindu temple thrown open to Harijans. For, in my opinion, untouchability cannot be claimed to have been removed, unless all temples are accessible to Harijans as they are to other Hindus.

But the second resolution gives away the whole case for temple-entry, so far as the conference is concerned. Men who threaten to leave their religion, because some other men, pretending to be of the same faith as they, prevent them from entering temples, have little religion about them. Such men cannot be said to be actuated by the religious spirit. Temples are houses of worship. They are for all who believe in them. Religious persecution is not a thing of today. It is as ancient as religion itself. It tries and purifies the persecuted who prove themselves staunch in their faith. If Harijans can patiently bear persecution, they are bound to come triumphant in the end.
But the threat to desert the faith they have uncomplainingly professed from time immemorial, if their right of temple-entry is not recognized, puts them out of court. Sanatanists probably do not care if Harijans leave the Hindu fold. Reformers will be nonplussed if they have no case to fight for. Fortunately, there are tens of thousands of Harijans whose faith remains unshakable in spite of persecution.

Religion is an essentially personal matter. It is one between oneself and one’s God. It should never be made a matter of bargain. I would respectfully advise the leading spirits behind the conference of the Pallas of Kulitalai to treat the question of temple-entry on its merits and not to confuse the issue by the threat contained in their second resolution.

Harijan, 29-3-1935

525. NOTES

A Generous Donation

During Thakkar Bapa’s tour in Travancore, we received on behalf of the Central Sangh, from Shri Parmeswaran Pillai, President of the local Harijan Sevak Sangh, a donation of a portion of his ground for Harijan Ashram. It is situated at Vithura Nedumangad. The following brief speech he made at the meeting announcing the gift sufficiently describes it.

It is now over fourteen years since a school was started here. Ten months ago I rebuilt the school house at a cost of about Rs. 800. The school has now three classes with a total attendance of 75. Of these, 40 are Harijans. Of these Harijans 34 are boys and 6 girls. The number of Kani children in the school now is 16. I have long thought that a school of this kind cannot fully serve its purpose without being made part of an ashram where one or two workers will stay all the time and undertake daily a programme of co-ordinated Harijan uplift work. I have, therefore, now put up a small building for the Ashram. I have also set apart 10 acres of land for the Ashram, 8 acres of which are planted with about 2,000 cashewnut trees. These trees will begin to bear in another 2 years, and as cashewnuts are fetching a good price, this will constitute a tangible item of income. . . . I intend taking at once 5 Harijan boys, including 3 Kanis, as residential students in the Ashram. A worker has been appointed and he will stay with the boys in the Ashram. After 6 months I propose to take 5 more boys, making the total of residential students 10. . . .

1 Only extracts are reproduced here.
Thinking that an institution of this kind will work better as part of the Harijan Sevak Sangh, I have handed over the school, the Ashram building and the ten acres of land to the Kerala Board of the Harijan Sevak Sangh.

I congratulate the donor for his generous gift and hope that the Harijans will make good use of the Ashram which is to receive the personal care and affection of the donor.

PAISA FUND

Paisa Fund is a unique institution in India, if not in the world. Its creator, Shri Antaji D. Kale, is a poor man. Twenty-five years ago, he conceived the idea of establishing what might be otherwise called a poor man’s fund. For he meant literally to collect paisas—quarter annas—for the promotion of industries and thus help the poor. Its visible monument is the Talegaon Glass Works near Poona, which have been a means of providing decent livelihood to hundreds of young men. The committee of this Fund celebrated the other day its silver jubilee amid the blessings of many friends. I wish this enterprise, brilliant as it has been, a still more brilliant career. The committee have issued a sumptuous and readable volume, in commemoration of the silver jubilee, which gives a history of the whole enterprise and a fund of information about glass works throughout India. It can be had on application to the Secretary, 626, Shanvar, Poona 2.

BUFFALO MILK-FAT v. COW MILK-FAT

Dr. Godbole, professor of Industrial Chemistry in the Benares Hindu University, has sent me at my request an elaborate and critical analysis of these two fats. It is far too technical for the lay reader. I shall gladly lend it to any student of this important subject. Meanwhile I content myself with giving his conclusions.

I. Cow butter-fat is known to have iodine in its composition, whereas no data are available on this point in the case of buffalo butter-fat.

II. Both cow butter-fat and buffalo butter-fat contain vitamins A and D; but cow butter-fat is richer in vitamin A, while the other is richer in vitamin D.

III. Butter-fat as such is any time better than tallow, lard or vegetable ghee.

IV. Cow butter-fat is richer than the buffalo butter-fat in the total assimilable and digestible part and is, therefore, comparatively more suitable for children and weaklings.

V. From an economic point of view, the buffalo is a better butter-producing machine than the cow.
We are of opinion that it is worth while trying physiological experiments in India on oils like sesame, cocoanut, etc., which are rich in assimilables, although poor in vitamins.

Of the two butter-fats, cow’s is in a sense nearer to the composition of human body-fat than the buffalo butter-fat.

_Harijan_, 29-3-1935

526. LETTER TO AGATHA HARRISON

WARDHA,
_March 29, 1935_

DEAR AGATHA,

Because I am silent I am able to reply to your letter just as it is received.

As usual, the newspaper report is an unintelligent anticipation of an event that was not to come. Yes, you shall have notice of any contemplated step unless it comes absolutely unperceived by me.

I remember Joshuah Oldfield well. He was of the greatest help to me when I went to London as a lad. He is a fellow crank.

Rajkumari has promised to hunt out Watts’ volumes for me. But Henry¹ must be dispossessed if he has them.

Mahadev’s book² is having a wonderfully good reception. All village paper is not as bad as this. This was given as the very first product after revival. Since then much improvement has been made.

Mahadev is probably telling you how vindictively they are acting. It is all being done to consolidate power!!! Little do they realize how it is undermined. A scholar who has renounced everything, who is as non-violent as anyone can be, had undergone his full term of imprisonment. He had also a fine against him. This they had recovered from his brother who had separated. The fine had to be refunded. This happened perhaps a year ago. Now the scholar who was doing village work has been arrested and is serving six weeks in lieu of fine. This is not the only instance of its kind.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 1487

¹ Henry Polak
² Two Servants of God
MY DEAR AMRIT,

I have your letter. You have been prompt about sugar. If you want Ba’s thanks, you can have them. Though ‘Thanks’ is a good custom, somehow among members of a family it seems artificial. There you are, you have your choice.

I am sure the thali\(^1\) and katora\(^2\) is a sound investment.

I hope the plague in Khan Khana has abated. It is just a punishment for our flagrant breach of the fundamentals of sanitation and hygiene.

I have no doubt that the method adopted by you regarding the erring servant is the correct method. It is a thousand times better to be deceived for having trusted than to be able to boast of never having been deceived by having been strict and suspicious. Only trusting should never mean tempting.

But this calculated deception by the president is insufferable. You should find out means of exposing the deceit. No law of secrecy can protect fraud on the part of a trustee. And lawyers say that there is no wrong but has a remedy. Therefore you should discover a remedy for the public wrong done by your president.

I sent yesterday some more questions for Shummy. Tell him with my love that he will have no rest from me and that he will have questions put to him which perhaps he never had to face in the course of practice.

You need not worry about your slow progress in spinning. You can’t be more stupid than I.

Love.

BAPU

SHRI RAJKUMARI AMRIT KAUR
JULLUNDUR CITY

From the original: C.W. 3525. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6334

---

\(^{1}\) Large metal plate in which food is served

\(^{2}\) Metal bowl
528. LETTER TO REGINALD REYNOLDS

March 29, 1935

MY DEAR ANGADA,

This is just to tell you that I wrote to David Pyke. He must be a brave boy.
Why don’t you tell me something about yourself? I am enjoying my silence. Love from us all.

BAPU

From a photostat: C.W. 4545. Courtesy: Swarthmore College, Philadelphia

529. LETTER TO TRANK LANBEAH

March 29, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter. Please do not think that I undervalue literacy. I do not put upon it the same emphasis that you do. And my field of operations is so different on the surface. At bottom we are one. You cherish human happiness as much as I do.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

DR. TRANK LANBEAH
MINDAN. (P. I.)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 Gandhiji used to address Reginald Reynolds as Angada—Rama’s messenger to Ravana—as he was the bearer of Gandhiji’s letter of ultimatum dated March 2, 1930 to the then Viceroy; vide “Letter to Lord Irwin”, 2-3-1930
530. LETTER TO NARAHARI BHAVE

[March 29, 1935]

Maganlal Gandhi’s father had entrusted all his four sons1 to me; similarly you have given me all your three sons4. Need I say how much closer you have come to me thereby? I now request you to spend your remaining years with me. We will utilize your wide knowledge in our village industries work. It will be good if you can come over after I return from Indore.

[From Gujarati]

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

531. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

March 29, 1935

A determined refusal solves all problems. One of the maxims of practical wisdom offered by the English weekly Punch is this: Whenever in doubt, “Don’t is Punch’s advice. . . .”5

We can see that the prevailing atmosphere is thoroughly immoral. In such circumstances silent service is the only golden path.

[From Gujarati]

Bapuni Prasadi, p. 157

532. LETTER TO TAGADUR RAMACHANDRA RAO

March 30, 1935

Your letter confirms the opinion I have already given.6 Your fast was a species of violence. Apathy can be turned into sympathy only

---

1 Father of Vinoba Bhave
2 In the source this is placed among the items of this date.
3 Maganlal, Chhaganlal, Narandas and Jammadas
4 Vinoba, Balkrishna and Shivaji
5 Gandhiji uses here the original English quotation.
6 Vide “A Letter”
by sustained, silent and selfless service.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. G.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

533. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

WARDHA,
March 30, 1935

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

I never gave my consent to anybody. I was surprised when I read the news in the paper. At present I do not feel like going anywhere. If I could have my way, I would prolong the period of silence. It suits me very well. Whenever necessary, I speak and give instructions. But can anybody refuse a request from you? Nobody else would have been able to draw me out of my retreat at present. If you would let me pass one year in this manner, I should very much like to do so. If, however, you must drag me anywhere, let it be to Borsad where the plague is the most virulent. I shall enjoy camping in the open. We will visit Ras on foot. Use my services for four types of work: removal of untouchability, khadi, village industries and plague control. Comforting the cultivators can hardly be described as a programme. Don’t take me anywhere else. Keep me there for the fewest possible days and then send me away. Fix any date after the middle of May. I shall have to go there again after the visit to Indore.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhaine, p. 156

534. LETTER TO MITHUBEHN PETIT

March 30, 1935

CHI. MITHUBEHN,

I see that your work is making good progress. It is a good thing that you will soon be producing honey. You must do something about hides and also grow cotton.
My visit to Gujarat is not certain. Sardar did ask me. I am still considering. If at all I go to Gujarat, I shall confine myself to one place only.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 24320

535. LETTER TO HARIBHAU UPADHYAYA

March 30, 1935

CHI. HARIBHAU,

I feel you are completely off the track. This always happens to one who is carried away by emotions. I just do not understand how you could override . . . ’s guardian and presume to ask . . . . Despite your being members of the same institution you did not have the decency to consult the Manager. How did you come to have the right to encourage . . . ? She has not been pining for anybody. Her heart is still a blank page. Your motive is not to protect her but to help . . . . The way you appreciate . . . ’s careful nature suggests that you have a low opinion of people’s morals. Has . . . done anything special if he has not violated the rules of the Ashram while he lived there with everybody else? Well, you must then think that the others who never had any evil thought towards the girls in the Ashram must surpass even the gods.

You will not understand how this must have hurt . . . behn. You have only added to your guilt by exploiting . . . for such matters. Would you welcome anyone doing to . . . what you have done to . . . . Would you agree to anybody arrogating the title of father to someone else’s daughter?

In my opinion you have harmed . . . as well as . . . I have been put in an awkward position now. I must caution . . . behn and send . . . out of the Ashram. I assume from your letter that you will flout everyone and try to arrange a marriage between . . . and . . . , making poor . . . instrumental. I should be reassured only if you realized what adharma you have committed and having freed . . . behn from worry opened . . . ’s eye to the adharma on his part as well. Send me a telegram, however, if you feel that what you did was the right thing.

1 The names are omitted in the source.

364 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
will understand if you simply wire ‘unconvinced’ and speak to...behn. At the moment I do not want to tell anyone anything. Do not get worried on account of this. Do not even consider this as a scolding. This is just to explain your dharma to you.

Make arrangements for my stay wherever you like.

I will not hesitate to write to the Maharajas.

The Sammelan should have no right over the money to be given to me. About the exhibition in due course.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 6082. Courtesy: Haribhau Upadhyaya

536. FRAGMENT OF A LETTER:

[March 30, 1935]

There can be no greater hypocrisy than marrying again for the sake of the children or to have someone to cook. I would prefer anyone marrying after humbly admitting that he wanted to marry to satisfy his passions. A person who marries again should stop all pretences of loving his dead wife or should confess that love does not satisfy passions.

[From Gujarati]

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

537. LETTER KASIM ALI

March 30, 1935

SAIYED SAHEB,

I have your letter. I shall inquire regarding the matter at Indore. I am of course also looking for the book.

We have not started having any books written for the Village Industries Association. When did you send your application? I have

1 Presumably the Maharaja of Indore. The Hindi Sahitya Sammelan was holding a convention at Indore.

2 The addressee had written that his wife had died and his father-in-law had been insisting that he should marry his second daughter for the sake of the children.

3 In the source this letter is placed among the items of this date.
been hunting for it in the office here. Send me a copy. How and where would you work for the Sangh?

Yours,
M. K. GANDHI

SHRI SAiyed Kasim Ali
VISHARAD
BETUL., C. P.

From a photostat of the Hindi: C.W. 9749

538. LETTER TO BHAGWANDIN

March 30, 1935

Bhai BHAGWANDIN,

I saw your letter to Avadhesh. Many young men commit the error that he did. Avadhesh has realized his mistake and repented, so we should not lay it against him any more. I shall be writing so in Harijan.¹

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 736

539. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

March 30, 1935

CHI. BRIJKRISHANA,

I have your letter. It is good you are having treatment there. Your leaving this place was also to the good.²

You may certainly ask me any questions arising out of my reply.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 2439

¹ Vide “Notes”, 13-4-1935, sub-title, “Full Repentance”
² The addressee though intending to make a long stay had left Wardha in the middle of March on account of ill-health and was now recuperating in Kashmir.
March 31, 1935

I have your second letter and now the pamphlet. I have gone through the letter carefully. Your case is undoubtedly strong. I feel flattered by your compliment that there is no domestic circle to which I do not belong. Even so, my duty would often compel non-interference. So long as there are divisions even in the same family, they will have to be respected. We are one vast human family. You have gone further, and rightly. All God’s creation is one family. But we accept our limitations. In this quarrel of yours I am quite sure that you ought not to invite outside aid—outside the Borah group. If you break through the fence, you have no complaint to make. If you recognize Borahs as a distinct group, the quarrel should be adjusted among the members of the group. Any extension of the doctrine is sure to land us in trouble.

Then, were you right in disregarding excommunication? Mind, I am not examining the position from the legal standpoint. It is the moral that concerns me. From the ahimsa standpoint, you should have respected the order of excommunication. There is too much violence in the air. Your object was and is to convert the high priest and if not him, at least the fellow Borahs. This you could have done without forcing the entry into the mosque. Your motive is triumph of truth, not assertion of rights. I wonder if what I have said appeals to your reason.

Love.

BAPU

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

---

1  Issued by the Borah Young Men’s Association giving details of the dispute between the reformers and the orthodox of the Borah community. The former wanted to bring all the Borah Trusts under the Waqf Act. The Mullah excommunicated them for holding such views but they regained their right of entry into the mosque by a legal verdict.
541. LETTER TO N. R. MALKANI

WARDHA,
March 31, 1935

MY DEAR MALKANI,

Your letter. I have an impression that I wrote to you saying that you might build with the second-hand material including burnt bricks. I note what you say about Amtul Salaam. She is also a burnt brick—very much so. She deserves all the love you can give her. I note also what you say about the Indore boarding.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 914

542. LETTER TO MANILAL AND SUSHILA GANDHI

March 31, 1935

CHI. MANILAL AND SUSHILA,

I have your letters. There was some confusion. I have received a part of the letter addressed to Devdas and a part of mine has gone to him.

I understand about the new Agent¹. You should not even think about Maharaj Singh’s criticism of you. A public worker has to put up with all such things. Do fearlessly what you consider to be your duty.

Ramdas’s business is again off the rails. The person with whom he was to enter into partnership has himself broken it off. It is no doubt a good thing.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4835

¹ Syed Raza Ali, Agent of the Government of India in South Africa
543. LETTER TO HARIVADAN

March 31, 1935

BHAI HARIVADAN,

I have your letter. I got the point. I am writing to Parikshitlal. Mama came and saw me.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4007

544. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

March 31, 1935

BHAI THAKKAR BAPA,

I am not observing silence so as to avoid reproaches but to listen silently to whatever anyone has to say.

Please see whether Sastri alone will be able to manage the column and also find out whether he and Ganesan will get on. If you have doubt about Ganesan’s honesty, then by all means relieve him. Keep him only if you have no doubts about him.

If the debt is incurred on account of the Congress, we have got to pay it. If the drafts are wholly worthless, then take it that the institution is worthless and you do not have to pay a single pie.

I shall be in Indore from the 20th to 24th and after that here.

BAPU

SHRI TH[AKKAR BAPA]
HARIJAN S[EVAK] SANGH
TRICHINOPOLY S. I.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1154

545. LETTER TO AVADHESH DUTT AVASTHI

March 31, 1935

All right. You will live with me as at present. I shall teach you spinning and other things if you are ignorant of them. As for the rest we shall see. During your stay here you will get an emolument of Rs. 15 per month out of which your boarding expenses, which I am having calculated, will be deducted. You should tell me all that you feel.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

I am sending a note to the journal.¹

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 3219

546. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

WARDHA,
April 1, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

I did not want you to send me the enormous quantity of sugar and gur you have sent me. At the rate you are going, you will presently be my universal provider.

Your warning me against overwork induces the retort: “Physician! Heal thyself.”

Do you remember Rhys Jones? He asks me to take all the work I can from Shummy. Have I not anticipated Rhys?

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 3526. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6335

547. LETTER TO VALJI G. DESAI

APRIL 1, 1935

CHI. VALJI,

I had forgotten to mention one thing in my letter. Jivanji was here a few days ago and he told me that some difficulty was being experienced in selling your books because of your insistence on following your own style of spelling. Surely there can be no principle behind such a rigid attitude. And where no principles are involved, is it not one’s duty to respect the opinion of the majority? If everybody insisted on his point of view being the right one, we would have neither unity among the people nor any organization. If you are very particular about your style of spelling, you may try to popularize it and win. Till then, however, please accept the spelling recognized by your Vidyapith. You can also do this: explain in all your books the rules governing your system of spelling and give arguments in support of them adding that you will, however, adopt the spelling evolved by your co-workers till they are won over to your point of view.

¹ Vide “Notes”, 13-4-1935, sub-title, “Full Repentance”.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 7471. Courtesy: Valji G. Desai

548. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

April 1, 1935

CHI. VASUMATI,

I think I shall have to send you some common sense, too, along with my letters. I had meant a common kitchen. For this, there is a cooker big enough for you and me to be boiled in. Containers with gruel, a vegetable, dal, rice and milk can be put inside it at the same time. This not only saves the trouble of constantly keeping an eye on the things but also results in considerable economy of fuel in the end. Prabhavati, Ba, Kishori and the rest have gone to a rural exhibition in Deoli. I will ask Prabha to write to you. Sharda Kotak came and stayed here for about fifteen days.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

I trust Gangabehn is all right. I have written to Durga at the Borivli address.

SHRI VASUMATIBEHN
UDYOG SANGH ASHRAM,
BOCHASAN via BORSAD

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9397. Also C.W. 643. Courtesy: Vasumati Pandit
549. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

April 1, 1935

Bhai Thakkar Bapa,

I got the papers sent by you. I have written to both the Iyengars and sent the papers over to Malkani.

I will wait for you after the 12th. I am holding myself ready.

Vandemataram from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 22753

550. LETTER TO VIYOGI HARI

April 1, 1935

Bhai Viyogi Hari,

The problem of conducting the official business of the Charkha Sangh, Udyog Sangh and Harijan Sangh in Hindi is a difficult one. For all the three offices the only capable men we have found are English-knowing. Where are efficient Hindi-knowing men to be found? What can one do? There is no need for me to expound upon it. If there were right men to be found, we could bring about the change in all the three offices today. Let me know if you have any suggestion. You are coming to Indore, I suppose?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1095

551. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

April 1, 1935

Chh. Sharma,

I have your letter. In the absence of a wire from you I take it that Devi is doing well.1 So far I have never had anyone given injections. We made use only of mud poultices and similar remedies.

1 The addressee’s son had been bitten by a dog and the wound was being treated with mud poultices.
Yes, you may certainly go to Simla if it is possible. I shall send you the books too if I can lay hands on them. Your fear as to what will happen after I break the silence is groundless.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 3153

552. NOTE TO SUMANGAL PRAKASH

April 1, 1935

If the tomatoes are good, please wash them first in a solution of potassium permanganate and then in clear water. If you feel like taking milk you should do so. The milk should be taken unboiled. No need now to add hot water. Milk, tomatoes and an orange—this should constitute the diet for today. Tamarind water as and when required.

From a photostat of the Hindi: Sumangal Prakash Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

553. LETTER TO PURUSHOTTAM BAVISHI

April 2, 1935

Bhai Purushottam,

I wrote to you on 28th March asking you to come to Indore. But I see from your letter of 31st March that you had not received my letter up to the time of your writing. Maybe I wrote Shampur instead of Shajipur in the address.\(^1\)

Please do both of you come to Indore. I cannot fix the time from here. But we shall certainly talk things over.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 123. Also C.W. 4746. Courtesy: Purushottam Bavishi

\(^1\) Gandhiji did write Shampur; vide “Letter to Purushottam Bavishi”
554. LETTER TO LAKSHMANDAS KAPUR

April 2, 1935

BHAI KAPURJI,

I have been wanting to write to you all these days but could not do so. Please forgive me. The new glasses sent by you fit very well and now those are the ones I use every day. Thank you.

Vandemataram from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2216

555. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

April 2, 1935

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

Send me a copy of the reply received by Manilal\(^1\). Its wording will help me decide what to write to Delhi.

Such replies are not yet the worst. Much worse insults are going to follow. That is why we should only go on doing what we can without coming into contact with the Government. I think that that is the only way to conserve our strength. To yield to anger is of course very easy.

Perhaps it would be safer to ignore my views regarding vaccination against the plague. I myself have always taken such risks and made others take them. But, then, I was on the spot on every such occasion. It may be dangerous to act upon the suggestions which I have been making from a distance on the present occasion. I, therefore, would advise you to be guided by Dr. Bhaskar. I have of course placed my views before him. Maybe you have even read that letter.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 157-8

\(^1\) Manilal Kothari, then Secretary of the Gujarat Provincial Congress Committee had been taken to one of the States of Saurashtra and forbidden to return to British Indian territory. The reference is to the reply to his letter to the Government in this connection.
556. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

April 2', 1935

DEAR BIBI,

You must have got my letters. How did you fare in Khurja? Now at least the idea of living at Harijanvas has been put off, has it not? Your health must have improved. Are you coming to Indore? Everything is all right here.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Urdu: G.N. 321

557. LETTER TO BIMLAPRASAD CHALIHA

WARDHA,
April 3, 1935

DEAR BIMLAPRASAD,

I am glad you were able to go to Madhubani. You should certainly now popularize the different processes in your part of the world. You can have the membership of both A. I. S. A. and A. I. V. I. A. Do you get Harijan regularly?

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

From a copy: C.W. 9736. Courtesy: Government of Assam

558. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

April 3, 1935

DEAR BIBI,

I have your letter. From Indore I return to Wardha. You should stay at Wardha till your cottage is ready. You can even prolong the stay. Regarding your cottage, I shall write to Malkani that it should be constructed of baked bricks and consist of two rooms even at the 1 Not clear in the source.

2 A photostat of this letter was displayed at the Assam Pavilion of the Gandhi Darshan Exhibition held at New Delhi in 1969-70.
cost of a slight increase in the outlay. You will have fully recovered by the time I return, won’t you?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Urdu: G.N. 322

559. LETTER TO N. R. MALKANI

April 3, 1935

MY DEAR MALKANI,

Better build two rooms for Amtul and use the same material as you would for the other buildings. Additional cost should not matter much as ultimately the building would be our property.

Yours,
BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 915

560. LETTER TO DR. PATTABHI SITARAMAYYA¹

April 3, 1935

DEAR DR. PATTABHI,

You have placed me in a most awkward position by sending two young men without notice, without any pots, without bedding. We have hardly settled down here. There is not enough accommodation for our requirements. Is it fair to dump down people in an institution?
Supposing others followed your example, where would I be?

We have not yet begun to entertain learners. There is little to teach. I have taken them and told them they will work as scavengers and labourers as we all do consistently with our other duties. Only please do not repeat the performance.

If you can get money from their homes or from friends, send me enough for their return fares and initial expenses.

¹ The addressee explains: “In 1935 a satyagrahi, who had been in jail, came to see me and asked for a letter of introduction to Wardha where he wanted to see the Ashram. I gave one readily. At the railway station he wanted to take a companion, and I included his name also in the letter.”
How do you pass your time?

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

Incidents of Gandhiji’s Life, p. 225

561. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

WARDHA,

April 3, 1935

CHI. AMBUJAMMAL

Just a line to acknowledge your letter. I have a parcel of honey from Trivandrum. Has that also been sent by you? Do not send till I ask. There is plenty of honey with me just now. But you may send the almonds again. I can’t get good ones here.

Do come to Indore if you can. Why not Mother too if she would.

Love.

BAPU

From the original. Ambujammal Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

562. LETTER TO ABBAS

April 3, 1935

CHI. ABBAS,

You wrote after quite a long time. I have already written.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6310

1 This is in Hindi.
563. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

April 3, 1935

CHI. JAMNALAL,

Agree to the betrothal only if Kamalnayan and the girl are fully willing and are ready to live in simplicity. There is no need at all for hurry. Kamalnayan’s assurance that he will not go to the West till after his betrothal should be enough for us. He has to learn a great deal to acquire maturity. It is our duty to see that neither he nor the girl is unhappy afterwards.

If Kamala does not particularly want your presence in Bhowali, perhaps it might be better for you to go to Sinhagad. Think over the matter, however. Your health should be the first consideration. . . .

Kamalnayan is bound to come to Indore and we shall know everything then. If you decide to go to Sinhagad, and the date fixed is around the date of the Sammelan, I should like you to go via Indore.

Madalasa is doing fairly well. Ganga is calm.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2961

564. LETTER TO SECRETARY, HINDI SAHITYA SAMMELAN

April 3, 1935

SECRETARY
ALL INDIA HINDI SAHITYA SAMMELAN
INDORE

DEAR SIR,

I was under the impression that those arranging the Sammelan and the exhibition were largely the same people. The people who had approached me in connection with the Sammelan had talked about the exhibition. I, therefore gave my consent for another speech for the exhibition and that in the same letter which dealt with the Sammelan

1 & 2 words are not decipherable in the source.
matters.
Inform me of the train I should board on the 19th and how I should reach there.

M. K. GANDHI

[From Hindi]
Veena, Tributes Issue, April-May 1969

565. NOTE TO SUMANGAL PRAKASH

April 3, 1935

Do you feel heaviness in the stomach? Even then you should take only milk and fruit in the morning. At noon a little bread, a little curd, and raw crushed vegetable, tamarind and jaggery. How did you like crushed vegetable yesterday? If you like whole leaves you may take them or you may take them crushed. Take only bhakhari. Are you used to taking rice? For the evening bhakhari and vegetable and tomatoes if they are available. Increase the quantity slowly. Let not your stomach get out of order.

From the Hindi original: Sumangal Prakash Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

566. “HARIJAN” IN POONA

April 4, 1935

For saving expenses and for purely financial considerations, the Harijan, which was originally published at Poona by the Aryabhushan Press but which was transferred to Madras some time ago, will from next week be retransferred to Poona. Sjt. Mahadev Desai will be the Editor. Thus both Harijan (English) and Harijanbandhu (Gujarati) will be published at the same Press and place. All communications meant for Harijan should henceforth be addressed to the Manager or the Editor, as the case may be, at the Aryabhushan Press, Poona 4.

M. K. G.

Harijan, 13-4-1935

567. LETTER TO EFY ARISTARCHI

April 4, 1935

Your letter advising me of Alexander Moissi’s death. Death is a never-failing, faithful companion, whom we should welcome no matter when he comes. He is twin brother of Birth. Why we should welcome one and dread the other I have never understood. If there is a certainty about the life beyond, why not welcome the change that Death gives?

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

568. LETTER TO AGATHA HARRISON

WARDHA,
April 4, 1935

MY DEAR AGATHA,

I have your maid. I am supporting your suggestion about sending Rajaji.1 But I must confess to you I have no faith in these deputations. The British policy is fixed and rigid. They want to carry their Bill at any cost. They will placate any opinion but the advanced Indian political opinion. They honestly believe that if they give the Indian politicians an inch, they will want an ell and grumble even when they get their ell. This belief is not only honest, it is well-founded. The Indian wants his independence as of right. The official says he has no right save that of being governed. The official has the firm opinion that India is incapable of governing herself. Hence whatever he concedes is given grudgingly. Hence no advance will satisfy the Indian advanced politician. He may take it only to agitate for more. The policy has now been definitely adopted of never conceding to the popular demand. They will give only what they honestly think is proper. This does not irritate me. We have to develop internal strength to take what we need.

Now see what is happening here. Read the enclosed latest ordinance—a whole population being degraded for the sake of crushing a few “terrorists”. They won’t attempt to know why young men and women are ready to throw away their lives. They are now doing what they have never dared before. They have evolved a new philosophy.

Things will right themselves but not by your importing even our best men. You must plough the lonely furrow for the time being. I do

---

1 Agatha Harrison, while visiting India earlier, had suggested to Gandhiji that someone should go to England “to help people understand the situation better” not say no one should ever go from here. Those like Dr. Ansari or Bhulabhai will go on business. And then they may do a little political work.

In spite, however, of my opinion, I am not going to throw any obstacle in the way of Rajaji going. In fact, I am making the first move. I would like him to go even for your sake.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 1488

569. LETTER TO G. C. TAMBE

April 4, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

Monday is my day of silence. But I do not mind if no other day is possible. I want to see and listen, not speak.

Yours,

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G.N. 7961

570. LETTER TO BHUJANGILAL CHHAYA

April 4, 1935

CHI. BHUJANGILAL,

If you are obliged to write to me without your father’s knowledge, it is the duty of us both not to write to each other.

Anybody who is unwilling to perform a modest duty facing him in the immediate present in the hope of being able to perform a more important one in future is sunk in moha. “Make the best of today, for who has foreseen tomorrow?” But even if you decide to take up the smaller duty, you should do so after consulting your father.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of Gujarati: S. N. 24225
471. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

April 4, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

I got your letter.

Father’s unwillingness to me is sufficient reason why you should not leave Rajkot. I can understand his feelings. Now that Jamnadas has gone there, he may perhaps agree to your leaving. But just now that makes no difference. Also, you cannot leave till you can find somebody to take charge of the school. What you write about the school is perfectly correct. The right course is to let those who wish to leave go and do the best that you can. I will remember about the English teacher. Till you get one, do whatever you can.

I could not convince Vinoba. The idea was to lighten the final responsibility on your head or on that of anybody else who might take your place. Mathew’s problem was a difficult one. I think I have been able to solve it. For everybody else it was a difficult job. If there is still something which I can persuade him to accept, please let me know. But now there is no need for that, either, for the present.

The question which I asked you amounts to this: that excepting for father’s consent, you should arrange all your affairs in such a manner that you are able to leave immediately.

At present Amtul is with her brother Miya Rashid in Indore. I am going to Indore. She has, therefore, gone there in advance.

Does Qureshi still draw money?

If you wish to buy land for the school, you may do so. If I have not already given my opinion about the Trust Deed, send me a copy. My impression is that I have already written to Jamnadas about it.

A letter for Lilavati is enclosed.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8435. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi
572. LETTER TO VALLABHBAI PATEL

April 4, 1935

BHAI VALLABHBAI,

So you have been laid low. I had a letter from Mani. It seems unpolished rice will not agree with you. Here everybody can digest it. It can’t possibly cause constipation. But experiments in food are not for you. It will be enough if you can keep yourself fit. If you take proper nourishment, you will be all right.

There was a letter from Agatha. She has strongly urged that Rajaji should go to England. Whoever goes, nobody will be able to do anything just now. But a visit by a person like Rajaji may perhaps be useful for the future.

Let me have your opinion.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, p. 159

573. LETTER TO HARIHAU UPADHYAYA

April 4, 1935

CHI. HARIHAU,

I understand about the exhibition.

Please try your best. If the Maharaja and the Maharani feel embarrassed in sitting in chairs while I do not use one, I will not mind doing so for the occasion.

No matter how much is collected in Indore for Hindi propaganda, I will expect only one lakh for work in South India, that is, the part of the country where the four Dravidian languages, Tamil, Telugu, Malayalam and Kannad, are spoken. This means that a purse of one lakh should be earmarked for Hindi propaganda in South India or in any other part that I like. I give the second alternative for earmarking contributions so that I may be able to spend the money in provinces like Assam if I wish to do so. I don’t want such freedom, but if we can get more contributions in that way, I don’t mind.

The arrangement for the disposal of night-soil in Indore is supposed to be excellent. Please do not forget to take me to that place.

Blessings from

BAPU

From Gujarati: C.W. 6083. Courtesy: Haribhau Upadhyaya

574. LETTER TO HARIBHAU UPADHYAYA

April 4, 1935

CHI. HARIBHAU,

I got your letter. You ought to have written to . . .¹ to soothe her. Please write even now, no matter if the problem is still being discussed with me. I am not making use of your letter.

You are still labouring under an error. To say that you would adopt the same attitude towards . . . shows that you have not thought carefully about the matter. If you adopted such an attitude, I would say that you did not understand your dharma towards . . . as her father. As a father you should at least insist that even your dearest friend should consult you before he talks about any delicate matter to . . . How can anybody else understand . . . as well as you, a thoughtful father, can? For anyone to talk to . . . about such a matter, and that without her parents’ knowledge, is certainly immoral.

For the present, however, it will or suffice? if you write a reassuring letter to . . . and . . . God alone knows how . . .’s mind has been affected. But there is nothing we can do about it now. I have no doubt that her mind ought to have been allowed to remain unsullied.

. . . has been following a wrong path. But I have not for that reason stopped doing my duty as a parent as I understand it, though it is possible that he might not like it just now. And moreover, isn’t there the true Father of us all above? Is He ever likely to forget any of us?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 6086. Courtesy: Haribhau Upadhyaya

¹ The names are omitted in the source.
575. LETTER TO RAJAB ALI

Thursday, April 4, 1935

BHAJ RAJAN ALI,

Wonderful doctors you are! Day in and day out you din into the ears of your patients: “Stop eating polished rice; start unpolished rice; and your constipation will go.” But the unfortunate patient comes back with a sample and asks: ‘Sir, here is what I have got from the bazaar. Is that unpolished rice?’ I suppose you will tell him: ‘It is not my business to answer that question. You must go and consult an expert in industrial chemistry.’ Nothing very difficult. Another fat fee and he can get the opinion. What a wonderful age we are living in! Now let me ask Mrs. Jenabehn what rice she cooks for you. Polished? Unpolished? Or just what your ‘expert’ servant gets from the market?

Blessings from

BAPU

Harijan, 13-4-1935. Also a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

576. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

WARDHA,
April 4, 1935

CHI. LILAVATI,

You seem to be acting in the manner of the thief scolding the policeman. My impression is that the last letter has still to come from you. How can you be forgotten? I do get news of you. Do come during the vacation if you feel like it. Are you in good health or are there complications still?

Ask Kusum to write.

Blessings from

BAPU

1 Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Notes”. The addressee’s name is omitted in the source and is supplied from the Gujarati copy. Gandhiji had earlier asked his opinion as to the comparative merits of polished and unpolished rice. And he had said: “This is not my domain. The questions about polished and unpolished rice that you ask belong to the subject of industrial chemistry.”

2 The Gujarati copy bears this date.

3 & 4 The superscription and subscription are supplied from the Gujarati copy.

Supplied from the Gujarati copy
577. NOTE TO BALVANTSINHA

April 4, 1935

CHI. BALVANTSINHA,

1. If there is not enough flour for the evening meal, fewer rotis should be prepared for the midday meal. What happened yesterday was not becoming.

2. Is there any difference in the quantity of firewood consumed now and when the cooker was not being used?

3. Can you spare an hour or a half to teach Rajkishori Hindi?

4. What about Kale’s room?

5. Can leafy vegetables be grown in the larger plot?

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1872

578. NOTE TO BALVANTSINHA

April 4, 1935

CHI. BALVANTSINHA,

I do not like your being ill. If the climate here does not agree with you and you do not feel cheerful I shall not force you to work in the kitchen. Shall I assign you some other work? The best thing might be to settle down in your own village. Consult Surendra.

Why do you need a room for solitude? You have to find solitude under the trees, and in your heart.

It is proper for Vishwambharji to write. His coming here, in my opinion, will serve no purpose.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1874

579. NOTE TO BALVANTSINHA

April 4, 1935

CHI. BALVANTSINHA,

How long can you live with me and not associate with and love others living with me? If you like living here you should like everyone who is here. And they are all good people. What else can one learn from living with me? You would serve all, so you should make up your mind to love all. If one is good the whole world is good. Why do you need a room for solitude? You have to find solitude under trees and in the cave of your heart.

You should give him the room, for you can live even under a tree. You are not likely to run away from me while Harilal avoids me. Now that at last Rama has come to dwell in his heart and he has come to me I have no wish to irritate him over small things. It will be a great thing if he can stay on. Ba will be the happiest. She often complains that I do not pay sufficient attention to Harilal. But I can do so only in my own way. I cannot discriminate between mine and outsiders. Whosoever follows my path is mine. I have no ill-will for those who follow other ways, but I will not help them either. Thus I can expect sacrifice from you but not from Harilal.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Hindi]
Bapuki Chhayamen, p. 72

580. THE EXTENT OF MEDICAL AID

With the commencement of the activities of the A. I. V. I. A., medical aid finds a prominent, if not almost an exclusive, place on the programme of many workers. The aid consists in distributing among the villagers free medicines, allopathic, ayurvedic, unani or homoeopathic, or all combined. Druggists selling these medicines are quite ready to oblige workers approaching them for a few medicines, which cost them a trifle and which, in their opinion, may, if they look at the gift selfishly; bring them more buyers. The poor patients become the victims of well-intentioned but ill-informed or over-enthusiastic workers. More than three-fourths of these drugs are not only useless but imperceptibly, if not perceptibly, harmful to the bodies into which they are put. Where they do bring some temporary relief to the patients, their substitutes are as a rule to be found in the village bazaar.

Medical men of the West are slowly but surely finding out that the less drugs they prescribe the better it is for their patients. The best of them never keep their patients in ignorance of what is prescribed. Instead of overloading their prescriptions, they give some simple harmless drug. The best part of their work consists in steadying their patients, removing their fears and insisting on careful nursing and a change of diet. They are more and more veering round to the belief that nature is the best healer.

Therefore, A. I. V. I. A. is leaving medical relief of the kind I have described severely alone. Its primary care is education in matters of health as well as of economy. Are not both interrelated? Does not health mean wealth for the millions? There bodies, not their intellects, are the primary instruments of wealth. The Association, therefore, seeks to teach people how to prevent disease. It is well known that the food of the millions is very deficient in its nourishing value. What they do eat they misuse. Their knowledge of hygiene is practically nil. Village sanitation is as bad as it well can be. If, therefore, these defects can be put right and the people imbibe the simple rules of hygiene, most of the ailments they suffer from must disappear without further effort or any outlay of money. Hence the Association does not contemplate opening dispensaries. Investigations are now being made to find out what the villages can supply in the shape of drugs. Satisbabu’s cheap remedies are an effort in that direction. But incredibly simple though they are, he is experimenting with a view to making drastic reduction in the number of these remedies, without diminishing their efficacy. He is studying the bazaar drugs and testing them and comparing them with the corresponding drugs in the British pharmacopoeia. The desire is to wean the simple villagers from the awe of my sterial pills and infusions.

Harijan, 5-4-1935

581. PRIESTHOOD AND UNTOUCHABILITY

A correspondent from Sibasagar writes:¹

When I was touring in Assam last year in the Harijan cause, I had understood that the tea-garden coolies were regarded as untouchables and that the Miris were also almost so regarded. Be that as it may, it is a serious question whether, where the priests exploit the superstition of the people and where innocent birds and animals are offered as sacrifice, it is right to agitate for the entry of Harijans to such a temple.

¹ The letter to not reproduced here. The correspondent had reported about a temple at Dergaon, Assam, where innocent birds and animals were offered as sacrifice and which barred the entry of tea-labourers and Miris because they were regarded as untouchables.

No doubt temple reform is a separate question. Entry of Harijans into temples cannot await reform. But I would draw the line at temples where animal sacrifices are offered. I would not touch these temples till animal sacrifices are stopped. Inward corruption in temples cannot affect the devotee who knows nothing about it. But with animal sacrifice every worshipper is intimately connected. For, he or she has to offer such sacrifice. And a Harijan admitted for the first time in such a temple would naturally be expected to bring some poor bird or animal as sacrifice. He may or may not be a meat-eater, but who will make himself responsible for the sin of teaching an unsophisticated Harijan that God expects His worshippers to propitiate Him with the blood of innocent dumb animals who have never sinned, who have no sense of sin? I wish that the leaders of Assam will purge the Dergaon temple of the stain of bloody sacrifice. Let no one retort that the beginning should be made, not with an unknown temple like that of Dergaon, but it should be with the temple of Kali. Most reforms have had their origin in small beginnings. The citadel of Kali will fall by its own weight, if the minor temples wash themselves clean of innocent blood.

_Harijan_, 5-4-1935

582. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

_April 5, 1935_

MY DEAR AMRIT,

The _gur_ and _shakkar_¹ are both good. What Ba would ultimately say of _shakkar_ I do not know. I shall give you her opinion when she gives it.

_Shurry_’s note on _gur_ and _imli_² is valuable and I am using it for _Harijan_.³ He must, or you would for him, warn me when I put an undue strain on him. I am having so many medical and chemical conundrums for solution.

The papers you sent me are going back. They make interesting reading. But we will have to work out our own salvation.

¹ Brown sugar
² Tamarind
³ This was published in the _Harijan_ of April 20.
When you get used to it, you would prefer loosely-woven khadi sheets to glossy linen. The softness of the khadi sheets I have in mind is all its own. It is light and airy. This is no exaggeration. The proof of the pudding is in the eating. You get the right kind. If you can’t procure it, you must tell me.

Shall I send you good slivers from here? Next time you come, I must teach you carding. It is quite easy. You must not have slivers sent for you. You should make them yourself.

It is almost dawn now and I must stop.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 3527. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6336

583. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

April 5, 1935

CHI. PREMA,

I have taken up for reply both your letters of 8-2-’35 and 30-3-’35. How is Kisan now? Is she doing anything? How does she keep herself occupied?

Do you still go on with your self-chosen occupation of ploughing the fields and working the water-lift?

You should try and persuade those over whom you have influence to save the expenditure on births and deaths. All may not listen to you, but a few certainly will.

You had a good discussion with Nariman. It is true that most people follow ahimsa only as a policy. But there are a few at least like you who strive their utmost to follow it as a dharma. Ultimately it is such ahimsa that will work.

There will be an army even after the country has become free. I don’t feel that my ahimsa is sufficiently strong to convince the people that there will be no necessity for an army. If the army remains, military training also will remain. But this is only speculation. It is not inconceivable that, if we really and truly win freedom through ahimsa,

---

1 Nariman had argued that the Congress had adopted ahimsa only as a policy and not as a creed and that, therefore, when the country became free it would have to maintain an army.
we may not need an army afterwards. There is no limit to the power of ahimsa, as there is none to that of the votary of ahimsa. The latter does nothing of his own will. All his actions are prompted by God. That being so, how can he say in advance what God will prompt him to do at a future time? There is thus no question of compromise in this matter. It is only a question of recognizing the limit of one’s strength. My killing a snake through fear is no compromise but merely an exhibition of my lack of strength. One might say that God has given me only so much strength and no more, or that I have not purified myself sufficiently—have not adequate tapascharya—to make myself fit for greater strength. A compromise, on the other hand, is a deliberate and voluntary act.

A perfect satyagrahi means a perfect avatar of God. Do you doubt that such a perfect avatar can shake the whole world? It is no exaggeration to say that this world is a laboratory for preparing the ground for such an avatar. If all of us prepare ourselves for a partial manifestation of the Divine, we may rest assured that the perfect avatar will come some day. If you have such faith, you will not need to ask about the necessity or otherwise of an army.

The Government may indeed be a machine, but is not the machine controlled by an engineer? There is no harm in attending a music or dance performance, provided there is nothing obscene in it. But I would certainly mind going when somebody else pays for us. It may be possible to pay for one person, but who will pay for the millions? We are among the millions. In this matter, however, everyone should act according to his or her own strength.

Preserve carefully Mahadev’s article about bread. The problem of keeping the wells clean is a big one. It will be a great achievement if you can persuade the people to stop using the steps on wells wherever they exist.

Write to me in detail the method of straining oil so that I may try it.

Don’t mind if your weight is increasing. Acid things are necessary in one’s food. I have introduced here both tamarind and onions.

If Sushila has been appointed an Examiner, she should share her fees and set a question paper that will be easy to answer and that will test originality.

My remark about menstruation is correct. Such freedom from passion takes a very long time to acquire. Passion is so subtle a thing that we are not always able to recognize it.

It would be proper for Europe to carry on an agitation for the release of Jawaharlal.

The disregard of the Assembly voting does not fill me with disappointment. This contingency was taken into account. Entering the Assembly was necessary and remains so.

I keep silent about Hindu-Muslim unity because I can do nothing about it. When the Elephant King had realized his helplessness, he started praying and his prayer was answered. My condition is like his. My prayer continues. Let deliverance come when it will. Why should an anasakta¹ be impatient to know its exact time?

We have a large number of newcomers here. Cooking has been drastically simplified. Everything is cooked in steam. Containers for all the three articles of food are put into the cooker at the same time. This saves a lot of time. Cooking now practically means only making rotlis. I am trying to discover some method of simplifying this work too.

The oil-press is still working. We continue the cleaning of the neighbouring village every day. I visited it only once. Mahadev goes there daily.

You can come when you get time and wish to do so. You may come to Indore, too, if you wish.

I think this is enough.

Blessings from

BAPU

584. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

April 5, 1935

BHAJ VALLABHBHAI.

I hope the enemy—your fever—has left you now. Don’t tolerate it even for a day.

You have certainly done well in deciding to go to the U. P.

¹ One who remains unattached to fruits of action.
Nobody will feel hurt by anything that you say. “Your real leader is Jawahar. We others can stand before you only as trustees for him. Let that be the warp of your speech, and the woof can be as you like. The very fact that they have so eagerly pressed you to accept the invitation makes me happy..."

I carefully read all your leaflets. I have started filing them from yesterday. I am sure Mani is preserving copies of all of them. I should like to have a complete set here too. Ask her to send me the preceding seven leaflets.

If you get the “lucky bag”, I hope you will give me a share.

Write to Raja. He seems to feel isolated. He has been working without respite and it seems he can’t even open his heart to anybody.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 159-60

585. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

April 5, 1935

CHI. MATHURADAS,

Please be assured it was a good thing you were not elected. You can do a great deal of service from outside. It is possible you may have to be out of the Corporation altogether. I hope you are keeping fit.

I had known about Sardar’s illness. I get letters every day.

Do draw Pyarelal to you if you can do so. I am guiding him in my own way. His good lies in finding peace in Utkal. Hence, I would not suggest to him anything else. You have a right to call him over. I shall not stop him if he agrees to go.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

1 Omission as in the source
586. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

WARDHA,
April 6, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

I understand what you say about gur and shakkar.
I am returning straight from Indore. The report about the tour was quite wrong. I might have to go to Gujarat later.
I hope to be here in July to receive you.
Love.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 3712. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6868

587. LETTER TO GOVIND RAO

April 6, 1935

MY DEAR GOVIND RAO,

Though as you say there was no excuse for the negligence, you have now done full reparation to Shri Thomson.

As for the ladies, wait till the next cold season. In any case, will they pay their own board expenses? Do they know Hindi? Of course you will write to the manager when the time for sending them comes.

Yours,

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 1383

588. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

April 6, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

Read the accompanying. A copy of my reply is also enclosed. I would advise you to engage him if he is ready to come on that condition. If, however, you are not satisfied, you may unhesitatingly send me a wire saying “No”. I am asking for a wire in case it is “No”, so that Mathew, if he is ready, may not be kept waiting.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—9: Shri Narandas Gandhine, Part II, p. 185. Also C.W. 8436.
Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi
589. LETTER TO BHAGWANJI P. PANDYA

April 6, 1935

CHI. BHAGWANJI,

Why is Balvantsinha unhappy? Has anybody done him an injustice? Or does anybody harass him?

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 3014. Courtesy: Bhagwanji P. Pandya

590. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

April 6, 1935

BHAI VALLABHBHAI

. . . I wrote a similar letter to me also. I have asked him why he asks for money like this every now and then. I am writing to him and advising him not to be a cause of pain to you. He may come to me if he wishes.

Your have given a good reply to Chandubhai. I wonder what they find in sannyasa.

I read Bulabhai’s letter. It is all right. Let him do whatever he can.

I do not wish to write more today. I had nearly forgotten that today is a day of fasting.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

1 The name is omitted in the source.
591. LETTER TO CHANDULAL

April 6, 1935

BHAI CHANDULAL,

It is good that you asked the question. There is nothing wrong in my believing that no one can feel as strongly as I. It is no more than an expression of one’s own strong feeling. I do not believe that anyone else can have greater love for my mother than I have. Do you find anything wrong with this statement?

The same is true of the other sentence. There could be millions of people who practise more austere penance. But just the same I can say that I do not know of any such, can’t I? Would you look upon it as claiming omniscience I said that I hadn’t heard anyone speak the language of the seers? There could be millions speaking the language of the seers, but must I not say it if I have not met any?

If you don’t follow, ask again.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

592. LETTER TO MOOLCHAND AGRAWAL

April 6, 1935

BHAI MOOLCHAND

I have no recollection of any letter about Khudi¹. Anyway,
I shall reply in the Harijan.²

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 834

¹ The source has “kaddi” which means bone, presumably a slip; vide also “Letter to Moolchand Agrawal”
² Vide “Notes”, 13-4-1935, sub-title, “A Result of Untouchability”
593. LETTER TO KASIM ALI

April 6, 1935

SAIYED SAHEB,

I learn that replies are being sent to you from the office. No services of writers are needed. Let alone a thousand villages, it would be enough if you could properly manage even a single village. Only he can take up the agency of a thousand villages who has scores of assistants at his disposal.

As for Shiva Bavanī even the name I hear from you for the first time. But I now find it to be an old book. I am collecting more facts.

M. K. GANDHI

SAIYED KASIM ALI
VISHARAD
BETULI, C.P.

From a photostat of the Hindi: C.W. 9750

594. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

April 6, 1935

CHI. SHARMA,

I have your letter. I hope Devi is well. If he has to have injections, the facility is available in almost all hospitals these days. If it can’t be done at Khurja, it certainly can be done in Delhi.

Remember that you have the right to come to live here. As for ordering anyone, I have for the present no wish to do so.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, facing p. 154

---

1 A Hindi poetical work by Bhushan, extolling the exploits of Shivaji
595. LETTER TO KANU GANDHI

WARDHA,
April 7, 1935

CHI. KANAIYO,

How foolish you are! When you first suspected that I was displeased with you, you could have had your doubt resolved immediately. In the instances which you have cited, there was no question at all of my being displeased. I take work from you that is hard enough, and that as exactingly as I can, because I am pleased with you. I am not at all angry with you. If I were, I would say so immediately and not hide the fact from you. You have, therefore, no cause to feel unhappy or disheartened.

You need not believe that you will never be able to learn English. And even if you cannot, why should you give way to despair? Is there anything else to make you feel despondent? You need not hide anything from me.

I am fully satisfied with you. You have given me no cause to feel dissatisfied.

You need not, therefore, leave and go away somewhere else.

After this, do you want any explanation about the instances which upset you?

I am returning your letter.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

I forgot to reply to one of your questions. Your decision to improve your Gujarati thoroughly is perfectly correct. Master the grammar. English will then come of itself. If you make a systematic study of Gujarati, you will be able to learn any other language without much difficulty.

You should do your best to memorize the eighteen chapters [of the Gita]. Give more time to the study of Sanskrit.

You should have informed me about Purushottam immediately.

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II
596. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

April 7, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

I learnt only today that Purushottam’s health is again giving trouble. He should stay in Santa Cruz and put himself under Gaurishankar’s treatment or he may try Kuvalayanand’s treatment. If he wishes to try Sharma’s treatment, he can go to Khurja. But I think at present he is not interested in treating patients. Purushottam may go to Mehta also if he is so inclined. I have an impression, however, that he was not satisfied with Mehta’s treatment. He may, if he wishes, come here. I have not accepted defeat. It is very hot here, but I do not think it can be less hot there. Let him try any treatment he likes, but he must get well. “Health is the first condition of happiness.” Harjivan neglected his health and has now got tuberculosis of the bones.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8437. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

597. LETTER TO BHAGWANJI P. PANDYA

April 7, 1935

CHI. BHAGWANJI,

Show the accompanying to Balvantsinha. Carry out my suggestion and end the bickerings. Look into Harilal’s complaint regarding milk, etc. He seems to have a great deal to say.

Letters for the family are enclosed.

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati C.W. 385. Courtesy: Bhagwanji P. Pandya
598. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

April 7, 1935

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

The reply\(^1\) received by Manilal is the limit of arrogance. Let the Government follow its own nature. We shall follow ours. I see in the reply the utmost limit of violence. Where shall we put the limit to our non-violence? Violence has a limit, non-violence can have none. That is why it is invincible. But why this philosophizing before you? It is not mere philosophizing, though. That is how I spontaneously feel. I place before you whatever thoughts come to me. As you know, I never wish to hide any thought of mine from you.

The letter received today was accompanied by a copy of yesterday's leaflet. "No 10" seems to have been written through oversight.

I hope you are getting over the weakness brought on by the fever.

What you say about vaccination is correct.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

The leaflet is all right. The one received yesterday bore No. 9. I wrote as above only after reading the first few sentences. I have now read through No. 10 and see that its contents are different.

[From Gujarati]

_Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine_, p. 161

599. LETTER TO RATANLAL

April 7, 1935

BHAI RATANLALJI,

I like your letter. Your decision to oppose is born out of ignorance. It was your duty, certainly, to find out the full facts from me. What has Hindi got to do with swaraj, a political matter? I need funds only for the propagation of Hindi in South India. What is there to oppose in this? Are you aware of the magnitude of the work already done in this direction in the South? Have you seen how much has been spent on it? Do you realize the need for it? Have you any reason to doubt that the amount will be spent on the popularization of Hindi? Your remark that the funds will be spent on political workers does not become you. I would expect from you not opposition but help.

\(^1\) Vide "Letter to Vallabhbhai Patel", 2-4-1935

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

600. LETTER TO MOOLCHAND AGRAWAL

April 7, 1935

BHAI MOOLCHAND

I have your letter. Concerning the Khudi incident justice should be demanded from where it is due. Can truthful testimonies be got? Can any impartial man go there? Many such questions arise.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 829

601. LETTER TO SECRETARY, HINDI UNIVERSITY COMMITTEE

April 7, 1935

DEAR SIR,

I have your letter. The funds I have asked for are for the propagation of Hindi in the South. Thus I can spare you nothing out of that one lakh. If there are any further donations they can be put down. Of course the work undertaken by your committee is commendable.

Yours,
M. K. GANDHI

SECRETARY
HINDI UNIVERSITY COMMITTEE
INDORE
CENTRAL INDIA

[From Hindi]
Veena, Tributes Issue, April-May 1969
602. LETTER TO DR. PATTABHI SITARAMAYYA

WARDHA,
April 8, 1935

DEAR DR. PATTABHI,

The young men¹ are not going back unless the life here disquiets them. Strange food, strange climate. If their friends can find money, I should like the return fares in case of need and some for their bedding. They are under Mirabehn’s charge.

Yours,
BAPU

Incidences of Gandhiji’s Life, p. 225

603. LETTER TO MANU GANDHI

April 8, 1935

CHI. MANUDI,

How can you say that I have stopped writing to you? Have I failed to reply to any letter of yours? How can you charge me when you yourself do not write? I got your letter today and here I am replying to it. I am glad to learn that you have passed. Instead of trying to speed up progress from form to form and save years, it would be better to try to master what you learn in every form. Write to me regularly from now on. About other things Ba or somebody else will write. I hope you yourself do not feel that you are already nineteen. Write to me frankly.

Blessings to aunties.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 2665. Courtesy: Manubehn S. Mashruwala

¹ Vide “Letter to Dr. Pattabhi Sitaramayya”, 3-4-1935
604. LETTER TO NARAHARI D. PARikh

April 8, 1935

CHI. NARAHARI,

Who told you that I intended to go there? We know nothing about the matter here. Please banish the thought from mind.

Do write and let me have your views about the dairy.

Tell Puratan that there is considerable substance in what he says. I still need to get more experience about the tannery, and I am doing so. If I live, I will certainly guide him.

I know the reason for the failure of Sabarmati.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9075

605. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

April 8, 1935

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

What else could Ansari have done? He can’t refuse anybody, rich or poor. He was once visited by a woman out to rob him, and he emptied his purse into the fold of her sari. It will, therefore, be a mercy to him to free him.

Personally I am all in favour of the policy of doing silently what we can and saying nothing to or begging nothing from the Government.

Let them plunder Ras. We will get back every inch of the land. When to have me there is entirely in your hands. But please do not take me out in a procession. You may, if you wish, have me at Borsad.

I hope you will not have a relapse.

Mani tells me in her letter that the nose has been giving trouble. Is that true?

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, p. 162
606. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

April 8, 1935

DEAR BIBI,

You should get yourself examined by the doctor for your brother’s satisfaction if for nothing else. It is rather difficult to say how long I shall remain at Wardha. If you follow my instructions to the letter, I shall rid you of pleurisy and the weakness of the heart. What is the alternative if the committee does not permit a structure of sun-dried bricks?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Urdu: G.N. 323

607. NOTE TO SUMANGAL PRAKASH

April 8, 1935

First read this.¹ I have not revised it. If there is anything you want to ask me you may. You make the corrections in the language on this itself. I shall then see it and a copy can be made out. If you find any looseness of thought you should make a note of it. It will be convenient for both of us.

From the Hindi original: Sumangal Prakash Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

608. NOTE TO SUMANGAL PRAKASH

April 8, 1935

Do not spend so much money.² With fresh milk and curd you do not need so many oranges. Tamarind can be a substitute for oranges. Tamarind, raw vegetables, papaw and tomatoes are enough.

From the Hindi original Sumangal Prakash Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

¹ Draft of speech for the Hindi Sahitya Sammelan of which Gandhiji was the President and which was to be held on April 20 and 23. For the text of the speech, vide “Speech at Hindi Sanhita Sammelan Indoe”.

² The addressee had said that he had been taking a dozen oranges a day and pointed out that the price of oranges had gone up.
609. DISCUSSION WITH J. P. BHANSALI

[April 8, 1935]

GANDHII: Does this diet suit you?

BHANSALI: Quite.

G. Perhaps the neem leaves are a great help?

B. Undoubtedly. In winter I have to drop them, as these limbs have a rheumatic tendency.

G. Don’t you find the leaves too bitter?

B. Well, there are varieties even among neem trees, and while some leaves are very bitter, some are not. The palate gets accustomed to this diet, so much so that it relishes it. There again crops up the question of the control of the palate!

G. And where do you sleep? You have nothing to spread or cover yourself with.

B. Just where I chance to be, and have just what I chance to get.

G. You won’t mind a mattress and a bedsheets and a wrap?

B. No. But I have slept often under the trees, often on bare earth and under the open sky, and often on the burning-ground.

G. Ever troubled by dangerous reptiles or animals?

B. Hardly ever. I was once stung by a scorpion, but it was no more than an insect bite. Snakes I have come across and once a leopard, but none of them meant any harm and there was no fear in me.

G. Any queer experiences on the burning-ground?

B. I must own that there is a species of disembodied beings, but one need not believe in them. I have met them, and that is the fear that sometimes lurks in me. But soon I pull myself together.

G. Do you have to speak, if only to beg for your flour?

B. No.

G. Do you manage to get it always?

B. No. I have often had to go without any food. Once for three days

1 Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter”. Gandhiji had many rounds of talks with Bhansali, an old co-worker and member of the Ashram. He had been silent for three years and wanted to break his silence only to talk to Gandhiji. He had walked for months, barefoot and bare-bodied, to see Gandhiji at Wardha. His diet consisted of corn flour with water and neem leaves.

2 From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. This source however mentions only one date, while Gandhiji had at least three interviews with Bhansali.
running I had no food. Whilst some would willingly feed me, some have doubted my bonafides, some have taken me to be a cheat, and some a member of the C.I.D.

G. Do you think of any of your old friends or relations that were once a source of worry to you?

B. Never. All memory is gone.

G. Does the grinding poverty of the villagers oppress you?

B. Rather. That reminds me of all you have written about it. I think of some of the most heart-moving of your writings like “Death Dance” in Young India, and feel that the “Death Dance” is going on, more relentlessly if possible, and feel that I have no right even to the handfuls of flour I eat. I am glad that I do not rob them any more, and the living presence of Death in the burial ground is somewhat of a consolation.

G. Then, you will some day come back to me and yet fulfil my cherished dream about you? Won’t you?

B. I wish I could say it. I do not know. God alone knows. Maybe there is a lingering chance.

G. What do you think of the whole day?

B. I have my mantras which I constantly repeat. Nothing disturbs me, nothing worries me

G. Then all fear is gone?

B. Indeed. I swim in the ocean of peace. All that is due to you. You taught me all this. I have forgotten most of my past but not the discourses on the Gita you used to give us, nor your discourses on Pilgrim’s Progress. Undisturbed peace is my privilege. Sleep practically untroubled by dreams. I have been often held up to ridicule and contempt. I have rejoiced in it and often craved for it. All I now want is the extinction of even that craving. Why should I rejoice over ridicule if I do not rejoice over praise? Undisturbed equanimity I want—that equability to praise and blame and heat and cold. I wish, if I could, not to delight even in travail. But what a dandy I used to be, Bapu! Oh, the days of my dandyism! It is the mind that makes a heaven of hell and hell of heaven. There is no end to my peace now, and yet what a dandy I used to be once!

With this he laughed a hearty laugh.

G. Where do you sit all day?

B. Downstairs, in the room. Friends come and go. I am perfectly untroubled and peaceful. I do not even know who comes and goes.

G. That is real victory.

Harijan, 13-4-1935
610. LETTER TO KHURSHEDBEHN

April 9, 1935

I am wide awake even when I am asleep. My sleep is not a forgetting, it is a renovating.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

611. LETTER TO BAL KALELKR

April 9, 1935

Like you, I, too, am preparing for an examination. You will appear for your examination without leaving that place, and will have only three or four examiners to satisfy. But I shall have to go as far as Indore for my examination, and as for the number of examiners, the very thought of it frightens me . . . Let us see what happens.

Has not Kaka also to appear for an examination? That means that all three of us are busy.

[From Gujarati]

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary: Courtesy: Narayan Desai

612. FRAGMENT OF LETTER TO HARJIVAN KOTAK

April, 9, 1935

What must be the plight of a bachelor or a widower? Should not there be somebody at any rate whom God would look after? I am certainly trying to persuade Sharda, but I cannot bear to see you so helpless as to feel completely lost without her.

[From Gujarati]

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

613. LETTER TO MADAN MOHAN MALAVIYA.

April 9, 1935

Bhai Saheb,

Your telegram relieved me of my anxiety. You have resolved to live to a hundred. In order to do that you will have to make an effort to protect the body.
I am setting out to draft the speech for the Hindi Sahitya Sammelan. Before I do that I must ask your blessings. I shall be greatly encouraged if I can receive them before I leave here on the 19th.

The presidentship was to be yours but your refusal has thrown the burden on me which only your blessings can lighten.

Your younger brother,

MHOHANDAS

[From Hindi]

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

614. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

WARDHA,

April 10, 1935

CHI. JAMNALAL,

I got your letter. What you have done seems perfectly all right. By all means go and stay for some time in that part. I will talk to Janakidevi about the engagement.

When Chandrakant’s father writes to me, I will do what is necessary. I hope your car does not give you any trouble.

This is enough for now.

Blessings to Kamala.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2962

615. LETTER TO JIVANJI D. DESAI

April 10, 1935

BHAI JIVANJI,

I finished Yeravda Mandir ten days ago. I hope to finish Gandhi Vichar Dohan tomorrow. The remaining things I think I shall be able to finish when I take a vow of silence next time. But I shall see. I have not enjoyed a minute’s leisure during the present period of silence.

Read the accompanying letter. Wherever Mohanlal is, you may send him if you wish to. Do what is necessary and inform me. Do you want Yeravda Mandir immediately?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9939. Also C.W. 6914. Courtesy: Jivanji D. Desai

616. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

April 10, 1935

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

Your leaflets are becoming more trenchant. The dark cell has been vividly described. There are a great many such cells. We are being punished for them. What you have been doing is the only real work.

A letter from Dev Sharma is enclosed. I have received what I expected from him. I hope you are gaining strength.

The mahuda¹ experiment is good. Let me know the results.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbaine. p. 163

617. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

April 10, 1935

BHAI GHANSHYAMDAS,

Yes, Thakkar Bapa had written to me. The nature of work is such. I enclose Paul’s letter. I have desisted on his suggestion. Rajaji too was not in favour of a public agitation. I shall await a further communication from Paul.

The sea is very rough in the first week of June. Could you not leave a little earlier? Schuster’s letter is good. The man had meant to do a great deal but could achieve nothing. Their present policy does not show a trace of courtesy. They have no regard for public opinion;

¹ The addressee had taken to eating a few mahuda flowers each morning.
they rely solely on their armed might.

Blessings from
BAPU

From Hindi: C.W. 8008. Courtesy: G. D. Birla

618. LETTER TO SAMPURNANAND

WARDHA,
April 10, 1935

DEAR SAMPURNANAND,

I have your letter. My memory has become weak, but I do seem to recollect that each of the provinces was given its rightful share.¹ If not, the matter should be looked into. Has this happened in every case? If injustice has been done and if I can do something about it, I shall certainly do so.

SHRI SAMPURNANANDJI
JALIP DEVI
KASHI
BANARAS (U. P.)

From the Hindi original: Sampurnanand Papers. Courtesy: National Archives of India

619. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

WARDHA,
April 11, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

If you have difficulty in getting slivers from Adampur, or if what you get is not good enough, please do not hesitate to fall back upon me. I can ensure you a regular supply of good slivers.

You need not worry about Watt’s 16 volumes. I have already got the abridgment which will serve the purpose. I had an offer from Calcutta to buy me the whole set. I have stopped the purchase. So for the time being it will be enough for you to be able to procure for me the other books.

¹ The addressee had complained that under the new constitution of the Congress, U. P. had been given inadequate representation in the A I. C. C.; for the October 1934 resolution of the Congress embodying the amended constitution.

When you come in July I undertake to return you a good carder. It is no strain to work the bow.

If I do go to Europe again, I would love to have you with me. But just now there is little possibility of my going out of India. My heart is in the village work just now.

Love to you both.

BAPU

[PS.]

Of course we gratefully take what help comes to us from friends like Agatha.

From the original: C.W. 3528. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6337

620. LETTER TO ANAND T. HINGORANI

April 11, 1935

MY DEAR ANAND,

Strange! I wrote' to J. yesterday inquiring about you. Today I have your letter. I understand the situation. You must get out of Father’s house without bitterness or reproach. Mother you cannot help. Your interference can only make matters worse. If she would leave his roof, you can take her in. Your maintenance will be all right. Payment from me can be returned. You need not enter [into his] private life. Vidya should get well at once. Write to me when you have taken up separate abode. Let Jairamdas share this with you and write to me. Love to you both.

BAPU

SHRI ANAND T. HINGORANI
D/3 COSMOPOLITAN COLONY
KARACHI

From a microfilm. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

1 The letter is not traceable.
621. LETTER TO BHUJANGILAL CHHAYA

April 11, 1935

CHI. BHUJANGILAL,

Your letter was transparently sincere. When perfect ahimsa has grown in you your path will be quite clear before you. Just now I personally feel that it would be better for you to devote your time to your studies and finish them.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 24217

622. LETTER TO JIVANJI D. DESAI

April 11, 1935

I went through more than one-fourth of this line by line. Afterwards, being short of time, I looked at only the portions marked by you.

I see that the pains you have taken over this leave nothing to be desired.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9940. Also C.W. 6915. Courtesy: Jivanji D. Desai

623. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

April 11, 1935

CHI. VASUMATI,

Even before I got your letter, I had heard that you had joined in the work of cleaning. I am glad. Ba returned long ago and is now thinking of going to Delhi where Tara has fallen ill.

Blessings to all from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9398. Also C.W. 644. Courtesy: Vasumati Pandit
624. LETTER TO BENARSIDAS CHATURVEDI
April 11, 1935

BHAI BENARSIDAS,

I have your letter. It has not hurt me. A man should do only what he can. I would advise you first to get married and then to devote yourself to the task of popularizing Hindi. You will be able to accomplish three purposes in this way: Vishal Bharat, propagation of Hindi and writing.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 2555

625. LETTER TO CHAND TYAGI
April 11, 1935

BHAI CHAND TYAGI,

Your letter is frightening.\(^1\) I have sent it on to Jyotiprasadji. You will know how to deal with him, only be firm.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 6632. Also C.W. 4280. Courtesy: Chand Tyagi

626. LETTER TO MANZAR ALI SOKHTA
April 12, 1935

MY DEAR MANZAR ALI,

Did you not teach me that ‘Sokhta’ means burnt? Not until you have burnt your ‘I’ into ‘O’ will you achieve success. You say you want funds. What for? Not for cleaning your neighbours’ streets and everything else, nor for pounding his and your paddy and wheat. You do not need funds; you need to sweat and produce wealth out of waste.

Yours,
BAPU

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

\(^1\) The corresponding word in the source is not quite legible.
CHI. HARILAL,

I have been wanting to write to you all these days, but for one thing and another I never got the time. I have snatched a little time somehow today.

Mahadev had had a little talk with me. Kishorelal wrote and acquainted me with the matter.

I understand your problem. You don’t wish to deceive yourself or me. You still crave for sex pleasure. If so, you must satisfy your craving. You can suppress it only when you feel a strong aversion to worldly pleasures.

My difficulty is this. How can I, who have always advocated renunciation of sex, encourage you to gratify it? How can I help you to do so? I can tolerate your remarrying. But how can you carry on your search for a wife while staying with me? If I invited you to come and stay with me, even though I knew your desire to remarry, I did so not with the intention of helping you to get married but with the hope that your staying with me might help your mind to calm down. Besides, I also wanted to understand your change of heart.

I do wish to help you as much as I can. But wouldn’t you on your part that I did so only within my limits? Think over this and write frankly to me now. You may say whatever you wish to. Are your efforts to give up smoking nearing success, or do you think you will never be able to give it up?

Do not employ Mirabehn’s labourers in cleaning those buildings or washing the baths. Clean whatever you can with your own hands. I am not happy about the labourers being employed even in the orchard. I tolerate that being done because of my helplessness.

Avadhesh has informed me of his final decision not to accept the sum of Rs. 15. I felt that day that you were unnecessarily hurting him. He had already yielded. Where was the need, then, to go on lecturing?

_Blessings from_

_BAPU_

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 1538. Courtesy: Manubehn S. Mashruwala

414 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
628. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

WARDHA,
April 12, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

I send herewith a copy of Ramanlal’s report. If you can go to Sabarmati for two or three days and inspect the accounts, I would feel easy in my mind and also know what I should do. Is Titus inefficient or dishonest, or is Ramanlal’s letter without basis?

Attend to this immediately if you can.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8438. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

629. LETTER TO VITHAL L. PHADKE

April 12, 1935

CHI. MAMA,

I have written to Parikshitlal, but have received no reply so far. I am sure that the leaf-plates made by you must be excellent. Show me a specimen some time. About bhaji, what you say is correct.

You certainly need not select a village in a hurry, but you should not delay through lethargy, either.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3830

630. LETTER TO AVADHESH DUTT AVASTHI

April 12, 1935

CHI. AVDHESH,

Your letter is good. So be it. You will not be on a salary but I shall give you the fare when you happen to leave. Rid yourself of anger and acquire humility. No one is high or low here, all are alike. There is no master and no servant. We are all servant. We are not ashamed to do any kind of work.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 3210
631. INTERVIEW TO LORD FARINGDON

[Before April 13, 1935]

LORD FARINGDON: What is the real object of the Village Industries Association?

GANDHIJI: To show the people how to turn waste into wealth.

L. F. How do you propose to achieve it?

G. By having an army of self-effacing workers who will show the people how they can avoid slow starvation. There is no other constructive programme before the people.

L. F. You should need a very large number of workers. And how would you be able to get them?

G. If the moment has come, we shall find the workers.

L. F. How do you propose to tackle the problem of rural indebtedness?

G. That we are not dealing with. It requires State effort. I am just now discovering things people can do without State aid. Not that I do not want State aid. But I know I cannot get it on my terms.

Lord Faringdon was anxious to get Gandhiji’s views on the communal question. How was it to be solved?

G. That has just now become insoluble. I fear that time alone can solve it. If I can persuade the Hindus to give a blank card to the Muslims, the solution can be had today. But there is too much mutual distrust to admit of any such heroic solution in the immediate future.

Harijan, 13-4-1935

632. NO DISAPPOINTMENT

Sjt. Har Dayal Nag, probably the oldest leader at work in all India, writes:

I feel disappointed to notice want of sufficient rally round you in the work of your All-India Village Industries Association. . . . I have been studying the economic aspect of the problem of village industries since the beginning of my public life. Your programme does not enthuse me much simply because I miss in it that economic aspect. . . .

1 Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Notes”. Since Gandhiji was observing silence he gave his answers in writing.

2 Only extracts are reproduced here.
Imagine for a while that India is flooded with cottage-made goods; but manufacture of goods without consumers or purchasers is nothing but a loss. The hand-loom can produce khaddar but it cannot produce its buyer. My painful experience is that many of those who spin do not wear any cloth made out of their self-spun. . . . The gur producer may taste a bit of it for the sake of lip loyalty to the country, but will he mix it with his tea or milk? Will the owner of a village shoe factory use rough shoes of his own factory in preference to fine pleasurable cheap imported shoes? . . . The Indian cottagers will never eschew foreign goods unless and until they are taught to learn that no foreign goods can be cheaper than the goods which they can produce with their own raw materials and spare labour and for their own use. . . .

Har Dayalbabu has earned his rest, and no one will complain if he retires from all public work. But like his three competitors, Pandit Malaviyaji, Abbas Tyabji and Vijayaraghavachariar, he insists on working. He can, therefore, expect no indulgence from critics on the ground of age. I know he wants none. His body and his intellect remain unimpaired and are ever at the disposal of the nation.

Let me then tell him that those who are actually working have no sense of disappointment. The ground is so new that it takes long to prepare. The workers are not able to cope with what they have on their hands.

I suggest then that Har Dayalbabu has the sense of disappointment for the very reason he has given. He pleads guilty to the charge of neglect of duty. If he had, as is his wont, taken up the work, he would no doubt have found it very difficult but he would certainly not have been disappointed. He misses the economic aspect because he has not worked to see it.

Having been immersed in Harijan work, I discovered that if India was not to perish, we had to begin with the lowest rung of the ladder. If that was rotten, all work done at the top or at the intermediate rungs was bound ultimately to fail.

There is more than the economic aspect in the programme before the country. To provide nourishing food for the nation in the manner sketched in the programme is to give it both money and health. For the villagers to pound their own rice and eat it unpolished whole, means saving at least thirty crores of rupees per year and promoting health. But the tragedy of it is that we have no such thing as unpolished whole rice to be had in the ordinary bazaar. And the Association has to wait some days before it can give a clear lead to the nation. The nation requires education as to the food to be taken and the manner in which it has to be prepared.

This is no programme of preparing shoddy goods in the villages and forcing them on unwilling buyers. There is to be no competition, foredoomed to failure, with foreign or swadeshi corresponding articles. The villagers are to be their own buyers. They will primarily consume what they produce. For they are ninety per cent of the population. They will manufacture for the cities what the latter want and what they can usefully manufacture. Most undoubtedly people will be advised to use gur for their milk and tea. They will be told, as they are being told, that it is a superstition to think that gur taken in milk or tea is injurious to health. One correspondent says that on his wife beginning to take gur with her tea instead of sugar she lost her constipation. I am not surprised, because gur has a mild laxative effect which sugar certainly has not. The middle-class people have exploited the villages. Some of them are now making reparation by making them realize their dignity and importance in the national evolution.

Then take the question of sanitation. Proper attention to it gives the country two rupees per year per head. That means sixty crores of rupees per annum in addition to better health and greater efficiency.

The present programme is the foundation of an all-round improvement in the tottering condition of the seven lacs of India’s villages. It is work that is long overdue. It has to be done, no matter what India’s political condition is. It includes every class of villagers from the scavenger to the sowcar. It is work in which all parties can whole-heartedly join. Its future is assured if a supply of workers can be assured.

_Harijan_, 13-4-1935

633. HARIJANS AND PIGS

Seth Achalsingh of Agra wrote to me two months ago a letter describing a scene he had witnessed for the first time in his life. He had seen pigs, with their mouths gagged, being roasted alive by Harijans. I was horrified by the description. But I know that pigs are used as food by Sikhs, and also by thousands of Hindus in Andhra Desha. It is possible that pig-flesh is eaten in the other parts of India by non-Harijans. The only thing that can be said with certainty is that, apart from vegetarians, Mussalmans alone never eat pig’s flesh.
Co-workers in Wardha, who have been eyewitnesses, tell me that humaner people suffocate pigs to death and immediately proceed to roast them whole. Those who are devoid altogether of the humane instinct roast them alive. A party, armed with powerful lathis, surrounds the fire to which the poor animal is consigned, and hits him with lathis as, writhing in pain, he is trying to run out of the burning fire. Here is the reply received from Sjt. Bapineedu to whom I referred for information as to the practice in Andhra.

“In killing pigs, various methods are adopted in various places of Andhra, but all the methods are extremely cruel. They are as follows:

1. A pig is caught, and its legs are tied fast with a long rope. Then another cord is tied very tightly round its mouth above the nostrils. This disables the animal from breathing, and it dies after some time due to asphyxiation. This method is most common.

2. As stated in the former paragraph the animal’s legs are tied fast, and, instead of tying another cord round its mouth, it is submerged in water, and allowed to die of drowning.

3. A third method is to tie its legs, and to pierce it with a spear and hold it thus till it dies. The pig, being a very sturdy animal, does not die easily, and suffers for a long time.

4. Another method is that its forelegs and hind legs are tied separately and two persons hold them tightly after laying the pig upside down. A third man then beats it to death by dealing blows on its chest. The animal suffers much more terribly in this case than in the previous cases.

I am also informed that nowadays some people shoot it with a gun, but it is very rare.

Harijans eat pork rather rarely on account of its being dear. But it is an indispensable item on the menu on festive occasions. In some places, Harijans purchase them at a very young age, and rear them till they are fit to be slaughtered. Then the whole village combines itself, and purchases the animal from the owner. After it is killed, it is shared among the whole village, its cost being borne by them equally.”

Sjt. Bapineedu supplements his letter with an American bulletin entitled “We can kill a hog”. I had to perform the painful task of reading the bulletin containing for me the most repelling description of how pigs are killed for meat. There is not much to choose in the methods described above. If one is to consider the degrees of cruelty, the pig seems to require the most cruelty before it can be killed. My purpose in writing this is to show that Harijans are the least offenders in this matter, not, I admit, from choice but from sheer necessity. The question raised by Seth Achalsingh therefore resolves itself into one not of Harijan reform but of broad humanitarian reform. We must not take up any stick that comes our way to beat the poor Harijan with.

But the reform is not the less urgent because it does not specially concern Harijans. If our sense of right and wrong had not become blunt, we would recognize that animals had rights, no less than men. This education of the heart is the proper function of humanitarian leagues. I know that the lower creation groans under the arrogant lordship of man. He counts no cruelty too repulsive when he wants to satisfy his appetite, whether lawful or unlawful.

_Harijan_, 13-4-1935

634. NOTES

FULL REPENTANCE

Some time ago I referred in these columns to the case of a young man from Bahraich who was living on public charity. As has already been stated, he returned to me fully repentant. He is still at Maganwadi regularly working with us and doing his share of physical labour. He will soon earn his fare for going to Bahraich. But having found himself in Maganwadi, he does not want to leave as soon as he has earned his fare. He proposes to learn something and benefit by his stay in our midst. His friends in Bahraich have been pained over the criticism of his conduct. Avadhesh, for that is the young man’s name, admits the justness of my criticism though he says in extenuation that he had no guilty conscience when he was travelling and living on charity as, he says, is the custom among Ramanujis. But now that he has discovered his error, he promises never to repeat it. He has thus turned the error to good account and purged himself of any stigma that might have been brought on him by my criticism. It is to be wished that many others, who like Avadhesh are living on charity, will profit by his example and like him turn over a new leaf of the book of life. To err is human; it is noble after discovery to correct the error and determine never to repeat it.

A RESULT OF UNTOUCHABILITY

The readers of _Harijan_ are familiar with the story of the persecutions of Harijans by Nattars in Kairaikudi. Now comes a similar story from Rajputana. Khudi is a little village attached to Sikar, an understate to Jaipur. The letters that have come to me allege that on 28th March last a horde of Rajputs surrounded a marriage party of Jats and delivered a terrible lathi charge on the defenceless Jats for their effrontery in taking the bridegroom in procession on horseback. The custom in this part of the world seems to have been that the Jats should not on ceremonial occasions make use of elephants or horses. It was believed that the matter was adjusted between the rival parties and that the Jats could make use of these animals for riding on any occasion. But events seem to have shown that whosoever made the pact could not compel its observance by the Rajputs as a whole. It is said that the charge was preceded by the premeditated murder of a Jat. Over 40 persons are reported to have been seriously injured during the charge, one of the victims having succumbed to the injuries.

1 _Vide “Notes”, 1-3-1935, sub-title “A Shame”_

Let us hope that the State authorities will carry on full investigation into the matter and afford due protection to the poor Jats in the exercise of rights common to all humanity.

What concerns us here is the fact that this senseless persecution is a direct result of untouchability—the belief that God has created beings of whom some are superior to others, so much so that in the extreme limit the inferior beings become untouchable or even unseeable. The alleged persecution of the Jats of Khudi is a species of untouchability different only in degree from the form familiar to the readers of Harijan. If we succeed in dealing with the extreme form, the rest will certainly disappear. It is therefore necessary to deal with the fiend in a summary and most expeditious manner.

A REWARD OF SERVICE

A worker of Darbhanga writes:

During the Holi holidays I went to my village. Finding the streets very dirty, I thought I would clean them, and accordingly I invited the young men to turn the holiday to good account by helping me to clean up the dirt. About thirty of them responded. Shovels in hand we worked for four hours, gathered the dirt and buried it in a pit. We thought we had done a good day’s work. Not so thought the village elders. They thought that we had degraded ourselves by becoming scavengers—untouchables of the worst type. So they met and pronounced an order of excommunication against all who had done the work. I am glad to say that the young men are not frightened.
This worker and his young helpers deserve warm congratulations for their very meritorious service. The order of excommunication shows with what ignorance reformers have to deal. The only way to bear down the opposition is on the one hand not to resent persecution and on the other to persevere in the service regardless of personal consequences. Workers may be sure that if they preserve their equanimity and continue the service, those who are cursing them today will be blessing them tomorrow when they realize what a precious and noble service scavenging is. It will presently come to be regarded as a service of the highest order.

ABOUT NIGHT-SOIL PITS

A correspondent asks:

1. What is the length of time that should lapse before a pit one-foot deep could be dug in the same place for a second time, for evacuation?

2. Usually fields are ploughed immediately after paddy is sown. If night-soil is buried in the fields about a week prior to sowing, will it not come up to the surface when the field is ploughed and thus contaminate the feet of the workmen and of the bulls?

(1) When superficial burial takes place, according to Poore’s formula, seeds may be safely sown after a fortnight’s at the most. The same soil will used for further burial after a year’s use.

(2) The question of soiling the feet, whether of human beings or of cattle can never arise, as nothing can or should be sown without the night-soil being turned into good sweet-smelling manure, which one handles freely without any hesitation.

Harijan, 13-4-1935

635. SILENT WORK

Sjt. Jayaramdas, an old Ashram inmate from Ceylon, through whom I have endeavoured to keep myself somewhat in touch with the recent outbreak of virulent malaria in Ceylon, writes:

I am glad to be able to state that the epidemic is now on the wane and we have closed 6 out of the 11 convalescent homes.

The following number of patients have been attended to by us without a single casualty.

1 Only extracts are reproduced here.

2 The table is not reproduced. 1896 patients were admitted, 1729 were cured and released 167 were still under treatment.
The number of volunteers now working is 85 composed of 21 Bhikkus and 64 laymen; besides we have 12 Bhikkus and 78 laymen as helpers.

Appeals for help were received by me from Ceylon. I had made such inquiries as I could. There is a large Tamilian settlement in Ceylon. Such aid as was possible was being given by it. Most of the relief measures were in the hands of the Government of Ceylon. But the poverty of the people and their ignorance of the first principles of hygiene rendered effective aid impossible. Some voluntary aid was organized by workers like Sjt. Jayaramdas. The greatest good that the severe outbreak of malaria did was to discover the Bhikkus of Ceylon. ‘They toil not, neither do they spin.’ They do a little bit of teaching. If they wished, they could, by serving society in a tangible way, rid the beautiful Island of want and disease and restore the beauty with which Nature has endowed it and which man has ravished. It should be the duty and the privilege of the Bhikkus to carry the message of goddess Hygeia to every cottage of Ceylon. It is criminal to go off to sleep when disease in its virulent form abates and to wake up when it revives. Real service consists in devising measures that would make a recurrence impossible.

An object lesson is being taught us by Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel who has just now buried himself in Borsad where plague has broken out. Assisted by Dr. Bhasker Patel and a band of volunteers, he is giving medical aid to those in need. But his enduring work consists in doing scavenging work. One by one, he is cleaning, the infected villages; he is bringing people out of their dark houses and inducing them to live in the open, in their fields, while he is opening out roofs and letting in light, sunshine and air, removing debris, clearing out filth, disinfecting insanitary places and destroying vermin. He is flooding the villagers with crisply written leaflets giving them instruction in preventive measures. He has made no appeal for funds or volunteers. Volunteers have been recruited locally. All villages are not plague-infected. And if the spirit of help cannot be locally roused, it is a moot question whether one should not wait till it is. It is possible to bring from a distance experts who would teach. But workers should surely be coming from walking distances. And so should funds from near neighbours. It is good for Bombay and such big places to keep their purses open for all causes that do not admit of local relief, but it is equally necessary for afflicted people to learn the lesson of self-help.

_Harijan_, 13-4 1935

636. LETTER TO K. M. MUNSHI

April 13, 1935

BHAI MUNSHI,

I have your letter. I will start from here on the 19th evening. It will be more convenient for you to go directly to Indore. The train from here is inconvenient. We have to change at Khandwa for the train to Indore. It is possible we shall run into each other there. I shall reach Indore on the 20th morning. You may do what is convenient to you.

I have been daily reading a few pages from your history. If I read the _Gita_ or the _Ramayana_ with the same perseverance, wouldn’t my life be blessed?

Rajaji is extremely tired. He has been after me for two months. Let him have rest. And it is certainly not as if his help would not be available whenever needed.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From Gujarati: C.W. 7571. Courtesy: K. M. Munshi

637. LETTER TO RAMDAS GANDHI

WARDHA
April 13, 1935

CHI. RAMDAS

I have received your note. Let me know when the thing is fixed up. I will be leaving for Indore on the 19th instant’ and return at the latest on the 25th. The silence’ will end not on the 14th morning but after the morning prayer on the 19th. It is not at all certain that I will

1. To preside over the Hindi Sahitya Sammelan
2. The four-week silence was started by Gandhiji on 22nd March.
go to Gujarat. Even if I go, it will only be to Borsad. And that too, will depend on Sardar’s wishes. Devdas’s Tara has got whooping cough. And so, Ba may perhaps have to go to Delhi. Jamnalalji is at Almora. Janakibehn and Madalasa have gone there.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Mrs. Sumitra Kulkarni Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

638. LETTER TO L. N. GUBIL SUNDARESAN

WARDHA,
April 14, 1935

I do not know anyone who can be spared from India. I do not know if any of the ardent Congressmen can suggest a solution to this difficulty. But I sincerely feel that unless we are able to find out an Indian fit enough to discharge the duties of a representative, we and the Americans cannot understand each other so well as we ought to.

The Hindu, 17-4-1935

639. LETTER TO AVADHESH DUTT AVASTHI

April 14, 1935

CHI. AVADHESH,

There was nothing in it. By all means jot down whatever thoughts occur to you. How well are you acquainted with the Rama-yana?

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 3211

1 Vallabhbhai Patel
2 Jamnalal Bajaj’s wife and daughter respectively
3 Sundaresan had written to Gandhiji about a suggestion of John Haynes Holmes that some special representative should be sent to America “to keep India before the American people”.
640. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

April 14, 1935

DEAR DAUGHTER,

Why can we not address the daughter as Bibi? Why should you worry about repaying Devdas? You have no need now to purchase the ticket for the Sammelan. We shall see on my arrival there. More on meeting.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Urdu: G.N. 324

641. LETTER TO PURUSHOTTAMDAS THAKURDAS

April 15, 1935

BHAISHRI PURUSHOTTAMDAS.

Then you yourself or some institution of experts should take the first step. The series should appear in the Press not anonymously but in the form of responsible, authentic and signed articles which could be easily understood by the layman. There should also be a secretary who may compile the views of different institutions and get signatures on them.

My right hand is tired and I am writing this at 4 in the morning, so I am writing this with left hand. I hope you will have no difficulty in reading it.

Vandemataram from

MOHANDAS

[From Gujarati]

Purushottamdas Thakurdas Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

1 The addressee had reached Indore at this time.
642. NOTE TO SUMANGAL PRAKASH

April 15, 1935

The idea behind giving you tamarind today is to make vegetable palatable. In the end you must find the leaves tasty as Mirabehn does and as many I think do. Although I have consulted physicians regarding tamarind, people take me to task for it. My experience is that I can take four large spoonfuls of it. So far no adverse effect has been seen. But it is yet too early to say anything. Bhau is none too well. Tamarind could be the cause.

From the Hindi original: Sumangal Prakash Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

643. LETTER TO MANILAL AND SUSHILA GANDHI

April 15, 1935

CHI. MANILAL AND SUSHILA.

The right hand is aching, but there is no time now to write with the left. I got the letters of you both. Don’t expect Ramdas now. Do the best you can and go ahead. Kishorelal has gone on a tour of Poona and other places. Tara has got whooping cough, which is likely to be quite prolonged.

Harilal is still with me. He wants to marry again. Let us see what happens. Ramdas is trying hard for something in Bombay, but has found nothing suitable as yet. Kanti is with me of course.

I am in fine health, and so is Ba.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4836
644. LETTER TO SURAJMAL JAIN

April 15, 1935

BHAI SURAJMALJI,

I have not been able to decide upon the number of people who will accompany me because the number of aspirants is always high. Anyway, they will not require any special arrangements, the food should be the simplest. No need to send for anything from outside. Whatever is available in Indore will do for everybody. My entourage probably will consist of twenty-five. Send me a wire if the number seems too large. Yes, advocate Munshi and his wife might be with me and Acharya Dhruva will reach on Monday. Some preparations might be necessary for them.

As regards the purse, I will not take anything from the one lac, but if an extra few thousands are collected over and above that, it will be a different matter.

One motor-car will suffice.

Yours,

M. K. GANDHI

[From Hindi]

Veena, Tributes Issue, April-May 1969

645. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

WARDHA,
April 16, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

I have two letters to acknowledge.

Your circular is good. It is weak on sanitation. No refuse need be burnt. It is like burning a currency note. Shummy can tell you what I mean. When you come here in July, you will know much more about this. K. has gone to Andhra. He returns next week.

Fancy Shummy having an ache. ‘Physician, heal thyself.’

Your yarn has come in. It is quite good for a beginner. I could not do as much in the time you have done. But then I am more stupid

1 Secretary, Managing Committee of the Hindi Sahitya Sammelan

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
than the average learner.

Please tell Miss Reynolds that the 2 guineas will be used for the benefit of Harijan girls—the most neglected of Indian humanity and that too where starvation is great just now.

Of course you will write what you like to Agatha. I know what you are going to write. But this perhaps you do not know that our Chairman and Secretary are among the most competent accountants in India. The accounts are public property.

Yes, Agatha has brought us so close to each other. It is a matter of sorrow to me that I cannot give her the satisfaction she wants in the shape of sending a man like Rajaji to England. She does not realize that it is all one man’s show. Sir S. does not want to placate the Congress at all. He is riding for a fall. He does not know what terrorism is being employed in order to enforce his will. If non-violence is the remedy, as it is, against this evil, we must have patience and all will be well. I wish you could let Agatha see why nobody can be usefully sent just now.

I am sending you some slivers. You will tell me how they work.

You ought to get hold of a boy or a girl who would learn these processes and then teach others. I could soon train anyone you may send.

I have overtaken the arrears of correspondence. I am enjoying my silence and dread having to break it on Friday. Arrears will pile up in no time.

You have captivated the Ashram girls. They often inquire about you.

Love.

BAPU

[PS.]

R.’s letter herewith.

From the original: C.W. 3529. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6338
646. LETTER TO G. M. THAWRE

April 16, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I am sorry I cannot visit the fair. You should persuade the Harijans not to pay a single pice to the Pandas. Your complaint about temples is just but they cannot be opened by compulsion. The act of persuasion is being tried. You can depend upon it that there can be no rest without the temples being opened.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

The Hitavada, 21-4-1935

647. LETTER TO BULAKHIDAS

April 16, 1935

BHAI BULAKHIDAS,

I have no plans to go to that side in the near future. If I was going, I would certainly meet you. With perseverance, the Bhavsars can revive many of the old dyes.

MOHANDAS GANDHI

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3140

648. LETTER TO VALJI G. DESAI

April 16, 1935

CHI. VALJI,

Which is the right place for a gold dagger, the waistband or the stomach? Is it proper that Magan Kutir should be a haunt of snakes, with white-ants eating holes in the walls and pigeons building nests inside, or should it rather be inhabited by living human beings? Having gifted away the whole place for Harijan work, is it proper for you to retain such attachment as you do? Only such people as can fit into our discipline are likely to come.

The article about bees was duly received. Just now Jaykaran’s

---

1 The addressee was Assistant General Secretary, All-India Depressed Classes Association, Nagpur, and had complained about Harijans having been unjustly treated at a fair in the Bhandara District.
series is being published.¹

I suggest that you yourself should write something about cow-protection. I will turn it to some account

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 7472. Courtesy: Valji G. Desai

649. _LETTER TO PRABHUDAS GANDHI_

WARDHA,
_April 16, 1935_

CHI. PRABHUDAS,

You should make it a rule always to write your address at the top of the letter. The paper on which you have written your letter is of the finest quality. It cannot be hand-made paper. Go and see for yourself and assure yourself whether it is so or not. Let me know its price, size, etc. Who makes that paper? What daily wage does he get for the work? And similar details. I have still not received the ink-and-pen-stand. What do you do for your share of milk?

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

_SHRI PRABHUDAS GANDHI_
_GULERIA_
_BADAUN_
_U. P._

From the Gujarati original: S.N. 33049

650. _LETTER TO MAHAVIR PRASAD GUPTA_

_April 16, 1935_

BHAI MAHAVIR PRASAD,

Your counsel is good, I shall discuss it at Indore.
Being a dealer in oil you should give me your experiences

¹ Two articles of J. N. Jaykaran under the title “Bee-keeping” were published in _Harijan_ on 20-4-1935 and 27-4-1935.
regarding oil. How is it refined?

M. K. GANDHI

SHRI MAHAVIR PRASAD GUPTA
RENDI GODOWN
P. O. BINDKI
DIST. FATEHPUR

From a photostat of the Hindi: C.W. 9671. Courtesy: Mahavir Prasad Gupta

651. LETTER TO ANAND T. HINGORANI

April 17, 1935

MY DEAR ANAND,

I have your second letter. And this is second reply. You must be weak. You must stick to your work at any cost. Your maintenance will come. I am glad Vidya has gone to Multan.

Yours,

BAPU

SHRI ANAND T. HINGORANI
D/3 COSMOPOLITAN COLONY
KARACHI

From a microfilm. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

652. LETTER TO NARASINHARAO DIVATIA

WARDHA,
April 17, 1935

SUJNA BHAISHRI,

I have just heard that you are at present bed-ridden. How can you afford to be so? You have to live for many more years still and serve. Haven’t you a right to live up to a hundred at least?

You need not even reply to this letter.

Yours,

MOHANDAS GANDHI

[From Gujarati]

Narasinharaoni Rojnishi, p. 617
653. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

April 17, 1935

DEAR DAUGHTER,

I had expected that you would be with me.¹ I have no idea of the arrangements there but there are hardly any more days left. We shall soon see.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From a photostat of the Urdu: G.N. 325

654. LETTER TO JAMNA GANDHI

Silence Day [Before April 18, 1935]²

CHI. JAMNA,

I get no time at all to write letters. If Purshottam wishes to be betrothed, I have no objection at all to that being done. Why should I object even if he wants to be betrothed to a girl belonging to the _modh_ subcaste? But in that case, I will not be able to attend the wedding. I should welcome if he married a girl outside our caste. Do not effect the betrothal thinking that you would get a maid servant to help you. In this matter, we should consider only Purshottam’s own good and his own inclination.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From the Gujarati original: S.N. 33781

655. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

WARDHA,
April 18, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

Please convey my condolences to Sardar Devraj’s people. Yes, I had the privilege of meeting him. He was himself an institution.

¹ The addressee was at this time in Indore where Gandhiji was to proceed on the 19th and she might have been staying with her brother.
² _Vide_ fn 1 to the preceding item.
I return not on 27th but on 25th at the latest.
I do hope Shummy will get over his flu in good time. The slivers went to you yesterday.
Love to you both.

BAPU

SHRI RAJKUMARI AMRIT KAUR
JULLUNDUR CITY
PUNJAB

From the original: C.W. 3713. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6869

656. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

April 18, 1935

CHI. JAMNALAL,

I got both your letters. I have asked Kumarappa. No president had been appointed when we got these forms printed, but a treasurer had already been appointed. His name was printed as that was thought necessary. I in fact knew nothing about the matter. I called for and read his letter also after receiving yours. I have suggested that the new forms to be printed should be revised. The thing has no special significance.

I am glad that Kamalnayan is paying a visit to the Frontier Province. The newspapers say that he was injured, but there seems to be no truth in the report.

I understand about Kamala. It is her desire that when she leaves, I should go and see her in Bombay. Since you are there please guide me.

How is the ear? You have not answered. Thakkar Bapa has arrived today.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2963

657. LETTER TO KANU GANDHI

April 18, 1935

CHI. KANAIYA,

Once again you have been hasty in coming to a conclusion. All my work and accounts which require to be looked after are here.
There will be nobody whose luggage will have to be looked after. Who will see the daily mail? And who will keep the daily accounts? Neither of you is needed just to make additions and subtractions. I shall have hardly any luggage with me. I don’t need to take anybody just to do typing. There will be nothing at all to be typed. If, therefore, you are not very eager to accompany me, both of you should remain behind and look after the normal work here. You should plan some study and make a few tools. Some of course will have to be purchased. Do you understand?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II

658. LETTER TO PURUSHOTTAM GANDHI

April 18, 1935

CHI. PURUSHOTTAM,

I got your letter today. May you live long and may your aspirations be fulfilled. I had got your previous letter, too. I shall be satisfied if you improve your health somehow. Your plan of going to Chorwad is a good one. Can’t one serve wherever one happens to be?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II

659. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

April 18, 1935

CHI. PREMA,

Today is the last day of my silence. During this period I disposed of considerable arrears of work. I got your letter only today. What you say about your coming here is correct.

Do I force anybody to eat rice, jaggery, onions, etc.? I only point out the virtues and defects of the things people eat. I consume tamarind when eating uncooked vegetables. I soak it in water and squeeze out the nutritive elements in it. Even raw vegetables I have to get crushed before eating.

Onion occupies an important place in the diet of the village.
people. It is the one vegetable that is of inestimable value for them. While it is present in their diet, they don’t very much need ghee, etc. I, therefore, have included it in our food on an experimental basis. Those who like eat it. I have indeed revised my view about onions to this extent, that those who eat them as medicine will not find them an obstacle to the practice of brahmacharya. I have no evidence for this, however.

Teaching of lathi exercises, etc., is certainly likely to weaken the desire to cling to ahimsa. Wouldn’t they be taught as training in self-defence? But I don’t feel inclined to make a rule forbidding those who wish to teach them to do so.

I have never said that people should not use coloured khadi instead of plain khadi. If I have, it was an error.

Many things will change so completely when we get swaraj that it is difficult to say anything today with certainty about the Indian States. But in a general way it can be stated that the swaraj Government will do nothing to impede the growth of their strength.

Blacksmiths, goldsmiths, etc., are Vaishyas.

I am leaving for Indore tomorrow and will return on the 25th

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 10370. Also C.W. 6809. Courtesy: Premabehn Kantak

660. LETTER TO ANASUYABAI KALE

April 18, 1935

DEAR SISTER,

I have your very full reply for which I am obliged.

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat of the Hindi: C.W. 6901
661. A TELEGRAM

[Before April 19, 1935]1

PURSE WILL BE USED ONLY FOR HINDI PRACHAR NEVER FOR POLITICAL OR HARIJAN WORK. ACCOUNTS OPEN PUBLIC INSPECTION.

Madhy Pradesh aur Gandhiji, p. 49

662. LETTER TO KOTWAL

[Before April 19, 1935]

BHAI KOTWAL 3

Where do you plan to put me up? Will it be all right if my entourage increases in number? I would prefer to live in a hut in some village in the vicinity of Indore.

[From Hindi]
Veena, Tributes Issue, April-May 1969

663. MESSAGE TO THE BENGAL PROVINCIAL POLITICAL CONFERENCE

[On or before April 19, 1935]5

Having retired from the Congress you don’t expect me to attend the Conference. I hope, however, that you will have a successful session.

Amrita Bazar Patrika, 24-4-1935

664. LETTER TO N. VENKATA KRISHNAIYA

April 19, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

In one of my letters I pointed out the difficulty of the barter

1 The addressee is not identified in the source.
2 The telegram must have been sent before Gandhiji left for Indore, which was on April 19.
3 Member of the Managing Committee, Hindi Sahitya Sammelan
4 Held at Dinajpur
5 The report in the source is dated April 19.
system. There should be a common measure of value. As to your second point, undoubtedly there should be division of labour.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

SHRI N. VENKATA KRISHNAIYA
KHADDAR SANSTHANAM BEZWADA

From a photostat: G.N. 9242

665. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

April 19, 1935

CHI. AMALA,

I am in good condition and order. Broke silence today.
The qualifications you have described are perfect. The shy manner in which you have announced the giving up of khaddar is characteristic. You are making progress with a vengeance.
Mahadev has gone to Ajmer. He and I return on 25th.

Love.

BAPU

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

666. LETTER TO PARIKSHITLAL L. MAJMUDAR

April 19, 1935

BHAJ PARIKSHITLAL,

I got your letter. I have asked for your opinion about Haribhai. What is your wish? I didn’t approve of his having spent so much. All the same, your opinion will help me to come to a decision.
Now about the Udyoga Mandir money. I don’t remember anything about the matter. Write to Narandas and ask if he knows. He will be there at the end of the month.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4030
667. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

April 19, 1935

My silence\(^1\) was taken just with a view to clearing off heavy arrears, but I now see that that was but one of the many good things I have got out of it. As I do nothing except with an ultimate spiritual end in view, this silence obviously carried with it its spiritual advantage. Silence is essential for one whose life is an incessant search for truth. But such silence is a much more serious affair than this. Even writing as a means of communication must stop. Truth would speak, if it must, in every act and not through the written word. I had a letter the other day from Vinoba who wrote in connection with the slivers which Bhau had made for me and which I had warmly praised. Vinoba wrote: “Bhau of course deserves all the praise you have given him, but I want your slivers to be still better. The cotton that he has used is not unbaled cotton. You should use no other cotton. It will have an effect all its own.” I had a sure proof of this some days ago when Nanibehn, who had gone to Nanded to study the processes of fine spinning, came here and gave me some of her specially prepared slivers from unpressed cotton. When I tried these, the difference was great. The thread did not break at all. Not that I spun with extra care, but the cotton had been cleaned and carded with exquisite care. I am trying to show what care truth requires and that action is more eloquent than speech. Some years ago in Calcutta I contented myself with telling my audience that they must listen to the silent speech of my fingers which were plying the takli.

There is another merit in silence which these four weeks demonstrated to me unmistakably. I am prone to anger like anyone else, but I can successfully suppress it. Well, I found out that silence helps one to suppress one’s anger as perhaps nothing else does. How is one to give vent to one’s wrath if one is silent? Not by eyes. Surely not by physical violence, when one is pledged to non-violence. Not by writing, for the wrath would disappear in the very process of writing.

There are a number of other uses of silence that I could mention, but these should suffice. Let me tell you that I was not

---

\(^1\) Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Notes”

\(^2\) Gandhiji had been on four weeks’ silence from March 22 and had just broken it.
looking forward to the termination of this silence. I was dreading it, and I should often like to go into silence, if not quite for a month or months, at least for brief periods.

Harijan, 27-4-1935

668. MESSAGE TO THE KISAN CONFERENCE

[Before April 20, 1935]

I am sorry I cannot attend the Conference. With Sardar in the chair, the success of the Conference is assured.

The Bombay Chronicle, 21-4-1935

669. DISCUSSION WITH J. P. BHANSALI

[Before April 20, 1935]

GANDHIJI: As you sit in your meditation, are you troubled by extraneous thoughts?

BHANSALI: No, never.

G. Never during the day?

B. Not so. Whilst I am not engaged in my meditation, I think of the talks we are having, and I put your questions to myself again and again.

G. You do. Well, then, you said the other day that when you see all the surrounding misery, you are considerably agitated. Don’t you feel like doing your little bit to lessen it?

B. No, though it may seem strange.

G. But, then, what is the meaning of being agitated?

B. I feel the misery myself, but also feel that I am powerless to do anything.

G. When a thorn pierces your foot, you pull it out, don’t you?

B. Yes.

G. When you feel hungry, you eat, don’t you?

B. I do.

1 The report in the source is dated April 20.
2 Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter”
3 In the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary this is reported under April 10.
G. Then if you find a thorn piercing someone else’s foot, would you not help him to pull it out? If you find someone suffering from the pangs of hunger, would you not feed him?

B. I would, if I could.

G. If there was someone who was going through agonies and there was none but you to tend him, would you not sit down to do so?

B. I should, but I could not do much. I should confess my helplessness.

G. Surely, one like you would not shirk a responsibility so lightly?

The recluse smiled a winsome smile in reply.

G. But we started with the premise that the surrounding misery agitates you, and that, as you yourself said, you see the Death Dance in ever fiercer reality.

B. I do. But I declare my helplessness.

G. Only he who has exhausted all efforts may say that he can do nothing more. If he has a lame person to attend to, he will give him all the attention that he is capable of. This one act of service will mean the service of humanity.

B. But I could not exclusively devote my attention to relieving the misery of the distressed. I would do a little bit, but I should soon feel powerless.

G. The world is sustained by sacrifice and service. As the Gita says, “The Lord created the beings with the duty of sacrifice cast on them.”

B. I know. But are not meditation and worship too a sacred duty?

G. Meditation and worship are not exclusive things like jewels to be kept locked up in a strong box. They must be seen in every act of ours. But I will not press you for a reply today. I simply want to set you thinking about this. You know that you are always in my thoughts.

G. Not a bit of it.¹ I felt I must share my feelings with you, and so I asked you those questions.

B. Please don’t think of giving me up.

G. I will not think of giving you up. But I want you to do

¹ Bhansali had met Gandhiji the following morning and told him that he was distressed that he should be a source of worry to Gandhiji but that he found himself helpless.
nothing that does not appeal to you. At the same time let me also plead with you. However, I am sure that, whether you are in a cave or working in the midst of multitudes, all is well with you.

The talk was continued the next evening.

G. Though you have told me that all that I have said does not alter your conviction, you will please let me harp on the same subject a little while longer.

B. You have every right, Bapu. Only I thought I might tell you how my mind was working.

G. Of course I know your mind. But knowing your mind, how is it that I do not feel like copying your example? Of course I should love to trudge about like you from one end of the country to the other; and, if my body allowed it, I should like to live on uncooked flour and neem leaves. But I find there is a serious flaw in your way of life. As a seeker after truth, if I find that yours is the true way, it would be my duty to adopt it. On the other hand, if I feel that there is some serious error in it, it is my duty to draw your attention to it. As I have told you I have no quarrel with your flour or with your neem leaves. What I cannot understand is that you should ignore a vital condition of our very existence, I mean the principle of sacrifice with which we are born.

B. I should like you to make this a little clearer.

G. You know that the Gita says that he who eats without offering the daily sacrifice steals his food. To beg one's food is a good thing, but only after one has offered one's sacrifice.

B. I have heard it. I was pondering the whole day over what you said the other day. I wondered if I had any right to eat my flour and neem leaves, as I did no work.

G. Yes, you have heard it. But the world accepts the principle and acts up to it, e.g., Jain munis and sannyasis. They live on alms, but they do so because they persuade themselves that they are offering sufficient sacrifice in the shape of the teaching they impart.
Here they are somewhat mistaken, as I think. It is their duty to impart spiritual teaching, but all the same they must offer some sacrifice in the shape of bread labour, and rather than expect their food as a reward of their sacrifice, they should, like true Brahmins, live on the charity of the people. All, therefore, that I have to tell you again and again is that you must shake yourself of this illusion. To do no work is norenunciation. It is inertia. What I have written has universal experience in support of it, and my own life is an eloquent witness to it. You interrupted your wanderings and came here out of love for me. God sent you here. How best am I to requite your love? Not by treating you to good food. You would not care to have it, I would not care to give it. But I must pour out to you what the purest love bids the heart to do.

B. I am deeply thankful. I must go over all that you have said.

There was one more talk on the subject, which for the moment may be regarded as final.

G. Well, have you thought over what I said?

B. I have, but, I confess, to no effect. The fact is that for ten years my views have run along this line. Even when I was in England, I said to myself I should adopt sannyasa on my return, and, if anything, the years that have elapsed have strengthened the old conviction.

G. I know the conviction has been long with you.

B. Yes, and I have not yet found any reason to alter it. Pray pardon me, if I am rude.

G. There is no question of rudeness. If plain-speaking were rudeness, I am simply saturated with it. No, I am glad you are speaking to me your mind quite frankly. But there I will leave you. I do not want to tax you any further.

Harijan, 20-4-1935

670. WAGES OF SIN

‘The wages of sin is death,’ says the Bible. That by reason of our sin of untouchability we are daily courting economic death is exemplified by a letter received from a correspondent in Rajputana. In a Hindi letter he says in substance:

‘Here, in our parts, wherever I look I find bones of animals strewing the paths. No one cares to collect them. Village surroundings therefore look like neglected crematoria. Dogs make worse what is already so bad. You have written now and again on this subject in the pages of Harijan. Will you not give summary instructions for guiding Harijan, and even village workers? It will be useless if you advise us to send the bones to some bonegrinding mill; for the expense would be prohibitive. Then you have to consider the religious prejudice against the use of articles made of bones, etc.’

The waste that is going on in this country is truly terrific. If, however, an economist were to work out figures of waste caused by the curse of untouchability, they will be staggering. The wages we are paying for the luxury of committing the sin of untouchability will comfortably feed the starving millions. It is no small waste deliberately to stunt the mental and moral growth, and to make the least economic use, of one-sixth of the population of India. But to state the problem in such large terms baffles one. For workers who need not think in terms of millions, either of money or men, it is simple enough.

Religious values have to change. In a country like India, where animal life is held sacred, we must learn to regard as sacred the use, other than for food, of all parts of naturally dead animals. Harijan workers I regard as having advanced to the position here set forth. If they have, they would collect all the bones they thus see strewn about on village paths and put them by till they receive further instructions. I am trying to find out easy methods of grinding bones to powder. To turn them into manure seems to me to be the cheapest method of disposal. Experiments are being made by Satisbabu of Khadi Pratishthan to find out the best way open to villagers of making the most economic use of all parts of carcasses. I hope to acquaint the readers of Harijan with the result of Satisbabu’s researches.

Harijan, 20-4-1935

671. A WORKING SUB-COMMITTEE

Most committees or sub-committees are appointed to make investigations. But I have come across a sub-committee that was appointed to take prompt action. Sjt. A. A. Paul, the Hon. General Secretary of the Federation of International Fellowships, sends me a report of a sub-committee appointed by the Federation to deal with rural indebtedness in a confined area in Karnataka. From the report of the sub-committee I take the following interesting particulars:

The extortion evil is like the weather; everybody talks about it, but nobody does anything about it. Eight months ago our International Fellowship awoke to the menace of this evil to the life of our under-privileged village brethren. This is not to say that this menace is peculiar to the villages, but due to the generally defenceless position of the villager, with the ranks of privilege arrayed against him, he is especially victimized. Our attention was directed to a certain village which had a vicious nest of extortioners. The chief one had come there with next to nothing a few years ago and now owned the only storied building in the place, with almost everybody in his debt. His prevailing rate of interest was 75% per annum. Roving Pathans extorted up to 300%...

Only extracts are reproduced here.

Finally, a committee was appointed with two leaders, one a Muslim and the other a Hindu, volunteering to serve. The next step was to get from one of our Matric students, resident in the village, a long list of debtors; with particulars of their debts. After studying this, our committee visited the village and questioned each debtor. In the case of those whose testimony at their own risk showed that they had paid back the principal plus a decent rate of interest, our pleader members served a free legal notice on their behalf, acknowledging no further debt. At the same time, the debtors stopped payments. About fifty such notices were served in course of time. The movement of rebellion spread to other villages, even without the process of legal notice. We found it necessary to send a carefully written note of warning to the Police Sub-Inspector as well as the money-lender, enclosing the annual report of our Fellowship, which gave a more or less imposing array of names of members...

During the last eight months approximately a hundred debtors have been relieved, and thousands of rupees turned into the building of their families...

After prejudicing their cases by not replying to the legal notice for six months, the extortioners have at last filed three or four suits. But they are at a great disadvantage, as the evidence at hand shows, in the fact of their high-handed and careless methods of doing business...

The latest development, and the most encouraging one in view of the initial apathy, is the fact that a formerly sceptical pleader friend is quietly getting together a group of the more idealistic young pleaders for the formation of a Legal Aid Society. He has a vision of taking such pleaders (who ordinarily rot around the bar room waiting for touts to stir up a case) to the surrounding villages where, through various means of propaganda, they will awaken the villagers, especially the debtors, to their legal rights, and offer them very reasonable and incorruptible legal aid. This is, happily, in line with Gandhiji’s recent call to village reconstruction. It is our conviction that the vigilance on the part of the privileged classes, such as those who compose our International Fellowship, is the price of liberty for these victims of extortion...

This is an example to copy. No capital expenditure was required here. All that was evidently necessary was to hearten the villagers and tell their creditors (while such was the case) that most of them had paid more than was due by them.

_Harijan_, 20-4-1935

_VOL. 66 : 16 DECEMBER, 1934 - 24 APRIL, 1935_
Mysore has always appreciated the worth of hand-spinning as an aid to the farmer. It runs several such centres. The managers keep themselves in touch with the A. I. S. A. so as to keep their centres abreast of the latest researches and improvements made by the Association. The following letter from the Badanval Spinning Circle addressed to the Secretary, A. I. S. A., will be read with interest:

I beg to inform you that Government sanction was received to pursue a policy of developing local market: and for popularizing khadi in villages. This was in accordance with the new policy which was followed to keep pace with the changes introduced by the A.I.S.A. Khadi cloth is given at cost price to bonafide weavers and spinners of this Circle. Since the month of November, 1934, work was started in this direction. Till now we have sold just over Rs. 2,000 worth of khadi to about a thousand spinners. We issue cloth and recover the value thereof in weekly instalments at the time of yarn purchase. From April onwards, we propose to launch the sales again. Our aim is to sell another Rs. 2,000 worth of khadi, this time mainly consisting of village sarees. We find that the programme is working quite normally here.

Similar encouraging reports are coming from many quarters. I would suggest to the workers that now that the true message of khadi has been understood they should take all the steps simultaneously. A commencement has to be made with cotton-growing with a fair knowledge of the conditions of cotton cultivation. It should be possible to grow cotton for village use almost anywhere. Concentration in the most favourable soil is necessary when the ambition is to supply the world. But the reverse holds good where the ambition is to supply the village need. A corner in a field can easily grow rough cotton for the village farmer; or a village may grow cotton for itself in co-operation. If this is done, it is simple enough to see that no imported cloth can beat cloth thus produced locally, either in cost or durability. The process induces the greatest conservation of energy. Under such ideal conditions ginning, carding and spinning become pleasurable and simple. The spinning-wheels, too, require overhauling. There is great waste of energy when the revolutions of the spindle are not up to the standard. With this however, I propose to deal shortly in an article specially devoted to it.

_Harijan,_ 20-4-1935
BROTHERS AND SISTERS,

God’s ways are inscrutable. I had been avoiding this burden since October. This honour belonged to the venerable Malaviyaji Maharaj. But because his health is not good, and also because he has to go abroad, he sent in his resignation. You found some difficulty in choosing another president. The Reception Committee had my name before it of course. When the Reception Committee’s difficulty was explained to me I was compelled to accept the office.

I had no doubt other reasons, too, for my acceptance. Last year when the question of presidentship of this session came up before me, I asked for two lakhs of rupees for the propagation of Hindi in South India. Who can afford to give two lakhs of rupees for this purpose, nowadays? “Yes, we shall try. If you accept the office success will follow.” I was never so naive as to be deceived by such talk by the Committee. I insisted on the guarantee of two lakhs. I thought friends had given me up on this issue.

But God had willed otherwise. He had to take from me some service for the cause of Hindi. Malaviyaji Maharaj could not come. May God make him live a hundred years. I have seen some portions of the report of your sessions. The first session was held in 1910. The president of that session was Malaviyaji Maharaj himself. Someone having a greater love of Hindi than he is not to be found anywhere in India. How wonderful it would have been if he were in the chair today! His sphere of work for Hindi is the whole of India. His knowledge of Hindi is very deep.

My sphere is very limited. My knowledge of Hindi is almost nil. I cannot pass your Prathama examination. But my love of Hindi is not less than anybody else’s. My sphere of work is the spread of Hindi in the South. It was in 1918, when you held a session here that the task of the spread of Hindi in the South was first undertaken. From thereon it has been systematically progressing. It should not...... stop for want of funds. Pandit Harihar Sharma is always pestering me for more funds. I tell him, “Now, please do not bother me. You should obtain your funds from the South itself. If you have not the capacity to do even this much, you may consider yourself a failure.” It is easy for me to say so. But so large an organization must have the right to remain a minor for 21 years. Therefore, when the opportunity came, I made the demand for two lakh rupees. This is not too large a sum. But the gentlemen who came to me expressed their inability to promise two lakhs because there had been a fall in the price of cotton. It was quite true. Jamnalalji also took their side. I admitted defeat and accepted the promise of one lakh rupees. Now by some means or other, but by fair means, you have to give me one lakh rupees.

You may ask why it should be exclusively for the spread of Hindi in the South? My answer is that South India is not a small area. It is like a continent. There are four provinces and four languages—in it Tamil, Telugu, Malayalam and Kannada. Its population is nearly seven and a quarter crores. If we can secure the foundation of the propagation of Hindi among so many people, we shall find it the easier to do so in other provinces.

Although I consider these languages daughters of Sanskrit, they are nevertheless different from Hindi, Oriya, Bengali, Assamese, Punjabi, Sindhi, Marathi and Gujarati. Their grammar is quite different from the Hindi grammar. I call them the daughters of Sanskrit because they all abound in Sanskrit words. When they are in difficulty they call out to their mother Sanskrit and drink her milk in the form of new words. They may well have been independent languages in the past, but now they add to their glory by borrowing words from Sanskrit. Besides this, there are several other reasons for calling them the daughters of Sanskrit, but we shall not go into them at present.

Be it as it may, it is an indisputable fact that the task of spreading Hindi in the South is the most difficult. But still, as a result of the systematic work we have been doing there during the past eighteen years, six lakh South Indians endeavoured to learn Hindi, 42,000 sat for various Hindi examinations, Hindi was taught in 3,200 places, 600 teachers were trained, and today this work is being carried on in 450 places. The Snataka examination was started in 1931 and today there are 300 Snatakas. Seventy Hindi books were published there and in Madras 8 lakh copies of them were printed. Seventeen years ago Hindi was not taught even in a single high school in the South but today it is taught in 70 high schools. All told, there are 70 workers carrying on the work there and so far four lakh rupees have been spent on this task, a little less than half of which was obtained from South India itself. It is necessary to mention one fact here. After his tour of inspection Kakasaheb claims that women of the South worked very hard for the spread of Hindi there. They have realized its importance. They are so keen that some of the menfolk are wondering who would look after the homes if women become so active in this work. Is not such progress a matter for satisfaction? Should we not encourage the growth of such a tree? Even today when I have been given this office, if I do not make efforts to make this organization permanent then there is no greater fool than I. If I have a claim to be elected president for a second time, it is because of my work of spreading Hindi in the South. I may not have held any office but in any event I have played a great part in watering that tree. Its custodians are Shri Jamnalal Bajaj, Shri Rajagopalachari, Shri Ramnath Goenka, Shri Pattabhi Sitaramayya and Shri Harihar Sharma. The accounts of this work are kept to the last pie, and are published from time to time.

I have presented to you a picture of the bright side of this organization. It does not mean that it does not have a dark side as well.

God has filled the world with animate and inanimate good and bad things. A good man is like the swan which drinks the milk and discards the water.

We have had to face failures too in abundance. It cannot be claimed also that all the workers were good. Had the work been well done from the beginning to the end, we should have had still better results. But it can be definitely stated that when compared to the work done in other provinces in this respect, what has been done in South India is the best. Now remains the question of how this one lakh should be spent. Is it not necessary that this amount should be spent through the Central office at Allahabad? Would it not be an insult to the Sammelan if it were not so spent? In answer to these questions, I humbly submit that no insult is implied. But for the existence of the Sammelan, the Dakshin Bharat Hindi Prachar Sabha would not be there. This organization was born in 1918 in this very town, under the aegis of the Sammelan. It is not necessary to trace its history from then on. In the end, the Sammelan made it an independent organization, or, you may say, it gave it “Dominion Status”. By doing so the Sammelan did not lose any prestige; it only gained it. If all the organizations connected with the Sammelan become self-supporting, what can be more fortunate than that? The donation of a lakh of rupees which is being asked for from you is for this independent organization. They will also have to fly the flag of the Sammelan.

Then the question arises: “Should we neglect the other provinces? Is there no need for the propagation of Hindi in other provinces?” There certainly is. I am not partial to the South, nor do I have any grudge against other provinces. I have put in great efforts as regards other provinces as well. But for want of workers the degree of success there has not been the same; it has, in fact, been negligible. Poor Baba Raghavdas is striving untiringly to spread Hindi in Utkal, Bengal and Assam. He has had some success although it is slight. I tried my very best to give him whatever help I could. Through Babaji’s efforts work is going on in Gauhati, Jorhat, Shivasagar and Naogaon in Assam. A hundred and sixty pupils are studying there. Two boys and two girls have been given scholarships and are studying in the Kashi Vidyapith and the Prayag Mahila Vidyapith. One gentleman from Assam is studying Hindi in Barhaj (Gorakhpur) and teaching Assamese to the people there. People of social standing in Assam do not show much interest in the work for the spread of Hindi. The help that Babaji is getting is also for one year only.

In Utkal, some efforts are being made in Cuttack, Puri and Burhampur. It is very gratifying to learn that in Utkal Shri Gopabandhu Chowdhury and his wife Shrimati Ramadevi are keenly interested in the spread of Hindi. They have made their family learn a fair amount of Hindi. They are now staying in a village, engaged in this useful work. There are also some other selfless workers in Utkal. One may surely hope that the spread of Hindi in Utkal will be a success.

In Bengal even a Committee was formed. Everything was done. There are also many Bengalis who love Hindi. Ramanandbabu assisted by Shri Benarsidas Chaturvedi is bringing out Vishal Bharat. This is not a small thing. There is also no dearth in Calcutta of Hindi-loving Marwaris. Still what is being done may be considered too little.

I shall leave out the Punjab, for Urdu is understood by everyone there. The only question is that of the script. A script conference under the presidentship of Kakasaheb will be looking into the question. So I shall not say anything about it here. Now remain Sind, Maharashtra and Gujarat. What is being done in these provinces scarcely deserves mention. But I hope in this Sammelan we shall be able to decide on some constructive work to be taken up there.

The whole difficulty is that though the propagation of Hindi in the other provinces has an important place among the aims of the Sammelan, I do not think I shall be wrong in saying that the Sammelan has not given as much importance to the spread of Hindi as to conducting examinations. I humbly suggest that we deliberate carefully on this question in this Sammelan and adopt a clear policy.

In my opinion, the Sammelan’s main task in the other provinces should be the propagation of Hindi. If Hindi is to be made the national language, then the work of propagation of Hindi has to be widespread and well organized. We do not have enough teachers. In the Sammelan headquarters there should be a training college for Hindi teachers in which on the one hand teachers from Hindi provinces are trained and are also taught the language of the province to which they would like to be posted; and on the other hand students from other provinces should be admitted and taught Hindi. Such an effort was made for the South, as a result of which we have Pandit Harihar Sharma and Hrishikesh.

You know that, on my advice, Kakasaheb Kalelkar went to the South to inspect the work and to help Pandit Harihar Sharma. He toured Tamil Nadu, Malabar, Travancore, Mysore, Andhra and Utkal; he met Hindi-lovers and also collected some funds. From this tour he gathered the impression that there is a feeling among a section of the people that we wish to do away with the regional languages and make Hindi the sole language of India. Under this misapprehension they oppose our efforts to spread Hindi. I feel that we must make a clear statement of our policy in this matter and dispel such misapprehensions. I have always maintained that we do not wish under any circumstances to do away with the regional languages. All we want is that for maintaining inter-provincial relations we must all learn Hindi. This does not indicate any bias in favour of Hindi. We consider Hindi the national language of India. It deserves to become the national language. Only that language can become the national language which is known and spoken by a majority of people and which is easy to learn. Such a language is Hindi and no other. This Sammelan has been saying this since 1910 and there has been no significant opposition to it up till now. The other provinces too have accepted this fact.

Kakasaheb found among the people a second misapprehension, namely, that we wish to install Hindi in the place of English. Some indeed feel that only English can be and has in fact become the national language.

If Hindi could take the place of English I for one should be happy. But we realize full well the importance of the English language. We need the knowledge of English for the study of science and of modern literature, for contact with the rest of the world, for trade and commerce, for keeping in touch with the officials and for various other things. We have to learn English whether we wish or not. And this is exactly what is happening. English is an international language.

But English can never become the national language. Today it looks like having the sway. Notwithstanding our great efforts to free ourselves from it, English continues to occupy a very large place in the national work. But from this we should not fall into the delusion that English is becoming our national language. We can easily test this in each province. Take Bengal or South India where the influence of English is the greatest. There if we wish to get anything done through the masses, we may not be able to get it done through Hindi, but we certainly cannot get it done in English. We certainly can express ourselves a little bit with the help of a few words of Hindi. We cannot do so at all in English. Yes, it may be admitted that up till now no language has become the national language. English is the official language. It is only natural. I cannot see English advancing any further however strenuous the efforts that may be made in this regard. If India is to become one nation, whether one admits it or not Hindi alone can be our national language, because no other language can have the place Hindi has. Hindi, i.e., Hindustani, with some variations here and there, is the language of 22 crores of people, Hindus and Muslims taken together. Therefore it is proper and practicable that there should be a regional language within each province, Hindi for the inter-provincial communications and English for international intercourse. The number of people speaking Hindi will run into crores, whereas those speaking English will never exceed a few lakhs. It will be an injustice to the masses even to try.

I just now used the expression “Hindi-Hindustani”. In 1918 when you honoured me with this office, I had said the same thing, namely, that Hindi is that language which is spoken both by Hindus and Muslims naturally and without effort. There is no difference between Hindustani and Urdu. Written in the Devanagari script it is called Hindi, and written in the Arabic script it is called Urdu. The writer or the speaker who deliberately uses too many Sanskrit or Persian or Arabic words does a disservice to the country. Our national language should contain all the words that are in common use. Shri Ghanshyamdas Birla has rightly said that advocates of Hindi should adopt words of other provincial languages which have become conventional. Every living language has this capacity to absorb words from other languages. That is how it acquires universality. What has English not adopted? There are so many Latin and Greek idioms that have been absorbed into English. They have not spared even modern languages. Their impartiality in this is praiseworthy. English has borrowed many Hindustani words. Some words taken from African languages are also found in English. In this the English have maintained their policy of “free trade”. In saying this I do not mean that we should indiscriminately introduce words from other languages into Hindi as English-educated youths of today do. This should be done with discretion. We are not paupers, but we shall not also be miserly. We shall call a chair a “kurṣi” not “chatuspadapith”.

Let me take this opportunity to tell you of my own distress. Whether Hindi becomes the national language or not, I cannot give it up. As a worshipper of Tulsidas my love for Hindi will remain. But where is a Rabindranath among those who speak Hindi? Where is a Profulla Chandra Ray? Where is a Jagdish Bose? I can name several others. I know such men are not born by my merely wishing it, or thousands like me wishing it. But it is only natural to expect that if a language has to become the national language it will have to produce a few such men.

There is in Wardha a girls’ school. Several girls are preparing there for the Sammelan examinations. Both teachers and girls complain that not all the prescribed text-books are fit to be read. It has been complained that they are too full of erotic matter. There is erotic literature in Hindi. Shri Benarsidas Chaturvedi had drawn my attention to this a few years ago. The literature of the language which we wish to make our national language should be pure, radiant and lofty. there is a good deal of obscene literature in Hindi. Editors of periodicals are either not careful or they deliberately encourage obscenity in the writings. In my opinion the Sammelan should not remain indifferent in this matter. Good writers should get encouragement from the Sammelan. People should also get some help from the Sammelan in choosing the right books. The task no doubt is difficult but we cannot run away from difficulties.

A Muslim who knows the Devanagari script well has a complaint about one of the text-books. It contains disparaging things about Mogul emperors which are not even historically true. I humbly submit that great care should be exercised in the choice of text-books; they should have a nationalistic bias and the syllabus should be drawn up keeping in view the modern needs. I know that all this that I have said is outside my province. But I considered it my duty to put before you the complaints that were brought to me.

[From Hindi]

Veena, Tributes Issue, April-May 1969

674. SPEECH AT HINDI SAHITYA SAMMELAN, INDORE

April 20, 1935

SHRIMAN MAHARAJA SAHEB, MAHARANI SAHEBA, CHAIRMAN OF THE RECEPTION COMMITTEE, SISTERS AND BROTHERS.

On behalf of you all and on my own behalf I thank the Maharaja Saheb for declaring this session open. I consider it my good fortune that when I last came to Indore to preside over another session of the Sammelan, Your Highness was the Crown Prince. It was as Crown Prince that you had opened the proceedings of that Sammelan and now as the Maharaja you have performed the same office for this Sammelan. You have all heard the speech of His Highness and so have I, most attentively. If I can give anything in return for it, it can only be my thanks. If the sentiments that the Maharaja Saheb has expressed for the Hindi language are to be acted upon all over India, then Maharajas like His Highness will also have to do some real work. As the Chairman of the Reception Committee has recalled in his speech, when the 8th session of the Sammelan was held in Indore, Your Highness had donated Rs. 10,000 for the propagation of Hindi. I sincerely hope that in the same manner now, in order to fulfil the request made by the Reception Committee, full help will be forthcoming. I consider it our good fortune that while Your Highness then gave help as the Crown Prince, now Your Highness will be doing so as the Maharaja. Our millionaire Seth Hukumchandji is also present here. He garlanded me this morning. Although the garland was of yarn, its worth is the worth of the person who garlands. Rai Bahadur Dr. Sarjuprasadji is also present here. He is ill, and, like all of you, I feel sorry about it. There is no question of his lacking in love for the Hindi language or the Sammelan. I have full confidence that whatever has to be done will meet with success. In spite of this, there is some commotion in the Hindi world. I had had an inkling of it in Wardha and after coming here I have understood the situation more fully. It is not still known how this commotion started. It is not true that the spread of Hindi in South India is not connected in any way with the Hindi Sahitya Sammelan; because that work is an inalienable part of the work of Hindi Sahitya Sammelan.

1 Gandhiji delivered this speech as president of the Sammelan in addition to the written address, the preceding item.

The Hindi Sahitya Sammelan is the mother or the father, whatever you may choose to call it, of Hindi Prachar in South India. If it were not so, it would have been impossible for 6,00,000 people in South India to have learnt to speak or write Hindi as they do. For this spread of Hindi thanks are due to Hindi Sahitya Sammelan. No thanks are due to me for this, because whatever I did I did as President of the Sammelan. There was nothing personal in it. I can say this much that, propagation of Hindi is an inalienable part of the work of the Sammelan. If the Sahitya Sammelan should concern itself only with the growth of literature and not propagate Hindi, how can Hindi become the national language? Yes, it is our bounden duty to promote the growth of literature, but growth of literature cannot make Hindi the national language. Bengali is rich in literature, so rich that no other language can stand comparison with it. Marathi occupies the second place in literature. Hindi would perhaps be placed third or even fourth. Even that I doubt. But Hindi is spoken by a majority of people and it is an easy language to learn and to read, and therefore only Hindi has a claim to becoming the national language. If the propagation of Hindi were not a part of the work of the Hindi Sahitya Sammelan, then a person like me would be unfit to be its President, because I have done nothing for Hindi literature. I wanted to read out my written address, but speakers put up resolutions and took up the time. It was pointless to move resolutions because no one could snatch away my rights. The programme of the Sammelan will continue only for a few minutes. So, I wish to end this session by 7.30. From the point of view of Hindi literature I am most unsuited as President. Of the few girls that are present here, many have passed Prathama and are preparing to sit for the Madhyama. Even if I sat only for the Prathama, Purushottamdasji here may not give me enough marks to pass it because I do not know grammar. I have not the least objection to agree to what Jayaswalji has said. I am not partial to the Gujarati language. I have been made the President so that, through me some work for the spread of Hindi may get done. If the criterion was qualification, then even one of the girls could have been in this chair even as was the case with Queen Victoria. The Secretary just said, “I shall do everything. You have only to assent.” That is not quite so. I have been chosen President and my condition that you will give me a lakh of rupees has been accepted so that through me Hindi Prachar should be well conducted. Poetry now has many branches. You can hear about them from poets to your hearts’ content; but through me you will hear only about the spread of Hindi because I have no mastery over other fields.

When I had come to Indore on an earlier occasion to assume the presidency of the Sammelan, I had craved the blessings of Malaviyaji Maharaj and he had sent me a long letter of blessings. Now that he is stricken with illness and also overburdened with work, I crave blessings from all of you. Malaviyaji, on account of ill-health and also because he has to go abroad, could not assume the presidency of the Sammelan. The Reception Committee was therefore obliged to choose me.

Malaviyaji’s telegram has also come, in which he has sent me his blessings. It is not necessary to translate the full text of the telegram. I pray to God that he may live for a hundred years and may enjoy good health all through. He is seventy years of age, and when he works, he does so like a youth of seventeen. May God give him a long life. May he continue to serve India as he is doing. I have come here with his blessings and as his deputy. His efforts for the spread of Hindi in South India and other provinces are well known. He loves the work as much as you and I do. There are three questions before us today; it is necessary to make them clear. There are three things before people who wish to donate money. The first concerns the university, of which the Maharaja Saheb has made a mention with satisfaction. Donations have to be sought for it also. People can either donate money for the university or for the spread of Hindi. He who has three cowries to give, for him there is no problem. But he who has a single cowrie, to whom shall he give it? For a cowrie cannot be split. The Maharaja Saheb, Seth Hukumchangdi and Dr. Sarjuprasad are all present here. Even if they say no, I can answer that the people of Indore should first help the university if they are fully convinced that this work is good, that there is spirit in the workers and they have the desire to work earnestly. Many people say all sorts of things, but when they are asked what they can do, they answer that they have poetic talents. This should not be so. Once you are convinced that everything for the university is ready and only money is needed, donating money should be your first concern. After this comes the Hindi Sahitya Sammelan and the propagation of Hindi in South India. I am saying this as President of the Sammelan. Because while I am the President I should not do anything that would harm the Sammelan or hinder collection of funds and I would certainly do nothing against the rules of the Sammelan. Because, in accepting this office, I have taken on a very heavy responsibility as I have realized within the last few hours. To make it a success is my duty. I can, therefore, assure you that all the strength I possess, all the strength God can give me, shall be used to make this enterprise a success. There has to be one script if Hindi is to spread everywhere. There is going to be a script conference for this purpose about which you shall hear more from Kakasaheb. Hindi is born from Sanskrit. Assamese and Bengali too are related to it. The South Indian languages are believed to be of Dravidian origin. My own belief is that they too have sprung from Sanskrit. Regarding the Dravidians, some assert that they were uncivilized in the beginning and became civilized later. But the Tamilians say that they were not uncivilized but had enjoyed a high degree of culture. Tamil, Telugu, Kannada and other languages are replete with Sanskrit words. Bengali too is rich in Sanskrit words. When they are short of words, these languages borrow from Sanskrit. Thus, therefore, a common script for all the languages is necessary. In order to achieve this, modifications in Devanagari may be necessary. But I do not wish to involve myself in this. I have just put forth an idea before you, since I believe that a common script will make the languages easy to learn. Kakasaheb has taken the responsibility and he will carry on the work for this. When Kakasaheb went to Assam and Utkal from South India, he had to face a difficulty of the magnitude of the Vindhyas. People began to murmur that he planned to supplant their languages with Hindi. But that is not so. What is intended is that while the regional languages should continue to be used Hindi should be specially learnt so that it may become the national language. Bengali for that matter is rich in literature but it can never become the national language. But I wish to have it clearly stipulated that Hindi shall not supplant any regional language. Hindi Sahitya Sammelan should, through a resolution, make a clear statement on the question.

Hindi is our national language. It should not be packed with words from Sanskrit. One comes across writings which are full of Sanskrit words which village folk cannot understand at all. Trying to make Hindi the national language while ignoring our seven crore Muslim brethren would be like trying to plant flowers in the void and smelling their scent. Village folk are simple people. They understand plain and simple language only. In the exhibition put up here we are told what is done in Indore State. What do your brethren in villages wish to make? Are those things useful to us or not? It is also necessary to ask whether there is a contact between us—the townsmen and the villagers. Many in the towns believe that they have very little connection with the villages but as far as I know, there is a very strong connection between the townsmen and the villagers. I shall even say that everything India has comes from the peasantry. If they refuse to do our work, then we shall have to starve and this is true of the Maharaja Saheb and of Seth Hukumchandji as well. For no one can feed on gold and silver. They need not resort to satyagraha as I do. They can just say that since they do not have enough to eat they cannot work and the townspeople will have a hard time of it. In India everything depends on the villagers. Therefore it is necessary that we use a language that they can understand. It is also not right for us to exclude words of Arabic or Persian origin. Because, by doing so we cannot make Hindi the national language. For this work I wish to beg funds from all of you. This task can be accomplished with the blessings of the Maharaja Saheb. Whether you call anyone a Mahatma or by any other title, only making efforts can we make a success of this work. I shall not run away with your one lakh rupees. But I shall endeavour to bring glory to this work.

Harihar Sharma learnt some Hindi in Prayag and went to Madras. There he carried on some Hindi Pracher. What he has achieved is shown at the exhibition. If you wish to see it, you can do so even today. It was my duty to draw your attention to it. How much work remains to be done in the ten minutes that remain or when to close the session, is left to the Maharaja Saheb and is not my concern.

[From Hindi]

_Akhil Bharatiya Hindi Sahitya Sammelan: Karya Vivaran, pp. 8-12_

675. SPEECH AT OPENING OF VILLAGE INDUSTRIES EXHIBITION

INDORE, April 20, 1935

Exhibition does not mean collecting artisans and indigenous products of villages in the vicinity of cities dependent upon villages. The civilization of India rests on seventy lakhs of villages, not cities. Our English Amaldars say ten per cent of the people of India do not get food at all and the rest get only a small quantity of rice, salt and flour. Chemists inform us that the scanty food which Indians get cannot help to develop their mental, physical and spiritual power. Whatever we eat does not nourish us; we and the villagers both are dying.

People say village uplift in India is impossible, but foreign lands like America give an example to the contrary. When there were no machines in India, a single work was done by a hundred hands and all of them remained employed, but today growth of machinery has left 98 people out of 100 unemployed. Look at America, where sweeping engines are lying useless on roads. In the Western world unemployment means not getting even salt and rice.

Experts say the land of India is not sufficient for the increasing population, but it is not so. The Exhibition should consist of things of everyday use and not of things which we either like or want to use, like wine, etc. It is better to buy pure ghee at double the price. It is cheaper for us than to use cheap but adulterated ghee.

Mahatma Gandhi declared that mere demonstration of rural products would be insufficient to help the cause of Village Industries Association. It was high time methods were devised by means of which the masses could be clothed and fed. Village industries in India were in a dying state today and the responsibility for it

---

1 The exhibition was held at Biscoe Park. mainly lay with the people. They could expiate their sin only by actively supporting the revival of the decaying village industries. He opined that Indian rural regeneration could only come by falling back on the old system of making every small unit of population self-supporting in all its needs.

The Hindustan Times, 21-4-1925

676. LETTER TO RAJENDRA SINGH BEOHAR

INDORE,
April 21, 1935

Bhai Rajendra Singh,

I hope the Harijan Conference will be an all round success. That is to say that the savarna Hindus will realize their dharma and abide by it and Harijans will also realize theirs. Both should know that without this kind of two-way self-purification it is difficult for Hinduism to survive.

M. K. Gandhi

From the Hindi: Rajendra Singh Beohar Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

677. LETTER TO PURUSHOTTAM K. BAVISHI

April 22, 1935

Bhai Purushottam Bhashi,

I saw your letter yesterday. You may come with your friend today at two. I shall of course be observing silence, but that will not matter. For most of the time you will be doing the explaining.

Blessings from
Bapu

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 122. Also C.W. 4747. Courtesy: Purushottam K. Bavishi

678. LETTER TO HARILAL GANDHI

April 22, 1935

Chh. Harilal,

There is no need at all to be in a hurry to come to a decision about Amala’s letter. I think you will have to drop the idea. You should write and tell her plainly that any children that may be born will have to be brought up in a simple manner. And whatever means of livelihood the Lord provides will probably be in Wardha. If you start going to women or drinking, she should be free to leave you immediately. And even this you may write only if you are sure that you wish to marry her. Amala’s letter seems a good one to me, but I didn’t know her as she reveals herself in it. I am, therefore, of the view that you will not be happy unless she comes to feel strongly that she cannot live without you.

It is certainly a good thing that you have not become impatient. Have patience and do only what is proper.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 1540. Courtesy: Manubehn S. Mashruwala

679. LETTER TO MANU GANDHI

April 22, 1935

CHI. MANUDI,

I got your letter in Indore. You need not ask me whether or not you should go to Bombay. Respect the wishes of your aunt.

I did read about your having entered the nineteenth year. But what you write were only fancies of your mind. What made you write it? I haven’t thought even once from that point of view. But now perhaps I may think.

Does all that you write mean that you wish to get married now? If so, you should say so plainly. We don’t regard it as anything to be ashamed of. It is a quite natural desire. Yes, to me you seem to be a girl of twelve or so. But it is possible that your body has changed recently. If you feel that you have grown up, there is nothing more to be said about it. Write to me openly what you wish.

We shall return to Indore on Wednesday or Thursday.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 1539. Courtesy: Manubehn S. Mashruwala

1 Perhaps Gandhiji meant Wardha where he returned on April 25 which was a Thursday.
680. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

INDORE,
April 22, 1935

BHAIVALLABHBHAI,

I have gone through your speech. It won’t do. We should not criticize the Government’s policy in that tone at the present time. This is not the time for examining the Government’s policies or of the zemindars; it is a time for introspection, for putting and keeping our house in order. You should not, therefore, expect me to discuss anything just now except what we ourselves ought to do. After these prefatory remarks, I would point out the duty of cultivators without so much as mentioning the Government even once. We had better forget New Delhi for the present. If, however, this does not appeal to you, you may say what the Lord in your heart prompts you to say.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 163-4

681. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

April 22, 1935

BHAIVALLABHBHAI,

I wrote a letter to you this morning. After that I had to write so much that I cannot write with the right hand any more today.

If you think it necessary to make Munshi the secretary of the Board¹, you may consider doing so. Now that Ansari has resigned, will Bhulabhai become the President? If you can persuade Raja by some means, do so. Has Bidhan resigned too?

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, p. 164

¹ Congress Parliamentary Board
682. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

April 23, 1935

CHI. JAMNALAL,

I have had a fairly long talk with Kamalnayan. If . . .¹ can come here before the engagement takes place, I think I may also examine her a little. Kamalnayan also has approved of this. I have, therefore, given him a letter to that effect addressed to . . . ².

I had already sent Radhakrishna to Sikar before I got your wire, and so I didn’t wire to you.

How is the ear?
How is Madalasa?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2964

683. LETTER TO SHASHIBALA

April 23, 1935

CHI. SHASHIBALA,

Even though Kamalnayan³ and you have talked things over sufficiently, you may still come and see me before finally deciding on the relationship. You may come even if Father agrees to the proposal.⁴

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: C. W. 10985. Courtesy: Ramakrishna Bajaj

684. SPEECH AT HINDI SAHITYA SAMMELAN, INDORE

April 23, 1935

Mahatmaji expressed his regrets to the delegates and the assembled public for having been late. He said the election of members of the Standing Committee and the resolutions, etc., had taken up so much time that with all the will in the world he was not able to arrive in time. Making an appeal for donations for the work of Hindi

¹ The name has been omitted.
² Ibid
³ Son of Jamnalal Bajaj
⁴ Vide also “Letter to Jamnalal Bajaj”, 27-4-1935 and “Letter to Kamalnayan Bajaj”, 16-7-1935
Prachar, he said:

The alms for which I am appealing to you could be split up into three parts. If you wish, you may deposit your donation in the office of the Hindi Sahitya Sammelan, or you may donate for the Hindi University which is being planned for Indore, or you may give money to help in the propagation of Hindi in South India and other provinces. While donating, if you do not specify whether it is for the Hindi University or for the promotion of Hindi in non-Hindi speaking States, the donation will automatically be sent to the Hindi Sahitya Sammelan office. You should specially donate for the Hindi University, and the propagation of Hindi. I do not mean that you should ignore the Hindi Sahitya Sammelan. But the first two tasks are of primary importance and should be started very soon. The Hindi Sahitya Sammelan is self-supporting. Its programme of examinations is financed from the fee charged from students, small though it may be. It has started independent institutions like the Hindi Prachar Sabha for the spread of Hindi in South India which are no burden to it. They are self-supporting. The cost of publishing Hindi literature is met fully from the sale of books. The cost of printing and other expenses of the Ojha- Welcome Volume which has been presented to me, is met by donations from Rajas and Maharajas. Because the cost of printing, cost of articles therein and the cost of illustrations are very heavy in such books, the articles in this volume have been obtained free of charge. And so the expense of bringing out this volume is less. It is also priced low at Rs. 12 per copy. Otherwise such a volume would cost not less than Rs. 50 or Rs. 60. My contention is that, whatever is spent in bringing out this work, is got from Rajas and Maharajas and later from the sale of it. I am sure you will have now understood what I have said. Some money is needed for the museum whose foundations were laid by the Sahitya Sammelan, and on which more than half the construction work is over. Otherwise, it will remain incomplete. Wood and other material bought for the construction is lying idle. Unless a work which is begun is completed in a short time, it goes to waste. To complete the building, ten to fifteen thousand rupees are needed. Until you donate towards its construction its doors will remain closed. In addition to this I beg you for donations for the spread of Hindi in the South, the burden of which is not upon the Hindi Sahitya Sammelan. As the Sanskrit saying goes, “plenty yields plenty”, the more you give the more will be the benefits you will get. Now, I wish to repeat to you that before you give your donation, please state whether it is to be deposited in the office of the Sammelan, or is for the Hindi University or meant for the spread of Hindi in other provinces. It is up to you if you do not wish to make any donation at all. It is neither against the law nor a matter for regret. If you donate nothing for the spread of Hindi but only give your contribution to the office or to the University, I shall understand that you have given your donation to me. I shall not feel hurt by that. This year, even as an obligation, I must ask you for donations for the Sammelan. I do not wish to say more to you, and before I start my work with the speed of a railway train, I request you to give your donations quietly. If you have the money on you, you can give your donations now. But if you have not brought it with you, please give your names and addresses. Later, members of the Reception Committee can collect them from you and send them to the office. There are volunteers here. They will come round to you.

Whatever you wish to donate you can either give or put the amount against your name. You know that I am ready to snatch away even the jewellery from the sisters. So they have realized that they should wear no jewellery in my presence. If they want to take to stealing in this way, they may. But I will say to you sisters, that by the establishment of a University in Indore, and with the spread of Hindi in other provinces the service rendered to the brothers and sisters who are poor brings its benefits to you also. Therefore, those sisters who wish to give their ornaments can do so. Whatever you give as charity should be given whole-heartedly and not grudgingly. The volunteers will come to you now because there are many representatives who are unable to donate anything themselves. So, those among the onlookers who have money, please donate quickly. I shall have to hurry with the remaining work like a train after this because I shall have to end this by half past five and quit. Pandit Lakshminarayanji of Indore has presented his house Jagannath Trivedi Bhavan worth fifty thousand rupees to the Hindi University. And, therefore, he deserves our thanks. If the people here follow his example, and if we have the goodwill of the Maharaja, then your University can become the Indore Hindi University like the Osmania University. I shall now end my speech with this and volunteers will be approaching you. Please give whatever you wish.

[From Hindi]
Akhil Bharatiya Hindi Sahitya Sammelan: Karya Vivarana, pp. 41-3
The bulk of those who have come here are citizens of Indore. There are people from the villages too, but the majority are from Indore. You must have seen the exhibition which untimely rain has unfortunately spoilt. It was organized in order to remind the city-dweller of his duty to the villager. We have been oblivious of it all these years, but we can ill-afford to be so now. We may not know it, but it is certain that we are slowly perishing individually and as a nation. It is no use laying the blame at other people’s door—the Government, the State, or the Zemindar. They are certainly responsible for our sorry plight, but we are no less responsible, and we had better bethink ourselves of our responsibility.

The reason why our average life-rate is deplorably low, the reason why we are getting more and more impoverished is that we have neglected our 700,000 villages. We have indeed thought of them, but only to the extent of exploiting them. We read thrilling accounts of the glory that was India, and of the land that was flowing with milk and honey; but today it is a land of starving millions. We are sitting in this fine pandal under a blaze of electric lights, but we do not know that we are burning these lights at the expense of the poor. We have no right to use the lights if we forget that we owe these to them.

There is a difference between the civilization of the East—the civilization of India—and that of the West. It is not generally realized wherein the difference lies. Our geography is different, our history is different, our ways of living are different. Our continent, though vast, is a speck on the globe, but it is the most thickly populated, barring China. Well, now, the economics and civilization of a country where the pressure of population on land is greatest are and must be different from those of a country where the pressure is least. Sparsely populated America may have need of machinery. India may not need it at all. Where there are millions upon millions of units of idle labour it is no use thinking of labour-saving devices. If someone devised a machine which saved us the trouble of using our hands to eat, eating would cease to be a pleasure, it would become a torture. The reason of our poverty is the extinction of our industries and our consequent unemployment. Some years ago India’s agricultural population was said to be 70 per cent. Today it is said to be 90 per cent. It does not mean that 90 per cent are agriculturists, but that, instead of 70 per cent who depended on land, 90 per cent are now driven to depend on land. In other words, whereas there were industries and crafts enough to feed the 20 per cent some time ago, these are no longer there and the people have thus been thrown on land. They thus steal their living, not because they want to, but because there is no more land.

---

1 Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s report under the caption “Our Duty to the Villagers”. The meeting was held in the pandal of the Hindi Sahitya Sammelan and was largely attended. The speech, of which this is a condensed summary, was in Hindi.

Not that there is not enough land to feed our 35 crores. It is absurd to say that India is overpopulated and that the surplus population must die. I am sure that if all the land that is available was properly utilized and made to yield up to its capacity, it would surely maintain the whole population. Only we have got to be industrious and to make two blades of grass grow where one grows today.

The remedy is to identify ourselves with the poor villager and to help him make the land yield its plenty, help him produce what we need, and confine ourselves to use what he produces, live as he lives, and persuade him to take to more rational ways of diet and living.

We eat mill-ground flour, and even the poor villager walks with a head-load of half a maund grain to have it ground in the nearest flour-mill. Do you know that in spite of the plenty of food-stuffs we produce, we import wheat from outside and we eat the ‘superfine’ flour from Australia? We will not use our hand-ground flour, and the poor villager also foolishly copies us. We thus turn wealth into waste, nectar into poison. For whole meal is the proper meal. Mill-ground flour is vitaminless flour, mill-ground flour kept for days is not only not vitaminless, but poison. But we will not exert ourselves to produce flour which we must eat fresh every day, and will pay for less nutritious things and purchase ill-health into the bargain. This is not any abstruse economic truth, it is a fact which is daily happening before our eyes. The same is the case with rice and gur and oil. We will eat rice, polished of its substance, and eat less nutritious sugar and pay more for it than more nutritious gur. We have suffered the village oilman to be driven to extinction and we eat adulterated oils. We idolize the cow, but kill her by slow degrees. We eat honey and kill the honey bee, with the result that honey is such a rare commodity today.
that it is only available to a ‘Mahatma’ like me or to those who must have it from the physician as a vehicle for the drugs he prescribes. If we took the trouble of learning scientific and harmless bee-keeing, we should get it cheaper and our children would get out of it all the carbohydrates they need. In all our dietetics we mistake the shadow for the substance, preferring bone-white sugar to rich brown gur and pale white bread to rich brown bran-bread.

We are said to be a nation of daily bathers. That we are, to be sure, but we are none the better for it. For we bathe with unclean water, we foul our tanks and rivers with filth and use that water for drinking and bath. We lawyers and degree-holders and doctors will not learn the elementary principles of sanitation and hygiene. We have not yet devised the most economic method of disposal of our evacuations and we turn our open healthy spaces into breeding-grounds of disease.

I implore you to throw off your inertia, to bestir yourselves to study these elementary facts and live more rational lives and learn how to turn waste into wealth. I have told you simple truths which we would soon realize and act up to if we threw off the inertia of ages. But we have shunned body-labour to the detriment of our brains, and thus rest content with the irrational way of diet and living. Let us pull ourselves together and resolve to make our bodies and brains more active.

I thank you for the patient attention you have given me.

Harijan, 11-5-1935

686. SPEECH AT MEETING OF GUJRATIS

INDORE,
[April 24, 1935]

I am glad that my visit should have been instrumental in the ending of the two factions said to have been existing amongst you. But I would now ask you to go a step further. You must think of the interests of the area where you earn your living. You must not think of sending out the whole of your savings to your families, but should use a portion for the Marathi and Hindi speaking people among

---

1 Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s report “Other Functions at Indore”. The Gujaratis of Indore had organized a function in Gandhiji’s honour and presented him a purse.

2 The date is supplied from Gandhijini Dinwari.
whom you live. It is wrong to think that business is incompatible with ethics. I know that it is perfectly possible to carry on one’s business profitably and yet honestly and truthfully. The plea that business and ethics never agree is advanced only by those who are actuated by nothing higher than narrow self-interest. He who will serve his own ends will do so by all kinds of questionable means, but he who will earn to serve the community will never sacrifice truth or honesty. You must bear in mind that you have the right to earn as much as you like, but not the right to spend as much as you like. Anything that remains after the needs of a decent living are satisfied belongs to the community.

There should be no Gujarati here who is ignorant of Hindi. When I say this I am thinking of women too. For they must associate with Hindi-speaking women here and give their share in the work of general social uplift.

The Gujarati Youth League asked for permission to take part in the function by separate speeches. To them Gandhiji said:

Would it not be better that I give you a couple of minutes than that you take a couple of minutes for speech-making? Well, I should like to leave you a message of silence. Speech without the backing of experience based on action will lack chastity and refinement. I would ask you to curb your tongues and make use of your hands and feet for the service of the community. After you have done so for a few years, you will speak the speech that counts and never fails.

_Harijan, 4-5-1935_

687. _SPEECH AT HARIJAN SCHOOL_¹

_Indore,_
_[April 24, 1935]²

Do not mind what the caste Hindus do or say. Think of what you have to do. It is no small thing that you still care for a religion which keeps you suppressed. I do not know whether I should attribute it to the greatness of the religion or to your great power of suffering.

¹ Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s report “Other Functions at Indore”
² The source does not specifically mention the date. But in the report Mahadev Desai makes a reference to the day being crowded with functions and Gandhiji going without food till the train started. He left Indore on April 24.
But whatever it may be due to, I would ask you to be patient a little longer and to glorify the religion that you have adhered to through thick and thin. You can do so by purifying your lives, by internal and external cleanliness, by giving up carrion and drink if you are given to them, and by prayer to God. The name ‘Rama’ has a miraculous power if it is repeated from a faithful and pure heart. Untouchability will disappear in no time and you will soon have your place in the community. May God bless you.

_Harijan, 4-5-1935_
APPENDICES

APPENDIX I

ABSTRACT OF THE PROCEEDINGS OF THE BOARD OF MANAGEMENT
OF ALL-INDIA VILLAGE INDUSTRIES ASSOCIATION

The following six persons shall be a permanent Board of Trustees, who shall hold funds and properties on behalf of the Association and shall disburse them in accordance with the instructions of the Board of Management, provided, however, that if the said instructions are, in the opinion of the Trustees, in conflict with the object of the Association or with the best interest thereof, there shall be a joint meeting of the Board of Management and the Trustees and that if, in spite of the joint meeting, two-thirds of the Trustees disapprove of the instructions of the Board of Management, then such instructions would be deemed to have lapsed:

(1) Sjt. Shrikrishnadas Jaju, Treasurer (Wardha)
(2) Sjt. J. C. Kumarappa (Wardha)
(3) Sjt. Jammalal Bajaj (Wardha)
(4) Dr. Khan Saheb (N.W.F.)
(5) Mr. Gopichand (Lahore)
(6) Sjt. Vaikunth L. Mehta (Bombay)

In the event of a vacancy occurring by reason of resignation, death or otherwise, such vacancy shall be filled in by the remaining Trustees from amongst the ordinary members of five years’ standing or if, at the time of the vacancy occurring, the Association has not been in existence for that period, then from the list of members then in existence and registered on or before the 31st day of March, 1935.

7. The following shall be the Foundation Members and shall also be the first Board of Management to hold office for seven years from this, the 3rd of February 1935, along with such members as may be co-opted in the manner hereinafter provided:

(1) Sjt. Shrikrishnadas Jaju
(2) Sjt. J. C. Kumarappa
(3) Smt. Gosibehn Captain
(4) Dr. Khan Saheb

1 Vide “Membership of All-India Village Industries Association and “All-India Village Industries Association Proceedings”
Sjt. Shrikrishnadas Jaju shall be the first President and Sjt. J. C. Kumarappa the Organizer and Secretary.

After the expiry of the term of office of the first Board of Management succeeding Boards shall be elected every three years by Ordinary Members of at least three years’ standing from amongst themselves.

Each member of the Board shall be jointly and severally responsible for the enforcement of the policy of the Association and shall, therefore, be expected, to the best of his ability, when the Board is not in session, to represent it and enforce its policy and programme within his sphere of influence.

8. Any persons who subscribes to the pledge hereto annexed, who is recommended by a Member of the Board of Management and whose admission is approved by the said Board, shall be an Ordinary Member of the Association.

9. Agents may be selected out of Ordinary Members by the Board for representing it without any pay in a village, villages or district and shall be chosen for their knowledge of the area of their jurisdictions, for their organizing ability and known influence within their area, and shall be subject to the Bye-laws defining their duties.

10. Honorary workers shall be workers other than Agents or Ordinary Members and shall be approved by a Member of the Board or an Agent. Such workers shall perform some tangible service of the Association.

11. Paid Workers shall be chosen by the Board or persons duly authorized thereto, subject to the confirmation of the Board, and shall give their whole time and attention to the work of the Association.

12. Any person who sympathizes with the object of the Association and pays an annual subscription of not less than Rs. 100 shall be an Associate, and one who pays a lump sum of Rs. 1,000 may be enrolled as a Life Associate.

Total receipts upto 31st January were Rs. 11,265-7-6.

Dr. S. K. Datta, Principal, Foreman’s Christian College, has agreed to be on the Board of Advisers.

Sjts. Mohanlal Kuvarji (Bombay) and Soniram Poddar (Rangoon) have become Life Associates; and Sjts. Shaligram Ramachandraji (Dhulia), Rameshwards Joharmal (Dhulia) and Venilal Modi (Baroda) Ordinary Associates.

AFFILIATION

The following rules for affiliation were framed and passed:

1. Institutions, which have as one of their objects the promotion of village industries and the welfare of the villagers and in whose constitution and rules there is nothing that is repugnant to the ideals of this Association, may be affiliated on their undertaking to abide by the rules and regulations framed or to be, from time to time, framed on this behalf by the Board of Management under Bye-law No. 8.

2. Such affiliated institutions will be subject to the inspection and supervision of this Association.

3. Every three months, they shall submit a report of work done during that period.

4. Affiliation fees will not be less than Rs. 12 per year.

5. Such affiliated institutions will be entitled to receive free copies of all literature published by this Association, and advice and guidance whenever sought.

CERTIFICATION

The following rules for certification were framed and passed:

1. The institutions and persons, who are prepared to deal in village manufactures coming within the province of this Association and who undertake to abide by the Rules and Regulations framed or to be, from time to time, framed on this behalf by the Board of Management may be certified.

2. Such certified organizations will be subject to the inspection and supervision of this Association and shall furnish from time to time such information as may be received by the Central Office in regard to their dealings periodically when called upon to do so.

Officers and employees of certified institutions and certified dealers will be expected to live up to the ideal of the All-India Village Industries Association.

3. They shall pay such fees as may be prescribed by the Board or any one authorized by the Board for the purpose.

4. Such organizations will be entitled to receive free copies of all literature published by this Association, and advice and guidance whenever sought.

MISCELLANEOUS

It was decided to supply, free of charge, a copy of the Harijan each (English, Hindi or Gujarati) to such Agents and workers as may apply.

It was resolved that, out of the annual subscriptions received by the Associates enlisted by an Agent, 75% should be allotted to the work in that district, unless it be earmarked by the donor for a specific area or purpose.

Sjt. Vaikunthrai L. Mehta of Bombay, Babu Braj Kishore Prasad of Bihar and Mr. Gopichand Bhargava of Lahore were co-opted members of the Board of Management.

Harijan, 22-2-1935
APPENDIX II

FORMS OF UNDERTAKING TO BE GIVEN BY ASSOCIATES, PAID WORKERS AND HONORARY WORKERS OF A.I.V.I.A.

ASSOCIATE’S FORM

As a sympathizer, I shall strive as far as possible to carry out in my own person the spirit underlying the movement represented by the All-India Village Industries Association and shall use village manufactures so far as is possible.

Date  SIGNATURE

PAID WORKER’S FORM

I believe in the Object of the All-India Village Industries Association and shall endeavour to the best of my ability to use only articles made by villagers. I shall obey and carry out faithfully instructions issued by those under whose charge I may be placed from time to time.

Date
Confirmed on  SIGNATURE

HONORARY WORKER’S FORM

I have read the Object and the Constitution of the All-India Village Industries Association and, as worker for the advancement of the object, I shall endeavour to the best of my ability to procure and use village manufacture myself and to propagate their use among my neighbours and those I may come in contact with. I shall also seek every opportunity of doing such services of villagers as may be in my power to render. I shall send to the Secretary of the Association a report of my activities on behalf of the All India Village Industries Association every quarter.

Date
Approved by  SIGNATURE

Harijan, 22-3-1935

1 Framed at the Association’s meeting held on March 16/18, 1935
2 Vide “Instruction to the Members of A.I. V. I. A.”
1. LETTER TO R. R. DIWAKAR

April 25, 1935

Yes, we have to submit to the most exacting orders if we are to learn the art of non-violence. Our submission has therefore to be cheerful and intelligent.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

2. LETTER TO AGATHA HARRISON

WARDHA,
April 25, 1935

MY DEAR AGATHA,

I have your letter. Extra copies of Harijan will be sent to you. Your description of the meeting in the S. E. of London is entertaining.

Do not expect me to write another autobiography unless you would send me to prison for a fairly long term and procure the necessary permission to write it there. The papers can certainly be collected and printed. Mahadev can do it best. But he is overloaded with work. Nevertheless I shall see what is possible.

I do hope C. F. Andrews was able to go to his sisters. Yes, it is good he proposed to stay there for two weeks. According to his cable, he should have started ere this reaches you. But if he is still there, please tell him he can stay longer if he likes. For the moment I am reconciled to the outdoor life.

Mira is absorbed in her garden work from early morning to late in the evening. Do not expect any letter from her for some time. You see, we are trying to become villagers but we are [far] from the thing. She is the whole-hogger among us all.

I am purposely not writing anything to C. F. A. as I expect he will have left before this is in your hands.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G. N. 1489

1 The addressee was not allowed to enter Akola District under an order from the District Magistrate.
3. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

WARDHA
April 25, 1935

CHI. MATHURADAS,

I had your letter. I spoke to Munshi¹ and wrote to Sardar.² You will be keeping good health.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI
74 WALKESHWAR ROAD
BOMBAY

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

4. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

WARDHA
April 26, 1935

CHI. MARY,

If you had told me what to send I would have sent the amount. But you are in the midst of friends. Let the bills come, they would be honoured nevertheless. If you want me to send you cash please write.³

I have told you in my wire that I could easily arrange for your examination in Bombay or Nagpur. My impression is that there is the apparatus in Wardha also. But if the friends there advise otherwise, their advice should be followed.

We were all glad to see Duncan⁴. He does not look strong. He will be here for two days.

Chandra is selfish. She prefers to be on the floor from which there is no fall. And she would watch the fun of my slipping from the bed down to the floor and probably having a bump on the forehead. Tell her I shall succumb to none of her wiles.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G. N. 6036, Also C. W. 3366, Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

¹ K. M. Munshi
² Vide “Speech at Gujarati Meeting”, 5-10-1909
³ The addressee had fallen ill. The expenses of her treatment were being met by Gandhiji.
⁴ Duncan Greenlees.
MY DEAR AMRIT,

I have your letter.

The sooner you go to Simla, the better. You will do what work you can from there. It is well to recognize your limitations. Evidently both of you need the change.

Of course your yarn will be utilized. You will have to spin for many months at the present rate before I can get a sari for Ba and a loin-cloth for myself. But that is not just now of consequence. All that will come after your second training here. It is a tragedy that you cannot find anyone in all Jullundur who knows all the processes. When one comes to think of it, the progress of spinning among the so-called cultured classes is very little.

Dalip Singh will find when he settles down to work among the Harijans that they have skill enough to earn a living but that as labourers they do not get employment as easily as the others and that as artisans they do not find customers for their wares. No doubt improvement can be and should be made in their method of dealing with hide. But this will follow his taking up the work. He need not work as a representative of our organization. He can work independently and yet get all the technical assistance he may need from us to the extent of our capacity.

The rain did interfere with our work at Indore but not much. It damaged the village crafts exhibition that was held as a side show. The women’s meeting too went off quite nicely. Thousands of them came out, many perhaps for the first time in their lives.

Love.

Yours,
BAPU

[PS.]
Letter returned.

From the original: C. W. 3530. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 6339
6. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

April 26, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

Enclosed is a letter from Mathew. I have written to him and told him not to expect Rs. 65 at present. He can’t be given anything more than what I mentioned. I have also told him that just now he would have to join as no better than a labourer. If he proves his worth, we may think further provided circumstances permit. He may be given railway fare if anything is owing to him in the accounts here, otherwise he will have to find even that from where he is.

The prize of Rs. 1,00,000 has not been awarded to anybody. But it may be awarded if a good enough model of spinning-wheel is received. I have still not received a copy of the resolution. It contains three main points: that the model cannot be considered “handy”; that only a model which is small enough for a village house and can be easily lifted and moved whenever necessary can be considered “handy”; and that such a model cannot be manufactured within Rs. 150. Would it require frequent repairs? And would the expenses on repairs exceed five per cent of the cost annually? I enclose a copy of the specific defects pointed out by Vinoba and Kakasaheb. If Keshu can remove these defects, let him do so. Kale’s machine is not with me. It had gone to Ahmedabad. I have asked them to send it back. But I may not get it back and, therefore, may not be able to have a look at it. It is better that Keshu should remain there and go on with his experiment. Let him stay with you. He should fix a limit for the expenditure on the experiments. If he wishes to come to me, he may certainly do so. But I won’t be able to tell him anything more or guide him further. There is nothing more to be explained about this experiment. Even if his invention does not deserve a prize of Rs. 1,00,000, whatever improvements he discovers are bound to be useful.

If the machine for making slivers has been perfected, it is also a good thing. Let him describe in detail what progress he has made with it. Since I have explained everything in this letter, I am not writing separately to him.

You may now organize the school as you think best. If it

1 Keshav Gandhi, Maganlal Gandhi’s son becomes a technical institute for our work, that would be excellent. Languages should be taught from a different point of view altogether. At present they are taught from a literary point of view. We should teach them simply as languages. The curriculum should include Gujarati, Hindi and English and a little bit of Sanskrit. The pupils should be taught the Urdu script. Instruction in these subjects should be easy. They can be taught while the pupils learn crafts. The crafts should be such as would bring the pupils some payment. There should be no fee, the pupil’s earning through crafts being counted as fee. Beyond a fixed limit, the earning would go to the pupil. The fee should include all the expenses. You can introduce these changes gradually without much trumpeting or publicity. Find the staff locally, if possible. There should be no highly-paid teacher. Kusum\(^1\), Lilavati\(^2\) and others who have got trained should be your staff. If Keshu helps, nothing like it. Think over this. If you wish to discuss this matter further with me, you may do so.

Do something about the inspection of Titus’s work and finish with it.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Enclosed is Vinoba’s opinion. I am writing to Raghunath Shastri.

7. LETTER TO BALVANTSINHA

[After April 26, 1935]\(^1\)

CHI. BALVANTSINHA.

I enquired and found your assertion to be true. The unaskedfor report gave me pain. Now Mahadev on being questioned tells me that Kanti had tried persuasion. Did you inform before you left? This

\(^1\) Kusam Gandhi
\(^2\) Lilavati Asar
\(^3\) T. Titus, Manager, Ashram dairy
\(^1\) The addressee had left Maganwadi on April 26.
much seems true even now that they were willing enough to dine.

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 1875

8. DISCUSSION WITH J. P. BHANSALI

[Before April 27, 1935]

GANDHIJI: How much did you spin yesterday?

BHANSALI: Not at all, I am sorry to say.

G. But I thought you had started spinning?

B. I did about fifty yards the other day. But that's all.

G. How nice it would be if you would make a loin-cloth for me . . . . I should be very glad if you could make a pair, but even one would satisfy me.

B. It would be a rare privilege to be able to spin for your loin-cloth, but you know my state of mind!

Next day again there was a talk. With child-like naivete he asked Gandhiji, “You do not want the loin-cloth. You want me to work. Don't you?”

G. You are right. But if you must work, why not do this thing for me?

B. If I must work, why not command me to do some other work? I am not worthy to do this sacred thing for you.

G. But surely those who spun for the cloth I am wearing were by no means purer than you.

B. No, Bapu. I am humbler than even the humblest, humbler than the dust of their feet.

Harijan, 27-4-1935

2 The discussion is extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter”.

3 Mahadev Desai had concluded: “The next day old associaters like Kakasaheb tackled him. . . . Bhansali persisted in pleading his unworthiness. ‘But’, said Kakasaheb, ‘supposing Bapu were to ask one of us to fetch a glass of water, and if all of us were to say to him, ‘we are sorry, Bapu, we have not the purity to do anything for you’, what would happen to Bapu?’ That seemed to go straight home. Bhansali wrote (for he talks only to Gandhiji): ‘All right, then. I spin. I shall err on the safe side.’ And he is now regularly spinning.”
9. A GROWING VICE?

The Principal of the Sanatana Dharma College, Lahore, writes:

Allow me to request you to peruse the accompanying newspaper cutting, notices, etc., which speak for themselves. The Youth Welfare Association is doing very useful work here in the Punjab. It has attracted notice in academic and administrative quarters, while it has secured the active interest of enlightened guardians of boys. Pandit Sitaram Das of Bihar is the leading spirit of this movement which counts very many distinguished people here among its patrons.

The evil of juvenile seduction is admittedly more rampant in the Punjab and North West Frontier Province than elsewhere in India.

May I pray that you will draw the attention of the country to this canker through a note or letter in Harijan or in any other newspaper?

The Secretary of the Youth League wrote to me long ago on this very delicate subject. On receiving his letter I entered into correspondence with Dr. Gopichand who confirmed the statements made in the League Secretary’s letter. But I could not see my way clear to discussing the problem in these columns or elsewhere. I had known of the evil but was not sure that a newspaper discussion could deal with it to any purpose. Nor am I sure now. But I may not resist the appeal of the Principal of the College.

The vice is not new. It is widespread. As it is necessarily kept secret, it is not possible to detect it easily. It goes hand in hand with easy life. In the case referred to by the Principal, the teachers are alleged to be the corruptors of their own wards. “When the salt loses its savour wherewith shall it be salted?”

This is a matter which no commission, no government can deal with successfully. It is the function of the moral reformer. The parents have to be awakened to a sense of their responsibility. The students should be brought in close touch with clean life. The idea that ethics and clean living are the foundation of true education, should be seriously propagated. Trustees of educational institutions have to exercise the greatest care in the selection of teachers, and having selected them they have to see to it that they remain up to the mark. These are some of the ways in which the awful vice can be brought under control even if it cannot be eradicated.

Harijan, 27-4-1935

1 Dr. Gopichand Bhargava, a Congress leader of the Punjab and later a Minister
10. LETTER TO G. V. GURJALE

WARDHA,
April 27, 1935

MY DEAR GURJALE.

Take your wife in your confidence. Realize that loyalty to her is your complete shield. You will win the day.

Yours,
BAPU

From a photostat: G. N. 1381

11. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

April 27, 1935

CHI. JAMNALAL.

Kamalnayan\(^1\) has left for Allahabad. I have written to . . . that I would be glad if she could come here; I should like to meet her before the betrothal takes place. Ramakrishna\(^2\) had accompanied me to Indore. He has been detained there by Gulab for two or three days. He will see Ujjain and other places nearby. Both are expected to arrive today.

Prabhavati\(^3\) had a letter from Brijkishorebabu\(^4\) He has written to her that she should be ready to go to Bihar when he asks her to do so. That means she may have to go there even when there are no holidays. Prabhavati has replied to him that she will be ready to leave as soon as she hears from him.

Chaudhari has come here . . .\(^5\) I do not know what talk you have had, but from what he and Valunjkar said, I understand that you are prepared to give his wife Rs. 100 for serving in the maternity home. I do not remember having discussed this subject with you. But

---

1 Also known as Bhikshu Nirmalanand
2 Addressee’s sons
3 The name has been imitted
4 Addressee’s sons
5 Wife of Jayaprakash Narayan
6 Omissions as in the source
7 ibid.
I do remember that Chaudhari had talked to me. On the basis of our talk, Chaudhari’s wife has resigned from the Seva Sadan at Poona. Chaudhari has already arrived here, and his wife also will be arriving soon. From your postcard to Valunjkar, it appears that you have not come to any decision so far. You do not even know that lady. Please write to me what you would now like to do about this matter. His wife can be lodged in the orchard for the time being, though it may not be possible to accommodate. . . The maternity home will have to be built, and perhaps, we shall have to consider the desirability of building it in the orchard. If you have decided to engage that lady, then some portion of the upper storey of the old bungalow or of the new one in which you are now living should be spared for cases of delivery. But before taking in such cases, she should visit the women in their homes and examine ordinary cases, give them medicines, meet village women, and so on. For starting a maternity home, it will also be necessary to spend some money on buying cots, etc. All this can be done only after you arrive here and think over the whole matter. The main thing, however, is, whether or not you wish to engage that lady. Chaudhari cannot be given Rs. 100 from the Industries Association. The Association can give him Rs. 25 per month at the most, for he can be useful only in the experiments of making hand-made paper.

I will pay a short visit to Bombay to see Kamala1. I think it will be difficult to see her while she is on her way.

Madalasa2 must have arrived there. I should like you to give up travelling by trains and cars for some time.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 2965

---

1 Kamala Nehru, who was to sail for Europe on May 23, under medical advice
2 Addressee’s daughter
12. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

April 27, 1935

CHI. LILAVATI,

I have certainly no plans for a tour. Perhaps I may have to go to Borsad. In the beginning of May at any rate I shall be here.

You will stay with me in the orchard here. There is no room. We are living in the verandah. There is a room but only large enough to keep our things in. Bear these facts in mind before you decide to come.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 9681

13. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

April 27, 1935

BHAI GHANSHYAMDAS,

I have made mention to you of Sharma from Khurja. He has some familiarity with nature cure. I have known him for years. He intends to gain some experience at Battle Creek and later visit some nature-cure clinics of Europe, spending in all one and a half years. He is self-sacrificing and clever but of a slightly erratic temperament. He is full of the spirit of service. He had a clinic of his own which he has squandered away. He had published a few books which he has burnt because they contained little knowledge gained from experience. I want to send Sharma to America and Europe using some funds out of the amount you intend to give me for this year. If this has your approval, find out and let me know what the journey to Battle Creek will cost and the convenient route. He will of course travel third or deck whichever is available. What would be the cost of living there in poverty? Do they take students at Battle Creek? Would it be better for him to go via Japan?

How are you keeping now?

You will have seen that I have taken up the burden of the Hindi Sahitya Sammelan.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Hindi original: C. W. 8009. Courtesy: G. D. Birla

10 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
14. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

April 27, 1935

CH. SHARMA,

What is this? The matter was trivial but pregnant with great import. I did take note of what you said. The load was more than you could carry and you needed assistance. This was what pained me. We are poor people; why need we carry so much luggage? You did not need anything beyond a book, a blanket, a towel, a lota, a bowl, a sheet, a dhoti, a kurta and a cap. Why did you bring more articles? And since you had brought, you should have quietly called a porter and left, or you could have even left behind the excess luggage as I had suggested. Neither Bhagwanji nor Kishoreprasad should have gone. Both were busy but went to help you to carry the luggage. That Kishoreprasad was also carrying letters is beside the point. You had no reason at all to feel hurt. You ought to have taken a lesson from the incident. If even now you have learnt it, the incident will have served a useful purpose. I have already despatched the letter

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Your letter is being returned.

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, between pp. 156 and 157

1 In the source, the addressee explains that the letter was addressed to Dr. K. H. Kellog of Battle Creek.
15. LETTER TO NARAHARI D. PARIKH

[Before April 28, 1935]¹

CHI. NARAHARI,

I got your letter. I have sent a wire to Titus asking him to hand over charge to you immediately and to wait there till the arrival of Narandas and then come over here.

I have also written to him. Do you have any suspicion regarding his integrity? If possible I wish to keep him with us. Please, therefore, guide me.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

How is Vanamala?² How are you?

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9077

16. LETTER TO JAMNA GANDHI

Silence Day [Before April 28, 1935]³

CHI. JAMNA,

I have your letter. How did your health take a bad turn once again? Did the Punjabi vaidya’s treatment fail? I hope you have gone to Rajkot and that your health has improved.

Purshottam’s letter is such that instead of being unhappy by it, we should feel happy. He should get the blessings of us all in his happy decision.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: S.N. 33764

¹ From the reference to Titus; vide also the following two items.
² Addressee’s daughter
³ In his letter to addressee’s son Purshottam, dated April 18, 1935, Gandhiji says “May you live long and may your aspirations be fulfilled” and approves of his plan of going to Chorwad in Saurashtra; vide “Letter to H. S. L. Polak”, 23-9-1909. Then on April 28 of the same year, he writes to Purshottam’s wife Vijay at her Chorwad address. Evidently by that date Purshottam and Vijaya had got married. The reference to his “happy decision”, presumably the decision to marry, suggests that this was written before his marriage to Vijaya.
17. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

WARDHA,
April 28, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

Jivanlal and the others may certainly come to see me in connection with the school. Even if I go out, it will be only for a few days. Only the visit to Borsad depends on Vallabhbhai’s desire. Even if I have to go, it will be after the 15th of May.

Yes, the money received from Tharparkar has been disbursed exactly as you have stated. Draw it from some account.

I have already written to you about Mathew. Titus has been relieved from Sabarmati. Narahari has no trust at all in his ability. I have called him here. If he comes, I will keep him and watch him. In any case you should go and look into his accounts. Keshu’s letter was a clean one. Give him Rs. 300 more. But fix a limit now. It was a good letter.

The suggestion I made in the letter to Jamna regarding steam cooking deserves careful consideration. Kanu will explain how we do it here. The method is easy and results in considerable economy. No new utensils are required. Why should any bhatts come? There should be no such class of professional cooks as there should be none of scavengers. The idea that a cook should always be a Brahmin is born of ignorance.

Blessings from

BAPU

18. LETTER TO NARAHARI D. PARIKH

April 28, 1935

CHI. NARAHARI,

Titus must have handed over charge to you.1 If he has not done so, send me a wire. I will then wire to him again. I hope he gave you my letter.

If you can manage the dairy and make it a success, I think an important task will have been accomplished.

1 Addressee’s wife
2 Vide also the preceding two items.
Get over your nose trouble. I think it can be done with simple remedies.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Why have you asked for saris and khadi to be sent from here? Your request doesn’t seem proper to me. Mahadev will write more.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9076

19. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

April 28, 1935

CHI. JAMNALAL,

I got your letter. Madalasa may continue to have boiled milk and eat chapatis if she can digest them. Let her eat anything she likes, provided it is not harmful for her health. But in no case should she eat more than four times a day, nor in between the meals. It is obvious that she will be able to eat more there in proportion as she takes exercise.

Has the discharge from your ear stopped? Rajendrababu and Raja' have arrived. Raja is very much tired. He will, therefore, leave after a little while.

The professor also has arrived.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

I have already written to Taradevi about Pyarelal.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2966

1 C. Rajagopalachari
20. LETTER TO MADALASA BAJAJ

April 28, 1935

CHI. MADALASA,

I have your letters. I shall wire tomorrow about the diet. Improve your health.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Panchven Putrakho Bapuke Ashirvad, p. 316

21. LETTER TO MANU GANDHI

April 28, 1935

CHI. MANUDI¹,

All right, you may now even stop writing to me. If you insist on my permission to go to Bombay, you have it provided Aunt² is agreeable.

I shall be content if you become happy and good.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 1541. Courtesy: Manubehn S. Mashruwala

22. LETTER TO VIJAYA GANDHI

April 28, 1935

CHI. VIJAYA³,

I learnt from Jamna’s letter, received yesterday, that you had survived a serious illness. You should now learn the art of keeping healthy. You should eat food as medicine and not for the pleasure of the palate. Never eat factory-made sugar. Eat daily with your food fresh leaves of a bhaji like fenugreek and juicy fruit like orange or

¹ Harilal Gandhi’s daughter
² Balibehn Adalaja
³ Purushottam Gandhi’s wife, daughter-in-law of Narandas Gandhi grapes. Learn to breathe properly. And you must take some exercise. Keep in open air as take as possible. Write to me.

Blessings from
BAPU

CHI. VJAYABEHN
C/O SHRI HARAKHCHAND MOTICHAND
CHORWAD
SONAGADH STATE
KATHIWAR

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II

23. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

April 28, 1935

CHI. VASUMATI,

How can you possibly expect a long letter from me? Bhansali is here. He takes uncooked flour and neem leaves. He goes on spinning all the time. Amtussalaam has come here. She is all right. As for other news, somebody is always coming or going. This time things have been made a little harder than before. Nobody gets a separate room for himself or herself.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C.W. 645. Courtesy: Vasumati Pandit. Also S.N. 9399

24. LETTER TO VIJAYABEHN PATEL

April 28, 1935

CHI. VIJAYA,

I got your letter. I have no separate room for you. You will have to work hard the whole day and the food is unspiced. Come if you can endure all this. If you come, bring with you sufficient clothing and a thali, bowl and lota. If you think you will not be able to work, do not come.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 7059. Also C.W. 4551. Courtesy: Vijayabehn M. Pancholi

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
25. LETTER TO GANGABEHN VAIDYA

April 28, 1935

CHI. GANGABEHN,

I understand what you say. Go on doing service with ever greater devotion. May your pledge to remain steady at one place for five years be fulfilled. What simple remedies did Hakimji teach you?

I heard about Maitri being betrothed too. When are they getting married? The credit for saving that family goes wholly to you.

Do you keep good health?

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—6: G.S. Gangabehne, p. 84

26. LETTER TO RAMDAS GANDHI

April 28, 1935

CHI. RAMDAS,

I have your letter. You are very lucky, indeed. I am glad that your last enterprise has come to nought. It could not have continued. The difference between business and service is that in the latter income is limited and in the former it is unlimited. Business, of course, calls for hard work. You should therefore take up a job and learn what you wish to learn. You will acquire self-confidence if you learn some trade. If you take in a press, learn printing or composing. Then there are of course the crafts such as tailoring, shoe-making and carpentry. The easiest are tailoring and shoe-making. Both involve only stitching. After learning these crafts you may even do business in the filed. Instead of hankering after money, you should be keen on learning. Ba suggests that you should go to Amreli and serve under Ramjibhai. I also would like Amreli provided that there too you learnt some craft. I have been giving you this advice for many years. You should become an expert in something. Then alone will your worth be properly recognized. If you become an expert, even if only as a barber, you will come to be respected.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Ramdas Gandhi Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

1 Maitri Giri
27. LETTER TO BENARSIDAS CHATURVEDI
April 28, 1935

BHAI BENARSIDAS,

I had your letter. Even if we do form a committee, who will do the actual work? We shall deliberate in the standing committee. Will you attend it?

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI BENARSIDAS CHATURVEDI
120/2 UPPER CIRCULAR ROAD
CALCUTTA

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 2568

28. TELEGRAM TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ
WARDHAGANI,
April 29, 1935

SETH JAMNALALJI
BHOWALI

MADALASA SHOULD HAVE BOILED MILK AND CREAM WHOLE- MEAL BREAD OR CHAPATI IF DIGESTIBLE.

BAPU

Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, p. 158

29. LETTER TO PARIKSHITLAL L. MAJMUDAR
April 29, 1935

BHAI PARIKSHITLAL,

The friend who has advised Haribhai1 to build a house near Sachin does not seem to have advanced his best interest. When Haribhai could not manage to collect as much as Rs. 800, what can he achieve with the aid of Rs. 200? How will he be able to improve his condition? How much of what he has made will he be able to sell from there? Explain to me the whole business.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI PARIKSHITLAL
HARIJAN ASHIRAM
SABARMATI

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3955

1 A Harijan worker; vide also “Letter to Lord Amphill”, 29-7-1909
30. LETTER TO RAMDAS GANDHI

WARDHA, April 29, 1935

CHI. RAMDAS,

I got both your letters. Even if you were to fail in following your own inclination, I would count that too, as success. If you do what I desire and succeed in that, it would be my success. But that would be of no profit to you. What you need just now is self-confidence. If you acquire that, all will be well.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Mr. Sumitra Kulkarni Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

31. LETTER TO PRABHUDAS GANDHI

WARDHA, April 29, 1935

CHI. PRABHUDAS,

I did get the figures about jaggery and sugar sent by you. I have found no exaggeration in them. They lie buried in other papers. I will look for them today.

If no paper is available there, it might perhaps be unnecessary to order new paper to be made. Where such paper cannot be procured at all, I would not consider it right for a poor man to get it from outside and use it. That you are able to get milk is welcome news. If despite your effort, you cannot obtain cow’s milk, use goat’s.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

Now that Ambabhavani is a mother, I hope she will not go to the length of not writing to me at all.

SHRI PRABHUDAS GANDHI
GUJERIA
BADAUN
U.P.

From the Gujarati original: S.N. 33044

1 Also “Help From Natal"

2 Prabhudas’s wife, Amba. Gandhiji has humorously compared her to the goddess Ambabhavani.
32. LETTER TO MOOLCHAND AGRAWAL

April 29, 1935

BHAI MOOLCHAND,

I still regret not having been able to see you at Indore. I had absolutely no time. I already know what you have written. For the present I can suggest no course except to endure things. You certainly can write everything to the State. Who will now look after the work at Ringas?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 760.

33. LETTER TO PYARELAL

Sunday [After April 29, 1935]¹

CHI. PYARELAL,

Do not hurt the feelings of either Mother or Sushila. Calmly put up with the illness.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

34. A LETTER

April 30, 1935

Of course there are many ways of reaching God and yet all are derivable from the same source. One who prays for the removal of untouchability may be doing more effective work than the one who goes among Harijans. My point is that for millions prayer without work is a mere vocal effort.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

¹ This letter is written on the back of a letter to Gandhiji dated April 29, 1935.
35. LETTER TO HUKAM CHAND

WARDHA,
April 30, 1935

SHRI HUKAM CHANDJI

It is a matter of regret that I have received nothing so far from you. Even now I am hopeful of getting a substantial sum from you for the propagation of Hindi.

I am enclosing herewith a letter submitted by the labourers. If what is said therein is correct, I feel it is necessary and proper to remedy matters quickly. There is no reason why you should not set an example.

Yours,
M. K. GANDHI

[From Hindi]
Veena, Tributes Issue, April-May 1969

36. LETTER TO JOHARILAL MITTAL

April 30, 1935

BHAISHRI MITTAL,

Daily I have been waiting for a letter and some drafts from you. Apart from Rs. 500 from the Gujaratis and Rs. 101 from Bhadwas I have so far received nothing here. ²

Yours,
M. K. GANDHI

GENERAL SECRETARY
RECEPTION COMMITTEE
HINDI SAHITYA SAMMELAN, INDORE

[From Hindi]
Veena, Tributes Issue, April-May 1969

¹ President, Reception Committee, Hindi Sahitya Sammelan
² This sentence is not clear in the original.
37. NOTE TO SUMANGAL PRAKASH

[April, 1935]

You took neem leaves pounded into pulp. That may have made you feel hot. Pounded leaves is not the same thing as the juice of the leaves. They are as different as polished rice is from unpolished rice. The leaves should not be strained. I used to strain the vegetables a little when I was taking vegetable juice. That way you will not get the feeling of heat. You may take as much tamarind as you may find necessary. If you want to take a little more you may do so. Milk will satisfy the hunger. The quantity of the milk cannot be increased too soon. If green vegetable is palatable you may take five tolas to begin with. Once you are able to digest it you may increase the quantity by five tolas at a times, going up to 20 tolas. This should be taken thrice. You do get goat’s milk at 10.30 and fresh cow’s milk in the morning and evening.

From the Hindi original: Sumangal Prakash Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

38. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

WARDHA,
May 1, 1935

CHI. MARY,

I have your letter. I do not know who the friends were who came to you nor have I any knowledge about your needing hand-made paper. To whom did you write? Girls are away on a holiday. Chhotelal\(^1\) has gone to the South to learn bee-keeping. I shall send you nothing till I have heard from you. Duncan was here for four days. He was still working none too well.

I hope you are making steady progress.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G. N. 6043. Also C.W. 3373. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

\(^{1}\) As supplied by the addressee

\(^{2}\) Chhotelal Jain, manager of the Wardha Ashram
39. LETTER TO AGATHA HARRISON

May 1, 1935

MY DEAR AGATHA,

If it was possible, for your sake, to send somebody to London I would do so. But I see that it cannot be done at present. Rajaji will not look at the proposal nor would anyone else. There never has been within living memory such unbending attitude on the part of the Government one sees now. It is the naked sword that is being dangled before India at the present moment. I regard it as a trial from above.
If we have real love, i.e., ahimsa in us, all will be well. If we have not and we have used it merely as a cloak, the naked sword is well deserved. Anyway the mentality being as I have described it, no one of the front rank think of going to England, so long as the policy persists.

I did read a paragraph about Sir Samuel’s illness. But the reports did not give it any serious importance. I therefore refrained from writing or cabling.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G. N. 1490

40. LETTER TO BALUKAKA KANITKAR

May 1, 1935

DEAR BALUKAKA,

When you invite me to read your pamphlets you ask me to do what is not possible for me today. I do hope you will succeed in your endeavour in the three villages.

M. K. GANDHI

C.W. 966. Courtesy: G. N. Kanitkar

1 The addressee had suggested to Gandhiji that someone should go to England
“to help people understand the situation better”. Vide also “Letter to Swami Shankeranand”, 30-8-1909
41. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

May 1, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

Shummy’s letter was received after I had written to you. I am going to make good use of the information he has given me. I would like him to prosecute similar inquiry about tamarind seeds and the seeds of other edible fruits.

I am presently going to send you specially made envelopes and note-paper.

You will tell me in good time when you need slivers.

Yes, we saw the old Maharani but had no opportunity of talking to her.

Love to you both.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 3531. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6340

42. LETTER TO PADMAVATI

May 1, 1935

DEAR SISTER,

Ramachandran will show you my letter to him. You have developed a liking for Kanti of which I hope he will prove worthy. I would welcome the marriage of your daughter with Kanti, if he proves his worthiness when the time for marriage comes. The interval must be one of sacred preparation on either side. One thing I must beg of you. The girl should know nothing of our intentions. She must be free to make her choice when she grows to maturity.

I know that Kanti has been in frequent correspondence with you. Nothing of it should be secret from Ramachandran. Kanti will be guilty of unfaithfulness if he did anything in connection with the girl or held communication with you secretly from Ramachandran. I could never forgive myself if any such thing happened.

With love,

BAPU

From a copy: C.W. 9741. Courtesy: Kantilal Gandhi

1 Kanwar Shumsher Singh, addressee’s brother

2 Regarding guava seeds and use of coal as tooth powder. The information appeared under the title “Useful Hints” in Harijan, 18-5-1935.
MY DEAR RAMACHANDRAN,

I have deliberately refrained hitherto from replying to your letter regarding Kanti. I am now able to give you the reply. The girl should know nothing about our intentions till she grows to maturity. Kanti may harbour and the age of maturity hold any communication with her directly or indirectly [sic]. He may write as he is already writing to your sister but nothing of what he writes should be secret from you. All his letters should be accessible to you if and whenever you desire. Each has to be worthy of the other. If, therefore, the girl has to be prepared for Kanti, Kanti has to prepare himself for being worthy of her and you. If when the time for marriage comes, Kanti is found not to have progressed along the right lines, you are free to withhold the girl from his assuming of course that when she comes to maturity, she will listen to you. For you and me the proposed union can be tolerated only if it becomes a pattern for others to copy. It must therefore be developed in the spirit of service. Development along this line must mean greater simplicity, greater self-abnegation, greater advance towards truth and ahimsa, uttermost brahmacharya in thought and word and deed. The contemplation of the girl must mean to Kanti exclusion of every other woman from his thought for the gratification of his sexual impulse.

If these conditions are fulfilled, I should welcome the union. There is nothing wrong, as it seems to me, from the inception. Kanti honestly confessed as soon as he felt drawn to the girl. His subsequent conduct too has appeared to me to have been free from reproach.

This will be seen by Kanti who will send it to you. If there is anything in my letter of which you disapprove please let me know, I am asking Kanti to send a copy of this to Devdas. Of course Mahadev will see this as also Harilal. Enclosed\(^\text{1}\) is for your sister.

Love.

BAPU

From a copy: C.W. 9742. Courtesy, Kantilal Gandhi

\(^{1}\) Vide the preceding item
44. LETTER TO KANTI LAL GANDHI

May 1, 1935

CHI. KANTI,

I wished every day to write to Ramachandran, but could not decide what to say. I have not [even] asked you what you have been doing. Now read both the accompanying letters. If you like them, send them on to Ramachandran. Show me the letter which you write forwarding them. Show it to Mahadev and Harilal too. Send a copy to Devdas. It is my wish that this alliance may prove an ideal one.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

I have gone through the cash book. I assume that you daily complete the ledger. Let me know how far you have come.

45. LETTER TO DR. HARIPRASAD DESAI

May 1, 1935

Bhai Hariprasad,

I got your letter. The person for whom I wanted your homeredies had inquired thrice about them; he will be glad now.

I have no doubt that sending your previous letter to Sardar was the best use that could have been made of it.

I liked your description of myself. I am better understood in our own country than anywhere in Europe. Tell Haribhai that he should give the benefit of whatever he has brought from Europe to the villagers.

DR. HARIPRASAD DESAI
11 PRITAM NAGAR
ELLISBRIDGE, AHMEDABAD

Vandemataram from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4137

1 Vide the preceding two items.
2 A social worker and medical practitioner of Ahmedabad
46. LETTER TO RANI VIDYAVATI

May 1, 1935

CHI. VIDYAVATI,

Why are you making yourself miserable? When you want to die a heroic death and tread the path of the brave, how can you show such weakness of heart? You must display heroism under all conditions. When one is afflicted with sickness, there are more occasions to show courage. She is a true heroine who does not forget God in pain, shows a concern for the nurse, is content with whatever nursing she gets, takes the least amount of service and is always prepared to embrace death. Being roused to battle and die is heroism of an inferior kind.

I am sending a telegram to Dr. Roy today. Whatever happens, you will not show anger or condemn anyone. You are not going to leave the Seva Sadan in a hurry.

Send a comforting letter to Tara. Tell her not to cry. If you smile even in your moment of sorrow, others will not cry either.

Blessings from BAPU

From the Hindi original: Rani Vidyavati Papers. Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library

47. LETTER TO SUMANGAL PRAKASH

May 1, 1935

CHI. SUMANGAL,

How could you help it if questions arose in your mind? It was proper that you told me. I am giving my attention to Ramakrishna. I have not done anything more. I am watching. If anything comes to your notice unsought do let me know.

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: Sumangal Prakash Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library
48. LETTER TO AYOHDHYA PRASAD

May 1, 1935

BHAI AYOHDHYA PRASAD,

Your letter to Avadhesh was read out to me. If you wish that he should remain with me you have to forgo the temptation of calling him for a short visit. It would cause interruption in work and waste of money.

Vandemataram from

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 3216

49. FOREWORD TO “GUJARAT AND ITS LITERATURE”

[Before May 2, 1935]¹

The only reason for inviting me to write a Foreword to a literary work such as Shri Munshi’s can be that I am called ‘Mahatma’. I can make no literary pretensions. My acquaintance with Gujarati and for that matter any literature, is, for no fault of mine, next to nothing. Having led a life of intense action since early youth I have had no opportunity of reading except in prisons whether in South Africa or in India. Shri Munshi’s survey of Gujarati literature has made fascinating reading for me. His miniature pen-portraits of writers give one a fair introduction to their writings.

Shri Munshi’s estimate of our literary achievement appears to me to be very faithful. The survey naturally confines itself to the language understood and spoken by the middle class. Commercially-minded and self-satisfied, their language has naturally been ‘effeminate and sensuous’. Of the language of the people we know next to nothing. We hardly understand their speech. The gulf between them and us, the middle class, is so great that we do not know them and they know still less of what we think and speak.

The dignified persistence of Shri Devendra Satyarthi, a writer whom I do not remember to have ever met, has made me peep into his remarkable collection of folk songs of the provinces he has been travelling in. They are the literature of the people. The middle classes of the provinces to which the songs belong are untouched by them, even as we of Gujarat are untouched by the songs of folk, i.e., the language of the masses of Gujarat. Meghani of the Saurashtra school has done folklore research in Kathiawar. His researches show the gulf that exists between the language of the people and ours.

¹ Vide “Letter to K. M. Munshi”, 2-5-1935

But the folklore belongs to an order of things that is passing away, if it has not already done so. There is an awakening among the masses. They have begun not with thought but with action, as I suppose they always do. Their language has yet to take definite shape. It is to be found somewhat, but only somewhat, in the newspapers, not in books. Shri Munshi’s work therefore may be said to have only commenced with the volume before me. It was necessary. But he has to continue the work so well begun. He has the requisite passion for his work. If he has health, he will now go direct to the people and find out what they are thinking, and he will give expression to their thoughts. The unquestionable poverty of Gujarati is a token of the poverty of the people. But no language is really poor. We have hardly had time to speak since we have begun to act. Gujarat like the rest of India is brooding. The language is shaping itself. There is enough work awaiting writers like our author.

Munshi has alluded to Parsi-Gujarati. So there is. It is unfortunate that there is Parsi-Gujarati. It is confined to novels and stories of the shilling-shocker style. They are meant merely for passing the idle hour. The language is tortured out of shape. And just as there is Parsi-Gujarati there is also Muslim-Gujarati though on a much humbler scale. It is impossible to ignore these two streams. They are not wells of Gujarati undefiled. But no reviewer of Gujarati literature can afford to ignore the existence of works which hundreds, if not thousands, of Parsis and Muslims read and by which, maybe, even shape part of their conduct.

M. K. GANDHI

_Gujarat and Its Literature_
50. A LETTER

May 2, 1935

The more you tease some boils, the worse they become. Hindu-Muslim tension is such a boil. I therefore pray for its solution. I do not want to speak about it.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai.

51. A LETTER

May 2, 1935

Love has no boundary. My nationalism includes the love of all the nations of the earth irrespective of creed.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

52. LETTER TO K. M. MUNSHI

WARDHA
May 2, 1935

BHAJ MUNSHI,

I had got your letter. The Foreword¹ has already been sent.

The Socialists cannot be stopped from going their ways. We have no choice but to tolerate all that till Jawaharlal leaves. Where is the need to reply to him every time? We do accept some of his views. I think that after pointing out clearly where we differ from him over principles, we should remain silent.

In matters concerning which we have no differences with them, let them go ahead with their work. In regard to matters over which we have differences, why should we not cultivate the faith that their plan will simply not progress?

I tried hard to persuade Rajaji. I think we must let him have rest. He has assured me that there is no such reason as you suspect. We have no reason to disbelieve him. If he has been offended, he wouldn’t hide it from me.

Blessings from

BAPU

¹ The addressee had written to say that since swaraj was not possible without Hindu-Muslim unity Gandhiji should concentrate only on this.
² The addressee, an American, is not identified by name in the source.
³ Vide “Foreword to “Gujarat and its Literature”, 2-5-1935
[PS.]

Did you see that the resolution\(^1\) we had in mind was passed at the Hindi Sammelan?

From Gujarati: C.W. 7572. Courtesy: K. M. Munshi

53. A LETTER

May 3, 1935

Faith is not a thing to grasp, it is a state to grow to. And growth comes from within.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai.

54. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

May 3, 1935

CHI. PREMA,

I got your letter just now. All the descriptions are beautiful. You will be able to manage most of the things.\(^2\) The Koran has been translated into Urdu. You should go through the translation. You will then be able to get into its spirit. You should also go through the Urdu readers. They have been published from the Punjab. Some may have been published from Hyderabad, too.

I understand about straining oil. We have an indigenous oil-press here. But your method may perhaps be useful in pressing small quantities. I will try it.

Probably I may have to leave on the 6th for Borsad. I intend to return on the 17th. I shall be spending a few hours on the way in Bombay, which will be on the 16th.\(^3\) If this programme is finalized, you will be able to know about it from the newspapers also.

Blessings from

BAPU

\(^1\) Vide “Two Good Resolutions”
\(^2\) The addressee was working among Muslim women and used to read out to them from the Marathi version of the Koran.
\(^3\) Gandhiji in fact left Wardha on May 21 and was in Borsad till the end of the month.
55. LETTER TO PURUSHOTTAMDAS THAKURDAS

May 3, 1935

BHAI PURUSHOTTAMDAS¹,

I saw your letter only today. I returned from Ahmedabad this very day. I went through the article sent by you. The tears shed by the author towards the end are improper. If the Government is awake why cannot we wake up? It is for persons like you to wake the people up. If, however, you also look to others, won’t it be like the sea losing its salt and then bemoaning the fact? Wake up yourself, show the way and others will follow.

Exchange and similar issues are matters of high finance. What can the Congress do about them? Those who know the subject do not, cannot, join the Congress. Those who are in the Congress naturally do not know much about such matters. This is a work for experts on finance. They should set up a special body for that purpose and take the necessary steps.

The author of the article says that if India had been awake when the country went off the gold standard, the step would not have been taken. What ought to have been done to prevent it?

What can we do today so that the right policy will be followed? Do you think there is any connection between this problem and that of village industries? Won’t the villagers have to learn to be clean, irrespective of whether or not the right policy is followed; and know what proper diet is? If the revival of [Village] industries is desirable, shouldn’t it be carried out? Do you think carrying it out will interfere with currency agitation? Hardly any currency experts have joined in it. And those who have joined can still continue working in the other field.

What is the remedy if finance experts do not take up this burden? Who will wake them up? I myself do not know enough about the subject to be able to do so.

I understand about cement. I am writing to Bapa² asking him to send an application.

Vandemataram from
MOHANDAS

¹ Economist and Vice-Chairman, Indian Central Banking Enquiry Committee.
² Amritlal V. Thakkar.
56. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

May 3, 1935

I am writing to Dr. Gopichand. Your account here shows a balance of Rs. 53. Rs. 42 is your railway fare. But I don’t remember the details. My advice is that you may leave Rs. 100 as a standing account.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Hindi]

Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, pp. 157-8

57. TWO GOOD RESOLUTIONS

The Hindi Sahitya Sammelan, recently held at Indore, passed some useful resolutions. Among them was one giving a definition of Hindi, and another expressing the opinion that all the languages that had descended from or had been largely influenced by Sanskrit should be written in the Devanagari script.

The first resolution is designed to emphasize the fact that Hindi does not supplant the provincial languages, that it supplements them, and that it extends the knowledge and usefulness of the speaker as an all-India worker. By recognizing the fact that the language written in the Urdu script but understood both by Mussalmans and Hindus is also Hindi, the Sammelan disarms the suspicion that it has any design upon the Urdu script. The authorized script of the Sammelan still remains Devanagari. The propagation of the Devanagari script among the Hindus of the Punjab, as elsewhere, will still continue. The resolution in no way detracts from the value of the Devanagari script. It recognizes the right of Mussalmans to write the language in the Urdu script as they have done hitherto.

In order to give practical effect to the second resolution, a committee was appointed with Kakasaheb Kalelkar as Chairman and Convener, to explore the possibility of such introduction and to make

---

1 This was a postscript to Mahadev Desai’s letter to the addressee informing him of a bookshop at Lahore and advising him on behalf of Gandhiji to purchase the books he needed through Dr. Gopichand Bhargava so as to get a discount on the price.
such changes and additions in the Devanagri script as may be necessary to make it easier to write and more perfect than it is so as to represent the sounds not expressed by the existing letters.

Such a change is necessary if interprovincial contacts are to increase and if Hindi is to be the medium of communication between provinces. The second was ever an accepted proposition for the past twenty-five years with those who subscribe to the creed of the Hindi Sahitya Sammelan. The question of script has often been discussed but never seriously tackled. And yet it seems to be a natural corollary to the first proposition. Learning sister languages becomes incredibly simple and easy. Gitanjali, written in the Bengali script, is a sealed book to everyone except the Bengalis. It is almost an open book when it is written in the Devanagari script. There is in it a vast number of words derived from Sanskrit and easily understood by the people of the other provinces. Everyone can test the truth of this statement. We ought not unnecessarily to tax the future generations with the trouble of having to learn different scripts. It is cruel to require a person desiring to learn Tamil, Telugu, Malayalam, Kanarese, Oriya and Bengali to learn six scripts, besides Devanagari, let alone the Urdu script if he would know what the Muslim brethren are saying and doing through their writings. I have not presented an ambitious programme for a lover of his country or humanity. Today the impenetrable barrier of different scripts has made the learning of sister languages and the learning of Hindi by the sister provinces a needlessly heavy task. It will be for Kakasaheb’s committee on the one hand to educate and canvass public opinion in favour of the reform, and on the other to demonstrate by practical application its great utility in saving the time and energy of those who would learn Hindi or the provincial languages. Let no one run away with the idea that the reform will diminish the importance of the provincial languages. Indeed it can only enrich them even as the adoption of a common script has enriched the languages of Europe by making intercourse between its provinces easy.

Harijan, 4-5-1935
58. HOW TO DOUBLE INCOME

Though the spinning movement has been going on for the past seventeen years, and though it is giving a small but steady income to at least 1,20,000 women from year to year, the deplorable ignorance of the science of spinning on the part of workers keeps the income lower than it need be. Bad cotton, badly carded and spun on a rickety wheel without regard to the revolutions of the spindle, results in a low output. Attention to details can easily double the output and therefore the income. If cotton is carefully picked, hand-ginned and well carded, there will be an increased output and improvement in the strength and evenness of yarn. Speed, strength, evenness and count of yarn depend perhaps most upon the number of revolutions of the spindle, i.e., the turns a spindle makes for every turn of the wheel. The calculation is easily made by drawing a vertical line on the spindle disc and turning the wheel so slowly as to enable one easily to count the turns of the spindle. A spindle should never have less than one hundred revolutions against one of the wheels. But Shri Shankerlal Banker reports that during his tour he noticed spindles performing only thirty-five revolutions. No wonder if the output is miserably low and the yarn weak and fluffy. The way to increase the revolutions of a spindle is to decrease the diameter of the sari which keeps the mal in its place. Local workers should examine every wheel in their place and make the necessary changes in the spindle and other parts, wherever necessary. It may be that in the end the takli may be found to be the best instrument of yarn production. It requires the least attention, and the new method of takli spinning gives an average speed of 200 rounds, i.e., 266 yards of yarn, and as much as 440 rounds per hour.

Harijan, 4-5-1935
59. LETTER TO N. R. MALKANI

WARDHA,
May 4, 1935

MY DEAR MALKANI

I had to give considerable time to the revision of your notes of our talks. You will see I have made many changes and removed whole paragraphs. All references to others have been dropped as they should have been.

I hope you had a useful time in Calcutta.

Yours sincerely,
BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 909

60. LETTER TO DR. GOPICHAND BHARGAVA

May 4, 1935

DEAR DR. GOPICHAND,

God will bless you in your new dedication as He has done hitherto. . .

Shri Sharma of Khurja will probably send you a list of medical books to be bought. Will you please get them for him? Perhaps the booksellers will quote cheap rates to you.

BAPU

DR. GOPICHAND BHARGAVA
LAHORE, PUNJAB

From the original: Dr. Gopichand Bhargava Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

---

1 Joint Secretary, Harijan Sevak Sangh.
2 Agent-in-General of the All-India Village Industries Association for the Punjab
3 Omissions in this and other letters to the addressee indicate words that are undecipherable in the source.
4 Vide also “H. L. Sharma”, 3-5-1935

36 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
61. LETTER TO KANTI GANDHI

May 4, 1935

CHI. KANTI,

Kanu had written as foolish a letter as you have done, and I hope that your doubt will be resolved as quickly as his was. Man daily dies a living death and cries when real death comes. Man himself is responsible for being miserable. I do not want to bury either of you here. This time, too, I cannot understand why Mahadev had to answer your letter. I have deliberately decided not to give either of you charge of the kitchen, so that I might be able to take one of you with me when I go on a real tour. I may not be able to take both of you, though I am thinking of taking both. I am sure you will both understand, if owing to chance or exigencies of work I am not able to do as I wish. This year I do not want to travel at all. I wish to put things here in order. I will go on tour next year if I am alive—alive in both senses. For isn’t imprisonment also a kind of death? In English they call it ‘civil death’, that is, death in the eyes of law. Isn’t that always there as my lot?

I reprimanded Bal, just as I reprimanded you. He wanted me to write, and so gets letters from me. You in your letter kept me free from the obligation of replying and, therefore, I write less often to you. How often do I write to Devdas? I write according to the need of the other persons.

Do you know the meaning of your statement that my words leave you dumbfounded? It means that you feel yourself miles away from me. Is it your fault or mine that you could not recognize the love behind my harsh words? As a votary of ahimsa, I should believe it to be mine, but as a father I would say it was yours. How strange it is that I should have to weigh my words and restrain my language when speaking to you lest you feel offended?

From the beginning you have had a tendency to rudeness and bad manners. You have tried hard to overcome it and succeeded in a great measure, yet some traces are still left. There is nothing of that kind in this letter to me. But there was something of it on that day on the terrace. I had pacified myself of course. It is strange that Harilal should think you have lost your value in my eyes. I am a little hurt, too, for he knows very well that you mean much to me. For myself, I feel that I am tending you carefully like a flower. Your work has given me nothing but satisfaction. Your intelligence is impressed on your face. I have been trying to argue with Devdas that he is making some mistake. What does the letter also which I have written to Ramachandran prove? Let me assure you that you really mean a great deal to me. It is a matter of shame for both of us that you hesitate to come to me. There is no reason whatever for this.

Cardamom, oil or toothpaste, none of the three is necessary. The ashes of burnt cowdung, powdered fine like flour and mixed with salt, and a neem twig will keep the teeth very clean. Coconut oil is a perfect hair-oil. It is improved still further by the addition of a few drops of lime juice. Instead of cardamom, the neem leaf is a fine mouth-purifier and one that is used by the village people.

In your relations with the girl whom you wish to marry, you will have to cultivate the virtues of Bharata. I hope that your marriage will provide an example of self-control.

I wish that you should feel no discontent whatever, not even about studies. If you can endure the hardships of life in this place, you will become a man. Even otherwise, however, you will surely grow up to be a successful man of the world. While living with me Prithuraj became lean and as soon as there was an abundance of money his weight went up to 135. This is a great lesson to me. Live with me in perfect cheerfulness. I would rather bear your staying away from me than that you should languish with me.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]
I have not revised the letter. If you do not understand any point in it, ask me again. If I have omitted anything, get me to write about it.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 7296. Courtesy: Kantilal Gandhi

62. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

WARDHA,
May 5, 1935

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

I got your wire. I will arrive there on the 25th. Will it cause any inconvenience if I come on the 23rd? If I go to see Kamala in Bombay on the 22nd, I may perhaps arrive there on the 23rd

1 Vide also “Letter to Padmavathi” 1-5-1935
2 Borsad
morning. Let me know how long you intend to keep me there. Make my stay as short as possible.

Raja is weary beyond words. How can we blame him either? How can we press anybody who has lost all interest? But to whom can Rajendrababu and you give your resignations? Those of you who remain should carry on as long as you can. If any party can take control of the Congress, it is welcome to do so.

Jayaprakash has sent to Prabhavati a copy of the letter which he has written to you and asked her to show it to me. What is behind it? What could you have said to provoke it?

Athavale, who had come here, has left. He told me the same thing that he has written to you.

The plague must be under control now. Have you regained your strength?

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, p. 165

63. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

May 5, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

Chi. Harilal is going back to Rajkot. He definitely intends to marry, provided he finds a suitable wife. I feel that if he marries, it will not be proper for me to let him stay with me. I may accept his marriage, but I can’t welcome or like it. Still, I do wish that his marriage should be a happy one. I will have no objection, on the contrary I would like it, if he earns a living by engaging himself in one of our manifold activities. However, I can’t recommend him to anyone. Harilal’s wish is to continue to live in the small room you have provided. If you think it right, I will have no objection. But, it is for you to decide whether it is right or not, since I do not know anything about the situation there. Now you need not give him anything for monthly expenses, but give him up to Rs. 100 in a lump sum or in instalments as he may ask. Over and above that he will earn

1 C. Rajagopalachari retired temporarily from politics on May 11, 1935.
2 In his letter dated May 2, the addressee had complained of the trouble he had to undergo as one after another the members were leaving the Congress.
on his own. He is thinking of looking for some job or starting a business. I am in a fix. I liked his staying here. He did whatever work he could and was friendly with everybody. He says that his passion for drinks has completely died out. And I understand that he has no carnal passion left, apart from the desire to marry. I haven’t been inquisitive about these things and didn’t ask him any questions. He is still addicted to smoking and smokes three cigarettes a day with my permission. I believe that he has kept to the limit of three.

This is Harilal’s story. Let us see how fate shapes his life now. I will be content even if the treasure I have got back is not lost again, and thank God for His mercy.

Mathew is quite ready to come on the terms offered. Now he is asking for money from the Wardha Ashram so that he can pay his fare from that amount. I am writing to the Ashram to ascertain the position.

Blessings from

BAPU

64. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

May 5, 1935

CHI. AMBUJAMMAL

I have your letter. Write to me about Father’s health from time to time.

The rice you sent was very good. But it was slightly polished. Rice should not be polished at all.

Do by all means try to find a girl for Krishnaswami. But why do you worry about it? Worry will not help you to get a girl for him. You will succeed only if you make efforts.

The sloka of the [ekadash] vrat is as follows:

1 Vide “Letter to Narandas Gandhi”, 26-4-1935
2 Daughter of S. Srinivasa Iyengar. She was the head of Vidyalaya Girls High School, Madras. The superscription in this and other letters to the addressee is in Devanagari.
3 Addressee’s son
Non-violence, truth, non-stealing, brahmacharya, non-possession, body labour, control of the palate, fearlessness on all occasions, equal respect for all religions, swadeshi and sparshabhavana —these eleven vows should be observed in a spirit of humility.

Give the enclosed letter to Father.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From the Hindi original: Ambujammal Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library.

65. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

May 5, 1935

CHI. SHARMA,

Yesterday I sent you a letter. I have now received the reply regarding the steamer. It is on the back side of this. Isn’t it all right? Travelling by cargo boat is in no way uncomfortable. I travelled from Bombay to Ceylon in a cargo boat. I found it better, it provided more seclusion.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

[From Hindi]
Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, p. 158

66. LETTER TO BALIBEHN M. ADALAJA

May 6, 1935

CHI. BALI,

I didn’t write that letter in anger. Harilal has not said anything improper to me. I wrote what I did on the basis of Manu’s letter and asked the questions only for my information. If Harilal also takes interest in this matter, why need I bother myself? Rami’s engagement

---

1. Refusal to treat anybody as untouchable
2. The two Sanskrit verses of which this is a translation were composed by Vinoba Bhave and were recited during prayer in the Ashram.
3. From G. D. Birla
4. Omission as in the source
5. In November 1927
also was arranged by Harilal and you. I had to make the arrangements for marriage because Harilal was not in his proper mind then. I can have no objection if Harilal and you arrange Manu’s marriage. If I have to do that, she should be with me.

Blessings from
BAPU

67. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

WARDHA,
May 6, 1935

Bhai Ghanshyamdas,

I have your letters. It will be good if you can come by the 17th or 18th or, better still, 16th. On the 18th there is a meeting of the standing committee of the Hindi Sahitya Sammelan. I shall nevertheless find some time. On the 21st I am also scheduled to go to Bombay to see Kamala Nehru. She will travel by the same ship as you. The Asphalt Line steamer leaves from Calcutta. Does it sail direct to New York?

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

Mirabehn’s book on bees should be returned.

From the Hindi original: C.W. 8010. Courtesy: G. D. Birla

68. NOTE TO SUMANGAL PRAKASH

May 6, 1935

Take fruit and milk now. Afterwards fasting. Wrap your head with a piece of cloth.1 I used to do that. I am teaching you true poverty. There is in fact no poverty here. In a poor man’s home there is one charkha for all. Each charkha should be worked for at least twelve hours. Here it is not worked even for half an hour. That is why I told you to spin on my charkha. This promotes the feeling of oneness. It teaches humility. There is no feeling of mine and thine.

1 The addressee had said that spinning on the takli irritated the hair.
Whatever there is belongs to all. This apparently small matter has far-reaching implications.

From the Hindi original: Sumangal Prakash Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

69. LETTER TO AVADHESH DUTT AVASTHI

May 7, 1935

CHI. AVADHESH,

Tulsidas himself has said that the name of Rama is greater than Rama, meaning that Rama, who transcends the body, is formless and nameless and is greater than Rama in body. Rama was certainly the son of Dasharatha and the husband of Sita, but He is also the Purushottama of our imagination because the Unmanifest is not different from the Manifest. Everything is a manifestation of the Unmanifest. I don’t insist on the name Rama, it might be Omkar or Krishna, or Ishwar.

I do get angry, but I feel angry with myself for it. Full conquest of anger is possible only through self-realization.

We should love even those who have the worst opinion of us. This is ahimsa, the rest is only ignorance.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 3212

70. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL JOSHI

WARDHA,
May 8, 1935

CHI. CHHAGANLAL,

You favoured me with a letter after a long time. I did receive a complaint against you, but there was no necessity for me to write to you. If there is anything to write about after Jivanlal’s arrival, I will write. You have not taken up public work to please or oblige anybody. Go on doing it as long as you can. Don’t worry at all. We shall do afterwards whatever is necessary. I will not let you be humiliated. Keep yourself engrossed in your work. Don’t make yourself unhappy unnecessarily.

I hope Rama¹ and the children are doing well.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5529.

¹ Addressee’s wife
71. LETTER TO PARIKSHITLAL L. MAJMUDAR

May 8, 1935

BHAII PARIKSHITLAL,

I fully understand about Haribhai. I don’t approve of giving him a single piece. It will be for his own good to leave him to fend for himself. If he sells off the land and comes away from that place, there will be no difficulty at all in helping him forward. To go on living near Sachin is as foolish as killing a buffalo for the sake of thong. Your duty is also to persuade him to come away from Sachin.¹

I have carefully gone through your other letter regarding the expenses for Gujarat and I am thinking over the matter.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3959.

72. LETTER TO UDAY PRASAD

May 8, 1935

BHAII UDAY PRASAD²

I remember your poems. I have not read them. Kishorelal and Kakasaheb said there was nothing much to read in them. Where am I to find fifteen minutes?

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat of the Hindi: C.W. 9753

¹ Vide also “Letter to Parikshitlal L. Majmudar”, 29-4-1935
² Of Bodegaon in Madhya Pradesh
73. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

WARDHA,
May 9, 1935

CHI. MARY,

Here is a letter from Dr. Tandy¹. Her bill came to Rs. 87. I have sent word to discharge it.

What about her proposal for you to go to Miraj? If you give yourself full rest and take proper nourishment, nothing more may be necessary. Do write to me fully please.

Love.

BAPU

[PS.]

Did I tell you Chhotelal had gone to Coimbatore to learn beekeeping? I see that the money order has been sent to you. I am sorry. You have to send the money to Dr. Tandy.

From a photostat: G.N. 6040. Also C.W. 3372. Courtesy: F. Marry Barr

74. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

May 9, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

Enclosed please find a letter from Bhagwanji². Go to help him or send someone else. There is nothing great in going to nearby villages. Go and see him. He is a simple man and wants to do a lot. If he volunteers to devote some time to the school, you may accept his services. However, if your experience is to the contrary, then leave it.

A letter for Lilavati is enclosed. What is the news about Keshu?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8443. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

¹ She was treating the addressee.
² Bhagwanji Anupchand Mehta, a lawyer of Rajkot
75. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

May 9, 1935

I got your letter regarding Titus. If the dairy at the Ashram cannot be retained, he may go.

BAPU

[PS.]
I shall have to write to Mathew again.

[From Gujarati]

76. LETTER TO NARAHARI D. PARIKH

May 9, 1935

CHI. NARAHARI,

I got your letter. How can the Harijan Ashram be run without a cow? I think we should keep a cow and a bull in the Ashram and hand over the other cattle to the _pinjrapole_. Think over what should be done about Bidaj. If it is at all possible do hand over the cattle to Ramjibhai without consulting me, but with the consent of the Trustees.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9078.

77. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

WARDHA,

May 9, 1935

CHI. LILAVATI,

I have your letter. It is good you went to Rajkot with your brother. Now come whenever you find the time. You certainly have my permission to come.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

---

1 Place for disabled and weak cattle
78. LETTER TO KRISHNACHANDRA

May 9, 1935

CHI. KRISHNACHANDRA,

Your goal is self-realization. For that the *ekadash vrat*¹ that we ponder upon daily is essential. That is why there lies some difficulty in your way at present. Discharging of family debts has, to a certain extent, become obligatory for you. If it can be done easily it may be done. Even for this you need to observe the *pancha mahavrati*². I hope that you will stick to them with a cheerful spirit.

You should suspend your studies for a year and concentrate on building up your health and refreshing your mind.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 4268.

79. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

WARDHA,
May 10, 1935

CHI. THAKKAR BAPA³

I read your letter to Chandrashankar. From which letter of mine did you draw that conclusion? You desire that the sum of Rs. 3,742-3-8 should be written off. If that is done Harijan will go bankrupt. Do you expect Harijan to make a gift of it to Kodambakam? So far as I remember, we had a discussion about the supplement too. At one time you were ready to offer monetary help so that Harijan might be continued. Do you wish now to put a burden upon it? You may certainly do so if and when it makes a profit and has some savings.

If you put Harijan to a loss of Rs. 4,000, it will have to be stopped. I, however, fully approve of your disinclination to write to anybody to enlist subscribers. People will subscribe to it if it has any worth. Otherwise let it die.

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1156

¹ Vide “Letter to S. Ambujammal”, 5-5-1935
² Of non-violence, truth, non-stealing, brahmacharya and non-possession
³ General Secretary, Harijan Sevak Sangh

80. INTERVIEW TO A MISSIONARY NURSE

[Before May 11, 1935]

[NURSE:] You have the reputation of never being angry. Is that true?

[GANDHI:] It is not that I do not get angry. I do not give vent to anger. I cultivate the quality of patience as angerlessness, and generally speaking I succeed. But I only control my anger when it comes. How I find it possible to control it would be a useless question, for it is a habit that everyone must cultivate and must succeed in forming by constant practice.

When did you come to experience this great love for the poor? Could you tell me the period or the occasion?

I have always had a love for the poor all my life and in abundance. I could cite illustration after illustration from my past life to show that it was something innate in me. I have never felt that there was any difference between the poor and me. I have always felt toward them as my own kith and kin.

Don’t you have anything like antipathy for filth and dirt?

I have no antipathy against dirty people but I have a horror of dirt. I should not eat out of a dirty plate nor touch a dirty spoon or kerchief. But I believe in removing dirt to its proper place, where it ceases to be dirt. 2

I do feel that whilst it is bad to encourage begging, I will not send away a beggar without offering him work and food. If he will not work, I should let him go without food. Those who are physically disabled like the halt and the maimed and the blind have got to be supported by the State. There is, however, a lot of fraud going on under cover of pretended blindness or even genuine blindness. So many blind have become rich because of ill-gotten gains. It would be a good thing if they were taken to an asylum, rather than to be exposed to this temptation.

Would you prevent missionaries coming to India in order to baptize?

Who am I to prevent them? If I had power and could legislate, I should certainly stop all proselytizing. It is the cause of much avoidable conflict between classes and unnecessary heart-burning.

---

1 This is extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter”.
2 Here Mahadev Desai had explained that “the visitor next discussed the question of beggary”.

48 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
among missionaries. But I should welcome people of any nationality if they came to serve here for the sake of service. In Hindu households the advent of a missionary has meant the disruption of the family coming in the wake of change of dress, manners, language, food and drink.

Is it not the old conception you are referring to? No such thing is now associated with proselytization.

The outward condition has perhaps changed but the inward mostly remains. Vilification of Hindu religion, though subdued, is there. If there was a radical change in the missionaries’ outlook, would Murdoch’s books be allowed to be sold in mission depots? Are those books prohibited by missionary societies? There is nothing but vilification of Hinduism in those books. You talk of the conception being no longer there. Only the other day a missionary descended on a famine area with money in his pocket, distributed it among the famine-stricken, converted them to his fold, took charge of their temple and demolished it. This is outrageous. The temple could not belong to the converted Hindus, and it could not belong to the Christian missionary. But this friend goes and gets it demolished at the hands of the very men who only a little while ago believed that God was there.

But, Mr. Gandhi, why do you object to proselytization as such? Is not there enough in the Bible to authorize us to invite people to a better way of life?

Oh yes, but it does not mean that they should be made members of the Church. If you interpret your texts in the way you seem to do, you straight away condemn a large part of humanity unless it believes as you do. If Jesus came to earth again, he would disown many things that are being done in the name of Christianity. It is not he who says “Lord, Lord” that is a Christian, but “He that doeth the will of the Lord” that is a true Christian. And cannot he who has not heard the name of Jesus Christ do the will of the Lord?

_Harijan_, 11-5-1935.
81. GROSS ILL-TREATMENT

I was working in a cheri under the auspices of the Harijan Sevak Sangh for a period of about four months. A Harijan was expelled from the cheri, before I began Harijan work in the village, on account of his moral delinquencies. The said Harijan once returned to visit his son studying in our school. I allowed him to stop with me for the purpose. He was resting in the school shed on the particular night. In my absence, a party consisting of five persons belonging to the Harijan class who were the near relatives of the woman seduced, along with a few others of the so-called castemen, took him out and beat him severely for the old offence of seducing a married woman, and drove him out of the shed. Immediately I learnt of the incident, I approached the persons who had taken the law into their own hands and protested against the maltreatment and demanded the re-admission of the Harijan into the cheri. This was refused. Therefore, I have withdrawn myself from the village.

The foregoing is a much condensed summary of a long letter. I do not vouch for the accuracy of the statement. But if the facts are as stated, surely it was wrong altogether to beat the Harijan as he appears to have been beaten. If he had committed any crime, he should have been prosecuted. But no one had any right to take the law into his own hands. The correspondent was right in retiring from the cheri which was not prepared to do simple justice. I hope that the matter was brought to the notice of the local Sangh and that the latter had tried to secure fair treatment for the Harijan concerned. The whole affair is one for careful investigation. I fear that such cases are frequent enough. It is up to Harijan sevaks on the one hand to afford protection to the injured and on the other to awaken their sense of morality where it is lacking. The offenders do not belong to any particular class. All sections are tarred with the same brush. Only those workers who have proved their worth and are above reproach will be able to create any impression at all on the delinquents.

Harijan, 11-5-1935

82. WELLS FOR HARIJANS

The Government of Bombay are to be congratulated upon their decision to build wells for Harijans in the Presidency of Bombay. The sum set apart is a trifle for the work to be done. As is well known, wells have been constructed for Harijans for years past in Gujarat by the late Anti-untouchability Board set up by the Congress, and since 1932 by the Harijan Sevak Sangh. The latter has an extensive programme of well-building for Harijans, and Sjt. Juthabhai, a quiet and great worker, has made up his mind to devote his attention to this noble humanitarian work. It is greatly to be desired that in this work there would be perfect co-ordination between the various agencies working towards the same end. If co-operative effort is not possible, there may be at least a division of labour and areas. Whatever is done, the end should be quick work, good work and cheapest cost. The last can be satisfied only if there is unskilled voluntary labour forthcoming either on the part of Harijan Hindus or savarna Hindus or both.

_Harijan_, 11-5-1935

83. VILLAGE WORKER’S QUESTIONS

A village worker writes:

1. I am working in a small village of a hundred houses. You have said that attention to sanitation and hygiene should precede medical relief. But what is a worker to do when a villager suffering from fever seeks aid? I have been hitherto advising them to use indigenous herbs obtainable in the village bazaar.

2. What is to be done with the night-soil during the rains?

3. Can night-soil be used for all crops?

4. What is the advantage of eating _gur_ in preference to sugar?

Where cases of fever, constipation or such common diseases come to village workers for help, they will certainly have to render such help as they can. Where one is certain of the diagnosis, there is no doubt that the village bazaar medicine is the cheapest and best. If one must stock drugs, castor oil, quinine and boiling water are the best medical agents. Castor oil may be locally procurable. The _senna_ leaf may serve the same purpose. Quinine one should use sparingly. Every fever does not require quinine treatment. Nor does every fever yield to quinine. Most fevers will disappear after a fast or a semi-fast. Abstention from cereals, pulses and milk, and taking fruit juices or boiling raisin water, even boiling gur water with fresh lemon juice or tamarind, is a semi-fast. Boiling water is a most powerful medical agent. It may move the bowels, it will induce perspiration and therefore abate fever; it is the safest and cheapest disinfectant. In every case where it is required to be drunk, the water must be allowed to cool till it is fairly bearable to the skin. Boiling does not mean mere heating. The water begins to bubble and evaporate after it is on the boil.

---

1 _Jaggery_

Where the workers do not know for certain what to do, they must allow the local vaidya to have full sway. Where he is non-existent or unreliable and the workers know a philanthropic doctor nearby, they may invoke his assistance.

But they will find that the most effective way of dealing even with disease is to attend to sanitation. Let them remember that nature is the finest physician. They may be sure that nature is repairing what man has damaged. She appears to have become powerless when man continuously hampers her. Then she sends death—her last and peremptory agent to destroy what is beyond repair—and provides a fresh garment for the wearer. Sanitary and hygienic workers are therefore the best helpers of the best physician every person has, whether he knows it or not.

2. Even during the rains villagers should perform functions in places not trodden by man. Faeces must be buried. This is a most difficult question owing to the erroneous training of villagers. In Sindi village we are trying to persuade the villagers not to use the streets, to go to the adjoining fields and to throw dry clean earth on their own evacuations. After two months' continuous labour and co-operation of the municipal councillors and others, they have been good enough generally to cease to defile the streets. They go to the fields which their owners have been good enough to open for such use. But the villagers still obstinately refuse to throw earth on their own evacuations. ‘Surely it is bhangi’s work; it is sinful to look at faeces, more so to throw earth on them’, they say. They have been taught to believe so. Workers have therefore not to write on a clean slate. They have to rub off what is drawn into the slate with steel points. But I know that if we have faith in our mission, if we have patience enough to persist in the work of daily morning scavenging and, above all, if we don’t get irritated against the villagers, their prejudice will disappear as mist before the rays of the sun. Age-hardened ignorance cannot yield to a few months’ object-lessons.

We are preparing for the rains in Sindi. Naturally the owners of fields must protect their crops. They cannot, therefore, allow free access to their fields as many do now. We have suggested to them that they should put up fences a few feet inside their boundaries, leaving the marks intact. The few feet they may leave will by the end of the season be richly-manured strips of their fields. A time is coming when owners of fields will invite people to use them. Every man constantly using a particular field leaves on it two rupees’ worth of manure in a year, if Dr. Fowler’s estimate may be accepted. The accuracy of the figure may be doubted. The fact that a field benefits by the deposit of night-soil in it is beyond doubt.

3. No one has suggested that night-soil may be administered to crops directly as manure. What is meant is that addition of night-soil to earth enriches it after a fixed time. Night-soil after being received into the earth has to undergo certain changes before the earth becomes fit for ploughing and cultivation. The test in infallible. Open up the earth after a stated time where you have buried night-soil. If you find that it is all sweet earth and no smell, no trace to faeces, the soil is fit to receive the seed. I have used night-soil in this manner for all manner of crops for the past thirty years with the greatest benefit.

4. It is the universal testimony of experts that gur is more nutritious than sugar because it contains salts and vitamins which sugar does not contain. As whole-wheat meal is to fine flour, or unpolished rice to polished, so practically is gur to sugar.

_Harijan_, 11-5-1935

84. LETTER TO T. PRAKASAM

WARDHA,
May 11, 1935

MY DEAR PRAKASAM,

I have gone through your note. I believe in the system of barter. It can apply only to village communities. In its very nature it can work among small groups of men. The village movement [if it]1 succeeds, must result in villagers exchanging their goods. It won’t spread by preaching but it will by practising it wherever possible.

_Yours sincerely_,
M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G.N. 9245

1 Very faint in the source
85. LETTER TO JAIRAMDAS DOULATRAM

May 11, 1935

MY DEAR JERAMDAS,

What is this? What about Anand¹? How are you getting on? Do you want me to resume payment to Anand? Do keep me informed of your doings.

Love.

BAPU

[PS.]

Malkani is here. Nothing serious about snake-bite².

From the original: C.W. 9714. Courtesy: Jairamdas Doulatram

86. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

May 11, 1935

CHI. AMBUJAM,

You seem to be unnecessarily worrying about your boy’s marriage. This is essentially a matter which you should let father and mother manage in the best manner they can. It is a difficult thing. But they seem to have got over every difficulty. You should avoid all anxiety.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: Ambujammal Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

¹ Anand T. Hingorani
87. LETTER TO RAJARAM R. Bhole

WARDHA,
May 11, 1935

MY DEAR RAJARAM,

Why should you be torn to pieces. You should simply do what your body allows. See friends there and find out what is possible.

Yours,

BAPU

SHRI RAJARAM BHOLE
C/O MINERVA TALKIES
POONA

From the original: R. R. Bhole Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

88. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

[May 11, 1935]¹

CHI. JAMNALAL,

I got your letter. Mahadev has gone to Borsad in response to Vallabhbhai’s request. He will return in three or four days. Marybehn was very ill and was in the hospital at Itarsi. I have paid the bill of Rs. 87 for her. Maybe she has tuberculosis. The doctor at Itarsi says that she should be sent to Miraj. At present she is at Betul.

I may have to go to Borsad on the 24th. In any case I shall have to go to Bombay to see Kamala. I will, therefore, start from here on the 21st.

Kishorelal² and Gomati³ arrived yesterday. Gomati had a little fever and has become weak.

The meeting of the Standing Committee of the Hindi Sahitya Sammelan is fixed here for the 18th.

Ramakrishna is getting on fairly well.

Om⁴ seems to have become absorbed in her work.

Blessings from

BAPU

¹ In the source, the addressee had mentioned May 14 as the date of receipt of the letter. Kishorelal Mashruwala and his wife arrived in Wardha on May 10, 1935; vide also “Letter to Manilal and Sushila Gandhi”, 13-5-1935
² Kishorelal Mashruwala and his wife.
³ ibid
⁴ Uma, addressee’s daughter
I suppose you know that we did not get one lakh for the Sammelan. Write to whomsoever you think worth writing to.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2968

89. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

May 11, 1935

BHAITHAKKAR BAPA,

I have been prejudiced against S. from the very beginning. This work hasn’t seemed clean to me. It might not perhaps be proper to give anything, against the advice of Shukla and others, from the amount realized through the sale of the cattle. If, therefore, you have full faith in him, you may give him something from the money which is lying in my name.

I sent a wire yesterday regarding Malkani. I had to send another today.

He had gone to Nalvadi to see the work being done there. While returning from there, he was bit by something in the darkness. He was accompanied by . . . and others. They lifted him up and laid him . . . . When some conveyance was available he was taken to hospital. An incision was made to let out blood. . . . The night passed fairly well. . . . He will have to remain in the hospital for two days at least. Even apart from this, I felt that it is not desirable that neither of you should be present in Delhi. Whatever has to be done on the basis of your observations during your visit. . . . What may have happened during your absence. . . .

It is essential that a plan should be drawn up. There is, of course . . . about one well. There must be many more like that. . . . Therefore, think over my suggestion. I told Malkani the same thing yesterday and then wired to you. If, however, you see any error in this reasoning, ask me.

Regarding your reply to Chandrashankar I have sent you my views yesterday.

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 22765

1 The photostat copy of this letter in pencil is very faint and many words are illegible. This translation is based on a partial reconstruction of the letter, presumably from the original, attached to the photostat copy.

2 The name has been omitted.

3 It was a snake; vide “Letter to Jairamdas Doulatram”, 11-5-1935

4 Vide “Letter to Amrital V. Thakkar”, 10-5-1935
90. LETTER TO KASIM ALI

May 11, 1935

BHAI KASIM ALI,

The enquiry I had instituted about Shiva Bavani is continuing. A reply from the Village Industries Association has been sent to you. There is no obstacle to anyone doing any work for the village industries but no salary is paid for it.

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat of the Hindi: C.W. 9751

91. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL JOSHI

WARDHA,
May 12, 1935

CHI. CHHAGANLAL,

I read your letters, the one to me and the other to Thakkar Bapa, and your article in Roshani. I have also discussed the matter with Bhai Jivanlal. Nanalal was present at the discussion. I didn’t like your letter to Bapa and your article in Roshani.

I admit the necessity of the sphere of your work being defined. Your freedom should be respected. I think the present bitterness is purely the result of temperamental differences. I see no good coming out of your leaving the Sangh, nor from Jivanlal’s leaving it. It should be a matter of shame for us that well-to-do and poor workers cannot work together. Bhai Jivanlal and you should bear up with each other. I don’t think that you wish to do anything without consulting Bhai Jivanlal, nor do I find that the latter objects to discussing things with you. Today, therefore, I will content myself with this request that both of you should resolve henceforth to work in harmony like blood-brothers. I have given the same advice to Bhai Jivanlal. I have also shown him this letter. I am sending a copy of it to Thakkar Bapa.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5530

1 A poetical work by Bhushan praising the exploits of Shivaji
2 Gujarati weekly published from Saurashtra at the time
3 Jivanlal Motichand Shah, an industrialist of Calcutta, who rendered financial assistance to Gandhiji for khadi and Harijan activities.
92. LETTER TO RAMDAS GANDHI

[May 12, 1935]

CHI. RAMDAS.

What keeps you happy will keep me happy, too. You will develop strength of character and understand your duty only by acting as you wish to. I do not worry. Sumitra has once again run back here. She will not get here the company of . . . 2 she had in the Kanya Ashram. But she is getting along quite well.

Andrews has already arrived here. . . . 3 Harilal has started looking for another wife. . . . 4 He will find some work to do. He is staying with . . . just now. He will keep away from drink and . . .

I will be going there most probably on the 22nd 5. The same evening, I will leave for Borsad with Sardar. Sardar also will arrive in Bombay on the 22nd [to see off] Kamala Nehru. 6

So, after all, I have got letters from Manilal and Sushila. I will send . . . only with . . .

Andrews will be here upto the 26th at least . . .

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Mrs. Sumitra Kulkarni Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

---

1 As suggested in the source
2 The source is illegible here and at many other places.
3 He had returned from England on May 9.
4 Harilal’s first wife, Gulab alias Chanchal, had died towards the end of 1918.
5 Gandhi ji arrived at Bombay from Wardha on May 22.
6 She was to leave for Europe on the 23rd for medical treatement.
93. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

May 12, 1935

CHI. AMBUJAM,

I got your letter and Rs. 110. You should not worry about Krishna. There is no need for me to go to a hill-station. Moreover, there is so much work here that I cannot get out.

Ekadash vrat is a means of serving the country. That is why service to the nation is included in the sloka'.

Take father to a hill-station immediately.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Hindi original: Ambujammal Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library.

94. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

WARDHA,
May 13, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

I have shown your letters to C. F. A. He is not likely to be with you before 25th of the month. Ceresole and Wilkinson are coming here on 16th. They sail for Europe on 23rd.

I am having more envelopes and note-papers made of the two varieties you left. If you want any other you will please send me samples. I shall not send you more unless you order more. I shall stock them for you. You will pay for the packet sent when you come.

I hope to send you a lot of slivers in a few days.

Love,

BAPU

From the original: C. W. 3532. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6341

1 Vide "Letter to S. Ambujammal", 5-5-1935
2 Pierre Ceresole, Swiss engineer and president of the International Voluntary Service, who in response to C. F. Andrews’s appeal, came to India in 1934 to do relief work in the earthquake-stricken Bihar
3 Joe Wilkinson, who came at the instance of C. F. Andrews
95. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

May 13, 1935

CHI. JAMNALAL,

I got your letter to Radhakrishna'. I am sure that there is no need for you to get involved in a matter like this. It seems to be almost settled. Your duty is to rest there and recover fully. Descending before June is out of the question. What has happened is certainly bad, but the matter is full of so many complications that it will do no good to intervene. It would be better to let events take their own course. We may give whatever advice we can from a distance.

I have already informed you that I have not received anything from Indore. You may now write to anybody you wish.

I understand...'s case. You must have received my letter to him.

The Standing Committee of the Hindi Sahitya Sammelan will meet here on the 18th. I have asked Radhakrishna to put up the members at his bungalow. Andrews is here. He has been put up at Maganwadi. Malkani, who was bitten by a snake is also here. He is better now because immediate treatment could be given.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

I must hear regularly from Madalasa.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2967

---

1 Addressee’s nephew
2 Vide “Letter to Amritlal V. Thakkar, 11-5-1935
3 The name has been omitted.
May 13, 1935

CHI. MANILAL AND SUSHILA,

I got your letters. In the end the garment to be made from my yarn could not be ready in time. Some day it surely will be.

You can banish the disease from Phoenix in the same way that I did. It was banished merely through a change in diet and the crop raised in the fields. There were hardly any cases of malaria. At that time we never used to take milk.

It is for you to decide what changes you should make. Kishorelal, Gomati, and Anasuya\(^1\) arrived here three days ago. Anasuya will leave when her holidays are over. Kishorelal stood the journey well enough on the whole.

Ramdas is trying hard to settle down in Bombay. He also has joined a Press.

Harilal wants to marry again and that is why he has gone to Rajkot. He will try there and also look for some work. In other respects he seems all right.

Kanti\(^2\) and Kanu\(^3\) are here so far. Andrews arrived the day before yesterday. Devdas is in Delhi.

Blessings from

BAPU

[P.S.]

Thakkar Bapa must have sent acknowledgment to Gokaldas Garach.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4837

---

\(^1\) Harilal Gandhi’s granddaughter

\(^2\) Son of Harilal Gandhi

\(^3\) Son of Narandas Gandhi
97. LETTER TO MAHAVIR GIRI

May 13, 1935

CHI. MAHAVIR,

May I treat your letter as a wedding invitation? I got the letters of Maitri, Durga, and Satyadevi too. I don’t have the time to reply to all separately. May Durga and her husband enjoy a long life. It is my wish and my blessing that they lead a simple life dedicated to service and bring credit to the Ashram. I hope Durga will not forget me after her marriage.

Maitri must get rid of her constipation. When is she to be married? Don’t mind if there are no blood-relations. We should look upon all as our relations. The distinction between relations and others is wholly a product of the mind.

Satyadevi has had a good dig at me. She seems to be reminding me how I used to criticize her for her handwriting. I suppose she merely wants to tell me thereby that she has defeated me. I should like everybody to defeat me in a similar manner. May she be as pure of heart as she is intelligent.

Blessings from
BAPU

[P.S.]

I shall be in Bombay on the 22nd. All of you will be able to see me for a minute or two there. I shall be leaving for Borsad the same night.

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6242

---

1 Addressee’s sister
2 ibid
3 ibid
May 13, 1935

CHI. PREMA

I got your letter. This solution is possible. Father may hand over to me, on your account, the jewellery or the money realized from the sale. This will mean that I would use the income from it every month for you. After your death the trustees of the Ashram will use it for the Ashram. This will cast no blemish on you. No doubt you live your life wholly depending on God. You may keep yourself aloof from any understanding that father and I may arrive at. Isn’t that also the arrangement for Mirabehn? One or two hundred pounds are received for her (annually) and are credited to the Ashram. My suggestion will relieve father of his worry and leave you completely out.

I shall arrive there on the 22nd and leave for Borsad the same night. You will of course meet me in Bombay but you can also come to Borsad if you wish. In any case you are always welcome at Wardha.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]
Has Kisan become as strong as a horse? Sushi seems quite . . .

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 10372. Also C.W. 6811. Courtsey: Premabehn Kantak

99. LETTER TO THAKUR PRASAD SHARMA
May 13, 1935

BHAJ THAKUR PRASAD SHARMA,

Good relations cannot be brought about by concealing our faults. If both the parties jointly appoint an arbitrator, they need not go to the law-court. But if this is not possible I see nothing wrong in making an attempt to obtain justice through the courts. One cannot 1 The addressee’s father and grandfather wanted to sell the ornaments left by her mother and make a trust of the money so that she could have regular income in the form of interest on it. But the addressee wanted to give away all the money to Gandhiji.

Kisan Ghumatkar

Sushila Pai

Illegible in the source lay down a fixed principle in such matters. Every case is to be judged on its own merits.

M. K. GANDHI

SHRI THAKUR PRASAD
JALPA DEVI
BENARES CITY

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 156. Also C.W. 9754. Courtesy: Bharat Kala Bhavan

100. LETTER TO SECRETARY, HINDI SAHITYA SAMMELAN

WARDHA, May 14, 1935

DEAR SIR,

I have your letter. I have made no categorical statement that the committee is absolved of responsibility. What I said was that, if Haribabu and Kotwal have told you that the total of one lakh is also inclusive of the amount meant for Indore University, your responsibility is over. But I do not want to enter into this discussion nor do I wish to inconvenience you. After all the responsibility has been taken up by Seth Jamnalalji and he can go by his own judgment. I see no fault in Tandonji having spoken and acted as he did. To prevent outside agitation was beyond my strength nor was I so inclined. It was impossible for me to act otherwise than I ultimately did.

Yours,

M. K. GANDHI

Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, p. 375

101. LETTER TO RAMASWAMI IYENGAR

May 14, 1935

DEAR RAMASWAMI,

I wish your venture success. Take care that you do not leave what you have begun.

Yours,

M. K. GANDHI

From a copy: C.W. 9234. Courtesy: Ramaswami Iyengar
102. LETTER TO G. SITARAM SASTRY

[May 14, 1935]

DEAR SITARAM SASTRIJI,

I approve of the proposal to invite an essay on the barter system. The prize does not seem to be attractive. Who should be the judges? They must be [men] with special [qualification]. [I] cannot just now think [of] them.

Yours sincerely,

BAPU

SHRI G. SITARAM SASTRY
VINAYA ASHRAM
GUNTUR DIST.
CHANDOLE P.O.

From the original: C.W. 9175. Courtesy: Government of Andhra Pradesh

103. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

May 14, 1935

CHI. JAMNALAL,

I have to trouble you even there regarding Indore. I do not think we shall receive anything from there. Please read the accompanying letter. I am also sending a copy of my reply. I do not know anybody there. I have left everything to you. If nothing can be done even by you, we shall drop the matter. You need not worry about it. If you can do anything from there or write to anybody, you may do so. If that is not possible at present, then forget about it.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2969

1 From the postmark.
2 The source is mutilated.
3 Bhowali
4 Vide “Letter to Secretary, Hindi Sahitya Sammelan”, 14-5-1935
104. LETTER TO MOOLCHAND AGRAWAL

May 14, 1935

Bhai Moolchand,

It is a mistaken notion that every wrong can be righted if it appears in the pages of Harijan. Great effort will be required to eliminate the evil custom of child-marriage.

Blessings from

Bapu

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 756

105. LETTER TO KRISHNACHANDRA

May 14, 1935

Non-violence, truth, non-stealing, brahmacharya, non-possession, body labour, control of the palate, fearlessness on all occasions, equal respect for all religions, swadeshi and sparshabhavana these eleven vows should be observed in a spirit of humanity.

May Gita become your staff of life.

Blessings from

Bapu

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 4269; also S.G. 43

106. LETTER TO SAMIRMAL

May 14, 1935

Bhai Samirmal,

How old are you and Shri Vayulal? Give me all details regarding yourselves such as health, education and whether you can pay your expenses. The work here is only manual.

M. K. Gandhi

Shri Samirmal
Dapharia
Jaora, Malwa

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1292
107. TELEGRAM TO RAMESHWADAS PODDAR

WARDHA,
May 15, 1935

SETH RAMESHWADAS
DHULIA

GANGA\(^1\) DELIVERED DAUGHTER. BOTH WELL.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 741

108. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

May 15, 1935

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

I didn’t like the joke about crows in Delhi. Such jokes don’t benefit the people in any way. There is also no fight going on just now.

I had a letter from Amritlal\(^2\). I have replied and said that it would be proper if he expressed regret in his newspaper.

The rest you will know from Mahadev’s letter. I am extremely busy these days. Andrews is here. Ceresole and Wilkinson arrived yesterday. Some others also are arriving. I shall barely get ready by the 21st to leave. I don’t think it will be possible to bring Mahadev along with me.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

_Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhaine_, p. 167

---

\(^1\) Addressee’s wife

\(^2\) Amritlal Seth, editor of Janmabhoomi, a daily published from Bombay
109. LETTER TO AVADHESH DUTT AVASTHI

May 15, 1935

CHI. AVADHESH,

May our nation become and remain the greatest in respect of all moral values. Man’s self-respect lies in uplifting himself and in doing this not fearing even death.

Why is anger necessary for protecting our self-respect and fighting wickedness? If I am told to rub my nose on the ground I may not be angry and yet refuse to comply and bear cheerfully whatever punishment is vouchsafed for my disobedience.

Dharma is that which uplifts the soul. We shall think that God is a name for Truth, God is identical with truth.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 3217

110. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

WARDHA,

May 16, 1935

CHI. MARY,

Your letter. Wherever you are you need complete rest. Why not take it before it becomes too late? Instead of Miraj, why not undergo examination in Bombay? You almost touch Bombay going to Miraj. But doing it in Bombay will serve the same purpose without any cost. There are most competent doctors in Bombay. Anyway you must be healed quickly.¹

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 6041. Also C.W. 3370. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

¹ Vide also “Letter to Jamnalal Bajaj”, 11-5-1935
111. LETTER TO GLADYS OWEN

May 16, 1935

DEAR GLADYS,

I was [glad to read]¹ your letter. It came into my hands today and just . . . after Pierre Ceresole arrived. I shared with him the portion regarding him. He was glad about it. He would certainly undertake . . . mission . . . way . . . before him.

We shall all be glad to . . . and welcome you with Muriel. C.F. Andrews . . . with me . . .

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G.N. 6191

112. LETTER TO SATYAMURTI

May 16, 1935

You are a tempter. I must not succumb. You will be all right without my blessings. As you have well said, you will succeed if you deserve success.

The Hindu, 20-5-1935

113. LETTER TO N. K. BOSE

May 16, 1935

DEAR NIRMALBABU,

I have been simply overworked. As soon as I finish revision I shall return the manuscript. You may certainly send it to The Modern Review.

Yours,

M. K. GANDHI

SHRI NIRMAL KUMAR BOSE
6/1A BRITISH INDIAN STREET
CALCUTTA

From a photostat: G. N. 10520

¹ The source is very faint and illegible at places.
² Satyamurti had asked Gandhiji for his blessings on his becoming president of the Tamil Nadu Provincial Congress Committee.
114. LETTER TO K. M. MUNSHI

May 16, 1935

BHAI MUNSHI,

I got your letter. You may remain there but I would like you to build up good health. The Standing Committee is meeting on the 18th. Let me see what happens at the meeting. I was glad to receive Jijima’s good wishes. My respectful greetings to her.

Blessings from

BAPU

From Gujarati: C.W. 7573. Courtesy: K. M. Munshi

115. DISCUSSION WITH PIERRE CERESOLE AND JOE WILKINSON

[May 16, 1935]

Ceresole proceeded to tell Gandhiji of some of the books he had recently read. There was India in the Dark Wood . . . wanting “the main framework of the dominant Hindu philosophy to be shattered”. . . . Pierre Ceresole said he had turned from this book with relief to Frank Lonwood’s book Jesus Lord or Leader where the author rejects the claim of Christianity as the final religion and pines for “a fuller and richer faith than we have yet reached and to believe that God, who has nowhere left Himself without witness will use the highest institutions of other systems and of many races to enrich the thinking and worship of mankind.” He sees definite gain in the abandonment of a special claim for the inspiration of the Bible, and classes himself among those “who humbly desire to follow Jesus as leader, though their view of truth will not allow them to worship him as Lord”. Gandhiji said:

There is a swing in the pendulum, and I have a Christian friend telling me that the Gita shows him how to live the New Testament, and that many passages in the latter which used to be dark were intelligible to him through a study of the Gita.

1 Panchgani
2 Addressee’s mother
3 This is extracted from “Weekly Letter” by Mahadev Desai who had explained: “Pierre Ceresole and Joe Wilkinson . . . returning home after a strenuous time in Bihar earthquake-stricken districts, broke journey here at Wardha”
4 From Gandhi: 1915-1948—A Detailed Chronology
And yet Ceresole feels that each one must find his solace from his own faith. He attended our prayer meetings regularly, morning and evening, but said one evening: “This repetition of one and the same thing over and over again jars on me. It may be the defect of my rationalist, mathematical temperament. But somehow I cannot like the repetition.”

GANDHJI: But even in mathematics you have your recurring decimals.

PIERRE CERESOLE: But each recurs with a definite new fact.

G. Even so each repetition, or japa as it is called, has a new meaning, each repetition carries you nearer and nearer to God. This is a concrete fact, and I may tell you that you are here talking to no theorist but to one who has experienced what he says every minute of his life, so much so that it is easier for the life to stop than for this incessant process to stop. It is a definite need of the soul.

P.C. I quite see it, but for the average man it becomes an empty formula.

G. I agree, but the best thing is liable to be abused. There is room for any amount of hypocrisy, but even hypocrisy is an ode to virtue. And I know that for ten thousand hypocrites you would find millions of simple souls who find their solace from it. It is like scaffolding quite essential to a building.

P.C. But if I may carry the simile a little further, you agree that the scaffolding has to be removed when the building is complete?

G. Yes, it would be removed when this body is removed.

P.C. Why?

JOE WILKINSON: Because we are eternally building.

G. Because we are eternally striving after perfection. God alone is perfect, man is never perfect.

Harijan, 25-5-1935
116. LETTER TO R. B. GREGG

WARDHA,
May 17, 1935

MY DEAR GOVIND,

Of course I know that absence of letters does not mean decrease of love. I know what you are doing to spread the gospel of love. It must tax your energy to the full.

If America will take to an equivalent of khadi, it will be a great thing.

Andrews, Pierre Ceresole and Joe Wilkinson, the former’s companion, are here just now. Andrews will be in India for some [months]1 with the Poet2. Ceresole leaves for Europe on 23rd.

The Village Industries work is going on.

H.L. Sharma is a nature-cure man. He wants to go to Battle Creek to perfect his knowledge. He wants to use it for purely humanitarian purposes. I am getting a scholarship for him. If he can earn his board and lodging by part-time work it will be a good thing. Have you any suggestion for him?

Love to you and Radha.

BAPU

From a photostat: G. N. 4666

117. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

May 17, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

Your note-paper looks satin-like.

Dalip Singh’s3 letter is good.

We are a crowded family just now. C.F.A., Ceresole, Wilkinson, Malkani, Mrs. Malkani, their friend and son and two students—a good addition. And you will remember the scarcity of plates and bowls we have. But we manage and keep merry.

Yes, the heat here is trying.

1 Very faint in the source
2 Rabindranath Tagore
3 Addressee’s brother
The gum on your envelopes is from the bark of a tree in the garden. I shall see what can be done to the next lot.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 3533. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur, Also G.N. 6342

118. FOR MUNICIPALITIES

The following appeal has been issued by Prof. Malkani, Joint Secretary, Harijan Sevak Sangh, to the municipalities.¹

It is to be hoped that it will receive an effective response from the municipalities.

Harijan, 18-5-1935

119. HARIJAN EDUCATION

The question of primary education is in many respects much more difficult than secondary and college education. And Harijan education is the most difficult for all. Be it in the crudest manner possible, a non-Harijan child receives some home culture. A Harijan child, being shunned by society, has none. Even when, therefore, all primary schools are open to Harijan children, as they must be sooner or later and in my opinion sooner rather than later, preliminary schools will be needed for Harijan children if they are not to labour under a perpetual handicap. The preliminary training can be discovered and tried in all the numerous Harijan schools conducted under the aegis of Harijan Sevak Sanghs scattered throughout India. That preliminary training should consist in teaching Harijan children manners, good speech and good conduct. A Harijan child sits anyhow; dresses anyhow; his eyes, ears, teeth, hair, nails, nose are often full of dirt; many never know what it is to have a wash. I remember what I did when in 1915 I picked up a Harijan boy at Tranquebar and took him with me to Kochrab where the Ashram was then situated. I had him shaved. He was then thoroughly washed and given a simple dhoti, vest and a cap. In a few minutes in appearance he became indistinguishable from any child from a cultured home. His head, eyes, ears, nose were thoroughly cleaned. His nails which had become repositories of dirt were pared and cleaned. His feet which were laden with dust were rubbed and cleaned out. Such a process has to be gone through every day, if need be, with Harijan children attending schools. Their lesson should begin for the first three months with teaching them cleanliness. They should be taught also how to eat properly, though as I write this sentence I recall what I had seen during the walking pilgrimage\(^1\) in Orissa. Harijan boys and grown-ups, who were fed at some of the stages, ate with much better cleanliness than the others who soiled their fingers, scattered about the savings and left their plates in a messy condition. Harijans had no savings and their dishes were left thoroughly clean. Their fingers, whilst they were eating, were after every morsel taken licked clean. I know that all Harijan children do not eat so cleanly as the particular ones I have described.

¹ The appeal is not reproduced here; it exhorted the municipalities to provide social amenities, such as housing facilities, better service conditions, provision for sick, casual and maternity leave, etc., to its sweepers and scavengers.

If this preliminary training is to be given in all Harijan schools, pamphlets giving detailed instructions for teachers in their languages should be prepared and distributed and inspectors of schools be required during their inspection to examine teachers and pupils on this head and to send full reports of the progress made in this direction.

This programme involves care in the selection of teachers and the training of the present staff. But all this is well worth the attention, if the Sangh is to discharge its trust by the thousands of Harijan children that are brought under its care.

_Harijan_, 18-5-1935

120. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

May 18, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

What is the news about Dhiru\(^2\)? Who meets his expenses? How is he progressing? When will he complete his study? Do you have what he gave in writing?

How is Harilal?

Everything has been settled about the school. Everybody agrees that your scheme is all right.

How is Purushottam\(^3\)? Does Chorwad suit him?

\(^1\) In 1934

\(^2\) Dhiru Gandhi, son of Vrajlal Gandhi, who was learning painting at Santiniketan

\(^3\) Addressee’s son
Did I write to Jamna that I had written a letter to Vijaya?

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]
I shall be in Borsad from 23rd to 31st May.

121. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

WARDHA,
May 18, 1935

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

While Mahadev was there, I was too lazy to write to you. Then, owing to circumstances over which he had no control, he took two days to return. The result was that I could not write to you.

What you say about Mohanlal Pandya is quite right.¹ The memories of old days are quite vivid. But what will it avail to grieve? Co-workers come and go. You feel that they only go, don’t come. Even if that be so, what does it matter? God doesn’t disappear. It is because He is, that we are. Without Him, of what help could all others be to us? They would be so many bodies without souls. You should not, therefore, grieve over the passing of a co-worker. Our duty is to do the best that we can.

I won’t be free before the 21st. I shall arrive in Bombay on the 22nd morning. The 20th is Monday. I must be here on the 21st. Most probably I shall be accompanied only by Ba. I will take along Mirabehn only if I cannot help it. If she insists on coming I shall be obliged to take her and may also bring one more person. For food, I will have goat’s milk, neem leaves and any fruit available locally. Please don’t get anything from Bombay. That is my diet here too. In place of lime-juice I take the juice of tamarind and in place of green vegetables crushed neem leaves. These days I also eat mangoes which grow in the orchard here. I have not as yet tasted Bombay mangoes this year. I will do that in Bombay. But positively not in Borsad.

I must leave Mahadev behind here. I will send him, if necessary, after I return here. The rest when we meet.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 168-9

¹ Vide also “Speech at inauguration of Bal Mandir, Nadiad”, 31-5-1935
122. LETTER TO BALVANTSINHA

May 18, 1935

CHI. BALVANTSINHA,

I have not a shadow of doubt that it is best for you to settle down in some village. You should live by your body labour and serve the villagers by thought, word and deed and to that end observe the eleven vows. A timepiece is not a necessity; but if you think it is, you can construct a device using sand or water. That would involve no expense whatsoever. Yes, you have my permission to visit me whenever you like, only remember that we have no money to waste on railway journeys.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1876

123. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

May 18, 1935

CHI. LILAVATI,

You have entered your twenty-eighth year. That means you are growing. Are you also growing mentally and emotionally? May you be of sound health. May your spirit of service grow. May you be more firm and may you find your peace of mind.

I hope to reach Borsad by the 23rd. I shall return from there on the 31st.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar
124. LETTER TO KUNVARJI K. PAREKH

May 19, 1935

CHI. KUNVARJI,

I got your letter. Here we didn’t see anything to criticize in Harilal’s behaviour. I shall be pained if your suspicion proves true. There is no question of handing over Manu to his care. I hope all of you are quite well there.

Ba and I shall be in Bombay on Wednesday. You can come. I will give you a few minutes.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9721

125. LETTER TO MANU GANDHI

May 19, 1935

CHI. MANU,

I got your letter. I shall be in Bombay on Wednesday; also Ba. Do come.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9721

126. LETTER TO DAHYABHAI M. PATEL

WARDHA,

May 19, 1935

BHAi DAHYABHAI,

After reflecting over your letter of June [sic] 25, 1935 for so many days, I content myself with this reply. After I got it, a number of similar incidents have occurred at other places too. I am tired of

1 Harilal Gandhi’s son-in-law and Rami’s husband
2 In the source, the letter is written on the back of “Letter to Kunwarji Parekh”; vide the preceding item.
writing about them. My writings may have had some effect, but nothing worth speaking about. In regard to these activities the local worker at each place must go on doing the best he can. He must of course keep me informed. We should realize our limitations. We are reformers and not policemen. Nor do we want to become policemen. A reformer brings about reforms by laying down his life for them, the policemen impose them by force. The same person cannot function both as a reformer and as policeman. Hence the rise of the State. Since, however, we are not with the State we can get but negligible help from it. We may accept it wherever we can do so without loss of self-respect.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati: C.W. 2706. Courtesy: Dahyabhai M. Patel

127. LETTER TO SHALIGRAM VERMA

May 19, 1935

BHAI SHALIGRAM VERMA,

Whatever I said was wholly without prejudice. An argument was advanced and I reacted to it. There was no intention to cast any aspersion on anyone. I had already made it clear that the consultation I had was only informal. I had later on understood that it would not be proper to exclude the publishers from the office of the secretary. There is no reason for you to sever connection. I hope that you will give up the intention of resigning.

Yours,
M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 8219. Also C.W. 5634

128. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

WARDHA,
May 19, 1935

CHI. SHARMA,

The order for your ticket has been received but it is more difficult about the passport. Everyone has to apply for it in person. So you might have to go to Delhi. Possibly the form is available with the magistrate in Khurja. I shall be able to write, if at all it should be necessary, after you have sent in your application. A visa from the \footnote{This was written at 3 a.m.; vide “Letter to H. L. Sharma”, 20-5-1935}

American Consul at Calcutta will be required after the receipt of the passport. I expect to be able to obtain it for you. Now it is up to you to arrange for the passport.

The enclosed letters are to be returned. I leave tomorrow for Borsad, returning on June 2. My address from the 23rd to the 31st will be: Borsad, via Anand, B. B. & C. I. Rly.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Hindi]

Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, pp. 160-1

129. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

May 20, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

I have not been able to write you during the past five days. Guests have absorbed all my time.

Charlie’s wire has just arrived. Not one of us had realized till I got your letter what a miraculous escape you had. You are destined to render greater service than you have already rendered. That to me is the reasonable meaning in God having kept you whole in spite of what looked so like a fatal accident. Let the accident make us all careful of every moment He spares us.

I am having slivers and note-paper made for you. They will be sent to you in due course.

I suppose you have known Puri for a long time. If you have found him trustworthy, he should be of great help to you. What is he doing there?

Does Shummy know the fruit-tree called falsa? The fruit is a berry, the size of a pea. Can he get for me the analysis of the pulp and the seed? What is its botanical name? I am trying to discover the food values of all these easily obtainable fruits and leaves. They seem to me to have immense possibilities. I would like Shummy to specialize in this branch of the work. He has access to specialists which few persons have.

Love to you three.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 3534. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6343
130. LETTER TO NARAHARI D. PARIKH

May 20, 1935

CHI. NARAHARI,

I got your letter. I have already written¹ to you and given you complete freedom whether or not to give a cow to Ramjibhai. Follow your own inclination in the matter. I attach no importance to my wish. Where is the sense in my expressing a wish when it is you who are doing the work?

You may sell to Parnerkar² as many of the cattle as you think necessary. In other words, you have complete freedom in this matter. I assume that you will inform me of whatever you do.

How Vanu’s³ illness is being prolonged? I have to reach Borsad on the 23rd. And what a bother also that you have to go to Broach for Mani’s⁴ molar?

Blessing from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9079

131. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

May 20, 1935

BHAISHRI VALLABHBHAI,

I can’t stop thinking about you. Kaka is here at present. I will leave everything to him and bring along Mahadev with me. What would be the use of sending him later, I kept asking myself, when you needed him just now? I, therefore, told Kaka and he agreed to shoulder the burden.

We will discuss other things when we meet or after we reach Borsad. On Wednesday perhaps people will not leave us any free time for a talk.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, p. 169

1 Vide "Letter to Narahari D. Parikh", 9-5-1935
2 Yashvant Mahadev Parnerkar
3 Vanamala Parikh, daughter of the addressee
4 Manibehn Parikh, the addressee’s wife
132. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

May 20, 1935

CHI. AMBUJAM,

The sooner father goes to a hill-station the better. Only the doctor can decide how long he should stay there. Let us all pray that he will get well soon.

It is good that Krishnaswami’s marriage has been fixed. Let us hope that this alliance will bring happiness to both.

I still have the almonds. I am leaving tomorrow. I shall return on 2nd June.

The letters should be addressed: Borsad, via Anand, B.B. & C.I. Rly.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Hindi original: Ambujammal Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

133. LETTER TO SAMIRMAL

May 20, 1935

BHAI SAMIRMAL,

You can both come after the 10th June having first informed me. I have not a single room to spare. People have to sleep in the verandah. Manual labour is the daily routine. If you do come you should bring with you, apart from the bedding, a thali, a lota, a bowl, a towel and so forth. No useless possessions should be brought. A box is superfluous.

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1291

134. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

May 20, 1935

CHI. SHARMA,

The accompanying letter¹ was written at 3 a.m. and yours arrived in the afternoon. The same mail brought the news that you had demanded Rs. 5,000 for giving evidence. I gave no weight to it. And then I read your letter which contained quite a different account of the same affair. Why are you so disheartened? How was the judge disappointed? Why should you leave Khurja? What does it matter if people indulge in wild talk? . . . I shall certainly print something if you fully explain about the joint policy, I do not understand as yet. You are well aware of my opposition to insurance. But what is the particular significance of joint insurance? There are often enough cases of poisoning among people insured. I do not see anything special about joint insurance.

¹ Vide “Letter to H. L. Sharma”, 20-5-1935

Where do you have the boils? Mud treatment may be given up if it does not bring prompt relief.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Nothing should be done rashly.

[From Hindi]

Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, p. 162

135. LETTER TO SUMANGAL PRAKASH

May 20, 1935

CHI. SUMANGAL,

I have your letter. I know what value to place on the sentiments it contains. I know how permanent they are. Remain quiet for a couple of months. Improve your health. Eat sparingly. Find pleasure in what is good. If what pleases is not good, give it up. Do not worry about the future. Take good care of the present.

This covers everything. I shall be at Borsad from the 23rd to the 31st. Then Wardha.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: Sumangal Prakash Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

1 In a case involving an insurance claim
2 As in the source
136. INTERVIEW TO A CHRISTIAN STUDENT

[On or before May 21, 1935] ¹

GANDHIJI: Why, service which has not the slightest touch of self in it is itself the highest religion.

[STUDENT:] But one must be devoted to someone?

Yes, to Truth. I am devoted to none but Truth and I owe no discipline to anybody but Truth.

But how is one to get inspiration from this general idea?

That means to say that you want a God who has form. Truth is too impersonal for you. Well, idolatry is embedded in human nature. But you may if you like worship God as Truth, if not Truth as God. God is Truth, but God is many other things also. That is why I prefer to say Truth is God. But you need not go into what may sound like mystic lore; you may simply worship what you find to be the Truth, for Truth is known relatively. Only remember that Truth is not one of the many qualities that we name. It is the living embodiment of God, it is the only Life, and I identify Truth with fullest life, and that is how it becomes a concrete thing, for God is His whole Creation, the whole Existence, and service of all that exists. Truth is service of God.

But how should we Christian students go to the villagers? They might shun us because we are Christians.

You will tell them: ‘We are Christians, but don’t be alarmed, even as we are not alarmed because you are Hindus. We have no designs on you, as we know that you have no designs on us. We want you to be better Hindus, even as by reasons of our contact with you we know that we will better Christians.’ That is the way of approach. It is idle to talk of winning souls for God. Is God so helpless that He cannot win souls for Himself? Everyone’s religion is a personal matter with himself. I cannot preach Hinduism, I can but practise it.

Harijan, 25-5-1935

¹ This is extracted from “Weekly Letter” by Mahadev Desai, who had explained: “A Christian student, who is now with us studying things and preparing to qualify himself for village work, asked Gandhiji whether there could be any service without religion.”

² Gandhiji left Wardha on May 21, 1935 for Bombay, en route to Borsad.
137. TALK WITH JAIRAMDAS DOULATRAM

[On or before] May [21, ] 1935

This is Jawaharlal Nehru all over. He means nothing. He did not invite [a] discussion on my view of statue of Westminster. But his moods we know and must learn to tolerate cheerfully.

I have written to Anand. He is the author of his own grief. The best way to bring his father round is to forget him. It is also the best way to soothe and serve him. He must also firmly tell his mother that she must not grieve over the separation. She may not listen to him but if after having given her that advice, she does persist in nursing her grief, Anand should not worry. As to Vidya, I do not believe in prolonging the existence of the body at any cost or without purpose. A lingering death is worse than a quick death brought about by disregarding or refusing the highly artifical aids that the so-called science has provided. I have written in that strain to Anand. Perhaps you too will be shocked over this last view on preservation of the body. But is the view I have held and enforced for years. I enforced it in Mira’s and Nanavati’s cases when both bodies were said to be perishing.

Form a microfilm. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

138. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL JOSHI

WARDHA.
May 21, 1935

CHI. CHHAGANLAL,

You must have received the permission regarding wells. Wait and see what happens now. The fruits of patience are sweet. I had heard long ago that you did not get the permission. I had even forgotten about the matter. May it not be that God will throw me to that side one day so that we might meet?

I am not writing to Bhai Nanji\(^1\) anything just now. I will see later if it becomes necessary.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5531

\(^1\) Vide footnote 2"Interview to A Christian Student”, 21-5-1935

\(^2\) Nanji Kalidas Mehta of Porbandar

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
139. LETTER TO KRISHNACHANDRA

May 21, 1935

CHI. KRISHNACHANDRA,

May all your noble intentions fructify. I have owned you long since but only you or God knows how long you will continue thus.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 4271

140. DISCUSSION WITH PIERRE CERESOLE

[May 21, 1935]

PIERRE CERESOLE: Could one lay down a rule of life for the wealthy? That is to say, could one define how much belongs to the rich and how much does not belong to them?

GANDHIJI: Yes. Let the rich man take 5 per cent, or 10 per cent, or 15 per cent.

But not 85 per cent?

Ah! I was thinking of going up to 25 per cent! but not even an exploiter must think of taking 85 per cent!

That is where I disagree with the communist. With me the ultimatetest is non-violence. We have always to remember that even we were one day in the same position as the wealthy man. It has not been an easy process with us and as we bore with ourselves, even so should we bear with others. Besides, I have no right to assume that I am right and he is wrong. I have to wait until I convert him to my point of view. In the meanwhile if he says, ‘I am prepared to keep for myself 25 per cent and to give 75 percent to charities’, I close with the offer. For I know that 75 per cent voluntarily given is better than 100 per cent surrendered at the point of the bayonet, and by thus being

1 This is extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter”; Desai had explained that the discussion took place in the train on way to Bombay. Ceresole was to return to Europe on May 23.

2 Mahadev Desai had explained that “Pierre was reading a book in which the communist author had suggested that Gandhiji’s sympathy for the poor was only ‘a cover for his real sympathy for the rich’.”

3 Mahadev Desai had explained: “Ceresole’s tangible difficulty was how long one should wait in order to carry conviction to the rich man.”
satisfied with 75 per cent I render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar’s. Non-violence must be the common factor between us.

You may argue that a man who surrenders by compulsion today will voluntarily accept the position tomorrow. That, to my mind, is a remote possibility on which I should not care to build much. What is certain is that if I use violence today, I shall be doubtless faced with greater violence. With non-violence as the rule, life will no doubt be a series of compromises. But it is better than an endless series of clashes.

How would you in a word describe the rich man’s legitimate position?

That of a trustee. I know a number of friends who earn and spend for the poor and who do not regard themselves as anything but trustees of their wealth.

I too have a number of friends wealthy and poor. I do not possess wealth but accept money from my wealthy friends. How can I justify myself.

You will accept nothing for yourself personally. That is to say, you will not accept a cheque to go to Switzerland for a change but you will accept a lakh of rupees for wells for Harijans or for schools and hospitals for them. All self has got to be eliminated and the problem is simplified.

But what about my personal expense?

You have to act on the principle that a labourer is worthy of his hire. You must not hesitate to accept your minimum wage. Every one of us is doing the same thing. Bhansali’s wage is just wheat flour and neem leaves. We cannot all be Bhansalis, but we can try to approximate to that life. Thus I will be satisfied with having my livelihood, but I must not ask a rich man to accommodate my son. My only concern is to keep my body and soul together so long as I serve the community.

But so long as I draw that allowance from him, is it not my duty to remind him continually of the unenviableness of his position and to tell him that he must cease to be owner of all that he does not need for his bare living?

Oh yes, that is your duty.

But there are wealthy and wealthy. There are some who may have made their pile from alcoholic traffic.

Yes, you will certainly draw a line. But whilst you will not accept money from a brewer, I do not know what will happen if you have made an appeal for funds. Will you tell the people that only those who have justly earned their money will pay? I would rather withdraw the appeal than expect any money on those terms. Who is to decide whether one is just or otherwise? And justice too is a relative term. If we will but ask ourselves, we will find that we have not been just all our ...lives, the Gita says in effect that everyone is tarred with the same brush; so rather than judge others, live in the world untouched or unaffected by it. Elimination of self is the secret.

_Harijan_, 1-6-1935

141. INTERVIEW TO “THE BOMBAY CHRONICLE”

[May 22, 1935]

GANDHJI: That is quite right. Now, have you got your questions ready? What is it you want me to tell?

REPRESENTATIVE: First and foremost, I would like you to tell me something about the All-India Village Industries Association. What work has it been doing since it was started ten months ago?

G. The work of the Village Industries Association is going on steadily. There is nothing heroic to report. But not a moment is being wasted in the pursuit of the programme chalked out at the commencement. Though we are having all the difficulties that were anticipated and others which were not anticipated, I still swear by the original programme. I believe that on this earth there is no better instrument of progress than human flesh, and you cannot expect brilliant results if that flesh is weak, and is daily getting weaker, because of interior and exterior defects. We are, therefore, tackling the question of food and that of sanitation. And since charity begins at home, we are trying to reproduce at the centre conditions that we would like to see in use in every village of India.

Side by side with that we have selected a village nearest the centre for experiment. I would like the Press to realize the deep significance of the movement and give its intelligent support. By intelligent support I mean that important newspapers should have on their staff specialists who would regularly contribute instructive articles which the reader can profit by. You will see that in the programme which to the superficial observer appears dry, but in reality is highly interesting, there is no room for difference of opinion. All parties and persons must recognize the primary necessity of India’s millions getting nourishing food or a “balanced diet”, as Dr. Tilak calls it, and healthy surroundings. I think that both these things are possible in spite of our corroding poverty.

1 According to the reporter, the interview took place in Calcutta Mail, which was nearing Bombay early in the morning.

2 The source had reported: “Before the interview commenced, the representative told Gandhiji that he had been instructed not to put him any questions about politics.”
When informed that though it had been ten months since the Association was started little was known about the work done on behalf of the Association excepting, possibly, about the work at Wardha and Panvel, Gandhiji said that silent work was being done all over the country. The workers were finding out the depths to which the work could be carried on. There was nothing much to report in the papers, day to day or week to week. As workers of the right stamp were being found, the different questions were being tackled.

Asked whether it would not be necessary for him to undertake an all India tour in the near future, with a view to widen the scope and work of the Association, Gandhiji said that he did not think that it was necessary just yet. He added:

Undertaking an all-India tour just now would be for tackling the extent instead of the depth. There was no doubt that such a tour would bring money, and I will be giving superficial instructions about the work, that too without knowing anything of the difficulties that face village workers.

Just now I am endeavouring to concentrate at the centre and the neighbouring village to give myself and co-workers first-hand instructions. Other workers in other centres are also carrying on work likewise. When we have taken the preliminary training then I will go on an all-India tour, if necessary. Remember this is a question of a kind of adult education on a mass scale. It cannot be given without previous preparation. I have said all that I have to say about the All-India Village Industries Association. That is all.

Our representative told Gandhiji that he would ask him one or two brief questions and not disturb him after that. Gandhiji was reminded about Dr. Tagore’s message to him regarding village arts and the A.I.V.I.A. in which the Poet had said that the Central Museum that is to be started by the Association should not be restricted only to industries. The Poet had said: “... the economic life of a nation is not such an isolated fact as Mahatmaji imagines, and today, side by side with economic poverty we are faced with cultural poverty which puts us to shame—shame that is in no way lessened when we consider what we once were. Our art treasures are today found in museums outside India, and our village artists are dying out... Please tell Mahatmaji that art is not a luxury of the well-to-do. The poor man needs it as much and employs it as much in his cottage building, his pots, his floor-decorations, etc. If Mahatmaji’s men go round collecting specimens of village industries, why can they not look for and collect specimens of various indigenous arts spread all over our land and waiting to be re-cherished. ...” Gandhiji said:

Every message coming from Dr. Tagore must receive respectful attention from me. I quite believe that we have got to take care of village arts and by his assistance we shall not neglect the arts. He would not let us neglect, even if we forgot our duties. He had lent the assistance of Sjt. Surendranath Kar who has already paid a preliminary visit and I have discussed the whole thing with Deenabandhu C.F. Andrews who will in turn discuss with Gurudev.¹

Gandhiji was asked if he wanted Hindustani, the Lingua Franca of India, to be written both in Devanagari and Urdu scripts. Gandhiji replied:

Hindustani will naturally be written by the vast masses in Devanagari, but Mussalmans will for a long time to come—or, it may be for all time—in sist on writing in Urdu script. Therefore, in the definition we have said that Hindustani is the language spoken by the people in the North and written either in Devanagari or Urdu script. My hope, however, is that when religious differences have sunk and religious unity is accentuated, and friendship of the heart established between Hindus and Mussalmans, Devanagari, as the most scientific script of all the scripts of the world, will receive its due, that is, universal recognition in India.

At this stage, Sjt. Mahadev Desai informed our representative that his time was up, and he should leave the seat he was occupying and Gandhiji observed that he would not have enough time to talk to his son if further questions were asked. The Chronicle representative said that he would leave his seat immediately after he had got a reply for his last and only question that he would put, adding:

“I know it is beyond the scope of my instructions to ask this question as it is definitely political.” Gandhiji said:

Go ahead.

[R.] It was stated by Sjt. Bhulabhai Desai the other day that everyone should try to get back Gandhiji into the congress and the politics. When are you coming back to the Congress? Gandhiji laughed and said:

If you have direct access to God, ask him when I am coming back to the Congress. I am saying this because I do not know it myself.²

The Bombay Chronicle, 23-5-1935

¹ Here the source had reported: “By the time Gandhiji gave the above reply, the train had reached Kalyan and Ramdas Gandhi and others got into the compartment. . . .”

² The reporter had concluded: “After the above question, our representative was asked to take his leave but before leaving his seat Gandhiji asked him to collect his ‘commission’ from the ‘torchers’, meaning the photographers! A certain amount (less than a rupee) was collected and handed over to Gandhiji.”
142. SPEECH AT PRAYER MEETING

BOMBAY,
May 22, 1935

You will wonder why I consented to have a prayer meeting in Bombay, when even the existence of God is with many a matter of doubt. There are others who say: ‘If God is seated in the heart of everyone, who shall pray to whom, who shall invoke whom?’ I am not here to solve these intellectual puzzles. I can only say that ever since my childhood prayer has been my solace and my strength.

I am told that there is despair and depression everywhere, that there is disappointment all round as the gateway to jail is closed. People, I am told, do not know what to do. I do not know why, when there is the whole of the constructive programme of work to do. When the programme of jail-going was on, there was room for hypocrisy, compulsion, violence. But present constructive programme leaves no room for these. And it leaves no room for disappointment and despair. For them there is the name of God. It is God’s covenant that whoever goes to Him in weakness and helplessness, him He will make strong. ‘When I am weak, then I am strong.’ As the poet Surdas has sung, Rama is the strength of the weak. This strength is not to be obtained by taking up arms or by similar means. It is to be had by throwing oneself on His name. Rama is but a synonym of God. You may say God or Allah or whatever other name you like, but the moment you trust naught but Him, you are strong, all disappointment disappears. The hymn alludes to the story of the Lord of elephants who was in the jaws of a crocodile and who had been all but drowned in water. There was only the tip of his trunk left above water when he invoked God’s name and he was saved. No doubt it is an allegory. But it conceals a truth. Over and over again in my life I have found it. Even in darkest despair, when there seems no helper and no comfort in the wide wide world, His name inspires us with strength and puts all doubts and despair to flight. The sky may be overcast today with clouds, but a fervent prayer to Him is enough to dispel them. It is because of prayer that I have known no disappointment. Though I have retired from the Congress, I have not closed my eyes or stopped my ears. I know all that is happening about me, and if anyone must give way to despair, it should be I. But I have known no despair. Why 1 This is extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter”. The meeting was held in the Congress House compound. Thousands of men and women were found seated on house-tops, balconies and terraces.

---

then should you give way to it? Let us pray that He may cleanse our hearts of pettinesses, meannesses and deceit, and He will surely answer our prayers. Many I know have always turned to that unfailing source of strength.

Swaraj is our birthright. No one can deprive us of it, unless we forfeit it ourselves. We have forfeited it and we have to win it back. Swaraj does not depend on jail-going. If it did, there are thousands of prisoners in jail today. It depends on everyone doing his or her own task. That task has been shown to you. Go to the villages, identify yourselves with villagers, befriend the untouchables, make Hindu-Muslim unity a concrete fact. Do not despair although there may be Hindu-Muslim riots in the country, but go ahead with the work before you and be sure that He will pull you through.

_Harijan,_ 1-6-1935; _also The Bombay Chronicle, 23-5-1935_

143. LETTER TO MIRABEHN

_BORSAD_,

_May [23 ]^2, 1935_

CHI. MIRA,

We arrived here [at] 5.45. It is now 8.20 a.m. The weather is quite cool. A gentle wind is blowing. Anandi' and Bal' joined us at Bombay. So we are five. Bal has taken charge of me. There are many old faces here ready to anticipate my wants. So you need have no anxiety on my behalf. I am quite clear in my mind that it was well not to take you with me. But this is no precedent for the future. And in any case yours is to be the final voice.

I hope you are getting all you need in the shape of fruit. You must not hesitate to order what you want.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 6302. Courtesy: Mirabehn. Also G.N. 9768

^1 In _Bapu’s Letters to Mira_, Mirabehn explains: “On my return from Europe, I joined Bapu at Wardha Ashram. Not long after, Bapu took up residence at Maganwadi, where the Village Industries Association was then taking root. I had remained on there when Bapu wrote the . . . letter . . . .”

^2 The source has “22” which is obviously a slip. Gandhiji reached Borsad on this date.

^3 Anandi Asar

^4 Bal Kalelkar
144. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

May 23, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

I got your letter today. I have sent you a wire asking you to send Keshu. I do not remember your having asked for my permission.

I did not at all like Harilal’s idea about watches. Dissuade him. If he goes in for it in spite of that, let him.

Mathew has grown impatient about coming. The Ashram does not owe him anything. If you feel inclined, we may send him railway fare for coming; I don’t. If he is very eager to come, he will, I am writing to him and informing him that if he does not come in a few days, time he will not be taken up.

Titus has not gone on leave. He has left altogether. He was paid railway fare for the journey. I had agreed to keep him at Wardha, but he did not seem very eager. However, he will reply from Travancore. I have refused to give him a note of recommendation on anybody else.

For the present draw the amount for Tharparkar from the Ashram account. Afterwards, if necessary, I will pay it from some other account.

In my view Chimanlal is spending too much. But since we have tolerated similar expenditure by other, we should tolerate it in his case too. To a certain extent the desire to recover and to live on clings in all of us. Each one fixes his own limit of expenditure. Chimanlal is satisfied merely with staying in Veraval and having Talwalkar’s injection. But we have spent over others much more than that. I therefore, do not feel like imposing excessive restrictions on senior workers. We should be satisfied with whatever self-restraint he exercises. Do you have anything else to suggest in this matter?

I see that we shall not get interest.

It seems that giving money to Gajanan was a mistake. He had even given up study. The payment to Dhiru also should stop. He will have a copy of the agreement he gave in writing. It may be with Chhaganlal. Look into the matter.

Was my suggestion to Lilavati all right?

1 Harilal Gandhi wanted to start business in watches; vide “Letter to Manilal and Sushila Gandhi”, 24-5-1935
2 Chimanlal N. Shah, a senior inmate of the Ashram
3 Dr. Talwalkar of Ahmedabad
I am writing separately to father.

Prema came and saw me. She handed over some of her jewellery. We couldn’t have any talk. If you have preserved her last two letters, send them to Gomati to read. (She is at Wardha).

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8445. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

145. LETTER TO KHUSHALCHAND GANDHI

May 23, 1935

RESPECTED BROTHER,

Chi. Narandas informs me that, though you have read and reflected a great deal, all that seems to be of little help now and your mind has become weak. I am not surprised, for this happens to everybody. I must say, however, that I have cherished a different hope about you. For one whose mind has turned Godward, there is no old age. The body becomes weak but in that it but follows its law. The mind need not become weak. It may go on rising till at last it merges in God. Isn’t this the meaning of the verse:

This is the state, O Partha, of the man who rests in Brahman; having attained to it, he is not deluded. He who abides in this state even at the hour of death passes into oneness with Brahman.²

Isn’t the true brahmi state that which endures up to the end? What should a mind that has become weak do to attain such a state? The only reply is, constant repetition of the name. I, therefore, pray that you should make a firm resolution and, withdrawing your mind from everything, merely go on repeating, after taking the Lord’s name, the following verse:

I desire neither earthly kingdom nor paradise no, not even release from birth and death. I desire only release of the afflicted from misery.³

If you cannot do this, repetition of the name will suffice. If you fill your mind completely with strength and light, you will cease

¹ Khushalchand Gandhi; vide the following item.
² Bhagavad Gita, II. 72.
³ Ashram Bhajanavali, verse 10; vide, “Letter to Jayaprakash Narayan”, 11-12-1930 feeling old and feel young instead. If you still feel attachment to any being or object, I entreat you to shed it completely.

Humblest respects from

MOHANDAS

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II.

146. LETTER TO MADALASA BAJAJ

May 23, 1935

CHI. MADALASA,

It does not matter if your letters are long. I must know about everything. Tell Janakibehn' that she should not ride. If she has a fall, she will take time to recover. In your case, there is not the same fear. And is it not a common truth that ‘one who rides may also fall’?

We must find a remedy for your boils. Do start eating salt, although I do not think that has anything to do with the boils. Try neem leaves. I am also experimenting with them. Chew half a tola of leaves twice a day after meals. That will improve your appetite and purify your blood. Let me know about the result.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, p. 317

147. LETTER TO KANTI AND KANU GANDHI

May 23, 1935

CHI. KANTI AND KANU,

Please understand that I was very eager to take you with me but I had to restrain my desire. I have no doubt that it is for the best. But there is no doubt, either, that you are wanting to accompany me. I hope everything is going on all right. Take as much interest in prayers as you can. Kanu must learn the chapters of the Gita by heart.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 7297. Courtesy: Kantilal Gandhi

1 Addressee’s mother
148. LETTER TO BALVANTSINHA

May 23, 1935

CHI. BALVANTSINHA,

I was distressed to see you so upset on the 21st. But it was well that I learnt the extent of your weakness. You should now be calm in mind and understand yourself. Talk it over with Kishorelal and Kakasaheb.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1877

149. LETTER TO RAJKISHORI TYAGI

May 23, 1935

CHI. RAJKISHORI¹,

I was sorry I did not take you with me. But your good lay in my keeping you there. However, you will have opportunities of travelling with me in future. I hope you are happy.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 6636. Also C.W. 4284

150. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

May 23, 1935

DEAR DAUGHTER,

I expect that you are in good spirits and that everything is progressing satisfactorily. Your weight must be increasing. You are not to worry about anything.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Urdu: G.N. 326.

¹ Daughter-in-law of Chand Tyagi
Rats and fleas spread the infection and experts say that these have got to be exterminated. But rats and fleas are messengers of God. God speaks to us through them. In villages where Nature has blessed you with the finest climate and the healthiest soil, as I can see with my own eyes, you have so infringed Nature’s rules that plague seems to have a knack of appearing again and again if you do not make your houses and surroundings inhospitable to them. A man like me wedded to non-violence would say rats and fleas have as much right to live as I, and there is no reason why I should not exterminate myself rather than that I exterminate them. But I cannot reach that pitch of non-violence in this lifetime, may be in several lifetimes, nor perhaps can you. But you certainly can produce conditions where rats and fleas can never flourish. I want you to create those conditions. I want you to make the cleaning and scavenging campaign of these volunteers a permanent affair, and I want you to break up your floors, break up rat-nests and rat-burrows, and construct floors where rats cannot make their homes.1

A plague-infected man is worse than a plague-infected rat or fleas and unless you make your bodies proofs against infection you cannot abolish these epidemics. Nature has endowed us with enough capacity for the resistance of disease. It is we who, careless of her laws, have ruined that capacity. We have to regain it by healthy and hygienic ways of living and eating.

Harijan, 8-6-1935

---

1 This is extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter”. Without mentioning either the date or the place of the meeting or meetings, Mahadev Desai had merely reported that “Gandhiji addressed about ten meetings in these villages and in the course of his speeches asked the people not to go to sleep over the flight of the enemy but to take permanent measures for banishing him.”

2 Gandhiji reached Borsad on May 23.

3 What follows was reported by Mahadev Desai as said by Gandhiji “in one of his speeches”. Mahadev Desai had explained: “During his eight days’ stay at Borsad, Gandhiji got Dr. Bhaskar to issue a series of leaflets on the elements of rat-proofing of houses and on the disease-proofing of human bodies.”
152. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

May 24, 1935

CHI. MARY,

I had a talk about you with Khurshed. Her whole house will be practically vacated. If therefore you would rather go to Miraj, do by all means go and that as early as you can. Of course there is no difficulty about your stay elsewhere in Bombay if you go simply for examination. You will do whatever is best for your health.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 6042. Also C.W. 3371. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

153. LETTER TO AGATHA HARRISON

WARDHA, 1
May 24, 1935

MY DEAR AGATHA,

Whilst C. F. A. is here I need not write at all. But I must refer to your letter enclosing Carl Heath’s letter to Manchester Guardian. The letter evokes no response because it takes no note of the truth as it is known here. The king there is, or may be, above party strife. The King-Emperor is here identified with the services. He is the ruler through his Viceroy. The India Office laughs to see the paragraph which is so hopelessly out of touch with the reality. And why should the Government release prisoners who bear no affection either towards the Emperor as such or his Empire? I have never appreciated the agitation for the release of political prisoners. I have understood the Government’s stubborn refusal. It is consistent. It is wrong only if the whole system is admitted to be wrong. O! for an ounce of facts.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 1491

1 Permanent address
154. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

May 24, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

So you were not free from the effect of the accident even at the time you wrote, i.e., the 20th instant. I hope you are now completely free.

I am glad you have established touch with the villagers. You should learn their domestic condition and know them as if they were members of the family. Their morals need not worry us just now for they know no better. They have not a guilty conscience. If therefore we establish contact with them it becomes easy and effective to ask them to give up some of their habits.

Heat is there but none too oppressive.

I am not writing to Charlie separately.

Love to you all there.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 3535. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6344

155. LETTER TO MIRABEHN

May 24, 1935

CHI. MIRA,

I had put in an *ateran*¹ myself. So there was no difficulty. There are plenty of winders here and slivers. Of foot-wipers too there is no dearth. So far as food is concerned, Bal goes and gets the goat milked and mangoes are plentiful. Neem trees are everywhere. So you need have no anxiety on my score.

I am glad you are having Raghavayya treated. It is good too that you are helping in the kitchen.

Kamala was quite well and cheerful.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 6303. Courtesy: Mirabehn. Also G.N. 9769.

¹ A wooden winder
156. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

May 24, 1935

CHI. JAMNALAL,

I got your letter. Do not let the Indore matter weight on your mind. Do please go there after you come down.

You must be getting news about Gangadevi.

Everything is all right at Borsad.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2970

157. LETTER TO MANILAL AND SUSHILA GANDHI

May 24, 1935

CHI. MANILAL AND SUSHILA,

I came to Borsad yesterday in response to Sardar’s wish. Ba and Mahadev have accompanied me. I will leave on the 31st to return to Wardha. Ba will most probably stay on in this part for about a month.

I was sorry to hear that your sugarcane crop had dried up. But that is the common lot of all farmers. In taking up farming one must make due allowance for such contingencies. Weren’t golden crops worth crores ruined here this year because of frost?

Ba may feel upset for a while, but you should always give all news, good or bad, from that side. Only then can I guide you whenever necessary.

I liked your suggestion about Ramdas. I am sending your letter to him. He will not go there, but he can certainly take up the agency, to the profit of you both. I will advise him to do so.

Harilal is at present busy looking for a new wife. He wants to start business in watches.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

...¹ has not returned a pie of the money that he borrowed from Jamnalal. He swallowed the amount sent by Medh². You must, therefore, send one pound every month.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4838

¹ The name has been omitted.
² Surendra Medh
158. LETTER TO SHANTIKUMAR MORARJEE

May 24, 1935

CHI. SHANTIKUMAR,

I got your letter. May you live long and render great services—that is ever my hope and my blessing.

I hope Sumati1 is keeping good health.

My pranams to Mother.

Blessings from

BAPU

1 Addressee’s wife

159. LETTER TO AVADHESH DUTT AVASTHI

May 24, 1935

CHI. AVADHESH,

Service to all living beings may be said to be the object of human life.

2. The observance of the eleven vows and avoidance of their opposites is essential.

3. Garuda, indeed, spoke in anger; but it does not mean that we, too may get angry.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 3215.
160. DRAFT TELEGRAM TO SUPERINTENDENT, WANLESS SANATORIUM

[After May 24, 1935]

SUPERINTENDENT
WANLESS SANATORIUM
MIRAJ

MISS BARR PREVENTED START YESTERDAY OWING FEVER. REACHING THERE SATURDAY MORNING.

GANDHI

161. WANTED ONE LAC RUPEES

The Central Board of the Harijan Sevak Sangh has already built many wells out of the fund that was placed at its disposal by Sheth Jugalkishore Birla. That fund is exhausted and there is still a need for building wells for Harijans. The orthodox opposition to the use by Harijans of common wells still continues in many places, and Harijans are obliged either to drink water out of cattle troughs or pay for water which people may for a consideration pour into their pots. Every additional well built is therefore undoubtedly a great comfort to Harijans, but it is also an increase in the wealth of the country. The Central Board of the Harijan Sevak Sangh has resolved to make an appeal for one lac of rupees for the purpose. Figures are being prepared for presentation to the public showing the wants of the different provinces. One lac is nothing in comparison to the need. But the Sangh has not the resources to spend large sums on well-construction. It is slow work requiring special skill. Not everyone can construct a well. And the work being scattered makes it very difficult to provide effective supervision. The policy of the Board is not to ask for what it cannot spend well and give a good account of to the public. I hope the modest appeal will receive prompt and adequate response.

_Harijan,_ 25-5-1935

1 From the reference to Mary Barr to whom Gandhiji had written on May 24; _vide_ “Letter to F. Mary Barr”, 24-5-1935.
162. LETTER TO RAJARAM R. BHOLE

AS AT WARDHA,
May 25, 1935

DEAR RAJARAM,

It is most difficult to guide you. My own general advice to all has been to stop all college education as soon as they have had in their own opinion enough of it and enter business. Those who have love of education truly begin it after the college course. I would like you to succeed as an honest, able businessman who would earn not for himself but for all. And in every case you must consider your body.

Yours,
BAPU

From the original: R. R. Bhole Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

163. LETTER TO BHAGWANJI P. PANDYA

May 25, 1935

CHI. BHAGWANJI,

I had your very graphic letter. Take proper care of your health. Do not forget Vadaj.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C.W. 387. Courtesy: Bhagwanji P. Pandya

164. LETTER TO VINAYAKPRASAD PANDYA

May 25, 1935

BHAII SHRI VINAYAK,

Except for persuasion I see no way of making your brother-in-law give up tea and smoking. If the love of you all doesn’t melt him, you should put up with his habits.

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1367
165. LETTER TO ANnapurna

[As At] WARDHA,
May 25, 1935

CHI. ANnapurna,

Why did father undertake a fast? What did he do during the fast? Did he suffer much? What does he eat now? How was the fast concluded? Write to me all the details after Satisbabu’s arrival. What does Vaidyanath do? What is the number of girls now? We should try to grow devakapas.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI ANnapurna Kumari
C/O SHRI GOPABANDHU CHOWdhary
P. O. BARI, DISTRICT CUTTACK

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 2778

166. LETTER TO BHAGWANJI P. PANDYA

BORSAD,
May 26, 1935

CHI. BHAGWANJI,

Your letter was put into my hands at 3.30 a.m., and after reading it I have immediately sat down to reply to it. Shedding tears will not help us to remove the hardships of Savli’s women. It can be proved that the condition of the Harijan women of Savli is not as bad as you believe it to be. Your imagination can carry you too far. That faculty needs to be kept under control. This world is a sea of misery. If we keep thinking of it only we would get drowned in it. We should remember that God, who created this world and who rules it is just and, therefore, the sufferings that we imagine do not exist and that, on the balance, happiness reigns, that is, truth alone triumphs. Knowing this, we should keep our minds light. That will also help us in removing the sufferings. If, on the contrary, we magnify the sufferings, we would sink into mohā’ and become incapable of relieving them.

1 Satis Chandra Das Gupta
2 Ignorant attachment
I will certainly inquire regarding Salvi. But I will say one thing.
It is surely a matter of satisfaction that whereas before the women earned nothing, through spinning they earn something now, however little it may be. They do have other income. A woman is but one member of a family. There are others, too, who earn. There are countless women in this country much poorer than they. Instead of shedding tears over their poverty, we would steel our hearts while thinking about it and devise measures to eradicate it.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C.W. 388. Courtesy: Bhagwanji P. Pandya

167. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

[AS AT] WARDHA,
May 26, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

I have now got your yarn. It is not bad. You should now learn to make properly-twisted strands. If you do not, the yarn becomes weak.
I see you have sent a lot of razor blades, some of which are quite new.
They make up for the postage spent on the yarn. Now you should collect a fair quantity before you send a parcel.

Did you get the packet of envelopes and note-paper? The expert has [not] yet commenced paper-making. I put him on to making note-paper, etc., out of the stock brought from Indore. When he does make paper you shall know.

Yes, I began about the market in Simla. I suggested your personally visiting it and studying the local vegetables and fruit and their quality from the health point of view and at the market knowing the poor who come from distant hills to sell their produce. You can also sell paper, khaddar and the like among those who will congregate in Simla.

I hope you have both already felt the effect of the mountain air.
Andrews should be here during the week.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 3536. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6345.
168. LETTER TO N. R. MALKANI

May 26, 1935

MY DEAR MALKANI,

Your letter of 23rd April which Hariji seems to have resented is none too courteous. It is professorial not secretarial (if there is such an adjective). A secretary is nothing if he is not pleasant even when he is saying unpleasant things which he has to say far more often than a professor.

I have written to Bapa to throw cold water on the fire lit by Hariji. I am also writing. And you may write a polite letter apologizing for any unconsciously discourteous language into using which you might have been betrayed.

Yours,

BAPU

[PS.]

Have you been sending the list of Pani Fund Donations?

From a photostat: G.N. 953

169. LETTER TO MIRABEHN

May 26, 1935

CHI. MIRA,

I am glad you are guiding Ganga Devi. She must not do any strenuous work just yet. I hope Raghavaya is better now. Sindi cleaning must not be omitted even for a day. But at the same time you must have that silent walk up to the hill.

Sardar has arranged a very light programme for me.

Love

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 6304. Courtesy: Mirabehn. Also G.N. 9770.

1 H.N. Kunzru
2 J. K. Pani Fund was started by the Harijan Sevak Sangh in June, 1933 for the improvement of water supply in Harijan colonies.
3 Mirabehn explains: "The inhabitants of this village . . . used the sides of the roads . . . for easing themselves. I happened to mention this matter to Bapu and he immediately said: 'It is our duty to teach these people sanitation and if they won't listen . . . we should clean up . . . .' The villagers proved deaf . . . so Bapu told me to take bucket and shovel, and any volunteers . . . and daily go to clean . . . ."
170. LETTER TO KANTI GANDHI

May 26, 1935

CHI. KANTI,

Your explanation is correct. I understand only this, that you have on the whole seen your good in staying with me. I don’t think you are convinced that the way of life you have to follow in staying with me is true education. But I do believe that your decision has made you happy. I have no doubt at all that all will be well with you. I understand your programme. We shall think over it when I return there. If the ledger is completed, one job will be over. By all means take as much advantage of Kakasaheb’s presence as you can.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 7298. Courtesy: Kantilal Gandhi

171. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

May 26, 1935

CHI. PRABHA,

I got your letter. I don’t like your falling ill. The disease must be cured. Kamala told me that you had gone to see her. It was also good that you went and stayed with Jayaprakash for some time. If, similarly, the marriage also is settled, all your problems will have been solved. See that you don’t fall ill before that. Eat neem leaves. Take hip-baths and go out for regular walks. I will leave Borsad on the 31st and reach Wardha on June 2. My weight is 104. My present food is milk, neem leaves and mango juice. Tamarind is not available just now. In place of it, I take the juice of lemons. My health is good. Only Ba and Mahadev are with me. Bal and Anandi joined from Bombay. Most probably Ba will stay on for a month. There are many girls at present with Gangabehn1 in Bochasan.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3449

1 Gangabehn Vaidya
172. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

May 26, 1935

You couldn’t come to see me nor could I go to see Kapil. I read your letter to Mahadev. It was good to hear that Kapil was all right again.

[From Gujarati]
Bapuni Prasadi, p. 158

173. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

May 26, 1935

DEAR DAUGHTER,

Your letter. You did nothing wrong in coming to the station. Why do you unnecessarily distress yourself? You did well in giving me all the news. Gangabehn, I hope, is cheerful. Rajkishori must have got my letter. Do only as much as your health permits. I shall reach on the 2nd.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 327

174. LETTER TO MIRABEHN

May 27, 1935

CHI. MIRA,

I have your two fine descriptive letters. They show how much you need these solitary walks for self-expression. You must have them more frequently if not daily. I am writing against mail time. 2 lb. of milk, two tolas neem, a big bowlful local mango juice and lemons is my staple here. The weather here is undoubtedly much cooler than there. We are only 15 miles from the sea.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 6305. Courtesy: Mirabehn. Also G.N. 9771.

1 Addresser’s son
2 The addressee had gone to the Wardha railway station to see Gandhiji off when he left for Bombay a few days earlier.
3 Wife of Rameshwardas Poddar of Dhulia
4 Vide “Letter to Amtussalaam”, 23-5-1935
175. LETTER TO KANU GANDHI

May 27, 1935

CHI. KANU,

I got your letter. I am glad that you are studying the Gita systematically. If you master the Margopadeshika well, you will become proficient in grammar, and that will help you in learning the correct pronunciations and also aid your memory. If you use every minute well, you will learn a great deal. I hope you keep everything clean. What happened about the third quern that had arrived? What was done about cleaning the damaged parts? I hope the mangoes and other gifts which were received have also been entered in the register.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II

176. LETTER TO VAIKUNTHLAL L. MEHTA

BORSAD, May 27, 1935

Bhai Vai[Kunth],

Bhai [Ma]thu[ra]das Vasanji informs me that as you are unable to sign the Harijan Sevak Sangh pledge, you wish to resign. Is this true? I didn’t believe it. The pledge is only a symbol of our mental attitude. How can we dispense with it? How can we ask anybody else to take a pledge which you cannot take? I believe that Bhai Mathuradas [has not understood you]. Write [to me] and explain the correct position. The Bombay branch of the Sangh must be placed on a sound footing.

BAPU

[PS.]

I will leave Borsad on the 31st.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N.1362

---

1 Bhandarkar’s manual of Sanskrit grammar for beginners
2 The original is mutilated.
177. LETTER TO V. N. ABHYANKAR

May 27, 1935

Bhai Vishnu Narayan Abhyankar,

I have read your letter carefully. I congratulate you on the faith and firmness which you have put in the khadi work. That the Praja Mandal should buy mill carpet rather than khadi carpet is as painful as it is amazing. We who have faith in khadi should not, however, give up our faith.

Yours
M. K. Gandhi

From a photostat of the Hindi: S.N. 12761

178. LETTER TO BALVANTSINHA

May 27, 1935

Chi. Balvantsinha,

If you do not see the fault, why should you be troubled? Even if a mahatma shows us our faults, we should neither be pained nor repent, so long as we do not see them for ourselves. I have not found you untruthful, only indiscreet. When you had to travel at public cost, there was no need to go. It is also debatable whether your coming from Delhi was in itself proper. The same is true about rotis and mangoes. All these things should not cause you distress. You should only try to understand and try to restrain yourself. More when we meet. I hope you have put to good use the 12 days that you got.

Blessings from
Bapu

[PS.] I am returning your letter.

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 1878

179. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

May 27, 1935

Chi. Sharma,

I have your letter. I understand you have paid for the books for the present. I shall send you the money when the remaining books arrive. It is not necessary for you to pay for the books. Did the shopkeeper charge the printed price or did he allow some discount? You may continue reading whatever books are available now. In the mean time, let us see how the plans about America progress. You can certainly come and learn at Wardha. All this will depend upon plans regarding America. The letter to Dr. Kellogg does not mean that your departure depends upon his reply. If the passport was ready, I would certainly send you away on the 31st without waiting for Kellogg’s reply. The position about the passport is as I explained. We cannot move a single step without your application.

I am at Borsad. I shall leave on the 31st and reach Wardha on the 2nd June.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

How is your boil? What about the court judgment?

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, between pp. 162 and 163.

180. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

May 27, 1935

DEAR DAUGHTER,

Though you forbade me to write I feel my letter will gladden you. I do have some leisure for writing. It is pleasing to learn that everything is proceeding smoothly there. I hope the Japanese monk is well.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Urdu: G.N. 328

181. SPEECH AT BORSAD

May 27, 1935

It is a shame that plague should have been endemic here for four years. Borsad proper has only a population of 13,000, and the taluka has a population of 1,44,000 to deal with. It should not be impossible to abolish plague both from the town and the taluka. But

1 Vide “Letter to H. L. Sharma”, 20-5-1935
2 This is extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter”.

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
you cannot do so with only six scavengers for the whole of the town. Unless you convert yourselves into Bhangis, unless all of you become voluntary scavengers, plague must come again, the Sardar’s and his volunteers’ efforts notwithstanding. In fact the voluntary relief work that has now come to an end adds considerably to your responsibility. Unless you follow up the work it will be wasted. I have in the past come to you to congratulate you on the pluck with which you had fought during the civil disobedience movement and on your sufferings and sacrifice. But I have come to tell you today that it is not those who can fight the Government that can govern themselves, but those who can show themselves to be equal to calamities like this. Let me tell you that ever since I learnt the word ‘swaraj’, I have been interesting myself in work of this kind. Ever since 1893 when my public life began my principal interest has been this kind of constructive work. The fight with the Government came at a very late stage in life. But it may be said to be an edifice built on the sure foundation of solid constructive work done through several years. I have obeyed and respected every municipal and civic law to the best of my ability, and even the Government that has often imprisoned me knows my capacity for obedience. I learnt scavenging for the first time in South Africa, and have ever been laying the greatest stress on the fact that it is work of this kind that qualifies one for swaraj. You will not say that after you have won swaraj you can go to sleep, unmindful of these problems. Swaraj is not absence of rule. You will have to tackle all these problems successfully even after you have won swaraj. Remember that the man who made the call for civil disobedience is making the call for work of this essential character. Even constructive work like production of khadi and revival of village industries cannot be done unless you have made your bodies and your homes proof against disease, and therefore this sanitation work is the very foundation of all constructive work.

Harijan, 8-6-1935; also The Bombay Chronicle, 28-5-1935.
182. LETTER TO KANTI LAL GANDHI

BORSAD,
May 28, 1935

CHI. KANTI,

I got your entertaining letter. Ravishankar¹ comes and sees me regularly. If the rule he has taught you has gone down the throat and sunk into your heart, you may rest assured that all your problems will be solved. Everything will happen when its turn comes. You will have Bal and everything else too. All feel hunger and thirst, but he who remains cheerful despite them enjoys true happiness.

Anyone who has got a wooden flute like the one that Mirabehn has should please give it to Amtussalaam. I am trying to procure another.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 7299. Courtesy: Kantilal Gandhi

183. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

May 28, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

Read the accompanying letter and give it to Harilal. Do you think there is anything in it?

Keshu has gone to Bombay. He wants something by way of scholarship. I have told Panditji² about Gajanan. He will have a talk with Gajanan. Go on giving³ for the present.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8446. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

¹ Ravishankar Vyas, popularly known as Ravishankar Maharaj
² Narayan Moreswar Khare
³ Vide “Letter to Narandas Gandhi”, 23-5-1935
CHI. PREMA,

Why did you have to keep waiting for forty-five minutes? In any case, I didn’t think you would run away. Since you were meeting me after a long time, I was eager to ask you a few questions and have a careful look at you. Of course you did well to go back to your place of work. But I was eager because on that day you had stayed on.

I am unable to say anything about Aurobindobabu. If a man with a flabby body cannot have pure wisdom, what can one say of one who is slim? I can only say that my path has borne fruit for me. Let us not make ourselves judges of the whole world. We should admit that among the two hundred persons living under his wing there are several whose lives have undergone a great transformation through his influence.

Everybody follows his own natural bent.

It is not quite correct to say that in the West they do not recognize the necessity of purity in private life, nor is it correct to say that here everybody recognizes it. We ourselves not only recognize it, but go further and believe that the actions prompted by a reason not purified inwardly will not endure, however attractive they may appear. Such actions cannot be judged from their immediate results. It is true, of course, that actions which have no connection with morality do not require inward purity. A dissolute carpenter will be able to make a right-angled table. But a person lacking in purity will not be able to eradicate untouchability or turn the people to the spinning-wheel, for both these tasks require qualities of the heart. In such activities calculations of time count for little. We should have no doubt at all that actions performed with sincere and truthful motives are bound to have certain results. If we do not have such faith, we shall never be able to adhere to moral principles.

God is beyond the reach of human thought. The God, therefore, whom we worship is a creation of our imagination. Nobody has seen the real God. If anybody has seen Him, he has not been able to describe Him. It is difficult to say which Form of Him is dearest to me. The Form, however, which I worship is known as Truth. He both has a manifest form and has none. He manifests Himself in innumerable ways. How can imperfect man see perfect truth?

I don’t intend to write anything about the jewellery though I have already made a note of the point in my diary. The additional note which will appear after your letter will be for my information. Isn’t that what you desire?

I will use the khadi when it is received.

Lilavati has arrived here from Rajkot. This time her health is excellent. She has gained weight, too, and seems to be quite happy.

I intend to leave on the 31st and reach Wardha on the 2nd.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 10373

185. LETTER TO KRISHNADAS

[AS AT WARDHA.]
May 29, 1935

MY DEAR KRISHNADAS,

I did not know that the illegal sessions were counted among the others. I think you should take the ruling from Rajendrababu1 and act as he says. If they are counted as sessions, their chairmen undoubtedly become members of A.I.C.C. if they conform to the rule applicable to original members.

Shri Srinivasa Iyengar is not found in the list because I imagine he has not paid his subscription.

If the Congress has actually finished 50 years of its life, undoubtedly there should be celebrations on a grand scale. The programme requires careful thinking out. Confer on this with Rajenbabu.

Love.

BAPU

[PS.]

Sardar has seen this letter and he approves.

From a copy: A.I.C.C. File, 1931 Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library.

1 Then President of the Indian National Congress, to whom Gandhiji had sent a copy of this letter.
186. LETTER TO MIRABEHN

BORSAD,
May 29, 1935

CHI. MIRA,

From your description of the weather there, Borsad is heaven. The evenings and mornings are delightfully cool. Wardha must be a furnace day and night. Whatever it is, if all goes well you will find us there on 2nd June.

I am glad Janakiprasad joined the party of his own accord. Amtussalaam has to be allowed to grow her own way. She is a wonderful girl—a freak of nature. If she lives long, she is likely to become a first-class servant of humanity.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 6306. Courtesy: Mirabehn. Also G.N. 9772.

187. LETTER TO VITHAL L. PHADKE

May 29, 1935

CHI. MAMA,

I could read your letter only last night. I am camping tomorrow at Ras and at Nadiad on the 31st morning. From there we take the train for Ahmedabad at 9.22. At Ahmedabad I shall spend the day at Budhabhai’s and at night take a train for Wardha. Thus we can meet only at Ahmedabad now. We are spending four hours at Kanjibhai’s¹ in Surat. I shall expect Bhaskar² there.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3831

¹ Kanaiyalal Desai
² Dr. Bhaskar Patel
188. LETTER TO PURUSHOTTAMDAS THAKURDAS

May 29, 1935

BHAIPURUSHOTTAMDAS,

The Harijan Sevak Sangh has a big scheme for digging wells. It is planned to construct them with cement. Can we expect your help in obtaining it? Thakkar Bapa informs me that you had allowed 30 per cent in the Bihar Relief work. I assume that you will do whatever is possible in this instance. I was told in Borsad that you had called during the few hours I spent in Bombay. I was disappointed that we couldn’t meet.

I hope you keep perfect health.

Vandemataram from

MOHANDAS

Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

189. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

[May 29, 1935]¹

CHI. SHARMA,

What can I do? You cannot get a passport at Wardha. As far as I know, you will get it in Delhi only. You will have to apply to the magistrate. The Police Commissioner will make inquiries. So you have to get an application form and fill it. I was hoping that I could take out a passport for you but rules do not permit it. I too had to apply and attach a photograph and all this not at Simla but in Bombay. The only difference was that, since I had to attend the Round Table Conference, Simla had cleared the way for me. They will make many inquiries about you, as they do in all cases. This should not cause anything like fear. You will often have to come in contact with many such officials. More so in America. There are inquiries and verifications at every stage, so you must make a start.

It was a reliable person who wrote to me about the Rs. 5,000.² He does not want to disclose his name. It is the same firm. In this I can never be misled. Nor does that seem to be his intention. When he learnt that I was sending you to America, he wrote to caution me. I replied to say that there was no reason for me to be cautious. I have written to you as a matter of duty to let you know how people talk about you. This should not cause you any worry.

¹ As in the source
² Vide “Letter to H. L. Sharma”, 20-5-1935

I understand about joint policy. I fear nothing can be done in this matter. My writing is not likely to deter anyone from taking out a policy. I would not bother about the effect, if writing becomes a duty. At present I do not feel called upon to write.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, facing p. 164.

190. LETTER TO KOTWAL

May 31, 1935

BHAI KOTWAL,

I got your letter. I have absolved nobody. I merely said that if Haribhau and you had misled the members of the Committee, they would be absolved from blame. But even though you might have misled them, how can those who accompanied you be absolved? As a matter of fact, therefore, nobody is absolved. Your atonement lies, first in explaining to the people there what their dharma is, and, secondly, in refusing in future to assume any responsibility beyond your capacity. You have no gift for collecting money. Since you did not have money, you should not have involved yourself in money matters. Except this there is no other atonement. It will not matter if you can collect nothing. But even if you are offered contributions of a hundred or two hundred rupees, you may accept them. Drop by drop the lake fills.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3610
191. LETTER TO VIPIN D. PATEL

BORSAD,
May 31, 1935

CHI. BABA\(^1\).

Manibehn says today is your birthday. What will you do on this day? Won’t you do some act of service? If you wish to do so, then ask Manibehn what you can do. You will certainly be growing up. You must also become good.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro-4: Manibehn Patelne, p. 163

192. SPEECH AT INAUGURATION OF VITHAL KANYA VIDYALAYA, NADIAD

May 31, 1935

Today we have assembled for the opening of a girls’ school. I have made a thorough study of child education. I could say the same thing about girls’ education. But how can experts accept this? Today, even I cannot make that claim. In the prevailing state of affairs it is not easy to talk about girls’ education. Everyone may well claim that he is capable of giving education to girls. I will however ask him whether he has imparted true education to his daughter or his wife. How can he who has not observed his dharma towards his wife, sister, mother or mother-in-law, set out to teach the daughters or sisters of others? They may well become B.A.s or M.A.s but I shall put them to the same test. I should like to know what kind of husbands and fathers those who write books on girls’ education are.

You will tell me that although this school is to be opened as a memorial to Vithalbhai, I have not yet said anything about him. Why should we have a memorial to Vithalbhai in Nadiad? His services extended over a vast area. He brought credit to the office of the Mayor of the Bombay Corporation. Both in Bombay and Simla, he struggled for the nation’s cause. There have always been differences of opinion between Vithalbhai and myself. Nevertheless the very same

\(^1\) Grandson of Vallabhbhai Patel
Vithalbhai sang my praises in America. The reason for this was that both of us had one thing in common—the zeal to live and die for the country. He did not keep a pie for himself. He bequeathed to the country whatever he had saved. When he was earning, he donated Rs. 40,000 the interest on which is still accumulating. Is it a child’s play to build a memorial to such an individual? The ideal of education for girls is not that our girls become like dolls or beautiful dancers but good volunteers. As Patidars, you have thought of erecting this memorial. God alone knows whether he was a Patidar or not. When I first met him, I mistook him for a Muslim because of his fez and his beard. I did not even ask him, for it would not be in keeping with my habit. How can he who regards everyone as his brother ask about a person’s caste or religion! If you want to ridicule Vithalbhai by calling him a Patidar, you may well do so. Which of the Patidars’ customs did he observe? Which circle of Patidars can absorb him? If you want to claim Vithalbhai and Vallabhbhai as your own, then be sure that you are doomed. If you regard the former as one of you, you will have to regard Dheds, Bhangis and Dharalas as your kinsfolk. He never distinguished between Bhangis and Patidars. If you want to build a memorial to him, you will have to make this institution such as would do credit not to Kheda but to India and you will have to produce women volunteers who will serve the country. If you run this institution with this ideal in view, it will be regarded as a real memorial to Vithalbhai.

It is not easy to do that. However, I have come here on your insistence and because of my blind love for you. How could I refuse to come to Kheda district and refuse to open a school when I have a fund of sacred memories of this district, where I went round on horseback and in bullock-carts, where I gathered a lot of dust by going on foot, where once I was on my death-bed and where volunteers like Fulchand cleaned my bed-pan? It is true that I was not very enthusiastic about performing this ceremony, for I have burnt my fingers once, but I agreed to do it as I hold the belief that faith moves mountains.

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbandhu, 9-6-1935
I feel it is necessary to say two things before we begin our programme for the day. Today, on this occasion, I feel the absence of Fulchand1 and Mohanlal Pandya2—the onion thief. I came into contact with both these persons when I was staying at the Nadiad orphanage in 1918 and that relationship lasted till they died. I have preserved in my memory many sweet recollections of both. I received a heart-rending letter from Sardar at the time of Mohanlal’s death. Ordinarily, Sardar has a heart of steel, he can harden his heart to put up with any kind of suffering that befalls him. Nevertheless when I came across heart-rending phrases in his letter, I realized how much he must have felt at the loss of such a colleague. Not only this district, but the entire Gujarat feels his loss. These two workers embodied my ideal of silent volunteers. Both gave up their lives thinking of their own work.

I have visited the Bal Mandir which has been built in memory of Fulchand. It is natural that you should wish to have a memorial for Mohanlal as well. However, it is better if we do not beguile ourselves with such small memorials. If we wish to erect a permanent memorial, it cannot be done by spending money on buildings of brick and mortar. This does not mean that such memorials should not be built. Only we must understand what we intend through the memorial. We cannot sit by saying, now he is gone and where are we to find the like of him? We are bound to feel sorry at the loss of such workers but their loss should be made good. Just as at the death of a king his throne does not remain vacant and we say “the king is dead, long live the king”, similarly the institution built by workers who are no longer alive should continue to function. And a successive line of workers belonging to these should continue. Both Fulchand and Mohanlal Pandya were institutions by themselves. What would happen to a person like myself if such institutions did not function? Or, in other words, no sooner a person who is prepared to face the gallows has departed, than another such person should be ready. I would, therefore, suggest that if we wish to perpetuate the memory of Fulchand and Mohanlal Pandya we may certainly erect buildings but before doing that our task should be to resolve to make all efforts to become like them. The poet Shakespeare has said: “The evil that men do lives after them, the good is oft interred with their bones.” The poet has not expressed a universal truth in this but has reproached the world.

As a matter of fact, Nature does not store rubbish. It continues to give out its fragrance after burying or burning up filth. Similarly, we should bury any faults in our elders and departed leaders and preserve their virtues. The reason is that it is not the former but the latter which is our wealth. We are not guilty of any injustice to those like Mohanlal Pandya if we believe that we can excel them. Each one of us is born with his own faults. It is the dharma of every one of us to rid ourselves of these and to develop our virtues and preserve them. To the extent that the world has not been regularly practising this dharma, it has not done credit to its heritage.

This morning, I visited the Bal Mandir started in memory of Fulchand. I was informed by the persons who run it that the transport charges for bringing the children to the school every day came to fifty rupees per month. I am acquainted with child education and the Montessori system. I have met the learned Madam Montessori. I have not taken a single lesson from her and yet she has publicly awarded a certificate to me saying that I fully understand her system and have been practising it. This certificate was not by way of false flattery. For I had given a certificate to myself at the very outset. So, with full knowledge as to what child education is, I say that this expense of fifty rupees seems preposterous to me. Spending fifty rupees for making cripples of children is not the Montessori system. Those who blindly imitate in this country the way it is practised in Europe are fools. And how far will you carry out that imitation? According to that system, it is necessary to have a garden along with the school. In this school I did not find a garden. When I enquired about the distance of the school from the children’s homes, I was informed that it would not be more than a mile. I would ask the parents and the teachers to save these fifty rupees. Teachers should set out early in the morning and bring the children to the school, leading them by the hand. You cannot perpetuate the memory of Fulchand by packing the children into a carriage and bringing them to the school. Fulchand was not the person to rest in a bed of flowers. He was as hard as steel. Hence I would tell the teachers to serve a notice on parents that they should accept your resignation if they cannot send their children on foot, but they should not compel you to make the children helpless. Only aged and helpless persons like Nanasaheb go about in carriages. I would not do so. And if an old man of sixty-six does not sit in a carriage, why should you send children of two-and-a-half years in that manner?

\[1\] In 1931, when Gandhiji was visiting England for the second Round Table Conference; Vide “Interview with Maria Montessori”, 9-10-1931

[From Gujarati]
Harajanbandhu, 9-6-1935

194. STATEMENT TO THE PRESS

AHMEDABAD,
May 31, 1935

Ghaffar Khan is cheerful and happy, though considerably reduced. He looks weak. Our conversation throughout was about the members of his family.

The Bombay Chronicle, 1-6-1935

195. INTERVIEW TO THE PRESS

May 31, 1935

Answering several questions, Gandhiji said that plague was practically exterminated from Borsad. The conversation next turned to the village industries work. Asked as to why he selected Wardha as his headquarters Gandhiji said:

Because Wardha is in the centre of India, and it was in Wardha that I was able to get a rich piece of land with buildings and plenty of water, land worth over two lakhs. There are nearly 700 fruit trees on the land. I selected Wardha also because Sheth Jamnalal Bajaj was most anxious that the land which he had contemplated as donation for Maganlal Gandhi Memorial should be taken up by the All-India Village Industries Association. Lastly, Wardha is a half-village and half-town, and my own desire and that of my associates was that the headquarters should not be selected in any presidency town. There

1 Gopaldas Vithaldas Desai
2 Gandhiji issued the statement after meeting Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan in Sabarmati Jail in the afternoon.
was an additional attraction of Vinoba and his band of workers already trained at the Wardha Ashram. These were sufficient inducements for all of us for selecting Wardha as headquarters.

Answering further questions, Gandhiji said that he did not propose to move out of Wardha as far as possible in order that the work might go on in his presence, as the conception was his. Moreover, it was advisable that all office-bearers of the Association should be in close touch with him and that he might be available, whenever any of them wanted his guidance at Wardha. They met daily for one-and-a-half hours except on Mondays.

Asked as to whether it was a fact that he had left Gujarat because he was dissatisfied with her, Gandhiji said that that was altogether a wrong notice. [He said:] It is not without considerable pain that I am just now physically cut off from Gujarat, though, in other respects, I am in constant touch with her work.

Replying to another question, Gandhiji said that he wished he could stay in Gujarat for the Village Industries work, but he was afraid that Gujarat was far too commercialized for doing spade-work with better prospects of success than elsewhere. Gandhiji was of opinion that villages in Gujarat were more touched by that commercial spirit than elsewhere.

The Bombay Chronicle, 1-6-1935

196. ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS

May 31, 1935

What should be the attitude of a woman towards her family? To what extent can she maintain her individuality in the family?

There is not the slightest doubt that wives have all the rights which husbands enjoy. Their duties are different but their rights are the same. If a woman sets out in shirt and trousers with a gun in her hand, a man has no right to stop her. In such matters men and women enjoy equal rights. A husband cannot compel his wife to go to a cinema against her wishes or if she wishes to go out by herself, he cannot prevent her. In other words, in things which have to be done jointly—the greater the amount of co-operation and unanimity the better it is.

This co-operation is not a one-sided affair. It cannot be measured. The husband saying, ‘I am your master, you are my property, you should do as I tell you’ is the kind of thing that has no place in my ideology. Satyagraha is the final weapon against such

---

1 The questions were asked by members of Jyoti Sangh, an institution for women’s welfare.
attitude in husbands. A woman too can resort to it. It is both a single-edged and a double-edged sword. It can be used anywhere with success. The husband has no alternative but to give in before this strength of love. Although I am pointing out this path of love—of satyagraha—to the woman who wishes to assert her own personality before her husband, it is as the poet Pritam has said “the flame of the fire”. She will have to walk in it and that too bare-footed, not with shoes on.

With reference to removing the economic dependence of women, Gandhiji said:

I can point out many ways of removing the economic dependence of women. The easiest way to this is for every woman to take up some form of work. It is not as if the educated women of today were independent. They are equally dependent. But this is a problem that concerns only the city women and high-caste women. I have travelled in villages and have seen numerous women enjoying economic independence. These women do more work than men. But women get less wages. Truly speaking, both men and women should get equal wages. That is women’s right. It is only fair. If Jyoti Sangh could achieve this, one could say it had brought forth a new principle in the world.

Now we have to find out what our work should be. Of the crores of women, how many of you are going to become B.A.s and M.A.s? But let me inform you that crores of women in India enjoy economic freedom. I have to find out how many in Ahmedabad do so. It is difficult for the Jyoti Sangh to remove their financial dependence. For peasant women it is not so. We do not enjoy the right which they enjoy. It is the Brahmins and Banias who have to fight for the right of divorce. Other communities have long been enjoying this right. Hence, I ask you not to pity them unnecessarily. Only you city-dwellers are dependent.

All of us have to work in the way bricks are put together one upon another. You should work within the scope set for your work and bring credit to it. You can invite those who wish to take an active part in national and social activities. I bless you that you may succeed in your endeavours. But for this many women will have to become martyrs to this cause and become ascetics. This is no play and if it is that at all, it is like that of the tight-rope-walker who is able to keep himself straight like a stick only when he concentrates fully, keeps his eyes fixed on a particular point and is fully attuned to the tunes of the shehnai and the drum. You shall be able to achieve something only if you work with such concentration.

With reference to the duties of women, Gandhiji said:
The duty of a woman is to look after what in English is called the hearth and home. Man has never performed this task. He has been content to build forts and ramparts for protection. Will he come forward to protect the home? And even if he does so, what sort of protection will he offer? Even in a home he will build fortresses and walls. He will make holes within these to fire bullets from and put glass and nails on walls. In the end, the children of the house will meet their death by climbing upon these. But we have to bring credit to the home. Hence it is my confirmed opinion that women should get a distinct kind of education. The two have separate spheres of activity and their training, therefore, should also be different. This does not imply that the work of the one is inferior while that of the other is superior; the spheres of the two are complementary.

[From Gujarati]

Gujarati, 16-6-1935

197. STRUGGLES OF A WORKER

I am conducting, with the co-operation of some comrades, an ashram; its object is to so train ourselves as to be transformed into ideal peasants, so that we may be able to completely identify ourselves with village people and village society, and thus be able to serve them by being actually of them. With this end in view, agriculture has been taken up as the chief means of support with spinning and weaving as supplementary . . .

While starting the ashram, it had been conceived that along with the working out of the ideal of ourselves living a self-supporting peasant life, we should also serve the villagers by doing Harijan work, by introducing spinning and in other possible ways. But we have been entirely disappointed in this respect, for we have not been as yet able to find a suitable locality for the ashram. In the locality wherein the ashram is at present situated the hamlets consist of one or two houses; and these hamlets are separated from one another by a distance of from half a mile to one mile.

Another thing that has seriously impeded the progress of the ashram is that I committed grave blunders, as I now find them to be, in the matter of diet. In what now seems to be a mere over-enthusiasm for the ideal of poverty, the standard of diet was kept very low. The ashram, for instance, did not even use vegetables regularly . . . . Milk and milk products were considered a luxury . . . . All this has seriously crippled the health of the inmates. The ashram started with twelve inmates; we are now only five . . . .

The ashram has up till now stuck to the ideal of maintaining itself by manual labour . . .

Friends and sympathizers as well as critics set this our insistence on the Tolstoyan idea of bread labour in opposition to the ideal of social service, and argue that the ashram has thus deprived society of the benefits of the many services that the ashram workers would have been otherwise in a position to render to it. How and when, if at all, can one be justified in compromising the principle of bread labour for the sake of rendering ‘social service’? Is not, most often, the conflict between ‘being’ and ‘doing’ only apparent and superficial, while in truth, ‘being’ is ‘doing’ in the real sense?

. . . . the board per head per month has been Rs. 3 and other expenses including clothing Re. 1 per head per month.

This is from a letter addressed to Shri Kishorelal Mashruwala by a highly educated selfless worker. It depicts the struggles of a sincere worker and is likely to help all who are trying to lead a life of service.

The effort is noble. The writer and his co-workers do not hesitate to own and mend mistakes when they discover any.

I do not know how Shri Kishorelal has answered the queries put by his correspondent. I must try to answer them in order to help the general reader who is interested in the questions of the type that puzzle the writer of the letter.

There seems to be some confusion about the principle of bread labour. It is never opposed to social service. Intelligent bread labour is any day the highest form of social service. For what can be better than that a man should by his personal labour add to the useful wealth of the country? ‘Being’ is ‘doing’.

The adjective ‘intelligent’ has been prefixed to ‘labour’ in order to show that labour to be social service must have that definite purpose behind it. Otherwise every labourer can be said to render social service. He does in a way, but what is meant here is something much more than that. A person who labours for the general good of all serves society and is worthy of his hire. Therefore, such bread labour is not different from social service. What the vast mass of mankind does for self or at best for family, a social servant does for general good. These seven members today find that they have hardly time left for service other than that of slaving for their daily bread. This need not be so if they were proficient in their work. In fact they are not. As field labourers, they are no match for the ordinary labourers. As artisans too they are novices. Every worker, thank God, now knows that with intelligent use of his tools a spinner can easily double his output in a given time. That means doubling the income from the wheel. This is true of most things. In agriculture, the field for development with the same tools is so vast that unless Nature interferes, a farmer can by the use of his intelligence any day quadruple his income, working the same number of hours per day. This means that for the same amount of income he need not labour so much as he is now doing. These workers can, therefore, when they have acquired proficiency, earn their bread in much less time than they need now, and will have energy set free for special Harijan or other service. The problem becomes complicated for householders who have many calls on their purses, but a self-denying worker whose needs amount to Rs. 4 per month has any day ample time at his disposal for work beyond labour that would bring him Rs. 4 per month.

---

1 Only extracts are reproduced here.

But will three rupees per month needed out of four for food give a person enough to feed himself? If Dr. Tilak’s figure for Bombay, i.e., Rs. 5 per month, is good, Rs. 3 for village life is certainly good. And when I add my own experience to Dr. Tilak’s prescription there is no difficulty. Dr. Tilak erases powdered milk from the village menu. But as he says there is no escape from milk. The inmates were wrong in eliminating milk from their dietary. It is true that millions get not a drop of milk. But they do not get many other things without which we dare not do if we are to live to serve. We must therefore take those bare necessaries which we have to strive every villager to produce for himself. Whole cereal, whether wheat, rice, bajri, juwar or the like, green edible leaves uncooked, milk, and any village fruit when in season such as mango, amrood, jamun, ber, etc., are indispensable for healthy life. The prince among edible leaves is perhaps neem leaves, to be had for the picking everywhere in India; and there are many edible grasses of which we have no knowledge. And tamarind fruit which is also obtainable everywhere is not to be despised. There is, however, a prejudice against tamarind which is difficult to understand. I have been using it liberally in the place of the expensive lemon with the greatest advantage. Diet reform is a limitless field of research, fraught with the greatest consequences for the world and more especially for the famishing millions of India. It means both health and wealth which according to Ruskin are one and the same thing. The members of the little ashram are right in thinking that they will do the greatest social service by living right all along the line. They will infect their surroundings whose limit may in course of time be the whole of India and then the universe. In this service the welfare of one is the welfare of all.

_Harijan, 1-6-1935_
198. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

BARODA,
June 1, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

Do you know anything about . . . .? According to . . . , those women are completely dissolute. If there is the slightest truth in this report, I must know it. Afterwards we shall also have to consider whether . . . should remain there. Please therefore guide me in this matter.

Help Harilal to find a suitable occupation. I have not been able to approve of his choice. I am in Baroda today, where I have come to see the Kanya Vidyalaya. Rasik met me. He has secured very good marks indeed. Bal and Tansukh also have fared equally well.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.] On reading Harilal’s letter again, I see that you are prepared to persuade him to join the school. I would like that, if you can trust him to that extent. I have till not been able to have a talk with Keshu and have asked him to come to Wardha.

199. LETTER TO BEHRAMJI KHAMBHATTA

June 1, 1935

BHAI KHAMBHATTA,

I do get news about your illness from time to time. Please let me know how you are now. The Rajkumari has given me some news and that has increased my curiosity. You must get well. What treatment are you trying there? I hope your mind is perfectly clear irrespective of the state of your health.

Blessings from
BAPU

1 The names have been omitted.
2 ibid
3 ibid
4 Nephew of V. G. Desai
200. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

BORSAD,
June 2, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

I reach Wardha on 3rd instead of 2nd. I shall send you more note-paper and envelopes after reaching Wardha.
I hope there is no after-effect now left of the accident.
How about your slivers?
Yes, I know the Khambhattas very well indeed. They are both very good workers. I am eagerly looking forward to Charlie’s letter about them. Please send me their address and have the enclosed delivered or posted to Khambhattas.
Mira says it is like a furnace in Wardha just now. It is much better comparatively in Borsad.
Love to you all.

BAPU

[PS.]
Tell Charlie, Khansaheb sends his love to him.

From the original: C.W. 3714. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6870

201. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

WARDHA,
June 3, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT.

On reaching here this morning I found your letter and samples. I return Dr. Gopichand’s letter.
If, contrary to Dr. G., you think that Puri has managed the abolition of octroi on khadi, you have to have the honour with him.
Pray do not go to the market at the sacrifice of health.
I shall hope to send you village-paper note-paper as per size sample, not the colour sample, at any rate not for some time to come.
Love to you all and a kiss to the little friend if she won’t blush.

BAPU

[PS.]
Nothing yet from Charlie regarding Khambhatta.

From the original: C.W. 3715. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6871
202. LETTER TO KAMALNAYAN BAJAJ

June 3, 1935

CHI. KAMAL,

1. Speak little.
2. Listen to everybody but always do what is right.
3. Keep an account of every minute and do punctually the work fixed for the hour.
5. Keep an account of every pie.
6. Study attentively.
7. Similarly, do exercises regularly.
8. Eat moderately.
10. Cultivate strength of heart, which is far more precious than sharpness of the intellect. For that purpose, it is necessary to read the Gita and Tulsidas.
11. Read the Bhajanavali daily. Pray daily both times.
12. Now that you are engaged, you are like an animal tied with a tether. Do not let your mind be drawn to any other woman.
13. It will be to your good if you write to me once every week and give an account of your work.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2196

203. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

June 3, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

I got your letter. I have arrived only today. Ba has stayed over in Bochasan. Here it is hot as a furnace. They say it will remain like this for the whole month.

I have already written to you about Harilal. I would be happy if he lives under your care. Write to me about . . . Keshu is here. Today is my Silence Day. I will, therefore, talk to him tomorrow, I

1 Vide “Letter to Narandas Gandhi”, 3-6-1935
2 The name has been omitted.
3 Maganlal Gandhi’s son have not forgotten about the trust-deed of the school, and will attend to it when I get time. I had a letter from Mathew from which it seems that he will be there in a few days’ time. I wrote to him that he would be reimbursed the fare only after he reaches there and satisfies us with his work. I think I wrote to you about this too.

I hope Vijaya has now fully recovered.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8449. Courtesy:
Narandas Gandhi.

204. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

June 3, 1935

CHI. SHARMA,

Your letter. I am returning the copy of your application for passport.

Why did you not deduct from the money-order what was due to you? You may debit my account for books and other expenses and credit it, for the time being, with the amount saved on evidence. The account should be settled subsequently. I hope you know how to maintain such simple accounts.

Do whatever you consider proper about the Rs. 5,000. If someone does not disclose his name to you, you may presume that he is afraid. Were the boils cured by earth treatment or did you have to apply something else?

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

It has been very hot here, too, for the last 24 hours. We had to halt at Bhusaval for four hours. But we did not go to the waiting-room. During the years 1915-17 I have had sufficient experience of third-class waiting-rooms.

BAPU

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, facing p. 166
205. TELEGRAM TO C. F. ANDREWS

WARDHA,
June 4, 1935

ANDREWS
MANORVILLE
SIMLA

DELIGHTED KHAMBHATTA’S OPERATION. GIVE LOVE.

BAPU

206. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

June 4, 1935

CHI. AMBUJAM,

I returned yesterday to find your letter. I am glad you are all in the hills and that Father is making daily progress. I do hope you will be able to stay there at least for the whole month.

Yes, it is very hot here. They say it will remain like that for the whole of June.

Ba has gone to Bochasan, very cool comparatively.

My weight has just now become steady at 104 lb.

I shall gladly take Kamalabai, if she is anxious to come to me. Let her first write to me. And in any case she had better not come just now in this heat. The weather will be quite cool in July.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: C. W. 960. Courtesy: S. Ambujammal

207. LETTER TO SASTRI

June 4, 1935

MY DEAR SASTRI,

I am not quite sure that you are bound to report every theft in your house. Therefore, I would not report theft except under extraordinary circumstances. No prosecution generally, even if the thief is caught red-handed. The moral is you must have no valuables; if you have them, you must have your own guards day and night. You should cultivate friendship with your neighbours and kinship with servants. Women should avoid all ornaments including *mangalasutra*¹ if it is gold, silver, pearl or the like.

The foot-pounder is interesting experiment. But you must grind your paddy which is the cheapest.

Yours

APU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

208. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

June 4, 1935

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

I wished to write to you from Surat, but how could I possibly get time then to do so? Afterwards during the journey it was impossible to write, and yesterday I got no time. The return journey was a bit trying. We barely got sitting accommodation at Bhusaval. We had to spend the night sitting.

Take immediate treatment for your bowel complaint. As yet it is only worms and the condition can be cured without difficulty. Lose no time.

Kanuga² has sent some mangoes at your suggestion. I hope Mridula³ sends them for Ghaffar Khan.

Blessings from

APU

SARDAR VALLABHBHAI PATEL

ABU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, p. 170

---

¹ Literally, ‘auspicious thread’; necklace worn by married woman.
² Dr. Balwantrai Kanuga, a medical practitioner of Ahmedabad
³ Mridula Sarabhai
209. LETTER TO HEMPRABHA DAS GUPTA

June 4, 1935

CHI. HEMPRABHA,

I got your letter. I read what you have written to Shankerlal and Jerajani\(^1\). I have written to them. But I wish to write to you something else. We should act in this spirit, namely, we should not want something which others need. We have love, but never attachment, for khadi. Nor do we have the pride that we are the best workers. Therefore we should leave Borkamata if we cannot work there smoothly. Besides this, I have said another thing. We are no more traders. We seek the spread of khadi as a means of self-help. The production of khadi for sale has not much significance. We cannot vindicate the message of khadi with the help of commercial khadi, and such khadi is bound to vanish.

In spite of this, I would say that you should follow your inclinations as long as you are not convinced of this truth. That is why I have written to Jerajani and Banker.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Satisbabu had sent a long letter. Since I had nothing to say, I did not reply.

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 1710

210. LETTER TO S. L. SOKHEY

WARDHA,

June 5, 1935

DEAR COL. SOKHEY\(^2\),

As you may be aware, in company with Sardar Patel I visited several villages of Borsad Taluka and saw the houses in those villages specially with a view to test the possibility of effectively using calcid for the destruction of rats and fleas. I could see at a glance that such destruction was well-nigh impossible unless you hold that calcid pumped into brick houses with storeys which are not air-proof will reach every nook and corner and the burrows under floors. Nor is it

---

\(^1\) Vithaldas Jerajani

\(^2\) Director, Haffkine Institute, Bombay

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
possible to denude the houses of huge earthen or mud jars under and round which mice and rats take shelter. The only thing effective in these cases seems to me to make the floors of all houses rat-proof. This was the method devised successfully in South Africa when the plague made its first appearance there. The device was to tear open all cutcha floors without disturbing the super-structure and make them pucka and rat-proof. This was easily and cheaply done by a liberal use of stone or brick and cement. Dr. Bhasker Patel has [after] consultation with an experienced house contractor devised several cheap methods of floor renewal so as to make floors rat-proof. Leaflets have already been issued for the purpose. If you can approve of the method, it will receive additional impetus and might be perfected under your kind guidance.

If you have anything further to say on behalf of the use of calcid or to criticize the method adopted of making houses rat-proof you will please not hesitate to send your criticism freely. Both the Sardar and I would welcome any criticism or advice you may have to offer.

I may add that the agent for calcid who went to Borsad whilst I was there opined to Dr. Patel after visiting a few houses that the calcid treatment is not applicable to them. I discovered too that a judicious use of the special emulsion prepared by Dr. Bhasker Patel followed by sulphur fumigation had proved most effective for the destruction [of] fleas.

I must not omit to mention how grateful both Sardar and I were to you for showing us round the Institute with so much care.

Yours sincerely,

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

211. LETTER TO RUKMINI BAZAJ

June 5, 1935

CHI. RUKMINI

Giriraj mentioned your name to me but I thought he was referring to some relation of Damodardas. I was surprised to read your letter received today. I didn’t know at all that your health had deteriorated so badly. There was no letter from you and I concluded from that both of you must be quite well. Get well there now. Write to me from time to time.

1 Maganlal Gandhi’s daughter
Keshu was with me till yesterday. He has gone to Bombay. He intends to learn car-repairing there. Navin’ is here. He had met Radha in Bombay. Ba has stayed back in Bochasan. Ramdas is in Bombay.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI RUKMINI DEVI BAZAJ
SHAKTI ASHRAM
P. O. RAJPUR, DEHRADUN

From Gujarati: C. W. 9711. Courtesy: Benarsilal Bazaj

212. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

June 5, 1935

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I got your letter. I am writing to Jayaprakash. Send on the letter to him. You have done your best. You should still go on writing to him. If he doesn’t take care of his health, what can you do? When your one year is over, we shall certainly have to think about your future. It will probably be desirable then that you should stay with Jayaprakash. Cook for him and take care of his health. But it is too early to think about that just now. My weight has remained steady. It is extremely hot here.

See that your health is not affected there. It will indeed be good if you can go to Sitabadiyara for three or four days. It was indeed good that you went and stayed with Jayaprakash for a few days. Your leave has been sanctioned. Return on the next day after the wedding. Make the wedding as simple as possible.

The only newcomer here is Chitre. Amtussalaam will remain here for the present. She is working very hard. Devraj’ has arrived.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: B.N. 3450

1 Vrajlal Gandhi’s son
2 Addressee’s elder sister
3 Gandhiji’s typist

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
213. LET US PRAY

WARDHAGANJ
June 6, 1935

When a man is down, he prays to God to lift him up. He is the Help of the helpless, says a Tamil proverb. The appalling disaster in Quetta paralyses one. It baffles all attempt at reconstruction. The whole truth about the disaster will perhaps never be known. The dead cannot be recalled to life.

Human effort must be there always. Those who are left behind must have help. Such reconstruction as is possible will no doubt be undertaken. All this and much more along the same line can never be a substitute for prayer.

But why pray at all? Does not God, if there be One, know what has happened? Does He stand in need of prayer to enable Him to do His duty?

No, God needs no reminder. He is within everyone. Nothing happens without His permission. Our prayer is a heart search. It is a reminder to ourselves that we are helpless without His support. No effort is complete without prayer, without a definite recognition that the best human endeavour is of no effect if it has not God’s blessing behind it. Prayer is a call to humility. It is a call to self-purification, to inward search.

I must repeat what I said at the time of the Bihar disaster. There is a divine purpose behind every physical calamity. That perfected science will one day be able to tell us beforehand when earthquakes will occur, as it tells us today of eclipses, is quite possible. It will be another triumph of the human mind. But such triumphs even indefinitely multiplied can bring about no purification of self without which nothing is of any value.

Of course we will forget this latest calamity as we have forgotten the Bihar one. I ask those who appreciate the necessity of inward purification to join in the prayer that we may read the purpose of God behind such visitations, that they may humble us and prepare us to face our Maker whenever the call comes, and that we may be ever ready to share the sufferings of our fellows whoever they may be.

Harijan, 8-6-1935

1 From The Bombay Chronicle, 7-6-1935
2 Earthquake on May 31, 1935
3 Earthquake on January 15, 1934
214. LETTER TO PRIVATE SECRETARY TO VICEROY

WARDHA,
June 6, 1935

DEAR MR. MIEVILLE.

All differences vanish in the midst of the awful calamity in Quetta\(^1\) following almost in the wake of Bihar.

I got the enclosed from Hyderabad today to which I sent a reply\(^2\), copy of which is also enclosed herewith.

Hardly had I sent the reply when the voice within told me that I must enforce in my own action what I had advised Shri Jairamdas and Prof. Kripalani—both Congress secretaries. Hence this private approach to the highest authority.

If I am permitted, I should love to proceed to Quetta myself and do whatever is possible.

My submission is that a small relief committee should be formed comprising all sections to concert measures of relief. In my opinion it is necessary to take the public into confidence about everything that may be done regarding alleviation of distress.

Will you please put this before His Excellency and if possible wire reply as to permission for me to proceed to Quetta? If the permission is granted, it should include sufficient member[s] to enable me to do effective work.

E. C. MIEVILLE, ESQ.
PRIVATE SECRETARY TO H. E. THE VICEROY

From a copy: Dr. Rajendra Prasad Papers. Courtesy: National Archives of India

215. LETTER TO N. R. MALKANI

June 6, 1935

MY DEAR MALKANI,

I had your letter in Borsad. Strange, Thakkar Bapa had complained before your letter and had seen me. He had a grievance

---

\(^1\) A copy of this letter and a copy each of the enclosures mentioned in it were sent to Dr. Rajendra Prasad by Mahadev Desai with a forwarding note dated June 7, 1935.

\(^2\) Quetta had been rocked by a severe earthquake on May 31, 1935.

\(^3\) Vide “Draft Telegram to Jairamdas Doulatram”, 6-6-1935 against me. He thought that I had accepted your one-sided complaints. I told him my wire was independent of what you had said and that I had prejudged nothing. In any case you and I have to take things calmly. Thakkar Bapa means nothing even when he says a lot. It is the vent he needs for bottled up rage over things real or imaginary. My advice is: Think nothing of what he says! And do as he wishes even when there is conflict of opinion. We must not let him be soured.

Do act as if he was still in office.
I hope your wound is completely healed.

Yours,
BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 952

216. LETTER TO MANU GANDHI

June 6, 1935

CHI. MANU,

I have sent both your letters to Bhai¹. His postcard to you was bad. I have written to him about it. This chapter is becoming more and more painful. It is good that you have shed your fear of Bhai.

You say that you wish to abide by my advice. Is it in all matters? If that is so, you should give up your idea of marrying in the Modh caste. I would certainly get you married in a good family where you would be completely happy. Your happiness would be the sole consideration in the selection I would make. Harilal has been writing to me frightful things. Personally, I should like you to be with me just now. I am inquiring about what Harilal has written to me. I need your help in that too. But I would like you to come only if you would like to stay with me. It is quite clear that if you have grown more fond of luxuries, I cannot satisfy your desires. Therefore do what will please you. Whatever you write to me, do so frankly. You are a free person.

Blessings from
BAPU

From Gujarati: C.W. 1543. Courtesy: Manubehn S. Mashruwala

¹ Harilal Gandhi, addressee’s father
217. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

WARDHA, June 6, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

Please go through the enclosed letters that I wrote to Harilal. I don't like to take your time in this matter, but I have no choice. I will soon end this chapter. Meanwhile you will have to put up with a little infliction.

I had a talk with Keshu. He must have come there by now. What do you intend to do with the workshop which he will be leaving? He is going to learn motor-car and radio repairing. I understand from him that he will secure some help in Bombay. I see that we shall have to bear the expenses of Santok d and Radha.

I forgot to ask Keshu whether the research which he has made so far would now become useless. Thus sometimes important matters are left out when I have to finish our discussion in a short time. Please have me clarify the points which I may have left unclear.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8451. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

218. LETTER TO PUPILS OF VITHAL L. PHADKE

June 6, 1935

PUPILS OF MAMASAHEB,

I cannot reply to you without knowing your names and addresses. One should never write an anonymous letter. Who taught you to write such a letter?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3832

1 Widow of Maganlal Gandhi

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
219. LETTER TO NARMADABEHN RANA

June 6, 1935

CHI. NARMADA,

I doubt now whether you have really understood me. I wrote to Shambhushankar what I saw with no other aim but that of your own good. Be good and humble.

Blessings from
BAPU

From Gujarati: C.W. 2779. Courtesy: Ramnarayan N. Pathak

220. LETTER TO KRISHNACHANDRA

June 6, 1935

CHI. KRISHNACHANDRA,

I have your letter. If I find the letter about neem, I shall send it. Neem never causes heat. Even people who are taking a fast eat neem. But I wish you to take as much milk as you can. Cow’s milk is the best. Give up all worry. I have already said that you should spend this one year of abstention from studies with me here. Come whenever you like.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 4272

221. LETTER TO SUMANGAL PRAKASH

WARDHA,

June 6, 1935

CHI. SUMANGAL,

I have your letter. It is good you went to your mother. May the peace you have found endure. May you gain in self-control. May you have excellent health.

I read Trine’s In Tune with the Infinite many years ago. I remember I enjoyed it. Rabindranath’s Sadhana certainly merits being read again and again. Remember one thing: pondering is better than reading. Even if you read just a little, but digest it well, it is good.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: Sumangal Prakash Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library
222. DRAFT TELEGRAM TO JAI RAMDAS DOULATRAM

[On or after June 6, 1935]

JAI RAMDAS DOULATRAM
MARKET ROAD
HYDERABAD

TELL PUBLIC AGITATION PREMATURE. PRIVATE APPROACH SHOULD BE MADE LOCAL AND HIGHER AUTHORITIES. ASCERTAIN REASONS CONTEMPLATED BURNING. MUST REALIZE HELPLESSNESS.

GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

223. LETTER TO C. F. ANDREWS

WARDHA,
June 7, 1935

MY DEAR CHARLIE,

No letter from you means no anxiety complex. For if there was any even the presence of Rajkumari as the medium of communication between us would not have prevented you from writing.

Here is a copy of my correspondence with the Viceroy. It is purely for your information, not for any action thereon. Things will take their own course. The most probable thing is that they will allow nobody to go there.

I hope your book is making good progress and that you are keeping well.

Love

BAPU

From a photostat: G. N. 986

1 This was in reply to a joint telegram received on June 6 from the addressee and J. B. Kripalani. It was dated June 4 and read: “Public relief Quetta impossible. Military authorities disallow entry men. Jamshed Mehta and even title-holders refused permission though prepared own arrangements and not draw on local resources. Much life property could have been saved. Possible danger epidemics avoided if adequate labour imported and public offers co-operation accepted. Whole population including injured being evacuated. Rumours rife about abandoning excavated and burning city with petrol. All 20,000 lying under assumed dead after only three days. Public feel even now life property can be saved if immediate public co-operation Sind Punjab India accepted. Public meetings Sind condemn attitude authorities. Public sent wires Secretary, Viceroy. Possible help see healthy refugees being given by public bodies various stations Sind [sic].”

2 After the earthquake, Martial Law was imposed in Quetta and nobody was allowed to enter the town; vide also the preceding item and pp. 151 and 156.

India and Britain
MY DEAR AMRIT,

I see why your body wears itself out. You insist on doing everything thoroughly. Of course it is the right thing for any seeker. But there is no warrant for any seeker taking over more than he or she can well manage. I wonder whether I was right in letting you come into my movements. God will take care of you. You must cut down the social functions of Simla even though it may involve some seeming sacrifice of the good you might do to the movements you may be in. No movement designed for the multitude will suffer by your conserving your time and energy by cutting down many social functions.

Now for khadi. All Punjab shops are not run at a loss. The Simla one has always been. Management is no doubt defective. But the people in Simla look down upon khadi and there is a class that is afraid to wear it. The wearers become marked men. Your idea of having a swadeshi mart on the Mall is attractive but its execution is risky. However good swadeshi articles may be, they must suffer in comparison. And I doubt the utility of aiming at gaudiness. I differentiate between art and gaudiness. What one sees in fashionable shop windows is by no means all art. To produce things of real beauty and hope to put them side by side with the showy things of the Mall in Simla is an expensive ambition which we had better suppress at least for this season. Do what you can with the shop as it is. Convert it into something better. Let there be swadeshi articles in it. Arrange it after your taste and gain experience before you take expensive quarters. We must have this as one of the topics of discussion when you come down in July or August—the earlier the better.

You will read what I have felt and done about the Quetta disaster. You will read my letter to Charlie. He should know that one swallow does not make a summer. He will have to trace me in Orissa or some such place when I take up walking again. Meantime I accept 12 miles on the hills as a fair beginning.

I am waiting for the analysis of falsa.

1 Vide “Let us Pray”, 6-6-1935
2 Vide the preceding item.
3 From Shumsher Singh; vide “Letter to Amrit Kaur”, 20-5-1935
Note-paper and envelopes are nearly ready. Some slivers are also ready. I want to put together a fair lot. I hope to give you the cost price of everything, at the time of sending the articles. I have kept no account of what has been already sent to you of paper or slivers. Nor need you worry about these.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 3537. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 6346.

225. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

June 7, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

Enclosed are two letters. Read them carefully. Both of you brothers sit together, think over the matter and let me have your view. I am completely at my wit’s end. If . . . ‘ has fallen with . . . , that is enough for me. I would regard it as most dreadful . . does level such a charge. Does he have any proof for it? You have no option but to dirty your hands with this filth.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8452. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

226. LETTER TO PURUSHOTTAMDAS THAKURDAS

June 7, 1935

BHAU PURUSHOTTAMDAS,

I understand what you say. I only want to know what is possible under the present circumstances. What should we do to bring about the adoption of a monetary policy that would be in the interest of the country? I leave aside the argument that we should go on doing our best. Doing one’s best is not enough when a cloud is actually threatening. How much do you think the efforts of the people of Quetta must have availed against the recent earthquake there? According to me, a political earthquake is going on in the country just now and we seem helpless against it. I am therefore taking care of the future.

1 The names have been omitted.
I will not involve you in the problem of village industries. I give you this assurance, however, that that programme will not interfere with the movement for the protection of gold and silver.

_Vandemataram from_
_MOHANDAS_

From Gujarati: Purushottamdas Thakurdas Papers, File No. 159/1935.
Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library.

227. TRUE KINSHIP

Those educated men who are conducting ashrams or are desirous of living in villages and have their physical constitutions disabled or ruined for want of use and find it difficult to do work involving physical labour and would yet be village workers, complain that unless they have at least one companion with them, they would feel lonely. Those who would turn ashrams into colonies of farmers, dairymen and artisans, would do well to employ labour and treat the men and women so employed as if they were members of the ashram. Thus they will understand the domestic and economic condition of their employees and will take them only if the wages paid would at all meet their wants. They would interest themselves in their lives as they would if they were ashramites.

Labourers thus treated are likely to more than repay the wages taken by them. It will be found that under such treatment the labourers will respond to the affection so lavishly bestowed upon them.

Under this scheme the founder will live his own life and the labourers theirs. I have observed that the common kitchen often taxes the best resources of the ashram and becomes also a theatre for quarrels and heart-burnings between the members. This will be altogether avoided when the labourers alone are employed. Labourers are used to food which they won’t leave and upon which they flourish. Educated men’s tastes have become different and often artificial. They would collapse if they attempted to live on labourers’ rations.

This is not to say that a common kitchen is a failure. It is a necessity where the ideals are common and full kinship is a mutually recognized obligation. This is not to be expected for many a year to come from the labourers.
The proposed scheme reduces chances of hypocrisy to a minimum and enables a natural union between intelligence and labour to be established. Each will be complementary of the other. There is, too, a chance of the ashram so conducted becoming immediately self-supporting and rapidly developing.

This is all very well for the imaginary ashram or the ashrams which would experiment with the new scheme, but what about the village worker who becomes a villager for the first time in his life? My scheme applies to him with necessary changes. He must not regard himself as a different species from those in whose midst he is to go. He must regard the villagers amidst whom he will work as friends and fellow workers. According to his wants he will employ the willing labour of those whose services he may need. And if he has enough intelligence that would suit the villagers, he may need the paid services of all the villagers who have enforced leisure and who would gladly employ it if they can.

_Harijan, 8-6-1935_

228. LETTER TO TEHMINA KHAMBHATTA

WARDHA,
June 8, 1935

DEAR SISTER,

I was glad to read your detailed letter. Do please keep me regularly informed. I hope he is daily improving. It is good that Deenabandhu is there.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6609
229. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

[Before June 9, 1935]¹

CHI. JAMNALAL,

It is good that you went and saw everybody in Nainital. I should like you to spend the whole of June in the hills. Postpone the programme you have drawn for 15th onward to 30th. It is not good that the discharge from your ear has not completely stopped. Do you keep Bombay informed? If not, you must send a detailed report now. We should know what they think. If they want to express their helplessness, let them say so. The discharge from the ear must stop.

You have perhaps been a little hasty in writing to Ogylvie, that is, from the point of view of your health. I believe that you will see me before going to see him if he says yes.

I enclose a letter for that Danish friend. He has given his Bombay address.

Marybehn is arriving tomorrow. You are silent about Madalasa’s progress.

Kamalnayan has left. He was quite enthusiastic. Gangadevi has arrived and been lodged in the garden. We met Khansaheb² and had long talks with him. His health is very bad, but he was cheerful. He was really happy that we visited him. He remembered all of you very much. I have written that he should be transferred to Nasik or Yeravda. Let us see what happens. He did feel a little worried about Abdul Ghani.

The [All-India Village] Industries Association is progressing slowly yet steadily. It is shaping up. Everything else is all right.

Andrews is in Simla and is writing his book there. He is not seeing any officials this time.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2971

¹ From a note by the addressee at the top of the letter indicating June 9 as the date of its receipt
² Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan
230. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

WARDHA,
June 9, 1935

CHI. LILAVATI,

I got your letter. I am arranging for a teacher for you. I will entrust the task to Maganbhai himself. Write a letter to him giving him an idea of your knowledge of English and Gujarati. Tell him what you have read in English and in Gujarati, how much grammar you know, etc. Send the letter to me. Write in a neat hand. Don’t mind if the letter becomes long. Write a letter in English, too. The letter should be addressed to Maganbhai. Take this as the beginning of your lessons. You will get a reply immediately. He will correct your English and Gujarati and will tell you what you should do further. Keep some space between the lines and also a margin.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9331. Also C.W. 6606. Courtesy: Lilavati Asar

231. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

June 9, 1935

CHI. JAMNALAL,

I got your letter. Enclosed please find an acknowledgment to Das.

I enclose copies of two letters I wrote to the Viceroy. I have received his reply, which is in the negative. And now, when everybody has been sent down from Quetta, there is nothing we can do except look after them.

Please do not be in a hurry to come down to the plains. Do stay there till the end of this month. Here it is still as hot as a furnace.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2972

1 Maganbhai Prabhubhai Desai

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
232. LETTER TO K. M. MUNSHI

June 9, 1935

Bhai Munshi,

In Jamiatram Kaka you have lost a source of great strength.

I had a letter from Amritlal regarding Sikar\(^1\). I can’t decide even about the propriety or otherwise of a committee without understanding the position better. I am afraid we shall not be able to get any good out of it. If my fear is unwarranted, I can decide that only after I understand the position more fully.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati: C. W. 7575. Courtesy: K. M. Munshi

233. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

June 9, 1935

Bhai Vallabhbhai,

I got your letter . . .\(^2\)

As regards Quetta, what can we do now? They are sending out everybody, and so the question of going there doesn’t arise. Wherever the injured or those rendered homeless go, they are helped by the people. What more could we do? Yesterday I received a wire similar to the one received by Rajendrababu. The only thing for us now to do is to keep silent.

I don’t consider the change in India Office as a happy augury.\(^3\) You must have read Sapru’s certificate. To whom are we to complain? He himself had disapproved of such a Bill, and now welcomes this one.

Rajendrababu is arriving here on the 12th. He will stop for four hours.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

---

\(^1\) In the former Jaipur State, where a satyagraha had been launched against excesses of the State Government

\(^2\) Omission as in the source

\(^3\) The reference is to the appointment of Lord Zetland as Secretary of State for India in place of Sir Samuel Hoare.
234. LETTER TO VIJAYA N. PATEL

_Please note the date and salutation._

June 9, 1935

CHI. VIJAYA,

It is but right that you should pursue your studies instead of coming here to labour.

Even if either husband or wife desires their relations to be like those of a brother and sister but cannot live like that in the same house, it will be their dharma to separate.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

VIJAYABEHN NARANBHAI PATEL
VARAD, via BARDOLI, TAPTI

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 7058. Also C.W. 4550. Courtesy: Vijaya M. Pancholi

235. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

_Please note the date and salutation._

June 9, 1935

CHI. BRIJKRISHNA,

This time you have punished me severely. I waited and waited for your letter and was always disappointed. A man does not die by desiring to die. Come here after you have done with Kashmir. I shall assign you work. Let us wait and see. No one is allowed to go to Quetta.

Prabhati is at Savali these days and Ba at Bochasan.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 2438
236. TELEGRAM TO RAJENDRA PRASAD

WARDHAGANI,
June 10, 1935

BABU RAJENDRA PRASAD
BHUSAVAL

THINK PROPOSED ACTION RIGHT

RAJENDRA PRASAD
CONGRESS PRESIDENT
CAMP DHULIA

From the original: Dr. Rajendra Prasad Papers. Courtesy: National Archives of India

GANDHI

237. LETTER TO PURUSHOTTAMDAS THAKURDAS

WARDHA,
June 10, 1935

BHAI PURUSHOTTAMDAS,

I got your letter. From which expression of mine did you conclude that I was offended?

As regards the Village Industries Association, I merely reassured you and took the opportunity to have a little dig at you.

However, I was very much pleased that you wrote to me. Do write to me often. I was never so thin-skinned as to take offence quickly, and even if I was I have been assailed by so many that I am no longer so. Have no fear about me, therefore.

My question was not about what kind of relief we should ask for, but about what we should do to prevent harm. My difficulty is that nobody is likely to listen to us just now. What steps should we take to ensure that no harm will be done?

Vandemataram from
MOHANDAS

From Gujarati: Purushottamdas Thakurdas Papers, File No. 159/1935. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

This was in reply to a telegram from the addressee dated June 9, which read: “Your letter. Government express inability grant entry to relief parties giving reasons in reply my telegram. Wishing not embarrass Government, propose asking people organize relief refugees as suggested by Government. Reply immediate, Posting correspondence.”
238. LETTER TO KUNVARJI K. PAREKH

June 10, 1935

CHI. KUNVARJI,

I got your letter, as also Manu’s. I very much liked the latter’s decision to come here, Kanti or Kanu will go to the station on the 15th morning to receive her. I understand the other things that you write about.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9722

239. LETTER TO ALAMGHEIR

WARDHA,

June 11, 1935

DEAR ALAMGHEIR,

Surely you should be able to answer the question whether I love the Mussalmans as dearly as life or I hate them. If you yourself have any doubt, then I cannot solve it by means of a letter. You must study the whole of my life and get the answer from it.

BAPU

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

240. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

June 11, 1935

CHI. VASUMATI,

I got your letter. It is not good that your constipation persists. Eat neem leaves and tamarind. You get plenty of tamarind there. Clean it before eating it.

Narandas is very eager that you should go to Rajkot. If you are not needed there, it would certainly be good that you should go to Rajkot. If you do not find the place agreeable you may come away.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9400. Also C.W. 646. Courtesy: Vasumati Pandit
241. LETTER TO NIRUPAMA PANGALKAR

June 11, 1935

CHI. NIRUPAMA,

I have got your letter. There is a way of putting an end to your weeping. You are still a child. You should not speak in public for three or four years. Concentrate on studies. When you grow up, you will start speaking on your own, and your self-restraint will have strengthened you.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI NIRUPAMA PANGALKAR
SUDAMA KUTIR
UDIPI, KATAPADI, P.O.

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 9226

242. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

June 11, 1935

CHI. SHARMA,

I have known cases where passports have taken more than six months. Let us see how much time yours takes. I do not follow what you say about money. Clothes, watch, etc., should be thought of only after you have got the passport. Pyjama and kurta are a good dress. I understand about bitter gourd. It is all right.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, facing p. 167

1 The address is written in English on the postcard.
2 The addressee’s wife was planning to supply him with a stock of dried bitter gourds and other vegetables for the trip abroad.
243. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

[On or after June 11, 1935]

CHI. NARANDAS,

I should like you to probe into the affair of . . . . I must get to the root of the matter. Personally, I formed a good impression about the Kanya Vidyalaya in Baroda. But we cannot come to any conclusion on the basis of just one day’s impression. We will have to go deeper.

Ranmiklal and Kishorelal will write to me. I have already talked about the matter to Vasumati. It will be better if you also write to her. Write to Ranmiklal too.

Did the Chorwad climate have any effect on Purushottam’s health? Has Jamna benefited? Is Vijaya all right now? Mathew should reach there in a few days.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8454. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

244. LETTER TO SHIVASEVAK TIWARI

WARDHA,
June 12, 1935

BHAISHRI TIWARIJI,

I am glad to learn that you and your colleagues are making efforts to collect a fund.

M. K. GANDHI

SHRI SHIVASEVAK TIWARI
HINDI SAHITYA SAMMELAN
INDORE

[From Hindi]

Veena, Tributes Issue, April-May 1969

1 From the reference to Vasumati Pandit, whom the addressee wanted to go to Rajkot; vide “Letter to Vasumati Pandit”, 11-6-1935
2 The names have been omitted.
3 Joint Secretary of the Reception Committee

154 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
245. LETTER TO RANI VIDYAVATI

WARDHA,
June 12, 1935

CHI. VIDYA,

If you are learning Bengali there and if everyone is envious of your cheerfulness, I shall congratulate you. What right does one who is both mother and father have to worry? Also, is there a rule for one who is only a mother that she must remain free from anxiety?

There is no chance of my going to Calcutta now.

Blessings from BAPU

From the Hindi original: Rani Vidyavati Papers. Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library

246. LETTER TO SUMANGAL PRAKASH

WARDHA,
June 12, 1935

CHI. SUMANGAL,

I have your letter. We shall never own defeat, even if we forfeit life itself.

I have gone through the diary. I have pointed out the remedy. The diagnosis is accurate. If possible refrain from thinking too much and take up some work of service. It could be the service of your mother or of the children of Rajgarh. I am surprised at whatever Prabhavati wrote to you about Kanta. You did well to stop her and to have restrained your own curiosity.

You must cling to Ramanama.

Blessings from BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: Sumangal Prakash Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

247. TELEGRAM TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

WARDHA,
June 13, 1935

SETH JAMNALALJI BHOWALI
REMAIN THERE TILL END MONTH IF POSSIBLE.

BAPU

Panchaven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, p. 164
248. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

June 13, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

Your letter brought tears to my eyes. God will certainly bless service so conscientiously and selflessly rendered.

I would have joyously taken you both to Quetta if I could have gone. But it was not to be.

Yes, you will convince me of the necessity of removing the Khadi Bhandar to the Mall.¹

I can’t write much as I am writing with the left hand. The right needs rest.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 3538. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6347

249. LETTER TO N. R. MALKANI

June 13, 1935

MY DEAR MALKANI,

I have already written² to you about Bapa.

Now I have your letter about the Pani Fund. I shall write again. I have seen also Jugalkishore Birla’s objection. Was the first use of his name without sanction? If it was with his sanction, then the second use is inoffensive. But if the first use was without sanction, I do not know what answer you would give. I had written to him. He said he might pay later on.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 917.

¹ Vide also “Letter to Amr Kaur”, 7-6-1935
² Vide “Letter to N.R. Malkani”, 6-6-1935

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
250. LETTER TO VITHALDAS JERAJANI

June 13, 1935

Bhai Vithaldas,

You have raised a very big issue. If you had this doubt in your mind, the method that you adopted was wrong. If the reason which you now give was the real reason for relieving them, they could have been relieved but in a different manner. The question at the moment is this: Was the reason mentioned in the notice given to Ganatra honestly the real one?

That notice is certainly imperfect. If any assurance was given by Kakubhai it should certainly be honoured. The conduct of the others was no doubt objectionable, but if they apologize for it they should be taken back. If you approve of this much, I would take up the question of adopting a new policy and would even give immediate notice of it. To my mind this is an important question. Even for arriving at a correct decision about it, it is necessary to disperse this small cloud. Unless this latter problem is solved completely, it will not be possible to solve the other important ones.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9788

251. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

WARDHA, June 14, 1935

Chh. Narandas,

I got your letter. I can see that I should not involve you in . . .’s affair.

Pass on the accompanying after reading it. Then watch what happens. In any case, Manu will come here tomorrow and live with me.

I understand about Keshu. What about the workshop? Shall we get any benefit from the machines Keshu has invented?

1 Of All-India Spinners’ Association, Bombay; vide also “An Award”, 18-6-1935
2 The name has been omitted.
I had a letter from Dhiru, but it didn’t satisfy me. Enclosed please find a letter from Panditji. Meet Gajanan’s expenses as desired by Panditji. I intend to write to Dhiru. Do you think the problem of expenses should be reconsidered?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8453. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

252. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

June 14, 1935

CHI. PRABHA,

I got your letter. You must have received Babaji’s letter. You should leave immediately after the marriage. I got Jayaparaksh’s letter. Kumarappa gave me your message regarding Sardar. The lessons with Viyogiji are going on. Do people in Srinagar card or spin? If nobody spins, you should carry on propaganda and persuade some people to do so. Srinagar is just a village. You should make a beginning with yourself. There you must be getting sufficient time. Give me your daily programme of work. Amtussalaam is here. I am all right. Lakshmi will come here from Bardoli. Manu also is coming.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3452

253. TALK WITH A HARIJAN SEVAK

[Before June 15, 1935]

What are four years in the life of a nation, and what is even a lifetime in the vast space of eternity, when one remembered that one had to conquer the prejudices of centuries? And have we tried enough and suffered enough? Look at Booker T. Washington. Have any of

---

1 Viyogi Hari
2 Lakshmi Marutidas Sharma
3 This is extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter”. The Harijan sevak had failed to get enough money for his institutions from the Harijan Sevak Sangh and was also unable to enlist the sympathies of young men during the four years of his service.
4 American Negro educator, founder of the Tuskegee Institute. He had to suffer great hardships as a youth.
us suffered as much as he did? We narrate the woes of Harijans but do we ever share with them those woes? They are sharp-witted enough to see that we do not starve whilst it is they who have to starve, we have plenty of clean water to drink whereas they have dirty pools to depend upon.

The Harijan Sevak Sangh does not give you money. Well, it is right from its point of view. We have begun at the wrong end; we rely on outside assistance instead of relying on our own strength. The time has come when we must cease to be spoonfed. Why not teach the boys in the verandahs or their own sheds and make the school a natural growth from the soil? Why not get them help you in growing your own grain and your vegetables and thus reduce the expenses of the boarding house? It is preposterous for a school, say in Trivandrum, to depend on Delhi. It is so unnatural. It may have been necessary in the initial stages, but it should be no longer necessary now. The man in charge of the school depending for his salary on Delhi is a foreigner there. If he completely identifies himself with Harijans, they will share with him their meagre fare and will certainly not allow him to starve. It is no use looking up to the Central Board every now and then. The Central Board will keep the whole show nicely moving, but the sinews should come from the offshoots, the provincial boards. But my mind is daily making so many discoveries that I feel that we might even dispense with collections. If we have no money we have other resources, if only we knew the art of discovering them.

And why should the Harijans be the cause of despair? Show me many people who can keep their pledges. Have we kept all our pledges? And why do we make so much of their carrion-eating? We want them to give it up no doubt, but it is no use getting impatient with them. If many savarna Hindus eat flesh, naturally they will eat carrion. There is hardly any chemical difference between meat and carrion. You will remember Dr. Deshmukh wrote to me that he would find it impossible to distinguish between fresh meat and fresh carrion. And the logic at least is with the Harijans. A rich Hindu may afford to have a goat killed for himself, but what is a poor Harijan to do? You will give him no live goat, and you will not allow him to eat a dead goat’s flesh that chance throws in his way. No, We must realize that there is no vice among the Harijans that is not traceable to us. It is we who have to do all the penance. If crores of savarna Hindus will give up meat-eating, Harijans will today give up carrion.
QUESTION: Could we ask them to leave their wretched abodes and settle in our midst?

ANSWER: This is more easily said than done. If all caste Hindus become reformers your question won’t arise. Today the reformers would be powerless to defend Harijans from molestation if they settled in savarna quarters. But I would advocate exodus by Harijans from where they are persistently persecuted, as by the Nattars for example.

Q. What about making them go through an Upanayana ceremony?
A. No; it involves the assumption that they are low and that they have got to be raised to a higher status. There is nothing low about them. Whatever appears to be low in them is a reflection of our own terrible lowness. Supposing I have a diseased child, what shall I do with it? Shall I discard it, shall I consider it low? No, I shall have to remind myself that it is suffering for my sins, and that therefore it deserves extra care from me. But here with the Harijans, let me tell you that I literally hold that they are far superior to us. They have remained with us in spite of our persecution, and they are still clinging on to us. It is a marvel of marvels to me that they continue to hold on to a religion, of which some of the adherents say that it has no place for them. No, we must come down from the high pedestal we have occupied all these years and take our natural place with them.

Harijan, 15-6-1935

254. IMPLICATIONS OF PRAYER

The few lines that I wrote inviting the people to prayer and repentance on the Quetta disaster have given rise to some private correspondence. One of the correspondents asks:

At the time of the Bihar quake you had no hesitation in saying that it was to be taken by savarna Hindus as a fit punishment for the sin of untouchability. For what sin must the more terrible quake of Quetta be?

The writer had the right to put the question. What I said about Bihar was deliberately said even as the lines on Quetta were deliberately written. This call to prayer is a definite yearning of the soul. Prayer is a sign of repentance, a desire to become better, purer. A man of prayer regards what are known as physical calamities as divine chastisement. It is a chastisement alike for individuals and for

1 Wearing the sacred thread
2 Vide “Let us Pray”, 6-6-1935
nations. All chastisements do not equally startle people. Some affect only individuals, some others affect groups or nations only mildly. Disasters like Quetta stun us. Familiarity with ordinary everyday calamities breeds contempt for them. If earthquakes were a daily occurrence, we would take no notice of them. Even this Quetta one has not caused in us the same disturbance that the Bihar one did.

But it is the universal experience that every calamity brings a sensible man down on his knees. He thinks that it is God’s answer to his sins and that he must henceforth behave better. His sins have left him hopelessly weak, and in his weakness he cries out to God for help. Thus have millions of human beings used their personal calamities for self-improvement. Nations too have been known to invoke the assistance of God when calamities have overtaken them. They have abased themselves before God and appointed days of humiliation, prayer and purification.

I have suggested nothing new or original. In these days of fashionable disbelief, it does need some courage to call men and women to repentance. But I can claim no credit for courage. For my weaknesses or idiosyncrasies are well-known. If I had known Quetta, as I know Bihar and Biharis, I would certainly have mentioned the sins of Quetta, though they might be no more its specialities than untouchability was Bihar’s. But we all—the rulers and the ruled—know that we have many sins, personal and national, to answer for. The call is to all these to repentance, prayer and humiliation. True prayer is not a prelude to inaction. It is a spur to ceaseless, selfless action. Purification is never for the selfishly idle, it accrues only to the selflessly industrious.

_Harijan_, 15-6-1935
255. CRIMINAL WASTE

Shri Annadababu writes from Raha (Assam):¹

I hope that some Assam worker will put an end to the criminal waste to which Annadababu has drawn attention. If cotton seeds are thrown away, it will pay any young man to collect them. They have a market price. This is pre-eminently a matter of educating the ignorant.

Harijan, 15-6-1935

256. THE EVIL OF GAMBLING

A friend has been persistently asking me to draw public attention to the species of gambling prevalent in Bombay among the so-called high class people. Whilst I have been heart and soul with the friend in deploring the evil, I have not had the courage to write about it. I felt that whatever I said would be a waste of effort, as I had no hope of following up my writing by some organized constructive effort to combat the evil. Whilst I was thus debating as to writing on the evil, I had to go to Borsad in answer to the Sardar’s summons. There in Borsad the Sardar and his volunteers poured into my ears harrowing tales of the havoc that gambling was working in the villages of Gujarat. It is spreading like grass fire of a windy night. Everybody is in a hurry to be rich without working. ‘Somebody will have made the correct guess as to the ruling price for the day of some commodity. Why not I?’—argues the gambler and rushes to his ruin. Peace is being destroyed in the once happy homes of Gujarat.

There is no doubt that whatever one calls it, this gambling is as old as Adam, and that though the form and the name may have changed, the substance has not changed at all.

The law must be against this gambling. But it is of no avail if public opinion is not behind it. It is therefore necessary for workers to

¹ The letter is not reproduced here. The correspondent had drawn attention to the primitive process of oil-pressing which resulted in much wastage. He had mentioned that villagers did not even make use of the cake and those who used “unginned cotton on the adhi system threw away the cotton seeds”. He had suggested to A.I.S.A. workers there to set up a ghani to be made available to the villagers “at no cost or for a part of the cake”.

162

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
bestir themselves as they did during the plague or as they have done for the earthquake relief. They must not be satisfied till the evil is rooted out. In a way it is worse than the plague or the quake. For it destroys the soul within. A person without the soul is a burden upon the earth. No doubt war against gambling is not so simple as war against plague or earthquake distress. In the latter there is more or less co-operation from the sufferers. In the former the sufferers invite and hug their sufferings. To wean the gambler from his vice is like weaning the drunkard from the drink habit. This war against gambling is therefore an uphill task. But it must be tackled, if the evil is not dealt with in time. It is bad enough in Bombay. Its inroad upon the villages is a danger signal which no lover of the country can dare ignore.

_Harijan, 15-6-1935_

257. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

WARDHA,
June 15, 1935

CHI. AMBUJAM.

I have your letter.

I hope that Kichi\(^1\) is out of fever. What is the matter with him? When you are not there, with whom does he stay? How does he pass his time? Does he interest himself in any thing or person?

Kamala has written to me. How nice it would be if you could come with her.\(^2\) But I know you must not leave Father or Kichi just now.

Yes the Quetta disaster is awful. You should ponder over what I have written thereon.

Prabha is with her father. She returns in July. Amtussalaam is here.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: C.W. 9601. Courtesy: S. Ambujammal

\(^1\) Krishnaswami

\(^2\) Vide "Letter to S. Ambujammal"
258. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

June 15, 1935

BHAISHRI VALLABHBHAI,

On the subject coming up for discussion with Balvantrai¹, I told him that it was on your advice that Devchandbhai² was not calling a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Kathiawar Political Conference, and that I, too, approved of the decision. Balvantrai says that nobody desires to transgress the limits agreed upon in Porbandar. I have told him that if he could assure you to that effect, you might perhaps withdraw your objection. But even apart from this, I have advised him to talk things over with you.

He and some others are here in connection with the situation in Sikar.³ He will tell you my opinion about it. Get well soon.⁴

Blessings from

BAPU

SARDAR VALLABHBHAI PATEL
89 WARDEN ROAD
BOMBAY

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 171-72

259. MESSAGE ON OPENING OF MEMORIAL TO C.R. DAS⁵

[Before June 16, 1935]

I am sorry I cannot attend the function which is to take place on the 16th instant. I wish it every success. How nice it would be if those present would remember that the true memorial will be to weave into our own lives the virtues we prized most in Deshbandhu’s life.

Amrita Bazar Patrika, 18-6-1935

¹ Balvantrai Mehta
² Devchand Parekh of Wadhwan
³ Vide “Letter to K.M. Munshi”, 9-6-1935
⁴ The addressee was suffering from jaundice.
⁵ The Memorial, built on Keoratala crematorium, was opened by Nil Ratan Sircar on June 16, which marked the tenth anniversary of the death of C. R. Das.

164
260. LETTER TO G. SITARAMA SASTRY

June 16, 1935

DEAR SITARAMA SASTRI,

I shall try the gur syrup and report the result to you. Only I shall know nothing about its capacity to keep for a long time.

Yours sincerely,

BAPU

Sjt. SITARAMA SASTRY
VINAYA ASHRAM
P.O. CHANDLE, DIST. GUNTUR

From a photostat: C.W. 9174. Courtesy: G. Sitarama Sastry

261. LETTER TO MOHANLAL

WARDHA,
June 16, 1935

MY DEAR MOHANLAL,

I have your letter. The point you raised cannot be discussed in the pages of the Harijan. I think that Dr. Gopichand’s opinion is quite sound. Only I would go a step further and say that as Sangh we ought not to carry on any agitation regarding what may be done by the Government. Our scope is confined to such work as we can do without the assistance of the Government. We should appreciate every step that the Government may take. It is open to us to give cooperation to the Government if and when they seek it. But it is outside our province to criticize the Government or to carry on platform agitation with a view to secure measures from the Government. This is not conceived as a permanent policy but for the moment I have not doubt that it is the only sound policy for us to follow. We must recognize that Harijans at the present moment are undecided as to what they should do. We must deserve their absolute confidence before we can hope to influence the Government along the lines that we may desire. I take it that you will show this letter to Dr. Gopichand also.

Yours,

SJT. MOHANLALJI
LAPATRAI BHAWAN
LAHORE

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 Secretary, Punjab Harijan Sevak Sangh

262. LETTER TO MOHAMMAD AJMAL KHAN

June 16, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter received four days ago and now your book. I cannot read Urdu fast and I have little leisure left to me today for reading however much I may like to do it. At the present moment I have given your book to a Mussalman friend who is staying with us. When he has finished it I shall try to go through your book and if and when I succeed I shall certainly give you my opinion. You may not know that I do not review any book in the pages of the Harijan.

Yours sincerely,

MAULVI MOHAMMAD AJMAL KHAN
THE INSTITUTE OF DIVINE TRUTHS
DAIRA, ALLAHABAD

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

263. LETTER TO MUHAMMAD ABOOSALEH A. NIZAMI

June 16, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I have gone through your book on tanning. It is very scrappy and very incomplete. There are many things omitted. It is not a book which a learner may take up and carry on experiments without reference to any teacher. You have not given the accurate proportion of materials used. I would recommend your rewriting the chapters and making your book much more accurate than it is. It need not be bulky but it ought to be accurate. You have said very little about the quality of water to be used by tanners and all the literature I have read about tanning lays the greatest stress upon the quality of water. Lastly it seems to me that the price you have put upon the book is altogether out of proportion to the cost of the publication. Your book is not intended for the wealthy few but it is intended for the poor many.

Yours sincerely,

MUHAMMAD ABOOSALEH A. NIZAMI
BARODA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

166 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
264. LETTER TO DR. M. B. GODBOLE

June 16, 1935

DEAR GODBOLE,

I thought that I had returned the book you left with me long ago. That was to have been handed to you when you passed through on your way to Poona. Somehow or other this was not done. I hope you have now received it. It was sent immediately after I got the letter.

As for the apparatus I gave it for trial to Shri Kishorelal Mashruwala whom I introduced to you and who is an asthmatic. He has been giving it a trial and I have asked him to make a written report. As soon as I receive it I shall send it to you. So far as my own opinion is concerned I think that it is a very simple device for measuring the breathing capacity of people and therefore it is likely to be of use in schools and hospitals where the lung capacity of children or patients is required to be measured.

Herewith Sjt. Kishorelal’s report.

Yours sincerely,

DR. M. B. GODBOLE
POST BOX 19, POONA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

265. LETTER TO L. K. KIRLOSKAR

June 16, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I had hoped to hear from you in reply to my letter about your machine. As I have already said I would like to buy one machine from you so as to enable me to try it for a lengthened period. If it gives the work that I contemplate it may be possible to take from you a large number at an agreed price. And I would like to discuss more fully the larger proposition I tentatively discussed with you for enforcement in the event of your failing to secure the price.

1 Professor of Industrial Chemistry, Banaras Hindu University
2 Vide “Speech at Hindi Sahitya Sammelan”, 29-3-1918
I enclose Sir Daniel Hamilton’s letter to me for your perusal. If you think that you would let him have a drawing of your charkha for the purpose intended by him you may either send it to me or Sir Daniel directly to the address given in his letter.

Please return the letter.

Yours sincerely,

L.K. KIRLOSKAR
KIRLOSKARWADI

From A copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

266. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

June 16, 1935

CHI. SHARMA,

I have your letter. A time limit of 15 days is too short. Even important persons do not get passport in 15 days. Recently a doctor got a passport after 18 months.

Your coming here is a different matter. What will happen to Draupadi and the children when you leave? Will she stay with your brothers? Give me all details. Even when you decide to come, I shall not reserve a room for you. We shall think of a separate room only after your arrival. All this will be done only after the decision about the passport. And after getting the passport, will a separate room be necessary? Before coming here, you will have to write to the Collector or see him and tell him that he should write to Wardha, in case he wants to make any inquiries. He should also be asked when the reply may be expected.

I have not understood what you have written about Mother. Ramgopal has sent many complaints but they are not well-founded. An answer has been sent along these lines.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, facing p. 169

1 Of Gosaba Zamindari Estate, Sunderbans
267. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

WARDHA,

June 17, 1935

CHI. MARY,

I was glad to have your postcard. Thakkar Bapa sent me a letter. I would like to have a daily bulletin for a few days.

All well here.

Love from all.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 6045. Also C.W. 3375. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

268. LETTER TO N. R. MALKANI

June 17, 1935

MY DEAR MALKANI,

I have your letter. I shall go through the Bihar report and may have to write¹ again on wells. I hope to write on the Pani Fund in the next issue of the Harijan.

Rao Bahadur M. C. Raja has sent me a copy of the letter he sent to you. It speaks highly of Ganesan. I take it that you have dealt with that letter.

Ganesan seems to have disappointed everybody. Of course Thakkar Bapa does not trust him at all. Now Sastri has been disillusioned and so, I believe, have the Chairman and the Secretary of the Madras branch of the Sangh.

Love.

BAPU

PROF. MALKANI

DELHI

From a photostat: G.N. 1160

¹ Vide “Wells for Harijans”, 22-6-1935
269. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

June 17, 1935

CHI. VASUMATI,

If Shivabhai has really some work for you and wishes you to remain there, you have already given a promise to stay there for a year and you should keep it and live there in perfect peace and joy and carefully do the work entrusted to you. Try to cure your constipation.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

Lakshmi and Manu have arrived here.
SHRI VASUMATIBEHN
VALLABH VIDYALAYA
BOCHASAN

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9401. Also C.W. 647. Courtesy: Vasumati Pandit

270. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

June 17, 1935

BHAISHRI VALLABHBHAI,

After all experiments are experiments. There is no knowing when they will succeed or fail. If you live for a few days only on juicy fruits, you will need neither medicines nor anything else. If the bowels don’t move, you must take enema. And it is altogether unreasonable for you to refuse to use a commode. It makes things convenient both for the patient and those who are attending on him. Do start using one.

Andrews is coming here tomorrow. He will stay for a day or two. We have a miscellaneous crowd of people here at present. Kumarappa’s brother Bharatan has come.

Vasumati had almost decided to leave Bochasan, but Shivabhai is pressing her to stay on. I have written to her and told her that if she is really needed there, she may certainly stay on for a year. If you have any suggestion to make in this regard, convey it through Mani\(^1\). I don’t expect a letter in your own handwriting just now. You must get over your illness.

1 Shivabhai Gokalbhai Patel, Principal, Vallabh Vidyalaya, Bochasan

Come here when you are all right. Rajendrababu is definitely coming. Jamnalal also will arrive in July. It will also be fairly cool here by that time. Now the excessive heat of the past few days is no longer there.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 172-3

271. LETTER TO N.R. MALKANI

WARDHA,
June 18, 1935

DEAR MALKANI,

The letter dictated on Sunday has not yet been posted. This, therefore, will accompany that letter.

I cannot trace anywhere the letter written to you by Mrs. Nehru which you were sending me and which you wanted me to return. You will, therefore, trace that letter in your papers. I shall not need it because I shall guess its purport and I hope to deal with Women’s Conference in one of the issues of the Harijan.

As you will see from the forthcoming issue I shall be dealing with the Wells Fund practically from week to week. I have already dealt with the Punjab report. I have on my file the Bihar report and now I understand also the Gujarat report. The one or the other will go in next week.

I have already written to Seth Jugalkishore. I have told him that he should not mind the mention, and that it was begun by Thakkar Bapa purely out of enthusiastic admiration. I have also said that if he has still strong objection to his name being in any way coupled with the Fund, it will be formally removed. If you have, therefore, already not written to him, you need not think about it any more until I write to you.

What is your objection to the David Scholarship Fund retaining the name David? And if that name is anathema to anybody, call it

\(^1\) Manibehn Patel

Harijan Scholarship Fund. “What is in a name? A rose smells sweet under any other name.”

The note on the framing of budgets I have not yet studied.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 1161

272. LETTER TO C. G. JAGANNATHDAS

June 18, 1935

MY DEAR JAGANNATHDAS,

You were quite right in writing to me at length on nudism.¹ I have no hesitation in agreeing with you in theory. But theories are not always capable of being reduced to practice. Not even in exact mathematics, like geometry, are theories capable of always being reduced to practice. The imaginary right angle of geometry will not build houses but the nearly perfect right angle which masons and carpenters use is responsible for many marvellous things. In the Western world as well as in India nudism in practice is not permissible. I am convinced that it would be a great error to act as though all men and women were pure-minded. I hold it, therefore, to be dangerous.

Yours sincerely,

BAPU

SJT. C.G. JAGANNATHDAS
459 MINT STREET
PARK TOWN, MADRAS

From a photostat: G.N. 9091

273. LETTER TO SARDUL SINGH CAVEESHAR

June 18, 1935

DEAR CAVEESHAR,

Dr. Khan Saheb should remain the solitary exception. By all means take what assistance you can from Dr. Gopichand without connecting him officially with any organization. I assure you that one or the other is bound to suffer if he is officially connected with both. Though the branches of a tree are one and the same at the root, on the tree their separate existence is justified and they fully serve the root only by remaining in their respective places and discharging their duties. I know we are grievously short of true workers and we shall always remain so if we continue to saddle more than one responsibility on them and flatter ourselves with the belief that they are being well discharged. If you agree with my argument you will be satisfied with Dr. Gopichand giving you the help required without being officially identified with the Parliamentary Board. Absence of official connection gives a freedom to a conscientious man which he will not enjoy when he is officially connected. Do you not agree?

¹ The addressee in his letter of June 15 had made out a case for the adoption of nudism. Clothing, he had argued, was unnatural and unhealthy and ought to be abolished, thus ensuring the exposure of the skin to light and air.

Yours sincerely,

SARDAR SARDUL SINGH CAVEESHAH
CHAMBERLAIN ROAD
LAHORE

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

274. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

June 18, 1935

CHI. AMBUJAM,

My whole heart goes out to you in your trial. God is merciful. He will give you strength. It was good you did not inform Father and Mother and had the courage to have the operation performed at once. Why not take Kichi too to Kodai, if the doctor will allow it?

I sent you a letter at Bangalore. I hope you will receive it in due course, if it has not already come to you.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: Ambujammal Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

275. AN AWARD\(^1\)

June 18, 1935

With the consent of both the parties concerned, I have been involved in the grievances of the workers of the Bombay bhandar of the All-India Spinners’ Association against their local agent.

I have gone through the papers presented by both parties.

\(^1\) Vide also the following two items.
The notice served on Mr. Ganatra was improper. This defect can be overcome by giving him additional salary.

The conduct of the workers and their written memoranda after the notice had been served were rude and not befitting those who serve the cause of khadi. Such conduct cannot keep any institution going. Hence, the agent is justified in dismissing the workers who misbehaved.

However, if the workers give a written apology as suggested in the appendix, the agent should reinstate everyone including Shri Ganatra without any deductions from their salaries.

If the workers do not hand in the letter of apology within seventy-two hours of this resolution reaching Shri Ratubhai Desai, the representative of the workers, they would not be able to join their duty and the notice they have been served with will hold good permanently.

The agent is of the opinion that the bhandar does not have the capacity to bear the burden of the number of workers employed there. The award I have given above does not preclude any changes in the bhandar, reduction in the number of workers engaged or in their present salaries. I myself wish to make some suggestions regarding the way in which all khadi bhandars are being run, and it has become necessary to state them now.

It is my hope that the workers will willingly sign the letter of apology and return to their duty in the bhandar.

In case all the dismissed workers do not accept the above decision, the agent shall take back those who do so.

M. K. GANDHI

APPENDIX

After Shri Ganatra received the notice of dismissal, his and our behaviour was not worthy of the khadi workers. The letters we wrote were rude. We are sorry for such conduct. Hereafter we shall ceaselessly endeavour not to behave in that manner.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9789
276. LETTER TO VITHALDAS JERAJANI

June 18, 1935

BHAI VITHALDAS,

Here is my decision. You yourself should call Ratubhai and show it to him. Give him a copy of it, too. I think it is the right course. Treat those friends with the utmost love. I will soon take up the question of the policy as a whole. Arrange and note down your ideas about the subject. If your mind cannot work on the subject or if you are physically unfit for the task, let me know. I want to take up the problem immediately.

You may come whenever you wish after reinstating the men.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9790

277. LETTER TO RATUBHAI DESAI

June 18, 1935

BHAI RATUBHAI,

I have already drafted my award. Bhai Vithaldas will give you a copy of it. Go and collect it yourself in order to save time.

The purport of the message is that if you, Ganatra and others do not send in your apologies, you are doomed. I have given the message in the hope that all of you will live as members of a family and will work with greater devotion than before and serve the cause of khadi through the bhandar.

Write to me as soon as possible what you have to say regarding the management of the bhandar. I shall take up the matter immediately. The bhandar does not belong to anybody. It is for us only a means of service. I have as much right as you to give suggestions regarding its management.

Blessings from

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 Vide the preceding item.
2 Vide "An Award", 18-6-1935
278. LETTER TO SOHANLAL OBEROI

June 18, 1935

Bhai Sohanlal,

What you have written is correct. Many girls suffer the fate that befell your sister. I shall try to write about it. I hope your efforts will succeed.

Blessings from
Bapu

[PS.]
Don’t you have good slivers? Or good cotton?

Sri Sohanlal Oberoi
A. I. S. A. Depot
Adampur, Jullundur District

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 6863

279. TELEGRAM TO THE HOME SECRETARY

June 19, 1935

Thanking you for permission interview Khansaheb regret unable avail permission unless condition English-speaking waived. Can pledge honour not talk anything but domestic affairs health. Sardar tells me when he was allowed visit Khansaheb interview was carried on Hindustani. Request waive condition English-speaking.

Gandhi

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

280. LETTER TO R. R. DIWAKAR

June 19, 1935

My dear Diwakar,

The interview does not surprise me. I expect nothing better just now. The weakening of the peasant does not pain me, for it has become general. The leaders have done no better. It is nobody’s fault. The leaders as well as the peasants have done as well as it was possible for them to do. The lesson was valuable. All will be well if some of us are able to retain our faith in truth and non-violence undimmed by the surrounding weakness and gloom.

1 Vide “Notes sub-title Helpless Widows”, 22-6-1935
2 In his reply, the Home Secretary agreed to Gandhiji’s speaking in Hindustani.

Yours,

BAPU

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

281. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

Unrevised  WARDHA,

June 19, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

The frank admission of one’s proved helplessness does not make one a coward but may be the beginning of bravery. I am taking you at your word and dictating. Writing with the left hand is a pleasure to me but I cannot do it with the same ease and quickness as with right hand.

Charlie has duly handed your letter. I am returning the photo-prints with autographs in the manner suggested by you.

I cannot remember Krishnalal Goswami. It may be that he was in the Ashram during my absence. Charlie says he has distinct recollection of having seen him in the Ashram. Mahadev has not. What he has said to you about charkha seems to be correct and shows that he knows something of the art of spinning. Slivers I am sending with Charlie. You will tell me how you find them. You should have the spindles locally made. If you cannot secure good steel, they can be made of any iron. So long as they are true it does not matter much. A weak spindle spins as well as any other, so long as it remains true. But in an inexperienced hand a weak spindle will go wrong more frequently than a steel spindle.

I am sending you also 450 note-paper sheets and an equal number of envelopes done up in nine bundles. I was about to have packets of 50 each pressed and nicely covered in some blank paper, of course hand-made, when your letter came telling me that I was to send the sheets coverless and that you would have them dressed up for the windows. You ask me to give you the price. The bundle that is coming to you with Charlie and the one that was sent previously to this were made out of paper which has cost me Rs. 12. Odd sheets that were saved were used up by me. There still remain 150 sheets with me. The labour of making these I have not counted, nor the price of material specially prepared for making the envelopes. The price of the latter can only be trifling. The price of the former cannot today be estimated. Two or three workers have been at it for some odd days. I did not ask them to keep a record of all the time that they gave to this work. Now I have given you enough material to put your own price on the note-papers and envelopes. The least you have to sell them for is Rs. 12. But you are at liberty to do what you like with them. Of the slivers I can say nothing because all I have to pay for is the cotton purchased from the khaddar bhandar. But I have kept no account of what has been sent to you. The raw material could not have cost more than a rupee and a half.

As to Quetta relief I have asked you to reserve for the time being what you collect. Later on I shall be able to guide you. The relief will last for some time. Of course this advice has force so long as you have no definite idea about its direction. Immediately you know where you would like to spend your donation, you will not hesitate to do so.

One thing I cannot help asking you to collect for and that is the Harijan Wells Fund. You will note what I have said about it in the ensuing number of the Harijan.

About the photos you will do what you like with them. They are your property. I think this covers all the points raised in your two unanswered letters. There is nothing wrong about the right hand. It will be all right after due rest.

Love to you both.

BAPU

DEAR SISTER.

I cannot vouch for the accuracy of the quotation. But my difficulty is fundamental. Which Jesus am I to believe? Him of your conception or mine? You will say, ‘Jesus of the Bible’. Then the question is: ‘According to whose interpretation?’ I solve the difficulty by going the way God takes me.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

Vide “Wells for Harijans”, 22-6-1935
283. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

June 19, 1935

CHI. LILAVATI,

I got your letters. The work is going on.\(^1\) Maganbhai is examining the Gujarati. The English may have to be given to somebody else. Rest assured, I will make perfect arrangements about your work.

Write to me what English and Gujarati books you have.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9576. Also C.W. 6548. Courtesy: Lilavati Asar

284. LETTER TO BEHRAMJI KHAMBHATTA

WARDHA,
June 20, 1935

BHAISHRI KHAMBHATTA,

I got your letter and the two cheques. I will do as you wish. I was surprised to learn about what you had to go through in the hospital. Write out in English all that you observed and show the draft to Deenabandhu Andrews. Then send it to the head of the institution. If he does not pay attention to it, we shall take the next step. Inquire as to who controls the hospital and who are the persons in charge of its running and let me know their names and addresses. You put up with the hardships but what would a poor man do? You have a devoted wife like Sita and, therefore, receive the best nursing. But what would be the plight of a person who has nobody to look after him and who has no faith in God? You must, therefore, acquaint the proper quarters with what you went through in the hospital. I hope your health is daily improving.

Blessings to you all from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 7558. Also C.W. 5033. Courtesy: Tehmina Khambhatta

\(^1\) Vide “Letter to Lilavait Asar”, 9-6-1935
285. LETTER TO NARAHARI D. PARIKH

June 20, 1935

CHI. NARAHARI,

Let Panditji start a music class if he wishes. The expenses seem all right. There must be a regular curriculum for inclusion in the prospectus. The progress which the pupil will make during the whole period and annually must be indicated in detail.

Even if Vanamala’s fever has subsided, it will benefit her if she sticks to the diet I have suggested. You have certainly done well in imposing on yourself that restriction. It doesn’t matter if you cannot observe it outside. Vanamala must take regular walks and the baths, too, of course.

How many boys and girls have joined the new school? Who are the teachers? What will the expenses come to every month?

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Is Jayabehn there at present? What does she teach?

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9080

286. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

WARDHA,

June 21, 1935

CHI. MARY,

You have given me good news. I expect better tomorrow. Where are you staying? Are you comfortable?

Strange, Margarete had no letter from me. I have searched my file. I cannot find her letter which shows that it is destroyed and no such letter is destroyed without answer. Please ask her with my love to write again and I will reply at once. All well here.

Love.

BAPU

[PS.]

Mira has shown me your letter. K. may come any day in July and will stay perhaps a month. Mira need not write now.

From a photostat: G.N. 6046. Also C.W. 3376. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr
287. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

June 21, 1935

CHI. PREMA,

I was not in a position to reply immediately to your excellent letter. When the right hand demands rest, it becomes impossible to cope with the work.

All my questions are not such as can be asked in a letter. I must of course have asked you such questions. Questions which occur to me at any moment belong only to that moment.

My aim in taking you to Borsad was that you might be able to do such work more easily in future, and to show you that I had taken a share in anti-plague work also.

I have already written in Harijan and explained the connection between our sin and the earthquake.¹ Read that article. Nobody was angered in Bihar. On the contrary, everybody realized that it was the result of our sin. All this follows from the principle of oneness.

I have written an article² in Harijan about snakes, etc. Read it. If you are not reading the articles which I have been writing recently in Harijan, I would advise you to read them carefully. I hope you get copies of it.

I wouldn’t see any sin in ending the life of the husband who was lingering in pain and to whom no relief could be given even by careful nursing.³ If, however, the husband is conscious, his wishes should be ascertained. If he wishes to live despite the pain, he should be allowed to live.

The owners becoming trustees means their handing over to the poor, that is, to the State or any other public welfare institution, all income in excess of a certain percentage.

If everybody handed over all their possessions to the State, the spirit of enterprise would disappear and everybody would become an automaton

My relations with the rich will continue. I don’t look upon the rich as wicked and upon the poor as angels. Both in the East and the West there are a great many rich who earn money with philanthropic motives. They deserve to be honoured. I know numbers of poor people whose company should be shunned. In the swaraj of my dream, the tiger and the goat should be able to drink water together from the same pool. What will it matter if this remains forever a dream? If I didn’t know what I wanted, what would I strive for?

¹ Vide “Implications of Prayer”, 15-6-1935
² Vide “All Life is One”, 22-6-1935
³ The reference is to a news item in a newspaper that an actress had shot her husband, who was suffering from cancer, to save him from a painful death.

It is certainly true that I cannot understand people correctly, but do those who claim to understand them really do so? I, therefore, do not regret my ignorance. Since I cannot know human beings, I trust them.

Is it necessary for you to answer every time somebody asks you a question about me? Why don’t you say, ‘I cannot answer your question. I like the man’s work and his ideas. Does one always give reasons for what one likes? You should, therefore, address your questions to the man himself?’ If you replied thus, you would be saved from a great deal of unpleasant argument. However, you may certainly impart to others what you have learnt from me and fully digested. But then what one has digested doesn’t remain somebody else’s but becomes one’s own. One entertains no doubt about what is one’s own and is always ready with answers to any questions about it.

Let this suffice for today.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 10374. Also C.W. 6813 Courtesy: Premabehn Kantak

288. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

June 21, 1935

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

I have not become impatient at all. But I can’t put my faith in vaids. Their remedies are like black magic. They are just a shot in the dark. Are they worth trying even if they help? The best known vaid in the country is Gananath Sen. But he also is like the others. They do have some effective drugs, but when their power is exhausted you are where you were. I would quake with fear to put you in their hands. I see that even Malaviyaji and Motilalji went ultimately to doctors. If, however, you have really got all right, I needn’t say anything in the matter. Call Mahadev there whenever you wish . . . .

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbaïne, p. 173

1 Omission as in the source
289. LETTER TO KRISHNACHANDRA

June 21, 1935

CHI. KRISHNACHANDRA,

Maybe in the early morning you may feel listless, but after sipping something, the strength will return and you may then stir out for a walk. The stomach should be empty before sleep.

Repetition of Ramanama serves me best when I am engaged in an act of service. But if one does not get peace in this way, one may seek it in solitude.

True renown comes from service rendered while practising truthfulness and other virtues.

God is author of good and evil, after all, only to the devotee. A proud ungodly man believes that he does everything. The Gita would not have been necessary if the Arjuna within had conducted rigorously the battle that goes on in this body.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 4273

290. DISCUSSION WITH A VISITOR FROM QUETTA

[Before June 22, 1935]

VISITOR: But why prayer, and not service? Would not service be the most effective form of prayer?

GANDHIJI: Indeed if service was open to us. But there are vast masses of people who have no power to render any tangible service to the survivors. Rather than talk about this grim visitation, they should cast the searchlight inwards and purify themselves. Prayer is a call to self-purification.

But is not prayer by itself ineffective without acts of service?

I do not mean outward demonstration of prayer. I mean self-introspection and self-purification which is essential for us all. If we were engaged in service all our waking hours, I should have to say nothing. But we are not so engaged. And when we are not so engaged, God’s name, taken with a view to self-purification, is not taken in vain.

1 This is extracted from “Weekly Letter” by Mahadev Desai, who had reported that the visitor “had specially come to give Gandhiji an idea of the ravages of the earthquake . . . . He had read with deep interest Gandhiji’s call to prayer”.

I see it. So far as some of the survivors—both our own people and tommies who did rescue work for the first two days—are concerned, I am afraid they badly need to pray. For the moment when the calamity occurs we are stunned, we make professions of prayer and brotherhood of man, but the very next moment we forget that there was a calamity. Our acquisitive and depredatory instincts get possession of us, with the result, we are none the better for the earthquake.

_Harijan, 22-6-1935_

291. A DISCUSSION

[Before June 22, 1935]

GANDHIJI: Is not this wheel a machine?

[SOCIALIST:] I do not mean this machine, but I mean bigger machinery.

Do you mean Singer’s sewing machine? That too is protected by the village industries movement, and for that matter any machinery which does not deprive masses of men of the opportunity to labour, but which helps the individual and adds to his efficiency, and which a man can handle at will without being its slave.

But what about the great inventions? You would have nothing to do with electricity?

Who said so? If we could have electricity in every village home, I should not mind villagers plying their implements and tools with the help of electricity. But then the village communities or the State would own power-houses, just as they have their grazing pastures. But where there is no electricity and no machinery, what are idle hands to do? Will you give them work, or would you have their owners cut them down for want of work?

I would prize every invention of science made for the benefit of all. There is a difference between invention and invention. I should not care for the asphyxiating gases capable of killing masses of men

---

1. This is extracted from “Weekly Letter” by Mahadev Desai, who had reported: “A socialist holding a brief for machinery asked Gandhiji if the village industries movement was not meant to oust all machinery.”

2. Gandhiji was just then spinning.
at a time. The heavy machinery for work of public utility which cannot be undertaken by human labour has its inevitable place, but all that would be owned by the State and used entirely for the benefit of the people. I can have no consideration for machinery which is meant either to enrich the few at the expense of the many, or without cause to displace the useful labour of many.

But even you as a socialist would not be in favour of an indiscriminate use of machinery. Take printing-presses. They will go on. Take surgical instruments. How can one make them with one’s hands? Heavy machinery would be needed for them. But there is no machinery for the cure of idleness but this. I can work it whilst I am carrying on this conversation with you, and am adding a little to the wealth of the country. This machine no one can oust.

_Harijan_, 22-6-1935

292. NOTES

HELPLESS WIDOWS

A bereaved friend sends a pathetic letter describing the plight of a 17-year-old girl, who has lost in Quetta her husband, two months old child, father-in-law and her husband’s younger brother, that is to say everybody in her father-in-law’s house. My correspondent adds that she escaped unhurt and returned with only her clothes on. She is his uncle’s daughter and he does not know how to console her or what to do with her. She herself is not undamaged. Her leg has been injured, though fortunately the bone remains intact. The correspondent concluded by saying:

I have left her with her mother in Lahore. I gently mentioned to her and other relatives whether the girl might not be remarried. Some listened to me sympathetically and some resented the proposal. I have no doubt that many a girl must have suffered the same fate as this cousin of mine. Will you say a word of encouragement to these unfortunate widows?

I do not know what my pen or voice can do in matters in which age-long prejudices are concerned. I have repeatedly said that every widow has as much right to remarry as every widower. Voluntary widowhood is a priceless boon in Hinduism; enforced widowhood is a curse. And I very much feel that many young widows if they were absolutely free, not so much from the fear of physical restraint as from the opprobrium of Hindu public opinion, would remarry without the slightest hesitation. All the young widows, therefore, who are in the unfortunate position of this bereaved sister from Quetta should have every inducement given to them to remarry, and should be sure that no blame would be attached to them if they chose to remarry, and every effort should be made to select for them suitable matches. This is not work that can be done by any institution. This work has got to be done by individual reformers whose relatives have become widows, and they have to carry on a vigorous, dignified and restrained propaganda in their own circles, and whenever they succeed they should give the widest publicity to the event. Thus, and only thus, there is likely to be tangible relief provided for the girls who might have become widows during the earthquake. It is possible that the public sympathy can be easily mobilized whilst the memory of the tragedy is fresh in mind, and if once the reform takes place on a large scale, the girls who may have become widows in the natural course will also find it easy to get married if they are willing to do so.

THE THREE SERVICES

Khadi service, village service and Harijan service are all one in reality, though three in name. They are purely humanitarian services with no other aim than that of serving Daridranarayana. Harijans are the most down-trodden among the millions of Daridranarayanans. Their service necessarily includes that of all. A cup of water served to a Harijan in the name of God is a cup served to all the neglected ones of humanity.

With services so conceived it is wrong to associate ideas of capital and labour. From the unpaid chairmen to the salaried bearers all are servants. The funds belong to the respective trusts. All the servants, whether paid or unpaid, are subject to the rules framed from time to time by the respective boards. Where the whole idea is one of duty, there is no question of privilege. Anyone therefore in these services who thinks of privileges and rights is doomed some day or other to disappointment. For in these services there is no gradual betterment of the economic condition; on the contrary, there is or there soon will be a progressive renunciation of material advantage. ‘Duty will be merit when debt becomes a donation.’ Duty done is its own reward. Satisfaction there undoubtedly is in these services. But it is that of having done one’s duty. It is true that all have not approached their tasks in the spirit of pure service. Hence there have been exhibitions of distemper now and then in the oldest of the three services. The only way to avoid a repetition of these distempers is to remind ourselves that we are in these services merely to discharge our obligations to \textit{Daridranarayana}, not to seek privileges. We own no master but \textit{Daridranarayana}, and if for the time being we own human superiors, we do so voluntarily, well knowing that no organization can be carried on without discipline. Discipline presupposes an organizing head. He is only the first among equals. And being purely a servant, in order to be the head, he has to be the humblest of all his co-servants. He is there on sufferance. But whilst he is there, he is entitled to the whole-hearted allegiance and uncomplaining obedience of all the fellow-servants.

\textit{Harijan}, 22-6-1935

293. \textsc{All Life is One}

During my brief visit to Borsad last month in several of my speeches I had said that, although I believed that even plague stricken rats and fleas were my kindred and had as much right to live as I had, I had no hesitation in endorsing Dr. Bhaskar Patel’s campaign against rats and fleas.

A reporter who was struck by this claim to kinship with rats and fleas, but not interested in the context in which I had said it, telegraphed to his paper the interesting claim I had advanced. The Sardar’s eagle eye caught the paragraph and wanted me to correct the mischief it was likely to do. Being immersed in the work he had entrusted me with, I excused myself by saying that the people concerned would not misunderstand me.

But perhaps the Sardar was right. For the paragraph containing the half-truth was wired to London. Those who are jealous about my European reputation were agitated, though they had realized that my claim to kinship must have had large qualifications. They have sent me the clipping containing the paragraph. I am bound now, if only for the sake of these loving friends, to clear the position though the half-truth having had a start cannot be overtaken at once.

I was in the midst of a population which would not kill wild animals that daily destroy their crops. Before the Sardar threw the whole weight of his tremendous influence into the campaign of the destruction of rats and fleas, the people of the Borsad Taluka had not destroyed a single rat or flea. But they could not resist the Sardar to whom they had owed much, and Dr. Bhaskar Patel was allowed to carry on wholesale destruction of rats and fleas. I was in daily touch with what was going on in Borsad.

The Sardar had invited me naturally to endorse what had been done. For the work had still to continue, though henceforth with the people’s own unaided effort. Therefore, in order to emphasize my endorsement, I redeclared in the clearest possible terms my implicit belief in ahimsa, i.e., sacredness and kinship of all life.

But why this contradiction between belief and action? Contradiction is undoubtedly there. Life is an aspiration. Its mission is to strive after perfection which is self-realization. The ideal must not be lowered because of our weaknesses or imperfections. I am painfully conscious of both in me. The silent cry daily goes out to Truth to help me to remove these weaknesses and imperfections of mine. I own my fear of snakes, scorpions, lions, tigers, plague-stricken rats and fleas, even as I must own fear of evil-looking robbers and murderers. I know that I ought not to fear any of them. But this is no intellectual feat. It is a feat of the heart. It needs more than a heart of oak to shed all fear except the fear of God. I could not in my weakness ask the people of Borsad not to kill deadly rats and fleas. But I knew that it was a concession to human weakness.

Nevertheless there is that difference between a belief in ahimsa and a belief in himsa which there is between north and south, life and death. One who hooks his fortunes to ahimsa, the law of love, daily lessens the circle of destruction and to that extent promotes life and love; he who swears by himsa, the law of hate, daily widens the circle of destruction and to that extent promotes death and hate. Though, before the people of Borsad, I endorsed the destruction of rats and fleas, my own kith and kin, I preached to them without adulteration the grand doctrine of the eternal Law of love of all life. Though I may fail to carry it out to the full in this life, my faith in it shall abide. Every failure brings me nearer the realization.

Harijan, 22-6-1935

294. FAECES AS CATTLE FOOD

I have seen in childhood in Porbandar cows freely eating human faeces. The practice appeared to me to be revolting and the feeling has persisted to this day. But a correspondent wrote telling me that in Satara district it was the usual thing for gwalis to pay for the right of... getting access to the pekhanas of people so that their cattle may eat the faeces from day to day. The correspondent said that the feeding of cow with faeces increased the yield of milk. Having no reason to doubt my correspondent’s veracity I asked a medical friend to obtain an expert’s opinion on the statement. Here is the startling opinion:

Normal faeces contain some nutritive material in the form of cellulose and nitrogenous material. The main substance in the faeces which might produce some physiological action on the animal feeding on them is vitamin B. “That vitamin B is present in the faeces was shown by Cooper (1914). He cured polyneuritic pigeons by administering an alcoholic extract of faeces. There seems to be general agreement that the nursing animal requires an increased amount of vitamin B in order to suckle her young successfully.” (Vide Monograph on Vitamins published by Pickett Thomson Research Laboratory, London.)

It is quite possible that animals feeding on faeces get a liberal supply of this vitamin which ensures a copious secretion of milk from the active mammary gland.

Lack of appetite and deficient utilization of food are well marked characteristics of vitamin B deficiency in the diet, and it is quite likely that cows that feed on faeces along with other vegetable foodstuffs will put on fat owing to stimulation of appetite by vitamin B and greater utilization of carbohydrate food which is mostly transformed into fat in herbivorous animals.

As regards the bacteria, etc., which are normally to be found in the stools of human beings, it may be said that most of them are dead or dying bacteria and that the few that survive are killed by the gastric juice in the cow’s stomach.

Thus though the chemical evidence in favour of human excreta as good food for cattle may be said to be established, the psychological objection will persist.

Harijan, 22-6-1935

295. WELLS FOR HARIJANS

Though the spectre of stricken Quetta haunts me still, I have neither compunction nor hesitation in asking the benevolent to respond quickly to the appeal for the Harijan Wells Fund published in these columns. Quetta has the whole world at its back. Harijans have only a few to help them. Not one sufferer from the Quetta disaster has to languish for thirst or to be obliged to drink filthy water which people would not have their cattle to drink.
We may not lose the sense of proportion in the face of overwhelming disasters. Not even the gaieties of people have been stopped except perhaps in some cases for a solitary moment. Must the burden of the Quetta grief fall on the already bruised shoulder of the Harijan? Donors would be guilty of misappropriation before God’s court, if they were to divert what they had intended for giving clean drinking-water to Harijans or begrudge Harijans because the unexpected call of Quetta has come. The proper way is to revise the budget of personal expenses, not that of charities, least of the penentential which the Harijan Wells Fund is.

It was not without purpose or experience that the appeal for prayer was made. Heart-felt prayer steadies one’s nerves, humbles one and clearly shows one the next step. Let the readers study the Punjab report on the drinking needs of the Harijans of that land of five mighty rivers. Is it not a shame that the rich people of the Punjab cannot provide clean water for Harijans? The appeal for a paltry lakh of rupees should be speedily over-subscribed.

_Harijan, 22-6-1935_

296. LETTER TO NARAHARI D. PARIKH

WARDHA,

_June 22, 1935_

CHI. NARHARI,

I will write to Velchand and then to you. Give the accompanying letter to Bhagwan. What is being done about the cows?

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9081
297. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

WARDHA,
June 23, 1935

CHI. MARY,

If the place agrees with you, you should stay as long as they will let you. I want you to return strong and healthy. Ask them what it is that causes fruit to disagree with you.

I am not likely to be out of Wardha for another five months.

Yes, Chhotelal is as you describe him.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 6047. Also C.W. 3377. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

298. LETTER TO VITHALDAS JERAJANI

June 23, 1935

Bhai Vithaldas,

I got your two letters, the one written from home and the other from the store.

You need not give any statement to the Press. We shall send one, if necessary, when there is a union of hearts.

What Ratubhai said was painful. I am writing to him. Just now you should not take any step without consulting me. Have patience and do not worry. About effecting economy, too, we shall think together. I will call Vallabhdas. Send your whole scheme. I will call Ratubhai, if necessary.

Take action about Lakshmidas also after consulting me. Just now when things are going wrong everywhere, we should take every step carefully.

Do not endanger your health in doing this work.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9791
299. LETTER TO PADMA

June 23, 1935

CHI. PADMA,

By replying to your letter with a postcard, I am saving a pice for the Daridranarayana. You are all getting alone very well. Study well but train your body well, too, and do not give up physical labour. Here it is all labour, as you must be observing from Harijan Sevak.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6151. Also C.W. 3507. Courtesy: Prabhudas Gandhi

300. LETTER TO MOOLCHAND AGRAWAL

June 23, 1935

BHAJ MOOLCHAND,

I have your letter.

Yours is a sad tale, but you can make it a means of dharma. Compassion subserves dharma. Dharma is put to test in adversity. When a wife does not follow the husband, how can she become his help-mate? She has a right to follow a different dharma and so has the husband. But when a wife follows an opposite dharma, she should not expect co-operation or cohabitation from the husband. She has every right to get maintenance from the husband. A husband who can be passionless towards his wife, and who remains and would remain passionless towards other women, has a right to part with his wife under such circumstances. So she should have complete freedom to stay away from you and live her own life. There is no cause for anger here. Let no harsh word be said to the wife. She should be reminded of her dharma affectionately; and non-co-operation should follow.

Then comes the problem of the children. As long as the children do not attain the age of 16, they must be in your custody. After that it is up to them to decide where to stay and whom to obey.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 837
301. LETTER TO AVADHESH DUTT AVASTHI

June 23, 1935

CHI. AVADHESH,

You cannot do social service by neglecting your duty to your father, mother and wife. This duty is not opposed to social service. It is necessary to understand the nature and scope of one’s duty to one’s mother and father. It is the duty of a husband to provide for his wife and to live with her, with due restraint, as long as she can tread the same path of duty. If the mother and father are invalid or poor and if they have no other son, it becomes one’s duty to provide for them and to serve them.

I take goat’s milk as I was driven to it. My vow prevented me from taking cow’s or buffalo’s milk. I resorted to a narrow interpretation of the vow and secured the freedom to take goat’s milk.

If one wants to avoid cooked food, one can do with fruit only.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 3213

302. LETTER TO SHRINATH SINGH

June 23, 1935

BHAI SHRINATH SINGH,

I have your letter. The committee’s decision may be conveyed to Shri Suryanarayanji by the Sammelan office. That was my idea in sending his letter to the office.

I am exchanging views with the Nagpur friends about the next session of the Sammelan. I have also received your letter in that connection.

M. K. GANDHI

SHRI SHRINATH SINGH
SECRETARY, HINDI SAHITYA SAMMELAN
P.O. BOX 11
ALLAHABAD (PRAYAG)

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 5662. Also C.W. 2974. Courtesy: Parashuram Mehrotra
303. TELEGRAM TO H. L. SHARMA

WARDHA,

June 25, 1935

DR. SHARMA

KHURJA

WIRE RECEIVED. COME THOUGH DATE NEXT STEAMER UNKNOWN.

ENQUIRING.

BAPU

From a facsimile: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, facing p.170

304. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

June 25, 1935

CHI. MARY,

I am glad you are daily improving. Therefore if once in a while they induce fever in order to complete their test, I suppose we may not grudge them.

Chhotelal has not yet turned up. Hakim’s medicine did no good. I didn’t expect any.

Love.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 6048. Also C.W. 3378. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

305. LETTER TO L. K. KIRLOSKAR

June 25, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I am sorry you have lost all interest in the machine. My suggestion not only does not contain anything inviting fresh expenditure but it contains a proposition that will cost you nothing. Paying for any fresh labour may be put in and may lead to payment of part or whole of the proved expenditure on the great effort you made in order to win the prize.

I told you when we met in Wardha and I repeat what I said then

1 This was in reply to a telegram of even date from the addressee, which read: “Passport granted. Wire if I bring it for Calcutta.”

2 The subscription is in Hindi.

3 Vide “Letter to L. K. Kirloskar”, 16-6-1935 that, if the machine answered the modest points that I had suggested, I would like to place with you orders under a contract that may gradually liquidate the expenses incurred by you. For the time being this proposal has nothing to do with the Association because the idea is wholly mine. If we came to a workable understanding, I would endeavour to interest the Association in the proposal.

I note that you cannot let Sir Daniel Hamilton have the drawings of your machine.

SIT. L. K. KIRLOSKAR
KIRLOSKARWADI

Yours sincerely,

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

306. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

June 25, 1935

Unrevised

CHI. AMBUJAM.

Whilst the right hand is resting I must dictate to save time and be in time with my correspondence.

I had fear that mother would not be able to restrain herself. Both she and you would try your joint best to prevent father from interrupting his cure. I do hope that Kichi’s wound is still healing. I know how troublesome these little operations are even for people in robust health. They take a long time to heal.

I am keeping your Quetta-quake donation. I shall make use of it when the proper time comes. When you are free I would like you to collect for Harijan Wells Fund. And you can begin with father and mother. It is a work of religious merit and therefore each has to win it for himself or herself. I take it you have been reading all about it in the columns of Harijan.

Yes, rains have set in here and so the temperature has gone down considerably.

Love.

BAPU

SHRI AMBUJAM
FAIRYFALLS VIEW
KODAikanal OBSERVATORY

From the original: Ambujammal Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

1 All-India Spinners’ Association; vide also” Improvement in Spinning”, 29-6-1935
307. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

June 25, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

It seems that Harilal is off the rails again. He has left the job. You have promised to give him some work, but if he is in the habit of telling down right lies then are you sure you have done well? How will he prove useful to you? Of late, his letters do not satisfy me at all.

How is Mathew getting on? I hope you give him manual work.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8455. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

308. LETTER TO DIWAN OF INDORE

[Before June 26, 1935]

DEAR FRIEND,

You may know that during Easter I presided over the deliberations of the Hindi Sahitya Sammelan. There was established at the conference a Lipi Parishad. I understand that His Highness had ordered a compilation of opinion on Mr. Latifi’s scheme for an improved Roman script for universal adoption. I would be grateful if you could lend me the papers the State may have in the matter.

Then there are Hindi publications by the State and publications in Devanagari script. I should be grateful if they could be supplied.

Lastly, I would like to have, if I may, copies of all State circulars regarding the use of Hindi in the State.

Yours sincerely,

THE DIWAN SAHEB

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

---

1 Vide the following item.
2 Held at Indore from April 20 to 23
309. LETTER TO DIWAN OF INDORE

WARDHA,
June 26, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I am grateful to you for your prompt reply to my letter. I have now received the books and the papers I had asked for. Will you please accept the thanks of the Lipi Parishad for the gift?

I have now received from the convener, Kakasaheb Kalelkar a memorandum containing a list of books he needs for his research work. I should be grateful if these books can be supplied.

Yours sincerely,

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

310. LETTER TO O. V. ALAGESAN

June 26, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I had your letter. I wish my pen or my word had the influence that you attribute to them.

What you say about the puzzles competition appearing in the daily Press is largely true. But it is an evil much subtler than the gambling on which I have been writing. Though fashionable, the latter is still regarded an evil. The puzzles competition is not. I have not, therefore, the courage to deal with this evil.

Yours sincerely,

The Hindu, 6-7-1935

1 The correspondent had drawn Gandhiji’s attention to the puzzles competitions started by various literary journals in Tamil Nadu and requested him to write an article in Harijan condemning the practice which was a form of gambling.

311. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

June 26, 1935

CHI. MARY,

Chhotelal has just arrived. I read the paragraph about the cooker to Mira. She remembered nothing about it. She has been searching it, but till now it has not been found. Don’t you disturb yourself about it. If you can give me more particulars my search will be facilitated, unless I have found the thing before the arrival of your reply.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 6049. Also C.W. 3379. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

312. LETTER TO RAJARAM R. BHOLE

WARDHA,

June 26, 1935

MY DEAR RAJARAM,

Though it is fairly cool now it is nothing like Poona yet. If you come after the first week of July, it would be pleasant. But you are at liberty to come earlier if you wish to.

Yours,

BAPU

SJT. RAJARAM BHOLE
C/O MINERVA TALKIES
POONA CITY

From the original: R. R. Bhole Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

313. LETTER TO C. G. JAGANNATHDAS

June 26, 1935

MY DEAR JAGANNATHDAS,

I have no objection to your publishing my letter on nudism.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G.N. 9093

1 Vide “Letter to C. G. Jagannathdas”, 18-6-1935
314. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

June 26, 1935

CHI. LILAVATI,

Herewith your first exercise. You can now send the Gujarati exercises directly to Maganbhai. However, you may send them to me if you wish.

This has been delayed in returning. It lay with me for three days. And since it was the first, Maganbhai also took some time over it.

The English [exercise] seems to have been lost. It is being searched for. If it is not found, I will frame a new exercise and send it. This work will remain in my charge for the time being.

Ask every time you do not understand a point. That will help you to make very great progress.

If you are one in a class of 20, you will receive 1/20 of the attention paid to the class. Through correspondence you will receive individual attention. Tuition by correspondence can help an industrious pupil a great deal.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9333. Also C.W. 6608 Courtesy: Lilavati Asar

315. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

June 26, 1935

CHI. LILAVATI,

Your English exercises have been found. They are being returned duly corrected. Maganbhai’s previous remarks apply to these exercises, too. Write in a neat handwriting. Use a reed-pen and write slowly. Your English is better than I had thought. It will improve very quickly. After I get a list of the books you have with you, I will let you know which of them you should use for your study. Just now take up Pathmala, Part I, and make a start with it. You will find the first few lessons easy. Start translating from the point where you find the exercises difficult. Do not in the least feel shy to ask the meaning of any construction that you cannot grasp. We have here Prabhavati’s copy of Pathmala, Part I. It will be enough, therefore, if you quote page numbers. Study the corrections carefully. If you do not understand any of them, ask again about them.

1 The addressee used to send weekly exercises in English to Gandhiji which he returned with correction and notes. Some of the routine corrections are omitted here.

How is Mathew getting on? What work does he do?

Blessings from

BAPU

316. LETTER TO BENARSILAL AND RUKMINI BAZAJ

June 26, 1935

CHI. BENARSILAL AND RUKMINI,

I got the letters of you both. A disease must be stamped out before it has taken root. I hope Devendra’s tonsils are all right now. I am glad that you will be going to Bombay via Wardha.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI BENARSILAL BAZAJ
TATHERI BAZAAR
BANARAS CITY

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9159

317. LETTER TO PURUSHOTTAM L. BAVISHI

June 26, 1935

BHAI PURUSHOTTAM,

I got your letter.

I do indeed see a miracle in the spinning-wheel.

May your agricultural experiment succeed. Please write to me from time to time about everything you may think worth writing about in connection with it.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N.129. Also C.W. 4748. Courtesy: Purushottam L. Bavishi

200 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
318. LETTER TO NARAHARI D. PARIKH

June 26, 1935

CHI. NARAHARI,

I am enclosing a letter for Velchand. If you think it all right, send it to him wherever he is. I had a talk with Lakshmidas. I think he is right in being keen that Velchand should join.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S. N. 9082

319. LETTER TO VANAMALA N. PARIKH

June 26, 1935

CHI. VANAMALA,

Now that you have recovered your health, try to preserve it. If you are sure that the giving up of salt and pulses has definitely benefited you, keep up the practice. You may gratify your palate as well as you can with the things that help you to maintain good health.

I do not understand what you will gain from a hand-written magazine. What is the value of my blessings, then? All the same it may be a source of innocent pleasure and, therefore, if you are keen on getting my blessings you have them.

Blessings from
BAPU

320. LETTER TO JETHALAL G. SAMPAT

June 26, 1935

BHAI JETHALAL,

I have sent the information about gamboge thistle to Harijanbandhu.¹ I have examined the oil-seeds. I will look for oily variety and if I get that I will even try to extract oil. I shall wait for your next letter.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI JETHALAL GOVINDJI
ANANTPUR
P.O. REHILI, SAUGAR DISTRICT

From Gujarati: C.W. 9852. Courtesy: Narayan Jethalal Sampat

¹ This was published under the title “Darudi” in Harijanbandhu, 30-6-1935.
321. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

WARDHA,
June 27, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

If I am routing all my letters to Harilal through you, there is some purpose behind it, viz., to enable you to know what your relationship with Harilal should be although you may not take part in the inquiry. This question has become one of very great importance to me, as you will see from my letters to him. Still, even after reading all these letters, you are free to form your own impression of Harilal and act accordingly. If you have to feed him, you may give him any work to do which involves no risk. But this does not mean that you are bound to maintain relations with him or give him work. The bond of blood-relationship also has its limits. It shouldn’t make us violate moral principles. Harilal cannot have greater claims on you than a stranger placed in similar circumstances. We should rather be more generous towards a stranger and more miserly towards Harilal. That is, the more intimate the blood-relationship, the stricter should our attitude be. Only thus can we do pure justice.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8456. Courtesy:
Narandas Gandhi

322. LETTER TO KAKUBHAI

June 27, 1935

BHAI KAKUBHAI,

Ratubhai and other workers of the Khadi Pratishthan say that you have given them an assurance that none of the workers will be retrenched as a consequence of the economy drive. Have you given the assurance to any one of them? They have said so and published it too. I am asking you this question because some important changes have got to be made because of the new policy . . . .¹

¹ The letter is incomplete in the source.
323. LETTER TO VITHALDAS JERAJANI

June 27, 1935

BHAJ VITHALDAS,

I got your letter. Do not give notice to Ganatra just now. If there is no typing work you may give him any other work. Do give him typing, however, if there is any to be done. As for other changes, everything depends on when you are ready. Such changes as occur to me can be carried out even through correspondence with Shankerlal. Jamnalalji is arriving on the 7th without fail. Everything thus depends on your convenience. I am in favour of drastic economy measures. I will, therefore, go all out to help you in that respect.

Hemprabhadevi has charged that after agreeing to buy goods from Khadi Pratishtthan you changed your mind. I once asked you about it, but you seem to have completely forgotten the question.

As Shankerlal is not keeping good health, I want him to remain in Ooty for as long as possible. Please, therefore, do not be in a hurry to call him back. It is our duty to carry on the work somehow.

Send the accompanying letter¹ to Kakubhai.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9792

324. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

June 27, 1935

BHAJ VALLABHBHAI,

Not being sure whether Mahadev would be there, I am dictating this letter to you. I got the statement² and went through it. I waited for the second post, but there was none. Ba also didn’t bring any letter. And so I sent the wire.

I didn’t like the statement at all. Instead of setting out facts only, it mixes facts with arguments. I disliked the very first paragraph and sent you the wire. The post arrived just now, that is, at four, and now I

¹ Vide the preceding item.
² About the Borsad plague-relief work am dictating this. I see that you like the idea of our appointing a committee. I was glad, for I know that such a committee can be of great help to us, inasmuch as a doctor’s opinion is bound to be considered independent. Since you have accepted its necessity, I needn’t write anything more. I should like to see the revised draft of the statement before it is issued.

If Mahadev has got all the facts with him, he can draft the statement here. Or you may detain him there for one more day if you think that necessary.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabh bhaine, p. 174

325. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

WARDHA,
June 28, 1935

CHI. MARY,

The cooker was after all traced,¹ thank God.

Is there anything else left by you? Chhotelal returned on Wednesday. If you are getting on well there and are well fed and can be kept there without inconvenience to anybody, do stay there long enough to be restored to perfect health.

Mary Chesley expects to come here on or about July 7 and bring Miss Ingham² with her.

Love.

BAPU

[PS.]

If I write so often your cards demand an answer.

From a photostat: G.N. 6050. Also C.W. 3380. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

¹ Vide “Letter to F. Mary Barr”, 26-6-1935
² Mary Ingham had come from England at the invitation of Mary Chesley to do village work.
326. LETTER TO N. R. MALKANI

June 28, 1935

MY DEAR MALKANI,

Here is the first contribution received from a Harijan subscriber. You should send me every week a list of contributors for publication in Harijan.

Sjt. Jugal Kishore¹ has sent me a nice long letter. He will presently be making a handsome contribution without any loss [sic]. Cease to make use of name in connection with the fund but simply call it as I have called it Harijan Wells Fund.

Encl. 1 (cheque)

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 1162

327. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

Unrevised June 28, 1935

CHI. LILAVATI,

I got your letter. You should have some patience. Once the work gets going it will proceed smoothly.

For the present you should write one letter every week. Whenever you wish, however, you can write two lessons, one in Gujarati and one in English. But despatch both on the same day. That will save one stamp. Maganbhai will need three days after the receipt of your letter and you can accordingly calculate the date on which you may expect a reply. If your letters are received here on the same day of the week, you will get the reply, too, on the same day.

If along with your weight your strength also increases, you need not worry in the least about the increase in weight. Your weight can easily be 110 pounds.

You have correctly grasped the argument in my article². I think it more advisable to encourage a child-widow to marry again rather than that she should pretend, under social pressure, to observe self-

¹ Jugal Kishore Birla
² Vide “Notes” sub-title Helpless Widows, 22-6-1935
control. If any such widow feels sincere aversion to worldly life, she will plainly refuse. Her widowhood will then be an adornment.

For the English book, get the Nelson Reader just now. Copy out and send fifteen lines from it every week in the most careful handwriting together with a translation of them in equally good handwriting. Use sheets of the same size every time, so that afterwards you can bind them together and preserve them.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9575. Also C.W. 6547. Courtesy: Lilavati Asar

328. LETTER TO NAVIN GANDHI

June 28, 1935

CHI. NAVIN,

I have your letter. I appreciate your keen desire [for studies]. But I am afraid I will not be able to help you much in the matter. However much time I may devote to you I will always consider it as insufficient. It would be like the proverbial recluse who, hankering after this world as well as the next, ruins his prospects in both. So it is better if you join the Vinaya Mandir at Ahmedabad or a high school at Rajkot or Bhavnagar. If I cannot afford to send you to a high school, there is nothing else that I can do to satisfy your craving. If you come to me I shall certainly help you in learning English and Arithmetic thoroughly. But you cannot lay down any conditions with me. The main thing is the work here and anything that has to be done is by way of service. Of course the best course would be to come to me. I too would welcome it but staying with me means learning to serve and making progress in it. Even acquiring knowledge is for the sake of service.

Don’t hesitate to write to me. I shall try to guide you if you keep on writing to me.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
329. DUTY OF BREAD LABOUR

Brahma created his people with the duty of sacrifice laid upon them and said: ‘By this do you flourish. Let it be the fulfiller of all your desires.’ He who eats without performing this sacrifice eats stolen bread.

Thus says the Gita. “Earn thy bread by the sweat of thy brow”, says the Bible. Sacrifices may be of many kinds. One of them may well be bread labour. If all laboured for their bread and no more, then there would be enough food and enough leisure for all. Then there would be no cry of over population, no disease, and no such misery as we see around.

Such labour will be the highest form of a sacrifice. Men will no doubt do many other things either through their bodies or through their minds, but all this will be labour of love, for the common good. There will then be no rich and no poor, none high and none low, no touchable and no untouchable.

This may be an unattainable ideal. But we need not, therefore, cease to strive for it. Even if without fulfilling the whole law of sacrifice, that is, the law of our being, we performed physical labour enough for our daily bread, we should go a long way towards the ideal.

If we did so, our wants would be minimized, our food would be simple. We should then eat to live, not live to eat. Let anyone who doubts the accuracy of this proposition try to sweat for his bread, he will derive the greatest relish from the productions of his labour, improve his health and discover that many things he took were superfluities.

May not men earn their bread by intellectual labour? No. The needs of the body must be supplied by the body. “Render unto Caesar that which is Caesar’s” perhaps applies here well.

Mere mental, that is, intellectual labour is for the soul and is its own satisfaction. It should never demand payment. In the ideal State, doctors, lawyers and the like will work solely for the benefit of society, not for self. Obedience to the law of bread labour will bring about a silent revolution in the structure of society. Man’s triumph will consist in substituting the struggle for existence by the struggle for mutual service. The law of the brute will be replaced by the law of man.
Return to the villages means a definite voluntary recognition of the duty of bread labour and all it connotes. But says the critic, “millions of India’s children are today living in the villages and yet they are living a life of semi-starvation”. This, alas, is but too true. Fortunately we know that theirs is not voluntary obedience. They would perhaps shirk body labour if they could, and even rush to the nearest city if they could be accommodated in it. Compulsory obedience to a master is state of slavery, willing obedience to one’s father is the glory of sonship. Similarly compulsory obedience to the law of bread labour breeds poverty, disease and discontent. It is a state of slavery. Willing obedience to it must bring contentment and health. And it is health which is real wealth, not pieces of silver and gold. The Village Industries Association is an experiment in willing bread labour.

_Harijan, 29-6-1935_

330. IMPROVEMENT IN SPINNING

Investigations made in Savli, one of the good centres of khadi production, reveal the fact that the spinners there earn no more than one pie per hour on an average. Fortunately they have other sources of income or they are members of families whose other members are following some more remunerative occupations. But a khadi servant cannot afford to be satisfied with this knowledge. He must devise means of increasing the spinners’ wage. There are three ways of doing it: (1) By paying a higher wage and increasing the price of commercial khadi. (2) By inviting the ginners, carders and weavers to divide their wages with the spinners. (3) By making improvements in the existing wheels and by teaching the spinners to be more careful than they are.

If this last was not possible, one of the first two alternatives would be obligatory, but improvement in the existing machines and in the spinners’ manners is undoubtedly possible. Had Messrs Kirloskars’ efforts come up to mark, the spinners’ wage would easily have gone up to nine pies per hour. But that was not to be. Though it was easily the best among all the attempts submitted to the A. I. S. A., it was not considered by the judges to satisfy the tests laid down for a cottage machine. It could not replace the existing machines. Let us hope that neither Kirloskar Bros. nor other inventors will give up the attempt. Though the prize has been withdrawn, I have no doubt that the Association will always be prepared to examine any promising effort and give the full reward if a really handy, easy-working machine is forthcoming. But till that happy time comes, if it ever does, improvements in the existing machines must not be despised. Shri Shankerlal Banker has been concentrating on one essential improvement, speed of the spindle. The revolutions of the spindle have been found to be as low as 35 to 1 of the turning wheel. The result has been that the average output is not more than 150 yards per hour, if not even 100 yards. The highest attained has been over 800 yards. If the speed of the spindle can be improved, the average and therefore the wage can be easily doubled. This can be effected by using thinner spindles, thinner mals (wheel-strings) and reducing the circumference of the little pulley round the spindle. These are but illustrations of the way in which improvements can be easily made.

But no improvement is possible unless khadi workers master the science of spinning. They must know both the theory and the practice. They must study the incredibly simple construction of the existing machines and the function of each part. They must themselves be expert ginners, carders and spinners. And they must take a lively interest in the welfare of the spinners.

This means overhauling the khadi service. The sooner it is done, the better it will be for all concerned. We must not be satisfied with the indifferent work of spinners, when we know that better is easily possible.

_Harijan_, 29-6-1935

331. NOTES

THE GAMBLING EVIL

A correspondent from Bombay writes a pathetic letter on the growing evil of gambling. Below is a free translation of the telling passages of the letter:

If the canker is eating into the vitals of the simple village folk of Gujarat, it is invading titled men, barristers, doctors, merchants and even teachers who are expected to guard national morals. Even the police are said not to be free from the vice. Women, children of tender age and blind beggars are not free from the vice. Some newspapers thrive on advertising the evil. It goes on unchecked in spite of the effort of some reformers. May not growing poverty and consequent unemployment be the cause of the evil?

I do not think so. No doubt unemployment favours the spread. But the causes are much deeper. The very fact that the vice has affected all classes must make us cautious and lead us to make deeper investigations into the causes.

SUGAR v. GUR

Testimony in favour of gur over sugar is daily accumulating. Shri Shankerlal Banker who is touring in the Ooty regions sends the following analysis prepared for him by a chemist friend, showing the copper content in milligrams in one kilogram each of the samples submitted for analysis:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Sample</th>
<th>Copper Content (mg)</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Singanallur sugar</td>
<td>0.61</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Aska sugar</td>
<td>1.93</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Gur Anakapalli</td>
<td>7.48</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Gur Singanallur</td>
<td>7.67</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Molasses</td>
<td>5.70</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sugar Candy (cane)</td>
<td>4.98</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Palmyra Candy</td>
<td>7.40</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Thus it is a double waste of money to use sugar instead of gur.

Harijan, 29-6-1935

---

332. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

WARDHA, June 29, 1935

Chitr. Mary,¹

I quite see that you are going to take long there. But you should give as much time as may be necessary.

What about the climate there? How many are you in your ward?

What is the distance between bed and bed?

What food do they serve you?

Love.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From a photostat: G.N. 6051. Also C.W. 3381. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

¹ The superscription and the subscription are in Hindi.
333. LETTER TO BALIBEHN M. ADALAJA

June 29, 1935

CHI. BALI,

I got both your letters. I hope you are keeping patience. The truth will come out ultimately. Harilal is throwing off all self-restraint. There is no need at all for you to reply to him. You may certainly defend yourself through a lawyer against any step that he might take. You have every right to expose his misdeeds. There is no reason whatever for you to yield to blackmail. Do not give him a single pice. I am of course writing to him. I am returning the notice, as also Harilal’s letter which you wanted back.

Ba is leaving for Delhi tomorrow. As Lakshmi is expecting they have asked for Manu to go and help. Since she also wants to go, I am letting her go.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 5051. Courtesy: Manubehn S. Mashruwala

334. LETTER TO C. F. ANDREWS

WARDHA,

June 30, 1935

MY DEAR CHARLIE,

Your letters with enclosures have duly arrived. I must not write about it to Agatha. You will remember this sentence in her letter: “For we look to Mahatmaji to be above the battle. Am I right in thinking that the events of the past year are wearing him down?” If you feel with me that the events are not wearing me down and that I am above the battle then you must give her the assurance on my behalf and tell her that I am not “hopeless about the whole thing”. Only I can’t build hope on a foundation of sand. It is truth on the rock of Faith which persists in the face of appearances to the contrary. If I am not enthusiastic about any Indian going to England,¹ I have the soundest reasons. The best of us have more than our share of work cut out for us here, and I am quite clear in my mind that when we have discharged our trust here, real friendship between England and India will come. Those Indians who believe in non-violence must not go unless they are able to testify that politically conscious India has no hatred for Englishmen, but that it has nothing but goodwill towards them, if not active love. Rajagopalachari cannot bear that testimony today. And what is the use of his going to ask Englishmen to do their duty even though Indians cannot surmount their unregenerate nature and like the rest of mankind hate those who they believe persecute them? Do you not see my argument quite clearly? I am dictating so much on one sentence in Agatha’s letter, because I realize the distress of her mind and I want to soothe her and those who feel like her.

¹ Vide “Letter to Balukaka Kanitkar”, 1-5-1935

About the Simla incident you will have to put up with it a little longer. But what does it matter that bitter criticism is levelled against you. You said the correct word¹ and that is its own satisfaction.

About the rest of your letter and the enclosures I expect you do not want any reply. I hope Khambhatta is making steady progress and that you had time to look into his charges against Hospital management.

I must not forget one thing. You won’t disturb your programme owing to Agatha’s letter. Let things take their course. You are quite right in wanting the little bit of rest [sic] from the agonizing toil that Agatha is going through. That of course can happen only when you are there. But meanwhile you can soothe her while insisting on her hastening slowly and on being careful for nothing.

Love to you all.

MOHAN

From a photostat: G.N. 989

¹ In his letter dated June 7 to Agatha Harrison, the addressee had referred to the “racial discrimination in the official communiques to the Press” on the Quetta earthquake: “. . . the papers were full of every English name surviving, died and wounded; and even civil servants who were Indians were not recorded. The atmosphere in Simla was electric . . . . It is impossible to get one grain of common sense into their heads . . . . They are convinced that every Indian all over India is quite happy about what has happened and that the only one who was disturbed and stirring up racial feeling was C. F. Andrews!” (Charles Freere Andrews, p. 282)
335. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

June 30, 1935

CHI. SHARMA,

I have your two letters. The Consul is being contacted for the visa. I hope you will not have to go to Calcutta for that. Dr. Kellogg has not sent a reply. It should have come. I shall make other arrangements. Shri P.’s letter contains nothing. I have written to him that I cannot pay any heed to his letter. I have not attached any weight to his letter. That is why I did not write to you about it.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Hindi]
Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha. pp. 172-3

336. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

WARDHA,
July 1, 1935

CHI. AMBUJAM,

May the marriage ceremony go off well and may Krishnaswami and his wife have a long life of happiness and service. I hope that Kichi’s finger will be quite healed by Saturday.

There is no hurry about the Wells Fund.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: C.W. 9602. Courtesy: S. Ambujammal

337. LETTER TO K. M. MUNSHI

July 1, 1935

BHAISHRI MUNSHI,

If for the goodwill a payment has to be made to Premchandji¹, then I personally would prefer to start an independent paper. We would be able to secure the services of some Hindi writer. We can afford to have Premchandji only if he takes up the work in a spirit of service. Let us not decide in too much hurry. After the decision is taken, we shall approach Gurudev. I hesitate to write to him myself because he [might agree to write] something even against his will through sheer courtesy. When the time comes I will ask Mahadev to write. Or else you may write. Your leaflet is bound to mention my name in some connection and that will amount to an invitation [from me].

¹ Munshi Premchand, Hindi novelist who jointly owned and edited with the addressee a Hindi monthly, Hansa

I hope you have benefited from your stay in Panchgani.

It will also be necessary before starting Hansa to make sure where the money is to come from.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 7576. Courtesy: K. M. Munshi

---

338. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

July 1, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

Read my letter to Harilal. It will perhaps help you to see what you should do. I am not yet ready to order you, but I think Bali, Kumi and Manu are right. Please warn me beforehand if you think they are wrong. If they appear right to you and if Harilal does not confess his faults, then, you cannot keep him at all. In no circumstances can anything be given to him in the shape of help from public funds. He may certainly earn something by doing work. This sums up my advice. Think over it and act according to the promptings of your heart.

Enclosed please find Mathew’s letter. Prema’s letters are such that they promptly elicit fitting replies.

What about the workshop?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8457. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

1 Not traceable; however, vide “Letter to Vallabhbhai Patel”, 3-7-1935
339. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

July 1, 1935

CHI. SHARMA,

There is a letter from Calcutta announcing the ship’s departure around August 10. It also says that you must reach there 10 or 12 days earlier. They will arrange for your visa for America. Who sent you the newspaper cutting? Anyway, we shall have more specific news in four or five days’ time.

Never mind the sea. You have to leave only from Calcutta.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, between pp. 172 and 173.

340. LETTER TO G. SITARAMA SASTRY

WARDHA,
July 2, 1935

DEAR SITARAM SASTRI,

As Khadi Samsthanam reports seem to contain nothing new I would advise you not to send them every month. Send them only when there is anything new or striking in the way of conquest or defeat. Efficiency of a high order comes only after meticulous attention to every little detail. Even as the slightest looseness in a screw in the mechanism of a watch upsets its balance, how much more is it true of mental processes? And the correctness or efficiency of mental processes is determined by the correctness of our work in daily life.

Now about barter. Rs. 450 will do but why not the round sum of 500? I think a gold medal is unnecessary. The choice of Samsthanam khaddar may be given to the prize winner but the judge should be an economist. I, therefore, suggest Sjt. Kumarappa. I do not think that many judges are necessary. You may select another name. Ramadas Pantulu may be a better name. It may be worth while thinking of a 1 Presumably from the Birla brothers, who were financing the addressee’s trip abroad.

2 A friend of the addressee had sent him a cutting from a Calcutta newspaper reporting the addressee’s proposed trip to America.
name with a view to attracting competitors. Finally, drop a skeleton of the note of yourself. I shall then work after my own style and publish it.

I am not publishing the account of the sixth Bharata Bhagya Yatra. It is the repetition of the same old thing. It is enough for a people to know that it has become a permanent part of Vinaya Ashram. If you have workers enough, I would like you to send some in the villages, one each. That will make the workers resourceful and self-supporting. We shall thereby have a variety of experiences. This village reconstruction work is the most difficult, as we have tackled. You will see it if you have followed the pages of Harijan closely.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

341. LETTER TO NARAHARI D. PARIKH

Not revised
July 2, 1935

CHI. NARAHARI,

Mahadev left last night for Bombay. I am redirecting your letter there.

Do you know any relation of Hari Singh? I hope you have informed him. I assume that he was duly cremated. Who attended the funeral? Where was Hari Singh sleeping? Is the place safe? Was he sleeping on a cot or on the ground? Personally I believe that everybody dies only at the appointed hour, but because we do not know the hour and also because nobody welcomes death, we must take measures to save a man’s life. Looking at the matter thus, when we do not know definitely what bit a person, we must assume that it was a serpent and apply remedies accordingly. We may take him to a doctor, or, if we do not do that, we can bind the vein so as to stop the flow of blood, cut open the spot where we suspect the person to have been bitten and put permanganate in the wound, apply a mud pack and keep him conscious anyhow. We may even induce vomiting. This can be done by thrusting one’s fingers into the throat or by making the person drink warm water mixed with salt. If the salt is in sufficient quantity, vomiting is bound to follow. We should know from a doctor if there are other remedies also.

---

1 A ‘pilgrimage’ of workers organized by the addressee to “convey the message of village service”. The first ‘march’ was conducted from December 27, 1934 to January 13, 1935. For a report of the “second pilgrimage”, vide “Letter to Lord Ampthill”, 4-8-1909
Tell Bhagwanji that I got his letter. I do not remember his questions, however. Ask him to state them again.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI NARAHARI D. PARIKH
HARIJAN ASHRAM, SABARMATI, AHMEDABAD

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9083

342. LETTER TO SHIVABHAI G. PATEL
MAGANWADI, WARDHA,
July 2, 1935

CHI. SHIVABHAI,

I got your letter. You have started well. In my view, there is no place for the buffalo or buffalo-ghee in our programme of village industries. Why should we interfere with an activity that is going on smoothly? We do not want to take up this work as a business.

No one who looks upon service of the cow as a religious duty will ever advocate the cause of the buffalo.

Blessings from
BAPU

343. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT
July 2, 1935

CHI. VASUMATI,

I got your letter. I was indeed very glad to learn that you had decided firmly to stay there for one full year. If your mind is cheerful, then your health will automatically improve and remain better. The work assigned to you is really very good. Also engage yourself in learning something which interests you personally but not at the cost of your health. It is strange that Prabhavati has not yet arrived. Please give the enclosed letter\(^1\) to Shivabhai. Ba has gone to Delhi.

Blessings from
BAPU

\(^1\) Vide the preceding item.
344. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

July 2, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

I forgot to reply to one question of yours.

Is it necessary to reply to what Vajubhai¹ has written? I do want your reply when you get the time. I have received another still longer statement. I will send it to you after reading it. Read both and send me your remarks.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8458. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

345. LETTER TO MRS. S. SRINIVASA IYENGAR

July 3, 1935

DEAR SISTER,

As my right hand is resting I must dictate, for the left hand can work but slowly. The forthcoming Sunday is a great event for you. May God bless you and yours, and may He bless the bride and the bridegroom. May He give him a long life of health, strength and service.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From the original: Ambujammal Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

¹ Vajubhai Shukla, teacher of Rajkot Rashtriya Shala and Jamnadas Gandhi’s colleague
346. LETTER TO SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA

WARDHA,
July 3, 1935

DEAR SATISH BABU,

I must now dictate this letter as my left hand cannot cope with all the correspondence. I enclose herewith two letters. Can you trace the books mentioned in one of them? And will you examine the fire-proof process copied from an American magazine? At the time of replying you will return both the letters.

Now about the little storm that is going on there about Borkamata. Why all this insistence on operation either? Is it for the good of khadi? I have not gone into the merits, though I have written to Jerajani so far as the sale of Khadi Pratishthan is concerned. And I have his reply, the purport of which is that everything that has been done was done with the full concurrence of Vishwanath. About Borkamata, Annada has been sending bitter letters to Shankerlal who has passed the correspondence on to me. I have not the time to study it. I implored Prafulla to settle the matter and he sends the following telegram: “Met Hemprabha Devi, Satis Babu. They justify steps. So Borkamata competition continues. Hemprabha Devi’s attitude disheartened me discussing details.” Do you want me to go into the whole thing and decide or will you come to an understanding with Annada?

SJT. SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA
CALCUTTA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
347. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

MAGANWADI,

July 3, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

Jethalal’s letter has been lying with me for a long time, but I could go through it only today. He has sent copies of it to Vallabhbhai and others. Before that he had written to Nanabhai and Nanabhai had sent the letter to me. Nanabhai had also replied to him but there seems to have been some misunderstanding on his part. He should clarify the matter. When I got that letter, I wrote to Jethalal and asked him to write whatever he wanted to. The accompanying letter is in reply to that. I myself can reply to many of the points in it, but that is not enough. I must have your official reply. Please, therefore, let me have it. I had a letter from Harilal yesterday. I could understand nothing in it.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8459. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

1 Jethalal Joshi, ex-member of Rajya Sabha; formerly a teacher of Rajkot Rashtriya Shala

220 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
348. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

July 3, 1935

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

I got your letter. Mahadev seems to have needlessly frightened you and got frightened himself. I merely cautioned Harilal not to play any tricks on me lest he should lose me altogether. But he seems to have been up to something of that kind and, therefore, has taken the warning. There was a letter from Narandas saying that he had disappeared since two days ago. If, therefore, he has not returned before now, it is five days since he left. There is no fear at all of my taking his disappearance to heart. He has been disappearing in this manner for a long time now. Some outward signs of change in him had certainly roused my hopes, but how long can a man keep up pretence? Please don’t worry in the least. I will not take any hasty step. There is no need, either, for any such step now. Apart from this, my health is excellent and I am working with the utmost care. And ultimately it is God’s will that prevails. As long as He wants to use me as an instrument of service, no harm will come to me. And when the end does come, no precaution or remedy will avail. India’s future is safe. I see no sign at all for despair. God will permit nothing that is not for the country’s good.

After you have recovered, your health will perhaps improve if you have your headquarters here.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbahe, p. 175

349. LETTER TO NARAHARI D. PARIKH

July 3, 1935

CHI. NARAHARI,

I went through your letter regarding the school. What salary does Jayabehn get? The fact that you have not trained even a single lady out of twenty-five shows that there must be some defect in our system of teaching. And if this is so, how can we expect to get a lady from outside who would fit into our system of education? I think we will have to reap as we have sown. Please do not think for a moment that I say ‘we’ just for the sake of formality. I fully realize my own shortcomings. I do regard myself as a teacher but I am a giant among pigmies. All that I want to convey is that you must resolve to train someone up to your expectations from among our women. It is...

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

350. LETTER TO VAISKUNTH L. MEHTA

July 3, 1935

BHAII VAISKUNTH,

Mahadev is of course there. I read your postcard to him.

I also learnt the good news that Lallubhai’s operation was successful. I hope he is well.

Mahadev had told me about the talk [you had] with Seth Mathuradas. What I can gather from it is that he will sign the document.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI VAISKUNTH MEHTA
CENTRAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK
BOMBAY

From a copy of the Gujarati: V.L. Mehta Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

351. LETTER TO KRISHNACHANDRA

Unrevised July 3, 1935

CHI. KRISHNACHANDRA,

An eternal conflict goes on in our hearts between the divine and the demoniac, truth and untruth, knowledge and ignorance, light and darkness. We should put up a struggle to our utmost but not beyond our strength. Arjuna was overreaching himself when God dissuaded him. To take an example, ahimsa is good but what should I do if I cannot rid myself of the fear of snakes? When I have already killed it in my mind, but only shrink from putting the thought into action,

1 The letter is incomplete in the source.
dharma indicates that I kill it in accordance with my nature. The resolve not to kill it serves no purpose. The same holds true in the instance of brahmacharya and the householder’s estate. Observance of lifelong continence is undoubtedly worthy but those unable to control their passion should enter the holy state of matrimony as brahmacharya in such instances would be a mere mockery of it. There is no contradiction here, only a matter of two distinct dharmas.¹

Yes, prayers are most essential. They help one to cultivate a spontaneous habit of constant remembrance. The quantity of neem leaves may be reduced if necessary.

I can judge the state of your health only when you come here. There should be no faintness of heart now. When you hope to gain your peace of mind with me you should promptly come over.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 4275

352. LETTER TO SUMANGAL PRAKASH

WARDHA,
July 3, 1935

CHI. SUMANGAL,

I have your letter. If for the sake of your parents you must earn money and go out for the purpose or take to writing you should do so. Maybe in so doing you will find greater peace. Do not feel yourself bound by any past commitments. That alone is binding which brings us peace and promotes dharma. Dharma means dharma for the moment.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: Sumangal Prakash Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

353. LETTER TO TARADEVI

MAGANWADI, WARDHA,
July 3, 1935

CHI. TARA,

I have your letter as also those of your mother and Laxmidevi².

¹ Vide also “Ideals and Practice”, 13-7-1935
² Rani Vidyavati’s sister-in-law
We must do our best and then accept whatever happens. Where can we find a better Seva Sadan than the one where your mother is? The path of service is difficult. Happiness and unhappiness are all matters of the mind. We must regard both alike. If Laxmidevi has reached there, I shall not write to her separately.

Blessings from
BAPU

TARADEVI
BARUA KOTHI
SANDILA
DIST. HARDOI

From the Hindi original: Rani Vidyavati Papers. Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library

354. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

WARDHA,
July 4, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

I have your letter. Your letters to me are love letters, each time I suppose not less than an hour’s effort even for you—a ready and fast writer. Now that we know each other so well, you can certainly save your time by writing only when you must. Though I treasure your long letters, I would be satisfied with a mere postcard telling me of important events.

You have your work cut out for you at Poona. Are you coming to Wardha on your way to Poona or on your way back or both ways? The weather is much cooler just now.

I have shared your letter with Kumarappa¹. If you can establish contact with rickshaw-pullers, it would be a great thing. They can easily spin, weave and add to their meagre earnings.

I am sorry Krishnarao is leaving you. Of course, ultimately you will have to rely upon yourself. Though your arms may not be strong enough to work at the bow, it is good that you will know the process of carding. That would enable you to regulate and control carding by others. If your girls learn spinning, you will insist upon their carding. Unless they do, they will never spin regularly. And it is a bad job to depend upon others for slivers. If they form a kind of spinning-club, they can have a division of labour. Some may gin, some others may do the carding, many can make slivers and all will spin.

¹ J. C. Kumarappa, Secretary of the All-India Village Industries’ Association founded in October 1934

The clothes you have for Quetta relief, may be sent to Dr. Gopichand for the refugees in the Punjab, unless of course there are refugees in Simla itself, in which case you can distribute your clothes among them. Only I fancy that in Simla you will have the most well-to-do refugees, whereas in Lahore the poorest must have congregated.

I shall hold on the money. It can be sent where they have spent what is being collected now. There is always in such calamities an ample fund in the beginning stages.

You need not get out of your ‘Ville’ to sell those paper sheets and envelopes I have sent you. I am in no hurry to have the price of them. And ultimately even if they could not be sold there, there would not be any difficulty in selling them here, without any loss. I know we cannot make the profits that you can, but you must not give undue labour to their sale.

The slivers I have sent you, should give you at least 25 counts, as they are capable of giving 30 counts.

Please hand over the enclosed letter to Andrews.

Love.

BAPU

SHRI RAJKUMARI AMRIT KUNVAR BHAG
MANORVILLE
SIMLA

From the original: C.W. 3539. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6348

355. LETTER TO S. SRINIVASA IYENGAR

July 4, 1935

DEAR FRIEND.

I was glad to have your letter. I do hope that you will not leave Kodaikanal till you are thoroughly restored and enjoying your normal health.

I sent my blessings¹ through Ambujam two days ago, as I learnt through her the date of the forthcoming marriage. I have written' today to Mrs. Iyengar as also to Krishnaswami. Thank you for your good wishes.

Yes, I am keeping quite well and quite cheerful. Both I count as God’s gifts.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

SJT. S. SRINIVASA IYENGAR
“SRINIKETAN” KODAIKANAL

From a photostat: C.W. 10752. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

356. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL
July 4, 1935

CHI. AMBUJAM,

Here are two letters, one for Mother and the other for Krishnaswami. To Mother I am writing at Father’s wish. I have received a sweet note from him today.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the original: Ambujammal Papers, Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

357. LETTER TO AMRITLAL NANAVATI
July 4, 1935

BHAI AMRITLAL,

It is natural that I was sorry to learn about your younger brother’s death. But, after all, since I have so many co-workers, there is always news of somebody’s death or birth, and joy and sorrow are balanced so equally that to say ‘I feel sorry’ seems to be an exaggeration. Moreover, if regarded rationally, death is not a curse, but is rather a gift from God, being a release from life. This intellectual conviction has considerably blunted my feelings. I should like you to see the matter in the same light and console yourself with that knowledge, and cultivate a greater spirit of service.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 10710
358. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

July 5, 1935

CHI. PRABHA,

You have caused me much pain this time. How long would it have taken to drop me a postcard with two lines? I hope you have obtained Babuji’s permission. From your description of the conditions, I can see that it was absolutely necessary for you to stay on there. It is raining here daily. My diet remains the same. My health is good. I have not taken my weight recently. Ba and Manu have gone to Delhi. Rajendrababu was here on a visit some time ago. Amtussalaam is still here. Lakshmi has come from Bardoli.

I don’t have time to write more.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3451

359. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

WARDHA,

July 5, 1935

CHI. LILAVATI,

If you do not follow the corrections and the notes, do ask me. Please improve your handwriting. Make the letters large and keep your words separate.

I do not have any trouble [in correcting your lessons]. But I will appoint another teacher. Meanwhile keep on sending [your lessons] to me.²

1. Normally we can say that ‘s’ is used for living things and ‘of’ for non-living things; e.g., ‘a man’s leg’ but ‘a leg of a table’.

2. ‘Had’ is used for an action which is already over before another; e.g., ‘He had eaten when I went to him’; but ‘He ate at 10 o’clock’. ‘Had eaten’ is past perfect tense; ‘ate’ is simple past tense.

¹ Wife of Maruti Sharma
² What follows is given on the margin of the addressee’s letter.
3. ‘Have’ is used as an auxiliary verb as well as the main verb. As the main verb it denotes possession or relationship, e.g., ‘He has a box.’—possession; ‘He has a son.’—relationship.

When an action is complete, forms of ‘have’ are used but when it is intended merely to suggest the past tense, forms of ‘be’ are used. For examples, see the second note.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9254. Also C.W. 10127. Courtesy: Lilavati Asar

360. LETTER TO RAMDAS GANDHI

July 5, 1935

CHI. RAMDAS.

I understand now why you have taken up the printing-press work. May it give you satisfaction. My life has been spent in food and other experiments and the experiments will continue still. I believe they have done no harm either to me or to the world because, whenever I have discovered an error, I have corrected it. The neem leaves experiment was useful and is still continuing. Even the tamarind experiment has done me nothing but good. But I ate it in rather excessive quantity and therefore suffered for three quarters of an hour. After that I have suffered no ill-effects. It was even necessary to eat it in excessive quantity. Ba and Manu1 have safely reached Delhi. Kana is getting along so so . . . 2 besides being something of a vagabond of course. I have gone through the articles you have procured. I thought . . . 3 they have no force in them. They may certainly be regarded harmless .... 4 You should procure articles written in very good Gujarati . . . 5

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Mrs. Sumitra Kulkarni Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

1 Harilal Gandhi’s daughter
2, 3 & 4 A few words at these places are illegible in the source.
5 A Gujarati saying, meaning that it is futile to give advice to one who is not willing to listen to it.
361. LETTER TO JANAKIDEVI AGRAWAL

July 5, 1935

DEAR SISTER,

I, on my part, have instructed Moolchandji not to exercise any compulsion on you. And you too should treat him in the same way. You should have all liberty in respect of food. But as you cannot bring yourself to accept the mode of life followed by Moolchandji you may live separately and do as you please. This, however, does not absolve him of the duty of providing for your maintenance.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 836

362. HARIJAN CONFERENCE

On 16th June a Conference of workers in the Harijan cause was organized in Mysore under the auspices of the Mysore State Harijan Sevak Sangh. Shrimati Rameshwari Nehru presided. The following message was sent by the Dewan, Sir Mirza Ismail:

I am very glad to hear that the Mysore State Harijan Sevak Sangh is Organizing a conference of workers engaged in the noble cause of the uplift of the Depressed Classes, better known as Harijans, to review the result of the past year’s work and to settle future lines of action. I need hardly say that I wish the conference all possible success. The keen solicitude of His Highness the Maharaja and his Government for the well being and prosperity of the people extends, as is well known, to his subjects irrespective of their caste, creed or race. The social and educational uplift of the Harijans, who form no small section of His Highness’s subjects, is therefore a matter which has received and will continue to receive the active sympathy and support of His Highness’s Government. Various measures have been adopted by Government in recent years to ameliorate the conditions of this community. In this task the co-operation of the public and of such organizations as the Harijan Sevak Sangh of Bangalore is to be welcomed. I wish this Sangh all success in its labours to create a higher tone in the social life of the community and to enable it to play its part in the public life of the State.

1 Wife of Moolchand Agrawal
2 Vide “Letter to Moolchand Agrawal”, 23-6-1935
The conference passed many resolutions of local importance from which I take the following:

This conference appeals to Government to be pleased to grant the following additional facilities.

1. Lands for the starting of agricultural colonies in the Irwin Canal Area and also under the Vani Vilas Sagara.
2. Sites for the extension of Harijan quarters in the villages.
3. Definite allotment in the budget for the provision of drinking-water wells to Harijans in the villages.
4. Increased grants to aided Harijan hostels, scholarships and exemption from the payment of sports and library fees.
5. Preferential appointments to the Harijans who have passed the high schools and college examinations.
6. Appointment of a Special Office with staff and budget provisions to look after the moral and material improvement of the Harijans in the State.
7. Creation of an Educational Trust Fund and formation of an advisory board.
8. Starting of a free boarding-home for Harijan girls in Mysore.
9. Permission to the Harijans to enter and worship in all temples under the management of the Muzrai Department.

Let us hope that these reasonable requests will be granted by the authorities and perfect equality established between the Harijans and the other citizens of the State.

Harijan, 6-7-1935

363. MISSION OF KHADI

The mission of khadi is not merely to supply the townspeople with fashionable khadi that will vie with the mill manufactures and thus like other industries supply a few artisans with employment, but is to become a supplementary industry to agriculture. This mission still remains unfulfilled.

In order that it may fulfil this mission, it has to be self-sustained and its use must spread in the villages. Just as the villagers cook their own roti or rice so must they make their own khadi for personal use. The surplus, if any, they may sell. This mission cannot be delivered unless the khadi service changes its complexion and the Spinners’ Association its policy.

Every member of the khadi service should know the processes through which cotton passes before it becomes khadi.
When emphasis is put on self-sufficient khadi, commercial production will be restricted to the real wants of townspeople. It will then pass into the hands of private businessmen instead of being centralized in the hands of the Association.

In trying to commercialize khadi, the Association has been hitherto dominated by the ruling prices. Thus the spinnings wage has been the worst of all the wages for any form of labour. They have also varied with provinces. Therefore the prices of khadi too have varied with the provinces. It is all very well for more profiteering bodies to countenance and even stimulate cut-throat competition, but associations whose sole purpose is to serve the pauper millions cannot afford to join such competition. There is no reason why a spinner in Bihar should get less than her sister in Gujarat. No doubt prices vary in different provinces because the standard of living varies. But the Association cannot afford to take things as they are. It has to change them, if they are unjust. There is no reason why the price of one hour’s labour in spinning should be less than one in weaving. There is more skill involved in spinning than in simple weaving. Simple weaving is a purely mechanical process. Simplest spinning requires the cunning of the hand. Yet the spinner gets one pie per hour against the weaver’s minimum of six; the carder too does better, almost as well as the weaver. There are historical reasons for this state of things. But they are not just merely because they are historical. Time has come for the Association to equalize if not also to stabilize the prices of all labour regulated by it. This, in many cases, will mean inviting the weaver to lower his scale of wages where he gets more than one anna per hour. Time may never come when all the weavers will voluntarily consent to the equalization process. But if the doctrine of equality of wages for all productive labour is sound, the Association must strive to approach the ideal as near as may be. Unless the whole jump is taken at once, the beginning must be made with raising the wages of spinners to a decent level for a decent hour’s work. Vinoba is experimenting with spinning at the rate of nearly nine hours per day at the same time that he is taking his classes. His output per hour should be regarded as the standard output per hour entitling the spinner to the standard wage. I hope to publish shortly the results of Vinoba’s labours.

My scheme presupposes living contact with the spinners’ life. A body that would give an unexpected rise in wages will watch the course of the nickel pieces that may be distributed. It will be useless to raise wages gratuitously if they are to be wasted in drink or extravagant marriage or other feasts. The mission of khadi is almost like that of untouchability. The so-called higher classes have for ages utterly neglected the lower classes with the result that the latter do not know the art of living. They think that they are mere ‘hewers of wood and drawers of water’. The so-called upper classes have not escaped the punishment of their misdeeds, for they too do not know the art of living and would perish today if they had no help from the ‘lower classes’. The mission of khadi is to correct this double evil by inviting the ‘upper classes’ to [do] penance towards the ‘lower classes’.

Let the village industries workers, too, see to it that the villagers occupied in the various industries organized by them get the minimum wage that may be fixed by the Association.

_Harijan, 6-7-1935_

364. ON DIARY-WRITING¹

Your diary must contain every particular about your health. It must also contain the particulars of work done every hour, if the work could be so divided. You might also make it a mirror of your own mind, recording your thoughts and dreams, good and bad, and you must also make it a record of your acts, good and bad. This mirror of the self is helpful for a purification of one’s self. One’s bowels must move regularly in order to keep one in a fit condition. That is physical purification. Just as this physical purification is necessary for the health of the body, even so spiritual purification is necessary for the health of the soul. In fact the necessity for physical cleanliness is in inverse proportion to the necessity for spiritual cleanliness. That is to say, spiritual cleanliness means automatic physical cleanliness. Have we not heard that a yogi’s body emits a fragrant smell? The ‘fragrant’ smell means here the absence of bad smell.

_Harijan, 6-7-1935_

¹ This is extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter”. Gandhiji, who was examining the diaries of Ashram members, gave this advice when one of them asked him “what particulars he should enter in the diary and what not”.

232 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
HARIJAN WELLS FUNDS

This week is published an estimate of wells required in the Province of Delhi for Harijans. The reader will note what the wells mean to sweeper-class Harijans. They are debarred from using even the wells set apart for the other classes of Harijans. Of course this is not peculiar to the Delhi Province. The reiteration of the grievance emphasizes the importance of this special charity. I hope that the heads of provincial Sanghs will make local collections which may be earmarked for use in their own provinces to the extent required.

TAMIL HOLY BOOK

Thiruvalluvar was a Tamil Saint. Tradition says that he was a Harijan weaver. He is said to have lived in the first century of the Christian era. He gave us the famous Thirukural—holy maxims described by the Tamilians as the Tamil Veda and by M. Ariel as ‘one of the highest and purest expressions of human thought’. The maxims number 1,330. These have been translated into many languages. There are several English translations. The late V.V.S. Iyer, who founded the Sharmadevi Ashram for the service of Harijans among others, produced the latest translation. He died leaving Sharmadevi and his book to the nation. Sharmadevi now belongs to the Harijan Sevak Sangh. There are about 1,000 copies still left of the second edition of the translation. The price of the book was Rs. 5 originally. It has now been reduced to Rs. 2/8. The book has a substantial preface written by the translator. The proceeds will be utilized for the Harijan service. To whet the reader’s appetite I quote two maxims at random:

Take not away from any living thing the life that is sweet unto all, even if it be to save thine own.

Compare Goldsmith’s:

No flocks that range the valley free
To slaughter I condemn,
Taught by the Power that pities me
I learn to pity them.

The other selection is:
Death is like unto sleep and life is like the waking after that sleep.

Compare Wordsworth's:

Death is but a sleep and a forgetting.

The book can be had on application to the Secretary, Tamil Nad Harijan Sevak Sangh, Teppakulam, Trichinopoly.

Harijan, 6-7-1935

366. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

WARDHA,
June 6, 1935

MY DEAR MARY.

(Bapu insisted on my calling you by your Christian name when he heard me say that I was going to write to you as “Miss Barr”!

I am writing to you on his behalf. He has your letter of the 2nd instant. It is his desire that you should not leave Miraj until the doctors have declared you quite cured and fit enough to return to your work. He agrees entirely with your plan—when you do return—of returning via Secunderabad, instead of by Poona. Bapu feels also that your teeth and eyes should receive the necessary attention from the specialists who have treated you before—so you must consult them when it is possible for you to do so.

Regarding Maria Petersen's letter Bapu wishes me to say that there is no likelihood of his going to Denmark . . .

With love from
AMRIT KAUR

From a photostat: G.N. 6052

367. LETTER TO MANILAL AND SUSHILA GANDHI

June 6, 1935

CHI. MANILAL AND SUSHILA.

I have your letters. I understand the difficulty about eradicating malaria. The task is certainly difficult if all around the place there are plantations of sugarcane. But one thing about mosquitoes is that they do not fly beyond a certain distance. I think you are not likely to be affected by plantations situated at a distance of a hundred acres from your place. Be that as it may, make sure that no water or moisture collects around the place. Since the houses are on top of a hill, there is no possibility, either, of water accumulating around them. The food should be light. You should eat green leaves like salad, etc. Constipation should never be ignored. Mosquito-nets should be used. I think with the help of these precautions you can keep off malaria. I was surprised to learn that Lakshmi could send khadi made from the yarn spun by me. May I take it then that I need not send anything now? If you two cannot spare any time to teach Sita, then I should think that there is some big defect somewhere in your life. If, willingly or unwillingly, you accept the responsibility of parenthood, then it also becomes your duty to train the children’s body, mind, etc., and you ought to spare some time for that, however busy your life may be. Thanks to God’s kindness, children do get some education from parents whether they know it or not. Whether you want it or not, your children are bound to imitate your manners and thoughts. Even for that reason, parents are obliged to keep their thoughts and actions absolutely pure. If your speech is pure, that of your children will be pure. If you pray regularly, your children also will do the same. Whatever things and in whatever manner you eat, your children will do the same. What remains then is instruction in letters. How much time can it consume? With a little care, you can easily impart that to children while they are playing about. But then, there should be a firm determination on your part to impart education to your children yourselves. You should first acquire in some measure the knowledge that you want to impart to your children. And the result will be that your children will get valuable knowledge in the normal course of their daily life, such as they can never get in schools. If you spend your time in this way instead of in idle gossip, then you will increase your knowledge also and, what is more, your whole life will become more disciplined.

Forget Sorabji and his conduct. If you try to understand the affair about halwa, you will find it amusing. You should learn to get entertainment even from such malicious stories.

Harilal seems to have gone off the rails once again. Maybe he had never returned to the rails and was merely pretending reformation when he came here. But, instead of levelling such a serious charge against him, assume that he has now gone off the rails. This is only my suspicion as yet. I do not know what the truth is. It will be known in a few days.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4839. Also C.W. 1251. Courtesy: Sushila Gandhi

Vide also “Letter to Vallabhbhai Patel”, 3-7-1935
368. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

July 6, 1935

CHI. LILAVATI,

I got your very strange and sad letter. Only two days ago I had from you a letter full of hope, which gave me an impression that you were now completely composed. But today’s letter seems to have been written by another Lilavati as it were. How did such a profound change take place in just two days’ time? You are staying in Rajkot of your own free will. I had even suggested that you might study in Bombay. It has always been my wish that you should not overstrain yourself. What has happen all at once to fill you with such profound despair? If you find the atmosphere there full of selfishness, it will hardly be different anywhere else. It is in your hands to create and preserve the atmosphere that you desire. Have patience and be calm. But if your patience and endurance are exhausted, leave Rajkot by all means. You are entirely free. The relationship with me does not clip anybody’s wings. On the contrary, it gives fresh wings to a person if he has none. Hence, you can fly wherever you want to. Whether you can stay with me here is a different question altogether. We shall think over it if an opportunity occurs. Do not ever give up Narandas’s protection. You will repent if you do that. I cannot suggest a better guide for you than he is.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9334. Also C.W. 6609.Courtesy: Lilavati Asar

369. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

July 6, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

Read the accompanying letter and do what is necessary. What has happened to Lilavati? She is extremely agitated. She is a good girl, but one can never be sure when she will let one down. Still I am at ease since you are by her side.¹

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U. II. Also C.W. 8460. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

¹ Vide also the preceding item.
370. LETTER TO PRABHASHANKAR PATTANI

July 6, 1935

SUJNA BHAISHRI,

I wish to write this letter with the left hand for a change. Whatever one might think, it is in India we shall find our happiness in the poor comforts of our huts. Can we ever be happy by going abroad? I am glad that you read the Harijan story twice despite your worries. Don’t mind what happens now. I hope you are taking care of your health. Worrying won’t solve this problem. Don’t you know that Ramabehn is by your side? I wanted to write this last sentence differently but wrote it thus. But since it is apt, I am not revising it. She is a sort of a philosopher, but just as we do not know God who is very near us, we often do not know the friend who gives us real solace. Hence, if you do not feel reassured in her presence, I have suggested in the sentence above that you have no cause for worry so long as she is with you. She is the right person to bear the burden of your suffering.

Vandemataram from
MOHANDAS

371. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

WARDHA,

July 7, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

Where is the need for you to reason any further with Harilal? Can we compel him to be virtuous? It, therefore, seems to me that you need do nothing except pass his letters to me and mine to him. You may see what you can do when he repents again.

Kanu recovered from fever long ago. Please rest assured that he is perfectly at ease here. Neither you nor Jamna nor Purushottam need worry in the least about him. He is working constantly under my eyes.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8461. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

1 Addressee’s wife
2 Addressee’s son
372. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

Monday, July 8, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

These are the remains of the paper sent to you. Never believe what the papers say of me unless you have confirmation from here. I did howl from pain for 45 minutes. When it was over, there was no weakness felt, no weight lost. It was an overdose of neem leaf. I was trying its maximum capacity. Such experiments must be tried on self. My experiments have never done permanent harm. I have made rich discoveries for myself and companions. In the early days my teeth suffered. But there too, there was nothing wrong with the experiment. It was my ignorance of early days. If our doctors knew the properties of indigenous foods and drugs, the way of persons like me would be simple and easy.

I shall have more paper made for you.

Believe me, I am quite fit.

I had to do the writing myself today—Monday!

Love to you all.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 3540. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6349

373. LETTER TO K. M. MUNSHI

July 8, 1935

BHAI MUNSHI,

Your article is good, but it should be in Hindi. The English version should be as its translation. If this is not done, you will be making a wrong beginning. The writers in the North will not tolerate English. Have you made it clear that the monthly¹ will be printed in Hindi? I hope articles in other languages also will be printed in the Devanagari script. If I am right in this assumption, you should make the point clear in your article.

I like the idea of an advisory board. If I am to be the president in my official capacity, then there is no question of accepting or declining. If I am to be appointed President afresh, I would certainly hesitate. What place can I have among scholars? I like to remain within my sphere.

¹ Hansa

If it is possible to elect a new President, Vidhu Shekhar Shastri of Santiniketan or Shri Joshi of Karve University will deserve the honour. I hear that the latter is a great scholar. I do not know him personally. Think over this suggestion objectively. My hesitation does not spring in the least from false modesty. My literary ability is practically nil. Being gifted with common sense, I can make good use of whatever little ability I have. After you send me the brochure, I will write a brief ‘Foreword’ for it. For the present, I would like to see the advertisements. We shall think of some restrictions by and by. Personally, I would be for accepting advertisements only of books, education, etc. What connection can a purely literary paper have with soap or hand-made stick? or khadi? Advertisements of hand-made pens or paper or pictures would be all right. We may freely accept advertisements of foreign books. But I do not insist on my own views prevailing in this matter. We shall have whatever restrictions I can persuade you to accept. My health is excellent.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 7578. Courtesy: K. M. Munshi

374. LETTER TO SAIYED KASIM ALI

WARDHA,
July 8, 1935

Bhai Kasim Ali,

I am helpless. Village uplift can be brought about only by silent service, not by stage-plays. I do not find your play with me. Did you send it under registration? Anyway, I am hunting for it. You ought to find some occupation there itself if you are in financial straits. Even otherwise it is not the proper thing to earn one’s living from writing alone.

M. K. Gandhi

SaIyed Saheb Kasim Ali, Visharad
Betul

From a photostat of the Hindi: C.W. 9752

1 Vide “Message to Hansa”, 5-8-1935,
375. LETTER TO B. R. AMBEDKAR

WARDHA,
July 9, 1935

DEAR DR. AMBEDKAR,

As you may know, Rajaram Bhole is with me just now. He wants me to advise him as to the course he should take. Regard being had as to his precarious health, I have advised that it would be better if he could reconcile himself to some Harijan service against . . . 1 to feed and clothe himself. The other alternative is to take up a business line. I see difficulties in his taking it up. He must then attend regular hours and be prepared to do best work which is fatal for a man who is in perpetual fear of developing active T.B. But I told him that he should take your advice and be guided by you. He tells me he has already written to you. I know he will receive your reply in due course. But I would like you, for my sake, please, to hasten your reply so as to enable me to tell Rajaram what to do.

Yours sincerely,

DR. AMBEDKAR

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

376. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

MAGANWADI, WARDHA,
July 9, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

I got your letter. I had in fact washed my hands of him2 after I got his last letter. I fear that he had started drinking from the very beginning. The day he had sought my permission to take brandy as medicine for malaria, I had concluded that he had started drinking again. Hence there is no question of my being shocked at all. Since he

---

1 Omission as in the source
2 Harilal Gandhi
had come to me, I trusted him and would do so again, but I can do no more than that.

You certainly did well in not sending a wire. Don’t spend any money for sending him here. Leave him to his fate.

I have already sent Lilavati’s letter to you as also my reply.¹

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II Also C.W. 8462. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

377. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

July 9, 1935

CHI. LILAVATI,

I hope you have calmed down. What had upset you? You would not be so easily upset if you don’t do anything against your nature. May God give you wisdom. Pray to Him every day, both in the morning as soon as you get up and in the evening before going to bed, to give you mental strength.²

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9335. Also C.W. 6610. Courtesy: Lilavati Asar

¹ Vide “Letter to Lilavati Asar”, 6-7-1935
² Vide also “Letter to Lilavati Asar”, 6-7-1935
378. LETTER TO HARI GOVIND GOVIL

July 10, 1935

Bhai Hari Govil,

The book you sent has been received. My thanks to your wife. She can write whenever she pleases.

What you say about a dictionary and a Hindi primer is quite right. I shall do what is possible.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 1022.

379. LETTER TO SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA

WARDHA,
July 10, 1935

Bhai Satisbabu,

Your letter. How is it possible for me to keep aloof from the Barkamta affair? If the Charkha Sangh receives any complaint regarding khadi the matter perforce has to be cleared up. Shankerlal is ill and he is moreover upset over this dispute. Therefore he has referred it to me. Annada’s letters too are pouring in. So the matter has to be settled one way or the other. In my opinion you and Annada should both make your statements. Next, each of you should answer the other’s allegation. If, after that, there is need for you two to be called, I shall send for you. Otherwise I shall simply give my award. Isn’t this quite the right thing?

As regards bones I appreciate the process adopted in Indore. Some nitrogen is of course wasted. But does it matter? If the bones are fired carefully they can be easily ground in an ordinary mill. Hundreds of maunds of it can be ground to powder in the lime-grinding mill and this manure will be marketable.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1711

1 andhiji had visited the plant earlier in April.
380. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

WARDHA,

July 11, 1935

CHI. PREMA,

I got your letter just now. Since it was written on the occasion of your birthday, have my blessings first.

What a woman you are! You don’t say which birthday you celebrated. Your noble aspirations will assuredly be fulfilled. One who strives for good aims never strives in vain, and one who strives for evil aims never succeeds. The latter only seems to succeed sometimes.

About other things, when I have more time.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 10375. Also C.W. 6814. Courtesy: Premabehn Kantak

381. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

July 11, 1935

CHI. LILAVATI,

I got your letter. Do come over during the holidays. We shall consider the matter then. I am writing to Narandas about your pay. Do you know what staying with me means? It means living like a labourer, learning whatever you can while labouring and eating whatever food you are given. If you can be satisfied with this, then come. You won’t have a separate room here. This manner of living is difficult for me, for Ba, and would be so for everybody. But you may see for yourself when you come here. For the present, patiently go on doing the work assigned to you there.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 10107. Courtesy: Lilavati Asar

1 Vide the following item.
382. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

July 11, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

For the present Harilal may be considered as lost to us . . . . I get Lilavati’s letters. Enclosed please find one for her.² We may pay her out of the school funds if that is possible. If this is the only cause of her discontent, remove it.

Do give Mathew physical labour. What is the duration of each class?

Kanu is keeping very well.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8463. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

383. LETTER TO PARIKSHITLAL L. MAJMUDAR

MAGANWADI, WARDHA,
July 12, 1935

Bhai Parikshitlal,

Ambalalbhai must have reached there now. He has become a handicap, but that does not mean that he has got exemption from having to contribute to the purse occasionally. You may, therefore, go and explain to him the whole budget. Accept whatever he gives and write to me and tell me what he says. I will discuss the matter with Shankerlal when he comes.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3960. Also C.W. 126. Courtesy: Parikshitlal L. Majmudar

¹ Omission as in the source
² Vide the preceding item.
384. LETTER TO HEMPRABHA DAS GUPTA

July 12, 1935

CHI HEMPRABHA,

Your long letter gave me much joy. If I had not read it I could not have understood your mind. Your letter expresses anger, agitation and pride. To assert that men controlling the Charkha Sangh have spoilt it all, that the Pratishthan alone has accomplished everything, yet has had to suffer all hardships and that Annada and others bear animosity is not correct and it proceeds from pride. Regarding all this I shall not answer through a letter. You have to come here; only then will you and I, too, gain peace of mind. You must bring Satisbabu with you but it does not matter if he cannot come. The decision taken will be conveyed to him when the time comes and of course put into effect. Do come over at your earliest; your health, too, will benefit.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1712

385. ADVICE TO KEISHO

[Before July 13, 1935]

It is indeed swadeshi cloth for you, but not the cloth that you should go in for in India. “In Rome do as the Romans do” is not a meaningless saying. We must try to observe the manners and customs of the country whose salt we eat. When I was in Africa, I tried to use as many things as I could, made by African hands. So unless you have any special objection, I would ask you to use khadi, Khadi is no doubt dearer, but then you may try to do with less cloth than you need.

Harijan, 13-7-1935

1 This is extracted from “Weekly Letter” by Mahadev Desai who had explained that the advice was given when Keisho, a Japanese monk staying at the Ashram, purchased Japanese cloth. Vide also “Speech at Ashram, Wardha”, Before 20-7-1935.
386. IDEALS AND PRACTICE

There is an eternal struggle going on in us between the powers of light and powers of darkness, those of truth and of untruth, between God and the Devil. We have to carry on the struggle as best as we may, but we have always to be conscious of our limitations. Arjuna was on the point of forgetting his limitations and Lord Krishna prevented him from doing so. Ahimsa is the law of life, but if I have not shed the fear of serpents what am I to do? My mind has already killed the serpent, only the flesh is weak. Your duty says: ‘Kill it. Give up the vain attempt of refraining from killing it.’ The same is the case about brahmacharya and grihasthashrama. Lifelong brahmacharya is a consummation devoutly to be wished, but he who cannot control his passions, whose mind and sense lust after the flesh, must enter grihasthashrama and a pure householder’s life. For him the attempt at lifelong brahmacharya is vain. He will not give up his faith in the ideal, but he will approach it by gradual practice in self-restraint.

_Harijan, 13-7-1935_

387. PUNJAB HARIJANS AND WELLS

I gladly publish the foregoing. I am asking Lala Mohanlal, the Secretary of the Punjab Harijan Sevak Sangh, to deal with the letter. All the needs of Harijans in the matter of wells that come under the observation of the local Sangh will certainly be brought to the notice of the Punjab Sanitary Board. The Harijan Sevak Sangh’s policy is not to duplicate the work done by the Government but wherever

---

1 This is extracted from “Weekly Letter” by Mahadev Desai, who had explained: “In a recent article entitled “All Life Is One”, 22-6-1935Gandhiji answered all questions directed at some of the seeming contradictions between his belief and action. In reply to similar questions addressed to him privately he sent a reply presumably “Letter to Krishnachandra”, 3-7-1935 which makes his position and those of aspirants clearer, if possible.”

This was a letter dated June 28, 1935, from K. A. Rahman, Secretary, Sanitary Board, Punjab, not reproduced here. The addressee, who had read an article about drinking-water for Harijans in the Punjab in Civil and Military Gazette, dated June 27, 1935, had pointed out that “in recent years lakhs of rupees have been spent in providing good drinking-water for villagers” and that there was no “distinction between Harijans and non-Harijans”.

---
possible to supplement it. The Sangh is building wells only where necessity is proved. I may mention here, that though in law everywhere in British India public wells are open to Harijans in common with the others, in practice it has been found that Harijans are forcibly debarred from their use by caste Hindus and sometimes even others. Harijans dare not use these wells without inviting severe corporal punishment from caste Hindus. So far as my information goes, things are not very different in the Punjab.

_Harijan_, 13-7-1935

388. NEED FOR A STANDARD WAGE

The following questionnaire to its agents and others has been issued by the A.I.V.I.A., the answers to reach the Central Office, Wardha, before 1st August next:

It has been proposed that we should insist on the village artisan getting an adequate return for his labour in connection with all articles produced or sold under the aegis of the A.I.V.I.A. For this purpose it will be necessary to fix a working wage standard. Such standard should be the same for either sex for equal quantity of work. It may be based on an eight-hour day with a prescribed minimum output. Such wage will enter into the cost and the price should be fixed in relation to this. Ordinarily we may not be able to fix the prices in the competitive market, but we may do so for articles which do not enter into competition and for goods chosen for their special virtues which are appreciated by the consumers.

This questionnaire is sent out to invite your opinion on the following points:

1. Do you think it feasible to fix a minimum daily wage and ensure it to the workers by fixing prices?
2. Should we fix our ultimate standard and work up towards it, or should we start with a low minimum and then raise it as we proceed?
3. On what basis should it be arrived at? Can you suggest a subsistence wage taking into consideration only food for the time being, as clothing should be made by personal effort? Will half an anna per hour be too low?

Associations like the A.I.S.A., and the A.I.V.I.A., and such philanthropic institutions may not follow the commercial maxim of buying in the cheapest market and selling in the dearest. The A.I.S.A. has certainly tried to buy in the cheapest market. Of this however in

---

1 All-India Village Industries’ Association
2 All-India Spinners’ Association
another column. Wishing to give the A.I.V.I.A. the benefit of my experience of the evolution of khadi, I initiated a discussion about the wages received by the artisans working under its influence. The result was the questionnaire.

It has already been discovered that the tendency among agents is to produce the required articles at as low prices as possible. Where may the axe be laid if not upon the artisan’s earnings? Unless, therefore, a minimum rate be fixed, there is every danger of the village artisan suffering, though it is for his sake that the A.I.V.I.A. has been brought into being.

We have exploited the poor patient villagers for too long. Let not A.I.V.I.A. intensify the exploitation under the guise of philanthropy. Its aim is not to produce village articles as cheap as possible; it is to provide the workless villagers with work at a living wage.

It has been argued that anything that may raise the prices of articles made in the villages will defeat the purpose for which the A.I.V.I.A. has been brought into being, for, it is said, nobody will buy the village articles if the prices are too high. Why should the price of an article be considered too high, if it only provides a living wage for the manufacturer? The buying public has to be instructed to know the abject condition of the people. If we are to do justice to the toiling millions we must render to them their due; we must pay them a wage that will sustain them; we must not take advantage of their helplessness and pay wage that would hardly give them one full meal.

It is quite clear that the Association must refuse to compete with mill-manufactures. We may not take part in a game in which we know we must lose. In terms of metal, the big combines, whether foreign or indigenous, will always be able to outbid the effort of the human hand. What the Association seeks to do is to substitute false and non-human economics by the true and human. Not killing competition, but life-giving co-operation, is the law of the human being. Ignoring the emotion is to forget that man has feelings. Not the good of the few, not even the good of the many, but it is the good of all that we are made to promote, if we are ‘made in His own image’.

A philanthropic body like the A.I.V.I.A. cannot shirk a consideration of the problems involved in the questionnaire. If the true solution appears to be impracticable, it must be its endeavour to make it practicable. Truth is ever practicable. Thus considered the programme of the Association may fittingly be called adult education.

1 Vide the following item.

And if the Association is to secure for the artisan under its care a living wage, it must also pry into his domestic budget, and trace the course of every coin that is paid.

The most difficult question to determine would be the minimum of the living wage. I have suggested eight annas for eight hours’ strenuous labour converted into a given quantity of the particular goods turned out by an artisan of good ability. Eight annas is a mere token representing a certain quantity of necessaries of life. If in a family of five there are two full workers they would earn at the proposed rate Rs. 30 per month allowing no holiday and no sickness gap. Thirty rupees per month is no extravagant income for five mouths. The method here proposed necessarily ignores the distinction of sex or age. But every referee will draw upon his own personal experience and report accordingly.

Harajan, 13-7-1935
389. ALL-INDIA SPINNERS’ ASSOCIATION

What is true of the artisans working through the A.I.V.I.A., is equally true of those who are working through the A.I.S.A. Only the A.I.V.I.A. has to write on a clean slate. The A.I.S.A. has to undo a tradition of fifteen years’ standing if it has to introduce a uniform minimum. In helping the numerous spinners, it has also to deal with weavers, one-tenth of the number of spinners, besides carders, ginners and others. The wages of each class vary. The difference between those earned by weavers and those earned by spinners would appear to be too great to admit of equality. Whereas a spinner gets two pies per hour, a weaver gets one anna at the lowest and not unoften two. To bring the spinners to 12 pies from two is a very big problem, especially when it is remembered that they number nearly one lac and half.

But the Association to be worthy of its trust has to develop enough courage to do the right thing. Difficulties are there to be faced, not to cower us. We must trust those who buy khadi for the love of Daridranarayana to pay a higher price for it than they have done hitherto. If the trust is misplaced we must face a fall, however big, in sales. Those who love khadi will buy it at any cost if they know that ninety-five rupees out of one hundred go into the pockets of the Daridranarayana.

But after all the commercial use of khadi is its secondary and least use. Not more than one crore persons, i.e., city people, would need to buy khadi. These can be easily and comfortably clothed by twenty lacs of full-time artisans. The primary use of khadi is to find supplementary employment for the peasantry. They have to be taught to spin their own yarn and even weave it themselves or have it woven. They become their producers and buyers or rather users even as they are their own cooks and eaters. This work we have hardly touched seriously as yet. Shri Banker is quietly and slowly organizing the change. Whilst that is being done, it is as well to set ourselves right by the spinners by offering them an adequate wage. Is it to be eight annas per day or less? Whatever the limit, what is to be the quantity of yarn expected in one hour to qualify the spinner to receive the given wage? The same question has to be solved for ginners, carders, weavers and all those who are today working in the manufacture of khadi.
Will those who are interested in khadi and are at all conversant with the science favour me with their views on the proposed change in the scale of wages? If they favour the change, they will also say what minimum they will fix.

_Harijan_, 13-7-1935

390. MEMBERS BEWARE

Sjt. Kumarappa sends me the following for publication:

The ordinary members are reminded that they are required to send in their reports to the Secretary regularly every quarter under the Bye-Law No. 11 which reads as follows:

“Every ordinary member of the Association shall send to the Secretary a report of the work done by him every quarter so as to reach the Central Office not later than one month after the expiry of the quarter. If no report is received for three consecutive quarters from any ordinary member, such member shall cease to be a member of the Association.”

Such ordinary members as have not sent in their reports hitherto are requested to submit an account of their work done up to 30th June, 1935 without further delay.

Sjt. Kumarappa is a vigilant Secretary and so is the Chairman Sjt. Jajooji. They both believe that the rules of an institution should be enforced or repealed. As there is no likelihood of the above reasonable rule being repealed, it is to be hoped that the members will carry out the rule both in the spirit and to the letter.

_Harijan_, 13-7-1935

391. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL JOSHI

WARDHA,

_July 13, 1935_

CHI. CHHAGANLAL (JOSHI),

I welcomed your letter. I had thought that Narandas and you were now getting along well with each other. But I see that I was mistaken. I was very glad that you wrote frankly. I have received a letter regarding the school there. I am inquiring into the matter. Have you told Narandas what you think? I see from your letter that you are inclined to sympathize with the teachers who have left. Do you know all that they demand? Have you discussed the whole problem with Nanalal?

Bapa' tells me in his letter that there is complete understanding now between Jivanlal and you. Your letter raises a doubt in my mind. Let me know the truth.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5532

392. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

_July 13, 1935_

BHAI GHANSHYAMDAS,

I have your long letter; it is good and I notice nothing wrong in it. Nevertheless I have grave apprehension that things will fizzle out if any conditions are laid down such as release of the prisoners and detenus, abolition of deportation to the Andamans, restoration of the satyagrahi’s lands. It might be considered improper at this juncture. These suggestions may well come from a person invited for consultations. If the present atmosphere continues, I see no hope of an agreement. All their amiable talk with you seems to have an underlying implication that only the existing state of things will be accepted. If the fear is not groundless it is impossible to reach an agreement; I can do nothing more at present. But it does not mean that you should give up the efforts you are making. You should go ahead with your endeavour; the outcome lies only with God.

You are keeping well, I hope.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From Hindi: C.W. 7972. Courtesy: G.D. Birla

1 Amritlal V. Thakkar
393. LETTER TO LAKSHMI NIVAS BIRLA

July 13, 1935

CHI. LAKSHMI NIVAS

I have your letter. A letter for Father is enclosed, post it by air mail. All are well I hope.

Blessings from
BAPU

From Hindi: C.W. 8011. Courtesy: G. D. Birla

394. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

WARDHA,
July 14, 1935

CHI. SHARMA,

Enclosed is the letter from Mr. Gregg giving an idea of the situation there. But have no worry. The fees if required will be paid. Someone had come here. He says that Kellogg is not now held in such high esteem as some others. I shall find out their names, addresses and other particulars.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 3151

395. LETTER TO LACEY

WARDHA,
July 15, 1935

DEAR MR. LACEY,

I thank you for your letter. Your question is so important that without mentioning your name I have ventured to have on it an article for Harijan. I enclose herewith an advance copy of it. I hope you will make no public reference to it before its publication on Saturday.

Yours sincerely,

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
396. LETTER TO PADMAJA NAIDU

WARDHA,
July 15, 1935

DEAR PLAYMATE,

How stupid of you not to have broken your journey because I was silent. You did not need to hear my voice. And you could have made sure yourself that I was not ill. I expect better behaviour next time.

Love.

BAPU

[PS.]

How is the Shuaib family?

MISS PADMAJA NAIDU
C/O SHUAIB QURESHI
PRIME MINISTER
BHIPAL

From the original: Padmaja Naidu Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

397. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

July 15, 1935

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I got both your letters. Obtain Babuji’s permission and stay there as long as you wish. Since we shall be meeting soon, I don’t write more. I can’t think of anything which I should like you to bring with you from there. I hope you will see Vallabhbhai. Ramdas also is in Bombay. His address is: 1, Ash Lane, Fort.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Ba is in Delhi.

From a photostat of the Gujarati G.N. 3447
398. LETTER TO BEHRAMJI KHAMBHATTA

July 15, 1935

BHAJ KHAMBHATTA,

Please send me a copy of the letter you wrote about the hospital. I hope your health is better everyday.

Blessings to both of you from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 6610. Also C. W. 4400. Courtesy: Tehmina Khambhatta

399. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

July 15, 1935

1. When ‘have’ means to get we can in many cases use ‘get’; e.g., ‘I must have it’ or ‘I must get it.’
2. There is very little difference between ‘must’ and ‘have’.
3. We can say either ‘If you had done this’ or ‘Had you done this’, i.e., if we use ‘had’ in the place of ‘if’ the meaning remains unchanged. You will understand this better when you use it.
4. The article ‘a’ must be used before a noun denoting countable things. ‘A’ is taken to mean as one, therefore ‘the’ is used for the plural.

Where ‘that’ is used, we can use ‘the’; e.g., ‘The or that man whom you know is here.’ If there are more persons, then ‘The or those men whom you know are here.’

You must have calmed down now. I had stomach-ache one day for a short while as I had taken neem juice in excess. It had subsided very soon.

BAPU

From a phototstat of the Gujarati: G. N. 9254. Also C.W. 10101. Courtesy: Lilavati Asar
400. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

July 15, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

Forget Harilal completely now. I have almost forgotten him.

Enclosed is a lesson¹ for Lilavati.

Vajubhai has sent one more letter as a reminder. I shall send it to you, if necessary, after I get your reply.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

What is your advice regarding Dhiru’s request. I suppose you know that he wants to go to Santiniketan.

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C. W. 8464. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

401. LETTER TO NARAHARI D. PARIKH

July 15, 1935

CHI. NARAHARI,

Herewith an extract from Devsharmaji’s letter which concerns you. I would advise you to engage this gentleman. That will partly satisfy your urgent need for a Hindi teacher. Write to him directly [at]: Gandhi Sevasaram, Post. Gurukul Kangri, Saharanpur District.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9085

402. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

WARDHA,

July 16, 1935

CHI. MARY,

I had your letters. I hope you are making steady progress. If you procure a knife and bamboo, a bit of broken slate and a little compass you can make a takli yourself with the compass you can get a circular disc and with the point of your knife or a nail you can pierce a clean hole in the slate disc. Try this as a recreation. We have the trinity here: Mary C.\(^1\), Mary I. i.e., Ingham and Sumitra. Mary C. grumbles that I have put her on curds for she has a little cold.

¹ Vide the preceding item.

Love.

SHRI MARY BARR
WANLESS T. B. SANATORIUM
MIRAJ

From a photostat: G.N. 6053. Also C.W. 3383. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

403. LETTER TO K.V. RATNAM

July 16, 1935

DEAR RATNAM,

I must thank you for the fountain pen you have sent me through Shri Kumarappar. I have received it and it seems to be a good substitute for the foreign pens one sees in the bazaars.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

K. V. RATNAM AND BROTHERS
RATNAM FOUNTAIN PEN WORKS
RAJAHMUNDRY

From a photostat: G.N. 816

404. LETTER TO BHAILAL PATEL

July 16, 1935

BHAJ BHAILAL,

I got your letter and the money order. You are doing excellent work. I am sending your letter\(^2\) to Harijanbandhu.

Vandemataram from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3301

\(^1\) Mary Chesley, a Canadian Quaker

\(^2\) The letter appeared under the title “Experience of a Harijan Sevak” in Harijanbandhu, 21-7-1935.
405. LETTER TO KAMALNAYAN BAJAJ

July 16, 1935

CHI. KAMALNAYAN,

I heard from your father that . . . now does not want to marry you. She was, therefore, released from the engagement. That is the only proper course for us. I hope you are undisturbed. Rest assured that your stars are fortunate, and that you will get a wife best suited for you. At present, you should devote yourself exclusively to your studies and to building your character. You have still not written to me. Improve your English. Take interest in your studies, and train your body to bear strain. Do not get tired of physical work, much less feel ashamed of it.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3050

406. LETTER TO C. F. ANDREWS

WARDHA,

July 18, 1935

MY DEAR CHARLIE,

I am glad the burden of the book is off your mind. Simla was the right place for it.

I understand what you say of Khambhatta.

As to the young Bengali, apart from the desire to learn, the proposed book will be of little value unless it has outstanding merit. I may also tell you that Dr. Pattabhi is writing the Congress history.

Yes, Jawaharlal’s discharge will be an important event. The Socialist creed would be most attractive, if the sting of compulsion was out.

Love.

MOHAN

From a photostat: G. N. 990

1 The name has been omitted.
2 The addressee had just completed his book India and Britain.
3 Vide “Letter to H. L. Sharma”, 30-6-1935
4 The Rise and Growth of the Congress in India by C. F. Andrews and Girija Mookerjee published by George Allen & Unwin Ltd. in 1938; vide also “Letter to C.F. Andrews”, 29-7-1935
5 Later published as History of the Indian National Congress
6 Owing to Kamala Nehru’s illness he was discharged from the Almora Jail on September 2, 1935 before the expiry of his full term.
407. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

July 18, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

This is just to wish you a happy time in Poona.

Of course you will do about the balance Rs. 400 what you would have done about 400 should a similar occasion arise. I wanted you to wait for me to give the word so long as you were in doubt.

I shall look forward to your arrival on 1st or 2nd August. Herewith a note' for Charlie.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 3717. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 6873

408. LETTER TO HEMPRABHA DAS GUPTA

July 18, 1935

CHI. HEMPRABHA,

You ought not to fall ill. If you have been laid up because of my letters it reflects badly on your obedience. You are not to feel hurt over anything I may say, only to get well promptly.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 1713

409. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

WARDHA,

July 19, 1935

CHI. AMBUJAM, 2

Your letters can’t tire me, for I am interested in your true happiness.

You may send the little bigger size cooker through someone coming. There is no immediate hurry.

I am glad you have a good daughter-in-law.

1 Vide the preceeding item.
2 The source has this in Hindi
I shall be relieved when I hear that Kichi’s finger is completely healed.
I hope Father is keeping good health.
Love.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat: C.W. 9603. Courtesy: S. Ambujammal

410. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

July 19, 1935

CHI. MARY,

I have no particular view on the reactions the treatment is producing. I am quite clear that having gone there, if only to do justice to the doctors there you should go through the full course. After all we must trust them to know what they are doing. You need not hurry. I hope you are otherwise well. The Marys are here, gaining experience.

We are having gentle rains daily.
Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 6054. Also C.W. 3384. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

411. SPEECH AT ASHRAM, WARDHA

[Before July 20, 1935]

I rarely say anything on the occasion of the departure of our visitors, but I do so today, first, because he is a visitor from Japan, but secondly and principally, because of the noble example he has set to us all by the way in which he lived in our midst. He has been with us for four or five months, but no one has worked with such devotion to his task and in such self-abnegation. He has worked away so mutely that we rarely noticed his presence. His absorption in his prayers was a thing to charm anyone. To repeat one mantra over and over again for

1 The source has this in Hindi
2 The speech is extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter”.
3 Keisho, the Japanese monk, was leaving the Ashram to take the place of another disciple at Calcutta

260

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
four hours in the day, not in a haphazard or perfunctory way, but with zest, devotion and concentration is an extraordinary thing. Knowing no language of India and not even English, he must have found himself an utter stranger in our midst when he came. But stranger he would be none. He began the study of Hindi and learnt it soon enough to be able to speak with us somewhat. But what I prize most is the radiance of his joy all the days he has been with us. Fancy yourself in a strange land where you know no one, where everything, including the language, manners, customs, is strange, and ask yourself if you can live as this friend has lived in the midst of us. I fancy I could not do so, nor can any one of you. He derived his joy from the inner self, I should say. For I am sure the surroundings in the midst of which he found himself were no source of such joy for him. None of us has ever seen him ruffled, ever sour or bitter. His presence everywhere radiated joy which we prize. That is why we will all miss him. We bid him a very hearty farewell and hope that he will be back in our midst as soon as he can.

_Harijan, 20-7-1935_

412. _REMARKS ON THIRD-CLASS TRAVELLING_

[Before July 20, 1935]

You simply cannot have a clean seat in an upper class with its paddings and its cushions. These absorb dirt and dust and perspiration as nothing else can, and because they afford a comfortable seat you sit on them as a matter of course. These seats are or can be washed daily and you could clean them yourself as often as you like.

_Harijan, 20-7-1935_

413. _MEANING OF NON-VIOLENCE_

An English friend sends me the following letter:

Will you please see the attached copy of a report in the _Madras Mail_, and very kindly let me know whether it reproduces your words accurately? And if it does, would you be so good as to explain how you reconcile the view here expressed with your more usual statements? It seems to me the most dangerous doctrine yet recorded. It invites anyone to take law into his own hands, and do murder or other violence, on the sole pretext that he is afraid, or that the only alternative to violence is a cowardice that is worse. Hurrah for General Dyer, in that case!

---

1 This is extracted from ‘Weekly Letter’ by Mahadev Desai, who had reported that Gandhiji made these remarks during his talk with a friend who had never travelled third class but wanted to do so against the protests of his friends and relations because “one could never improve the lot of third-class passengers except by travelling with them.”

The following is the cutting from the Madras Mail dated 7th instant:

> Replying to a letter from a prominent Congressman, who had described the Hindu-Muslim tension in a village in Andhradesha and the reported aggressive attitude exhibited by Muslims of the village, and who sought his advice in the circumstances, Mr. Gandhi in a private communication, says:

> "DEAR FRIEND,

> "The condition described by you is regrettable. If the people fear their Muslim brethren they have every right to defend themselves by physical resistance.

> "Not to do so will be cowardice which can in no way be described as non-violence. Cowardice is a species of violence worse than open and armed violence."

> Though I have no copy of my letter, what is claimed to be a reproduction of it substantially represents my views. I cannot recall the name of my correspondent. He is unknown to me. If he is a prominent Congressman, I fancy, I would know him. As stated by the Madras Mail correspondent, my letter was a private communication in reply to an enquiry. My reply should, therefore, be read together with the circumstances which prompted it. If I had preserved the letter, I would have reproduced the main contents. It was a long letter. The writer gave in detail the condition of the villagers. The Hindu inhabitants were described as helpless and panic-stricken. They knew nothing of non-violence. The writer wanted to know what the villagers so situated were to do in the face of daily increasing violence on the part of the Muslims of the village supported by others coming from other villages. The advice I gave has been the advice I have always given in such circumstances. When I was travelling with the Ali Brothers in 1920, wanton acts of violence by the police near Bettiah were reported to have been done. I dealt with the matter in a public speech delivered in Bettiah and wrote on it in the columns of Young
Non-violence cannot be taught to a person who fears to die and has no power of resistance. A helpless mouse is not non-violent because he is always eaten by pussy. He would gladly eat the murderess if he could, but he ever tries to flee from her. We do not call him a coward, because he is made by nature to behave no better than he does. But a man who, when faced by danger, behaves like a mouse, is rightly called a coward. He harbours violence and hatred in his heart and would kill his enemy if he could without being hurt himself. He is a stranger to non-violence. All sermonizing on it will be lost on him. Bravery is foreign to his nature. Before he can understand non-violence he has to be taught to stand his ground and even suffer death in the attempt to defend himself against the aggressor who bids fair to overwhelm him. To do otherwise would be to confirm his cowardice and take him further away from non-violence. Whilst I may not actually help anyone to retaliate, I must not let a coward seek shelter behind non-violence so called. Not knowing the stuff of which non-violence is made many have honestly believed that running away from danger every time was a virtue compared to offering resistance especially when it is fraught with danger to one’s life. As a teacher of non-violence I must, so far as it is possible for me, guard against such an unmanly belief.

Non-violence is the greatest force at the disposal of mankind. It is mightier than the mightiest weapon of destruction devised by the ingenuity of man. Destruction is not the law of the humans. Man lives freely only by his readiness to die, if need be, at the hands of his brother, never by killing him. Every murder or other injury, no matter for what cause, committed or inflicted on another is a crime against humanity.

But I see quite clearly that this truth about non-violence cannot be delivered to the helpless. They must be taught to defend themselves.

The sceptic then argues: “You cannot teach non-violence to the weak and you dare not take it to the powerful. Why not admit that it is a futile creed?” The answer is, non-violence can be effectively taught only by living it. When there is an unmistakable demonstration of its power and efficacy the weak will shed their weakness and the mighty will quickly realize the valuelessness of might and becoming meek acknowledge the sovereignty of non-violence. It is my humble effort to show that this is no unattainable goal even in mass action. With critics like the English friend, I plead for patience.

1 Vide “Satyagraha in South Africa” and “Satyagraha in South Africa”, Chapter XIX, sub-title “Indian Opinion”

The deduction that the friend draws from my letter to the Andhra correspondent is in my opinion wholly unwarranted. Even without the letter to which mine was a reply, it is clear that there would be no occasion to defend oneself when police aid is at hand. The police won’t, if they are faithful to their trust, allow open aggression or violence. Resistance in self-defence is allowed in law. I was dealing with circumstances which were assumed to be beyond the reach of law or police.

They punish more often than they prevent, much less detect, crime. Self-defence, then, is the only honourable course where there is unreadiness for self-immolation.

And in future, if and when such incidents happen, they must be prepared to defend themselves. It is better if they can manfully stand persecution and allow themselves to be robbed, instead of hitting in defence of their persons or property. That would indeed be their crowning triumph. But such forbearance can only be exercised out of strength and not out of weakness. Till that power is acquired, they must be prepared to resist the wrongdoer by force. When a policeman comes not to arrest but to molest, he travels beyond his authority. The citizen has then the inalienable right of treating him as a robber and dealing with him as such. He will therefore use sufficient force to prevent him from robbing. He will most decidedly use force in order to defend the honour of his women. The doctrine of non-violence is not for the weak and the cowardly; it is meant for the brave and the strong. The bravest man allows himself to be killed without killing. And he desists from killing or injuring, because he knows that it is wrong to injure. Not so the villagers of Champaran. They flee from the police. They would strike and even kill a policeman, if they had no fear of the law. They gain no merit of non-violence but on the contrary incur the reproach of cowardice and unmanliness; they stand condemned before Government and man.

_Harijan,_ 20-7-1935
414. LETTER TO ANAND T. HINGORANI

WARDHA,
July 20, 1935

MY DEAR ANAND,

What nonsense! What more encouragement did you and Vidya\(^1\) need beyond saying ‘you may come’? Come both of you or one of you whenever you like. Have of me what is possible.

Love to both.

BAPU

From a microfilm: Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani.

415. LETTER TO KEVALCHAND K. MEHTA

July 20, 1935

Bhai Kevalchand,

I have your letter. I am afraid I understand nothing about electricity and the immediate solution is not in my hands. So many such things are being done in our country today against which there seems to be no help.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 147

416. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

July 20, 1935

Chhi. Vasumati,

Join Gangabehn whole-heartedly in the work of sweeping and cleaning. Even the pupils who join can be asked to do this work after some time. This work is neither laborious nor time-consuming.

You seem now to have recovered your peace of mind.

Prabha\(^2\) has fallen ill after going to Bombay and has not, therefore, returned as yet.

Lakshmi is still here.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9404. Also C.W. 650. Courtesy: Vasumati Pandit

---

\(^1\) Addressee’s wife

\(^2\) Prabhavati
417. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

July 20, 1935

CHI. SHARMA,

I got your letter. Whatever it be, you are going to America¹. A letter has come from Calcutta intimating the ship’s departure on the 10th [August]. As you have to reach there well in advance, you should be here on the 25th. You would better leave for Calcutta after spending two or three days here. You must not bring too much luggage from there, though, of course, what is essential has to be brought.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, between pp. 174 and 175

418. LETTER TO GOVINDLAL SAHA

July 20, 1935

BHAI GOVINDLALJI,

I have your letter after a long interval. As you have given your word to the Municipality there is nothing more to be said. Even otherwise the Harijan Sevak Sangh could not have taken possession of the plot. It is much better to let the Municipality have it.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 10677. Also C.W. 9758. Courtesy: Government of Uttar Pradesh

¹ The addressee had in his letter suggested cancelling the journey if the expense was too high.
419. LETTER TO A VILLAGE WORKER

[Before July 21, 1935]

I got your letter yesterday. It is very good. Keep on describing your work in the same way. If you consider the hut or cave whatever you call it as your sole abode, then alone you will be able to do some real work. At present do not give permission to anyone to stay with you. Excuse yourself. It may be that someone comes and stays for a short while after you have settled down. At the moment if anyone comes there he will definitely disturb your work. Avoid this. Take good care of your health. In case you do fall ill at some time, do not hope for or expect the companionship of an ashram inmate. Whoever is there is your companion. He also would render help and if he does not it is God’s will. God is always with you wherever you go.

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbandhu, 21-7-1935

420. LETTER TO JANAKIDEVI BAJAJ

WARDHA,
July 21, 1935

CHI. JANAKIBEHN,

Your letter was very good. Coax Madalasa gently to learn what you want her to learn. The days are gone when one could command obedience by scolding. Both of you should stay there for the present. Read as much as possible and write as often as you can.

Live there as if Ranjit and Saroop were your children. Rest assured that nobody can encroach upon your freedom.

Everything is all right here. Om is absorbed in herself and Ramakrishna is collecting tickets and is quite happy. He does not sleep by my side now, and that is but proper.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2973

1 The addressee had seriously taken up his work and had decided to have no companion to help him.
2 At Almora
421. LETTER TO MADALASA BAJAJ

July 21, 1935

CHI. MADALASA,

There was nothing improper in your letter. I like your daily programme of work. It does not matter if you have given up reading. Your decision to eat without fear the food which you like is correct. You will thus discover by and by the food which suits you best.

Do not be perturbed by Janakibehn’s anger. Pay attention to the truth behind what she says.

Your body must be kept warm. You must sit upright when praying, reading or writing. It is not necessary to bend your head at any time. You must wear sufficient clothes there.

Pay attention to all these things. Have you got justice now?

It is good that you take Ranjit’s help in your study. Remain there as long as you like.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, p. 317

422. LETTER TO BEHRAMJI KHAMBHATTA

July 21, 1935

BHAI KHAMBHATTA,

Let us now forget the hospital. Just remember that you had recovered your health there and be grateful to God for that, and serve every living creature in whatever way you can. My hand only needed some rest.

Blessings to both of you from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6611. Also C.W. 4401. Courtesy: Tehmina Khambhatta
423. LETTER TO BHAGWANJI P. PANDYA

July 21, 1935

CHI. BHAGWANJI,

I got your letter. Your figures will be helpful to me. At present I have been discussing this subject frequently. See that you get back your strength. It will be better to have the whole body massaged.

Is your connection with Vadaj getting stronger? Have you tried to get cloth woven out of your own yarn? What opinion did the weaver express after trying to weave it?

Blessings from
BAPU

From Gujarati: C.W. 389. Courtesy: Bhagwanji P. Pandya

424. LETTER TO NARAHARI D. PARIKH

July 21, 1935

CHI. NARAHARI,

I got your letter. The services of the man whom Devsharma may send can be used even outside the Vidyapith for the propagation of Hindi.¹ We should not sacrifice many gods at that altar.

I will settle Velchand’s² case with Sardar now.
If Joshi does not wear khadi, he cannot be acceptable to us. Apart from that, does Narandas’s explanation convince you?
I would be surprised if Bhaskarrao has not yet met you.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9078

¹ Vide “Letter to Narahari D. Parikh”, 15-7-1935
² Velchand Banker of Baroda; vide also “Letter to Narahari D. Parikh”, 23-8-1935.
425. LETTER TO JETHALAL G. SAMPAT

July 21, 1935

BHAJ JETHALAL,

May the child get well soon.
I shall wait for an account of your change of heart.
I understand your suggestions. I shall not do anything in a hurry. Since you are so near, would it not be better if you went to Anantpur via Wardha?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 9853. Courtesy: Narayan J. Sampat

426. LETTER TO RAMDAS GANDHI

WARDHA,

July 21, 1935

CHIJ. RAMDAS,

I wish you well. But the course you have adopted seems to me fraught with danger. You have become impatient to make money and therefore are not content with mere commission. Have patience. Get some experience. Calm down. Be satisfied with a little. But then, one remembers one’s master’s counsel only as far as the gate.6 In the end you will go where your fate leads you. This is but a caution by an old father.

We are flourishing here.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Mrs. Sumitra Kulkarni Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library
427. LETTER TO MOOLCHAND AGRAWAL

July 21, 1935

BHAI MOOLCHAND,

The wife has an equal right to the husband’s earnings. But it does not mean that she can utilize the money just as she pleases. Your decision to maintain an account is quite correct.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 838

428. LETTER TO B. R. AMBEDKAR

WARDHA,
July 9, 1935

DEAR DR. AMBEDKAR,

As you may know, Rajaram Bhole is with me just now. He wants me to advise him as to the course he should take. Regard being had as to his precarious health, I have advised that it would be better if he could reconcile himself to some Harijan service against . . . 1 to feed and clothe himself. The other alternative is to take up a business line. I see difficulties in his taking it up. He must then attend regular hours and be prepared to do best work which is fatal for a man who is in perpetual fear of developing active T.B. But I told him that he should take your advice and be guided by you. He tells me he has already written to you. I know he will receive your reply in due course. But I would like you, for my sake, please, to hasten your reply so as to enable me to tell Rajaram what to do.

Yours sincerely,

DR. AMBEDKAR

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 The addressee had in his letter mentioned about the differences between him and his wife over items of expenditure; vide also “Letter to Janakidevi Agrawal”, 5-7-1935
2 Omission as in the source
429. DISCUSSION WITH MARY CHESLEY AND MIRABEHN

[Before July 22, 1935]

GANDHIJI: But why do you object to it?

MARY CHESLEY: Because it is English.

G. But why should I not adopt whatever is best in English dress? I would not mind doing so, though Englishmen may look with contempt on Indian dress and disdain to adopt any part of it.

M.C. It is so inartistic. The English shorts go ill with the flowing Indian shirts.

G. Then I suppose you would be horrified if I asked people to wear the sola hat.

Here Mirabehn took up the battle on behalf of the friend and said it would certainly shock her. The sola hat was most expensive and extremely unportable.

G. That only shows that the hat you wore when you were in England was a misfit.

MIRABEHN: No. I had the best hats available in those days, but I never liked them. They cramp one's head and give one an ache.

G. Then perhaps your head was so ill-shaped. What I do seriously feel is that the sola hat is a good protection from the sun.

M. I would any day wear an Indian puggree in preference to the hat. It does keep off the sun as well.

G. It does not.

M. Well, well. But these shorts are bad. Between the loin-cloth that you wear and the shorts these people wear there is all the difference between heaven and hell.

G. Oh! Then you will explain why it is so shocking.

M. Perhaps I am putting it too strongly; I shall say there is all the difference that there is between day and night.

---

1 The discussion is extracted from Mahadev Desai's “Weekly Letter”.
2 Mary Chesley, left Wardha on Monday, July 22, 1935; vide “Letter to F. Mary Barr”, 25-7-1935
3 Mary Chesley, during her brief stay at the Ashram, had raised a question about the short-sleeved shirts and the shorts worn by some Ashram inmates.
M.C. But that is not my reason, I simply can’t stand this incongruous mixture. Your loin-cloth is Indian. Why should they not put on something like that? Let it be all Indian or all English.

G. Then to be all English I must go to a grogshop, too? As regards my loin-cloth I know that it is far superior to the shorts. But if they all adopted it they would be laughed at for trying to look like the Mahatma.

M.C. But why not wear the lower part of the shirt inside the shorts?
G. Yes, that is what you do. But it is hygienically bad.

Harijan, 27-7-1935

430. TELEGRAM TO H. L. SHARMA
WARDHAGANI,
July 22, 1935
DR. SHARMA
KHURJA
THEY WANT YOU QUICK CALCUTTA, COME IMMEDIATELY.
BAPU

From a facsimile: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, between pp. 174 and 175

431. LETTER TO MANILAL AND SUSHILA GANDHI
July 22, 1935
CHI. MANILAL AND SUSHILA.
I got the letters of you both. Your letter to Ba has been redirected to her at Delhi. She and Manu are there. News about Lakshmi’s delivery is expected in a day or two.
Ramdas seems to have lost some money recently. He will learn only from his own bitter experiences.
Harilal has gone to the last extreme. For the whole day he is found in a drunken state. This time he has crossed all limits.
Narandas and Kusum are in Rajkot. Nimu and her children are here. They keep fairly good health.
Jamnalalji has already arrived here. Janakibehn and Madalasa are in Almora.

273
Kanti and Kanu are here. This being the season for rain and malaria, everybody has to be careful. Fasting has proved to be the most effective medicine. Even though it may not work in all cases, it can do no harm either. The fast may either be partial or complete. In a partial fast protein and starch are avoided. Protein is present in milk and dal. Starch is found in rice, wheat, potatoes, etc. In a partial fast, therefore, juicy fruits and green vegetables can be eaten. When there is actual temperature, however, green vegetables, too, cannot be eaten. At that time one should take only orange juice or grape juice.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4840. Also C.W. 1252. Courtesy: Sushila Gandhi

432. LETTER TO MANU GANDHI

_July 22, 1935_

CHI. MANUDI,

You haven’t still replied to my letter. How can I permit that? You know I want to know your whole day’s programme.

Here, everyday it rains for some time. Hence the weather is rather cold. The sun is rarely seen.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

[PS.]

The letter from Natal is enclosed.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 1544. Courtesy: Manubehn S. Mashruwala
433. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

WARDHA,
July 23, 1935

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

What is going on in Lahore? Can you form any idea about it? Who is to blame? Insurance companies seem to have come up like mushrooms. I don’t like them at all. But what can we do? It is too bad that they should cash in on the name of the Congress. But what else can we do except look on helplessly? . . .

. . . is a straightforward man. How can we take offence in a matter like this?

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, p. 176

434. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

WARDHA,
July 24, 1935

1. No article is used before those substances because we cannot count them; they can only be weighed.

2. The other meanings of ‘would’ which you have pointed out are correct. It is the custom to use them in those senses. Such usage is called ‘idiom’.

3. It will be beneficial to continue the Pathmala exercises for the present.

4. I have given your letter to Maganbhai.

BAPU

[PS.]

Now that you have calmed down, remain calm.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9254. Also C.W. 10102. Courtesy: Lilavati Asar

1 & 2 Omissions as in the source

3 Lilavati Asar had asked: “(1) Should the article be used for material nouns like ghee, gur, sugar, milk, water, etc.? (2) I only know that ‘would’ is the past tense of ‘will’ but many a time it is used for the present tense e.g., I would like to do this. Sometimes ‘would’ is used in the past tense also. Hun Jato is translated as ‘I would go’. What meaning is to be taken of ‘would’ in this sentence? (3) Shall I continue to translate from Gujarati into English from the sentences given in the Pathmala? Can you send me a small English paragraph for translation? (4) Has Murabbi Maganbhai received my Gujarati letter to him?”

435. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

July 24, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

You have forgotten to reply to my suggestion to give a regular salary to Lilavati. Pay her if that can be done.

Send Dhiru to Ahmedabad or Bhavnagar if that is possible. If he agrees, inquire at both these places.

But don’t send him just now if his cough still troubles him. Let him stay there for some time, do whatever he can by himself and build up his body. If Maneklal can meet his expenses, he must do so.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Doesn’t the teacher Joshi wear khadi?

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8465. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

436. LETTER TO LOUISETTE GUIEYESSE

July 25, 1935

DEAR SISTER,

I have read your long letter to Mira. If the Indian merchant has not come to you it shows that he is not interested in your work. You need not write to Bhulabhai Desai. I shall try to know from him his intentions. Do not expect anything from Prof. Wadia. He can hardly help. My firm advice is: Do not on any account incur debts; if you cannot pay, you may cease publication.1 Do not depend upon Indian aid, save in the way of being supplied with news and literature. If there are not enough French men of means who can shoulder the little burden, you should close the venture, and rely upon your own personal labour. God expects the impossible from none. Whatever you do, do for His sake and in His name. Then He is responsible and not you for anything you may do. Though many of my friends here

---

1 The addressee wanted monetary help for her journal Nouvelles de L' Inde towards which she had already incurred a debt of 5,000 francs.
think differently, I feel certain that we should not spend money on foreign propaganda. Our worthiness will be its own propaganda, anything else will be a cover for weaknesses.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

437. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

WARDHA,
July 25, 1935

CHI. MARY.

I must not send any money myself. For I have nothing of my own to give. But Jamnalalji will send Rs. 50. I showed your letter to him and he at once said he would send. So far as food is concerned, you must not stint yourself. Concentrate on getting well for the sake of service.

The Marys went on Monday with Sumitra. Mary C. and Sumitra do not get on well. But Sumitra is determined to finish the six months she promised.

Dr. Premnath has not written to me.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 6055. Also C.W. 3385. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

438. LETTER TO ABBAS K. VARTEJI

July 25, 1935

CHI. ABBAS

Your suggestion is correct. Arrangements are being made to implement it. The rates for women spinners must be raised. If your help is required for this work, can you be spared from there?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6311

1 Craft teacher for spinning and weaving at Sabarmati Ashram
439. LETTER TO K. M. MUNSHI

July 25, 1935

BHAISHRI MUNSHI,

I got your letter and the other things.

I am not too pleased with your list of advertisements. Our approaches are altogether different. I won’t go into details. If I could convince you, I would have you accept only advertisements for books. But I have no right to interfere thus in the affairs of this monthly. I will therefore, say only this: Exercise as much restraint as you can.¹

I see from your letter to Gurudev that you have given up the idea of an advisory board. If that is true, I like it.

So far as I understand Bhulabhai’s advice about Indian States, it applies to the relations of the States with the Government and not with their subjects. If my belief is correct, then I see nothing wrong in Bhulabhai’s opinion. I think his view is subtle, but sound. The relation between Indian States and their subjects and the subjects of British India is a separate issue and was not before Bhulabhai. I have held this opinion from the time Bhulabhai’s advice was first mentioned in the papers. I see no contradiction between this and the Congress policy. The subjects of Indian States have to demand their rights from the Rulers of the States and not from the British Government.

The letter to Gurudev will be posted soon. Mahadev will write it.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 7579. Courtesy: K. M. Munshi

440. LETTER TO HARI GOVIND GOVIL

July 25, 1935

Bhai Hari Govil,

I am trying to read your book. I have gone through the newspapers and I find much exaggeration in them. Send me the name, place and other particulars of the nature-cure institutions you have come across.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1023

¹ Vide also “Letter to K. M. Munshi”, 8-7-1935
² The reference, presumably, is to the advisory opinion Bhulabhai gave as a lawyer to some Princes regarding the advisability of their joining the Federation.
441. LETTER TO KAMALNAYAN BAJAJ

CHI. KAMALNAYAN,

July 25, 1935

I got your frank letter. It is indeed good that you acknowledge your shortcomings. Now proceed one step further and strive hard to get rid of them. You can note the ablutions, etc., in your diary and certainly say your prayers twice a day. And of course there is Ramadhan. The best way to overcome lethargy is to meticulously chalk out your daily routine and stick to it although the work turned out may be less. Exercise should be deemed an essential item of the daily routine.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 3051

442. LETTER TO KEWALRAM

WARDHA,

July 26, 1935

CHI. KEWALRAM,

All my fears have been proved true. In fact there is nothing like private or public humiliation. And that, too, for a servant of the public [like me], my humiliation is that of the public and theirs is mine. We are the people and the people are we. Where is the difference between man and world?

Whether you are lucky or unlucky, you lose only because somebody is there to lend you. You ask for my advice. Just stick to two rules:

1. You will not undertake anything.
2. You will not start independent business.

Your independence is your dependence. How can you call a person dependent if he willingly serves under somebody? Do you take away somebody’s freedom when you employ him? Servant and master are man-made divisions. Serving means observing certain rules and being the master is doing as you wish to. How will you choose between the two? How long can I go on advising you like this? If by giving publicity to your error I could do some good to anybody, I would...’, but I see no such possibility. It is good that you should go on learning from your mistakes.

The treatment available in Wadhwan is good. Besides you have your house and your generous father is there. Go there and improve your health. Fasting will help in improving it.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

443. ADVICE TO ASHRAM MEMBERS

[Before July 27, 1935]

We are not judged so much by the big things that we do as by the smallest. You might have chosen a better sheet of paper, written more legibly and you had certainly no excuse to write in English, which you do not seem to know well, when you could do so in Gujarati or Hindi. ‘Take care of your pence and the pounds will take care of themselves’ is not only a maxim of economic thrift. It is a moral maxim as well. No matter how insignificant the thing is you have to do it as well as you can, give it as much of your care and attention as you would give to the thing you regard as most important. For it will be by those small things that you shall be judged.

Harijan, 27-7-1935

444. HOW TO BEGIN

Whether it is to be a standard rate or a minimm for khadi artisans, a change seems to be a certainty. With the exception of one dissentient of the many opinions so far received, none has opposed my proposal for fixing an increased rate. No one has yet been found to endorse the eight-anna proposal.¹ Some of the writers regard the

¹ The source is illegible here.
² This is extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter”. Gandhiji, who had substituted oil-cake for dal in the Ashram diet, “asked everyone to express in writing what he or she felt about it”. Three members disapproved of the move and dal was immediately restored. But the “little slip of paper” signed by them “served Gandhiji as a peg on which to hang a sermon”.
³ Vide “Need for a Standard wage”, 13-7-1935
eight-anna proposal as fatal to khadi. The price of khadi will, in that case, have to be so far advanced, they say, that there will be very few buyers. Be that as it may, in any change worthy of the name some conditions will have to be fulfilled. It will therefore be wise to take time by the forelock and enforce the following immediately wherever it is at all possible:

1. The workers should master all the processes from cotton picking to weaving so as to be able to teach others.

2. Organizers should make a register of all the carders, spinners, weavers, etc., within their circle or jurisdiction.

3. They should know the variety of cotton used by their spinners, and see that they do not attempt to spin a higher count than it is capable of.

4. Spinners and the other artisans should be warned that unless they use khadi in their own households, they may not get any work.

5. The artisans so warned should have facilities put in their way, so as to enable them always to get their khadi for their labour.

6. Every hank of yarn received should be examined for its strength and evenness, all uneven and weak yarn being rejected, even as underbaked bread would be.

7. As a rule, each spinner’s yarn should be stocked separately and woven when there is enough for a piece. This will ensure durability of khadi and an all-round improvement in the texture and appearance.

8. All pieces thus prepared should have labels attached to them giving the names of ginners, carders, spinners and weavers where they are all different.

9. Where artisans are members of families, the latter should be induced and encouraged to have all the processes in their own homes. This will be easy when the wages are equalized or nearly so.

10. The lives and budgets of families coming under the influence of the workers should be carefully studied and those who spend their earnings judiciously should be helped.

11. If ever it becomes necessary to restrict the number of artisans served by the Association, by reason of shortage of custom, those who have other means of livelihood should be first eliminated. At present, I understand, in several provinces, it is not only the neediest who spin but also the thrifty women who want a little money for themselves to buy a few trifles, rather than to have better food or to pay debts.

12. In every case the workers will have to closely examine the carding-bows and the wheels, especially the latter with reference to the spindles and their revolutions. For the proposed increase will never be a rise pure and simple. It will be partly earned by greater and better output in the same time and partly there will be pure increase. No spinner who refuses to make any improvement in her or his manner of work is likely to get any increase unless the demand for khadi increases.

13. It follows from the last paragraph that new machines or parts will have to be supplied by the associations on easy terms in the first instance. In many cases alterations in the mal (string) and the spindle will automatically increase and improve the quality of the output.

All these conditions can be fulfilled only if the workers realize that they have a grand mission and that they are but humble units in a vast family of artisans and labourers who are semi-starved or underfed.

I have not touched the question of cotton-growing. So far I have dealt with the khadi that is manufactured for the market. Some different rules will govern self-sufficient khadi. It will never succeed without cotton being grown by spinners themselves or practically in every village. It means decentralization of cotton cultivations so far at least as self-sufficient khadi is concerned. For this we shall need a census of the villages served. For not every spinner or weaver has a plot (ever so tiny) of land, where he or she can grow cotton. Self-sufficient khadi is a much bigger proposition, for which alone can the existence of the A. I.S.A. be justified. It is a field as yet untouched by it on any scale worth mentioning.

Harijan, 27-7-1935

445. NOTES

NEED FOR CORRECTNESS

Professor Malkani has been kindly sending me copies of the notices he has been issuing to the Provincial Sanghs on the necessity of compliance with the rules framed by the Central Board for the proper management of the wonderful organizations that have been brought into being in the provinces. They cannot function well or in co-ordination with one another and with the Central Board unless they strictly carry out all the rules and instructions issued by the Central Board from time to time. Failure to comply with requirements regarding budgets or preparation of accounts must result in bad finance—a very serious matter for a Board having numerous branches which have control of large funds. Failure to send in regular reports of work done must leave the Centre in the dark and impair the efficiency of work. Failure to attend meetings must bring work of the Sangh to a standstill resulting in stagnation and finally disruption. If attention to rules and instructions is held to be essential in business organizations, how much more must it be so in the working of a voluntary, philanthropic or penitential institution? It is to be hoped, therefore, that all the component parts of the Sangh will respond to the requirements from the Centre and thus by correct behaviour hasten the disappearance of the canker of untouchability from our midst.

A PLEA FOR PURITY

A correspondent, himself an editor, sends me cuttings from one single newspaper owned or managed by a public worker of approved merit. They were with one exception about medicine. In my opinion they were highly objectionable. They contained indecent suggestions calculated to excite and promote animal passion in man. These advertisements were taken from recent issues of the newspaper concerned. They were all claimed to possess the virtue of rejuvenating their users. The description was revolting. Some of them were manifest lies.

My correspondent tells me that the newspaper from which he had taken the cuttings was by no means the sole offender. He could send me similar cuttings from others known to be popular and respectable.

The proprietors of such newspapers probably do not know that their sheets contain indecent advertisements. Perhaps they have not even read them. Let me hope that the editors and managers of newspapers will study their advertisements and remove those that are without doubt objectionable. I trust, too, that journalists’ associations in the provinces will take up the matter and persuade proprietors to exercise restraint in the matter of admitting advertisements. It is not too much to expect them to remove all such as are likely to corrupt public morals or offend sense of decency.

Harijan, 27-7-1935
446. LETTER TO JOHN HAYNES HOLMES

WARDHA, July 27, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

This will introduce to you Shri. H. L. Sharma who is an utter stranger to America. He is going there in order to gain further knowledge of natural treatment of diseases. Dr. Kellogg’s Battle Creek Sanatorium has attracted his attention. I now learn from Dr. Kellogg’s representative that he has stopped taking in pupils. I can think of no better guide for Shri Sharma than your good self. He wants to live there as a very poor man. He is hard working. If he can work for his studies and food, he would like it and so would I. If he cannot, he is assisted by a friend who will defray his expenses. Please give him such help as is in your power to give him. I am not giving Shri Sharma any further introductions, not even to Hari Das. Whatever you may think necessary in this direction, you will please do. I know you do not mind my putting you to this trouble. It will interest you to know that Shri Sharma is pursuing this study purely to serve diseased humanity.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, pp. 176-7

447. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL JOSHI

CHI. CHHAGANLAL, July 27, 1935

I got your letter. I don’t want the happy relations between Narandas and you to be endangered. I, therefore, will keep you out of this trouble about the school. But I see from your letter that acute temperamental differences still persist between you. You have only cultivated a kind of mutual forbearance. It is enough for you that your work goes on smoothly. Do write to me, however, about anything to which you think my attention should be drawn. I will use such information as I think fit.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.] Ask Rama if it is too much to expect a letter from her.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5522

1 A copy of this letter was given to Hiralal Sharma.
448. LETTER TO HARI GOVIND GOVIL

July 27, 1935

BHAJ GOVIL,

This letter will be handed over by Shri Hiralal Sharma. He is proceeding to America to gain further knowledge of nature cure. He wants to live in poverty and if possible even earn his living. He may be supplied with the names and other details of the sanatoria [there] as also some introductions if possible. Shri Sharma had never been out of India.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI HARI GOVIND GOVIL
54 CHOWRINGHEE
CALCUTTA

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N.1024

449. ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS

July 27, 1935

Q. Apart from reforms in sanitation and food-habits, as for example in respect of flour, rice, gur, oil, etc., what other reforms are necessary for an ideal village?
   A. Every village has to be studied individually.

Q. Should I obey parents and other relatives and keep away from participating in activities of universal benefit when I am certain that there injunction is prompted only by misguided love?
   A. In that case disobedience might be dharma for you.

Q. Would it be right to obey a command of one’s superiors, viz., parents, teachers and official superiors, if it goes against any one of the vows of truth, non-violence and so on?
   A. No.

Q. The following is one of the ten rules laid down by the Arya Samaj: “An individual has some freedom in the observance of all rules of particular benefit but none in observing rules of universal benefit.”

1 The questions were asked by Avadhesh Dutt Avasthi on July 25, 1935.
A. It is not quite clear to me. If so, would it not mean that a vicious custom prevalent in society but calling for eradication should be conformed to until the whole of society or the majority is in favour of its eradication? In other words, one should not individually offer active opposition to it though one may continue other efforts. I want to learn the duty of an average individual. A great man of course attracts the popular opinion to follow him in whichever cause he adopts.

The individual should firmly adhere to his duty.

Q. You have stated that only those jail rules really offending one’s self-respect need be disregarded. Therefore it may be explained which of these following seven conditions are really derogatory to one’s self-respect as these were usually the causes of conflict in all the jails:

To be counted by pairs, to perform tasks in spite of abuse and beatings, to be served by the barber with handcuffs on, to be subjected to restraints in saying prayers, to remain standing during the parade holding one’s ticket, to parade, to be searched morning and evening in an objectionable manner.

A. We should disregard only that which we feel violates our dharma.

Q. You have said that dharma enjoins a husband to provide for the wife and also to co-operate with her so long as she follows his way of life. Therefore what is the husband’s duty when the wife holds views opposed to his and does not adopt his ways, and what is the wife’s duty when the situation is reversed?

A. Dharma indicates that they live separately and the husband provides for the wife.

Q. If anyone, especially a poor man or a Harijan, due to some reason, is being abused or beaten in my presence by a State official or a policeman or any arrogant person, especially a savarna as happens often enough, what would be my duty?

A. You should render non-violent help to the victim by pleading with the oppressor.

Q. Would it not be right to kill a mad elephant or a dog that has caused death to many and that is altogether uncontrollable? And if this is right, would it be proper for the State to give the same or similar treatment to men turned mad by selfishness, lust and anger?

A. It is possible to control even a mad elephant if one bears him true love and, as for insane people, the State has already some arrangement.

Q. Is man by nature slightly superior to woman?
A. No.

Q. Why is that women usually suffer no embarrassment in wearing male apparel while men feel it a matter of humiliation to dress like women? I think women regard masculinity to be somewhat superior.
A. It is because man attributes weakness to woman.

Q. What is the reason behind your avoidance of food cooked on fire?
A. Non-violence, saving on expense and time, health and so on.

Q. Owing to some reasons I have formed the opinion that one should keep totally aloof from political and social movements while one is a student. Am I correct in this opinion?
A. That is for you to decide.

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 3221

450. VIOLENCE v. NON-VIOLENCE

A reader of Harijanbandhu writes to say: 1

The confrontation between violence and non-violence has lasted from time immemorial and will last till eternity. Everyone will interpret these words in his own way and act in accordance with his wishes and his capacity. Hence, it seems that any further discussion on this much debated topic will not take us much further. However, the way I look at non-violence in our enfeebled circumstances appears to be a novel viewpoint and this sometimes has even hurt the votaries of non-violence. Non-Violence is the characteristic of a brave man. Fear and non-violence are deadly enemies. We are unable to see non-violence in its true form as we are surrounded by fear and have become accustomed to look at it from a distorted angle.

This introduction seems necessary for a consideration of the above letter.

We have no evidence before us to support the belief that the death-rate is higher where the number of snakes killed is great. On the contrary snakes are seldom found in places where people have unanimously decided to make it their dharma to kill every snake. But this evidence cannot establish the dharma of violence. Non-violence

1 The letter is not translated here. The correspondent had stated that he was unable to overcome the fear of snakes, though he knew that “ahimsa was the law of life”.

can be proved only by dying. The practice of killing has always been there. This state of affairs shocked a certain brave man who proclaimed: “This is not dharma.” Non-violence alone is the true religion for all times.

If I have suggested that snakes should be killed in certain circumstances, it is to help non-violence, not to destroy it. Non-violence is an attitude of mind. My non-violence is not put to shame if I kill a snake through fear although my efforts are directed towards befriending it. If I make the fullest effort, I can even reach this ideal.

It is not because we are merciful that we refrain from killing snakes and such other creatures; we are persuaded to do so because we traditionally believe that there is non-violence in doing so and hence do not kill snakes. We cannot claim that human beings are kind towards those whom they fear. He who is strong is merciful towards the weak. Where is the mercy in catching hold of a snake and throwing it away because we are afraid of it? While doing so, generally we do not even have the notion that some day we shall make friends with the snake. Non-violence is the dharma of awakening. Its votary has to make conscious use of it at every moment as we are surrounded by violence on all sides. Every one of us has according to his capacity to make his own way out of this dangerous predicament.

Let us examine that act of refraining from killing a serpent. When a snake comes to attack us, we shall certainly kill it because it does not attack us. While going its own way, it strays from its path and comes into our homes. We then catch hold of it and throw it far away. While taking care that it does not attack us, we subject it to as much pain as is necessary. Mercy plays no part in this, but what is at work is the fear of punishment in our next birth for our failure to practise the dharma of non-violence. We have given no proof of our bravery in not killing the snake. Killing it would not have been a courageous act either. The motive behind both [the killing and non-killing] is fear. If mercy in its pure state were present in me, I would catch hold of the serpent and befriend it and rid others of the fear of snakes. We do hear stories of sadhus who do this. It is possible that these reports are not true or are mere exaggerations. However, if non-violence is real, such friendship between snakes and human beings is not an impossibility.
If this much is clear to the reader, he will realize that there is no room for doubt regarding the sentence in question. This does not imply that so long as the fear of snakes persists, these should be killed at sight. However, wherever their danger continues, it is not necessary to have any hesitation in killing them, as underlying that fear there is a deep-rooted desire for their death. One feels free from fear when one kills them. I cannot imagine a more pitiable condition for the non-violent person. Anyone who attempts to befriend snakes and such other creatures will not rest satisfied by solving such problems in the traditional manner, but will rather make an effort to rid himself of the fear of such ferocious animals without indulging in violence of any kind.

The example of a beautiful woman is not applicable here at all. If anyone desires her and tries to seduce her, many persons will be ready to beat him up. Human beings suppress such desires. Or by consciously nurturing them they seek the means of their own destruction. The comparison with snakes could be made in the following manner. Rather than be infatuated by a woman and yield to this infatuation, I should destroy the serpent within me or, in other words, drown myself by jumping into a well. This should be regarded as pure non-violence and be considered an act of bravery. Snakes and such other creatures are symbols for us. The passions within us are the reflection of evil. If we make a Herculean effort to rid ourselves of the fear of our fellow-creatures such as snakes. However, so long as we cannot do so, we should do whatever we think best while entertaining the desire for friendship.

[From Gujarati]

_Harijanbandhu_, 28-7-1935

---

1 The correspondent had quoted the following from Mahadev Desai’s Gujarati translation of “Ideals and Practice” (p. 248) which appeared in _Harijanbandhu_, 14-7-1935: “Ahimsa is the law of life, but if I have not shed the fear of serpents, what am I to do? My mind has already killed the serpent, only the flesh is weak. Your duty says: ‘Kill it. Give up the vain attempt of refraining from killing it.’”
451. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

WARDHA, July 28, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

Herewith a letter from Harilal. Wasn’t it as I have been saying it was? Still the same old self? Where is he staying?

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

I am sending the accompanying letter since it contains a suggestion about the educational value of the spinning-wheel which is worth thinking over.

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8466. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

452. LETTER TO L. R. DUCHA

WARDHA, July 29, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your remarks on my suggestions about khadi.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

SHRI L. R. DUCHA
SOCIAL WORKER
3224/A LINGAMPALLY
HYDERABAD, DECCAN

From a photostat: C.W. 4742. Courtesy: L. R. Ducha

453. LETTER TO C. F. ANDREWS

July 29, 1935

MY DEAR CHARLIE,

If you have booked for 17th, you have to leave Santiniketan fairly soon. Or else there will be a rush at the last moment. A day with Verrier is quite right but you have hardly time to go to Kodai. Esther’s is a tough problem. My opinion is that Menon should stick to India but not to Tanjore. Real skill has its price everywhere.
ember Dina Babu . . . ay give my . . . d condolences to Gurudev.

Mrs. Ambalal is in Ahmedabad. They returned only the other day. She is well.

It would be a good thing if you can write something substantial about the Congress for the European reader. But then it would have to be independent and authorship exclusively yours. You can’t tack yourself on to Girija or anybody else.¹

[PS.]

Did I tell you I wrote to Sudhir at once?
What about Aprakash?

From a photostat: G.N.991

454. LETTER TO PADMA

July 29, 1935

CHI. PADMA,

If I used a coloured slip of paper, it would cost one pice more and, besides, it won’t be hand-made paper. One must not fall ill. Do you have a Magan spinning-wheel? How much yarn do you spin everyday? It is really good that Sheela is studying in a Harijan school. Do all the others spin? Here it has been raining more than we need.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6152. Also C.W. 3508. Courtesy: Prabhudas Gandhi

455. LETTER TO K. M. MUNSHI

July 29, 1935

BHAIRAMUNSHI,

Your readiness to accept my suggestion regarding advertisements embarrasses me because it increases my burden and makes me afraid lest I should exploit your habit of accepting my

¹ Illegible in the source
² ibid
³ ibid
⁴ Vide “Letter to C. F. Andrews”, 18-7-1935 views and in consequence lose a co-worker like you. I have no doubt, however, that such self-restraint will definitely enhance the prestige of the paper.

I do admit that Bhulabhai’s opinion\(^1\) is too technical.
I understand about the advisory board.\(^2\)

_Blessings from_
BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 9580. Courtesy: K. M. Munshi

456. LETTER TO PRABHUDAS GANDHI

_July 29, 1935_

CHI. PRABHUDAS,

I have your letter. I liked the charkha made by you and therefore tried hard and have mastered it. I even made some improvements in it which occurred to me. But I could not pass your budget. How can I find two persons? It may be possible if you can persuade Maruti\(^3\) or Lakshmidas\(^4\). But, as the saying is, one cannot go to heaven without oneself dying. I, therefore, feel that you will have to rely on yourself. I will do what I can.

Your sphere of work has been fixed and you cannot, therefore, leave Gularia. Do what you can there. I will show your letter to Ishwarlal, Vinoba and Kaka. Let this, however, not upset you in any way. My figures regarding spinning seem all right.

You are completely mistaken about village industries. Even if you were to list twice as many industries as you have done, you will still not be able to show that the variation in wage follows any fixed rule. The disparity is as between men and women and does not follow the principle that the greater the risk the higher the wage. Nature has laid it down that all have equal needs. Indeed all the workers should be paid at the same rate. You have seen equality in inequality here, but that is fallacy. Think over the matter again. I agree that those who are receiving more wages today will not agree to accept less. That does not worry me. I shall be satisfied if those who are getting less receive

---

1. Vide also “Letter to K. M. Munshi”, 25-7-1935
2. Vide also “Letter to K. M. Munshi”, 8-7-1935
3. Maruti Sharma
4. Lakshmidas Asar
justice. If all people become wise or good, they would accept equal payment for every work. Work will then become yajna. But that time is far away. It will be enough if we progress towards it.

I will go through Gopinathji’s article when I get it and send it back to you. I do not know how far you are right in praising it. I had heard something to the contrary. However, I paid no attention to it.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

---

457. LETTER TO AMBA GANDHI

_Chili Amba,_

Your letter is good even though it smacks of pessimism. But we must not lose heart. Whatever the circumstances, we have to render service and that cheerfully and devotedly. It is all right if people care to listen to us, but even if they do not [we have to go on serving].

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

---

458. LETTER TO S. C. DELURFF

_Wardha,_

_Dear Friend,_

Tolstoy was one of those teachers before whom my head bowed instinctively.

This is all I can send you. During my several breakings up, I destroyed many foreign letters. Tolstoy’s were no exception. I keep no portrait of me.

_Yours sincerely,_

S.C. DELURFF
“SVOBODA”
RUE 6 SEPTEMBER, N. 5
SOFIA (BULGARIA)

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
459. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

July 30, 1935

CHI. AMBUJAM,

The photograph you have sent me is good. I like the girl’s face. It is open and innocent. Let their life fill yours as I know it will fill Father’s and Mother’s. I hope Kichi’s finger is on the way to complete recovery.

The cooker came to me today. It is very good. You have not told me its price. The fruit too was duly received.

As it so happened, it came in useful this time because I have several patients. This is no invitation to you to send more. I have just now an ample supply, as visitors have brought baskets.

Love.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat: C.W. 9604. Courtsey: S. Ambujammal

460. LETTER TO G. SITARAMA SASTRY

July 30, 1935

MY DEAR SASTRY,

About the barter essay I have not been idle. Shri Vaikunth Mehta’s name has been suggested by Prof. Shah. K. suggests Prof. Ranga. Who is Prof. Rao of Lucknow? Is he an Andhra man? May the prize be given if the best and the most convincing essay is against the barter system?

Yours,

BAPU

1 Vide “Letter to S. Ambujammal”, 19-7-1935
2 U. Venkata Krishnaya of Khaddar Samsthanam, Gunadala, Krishna District, had announced a prize for the best essay on the barter system.
3 Presumably, J.C. Kumarappa
461. LETTER TO BHAGWANJI A. MEHTA

July 30, 1935

BHAI BHAGWANJI,

I am sending your letter to Jamnalalji. I will definitely talk to him when I see him. The engagement on which you have offered congratulations has been broken off. Kamalnayan is preparing for the London matriculation examination in Colombo. It is incorrect to say that there is nobody in Kathiawar. Who is prepared to live a pure life and work in a spirit of self-sacrifice? Such a statement cannot be proved. It is as true to say, “As are the subjects so is the ruler” as to say, “As is the ruler, so are the subjects.” If one is good, the whole world is good. Do you meet Chhaganlal Joshi? I think he is touring the villages.

Vandemataram from
MOHANDAS

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5825. Also C.W. 3048. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

462. LETTER TO KOTWAL

July 30, 1935

BHAI KOTWAL,

Why can’t you still get rid of your vain hankering? Isn’t service its own reward and certificate? What certificate can I give to those whom I do not know at all? You should get rid of such wordly entanglements.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3599.
463. LETTER TO NARAHARI D. PARIKH

July 30, 1935

CHI. NARAHARI,

I read your letter regarding the Vidyapith. What pay has been fixed for Jayabehn? Don’t you think there is something wrong with our training so that, though we have at least twenty-five women, not one of them has been trained in the way you want? And if that is the case, how can we expect to get a woman from outside who would fit into our mould? I feel that we shall have to reap as we have sown. Do not have the slightest suspicion that I include myself in ‘we’ merely out of politeness. I know my limitations full well. I do consider myself a teacher but I am no better than a shrub in a desert. Having said all this, what I want to tell you is simply that you should aim ultimately at producing from among ourselves a woman worker of the type you want. Some day your effort will succeed. Be sure that all attempts to get such a worker from outside will be futile. Even if there is a chance of your succeeding in such an attempt, it will be to our good and ensure the success of our mission not to make it.

Do you teach the girls the new method of spinning on the takli? That method is of great importance. By following it, little girls attain a speed of 80 rounds per half hour in just 15 days’ time, as it is very easy to learn. Test from time to time the girls’ speed of spinning on the takli and on the spinning-wheel.

I am not writing anything about the Vidyapith just now.

I have been constantly thinking about the goshala. I still feel that either we should take over some pinjrapole and keep the useless cattle there, or we should set up one ourselves along with the dairy. Such cattle can be kept only in Bidaj or some such place. Parnerkar’s idea of securing the co-operation of Bharawads attracts me more and more. I wish to try that experiment on a large scale here. I am only waiting for Dahyalal to get ready. Titus may perhaps come. I had a telegram from him. What I have understood from Parnerkar is this: We should have complete control over the Bharawads’ cattle. They should give the cattle fodder of our choice; should milk them and rear the calves scientifically. We on our part undertake to sell the milk obtained from them. If the last two suggestions cannot be implemented, forget about them. Keep as many good cows as you can manage and do whatever is practicable.
Vanamala will have to end her vow of saltless diet for the present. It would be better if she takes some other vow. You perhaps know Bhaskarrao. He was in the Ashram for some time. Afterwards he worked with Vinobaji. He has also worked under Mama. He comes from Baroda. He does not want to live very far from his parents. He knows Gujarati, Sanskrit and Marathi. Most probably he also knows English. He requires only twenty-five rupees as pay. I would advise you to employ him either in Vinaya Mandir or in the Harijan Ashram. Vinoba thinks that he will prove useful if we employ him. He is a very pious man. I am not sure, but probably he knows you. Write to me if you cannot utilize his services either in the Vidyapith or in the Harijan Ashram.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9084

464. MESSAGE ON ITALO-ABYSSINIAN CRISIS

WARDHA, [On or before August 1, 1935]

I can only pray and hope for peace.

The Hindustan Times, 2-8-1935

465. STATEMENT ON ITALO-ABYSSINIAN CRISIS

[On or before August 1, 1935]

Gandhiji, I understand, has made it clear in response to enquiries that no such appeal for funds has been issued by him.\(^1\) Gandhiji refuses to be interviewed on the Italo-Abyssinian question on the ground that a verbal expression of opinion would be valueless unless he was also able to follow it up by action.

The Hindustan Times, 2-8-1935

\(^1\) This was in reply to an urgent request for the Council of the League of Nations for a message on the eve of the meeting of the council of the League of Nations to consider the Italo-Abyssinian crisis.
\(^2\) The message was reported under the date-line “Wardha, August 1”, 1935, as “from our special correspondent”.
\(^3\) The statement was reported under the date-line “Wardha, August 1”, 1935.
\(^4\) The source had reported the “rumour seems to have got abroad of which nothing at all has been heard in India, that Gandhiji has issued an appeal for funds for raising a volunteer corps of Indians for Red Cross Service in Abyssinia. The rumour starting apparently from London has travelled to America and Gandhiji has been the astonished recipient of a cabled message from America congratulating him on his action.”
466. STATEMENT TO THE PRESS

WARDHAGANJ,
August 1, 1935

I am surprised at the statement attributed by Reuters Agency to Lord Zetland¹ that Mr. M. R. Masani had advocated violence, when he opposed my resolution² on the substitution of the words “legitimate and peaceful” by the words “truthful and non-violent” in the Congress creed.

I distinctly remember the occasion and I am quite sure that there was nothing in his speech showing that he advocated violence. His objection was, like that of many others, to the introduction in a political creed of expressions of a more or less religious character.

I can only therefore hope that Lord Zetland, occupying, as he does, one of the most responsible positions under the Crown, did not allow himself to make use of the unequivocal language attributed to his Lordship.

The Bombay Chronicle, 2-8-1935

467. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

August 1, 1935

CHI. SHARMA,

Why have I not got any letter from you? I learn from Shri Braj Mohan’s letter that living in America is very expensive. It should not be. Anyway, you will have an idea only when you are there. The expenses should be less if you lived like a working man. Everything is proceeding well, I hope. Give me all the news.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jiwanke Solah Varsha, facing p. 179

¹ The Secretary of State for India; he was replying to Lord Farringdon’s question in the House of Commons on the impounding of M. R. Masani’s passport.
² At the annual session of Indian National Congress held in Bombay on October 26, 1934.
468. LETTER TO APRAKASH CHANDRA MEHTA

WARDHA,
August 2, 1935

MY DEAR APRAKASH,

Why should it be galling to you to be on trial at your age. Age is rather against you in a novel experiment. A stranger would be on trial no matter how able he is. Much more so one who embarks like you on a new venture. Why should we assume that the world knows us as we think we are? Remember the recital of the eleven vows¹ which we have at each prayer daily. The verse ends with the exhortation that the observance should be with due humility. Humility is the key to peace and real joy.

I await your first letter of experiences with a little impatience.

Look out for Ambala² there and befriend her.

Love.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

469. NOTE TO AVADHESH DUTT AVASTHI

August 2, 1935

Do write and I shall try to answer. Write a letter whenever you want to come here and, if I happen to be here, I shall try to reply to you in confirmation.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 3223

¹ Vide “Letter to Samirmal”, 14-5-1935
² Margarete Spiegel
³ This was written on a letter from the addressee who was about to leave the Ashram.
A GOOD SERVANT GONE

Nibaranbabu who dies the other day in Purulia was one of the gentlest of souls. He was a true servant of Harijans and equally true friend of all the poor. He had realized to the full the matchless beauty of non-violence which had become a living creed with him. His life was an inspiration to many of his friends and followers who looked to him for guidance and comfort in their darkest hours. May the memory of it ever sustain them and move them from good to better.

WEALTH WELL USED

Shri Jwala Prasad Mandelia, a great servant of Harijans, is no more. He was the treasurer of the Central Harijan Sevak Sangh. And what a treasurer he was to the cause which he loved with a rare passion! He could not be called a wealthy man as the expression is understood nowadays. But he was secretary of the Birla Mills and earned well. He has willed away practically all he possessed. During his lifetime too he spent liberally on charities. He was a born reformer. The cause of the widow was as dear to him as that of Harijans, and by his will he provided for both these, the bequest to be spent in his home, Pilani.

Harijan, 3-8-1935
471. SELF-SUFFICIENT KHADI

The conditions promoting the success of and governing self-sufficient khadi are different from those governing khadi produced for the town-dweller who would not or cannot toil to make it at any stage of its manufacture. In khadi, made for sale, every process from sowing and picking of cotton to weaving the yarn can be distributed with ease, especially when the cost of labour is equalized or nearly so. Specialization under supervision and on a co-operative basis must yield better returns. But where an article is produced for personal use, the greater the concentration of all the processes in the same family or even the same hands, the greater the economy of time and money. A person, who has a little land which he can call his own even for a fair period and works on it daily, can have his khadi for mere labour put in by him or his during their odd moments. All he needs is instruction or education to show how each one can make his own khadi practically for nothing. When labour has to be paid for and that at an equal rate per period, spinning would take in the largest part of the outlay. For spinning yarn for one yard of Khadi takes longer than any of the other processes anterior or posterior to it will take. If a person gins, cards and spins for himself, which he can do easily, he will get his khadi almost at the same price as mill-cloth. The cost of an article represents the cost of labour spent in its production. So when the whole labour comes from the user himself the cost is practically nothing, when that labour is given during leisure hours. Self-sufficient khadi eliminates the middleman altogether. It is the easiest method of perceptibly increasing the income of the millions of the semi-starved villagers.

But will the villager ever take to self-sufficient khadi? Yes, if we have faith accompanied by technical skill, or rather a living faith that will move mountains and give the worker all the skill necessary for his task which is undoubtedly difficult. But whether difficult or easy it has hardly been attempted as yet on any large or organized scale or a well conceived plan. Not without a well conceived, India-wide effort to educate the villagers to produce their own cloth and thus stop the unnecessary drain from their villages of what little they possess, will the A.I.S.A. have justified its existence; for as I have been of late insisting in these columns, the message of khadi is nothing less than its universal use in the villages by local production and local use. The beginning has to be made by inducing cotton cultivation in every village, even in those where it is never known to have been grown. Without decentralization of cotton cultivation, universal manufacture in villages may not be possible. We have authentic examples of deserts having been turned into smiling gardens by judicious manipulation of the soil. It ought not, therefore, to be impossible to grow enough cotton in every village, for local use. Not only will this cheapen khadi for the villagers, but it will also improve the durability of khadi. Experience has conclusively demonstrated that the strength of yarn and the output are affected by the variety of cotton used and the manner of picking, cleaning, ginning, carding and spinning cotton. A material from which the famous Dacca muslin could be produced must demand gentle handling during all the processes it undergoes, before it comes out as shabnam or the morningdew.

Harijan, 3-8-1935

472. REMARKS ON BODY-LABOUR

Why worry about those who do not do body-labour? I have never imagined that every man on earth will earn his bread by the sweat of his brow, but I have simply enunciated the golden rule. Are you prepared to do it? If you are, you need not be jealous of the man who is not prepared to do it or cannot do it. I may not be able to earn what fruit and milk I eat by mere body-labour, but that means that I am to be pitied, the rule is not affected. Only a few people can observe brahmacharya, but should they, therefore, be jealous of the millions who cannot? The latter may be pitied, rather than be envied. . . . I have indicated the ideal to work up to. Let everyone try to observe it as best as one can. Don’t worry because you are incapable of doing any body-labour. Do whatever other clean labour you can, and be sure that you do not exploit those that labour for you. Do not worry about the doctors and the rest who in your opinion seem to have no time for body-labour. When they will practise their professions in a pure spirit of service to the community, the community will take care to see that they are not starved.

Harijan, 3-8-1935

1 This is extracted from the “Weekly Letter” by Mahadev Desai, who had reported: “Some of the simplest things that Gandhiji has been saying and writing seem to puzzle and perplex people. One of these is Gandhiji’s insistence on bread-labour.” What follows is Gandhiji’s reply to them.
473. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

August 3, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

I do not have anything to say in reply to either of your two letters just now. I am sending them to the persons concerned. I had sent them for perusal to Sardar and Narahari, as they also had got similar letters. They have nothing to say in the matter. There was a reference to Joshi’s dress about which I have already asked you. I haven’t yet heard from him. What was the charge against him? It should be enough for assistant teachers like him if they attend the school in khadi. Nothing more should be expected of them. It would be fine, of course, if he has faith in khadi.

Just now I am under great pressure since senior co-workers have assembled here.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8467. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

474. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

August 3, 1935

CHI. BRIJKRISHNA,

You should not enter such deep waters, you should do only what is within your capacity. The incident of the false rupee coin involved grave sin and the other too denoted weakness. Anyway we are all subject to frailties; may God save us from them. These days it is quite cool here but it is bound to get hot when the rains cease. I have a feeling that you should settle in a place like Almora. That too offers ample scope for service. Everything is all right here.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA
KATRA KHUSHAL RAI
DELHI

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 2437
475. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

WARDHA,
August 3, 1935

CHI. JAMNALAL,

You are proceeding to Indore to collect funds for the purse. In this connection you want to be clear on these three points:

1. How will this money be spent?
2. Should any earmarked donation be accepted?
3. Whether I wish to form a trust or a committee to deal with the expenditure or if I have thought of any alternative arrangement.

Here is my clarification on these points: Although my main requirement is for the propagation of Hindi in South India, I would like to utilize the funds when occasion arises for provinces like Bengal, Assam, Sind, Gujarat and Punjab where Hindi is not known well or has not been propagated. There should be no objection to accepting for the purse earmarked contributions if a donor wishes to contribute for the work in any of these provinces or for the training of necessary propagandists.

Now about a trust or a committee. I intend to form a trust or a committee or a registered institution when the whole sum is collected and disburse the funds through it under my own supervision.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 2974

476. LETTER TO SATYADEV

August 3, 1935

BHAJ SATYADEV,

You are running a new sect. I will not be able to say anything about it. Therefore, why should I trouble you to come over here? By all means continue to correspond from Lahore.

I had carefully considered what you had to say in your earlier letter. I gave my reply only after that. I have not found anything despicable in Vishal Bharat. I have found him to be a truthful person.
I do not agree with all his views. But there is nothing wrong in it. Except you nobody has complained against him. Do you agree with this?

Among those who are around me, whom have you not found to be truthful and honest? If you give incontrovertible evidence [against anyone], I would give him up. Except Mahadev you perhaps don’t know the others.

Yours,
M. K. GANDHI

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

477. LETTER TO ISHWARDA S

August 3, 1935

BHAI ISHWARDA S,

I have both your letters. You seem to have a mania for asking questions. So I will not answer them. Rest content with whatever you can gain from Harijan and Harijan Sevak and try to put into practice as much as you like in it to the best of your ability.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

478. LETTER TO VALJI G. DESAI

WARDHA,
August 4, 1935

CHI. VALJI,

I have disallowed your article on Bengal khadi. I have an impression that I wrote to you on the matter. I will see about the suggestion for increasing the yield of cow’s milk. I see nothing wrong at present in the moneys of the village Industries Association being deposited in banks.

I cannot express a definite opinion about sterilization. I am inclined against the idea, however. We must endure the fruit of our sins. Forcible sterilization is likely very much to increase immorality and lead to coercion. The theory of degeneration seems to me to be without any foundation.
Govindlal had written to me about Govindnagar. It is not advisable for us to take interest in the matter. Let him approach the Municipality.

What books do you want? If you send me a list, I will try to procure them. But I will not permit you to keep late hours for reading them and harm your eyes. I hope you are all in good health.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 7473. Courtesy: Valji G. Desai

479. LETTER TO G.D. BIRLA
August 4, 1935
Bhai Ghanshyamdas,

I have your letter, and all the earlier ones too. My letter did not at all imply that there was any shortcoming in your presentation of the case. So far as I remember I meant to say that on your part you did everything well but I feared that the interpretation of the agreement is bound to create many problems. But my mind is at ease; what is to be will be. We can only follow our duty fearlessly. Do come away when your task is completed. To remain there idle would not suit you either, though you may certainly stay on if it seems desirable in the interests of health.

You must be receiving all the news of the Harijan Sangh.

Blessings from
BAPU

From Hindi: C.W. 8013. Courtesy: G.D. Birla

480. LETTER TO LAXMI NIVAS BIRLA
August 4, 1935
Chh. Laxmi Nivas,

I have your letter. I got all the earlier ones. I am sending a letter for Father; do write or wire to me if he has already left.

All are well, I hope.

Blessings from
BAPU

From Hindi: C.W. 8018. Courtesy: G.D. Birla
481. LETTER TO MOOLCHAND AGRAWAL

August 4, 1935

Bhai Moolchand,

I had both your letters.
The remedy for the boycott is to remain unaffected by it.

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 757

482. MESSAGE TO “HANSA”

WARDHA,
August 5, 1935

Hansa is a unique enterprise in the whole of India. A monthly of this kind is sorely needed if Hindi or Hindustani is to become the national language. Through the medium of the national language all should become acquainted with the current writings in all the provincial languages. It is very gratifying that whosoever desires can get this benefit at a cost of only half a rupee a month.

M. K. Gandhi

From Hindi: C.W. 7582. Courtesy: K.M. Munshi

483. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

August 5, 1935

Chh. Amala,

You are unnecessarily suspicious. And now that you are grandmother of five pupils, you can afford to ignore Mahadev, me and a whole host of lovers. Slivers, I have asked Satisbabu to send you at once. I hope you have got them by this time. I am glad you are feeling settled there.

Love.

BAPU

SHRI AMALABHN SPIEGEL
SANTINIKETAN, via BOLPUR

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library
484. LETTER TO K. M. MUNSHI

August 5, 1935

BHAI MUNSHI,

You have brought out an attractive pamphlet indeed. You are certainly likely to spare no pains in regard to the get-up. If we always receive articles as attractively got up as this pamphlet, we can want nothing more.

My message¹ is enclosed. Please don’t yield to the temptation of getting it engraved.

The request for an article may perhaps be more than I can meet. If I get time, I will write out something. Can you suggest a subject?

Take care and enlist enough subscribers in advance.

I had a brief talk with Tandonji, and that, too, by chance. I had nothing particular to tell him. The purport of what I told him was that it was necessary to keep him informed.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 7581. Courtesy: K.M. Munshi

485. LETTER TO N.R. MALKANI

WARDHA,
August 6, 1935

MY DEAR MALKANI,

As to Hariji² all’s well that ends well. He suggests decentralization. Please send me list of members of the Executive and tell me who are likely to come. Send an invitation to Hariji, if he is not on the Board³.

Yours,

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 916

¹ Vide “Message to “Hansa”“, 5-8-1935
² H. N. Kunzru
³ Harijan Sevak Sangh Board; vide also “Harijan Sevak Sangh Resolutions”
DEAR SHIVAPRASAD,

Received your letter. You have not forgotten the country even in your ill health. After my severance from the Congress, the Working Committee met here for the first time. It matters little whether it meets here or somewhere else. Your question is why I am so very interested in the Congress after I have severed my connections with it, and why I give my advice and opinion to them. I think you already know that when I severed my connection with the Congress I had already said that, if anything be referred to me, I would give my opinion. To control the Congress and to give advice to Congressmen are two different things. The Congress Committee held its sittings here, but I never participated therein. I am totally in the dark regarding its full proceedings up till now. Whenever any member wanted to consult me or have my opinion, they used to call at my place and I used to give them my advice most willingly. I do not see any reason for not doing so. I came out of the Congress only for its benefit. I cannot forgo the ideals of the Congress. Knowingly if I refuse to give them my advice, I fall from dharma.

Now as regards Council-entry, I think Council-entry is dharma at this stage but not for myself, for I have devoted myself to something else. My sadhana at present is non-violent disobedience of laws. Council-entry will prove a hindrance in the realization of that end of mi-ne. Do you not know, what is one man’s meat is another man’s poison?

I hope I have given answers to all your questions which will be to your satisfaction.

Leave the Council-entry to me and devote yourself entirely to village industry and Hindi prachar. If you will devote heart and soul to the above, you will not get time to think of other things. May God grant you speedy, perfect recovery.¹

Blessings from
BAPU

The Searchlight, 6-9-1935

487. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

WARDHA,
August 7, 1935

CHI. AMALA,

Your wonderful letter. Nobody believed that you were going to shave your head and if you had, the hairs would have begun to grow again. I hope the grandchildren² are doing well.

Love.

BAPU

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

¹ According to The Hindu, 30-8-1935, the addressee had in his reply said: “I cannot even for a moment imagine how you could advocate Council-entry where everyone is required to take an oath of loyalty to the King and how you consider it in accordance with the resolution of the Lahore and Karachi Congress.” The Hindu had also reported: “Mr. Mahadev Desai, Gandhiji’s Secretary, acknowledging the letter wrote, ‘Your letter reached Bapuji. As regards taking of the oath, Bapuji says that Council-entry was decided upon seeing the present condition of our country and for those who take an oath, it is not good on their part to do anything against the Government. In the attainment of swaraj, this is also a stage and he considers this stage essential.’”

² The addressee’s pupils; vide “Letter to Margarete Spiegel”, 5-8-1935
488. LETTER TO G. A. GAVAI

[Before August 8, 1935]

MY DEAR GAVAI,

I have gone through the interesting document left by you with me. This is my opinion:

All rules must be interpreted so as to advance their purpose; in this case the interest of the Harijans. Therefore election of four is not obligatory but if there are more than four candidates, four have to be elected by the college. Withdrawals are certainly permissible at any stage. Any candidate of the Harijan class has the right of becoming a candidate for the general election. If the electoral college is considered a burden, Harijans can any day by practically unanimous agreement forgo the privilege. Such a provision is made in the Pact itself.

Needless to say mine cannot be in any way regarded as a legal opinion. It is that of one who had a hand in promoting the Pact.

M. K. G.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai.

Also The Bombay Chronicle, 11-8-1935

489. LETTER TO A STUDENT

August 8, 1935

No matter how weak a person is in body, if it is a shame to flee he will stand his ground and die at his post. This would be non-

1 According to The Bombay Chronicle, the addressee, a member of the Legislative Council (Depressed Classes), had, in an interview with Gandhiji at Wardha, “explained the interpretation of the Poona Pact and the view taken by the members of the Central Provinces Delimitation Committee on the question of primary elections”.

2 In the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary, this letter precedes “Letter to a Student”, 8-8-1935, the following item.

3 In his “Weekly Letter” Mahadev Desai had reported: “A student who is a regular reader of Harijan asked Gandhiji whether his own conduct would be described as cowardice or as only natural under circumstances he thus described: ‘I am physically very weak, and I naturally avoid burly blustering ruffians wherever I see them. Why should it be cowardice if one flees from a monster against whom one can never hold out? Is a mouse a coward because it flees from a cat?’” violence and bravery. No matter how weak he is, he will use what strength he has in inflicting injury on his opponent and die in the attempt. This is bravery but not non-violence. If when his duty is to face danger, he flees, it is cowardice. In the first case man will have love or charity in him. In the second and third cases there would be dislike or distrust and fear.

Yours,

M. K. G.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai. Also Harijan, 17-8-1935

490. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

WARDHA,
August 8, 1935

CHI. VASUMATI,

I got both your letters. I am very glad indeed that you are keeping good health. Now go on doing whatever work you can. Tell Gangabehn that I got her letter. There was nothing particular in it which called for a reply. Ask her to write to me from time to time and consult me whenever she is in doubt.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9405. Also C.W. 651. Courtesy: Vasumati Pandit

491. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

August 8, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

I have received no such letter from Mathew as he speaks of. His demand is against our principles. He persists in it in spite of repeated warnings. For the present, we are unable to send him anything for his parents, nor can he come to me just now. He can consider himself permanent so long as he is satisfied with bare maintenance and works for it. When we are fully convinced about his sincerity and ability, we may give him something for his parents, according to his deserts. But that is a matter for the distant future.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8486. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi
492. LETTER TO PURUSHOTTAM K. JERAJANI

WARDHA,
August 8, 1935

BHAI KAKUBHAI,

I have found no mistake in your work. Even before I got your letter I had already written to Ratubhai\(^1\) that for the sake of the inquiry the transfer of a person who has to be transferred for some other reason should not be stopped. The inquiry will of course go on. Let me know when your inquiry is over. Do not hesitate to write to me out of pity, thinking that I am over-burdened with work. I am very pleased that it had occurred to you early that the spinners’ wages should be increased. The fact that the idea had occurred to my co-workers before it did to me makes my path easier. You may therefore take the credit for being original. I now wish that you should also earn the credit for not letting that affect the sales too much. You have no doubt taken the first bold step in that direction.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C W. 10833. Courtesy: Purushottam K. Jerajani

493. A LETTER\(^2\)

August 8, 1935

What special message do you have to give that impels you to bring out this journal? Anyway, to bring out a journal has these days become a profession. Do you not have any other profession? Leave it alone.

[From Hindi]

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

\(^1\) Ratubhai Desai, representative of the workers of the Bombay Bhandar of the All-India Spinners’ Association

\(^2\) To a woman correspondent; the letter appeared in Harijan, 17-8-1935.
494. LESSON TO LILAVATI ASAR

August 9, 1935

1. A clause beginning with ‘when’ can be used either before or after the principal clause. ‘When’ is used for all tenses as in Gujarati, e.g., ‘When you come, we shall play.’

2. ‘Before you come, I shall have gone.’ ‘Before’-pahelan. ‘Since you have come, we have been all well.’ ‘Since’-tyarthi or karanake [because]. ‘Ago’ is not used to make an independent sentence. ‘Long ago’-lamba kal pahelan, ‘years ago’-varsho pahelan; they are thus used to suggest the tense.

3. ‘Large’ is used for inanimate objects only, e.g., ‘A large vessel’; but ‘A big boy’.
‘Big can be used in both cases. The same is the case with ‘small’ and ‘little’.

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9254. Also C.W. 10103. Courtesy: Lilavati Asar

495. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

August 9, 1935

CHI. LILAVATI,

You should improve your handwriting still further. It is not proper that you are not keeping the rule.

You have certainly done well to reduce your expenses. If you have patience, everything will be well. Don’t reduce the expenses to a

1 Lilavati Asar had written : “(1) The 14th lesson of the Pathmala is now completed. Now I will start on the 15th. It is about the past continuous tense. I am giving you one example : ‘When I came yesterday you were writing.’ Here ‘when’ is at the beginning of the sentence. The second sentence is as follows : ‘We were coming to school when the bell rang.’ Now in the first sentence ‘when’ is placed at the beginning of the sentence and in the second sentence after. Is there any difference in their usage? Is there any rule as to when ‘when’ is placed before or after? Is the verb in the past tense when ‘when’ is used? (2) Another thing I do not know well is how to use ‘since’. What is the difference between ‘since’, before’ and ‘ago’? (3) The two words ‘large’ and ‘big’ are they synonyms? Can both he used in the same place? Is it the same with ‘small’ and ‘little’?”
level which you may not be able to keep up. Take every step after careful thought.

If you do not follow any of the explanations I give in your exercises, ask me again. If you use sheets of the same quality and size and keep a margin for comments, the exercises will be easier to preserve.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 10103. Courtesy: Lilavati Asar

496. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

WARDHA,
August 9, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

I scribbled a letter to you yesterday in great hurry. Enclosed are letters for Lilavati and Mathew. Read the letter to Mathew carefully before passing it on to him. You also should talk to him with firmness. If he harasses you, relieve him. Keep him only if he teaches carefully and puts his heart into his work, and also does some physical work. What does he do for his meals?

Did you pay the rent for Harilal? What makes you think he wouldn’t get liquor in Junagadh? I’m sure he won’t behave well in regard to anything. One thing is certain, however. You will have less trouble there, that is, if he does not come back.

I understand about Radha and Santok. Your suggestion regarding Pyarelal is correct. We have got to agree to it.

Enclosed please find another letter from Vajubhai. As there was nothing new in it, I did not send it to you earlier. There is no question of handing over the school to him. It is you who have to develop it. I have not yet been able to send him your letters.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II

1 Vide “Letter to Narandas Gandhi”, 8-8-1935
QUESTION: In Bihar something like five thousand women walk ten miles a day to receive the present scanty wage. More would come if we could sell more khadi. What would happen to these poor women, if the demand for khadi disappeared?”

GANDHI: Quite, right. I know the same is the state of things in Bengal villages and in South India. But I would put your proposition in a converse way. Supposing you gave one pie instead of two pies an hour that you give at present, you would be employing not 5,000 women but 10,000 women. And supposing these helpless women were ready to accept even that miserable pittance, would you dare to do it? I say, you would not. That means that you will have to determine a point beyond which you cannot go. Call it if you will a ‘helpless minimum’. But if that minimum has to be fixed, why not fix it once and for all, no matter whether it affects some of the producers for the time being adversely? So long as the number of purchasers is limited and the number of producers unlimited, there is no doubt that you will have to turn some of the producers away. Why not then have a deliberately fixed, high enough minimum wage to ensure these poor women at least a living wage? Otherwise there would be no end to this unconscious exploitation. A paper manufacturer sends us paper from a place. He is paying the labourers at the rate of six pice per day, and says he hopes to make the paper cheaper. I tell him I will not have it cheaper.

Then you will now change the definition of khadi. It no longer remains hand-spun hand-woven cloth, but cloth hand-spun and hand-woven at a particular wage.

There is no doubt. I am sorry that you are making the discovery so late.

But spinning is a supplementary occupation, we have been telling the world all these years. It is done only in one’s spare hours.

1 This is extracted from “Weekly Letter” by Mahadev Desai who had explained that the presence of Congress Working Committee members like Rajendra Prasad, Vallabhbhai Patel, Jairamdas Doulatra, Jamnalal Bajaj, Pattabhi Sitaramayya, Gangadharrao Deshpande and J.B. Kripalani “stimulated the discussion” on the subject which had become a burning question ever since Gandhiji wrote the article on the “Need for a Standard Wage”
Yes and no. I know that there are thousands who are doing it for the whole day. To them it is not a supplementary but a substantive occupation. And even if it is not, why not give them for an hour’s work what you would usually give for any other hour’s work?

Do you know that in some parts of Guntur District, people are taking to rice-pounding because it fetches a higher wage than spinning?

I do. But you support my argument. They will certainly choose whatever work fetches them a higher wage. Then why not dignify the spinner by a wage which will be equal to any other wage?

Practical difficulties are very great. You cannot induce these spinners to conform to your terms. You want a regular register of them, you want them to spin yarn of a particular count, of particular evenness and of particular strength. How will all that be done?

The difficulties have got to be conquered. Don’t I know that for considerable length of time there will be tales of long-drawn-out agony—some saying we cannot induce the spinners to spin for themselves, some saying we cannot get them to conform to our requirements?

But supposing they conform to our regulations and we give them better machines and better spindles, they will automatically do more work and more than double the wage.

That they will do automatically but for no virtue of yours. That more production means more earning is obvious enough. But what are we going to do, by way of justice which we have denied them?

No, we shall have to forget that khadi has to compete with mill-cloth. Mill-cloth is mill-cloth and khadi is khadi. The mill-cloth producer will always concentrate on cheapening it, we must concentrate on justice and a fair wage. There can be therefore no comparison between the two. As regards the practical difficulties, let us reduce our establishments, let us stop advertisements, let us not patronize the private producer. It is going to be the test of those who are pledged to khadi. Let them produce it themselves or pay for it enough to give our brothers and sisters a living wage. It is a question of the self-purification of all khadi-weavers. Let us not forget that our mission is the service of Daridranarayana. Difficulties there may be, but let us solve them gradually.

_Harijan,_ 10-8-1935

---

1 Mahadev Desai had concluded: “It seemed to be generally agreed that the experiment must be started wherever possible and with varying but increased wages for spinners.”
498. THE BOMBAY KHADI BHANDAR

The Bombay Khadi Bhandar is the largest khadi bhandar depot of the A.I.S.A. It is no single individual’s property. It belongs to the A.I.S.A. as the sole trustees for Daridranarayana. As such its primary concern must be Daridranarayana. Though it has served as a means of giving honourable employment to some middle-class people, it must not be regarded as an employment bureau for them. Since a new policy is in the course of adoption, reduction is being made in the staff in keeping with the requirements of the new policy. Hitherto extraordinary efforts have been made to push up sales of khadi sent from all parts of India and ordered by Shri Jerajani in accordance with patterns designed by his inventive genius. But this effort meant overhead charges out of proportion to the results achieved in terms of Daridranarayana. And it drew the attention of the provincial workers away from their main work which was to make khadi self-supporting or popular in their own provinces. The universal mission of khadi cannot be fulfilled without true provincial effort. That can be achieved only by its distribution as far as possible in the innumerable centres of production. No doubt some khadi will always be required for big cities like Bombay which will never produce it themselves. That will be a healthy demand to be met without extraordinary effort. The rich variety one sees in the city khadi shop was possible only because the Association put forth the effort to meet the varied tastes of the city public. But time has come, if khadi is to fulfil its mission, to turn the attention towards centres of production. They are far too few. Every village, if not every home, has to be such a centre even as every home is a centre of production of cooked food. The economy of the kitchen is wholly different from the economy of the books. Even so is the economy of khadi. The contemplated change, then, means substantial reduction in the staff of large bhandars run by or on behalf of the A.I.S.A. It also means reduction in the number, if not disappearance, of certified private producers. How it will all be worked, it is difficult to say as yet. It is being carefully worked out by Shri Shankerlal Banker who has been travelling throughout India for that special purpose.

But meanwhile this is to warn the lovers of khadi, the votaries of Daridranarayana, the prices of khadi must go up. greater technical skill must be developed among khadi workers, a greater spirit of self-sacrifice must be evoked amongst all the classes connected with the production and distribution of khadi. Sales depots have taken delight in showing a progressive decline in the prices. I remember the time when I sold the first piece of very coarse khadi for over one rupee per yard. Such coarse khadi will not fetch two annas today. It is not on sale at khadi depots. This decrease has been brought about no doubt by progressive efficiency in every department of khadi, but it has been largely purchased at the cost of the spinner. And yet the concrete shape of Daridranarayana is the spinner—the lowest paid labourer in all India. It was good that the A.I.S.A. found a means of employment on the widest scale possible for the chronic unemployed at a wage, be it ever so low, even one pie per hour. But if it is to discharge its trust, it must find at least a subsistence wage for the spinner. Her receipt for the spinning hour should be in proportion to the amount she would need to live if she worked for eight hours a day. What that amount is to be is not so much matter of moment, as that there must be an increase in the rate of wages earned by the spinners. Henceforth the reports of the A.I.S.A. should state not how much reduction in the price of khadi has taken place during the period under review, but they should take pride in showing how much increase has been made in spinning wage. It should not be satisfied—I cannot be satisfied—till the spinner’s wage per hour has been put on a level with, say, the weaver’s. And let the buying public remember that they are the unnamed members of that great trust and that the spinners are their wards. Once that relation is realized there should be no difficulty in the progressive rise of khadi in the geometrical ratio.
Would that every lover of khadi will know his duty and falsify the fears of the unbelievers among khadi workers who think that the public will never pay a higher price for khadi!

Harijan, 10-8-1935
499. LETTER TO BHUJANGILAL CHHAYA

WARDHA,
August 10, 1935

BHI. BHUJANGILAL,

Do what your conscience tells you and your strength permits you to do. What others may advise is not one’s dharma. Dharma is what a man himself believes to be such. How can another man know your heart? You should, therefore, pray to God to help you to recognize your path. He is the only true guide.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2607

500. LETTER TO PARIKSHITLAL L. MAJMUDAR

August 10, 1935

Bhai PARIKSHITLAL,

I get your letters. You are making good progress in collections. I had a talk with Shankerlal, too. I will have a talk with Bapa when he comes. We should place our trust in God and go on working.

The incidents of harassment of Harijans are a painful matter. It seems we shall have no option but to take such cases to court. There must, however, be a local agitation to protest against every such incident.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

Sardar says that it would be proper for us to ask Taluka Boards for money for Harijan schools and that we would get the money if we applied. Think over this suggestion.

501. LETTER TO MANU GANDHI
August 10, 1935

CHI. MANUDI,

I got your letter after I had finished writing the letters. I had already got the news about Ba’s illness yesterday and, therefore, wrote today. You must be fine.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 1546. Courtesy: Manubehn S. Mashruwala

502. LETTER TO KASHI GANDHI
August 10, 1935

CHI. KASHI (GANDHI),

We are put to a test as soon as we enter the *vana*¹. Why this restlessness? If we have dedicated everything to Krishna, one sign of it is that no one can take away our inner happiness. If there is anything that is held back in such dedication, let us surrender it now while entering on this new stage of our life. Nimu and the children are with me.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 10706. Courtesy: Chhaganlal Gandhi

503. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA
August 10, 1935

CHI. BRAJKISAN,

Your letter. There is no harm in using rice husked in the watermill if the grain remains unbroken.

I like it when abuse is showered on me. Its greatest benefit is that it clears the way for better understanding. I would far rather receive abuse than receive worship without being followed. Those who offer

¹ The third stage of life commencing with the 51st year homage will never do anything because they have acquired the habit of doing nothing. But the maligners dislike me from their hearts, therefore they can do a great many things when a change of heart occurs.

What can be gained by sending Krishnan under compulsion? He came away only when he was released. Is it not your own duty to manage the work that is being mismanaged by those to whom you entrusted it? This course would be the best.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 2436

504. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

WARDHA,
August 11, 1935

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

I got your letter. After getting the Government’s permission, you should publish the whole correspondence from the beginning to date. Publish also the letter appointing the Committee¹. After doing that we should wholly concern ourselves with producing the evidence. If Lallubhai² has recovered and is strong enough to do the work, it will be all right. But I am very doubtful if he will be able to study the matter in sufficient detail. I would be glad if Kunzru joins. Gilder and Bahadurji, however, will suffice. It will not matter if the third person is a little weak.

I understand about Balvantrai. We should, however, go on doing what we think right. I had glanced at the article in _The Servant of India_. I didn’t have even the time to read it carefully. Rajenbabu has taken it away.

If you can get . . .”s address, pass on the accompanying letter to him.

All the other accompanying material is for Mahadev.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

¹ The Committee in connection with the plague relief work, undertaken by Vallabhbhai Patel at Borsad, which the Government had alleged to be unscientific.
² Lallubhai Shamaldas Mehta
³ The name is omitted in the source.
[PS.]
If you have thought of anything with regard to Vithalbhai’s money, let me know.

[From Gujarati]

_Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 176-7_

505. LETTER TO N.R. MALKANI

WARDHA,
August 12, 1935

MY DEAR MALKANI,

I see quite clearly that you have not done much secretarial work. Or you would not send me your mail. You may not know that I had done nothing but secretarial work throughout my stay in South Africa. You have therefore my sympathy. But you will have to keep your peace and good humour in the midst of disappointments, censures from the multitude of employers. It makes no difference that one is a volunteer or rather when one is a volunteer, one has to bear more lashes than otherwise and still say ‘Thank you, Sir’. All the notable secretaries of the world have been made of such noble stuff. You have to belong to that category. More when we meet.

Love.

BAPU

[PS.]
Enclosure for Ba.

From a photostat: G.N. 910

506. LETTER TO ANAND T. HINGORANI

August 12, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

1. No matter how weak a person is in body, if it is a shame to flee, he will stand his ground and die at his post. This would be non-violence and bravery.

2. No matter how weak he is, he will use what strength he has in inflicting injury on his opponent and die in the attempt. This is bravery but not non-violence.

3. If when his duty is to face danger, he flees, it is cowardice.
4. In the first case the man will have love or charity in him. In the 2nd and 3rd cases there would be dislike or distrust and fear.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: C. W. 11072. Courtesy: Anand T. Hingorani

507. LETTER TO DRAUPADI SHARMA

August 12, 1935

CHI. DRAUPADI,

Sharma¹ is to leave today. While he was yet in Calcutta I had no worry regarding you. Henceforth it becomes my duty to keep myself informed regarding you all. Give me the news about yourself and the children. Write about your way of living and also give me your daily routine.

Tell me who are all the people who help you.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Are there any books belonging to the Kanya Ashram?

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, facing p. 184

508. LETTER TO S. D. SATAVLEKAR

August 12, 1935

BHAI SATAVLEKAR,

I am grateful for your loving letter. I think the snake was not venomous at all. Even Panchlegaonkar² said that it was not particularly venomous. It did not bite anyone even though deliberately provoked. Still, your warning is quite proper.

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat of the Hindi: C.W. 4777. Courtesy: S.D. Satavlekar

¹ The addressee’s husband, Hiralal Sharma, who was going to America
² A sadhu reputed for his power over snakes. On Nagpanchami Day (August 4, 1935), he placed a snake around Gandhiji’s neck.
509. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

WARDHA,
August 13, 1935

CHI. PREMA,

I am observing two and a half hours’ silence today to overtake the arrears of correspondence. Disposing of the letters one by one, I saw just now your letter of July 9, 1935.

You did very well in meeting Kelkar¹. It would be good if you could take him to see your work.

What you say about work regarded as unclean is correct. I am giving in Harijanbandhu the portion about the Mahars. Your name will not be published.

Inform me when the Poona resolution is implemented. Which is the other book about Hitler?²

And now I come to your question. There is great risk in taking Russia as a model to be emulated. For one thing, we have no direct knowledge; secondly, the experiment has not yet lasted long enough; and thirdly, they rely on violence for what they are doing. We should, therefore, leave out Russia when thinking about our problems. This must be assumed to be common ground between us, that we do not wish to use violence to force people to do anything. Hence the easiest way of securing justice from the rich is to see that they make the best use of the wealth they earn. This may possibly result in their being no longer eager to acquire much wealth. We need not mind that. Nor need we mind, even if such a result does not follow. We shall in this way get the use of so much wealth without having to bother about its safety. If a large number of rich people become trustees, we shall want nothing more. Your argument springs from the suspicion that the rich will never agree to be trustees of their own property. We needn’t worry if your suspicion is well founded, for truth is bound to triumph ultimately. He who keeps more than he needs is a thief and stolen wealth is like unprocessed mercury. It cannot be digested. We should have faith that the thief will not be able to retain the property he has stolen and should go on employing non-violent means.

¹ N.C. Kelkar
² In Bapana Patro–5 : Ku. Premabehn Kantakne, pp. 230-2, the addressee mentions Mein Kampf, as a book read by Gandhiji and herself, but does not specify “the other book”.

If you are still not satisfied, ask me again, The question you have put is an important one, and if you have fully grasped the meaning of ahimsa my answer should satisfy you as a perfect one.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Lakshmi has gone to Bardoli, Prabhavati is here, and so is Amtussalaam. Ba is in Delhi. Lakshmi has given birth to a son.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 10376. Also C.W. 6815. Courtesy: Premabehn Kantak

510. LETTER TO RAMDAS GANDHI

August 13, 1935

I have your letter. Ultimately everyone lives as he is destined to. So you also will work according to your lights. But as there is destiny so also there is effort and since it is in our hands to make efforts, we are taught not to rely on destiny. That is how the shloka “Action alone is thy province, never the fruits thereof” came into being. We can certainly put it this way: ‘You have a right to make efforts, never to know your destiny.’ We should live as God ordains after making efforts. Do you ponder over the Gita sometimes? Do you keep “Ramagita” with you?

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

---

1 Rajmohan Devdas Gandhi
2 Bhagavad Gita, II. 47
511. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

WARDHA,
August 14, 1935

What do you say to my new secretary?
Love

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 6056. Also C.W. 3386. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

512. LETTER TO PURUSHOTTAM K. JERAJANI

WARDHA,
August 14, 1935

DEAR KAKUBHAI,

I have not fully read the accompanying letter. Mahadev may be still there. If so, give the letter to him to read. Bhai Kishorelal has read it. He thinks that you should read it. If you have any comments to make after reading it, you may do so. If you meet Mahadev, return the letter to him after reading it. If you do not meet him, send it back to me. Make a full inquiry into the allegation.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 10834. Courtesy: Purushottam K. Jerajani

1 This was Gandhiji’s postscript to Amrit Kaur’s letter of even date which read: “Bapu has received your letter of the 11th instant. He is glad you are progressing satisfactorily. The report about neem leaves and tamarind having been discarded is quite wrong. I can vouch for the goodness of the marmalade and you will do well to obtain the recipe when you next come here. Bapu says it is good that you are learning to do your own ‘examinations’—so that you need not trouble the hospital folk. I have only a week left here now—alas! It has been lovely being here. Love from Bapu and me.”
513. LETTER TO H.L. SHARMA

August 14, 1935

CHI. SHARMA,

I have your letter. You did well in supplying all the dates. I have written to Draupadi.¹

I got a telegram from Braj Mohanji telling me of your departure. I had had your earlier letters. The account of your experiences on board should come now.

Were there any books belonging to the Kanya Ashram with you? Chhotelal has sent a memorandum. I have forgotten if you told me anything.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

A list of the books is given on the reverse.

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, facing p. 186

514. LETTER TO SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA

August 14, 1935

BHAI SATISBABU,

Your letter has helped me in understanding things better. I feel somewhat over-burdened. Would it be right to saddle a person with the responsibility of so many committees, paper-work and sundry activities? But I am unable to come to any conclusion. I ought to go and stay in the Pratishthan. But in the absence of personal experience I have no business to hurl any criticism. We shall have an exchange of ideas if you come over here.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1714

¹ Vide “Letter to S. D. Satavlekar”, 12-8-1935
515. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

August 14, 1935

CHI. AMBUJAM.

Today I am writing to you in Hindi. Let me know if you can read it. If you have any difficulty I will write to you in English.

Who are we to look after Kichi? In the end it is God alone who will take care of him.

Nimu is here with me these days. Kano is ill. He has grown very weak. Lakshmi has gone to Bardoli. Kumarappa was sick but is now all right. His sister came and stayed with us for ten days. At present Rajkumari Amrit Kaur and Khurshedbehn are here. Prabhavati and Amtul are of course here.

I got the fruit sent by you. The honey is also good. Send fruit and honey whenever you wish to, but they should be cheap because I need them daily.

My diet is milk, neem and some other leaves and fruit. Sometimes I don’t take fruit.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Hindi original: Ambujammal Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

516. LETTER TO NIRMAL KUMAR BOSE

WARDHA,
August 15, 1935

DEAR NIRMAL BABU.

I have your postcard of the 5th instant. At last I am able to return your article with the necessary corrections. I regret the delay and hope you will have no difficulty in deciphering the corrections.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G.N. 10509
517. LETTER TO MANILAL AND SUSHILA GANDHI

August 15, 1935

CHI. MANILAL AND SUSHILA,

I am dashing this off in great hurry in order not to miss the mail. Everything is going on all right here. I am working under great pressure these days. I don’t get even a minute free. Harilal spends the whole day immersed in a tub of liquor, so to say. All our hopes about his having been reformed are falsified. He is now worse than he was. But one keeps on hoping as long as one breathes. Accordingly, let us hope that, if he lives, some day he will reform himself.

Ba and Manu are in Delhi.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4841. Also C.W. 1253. Courtesy: Sushila Gandhi

518. LETTER TO RASIK DESAI

August 15, 1935

CHI. RASIK,

I am glad that you wrote to me, whatever the pretext.

Live in a manner worthy of the Ashram in every way. The easiest way of sending the Quetta money is to send it by insured registered letter. You can send the amount to Sheth Jamnalal Bajaj at Wardha. I hope you are keeping well enough.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI RASIK DESAI
SHAMALDAS COLLEGE HOSTEL
BHAVNAGAR, KATHIWAR

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6621

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
519. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

August 15, 1935

BHAVI VALLABHBHAI.

I got your letter. Don’t worry, you will get somebody else. We are in no great hurry. Keep Mahadev there as long as necessary. I will try and manage somehow without him. Rajkumari and Khurshed are helping as much as they can. The former disposes of most of the English correspondence. She will leave on the 21st. Khurshedbehn will remain here for the present.

Rajendrababu left today. He was, as usual, accompanied by Mathurababu and Gorakhbabu. The astronomer is leaving for that side this evening.

If necessary, take fourteen instead of seven doses of the powder, but see that you completely get rid of the jaundice. Never leave a job half done.

Your buying a second-class ticket for Andrews was all right. You could feed him well there because we starved him here. If we had fed him here, too, he would have been laid up in bed, as he was in Allahabad.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro–2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 177-8

520. LETTER TO BALVANTSINHA

WARDHA,
August 15, 1935

CHI. BALVANTSINHA.

Four days back Jethalal left for Anantpur. He needed some bhakharis prepared from ghee-softened dough as he buys nothing from the wayside stations. I sanctioned the preparation when Amussalaam referred it to me. I was reminded of the occasion when I had berated you for the same matter;’ the recollection was painful.

1 About three months earlier when the addressee was leaving Wardha
Although I know it turned to your ultimate good, it does not justify my own error. Notwithstanding the purity of motive I am not absolved. Do forgive me, your Bapu is so very imperfect! The other details have been conveyed by K.¹

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1879

521. LETTER TO DR. GOPICHAND BHARGAVA

WARDHA,
August 16, 1935

DEAR DR. GOPICHAND,

As I have now begun to take a direct part in the administration of the A.I.S.A. affairs, I am expected to deal with various standing complaints. One of these is about the Punjab branch. I would like you to give me your brief replies. . . Khadi Bhandar opened by H. Kotak is required in Lahore. There are complaints about the management of the Kashmir branch. I would like to have your views about that branch.

Yours,
BAPU

[PS.]
Please return the enclosed when replying.

From the original: Dr. Gopichand Bhargava Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

522. LETTER TO RAOJIBHAI N. PATEL

Wardha,
August 16, 1935

CHI. RAOJIBHAI,

I had a talk with Chanchal. But she does not wish at all to leave this place. She likes working and, therefore, has won everybody’s love. Being hard-working, she learns things quickly. She does not wish to exchange the certain for the uncertain.

¹ The reference is to a letter dated August 10 from Kishorelal Mashruwala, reproduced in Bapuki Chhayamen
In these circumstances, I for one wouldn’t press her to go there. Only a girl who feels spontaneously attracted by the Harijan Ashram may go there.

Dahibehn is always having some trouble or other. One must endure the body’s punishments. Has the quality of your ghee improved? We have completely stopped ordering ghee from outside.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI RAOJIBHAI PATEL
GRAM UDYOG KARYALAYA
LIMBASI, MATAR TALUKA

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9005

523. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

August 16, 1935

Bhai Vallabhbhai,

I got your letter. I am writing to . . .¹ about . . .² Such incidents are enough to shake one’s faith in God. The only remedy is for those who are vigilant to become more vigilant.

In a recent speech in Poona, Jayakar³ had made very harsh remarks about the Tilak Swaraj Fund. Haribhau⁴ has sent me those remarks. I have written to Jayakar and asked him if the report is correct. I will write to you after I receive his reply.

The labourer’s letter and the reply to it are enclosed.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

The letter to . . . is enclosed. Get his address and send it on to him.

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro–2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, p. 178

¹ The names in this item are omitted in the source.
² ibid
³ Mukundrao R. Jayakar, a liberal leader
⁴ Haribhau Phatak, a congress worker of Poona
524. DECENTRALIZATION?

Before the forthcoming meeting (on 30th instant) of the executive of the Harijan Sevak Sangh Board, among the many important questions for discussion, will be that of the need for decentralization which some provincial boards have felt for the sake of the better advancement of its object.

Centralization was insisted upon by Sheth Ghanshyamdas Birla and Shri Amritlal Thakkar for the decisive reason that money was found by the Centre, the Presidents of the Provincial Boards were selected by Sheth Ghanshyamdas, and the policy was also evolved by the Central Board.

Though I have concurred in the policy of centralization I have always desired, as I have no doubt the Board, too, has desired, decentralization at the first opportunity. But that could only be done when the Provincial Boards were ready and able to raise their own funds. I would love nothing so much as that every village had its Harijan Board and was able to find its own funds. When that day comes, it will also be one of complete abolition of untouchability in every shape and form. For the present it has to be unfortunately admitted that the cause is still led by a handful of earnest reformers scattered all over the country. Not all of them are able to raise funds locally nor are they all sure of the policy to be followed. I use the word ‘policy’ deliberately. For while everyone knows the goal, everyone does not know the grave limitations under which the reformer labours. The slightest error of judgment, a hasty action or a hasty word may put back the hands of the clock of progress. Policies have, therefore, to be cautiously evolved in the light of experiences daily gained by the few who have no other thought but that of serving Harijans and ridding Hinduism of its greatest blot.

Harijan workers will be grieved to learn that there are more than Rs. 80,000 as advances to Provincial Boards in the books of the Central Office.

This has a tale to tell. Those Boards against whom the money stand have not been able to find their quota. It is also a grievous fact that not all the Boards have sent in their returns in accordance with the prescribed manner. The third thing to note is that in spite of the ceaseless vigilance of the Secretaries and their tours, the district organizations have not functioned as they might have done. This is not to say that workers in the provinces and districts have nothing to their credit. Indeed the columns of Harijan have abundantly shown, what amazing progress the cause has made during the very short period that the Boards have functioned. But just now my purpose is to examine the debit side so as to enable interested workers to come to a right decision. It may be that the defects to which I have drawn attention are due to the policy of overcentralization. If it be so, the advocates of decentralization have to prove their case. Had the Centre felt the need, it would have come long ago. The forthcoming meeting is that of the executive of the Board. It consists of seven members of whom the Chairman is absent. I would invite the Harijan sevaks throughout the provinces to send their considered opinion to the Secretaries at Delhi supporting them as briefly as they can with facts and figures. After all in a cause so humanitarian as that of Harijans involving the very existence of an ancient faith, nothing should be left undone that would advance it. Personal considerations do not count in such matters.

_Harijan, 17-8-1935_

525. COMPOST MANURE

There is in Indore an Institute of Plant Industry. It issues from time to time leaflets for those whom it is designed to serve. The first one of these describes the utility and the method of preparing compost manure from farm wastes. As it is valuable for Harijans and village workers who handle cattle-dung and night-soil, I copy below practically the whole of the leaflet incorporating footnotes into the running description of the process.

_Harijan, 17-8-1935_

526. SNAKE POISONING

Dr. Sokhey, Director of Haffkine Institute, has kindly supplied me with a note on Indian snakes. As co-workers are spreading out in villages, it becomes necessary to arm them with information in matters of common occurrence in villages where city conveniences are not reproduced here; it appeared, in parts, in this and the following issue of Harijan.
unfortunately unavailable. The most dangerous is snakebite which proves fatal in many cases if the necessary measures are not immediately adopted. I give below the important portions of the note. The whole contains useful information about identification of snakes. But the description is too technical for the village worker to follow. I am, therefore, omitting this part of the note.

Since nine-tenths of snakes are non-poisonous and are valuable protectors of fields against rats, etc., it would be a good thing if a simple key for distinguishing poisonous from non-poisonous snakes can be had. Meanwhile let those interested study the very simple remedy described below:

Though Col. Sokhey has warned me that there is no sure remedy against bites of poisonous snakes except injections of antivenom serum, I cannot resist giving the remedy claimed to have been successfully tried by Just, the author of Return to Nature. I have tried it successfully in two or three cases of snake-bites and numerous cases of scorpion stings. It consists in applying an ample earth bandage to the affected part. Take as much clean earth as possible, add cold water to it and make a cold poultice of it. Spread the composition an inch as a pack on a wet linen piece, fold, apply and bandage. If it is a toe that is bitten, the leg should have the poultice up to the knee, if a finger, the whole area should be bandaged, the more the better. All the other treatment as described in the foregoing note should undoubtedly be taken. And if the serum injection is taken, the earth treatment may be quite superfluous. I was assured that if the injection was given in time, it was a sure antidote. Nor can I vouch for the absolute efficacy of the earth treatment. For I have no knowledge that the bites treated by me were highly poisonous. I suggest the earth treatment as being harmless and most easily available in villages and as being highly acclaimed by its author.

Harijan, 17-8-1935

---

1 Vide Appendix Extracts from Dr. Sokhey’s notes on snake poisoning.

2 Ibid
527. LETTER TO N.R. MALKANI

WARDHA,
August 17, 1935

DEAR MALKANI,

Your letter of the 15th instant arrived today but the draft of Deed and papers in connection with the new Trust have not been received.

Yours,

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 1164

528. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

August 17, 1935

CHI. LILAVATI,

I got your loving gift. Be firm in your thoughts; learn and serve.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9336. Also C.W. 6611. Courtesy: Lilavati Asar

529. LETTER TO NIRANJAN SWAMI

August 17, 1935

BHAI NIRANJAN SWAMI,

I found nothing in your articles to justify their publication. Even so, your labour in thinking on those subjects and writing the articles will not be altogether wasted.

What shall I say to Chi. Vallabh? Vinoba will see what should be done about him. I cannot interfere with the running of that Ashram. I know, however that Vallabh has to carry heavy enough burden in managing the Nalwadi Ashram.

BAPU

SHRI NIRANJAN SWAMI
AULPAD

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 10466

1 Alias Makanji Gopalji
2 Vallabh Swami
530. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

August 17, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

What shall we do about Harilal? He is suspicious about everything and considers himself innocent. I hope he does not create scandal in Junagadh.

I am indeed very glad that you are fully satisfied with Mathew. If he devotes himself whole-heartedly to his work, he will make a name for himself in Rajkot itself. When you are fully convinced, you may pay him more if you can. In any case, you must give him physical work to do. And also he must learn Hindi.

Send the money which they have asked for from Sabarmati.

Send me Vajubhai’s address which he has given in his last letter. I need it. I have not yet been able to write to him.

I am returning Prof. Joshi’s letter. If he has faith in khadi, why doesn’t he get a khadi dhoti? Superfine khadi dhotis are available now. If he himself would spin fine yarn, he can have a dhoti made at low cost. There is no reason at all for relieving him. I liked his letter. You should send it to Narahari.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8470. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

531. LETTER TO ISHWARDA

August 17, 1935

BHAI ISHWARDA,

The couplets composed by you concern a guru and his disciple and that too when they are residing at the same place. Neither am I a guru nor are you a disciple. I have never made anyone my disciple. I hope you know this. I find a sort of listlessness in your questions. They are such that they have already been covered in my writings. But you don’t study and ponder over them.

Blessings from

From a copy of the Hindi: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
532. THE WAY TO SERVE

For nearly a year a lady has been doing welfare work in a village. She is gradually making some headway. She has already crossed some huge hurdles. She ploughs with the farmer’s ploughshare, cleans roads and teaches women how to spin. She is teaching the young and the old. From among the experiences which she had, I give below¹ a recent one as it is a very useful one.

The Chamars would not take a goat’s carcass as it had been touched by a Mahar . . . To take it to the Mangs I put the basket on my head. When I started to walk people stared at me. I went straight to the Mangs and they took the carcass. They said, “why did you carry it? If you had told us, we would have fetched it.” I replied, “I wanted to show that no work is dirty; I was not ashamed of this job. So why should I trouble you?”

This instance shows that nothing is accomplished through speeches, but that results can be obtained by our actually doing what we wish others to do.

[From Gujarati]
Harijanbandhu, 18-8-1935

533. LETTER TO RAJARAM R. BHOLE

WARDHA,
August 18, 1935

DEAR RAJARAM,

I have your p. c. If you feel that your health will permit, I have no objection to your finishing your course in college. But you will come to a decision after seeing Dr. Ambedkar².

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI RAJARAM BHOLE
C/O K. D. BANKER, ESQ.
EMPIRE OF INDIA LIFE HOUSE
WALKER ROAD, NAGPUR

From the original: R. R. Bhole Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

¹ Only extracts are translated here. The correspondent presumably was Premabehn Kantak; Vide “Letter to Premabehn Kantak”, 1-8-1935
² B. R. Ambedkar, to whom Gandhiji had written about the addressee; vide “Letter to B. R. Ambedkar”, 9-7-1935
534. LETTER TO BHAGWANJI A. MEHTA

August 18, 1935

Bhai Bhagwanji,

I sent you some hand-made paper. You must have received it. Herewith the bill for it.

Indigenous reeds and ink are freely available in Rajkot. Vohras stock both. Such things needn’t be sent from here. Reeds grow in our fields. Some types of them, which are strong and beautiful in appearance, do not grow in all places. But bamboos are found everywhere. I remember that when we were children we brothers used to make bamboo pens just for the pleasure of seeing if we could make them. And we didn’t have any thing but reed-pens at home. The steel-pens entered our home after we had joined the English School. We used to compete among ourselves in using the two.

Vandemataram from
Mohandas

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5826. Also C.W. 3049. Courtesy: Bhagwanji A. Vakil

535. LETTER TO PARIKSHITLAL L. MAJMUDAR

WARDHA,
August 18, 1935

Bhai Parikshital,

Your letter narrates a painful story. In this particular instance, the newspapers have not exaggerated but on the contrary have understated [the facts]. You did perfectly well in seeking the help of the authorities. The persecutors must be punished. There will be minimum violence in that. As long as the number and strength of the non-violent are limited, violence by the State will be the smallest evil. However, even while seeking the help of the authorities, you should continue to adopt other measures of your own. Is there nobody who can have some influence on the Rajputs and the Baraiyas? One of us must stay among the Harijans. I hope that the other Rajput, the Vibhishana, is receiving encouragement.

You have given useful information about the schools. I am sending your letter to Sardar. About our budget I will have a talk with Bapa when he comes here.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4036, Also C.W. 127. Courtesy: Parikshitlal L. Majmudar

536. LETTER TO KASTURBA GANDHI
August 18, 1935

BA,

I got your letter after much waiting. You should get all right quickly. Please do not worry about Nimu, etc. She is very well. The children also have improved after coming here. Kano always has his meals with me. Sumitra also does that sometimes. Sometimes she drops out. Usha is growing up. Nimu’s practice on the sitar also goes on a little. Amtussalaam serves with the utmost devotion. Rajkumari is still here. She will leave on the 21st. Khurshedbehn has been here all the time. Gosibehn is likely to come on the 22nd. I continue to get letters from Harilal. He writes whatever comes into his head.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 1546. Courtesy: Manubehn S. Mashruwala

537. LETTER TO MANU GANDHI
August 18, 1935

CHI. MANUDI,

You ought not to have got fever. Henceforth live in such a way that you never get it again.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 1547. Courtesy: Manubehn S. Mashruwala

¹ Brother of Ravana who had gone over to Rama’s side when the former refused to heed his advice to restore Sita to Rama
538. LETTER TO DEVDAS GANDHI

August 18, 1935

CHI. DEVDAS,

For Lakshmi’s molar try gargling with warm water mixed with permanganate, if you have not done so. That helps.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 1548. Courtesy: Manubehn S. Mashruwala

539. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

August 18, 1935

Bhai Vallabhbhai,

Herewith a letter from . . . 1. Poor man, he doesn’t know anything about the Committee. Have you taken any step?

Kishorelal told me yesterday that you had an acute attack of piles which had even started bleeding, and that an operation had become necessary. This is the result of putting up with chronic constipation for so long. Send me full details. In your present state of health, an operation doesn’t seem advisable either. It would, therefore, be better if you could avoid it. I would advise you to consult Gaurishankar or Dr. Mehta2. Perhaps the former may be of real help. Many persons find it possible to avoid an operation by improving their digestion. If you could trust your body to a quack-hakim of Ahmedabad, you might as well trust it now to a quack naturopath. You just can’t afford to remain ill. How is Amritlal?

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

A letter from Parikshitlal is enclosed. I think it is one you should read—concerning both matters.

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro–2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, p. 179

1 The name is omitted in the source.
2 Dr. Dinshaw Mehta
540. LETTER TO MANILAL AND SUSHILA GANDHI

August 19, 1935

CHI. MANILAL AND SUSHILA,

Today also I have just enough time to write only a few words. Did I write to you about a son having been born to Devdas? Lakshmi and the baby are very well. Ba and Manu are still in Delhi. Nimu is with me at present. Kano is having fever. The temperature rises and falls. He will be all right soon.

Mahadev is in Bombay just now, with Sardar, He may return tomorrow. Navin has come here. He will stay here for the present.

Blessings from

BAPU

541. LETTER TO KRISHNACHANDRA

WARDHA,
August 19, 1935

CHI. KRISHNACHANDRA,

There is no reason for you to be distressed. Passing of the “sediment”¹ is bound to stop. You should have more exercise. Continue hip baths and perform the breathing exercises outdoors. You may decrease the quantity of neem and take more raw vegetables. Milk should not be totally given up; eat fruit and have no hesitation in taking all the necessary items of diet so long as taste does not come into consideration. The ultimate responsibility is mine. Do take porridge. The effects caused by roti could have been caused by the oil used in its preparation. This should be remedied.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 4277

¹ Gandhiji had used the English expression.
542. A LETTER

WARDHA,
August 20, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter of the 19th instant, enclosing a cutting from a Phillipine paper. The information contained therein is wholly wrong. I have made no statement about Abyssinia.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

The Bombay Chronicle, 22-8-1935

543. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

August 20, 1935

Bhai Vallabhbhai,

I got your letter. The Committee is well constituted. It is essential that it should finish its work as soon as possible. . . . 1 Morarji and Chandubhai are arriving here on the 25th morning.

How are your piles?

Kumarappa still shows signs of fever. I intend to get him examined by the Civil Surgeon today.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro–2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, p. 180

1 Vide “Statement to the Press”, 1-8-1935

2 Omission as in the source
544. LETTER TO TULSI MAHER

August 20, 1935

CHI. TULSI MAHER,

I hope the experience you gained here is proving useful there.
Do send me as much indigenous paper from there as you can. I can sell it.
We are all doing well.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 6549

545. A LETTER

August 21, 1935

Although I have never thought in such terms as presented by you, now that I am challenged my first thought is that belief in man’s freedom is wholly unnecessary for conducting the highest type of activity. But to answer your second question, I have always reconciled comparative freedom of the individual with the all-powerfulness of the Supreme Will. I came to that conclusion on observing some ordinary experience of life. A prisoner, even in a solitary cell, has freedom of movement, however little it may be, and he has complete freedom of the mind. In the question presented by you, even the mind is prisoner under the Supreme Will, and yet He permits us to think millions of idle thoughts. Hence I conclude that there is some freedom left to the individual, be it the tiniest conceivable. The acid test of complete obedience to the Universal Will would be full surrender even of that tiny freedom.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai
546. LETTER TO K.M. MUNSHI

WARDHA,
August 21, 1935

BHAI MUNSHI,

I got your book. Let me know how it is received. Kaka told me the rest.

Blessings from
BAPU

ADVOCATE K. M. MUNSHI
RIDGE ROAD, BOMBAY

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 7584. Courtesy: K. M. Munshi

547. LETTER TO MADALASA BAJAJ

August 21, 1935

CHI. MADALASA,

I got a letter from you after a long time. You may eat what you like, on condition that you do not fall ill. Rules of self-control which may be necessary should be observed spontaneously. There is no hurry. Learn to control anger and live like a child. From Ashram life one may learn freedom, but never rudeness, incivility or pride.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, p. 318

548. LETTER TO PURUSHOTTAM K. JERAJANI

WARDHA,
August 22, 1935

BHAI KAKUBHAI,

I have your letter. I for one am satisfied by your reply. Since you are keen I will read Ratubhai’s letter so that justice is done to him. Actually, the letter is not even meant for me. It is not for me to do justice to Ratubhai or anybody else. Here doing justice to Ratubhai only means that I should not entertain any unjust thought about him.
even in my mind. Ratubhai seems to be making a great mistake. The judgment about his Sevak Sangh has already been given. The personal matter has therefore ended there. During that inquiry Ratubhai talked about the whole management of the Bhandar. I suggested an inquiry. Even if I had not done so, it was my duty as President to inquire into the matter. Ratubhai’s resigning does not absolve him from his duty of co-operating in the inquiry. But that is a matter for him to consider. Ratubhai in his letters keeps himself in the centre and not the improvement of the Bhandar, that is, the interest of khadi. And by doing so he is making himself miserable. I do not have to think about anything except the policy of the Bhandar and the interest of khadi. It is not therefore my duty at present to go through his letters. When you have completed your inquiry and made your recommendations I will definitely think about the matter if necessary and if I feel that injustice has been done to Ratubhai and others.

It is good that you feel that both Vithaldas\(^1\) and Ratubhai may be right. In fact the truth may lie somewhere else altogether. But God alone knows it. Ratubhai sees the episode from one point of view and Vithaldas from another. From their respective paints of view, both may be right.

If you wish you may certainly show this letter to Ratubhai. I tried all means available to me to satisfy him. I troubled Kishorelal in whom he has faith. I asked you to intervene, because he has faith in you, too. Finally Mahadev felt that he could help him and he also lent a hand. If I cannot satisfy him with all this, then I suppose that is fate. In trying to satisfy him or anybody else my interest can only be the good of Daridranarayana. I can think of nothing else but that.

Blessings from

BAPU

PURUSHOTTAM KANJI JERAJANI

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 10835.Courtesy: Purushottam K. Jerajani

\(^1\) Vithaldas K. Jerajani, addressee’s elder brother
549. DISCUSSION ON MINIMUM LIVING WAGE-I

[August 22/23, 1935]²

GANDHIJI: Let us realize our amazing limitations. Do not mind even if we have to be like the three tailors of Tooley Street. Our resources are few and limited. We cannot afford to squander money on high sounding schemes and we cannot adopt any and every means. We may fail to get workers and agents, and our branches may have to be few and far between. But I am in no hurry to see a network of institutions all over the country. Ours is a policy of ploughing a lonely furrow . . . . If we find that it is not possible for any industry to pay this minimum living wage, we had better close our shop. We should see that in any industry that we handle the wage covers a reasonable maintenance allowance.

DR. PRAFULLA: When I was an official earning a salary, I used to calculate how much my servants, including their dependants, would need for a fair maintenance and I used to pay them accordingly. It used to come to Rs. 20 a month. With clothing and other needs, it would come to Rs. 30.

GANDHIJI (laughingly): Then if you like we shall have a rupee a day as the minimum wage for Bengal. What you used to do as an official you have now to do as a member of the Association. I would certainly have the wage as high as possible and include in it the maintenance of at least one dependant. But you will go as far as you can.

Sjt. Vaikuntha Mehta, who is the Managing Director of the Provincial Co-operative Bank in Bombay, had not the slightest doubt that the sooner we tackled the question the better; for, when we insisted on an adequate solution of the wage question and that of work in organized large-scale industries, it was our duty to attend to these questions in case of unorganized industries. There were obvious difficulties, but he had no doubt that the moment people were made to see that ninety per cent or more of the rupee that the people spend on an article they purchase goes directly into the pocket of the man who has produced it, they would not grudge to pay the money.

Sjt. Shankerlal Banker emphasized the importance of collecting data, from different provinces, on the prices of the minimum articles of a balanced diet, but he had some difficulty in applying the wage question to existing industries.

¹ The discussion is extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter”. The Management Board of the All India Village Industries Association met at Wardha.

² From The Searchlight, 30-8-1935
Gandhiji made it clear that we were exclusively concerned with dead or dying industries which we were trying to revive and we were not going to disturb the existing industries. Was the minimum wage likely to make matters difficult for the villager? What about the little articles of the villagers’ daily need, earthen pots and lamps, for instance? Because the townspeople were to pay a higher price for those articles, were the villagers also to pay that higher price? Already villagers in villages in close proximity to towns were paying a higher price for milk than those in distant villages. Gandhiji said:

That was inevitable. But the villagers among themselves will adjust the prices. Besides, when our organization is in good running order, the carpenter and the smith and the weaver and the spinner, who purchase from the potter at the minimum wage price, will have also had their minimum-wage price for their respective wares, and they won’t grudge the poor potter his price. But that is a distant goal. Let us at the present moment content ourselves with things that pass out of villages to the towns and let us refuse to have them at anything less than the minimum-living-wage price.

_Harijan_, 31-8-1935

---

550. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

WARDHA,
_August 23, 1935_

MY DEAR AMRIT,

The promised wire has come. And I am glad your place remains vacant. Whenever I take my seat, I miss you. You had become a fixture. Then you have left so many reminders behind. The thermos is a perpetual reminder. The citronel [la] bottle, too, I found lying on the table. I suppose you left that, too, by design. The baskets are still there. The beet never ends. I must try it again. So you see what you have done!

I hope Shummy was able to issue the certificate I wanted.

You have invited Kumarappa to be your guest whenever he could go to Simla. The Civil Surgeon examined him yesterday and regard being had to the slight temperature, he wants him to go to a hill for a month or two. I am sending him to Bombay for further

---

1 For the resolution passed at the meeting, _vide_ “An Important Resolution”, 31-8-1935 examination and then he may be ready to go to Simla, if you really can take him in without any inconvenience to you at all. If you can, please wire to me. But you must not hesitate to say no, if you will be inconvenienced in any way whatsoever.

Love to you both.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 3541. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6350

551. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL JOSHI

August 23, 1935

CHI. CHHAGANLAL,

You do not seem to read Harijan. If you convert the bones into manure, there is bound to be a demand for it. In every village collect the bones in one place, roast them slightly as explained in Harijan\(^1\) and then grind it into fine powder. You can then dispatch that powder wherever necessary. You can sell it to the Agriculture Department of the State. It can be stored indefinitely for it does not get spoiled. How to convert the flesh into manure has also been explained in Harijan. Money for this is provided by a certain big firm. The process of converting flesh into manure is more difficult than that of making bone-powder, but it is such as can be carried out at home. I will get a detailed copy of the explanation made and send it to you. The guts can be converted into nets. Jethalal does it. There is no part of a carcass which cannot be utilized in some way or other. Even blood can be utilized, but I do not remember the process. I will ask and find out. I have not yet been able to complete the arrangements. When they are completed, I hope to be able to create a permanent demand for the materials. The bone-manure or the other things need not be sent out of Kathiawar. We can sell the materials at low prices to cultivators whom we can persuade to buy them, for the cost of production is bound to be very low at present.

If Mathew cannot be steady even there, I shall be helpless. I have taken much trouble for him.

I understand about Rama. I am satisfied if the children are growing properly.

Ba is in Delhi. She has been through a severe illness.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5523

---

\(^1\) An article on the subject by S.C. Das Gupta appeared in Harijan 30-11-1934 and 14-12-1934.
552. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

August 23, 1935

CHI. LILAVATI,

If you leave some space below the questions in your exercises, it will be easier for you to study my comments.

The questions should be serially numbered. ‘I will’ indicates the future tense. In the second and the third person ‘would’ expresses desire. Apply this rule whenever you find these words used in the lesson you read.

1. ‘If’ and ‘will’ can be used in the same sentence. If is a conjunction and ‘will’ a verb in this context.

2. ‘You will have received my letter.’ ‘I hope you are happy.’

3. ‘Though you are good, yet will I not hurt you.’ There is very little difference between ‘still’ and ‘yet’.

4. ‘He must be punished’ means “He ought to be punished”. ‘He shall have been punished’ means ‘He must certainly have been punished’. There is not much difference between ‘must’ and ‘shall have’. Shall in the second or the third person can have the force of ‘must’.

5.¹

6. ‘Though’ and ‘yet’ or ‘still’ are used in the same sentence. ‘Yet’ and ‘still’ complete the sense of ‘though’.

I hope you will be able to understand all the answers. If you do not understand any of them, do not hesitate to ask again.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9337. Also C.W. 6612. Courtesy: Lilavati Asar

¹ As in the source
August 23, 1935

CHI. NARAHARI.

Though your letter of the 18th has been lying before me for the last two days, I could read it only today.

I like Bhai Velchand’s intention. Let a few wells be dug and tablets put up with Pandya’s name inscribed on them. Really speaking, however, his name can be fittingly associated only with a task accomplished with the greatest difficulty. Velchand should leave the implementation to us. Let the Pandya Village Uplift Fund immortalize both itself and Pandya, as the Tilak Swaraj Fund has immortalized itself and the Lokamanya. The sum that Velchand wishes to spend will partly fulfil that aim. At present we would not be able to use a larger sum than that.

This, however, may be your and my view. I had a talk with Sardar. He has not been able to decide. He was to write to Velchand. He will decide after doing that and let me know. We shall have to wait till then. The dairy seems to be going on very well there. How do you use the milk? Mahadev told me the Bhagat story. It seems a very strange affair.

I heard about Ratilal, too. Your hands are quite full, it seems.

Why has Surendra gone there? And how is it that I have had no intimation at all?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9088
August 23, 1935

Bhai Vallabhbhai,

I drafted the terms for the Plague Committee immediately yesterday and the draft is being sent with Vaikunth. I have also discussed the matter with him.

I am returning the cutting from Sanj. This sort of agitation is sure to be intensified still more. We shall be free from the bother as soon as the committee starts functioning.

The Civil Surgeon is somewhat alarmed by Kumarappa’s low fever. He has advised that we should get him examined in Bombay. He will arrive there in two or three days. Afterwards I am thinking of sending him to Simla. An invitation has been received from Rajkumari. Get Kumarappa examined by Jivraj. Since you are there, I am not writing to anybody else. I suggested to him that he should stay with you, but he is being dragged away by Shoorji who is here. Sahani has advised that we should get Kumarappa’s throat and lungs examined.

If you have been able to come to any decision regarding the donation contemplated by Velchand, let me know. His letter to Narahari is enclosed. I still feel that a part of the sum may be used for digging some wells, as desired by Velchand, and that the whole of the remaining amount should be spent for village reconstruction. You may, if you wish, restrict the expenditure to Gujarat. Give me your own independent views, however.

If you have come to any decision regarding Vithalbhai’s money also, let me know it. The letter to Motilal was excellent. Morarji and Chandubhai are arriving on the 25th.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro–2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 180-1

1 For the Plague Committee
2 Vide also the preceding item.
3 Motilal Setalvad, well-known advocate
555. NOTES

HARIJAN–NATTAR PROBLEM

This problem is ever with us. I have before me a long report sent by a worker in the black area. It shows that the Nattars are not much better than before. What improvement there is, is due not to conviction or enlightenment. It is largely due to the fear of prosecution against the Nattars for the harm they may do to the Harijans, and it is also due to the good work done by the Harijan Sevak Sangh’s workers among the Harijans. They have somewhat succeeded in their effort to lessen the Harijans’ fear of the Nattars. Permanent improvement is possible only if, as the report suggests, there is steady education spread both among Harijans and Nattars. The latter need perhaps more enlightenment than the former. Their unspeakable intolerance is due not so much to viciousness as it certainly is to unpardonable ignorance among them. Therefore the Sangh has to continue its labours undismayed by difficulties no matter how grave they may appear to be. If their faith survives them, it is sure to triumph.

NOT BOUND

Some weavers of Piplav, Bhadran Taluka, Baroda State, write to say that two years ago they resolved to give up carrion-eating and to that end gave up carrying and flaying carcasses. But the tanners and the Bhangis of the village have been doing that work. The Patidars of the village would not tolerate what they thought was presumption on the weavers part and proclaimed a severe boycott of them, cutting off all social services. They polluted their well, and began throwing stones on their roofs. The writers ask for guidance.

The Baroda State is well known for its enlightened policy about untouchability. I trust that the authorities will go out of their way to save these helpless Harijans whenever they are persecuted by the so-called caste Hindus. It is also up to the many reformers of advanced Bhadran to befriend these poor weavers and persuade the Patidars of Piplav to desist from the reported ill-treatment of its weavers. The latter deserve congratulations on their having given up carrion-eating. They need not have, on that account, given up the carrying and flaying of dead cattle, which is a lucrative and honourable calling and a necessary social service. But they are in no way bound to do the carrying or the flaying. If an honourable calling is regarded as degrading, the responsibility for its being so regarded lies on savarna Hindus. No wonder if the weavers of Piplav, having become conscious of their degradation and being determined to get rid of it, decided to give up a calling that had led to their being regarded as degraded people. It is well for the village of Piplav that it has tanners and scavengers who, not having attained class consciousness, are yet doing carcass carrying and flaying, which society wrongly considers degrading. The whole social structure must crumble to pieces if the so-called higher classes do not realize the obvious duty of abolishing the evil custom of considering any class of persons as lower than themselves. But, while that consummation is being reached, it is the duty of the authorities and the reformers to do everything in their power to protect the Harijans against the cruel treatment to which the poor weavers of Piplav are said to be subjected.

UNTRUTHFUL ADVERTISEMENTS

The other day I drew attention to indecent advertising. A Calcutta correspondent now sends me cuttings from well-known newspapers of advertisement which I would call untruthful. Just now a very vigorous propaganda seems to be going on in Bengal and probably in the other provinces also in favour of drinking Indian tea. The following is the translation sent by the correspondent of an advertisement in Bengali:

TEA-DRINKING AND YOUTHFUL LOOK

JALPAIGURI,
May 15

That tea helps retain youthful look and energy long is, it appears, demonstrated from the experience of Shrijut Nepal Chandra Bhattacharya. He is now forty-eight, but he looks no older than thirty-four. He maintains that this youthful look of his is due to his taking tea. He had his first cup of tea when he was fourteen. Since then he has been a regular tea-drinker, and since the year before last he has been taking more or less thirty cups of tea daily. In this respect he has a peculiarity all his own. He does not take tea immediately it is prepared, nor does he sip in the whole of it, but rejects a little at the bottom. He takes from six to ten cups of it at a time.

This is a specimen of many such and reads as if it were a report from the paper’s own correspondent. It advances a claim for tea-drinking which has no support in human experience anywhere. On the contrary even those who advocate tea-drinking advise extreme moderation. We should be no worse off if there was no tea drunk in India. But unfortunately tea and such other so-called harmless drinks have come to stay in our midst. My plea is for due regard for truth in advertising. It is a habit with people, especially in India, to treat the printed word in a book or a newspaper as gospel truth. There is need, therefore, for extreme caution in drawing up advertisements. Untruths such as my correspondent has drawn attention to are most dangerous. To drink thirty cups of tea per day not only does not refresh the body or the mind but weakens digestion and enervates the drinker. One or two cups of weak tea per day is about as much as the human body can accommodate, perhaps, without harm. In India the tea leaves are actually boiled so as to draw all the tannin they may contain. Any doctor would testify that tannin is bad for the stomach. The Chinese know how to drink tea. They put their leaves in a strainer and pour boiling water over the leaves which are never put in the tea pot. The water has to attain only the colour of the straw. It is pale yellow, never bordering on the red as tea made generally in India. Strong tea is poison.

1 Vide “Notes” Sub-title “Need for Correctness

Harijan, 24-8-1935

556. ANSWERS TO VILLAGE WORKERS’ QUESTIONS

1-5. There is no difference whatsoever between the two villages, so far as the village industries programme is concerned. In no case should a worker come in conflict with the authorities.

This is extracted from “Weekly Letter” by Mahadev Desai who had explained: “Some young men who have settled in a village in a Kathiawar State have sent the following questions to Gandhiji: (1) Which of the two should be preferred for swaraj work—a village in a native State or a British Indian village. (2) Which should be preferred from the point of view of the village industries programme? (3) Is not the need for uplift work greater in the British Indian village? (4) If the answer to 3 is in the affirmative, why should not all workers go to the British Indian villages? (5) Would not the Congress give any definite direction in the matter? (6) What standard of living should be adopted by the village worker? The villagers standard is far too low to be acceptable to the workers. You do not taboo milk and fruit for village workers. But villagers never get these things. How can a village worker conscientiously take them? (7) It is a fact that millions are starving. If we too follow suit, how are we to do work for them? And yet in a family a brother would share his loaf with a brother rather than let him starve. (8) What are the minimum necessaries of life?”
6-8. The main thing to be borne in mind by the village worker is that he is in the village for the villagers’ service, and it is his right and his duty to allow himself such articles of diet and other necessaries as would keep him fit and enable him to fulfil his function. This will necessarily involve the acceptance of a higher standard of living by the village worker, but I have an impression that the villagers do not grudge the worker these necessary things. The worker’s conscience is the test. He must be self-restrained, he will eat nothing in order to indulge his palate, he will go in for no luxuries, and will fill all his waking hours with work of service. In spite of this, it is likely that a handful of people will cavil at his mode of life. We have to live that criticism down. The diet I have suggested is not quite unobtainable in a village, with a certain amount of labour. Milk can generally be obtained, and there are numerous fruits, e.g., ber, karamda, mhora flower, which are easily available, but which we count of no value because they are so easily available. There are all kinds of leaves available which grow wild in our villages, which we do not use because of sheer ignorance or laziness (if not snobbery). I am myself using numerous varieties of these green leaves which I had never tried before, but which I find I should have used. It is quite possible to make a cow in a village pay for her upkeep and maintenance. I have not tried the experiment but I think it should be possible. I have also an impression that it is not impossible for the villagers to obtain and live on the same articles of diet as the village workers and thus to adopt the same standard of life.

Harijan, 24-8-1935

557. SELF-SUFFICING KHADI

From Madhopur centre in Bihar comes the news that in ten villages nineteen persons have had their yarn woven into khadi measuring 166\(\frac{1}{2}\) yards for personal use and that 82 persons in 22 villages had their yarn exchanged for khadi measuring 709 yards. This is good news.

Good news of distribution of seeds and sowing them for growing cotton for self-spinning comes from Payyanur and Nileshwar in Malabar. When cotton-growing for self-spinning becomes universal in the country, people can have their khadi for the mere labour spent upon it during leisure hours if the home growers of cotton will learn all the processes as they do in Assam for silk in many homes. Silk cannot be universalized. Cotton can and almost was at one time. This method means a most substantial addition to the national income and a perfect scheme of employment for the millions of the partially unemployed in this country.

Though the proposition is thus simple to state, it is undoubtedly very difficult to work. But it is in no way impossible. It needs no great outlay of capital. The processes to be learnt are simple, the tools required are all ready in the villages or can be quickly made. The greatest stumbling block is the disinclination of the people to work at new things and to exert intelligence. Generations of enforced idleness and consequent starvation have led to loss of hope, stamina and even the will to live. No greater calamity can befall a people than that they should lose hope even to the extent of the will to live. But those who have not lost hope have to work with greater zeal than ever before with an unquenchable faith in their mission. Their faith will certainly overcomemountains. In this glorious country, where sufficient food and clothing can be produced without much labour and skill, there need never be any loss of hope.

But hope has to be translated into progressive action based on ever-increasing knowledge of the science of khadi. Workers have to respond to the lead that the Centre may give from time to time, and they have also to anticipate the objections of the villagers whom they have to serve. For that purpose they have to come into closest touch and trust. They may never appear before the villagers as patrons but they should appear as voluntary servants who have hitherto neglected their trust. Given a due fulfilment of this primary indispensable condition, the rest will follow as night follows day.

_Harijan, 24-8-1935_

558. LETTER TO RAOJIBHAI N. PATEL

_August 24, 1935_

CHI. RAOJIBHAI,

Can you not be content to have Dahibehn treated by Haribhai? Try and see if you can persuade Chanchal. One is put in an extremely difficult position when faced with two equal duties. You, who know the situation there better than I, may certainly guide her as you think best.

If you can get pure cow’s milk of good quality there, by all means organize a business in it. But take up the work only after ascertaining what the producers get. We shall have to enter their lives, know in minute detail how they live and work and what debts they owe. You should thus know the history of the sample which you have sent to me. All your depots should have the history of every sample, in this fashion: ‘This sample was made by Bharwad Meghraj of Limbasi, who spent—hours in the work;—of milk cost—; labour charges per hour—; the middleman’s commission—; And this information should be passed on to the buyer. Please don’t tell me that this will take up too much of your time. The work will not take so much time after it has been systematized. No matter what rate is fixed by the Sangh, you should not pay less than two pice per hour. In the case of articles for which average production per hour can be calculated, you should fix the rate for work per hour. This can be done. For instance, if an average spinner spins 400 [yards]¹ of yarn of 15 count in one hour, we may pay two pice for 400 [yards]² of 15 count. Many new ideas are being discussed in Harijan these days. I should like you to read all these articles regularly. The institution of insolvency was originally intended to help persons like Chanchal’s father. But afterwards it came to be misused by knaves and, therefore, fell into disrepute. I, however, would certainly advise him to resort to this means and free himself from his worries. He may then cherish the hope of being able to pay off the balance of his debts one day. As things are, he would not even be able to engage himself in any business in peace because of harassment by importunate creditors.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9006

¹ The source has “rounds”, which was subsequently corrected by Gandhiji; _vide_ “Letter to Raojibhai N. Patel”, 27-9-1935.
² _ibid_
559. LETTER TO KASTURBA GANDHI

WARDHA,

August 24, 1935

BA,

Don’t you feel that you were prompted by God to go there? Moreover Manu also is with you. And so I am not worrying at all. You are a lioness and illness has no terrors for you.¹ Face the situation courageously, therefore. Put your trust in Rama. Ask Manu to write to me every day. Ansari is bound to be there. There is no better doctor than he. Most probably Brijkrishna also is there. And in any case Pyarelal’s people are all there.

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 1549. Courtesy: Manubehn S. Mashruwala

560. LETTER TO MANU GANDHI

August 24, 1935

CHI. MANUDI,

Keep me informed daily about Devdas’s condition. I got your postcard. You yourself must have got completely all right.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 1550. Courtesy: Manubehn S. Mashruwala

561. LETTER TO JAISUKHLAL GANDHI

August 24, 1935

CHI. JAISUKHLAL,

I got your postcard. Shankerlal also had wired to me. What is ordained cannot but happen, do what we will. Whom can we blame for that? In my view Umiya¹ has only one place to go to, and that is yours in Amreli. We should be content with whatever medical help we can get there. All ordinary facilities will be available there. I think it

¹ Devdas was laid up with typhoid.
² The addressee’s daughter Umiya Agrawal useless to go to Bombay or any other place. If the hospital there is a good one and she can be kept in it without inconvenience, she may get admitted to it. I believe, too, that nature cure will suffice for her illness, provided she has the necessary faith and patience for that.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U/II

562. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL
August 24, 1935

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

Andrews has taken ill and, therefore, has stayed on here. . . .¹

Jayakar’s reply is enclosed. Preserve it for some time. I have asked him with whom he had the conversation and what it was he found fault with in the administration [of the Tilak Swaraj Fund]². I will send you his reply when it is received. He may act as he wishes.

I send with this a telegram from Devdas. It was something of a shock³. I have wired to him and assured him that, if he took complete rest and abstained from food, there was no danger. Raja of course will go. Ba and Manu are already with him. There is also a physician like Ansari to look after him. What more can we desire? I am not worrying at all.

Kumarappa is arriving there today. Do what is necessary about him. I wrote to you about him in yesterday’s letter⁴. Let him come back as soon as the examination is over.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, p. 182

¹ Omission as in the source
² Vide “Letter to Vallabhabhai Patel”, 16-8-1935
³ Vide, footnote 3; “Letter to Kasturba Gandhi”, 24-8-1935 also the following item.
⁴ Vide “Letter to Vallabhbhai Patel”, 23-8-1935
563. LETTER TO DEVDAS GANDHI

August 24, 1935

CHI. DEVDAS,

I am not surprised by your wire nor am I worried. I had already seen your irregular way of living when I was there.¹ I did not like it at all. At the moment you are alone in the office. Moreover you have to look after Lakshmi² and you eat at irregular hours. Ba and Manu are also there and Tara¹ is ill. All this is very much beyond your strength. It is enough if you are doing according to my wire. . . .⁴

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

564. LETTER TO DRAUPADI SHARMA

August 24, 1935

CHI. DRAUPADI,

Your letter. Continue thus. Enclosed is Sharma’s letter which you may return after reading it. Ask one of the children to write if he can.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, facing p. 189

¹ In Delhi
² Addressee’s wife and daughter
³ Addressee’s wife and daughter
⁴ The letter is incomplete in the source.
565. LETTER TO VIYOJI HARI

August 24, 1935

BHAII VIYOJI HARI,

Who has written in Hin. Swa?¹ I did say something to this effect to someone and I recollect Mahadev saying on the same day that mistakes do occur in the Harijanbandhu and the Harijan Sevak and that it would be better to send the translations from here. Mahadev even started some Gujarati translation. No one person can be blamed for the occurrence of errors. Translation is a pretty difficult job and to be first rate it requires of the translator an equal command over both the languages. I have to confess with regret that I am unable to read any one of the three journals. I am in continuous touch with the material published in the Harijan as it passes through my hands but I am ignorant of all that is published in the other two journals. Mahadev does go through some items but ours is a pitiable plight. The burden of work is so overwhelming that we reconcile ourselves with what little we can do, regarding even that as God’s mercy.

I expect to have a talk with Malkani about the Sansi².

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 1073

566. LETTER TO DR. GOPICHAND BHARGAVA

WARDHA,
August 25, 1935

DEAR DR. GOPICHAND,

I am going through the papers left by you. Shankerlal tells me that the receipt for the monies received through Mrs. Hariram and others were given in the name. . . In any case the disposal of the funds should be held over till the whole thing is settled. I returned the original letters you left here.

Yours,

BAPU

From the original: Dr. Gopichand Bhargava Papers. Courtesy: NehruMemorial Museum and Library

¹ The original has only these initials.
² A scheduled tribe of North India.
567. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

WARDHA,
August 25, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

How can we expect satisfactory news about Harilal?
I do not know what can be done about Mathew. He can’t be given anything more till he fulfils my conditions.

A copy of the letter I have written to Vajubhai and others is enclosed. I succeeded in writing it only today.

I was not eager to have serpent put round my neck. I think this particular one was harmless. Jamnalalji knew the man very well. Nevertheless, your caution is right. I should not take interest in such experiments.¹

Amtussalaam is still here. As she is very busy she does not write to you. I will now ask her to do so.

I have sent away Sharma. He has gone to learn about nature cure. He has impressed me with his simplicity, truthfulness and enthusiasm. I am watching the outcome of this experiment.

What shall I say about Father’s health? It is a pleasant surprise that both are keeping alive. You should assume my humblest pranams to them in every letter.

Navin has arrived here. He will be given English and arithmetic. I am going to ask him to do carpenter’s work. Do you use the small workshop you have there? If you are not doing so, I may get it transferred here.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M. U./II. Also C.W. 8471. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

568. LETTER TO ANASUYABEHN SARABHAI

August 25, 1935

CHI. ANASUYABEHN,

I have your yearly offerings. Preserve your health. The work is vast and we are few.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: G.N. 11561

¹ Vide also “Letter to S. D. Satavlekar”, 12-8-1935
569. LETTER TO SARALADEVI SARABHAI

WARDHA,
August 25, 1935

DEAR SISTER,

You are passing through considerable ordeals. Only yesterday I heard that Vikram had been seriously ill. You yourself have not recovered yet. I see much sickness around. I strongly feel that nature cure, simple food, pure air, is all that a man needs. How far can we improve the body which is more delicate than a glass bangle? My blessings to all the children.

There is no need to reply to this letter.
The enclosed letter is for Deenabandhu.

Blessings from
MOHANDAS

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 11142. Courtesy: Sarabhai Foundation

570. PRIZE ESSAY ON BARTER SYSTEM

WARDHA,
August 26, 1935

Shri Uppulur Venkatakrishnayya is the trustee of the Khaddar Samsthanam which was started in the year 1927 at Gunadala near Bezwada. He is an ardent believer in the system of barter, and has been practising it to some extent in his institution in its internal and external dealings, especially with reference to the production and distribution of food and clothing.

He believes it to be the only remedy for the present economic depression and thinks that it can solve the many evils arising from the present monetary system. He further believes that the adoption of barter is essential to the development of agriculture, revival of khadi and other handicrafts and cottage industries in India, and the propagation and practice of the doctrine of non-violence. He holds that it is implied in non-violence itself. He fervently desires to know how far his views can stand the test of a scientific study and examination of the system. He therefore offers a prize for the best essay on the subject, and he has chosen me as his instrument for announcing his intention. I have gladly consented to be the medium for inviting essays on the system of barter. The prize-winner will be given at his choice Rs. 500 in cash or Rs. 500 worth of genuine, durable khadi woven in the Samsthanam itself. The cash amount is deposited with me.

1 Addresser’s son

The essay (which should be in English) should trace the early history of the barter system, the causes of its decline, and the possibilities of its revival at present. It should also describe the purpose it served in the past and the part it can play in the future economic life of the world, with particular reference to its adaptability to the Indian village life concerning some or all of the departments of its activities. The essay should discuss the conditions congenial for its successful working and development and to what extent the assistance of the ruling power is required for the same, and should indicate the nature and mode of exchange if the adoption of the system is recommended. The essay should also discuss the effects of the barter system on the development of the internal and international trade of India.

Prof. K. T. Shah, Shri Vaikunth L. Mehta and Prof. J.C. Kumarappa have kindly consented to act as examiners. Prof. Kumarappa will also act as Secretary to whom all essays should be sent addressed Maganwadi, Wardha. The essays should reach Prof. Kumarappa not later than the noon of August 31, 1936. No prize will be awarded if no essay reached the standard to be determined by the examiners. The result of the examination will be announced not later than 31st December 1936. The copyright of the prize essay will vest in the Khaddar Samsthanam. I do hope that there will be keen competition for winning the prize not for its monetary value but for the importance of the subject.

M. K. GANDHI

_Harijan, 31-8-1935_
571. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

August 26, 1935

CHI. AMBUJAM.¹

Prabhavati returned about three weeks ago. She is quite well. Ba is still in Delhi now nursing Devdas who is lying dangerously ill. The illness may end in paralysis. Rajagopalachari is going there.

Just now I am eating fruit sparingly. There are so many whose need is [greater]² than mine. I take occasionally apples or oranges. Don’t be anxious about me. When the body needs it, I shall take all I may need.

I have not read the book you refer to on Ramayana.

I hope Kichi will find his place in the Bank where he is undergoing training.

Love.

Blessings from³

BAPU

From a photostat: C.W. 9605. Courtesy: S. Ambujammal

572. LETTER TO C. R. SRINIVASAN

August 26, 1935

I am really and literally drained dry. I have no gift for weaving messages to order. This village work is so taxing and so baffling that if I could help it I would stop all writing and simply bury myself in a village and there work away for all I am worth and that I should love to do [in] perfect silence. In the circumstances you will please excuse for not sending you a message.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

¹ The source has this in Hindi.
² The source has “in”.
³ Of Swadeshamitran, Madras
573. LETTER TO G. V. MAVALANKAR

BHAI MAVALANKAR,

August 26, 1935

I see from Manibehn’s letter just received that your wife has had a mild attack of typhoid. I hope the fever has come down.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1244. Also S. N. 22860

574. LETTER TO DEVDAS GANDHI

CHI. DEVDAS,

August 26, 1935

I have sent a wire today. I was expecting a telegram from you but none has come. What can you do? And who would think of sending a telegram from there? It is good that I have a detailed letter from Ba. She writes and says that you have become panicky. But why should you be alarmed because of the illness? When we know the ultimate result and are prepared for it, why should you feel frightened? But there is still plenty of time before you take leave. You have to render a lot of service through your body. So resolve and get well. I can only advise you as regards diet and so on. May God protect you.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

575. LETTER TO MRIDULA SARABHAI

WARDHA,
August 26, 1935

CHI. MRIDU,

Shankerlal has sent me a copy of your letter for my reply. For want of time, your letter remained unanswered for a few days.

It is true that I have permitted the use of Indian mill thread and even foreign thread for embroidery on khadi if hand-spun thread cannot be had. But deep within me I would still wish that we could manage without either. I have no doubt given that concession in the hope that that would lead to increased sale of khadi. I do not remember the Charkha Sangh having made any rule for it. After knowing this much, do what you think proper.

I should send a copy of this letter to Shankerlal. But surely I can saddle you with that responsibility to save time and money?

You will all be doing well.

Come when you can.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 11195. Courtesy: Sarabhai Foundation

576. LETTER TO AVADHESH DUTT AVASTHI
August 26, 1935

CHI. AVADHESH,

To follow the immediate dharma as it presents itself can have nothing but good consequences.

People have no right to remain in an institution when they knowingly violate its rules.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI AVADESH DUTT AVASTHI
VILLAGE RAMPURVA, POST BADWAPUR
DIST. BAHRAICH, U.P.

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 3218

577. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR
WARDHA,
August 27, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

Don’t be alarmed. I am writing with the left hand to keep the right fit for Monday.

Your two letters and wire came in duly. Perhaps you will have to receive Devdas, too, if you have room for him. Poor boy! He is in danger of being attacked by paralysis. Jamnalalji wired yesterday saying Ansari had advised change to Simla. Simla must have come to his lips because of you. What other special recommendation could Simla have? I am simply preparing you for the application. If it comes, you will know what to do with it. Once more I warn you. Never hesitate to say ‘No’ when you mean ‘No’. That is the only way to preserve friendships. You have become dearer to me than a friend. But if you are to remain a dear daughter, I must not put undue strain on your loyalty. And yet my life is so full of companionships that everyone intimately connected with me is taxed to the uttermost. May God give you the strength to carry the burden you have imposed on yourself.

Shummy won’t now regulate Kumarappa’s life from the heights of Simla. For he is having Kumarappa under his own observation. Tell him I am religiously eating daily the beet he sent. Amtussalaam has found out the way of cooking it well.

I did not have much talk about Puri with Gopichandji. I see from Pyarelal’s letter sent by you that his heart is not in Simla. Is there no local man there who would take it up? I am writing to G.

How did you find the paper that was given to you by Choudhury? You should send me samples of the sizes and the colours you want.

The meetings of the Board\(^1\) were quite good. I wish you had been present. But I know it was right for you to go. Of course, you will come and resume your work here whenever you can come.

Give my love to your two faithful attendants and tell them I was sorry I was not able to know more of them as I would have liked to do. But my activities leave me no time for such amenities.

Love from us all.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 3542. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6351

578. LETTER TO DR. GOPICHAND BHARGAVA

WARDHA,
August 27, 1935

DEAR DR. GOPICHAND,

Here is Puri’s letter to Kunver Saheb. You will do what is best. My firm opinion is that the Simla Stores should be given up if it is being run at a loss. The stock can be distributed among those who will . . . sale. Rajkum . . . a helper. If there is one who can card, gin and spin on the takli as well as the wheel, he will be useful. If there is none such available, you should wait till you get such a person. From Puri’s letter it would appear that he won’t be happy till he can stay with his mother. It is a most natural desire for a son to cherish. But then he can give us only a limited . . . I would like you to . . . summary . . . me . . . but the other Stores . . . Punjab?

\(^{1}\) Vide “Discussion on Minimum Living Wage-I”, 22/23-8-1935

Yours,

BAPU

From the original: Dr. Gopichand Bhargava Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

579. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

August 27, 1935

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

I learnt from Mani’s letter yesterday about Baba’s tonsils. Isn’t it strange that a boy of his age should have such enlarged tonsils? What could be the cause? Can the doctors explain it? . . .

What way have you found out of the difficulty created by the illness of Durbar and Bhaskar? Do you need Mahadev?

Morarji and Chandulal will stay here for two or three days yet. Swami Yoganand of the U.S.A. is here.

I am sending you Devdas’s letter itself. Raja passed through this place today on his way to him. There was a wire from Jamnalal from which it seems that there is no threat to life as yet.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Morarji will go there in a day or two. Keep him there. Pass on Devdas’s letter to Ramdas.

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, p. 183

1 Vipin, elder son of Dahyabhai Patel
2 Omission as in the source
3 Gopaldas Ambaidas Desai
4 C. Rajagopalachari
580. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

[After August 27, 1935]

No one would have known that [the letter] was for me. 'Would' indicates desire in the First Person, too.

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9254. Also C.W. 10128. Courtesy: Lilavati Asar

581. LETTER TO K. M. MUNSHI

WARDHA,
August 28, 1935

Bhai Munshi,

Please be satisfied with message I have sent. There is such a crowd of people living in the Ashram just now that I do not get a minute free. Last night I could go to bed only after 11.25 p.m. and got up at 1.50. It is 2.40 as I write this. From 6 in the morning the daily round starts.

Blessings from

BAPU

ADVOCATE MUNSHI
RIDGE ROAD, BOMBAY

From Gujarati: C.W. 7585. Courtesy: K.M. Munshi

582. LETTER TO C. F. ANDREWS

August 28, 1935

MY DEAR CHARLIE,

You must take the burden of Gurudev’s requirements on your mind. I quite agree that he must not go out on a begging mission. I will see what is possible for me to do.

1 This letter was written on the margin of the addressee’s letter dated August 27, 1935, in which she had informed Gandhiji that an earlier letter addressed to him was returned to her undelivered.
2 To Hansa; vide “Message to “Hansa”, 5-8-1935

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
Of course you should give up the rush and devote yourself to writing not magazine articles but things of permanent value.
And you must avoid starches and much proteid. Fruits and raw milk, raw eggs are the things for you.
Love.

MOHAN

From a photostat: G.N. 3156

583. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR
August 28, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

What is the use of your being in that clear air and having good honey and fresh fruit, if you have laryngitis? I hope it is now a thing of the past.

I am passing on your letter to Kumarappa. I know that he won’t feel lonely there.

How do you like this note-paper and the cover, all made here? Is the border too rough? What of the colour?

I must remember to send you rice and the spindle.

I had better news about Devdas.

Love to you both.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 3543. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 6352

584. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR
WARDHA,
August 29, 1935

CHI. MARY,

I expect to be in Wardha during the remaining months of the year. Could you ascertain the names of the Congressmen who smashed buildings? I can understand missionary suspicion of me if such things were done by Congressmen there. How should they believe that where such things happened they did so in spite of myself? I do not mind the prolongation of your treatment if thereby a complete cure is achieved. Mary Ingham is in Mayo Hospital, Nagpur. Sumitra is in Betul Hospital. Let us pray. Just now khadi work is broken up.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 6057. Also C.W. 3387. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr
585. LETTER TO PURUSHOTTAM L. BAVISHI

August 29, 1935

Bhai Purushottam,

I got your letters and the seed. Mirabehn has relinquished charge of farming for the present. It is in Dahyabhai’s hands. It is enough that you are doing your best. I understand about cactus. Will you please enumerate its uses? Have you had experience about them?

Blessings to you both from

Bapu

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 128. Also C.W. 4749. Courtesy: Purushottam L. Bavishi

586. TELEGRAM TO VICEROY

WARDHA,
August 30, 1935

REGARDING KAMALA NEHRU’S HEALTH HAVE JUST RECEIVED EXPRESS CABLE GERMANY. “CONDITION SERIOUS OWING TO PERSISTENT NAUSEA AND VOMITING.” IN VIEW OF THIS SERIOUS NEWS MAY I APPEAL FOR PANDIT JAWAHARLAL NEHRU’S UNCONDITIONAL DISCHARGE ENABLING HIM IF AT ALL POSSIBLE TO CATCH DUTCH AIR MAIL FLYING NEXT TUESDAY?

The Leader, 5-9-1935

1 Similar telegrams were reported to have been sent to the Governors of Bengal and the United Provinces. The Government of India, after having communication with the Secretary of State of India, released Jawaharlal Nehru unconditionally on September 2. He left Almora Jail for Allahabad on September 3 and from there for Germany on September 4.
587. LETTER TO KUNVARJI K. PAREKH

August 30, 1935

CHI. KUNVARJI,

Kanti has gone to Savli. I see from your postcard to him that you have fallen ill. How did that happen? Since when have you been ill? As you know, Bali is unable to write any letters these days? If you get no replies, may not the reason be Rami’s lethargy? Can she not return whenever she wishes? You need rest, why not have it in Rajkot itself?

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI KUNVARJI KHETSHI
ZANDU PHARMACY
SAYANI ROAD, BOMBAY

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9723. Also C.W. 703. Courtesy: Navajivan Trust

588. LETTER TO KANTI GANDHI

August 30, 1935

CHI. KANTI,

Ramachandran was very much surprised and pained by your absence. He says that he will not leave without meeting you. He even suggested that he would follow you to Savli. He calmed down when I told him that I would get you back. He has unbounded love for you. In these circumstances, how can I ask him to leave before Monday? Please do return early on that day. Returning before that is of course out of the question.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 7300. Courtesy: Kantilal Gandhi
589. LETTER TO VALJI G. DESAI

August 30, 1935

CHI. VALJI,

I understand about Chitre. I got the article. The testimonial I have given to Munshi is about his collection of the facts of the history of literature. You will see that in the book which has been published. I have not read his books to examine the tendency of his novels as to their effects on the readers. I have no time to read them from that point of view. Munshi, of course, desires that I should read them and give my opinion. I hope all of you are well.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI V. G. DESAI
GOVINDNAGAR
NAINTAL (U. P.)

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 7474. Courtesy: Valji G. Desai

590. LETTER TO BALVANTSINHA

August 30, 1935

CHI. BALVANTSINHA,

Hand over the respective letters to Ishwarbhai and Kanti. I had your letters and saw the account. I suppose you have enough funds. Tell me when you need any; your account is satisfactory. It is good that you made a study of the vegetables, etc. My apology¹ was only for my own spiritual good but I am happy to learn of the deep impression it has made on you. You already possess a good capacity for work and Savli will help you attain equanimity.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1880

¹ Vide “Letter to Balvantsinha”, 15-8-1935
591. LETTER TO A VILLAGE WORKER

[Before August 31, 1935]

If you can get good and clean cow’s ghee made there, you can certainly concentrate on the industry. You must first ascertain whether it secures the ghee-maker anything like a living wage. We have to enter into the lives of our working classes, ascertain, what they eat and drink, where they live, and how they live, to what extent they are indebted, and so on and so forth. You should thus be able to tell me the whole history of the sample of ghee you have sent me. You must maintain in your shop a register containing all these details: (1) the name and place of the producer; (2) time taken for preparation; (3) quantity of milk from which ghee was prepared; (4) price of ghee; (5) wage earned by the producer per hour; (6) the middle-man’s share and transit charges. Every article that you stock and sell out of your depot must bear this history ticket and whoever purchases it has a right to ask for it. You will not tell me that this is a tedious procedure and that you have not time for it. When once the thing has got started, it will be a matter of routine and not much time will be required. Whatever minimum wage may be fixed by the A.I.V.I.A., you will in no case pay less than half an anna per hour. This is easily done. Find out the number of hours taken up in the manufacture of an article, and then fix the wage and the price. Thus, for instance, it takes an ordinary spinner one hour to spin 400 yards of yarn of 15 counts. You will therefore pay half an anna as the wage for spinning 400 yards of 15 counts of strong, even yarn.

Harijan, 31-8-1935

592. AN IMPORTANT RESOLUTION

After a full two days’ discussion the following resolution was unanimously passed by the A.I.V.I.A. Board at its periodical meeting last week:

This is extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter”. The addressee had asked “if he could concentrate on ghee-making as a supplementary industry to agriculture” and, if so, “how he should do it”. Harijan, 19-10-1935, published an account of the addressee’s experience about procuring good ghee.
Whereas the object of the Association includes bringing about the moral and material advancement of the rural population by encouraging the revival of dead and dying industries, the Board of Management desire that, for all commodities produced or marketed under the aegis of the Association, each workman should receive a minimum wage calculated on the basis of eight hours' efficient work sufficient at least for his (or her) maintenance in accordance with a scientifically prescribed scale of minimum food requirements; and it should be the duty of all connected with the Association to see that the workmen engaged in the industries promoted by them actually receive remuneration never less than the scale herein prescribed, always bearing in mind that as and when circumstances permit there should be a progressive rise in the scale so as to reach a standard enabling a worker's family to be properly maintained out of the earnings of its working members.

If this resolution is honestly worked it must produce far-reaching consequences. It would render a measure of tardy justice to the working class, whether labourers or artisans. To arrive at the correct figure in terms of money is going to prove a difficult task. The members and agents will have to compile three kinds of tables:

1. How much do the workmen and work-women earn per hour at their work in the different spheres in the different provinces?
2. What is the daily diet of the workmen within their area of work and what is its cost?
3. A scientific scale on a minimum basis prepared by experts in the respective provinces out of the local staples with the cost thereof.

What statistics I have received go to show that all over India, except in the Punjab, the articles of diet the masses live on are deficient in nutritive value.

The most helpful pamphlet on the minimum diet scale is the one prepared by Dr. H. V. Tilak, on behalf of the Bombay Presidency Baby and Health Week Association (Delisle Road, Bombay 11). It is called Balanced Diets. Its price is four annas. It has been translated into Marathi and Gujarati. The diet recommended by the pamphlet, containing a variety of whole grain (some of which is sprouted) including soya beans, dried skim milk and vegetables, increases a white rat to 55 grammes in weight from 13 grammes when fed on a diet containing an excess of highly polished rice with very little vegetables and milk. The diet scale recommended in the pamphlet has been prepared after careful experimentation. It costs in Bombay Rs. 5 per month. I have my doubts about the possibility of introducing soya beans and dried skim milk in the poor man’s diet even in a place like Bombay. The sprouting of pulses and malting of jowari recommended by Dr. Tilak is also very difficult of enforcement in private households. It is almost impossible of introduction in villages. Skim milk is unobtainable in the villages, and I know that in hundreds of them not a drop of fresh milk or good ghee is to be had. I mention these difficulties in order that taking Dr. Tilak’s carefully prepared scale as a basis, experts may work out a scale more suited to the villages in their provinces and yet produce the results that Dr. Tilak’s diet is claimed to have achieved. We may not be satisfied until the village workers have put the workmen coming under their influence in possession of means to procure an adequate diet for themselves and their dependants. Reduction in price of articles must be a consideration that must always be subordinated to the ability of workmen engaged in their production to earn a living wage for themselves. We must rule out the question of competition with machine-made articles whether foreign or indigenous. Millions of workmen must not live on the margin of starvation so that the few engaged in production by powerdriven machinery may have more than they need. In the absence of State protection public opinion should be so cultivated that it will refuse to exploit the toilers of the land.

Let khadi workers who are engaged in producing khadi for sale note that what applies to the other village industries applies equally to khadi produced for sale. From the spinner to the weaver all the khadi working men should have the wage contemplated in the resolution under discussion.

Harijan, 31-8-1935

593. OUR DUTY

Perhaps the burden of untouchability falls on Harijans in one way nowhere so heavily as in Gujarat. In Dholka a Harijan was done to death by a savarna Hindu and the murderer escaped with a fine of Rs. 300. In Kavitha the so-called Rajputs mercilessly attacked helpless Harijans for daring to send their children to a public school. In Kathiawar just now in various villages in its various provinces savarnas persecute Harijans because a plague has broken out among the cattle. They do so under the superstitious belief that the disease is caused owing to the incantations or some other machinations of Harijans. The Harijan is in perpetual fear of injury to his person or property. The reformer feels helpless; the State is indifferent or is itself also helpless in the face of the powerful savarnas. The reason is obvious. The Harijan does not know how to secure redress. He has no will to defend himself. He is wholly unconscious of his human dignity or innate ability to protect himself against the insolence of fellow human beings. The reformer has to carry the torch of knowledge among the persecutors, for they know not what they are doing. Leaflets may be distributed among them. But the savarna lynchers rarely read newspapers or leaflets. They are self-contained and self-satisfied. Personal contact is the only way of approach to them. They must be visited if need be in their own homes. Meetings should be addressed in their villages. No amount of anger or declamation will cure them of their ignorance. The quickest way to combat ignorance is the spread of the knowledge that would tell them how cattle diseases are contracted and how by careful treatment they may be prevented or cured.

All this means patient labour on the part of those who will carry on the propaganda. The States concerned should also be moved to protect the poor Harijans who are molested. Where the reformers are fairly numerous they may have to settle in the midst of Harijans and themselves share their hardships, if their presence does not prevent molestation. In this campaign against ignorance the sanatanists’ assistance should also be invoked. I am sure no sane sanatanist will defend the cruel persecution of the utterly innocent Harijans by ignorant, misguided savarnas.

_Harijan, 31-8-1935_

594. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

_September 1, 1935_

MY DEAR AMRIT,

This paper is the waste of what is now being prepared here by apprentices. I am sending it for you to see the colour and the thinness. It lacks finish. Presently we shall produce the finest paper made in India at a reasonable cost. Devdas’s coming to you will be earlier than I had expected. I am sending your love letter to Devdas. Kumarappa may leave Nagpur on 4th and be with you on 6th.
I have sent you a bag of rice with Avinashilingam. It is very good though cheap. I have paid double railway fare, for, the goods train would have meant a month’s waiting and the risk of damage. I wonder if I did right. The rice should keep good in Simla though unpolished rice must not be stored for long. If the quantity sent is too much for you, you should sell it. I hope to send you the bill herewith if it has not gone already.

The takli also went with Avinashilingam.

If Devdas does come, you should use him for khaddar propaganda. He knows spinning.

We are crowded here just now. We have the members of the Harijan Board.

Janakiprasad finished his seventeen days under extraordinarily good condition. He broke it on honey, lemon and water.

I was not able to take your apples. I have so many who are in greater need.

Love to you both.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 3544. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 6353

595. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL JOSHI

September 2, 1935

CHI. CHHAGANLAL,

You must have read the explanation1 about how to make bone manure. About the other processes, I have got an article specially written. Read it carefully and try the methods or induce somebody else to do so. They are such as can be tried without any help. You can even send somebody here and get him trained. Lakshmidas intends to send someone.

I have preserved the report of the Sangh in the hope of being able to read it some time, but I do not know when I shall be. I alone know under what pressure I am working.

It is true that I have given up fruit. They cost too much. I do eat those which are cheap, but no fruit is cheap just now. Orange peel is certainly cheap and whenever there is any I get it made into jam. I then need less of jaggery and the purpose of eating fruit is also partly

1 Vide “Letter to Chhaganlal Joshi”, 23-8-1935 served. I am experimenting just now with such jam. But generally I depend only on milk and green vegetables, besides honey of course. There has been no ill effect. It remains to be seen how long I can go on with this diet. We cannot judge in a short time. I eat green leaves, as also pumpkin, gourd, etc., which grow in the garden here. Just now we get lady’s fingers and pumpkin, besides bhaji.

Bhansali is behaving with great self-restraint. He submits to my control and takes care of his health. He keeps very cheerful. If I restrain him too much, I am afraid, I would lose him. So I restrain him only as much as he will bear. His path is entirely different from ours. How can we, therefore, compare his way of life with mine or anybody else’s? Who knows who is right? May it not be that both of us are right? How can one blind person judge another blind person? Both will deserve compliments if they escape falling into a ditch. I have given your message to Bhansali. Whenever he laughs, he fills the whole room with his laughter. We don’t have the privacy of the Ashram here. He occupies one corner in a big room, which is shared with him by Kanti, Navin and three or four others. No extra space is left.

The picture of the conditions here is quite interesting. With me are Mahadev, Kanu, and Mirabehn as permanent fixtures. Others come and go. Another room is occupied at present by Nimu and her three children, and three more women. Amtussalaam spends the day in the kitchen or in my room. And so also does Prabhavati when she is here. When it is raining, all of us sleep in the verandah or in the room; at other times, we sleep in the open on the terrace above. This will give you some idea of the conditions here. The expense on food comes on an average to between seven and seven and a half [annas]. We wish to reduce it. Let us see if we succeed. We hope to reduce it to five!

At present I wouldn’t feel unhappy at all in accepting the services of a teacher in a Government school who otherwise did not violate our ideals. I made all possible inquiries regarding this friend’s character and his love of khadi. He wrote to me a letter which I found satisfactory. He believes in khadi and wears it for the most part. He has not been able to go as far as to wear dhotis of khadi. He had even a tussle with his superior for wearing a khadi cap and other garments of khadi, and he won. His relation with a lady which was the subject of an allegation against him still continues, but he says that it has always been pure. His letter seemed to me quite truthful. This inquiry was completed only recently. I didn’t wish to involve you in this matter, but now if you can throw some light on it please do.

I have exchanged letters with Narahari and Vallabhbhai on this subject. Sardar has nothing to say about it. Narahari seems to be satisfied with Narandas’s statement. It has also been sent to Vajubhai and Jethalal and they have been requested to send their replies. I found nothing to criticize in that statement. There seem to be some differences of principle between Vajubhai and Narandas, but they also are not clear to me, except that the latter may have laid greater stress on crafts and expected the teachers to pay attention to them. I wouldn’t regard that as a difference of principle. Have you read Vajubhai’s and Jethalal’s letters? If you are prepared to take interest in the matter and give your time to it, I will send their explanations to you.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

My blessings to Rama and the children. Today’s letter reminds me of the long letters I used to write to you formerly. On days other than Monday, I mostly write with the left hand.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 5533.

596. LETTER TO MANU GANDHI

WARDHA,
September 2, 1935

CHI. MANUDI,

Here is a separate letter for you. Have you fallen ill again? If one lives very carefully, why should one ever fall ill? Won’t you now be coming here in a very few days? Kunvarji has written asking for your being sent to Rajkot. He has already sent for Rami. He is not keeping well.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 1551. Courtesy: Manubehn S. Mashruwala
597. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

September 2, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

Rest assured that all will be well with you. I know that you are being tested there. But you have patience and faith and, therefore, everything will be well. There must be somebody there, too, to look after things. Besides, you have to think of your parents. Circumstances have thus favoured you at present with an opportunity for doing service there. God has, as it were, so ordained things that you are able to perform all your duties.

Yes, it was feared that Devdas might get paralysis. He is better now. He has become weak. He and Ba will perhaps go to Simla. It rarely occurs to me to write about such matters.

I understand about Mathew. This paper was made here. This is the first lot.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8472. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

598. LETTER TO KRISHNACHANDRA

WARDHA,
3 a.m., September 3, 1935

CHI. KRISHNACHANDRA,

You will experience supreme bliss and of course realize the presence of God when, faithfully believing that He is witness to every act, you dedicate all your deeds, thoughts and speech to Him. Remember, “Whatever you do, whatever you eat”, etc.¹

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 4276

¹ Bhagavad Gita, ix. 27
599. TELEGRAM TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

September 4, 1935

THANK GOD. HOPE YOU ARE WELL.

The Leader, 6-9-1935

600. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

WARDHA,

September 4, 1935

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

You can imagine the relief I had on receiving your wire. As usual Mahadev is taking this with him. I wish I had come myself but I must not. You will frankly give me your opinion on all the things of common interest. Unless there is an insuperable bar you should take charge of the Congress ship next year. You will wire to me Kamala’s condition on reaching there. The news of your release must itself have brought her considerable relief.

I hope you were keeping well.

Love.

BAPU

601. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

September 4, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

This is the thinnest paper made here. You can write on both the sides as you can see. He has prepared the blotting paper too. And he promises to make considerable improvements. This paper industry may prove a veritable boon. If it does, it will be a proof of what a combination of talent and labour can do for the village. I am hoping to get with your assistance, more than even eight annas per day for the makers.

1 The addressee’s reply telegram of even date read: “Leaving this evening by air. Love.” Vide also “Telegram to Viceroy”, 30-8-1935

Avinashilingam has got your rice with him, he says, as he could not find your place. He would not let me pay the railage. The cost of the bag is a trifle as you will see. The railage twice the price of the article! I wonder if I did right in sending you all that quantity. Perhaps you did not know what a bag would contain. There are bags and bags!

Having asked you to accommodate Kumarappa and Devdas I am not going to say more than I have done. I only hope that they will not prove a source of burden to you. Of course you are not expected to give any time to them. It is monstrous for poor people to think of going to fashionable hill-stations. You are responsible for the mischief. My poverty is only so-called?

Shummy must not forget the real poor. I must have the analysis of the neem leaf.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 3545. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 6354

602. LETTER TO KAMALNAYAN BAJAJ

September 4, 1935

CHI. KAMALNAYAN,

I am glad that I got your letter, though late.

Repetition of Ramanama, if done regularly, will help you.

It does not matter if you do not use hand-made paper there. To do that, you should feel zeal and passionate sympathy for the poor. When these become part of your nature, you will on your own start doing these things. Only what you do spontaneously and gladly will have value and bear fruit.

Do not form any views from what you see there about the difference between the British and other foreigners.

Let me tell one thing regarding dress. You may give up khadi there if you cannot willingly make it a rule to wear it. Wear whatever dress is convenient to you and of whatever cloth you find suitable. I believe, this answers all your questions.

Thus, you may wear an overcoat, made from foreign cloth or mill-cloth, and likewise socks and banian for exercise. It won’t be bad if you try to get all these things hand-made, but you will be committing no sin, either, if you don’t.

Your main duty while you are there is to study hard, to acquire mastery in your subjects, to acquire the virtues of fearlessness, courage, firmness, habits of hard work, generosity, compassion and love and to cultivate greater simplicity and humility. Observe the life there. Spend every moment usefully. Keep a diary.

I am returning your letter. Write to me if any question has been left unanswered.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

_Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad_, pp. 286-7

603. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

WARDHA,

_September 5, 1935_

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

Mahadev left yesterday for Prayag to meet Jawaharlal. But I see from the latter’s wire received today that Mahadev will not be able to meet him, since he is leaving this evening.

The Bombay Government has made its reply as venomous as it could. Its meaning is clear. Every effort will be made to suppress the facts. I now feel that we should not publish the correspondence for the present. It may be published together with the report of the Committee, when it is received, as our introduction to the report explaining the genesis of the Committee. Do you see anything against this? It is desirable that the Committee should finish its work as soon as possible.

I hope Baba is all right now. At present we have some meeting or other everyday . . . .

Mahadev will return day after tomorrow.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

_Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhaire_, p. 184

---

1 Vide footnote 2, “Telegrams to Jawaharlal Nehru”, 4-9-1935. For Mahadev Desai’s letter to Jawaharlal Nehru, vide Appendix II.

2 Omission as in the source
604. LETTER TO JAYANTI N. PAREKH

September 5, 1935

CHI. JAYANTI,

I am surprised that you have not been able to understand my step. What I have said is that all my activities have swaraj as their goal. Every breath I take is dedicated to it. To reach that goal sooner I left Yeravda Mandir and took up Harijan work and have now taken up village industries work. Worship of any God is worship of Lord Krishna.

It is now our duty to help Kanti. You two brothers should take up some honest business and free Nathubhai from debts.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 6262

605. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

WARDHA,
September 5, 1935

CHI. MATHURADAS,

I have your letter. Mahadev has replied to your earlier letter. Today Mahadev is on the train to Prayag. Jawaharlal must have slipped away last evening. Still, the trip could not be avoided.

A more exhaustive statement of accounts of the Tilak Swaraj Fund than the one you have sent has already been published in octavo size. This is not it. If this is all you have, then it is incomplete. It would be proper to write that the printed version is available only at Revashankarbhai’s or at the All-India office. I have not gone deeply into it. You will have gone through my correspondence with J. which is with Sardar. It is not to be published. I have nothing to say in my defence. The [charges] against the Congress can be answered only by producing the accounts. I am saving your letter for Mahadev. Enquire at Revashankarbhai’s for other major items in the accounts. I hope you are all in good health.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar
MY DEAR AMRIT,

Your daily post has commenced even before the patients’ are there! This is like your rehearsal of Shakuntala. Next time you come, you will teach something of your art to the girls, if a little time can be saved from your secretarial work. I suppose your rehearsal there was in English? Whose translation was it? Who were the actresses?

Yes, you will have the salesman and the present rent paid for a limited period if you will guarantee purchase of definite minimum of khadi and not stock mill-cloth. You can sell all other swadeshi articles. But my anxiety is for you not to add to your already heavy burdens, financial and administrative. Run the swadeshi enterprise by all means if you have the right stamp of men and your financial responsibility is rigidly fixed. The undertakings with which I am connected are so vast in their scope that they can absorb fortunes. That they have never yet done so is because I have never allowed them to go out of hand. And there is protection from within as there is little chance of personal gain. All I want therefore is your great ability, constancy and purity dedicated to the service of the lowliest and the downtrodden. That, thank God, I already have.

I return Vijaya Singh’s letter. I do not like it over much. But I have no right to judge. You will insist on a proper accounting of every pice spent.

Mahadev has gone for a day to meet Jawaharlal. I fear however that he must have missed him by a few hours. Jawaharlal flew earlier than he had expected.

I hope you are not overworking yourself.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 3546. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 6355
607. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

September 6, 1935

CHI. AMBUJAM,

I am glad you will have a little touring. Of course it would be well for you to confine yourself to Harijan work, khadi and Hindi. Since you are going to Trivandrum, you may see the Government apiary which is said to be there. You know Ramachandra there, do you not? You should seek him out. He is secretary of the Harijan Sevak Sangh and one of our finest workers.

I hope, even if Kichi’s finger remains permanently deformed, there will be no constitutional evil resulting from it.

I do take almonds, but rarely. Do not send any unless I ask for them.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: Ambujammal papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

608. LETTER TO K. M. MUNSHI

September 6, 1935

BHAJ MUNSHI,

Study this case. If you think we can win it, you may go to Jalgaon or send someone else. These friends cannot afford to pay that person anything more than the railway fare.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 7589. Courtesy: K. M. Munshi

¹ This was an enclosure to the following letter dated September 11, 1935 from Deokinandan, Khadi Bhandar, Jalgaon, to the addressee: “We have here a civil case before the Additional First Class Sub Judge, fixed for argument on September 27. It is a case filed by the Khadi Bhandar against the Government. We consulted Mahatma and he has directed us to go to you. We send herewith Mahatma’s letter addressed to you regarding the case, etc.”
609. LETTER TO GOWAMAL

September 6, 1935

BHAI GOWAMAL,

I have had no letter from Padmavati. I don’t remember at all about the blessings. If she got them, I can’t tell in what circumstances she did. You should not waste my time about such matters.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a facsimile of the Gujarati: Mahatma Gandhi aur Jabalpur, p. 47

610. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

September 6, 1935

CHI. BRIJKRISHNA,

It will be all right if Nair can withstand the circumstances and remain there for a year. But recall him from Calcutta if the Ashram work is badly hampered.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 2435

---

1 This was in reply to the addressee’s letter enquiring whether Gandhiji had blessed the inter-caste marriage of Padmavati, a Kerala girl.
611. DISCUSSION WITH SWAMI YOGANANDA¹

[Before September 7, 1935]²

GANDHIJI: Why is there evil in the world, is a difficult question to answer. I can only give what I may call a villager’s answer. If there is good there must also be evil, just as where there is light there is also darkness, but it is true only so far as we human mortals are concerned. Before God there is nothing good, nothing evil. We poor villagers may talk of His dispensation in human terms, but our language is not God’s.

The Vedanta says the world is maya. Even that explanation is a babbling of imperfect humanity. I therefore say that I am not going to bother my head about it. Even if I was allowed to peep into the innermost recess of God’s chamber I should not care to do it. For I should not know what to do there. It is enough for our spiritual growth to know that God is always with the doer of good. That again is a villager’s explanation.

YOGANANDA: But if He is All-mighty, as unquestionably He is, why does He not free us from evil?

I would rule out this question, too. God and we are not equals. Equals may put such questions to one another, but not unequals. Villagers do not ask why town-dwellers do things which if they did would mean certain destruction.

I quite see what you mean. It is a strong point you have made. But who made God?

If He is All-powerful, He must have made Himself.

Do you think He is an autocrat or a democrat?

I do not think these things at all. I do not want to divide the power with Him and hence I am absolved from having to consider these questions. I am content with the doing of the task in front of me. I do not worry about the why and wherefore of things.

But has He not given us reason?

¹ This is extracted from “Weekly Letter” by Mahadev Desai, who had reported that Swami Yogananda had “just returned home after a long stay in America”. On his way to Ranchi, he halted at Wardha to meet Gandhiji.
² According to Gandhi—1915-1948: A Detailed Chronology, the discussion took place on August 26 and 27.
Indeed He has. But that reason helps us to see that we should not dabble in things we cannot fathom. It is my implicit belief that a true villager has an amazing amount of common sense and therefore he never worries about these things.

Then I will now ask a different question. Do you believe it is easier to be evil than good, that a descent is easier than an ascent?

Apparently it is so. But really it is easier to be good than to be evil. Of course poets have said that descent to hell is easy, but I do not think so. Nor do I think there are more bad people in the world than good. In that case God himself would be evil and not an embodiment of ahimsa or love which He is.

May I know your definition of ahimsa?

Ahimsa means avoiding injury to anything on earth, in thought, word and deed . . . .

I shall now change the subject. You would prefer self-control to birth-control?

I think artificial birth-control or birth-control according to methods suggested today and recommended in the West is suicidal. When I say ‘suicidal’, I do not mean resulting in the extinction of the race, I mean suicidal in a higher sense of the term, that is to say these methods make man lower than the brute; they are immoral.

But how long are we to tolerate indiscriminate procreation? I know a man who used to purchase a seer of milk, and went on diluting it with water in order to divide it between his children whose number increased every year. Don’t you think this was a sin?

It is a sin to bring forth unwanted children, but I think it is a greater sin to avoid the consequences of one’s own action. It simply unmans man.

What then is the most practical method of telling man this truth?

The most practical method is to live the life of self-control. Example is better than precept.

But the West asks us, “Why is it that you have greater child mortality and lower life average than we, though you regard yourselves as more spiritual than the West?” Do you believe in many children, Mahatmaji?

I believe in no children.

Then the whole race will be extinct.
It won't be extinct, it will be transformed into something better. But it can never happen, for we have inherited from eternity the sex instinct from our progenitors. It means a tremendous effort to check this habit of ages, and yet it is a simple effort. Absolute renunciation, absolute brahmacharya is the ideal state. If you dare not think of it marry by all means, but even then live a life of self-control.

Have you any working method to teach this to the masses?

It is, as I said a moment ago, to attain complete self-control and go and live that life amongst the masses. A life of self-restraint and denial of all luxuries cannot but have its effect on the masses. There is an indissoluble connection between self-control and the control of the palate. The man who observes brahmacharya will be controlled in every one of his acts and will be humble.

I see what you mean. The masses do not know the happiness of self-control and we have to teach them that. But what about the argument of the West I referred to before?

I do not think that we are more spiritually minded than the West. If we were, we should not have fallen so low. But because the average life of a Westerner is much higher than ours, it does not prove the spirituality of the West. Whoever is spiritually minded must show a better, not necessarily longer, life.

Harijan, 7-9-1935

612. HARIJAN SEVAK SANGH RESOLUTIONS

The meeting of the Executive of the Harijan Sevak Sangh Board held from 30th August to 2nd September passed several important resolutions. The following is one of them:

The question of decentralizing the finance and administration of the Sangh was discussed, in the presence of Sjt. J. N. Kunzru, who was specially invited to attend this meeting of the Committee; the position with regard to U. P. (East) and the representations from the other provinces were considered. At the end of the discussion Pandit Kunzru was requested to frame a separate scheme for U.P. (East) in consultation with his Provincial Board and District Committees by way of experiment and to submit it for consideration at the next meeting of the Executive Committee.

Another important resolution passed was the following:
Resolved that the [24th] of September 1935, the day on which the Poona Pact was signed, be celebrated as the ‘Harijan Day’ in accordance with instructions issued in that behalf by the Head Office, Delhi.

It is to be hoped that Harijan workers throughout India will make a special effort to establish closer contact with Harijans and that there will be an all-round greater self dedication.

The third resolution of importance runs:

Resolved that efforts be made for the co-ordination of the activities of the Charkha, Gram Udyog and Harijan Sevak Sanghs, and to secure that purpose it is suggested that a joint committee, consisting of the Secretaries of these sister organizations, be created after getting constitutional recognition from the Charkha and Gram Udyog Sanghs.

Seeing that all the three activities are constructive and meet at many points, much time, energy and money can be saved and the work of the three organizations advanced if there is greater coordination among workers wherever it is possible and desirable.

_Harijan, 7-9-1935_

613. PRIVATE PRODUCERS BEWARE

Whilst the new policy of giving an adequate wage to the spinners and others working at the manufacture of khadi is taking shape, the question of certified private producers of khadi comes up for serious consideration. They are responsible for a large quantity of khadi. The Association has a duty towards these no less than towards the wage-earners. The contracts made with them must be duly fulfilled. But the duty ends there. The whole organization of the Spinners’ Association is or should be run as a trust for the spinners whose lot must be progressively improved. Private producers are certified primarily for the benefit of the spinners. They should get their profit through the service of the latter, not at their expense, as we discover, they and others are doing.

But certificates issued to them need not be withdrawn if they will put themselves on a par with the direct agents of the Association. But they will have to radically revise their method of work if they will do so. They will have even to suffer loss. They have to maintain in accordance with the requirements of the Association registers of the

---

1 The source has “25th” which was subsequently corrected by Gandhiji; _vide_ “Notes”, 14-9-1935 and 21-9-1935.
spinners and other wage-earners served by them. They have to produce proof of payment of wages, collect and supply statistics regarding them. This may be too onerous for them. The risk entailed by the probable increase in the price of khadi may be too great to be borne by them. The requirements of the Association may be too exacting for producers who have undoubtedly to work hard for making the profits they do. Those who feel so, should from now begin to wind up their khadi business. Those who wish to continue to do khadi work, should put themselves in touch with the agents of the Association. Only they should know that the slightest neglect in the observance of the conditions will entail cancellation of certificates. Loss or no loss, strictest honesty is the essential condition of continuation of their contract with the Association. Only those therefore should continue who are lovers of khadi and devotees of Daridranarayana for whose sake they will not mind losses. Those who are themselves not users of khadi in their own persons and homes need not entertain any hope of continuing the contract.

_Harijan, 7-9-1935_

614. LEPROSY AND ITS PREVENTION

Savli is one of the hives of khadi workers who are living in the midst of poor spinners and weavers. Leprosy is rampant in Savli. It is no wonder when these toilers have to slave to eke out a bare living, spinners getting no more than two pies at the most per hour. Their average bill of fare is one rupee per month.

The workers inquire how they are to deal with the lepers, who mix with everyone without let or hindrance. Many of them work for their living or help their relatives. What is to be done with their manufacture? How are they to serve these unfortunate countrymen?

The Indian Council of the British Empire Leprosy Relief Association has published a booklet called _Leprosy Diagnosis, Treatment and Prevention_. It is running its fifth edition. The author is Dr. Muir, M.D.I quote freely from the chapter on Preventon.¹

_Harijan, 7-9-1935_

¹ The extracts are not reproduced here.
615. LETTER TO LALCHAND J. VORA

WARDHA,
September 8, 1935

BHAI LALCHAND,

You are conducting a good many useful activities. If such work is carried on with the co-operation of all and purely in a spirit of service, it will certainly bear fruit.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10497. Also C.W. 9127. Courtesy: Lalchand J. Vora

616. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

WARDHA,
September 9, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

Just a line whilst I use the right hand. I see that I must rest the right hand except during the silence day, if I am to retain its use for that day for some years. This is merely a precautionary measure.

I am eating your apples. But you won’t issue peremptory instructions with each consignment you may be sending. I assure you, I shall not deny myself fruit when I need it.

Khurshed\(^1\) is acting as secretary, Mahadev having gone to Allahabad only to miss Jawahar and now having gone to Sardar at his bidding. She is giving full time and is slaving today even as you had to that terrible Monday.

Amtul Salaam has just risen from sick-bed to find Mira taking her place.\(^2\) And it is pouring cats and dogs today! I hope however there is nothing serious with her.

Ba and Devdas must have come to you today. I do hope all this party won’t be too much strain on you. Shummy will give me his professional note on both Kumarappa and Devdas please.

\(^1\) Granddaughter of Dadabhai Naoroji
\(^2\) Mirabehn was suffering from malaria.
I wonder how long the bag of rice will last you. Next time you should import paddy from the nearest place and instal a husking chakki. That would be the cheapest method and in keeping with the village spirit.

Love to the ever-increasing family.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 3547. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 6356.

617. LETTER TO N. R. MALKANI

September 9, 1935

MY DEAR MALKANI,

Your batch of papers to hand. You will find in Harijan your wishes fully given effect to.¹ I have also written to Hariji. I wrote to Gulistan² last week to be excused. I am drained dry. And as you know I have enough hay on my fork. You should therefore plead for me to all the ‘beggars’.

Love.

BAPU

PROF. MALKANI
HARIJAN SEVAK SANGH, BIRLA MILLS
DELHI

From a photostat: G.N. 924

618. LETTER TO KANTI N. PAREKH

September 9, 1935

CHI. KANTI,

I got your letter. By all means start business. See that you avoid the sin of harming the country by doing trade in foreign goods, even if you can earn crores through it.

I didn’t know what you say about Shanta. I am not surprised by her conduct. Get married only after you have started earning and saved some money. If she is free then and both of you are willing, you may marry her. Or else you may find out some other partner.

¹ Vide “Notes”, 14-9-1935.
² A children’s journal. Shawakraj Bhojraj Dada, President of All-India Balkanji Bari, had asked for the message.
I never desire that all of you should approve of all of my ideas. Satyagraha means that you should think independently and shape your conduct accordingly. Earn every pie honestly. Nathubhai will not desire anything else. Write to me occasionally.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]
I have torn up your letter. Nobody else has read it.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6270

619. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT
September 9, 1935

CHI. VASUMATI,

I read both your letters. Your programme seems all right. You are always free to come whenever you wish. Why should you then wait for a letter from me? Does a daughter ask her father’s permission every time she wishes to visit him? Tell Gangabehn that I have no time and that, therefore, I am restraining my desire to write a long letter to her. Pratap and his wife Taramati came to see me before leaving for Germany. We talked a lot. I will write and tell you about it if I get the time.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S. N. 9406. Also C.W. 652. Courtesy: Vasumati Pandit

620. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL
September 9, 1935

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

Please go through the accompanying letter. I haven’t replied to it. Perhaps you will recognize the person. See if you can do anything. I do hope your burden has lightened a little.

I have been hearing rumours about an indirect breach of the Poona Pact on the part of the Government. Let us wait and see.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
_Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhai_ p. 185
621. LETTER TO P. KODANDA RAO

WARDHA,
September 10, 1935

DEAR KODANDA RAO,

The statement that I had derived my idea of civil disobedience from the writings of Thoreau is wrong. The resistance to authority in South Africa was well advanced before I got the essay of Thoreau on civil disobedience.1 But the movement was then known as passive resistance. As it was incomplete I had coined the word satyagraha for the Gujarati readers. When I saw the title of Thoreau’s great essay, I began the use of his phrase to explain our struggle to the English readers. But I found that even civil disobedience failed to convey the full meaning of the struggle. I therefore adopted the phrase civil resistance. Non-violence was always an integral part of our struggle.

As per your advice, a copy is going to Mr. Pearson. I hope you have done well. Mahadev is in Bombay just now.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

SJT. KODANDA RAO

From a photostat: G.N. 6280; also Gandhi and the American Scene, pp. 18-9

622. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

September 10, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

I am not going to worry about Kumarappa’s temperature. He is absolutely safe under Shummy’s care.

I do not remember having suggested your name to Rajendrababu. If you really do not feel equal to the task, say so unhesitatingly. If it is from the Congress standpoint that the pamphlet is required, you must not undertake the task. If it is from the woman’s standpoint, I do not know anyone who can do it better than you. But I

1 Vide “On the Duty of Civil Disobedience”, 7-9-1907; also “Letter to Henry S. Salt”, 12-10-1929
2 Of the Servants of India Society. He was in the United States of America at the time; vide “Interview to “The Natal Mercury” “, 5-1-1909

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
myself dread your undertaking fresh burdens. Therefore whilst from the latter’s standpoint I would like you to shoulder the burden, you shall be the judge as to whether you can spare the time. It need not be a book. A pamphlet of 25 pages octavo size compactly written would be quite good. Of course you may write more, if you feel like it.

You shall have the paper as soon as possible. The samples not yet received.

Did I tell you yesterday that Mira was on her back? She has just been transferred to where Kumarappa was placed. Amtul Salaam, tell Kumarappa, has now got her job and is now up and doing. She has forgotten that she was sick only yesterday.

Please tell Ba, Laxmi is to be put up at the bungalow.

Love.

BAPU

[PS.]

Just received wire about Devdas. Thank God.

From the orginal: C.W. 3548. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6357

623. LETTER TO GIRDHARILAL BATRA

September 10, 1935

DEAR DR. BATRA,

The cases of books have been delivered in good order and condition. They have not been unpacked and will not be for a little time to come. The portraits have also arrived safely.

I wrote to you hastily that they will be accommodated on the walls of the library, but it occurred to me at once that I was wrong in falling in with your proposal. I have always dissuaded friends from entertaining the desire to associate such memorials with their gifts.
What is more, the regulation of the library will rest not with me, but with the trustees of whom I am not even one.

You will therefore pardon me for my hasty answer and let me revise it. Will you be satisfied if I make some other good use of the portraits? I have not discussed your proposal with the trustees though
I mentioned it to Sjt. Kumarappa, who agreed with my view.

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
624. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

September 10, 1935

CHI. PREMA,

I had received the rakhadi in time. I got the [hand-made] paper made in Junnar. It was good. I have given the whole bulk to Khurshedbehn whose need was greater than mine. The yarn being kept aside. It attracts a good many people’s eyes. And what will be the payment for my labour of spinning? Whenever I can spin 160 rounds during a day, it is Diwali for me.

I have all along been under the impression that indigenous reed-pens are available in plenty. The one with which I am writing is believed to be Indian. I will inquire.

Among the Socialists there are many good people, and some have the spirit of self-sacrifice in them; there are some who possess a powerful intellect and some who are rogues. Almost all of them have Westernized minds. None of them knows the real conditions in Indian villages or perhaps even cares to know them.

Be thankful that your food was appreciated.

I do not recollect the name Lakshmibai Thunse.

It is all right if Kaka has invited you. Your duty, however, lies where you are. I have not changed my views. Deo seems to be upset by the attempt to entice you. Reassure him on my behalf. He needs no such reassurance from you of course.

I also feel about Hitler nearly the same way as you.

If one point regarding my attitude is borne in mind, everything else will be clear. I am indifferent about the time when the goal will be reached, but not at all about the work to be done and the good to be reached. I say that I do not care whether the rich do or do not give up their wealth not because I am unconcerned whether or not they do so but because I have no fear that they will not do so. If the steps we are taking are right, sooner or later they will lead to only one end.

1 An old Congress worker of Poona
2 In Bapuna Patro-5: Kum. Premabehn Kantakne, the addressee explains that she was asked by Kalelkar to take charge of Mahila Ashram at Wardha leaving the village work at Sasvad to Shankarrao Deo.
The theory about man having descended from the ape does not convince me. There is no doubt, however, that the soul which lives in the human body now has lived in the bodies of an ape and other animals in the past.

I do not like the argument that the atatayi\(^1\) may be killed. Who should be regarded as an atatayi? For the present I do believe that murderers and other criminals will have to be imprisoned. But I do not remember even having said that that is ahimsa. I certainly do not believe that it is. I have said that in the existing circumstances such action may be unavoidable. This only means that my ahimsa is still far from perfect and that, therefore, I have not yet been able to discover a remedy for this kind of violence. Truth lies in recognizing a fall from an ideal as what it is.

If we win power by any means other than ahimsa, the swaraj will most certainly not be the swaraj of the poor. They will profit only in proportion to the degree of ahimsa we observe in winning swaraj. Perfect ahimsa neither you nor I nor anybody else can claim. But one who believes in ahimsa will become more and more non-violent day by day and in consequence his field of service will keep ever expanding. The field of service of the votary of violence will become narrower day by day and will ultimately become restricted to himself.

You have done well in inviting Kelkar.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Ba has taken Devdas to Simla. His illness was fairly serious. We have a good many sick-beds here these days. Mira is ill. Amtussalaam also is practically ill. Nimu and her children are with me. Lakshmi is arriving from Delhi today. She is going to Madras. Prabha is here.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 10378. Also C.W. 6816. Courtesy: Premabehn Kantak

\(^1\) A killer
625. LETTER TO RAMESHWARDAS BIRLA

September 10, 1935

BHAIRAMESHWARDAS,

I had your letter and the cheque. I shall expect nothing after October unless some dire need overtakes me. But it is understood that you will continue the payments to the Sardar and Rajendrababu.

. . .’s 1 letter did not reach me. It is good that she went to . . . 2 as she is the only one who can save him and she can undoubtedly make some impression on him if she carries true strength within herself. The visit abroad will then prove to have been fruitful.

I am not writing a separate letter to Ghanshyamdas. Tell him to see me here on his way to wherever he may be going. I am staying put here.

Blessings from BAPU

From Hindi: C.W. 7973. Courtesy: G.D. Birla

626. TELEGRAM TO ANKLESARIA

[On or before September 12, 1935] 4

SORRY, PLEASE TELL HIM TO SUSPEND FAST, GET WELL AND PREACH HIS MESSAGE GENTLY AMONG PEOPLE THERE. HE MUST QUALIFY HIMSELF BEFORE HE RESUMES VICARIOUS FAST. I HAVE ALREADY TOLD HIM THAT THIS FAST IS ALTOGETHER PREMATURE.

Amrita Bazar Patrika, 13-9-1935

1 The names have been omitted.
2 ibid
3 This was in reply to the addressee's telegram to Gandhiji asking for advice regarding the “fast unto death” undertaken by one Ram Chandra Sharma.
4 The telegram was reported under the date-line “Wardhaganj, September 12", 1935.

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
627. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

WARDHA,
September 12, 1935

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

How well you have joined Kamala! It is the best tonic for her. I shall keep a note for her herewith. Your messages are being duly received here. And Sarup repeats what she receives. Let us hope all will end well. Please thank Dr. Atal for his messages and letters which have been most helpful. I expect a regular mail from you whilst the crisis lasts. Typed sheets¹ are with me. I shall go through them as soon as possible.

Mahadev had to go to Bombay to help Vallabhbhai about an inquiry. And he is still there. Rajagopalachari has just dropped in with Laxmi and her baby boy. Devdas was badly ill. Ansari has packed him off to Simla. I have Mira on my hands prostrate with bad fever.

I would like you to allow yourself to be elected President for the next year. Your acceptance will solve many difficulties. If you think fit, send me a wire.

Has Indu been fixed up?

Khurshed is here. She will be writing to you by the ordinary mail.

Love from us all.

BAPU

Gandhi-Nehru Papers, 1935. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

628. LETTER TO VITHAL L. PHADKE

September 12, 1935

CHI. MAMA,

I have thrown your article into the waste-paper basket. There is no ban against efforts by the right type of men or women. We cannot, however, get such workers by advertising for them in Harijanbandhu, nor do they grow in the [Harijan Sevak] Sangh’s Office. They emerge in answer to tapascharya. Why don’t you become one?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3833

¹ Of the addressee’s autobiography published in 1936

629. LETTER TO DILKHUSH DIWANJI

September 12, 1935

Bhai Dilkhush,

Only today I have been able to read the question you have sent to Kishorelal. The questions are good. In fixing the wages for spinning by the poor students who spin for their own needs, you may make them as high or as low as you like. If the khadi so spun is more than what they need, you can adopt the rate prevailing in any [khadi] association. If it is sold in the market, it should be sold so as to help khadi sales.

If the spinning activity is merely [part-time] for buying condiments or pan and bidis, the wages can be fixed quite low. But if it is [a whole-time activity] for buying ghee and milk, the rate of wage for an hour’s spinning should be sufficiently high to meet one’s needs. You may consider this a new theory, but according to me it is not. It can be inferred from what I have written earlier. So it is not a new theory and can be deduced logically from what has been stated as a premise. Experience shows that thousands of women earn their livelihood from spinning. When the question of fixing their wages came up, I had to say that they should at least be able to maintain themselves with that. Or we should show them some occupation by which they can do so. I think this covers answers to all your questions. If not, by all means ask me again.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Motana Man, p. 71
DEAR DAUGHTER,

All your efforts are in vain until you have been able to win over Kanam.

I don’t think it will affect me, if anyone touches my feet. But I want to put down this idolatry. I do not regard myself so pure.

I see no benefit in cutting off the hair but you can certainly have it trimmed by someone if it comes in the way of your doing your work.

I do not accuse you of harbouring any impurity. There can be no fear on my part if you find nothing wrong with yourself. It is a matter of your own choice whether or no to go to Kanpur or any other place.

BAPU

631. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

[After September 12, 1935]

There is hardly anything I can suggest in this matter. You can win him [Kanam] over only through love and this love will grow of its own accord. Anyway, it is an old story.

There is nothing to write down. Do on your own whatever you can do.

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 608

1 Inferred from the sentence: “I don’t think it will affect me, if anyone touches my feet.” On September 12, 1935, Gandhiji had renounced the practice of placing his hand on a girl’s shoulder for support while walking. Vide also “A Renunciation”, 21-9-1935.

2 The source has this in Urdu.

3 In Bapuke Patra—8: Bibi Amatussalamake Nam, the addressee explains that she was asked to take care of Kanam, son of Ramdas Gandhi, as Ba was in Simla.

4 Inferred from the reference to Kanam; vide the preceding item.
632. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

WARDHA,
September 12/13\(^1\), 1935

CHI. BRIJKRISHNA,

Your letter. Your suggestion that the expenses should be reduced is quite pertinent. Let Krishnan Nair remain in Calcutta for a year. In the mean time you and Hardhyan Singh can do what you can. Any enterprise that depends solely on one person is bound to break down ultimately, and how long can you keep Krishnan Nair in Delhi?

This time I chanced to notice the secret hatred K.N. bears towards the rich. He too realized that his heart has yet to digest it. What you write is quite correct. His stay in Bengal should prove beneficial. Gradually he will acquire mastery over everything. Meanwhile the other Ashram inmates too will have been tested. Only those can be defined as Ashram inmates who have no financial or any other kind of obligations towards parents and other relatives, whose wants comprise only food and clothing and who are ever alert in the observance of ahimsa and the other eleven vows. That is why one who is inclined to put aside even the smallest amount is disqualified as an Ashram inmate. Keeping this in view no one should be paid more than Rs. 10 and moreover anything saved over and above food, etc., should be returned to the Ashram. But we can employ on a salary those whose services are needed and who in spite of their spirit of service cannot, owing to their other obligations, work except on a higher remuneration. We should strictly limit our expenditure in accordance with the sums available in the budget. You can circulate this to all the workers currently employed. This will shift the responsibility from your head and have the desired effect. My health is satisfactory. The diet consists of milk, vegetables and occasionally fruit. Part of this letter has been written by me and the rest dictated, with many interruptions in between. In the mean while Rajaji arrived yesterday and informed me of your having fallen ill; how is it? I hope that you have recovered by now.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 2434

\(^1\) From the contents it is clear that Gandhiji had begun this letter on September 12, 1935, but was interrupted by the arrival of Rajagopalachari and could complete it only the next day; vide also “Letter to Jawaharlal Nehru”, 12-9-1935
633. LETTER TO PURUSHOTTAM L. BAVISHI

September 13, 1935

BHAI PURUSHOTTAM,

I got your postcard. Send me the name of the village you have in mind. The decision regarding Vinoba is not yet final.

Blessings from
BAPU

634. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

September 13, 1935

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

I got your letter. Rajaji is sitting by my side. I read out your order to him. He says he must leave on the 17th at the latest. Papa is expected in Madras and her son, who was ill, is eager to see him. Rajaji thinks you want to talk to him about the crown of thorns and says that, if it is so, your effort will be wasted. He says he has given no assurance at all to Bhulabhai. He is in no condition just now to accept the crown. He is extremely tired both physically and mentally. With his consent, I have written to Jawaharlal and asked him. All the same, it would be worthwhile if you can reach here by Monday. We must let him go on Tuesday at the latest. The weather here is none too good just now.

Mira is better, but she is having temperature since 2 o’clock. I inquired about the price of mosambis because, if they are available here at the same price, I should like to get them here itself.

You seem to have misunderstood my point regarding Sindi. We have no desire at all to force anything on the people. We simply wish to go on working silently. We shall discuss this further when we meet.

1 That he should be detained at Wardha for a week
2 Congress Presidentship
3 Vide "Letter to Amtussalaam"
4 Vide footnote 2, "Letter to Mirabehn", 26-5-1935
If we don’t meet in a few days, I will write to you a detailed letter. I will do nothing in haste.

I understand about the gentleman from Bulsar.

The less argument there is in the committee’s report, the better. There should be no adjective at all. A report giving their conclusions on the main issues and suggestions for future guidance will make it a pamphlet to which nobody could take exception. This is what I think.

It seems Bhau is living in Jamnalal’s chawl. It will be enough if he gets some money regularly.

...’s case is a strange one.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro–2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 186-7

635. DISCUSSION ON MINIMUM LIVING WAGE–II

[Before September 14, 1935]

Our objective is as the name implies to represent the spinners who are the lowest paid labourers, i.e., to improve their lot. Therefore we have to show a progressive improvement in their lot. You must remember my earliest formula which holds good as much today as it did then—a spinning-wheel in every home and a loom or looms in every village. That is the ideal of self-sufficing khadi, and if I could take you with me I would have you serve the spinners not so much by selling their khadi as by making them prepare it for their own use. We

1 The name is omitted in the source

2 This is extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter” which gave the following summary of arguments by khadi workers: “(1) It is wrong to say that we are exploiting the poor spinners. On the contrary, the consumers who can easily purchase cheap Japanese and other foreign stuffs, go in for khadi which is dearer. This is patriotism and not exploitation. (2) The minimum wage may mean a few more coppers in the pocket of a very few, but what about the thousands who will find their occupation gone? (3) The spinners themselves would far rather prefer a permanent small wage than a precarious higher minimum wage. If a referendum were to be taken, they would cast their vote against the minimum wage. (4) We have not reduced the spinners’ wage; the reductions in our prices are due to the fall in the price of cotton, and reduction in the weavers’ wages. (5) It would have been possible to do something when the political situation was favourable, but at the present moment it is hardly the atmosphere.”
make our own chapatis, there are no hotels in villages; in the same way all villagers should make their own khadi. Not that some of them will not make extra khadi but that will depend only on the demand. We shall certainly take orders from the city people who will want our khadi, and we shall get that khadi done by those who will get a wage per hour proportionate to their daily need. This may mean a temporary rise in the present price of khadi. We may no longer exploit the poverty of the people. I have never said it was deliberate exploitation. I take the fullest responsibility for all we have done during the past fifteen years, and what we have done was inevitable. But we have now to strike a new departure. We have ignored the proletariat for centuries, and whilst we have arrogated to ourselves the right of commanding their labour, the thought has never crossed us that they have a right to dictate their wage, that labour is as much their capital as money is ours. It is time we began to think in terms of their needs, their hours of work and leisure and their standard of living.

It is idle to argue that the spinners themselves would plump for a smaller wage for all than a higher wage for a few. That is the argument of every exploiter and slave-owner, and indeed there were unfortunate folks amongst slaves who hugged the chains of slavery. But why should you fear that the majority of them will find their occupation gone? Haven’t we other occupations to recommend them? In Andhra, Sitarama Sastry has not hesitated to encourage them to prefer paddy-husking to spinning as the former gives a better wage. Let us not deceive ourselves. We have made their necessity our opportunity, and have never looked at the question from their point of view.

Satisbabu had a fear that the minimum wage would open the door of fraudulent transactions. That fear, said Gandhiji, was always there. Without the minimum wage, had we not that trouble already? That was a problem which had to be independently dealt with. Gandhiji entirely agreed that the atmosphere of competition must disappear, and he was sure it would disappear as soon as the commercial spirit behind khadi disappeared.

Satisbabu was also anxious that in no case should the workmen’s minimum wage exceed the wage of an agriculturist. There was no such thing as an agriculturist’s wage, explained Gandhiji. In many parts of India the peasant hardly got out of his land enough to keep body and soul together, and the peasant who had no land of his own and cultivated it on lease produced not even enough to pay his rent. Gandhiji said:

The peasant’s condition is no standard. The only standard is to get the daily bread. To seek to pay anything less would be called criminal.

_Harijan_, 14-9-1935
636. NOTES

HARIJAN DAY

The Central Office of the Harijan Sevak Sangh has issued the following circular:

The Harijan Sevak Sangh will complete the third year of its existence by the end of September, and the Poona Pact agreed to by the leaders of caste Hindus and Harijans was signed at Poona on the 24th September 1932. It is therefore natural that the end of September, and more specially the 24th of September, should be considered an important date in the life of the Harijan Sevak Sangh. The Executive Committee of the Sangh which recently met at Wardha has therefore resolved that the 24th September be celebrated both by caste Hindus and Harijans all over the country in the following manner:

(a) On that day all Harijan sevaks should visit Harijan bastis in the morning and speak to Harijans on the importance of sanitation and perform some personal service for them however small.

(b) In the evening Harijan and non-Harijan children may be taken to open places for sports and entertainments.

(c) Processions, kirtan or bhajan parties may be organized. Public meetings may also be held wherever possible and the solemn pledge of the Hindu community for the abolition of untouchability by birth reiterated.

(d) Association and sympathizers of the Sangh should be enrolled.

(e) Collections for the Harijan Wells Fund—the special feature of this year’s work—be continued with zeal and vigour.

I hope that the Sangh’s appeal will receive ready response from all reformers, both Harijans and non-Harijans, no matter to what party they belong.

WARNING TO HARIJAN BOARDS

Here is an extract from Shri Malkani’s letter:

I am beginning to receive letters from Provincial Secretaries showing the difficulty of even raising 25 per cent of expenditure on welfare work out of fresh collections. A copy of Sjt. Gopalaswamy’s letter enclosed herewith shows the danger of laxity in collections. On 22nd August, a sum of Rs. 81,455-10-2 was outstanding as advances to Provincial Boards representing, roughly speaking, two month’s expenditure of all Boards and their branches. I am afraid several committees have already got into the habit of eating up advances instead of making fresh collections. If this tendency grows, as it may after 1st October next, a very difficult situation will arise, and without fresh advances heavy arrears may grow up in various centres so as to dislocate normal work. In this, Assam is the worst sinner and should serve as a warning. It was given the whole purse fund without any deduction and could get cent per cent on welfare out of the purse fund and two-thirds grant on A & B. Yet it is in heavy arrears and has eaten up advances. I shall be thankful if you kindly show the importance of vigilance with regard to our advances and fresh collections.

Hardly any comment on this is necessary. Provincial Boards, District Boards and other branches will find themselves without resources if they sleep away during the time while there is something to go on with. Fortune favours the vigilant, never the slothful. I know that the Central Office will follow literally this very sound practice of fortune. It is well, therefore, for all branches to be warned in time and find their own sinews of war. They will find them by local collections if they can show solid work. If they do not, it would be a sign to wind up work.

Harijan, 14-9-1935

637. FALLACIES

A careful observer of events and things writes:

I have no doubt that there is an enormous scope for work in the directions indicated by you in your letter under reply. Cottage industries have a place. But, to be quite frank, I do not think that these can replace industries on a big scale. Leaving aside the financial interests of those controlling such industries, I think that it will not be in the interest of the country to work for the ruin of such industries, which have been established and which can be established in this country. The greatest objection to machinery that has been urged is the growing tendency to reduce the number of men employed. This results in unemployment. The present method of distribution of profits may require readjustment. But leisure, if it can be well utilized, is more important than many other things. Merely to keep a large number employed at work I do not think it is necessary to discard economic and efficient machinery. It should be able to give leisure and food to many, and in this ‘many’ I include people not even distantly connected with the industry. With such a large population as in India and steadily increasing I fear that at no time will it be possible to keep everyone in reasonable comfort. With improved education and sanitation life will be prolonged and death-rate will come down. From the population point of view this will make the condition worse. So, you will forgive my saying that the first thing that requires to be done is to take measures to restrict population and it cannot be done without birth-control. I know that you are against it. But now that you are applying your mind solely to the problem of economic reconstruction by improvement in sanitation, food values, cottage industries, etc., I request you to consider if this is not also one of the things that should receive your attention.

The writer is an honest thinker and yet, as it seems to me, has missed the whole aim of the work being done by the two organizations he has in mind. Their aim is not to replace or to ruin the big industries, but it is to revive the dead or dying industries and therethrough to find employment for the millions who are semi-starved because they are forced to live in complete or semi-idleness. This is a constructive, not a destructive, programme. The big industries can never, they don’t hope to, overtake the unemployed millions. Their aim is primarily to make money for the few owners, never the direct one of finding employment for the unemployed millions. The organizers of khadi and other village industries don’t hope in the near future to affect the big industries. They may hope to bring a ray of light into the dark dungeons, miscalled cottages, of the villagers. My esteemed correspondent seems to give up his whole case when he says ‘leisure, if it can be well utilized, is more important than many other things’. The activities which he disapproves of are intended to accomplish the very end he has in view. They are designed to well utilize the leisure hours of the idle millions.

In this there is no war against the misuse and abuse of machinery, i.e., its use to the detriment of the millions. Dead machinery must not be pitted against the millions of living machines represented by the villagers scattered in the several hundred thousand villages of India. Machinery to be well used has to help and ease human effort. The present use of machinery tends more and more to concentrate wealth in the hands of a few in total disregard of millions of men and women whose bread is snatched by it out of their mouths. The movement represented by the A.I.S.A. and the A.I.V.I.A. has been conceived so as to minimize the evil wrought by the craze for amassing large fortunes through the use of dead tools in order to avoid having to deal with very sensitive human tools.

The writer fears that at no time will it be possible to keep everyone in reasonable comfort. This fear is not shared by those who are working in the villages. On the contrary, closer contact with the villagers and closer knowledge of the villages fill them with the hope that if only the villagers can be induced to shed their traditional idleness they can all live in reasonable comfort, without causing any very great dislocation. Certain oppressive conditions have no doubt to be abated. But the process will almost be unfelt, if there is some co-operation from what are termed vested interests.

The correspondent’s fear about the securing of reasonable comfort for the existing population leads naturally to the fear of over-population. The resort to birth-control becomes more than the logical step. Birth-control to me is a dismal abyss. It amounts to playing with unknown forces. Assuming that birth-control by artificial aids is justifiable under certain conditions, it seems to be utterly impracticable of application among the millions. It seems to me to be easier to induce them to practise self-control than control by contraceptives. This little globe of ours is not a toy of yesterday. In has not suffered from the weight of over-population through its age of countless millions. How can it be that the truth has suddenly dawned upon some people that it is in danger of perishing of shortage of food unless birth-rate is checked through the use of contraceptives? My fear is that my correspondent has led himself from one fallacy to another ending in the quagmire of contraceptives on a scale hitherto unknown.

_Harijan, 14-9-1935_

638. _PROCREATION AMONG LEPERS_

The following letter\(^1\) sent to me from London by Mr. A. Donald Miller, Honorary Secretary to the Indian Auxiliary to the Mission to Lepers, will be read with deep interest by all humanitarians who are at all interested in the baffling problem connected with the welfare of lepers.

_Harijan, 14-9-1935_

\(^1\) Vide Appendix III.
639. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

WARDHA,
September 14, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

Your unfailing full letters are a blessing to me. With the two patients under your care I have no anxiety about them. Please tell Pyarelal I have his letters. I take him at his word and save time by not replying just yet. Mahadev has not yet returned. He may not before Monday.

Your reply to Dr. Gopichand Bhargava is quite correct. I am destroying the letter as desired by you. You must resolutely refuse to carry burdens you cannot bear.¹

Mira is still not out of the wood. She had another restless night. Nevertheless the fever is abating though slowly.

Rajaji is still here. He will probably leave on Tuesday. Laxmi and the new-born are well. Tara still has recurring fever. And so has Manu. They are all at Jamnalalji’s bungalow.

Tell Ba and Devdas I got no time for writing to them. My letters to you must serve the purpose of separate letters.

Love to all.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 3549. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6358

640. LETTER TO BISWANATH

September 14, 1935

MY DEAR BISWANATH,

Neither Baba nor Ma should have suppressed you. You have a perfect right to write to me as you have now at last done. You have a double claim upon me. First because you are in an organization of which I am the head and secondly because you are connected with two persons who have for many years accepted my word as law. In writing your letter, therefore, you have not only recognized your unadulterated right but you have also performed the duty which you owe to me. That you have grievously erred in your writing does not in any shape or form diminish the value of your letter. On the contrary, the value is enhanced in that you have dared to tell me what you hold to be unadulterated truth although it may appear bitter to me and although I may consider it to be the reverse of truth. Very often we mount to truth by wading through errors so long [as] they do not appear to us to be errors. Your attachment as distinguished from affection for khadi has led you into a maze of errors. All-India Spinners’ Association is the head and the associations affiliated to it are the branches. The head has rights which branches do not and cannot possess. What appeared to me at one time a sound policy under given circumstances may prove unsound under altered circumstances or on a fuller perception of even same circumstances. I would be an unworthy head of an organization if I sacrificed its interests for a seeming consistency. Again the liberties that Baba and Ma have allowed me to take with them and their creation I may not take with others. I would never be afraid of being misunderstood by them. Every one of my actions in connection with Pratishthan, therefore, you have to interpret in the light of my relationship with Baba and Ma. It is a relationship of their creation. So much for the Pratishthan.

¹ Vide also "Letter to Amrit Kaur", 10-9-1935
² Satis Chandra Das Gupta and his wife Hemprabha Das Gupta

Now for my new experiment. Since you admit that I am the creator of the khadi movement I must have the right to regulate its growth and even to destroy it. He who creates can also recreate. And if I found that I made a mistake in fashioning my creation I must have the right to refashion it in any manner I like so long as I carry with me my associates in nursing the creation. You would admit that I would be a traitor to my own creation if for fear of the judgement of fellow-workers like you I fail to act up to my own judgement if it abide in spite of the criticisms of fellow-workers. I think this covers all the points that you have raised. You may write to me as often as you like till I have convinced you or till you despair of my ever succeeding in convincing you.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

[PS.]
I shall regard your letter as purely personal as desired by you.

SJT. BISWANATH
KHADI PRATISHTHAN
SODEPUR, NEAR CALCUTTA

From a photostat: G.N. 2729
WARDHA,
September 14, 1935

DEAR DR. GOPICHAND,

I have your belated reply. But better late than never. As for the funds which you claim as donations given to you personally, as I have not studied all the ramifications I would like you to abide by Shankerlal’s judgment. Without admitting any error of judgment and without any reflection being cast upon you, you could simply get the funds converted into donations for the A.I.S.A. Rajkumari has decided to stop the khadi Bhandar in her own place. Therefore the sooner we close the Simla Bhandar the better. I shall be prepared to give Puri the training in self-sufficient khadi whenever he could be conveniently sent. I understand what you say about keeping the accounts in our Bhandars in Urdu and you are right in what you say. I am carefully going into everything in connection with Harjivan. Without perhaps meaning it, he succeeds in displeasing his associates. I am trying to induce him to leave Kashmir work and take rest for the time . . . he recovers, his services can be utilized for less . . . . I would, therefore, like you to give me your suggestion for the conduct of the Kashmir Bhandar and its branches . . . your warning that all correspondence and the questions regarding the management of khadi work in the Punjab should be through you, if you are to keep yourself in touch with the movement and are to be really responsible for its growth in the Punjab. All Bhandars that are being run at a loss are certainly to be closed as quickly as possible, including, of course, the Peshawar Bhandar.

What you tell me about Khan Pirbux and Dr. Alam makes painful reading. We have to cut our way through all weathers, fair or foul and rely upon God’s help in so far as we may be walking along the path of truth and love.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the original: Dr. Gopichand Bhargava Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library
642. LETTER TO RAJARAM R. BHOLE

WARDHA,
September 14, 1935

MY DEAR RAJARAM,

I have your letter and am glad you have at last seen Dr. Ambedkar. He is right about the profession of law. Only my conviction is that you will not be able to stand the strain of studies and I would not risk the sacrifice of your health upon any consideration whatsoever. I do not share the fear he has about going to villages. The Sangh will not endanger your health in the pursuit of the work that may be assigned to you. Anyway if you are satisfied with social service, you should give this very good offer a trial. The moment you find it uncongenial for your body you may give it up. Of course you should dispel the fear of instability about the Sangh. You will not be taking any permanent step. You will be taking no risk if the Sangh is extinct.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the original: R. R. Bhole Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

643. LETTER TO G.V. MAVALANKAR

September 14, 1935

BHAI MAVALANKAR,

Our only consolation is the fact, isn’t it, that others too have like you to pass through the trials of a householder’s life? But I hope everything is all right now.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1245
644. LETTER TO G.V. GURJALE

WARDHA,
September 15, 1935

MY DEAR GURJALE,

I have your letter. It is very doleful. You must not give in like that. But your resolve, if it is not born of despondency, to remain in the Ashram and depend upon the friends sending help to you is admirable. The indispensable condition is that you should keep cheerful, if they do not send a single pie to you. You can appeal to your friends by letters and ceaselessly work up the institution there. You should also undertake some labour which would be an encouragement to village industries and which would bring at the same time a little income. If you can think out a good scheme it would be your deliverance. One thing in your letter disturbs me. You say that your wife who was your helper in every way has now turned against you. What is the meaning of this? Why should she turn against you?

Blessings from
BAPU

SJT. GOVINDARAO GURJALE
THE KRIPA ASRAM
TIRUVENNAINALLUR (S.I.)

From a photostat: G.N. 1403

645. LETTER TO K. G. RAKHADE

September 15, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

Many thanks for your letter. I have suggested to Shri Trivedi that the money should be transferred to me and I shall at once proceed to form a Salukar Memorial Committee to give effect to the trust.

Yours sincerely,

SJT. K.G. RAKHADE
CHHINDWARA

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal
646. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

September 15, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

I am writing a separate letter to Father.

The leaflet about Rentia Baras\(^1\) is well written, but I shall know what you can achieve through it only after I get a detailed report from you. At present, the middle class does not seem to have much faith in khadi, though some individuals have certainly retained their faith in it. I will be content if, in a town like Rajkot, you get a fairly good number of spinners.

If you are not using the equipment of the workshop lying there, I can easily make use of it here. If, however, it is of any use to you, I can do without it.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8473. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

647. LETTER TO KHUSHALCHAND GANDHI

September 15, 1935

RESPECTED BROTHER,

Your _tapascharya_ has borne fruit. May you do more _tapascharya_ still and may it bear fruit so that I may continue to have your blessings.

_Humble pranams from_

MOHANDAS

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II

\(^1\) Bhadraya Vad 12, Gandhiji’s birthday according to Vikram calendar, celebrated as Spinning Day. In 1935, it was on September 24.
648. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

September 15, 1935

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

I too was worried by Manilal’s wire. In the end, I replied to him as per copy enclosed. Don’t mind having detained Mahadev there. My ways are becoming more and more rural every day. With a thick-wheeled bullock-cart and several inches deep layers of dust on the roads, where is the need for hurry? But I hope now that you will come here on Tuesday. Rajaji will be here for the whole of the day. Release him in the evening.

You are worrying needlessly about Sindi. I will remove all your fears.

I hope the problems of . . . ² will be solved without delay.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, p. 189

649. LETTER TO MIRABEHN

[September 16, 1935]¹

CHI. MIRA,

Read this now and return with suggestions if any. Don’t read if you feel too weak for the effort.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 5481. Courtesy: Mirabehn. Also G.N. 9480

¹ Manilal Kothari
² The name is omitted in the source.
³ According to G.N. Register this is a silence-day note written in September 1935. From the contents it is clear that this was written soon after Mirabehn’s recovery. Vide also the following two items.
650. LETTER TO RAJENDRA PRASAD

September 16, 1935

DEAR RAJENDRABABU,

I have unwillingly begun to write in English. Mahadev is returning tomorrow with Sardar and Ghanshyamdas.

You must be well and then quickly come here if you can. Devdas cannot spare Pyarelal. If you cannot come, I must send Mahadev to you. You may not be deserted. Please therefore wire your intention.

BAPU

[PS.]

Mirabehn had a bad attack of Malaria. She has been free since yesterday. No cause for anxiety.

From a copy: C.W. 9768. Courtesy: Rajendra Prasad

651. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

September 16, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

Your dear letters never fail me. God bless you. You must not tax your eyes overmuch and then spoil them.

With the doctor in the house, I must not say Devdas should not be pressed to eat more than he wants to take. Better to let him go slow. That’s the layman’s tip to be taken for what it may be worth.

Here are two letters.

Love to all.

BAPU

[PS.]

Mira is free.

From the original: C.W. 3550. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6359
652. LETTER TO MANILAL AND SUSHILA GANDHI

September 16, 1935

CHI. MANILAL AND SUSHILA,

I got your letters. I have no time at all today. On one side is Mirabehn’s sick-bed; Nimu, Lakshmi also are here. And I myself am busier with Harijan today than I am on other Mondays. Rajaji and Kishorelal are busy revising an important article of mine. In the mean time I am writing this. Devdas and Ba are in Simla. Devdas is a little better now. Pyarelal is attending on him. There is no cause for anxiety. Rajaji and Lakshmi will leave tomorrow. Rajaji himself has named the baby Rajmohan.

Sardar, Ghanshyamdas and Mahadev are coming here from Bombay tomorrow.

I am firm about Sita’s and Arun’s education. You may be certain that they will never get from anybody else what they can from you. If they are trained in the right way, they will learn by themselves whatever else they especially wish to when they are grown up. Manilal must spare some time every day for them just as he spares some for eating.

Once a man forms rules for himself it is easy enough to follow them. If you regard it as your duty to teach the children, as you regard it as your duty to do the work for Indian Opinion from week to week, you will be able to spare the time.

Discuss courteously with the Agent as many problems as you can. Knowing that the office of the Agent is not likely to be abolished now, avail yourself of it for as much public service as you can. How can we change ourselves all at once from what we are?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4843
653. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

September 16, 1935

I do not have to go anywhere till the end of this year. Hence I shall be here in October. Your complaint regarding pencil handwriting is correct. I will now make the corrections in ink.

Blessings from

BAPU

654. LETTER TO BALVANTSINHA

MAGANWADI, WARDHA,

September 17, 1935

CHI. BALVANTSINHA,

Your account of the offering of goats to the goddess made painful reading. We cannot in a moment remove superstitions centuries old. The people’s hearts, too, will not be prepared to take any note of us till we have performed some tangible service apparent to them. The approach to their intellect is even more difficult. The very spirit of ahimsa is a matter of the heart only, it touches the intellect in a much lesser degree. Hearts can be reached soon enough by disinterested service. Therefore our present duty consists of service among those making the goat-offering to the goddesses and we shall as the occasion arises remove their superstition. Keep in mind that the scene witnessed by you among the uneducated can be seen among the educated, too, in Calcutta and that on a vast scale.

The other incident also is of the same category though not so painful or unbearable and the remedy is the same. I am not aware if Krishnadas has taken with him the seeds, etc. Your letter came into my hands after he had left.

Yes, the patient from Delhi is Harishchandra. Dr. Pingle is treating him with massage, etc., and they both have good hope of his recovery.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1881

1 The addressee had witnessed a woman being harassed for stealing a gold ornament. She, however, returned it on his intervention and entreaty.
655. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

MAGANWADI, WARDHA,
September 18, 1935

CHI. BRIJKRISHNA,

The question you have raised at this late date surprises me. What is the meaning of absolution of sins? Who is to absolve and why? Such language is used only by those who have no doubts because in talking of absolution they imply purification of man. But basically the effect of sin needs must be endured. One who endures it intelligently does not sin again and becomes pure. This is the meaning of being absolved. Absolution can never mean that man may continue to sin and seek forgiveness over and over again. One who has been forgiven does not sin again and, if he does, the absolution is no absolution.

Secondly, why must we regard every ailment as a visitation for our sins? Why should we not regard it as a blessing of God? That is, we can interpret both ways and improve ourselves either way.

Nair wrote to me, too. I would not like to interfere any more. You may yourself write to Nair. If he is indispensable for the Ashram he may suspend the training and come away. And if he comes he should be given complete authority and whatever financial assistance he may need. Whatever is to be said may be said only by way of advice. He may then act according to his judgment.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 2433

656. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

[After September 19, 1935]¹

CHI. LILAVATI,

Just as you were delayed, I too was delayed by a couple of days. I have already sent you your previous lesson. You have all taken enough pains.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9254. Also C.W. 1050. Courtesy: Lilavati Asar

¹ The letter was in reply to one dated September 19, 1935 from the addressee.
657. LETTER TO AGATHA HARRISON

WARDHA,

September 20, 1935

MY DEAR AGATHA,

I have not been able to write to you for weeks though I have succeeded at times in asking someone to write to you for me. All this of course apart from what Mahadev and Chandrasekher may be writing to you. Your work in connection with Jawaharlal’s release was prompt and glorious. As you very properly say, it was more humanitarian than political. I am glad, too, that the authorities rose to the occasion and lost not a minute in granting adequate relief. At this end, too, our machinery was set in motion. The whole thing ended so well. This release of Jawaharlal stands out prominently as the one bright spot on the black and mournful surface. I know you do not want thanks. You may have them by the train-load if you want them. I know this, that it would have been a severe disappointment to me if you had not acted as you did. You have accustomed me to look for such prompt and decisive action on your part. Do please, however, thank all those who helped you and made your difficult mission so completely successful. You did well in flying to Badenweiler. I am eagerly looking forward to your description of the visit. There can be no doubt that, if we really ever succeed in disturbing God’s plans and if God has any plans, these efforts resulting in Jawaharlal’s reaching there have prolonged Kamala’s life. I am old-fashioned enough to believe that not a blade of grass moves but by His will. Then, too, I can derive ample satisfaction in the knowledge that you and other friends conspired to fulfil God’s purpose and therefore whilst you were doing your duty angels above were saying, ‘well done, well, done’.

Ghanshyamdas had to leave this morning abruptly, for he received a telegram yesterday that his mother was suffering from fever. He would otherwise have stayed here at least four days longer. He was able, however, to give me a fair summary of his doings there. Charlie must have told you all about the situation here. I can add nothing to what he must have said. I hope he benefited by the voyage. He needed rest badly. I wish so much that he would abide by the plans made here, namely, that he would live in Cambridge or some such place and busy himself in writing work of a permanent nature, holding himself at your disposal when there might be something on which he alone could throw light or give guidance. I hope that you would encourage this plan. I know what a weak spot he has for you.

1 To see Kamala Nehru
Therefore you can always successfully act as the temptress if you chose. I must stop now.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 1492

658. LETTER TO G.V. GURJALE

September 20, 1935

MY DEAR GURJALE,

I have your letter. I shall say nothing on it. I shall pray that God may help you to fulfil your difficult vows.¹

BAPU

From a photostat G.N. 1384

659. LETTER TO ANAND T. HINGORANI

September 20, 1935

MY DEAR ANAND,

I must dictate this if I am to reach you at all today. It is bad thing—these continuous attacks for Vidya. I hope that the special treatment at Delhi did good. It would certainly be good if you could accept Valji’s² invitation. I am glad, too, that you have hope from your Harijan work in Karachi. Personally I am opposed to taking cost of clothing for Harijans. I refuse to treat them as forelorn paupers.
And when I have to provide anything in the shape of clothing, I always resort to khadi [but] it is not possible to lay down a law for all.
You must, therefore, use your own judgment in every case of this kind and do what appears to you to be proper or refer to Jairamdas³. And when in doubt always err on the right side.

Love to you both.

BAPU

SJT. ANAND HINGORANI
FEROZEPORE

From a microfilm. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T.
Hingorani

¹ Vide also “Letter to G. V. Gurjale”, 15-9-1935
² Valji G. Desai
³ Jairamdas Doulatram

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
660. LETTER TO BHAGWANJI A. MEHTA

September 20, 1935

BHAI BHAGWANJI,

I shall send on to Jamnalalji your letter to him. Why do you deliberately select rich partners for your daughters? I got your letter regarding Devchandbhai. If I send that letter to him, he wouldn’t meet you even if he otherwise had intended to do so. I, therefore, wrote to him a separate letter. I will let you know the result.

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5827. Also C.W. 3050. Courtesy: Bhagwanji A. Mehta

661. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

September 20, 1935

CHI. JAMNALAL,

I hear that the date of your arrival here is being repeatedly postponed. As that means a longer stay in Almora, I certainly like the postponement. You do need rest. Even there, however, you cannot have complete rest. There are letters to be written and visitors to see. Besides, you have to attend to the affairs of that place. Nevertheless, the strain which you will have to bear here is certainly not there. Hence, I would even like it if you stay there till the beginning of winter. And winter there is famous. The winter of Simla is even more famous, and in winter the cost of living there is much less than even in Wardha. Bungalows can be rented almost for nothing. Green vegetables, fruit, etc., are plentiful and cheap and the scenery is perfect. The cold there is a creation of people’s imagination only. Simla is less cold in winter than Lahore. I would, therefore, give you leave to stay there even for the whole of winter. I am sure you will do some work wherever, you are. If you spend one whole year peacefully at a hill-station, then I believe your ear complaint will be cured. Madalasa’s health will become perfect and even Janakimaiya will become an excellent rider, assuming that she does not have her bones broken meanwhile. I would certainly like you to attend the meeting of the Spinners’ Association. However, I would do without you if you are content not to attend. We have had enough discussions about the new policy, and you can write to me from there and send your views.
If decisions about Khadi Pratishthan, Meerut and Kashmir remain to be taken, my views about these also have been formed.

You may send your views about them too, and then resign yourself to what happens.

There remains the meeting of the Congress [Working] Committee. You need not attend even that. However, I excuse you from all this on condition that you spend all the time at some hill-station. If you come down, then it will be your duty to attend both the meetings. Didn’t you go to Jullundur, as you had intended to do? Radhakrishna and Sardar believe that you did not. Now Sardar will have to go. Everything is going on well here. Balkoba is experimenting with an exclusive milk diet under the guidance of Gaurishankar. He is better now. I enclose herewith a letter from Bhagwanji. I have asked him to see the man you wrote to me about.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2975

662. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

September 20, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

I wish success to your programme for the Rentia Baras. I can see in khadi the means of both dharma and artha; and anybody who understands khadi in the sense in which I understand it cannot but come to the same conclusion. I do wish that many people will join your yajna. Those who do so will not only advance their own welfare but also that of the country to that extent.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.] If Jamnadas undertakes to look after things there, I have plenty of work for you here.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8474. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

1 Addressee’s nephew
2 Material Welfare
663. LETTER TO PURUSHOTTAM K. JERAJANI

WARDHA,
September 20, 1935

Bhai Kakubhai,

Shankerlal has sent to me your letter addressed to him.

We have got three alternatives:
1. to close the shop if they attack,
2. to defend ourselves,
3. to seek police protection.

Since we cannot resort to the first two alternatives, only the third remains. The fourth alternative is to agree to a panch if they propose it. But how can we hope for such good fortune? If there is anybody in it who has some sense of responsibility, we must persuade him to act in a straightforward manner.

There seems no need to remove anybody because he is in the Sevak Sangh. Whether or not somebody is in the Sevak Sangh, if he does not abide by our discipline, we may remove him giving him the reason or without doing so.

In the end, however, the question may remain whether we will be able to get persons acceptable to us. However, there should be no problem if we can find loyal persons.

If you wish you may continue to write to me.

Blessings from
Bapu

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 10836. Courtesy: Purushottam Kanji Jerajani

1 The Sevak Sangh
664. LETTER TO P.G. MATHEW

[September 20, 1935]1

DEAR MATHEW,

Can’t you see how difficult it is to write with the left hand and against time?

BAPU

From a microfilm: M.M.U./II

665. LETTER TO H.L. SHARMA

September 20, 1935

CHI. SHARMA,

I have been unable to write to you after the letter addressed to Colombo, although there was hardly any occasion to write till you wrote from America. But this is not the whole truth. I always wanted to write to you but could not do so for sheer lack of time. God alone knows when this will reach you. I had your letter from Port Sudan and the one from Colombo too, both were pleasing. May your days in America prove as pleasant as the recent ones. I shall pursue the matter regarding the book you need. I have a feeling that the book will hardly be needed after your arrival there. Still, I shall enquire for it.

I had an extremely short letter from Draupadi and nothing since then, in spite of my writing to her. Amtussalaam too feels strongly the absence of letters from her. I suppose you are getting some letters. Do tell me if you want me to do anything.

Regarding the books belonging to the Kanya Ashram I shall write after consulting Chhotelal.

I hope your letters at any rate will continue to come in regularly.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, between pp. 196 and 197

---

1 In the source, the letter appears below the Gujarati letter to Narandas Gandhi, the preceding item, written on a postcard.
666. NOTES

A CORRECTION

Prof. Malkani writes saying that Harijan Day is to be observed not on the 25th but on the 24th instant as the Pact was signed on the date.¹

SILK AND WOOL

Allied to and in support of pure khadi are the hand-spun woollens and silks supported somewhat by the A.I.S.A., the former chiefly in, Kashmir, the latter in Bengal. The question has arisen as to how far the rule of the minimum wage applies to wool and silk spinning. The rule applies much more forcibly to them than to khadi. They are still, thank God, able to stand on their own legs. They permit one to charge a higher profit and thus help to reduce the price of khadi. Therefore the payment of a fair wage to wool and silk spinners is an obligation which does not admit of shirking on any account. The idea underlying the resolution of the A.I.V.I.A. and the effort being made by the A.I.S.A. is to ensure at least a subsistence wage to all the artisans and workmen coming under their sphere of work. And seeing that the scale finally fixed will always be the minimum, the tendency wherever possible must always be to pay a higher wage than the minimum. Hence it follows that no producers can be certificated by either Association unless they maintain an accurate register of all workmen served by them and can give satisfactory proof of their having given them the stipulated wage. It follows also that no certified sale stores can stock woollens or silks that are not purchased from certified producers.

LATE JUSTICE RANADE ON THE SPINNING-WHEEL

A correspondent sends me the following interesting advertisement published by the late Justice Ranade on 9th December 1880:

Cotton grows in various parts of our country, and the industry of spinning yarn on the charkha (rahat) is carried on at various places on a large scale, since yarn spun on charkha has yet a vast demand. Under the circumstances, improvement in the mode of spinning has immense

¹ Vide also"Harijan Sevak Sangh Resolutions", 7-9-1935 and “Notes” sub-title “Harijan Day” possibilities of doing good to the indigent and diligent. Towards this end is this advertisement being published for a spinning-machine with the following improvements:

1. An apparatus, either as a part of the spinning-machine itself or independent of it, for cleaning the cotton.

2. The machine should yield at least five threads instead of one and thus should increase fivefold the total output.

3. The yarn, besides being even, should be fine at least as much as the yarn woven into khadi; it may not be more coarse.

4. The machine, besides being strong, should be simple and it must work smoothly and without break.

The machine is not required merely as a model (in a museum) but it must yield work in actual practice. The machines (to the above order) that will be submitted before the 15th of May 1881 will all be examined by experts and prize of Rs. 500 will be awarded to the maker of one which will be approved by the examiners.

The said maker has to undertake to supply machines up to 25 in number at our demand for a fair price and also has to undertake guarantee to repair the machines if out of order within four months of their use.

Those, then, that mean to try this experiment should accordingly inform the undersigned in writing within two months from the date of this notice.

Details may be had personally from Mr. Hattibelgelkar (one of the undersigned) Shukrawar Peth, Poona, or through post-paid letter.

December 9, 1880    Pensioner Record Keeper, S.D.

(Sd).    M A H A D E V  G O V I N D  R A N A D E

The Indian Press is requested to publish this advertisement in their papers more than once for giving it wide publicity.

As the late Gokhale used to say, nothing escaped Ranade’s eagle eye and nothing that would benefit the least of his countrymen was ever too trifling for his consideration.

_Harijan, 21-9-1935_

667. A RENUNCIATION

In 1891 after my return from England, I virtually took charge of the children of the family and introduced the habit of walking with them—boys and girls—putting my hands on their shoulders. These were my brothers’ children. The practice continued even after they grew old. With the extension of the family, it gradually grew to proportions sufficient to attract attention.

I was unconscious of doing any wrong, so far as I can recollect, till some years ago at Sabarmati an inmate of the Ashram told me that my practice, when extended to grown-up girls and women, offended the accepted notion of decency. But after discussion with the inmates it was continued. Recently two co-workers who came to Wardha suggested that the practice was likely to set a bad example to others and that I should discontinue it on that account. Their argument did not appeal to me. Nevertheless I did not want to ignore the friends’ warning. I, therefore, referred it for examination and advice to five inmates of the Ashram. Whilst it was taking shape a decisive event took place. It was brought to my notice that a bright university student was taking all sorts of liberties in private with a girl who was under his influence, on the plea that he loved her like his own sister and could not restrain himself from some physical demonstration of it. He resented the slightest suggestion of impurity. Could I mention what the youth had been doing, the reader would unhesitatingly pronounce the liberties taken by him as impure. When I read the correspondence, I and those who saw it came to the conclusion that either the young man was a consummate hypocrite or was self-deluded.

Anyway the discovery set me athinking. I recalled the warning of the two co-workers and asked myself how I would feel if I found that the young man was using my practice in its defence. I may mention that the girl who is the victim of the youth’s attentions, although she regards him as absolutely pure and brotherly, does not like them, even protests against them, but is too weak to resist his action. The self-introspection induced by the event resulted, within two or three days of the reading of the correspondence, in the renunciation of the practice, and I announced it to the inmates of the Wardha Ashram on the 12th instant. It was not without a pang that I came to the decision. Never has an impure thought entered my being during or owing to the practice. My act has always been open. I believe that my act was that of a parent and enabled the numerous girls under my guidance and wardship to give their confidences which perhaps no one else has enjoyed in the same measure. Whilst I do not believe in a brahmacharya which ever requires a wall of protection against the touch of the opposite sex and will fail if exposed to the least temptation, I am not unaware of the dangers attendant upon the freedom I have taken.
The discovery quoted by me has, therefore, prompted me to renounce the practice, however pure it may have been in itself. Every act of mine is scrutinized by thousands of men and women, as I am conducting an experiment requiring ceaseless vigilance. I must avoid doing things which may require a reasoned defence. My example was never meant to be followed by all and sundry. The young man’s case has come upon me as a warning. I have taken it in the hope that my renunciation will set right those who may have erred whether under the influence of my example or without it. Innocent youth is a priceless possession not to be squandered away for the sake of a momentary excitement, miscalled pleasure. And let the weak girls like the one in this picture be strong enough to resist the approaches, though they may be declared to be innocent, of young men who are either knaves or who do not know what they are doing.

_Harijan, 21-9-1935_

668. _GUR-PRESERVATION_ ¹

While it is true that it is difficult to keep _gur_ for long time especially during the rainy season, I have been told by one who ought to know that _rab_, which the juice becomes before being boiled down to _gur_, will keep indefinitely and is supposed to become better for keeping. This experiment is worth trying when the sugarcane season commences.

_Harijan, 21-9-1935_

¹ This appeared as a note to Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter” describing his talk with a doctor who had “cast off the habits of a lifetime, gave up drink and tobacco, also meat, to a large extent, and took to part-polished rice, hand-ground flour, leafy vegetables and raw milk . . .” The doctor had remarked : “I wish you laid in your _Harijan_ greater emphasis on the scientific value of _gur_. It is in every way better than sugar, and ever so much cheaper than those foreign products—glucose and dextrose and what not. The only disadvantage is that some of our things do not keep long . . .”
WARDHA,
September 22, 1935

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

Your three welcome letters give us all accurate news about Kamala. For the time being I expect you to follow up the practice. I had telegraphed for daily wires because of the public demand. But you were right in not sending any when there was no change. You were right also in omitting the sender’s name. Your presence there is a source of great satisfaction to your friends here as it is an elixir of life to Kamala. I am not writing to her separately this air mail.

I am going to take up your manuscript presently. I have no difficulty in agreeing with you in the enunciation of principles. But when we descend to the concrete, we generally use the language I have used. In the huge organization the Congress has become, no one man can hope to run the show. But some-one has to shoulder the burden. And people want some guidance. Hence my inquiry. If you are elected, you will be elected for the policy and principles you stand for. I would like you therefore to tell me whether you will allow your name to be proposed for the crown of thorns.

I suppose Indira will now wait till Kamala’s condition is better known.

I am sending the Congress Constitution. If you can concentrate your attention on it, I would like you to send me your considered criticism on it.

As to the present policy of the Congress, whilst I can in no way be responsible for the detailed working of it, it is in the main of my shaping. It is not one of drift. It is founded upon one central idea—that of consolidating the power of the people with a view to peaceful action. But in your absence, we have been literally trekking. Now that you are free you have to give the guidance and take with you such of your old colleagues as would go with you whole-heartedly. So far as I know they will not resist you, even where they may not be able to follow you. I must not weary you with more of this kind of thing.

1 Vide "Letter to Jawaharlal Nehru", 4-9-1935 and "Letter to Jawaharlal Nehru", 12-9-1935
2 Vide also Appendices IV and V.
3 This was obviously not sent, as Mahadev Desai had, in his postscript, said: “It was too late to get enough stamps for posting the Constitutions. It will follow by the next air mail.”
whilst you are there nursing Kamala.

Love.

BAPU

JAWAHARLAL NEHRU
HEMS WALDECK
BADENWEILER, BADEN, GERMANY

Gandhi-Nehru Papers, 1935. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Also File No. 3001/H, pp. 3-5, Police Commissioner’s Office, Bombay

670. LETTER TO NARAHARI D. PARIKH

September 22, 1935

CHI. NARAHARI,

A letter from Ramjibhai is enclosed. There seems to be some misunderstanding once again. Do what is needed and let me know. I hope the goshala is running well. If Sardar gets time, try to settle Velchand’s affairs. I hope Vanamala is feeling better.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9068

671. LETTER TO PURUSHOTTAM K. JERAJANI

WARDHA,

September 22, 1935

BHAI KAKUBHAI,

Bhai Vallabhdas’s case is complicated. Does he have any money? Is it invested in the Bhandar? At one time I think he had invested his money in it. What post has he been given now? Does it carry a salary of Rs. 80? If he were not employed in that post could he earn that much or more elsewhere? I can arrive at a decision if I know all this in detail. Write to me whatever you wish without hesitation.

If you wish, you may show this letter to Bhai Vithaldas and Vallabhdas. They too, if they wish, may write to me about this. They may also come and see me if they wish.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 10837. Courtesy: Purushottam Kanji Jerajani
APPENDICES

APPENDIX I

EXTRACTS FROM DR. SOKHEY’S NOTES ON SNAKE POISONING

NATURE OF POISONS

The colubrine poison (that of the cobra and krait) acts chiefly on the brain and spinal cord, causing death by paralysis of the respiratory centre in the brain.

Viperine poisons produce their effect on the heart and blood, death being caused by paralysis of the vasomotor centre, exhaustion from profuse and persistent bleeding, or from blood poisoning due to septic infection of the wound.

SYMPTOMS OF POISONING

COBRA VENOM. Earliest constitutional symptom is one of intoxication. Later, there is a sense of creeping paralysis, beginning in the legs and ascending to the head by way of the trunk. The head droops and there is paralysis of the muscles of the eyelids, lips, tongue and throat. Saliva dribbles from the mouth and speech becomes increasingly difficult. Nausea and vomiting frequently occur. The breathing gets more and more difficult till it finally ceases, the face being livid and distressed and swallowing impossible. The heart remains unaffected and continues to beat after respiration has failed. Death usually takes place in from one and a half to six hours.

KRAIT VENOM. Death primarily due to suffocation, but, in addition, haemorrhages into stomach and bowels may occur, accompanied in many cases with violent abdominal pain.

VIPER VENOM. Prevents clotting of the blood and destroys the internal coats of the blood vessels, thus encouraging haemorrhages in various parts of the body. The wound inflicted is painful, the parts much swollen; bleeding occurs with great infiltration and discoloration, and, lastly, sloughing occurs permitting infection. Nausea and vomiting frequently occur, but there is no paralysis.

TREATMENT

The bite of a venomous snake is unmistakably due to fang punctures. If nothing happens within ten minutes the snake may be taken as harmless, for the bite from a poisonous snake develops a burning pain and swelling rapidly. In half an hour or less, profuse sweating and vomiting may supervene. By this time, of course, treatment should have been given, specially antivenene serum. The latter can be injected before a condition of collapse has set in; the earlier the better. Treatment would probably be possible in the following order only, as medical aid is not usually at hand.
1. LIGATURE. If the patient is bitten on a limb, apply a ligature above the bite. It should compress all the tissues against a single bone, e.g., in bites on a finger the ligature should be applied on the base of the finger with a second perhaps above the elbow; in case of bite on a toe apply one ligature round the base of the toe and a second above the knee. The ligature should be slackened off about every ten minutes and suction repeated as below. Such ligation should not be kept on for much over half an hour but mechanical suction should continue at intervals for some hours.

2. INCISION. The fang should be opened with extensive incisions across, deep enough but with care not to injure the delicate skin covering the bone or to cut into a blood-vessel. A safety razor blade, if possible, sterilized by rapidly passing through a flame, may be used.

3. DRAINAGE. By cupping, if possible, or by sucking with lips (no danger involved if mouth free from sores.)

4. INJECTION OF ANTIVENENE SERUM. This may be injected as soon as medical aid is available. This serum is sold by the Central Research Institute, Kasauli.

5. SUPPLEMENTARY. It is advisable to wash the incised wound with a mild solution of permanganate of potash (pale pink colour). Do not apply permanganate crystals directly nor cauterize the wound.

_Harijan, 17-8-1935_

APPENDIX II

_MAHADEV DESAI’S LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU_

ANAND BHAWAN, ALLAHABAD,

_September 6, 1935_

MY DEAR JAWAHRBHAII,

I am writing this from Anand Bhawan, where, like half a dozen others, I made a vain dash to meet you. Sarupbehn’s telegram of the 3rd saying you were to take the Dutch air mail on Friday reached Wardha on the 4th, as also yours of the 3rd. That moment Bapu decided I must leave the same evening for Allahabad and take the chance of seeing you for no matter how brief an interval. Sarupbehn’s telegram intimating that you had already left did not reach Wardha until yesterday when I was already half way to Allahabad! It was a sore disappointment, but I rejoiced that you could start a day earlier. I hope and pray that you may find Kamalabehn better and that you may be able to return with her completely restored to health.

I enclose herewith letters from Bapu and Khorshed. Bapu had also sent as his loving gifts hand-made paper—manufactured in our premises—and a hand-made

---

1 _Vide “Letter to Vallabhbhai Patel”, 5-9-1935._
paper-cutter and spoon. There is no point in sending these there. By the time you return we hope to be making much superior stuff and you will have samples when you come to Wardha.

There were two messages of some importance that I had brought from Bapu:
(1) That Bapu wished very much that you could assume the Congress helm next year. When he made the suggestion to the Working Committee it was unanimously accepted, and it was the general feeling that that was the only way in which much of the difficulties of the Working Committee and the bitter controversies of today could be avoided and your policy and your programme could be given a fair and unobstructed trial. The new Constitution enables you to have your own Cabinet, and those who were out would give as much co-operation as they could possibly give, but would place no obstacles in your way. (2) That you should even in Europe make no speeches or statement. Bapu was sure it would enhance your prestige and India’s to impose upon yourself a vow of silence until February or until your return here.

Besides these two messages, he was anxious to have your usually frank and outspoken views on: (1) the Village Industries Association work that was absorbing all Bapu’s time; (2) Bapu’s views regarding Council-entry; (3) the present Congress Constitution. Bapu himself had no doubt that it was a most effective instrument of our progress and that though there was a lot of corruption in the shape of manipulation of figures, etc., it was capable of being used to prepare the country for a final and successful effort for achieving freedom; (4) the question of the minimum wage; (5) the Socialists’ programme and their methods of work.

Though the progress of the constructive programme was slow, Bapu was getting more and more confirmed in his conviction that nothing else could qualify us for the final successful satyagraha campaign, for nothing heroic could be done unless we had won the hearts of the masses and this was impossible without intense constructive work in their midst enabling them to earn more and to live better.

That’s about all that I was charged with. We shall expect a cable from you regarding Kamalabehn’s condition as soon as you are with her. You will not think of replying to this until she feels fit and you may not send any reply at all if you can look forward to an early return.

With much love,

Yours,

MAHADEV

Gandhi-Nehru Papers, 1935. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library
APPENDIX III

LETTER FROM A. DONALD MILLER

[Before September 14, 1935]

Mr. Sharpe has passed to me your letter to him of 2nd July, in which you asked his opinion about procreation of children by those suffering from leprosy, and you made reference to the Home at Naini, Allahabad, where you gathered from Mrs. Higginbottom that that was permitted. . . .

You will be the first to realize how many questions are involved, medical, social, economic and spiritual. What is ideal and what is practical are courses that are not always identical. We have to arrive at the best possible course in a world as it is, and not as we would like it to be . . . .

At a conference held under the auspices of the Mission at Allahabad in 1924, and attended by medical experts as well as by administrators of large leper institutions, the following were among the findings of the Medical Committee, and approved by the Conference:

(a) That the disease has not been proved to be congenital, but childhood is the period of greatest liability to infection. It has been found that children separated from leprous parents at birth and thereafter protected from the possibility of infection do not develop the disease. These facts make strongly advisable the earliest possible separation of infants and children from such leper parents as have the disease in an infectious form.

(b) That in view of the considerable degree of fecundity of lepers, especially of females, and the excessive danger of infection to the children of lepers, both of which play a great part in maintaining the prevalence of the disease, the separation of the sexes is desirable as far as possible. Where this is not found to be practicable married lepers should only be allowed to live together on the express understanding that any children born to them shall be separated from their infected parents at the earliest possible age. It is also especially desirable to separate parents presenting good prospects of recovery under efficient treatment, both to eliminate the risk of the healthy mate becoming infected while the partner is undergoing treatment and because child-bearing is often accompanied by rapid development of the disease. . . .

More recent investigation has gone to strengthen the view that both for the leper mother and for her child, procreation is not to be encouraged. The mother is subject to strain that gives the disease an opportunity of developing; the child is subject to grave and constant risk of infection so long as he is with the mother, if she has the disease in its contagious stage . . . .

1 Vide “Procreation among lepers”, 14-9-1935. Only extracts are reproduced here.

When we touch the spiritual issue we reach ground where it is not easy to dogmatize. Yet I think it is clear that the highest solution of the problem raised lies in spiritual realms. Sacrifices of one kind and another are called for by all in the building up of a nobler future; individual sacrifice is of the very bone and marrow of the common good. And the sacrifice that is demanded of a man or woman, depending upon God’s grace and seeking His will, who has leprosy is to refrain from imperilling future lives by any personal gratification.

So that we arrive, quite decisively I feel, at the conclusion that ideally it is neither well medically, socially, nor spiritually for there to be cohabitation of destitute lepers in institutions, where it leads to the procreation of children.

But I said that ‘what is ideal and what is practical are courses that are not always identical’, and so it comes about that sometimes, while the Mission to Lepers has as its definite policy the non-provision of married quarters for those who come voluntarily to us and who are our guests, circumstances have sometimes made this policy incapable of complete adoption . . . .

At Allahabad which you mention in your letter married quarters do continue for those already occupying them, but the weight of evidence is clearly that such quarters are not serving the highest good, and so for fresh admissions provision is only made for them in either the men’s or the women’s separate quarters.

Where patients come to an institution under legal compulsion, the issue would be somewhat altered, at any rate on the social score. Then it would be a case of a community definitely taking the responsibility for governing the lives of others. But in all Mission institutions in India patients come voluntarily, and are our guests and not our prisoners. And just as you at your old Ashram at Sabarmati had principles to be observed by your guests calculated to achieve the highest good, so we at our institutions are endeavouring, so far as is possible, to achieve the greatest good by a policy which will, as far as is practical, not encourage the procreation of children by leper parents.

Have I made our difficulties and our ideals clear? I hope so.

_Harijan_, 14-9-1935
APPENDIX IV

MAHADEV DESAI’S LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

WARDHA,
September 25, 1935

MY DEAR JAWAHARLALJI,

Bapuji is too busy to write today and so I am writing instead. There has been no news from you for some days, and we take it that no news is good news. Progress is bound to be painfully slow, but we trust your presence will act as an infallible medicine. And what a comfort it must be to Indu who would hardly have borne the strain without you.

My dash to Allahabad to see you was not valueless, for I was the privileged bearer of your valuable manuscript. I read three parts (about 275 pages) on the way and was in raptures over them. Work here has prevented me from further progress, but Khorsheh has finished it and Bapu has now started on it. He finished the 1st part today and hopes to get through it soon. Of course he does all this reading in what he calls the ‘Library’ (meaning the W. C.!). You will be amused to hear that the only book which shares the W. C. shelf, with your manuscript, is a biography of Hitler! He finished Hitler’s autobiography (My Struggle) some days ago.

Yours affectionately,

MAHADEV

[PS.]

The Congress Constitution is accompanying this.

Gandhi-Nehru Papers, 1935. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

APPENDIX V

MAHADEV DESAI’S LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

WARDHA,
September 29, 1935

MY DEAR JAWAHARLALJI,

I am afraid Bapu must miss today’s airmail, too. There has been a number of visitors and just at the present moment when the post must be sent he is spinning and giving an interview. But he asked me, interrupting the interview for a second, that I must acknowledge your important letter received yesterday dated September 20 and tell you how happy he is that you have been able to communicate your decision. No

1 Vide “Letter to Jawaharlal Nehru”, 22-9-1935
2 ibid
3 Accepting the Congress presidency.
letter could be nobler and if you did not write in the straight way you have done you would not be you. Bapu is regularly reading the Magnum Opus and today he has finished the second part. There are eight parts, but Upadhyaya gave me only seven. The eighth was not yet ready when I left Allahabad, and Kripalani who comes here for the A.I.S.A. meeting on the 10th will bring the eighth part.

_Yours affectionately,_

_MAHADEV_

[PS.]

The other letter giving detailed news of Kamala's health also arrived yesterday. What a cross you are carrying. May God sustain you.

_MAHADEV_

Gandhi-Nehru Papers, 1935. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

---

1 Addressee’s autobiography.
1. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

Unrevised

WARDHA,

September 23, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

Your letter to Choudhury has told. He has taken it in the right spirit. There was no occasion for apology. And if you cannot call a spade a spade to your own people in your own home, which Maganwadi is, where could you do so? You must repeat the performance, whenever the occasion arises. This size is especially prepared for you. But you will give me your criticism on it. For the stinking lot you have to pay nothing. Has the stink gone with exposure to the sun and the air?

Puri should send his detailed criticism without delay. He must not wait for the time when he comes here. I must not be kept in darkness.

I am eating your apples with vengeance. And I needed them. They and musambis have acted like medicine.

Mira is free from fever. But she is still terribly weak and the digestive apparatus does not respond as it should. In spite of big doses of Eno’s Fruit Salt, she has to take the enema in order to get a clearance. But there is no anxiety on her behalf. You won’t get full marks as a good nurse, nor Shummy as a good doctor, unless between you two [you] make Pyarelal take milk and your excellent butter. Has Shummy anything to add to what I have given in Harijan on snake bites? Is there an easy way of distinguishing a poisonous from a non-poisonous snake? Does he recommend any book on it?

When does he think Kumarappa can be discharged?

Here are some letters for your guests (!) Love.

BAPU

1 Vide “Snake Poisoning”, 17-8-1935.
2 Pyarelal, Kumarappa and Devdas
[PS.]
When do you descend to the plains? You may not overstay your time in Simla for the sake of the convalescents.

From the original: C.W. 3551. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6360

2. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

September 23, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

I can see your tears of joy on your letter. If and when I close my eyes in the same condition in which I am today, you may shed more such tears.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8475. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

3. LETTER TO PURUSHOTTAM GANDHI

September 23, 1935

CHI. PURUSHOTTAM,

I have your letter. If I didn’t know you, I would be displeased to get no letter from you. I console myself thinking that you must have some good reason for not writing to me, either that you want to save my time or to save yours. According to my nature, I would rather that persons like you wrote to me frequently so that I could know them better and hence could also help.

I have not yet been able to go through the report of the Harijan work in Kathiawar. I do wish to read it. What you write about Chhaganlal has disturbed me. The Harijan work there must not suffer. And we can’t also afford Jivanlal losing interest in it. Can you make any suggestion? After your letter, it is not possible for me to keep still and do nothing. Can I use the contents of your letter in writing to Chhaganlal?
Would it be correct to say that you have completely recovered now?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gurjarati: M.M.U./II

4. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

WARDHA,
September 23, 1935

CHI. MATHURADAS,

I can understand your embarrassment. I have written to Nilkanth that he should undertake to send the amount to Gosibehn\(^1\). I hope your affairs are going on well.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

5. LETTER TO SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA

WARDHA,
September 24, 1935

DEAR SATISBABU,

I have gone through your correspondence with Malkani. I enclose a copy of my letter to him which speaks for itself. About Sharma our letters have crossed each other. Biswanath has got to be helped against himself.\(^2\) I do not suppose I know him at all but from the correspondence with Annada I have gathered the impression that he is one of your faithful workers. But whether he is that or not, he must not be allowed to go astray for want of attention. Therefore even if you have to neglect your work a bit and if he would not come alone to me, you should bring him with you. That is of course if you think that his being with me is not likely to aggravate his disease. This is merely to tell you that I am anxious about his mental condition but you should be the final judge as for the proper treatment to be given to him.

---

\(^1\) Gosibehn Captain

BAPU

SJT. SATISBABU
CALCUTTA
From a photostat: G.N. 2730

6. LETTER TO B.G. KHER

September 24, 1935

MY DEAR KHER,

I ought to have written this to you whilst Swami was here, but I simply could not do it and then it escaped me altogether, till I got a reminder from Swami yesterday afternoon. I see no contradiction between what Thakkar Bapa has written and what I conveyed to Swami, Harijan Sevek Sangh won’t take direct responsibility of owning the property in Pandharpur, but it will provide the majority of trustees and continue to do so, as vacancies occur by any reason whatsoever. The idea behind this arrangement is that the Sangh should not undertake any financial responsibility. Its burden would be fully discharged when it has appointed trustees who are able to manage property financially and otherwise. This proposition was adopted under my advice. The Sangh has not sufficient workers to enable it to take charge of properties that are being offered to it. This Pandharpur proposition has been entertained because you and Swami are interested in it and because both of you are connected with the donor, who I am sure holds advanced and liberal views on untouchability and other matters and who wholly endorses the Sangh’s campaign against untouchability. I hope this is sufficiently clear and quite satisfactory from the point of view of the Buva. If any further elucidation is required please do not hesitate to write to me. I understand from Shri Kavde who was here for two days that the Buva was expected to be somewhere near Wardha during the first week of October. If that does happen I would like you to urge him to pass a few days with me at Maganwadi so that I can make his personal acquaintance and understand his desire about the management of the Dharmashala in Pandharpur. In view of the conversation I had with Swami and Shri Kavde I would advise that in drawing up the trust-deed you give the trustees full powers of mortgage, alienation, etc., so long as the corpus is used for the exclusive benefit of Harijans. I have explained to Swami why I consider the possession of this power by the trustees as a vital part of the deed.

Yours sincerely,

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

7. LETTER TO DR. GOPICHAND BHARGAVA

WARDHA,
September 24, 1935

DEAR DR. GOPICHAND,

I have your letter. I am conferring with Shankerlal as to what should be done. My own inclination is to hand the charge to Meerut people because they already know the working of the Kashmir Bhandar. If that proposition does not commend itself to Shankerlal or to the council, your alternate proposals will be helpful. Let us decide upon certain propositions as decisive, namely, that we shall not run any Bhandar at a loss. Secondly we shall not make purchases even in the open market for replenishing our stocks if we do not know what wages the workers at those articles have received. This applies to the market pattus you have mentioned. It is not enough for us to know, that the pattus come within our definition of khadi or swadeshi.

Yours sincerely,

BAPU

DR. GOPICHAND BHARGAVA
LAHORE

From a copy: Dr. Gopichand Bhargava Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

\(^1\) Felt
8. LETTER TO VALJI G. DESAI

September 24, 1935

CHI. VALJI,

I couldn’t write to you because of heavy pressure of work. Munshi’s writing is neither seductive nor obscene. I didn’t see anything objectionable in his ridicule of brahmacharya. I had read nearly the whole of it before writing the Foreword. I had liked his effort. The fact is that, having come to know Munshi personally, I have developed a partiality for him. He has capacity for self-sacrifice. He seems to be a sincere man. This does not mean that I like everything about him. But we should regard others in the spirit of ahimsa, that is, with a broad mind. In other words, we should judge everybody according to his limitations. I hope this answers all your questions. I received your article. I hope all of you are well.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 7474. Courtesy: Valji G. Desai

9. MESSAGE ON BIRTHDAY

[On or after September 24, 1935]\(^1\)

These spurts are no good, if one sleeps away the rest of the year; and now that we have a definite ideal in front of us, viz., the working towards a minimum wage for eight hours’ work, some of us must try to do eight hours’ spinning, either single or by several combining together, keeping a regular record of everyone’s spinning and every

\(^1\) The message extracted from “Weekly Letter” by Mahadev Desai who had explained: “When some years ago Gandhiji came to know about the public celebration of his birthday’, he said: ‘Let the day be consecrated to spinning for Daridranarayana.’ And ever since, the celebrations have taken the form of some kind of khadi work. This year the Hindu [Vikram era] date was separated from the Christian date by nine days and people devoted the whole time to extra spinning or selling khadi or making khadi collections. As the 24th of September (birthday according to the Hindu year) coincided with the Harijan Day, in many parts of India effort was made to do some special acts of service for the Harijans . . . . Several places, including our own, had 16 hours’ unbroken spinning on wheel for the whole period. But this was far from satisfying Gandhiji . . . .”

\(^2\) Ibid
day’s spinning, so that one can arrive at a standard average spinning . . . . I understand the depth of feeling behind your wishing many returns of my birthday. But as you know well, not a minute will be added by the Creator to the allotted span of my life, no matter what human effort is put forth. Nevertheless, while it lasts we shall always continue to pray and otherwise strive for one another’s good and longevity.

_Harijan_, 12-10-1935

10. LETTER TO BHUJANGILAL CHHAYA

_MAGANWADI, WARDHA,_
_September 25, 1935_

CHI. BHUJANGILAL,

I am guilty of delay in replying to your letter. There is no need at all to try to see Harilal. You yourself must decide about your future.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2605

11. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL JOSHI

_September 25, 1935_

CHI. CHHAGANLAL,

I got your letter. Reading about the things that Balvantrai has tolerated doesn’t lessen my grief. Please tell him so, or convey it in a letter, if you have shown him my previous letter. The news that the houses of Bhangis were satisfactorily completed though after much delay, was welcome.

Can you not, with the help of Dakshinamurti, find somebody in Bhavnagar who would take up debt-relief work among Bhangis? Valji’s nephew Rasik is studying in Shamaldas College. College students are often found doing silent social work while studying. See if you can tempt Rasik. If he comes forward, he may also be able to draw his friends into the work. The fact that 15 maunds of bones did not give even a basketful of manure means that they were heated more than necessary. The bones should merely be charred, that is, heated till they turn black. They should be heated less than wood is when it is turned into charcoal. There will then be hardly any loss of weight in the bones. I performed the process myself and produced manure. The experiment was demonstrated in Maganwadi. The method is now frequently made use of in Nalvadi. The fuel consists of dried stumps of uprooted hedge-plants. Wood should not be used for the purpose, and dry sticks not at all. The material used for fuel should be such as would burn just a little longer than hay, so that when it is burnt up it will leave the bones unburnt. It should be remembered that our aim is not even to heat the bones till they look like charcoal. Charring bones means merely heating them till they turn black. We have to go just a little further than smoking them. Bones heated in this manner lose nothing besides a little nitrogen, and certainly no phosphorus. If the phosphorus in bones is lost, their essence is lost. Collect a few bones and make the experiment yourself several times till you have mastered the process. Did you by any chance try to heat the 15 maunds of bones together at one time?

More and more bone-mills and flour-mills will continue to come up and people will go in for their products. But wouldn’t a true brahmachari remain unshaken in his vow even in the midst of widespread immorality? Going further than that, don’t we see that, though the threat of death hangs over everybody, the whole world strives, and commendably, to stave off the evil day? If in the same way we regard it our duty to do our best, we would go on doing our work fearlessly and with faith and a cheerful mind no matter how often we fail.

The success of mills lies in being able to pay dividends, whereas ours lies in doing our duty. One who has dedicated himself to a cause doesn’t hope for the reward of his work. A person who travels to Hardwar in a train does nothing very great, but a pilgrim who travels on foot from Kanyakumari to Jamnotri may be said to have achieved something. I say ‘something’ because after all Jamnotri is only a physical goal. Our effort for the revival of village industries belongs to the same class. But real effort consists in striving for an invisible goal. Despite the coming into vogue of aeroplanes, we shall need our legs. Likewise, despite the numerous mills which have sprung up, there will be need for village industries. Just as it would be foolish to neglect cultivating strength of limbs because of the increasing use of aeroplanes, so it would be foolish to neglect village industries because of the multiplication of mills. We are trying to save to country from committing such folly. There can be no room for despair in such effort.

The description of the condition of the cultivators in Samdhiyala proves that I am fully justified in giving the first place in our programme to village sanitation. Even this first step in man’s education has come to be neglected. The reason for that neglect is the unforgivable sin of the higher castes in looking down upon the lower castes.

If Dhiru has gone to Totaramji to learn agriculture or with the noble desire of serving him, my congratulations to him, Rama and you. I never think about Harilal now.

I have already written to you about the result of my inquiry concerning . . .'s character. To me his letter seemed to be perfectly sincere. It seems he is connected with several institutions in Rajkot. He has suggested to me that, if I wish, I might make further inquiries to ascertain the correctness of the facts stated in his letter. Narandas has no doubt regarding that, and Bhai Jethalal has produced before me no definite evidence. I, therefore, have made no further enquiry. However, I am prepared to do so if you produce definite evidence. I have still kept that door open for you. Personally, I have no bias either way in the matter. My condition is like that of a judge who changes his view from time to time as more and more evidence for or against is brought forward. I have sent Narandas’s letter to Jethalal Joshi. Please tell him that he has not even acknowledged it, and, if he has not received my letter, inform me accordingly. I haven’t even kept a copy of Narandas’s letter. The date of posting of my letter can be ascertained from my register. Jethalal lives in the same house where you live. If, therefore, you feel inclined to take up this matter, by all means do so. You must have seen from Narandas’s letter that he does not accept a single charge. It should be borne in mind that . . .'s character or whether or not he habitually wears khadi is not the only subject-matter of inquiry. It is possible that Narandas’s attitude on that point is not correct. I have not come to any conclusion even about that. The main complaint is against the whole management of

---

1 The name has been omitted.
2 Ibid
the school and Narandas’s fitness as a teacher.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5534

12. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

September 25, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

Please find enclosed a letter for Jamnadas. I am also writing one to Kusum. Your purse is being filled up fairly well. Some work is being done here under Amtussalaam’s inspiration. One charkha will be kept working for sixteen hours daily till the 2nd. Yesterday, it was kept working 24 hours just by chance. Kanti started spinning late in the evening and continued till 4.45 a.m. He rose at the time of morning prayer, because only he and Mahadev have all the eighteen chapters by heart. Kanaiyo cannot but absorb himself in such work and Navin also has done the same. It looks as if they really like it all. Does Mathew take part in any of the activities?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8486. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

13. LETTER TO K.M. MUNSHI

September 25, 1935

BHAJ MUNSHI,

I add the good wishes of you both to those of many others. But isn’t it God’s will that prevails in the end? Who can thwart the decrees of Fate? Have you considered what kind of figure I would cut in the Sahitya Parishad? When my name was suggested on a similar occasion years ago, the late Ramanbhai had remarked that I did not know even as much Gujarati as a raw matriculate. I had at that time agreed wholeheartedly with him when I heard the remark. As my era had already commenced then, others who heard that sincerely meant remark had felt hurt, but I saw in it nothing but sincerity of purpose and regard for propriety. Our people’s love is blind. They believe that a person who is capable in one field must be so in other fields, too. If the person is weak-minded, he would therefore soon come to grief. Ramanbhai’s remark made in 1915-16 holds true literally even today, and I am therefore shaking in my shoes ever since my name was suggested for the forthcoming session of the Parishad. In cherishing the aspiration to make the Parishad a symbol of Gujarat’s unity and culture, don’t you think you are making its field unlimited? And I see no likelihood of that aspiration being realized through my becoming its President. This is precisely the state of my mind. If even after knowing this all the members desire that I must become the President and if the Parishad is to meet next year, you may give me an opportunity to think again then.¹ You have approached me as advocate of the Reception Committee, but now please become my advocate and reply to the Committee on my behalf that you are personally convinced by my argument and agree that I should be spared from having to become President.

Regarding the Advisory Committee for Hansa, I thought I had said my say.² But Mahadev gave me your message just now. I see that you have enumerated fifteen languages, from out of which you yourself agree to the exclusion of three, leaving twelve. Fixing an upper limit of 20 for twelve languages, you may select whatever names you like. I would find it difficult to make the selection, since I do not know everybody. I was concerned only with the size, and if my argument on that point appeals to you, you yourself should select the agreed number of names. I will accept your selection.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 7592. Courtesy: K. M. Munshi

¹ Gandhiji presided over its twelfth session in Ahmedabad from October 31 to November 2, 1936; for his presidential and concluding addresses.
14. LETTER TO NARAHARI D. PARIKH

AGANWADI, WARDHA,
September 26, 1935

CHI. NARAHARI,

I got your letter. We cannot afford to give way to despair in this manner. I can’t explain much in a letter. Find some time after Parikshitlal returns and come over for a while.

It is true that we are not able to give the girls as much as we ought to. But it is also true that we do not have the necessary women workers. God creates difficulties so that we might overcome them and not run away from them. You acted rightly in relieving Bhagwanji. Puratan may go to a village if he wishes. We may certainly introduce any reforms that you desire and others also that we can think of. While doing so we should bear only one thing in mind, namely, that we must not abandon anything we have started so long as we see no immorality in it. Think over this while you are waiting to come here. Can Anasuyabehn take charge of the younger girls who give you trouble? If she is short of space, can she shift her Bal Mandir to the Harijan Ashram?

You can do the tanning and the dairy work even there. Where else will you get the facilities of land, etc., which you have there? Valunjkar has been doing his work here so efficiently and intelligently that I am hopeful that he will soon be able to run tanneries at a number of places. He has even undertaken to start one at Nasik. A building is already under construction there and the work will start as soon as it is completed. You will see that, too, when you come here. Valunjkar has resolved to suffer no loss from the very beginning and all kinds of schemes are being thought out with that end in view. I think from the economic point of view the work here will be more successful than Satisbabu’s project. The latter has already consumed a lot of money by now. The return has yet to come. In Valunjkar’s project very little money has been invested, the hides are being tanned, there is a sufficient number of cobblers for the work and the trainees, too, are making progress.

Please remember that a servant of the people must display all the four qualities in proper balance, namely, the Brahmín’s wisdom, the Kshatriya’s fearlessness, the Vaishya’s purity of management and the Shudra’s capacity for untiring labour. The greatest shortcoming in us all is the lack of the Kshatriya spirit. We lose heart much too soon. We tremble to stand alone. At sight of the tiger of difficulties, whether we are one or many we start running away. Please do not think that any of these charges is directed against you alone. I am explaining to you what I see all around me and even in myself. As for myself, where can I run away to? My condition, therefore, is like that of a Bania who had got himself tied on the back of a horse. If you have not heard this story, please ask me some time. I will enjoy telling it to you or, if you cannot come in the near future, will write to you.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9089

15. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

September 27, 1935

Visma Pathmathi: Tame avsho te pahelan hun maro path lakhirahish.¹

From the 20th chapter: ‘I shall have written my lesson when you will come’. (‘when you come’ is better.) In the second sentence: ‘The old woman will have finished grinding bajra before the girls will reach home.’ (‘reach home’ is better.)

Between two actions which will be happening in future the one that is going to be accomplished will take the Future Perfect. Now do the 20th chapter. We shall think what you may do next after you complete the Pathmala, Part I.

From now onwards I shall not use a pencil.²

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 9254. Also C.W. 10106. Courtesy: Lilavati Asar

¹ The addressee had requested Gandhiji to translate a few sentences from the 20th chapter as she was not able to understand the Future Perfect.
² The addressee had complained that the corrections in pencil faded out.
16. LETTER TO RASIK DESAI

MAGANWADI, WARDHA,
September 27, 1935

CHI. RASIK,

I have not preserved your letter, but the language was so clumsy that I had to read it twice to take in its meaning. It is natural that you two couldn’t have any such meaning in your minds, but the letter did mean that you certainly wanted your money to be used for relief work but that I should send you an account showing the particulars of individuals to whom it was paid. If Kanti has written to you and said that the money received by me was not being used, he is not right. It is true that some funds that are lying with me are not being used as yet, but if Kanti did write what you think he did, you ought not to have sent me at all the money for Quetta relief work. If, however, you felt it your dharma to send it, you should have quoted Kanti’s words and told me that your money should be spent immediately and should not lie with me unused.

I hope you will see that your error in writing in English was still more serious. I was surprised to discover that, after having lived with me for so many years, you have not been able to understand and see that, however well one may know the English language, one should write or speak in it only when absolutely necessary. Since there was no incivility anywhere in your letter, you need not have apologized for it. If, however, you lose all that you have learnt in the Ashram, then will be the time for you to apologize.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 6622. Also C.W. 4354

17. LETTER TO RAOJIBHAI N. PATEL

September 27, 1935

CHI. RAOJIBHAI,

Even the small quantity of ghee you sent last time turned out to be very bad. It had to be boiled again. As soon as he tasted it, Swami told me that I ought not to eat it. Even if the ghee comes in a goods train, it should remain good. It should be so well packed that there would be no danger of leakage. If you cannot procure really good ghee, you should stop sending any. One of our men should go to the people who prepare the ghee and teach them how to make it and see that they pack only properly boiled ghee and use clean tins. It requires great art to boil the ghee properly. Don’t mind having sent the last sample, I will examine it and let you know.

Read ‘400 yards’ in place of ‘400 rounds’.¹ You yourself may fix the rate there, but see that the spinner gets at least one and a half pice per hour. It will be possible to have different rates per yard or rounds from province to province, but everywhere the spinner must get enough to pay for well balanced and nourishing food.

It is good news that Dahibehn’s eyes could be treated and cured in Anand itself.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 9007

18. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

September 27, 1935

Your replies to . . .’ s² questions³ are perfectly correct. Such questions may be asked at any time. When they are asked by a responsible person, we must reply to them. There can be no time limit for such questions. The people’s memory is always short, but their servants cannot afford to lose patience. They must always be ready to reply. I have, therefore, sent your reply in my name.

Nothing whatever is going on in Wardha. There was nothing, either, when Vallabhbhai was here. When Ghanshyamdas came, Vallabhbhai, too, came to listen to his stories. There was therefore, nothing in our talks except Ghanshyamdas’s stories of his exploits in England and some gossip. This real fact, fortunately, escaped the attention of reporters altogether, otherwise all kinds of speculation would have followed and Ghanshyamdas would have been upset.

¹ Vide “Letter to Kasturba Gandhi”, 24-8-1935
² Omission as in the source
³ About the Tilak Swaraj Fund
Rajaji’s being here at that time was just an accident. He was returning with Lakshmi and was bound to break journey here on his way. As Ghanshyamdas was coming I detained him for two days. I don’t remember anybody having so much as even mentioned the subject of my re-entry into politics. I do not understand how he gave currency to such a wild story.

I have made an inquiry. Why didn’t you ask him?

[From Gujarati]
Bapuni Prasadi, p. 159

19. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

September 27, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

I have nothing particular to write about.
You must have received my letter to Mathew. A spinning-wheel is kept going here continuously for 16 hours.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./ II. Also C.W. 8477. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

20. THE HINDI PRACHAR WEEK

The foregoing notice1 hardly needs any recommendation from me. The solid work done by the institution must be its own recommendation. The people of the South should prove their appreciation by giving it adequate financial support.

Harijan, 28-9-1935

1 Not reproduced here; written by Harihar Sharma, it gave an account of the origin and progress of Dakshin Bharat Hindi Prachar Sabha and the decision of its Executive Council to “organize Hindi Prachar Week from September 30 to October 6, 1935 . . . in order to convey the message of Hindi to every home in South India and also to collect funds . . . .” The Council had also desired “to enlist as many new members as possible to the Sabha during the Week. . . .”
21. ABOUT ‘CONVERSION’

Mr. A. A. Paul of the Federation of International Fellowships asked me the other day to define in these columns my position on ‘conversion’. I told him to frame definite questions on which he would like my answers. The result was the following letter with a list of propositions attached:

You remember that a little over a month ago, I wrote to you asking you whether you would publish a statement giving your views on ‘conversion’. You wrote back to say that it would be easier for you if we could put them in the form of questions or assertions. At the request of the Executive Committee of the Madras International Fellowship, one of our Christian members has prepared the enclosed statement and the Committee has asked me to pass it on to you with the request that you will kindly find it possible to answer these statements in Harijan. Of course you will notice that the questions are framed from the Christian point of view; but the Committee feels that the questions will apply equally well to other Missionary Religions which are engaged in conversion programme. May I hope that you will find it possible to explain your attitude to these questions?

PROPOSITIONS

1. Conversion is a change of heart from sin to God. It is the work of God. Sin is separation from God.

2. The Christian believes that Jesus is the fulfilment of God’s revelation to mankind, that He is our Saviour from sin, that He alone can bring the sinner to God and thus enable him to live.

3. The Christian, to whom God has become a living reality and power through Christ, regards it as his privilege and duty to speak about Jesus and to proclaim the free offer which He came on earth to make.

4. If any man’s heart is so moved by the hearing of this message as to repent and wish to live a new life as a disciple of Jesus, the Christian regards it as right to admit him to the company of His professed believers which is called the Christian Church.

5. The Christian shall do all in his power to sound the sincerity of conviction in all such cases and shall point out, as he can, the consequences of such a step, stressing the duty a man owes to his family.
6. The Christian shall do everything in his power to prevent any motives of self-seeking on his part and of material considerations on the part of the convert.

7. Inasmuch as Jesus came to give full life, and that as a matter of history conversion has often meant an enhancing of personality, the Christian shall not be accused of using material inducements if conversion results in the social uplift of the convert—it always being understood that such shall never be used as a means to an end.

8. The Christian is right in accepting as his duty the care of the sincere convert—body, soul and mind.

9. It shall not be brought against the Christian that he is using material inducements, when certain facts in Hindu social theory, out of his control, are in themselves an inducement to the Harijan. (But see points 5 and 6.)

In order to understand the background to these propositions, the reader should know that the origin of the main question was a discussion I was carrying on with Mr. A. A. Paul on the so-called mass conversion of a village predominantly or wholly composed of Harijans. The reader may later on read more of this ‘conversion’. For the present purpose it is enough that he understands, that it is the method of mass conversion that has to be tested in the light of these propositions. Indeed the ninth proposition almost says as much.

I have read the propositions several times, and the more I read them the more I feel that they can be applied only to individual contacts, never to the mass of mankind. Take the very first proposition. Sin is defined to be “separation from God”. “Conversion is a change of heart from sin to God. It is the work of God.” So says the author of the propositions. If conversion is the work of God, why should that work be taken away from Him? And who is man to take away anything from God? He may become a humble instrument in the hands of God. Even so he cannot be a judge of men’s hearts. I often wonder whether we are always true judges of our own hearts. ‘Man, know thyself’ must have been wrung out of a desparate heart. And if we know so little of ourselves, how much less must we know of our neighbours and remote strangers who may differ from us in a multitude of things, some of which are of the highest moment? The second proposition deals with the Christian belief handed to the believer from generation to generation, the truth of which thousands of Christians born are never called upon to test for themselves, and rightly not. Surely it is a dangerous thing to present it to those who have been brought up to a different belief. And it would appear to me to be impertinent on my part to present my untested belief to the professor of another which for aught I know may be as true as mine. It is highly likely that mine may be good enough for me and his for him. A thick woollen coat would be the thing for one living in the cold region of the earth, as a piece of loincloth for another living near the equatorial regions.

The third proposition too, like the first, relates to the mysteries of religion which are not understood by the common people who take them in faith. They work well enough among people living in the traditional faith. They will repel those who have been brought up to believe something else.

The other five propositions deal with the conduct of the missionary among those whom he is seeking to convert. They seem to me to be almost impossible of application in practice. The start being wrong, all that follows must be necessarily so. Thus how is the Christian to sound the sincerity of the conviction of his hearers? By a show of hands? By personal conversation? By a temporary trial? Any test that can be conceived will fail even to be reasonably conclusive. No one but God knows a man’s heart. Is the Christian so sure of his being so right in body, mind and soul as to feel comfortably “right in accepting as his duty the care of the sincere convert—body, soul and mind”?

The last proposition—the crown of all the preceding ones—takes one’s breath away. For it makes it clear that the other eight are to be applied in all their fulness to the poor Harijans. And yet the very first proposition has not ceased to puzzle the brains of some of the most intellectual and philosophical persons even in the present generation. Who knows the nature of original sin? What is the meaning of separation from God? What is that of the union with God? What are the signs of him who is united to God? Are all who dare to preach the message of Jesus the Christ sure of their union with God? If they are not, who will test the Harijans’ knowledge of these deep things?

This is my reaction to the foregoing propositions. I hope no Christian who reads it will be offended by it. I would have been false to my numerous Christian friends, if I had hidden from them my true position on the nine propositions.

My own detached view may now be stated in a few words. I believe that there is no such thing as conversion from one faith to another in the accepted sense of the term. It is a highly personal matter for the individual and his God. I may not have any design upon my neighbour as to his faith which I must honour even as I honour my own. For I regard all the great religions of the world as true at any rate for the people professing them as mine is true for me. Having reverently studied the scriptures of the world, I have no difficulty in perceiving the beauties in all of them. I could no more think of asking a Christian or a Mussalman or a Parsi or a Jew to change his faith than I would think of changing my own. This makes me no more oblivious of the limitations of the professors of those faiths, than it makes me of the grave limitations of the professors of mine. And seeing that it takes all my resources in trying to bring my practice to the level of my faith and in preaching the same to my co-religionists, I do not dream of preaching to the followers of other faiths. “Judge not lest ye be judged” is sound maxim for one’s conduct. It is a conviction daily growing upon me that the great and rich Christian missions will render true service to India, if they can persuade themselves to confine their activities to humanitarian service without the ulterior motive of converting India or at least her unsophisticated villagers to Christianity, and destroying their social superstructure, which notwithstanding its many defects has stood now from time immemorial the onslaughts upon it from within and from without. Whether they—the missionaries—and we wish it or not, what is true in the Hindu faith will abide, what is untrue will fall to pieces. Every living faith must have within itself the power of rejuvenation if it is to live.

Harijan, 28-9-1935

22. SOYA BEANS

As soya beans are claimed to possess high nutritive value, I reproduce the following from pamphlet No. 7 published by the Bombay Presidency Baby and Health Week Association to enable the food reformer to make experiments.

Harijan, 28-9-1935

1 Not reproduced here
23. ACHARYA P. C. RAY ON SPINNERS’ WELFARE

In recommending to Khadi Pratishthan, in which he is deeply interested and to which he has made handsome contributions out of his savings, the scheme for raising the wages of spinners and for making self-sufficing khadi, the main activity of the Pratishthan, Acharya P. C. Ray sends me the following nine points which besides being valuable in themselves show the deep faith he retains in khadi and the active interest he takes in it even at his advanced age.

_Harijan_, 28-9-1935

24. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

Wardha,

_Spember 28, 1935_

MY DEAR AMRIT,

I better dictate this letter. These ups and downs in Devdas’s health do not trouble me at all. I know that he is getting on there. And I know further that he is in the best of hands. Whoever gave the news to Pyarelal did no good turn. Really and truly I have never felt better. The whole of the last supply of your apples was practically finished by me. And I was also taking _musumbis_. Therefore there is no cause for worry, even on that score. Whenever I feel the need for fruit I shall certainly take it. I have not left off raw leaves. There was for a few days no room left for _neem_ leaves. So that was omitted. But then all the vegetables were to be omitted if I was taking fruit and the fruit jam. And now I have gone back to _neem_ leaves. The _bhaji_ I have been taking in its cooked form in order to avoid constipation but I stopped it when I was taking apples. You will please therefore not worry about my health.

Now about Ba. If she is not happy there and if she can be spared, I think it is no good keeping her there. With all your care and attention I am quite sure that Devdas does not need her presence there. If, therefore, she feels like coming away to Wardha you should let her do so. She is well able to travel by herself. She requires some assistance at stations where she alights. That you can arrange without the slightest difficulty at Kalka, Ambala and Delhi. Someone has simply to meet her at the station and put her in the right compartment.

---

I am looking forward to your letter giving me your own programme. I should be very much disturbed if you altered your own programe on account of Devdas or Kumarappa. If they cannot stay at Manorville after you leave it, they must shift somewhere else or go to some other hill-station, if a more prolonged stay is necessary. And I do think that both of them should remain in the bracing climate at least up to the end of October if not November. Devdas may even require a longer stay.

The apples and your letter have just come in. If Ba forfeits her ticket, she should pay the fare, i.e., Devdas.

Love.

From the original: C.W. 3552. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 6361

25. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL JOSHI

September 28, 1935

CHI. CHHAGANLAL,

I got your letter written on Rentia Baras Day. It looks very nice indeed that you are taking part in the uninterrupted spinning programme in the national school. Thanks to Amtussalaam’s efforts, here also spinning is going on daily for 16 hours. Sixteen persons give one hour each by turn. The spinning starts at 5 a.m. and goes on up to 9 p.m. About 3,500 rounds are spun daily. I have suggested some changes in this programme, and my suggestion that one spinning-wheel should be kept systematically working day and night is being discussed.

It seems you have not correctly understood my article¹. I did not give up the practice under pressure from anybody. When Morarji and Chandulal came here to express their views, their arguments had no effect on my mind or could not make me give up the practice. But when I was faced with the problem of how to save the young man, my attitude changed immediately. I have done many things in my life with the motive of saving other persons. Nor have I accepted it as a principle never to yield to popular sentiments, though I do oppose doing anything merely to respect such sentiments. My rule is this:

Whenever respecting popular sentiments does not involve violation of moral principles or loss of self-respect, they should be respected even at some cost to oneself. For instance, if it was not for popular sentiments, I would most probably wear no clothes. I would see for myself in such practice many moral benefits besides benefit to my health. It would strengthen my self-control. But out of respect for popular sentiments I refrain from taking this very desirable step.

I learnt about Jivanlal’s resignation only from your letter. You should have given more details. If I am required to decide about it finally any details given by you would have been useful. Now I myself will write to you and ask you for information that I might need if the matter comes before me. You must have received my previous letter.1

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 5535

26. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

September 28, 1935

CHI. PREMA.

I have no option today but to dictate. I use the right hand only on Monday to write for Harijan. On the other days I write with the left hand. That takes more time. Besides, your letter calls for immediate reply. Do come some time about the 16th. By bits I will give you as much time as you need. Will it be all right if I do so during my walks?
It would be better if you do not fix in advance the time of your stay here. You shouldn’t mind if you have to stay on for a day or two longer. It would be better to see all the scattered activities at leisure and also if our conversations were spread over. Prabhavati has collected the yarn spun by me. And I have entrusted its dispatch also to her. I read the book about Hitler at your suggestion. I read Maxton’s book2 on Lenin, too. I also asked them to send me another book on Hitler and I have got it now. Your description of the room is interesting. There are many reasons for people to envy you. I am sure that when you know all the circumstances of my renunciation, you also will agree with me.

Most probably Jamnalalji will return by the 2nd or the 3rd. So far as I remember, I had replied to both your questions in my previous letter. I see no acknowledgement of that letter in your present letter. I, therefore, briefly reply to your questions again.

There are many objections against approving of compulsory sterilization of people suffering from leprosy. The practice is likely to lead to numerous evils. It is also not right to assume any disease to be incurable. It seems safer to me to propagate the method of self-control and be content with whatever results can be achieved in that way. I sense cowardice at every step. A spinner who was a coward would cut apart tangled yarn. A good spinner, on the other hand, would undo the tangle with patience and skill and keep the thread whole. A follower of ahimsa would adopt some such method with persons suffering from supposedly incurable diseases.

Systematic foreign propaganda by us seems to me to be like a bullock-cart competing with a railway train. If we can spend a thousand for propaganda in the cause of truth, the adversary is in a position to spend a crore. I am, therefore, convinced that we should be satisfied with whatever propaganda takes place in the normal course through the work of individuals.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10377. Also C.W. 6817. Courtesy: Premabehn Kantak

27. A TESTIMONIAL

WARDHA,
September 30, 1935

Shri K. S. Savant was with me for nearly a week. He is a Harijan and sculptor by profession, having gone through the full course in the Bombay School of Art. I could not resist his appeal to be allowed to sit in my room and do his work without distracting my attention in any way. He had his heart’s wish and he made the fullest use of the opportunity. Experts alone can judge his art. But I could see that Shri Savant had varied gifts. He showed great application all the time he was with me and was entirely absorbed in his work. We found him to be thoroughly sociable and [he] became one of us the moment he came. He deserves encouragement from lovers of art and moneyed men. I wish him every success.

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G.N. 2832

28. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

September 30, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

I am sure the apples sent by you are not from your garden. Do you know what railage they mean? It is too much of a good thing. Let me be satisfied with what local fruit I can get here. If they were needed as medicine, I would have asked you to send them. But they are not. The only fruit, I fancy, I need for the ailing ones is oranges or musumbis. And I have arranged for a continuous supply. This too may be my fancy but if I am to do with the least amount of drugs, I must, so it appears to me, have honey and oranges. And I assure you I am almost extravagant in the use of these articles. Therefore please stop buying apples for me. When you have the next yield in your own garden I shall gladly have my share.

I expect Ba this evening. She will give me all the latest news about Devdas and Kumarappa though I suppose she will hardly be able to add to the very full information you have been giving me.

Kumarappa’s brother, J.M., has been here. He is leaving for Bombay this evening. They are chips of the same block, so alike in appearance and their liberal outlook of life and love of the land!

Hope you are well. No use saying do not overwork yourself. I suppose you have rendered yourself incapable of responding to any such request, advice or even command!

Love.

BAPU
[PS.]

Mira is completely free. Did I tell you we had built a little cabin for her just behind Kumarappa’s own office room? She migrated there yesterday, quite happy now.

From the original: C. W. 3553. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G. N. 6362

29. LETTER TO MANORANJAN CHAUDHURI

September 30, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I am making use of the information you have given me about tree cotton grown by Shri Kiranprova Devi\(^1\). I would like you to send me a sample of her cotton and the seeds; if available. I would like to spin it myself.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

SHRI MANORANJAN CHAUDHURI

B. P. HINDUNISA

211 BOWBAZAR STREET, CALCUTTA

From a copy: C. W. 9769

30. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

September 30, 1935

CHI. AMBUJAM,

I have been waiting for your letter which has come at last. I did write\(^2\) to you acknowledging the fruit that was sent by you.

You must pick up strength quickly. You cannot afford to play with your body. It is a trust for God’s service.

I was sorry to hear of Ramachandran’s death. It must mean a loss of a member of the family. I know what it means to lose an old and faithful servant.

\(^1\) Addressee’s wife

\(^2\) Vide “Letter to S. Ambujammal”, 14-8-1935.
Mira is all right now. Ba returns today from Simla. No more just now.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: Ambujammal Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

31. LETTER TO MANILAL AND SUSHILA GANDHI

September 30, 1935

CHI. MANILAL AND SUSHILA,

Accidents like the one that happened to Sita are a common occurrence. We should not treat them either as a good or a bad omen. If both of you feel that she ought to go to a school, that would be the right course to adopt. I am firm in my own opinion, though. It is the duty of you both to give Sita whatever you have. When she is grown up, she may add to it whatever she wishes. But I attach no value to my views before yours. After all it is you who have to shape her future. You know best your difficulties and aspirations. It would be proper, therefore, that you should do what you yourselves desire after taking my views into consideration and attaching to them whatever importance you may feel inclined to.

Ba is returning from Simla this evening. Devdas is improving. Ramdas has become a little weak. He does not wish to leave Bombay. Harilal is sanctifying his anatomy in the holy Ganga of liquor. Nimu and her children are at present staying with me.

Kishorelal is keeping indifferent health, as usual. Kanti, Kanu and Navin are absorbed here in work and study.

Be satisfied with this much today.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 4844. Also C. W. 1256. Courtesy: Sushila Gandhi
32. LETTER TO RATILAL SHETH

September 30, 1935

BHAI RATIBHAI,

I got your letter. May the new year be happy for you and may your capacity for service increase. I was glad to read the news about your family. If one can earn enough for a livelihood through honest means, why should one covet more? If Kantilal does his work to your satisfaction, you will be free from your worry about him. I understand about Chhagan.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 7175. Also C.W. 4671. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

33. LETTER TO BHAGWANJI P. PANDYA

September 30, 1935

May you live long and do service without swerving from truth and ahimsa.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 313. Courtesy: Bhagwanji P. Pandya
34. LETTER TO HARJIVAN KOTAK

September 30, 1935

CHI. HARJIVAN,

You are being obstinate. Nobody can convince a person who is being stubborn. Your behaviour shows that you cannot observe rules. Either things should work out as you wish or else you would be furious. Is this the result of staying so many years with me? You are angry and I am pained. God knows whether it is a folly to be angry or to feel pained. Pain is a sign of attachment. Attachment and anger are signs of rajas. My pain will not be for long. How nice it would be if your anger also subsides after showing up for a moment.

Blessings from

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

35. LETTER TO SHARDABEHN H. KOTAK

September 30, 1935

CHI. SHARDA,

You seem to be doing good work there¹.

Blessings from

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

¹ At Srinagar
36. LETTER TO VISHWANATH

WARDHA,
October 1, 1935

MY DEAR VISHWANATH,

I have your note. I shall await your arrival on the 5th instant. If you do not see anybody to receive you at the station, you will ask your way to Maganwadi which is about under ten minutes’ walk from the station. Someone will be there, however, to receive you.

Love.

BAPU

[PS.]
I am not writing to Satis Babu.

SJT. VISHWANATH
KHADI PRATISHTHAN
15 COLLEGE SQUARE
CALCUTTA

From a photostat: G.N. 2731

37. LETTER TO NARAHARI D. PARIKH

October 1, 1935

CHI. NARAHARI.

I got your letter. I understand about Ramji. His nature is exactly as you describe it. What can we expect from one whom even a man like Lakshmidas found difficult to deal with? It is our penance to suffer him. The rest when we meet.

Tell me about the machine, too, when you come. If the engine-pump proves to be an enemy of the bullock, then we had better be careful about it.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9090
38. LETTER TO GANGABEHN VAIĐYA

October 1, 1935

CHI. GANGABEHN,

I got your letter. It will help me a lot. Send me the hakim’s name.

Bachubhai\(^1\) seems to be causing you much worry. Death, disease and decay are the inevitable lot of every creature that is born, no matter how many vaidyas like Charaka\(^2\) and hakims like Lukman come into the world and go out of it. It is our good fortune that God always keeps from us the time of death or of recovery from disease. It is because of that that we can make some limited efforts to fight against the two. Keep me informed about Bachubhai’s condition. Give him my blessings.

BLESSINGS FROM

BAPU

SMT. GANGABEHN VAIĐYA
RAMDAS BHIMJÍ’S BUNGALOW
BORIVLI

[From Gujarati]

_Bapuna patro—6: G.S. Gangabehnne, p. 85. Also C.W. 8819. Courtesy: Gangabehn Vaidya_

39. LETTER TO FULCHAND K. SHAH

October 1, 1935

BHAI FULCHAND,

I was very happy to have your letter; I had thought you had completely forgotten me.

All that I have to say to the friends of Harijans is that they should strengthen their faith in the purity of their task.

From a copy of the Gujarati: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

---

\(^1\) Bachubhai Bhimji Ramdas, addressee’s brother’s son

\(^2\) Principal exponent of the Ayurvedic system of medicine and author of _Charakasamhita_
40. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

WARDHA,
October 2, 1935

CHI. AMBUJAM.¹

I have your letter with Rs. 55. As I answer I call to mind a young man who lives on charity and wants me to supplement it for continuing his studies. I am reserving the Rs. 55 for that special purpose. As a result of my enquiry if I understand that he does not need any further assistance, I shall transfer the amount to the general Harijan cause.

I have your parcel of fruit also. I understand the depth of feeling behind your writing many returns of my birthday. But as you know well, not a minute will be added by the Creator to the allotted span of my life, no matter what human effort is put forth. Nevertheless while it lasts we shall always continue to pray and otherwise strive for one another’s good health and longevity.

I am glad you seem to have recovered completely from your last attack of fever.

Blessings from²

BAPU

SHRIMATI AMBUJAMMAL
AMIAD BAGH, LUZ
MYLAPORE, MADRAS

From the original: Ambujammal Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

¹ Daughter of S. Srinivasa Iyengar. The superscription in this and the other letters to the addressee is in Hindi.
² This is in Hindi.
41. LETTER TO PURUSHOTTAMDAS BUJNA

October 2, 1935

BHAJ PURUSHOTTAMDAS,

I have your letter. I am wholly opposed to Pandit Ramchandra’s fast because I find ignorance and violence in it. Therefore my approving of it is a total impossibility. I only appeal to the friends who write to me to persuade him to abandon the fast by giving him the assurance that an agitation would be taken up to stop animal sacrifice.

M. K. GANDHI

SHRI PURUSHOTTAMDAS BUJNA
5 ROYAL EXCHANGE PLACE
CALCUTTA

From the Hindi original: C.W. 9839. Courtesy: Bharat Kala Bhavan

42. THANKS

[After October 2, 1935]

I am grateful to the senders of wires, cables and letters received from friends in India and abroad containing their good wishes and blessings on my sixty-seventh birthday. I can only hope that the future such as may be in store for me will find me worthy of their precious gift. They will forgive me for my utter inability to send them personal acknowledgements.

Harijan, 12-10-1935

43. THANKS

[After October 2, 1935]

Many brothers and sisters from all provinces have sent me letters and telegrams of good wishes and blessings on my sixty-seventh birthday. Speech is not adequate to express my gratitude. I pray to 1 This appeared under “Notes”. Vide also the following item.

2 This appeared in Harijan Sevak, 12-10-1935, and a Gujarati version in Harijanbandhu, 13-10-1935.
God to make me worthy of the pure love showered and to remove my imperfections in order to make me a true servant of the public. I am aware that the letters and telegrams received are not merely formal but an expression of heart-felt sentiments.

As the greetings cannot possibly be individually acknowledged, I hope all the friends will be content with this.

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1102

44. LETTER TO VIYOGI HARI

[After October 2, 1935]

BHAI VIYOGI HARI,"

Do correct errors of style or grammar, if any.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1102

45. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

WARDHA,
October 3, 1935

CHI. AMALA,"

I was delighted to receive your postcard. It was wrong of you not to have got down when Kanti met you at the station. However, If you get something there it would be very good. Don’t be nervous and don’t be impatient. Take the money that may be offered to you by Hiralal. He will see you again. Write to me from time to time.

Blessings from*

BAPU

SMT. AMALA

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

---

1 This is written in the form of a note to the preceding item.
2 Editor, Harijan Sevak
3 The superscription and the subscription in this and the other letters to the addressee are in Hindi.
4 Ibid
MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL.

Your letters come in with clock-like regularity and they are such a blessing.

I see that Kamala is putting forth a very brave effort. It will be rewarded. You know my partiality for nature-cure methods. There are in Germany itself many nature-cure establishments. Kamala’s case may be past that stage. But one never knows. I know of cases which were reported to be for surgical treatment but which yielded to nature-cure treatment. I send you this experience of mine for what it is worth.

Your letter about the wearing of the next year’s crown was delightful. I was glad to have your consent. I am sure that it would solve many difficulties and it is the rightest thing that could have happened for the country. Your presidentship at Lahore was totally different from what it would be at Lucknow. In my opinion it was comparatively plain sailing at Lahore in every respect. It won’t be so in any respect at Lucknow. But those circumstances I cannot imagine anybody better able to cope with than you. May God give you all the strength to shoulder the burden.

I am going through your chapters as speedily as I can. They are to me of absorbing interest. More than that I must not say just now.

This letter carries the love of us to you all.

BAPU

PANDIT JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

Gandhi-Nehru Papers, 1935. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

---

1. The addressee was in Germany with his wife Kamala who was undergoing treatment in a sanatorium.
2. In 1929
3. The Congress session was scheduled to be held in April 1936.
4. Of autobiography
47. LETTER TO PURUSHOTTAM GANDHI

October 3, 1935

CHI. PURUSHOTTAM,

I got your letter. It was a clear one. I received a letter from Thakkar Bapa just before I got yours. He has placed the whole burden on me. I have accordingly written a long letter to Chhaganlal. I do not wish to put more pressure on Jivanlalbhai. Let him do as much as he can. It is not possible to change Chhaganlal’s methods very much now. He can spend his energy in doing service, and Thakkar Bapa is in love with him. It is natural, therefore, that he should have full confidence in himself. Let him find out a president and carry on the work. Thakkar Bapa’s suggestion is that either Nanalal or Narandas should become the president. But Narandas and Chhaganlal will not team up well. The two follow their own methods of work and, therefore, the one cannot be president over the other. Even if that is possible, however, I wish to get Narandas over here if some other arrangement can be made for his parents. Chhaganlal simply cannot leave Kathiawar at present. I am sending your letter to him. Try and discuss the matter with him to the extent you can. Our duty is to serve the Harijans and we have to solve this problem only with a view to finding how best we can do it. Your own dissatisfaction certainly does not mean that you wish to give up Harijan work. On the contrary you also have the same problem, namely, what contribution you can make to the solution of the difficulty which has arisen.

Write to me from time to time.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II

1 Amritlal V. Thakkar
48. LETTER TO RAJARAM R. BHOLE

WARDHA,
October 4, 1935

MY DEAR RAJARAM,

I have your letter. I appreciate your frankness. I can understand your desire to get good government service and I quite believe that your having anything to do with the Sangh or me is bound to affect your chances. It is wisdom to face facts however painful they may be. You will, however, continue to write to me from time to time and consult your health no matter what you decide to do.

Savant¹ was here for a week. He seemed to enjoy his time here. All of us liked him very much.

Yours,
BAPU

SJT. RAJARAM BHOLE
MINERVA TALKIES
POONA CITY

From the original: R. R. Bhole Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

49. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

WARDHA,
October 4, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

You must have seem what I have written to Mathew². Let Lilavati come. We may give her as much work as she is willing to do. I had a letter form Harilal. He has asked for permission to come here and for railway fare. Give him the enclosed letter³. During the charkha week, ¹ K. S. Savant, a Harijan sculptor, to whom Gandhiji gave a testimonial; vide “A Testimonial”, 30-9-1935.

² P. G. Mathew
³ Not available

VOL. 68 : 23 SEPTEMBER, 1935 - 15 MAY, 1936 37
about 50,000 rounds of yarn was spun here. Some persons, besides taking part in non-stop spinning, also spun sometimes for eight hours at a stretch. They showed great keenness. Manu was one of them.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Jamnalalji has arrived here. I talked to him. He is eager to know your decision. He wishes to merge the Mahila Ashram and the Kanya Ashram into one and hand over full charge to you. This suggestion was mine. If you have already discussed the matter with Jamnadas and if you can get the whole-hearted consent of your parents, send me a wire. It will be enough if you are able to take a decision for coming. It will not matter if you take some time to come. Once I know your decision, I can make definite arrangements.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8478. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

50. LETTER TO SHARDA C. SHAH

October 4, 1935

CHI. SHARDA.¹

I had given up hope of having a letter form you. I think of you quite often. If you wish, you can derive some consolation from the thought that you are not the only one who avoids writing to me. You wrote me a letter if only after nine months. Narayandas of course kept me informed about your helath. I was also informed about your activities.

Now, if you are not able to study there I wish you joined the Vidyapith where at present all facilities are available and many of your friends are studying. But I make one condition which you must fulfil, and is it you should not be separated from your parents. Try to gain as much as you can by remaining wherever they are. Your helath is my main consideration in laying down this condition. In spite of your staying there, you will be able to improve your English by your own effort, although Mathew might leave. Since you are not keen about passing examinations, you can conveniently take up the subjects of your liking taught in Sushilabehn’s school. Moreover, you will be able to have an easy influence on the girls attending that school. I have no fear of your being tempted by the happy-go-lucky tendency of the girls attending the school. Nor do I think you have.

¹ Daughter of Chimanlal Shah

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C.W. 9969. Courtesy: Shardabehn G. Chokhawala

51. THREE QUESTIONS

Shri Gopabandhu Choudhury writing from Bari, Cuttack, sends the following three questions:

1. In self-sufficing khadi what should be the price of surplus khadi?

2. If a villager has cotton but no spinners to give him the requirements of his family and he wants to have his cotton spun for his own family requirements by his co-villagers or neighbouring villagers, what should be the wage? Will the proposed living wage for commercial khadi be applicable here? Or, will it be left to mutual adjustment?

3. What should be the wage when the spinner has no cotton of her own and she spins not for wages in cash for living but for cotton and that also till she earns a quantity sufficient for her cloth need?

The price of surplus khadi passing through the A.I.S.A. can only be the same as that of any other in the same province. Now that for the most part khadi sales, except for the requirements of cities, will be confined to the province where it is manufactured, the prices in different provinces will perhaps vary more than they do now. But there can not be any distinction between surplus khadi and any other. Indeed all khadi can only be surplus khadi, for khadi will not be accepted by the Association or its branches from anyone who is not himself or herself a full wearer of khadi. Of course the rule may have to be relaxed during the transition stage.

On the analogy of the first answer, there is no doubt that so far as the Association is concerned it must pay all spinners alike. But the Association will not regulate the dealings between spinners themselves. They must be allowed to adjust their own mutual relations. Any other policy must fail.
In the third case also the same principle applies as in the first two. The thing to remember is that the Association will be responsible for the payment of the minimum subsistence wage where it is itself concerned. If its policy becomes popular and therefore general, no doubt it will be difficult if not impossible for anyone to get things done for less wages. And the co-operation between A.I.S.A. and A.I.V.I.A. may become so powerful that wages in every other department will at once be levelled up to their standard. The success of the effort will depend upon the hearty response from the buying public. If they will realize that they may no longer exploit the poor villagers on whom depends their existence, the problem of unemployment and semi-starvation will be automatically solved.

_Harijan, 5-10-1935_

52. VACATE KAVITHA

Sjt. A. V. Thakkar says in a letter received last week:

There is no help like self-help. God helps those who help themselves. If the Harijans concerned will carry out their reported resolve to wipe the dust of Kavitha off their feet, they will not only be happy themselves but they will pave the way for others who may be similarly treated. If people migrate in search of employment, how much more should they do so in search of self-respect? I hope that well-wishers of Harijans will help these poor families to vacate inhospitable Kavitha.

_Harijan, 5-10-1935_

53. A KNOTTY QUESTION

Since the talk of the rise in the wages of spinners khadi-lovers are filled with all kinds of vague fears. For instance, they fear a fall in the public demand for khadi in view of a rise in its price. I am hoping that the public will appreciate the little rise that must take place in the price of khadi. They have hitherto benefited by the continuous reduction in prices which hitherto it has been the aim of the Association to achieve by extraordinary effort in the direction. The price of khadi

---

1 Not reproduced here. Amritlal V. Thakkar had written that Harijans in Kavitha, a village in Ahmedabad district of Gujarat, had been subjected to great hardships by caste Hindus and therefore they had decided to vacate the village. _Vide_ also “Our Duty”, 31-8-1935.
has been never so low as it is today. And yet the sales have gone down owing to want of propaganda. If some systematic propaganda is carried on without increasing administrative expenses, I have little doubt that the sales of khadi can be increased in spite of the rise that will take place in the prices.

But it is well to be prepared for the worst. The Association must not be deterred from doing the just thing by the spinners for fear of the public demand falling. It must, however, if need be, remove from its list of spinners those who do not need the support of spinning for their food. There are hundreds, if not thousands, of spinners who spin for gaining a few pice not for buying food, but for buying tobacco, bangles or the like. If there is pressure, these may be told to abstain from competition with those who need coppers for their food. The vast majority of spinners are such. The question, therefore, for workers is to find who are the needy ones in terms of the Association scheme. From the definition will be excluded those petty cultivators who employ labour and who are not ordinarily in want of food and clothing and who are not obliged to sell their holdings or other property to buy food with. But it will strain every nerve to give spinning work or other work accessory to spinning, assuring for every one of the occupations not less than a minimum subsistence wage at the rate of eight hours a day, to all those landless and propertyless workers who would starve partially or wholly but for the work found for them by the A.I.S.A.or the A.I.V.I.A. Conversely, these Associations will not concern themselves—not for want of will but for want of sheer ability—with those who eke out a living in some other way. If these bodies succeed to the full in their mission, they will have not only fulfilled their mission but they will have indirectly helped all the other needy ones and turned their lives of blank despair into those of bright hope.

_Harijan_, 5-10-1935
54. NOTES

TREE COTTON AND SPINNING

Of Shrimati Kiranprava Chaudhuri of Noakhali, who was good enough to send me a beautiful specimen of khadi woven from yarn of her own spinning, a friend of hers writes:

I congratulate this sister on her devotion to khadi. Her emphasis on growing tree cotton is supported by several khadi experts throughout India. The experiment is worth making on a fairly large scale all over India. Evidently it does not require any expense worth the name. And if it is true that tree cotton does not need carding, it must mean a great advantage over the ordinary plant cotton. I would like those who spin tree cotton to send me their experiences and if possible samples of their cotton and yarn, as also the seeds.

HOW TO PRESERVE GUR

A correspondent sends the following useful recipe for preserving gur:

Harijan, 5-10-1935

55. LETTER TO BHAGWANJI A. MEHTA

MAGANWADI, WARDHA,
October 5, 1935

BHAI BHAGWANJI,

I have your letter. I have sent it to Devchandbhai. I am not at all fit for such matters now. I don’t get even a single minute free. I understand what you say regarding your daughters.

Vandemataram from
MOHANDAS

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5828. Also C.W. 3051. Courtesy: Bhagwanji A. Mehta

1 The letter is not reproduced here.
2 The letter is not reproduced here. The correspondent had written that jaggery could be preserved during rainy season in gunny bags with cloth lining, stored under wheat straw.
56. LETTER TO CHANDAN PAREKH

October 5, 1935

CHI. CHANDU,

I got your letter. I understand what you say. As far as I can help it, I would not give you the trouble of coming to me. But if I am obliged to do so, you may be sure that it will be for your own good, for the sake of . . . 1 whom up to now you have respected as your guru and father and for the sake of Shankar2 who is going to be your companion for this life and for all your lives to come. You are like a daughter to me, Shankar is like a son and . . . is an old co-worker. He is a trustee of a big national institution. For the present I will content myself with a few questions.

If you stick to every word of your letter to Kishorelalbhai, then what about your letter to Manubhai? How do you reconcile the two? Kishorelalbhai wrote that letter at my instance. I wanted to save my time. Besides, in your letter to Kishorelalbhai written by you on your own, you had offered to answer any questions that he might ask. That is why he wrote those letters to you and asked some questions. It was formal courtesy on Kishorelalbhai’s part to say that you were not bound to answer them, and it was obviously your duty to answer them, if not for anybody else’s sake certainly for Shankar’s sake. But don’t mind that you didn’t answer them. Now please reply to this letter and answer the other questions, too, that Kishorelalbhai has asked. Do so without fear and with the God of Truth as your witness.

Blessings form
BAPU

Form a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 936. Courtesy: Satish D. Kalelkar

57. LETTER TO BHUJANGILAL CHHAYA

October 5, 1935

CHI. BHUJANGILAL,

I got your letter. Please take whatever step you do after the most careful deliberation and with the utmost courtesy. I do not understand

---

1 This name has been omitted in this and subsequent letters to the addressee.
2 Shankar alias Satish, elder son of D. B. Kalelkar how you can now break off the engagement to which you had given your consent. It is a grievous sin to act against the wishes of one’s parents unless a great moral issue is involved. When such an issue may be considered to be involved is for you to judge. I can do nothing form here. All those who, after a superficial study of my life, take any hasty step in imitation of me feel frustrated afterwards and many of them even repent their actions. See that such a thing never happens in your case.

Blessings form

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2595

58. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

October 7, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

I have hardly time to give you a line. But I must. Day by day I must deny myself more and more the pleasure of writing love-letters, if I am to preserve my health and cope with the ever-increasing calls on my time. I have to lay the axe somewhere. It has to fall on the correspondence, I much fear.

Yes, you will share apples with me or the like when these come your way without having to buy. I know there [is] little logic about it.
But it is some restraint on my greed and if you like yours also—mine to take and yours to give. We won’t quarrel about which is worse. It would be well for us both to give it [up] simultaneously and thus avoid at least one cause of war between us.

Yes, Ba is happy that she finds herself among her grand children and their mother.

The enclosed to P [yarelal] and D [evdas].

Love to you all.

BAPU

SMT. RAJKUMARI AMRIT KAUR
MANORVILLE, SIMLA W.

From the original: C.W. 3554. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6363
59. LETTER TO GANGABEHN VAIDYA

WARDHAGANI,
October 9, 1935

CHI. GANGABEHN,

It is a difficult time for you. Tell Bachubhai that he should not lose his peace of mind in spite of his painful condition. Our faith is tested only in adversity. Do drop me a few lines from time to time. Nath’s presence there must be a great support for you.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

60. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

WARDHA,
[October 10, 1935]²

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

I wanted to write to you on Sunday but I was so busy that I simply could not do it. That was to be in answer to your letter enclosing copy of your letter to Agatha. Yours to Agatha gave me an insight into the working of your mind which I would not miss for anything. She fully deserved that frankness. I can endorse most of your sentiments. You do not know that I have written to her more than once in much the same strain though in my own way and my own language. Nevertheless if Kamala shows distinct signs of improvement and if you are free to go [to] London and the way is open, I would like you to see the big ones, open yourself out to them even as you have to Agatha.

But your letter received yesterday shows that you may not leave Kamala’s bedside just yet. After all you have been freed for that

¹ Kedarnath Kulkarni, Kishorelal Mashruwala’s guru
² A part of this letter is available in Mahadev Desai’s Diary under this date. The original, which is damaged here, however bears the date 18-10-1935.
³ Agatha Harrison purpose and if Providence keeps you chained to Kamala’s bed, we must not grumble. You have gone there to see her through the terrible ordeal. How I wish I was there to share your burden and cheer Kamala! As I saw her for two days in Bombay before her departure, I observed that she never had so much peace of mind as she seemed to enjoy then. Her faith in the benevolence of God, she said, was never so bright as then. Her mental disturbance had vanished and she did not mind what happened to her. She went to Europe because you all wished it; it seemed to be her obvious duty to do so. If she lives, she will live for greater service than she has yet rendered. If she dies, she will do so to come down to earth with a body more fitted for her task than the one she has today.

It is well too that Indu’s literary studies remain suspended for a while. For me, she is having a training that is of far greater value than any she would have in a college. She is having her training in the University of Nature. She may give the finishing touch by completing her literary studies.

I am going through your chapters with the deepest interest. I should like to finish them at a single sitting as Mahadev did and as Khurshed almost did. I have no such good luck. I must reserve my opinion till I have reached the last chapter. I am thankful that you have sent them to me.

I am not going to talk to you about the politics. It is enough for my purpose that you will shoulder the burden, if it falls to your lot.
That it will, seems to me to be a foregone conclusion.

You will read the accompanying to Kamala, if you think fit. Indu used to write to me a few lines when you were not there. Now I suppose she thinks she is absolved from the task!

Love.

BAPU

[PS.]

You must excuse my obstinacy in writing with village ink, village reed on village paper.

Also manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

1 Indira, addressee’s daughter
2 Dadabhoy Naoroji’s granddaughter
61. LETTER TO KAMALA NEHRU

October 10, 1935

CHI. KAMALA,

What can I write to you except to say that we remember you every day? May God give you peace whatever be the circumstances. Have no worry for anything.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Hindi]
From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

62. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

October 10, 1935

CHI. SHARMA,

I got the letter you wrote prior to reaching Boston; it was extremely good. You must have got over the disappointment of not receiving while in Boston any letter of mine. I could not help it, nor was there anything fresh to write about. You have the opportunity to write about fresh matters and you have been using it freely so far. I am fully hopeful that such letters will continue to come. You must be writing to Draupadi too. I am passing on your letters for her perusal. She is unable to write frankly. I do not mind her not writing [to me] as long as she and the children are happy, though I shall persist in my effort of drawing her to me. I send you the letter\(^2\) for London that you had asked for. Be in no haste to leave America, but you may if there is nothing worth learning or if the expenses are too high. Do what you think best. There was a birthday greetings cable from New York. The name ‘Sharma’ was also in it, I suppose it was you. Do give me word-pictures of the people you meet.

I send only one letter for London, it will do.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsh, between pp. 198 and 199

1. Addressee’s wife
2. Letter of introduction addressed to Agatha Harrison, which is not available
63. TELEGRAM TO H.N. KUNZRU

October 11, 1935

KUNZRU
CARE “HITAVADA”
NAGPUR

YOUR AKOLA LETTER CLEAR INDICATION EXCLUDE BEANS GREENS.
CONFINE ONLY HONEY FRUIT JUICES WITH WITHOUT SODA INTERMITTENT HIPBATHS. AWAITING DAY’S REPORT TOMORROW.

GANDHI

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

64. MESSAGE TO INDIAN IMMIGRANTS OF SURINAME

MAGANWADI, WARDHA,
October 11, 1935

Pandit Bhavani Bhikh Mishra from the Dutch Guiana came to see me along with Shri Benarsidas Chaturvedi, and asked for a message for the Indian immigrant brethren of Suriname. All I have to say to you is to live in unity, taking care to lead a pure life by observing chastity of body, mind and speech. You should resort to Hindi-Hindustani to communicate with one another and open Hindi schools and libraries.

M. K. GANDHI

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Surinameke Pravasi Bharatiyonke Nam

65. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL JOSHI

October 11, 1935

CHI. CHHAGANLAL,

I got your letter. Encouraged by you, I am pressing Jivanlalbhai. I am sending your letter to him. I will write to you after I receive his reply.

If Pranjivan Joshi has already been relieved I will not waste time in inquiring into the matter now.

Let me know the result of your experiments in making manure out of bones and carcasses.
You shouldn’t have had the difficulty which you had regarding the use of hand-made paper. The argument has often been advanced against the use of khadi and we have solved the difficulty in but one way. Though khadi is relatively costly, those who have understood its importance have found a way of making it cheap for themselves. Many of us, for instance, reduced the consumption of cloth after they started using costly khadi and on the whole effected some saving. Those who could not reduce consumption saved on other items but did not accept defeat. Similarly, when we resolved to use hand-made paper, we reduced writing or included more matter in a given amount of space than previously. We stopped using envelopes costing four or five pice and started using postcards costing three pice only. I resumed here the practice of writing on small slips of paper, which I used to follow in jail. On the balance, therefore, our expenditure on postage has not increased.

I do not know how things are in Delhi. But I hope Malkani has started practising economy. What we give to the Government is in fact given to ourselves. It is, therefore, not right to think that we should spend less on postage because the money goes to the Government. Even when the Government will be in our hands, it will certainly not be proper for public workers to spend extravagantly on postage. In jail, we tried to keep the consumption of everything to a minimum because we thought that all things in the country belonged to us. For, no matter who ran the Government, everything it owned belonged to us, the people. The money that we give to the Government is spent for Government purposes.

Because the Government money is spent extravagantly when the Government is in foreign hands, it does not mean that such money ceases to be ours. It is our duty of course to check its extravagance. But so long as it continues, it is we, the people, who provide the money in one way or another. Hence the argument of increase in postage should not be advanced against the use of hand-made paper. In propagating the use of such paper, the expenditure on postage may perhaps go up in the beginning. Even then, if the use of hand-made paper is likely to increase through our example we ought not to grudge the additional expense on postage. Those teachers who see the moral necessity of manual work will themselves find out some crafts which they can take up. Nobody else can advise them in this matter.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5536
66. LETTER TO BALIBEHN M. ADALAJA

October 11, 1935

CHI. BALI¹.

I got your letter. You did well in going to Bombay. I know about Tulsidas’s illness. I had written to him. Now you should write to him. What can we do about Harilal? It seems he is heading for complete ruin. He rarely writes to me. He is the fruit of some sins I must have committed. How can we blame him? Can one ever change one’s nature?

Manu² has returned. She got quite ill in Delhi. She is well now. As you know she is lazy about writing letters. Kishorelalbhai has asked for her hand for Surendra, his nephew, son of Balubhai. Ba and I would very much welcome this alliance. If you two sisters³ and Kunvarji⁴ approve of it, I will arrange the betrothal. I hope you remember Surendra who was in the Ashram. He is in Bombay at present. Manu has left the decision to me.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 1552. Courtesy: Manubehn S. Mashruwala

67. LETTER TO PURUSHOTTAM G. PANSE

October 11, 1935

CHI. BHAU,

I do reply to your letters. Only one has remained unanswered. Your letters are very frank and satisfactory. The expenses should be accounted for but not worried over. The money spent now is only for the sake of service and I shall take as much work from you. Regard it your duty to make yourself strong.

¹ Sister of Harilal Gandhi’s wife
² Harilal Gandhi’s daughter
³ The addressee and Kunibehn Maniar
⁴ Kunvarji Parekh, husband of Rami, Harilal Gandhi’s elder daughter

50 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
I am trying to send Balkoba\(^1\) there and have written to Gaurishankerbhai.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 6754. Also C.W. 4497. Courtesy: Purushottam G. Panse

68. LETTER TO A VILLAGE WORKER \(^2\)

[Before October 12, 1935]

You will borrow cotton this season, but next year you must grow your own cotton. Anyone will permit you to grow a few cotton trees in his field. The seed should be the tree cotton or devakapas. It lasts for ten to fifteen years and the cotton, I am told, does not need to be carded. I have not used to cotton myself but propose to do so.

You are right that I did not like your leaving your place even for a couple of days. I did not like it because it is a pastime with you, and the best discipline for you is to settle down quietly and work away uninterrupted for a year. A villager absorbed in his work has no time to go on friendly visits. We must try to emulate him. You must therefore make it a rule not to move out beyond a radius of ten miles. It is impossible to get under the skin of the villagers until one lives in their midst all the twenty-four hours for an unbroken period. The moment you relax the rule, you will find excuses for going. To be free from filth and the dog nuisance is certainly necessary, but one may not run away from them. Everyone cannot go out of his house and find conveniences for himself. One has also to cultivate that sense of cleanliness in others. One must not therefore shun people. One cannot serve them from a safe distance. I know this is easier said than done, and if you cannot sleep in the midst of these nuisances you will continue to repair to the fields. I do not want you to do anything at the risk of your health.

Yes, you may have in course of time a grass hut, but it should not be far from the village. The people must be free to call upon us at all hours of the day and night. We must always be within easy call.

---

\(^1\) Balkrishna Bhave, younger brother of Vinoba Bhave

\(^2\) Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter”. The addressee, “one of the best workers working in a Gujarat village”, had restricted his needs to Rs. 5 a month.
The fact that you leave the village at 7 p.m. every day means that you deprive the villagers of the chance of talking to you and seeking your advice after supper, and that you will not hold even an hour’s night-school. You see the difficulty of Ashram inmates serving in the villages. The Ashram life and rules might easily become a luxury. We must realize that the villagers do not enjoy most of the amenities we enjoy with all our much-talked-of simplicity and renunciation. Man is naturally apt to turn every renunciation into a joy. Sannyasa which cannotes the highest renunciation has become today the biggest source of laziness and indulgence for many!

The scavengers will slowly understand your work of love. You must make them understand that you do not want to oust them, but to improve their efficiency. You must also find out for them more sources of income.

Because my recent renunciation was a source of pang, it need not have grieved you. The pang was a source of joy, and such pangs are inevitable.¹

_Harijan, 12-10-1935_

69. _NOTES_

TO PRIVATE CORRESPONDENTS

As time advances, my private correspondence too keeps on advancing at an accelerated speed and leaves its adversary for behind. My capacity to overtake this ever-increasing correspondence decreases in the same ratio as the increase in the volume of my correspondence. The mischief is aggravated by the new tasks that have come to me unsolicited. The most absorbing and fascinating is the work of village regeneration or, to adopt a current word, rejuvenation. The fascination increases with a growing perception of the difficulty of the work. My mind is living in the villages. They are calling me to bury myself in them. I do not know how this internal struggle will end. Difficulties are already cropping up to prevent such a burial. Much against my will I have been obliged to make a promise to shoulder a burden in Gujarat early next year. I know what it will bring in its trail. God’s will be done. But if a breakdown is not to take place, ¹ The addressee had referred to Gandhiji’s renunciation; _vide_ “A Renunciation”, 21-9-1935.

I must cut off as much private correspondence as possible and deal with the most necessary part of it through deputy. Then only can I at all hope to cope with the increasing call of Harijan. The extent of its scope has meant much additional burden on both Mahadev Desai and me. If the readers are to receive justice, we must free ourselves for it more than we have done hitherto.

This is, therefore, written to invite the co-operation of my many correspondents. Let them be assured that I am not tired of the correspondence. I have prized their confidence beyond measure. It has given me an insight into human nature and its ultimate nobility I should not have had otherwise. Such correspondence I have carried on for over a generation. My writings and publication of some of my correspondence provide sufficient help to those who will know my opinion on a given problem. I know that nothing can be a substitute for personal contact. But in the nature of things it is a perishable article, very fragile. I would urge correspondents to deny themselves the temptation of referring to me on all kinds of problems. Let them take the trouble of solving them themselves with such help as writings on ethics and eternal verities can give. They will find that they will do better in the end than if they would make of me a dictionary of reference on every occasion. Any way let my private correspondents not be surprised if they find that they no longer hear from me directly or that their letters remain unanswered or are answered on my behalf.

DUTY OF SPEAKING GENTLY

A Gujarati correspondent writes:

Speaking unnecessarily loud affects the health of hearers. In this country and among us, women and children, more than men, are in the habit of speaking much louder than we need and a false sense of delicacy makes most of us, even though we may be aware of the noise and its ill effects, tolerate such speaking which really grates on our ears. We would not protest. This may be a sign of our ahimsa but I would not classify it under ‘courtesy’. Model Montessory schools can be abodes of peace, not so our so-called homes, much less our institutions or our public roads. You advise people not to tolerate insanitation. Say you not do likewise about noises that are almost equally injurious to health? I am quite clear that gentle speech should have the same place in our system of education as sanitation. May I warn you that you are yourself often guilty of tolerating
I must plead guilty to the charge. What the correspondent says is largely true. I have often tolerated maddening noises which could have been easily avoided. I am well aware that they are injurious to health. The object of giving place to this correspondent, however, is to draw the attention of teachers to this national defect and invite them to make a beginning by restraining their pupils from making noises and speaking loud in class-rooms and outside. In railway trains these noises are simply maddening. They are made in total disregard of the feelings of fellow-passengers. Many indulge in loud talks which they can easily carry on in gentle tones. In this connection I am reminded of the meetings of Sikhs in which whenever necessity arises someone on the platform puts up a board which is fastened onto a long bamboo containing the words “Please avoid loud talking” or “Peace Peace”. Some such device can be adopted by passengers who notice such noises.

WASTE INTO WEALTH

Those who have been following what is being written in these columns on balanced diet will not have failed to understand the vast importance of bran which we simply throw away and give to our cattle. I do not grudge the cattle what they get. But it seems to me that we are thoughtless about cattle-feeding as about many other things. Cattle do not need bran so much as green fodder and seed cakes which they can easily divide with us if we will revert to the village oil-presses. But we need every ounce of the bran of wheat and rice if we are to become efficient instruments of production not to be beaten on this earth by any race, and yet without the necessity of entering into killing competition or literally killing one another. But I must not prolong what is becoming a heavy preface to a simple recipe which a friend has passed on to me for treating wheat bran. He is obliged to his sister for it. Here it is:

Grind sufficient wheat coarse to give you one pound of bran which you get by passing the meal through a medium sieve. Add 1\frac{1}{2} lb. of cold water, eight tolas of pulverized clean gur and half a tea-spoonful of clean salt to the bran and stir well. Pour the mixture in a flat vessel, cover and let it stand for full half hour. Then put a well-fitting tava or dish on the pot.
containing the mixture and stand it on hot coal and heap hot coals on top. Keep the pot between the two fires for full five minutes. Then transfer the mixture onto an iron _kadai_ and roast on a slow fire till the water is fairly dried out. Then take the pot off the _chula_ and let the contents cool. Then strain them through a sieve with clean hands and the contents will drop on a clean cloth or board in the form of threads. Expose these to the sun till thoroughly dry. These can be taken as they are or with hot or cold milk or hot water or whey. Two ounces will make a good breakfast and is claimed to be a valuable aid to remove constipation—the bane of civilized life and precursor of many diseases.

FOR FOUR RUPEES A MONTH

Dr. Aykroyd, Director of Nutrition Research at Coonoor, recently delivered an instructive lecture at Bangalore. From the lecture as published in the daily Press it appears that a well balanced diet need not cost more than Rs. 4 per month. Thus the lecturer said that:

The dietary requirements of an adult man per day were 16 ounces of _ragi_ ¹, two ounces of soya bean ², an ounce of jaggery, four ounces each of spinach and amaranth, an ounce each of potatoes and colocasia, 1.5 ounces of coconut oil and six ounces of buttermilk—all costing about two annas.

Harijan, 12-10-1935

70. CONSOLATION FOR THE AGED AND THE INFIRM

Dr. Sir P.C. Ray is 75 years old. He has been a weakling in body from youth upward. Yet he is foremost among the chemists of the world and retains to the present day the vigour and energy of youth. His greed for service is insatiable. He never refuses to help people in distress, especially the student world. He is so generous that swindlers have been known successfully to have exploited his name. He has not minded this. He takes pride in his prodigality and turns away from those who plead with him to discriminate. He works away till late at night, keeps an open door, and has a smile for everybody. In spite of all this output of service why does he remain so fresh when many of ¹ The source has “16 ounces of soyya bean”, which is a slip; vide “A Correction”, 19-10-1935.

---

² Ibid
his contemporaries have either joined the majority or are too infirm to do any work? He gives the answer in a remarkable chapter he has written for the second volume of his autobiography. He had occasion to write to me on the event of my birthday. Without even mentioning (to him) the insignificant event (for am I not a youngster compared to him?), he quietly sends me the ‘foul’ proof of that chapter. It is so full of bright hope that I have no hesitation in sharing it with the readers especially old and infirm, though I have no doubt that young people can read it with profit. To the reasons Dr. Ray has given for his energy in old age I would add his irrepressible humour and his boyishness. I have seen him shamelessly mount on the shoulders of his bulky friends like Sjt. Jamnalalji or Maulana Shaukat Ali and cracking all kinds of joke, forgetting for the moment that the world knows him as a serious scientist and Principal of a great college of science of which he is virtually also the creator.

_Harijan, 12-10-1935_

71. THE GREATEST FORCE

Non-violence is at the root of every one of my activities and therefore also of the three public activities on which I am just now visibly concentrating all my energy. These are untouchability, khadi, and village regeneration in general. Hindu-Muslim unity is my fourth love. But so far as any visible manifestation is concerned, I have owned defeat on that score. Let the public, however, not assume therefrom that I am inactive. If not during my lifetime, I know that after my death both Hindus and Mussalmans will bear witness that I had never ceased to yearn after communal peace.

Non-violence to be a creed has to be all-pervasive. I cannot be non-violent about one activity of mine and violent about others. That would be a policy, not a life-force. That being so, I cannot be indifferent about the war that Italy is now waging against Abyssinia. But I have resisted most pressing invitation to express my opinion and give a lead to the country. Self-suppression is often necessary in the interest of Truth and non-violence. If India had as a nation imbibed the creed of non-violence, corporate or national, I should have had no

1. The extracts from the chapter are not reproduced here.
2. The source has “and”.
3. _Vide “Message on Italo-Abyssinian Crisis”, 2-8-1935._ hesitation in giving a lead. But in spite of a certain hold I have on the millions of this country, I know the very grave and glaring limitation of that hold. India had an unbroken tradition of non-violence from times immemorial. But at no time in her ancient history, as far as I know it, has it had complete non-violence in action pervading the whole land. Nevertheless, it is my unshakable belief that her destiny is to deliver the message of non-violence to mankind. It may take ages to come to fruition. But so far as I can judge, no other country will precede her in the fulfilment of that mission. Be that as it may, it is seasonable to contemplate the implications of that matchless force.
Three concrete questions were, the other day, incidentally asked by friends:

1. What could ill-armed Abyssinia do against well-armed Italy, if she were non-violent?
2. What could England, the greatest and the most powerful member of the League, do against determined Italy, if she (England) were non-violent in your sense of the term?
3. What could India do, if she suddenly became non-violent in your sense of the term?

Before I answer the question let me lay down five simple axioms
of non-violence as I know it:

1. Non-violence implies as complete self-purification as is humanly possible.
2. Man for man the strength of non-violence is in exact proportion to the ability, not the will, of the non-violent person to inflict violence.
3. Non-violence is without exception superior to violence, i.e., the power at the disposal of a non-violent person is always greater than he would have if he was violent.
4. There is no such thing as defeat in non-violence. The end of violence is surest defeat.
5. The ultimate end of non-violence is surest victory—if such a term may be used of non-violence. In reality where there is no sense of defeat, there is no sense of victory.

The foregoing questions may be answered in the light of these axioms.

1. If Abyssinia were non-violent, she would have no arms, would want none. She would make no appeal to the League or any other power for armed intervention. She would never give any cause for complaint. And Italy would find nothing to conquer if Abyssinians would not offer armed resistance, nor would they give co-operation willing or forced. Italian occupation in that case would mean that of the land without its people. That, however, is not Italy’s exact object. She seeks submission of the people of the beautiful land.

2. If Englishmen were as a nation to become non-violent at heart, they would shed imperialism, they would give up the use of arms. The moral force generated by such an act of renunciation would stagger Italy into willing surrender of her designs. England would then be a living embodiment of the axioms I have laid down. The effect of such conversion would mean the greatest miracle of all ages. And yet if non-violence is not an idle dream, some such thing has some day to come to pass somewhere. I live in that faith.

3. The last question may be answered thus. As I have said, India as a nation is not non-violent in the full sense of the term. Neither has she any capacity for offering violence—not because she has no arms. Physical possession of arms is the least necessity of the brave. Her non-violence is that of the weak. She betrays her weakness in many of her daily acts. She appears before the world today as a decaying nation. I mean here not in the mere political sense but essentially in the non-violent, moral sense. She lacks the ability of offer physical resistance. She has no consciousness of strength. She is conscious only of her weakness. If she were otherwise, there would be no communal problems, nor political. If she were non-violent in the consciousness of her strength, Englishmen would lose their role of distrustful conquerors. We may talk politically as we like and often legitimately blame the English rulers. But if we, as Indians, could but for a moment visualize ourselves as a strong people disdaining to strike, we should cease to fear Englishmen whether as soldiers, traders or administrators, and they to distrust us. Therefore if we became truly non-violent we should carry Englishmen with us in all we might do. In other words, we being millions would be the greatest moral force in the world, and Italy would listen to our friendly word.

The reader has, I hope, by now perceived that my argument is but a feeble and clumsy attempt to prove my axioms which to be such must be self-proved.

Till my eyes of geometrical understanding had been opened, my brain was swimming, as I read and re-read the twelve axioms of Euclid. After the opening of my eyes geometry seemed to be the easiest science to learn. Much more so is the case with non-violence. It is a matter of faith and experience, not of argument beyond a point. So long as the world refuses to believe, she must await a miracle, i.e., an ocular demonstration of non-violence on a mass scale. They say this is against human nature—non-violence is only for the individual. If so, where is the difference in kind between man and beast?

_Harijan_, 12-10-1935

72. SPEECH AT A.I.S.A. COUNCIL MEETING

WARDHA,

[On or before _October 13, 1935_]

We must once for all dismiss the thought of competing with futile soul-killing economics. Do you know the insidious way in which Japanese fents are glutting the market? Whereas less than five years ago they were a few thousand yards, they amount to millions of yards today. How can you compete with these? No, we must no longer aim at reducing the prices in order to meet this competition. We have all these years thought of the consumer and done precious little for the spinner, forgetting that the Association was a spinners’ association, not an association of consumers. We have to be the true representatives of the spinners which we have ceased to be. The result is that we have simply jogged on and relied on the political upheavals and indulged in a kind of gamble. ‘What is the use of all the fancy advertisements that you have been giving?’ I asked Jerajani. ‘We shall soon end in justifying the charge that we are maintaining the institution in order to provide work for the middle-class unemployed.’ It is therefore that I suggest that we should no more incur losses in order to exploit the neediest of our fellowmen. ‘In order to give a hundred women a satisfactory wage, you will run the risk of depriving thousands of them of employment?’ is the question that was put to me. I say it is a crisis that it is necessary to produce in order to get rid of a remittent fever. Our goal is to see a spinning-wheel in the

---

1. Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter”. Earlier, members had expressed their doubts and difficulties regarding “Gandhiji’s proposal for a new departure in the khadi policy”.

2. The A.I.S.A. Council met from October 11 to 13.

3. Vithaldas Jerajani
hands of every adult villager and a loom in every village. We may have produced millions of rupees worth of khadi but we have gone nowhere nearer the goal. I ask you to forget the cities and the consumer in the cities. Concentrate on making the thirty crores of our villagers produce and use their own khadi, and the one crore of the city-dwellers will automatically begin wearing khadi. Do not mind a temporary lull or a breakdown. If there is no demand, do not produce the supply. Where your bhandars are run at a loss close them down, and tell all those who care to have your khadi that you are prepared to get it made for them but only at the revised rates.

But I do not want to thrust my proposal on you. You may reject it, if it fails to carry conviction. Do not assume on your shoulders heavier responsibility than they can bear. Cut your coat according to your cloth. Let me tell you that in the production centre at Savli there are already spinners who are satisfying the conditions of the new wage and have begun to earn from three to four annas daily. Concentrate on self-sufficing khadi wherever it is possible, and a healthy khadi atmosphere will grow out of it. In Kathiawar, for instance, for a time they made desperate attempts to run several centres and to stimulate the sale of khadi thus produced. They have given it up now, and among the replies that Sjt. Shankerlal Banker has received is one from the Secretary of the Kathiawar Branch to the effect that he has no criticism to offer and no opinion to express on the new policy, inasmuch as all the production in that centre consists of self-sufficient khadi.¹

Harijan, 19-10-1935

73. SIXTY-THREE YEARS AGO AND TODAY

From a circular issued on February 24, 1872, we find that cotton used to be consumed in the following quantities in Vadod in Kathiawar:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Material</th>
<th>Quantity</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Twine</td>
<td>300 seers</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ropes and muzzles</td>
<td>250     ,</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Webbing</td>
<td>46      ,</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Indian-made cloth</td>
<td>2,000   ,</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

¹ For the resolutions adopted at the meeting; vide “A.I.S.A. Resolution”, 11-10-1935.
Mattresses 75
Sewing thread 50
Wicks for lamps 75
Sacred thread 4

2,800

10,000 seers [of cotton] was sent elsewhere. The same circular states that the spinning-wheel alone was used for spinning and women belonging to the Kanbi, Koli, Rajput, Vania, Brahmin, Khoja, Memon, Darji, Luhar, Suthar, Mochi, Ghanchi, Dhed, Bhangi and all other communities used to engage in spinning. The Dheds alone did the work of weaving with looms. Altogether, 53 spinning-wheels and 10 looms were in operation. The following is a communitywise break-up of the women who did the work of spinning:

11 Kanbi [peasant] 1 Brahmin
10 Koli [farm labourer] 4 Rajput
5 Soni [goldsmith] 1 Bhangi
1 Pinjara [Muslim carder] 1 Darji [tailor]
1 Bharwad [shepherd] 1 Luhar [blacksmith]
1 Khoja [Ismaili Muslim] 2 Mochi [cobbler]
8 Vania [bania] 3 Memon [Kathiawar Muslim]
1 Valand [barber] 1 Bawa [sadhu]
2 Suthar [carpenter] 1 Khavas [a mixed caste]

The gentleman who has sent this circular writes to say that not even two seers of cotton is spun now at a place where sixty-three years ago they used to spin 2,000 seers, not a single spinning-wheel plies, the few weavers who are there weave millyarn. The production of cotton in Vadod and Kathiawar has increased, not decreased. And the situation that obtains in the large industries is also to be found in the smallest industries. We can easily imagine how impoverished the people would become when they do not utilize the raw material grown in their vicinity but instead sell it to others. And this is what we actually see today. The small-scale industries which once flourished in the villages are no longer there. Hence men and women are unemployed for most of the time. And what else could the idle minds be if not the Devil’s workshops?

[From Gujarati]
Harijanbandhu, 13-10-1935
74. LETTER TO RABINDRANATH TAGORE

WARDHA,
October 13, 1935

DEAR GURUDEV,

Your touching letter was received only on 11th instant when I was in the midst of meetings. In the hope of delivering it to me personally Anil needlessly detained it. I hope he is now quite restored to health.

Yes, I have the financial position before me now. You may depend upon my straining every nerve to find the required money. I am groping. I am trying to find the way out. It will take some time before I can report the result of my search to you.

It is unthinkable that you should have to undertake another begging mission at your age. The necessary funds must come to you without your having to stir out of Santiniketan.¹

I hope you are keeping well. Padmaja² who was with you a few days ago is here for the day and has been telling me how you have aged.

With reverential love,

Yours,

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G.N. 2287

75. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

October 13, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

Your note on the position of women was received yesterday afternoon. I have gone through it. It does not admit of corrections. Your writing is always proper and easy to follow. The argument runs smooth. But it is not what I had expected. It is not a striking statement of the position. I now appreciate when you said, you had never had to perform such a mission before. That your presentation is not ¹ Rabindranath Tagore was touring with a ballet troupe to collect funds for the Visva-Bharati.

² Sarojini Naidu’s daughter impressive is no fault of yours. I do not want you to make another effort just now, on any account whatsoever. When you come here, we shall discuss the thing and I shall tell you what I would have liked. Then if you feel like it you will write something independently, perhaps for your Association.

I do not worry about Devdas. I know he would have done no better, if he was with me. And most certainly he would not have receivedacare which you and Shummy are able to give. My fear is that you are worrying unnecessarily.

I have been having many meetings just now—A.I.S.A., Hindi Sahitya Sammelan, etc. No attention can be paid to correspondence or any other thing in these circumstances.

Love.

BAPU
77. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

WARDHA,
October 14, 1935

CHI. MATHURADAS,

Here is a telegram from New York and the reply to it. Please copy it out on a telegraph form and send it. We do not have to pay any money as you will see. It is possible that as the cable went to Sabarmati the money also went there. But there should be some authority at Bombay Central. Of course, they may not accept it because the 14th is already over. Even then there is no harm. In that case we would be spared the trouble. We do not want to spend any money. If it cannot be done, return the telegram and the reply.

You will be well. Taramati and the children too will be well. Do not ask how burdened I am.⁴

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

78. STATEMENT TO THE PRESS

WARDHA,
October 15, 1935

With reference to Dr. Ambedkar’s speech at Yeoli, Mahatma Gandhi said:

The speech attributed to Dr. Ambedkar seems to be unbelievable. If, however, he has made such a speech and the conference adopted the resolution of complete severance and acceptance of any faith that would guarantee equality. I regard both as unfortunate events, especially when one notices that in spite of isolated events to the contrary, untouchability is on its last legs. I can understand the anger of a high-souled and highly educated person like Dr. Ambedkar over the atrocities as were committed in Kavitha and other villages.

⁴ This last sentence has been included in “Letter to Mathuradas Trikumji”, 14-10-1935
⁵ This appeared in Harijan, 19-10-1935, under the title “Unfortunate”.
⁶ On October 14 at the Bombay Presidency Depressed Classes Conference, Nasik, B.R. Ambedkar had said: “Because we have the misfortune to call ourselves Hindus, we are treated thus. If we were members of another faith none dare treat us so . . . Choose any religion which gives you equality of status and treatment.” On Ambedkar’s advice, the Conference unanimously passed a resolution urging complete severance of the Depressed Classes from the Hindu fold and their embracing any other religion which guaranteed them equal status and treatment with the other members of it.

But religion is not like a house or a cloak which can be changed at will. It is more an integral part of one’s self than of one’s body. Religion is the tie that binds one to one’s Creator and whilst the body perishes, as it has to, religion persists even after death. If Dr. Ambedkar has faith in God, I would urge him to assuage his wrath and reconsider the position and examine his ancestral religion on its own merits and not through the weakness of its faithless followers. Lastly, I am convinced that change of faith by him and those who passed the resolution will not serve the cause which they have at heart; for millions of unsophisticated, illiterate Harijans will not listen to him and them when they have disowned their ancestral faith, especially when it is remembered that their lives, for good or for evil, are intertwined with those of caste Hindus.

The Hitavada, 16-10-1935

79. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

October 15, 1935

CHI. AMBUJAM,

I have your well-written Hindi letter. You must get rid of your fever altogether. How I wish you were here! Just now the weather is very good. But I suppose that must not be.

The month of January I shall have to give to Gujarat. February will probably be devoted to Delhi. It is not so cold there at that time.

Vasumati is due here this week. Amtul Salaam and Prabhavati

1 Vide “Vacate Kavitha”, 5-10-1935.
2 On being asked by an Associated Press of India representative for his comments on this, Ambedkar said: “I have made up my mind to change my religion. I do not care if the masses do not come. It is for them to decide. . . Kavitha does not represent an isolated incident but it is the very basis of the system founded on the ancestral religion of the Hindus.”
are here and so is Ba. Devdas has now returned to Delhi. He still remains depressed.

Love.

BAPU

[PS.]

Did I ask to send me your recipe for rasam’? If not, I do so now. You may send me medical opinion on the quality of rasam.

From the original: Ambujammal Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

80. LETTER TO BALVANTSINHA

October 15, 1935

CHI. BALVANTSINHA,

You are right. I shall make some effort though who but Rama can undo the damage done! Let us see how He guides us.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1882

81. TELEGRAM TO RAJENDRA PRASAD

October 17, 1935

BABU RAJENDRA PRASAD
CARE CONGRESS
MADRAS

JAWAHRLAL MAY [HAVE] RECEIVED MOHANLAL NEHRU’S LETTER SWARAJ BHAWAN. WANTS DEFINITION DECISIVE ATTITUDE CONGREES COMMITTEE.

BAPU

From a copy: Pyarelal Papers.Courtesy: Pyarelal

1 A thin soup of tamarind and pulses
2 The addressee had requested Gandhiji to take better care of his already indifferent health.
3 Secretary, Board of Management, Swaraj Bhawan Trust; vide also the following item.
82. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

WARDHA,
October 17, 1935

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

Your very important letter to hand. I have wired¹ to Rajendra Babu about Swaraj Bhawan. I do not know what is happening. I am entirely of your opinion that the policy of the Committee should be strictly defined.

As to our attitude on the present world situation, I do not think there is want of appreciation of it. But it is our helplessness which imposes silence on us. There is no weakness either. It is merely a matter, if you will, of tactics in the best sense of the term. Anyway I have no sense in me of weakness. But I know that I cannot speak with effect at this juncture. I cannot give the lead without knowing what the people can do. I know what they should do. And what is true of me is perhaps equally true of the majority of our workers. But I have great faith in you in these matters. You have undoubtedly a much greater grasp of the situation than any one of us has, certainly than I can ever hope to have. Therefore you may be able to evolve a dignified formula for national self-expression in speech as well as in action—assuming of course that at the present moment direct action is ruled out.

Your paragraph about Kamala is somewhat disturbing. But we are prepared for these ups and downs. I must await your further contribution on the Constitution² before I say anything. I am glad I spent the money³ for putting you in possession of the Constitution as early as it was possible.

Love to you all.

Blessings from

BAPU

Gandhi-Nehru Papers, 1935. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

¹ Vide the preceding item.
² Congress constitution
³ The constitution was sent by air mail and the addressee had protested against this expenditure.
83. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

WARDHA,

October 18, 1935

DEAR AMALA,

Your letters are beginning to be sane and that shows that you are settling down. Now, don’t you be greedy. Be content with what you are getting. Rs. 50 plus Rs. 25 should be enough for you. It is good you have got into touch with Miss Chattopadhyaya. Whilst you are thus making fresh contacts and settling down, you must not think of coming here though of course you are free to come whenever you like. The conditions you know well by now.

Blessings from

BAPU¹

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

84. LETTER TO A UNIVERSITY STUDENT ²

[Before October 19, 1935]

You can serve the country:

1. By spinning daily even and strong yarn for the sake of Daridranarayana; by keeping a diary of the time for which you have spun, of the quantity spun, with its weight and count; and reporting the work to me every month. Yarn should be carefully collected and held at my disposal.

2. By daily selling some khadi on behalf of the local certified bhandar and by keeping a record of your daily sales.

3. By saving at least one pice per day.

4. By holding the collection at my disposal. The implication of the adjective ‘least’ should be understood, namely, that if you are able to save more, you should pour more into Daridranarayana’s chest.

¹ The subscription is in Gujarati.
² Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter”. The student had “expressed his keenness to serve during his spare time without prejudice to his studies”.

68

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
5. By visiting Harijan quarters in company with other students; and with your companions cleaning the quarters, befriending the children and giving them useful lessons in sanitation, hygiene, etc.

Then if you can save some more time, you should learn some village industries for future service of villagers after finishing your studies. When you have been able to do these things and have still time and ambition for doing more, consistently with your studies, you can ask me and I shall send you more suggestions.

_Harijan, 19-10-1935_

85. _SOYA BEANS_

It has been found that soya beans can be cooked whole and eaten like any other beans. Shri Narhar Bhave of Baroda, who has given his three gifted and gentle sons, Vinoba, Balkrishna and Shivaji, to national service, is himself a careful observer, 61 years old. He is living almost wholly on milk and six ounces of soya beans and is keeping perfect health and strength. He is of opinion that soya beans help him to avoid constipation which milk alone or milk taken in combination with cereals and vegetables could not do. Soya beans have in his opinion helped him also to avoid flatulence which other pulses or milk produced. He has come to this conclusion after an unbroken experience of over ten months. I may add that Shri Bhave used to suffer from gout and corpulence and had a trace of diabetes. He got rid of this triple disability by mere careful dieting. In imitation of Shri Bhave the inmates of Maganwadi including me have been trying soya beans for the last few days. It is too early yet to pronounce any opinion for ourselves. Each inmate gets a heaped dessert-spoonful per day. This is how the beans are cooked: Clean the beans of foreign particles or dirt, wash in cold water and soak at least for twelve hours, and not more than eighteen, and drain off superfluous water. Put these beans in boiling water and cook for fifteen minutes on a quick fire. No salt or soda to be added while cooking. Salt may be added later. At Maganwadi we steam them for two hours. Let those who are interested in food-reform from the poor man’s point of view try the experiment. It should be remembered that

---

1 The source has “after”.

VOL. 68 : 23 SEPTEMBER, 1935 - 15 MAY, 1936 69
soya beans are a most nutritious diet. It stands at the top of all the known articles of diet because of its low percentage of carbohydrates and high percentage of salts, protein and fat. Its energy value is 2,100 calories per lb. against 1,750 of wheat and 1,530 of gram. It contains 40 per cent of protein and 20.3 per cent of fat against 19 and 4.3 respectively of gram and 14.8 and 10.5 of eggs. Therefore no one should take soya beans in addition to the usual protein and fatty foods. The quantity, therefore, of wheat and ghee should be reduced and dal omitted altogether, soya beans being themselves a highly nutritious dal. We are just now trying the Manchurian variety. The Baroda beans we have not tried. Maganwadi has its own crop of soya beans. I hope to report the quality of Indian varieties from a layman’s point of view as they come under my observation. Those who have Indian varieties are requested to send me samples with prices.

Harijan, 19-10-1935

86. SIMPLE CURE FOR SCORPION STINGS

Shri M.S. Narayanan who is a retired engineer writes the following letter:¹

The caution Shri Narayanan gives is worthy of him.² He is devoting his savings and his time and skill to village reconstruction principally through khadi. Though Maganwadi has a fair share of scorpions, the cases are nothing so frequent as Shri Narayanan has. I have no reason to doubt his testimony. I must not therefore keep this costless remedy from the public for fear of its proving a failure. Those who will try the cure will please report the results of their observations. If I have reports only of failures, the public shall know them. Let those who will try the cure prepare the solution in the manner prescribed.

Harijan, 19-10-1935

¹ Not reproduced here. The correspondent, a social worker, had suggested a simple remedy for scorpion stings: “Make a saturated solution of common salt, allow it to settle for a day and decant the clean solution. A drop of this solution put into each eye removes the pain of the sting instantaneously.”

² The correspondent had written that “after local tests you may give the information to the rest of the world”.

70 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
A correspondent whose earnestness is unmistakable wrote some time ago a long, very long letter declaiming against the anti-untouchability campaign and the methods adopted by the Harijan Sevak Sangh to combat the evil. He called it all patchwork. The letter lay in my file for several weeks, always making room for something which I then considered more important and pressing. With great difficulty I have reduced the letter to readable compass. Here it is:

I hold that your programme re: ‘untouchability’ is misconceived for the following reasons: You presume that ‘untouchability’ is nine-tenths of the ills of Harijans and its removal the only cure. You feel it a social and religious curse. I respectfully disagree with you. I hold the whole trouble is directly economic. Social and religious aspects that have gained ascendancy in the public view only serve the purpose of sugar-coating. We have been long trained by our ancestors (who knew the proper clue to it) to close our eyes to the bitter pill inside, but it mocks at us grimly in all its naked truth. I believe that ‘untouchability’ is bound to disappear along with the disappearance of the inferiority complex of the Harijan. Remove the cause of his poverty, improve his economic conditions, fight for a more equitable distribution of national wealth, make the Harijan feel that he has to revolt against the existing capitalistic exploitation; then a panoramic view of his future will be opened to him and he will then need no outside agency to count the steps of his progress and caution halt at measured intervals.

You believe ‘untouchability’ is peculiar to Hindu society and confined to our own land. But my view is totally different. It is a universal problem facing every land and the Harijan that inhabits it. So the solution to root out this evil must be one which is common to all lands, and which goes to the root of the matter, and one ought not to be satisfied only with lopping off the topmost branches. After all, what is ‘untouchability’? It is treating a whole race of men as lepers and denying the elementary rights to them. Mere touching or not touching is just a symbol and a symptom of the corroding disease, viz., subjection, and matters little or nothing to the victim so long as the main cancer is not sought to be removed. In this view, ‘untouchability’ is a universal menace and all oppressed peoples have got to rebel against it. It has taken various guises in various countries with difference in degree. Everywhere, its basis is economic which is miscalled ‘political’. Indian ‘untouchability’ arose, I believe, out of the conquest of Aryans over the so-called ‘Aborigines’ to whom the present-day Harijan has to trace his ancestry.
The American 'untouchability' towards the Negroes is rooted in the land-greed of the white man who first travelled to America in the Mayflower. The Hitlerian hatred of the Jew, the Bolshevik's hatred of the bourgeoisie, the Chinaman's fear of the 'Mikado' are all traceable to the same source, viz., economic exploitation, euphemistically called 'Politics'. The Indian 'asprishyata', the American 'lynching', the Belgian 'Congo', the Nazian persecution of the Jews are outstanding examples of this injustice, and world wars are their natural culmination.

Again 'untouchability' or, to speak more correctly, the inferiority complex of the conquered original owners of this land, was a bourgeoise political necessity of the Aryans for keeping the comparatively inferior races of the Harijans under eternal subjection solely for economic ends, that is, for permanently maintaining the superiority in status of the conqueror over the conquered. The much-advertised I.C.S. steelframe superiority, the recent uncouth reminder to the African Negro chief Tesh-Kendy by his European masters, the preferential treatment claimed [by] and conceded to those of European extraction are but living reminders of this hiatus which have been carefully conceived to enable smaller but more powerful nations to exploit bigger but weaker peoples.

This explains and greatly probabilizes the imposition, for economic ends, of cruel disabilities by the conquering Aryan hordes over the vanquished forces of the sons of the soil. Then followed as night did the day the engine of ruthless suppression, and every effort was made to introduce and establish this racial superiority in matters of residence, association, eating and drinking and in every walk of life. Poets sang praises of this system and Puranas sealed it with divine approval. The Harijan, like the Natal Indian, was feared in commercial competition, too, and there came the law ousting him from main business centres and important thriving trades. The impoverished Harijan reduced to mere manual labour became half-naked, huddled in huts, developed insanitation and illiteracy and, to use Arnold's language, "bowed low and let the storm to pass". He had of course to pay the penalty for being a conquered nation, as others do.

You do not believe in the existence of class struggle and are not prepared to unseat those owners of the so-called vested interests for the mere reason that their 'status quo' ought not to be disturbed. You refuse to recognize that the interests of the capitalists and the labourers are bound to clash with each other so long as the inequality in their present position is approved and sought to be maintained.

The Harijan asks for bread but a stone is your answer. For aught I know about the Harijan, he is least concerned about his 'touch me not' trouble. I am sure you realize that the Harijan’s untouchability is too deep to be removed by an occasional inter-dining, demonstrative sweeping in the slums, ceremonious entries into the village temples and merciful distribution of clothing and sweetmeats, which seem to be the type-design programme that is chalked out for the much tired Congressman. To all appearance, the programme seems to go on merrily. Details of boys holding scholarships in the till-recently banned schools, instances of temples and wells thrown open, are tabulated in Harijan, but what strikes me most pointedly is: Is the Harijan going to be satisfied with all this? Can we say that he is on the shortest road to his salvation? I would only wonder what the response would be if the public are asked to give better wages for shorter hours of work and do their duty by the impoverished Harijan.

To be true to you, I feel compelled to state that the too much stress you have laid on this comparatively minor problem, in preference to their more vital needs, leads the Harijans to self-deception, binds them to the chariot-wheel of capitalistic exploitation, and puts off indefinitely the day of their economic freedom, which their brethren in other countries are striving hard to secure.

Such argument was heard when I was touring in the South in the Harijan interest. It is well, however, to have it summed up in a letter. The mistake the correspondent makes is in thinking that the struggle against untouchability ends with the remonval of touch pollution. The campaign had to begin with the removal of the impassable religious bar. Those who come under the religious ban are a class apart. To them the taint attaches by birth. Who does not know that these men though they may be economically well off are still treated as social lepers? Thousands of Ezhawas in Travancore and Namosudras in Bengal are very well off and yet to their great sorrow and to the equally great disgrace of the so called savarna Hindus, the former’s possession of the good things of the earth makes no difference in their social status.

There is no difficulty in admitting that much will remain to be done after the bar sinister is removed. Indeed it is the recognition of this obvious fact that has impelled the Harijan Sevak Sangh to handle educational and economic work among Harijans which the correspondent seems to be little. That work serves the Harijans tangibly and tests the sincerity of the reformers and brings them in close touch with those whom they are out to serve.

When untouchability is altogether gone, Harijans will share the benefit with the others of the economic uplift that is silently but surely going on. Harijans contribute, say, 16 per cent of the total population of India. But those who suffer from economic exploitation form at least 90 per cent of the population. It is for that reason that I have said in these columns that the missions of the A.I.S.A., A.I.V.I.A. and Harijan Sevak Sangh are inter-related, and that is why the scope of Harijan has been extended.

The correspondent is wrong in suggesting that I do not believe in the existence of class struggle. What I do not believe in is the necessity of fomenting and keeping it up. I entertain a growing belief that it is perfectly possible to avoid it. There is no virtue in fomenting it, as there is in preventing it. The conflict between moneyed classes and labourers is merely seeming. When labour is intelligent enough to organize itself and learns to act as one man, it will have the same weight as money if not much greater. The conflict is really between intelligence and unintelligence. Surely it will be folly to keep up such a conflict. Unintelligence must be removed.

Money has its use as much as labour. After all money is a token of exchange. A person having 25 rupees has, say, 50 labourers per day at his disposal, regarding eight annas as the wage for a day of eight hours. A labourer who has 49 fellow-labourers working in unison with him is even with the person who has Rs. 25. The advantage, if any, will be with the one who has monopoly of labour. If both are even there will be harmony. The problem therefore is not to set class against class, but to educate labour to a sense of its dignity. Moneyed men after all form a microscopic minority in the world. They will act on the square, immediately labour realizes its power and yet acts on the square. To inflame labour against moneyed men is to perpetuate class hatred and all the evil consequences flowing from it. The strife is a vicious circle to be avoided at any cost. It is an admission of weakness, a sign of inferiority complex. The moment labour recognizes its own dignity, money will find its rightful place, i.e., it will be held in trust for labour. For labour is more than money.

Harijan, 19-10-1935

88. DUTY OF REFORMERS

I gladly publish the following letter\(^1\) from the Principal, Sanatan Dharma College, Lahore:

There can be no doubt that there must be a relentless war waged against this vice. I have gone through the gruesome reports enclosed with this letter. These are of a different type from those dealt with by me in the articles to which the Principal refers. They had reference to cases exclusively of seduction by teachers. The reports now sent mostly deal with cases of unnatural assaults committed by goondas on boys of tender age and then murdered. Though the cases of unnatural assaults followed by murder appear more hideous, I believe that they are more capable of being dealt with than the cases in which boys become willing victims of their teachers. Both require incessant vigilance by the reformer and the rousing of public conscience against the commission of this disgusting crime. It is the duty of leaders in the Punjab, in which this crime seems to flourish most, to get together, irrespective of race or creed, and devise methods of protecting the youth of the land of five rivers from criminals whether as seducers or ravishers and murderers. It is no use passing resolutions condemning the criminals. All crimes are different kinds of diseases and they should be treated as such by the reformers. That does not mean that the police will suspend their function of regarding such cases as public crimes, but their measures are never intended to deal with causes of these social disturbances. To do so is the special prerogative of the reformer. And unless the moral tone of society is raised, in spite of whatever may be written in the newspapers such crimes will flourish, if only for the simple reason that the moral sense of these perverts had become blunt and they rarely read newspapers, especially those portions which contain fervent exhortation against such vices. The only effective way I can conceive of, therefore, is for some enthusiastic reformers like the Principal of the Sanatan Dharma College, if he is one, to gather together other reformers and take concerted measures to deal with the evil.

\(^1\) This is not reproduced here.

Harijan, 19-10-1935

89. A CORRECTION

In the last issue of Harijan a serious mistake has crept in. In the last note on the last page. Dr. Aykroyd is made to say that among other things the dietary requirements of an adult man per day were 16 ounces of soya bean. Please read there 16 ounces of ragi and two ounces of soya bean.

Harijan, 19-10-1935

2 Vide “Notes subtitle - For Four Rupees a Month”, 12-10-1935.
90. LETTER TO N. R. MALKANI

MAGANWADI, (WARDHA),
October 19, 1935

MY DEAR MALKANI,

There is no such good news for you or for me. I don't stir out of Wardha till the end of the year. January has been mortgaged to Gujarat, and February will probably be given to Delhi.

The Sangh' Council will meet here in November, I expect. But do not expect me to go either to Calcutta or to Bangalore next year. I do not want to devote the whole year to travelling. There is much work to be done here. It is with the utmost reluctance that I have undertaken to go to Gujarat. One month to Delhi I will have to give.

You may expect no congratulations; but you will certainly deserve them for having built at such a reasonable cost, and from the details you have sent, I see that everything was worked out most thoughtfully. You won't have Amtul Salaam before next year and you might not have Viyogi Hari either.

With love,

Yours,

BAPU

From a photostat: G. N. 923

91. LETTER TO CHANDAN PAREKH

October 19, 1935

CHI. CHANDU.

I got your letter of the 9th. I like it very much. It is a frank one. Kishorelalbhai had written everything with the purest of motives. He used to speak in Shankar's favour when I was prejudiced against him. He was shaken in his confidence by the . . . [episode, but your letter to him made him wonder again whether Shankar might not be right in his belief. Hence with the aim of discovering the truth and because you had permitted him, he put you more questions. There was thus no reason for you to feel offended with him. But now your letter to me closes that chapter.

1 Harijan Sevak Sangh
2 The name has been omitted.

I am still meeting Nanabhai\ldots will return. I will of course still need your help. I will not put you to the trouble of coming here while you are taking rest. You may certainly stay with your brother and his wife for some time and recoup yourself. When your stay is over, I may suggest your coming over here before going to Vartej. I think it will be necessary to do so. And if you wish, I shall send a reliable person to escort you. If anything occurs to you meanwhile, write to me. Is there any other girl, besides you two sisters, who can throw light on this chapter? If there is, give me her name and address. If there is anyone else also who is in a position to help, let me know.

_Blessings from_

_BAPU_

From a copy of the Gujarati: C. W. 936. Courtesy: Satish D. Kalelkar

92. ABOUT SNAKE-BITES

I give below a summary in my words of the questions put by a Harijan reader and my answers:

Q. Is there any risk involved in making vertical and horizontal cuts over a [snake-] bite? And, if there is any, is it proper to invite one risk in order to avoid another?

A. There is no risk at all in making a cut over the bite. It would have been easier to follow if the translator had used the word 'incision' instead of 'cut'. The only purpose of making an incision is to drain some blood out. Such superficial incision does not hurt much; and anyone who has been bitten does not feel the pain at all and because he gradually tends to lose consciousness the cells in his brain become so insensitive that he has little awareness of what his body is being subjected to.

Q. Please explain clearly how the tender skin covering the bones escapes injury.

A. The previous passage explains this. The razor's edge does not reach the bone while making an incision. Instead of the skin we should think of layers. We should imagine that there are layers

---

1 Nrisintraprasad Kalidas Bhatt, founder of the Lokbharati beneath the skin which we can see and touch. The incision which has to be made is just to open up the skin. In that case the edge of the knife cannot even reach the layer of the skin immediately next to the bone.

Q. What is meant by "using the blade of the safety razor after passing it over a flame"?
A. The blade should be passed back and forth over a lighted match until the latter burns out. This would take only a few seconds.

Q. Is there no danger of death to the person who sucks [the poison]?
A. If he has no ulcers in his mouth, there is no danger of death or of any other harm. If he has ulcers, there is no question of his sucking.

Q. You write of mud-pack remedies, but you cannot give any assurances.
A. I can give no guarantee whatsoever. Moreover, who will permit me to make sufficient number of experiments to give any assurance?

Q. The sixth question is that I should have written exhaustively about identifying the different kinds of snakes.
A. Nothing is gained by putting before the reader something which I find it difficult to understand because even if I understood, it cannot help me in identifying the kinds. Those who [want to] understand this matter more than I do ought to obtain the literature for themselves and go through it; this literature can generally be found in libraries.

Finally, I may add that I am collecting further knowledge about snake-bites and if I find anything more valuable, I shall certainly inform the readers. An experienced doctor, who is an old friend, writes to say that there is no likelihood of anything new and worth communicating coming to light. I may say that Ramanama is the remedy for a bite by a venomous cobra. Luckily, such cobras are few.
There is little danger of death if the other bites are treated immediately in the manner suggested.

[From Gujarati]
Harijanbandhu, 20-10-1935

1 Vide “Snake Poisoning”, 17-8-1935.
93. TWO QUESTIONS

Many questions keep coming up about the new policy of the Spinner's Association, which is being framed. Here are some of them:

Q. 1. How can workers prepare themselves to put into effect the new policy?

The best way is for those who have grown accustomed to the new policy to train workers from among villagers and persons who do not know English. We shall need innumerable workers if the policy of self-sufficing [khadi] is to be made widespread. This poor country cannot afford them salaries if these happen to be large. If workers are trained only from amongst the English-educated persons they would demand large salaries as their needs have increased. They no longer possess a hardy constitution. And, in a sphere where a knowledge of the English language is not essential they cannot be said to be particularly useful. Very often, their usefulness has indeed inclined. For instance, they do not like living in villages and they try to import city-life into the villages. Their bodies are less supple and only in rare cases can they become skilled craftsmen. Even when they learn a craft, they can seldom compete with ordinary craftsmen. I only want to suggest here that we should give up the craze of looking for workers who know English. This does not mean that we should boycott or despite those who know English. We should welcome any such person who is available. They are all right where they belong. The only purpose of saying this is to rid ourselves of the false notion that only those who know English are fit to be workers. If a village worker's services are available, he will bring in greater returns than the amount paid to him. An allowance of not more than Rs. 10 to 15 should be required for such a worker. And he can easily bring in by way of return that amount every month. Organizers should train such workers wherever there are khadi centres and to that extent enlarge their field of work. Workers should acquaint themselves with all the processes starting from growing cotton right up to making khadi. And if those who are in charge of these centres are themselves efficient, they can readily produce such workers at no cost.

At present, I do not visualize any separate institution for training workers.

Q. 2. Will the number of private traders increase or decrease with the implementation of the new policy?
There cannot be any increase in the number of private traders. Making [khadi] self-sufficing will be the principal policy. Private traders have no place in it. They will continue for the purpose of selling khadi in the cities. There is very little likelihood of there being an increase in their numbers because, with the growing desire of craftsmen to add to their earnings, private traders will progressively decrease in number. This is because the latter are impelled by the profit motive. Hence they will not be satisfied. In the new scheme, the ceiling to the seller's earnings will be fixed and whatever profit is there, will go to the craftsmen.

[From Gujarati]
Harishbandhu, 20-10-1935

94. A LETTER

MAGANWADI, WARDHA,
October 20, 1935

It is true that I have the strength to strike her non-violently to bring her round, but it is not right to use such strength on every occasion irrespective of the circumstances.

Differences of opinion have been known to exist even among those whose spiritual eye has opened or is believed to have opened.

Vandemataram from
MOHANDAS

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 8770

95. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

October 20, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

Mathew has reached here. He has no work. He says that he will go to Poona at any rate. I won't send him to you. The desire for degrees is becoming universal at present. How, then, can we blame Sharda and Vijaya? Let them satisfy their desire. Only they should not expect any money from us.

1 Only the last sheet of the letter is available.
2 Sharda C. Shah
3 Vijaya N. Patel
I got Nanubhai's letter. Is it necessary to reply to it? I can't recall his face.

I was pained and surprised to read about Jamnadas. He had given me a firm assurance here.

Really speaking the money collected during the Charkha Week should be utilized in promoting khadi activities. However, do what you think best.

Lilavati has been entrusted just now with the management of the kitchen. I have of course been encouraging her to go to you. At the moment, however, she does not think of leaving this place till December. After I leave in January, she is bound to feel unhappy. Let us see what happens. Mirabehn recovered long ago. (A palatial hut has been put up for her.) She has gone to live in Sindi.

Devdas has returned to Delhi. He is steadily improving. But he will take some time to recover completely. Ghanshyamdas has kept him at his place. I am sending herewith a letter from Jethalal Joshi. Have you relieved Pranjivan Joshi? If so, on what ground? What is truth in what Jethalal writes? What is the Seva Sangh? What has been Sushila's part in it?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8479. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

96. INTERVIEW TO PATITPAWANDAS AND OTHERS

October 20, 1935

Mahatma Gandhi said that it was no fault of the religion that Dr. Ambedkar was going to make himself a convert. Caste Hindus and Harijans had a common religion. The enmity between those two parties was no sufficient reason for him to go against

1 The period, of about a week, from the date of Gandhiji's birthday according to the Vikram Calendar and October 2; vide “Message on Birthday”, 12-10-1935.

2 Lilavati Asar

3 At the instance of the Depressed Classes Federation Conference of the C.P. and Berar held on October 20, Patitpawandas, head of the Berar Maharashtra Temple-entry Satyagraha Movement, D.K. Bhagat, Chairman, C.P. and Berar Matang Society, T.A. Purohit of Arvi and D.S. Shende of Nagpur met Gandhiji at 9 p.m.

VOL. 68 : 23 SEPTEMBER, 1935 - 15 MAY, 1936 81
the religion. Dr. Ambedkar and Harijans might go against the caste Hindus and fight for their equality. It was a fact that the Harijans were molested by the caste Hindus at Kavitha. It should not be the case that from some such stray instances of harassment, men like Dr. Ambedkar should go against the religion. The Harijans of Kavitha might leave the place and go to other places where they would get the necessary environment to pull on. If Dr. Ambedkar was converted, many men from the depressed classes would not follow him. Anyhow the Muslim fold was thought to be a suitable place to go into. The Muslims would not be able to take many depressed classes in their fold; for they would not be able to manage them. Moreover, he said that the water-tight compartment of untouchability had been already loosened through the efforts to the Harijan Sevak Sangh and others. In such circumstances Dr. Ambedkar's threat to change his religion only showed that he was impatient and no one was able to help him in such a situation.

_The Hitavada, 3-11-1935_

97. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

_October 21, 1935_

MY DEAR AMRIT,

The longer you stay in Simla, the gladder I feel. Now that the giddy season there is over, you get a change of having a little bit of rest. I fancy that now is the real season for Simla—quiet and bracing. There need be no hurry to descend to Jullundur. The work won't run away from you, if you go there a little later.

Pray do not worry over my estimate of your brochure on the position of women in India. The matter is all right it is the manner which appeared to me to be defective. I could smell your fatigue and midnight oil—must one say now midnight electric burners—in it. I did not miss the political part. It was not expected there. But of all this when we meet, if only that will bring you here earlier.

Nor need you worry about Devdas not having been completely cured there. Dr. Ansari is more than satisfied. The weather in Delhi is quite good now and Devdas is accommodated in a nice house. Pyarelal is no longer with him all the 24 hours. Devdas says nowhere could he have had greater kindness than under your roof. Be careful for nothing.'

---

Love to you all.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 3556. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6365

98. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

October 21, 1935

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I get your letters. Don't expect long or regular letters from me. I certainly wish to write, but being in the Committee I get no time at all. I am glad that you keep good health. I don't know how long I shall have to stay here. I see that I shall have to do some travelling, unless indeed I have to go there immediately for some reason.

I am quite well. I intentionally avoid writing with my right hand. I am trying to drink $2\frac{1}{2}$ [pounds] of milk daily.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-10: Shri Prabhavatibehnne, pp. 73-4

99. SPEECH TO VILLAGE WORKERS

October 22, 1935

As today's menu was selected by me with some careful thought, and especially with a view to the needs of village workers, I must speak to you about it at some length. The idea was to provide you with food, nourishing and yet within the means of an average villager and within the possibility of an eight hours' minimum wage as we have fixed it, i.e., three annas.

We were 98 diners today and the total cost of our food was Rs. 9-14-3, which means that each meal cost slightly more than six pice. Here are the details:

1 As summarized by Mahadev Desai. The workers had undergone a fortnight's study course from October 8 to 22.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Item</th>
<th>Rs.</th>
<th>As.</th>
<th>Ps.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>36 lb. Wheat flour</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>8</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>12 ,, Tomatoes</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>11</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4 ,, Jaggery</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>24 ,, Red gourd</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6 ,, Linseed oil</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>50 ,, Milk</td>
<td>3</td>
<td>13</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4 ,, Soya bean</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>4 Cocoanuts</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>16 Koth fruit</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tamarind and salt</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>2</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Fuel</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>0</td>
<td>0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Total</td>
<td>9</td>
<td>14</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Vinoba had passed on the suggestion to me that I need not worry about giving all of you roti but might simply give you wheaten porridge (that we have here every morning) and thus save a lot of trouble. No, said I to myself, you young men whom God has given strong teeth must have good hard well-baked *bhakharī*², which anyone can make, which one can easily carry on one's person from place to place and which can keep for a couple of days. Before the dough was kneaded it was treated with linseed oil. This rendered it both soft and crisp. Then, as we must have some greens and raw vegetables, we had tomatoes and two chutneys—one made of koth fruit available in plenty in these parts and another made of leaves available in our garden. Koth fruit is known for both its aperient and astringent properties, and jaggery goes well with it and makes a delicious chutney. The other chutney contained some cocoanut, tamarind and salt to spice the leaves. Green leaves must be eaten by us in some form or other, in order what we may get proper vitamins in our diet. The vegetable chosen was the cheapest available and grows everywhere in our villages. You will see that I allowed the use of tamarind in the preparation of chutney. In spite of the popular prejudice against tamarind, it has been found that it is a good aperient and blood-purifier. I gave copious doses of tamarind water to one of the inmates suffering from malaria with very good effect and have tried it in

---

¹ Bread
² Crisp chapati
several cases of constipation.

Milk is an essential article of diet. Your menu contained half a pound of milk, but you must have seen that I gave you no ghee. I hope, however, that you did not miss it. For I gave you soya beans and oil. Soya beans are rich in oil (20 per cent) and proteins (40 per cent). Ground-nuts also are rich in oil, but they have the disadvantage of containing too much starch from which soya beans are comparatively free. Milk with soya beans gives us almost all that we need in the shape of fats and there is no need for ghee at all. Why then go to all the wasteful trouble of making ghee. And where procuring good ghee is a doubtful proposition, why have spurious ghee? But milk or buttermilk we ought to have, no matter how little. Medical men say that it helps in the assimilation of the vegetable fats and proteids. Therefore ghee you can omit with impunity. I had recently two little children under my care whose diet I carefully regulated. I cut out ghee from it and found that they were none the worse for the cutting out of ghee. Of course I gave them as much milk as they wanted.

Our menu has cost us a little more than six pice. It was a full meal and the other meals need not be so heavy as this. They, therefore, need not cost more than an anna or so. Milk may be omitted for the other meals. Wheat bhakhari, soya bean and chutney should be quite enough. So this is one of the two main things you have to do—to ensure to villagers a balanced diet, and to content yourselves with the same. There may be some who burden their diet with useless articles and many whose diet is badly deficient in vitamins. You have to introduce the right kind of diet to them. You will learn cow-keeping yourselves and encourage cow-keeping among villagers. It ought to be considered a shame that milk is not available in many of our villages. The second main duty is sanitation—a most difficult thing indeed. But if you have succeeded in introducing the right kind of diet and making the sanitation of your village tolerably good, you will have rendered human bodies worthy of becoming temples of God and efficient tools for doing a good day's work.

Khadi will certainly occupy the centre of the village industries. But remember that we have to concentrate on making the villages self-sufficing in khadi. Out of self-sufficing khadi will follow commercial khadi as a matter of course. The argument you will find elaborated in the columns of Harijan. But on you will depend the success of failure of khadi. People have been frightened by baseless scares. You have to restore their faith in khadi and explain to them the new policy.¹

You will of course take up any other industry available in villages and for which you can find a market, care being taken that no shop has to be run at a loss and no article produced for which there is no market. Give eight hours of your day to any home-craft you like and show to the villagers that as you earn your wage, even so can they earn it by eight hours’ work. Make Vinoba your ideal here. It is impossible for you to emulate his learning or to have his wonderful memory, but you can certainly emulate his industry and devotion to work. Go not to the villages to write commentaries on the Upanishads, which you may well do in towns and cities. Your work will provide the best commentary as does Vinoba's concentrated work. We have to infect the villagers with our passion for work. We say they have become hewers of wood and drawers of water². In order that they may stand erect and say they shall no longer be mere hewers of wood and drawers of water for us, you have to explain to them the reason for every one of their actions and make them voluntary workers for a living wage. What Vinoba has done should be easier for these simple folks to achieve. I am told a village lad called Gulab has already broken Vinoba's record in spinning.

You will also not take a companion to work with you. Our policy is to send a single worker to a village or group of villages. That will enable him to bring his resourcefulness into full play. He may pick out any number of companions from the village itself. They will work under his direction, but he will be mainly responsible for the village under his charge.

Let us not be tempted by the allurements of the machine age, let us concentrate on rendering our own body-machines perfect and efficient instruments of work and let us get the best out of them. This is your task. Go ahead with it, without flinching. There need be no despair in a field which Vinoba has made his own and where he has given the best of his 15 years. I at least have no cause for despair and that is why you find me settled down here.

_Harijan, 2-11-1935_

¹ Vide “Speech at A.I.S.A. Council meeting”, on or before 13-10-1935.
² The source has “work”.
100. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

MAGANWADI, WARDHA,
October 23, 1935

CHI. AMBUJAM,

I got your letter. The fever should go now. Om' has stayed over there. Keep in touch with her. Come over only when your parents give you their consent. I have read the recipe for rasam. I had enquired about it because Bharatan told me that it is recommended to patients suffering from fever, etc. Write to me what the doctors and vaidyas there say about the efficacy of rasam.

Are soya beans available in Madras? If so, at what price? Are they indigenous or imported? Send me a sample.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Hindi original: Ambujammal Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

101. FOREWORD TO "SHRIMADRAJACHANDRA"

WARDHA,
October 24, 1935

There is no doubt that these gleanings selected from the writings of the late Shri Raichandbhai will prove useful as an introduction to the original work. As they are arranged subjectwise, they will be very helpful to the jijnasu².

[From Gujarati]
Shrimadrajachandra

¹ Umadevi, daughter of Jamnalal Bajaj
² Seeker of knowledge
102. LETTER TO C. VIJAYARAGHAVACHARIAR

MAGANWADI, WARDHA,
October 24, 1935

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. Whilst the language you have chosen to describe the attitude of your co-workers, including myself, is unhappy, the substance of what you say is undeniable. There is no want of regard and affection for you. Your great services for the country will command them at any time; but the country has adopted a faith which runs counter to that of the days when you were one of the most active workers. I am not therefore surprised that you found the atmosphere in Madras unresponsive to your presentation of the situation and the remedy.¹ In spite of all the desire to appreciate your viewpoint, it has not been possible to follow it here. In my opinion there is no cause for grief or complaint. Is it not well that although our views differ, we can retain our affection and old friendship unimpaired?

Do come by all means, whenever you have a few days to spare.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From the original: C. Vijayaraghavachariar Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

103. LETTER TO JAIJI PETIT

[Before October 25, 1935]²

DEAR SISTER,

Mithubehn has sent to me your letter to your sister for my perusal. She did it because I had inquired about your health. I try to ¹ The A.I.C.C. had met at Madras on October 17 and 18 to consider the question of office acceptance and that of the Congress and the States. The Committee felt that considering the long interval that would elapse before the provincial elections under the new Constitution, as well as the uncertain character of the political conditions during the period, it would be inadvisable to commit the Congress to any decision regarding office acceptance.

² From the contents this letter appears to have been written before the one to the addressee dated October 25, 1935; vide “Letter to Jaiji Petit”, 25-10-1935.
get news of you from every possible source. Do write to me sometimes. I can see that you will find your peace of mind only by patiently enduring your suffering, and God has given you the strength to do so. I do not therefore intend to write to you a letter of sympathy even in your illness. Instead I wish that your God-given gift of preserving your peace of mind in any and every kind of suffering should go on increasing. Happiness and suffering are part of our lot. Who can say with certainty that what we think to be happiness or sorrow is really so? The best thing for us, therefore, is to be able to preserve our peace of mind in all circumstances and thank God for being able to do so.

What shall I write to you about the situation here? Do you get Harijan? Please let me know if you do not. I will send copies. How long do you intend to stay there? Andrews is here at present. He will leave tomorrow. Is Hilda with you? Write and tell me about everybody.

Ba sends you her blessings.

Blessings from

BAPU

JAIJI PETIT

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 3158

104. LETTER TO PRABHUDAS GANDHI

MAGANWADI, WARDHA,

October 24, 1935

CHI. PRABHUDAS.

I received your long letter. Do not mind it being so long. I am sending a copy of it to Shankerlal. I would not at any time advise either you or Amba to leave Guleria. I would regard it as humiliating for you to do so. Your description of the three circumstances there is correct. Till a person has spent ten years in the same village, nothing can be said as to whether he has succeeded or failed. I simply do not believe that your stay in Guleria is failing in its purpose. I have such blind faith in your uprightness that I have never believed that you have failed in your purpose in staying there. Nor do I believe that you have lost anything yourself by staying there.
I am trying to get the Magan spinning-wheel. Only if I do not get it from anywhere will I send for it from you. I am ready to buy ten thousand rupees worth of jaggery. I will pay even a higher price. But you should have the price fixed in advance before proceeding in the matter. Some limit must be fixed for the price. Unless that is done, the business cannot be carried on. The total quantity may be divided into cubes of one pound each and the cubes may be wrapped in paper of good quality. Do not mind if doing so increases the labour charges. I will certainly be able to obtain for it a price up to a certain limit.

I understand what you say regarding the saree. I will try to get some tamarind from the market and make the experiment.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: S.N. 33040

105. LETTER TO NANABHAI I. MASHRUWALA

WARDHA,
October 25, 1935

BHAI NANABHAI¹,

The bonds between our two families are increasing on their own. There must be some divine purpose behind it. You sent a girl into our family. You have now taken a girl into your family. As Sushila and Manilal make each other happy, even so may Surendra and Manu do. Manu is a submissive and simple-hearted girl, delicate in health. I do not think she would have felt as secure in any other family as she will be in yours and with Surendra. Let us hope that they live long and learn to do selfless service. Jamnalalji came here just a little while ago at 9.30 and, with the willing consent of Ba, the betrothal was solemnized. A coconut was broken and the betrothal ceremony was performed.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 7524. Also C.W. 5000. Courtesy: Kanubhai N. Mashruwala

¹ Sushila Gandhi’s father
106. LETTER TO JAIJI PETIT

October 25, 1935

DEAR SISTER,

How could I, of course, expect you to write to me? But even so I often thought of you. And then I got Charlie's letter. He has given a vivid description of the state of your health. I can imagine from it what agony you have been passing through and with what courage you are enduring all the suffering. You have endured so much mental suffering that in comparison with it this physical suffering should be nothing. I hope to see in you increasing awareness of God even as your suffering increases. I feel easy in mind because of the knowledge that Hilda is with you. Please ask her to write to me sometimes.

Charlie tells me in this letter that you often wish you were at Panchgani. I have indeed often wished that you were in India. If you were here today and in good health, I could have got so much work out of you in connection with village industries. But God's will be done. Now please get all right soon. I am still hoping that you will return one day and serve the women of India.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3157

107. LETTER TO SARALADEVI SARABHAI

MAGANWADI, WARDHA,
October 25, 1935

DEAR SISTER,

I hope you are benefiting from the treatment of the Calcutta doctor and that it will bring you full recovery. I hope that you will regain your health completely and return home safe and sound after spending a few days at Wardha. May the New Year bring happiness to all of you. And may you have the most of that which will give you a sense of fulfilment in life. Give my blessings to Bharati and Suhrid

1 C.F. Andrews
2 Addressee’s daughter
3 Addressee’s son
when you write to them. I hope both of them are in good health.

_Blessings from_

_MOHANDAS_

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 11143. Courtesy: Sarabhai Foundation

108. LETTER TO DRAUPADI SHARMA

_October 25, 1935_

_CHI. DRAUPADI_,

How is it that there has been no letter from you? I forwarded to you a long letter from Sharma and asked that it may be returned.¹ Neither that letter nor yours had been received. Amtul Salaam is keeping indifferent health and she too awaits your letter. I hope you are all doing well. You should not be lazy about letter writing. Ramdas must have sent you yet another letter from Sharma.

_Blessings from_

_BAPU_

[From Hindi]

_Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsh_, p. 191

109. LETTER TO H. L. SHARMA

_October 25, 1935_

_CHI. SHARMA_,

Long beautiful letters kept pouring in while you were on board the ship but they have stopped, now that you have reached America. I had the one written prior to your reaching Boston but none since then which is extremely surprising. I could not reach you at the ports of call but I am now trying to write almost every week but your letters have stopped coming. Every week I look forward to a letter from you and am invariably disappointed. I feel that you have written but they are still in transit from New York. Your letter ought to arrive by tomorrow's mail. It is now three weeks since you wrote from Boston.

¹ Vide “Letter to Draupadi Sharma”, 24-8-1935.
As desired by you I have already sent the letter for England and you must have got it by now.

I receive no letters from Draupadi, but on my part I keep on writing and ultimately she also may write regularly.

You are doing well, I suppose.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsh, facing p. 206

110. ON ITS LAST LEGS

Some critics have not hesitated to observe that it was preposterous for me to claim, in answer to Dr. Ambedkar's threat to accept some other faith rather than die a Hindu, that untouchability was on its last legs in spite of Kavitha. Indeed, Kavitha itself supports my claim. Kavitha had gone on ever since its birth living peacefully till an our-zealous worker, not knowing his own limitations, had put up Kavitha Harijans to dare to send their children to the local school, though he knew that there was opposition from some Kavitha savarnas. He had hoped, as had happened elsewhere, that Harijans had successfully asserted their right to send their children to public schools. But Kavitha savarnas showed that they had not recognized the time spirit.

Only a few years ago the Kavitha incident would have attracted no notice. There were very few reformers then. The few were to be found mostly in towns and cities. Now, thank God, their number is increasing and presently every village will have its quota. But a few years ago Harijans could not be induced to resist untouchability on any account whatsoever. It was part of their faith as it was of savarnas' faith. These columns contain sufficient evidence of the weekly progress made by the campaign against untouchability. Phenomenal though the progress has been, Kavitha and the like show that it has not yet affected the majority of savarnas in many places. The fact is a warning to the reformers and the Harijans that much has yet to be done before the hard hearts of savarnas are melted.

Let it be further observed that it was savarna reformers who advertised the Kavitha tragedy and gave it an all-India importance. It has agitated savarna conscience more than it has angered the Harijans. I have to note with shame and sorrow that even Kavitha Harijans no longer want to agitate for their rights. They have meekly submitted to the savarna impudence. In spite of all the help offered to them, they would not leave Kavitha. It is easy enough for the few that are there to earn their bread by honourable toil elsewhere. The attempt of the reformers to induce them to leave Kavitha under their protection has failed.

Even if change of faith, not on account of its inherent inadequacy but because of the unreasoning prejudice of many of its followers, were justified, in the present instance it can but defeat the cause intended to be served. Secession of stalwarts like Dr. Ambedkar can but weaken the defences of Harijans. We know, as a matter of fact, that non-Hindu Harijans, no matter how eminent they may be, are not able to help Hindu Harijans. Indeed, they are a class apart still in their adopted faiths. Such is the hold untouchability of the Indian type has on the people in India.

Let not Dr. Ambedkar’s just wrath deject the reformer, let it spur him to greater effort. For whilst it is true that the number of workers against untouchability has greatly increased, there can be no doubt that the number is yet too small to overtake the prejudice of ages. Nevertheless a movement which has attained the proportions that the anti-untouchability campaign has attained and in which the slightest untoward incident can attract world-wide attention, cannot but be on its last legs. Humanity will not suffer it any longer.

_Harijan_, 26-10-1935

111. "DEV COTTON"

Some of the readers of _Harijan_ may recall the periodical publications of khadi bulletins giving all kinds of useful information to khadi workers. It was part of the pioneer work done by the late Maganlal Gandhi who built up the science of khadi. Shri T. Sreenivas of Secunderabad sends me a copy of one of these bulletins called _Dev Cotton_ published in 1923. It is almost prophetic or rather shows how attempts were being made even in the early stages of the movement to work out a scheme or self-sufficing khadi. Now that it is to have the first place in the activities of the A.I.S.A. the reader will appreciate the reproduction of the bulletin:\footnote{Not reproduced here}

\textit{Harijan}, 26-10-1935

\textbf{112. NEW KHADI SCHEME}

The resolution\footnote{Vide “A.I.S.A. Resolution”, 11-10-1935.} adopted by the A.I.S.A. regarding spinners' wages and khadi policy generally deserves the careful study of every khadi worker. It can produce great changes, if the new policy is properly worked. In order to work it properly, all the instructions issued from time to time from the Centre should be meticulously carried out. Self-sufficing khadi has to receive the first place in all khadi organizations. In a way, self-sufficing khadi and production for sale will go together. Production for sale will be a by-product of self-sufficing khadi, and the latter will ensure the success of the former. As the condition of production is that the workers must be khadi-clad, they will have to make or take khadi for themselves. This they can easily do out of the (for them) very big rise in their wages which they will be receiving without having expected or demanded it. But receipt of wages will depend upon the surplus production which to be of use must command a ready sale. Thus self-sufficing methods will be easy where there are producing centres. For the spinners and other artisans will be more open to conviction than the others with whom workers have never come in touch. But some ask, who will buy khadi at higher prices? In my opinion this betrays ignorance and want of faith and resourcefulness.

Hitherto we have confined our attention to stimulating demand in the cities: we have been urban-minded. We have never cared to study the localities immediately surrounding centres of production, we have neglected the very producers themselves. Now, before we even tested the latter, we seem to have confidence that they will respond. Why should we not have the same confidence about the people in the surrounding localities? Surely they need cloth for their daily use. Is it too much to expect them to take in some khadi manufactured by their next-door neighbours? I know that those who have made an earnest effort in that direction have never failed. Failure has been with us, not with the prospective buyers. They are always with us, it does not matter what they buy and use today. If we would study the wants of the surrounding localities, we would produce khadi that would suit their taste and arrest their attention. Khadi workers have done that before now with success for the sake of the city-dwellers. Will they now turn their attention towards rural areas? It is not so much the dearness of khadi that turns people away from it. It is our want of faith and resourcefulness. If we have faith, we shall find that the same millions are open to us as they are to the vendors of fents that come to us from the Far East. They rely upon the cheapness of their pieces to produce a demand for their wares. We may rely upon local patriotism and the tastefulness of our wares to tempt the would-be buyers of cloth.

It is not without full justification that the Council of the A.I.S.A. has insisted upon every khadi organization being self-supporting and hence autonomous. They may no longer rely on the Centre to spoon-feed them. The central fund should be freed for tapping areas we have hitherto neglected.

_Harijan_, 26-10-1935

113. LETTER TO BEHCHARDAS DOSHI

MAGANWADI, WARDHA,
_October 26, 1935_

BHAI BEHCHARDAS,

I got your letter. May you prosper in the new year. I hope you are quite at peace there.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1342

---

1 The source has “one”.
2 According to Vikram calendar the new year begins on the day following Diwali, i.e., _Kartik Sud 1._
114. LETTER TO KUNVARJI K. PAREKH

October 26, 1935

CHI. KUNVARJI,

Manu was betrothed to Surendra Mashruwala yesterday at 9.30.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9724.

115. LETTER TO ABHIMANYU

October 26, 1935

CHI. ABHIMANYU,

I am glad you wrote to me the moment you reached there. When you write next, please improve your handwriting. Why didn't you like this place? Which item of food did you not like? A hungry person would relish any food. Such likes and dislikes in food are for the sick and the aged. Children should be satisfied with whatever things the elders give them to eat. May you all prosper in the new year.

I am not writing a separate letter to Mother.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI ABHIMANYU
C/O SHRIHEMENDRA B. DIWANJI
KHAR, BOMBAY

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 5744

116. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

October 26, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

I wished to write this in the letter addressed to pranjivan Joshi which I sent to you, but could not do so.

Jivrambhai’s cheque has been traced You must have heard its amusing story.
I have already written to Jethalal Joshi. It is a strange affair.
Mathew has arrived here. I have made everything plain to him. I have fixed the whole day’s programme of work for him. It consists entirely of physical labour. I have told him that if he learns sufficient Hindi to satisfy me and takes whole-hearted interest in physical labour, I am ready to provide for the maintenance of his parents. He will stay here. I will see what work he can do.

I have sent for publication in Harijan the account\(^1\) of the khadi woven from yarn spun by you. How many hours of work does the yarn represent? What is your speed? What is the count of the yarn? If you give me these details, they will help me still more.

_Blessings from_ BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8480. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

117. PROBLEMS CONFRONTING A SANITARY WORKER

A volunteer who has taken up the task of sanitation in villages has written a long letter from which I give the following extract\(^2\).

This letter may be divided into two parts—one relating to the incompetence of the ordinary worker and the other about the difficulties involved in the work of sanitation. It can certainly be said that very little progress, if at all, can be made in a task which is not done in an enlightened manner.

A volunteer who does his work with sincerity will indeed come at last to do it intelligently. It may so happen that a person may do the work entrusted to him through a sense of loyalty to his superior but there may be an absence both of sincerity and knowledge. Such volunteers continue to give the expected results and we can hardly hope for any enlightenment or of any new discoveries resulting from their work. Every volunteer should become engrossed in the work entrusted to him and keep doing research in it. From experiences published in Harijan we find that this has happened in certain places. Some are seeking ways and means to do away with the indifference of the people, while others are trying to find out how night-soil can be

\(^1\) Vide “An Experience”, 30-11-1935.
\(^2\) Not translated here disposed of with the least expenditure and in the simplest manner. This is happening in relation to Sindi. The people's indifference persists. There is no response from them. Hence, Mirabehn has as a last resort gone to live there. Underlying this is the conviction that the people's indifference cannot be done away with so long as we do not find out someone to live amongst the people of every village. Methods are being evolved also for the rapid disposal of night-soil.

There is no end to the difficulties of volunteers; the work of sanitation is more difficult than all other forms of service, as it is regarded as the meanest of tasks. There is a feeling of great disgust attached to it. Very few persons are prepared to do this work. I am of the opinion that there should be only one volunteer for every village. It is possible that this will yield result most quickly. He will realize that he alone is responsible for the sanitation of the entire village. By himself, he will never be able to cope with the entire work of sanitation if people from the village itself do not come forward to help him. When faced with problems, human beings find out new ways; hence the English saying: necessity is the mother of invention. As in the work of sanitation so too in the task of disposal of night-soil it is difficult to find assistance from the villagers. Let us take the example of Sindi again. People there defecate publicly in their own courtyards. The neighbouring fields are surrounded by fences, so these cannot be used. No one would be prepared to go very far. The village population consists of labourers. How can the latter find the time to go to a distance? How far can the womenfolk go? If so, nothing need be said of children. Hence, as a last resort, nothing but courtyards remain for the people to make use of. Villagers are not accustomed to have a latrine in every household. Hence so long as there are no public latrines in fair numbers or people are not prepared to make their own, public roads will continue to be used as latrines. In fact, so long as every individual does not acquire a knowledge of sanitation and he does not put it into practice, the practice of using roads as latrines, despite its being unseemly, is perhaps the least harmful from the hygienic point of view and may be tolerated.

How can a single volunteer living in a village facing such a situation carry out the work of sanitation? He should set aside a certain time each day for this task. So long as he is staying there, he should spend that time in educating the people and keeping the place clean to the extent that it is possible to do it singlehanded. As soon as someone is ready to take up the work of sanitation in the locality, he himself should seek out yet another locality in the same village. If he is capable enough he should seek the assistance of the district board and such other authorities for sanitary work. He should find out the best possible use for the night-soil which accumulates every day. He may either sell it to the owners of the fields nearby and use whatever he so earns for further sanitation work in that very area, or, if no one is prepared to purchase it, he should give it away to any farmer who is prepared to use the manure made out of it in his field and demonstrate how useful it is. This is but a trend of thought presented to the reader. I have not been able to put this idea totally into practice myself, nor to make others do so. After all this field of work is but new. Hence, for the present, there can only be an exchange of ideas. Volunteers who are doing this work will adopt from this whatever is worth adopting. They will inform me of any drawback in these ideas, and report to me the experience which they have gained wherever these have been put into practice.

[From Gujarati]

_Harijanbandhu, 27-10-1935_

118. LETTER TO PARIKSHITLAL L. MAJMUDAR

WARDHA,

_October 27, 1935_

BHAI PARIKSHITLAL,

Your two letters were duly received. I know you have been doing what you can for the Harijans. Please continue to watch the situation in Kavitha. If the Harijans there wish to leave the place we should encourage them to do so. I hope you remember that I am awaiting your letter in regard to the appeal for funds. Tell Narahari that he forgot to tell me what he intended to do regarding Bhai Velchand, and that I forgot to ask him. Ask him to write now. I hope Shashikant, who had a fall, is all right now.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

119. LETTER TO CHANDAN PAREKH

October 27, 1935

CHI. CHANDU,

I got your letter. Before you go to Vartej, please do pay a visit here. You will be returning there before December. I will be here all the while. Meanwhile, I am collecting as much information as I can.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 937. Courtesy: Satish D. Kalelkar

120. LETTER TO AMRIT KAUR

WARDHA,

October 28, 1935

MY DEAR AMRIT,

What do you say to this postcard? Choudhury has made vast strides. You will see the works when you come.

I do hope you are having full rest in Simla. I dread your habit of making work and then fretting that the day's work is not done.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 3718. Courtesy: Amrit Kaur. Also G.N. 6874

121. LETTER TO SHARDA C. SHAH

October 28, 1935

CHI. SHARDA,

Today is a day of silence. I am scribbling a few lines since I have just finished writing for Harijan. Whether or not I write, you should definitely write to me from time to time to give a full account of yourself. Lilavati is looking after the management of the kitchen for the time being. She is working very hard. Let this year bring happiness to all of you. I have received a letter from Chimanlal. It is just as well that you would be going back to Rajkot. Even there you can learn whatever you wish to learn.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C.W. 9970. Courtesy: Shardabejn G. Chokhawala

122. LETTER TO BHAGWANJI A. MEHTA

October 28, 1935

BHAI BHAGWANJI,

Please be satisfied that Devchandbhai has written to me. It is plain that he does not wish to write to you. In these circumstances, I don’t in the least feel inclined to press him to do so. Surely you don’t believe that you will have had justice if he wrote directly to you what he has written to me.

May the new year bring you happiness. I remember the matter of indigenous herbs.

Vandemataram from
MOHANDAS

SHRI BHAGWANJI ANUPCHAND, VAKILSAHEB
RAJKOT

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 5829. Also C.W. 3052. Courtesy
Bhagwanji A. Mehta

123. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

October 28, 1935

CHI. NARANDAS,

I got your letter. I understand about Jethalal. All this is a mystery. Why should Sushila take part in this? I shall be eager to know what Pranjivan Joshi has to say in the matter.

I understand about Jamnadas. Manu has been betrothed to Surendra Mashruwala.

Kanu\(^1\) has settled down very well just now. He uses his time so carefully that he can account for every minute. He keeps good health and remains cheerful. At the moment he does not in the least feel like going there. Please, therefore, give up your desire of getting him away from here. I won't hold him back if he shows the slightest inclination to go there.

\(^1\) Addressee's son

I would certainly like to take him with me on my tour. I shall be able to decide it when the tour starts. My inclination is to let him accompany me. You may take it for certain that I shall be here till January 10. Perhaps I may have to start a day earlier. In any case, I am not going out anywhere before December 31. I have to reach Ahmedabad on the 12th for the Parishad¹. After that, I have to tour a little in Gujarat. The programme will be fixed by Vallabhbhai.

I wish you all a happy new year.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 9481. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

124. LETTER TO MANILAL AND SUSHILA GANDHI

October 29, 1935

CHI. MANILAL AND SUSHILA,

I got your letters. When you feel tired, you may wind up your work there. Do not wait till you are besieged on all sides. One must understand one's limitations. If the quarrels go on increasing and you feel helpless against them, you should frankly admit defeat and wind up the whole thing. Rent out the orchard to somebody. If you get a buyer, sell it off. If the public want the journal², they should meet the expenditure. If they do not want it, it is against our principle to force it on them. About the Trust, I shall think and let you know.

I tried hard to persuade Ramdas to accompany Pragji, but he did not yield. Manu has been betrothed to Surendra, which means one more tie with the Mashruwala family.

May the new year see you prosper.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4846

¹ Gujarati Sahitya Parishad, over which Gandhiji was to preside: the session, however was postponed owing to Gandhiji's illness and was held from October 31 to November 2, 1936. For Gandhiji's Presidential and concluding addresses at the session

² Indian Opinion
125. LETTER TO SUREN德拉 B. MASHRUWALA

October 29, 1935

CHI. SUREN德拉.

It was not I who was responsible for your betrothal. It was Kishorelal and next to him Jamnalalji. Even in your short letter you have committed quite a number of spelling mistakes. Will you be able to take it well when Manu points out your mistakes? Wait and see.

I am sure both of you will be happy.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI SUREN德拉 MASHRUWALA

TOPIWALA CHAWL

SANDHURST ROAD, BOMBAY

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 2666. Courtesy: Kanubhai N. Mashruwala

126. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL GANDHI

October 29, 1935

CHI. CHHAGANLAL,

If the women spinners there refuse to accept khadi or they keep back a part of their yarn for their own clothing before giving it for weaving, you should give them no spinning work. Do not mind if as a result no spinner is left in Vijapur. If middleclass people wish to spin for their own requirements, you may give them the necessary facilities. If nobody listens to your appeal to wear khadi or to spin for his or her own clothing or by way of service, you may leave off khadi work. If the people agree to learn some other village or home industry, you may create the necessary facilities to enable them to do so, but see that we do not have to bear the expense for that. It should be possible to meet it from the sale-proceeds of the articles produced. And see that the industries which you select are also such that their products have a ready market; for instance, ghee, oil, jaggery, paper and some medicinal foods. This is only an illustrative list. If you cannot undertake any of these activities, you may try to run a hostel

1 Address from a copy

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
for Harijan boys and girls. If you cannot do even that, you may find out any other activity in the way of service.

I note that Gangabhain\(^1\) refuses to sign for registration a document transferring the land and the building to the names of the trustees of the Ashram. But in spite of her refusal to sign there is no risk to the land. We have with us a document signed by her and, therefore, she can create no difficulty. And no third party can do so either. Am I right? If, however, there is any risk even in this, discuss the matter with Mavalankar\(^2\).

Manu was betrothed the day before yesterday to Surendra Mashruwala. She is here for the present. She went to Akola yesterday for two day's stay.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

---

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 9682. Courtesy: Chhaganlal Gandhi

127. LETTER TO MRIDULA SARABHAI

WARDHA,
_October 29, 1935_

CHI. MRIDULA,

I should not really forgive you. But when many undeserving people escape from me, what is surprising about your escaping? Do come over.

Why should Gautam\(^1\) and Vikram also not spend a day here? Tempt them to come if you can give the place a good certificate after your visit.

You can have the reply to the second part of your letter after coming here.

Khurshedbehn\(^3\) will be here.

\(^1\) Gangabehn Majmudar
\(^2\) G. V. Mavalankar
\(^3\) The addressee reached England on October 29, 1935. Evidently the letter was written some time about this period. Again, in his letter dated November 7, 1935, to the addressee, Mahadev Desai wrote that Khurshed had already left.

\(^4\) Khurshed Naoroji, grand-daughter of Dadabhai Naoroji
I had received the telegram of Diwali greetings from your parents.
I am glad to read that Mother’s health is improving.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C.W. 11196. Courtesy: Sarabhai Foundation

128. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

[About October 29, 1935]¹

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

I have your letter. We have to be prepared for ups and downs in Kamala's health. I marvel at the resisting power Kamala is showing and so long as she has got this tremendous reserve of strength and will, we can hope for the best; at least I do. When I said good-bye to her in Bombay, I did not feel that we were parting for all time, and I naturally said: ‘We are going to meet again in a year's time, if I am out till then.’ I claim to have that hope still and I interpret your reports in that light.

I understand the depth of feeling behind your intense disinclination to see the “big folk”;¹ but I know that in spite of your disinclination, if there is a real approach to you, you are not going to be unapproachable. I know that at a given moment your decisions are always correct. Your firm decision, therefore, does not frighten me. I share your view, however, that during the election fever nobody would want to see you, nobody would be in the mood to discuss things that are irrelevant to their electioneering campaign, and India has ever been irrelevant on such occasions. From your standpoint you will be going to England at a safe time.

Khurshedbehn will be most probably leaving for Bombay on Wednesday. She has a bit of a literary programme before her which should keep her busy for some months.

I wonder if you have ever time to look into Harijan, which is sent to you regularly?

Love.

Blessings from
BAPU

Gandhi-Nehru Papers, 1936. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your very interesting letter. I simply cannot tax my mind about offices. I do not even know that the Constitution is coming. That it has received the King’s assent is not of much consequence. There’s many a slip between the cup and the lip. The inauguration is still far off. Many events may happen to upset the apple-cart, and way should I worry over a thing which is highly problematical? But I can say this, that if the Constitution does actually begin to work and if I find that there is no escape from taking office, that is, if the Congress is represented in the Legislatures, I would not hesitate to say so. Just at present, I can see many an escape from the predicament.

I do not think we need speculate about the Congress President because Jawaharlal Nehru has definitely written, saying that if the responsibility is entrusted to him, he will shoulder the burden. There should be no difficulty about his return in March.

You will be welcome whenever you come. From January my movements become uncertain.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From the original: C. Vijayaraghavachariar Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library learning to draw. If you are eager to learn how to draw such letters, you may succeed.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 5746

131. LETTER TO G. K. DEODHAR

October 31, 1935

MY DEAR DEODHAR,

Kishorelal gives me a graphic and pathetic description of his visit to you. You are not a broken reed. You [have] a record of faithful service in the past and, God willing, you will rise from your sick-bed to render still further service. But if God has willed otherwise, what then? Your past—stainless past—is an absolute assurance of your equally stainless future, no matter where God takes you. You are a man of faith. It is always well with those that have faith. May God keep you in our midst for many a long year.

From a manuscript of Mahadev Desai's Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

132. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

WARDHA, October 31, 1935

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

Enclosed is a letter from Parikshitlal. You seem to have read it. I think I was wrong in giving my consent. Before I correct myself, however, I must have a clear idea of the situation. I think that, if Harijans are physically ill-treated in a place and if they cannot get redress in any other way, they should leave that village and we should encourage them to do so. I have accepted and followed this policy for many years, both for individuals and groups. I started advocating it in 1906 and gave expression to my views in writing in 1908, and since then I have given the same advice on all occasions. When the Harijans

1 Founder-member of the Servants of India Society, social reformer and friend of Harijans. He passed away on November 16, 1935; vide “Telegram to R. R. Bakhale”, 16-11-1935.
2 At Kavitha; vide “Vacate Kavitha”, 5-10-1935.
of Talaja and of the villages near Meerut were terrorized, I gave this very advice. In Talaja, Pattanisaheb\(^1\) intervened on behalf of the Harijans. In the village near Meerut, there was a court case which dragged on for a long time and the Harijans lost it. The lawyers and other advisers were lukewarm and the matter was not pursued. Possibly there are special reasons in the case of Kavitha which make mass migration inadvisable. But what is the harm if the Harijans, all or some of them, leave the place after serving notice on the caste Hindus? If you differ with me about this, please explain your point of view to me. I don't know if there are any special circumstances in Kavitha. You have been there and so will be able to throw plenty of light on the situation. We should not treat the Kavitha chapter as closed. We do not hear that the kind of things which happen in Gujarat ever happen in the other provinces. In Tamil Nad the relations between Nairs [sic] and Harijans are equally bad, but I have not heard of such things happening anywhere else. We must find some remedy.

Valchand\(^2\) is thinking of coming here and bringing Ambedkar with him.

They have asked me about the programme to be drawn up during my visit there. It should include a tour of the Bhil areas and a tour for public collections for the Harijan Fund.

If the operations are necessary, you should get them done as soon as possible, unless of course the doctors think otherwise.

Deodhar is on his death-bed in Bhajekar's hospital. Write to him.

_Blessings from_
BAPU
SARDAR VALLABHBHAI PATEL
DR. KANUGA'S BUNGALOW
ELLIS BRIDGE, AHMEDABAD

[From Gujarati]
_Bapuna patro—2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine_, pp. 190-1

---

1. Prabhashankar Pattani, Dewan of Bhavnagar
2. Valchand Hirachand, an industrialist

133. LETTER TO PARIKSHITLAL L. MAJMUDAR

October 31, 1935

BHAI PARIKSHITLAL,

I couldn’t understand your letter. I remember your having written and told me that Sardar had gone to the place and brought about an understanding between the parties. But I did not know that though the Harijans were ready to migrate, Sardar disapproved of their intention. If he did, I must rectify the error now. I am asking Sardar how it can be done. You also may throw light on the matter. It was you, Dahyabhai ¹ and Puratan ² who gave me the information about Kavitha.

I had asked you to send me a scheme in connection with the appeal for funds, suggested by Thakkar Bapa, for the estimated expenses for the year. Either you did not get the letter or I did not receive your reply. I am waiting for your reply.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4005. Also C.W. 130. Courtesy: Parikshitlal L. Majmudar

134. LETTER TO DAHYABHAI M. PATEL

October 31, 1935

BHAI DAHYABHAI,

I got your letter. If you go to a village and engage yourself in silent service, you will experience peace of mind from the very first day. The people will not be able to rival you in making speeches, but they will be able to follow your example in hard work. If anybody from among the Harijans in Kavitha still wishes to leave the place, he can do so. Parikshitlal is keeping a watch on the situation.

What you say may be practicable where one latrine is used by one person. But in a place like Santa Cruz, as many as 25 people may be living in one bungalow. The latrine is at a height of 25 to 30 feet so that the stools fall to the ground from that height. Again, this can barely be removed through a dark passage. Now if there are no Bhangis in such a place, how and by whom would the latrine be cleaned? And such cleanliness maintained as you describe?

¹ Dahyabhai M. Patel
² Puratan Buch

What you say about food and drink is correct. But since I myself have not been able to reach such an ideal state despite my strenuous efforts, what light can I throw on the subject? May be, in order to reach it many other things are necessary besides right food. Let all of us strive our best to reach it.

May you prosper in the new year.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI DAHYABHAI M. PATEL
DHOLKA

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 2707. Courtesy: Dahyabhai M. Patel

135. LETTER TO MANIBEHN PATEL

October 31, 1935

CHI. MANI,

Why do you fall ill so often? I hope you don't think that devotion to one's father means that whenever the latter is ill one should fall ill, too? Shravana's parents were infirm, but he made his body as strong as steel and took them round on a pilgrimage, carrying them in a kavad carried across his shoulders. King Lear's daughter maintained good health while serving her father. Why have you, then, become prematurely old? If not indigestion, you have fever, and if not that you have cold, but you are always suffering from one thing or another. Why don't you find out the reason and make your body as strong as steel?

Blessings from
BAPU

MANIBEHN PATEL
89 WARDEN ROAD, BOMBAY

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—4: Manibehn Patelne, p. 118
I got your letter. How could you trust Harilal? How can we believe in anything he says when drunk? But I am quite guarded. I am not going to spend a single pie out of public funds for his coming here or for keeping him here. I hope you also have not promised to pay him the [railway] fare from such funds. You know that formerly he had asked me for the fare and I had plainly refused.

Why do you insist on calling away Kanu against his will? He has settled down here now, his studies are progressing and his health also is improving. He does not at all feel happy in Rajkot. What is then the point in sending for him? He has been here only for fourteen months. He has been entrusted with responsible work. For that reason, too, it will be difficult for him to leave.

If he is to accompany me on my tour, he wouldn't like to miss even one day from it. Such absence would stand in the way of his acquiring practical experience, and perhaps I may not be in a position to spare him at that time. When he is needed here, I am sure you will not call him away. Hence, the most convenient and the best time for him to go there would be when I am here. Let Santok, therefore, come [here] any day between now and December 31 or she may do so after I return and get settled here, that is, at the earliest after the end of March. If you take into account Kanu's inclination and my convenience, he should be called away only after March, or for a few days just now. Personally he does not wish to leave this place for the present. That also should be borne in mind. But finally your wish is to prevail. I have simply given you the facts which I know, to enable you to come to a decision. You will know from his letter what activities he is engaged in here. Do let me know your final decision. I will carry it out.

If Jamnadas remains so ill, how will he be able to take up responsible tasks in his present condition? What arrangement has been made for his expenses? What is the expenditure on account of Chimanlal? Is all that met from the Ashram fund? What are his

---

1 Maganlal Gandhi's widow activities there? Send me the figure of the expenditure incurred every month from the Ashram reserves.

The reasoning behind three yards and two yards of khadi is this: Satis Babu and Jethalal think that any spinner who wishes to consume three yards of khadi for personal use will, if he produces two yards of khadi for sale, realize the cost of the three yards. These figures have no importance. We have made the calculations here on a different basis. I have not gone through them. I will publish the figures when I get time.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II. Also C.W. 8482. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

137. LETTER TO A VILLAGE WORKER

[Before November 2, 1935]

Your meal is very meagre, it is starvation diet. In my opinion, you are not making full use of the instrument that God has put at your disposal. You know the story of the talents that were taken away from him who did not know how to use them, or having known would not use them?

Mortification of the flesh is a necessity when the flesh rebels against one; it is a sin when the flesh has come under subjection and can be used as an instrument of service. In other words, there is no inherent merit in mortification of the flesh.

Harijan, 2-11-1935

1 Extracted from Mahadev Desai's “Weekly Letter”. The addressee had “imposed on himself a strict regimen involving only one meal a day, consisting generally of 15 tolas of raw rice boiled, amti (made of vegetables and dal) and buttermilk—all costing only one anna per day.”

2 St. Matthew, xxv. 28-9
138. LETTER TO DR. P.C. RAY

MAGANWADI,
[Before November 2, 1935]

DEAR DR. RAY,

It is most cheering to find you taking such interest in the spread of the charkha. The scheme is being slowly inaugurated. [The] demand for khadi is bound to be reshuffled… may for want of faith of the workers sup… temporary check. I would like you, therefore, as you travel, to sow the seed and create a demand for khadi in the immediate neighbourhood of production centres. Once this is done, khadi will occupy its natural and deserved place.

If it is not an undue strain upon you I would suggest your reading all that is being written in the Harijan about the scheme.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

From the original: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Pyarelal

139. A TALK

[Before November 2, 1935]

A visitor asked Gandhiji if he was not putting too much emphasis on the gospel of work, if not making a kind of fetish of work. Gandhiji replied:

Not at all. I have always meant what I said. There can never be too much emphasis placed on work. I am simply repeating the gospel taught by the Gita where the Lord says: “If I did not remain ever at work sleeplessly, I should set a wrong example to mankind.” Did I not appeal to the professional men to turn the wheel to set an example to the rest of our countrymen?

1 From the reference to the new khadi scheme and to the addressee’s efforts towards the spread of khadi: vide “Two Questions”, 20-10-1935; “Dev Cotton”, 26-10-1935 and “Need for Humane Custom”, 2-11-1935. This was evidently written before the article in Harijan, 2-11-1935, wherein Gandhiji refers to this letter.
2 Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter”
3 Ibid
4 Ibid
5 Bhagavad Gita, III. 23

114 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
[VISITOR] Would you do the same thing with, say, one like Lord Buddha?
Yes; without the slightest hesitation.

Then what would you say about great saints like Tukaram and Jnanadev?
Who am I to judge them?

But you would judge Buddha?
I never said so. I simply said, if I had the good fortune to be face to face with one like him, I should not hesitate to ask him why he did not teach the gospel of work, in preference to one of contemplation. I should do the same thing if I were to meet these saints.

_Harijan_, 2-11-1935

140. NEED FOR HUMANE CUSTOM

Dr. P.C. Ray, who at his ripe age of 75 is exhibiting in the interest of suffering humanity the energy of youth, writes:

The custom for fine khadi has fallen off even before the expected or rather threatened rise in prices. When it falls further, if it does, it will do so not because of the rise in prices but undoubtedly because of want of love or humanity in the buyer. Humanity does not search for low prices in a spirit of bargain. The humane in man, even in his purchases, seeks opportunities of service, and therefore wants to know first not the price of the article of purchase but the condition of its producers, and makes purchases in a manner that serves most the most needy and deserving. If a sufficiently large number of men and women were actuated by this spirit of love of fellow beings, there would be an ever-increasing demand for khadi, and now more than ever, because of the knowledge that extraordinary care is being taken to assure to the humblest spinner at least a subsistence wage—a wage which would enable her not merely to eke out a living somehow but which would enable her to get sustaining food.

