determined too to get rid of the constipation if it was at all possible, so I have continued the stopping of curds. (Here is the bugle and I stop for the time being). To resume at 8 p.m. And I am now taking cooked leaves and tomatoes and dates or raisins. The bowels have moved naturally, strength has been maintained and the weight has suffered no further reduction. Yesterday I added sweet potatoes and today 12 almonds. No one need be alarmed at this change. If I feel weak or lose weight steadily, I shall at once revert to milk and shall feel all the better for the milk fast. If on the other hand the change agrees it will be a source of additional joy. Therefore you should all rejoice over the change. If it works, it is well. It is well also if it does not. I shall take no risks.

So Kaka left and he wept as he left. We had come so close to each other. Within two hours of his departure they sent mePyarelal and of course he has taken possession of me. I put him on your wheel. He spun 83 rounds. It went practically as I had set it up. We have now concocted some improvements on the holder. He is at one such whilst I am writing this. Somehow or other I can only think of the wheel and all it connotes. The Gandiv too is undergoing considerable improvement. I hope to try the improved wheel tomorrow. I will have a movable wheel and will have a spring for tension. If it works well, the output must increase. I am gradually getting control over the takli. My speed on your takli went up to 87 rounds per hour. But Vinoba says I must first try the steel takli and he has sent me two and I am trying to work at it. I haven’t yet got the result expected. But I am daily gaining confidence and hope soon to be able to pull 100 rounds per hour on the takli. (As it was 9 p.m. I had to stop here. I resume at 4.30 a.m. after prayer Sunday.) I understand about the Kumarappa differences. If Mahadev is gone Kaka has now come. He may be of help in adjusting differences. The golden rule is not to fret if things go contrary to one’s wishes and to yield where resistance is useless or likely to be misunderstood, where there is no principle at stake and where in an organization responsibility is not solely one’s own. The virtue of charity comes into play only when one comes in contact with a variety of opinion and conduct. Strict and even harsh with ourselves, charitable and even lax with regard to others. In the end, we find that we are neither strict regarding ourselves nor lax regarding others. The fact is we do not as readily observe our own blemishes as we are to detect those of others. Hence the terrible truth “Pluck the beam out of thine own eyes before you remove the mote from thy neighbour’s” or Burns’s (Is it not?) “O that we could see ourselves as others see us.” In practice I have found that it is best to search about ourselves and to assume the truth of friends’ criticism of ourselves and to take them in the first instance at their word when they disown guilt or defect. But enough of this morning sermonizing. You will act as the spirit guides you.

Love.

BAPU

8.45 p.m. 1-12-30

[PS.]

Pyarelal began well on the Bihar wheel. But it proved a failure. I fitted up the other Gandiv and it worked splendidly without a hitch. Through the favour of the Superintendent I have got the Gandiv with my improvements incorporated. It promises to work well. I have just tried it. The food experiment continues.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 5422. Courtesy: Mirabehn; also G.N. 9656
403. LETTER TO KUSUM DESAI

November 29/December 1, 1930

CHI. KUSUM (DESAI),

Though you had resolved to write every week, there has been no letter from you this week. I look upon this as a serious lapse. One may say that there is nothing as grave as violating a solemn resolution. This is such a common weakness that we don’t realize its gravity. But you should know that it is a grave weakness indeed and guard yourself against it. When you have nothing to write, you may sign on a blank sheet, as Chhotelal does. But it is not likely that a child will have nothing to say to its father or mother.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

December 1, 1930

Pyarelal took Kakasaheb’s place on the 29th.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1811

404. LETTER TO MANSHANKAR J. TRIVEDI

December 1, 1930

CHI. MANU (TRIVEDI),

From what Payrelal reports after having seen you I gather that you have recovered your strength. You must have talked with Kakasaheb to your heart’s content. Take care and do not fall ill again. Don’t be impatient to resume work. He whose aspiration is noble and who is always eager to serve works even when physically not working.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 7772
CHI. NARANDAS,

This time your packet was handed over to me as soon as it came yesterday evening. I have received the copies of Vratavichar.

If Chi. Kusum is firm in her decision, I like it. Since in any case she will not marry before swaraj is won, why should she bind herself just now? The right thing would be to act upon her inclination at that time. Convey this view of mine to both Devchandbhai and Jamnalalji. Ascertain Kusum’s real wishes. She should not advance this as an excuse if in the depth of her heart the real reason is different. She is completely free to do what she wishes. I would tell this same thing to the two young men too; if they are ready to wait till we get swaraj, why should they wish to bind themselves or bind any girl now? A brave man or bhakta would not do that, and if Kusum is a brave girl and if she has decided to marry, she should marry a brave youth. I will write to Ghanshyamdas.

Why does Manilal refuse to take milk? If he keeps up his strength, however, I don’t insist that he should take it. Only, he should not be obstinate in refusing to take it. If he is losing weight, he should take it. Why doesn’t Devdas write?

Friday morning

Ever since I had heard about Amidas, I was filled with admiration for him. He has achieved perfect victory. He was like one of the ancient sages in keeping his pledge. I believe the Ashram to have been sanctified by his having stayed there. Let all of us learn from Amidas how to die cheerfully for the sake of our pledge. If he had been inspired by my example in taking the vow of refraining from milk, etc., he had acted hastily. I think that no one should copy my example in this respect till I myself succeed in keeping such a vow. It is, however, clear to me as daylight that, having taken the vow, Amidas could not break it. A vow taken with open eyes, even if it means a risk to the body, ought not to be broken. A vow which would do harm to the soul ought not to be taken and, if sucha vow has been taken, it is one’s moral duty to break it. For instance, no one can take a vow that he will always speak untruth, for such a vow harms the soul. A vow always to speak the truth may mean a risk to the body and may cost us our life, it may even seem to harm the interests of the country, but it must be kept. I will write a letter to his father. Read it and send it on to him.

Saturday morning

As regards Sorabji’s insurance, inform him that it is beyond our means to pay the premiums. He should manage somehow to pay them and should send the receipt. Write to Jalbhai too about this. Make a note of Budhabhai’s decision concerning Nanibehn and inform her about it, and go on recovering the money till the amount is paid up. I was not satisfied by . . . ’s letter. Read the reply which I have written to him. So long as we entertain a suspicion about him, he cannot join the struggle. Only those inmates of the Ashram who are pure in our eyes may Join it.

Take the utmost care about the [spinning] yajna. Endeavour to remove the deficiencies in such work. Everyone should learn to test the strength and count of yarn, and should actually do so every day. A rough and ready method of testing the strength can be easily invented. It should be invented and everyone should test the strength of his or her yarn with its help. If the yarn spun by each is woven separately, we would know its strength better.

It was very good indeed that Sitala Sahay came. But how did he escape the attention of the U.P. Government? Show Shivabhai’s letter to Kakasaheb before you send it to me. If the facts he mentions are such as can be given publicity, there is no objection to his writing to me about them. On the contrary, there may be some advantage in informing me about them. But leave the responsibility in this regard to Kakasaheb.

. . . ’s case is a moving one. I cannot understand how . . . came to form such a connection. I will write to him. Read the letter and pass it on to him.

Sunday night

I have written the letter I mentioned above. It has turned out to be a very important one. I should like it to reach him.

---

1 The names have been omitted.
2 ibid
3 ibid
I got the taklis sent by Vinoba. Read the letter to Mirabehn for information about my health. They sent Pyarelal here immediately after Kaka had left. Read the back of page 1 for the discourse.

December 2, 1930

Inform Mahadev that he should write even from the jail, if he can get time and is permitted to write. More next week.

Blessings from

*BAPU*¹

[PS.]

The third, the fourth and the following fifth chapter should be read together, as they explain to us what the yoga of selfless action (anasakti) is and what are the means of practising it. If these three chapters are properly understood, the reader will have less difficulty in tackling what follows. The remaining chapters deal in detail with the ways and means of achieving anasakti. We should study the Gita from this point of view, and if we pursue this study we shall find without much trouble a solution of the problems which confront us from day to day. This calls for daily practice. Let everybody try it. If for instance he is angry, let him remember the verse dealing with anger and subdue that enemy. Supposing we heartily dislike somebody, or are impatient or gluttonous or in doubt as to whether we should do or should not do something or other, all these difficulties can be solved with the help of mother Gita if we have faith in it and give it constant study. Our daily recitation of the Gita as well as this series of letters is a means to this end.

The bugle for 5.30 a.m. has sounded.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PPS.]

There are 52 letter.

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./I

---

¹ For the text of the discourse which followed, vide “Letters on the Gita”—Ch. IV.
406. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

December 3, 1930

BHAI GHANSHYAMDAS,

I heard from Jamnalalji that a friend or a partner of yours had lost heavily in speculation. The message also says that this has caused you sorrow. Speculation itself implies loss. Then why take it to heart? A direct lesson drawn from this loss can even be a source of happiness. Why don’t you and your friends take a vow not to indulge in speculation any more? Earnings from speculation can never be truly ethical.

Write about Pujya Malaviyaji’s health.

Yours,

MOHANDAS

From Hindi: C.W. 6190. Courtesy: G. D. Birla

407. LETTER TO MIRABEHN

December 4, 1930

CHI, MIRA,

The Ashram post received last evening brings your disturbing letter. It does not cause anxiety but it furnishes food for reflection. What is the cause of this breakdown in health? In any case you must give yourself complete rest. You must relax both mind and body. Therefore please go gently. Read the 6th chapter [of the] Gita. Yoga should be undertaken gently. What work we are doing is yoga. Please drop me a card daily.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 5423. Courtesy: Mirabehn; also G.N. 9657
408. LETTER TO KASHINATH TRIVEDI

CHI. KASHINATH,

I got both your letters. I was glad to learn that your mother and others had arrived. If you take your meals with your mother with Narandas’s consent, I should not object. However, there is certainly a moral flaw in what you are doing. You ought to make it clear to Mother that the life which you two live is different from normal family life. Of course the financial aspect of the matter creates some difficulty. But I have stated here only the ideal. Do not take my words to mean that you ought to take your meals in the common kitchen, as we cannot always live up to an ideal and sometimes in actual practice we have to compromise it in order that we may not be forced to give it up altogether. As for your relations with Father, strictness is necessary. You should tell him in the plainest language that he should give up hopes of your taking up a job or a profession and earning money. By telling him this, you will serve him, for, as long as there is the slightest hope, he will continue complaining to you, but will cease doing so or rather the complaining will cease of itself, when he has given up the hope. This is human nature. When hope is entirely gone, despair itself turns into a sort of consolation. There are here several prisoners serving life sentences, who have no hope of being released and, therefore, live cheerfully. Those whose position is uncertain, like mine, suffer. They keep on hoping from day to day that they would soon be released. In other words, the cause of the pain in your relationship with Father is in your own mind. If you have understood your dharma clearly you should not so much as give a thought to Father’s complaining. To borrow money from friends to help Father to pay his debts and relieve his burden to that extent is not a good policy. It would be better not to receive such private benefits from one’s friends. Here again, I have merely stated the ideal. It may be advisable, in case of necessity, to borrow money from Mahavir Prasad and others if your relations with them are intimate. Solve all these problems with the master key of non-attachment.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5263
409. LETTER TO RAMABEHN JOSHI

December 4, 1930

CHI. RAMABEHN,

I have your letter. It was a beautiful one. Dhiru’s firmness is wonderful. His inclination towards mischief reflects this firmness of his. Let us hope that some of these Ashram children will excel us all in service when they grow up. If we are pure in our hearts and become daily purer, that is bound to be so.

I am not surprised by your description of the conditions in Kathiawar. That lethargy shows that we have still a long way to go. Indeed such effort is the essence of our spiritual striving. We need not, therefore, worry.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—7: Shri Chhaganlal Joshine, pp. 281-2

410. LETTER TO TARAMATI MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

December 4, 1930

I got all the information I wanted. I am not surprised to know that Mathuradas has been making very good use of his time. This experience will do him good. The separation is a test of your strength. I was happy to learn that Dilip and Jyotsna keep good health. Pyarelal is with me now. Both of us are well. Write to me from time to time.

[From Gujarati]

Bapuni Prasadi, p. 103
411. LETTER TO CHANDRAKANTA

December 4, 1930

CHI. KANTA,

There is no letter from you this time. I think you must have written the letter but it may not have reached the Ashram in time. I am used to having your letter every week and so when it does not come I wonder.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: Chandrakanta Papers. Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library

412. LETTER TO KALAVATI TRIVEDI

YERAVDA MANDIR,
December 4, 1930

CHI. KALAVATI,

I had your letters. You must improve your handwriting. It can be accomplished by writing with care. Good that Mother¹ and others have come. If you go to Kheda, be very careful and immerse yourself in service. Follow Gangabehn’s instructions.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

I understand about the mill-made slivers. No need to say anything just now.

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 5264

¹ Addressee’s mother-in-law
413. LETTER TO ANAND T. HINGORANI

Y. M.,
December 5, 1930

MY DEAR ANAND,

Depression overtakes you because you think too much about things other than the task before you. This is a sign of unfaithfulness; You will cease to worry about any other thing the moment you realizethat you are to devote yourself body, mind and soul to the duty undertaken by you. Truth demands this.

Love.

BAPU

From a microfilm, Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

414. LETTER TO ROHINI KANAIYALAL DESAI

December 5, 1930

CHI. ROHINI,

What you say is true. Let the Government seize all the goods they wish and auction them for nothing. The truth is that, under an oppressive Government, those who follow the path of right can own no property. If any is left with them, they should know that the Government can seize it whenever it wishes to do so. Our struggle does not at all depend on wealth and property.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2655
415. LETTER TO MANU GANDHI

YERAVDA MANDIR,
December 5, 1930

CHI. MANUDI,

I got your letter. Since you are learning lathi exercises, I shall have to learn them from you. A letter in a word should not be split from the rest of the word. If there is not sufficient space at the end of a line to complete a word, you should leave the available space blank. The correct word is not nabadai but nabalai. When the ‘u’ sound is short, it should be indicated by the sign q and not by w. For the present, pay attention to correctness in handwriting and not to flourishes. If it is correct, flourishes will follow without any effort on your part.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 1507. Courtesy: Manubehn Mashruwala

416. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

YERAVDA MANDIR,
December 5, 1930

CHI. PREMA,

Do you want compliments for your fast and the cheerful spirit you kept up during the period? I have already written to you about what to eat. Avoid uncooked vegetables for the present, and certainly do not eat pulses. You should take milk and curds and eat khakhra and boiled vegetables; if you can get fruits, like papaiya and mosambi, you will not require vegetables. I, personally, see no need for medicines. Apart from any other consideration, I am generally averse to taking any medicine of which the ingredients are not known to us. The fast must have completely served the purpose of medicine. I think it is necessary to continue sun-bath. See that you have enough sleep.

Do make some arrangements about children’s education.
I liked Dhurandhar’s letter very much. I have observed that everything he does is neat and clean.

Convey my blessings to Sushila on the occasion of her birthday.

When you went to Rajkot, you must have called on Jamnadas. Did you meet Manu? How is Purushottam’s health?

Is any work being done in Jamnadas’s school? Did you see any activity in Rajkot in connection with the movement? I hope to have news from you about all such matters.

Keep a watch on Dharmakumar’s bad habits. Explain the position to Durga. If she pays attention to the matter, she can do much.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

In line two of the 139th bhajan in the Bhajanavali, occurs an expression, nijanamagrahi. If Narandas or some other Gujarati knows its meaning, understand it from them and explain it to me. If you yourself know it, so much the better.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 10245; also C.W. 6693. Courtesy: Premabehn Kantak

417. LETTER TO CHAND TYAGI

December 5, 1930

Bhai Tyagi ji,

I was very pleased to have your letter. Take milk if the weakness does not go despite a regular diet. Try cooked cereals before you do that. Don’t be obstinate. I was sorry to learn of the conditions in Gurukul. Is Abhayji aware of them? What was Ramdevji’s reply? Baldev may well learn carpentry. Write to him, he should learn to construct charkha, loom, takli, etc. Who is the principal in Vr[ndavan]

1One who clings to the Name, which is his very self Ru[kukul]? Tell Premrajji to write to me how all things are. What is going on there?

Bharatiya Pathshala
Farrukhabad Bapu

Blessings from
Bapu

[PS.]
I never knew that your Urdu letters were like print, they are very good.

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 3266

418. LETTER TO KUSUM DESAI

Yeravda Mandir,
December 6, 1930

Chi. Kusum (Desai),

Your letter consisted of three sheets, but they seemed to have lost the middle sheet. I did not get it. If you remember its contents, write to me again. Pyarelal’s health has become very good. His weight is 122 pounds. He gets three pounds of milk, one pound of bread and vegetables.

At present, both of us have become crazy about spinning.

Blessings from
Bapu

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1812

419. LETTER TO BULAKHIDAS

December 6, 1930

Bhai Bulakhidas,

God will indeed test us in a thousand ways. But that will not make us lose heart. Both of you should devotedly go on doing your work till the last.

Blessings from
Bapu

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3139
420. LETTER TO MAHENDRA DESAI

December 6, 1930

CHI. MANU (MANSINH),

I got your letter. You should take care and write a more legible hand. How much do you spin daily?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 7411. Courtesy: V. G. Desai

421. LETTER TO BHAGWANJI PANDYA

December 6, 1930

CHI. BHAGWANJI,

I have your letter. Your interpretation of the term abhyasa is correct, as also of chittavrittintrodha. Dhyana=Upasana, i.e., ultimately it could mean faithfully observing one’s own dharma. In my view here the word dhyana is used in a narrower sense. Dhyana refers to our silent sittings at the time of our worship and prayers. This brings about a [sense of] dedication to the Lord, which in its turn gives rise to a disinterested attitude. No social service is possible without self-purification, which again develops in the course of social service. It is all right therefore that doubts arise in your mind but you should not fall into their currents. If they are resolved so much the better; if not you should have faith that they would be solved as you go on serving.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 334. Courtesy: Bhagwanji Purushottam Pandya
422. LETTER TO SHANTA SHANKAR BHAI PATEL

YERAVDA MANDIR,
December 6, 1930

CHI. SHANTA,

You did well to pay a visit to Shankarbhai. I was happy to learn about Kamala’s self-control. If you display the virtue which your name suggests and write your letters with a calm mind, your handwriting will improve. If a person cannot fast by dropping even one meal, he or she should learn to do so by patient effort, especially one who wishes to observe brahmacharya. Do you know that only recently Premabehn fasted for seven days? During the period of the fast, moreover, she continued the daily chores, including washing clothes and fetching water. And you say that, after you had missed one meal, your hands were shaking. The cause was the condition of your mind, and not of the body. Do you see?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3990

423. LETTER TO MAHALAKSHMI MADHAVJI THAKKAR

YERAVDA MANDIR,
December 7, 1930

CHI. MAHALAKSHMI,

I have your letter. What you say is true. No one ought to give up his or her work for any reason whatever. This is the ideal. We should not feel unhappy if everybody cannot act up to it. We should not criticize such a person even in our thoughts. We should be strict in judging our own weaknesses, but generous in judging others. This is not goodness but the correct principle to follow. We have no knowledge of the struggle which the person whose weakness we observe may be making. It is the effort which matters. It may be that we are free from a particular weakness, but that may not be the result of any effort on our part. There is no merit in our refraining from flesh-eating, since we are accustomed from birth to do without it. But there may be great merit in the self-denial of a person who was a habitual meateater but has given up eating it now, though he may repeatedly break his vow. Hence the right thing is that we ourselves should do the best we can to follow a rule perfectly, and be satisfied with what others can do. You have been getting good experience. I am sure that you will come out successful from the test. The diet which you follow is the right one.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6806

424. LETTER TO MATHURADAS PURUSHOTTAM

YERAVDA MANDIR,
December 7, 1930

CHI. MATHURADAS.

Hitherto I had been an admiring reader of your articles. That admiration remains, but now there is added to it the viewpoint of a student and a critic. I see that your book is not a self-teacher on the subject. By reading it one cannot learn carding. Even those who know it a little would not be able to carry out the reforms you suggest. The book is excellent in itself, but as a self-teacher it seems to me incomplete. As far as I have understood your book I think you have rejected the method you had explained to me and have followed a new one. I thought I had already adopted it. But on reading your book again, I find that I had done nothing new at all. Now my suggestion is that you should send me a draft lesson as if you were teaching me the method. It is not necessary to rewrite the whole of your book. How much cotton should I hold out to the string at a time and in how many pulls should it get carded? With how much cotton should I begin the carding? Should the pad be arranged anew every day and why should it be of half-carded cotton? And should that in its turn be carded the same day? Should all the cotton put on the mat in the beginning be carded the same day? As we pull at the string, the bow also swings, doesn’t it? The left hand should be used only for raising and lowering the carding-bow and it is moved forwards and backwards by the action of the rod; isn’t that what you mean? If you cannot find time to explain all this, don’t pay any attention to this letter. Your main work is to examine those who are learning there and improve their proficiency. I am like a by-stander who is looking on. I know that I have no right to engage your attention on such matters just now. This letter has two aims, one to point out the deficiencies in the book and the other to seek help for myself. Treat the second as of less importance. I have put briefly to Vithal the questions I have asked above. Let him give me his time. He will learn something while doing so.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3749

425. LETTER TO RAIHANA TYABJI

December 7, 1930

DEAR DAUGHTER RAIHANA,

Now there are two teachers in place of one, a girl and a grey beard. So the pupil is now done away with. Let us see what happens. This exercise is enough, isn’t it.1 Anyway, am I not making progress? Moreover, I have Pyarelal for companion now, and he is well-versed in Urdu. However, I would not take up much of his time for this, as he devotes all his time to spinning. You should, therefore, point out mistakes in my spelling. You should not, in your present state of health, spend much time for me. As I have plenty of leisure, I will read your letters slowly and carefully. Mother is partial to Father. His handwriting is an old man’s and yours that of a youngster. But let that be. Though a person may own a white beard, he may be young in mind and may play a thousand games—teach French to someone, translate from other languages and revolve all manner of plans in his mind. Others may be young in years, but old in mind. Of course I would not say that you are quite that, but you will cease being so if your septum trouble is cured. The news of that operation did not frighten me. In fact, I am never frightened by an operation. But I am certainly eager to have news about your health. Convey to Dahyabhai my blessings or Vandemataram—whichever he desires. I was glad to have that news about him.

1 These four sentences are in Urdu.

Khuda Hafiz.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9624

426. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

December 7, 1930

CHI. VASUMATI,

I got both your letters. You have not been arrested so far, though of course it would be good if you were. You should remain unconcerned whether or not you are arrested. Go on patiently doing all your work. I see that you have been having very useful experiences there. I have Pyarelal with me now.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9295

427. LETTER TO GANGABEHN VAIDYA

YERAVDA MANDIR,

December 7, 1930

CHI. GANGABEHN (SENIOR),

I got your letter. By not attending prayers in order that they might help in putting out the fire, the women offered real prayers. This is an example of non-action in action. You fulfilled the real purpose of prayers. Moreover, one can go on repeating Ramanama to oneself even while running to the place where fire has started in order to help put it out.

Finally, the person whose life is dedicated to service and who has burnt his or her egotism lives his life in the spirit of prayer. We pray morning and evening in order that we may be able to live thus, and, therefore, when a fire breaks out, or in similar circumstances, one may even drop prayers. But such occasions are rare.

1 This is in Urdu.

Pour out amrita against the poison which you describe. Violence is conquered by non-violence, untruth by truth, lust by self-control, anger by forbearance and avarice by generosity.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—6: G.S. Gangabehnne, p. 48; also C.W. 8767. Courtesy: Gangabehn Vaidya

428. LETTER TO SUSHILA GANDHI

CHI. SUSHILA,

I knew two or three persons of the name ‘Stuart’. One was a magistrate and afterwards became an officer in the army at the time of the Zulu rebellion. Another was a lawyer. I had become fairly intimate with the former. Is it that same Stuart who is there? Do you also wish to follow Manilal? Will you carry with you or leave behind Sita alias Dhairyabala alias whatever other names you have given her?

How many women work there?
To all of you,

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4778

429. LETTER TO PADMA

CHI. PADMA,

I got your letter. Because Gujarati is not your mother tongue, why should your handwriting be bad? What connection has one’s handwriting with the language in which one is writing? You may write in the Devnagari script and show me that you can write neatly. A letter in a word is like a drawing. A person who knows drawing can write a beautiful handwriting in any language.

If anyone presses us to eat food which we never eat, we should politely but firmly refuse—in the end that will please the other person.

We should not be rude to any British officer whom we may meet.

_Blessings from_

_BAPU_

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6116

430. LETTER TO TOTARAM SANADHYA

YERAVDA MANDIR,

_December 7, 1930_

BHAI TOTARAMJI,

Clay may be applied on the head. A mud-cap can be placed on the head while working in the sun. I used it on many occasions during the march.¹ A towel spread over with clay and tied on the head forms a cap and provides protection. How is Gangadevi’s health? Does Dhiru behave well? Is he very boisterous?

_Blessings from_

_BAPU_

PANDIT TOTARAMJI

HARIJAN ASHRAM

SABARMATI JN.

B. B. & C. I. RLY.

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 2540

¹The reference is to the Dandi March.
431. LETTER TO ANASUYABEHN SARABHAI

December 7, 1930

CHI. ANASUYABEHN,

Though I do not write to you frequently, you are always in my thoughts. How is Mridula? Did you meet her? How is her health? Khurshedbehn will be well. Did you meet Mani? Do they all stay together or separately?

God is kind. Is Bharati getting along all right?

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: G. N. 11556

432. LETTER TO BABALBHAI MEHTA

YERAVDA MANDIR,

December 8, 1930

BHAI BABALBHAI,

I got your letter. There is no need to do prayashchitta for having eaten in the company of all classes of persons in jail. Prayashchitta has no reference to cleanliness or lack of it. It is enjoined for eating food served by a person belonging to a community other than one’s own. One who does not believe in this restriction should never perform prayashchitta on that account. About other matters, Kakasaheb will guide you.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9455

433. LETTER TO MIRABEHN

December 8, 1930

CHI. MIRA,

I have reserved your letter to the last deliberately in the hope of hearing from you before or on Monday in reply to my postcard which I wrote to you on Thursday and which I hope you duly received. It contained an inquiry about your health. This obstinate constipation is disturbing. I hope when this reaches you all the effect of the attack would have worn out. I have got rid of mine by simply dropping proteid food for a while. I am now taking proteid through almonds. I should love not to go back to milk. Save now for a visible weakness, the result has been excellent. Almonds I am taking very cautiously and I cannot sustain the strength on green vegetables merely and about an ounce of almonds. I have gone to the ounce only for the last two days. I must take a cereal. I have not decided what to take. I want to try bajri or juwari—whatever the jail chapati for the day. If it agrees, the problem may be solved to my entire satisfaction. But there will be no haste, certainly no obstinacy. Immediately I feel the need, I shall go back to milk.

In another ten days I shall have finished the translation of the Bhajanavali. It has given me such a joy. I am not satisfied with the performance. Save for the fact that it is an act of love, it has no other merit—certainly no literary merit. But it will help you to know the meaning of the bhajans and that was all I aimed at. And when this is finished I hope to begin the other, viz., translation of preface to the Gujarati Gita. I do not think I shall translate the verses, but I shall go through one of the existing translations and where it is different from mine, I shall note it and translate all the marginal notes. This will simplify my work and save a great deal of labour. Please share this with Kaka. He will feel interested in the proposal.

The improvements in the Gandiv have exceeded all expectations. It now runs smoothly. It has the tension which was absent. But I am not going to weary you with a description of the improvements. I am describing them in a letter to Keshu. I am sure that for speed it cannot now be excelled by any other wheel. But that has still to be tested. My assurance won’t create more yarn, I know.

You must give yourself ample rest and must not work under tension. It is good for the wheel but not for human beings.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 5424. Courtesy: Mirabehn; also G.N. 9658
434. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

Thursday morning, December 4/9, 1930

CHI. NARANDAS,

I got your letter yesterday evening. They pass on the packets to me and post them to you with great care. It seems that the packets are delayed in posting by a day.

The doctor wishes to come during Diwali. Does that mean after nine months? Or does he mean the Christian Diwali? If he means the Hindu Diwali, a great many things will have happened by then.

Mahalakshmi and Madhavji are very conscious of the deep significance of a pledge. Hence both of them should be pained by a violation of even the letter of a pledge. But we should be satisfied if everyone keeps a pledge as he or she understands it and to the best of his or her ability, and it seems that most people do so. You should keep them vigilant.

Do what you think best about Giriraj. Since you will have to bear the burden, I will accept your decision as the only proper one. I know that Krishna will always have his own way. If he keeps good health, I think he is likely to do great service in future.

I believe the same about Purushottam. Let him write to me from time to time.

Pyarelal is improving quite well in health. I hope it will not go down while he is with me. His being with me is like a goat being near a wolf. A goat tied in front of a wolf will grow thinner every day even if you feed it on the finest grass. Something of that sort used to happen to Pyarelal. I hope that is not so now. I blame myself a good deal for what used to be. Let us see what God wills. He will get what he wants by way of food. At present, he takes milk and curds and eats bread, vegetables and papaiya.

I had not imagined that Parnerkar would mismanage things as badly as he has done. He is a worker with pure motives, but it seems that he cannot cope with work. You did very well in being strict with him and getting the accounts in order. I hope he will take rest now and improve his health. Should we assume that the business at Bidaj is running at a loss? If you think it necessary to reduce the scale or wind up any of our activities, do so. Anyone who works in the spirit of non-attachment soon discovers the measure of his ability. He will never be too eager to do things and never undertake anything beyond his capacity. Really speaking, he does not have to seek work. Work comes to him unsought, and he does his best to do full justice to it. To the world he seems a man who has no work, for his face betrays no anxiety and he never complains about the burden of work. In fact he carries no burden. He entrusts his burdens to Lord Krishna and dances as He wills.

Jethalal had written to me saying that he would send a report of the work done. I have not received the report. I understand what you say about Kamalabehn Lundi. That is what marriage is. The desire for it has its source in lust and attachment. Marriage is called a sacrament because it is a means of controlling lust. That is how it was conceived, at any rate. But this intention is now forgotten, and so for most people marriage has become a means of self-indulgence. I will write to Gangabehn and Nanibehn.

I have been watching your experiment in diet. Give me detailed information from time to time. It will certainly benefit you if you eat only a small quantity of groundnuts. You may not even need them when you have milk and curds. There is certainly some truth in the advice which research-workers now give against eating many articles at a time. All the foods are not simultaneously digested in the same manner and to the same degree and, therefore, a mixture of too many of them disturbs the stomach. The description of compassion was very good indeed. You say that you have sent the printed copies of the discourses; that may also mean that they are being dispatched now. I have not received them.

Friday morning

I have given all details about my health and my diet in the letter to Kakasaheb, and so I do not repeat them here. I had assumed that you would send for Keshu and hear his complaint, and that was why I did not write about it in my letter. But I give a summary now as far as I remember what it was.

1. You get angry with him without any reason.
2. Once he tried to explain matters to you, but you did not listen to him and shouted at him so loudly that all could hear you and you said many improper things.
3. You are very partial to Kusum, Navin and Dhiru and do not even listen to any complaints against them.
4. You have taken away from him the management of the factory without any reason.

5. Damodardas left the Ashram out of disgust at your partiality.

I have written to Keshu and told him that just as I used to be under Maganlal’s spell and saw no faults in him, so am I under yours and see no fault in you, and will not, therefore, be ready to believe anything about you which I have not myself observed. I, however, advised him to open his heart to you and tell you everything. He merely said in reply that he was not satisfied by my letter. After that I have kept quiet since he was to have a talk with Mahadev. Now you should, yourself, call him and show to him his complaints which I have described. If I have misunderstood him, he will correct my mistake. If I have left out anything, he should add that. You may then try to satisfy him if you can. I have written to him and advised him to take up some work, no matter what it is. I have told Kakasaheb about him. I have advised him, too, that he should see Kakasaheb. I have no doubt that it will do him no good whatever to remain without work.

If Harilal Desai wants to take up service in the Ashram and if you think there will be no harm in giving him a job do give him one. He is unmethodical in work but he is a young man of transparent sincerity of purpose. I think it will be worth while having him as one of our workers. Did you read the long letter which . . .¹ wrote to me? He will produce no effect on me unless he tells me something concrete observed by himself. I believe . . .² to be a pure-hearted girl. . .³ has also produced on me the impression of being pure in heart and one who would speak the truth. I had a happy experience of him also during the march. He had spread the fragrance of his character in the Kashi Vidyapith too. It is true that he has been guiding . . .⁴ and trying to raise her level, but I have seen in him nothing but the attitude of a brother and teacher.

Silence Day afternoon

Try to find soon a piece of leather to repair the soles of the sandals. I find that the soles of the new pair, too, are none too strong. Signs of its wearing out could be seen today. About my health and ¹The names have been omitted.

² ibid
³ ibid
⁴ ibid
diet, you will find something in the letter to Mirabehn and a little in the letter to Kakasaheb too. Hence I say nothing here.

These days I seem to be able to observe small things with greater attention, and so I cannot help noticing the character of the handwriting in the different letters received in the packets sent by you. I am trying to improve my bad handwriting. You must have observed this in every letter of mine. Bad handwriting is of course a form of discourtesy. Discourtesy in every form is violence, but bad handwriting is direct violence too. Anything which causes unnecessary pain to our neighbour or to any living creature is nothing but violence. I have twice as much experience as others of what pain and inconvenience are caused to the reader by bad handwriting. I have, in the first place, the experience of having to read letters written in bad writing by others and also the experience of the pain caused to others by my handwriting. My aim in saying this is to advise all inmates of the Ashram, men and women, boys and girls, to take great care to write a good hand. This requires no time but only some thought. One must have love for the other party. Let all of them observe the following rules:

1. They should leave enough space between the words.
2. They should avoid flourishes in the letters.
3. They should never leave a letter half-written.
4. They should not let the letters flow into one another.
5. As far as possible, they should write to no one in pencil.

If they follow these rules, they will certainly be able to make their handwriting legible. Haste signifies attachment. Let no one write in haste. Everyone should be content with what he or she can write slowly and patiently.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

There are 83 letters today, but No. 36 seems to have been omitted and so, really speaking, there are 80 only. The 81st is for the brother of the late Mangaldas Sheth. Have it delivered to him immediately.

The separate sheets of the discourses are included in the total number.¹

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./I

¹ For the text of the discourse which followed, vide “Letters on the Gita”—Ch. IV.
435. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

YERAVDA MANDIR,
December 9, 1930

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I have had no letters from you for some time. I do feel worried. But I believe that everything must be all right. God will look after you.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3383

436. LETTER TO J. C. KUMARAPPA

December 11, 1930

MY DEAR KUMARAPPA,

I note what you say about Kamalabehn. May she prosper in the right sense!! ‘This correspondence’ need not cease. I would gladly continue it if you will further cross-question me. Many things I have noticed become clear through sheer lapse of time and consequent, unconscious observation.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 10083
437. LETTER TO ANAND T. HINGORANI

December 11, 1930

MY DEAR ANAND,

I have left not one single letter of yours unanswered. I hardly think they have been intercepted. I have answered all your questions. I do hope you will get them all.

For avoiding constipation try green leafy vegetables and tomatoes only without any protein food for two or three days. This plan has worked well with me. Alternatively try stewed French plums without anything else.

Love to you both.

BAPU

[PS.]

I am well but am not taking fresh fruit.

From a microfilm. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

438. LETTER TO KUSUM DESAI

December 11, 1930

CHI. KUSUM (SENIOR),

I got your letter. I observe no harmful effect on my health. I see that the changes have done me nothing but good. Do not worry on my account at all.

Pyarelal’s time is taken up as under: 375 rounds on the spinning-wheel, 100 rounds on the takli and making the required number of slivers. This work leaves him very little free time. The takli takes up two hours of his time. I, too, do almost the same work. I spin 100 rounds on the takli, but am satisfied with 275 on the wheel. The total comes to 375.

What you say about the girls is correct. Write to me more plainly.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1813
439 LETTER TO JAYAPRAKASH NARAYAN

December 11, 1930

CHI. JAYAPRAKASH,

I have your beautiful letter. What you have thought about Father is only right. I shall say nothing more about it. I hope you were successful with Ghanshyamdas.

As regards the motherland being considered as your mother there is a flaw in your thought. Just as loving one’s mother does not mean that one should not love another’s mother, so also loving one’s motherland does not mean hating other countries. Where there is no love for the motherland love of the world is an illusion. And since the motherland has a greater right over us, being proud of the motherland without any ill will for other countries is only proper. I cannot directly care for the children of the whole world. But if I care lovingly for the children who are in my keeping I shall to that extent be doing service to the children of the world. The case of the motherland is exactly similar. After all it does matter in which land and in which atmosphere we are born. Ahimsa has its origin in this thought. In so far as ahimsa means universal love it can have direct application in our serving the creatures who are nearest us.

I hope you will now take Prabhavati to the Ashram.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Hindi original: Jayaprakash Narayan Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

440. LETTER TO PRABHUDAS GANDHI

December 12, 1930

CHI. PRABHUDAS,

If one does not like a particular name, he should himself suggest a better one. If Dhiru suggests a better one, we will keep it. As far as I am concerned, I like the name ‘Magan’ for your spinning-wheel. The three reasons given by you are even more appropriate.

Do not at all think about how long you will have to stay in Almora. You know of my desire of setting up an ashram there. Just take it that you are running an ashram on a rented place. A person who runs an ashram is not different from others. Any place where the rules of an ashram are followed, is like an ashram. You are a society of eight persons. You have with you there the Gita, the Ramayana and the spinning-wheel. What more do you want? For running the ashram, it is necessary to have some persons. Just take it that you three are the ones sent there for the purpose.

Devotion of Tulsidas was the devotion of the future generation. Rama in a human form did not exist in Tulsidas’s time. His utterances are imaginary . . . even if Rama in a human form did exist in his time, his origin as God in human form took place in a later period. Compare the seventh chapter of the Gita, to the grief of Rama. “I am the Creator of all the three qualities.” Wherever we find deceit and fault in God, we need not accept Tulsidas’s saying that God has no faults and that we should not do as He does. We have to observe the rules of proper conduct. We cannot abide by the text of the inimitable book of Tulsidas, but have to abide by its inner meaning. What does not appeal to us should be set aside. One experiences the mind’s quality of forgetfulness every minute. Think over it.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: S.N. 32944

441. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

YERAVDA MANDIR,
December 12, 1930

CHI. BRIJKRISHNA,

Your letter. I gave up fresh fruit on learning of the sufferings outside. Now Pyarelal is with me. Eating, drinking, [spinning] yajna are all karma or actions. An action that does not deserve to be undertaken is vikarma or perverse action. Akarma is absence of action, i.e., action undertaken by man without attachment or desire for the fruit. A perverse action cannot be undertaken without attachment. Do write if you have any doubts. Your health must be good when you come out [of jail].

We both are well.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 2385
CHI. MIRA,

Your p.c. was duly received. The absence of any further news from you, I take to mean perfect restoration. After each illness you are soon well, because the treatment followed is natural, but every sickness leaves behind it a legacy of weakness unless the system is allowed full rest and the mind relieved of tension. I suppose the mental control is the most difficult. For this the sovereign remedy is the application of the \textit{Gita}. Each time mind suffers a shock, there is failure in application. Let good news as well as bad pass over you like water over a duck’s back. When we hear any, our duty is merely to find out whether any action is necessary and if it is, to do it as an instrument in the hands of Nature without being affected by or attached to the result. This detachment appears a scientific necessity when we remember that in bringing about a result more than one instrument is employed. Who shall dare say ‘I have done it’[?] I know you know all this. Nevertheless, I drive the truth home, so that from the brain it may percolate to the heart. So long as it remains in the brain only, it is a dead weight on it. Any truth received by the brain must immediately be sent down to the heart. When it is not, it suffers abortion and then it lies on the brain as so much poisonous matter. What poisons the brain poisons the whole system. Hence the necessity of using the brain as it should be merely as a transmitting station. Whatever is there received is either transmitted to the heart for immediate action or it is rejected there and then as being unfit for transmission. Failure of the brain to perform this function properly is the cause of almost all the ills that flesh is heir to as also for mental exhaustion. If the brain simply performed its function, there need never be any brain-fag. So whenever we suffer from illness generally there is not only a dietetic error but there is also failure on the part of the brain to function properly. The author of the \textit{Gita} evidently saw this and gave the world the sovereign remedy in the clearest possible language. Whenever therefore anything preys upon your mind, you should meditate on the central teaching of the \textit{Gita} and throw off the burden. Let us hope there never will be a recurrence of the terrible constipation.
As to Kumarappa if you have enough charity and goodwill forward to him all the criticism you receive leaving the result to take care of itself. It is a duty you owe to him to let him have the criticisms. You may now use Kaka too for the purpose of sending your messages.

For me the milkless experiment continues as yet without any bad result. The weight has suffered a further decrease of 3 lb. but the vitality remains. One cause of the decrease in weight is that I am most cautious about increasing the quantity of cereals and almonds I take. Almonds remain at 3 tolas and bajri and juwari bhakhari a quarter, i.e., about 2 tolas each time, i.e., at 11 and 5. I may soon increase the weight. Anyway the condition of the bowels is extraordinarily good. I quite agree with you that the enema as a habit is a bad thing and should be got rid of, if at all possible. It has been possible with the dropping of milk as it had become when, on going to Wardha, you will recall, I had dropped milk. Indeed but for my folly in hastily following Gopalrao I might still have been flourishing on the diet I had then adopted. The present diet is a slight modification of the Wardha one.

Whenever you are ill, you will not hesitate to write to me at once without waiting for the weekly letter day.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: C.W. 9283. Courtesy: Mirabehn

443. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

December 13, 1930

CHI. VASUMATI,

I got all your letters together. It is good that the women have been arrested. I give all the news about myself in the common letter and, therefore, say nothing in letters to individual persons. My health is all right. I have given up milk at present and eat a rotla of jowar or bajra, vegetables and three tolas of almonds. And in addition, lemons of course, and sometimes dates. This diet has helped me to get rid of the need for enemas. But I must wait and see whether I can keep it up. The weight has gone down, but I do not worry about that at all.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9296
444. LETTER TO NIRMALA DESAI

December 13, 1930

CHI. NIRMALA,

I got your letter. I do not remember any letter of yours to which I did not reply. Why did Mother go back? Did she not feel happy there? Or had she come only for a few days? How is your leg now?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9457

445. LETTER TO RAMACHANDRA TRIVEDI

December 13, 1930

CHI. RAMACHANDRA,

I have your letter. Write in ink and shape the letters well. Good that all have arrived at the Ashram. Tell Jiji1 to give up the practice of untouchability and live in peace. There is no dharma in untouchability.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 5265

446. LETTER TO SHARDA C. SHAH

YERAVDA MANDIR,

December 14, 1930

CHI. SHARDA,

I am not aware that I have not replied to your letter. It would not be surprising if I had forgotten in my hurry. You are constantly harassed by asthma. Why don’t you drive it out? There must be something wrong with your diet or you may be getting excited. One does get asthma when one’s feelings are excited.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C.W. 9895. Courtesy: Shardabehn G. Chokhawala

1 Literally, ‘elder sister’, here addressee’s mother who was then at the Ashram.
447. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

December 14, 1930

CHI. PREMA,

I have your letter. I understand what you say about punishing children. Your argument is an old one. It is a vicious circle. Punishment did you good and so you think you should punish the children. When the children grow up, they will do the same. This is exactly the argument by which people justify their faith in violence. It is our aim to rise above this misleading experience. I admit that that requires patience. We have come together in the Ashram to cultivate that patience. Our aim is not just to impart education to children or teach them discipline, but to build character in them. Education, discipline, etc., are means to that end. If the result of building character in them is that education and discipline are neglected, let that be so. I understand your argument, though. I also see that there is no ill will behind your use of the rod. But there are certainly anger and impatience behind them. May I make a suggestion? Call a meeting of the children. If any of them say, ‘You may punish us, and in this manner, if we play mischief or disobey you’, you may punish them in the manner which they suggest. You should not punish those who do not want you to punish them. If you try this method, you will see that you do not need to punish them. You should keep up this discussion. Do not give up arguing out of impatience or despair. Till your reason is convinced of what I say, you should follow your own path. I know that you are dedicated to truth and, therefore, I am sure that you will realize the truth ultimately.

Your diet seems to be all right.

You did not describe your visit to Rajkot.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 10246; also C.W. 6694. Courtesy: Premabehn Kantak
448. LETTER TO PADMA

December 14, 1930

CHI. PADMA,

I have your letter. This time the handwriting was better. Improve it still further. I was happy to learn that there was nothing serious about the tumour. All the same, take care of your health. I am glad that you write every detail in the diary. To what term has Sarojinidevi been sentenced?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6117

449. LETTER TO VANAMALA PARIKH

December 14, 1930

CHI. VANAMALA,

As you used quite a big slip of paper for me, I have preserved it. If Dhiru uses bad language, you should lovingly persuade him not to do so. You should also inform Premabehn.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5756

450. LETTER TO NANABHAI I. MASHRUWALA

YERAVDA MANDIR,
December 14, 1930

BHAI NANABHAI (AKOLA),

I have your letter. You have got a worthy son-in-law indeed. He has gone away to live in a rest-house. And now Sushila will follow. And then Tara. Surendra also has been pressing his name as a candidate. I feel happy. This is true dharma. Till now, we used to enjoy pleasures in the name of religion. If Tara can stand it, let her take sun-baths. You also will benefit considerably from them. Along with them, you should take hip-baths in the prescribed manner. And the food should be simple.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4779

451. LETTER TO KUNVARJI MEHTA

December 14, 1930

BHAi KUNVARJI,

I got your letter full of information. Ask Jugatram too to write. I am all right wherever I am, whether in or out of jail. God holds the string and I dance as He pulls it.

Kanjibhai’s self-sacrifice is great, and his courage greater still. Convey my compliments to him.

I have written to Napoleon.¹

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2689

452. LETTER TO MANIBEHN PATEL

YERAVDA MANDIR,

December 14, 1930

CHI. MANI (SARDARIJI),

Now that you are out of prison, I expect to get from you a letter filled with details of your experience. How do you do?

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—4: Manibehn Patelne, p. 75

¹Chhotabhai Kalyanji Mehta
CHI. KASHINATH,

I got your letter. I have already replied to Kalavati. The treatment being given to Mother seems to be all right. There is no doubt that constipation is the root cause of many diseases. I will describe for your information the experiment I am making at present, which has succeeded in curing my constipation at least. For two or three days I took boiled leafy vegetables, together with which I had also boiled unripe tomatoes. That by itself cured the constipation. Then I started adding crushed almonds, gradually increasing the quantity to three tolas and now I have been taking a few bhakharis made of jowar and bajra flour. This seems to keep up my strength. Of course I can say nothing definitely. I can do that if I can go on like this for two or three months. Anyone who wishes to follow my example should do so with great care. Both Santok and Radha know about the two types of bath described in Kuhne’s book. They should prove very beneficial for Kalavati. We do not have a copy of the book on mouth hygiene.

Convey my compliments to Dr. Sarjuprasadji. I wish him success in his work.

How do I deserve any blessing for the low prices of grain? Wouldn’t the cultivators, for their part, curse me? There are several reasons for the prevailing low prices. As far as I am concerned, I see no objection to making extracts from my letters provided they are taken with Narandas’s consent.

Pyarelal is happy and cheerful. He has two editions of the Ramayana with him, and he is not therefore, anxious to have other books now. After coming here, he had perforce to stop his reading.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5266

---

1 Entitled Mukhacharyavijnana
454. LETTER TO HEMPRABHA DAS GUPTA

YERAVDA MANDIR,
December 14, 1930

CHI. HEMPRABHA,

Your letter. That 1,000 copies of the Bengali edition of Anasaktiyoga have been sold augurs well. In winter mornings it is good to expose as much of the body as possible to the sun rays between 9 and 10. It is also beneficial to take some raw onion with roti by way of medicine during winter. Onion has many qualities, though some drawbacks too. The main drawback is that of smell, but that can be avoided by taking a small quantity.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1679

455. LETTER TO SHANTA

December 14, 1930

CHI. SHANTA,

Your letter. Looking after Jiji is also a kind of national service. It should be performed without attachment. Jiji needs to be served and there is nobody else who can do it. We have no self-interest in this service.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 5268
456. LETTER TO RAMACHANDRA TRIVEDI

Sunday [On or after December 14, 1930]

CHI. RAMACHANDRA,

The letter bears no signature, but it is certainly from you. Your effort in improving your writing is good. Keep it up. Tell Jiji that, in regard to observance of dharma the question of Father’s pleasure or displeasure does not arise. Ultimately everyone is reconciled if we observe dharma. We have the example of Mirabai before us. Jiji should not practise untouchability if she regards it a sin, as she ought to.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 5291

457. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

December 15, 1930

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

From Jayaprakash’s letter, it seems you must be in the Ashram now. It has been arranged now that letters from you should be handed over to me as soon as they are received. But I got no postcard or letter either today or yesterday. If you have still not gone over to the Ashram, do so immediately. Even after you have gone there, you should write to me daily for some time. Your fainting fits must stop, and I think they will in the Ashram. If you require fruit, etc., don’t hesitate to ask for it. And don’t plunge into work immediately. You have done enough work in the Ashram in the past, and hence you should take complete rest now. Don’t burden your mind with worries. Everything will happen as God wills it. Meditate over the hymn Premal Jyoti².

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3384

¹ From the contents it appears this letter was written after the letter to the addressee dated December 13, 1930. The Sunday following it was December 14.
² A Gujarati rendering, by Narasinhrao Divetia, of Newman’s Lead, Kindly Light
458. "ASHRAM BHAJANAVALI"

1

प्रातः स्मरणि हृदि संस्पर्शस्ततत्त्वम्

Early in the morning I call to mind that Being which is felt in the heart, which is sat (the eternal), chit (knowledge) and sukham (bliss), which is the state reached by perfect men and which is the super-state. I am that immaculate Brahma which ever notes the states of dream, wakefulness and deep sleep, not this body, the compound made of the elements—earth, water, space, light and air.

20-12-1930

2

प्रातर्थजागि मनस्रोचसामान्यम्

In the early morning I worship Him who is beyond the reach of thought and speech and yet by whose grace all speech is possible. I worship Him whom the Vedas describe as neti neti (not this, not this). Him they, the sages, have called God of gods, the unborn, the unfallen, the source of all.

7-5-1930

1 Ashram Bhajanavali is a collection of devotional songs which formed part of the morning and evening prayers at Gandhi’s ashrams. They were in various languages and taken from various sources, some of them obscure, but all fairly popular in Hindu religious tradition. Gandhi rendered these into English for Mirabehn’s benefit, in the first place, during his imprisonment in Yeravda Central Prison. The work of translation was begun on May 6, 1930 and the last hymn was translated on December 15.

In 1934 George Allen & Unwin Ltd. brought out an adaptation of the work by John S. Hoyland. (For Gandhi’s permission for its publication, vide “Letter to J. S. Hoyland”, 15-12-1933.) But in order to make the poems acceptable to English readers, Hoyland omitted a great deal, “chiefly Indian names and symbolism” but also much else so that at places it is difficult to recognize the original in the adaptation. See for instance Gandhi’s translation of verse 8 and Hoyland’s adaptation of it (p. 388).

The version reproduced here is taken from a photostat of the original work in Gandhi’s hand (C. W. 4903).

2 Note by Gandhi: “1st verse rewritten on 20-12-1930.” Gandhi first wrote it on May 6, again on November 20 and then finally on this date.

VOL.50 : 23 AUGUST, 1930 - 5 JANUARY, 1931 323
In the early morning I bow to Him who is beyond darkness, who is like the sun, who is perfect, ancient, called Purushottama, (the best among men) and in whom (through the veil of darkness) we fancy the whole universe as appearing even as (in darkness) we imagine a rope to be a snake.

8-5-1930

O! Goddess Earth with the ocean for thy garment, mountains for thy breasts, thou consort of Vishnu (the Preserver), I bow to thee; forgive the touch of my feet.

NOTE. Bowing to the earth, we learn to be humble as the earth which supports the beings that tread upon it. Earth therefore is rightly the consort of the Preserver.

9-5-1930

May the Goddess Saraswati (of learning), the destroyer completely of black ignorance, protect me. She who is white as the mogra flower or the moon and a garland of snow, who has worn white robes, whose hands are adorned with the beautiful bamboo of her veena (a kind of violin), who is seated on a white lotus and who is always adored by Brahma, Vishnu, Siva and the other gods.

10-5-1930

O God with a curved mouth, big body, refulgent like ten million suns, keep me ever free from harm whilst doing beneficent acts.

NOTE. This is addressed to God represented by the mystic letter ‘ॐ’ pronounced ‘Om’. Mark its curved mouth and big body. Its mystic splendour has been sung by the Upanishads.

11-5-1930
Guru (teacher) is Brahma, he is Vishnu, he is Mahadev, he is the great Brahman itself. I bow to that guru.

NOTE. This refers of course to the spiritual teacher. This is not a mechanical or artificial relationship. The teacher is not all these in reality but he is all that to the disciple who finds his full satisfaction in him and imputes perfection to him who gave him a living faith in a living God. Such a guru is a rarity, at least nowadays. The best thing is to think of God Himself as one’s Guru or await the Light in faith.

12-5-1930

I bow to Vishnu, who is peace incarnate, who lies on a snaky bed, from whose navel grows the lotus, who is the supreme lord of the gods, who sustains the universe, who is like unto the sky, who has the colour of clouds, whose body is blissful, who is the lord of Lakshmi (goddess of good fortune), who has lotus-like eyes, who is knowable by the yogis through meditation, who dispels the fear of the wheel of birth and death and who is the sole Ruler of all the worlds.¹

13-5-1930

Forgive, O merciful and blessed Mahadev, all those sins of mine, of commission or omission, mental or actual and whether done

¹ Hoyland’s adaptation of this reads:
I bow to Thee, O Saviour-God:
The universe is stayed in place by Thee;
To those who seek Thee Thou dost show Thyself;
Known in the heart’s most secret meditation:
Thou drivest far the fear of death, the fear of life:
And Thou, Thou only,
Commandest by Thy sovereign sway all worlds;
To Thee I bow, O Saviour-God. through the hands or the feet, the speech, the ears or the eyes. Let Thy will be done.

14-5-1930

10

[नल्लं कामये राज्यं न स्वर्गं नापनर्भवम्]

I desire neither earthly kingdom nor paradise, no, not even release from birth and death. I desire only the release of afflicted life from misery.

15-5-1930

11

[स्वरतं प्रेजुन: परिपालनतातम्]

Blessed be the people; may the rulers protect their kingdoms by just means, may it be always well with the cow¹ and the Brahmin²;
may all the peoples be happy.

16-5-1930

12

[नमस्ते यते ते जगत्कारणाय]

I bow to Thee the sat (see first verse), the cause of the universe, I bow to Thee the chit (1st verse), the refuge of the world, I bow to Thee the one without a second, the giver of salvation, I bow to Thee the Brahman, the all-pervading, the eternal.

17-5-1935

13

[त्वमेकं शारणं त्वमेकं चरणं]

Thou art the only refuge, Thou art the only one to be desired,
Thou art the sole protector of the universe, Thou art self-revealed,
Thou art the sole creator, preserver and destroyer of the universe,
Thou alone art supreme, immovable, unchangeable.

18-5-1930

¹ Note by Gandhiji: “Cow=agriculture”
² Note by Gandhiji: “Brahmin=education”
Of all the fears, Thou art the chief, of all that is terrible Thou art the most terrible, Thou art the motion of all life, Thou art the holy of holies, Thou art the sole regulator of the mightiest places, Thou art the greatest among the great. Thou art the chief among all protections.

19-5-1930

We think of Thee, we worship Thee, we bow to Thee as the witness of this universe, we seek refuge in Thee the sat, our only support, yet Thyself needing none, the ruler, the barque in the midst of this ocean of endless birth and death.

20-5-1930

That which goes by the name of adversity is not such; nor is that prosperity which goes by that name. To forget God is adversity; ever to think of Him is prosperity.

21-5-1930

Let him be whosoever he may be whether Vishnu or Mahadev, Brahma or Indra, Sun or Moon, Lord Buddha or Mahavir, obeisance be ever only to him who is free from the poisonous effect of desire and anger, who is filled with compassion for all life and who is purified by a perfectly virtuous life.

22-5-1930
The face of truth is overlaid with a golden lid, O God, remove it so that I may see the true light.

23-5-1930

O God, the Knower of all the ways, lead us along the right path so as to enable us to reach the goal; wrestle with our dark sins; we make obeisance to Thee again and again.

24-5-1930

Both that which is good and that which is pleasing face man. A wise man will discriminate and will certainly prefer the good to the pleasing whereas the foolish one will prefer the pleasing thinking it to be profitable.

25-5-1930

I shall tell thee in one word that state which all the Vedas establish, to which all the austerities are dedicated and desiring which devotees observe brahmacharya. It is Om.

26-5-1930

1 Ishopanishad, 15
2 Ishopanishad, 18
3 Kathopanishad, i. ii. 2
4 Ibid
5 Note by Gandhiji: “4, page 24, 6th ed.”
22

[न तत्र सूर्यों भाति न च चन्द्रतारकम्]¹

The sun does not carry its light there, nor the moon, nor the stars, not even lightning can penetrate there, how then can this fire? All of them derive their light from It and all this (universe) is lighted by Its splendour.²

27-5-1930

23

[तपः षड़ते ये स्बूष्यस्वत्त्वयः]³

Those knowing ones who with austerities and faith live the forest life in peace begging for their food becoming sinless enter through the sunny gate that abode where dwells that well-known immortal changeless Being.⁴

28-5-1930

24

[आत्मानं रथिनं बिन्द्रित्म शरीरं रथमेव तु]⁵

Regard the soul as the warrior, body as his chariot, reason as the charioteer, mind as the reins; they call senses horses, sense-objects meadows; wise men have said that the soul acts through the mind and the senses.⁶

29-5-1930

¹ Kathopanishad II. ii. 15
² Note by Gandhiji: “This should have been later. It is the translation of verse 14, p. 28, 6th edition.”
³ Mundakopanishad, I. ii. 11
⁴ Note by Gandhiji: “Verse 15, p. 28, 6th ed.”
⁵ Kathopanishad, I. iii. 3-4
⁶ Note by Gandhiji: “5-6, p. 24”
25

[विज्ञानसारस्मतु मन:प्रग्रहवान्नः] ¹

He whose reason is like an experienced charioteer and whose mind is under control like the reins crosses over safely and safely comes to the journey’s end, the excellent abode of Vishnu.

30-5-1930

26

[उतिष्ठत जागत प्राण्य वरान्निर्दृक्] ²

Awake, arise, and learn wisdom from the wise. The sages say to traverse this way (through life) is as difficult as it is to walk along the edge of a razor.

31-5-1930

27

[अन्नम्येऽको भुवनं प्रविष्टं] ³

Even as fire though always the same assumes different forms as it passes through different media, so does the indwelling spirit, though essentially always the same, appear different passing through different media

1-5-1930

28

[वायुम्येऽको भुवनं प्रविष्टं] ⁴

Even as the air though always the same assumes different forms as it passes through different media so does the indwelling spirit, though essentially always the same, appear different passing through different media.

2-6-1930

¹ Kathopanishad, I. iii. 9
² Ibid.
³ Kathopanishad, II. ii. 9
⁴ Ibid.
Even as the sun which gives light to all the eyes remains unaffected by the external defects of these eyes so is the oversoul dwelling in all that lives not affected by the, external woes of mankind.

3-6-1930

Those wise men alone, not others, attain eternal happiness who feel dwelling in themselves that one all-controlling power which pervades all life and though one appears as many.

4-6-1930

Those wise men alone, not others, attain eternal peace who feel dwelling in themselves that God who is the permanent essence among the impermanent, who is the life in all that lives and who though one fulfils the desires of many.

5-6-1930

Having realized (the impermanence of) the status to be obtained by works, a Brahmin should cultivate detachment. Stability cannot come from activity. To know that he should reverently approach a teacher who knows the Vedas and is intent on God.

6-6-1930

1 Kathopanishad, II. ii. 9.
2 Ibid.
3 The source has “who”.
4 Kathopanishad, II. ii. 13
5 Note by Gandhiji: “For 14 & 15 verses see leaf 8.”
6 Mundakopanishad, I. ii. 12
To him thus come with due reverence, calm of mind brought under control, the wise teacher imparts divine knowledge whereby one really knows that permanent Being who is truth incarnate.

7-6-1930

Pranav (Om) is the bow, the spirit is the arrow and Brahm[an] is the target; therefore one must shoot unerringly so that the spirit becomes one with Brahm[an] like the arrow (with the target).

8-6-1930

When one realizes Godhead one’s heart is rid of difficulties, doubts vanish and works do not bind.

9-6-1930

This eternal Brahm[an] is before and behind, is in the right and the left, is below and above, pervades everywhere, is the universe, is above all.

10-6-1930

1Mundakopanishad, I. ii. 12
2Ibid
3Ibid
4The source has “his”.
5Mundakopanishad, II. ii. 12
Self-realization comes always through truth, tapas (austerity), true knowledge and brahmacharya. Seekers who have become free from sins realize the immaculate refulgent spirit within themselves.

11-6-1930

Truth alone triumphs, never untruth. That way which the sages whose purpose is fulfilled traverse, which is the way of the gods and where is the great abode of truth opens (for us) through truth.

12-6-1930

This spirit is not attainable by the Vedic study or by feats of intellect or by attending discourses. It is attainable only by him who woos it. It reveals itself to such a one.

13-6-1930

This realization is not possible for the weak or the indolent or those who resort to unmeaning austerities. But the soul of the wise man who remedies these defects enters the abode of Brahman.

13-6-1930

1Mundakopanishad, II. ii. II
2Ibid
3Ibid
4Ibid
All those who have well understood the meaning of life through Vedant and science, whose hearts are purified through sannyasa, being intent on the immortal, on death enter Brahmaloka and become free.

15-6-1930

All those who have well understood the meaning of life through Vedant and science, whose hearts are purified through sannyasa, being intent on the immortal, on death enter Brahmaloka and become free.

15-6-1930

Just as rivers rushing towards the sea leave their names and forms and merge in the sea, even so do wise men leave their names and forms and merge in the paramount divine Being.

16-6-1930

He who knows that great Brahm[an] I becomes It. In his family no one ignorant of Brahm[an] is possible. He passes grief and sin. He becomes free from the bonds of the heart and becomes immortal.

17-6-1930

---

1. Mundakopanishad, III. ii. 5
2. Ibid
3. Ibid.
4. Ibid.

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
45

[‘यतो बाचो निन्यन्त्रने अग्राप्य मानसा सह’]¹

He who knows that Brahm[an] which not reaching both speech and mind return, fears nothing. He does not burn thinking, ‘Why have I not done this good thing? Why have I committed that sin?’

18-6-1930

46

[‘युवा स्यात्साहृ युवाध्यायकः आशिषो द्रविष्टो बलिष्ठः’]²

A young man should have character, should be studious, full of hope, determination and strength. For him all this earth should be full of riches.

19-6-1930

47

He may not witness dances, he may not attend meetings, gatherings and revel, he may not gossip, he should cultivate a love for solitude, he may not resent incorrect conduct by the teacher and his family, he may not engage in talks with women except as may be necessary, he should be gentle, calm, modest and determined, he should shun idleness, anger, envy; he should fetch a pitcherful of water for the teacher both morning and evening and fetch wood from the forest.

20-6-1930

48

[‘बलं बाच विज्ञानाद्वयो अधि ह’]³

Soul-force is superior even to science, for one man having soul-force will shake one hundred learned men. When one has that force he is ready to go to a teacher, he serves him, then he becomes fit to sit near him, he ponders over what he has heard; he becomes wise, he does his duty, he has experience. The earth keeps its place through

¹ Taîtiyopanishad, II. 9.
² Taîtiyopanishad, VIII. 2
³ Chhandogypanishad, VII. viii. 1 that force, the heavens retain their place through it, the mountains, the gods, mankind, the brute creation, birds, grass, plants, game, insects, moths, ants, etc., all life are sustained by that force. Therefore cultivate that force.

21-6-1930

49

[मधुबाला ऋषायते]¹

May the winds, the waters, the plant life, the evening and the dawn, the dust of the earth, the heavenly vault which is like father, the trees, the sun and the cows be a blessing to us.

22-6-1930

50

[ ज जातु कामात् न भयात् न लोभात्]

One may not abandon one’s faith for the satisfaction of a desire, or from fear or ambition, not even for saving one’s life. Faith is permanent, happiness and unhappiness are fleeting things. The spirit is immortal, the result of its actions—the body—is evanescent.

23-6-1930

51

[यदेव विद्यया करोति श्रद्धायोपिषदा ततदेव वीर्यवतः भवति]²

Work done with knowledge and faith and in a prayerful spirit becomes most effective strength.

24-6-1930

52

[यं ब्रह्मान्र्मरतः स्तुन्यति दिल्यः स्तवः :]

I bow to that God whom Brahma, Varuna, Indra and the Maruts adore with divine hymns, of whom the Vedic singers sing in the Vedas with the angas, the padas, the kramas and the Upanishads, whom the yogis see in their meditations with minds fixed on Him and whose end the devas and the asuras do not see.

25-6-1930

¹ Brihadaranyakopanishad, VI. iii. 6
² Chhandogyopanishad, I. i. 10
KUMAR MANDIR PRAYER

Om! may God protect us, may He support us, may we make joint progress, may our studies be fruitful, may we never harbour ill will against one another. Om shanti, shanti, shanti.

26-6-1930

WOMEN'S PRAYER

O Govind, dweller of Dwarika, Krishna, Thou beloved of the Gopis, O Keshav, dost Thou not know that the Kauravas have surrounded me?
O Lord, Thou Lord of Lakshmi, protector of Vraja, deliverer from affliction, O Janardana, save me [from] the ocean of misery in the shape of the Kauravas.
O Krishna, Thou great Yogi, soul and protector of the universe, O Govind, deliver me lying hopeless in the midst of the Kauravas and seeking thy support.

29-6-1930

1 Taittiriyopanishad, II (Shantipath)
2 Brihadaranyakopanishad, III. 28
Act righteously, never unrighteously; speak truth, never untruth; look far ahead, never shortsightedly; look above; never below.
30-6-1930

Ahimsa, truth, non-stealing, purity and self-control, these, said Manu, are the common duty of all the four divisions.
1-7-1930

Ahimsa, truth, non-stealing, freedom from passion, anger and greed, wishing the well-being and good of all that lives is the duty common to all the divisions.
2-7-1930

Understand that to be religion which the wise, the good and those that are free from likes and dislikes follow and which is I felt in the heart.
3-7-1930

Listen to the essence of religion and assimilate it through the heart: one should never do to others which one would not wish done to oneself.

That which has been said in countless books I shall say in half a verse: service of others is virtue, injury to others is sin.
4-7-1930

The sun, the moon, the wind, the fire, the sky, the earth, the waters, the heart, the god of judgment, the day, the night, the evening, the morning and dharma itself are witnesses to man’s actions, i.e., he can conceal nothing.

5-7-1930

FROM “DWADASHAPANJARIKA [-STOTRA”]

[मूढ जहाँहि धनागमत्वणाम्]

O foolish one, give up the desire for amassing wealth, make thy mind pure and free from desire, satisfy thy mind with what thou may’st obtain through thy own labour.

6-7-1930

[अर्थमन्थर्थ भवय नित्यम्]

Always believe that wealth is illth. It is simple truth to say that there is no happiness coming from its possession. It is known to all that rich people fear even their own children.

7-7-1930

[कामं क्रोधं लोभं मोहम्]

Shun desire, anger, greed, possession and ask thyself ‘who am I’. Those foolish ones who don’t strive for self-realization go to perdition.

8-7-1930

[त्वयि मत्यि चान्येङ्को विष्णु:]

In thee, me and others there is but one God who suffers us all; thou art angered for nothing. See thyself in all and everywhere, give up thy ignorance in the shape of differentiation.

9-7-1930
Like the precarious drops on a lotus leaf this life is fleeting. Know this world to be full of disease, egotism and affliction.

10-7-1930

FROM “PANDAVAGITA”

11-7-1930

KUNTI: O Krishna, no matter in what species I am born due to my actions, may my devotion to you grow in strength.

12-7-1930

DRONA: O King, those who were killed by the Wielder of the Discus, the Lord of the three worlds, Janardana, have gone to the abode of Vishnu. For even the wrath of God is like his boon.

13-7-1930

GANDHARI: O Thou God of gods, Thou alone art my all, mother, father, brother, friend, knowledge, wealth.

14-7-1930

VIRATA: Ten thousand ten obeisances to the great God Krishna, Govind the benefactor of the cow, the Brahmin, the whole universe.

PRAHLAD: O Lord! O Changeless One! may my devotion unto Thee remain for ever constant, no matter where among the thousands of species I may take birth. May my love for Thee be pure and even as intense as the love of the worldly man for his sense pursuits and may it never fade from my heart ever intent upon Thee.

Bharadwaja: Good fortune and victory, never defeat, attend upon those whose hearts are ruled by lotus-like Janardana.

Markandeya: That moment or occasion when one does not think of Vasudeva means as much waste, loss, ignorance, folly, stupidity.

Shaunaka: Devotees of Vishnu needlessly worry over food and clothing. Surely He who sustains the whole universe is not going to neglect His devotees.

Sanatkumar: Even as the waters dropping from the heavens are received into the ocean, so is the worship of the different gods received unto Keshav.

15-7-1930

Selections from “Mukundamala”

O Mukunda, grant that I may always say: O Vallabh, O Giver of boons, O Fount of Mercy, O Lover of devotees, O Destroyer of the wheel of birth and death, O Lord, O Thou with a serpentine bed, O Thou Refuge of the Universe.

15-7-1930

O Mukunda! With head bowed down I ask of Thee only this that by Thy grace I may never from birth to birth lose sight of Thy lotus feet.

O God! I have no relish for dharma, nor for wealth nor yet for worldly enjoyments; let whatever is to happen happen as a result of my past actions; only this prayer I regard as of utmost importance: may my attachment to Thy lotus feet be unshakable.

O Thou Destroyer of hell! I do not care where my lot is to be cast, whether in heaven or on earth or in hell; only grant that I may ever think of Thy feet more beautiful than the lotus during the rains.
Vishnu becomes like a ship protecting men sailing on the ocean of birth and death, tossed to and fro as by the wind, by the pairs of opposites such as happiness and misery, borne down by the weight of guarding sons, daughters, wives and the like and sinking in the storms of violent passions.

16-7-1930

75

O, my heart, you need not be afraid that you cannot cross this unfathomable and difficult ocean of birth and death; thy single-minded devotion to the lotus-eyed, hell-destroying God will surely save thee.

O Lotus-eyed One! with hands folded, head bowed, body moved, throat choked, eyes bathed in hot tears, may our life close ever drinking in the nectar in the form of the meditation of Thy lotus-like feet. O Cupid! Get thee gone from my heart which is the seat of the lotus-like feet of Mukunda; thou art already scorched by the fire from Siva’s eyes; why will you not remember the might of Vishnu’s discus?

O thou wrong-headed fool! Why dost thou afflict with drugs this body which has hundreds of weak joints, which is liable to certain decay and which is subject to constant change? Drink in the one life-giving potion—the name of Krishna.

17-7-1930

76

I touch the lotus feet of Narayana, I worship Narayana always; I take the holy name of Narayana, I remember the changeless essence called Narayana.

O how passion deadens man’s senses; for though he can take, he never does take any of the many names of God such as Ananta, Vaikuntha, Mukunda, Krishna, Govind, Damodar, Madhav.

18-7-1930
O elephant-mouthed one, the chief of ganas by thinking on whom one attains salvation and who is a storehouse of knowledge and virtues, may Thy grace descend upon me; O merciful one by whose mercy the dumb speak, the lame ascend steep hills and who washes off all the scorching dirt of Kali—shower thy blessings upon me.

19-7-1930

For those in want there is no other than Thou so merciful, so generous! What is the use of my carrying my wants to others? They appear to me as much in want as myself. Gods, men, sages, demons, serpents and others exercise sway only during Thy pleasure. The world, eternity, the four Vedas proclaim that Rama is the beginning, the end and the middle; Thine is the Kingdom. To ask of Thee is not begging. Thy devotee comes to Thee for Thy well-known nature; for hast Thou not taken under Thy protection stone, beast, trees, bird? O Thou, son of Lord Dasharatha, Thou hast turned beggars into kings, Thou art the refuge of the distressed. I am Thy slave. O merciful God, say if only once: “Tulsidas is Mine.”

20-7-1930

Thou art merciful, I am in distress; Thou art the giver, I am a beggar; I am a known sinner, Thou art the forgiver of mountains of sins; Thou art the help of the helpless and who can be so helpless as I? There is none so afflicted like me, there is no deliverer like unto Thee; Thou art the creator, I am a little creature; Thou art the lord, I am a slave; Thou art father, brother, teacher, friend, all in all to me; if I have only faith, I know that there is much between Thee and me; may Tulsi somehow feel the protecting power of Thy holy feet.

21-7-1930
When shall I conduct myself thus by the grace of the merciful Rama that I shall cultivate the nature of good and true men; that I shall be satisfied with whatever accrues to me in the ordinary course and shall expect nothing from anybody; that I shall carry out the resolution to serve others in thought, deed and word; that I shall not burn with the scorching fire of the unbearably harsh language of others when I chance to hear it; that I shall be free from pride and have a mind equipoised and not delight in narrating the defects of others and that I shall give up all anxiety about the body and will not be elated by happiness and downcast by misery?

Tulsidas declares: being steadfast along the foregoing path I shall attain the boon of unchangeable devotion.

O my soul! How foolish art thou, thou leavest the celestial waters of Ramabhakti and runnest after the mirage even as the chatak bird being thirsty mistakes a volume of smoke for a cloud but finds neither coolness nor water and damages its eyes into the bargain; or even as the hungry hawk seeing its own reflection through a glass floor falls upoh it forgetting the injury done to its own face. O merciful God, how long need I relate my misdeeds? Thou knowest the minds of Thy devotees. Tulsidas says: Lord, think of Thy promise and deliver Thy servant from the insufferable misery.

O Lord! Hear this my prayer. Remove my ignorance which makes [me] cherish expectations of and faith in others rather than Thee. I want neither heaven nor good intellect, nor riches nor possessions nor greatness. I want an ever-growing devotion to Thee without expectation of reward. May Thy grace save me even as the tortoise its eggs from succumbing to the weakness of my irresistible evil nature; Tulsidas prays for deliverance from all egotism and attachments of the body.

24-7-1930

83

माघव मोह-पास क्यों टूटे ?

O Madhav, how can this bondage of infatuation be broken? Not even a million external remedies will remove the internal malady. No amount of fire underneath a cauldron will destroy the moon reflected in a cauldron filled with ghee. The bird living in the hollow of a tree will not be killed by cutting the tree (from above). Even so a mind devoid of disciplined thinking will never be purified by any external means. When the heart within is impure and full of evil passions, no amount of external cleansing of the body will purify it. Can the snake inside its mound be killed by destroying the mound? Tulsidas says that without the grace of God there is no clear discrimination and without it no one may hope to cross the deep ocean named the universe.

25-7-1930

84

मैं कही कहीं विपत्ति अति भारी ।

O Raghuvir, help of the distressed, to whom shall I take the tale of my great misery? My heart, O my God, is Thy abode, but many thieves have entered therein and although I am beseeching and imploring them to leave it, they are using unbearable force; ignorance, delusion, greed, pride, arrogance, anger, passion—all enemies of free knowledge are causing much trouble, O Lord, and thinking me to be helpless are crushing me, I am alone, the thieves are many, no one hears my cries; Lord, there is no escape from this either; O Lord of the Raghus, protect me. Tulsidas says: Listen, O Rama, thieves are looting Thy house; my great anxiety is lest they should bring discredit on Thee!

26-7-1930

85

ऐसी को उदार जग महीं

None is so generous in this world as Rama who is merciful to the distressed without requiring any service in return. There is no one like him. That state which even sages fail to attain after devotion and self-denial he bestowed upon the Vulture and Sabari and then thought he had not given much. The kingdom that Ravana got from Sivji after having offered his head Rama gave to Bibhishana as if it was nothing. Tulsidas says: O my mind, if thou wouldst have the real good then worship Rama who out of the abundance of his grace will answer thy prayer.

27-7-1930

86

आके प्रिय न राम वैदेहि

Shun those people as enemies who are not devoted to Rama and Sita, be they ever so good friends. (For Him), Prahlad left his father, Bibhishana his brother, Bharata his mother, Bali his teacher, the women of Vraj their husbands and they all rejoiced (in their sacrifice). A friend is desirable only so long as he is attached and devoted to Rama. What more need I say, what is the use of the eye-powder that destroys the eyes? Tulsi says: In my opinion, he who is devoted to the feet of Rama is in every respect my friend worthy of love and dear as life itself.

28-7-1930

87

कौन जतन विनती करिये

What should I do to be able to pray? I am afraid, for looking at my conduct I realize my defeat; I obstinately refrain from doing the things which make God merciful towards His devotees and I follow the path that leads me into the trap of misfortune and daily misery. I know that I should be safe if I gave myself in thought, word and deed to the service of fellow creatures but on the contrary I am vainly jealous when I see others happy. The Vedas, the Puranas and other scriptures proclaim the necessity of cultivating firmly the companionship of the good but my pride, passion and jealousy turn me away from them. I always delight in that which will lead me unto misery. Now tell me, O Lord! how may I be delivered from this misery? I can only be saved if Thou according to Thy nature will have mercy on me; Tulsidas has no other hope; how long shall he remain in this mire?

29-7-1930

88

जानत प्रीतरीत रघुराई

Raghunath knows what love is. He sets aside all other bonds and accepts only real love. Dasharatha expressed paternal affection by giving up life and made his fame immortal. But look at the greatness of Rama—he held the Vulture as superior to such a father. He even forgot his beloved Sita when he saw his friend Sugriva grief-stricken over the separation of his wife. Here was his brother lying senseless in the battle-field but he was thinking, at the time, of Bibhishana. Whether at home, or the teacher’s house, or the home of friends or the father-in-law’s, wherever he was treated, he never experienced the richness of those feasts as that of the wild berries provided by Sabari. When the sages begin to narrate His original nature they humbly acknowledge their inability to do justice to the theme and are happy to call themselves friends of the Bhil or take pride in calling themselves companions of monkeys. Tulsidas says: If thou, having known this nature and this love of Rama, hast not devotion in thine heart, then, O fool, thy mother in giving thee birth uselessly threw away her youth.

89

रघुवीर ! तुमको मेरी लाज !

O Raghuvir, my shame is Thy shame. I am ever seeking Thy protection and Thou art noted as protector of the weak. I have heard it said of Thee that it is Thy promise that Thou wouldst save sinners. And I am an old sinner; take my ship ashore. To destroy the sin of Thy devotees and to remove their distress is Thy only task. Be merciful, O Lord, to Tulsidas, and give him the boon of Thy worship.

90

जागिये रघुनाथ कुंवर

O Prince of the Raghus, wake up; the birds are singing in the grove. The moon will disappear presently, the chakravaka bird is off to meet her lord. The threefold breeze is gently blowing, the leaves are rustling. The morning sun is on the horizon, darkness of the night is gone. The bees are humming, the lotus has opened its leaf. Brahma and others are in meditation; the gods, common people and sages are singing hymns of praise. Thus when it was rising time Rama opened his eyes. Tulsidas is overjoyed to see the lotus face of Rama who gives valuables as gifts to the poor.

30-7-1930
91

मेरी मन हरिजू हठ न तजी

O Lord, my mind will not give up its waywardness. I try every day to control it but it will not change its nature. As a woman, although she recognizes the pains of labour, foolishly forgets them and goes to her foolish husband or as a greedy dog, even though it gets knocks on the head, meanly continues to visit the same haunts and is not ashamed, even so is this mind of mine wilful and unconquerable, I own defeat in spite of various efforts. Tulsidas says: It will come under subjection only when God the inspirer of all takes it up in hand.

31-7-1930

92

कुदंब तजि शरण राम ! तेरी आयो

O Rama, he (Bibhishana) left family, fort Lanka, palaces and temples and hearing Thy name rushed to Thee for protection. Seated in his full court Ravana kicked him and the foolish one would not listen though he was warned again and again. Thou embracedst this Bibhishana as soon as he came to Thee and crowned him King of Lanka. As soon as he met Thee the insults of ages were wiped out. O Raghunath, friend of the friendless, Thou owned him knowing him to be helpless. Tulsidas says: He received the boon of the protection from and devotion to the Lord of the Raghus.

1-8-1930

93

भज मन रामचरण सुखदाईं

O my mind, worship the beneficent feet of Rama. From these feet issued forth the Ganga and was caught by Siva in his ample lock of hair. It was therefore named Jatashankari; it came for the good of the three worlds. Bharata treasured as a token of love the sandals bearing the imprints of these feet. The Bhil chief would not steer Rama’s boat without being allowed to wash those feet. Saintly persons always worship these beneficent feet. The wife of the sage Gautama obtained salvation by the touch of those feet. Rama hallowed (with his feet) the Dandak forest and removed the distress of the rishis. (Yet strange to relate) this very Rama the lord of the three worlds ran after the golden deer. He gave the palm of victory to the monkey Sugriva, who was afflicted by the fear of his brother. Bibhishana, the brother of the enemy (Ravana), got the crown of Lanka through the touch of those feet. Siva, Sanak, Brahma, etc., also the thousand-mouthed serpent sing his praises but, says Tulsidas, his lips utter the praise of Hanuman the monkey.

2-8-1930

94

अब लो नसानी अब न नसैहोः

I have spoiled everything hitherto but will do so no longer. By the grace of God the night is past, I am awake and shall no more go to sleep. I have the talisman in the shape of God’s name; it shall not vanish from my heart. The beautiful and holy face of God is the testing stone. The gold of my heart shall be tested on it. My sense organs finding me without control have mocked me. I have now acquired self-control, they shall no more deride me. Tulsi says: My mind like the bee on the lotus shall lean on the lotus feet of Rama.

3-8-1930

95

मन पर्वते है अवसर बीतेः

O my mind, what is the use of repentance after the occasion is gone? Having attained the difficult human status, devote thyself body, speech and heart to the feet of Hari. Sahasrarjuna, Ravana and others could not save themselves from the claws of all-powerful death. Thou triest to protect wealth and possessions saying this is mine, this is mine, but at last thou hast to go empty-handed. Know that wife, children, etc., constitute bonds of the flesh; do not be entrapped by them. O miser, they will all leave thee when thou diest, why not then be detached now? Be devoted to the Lord, O foolish one, and give up all false hope with all thy heart. Tulsi says: The fire of passion will never be quenched by the oil of indulgence.

4-8-1930

96

माधव ! मो समान जग माहीः

O Madhav! there is none on this earth in every way so low, corrupt, beggarly and steeped in vice like me and I am in distress having left Thee, God, so merciful without cause, so friendly to the afflicted; why dost Thou not show mercy to me? It is not Thy fault, I know it is all of my doing. O Lord, thou gavest me a body through which I could know Thee but notwithstanding that I did not know Thee, The bamboo and the karil vainly blame the sandal and the spring (the one for want of scent and the other for want of leaves), being unworthy and unfortunate how could the one have scent and the other leaves? I am convinced that I am hard of heart in every way and Thou, O Lord, art tender. Tulsidas says: God! my bondage can be broken only by Thy mercy.

97

कलि नाम कामलर राम को

In the Kaliyuga Ramanama is the all-yielding tree. It is the destroyer of scorching miseries caused by bad times, pauperism, etc. Repeating the name purifies the mind and banishes misfortune. Valmiki and Shanker sing the virtues of taking the name whether correctly or with the letters transposed. It is well here and hereafter with those who are armed with the beautiful power (of the name). Tulsi says: I am able to live in the world peacefully by the power of the name, I have no anxiety whether I live or die.

5-8-1930

98

जय राम रमारमणं समनम्

Hail to Thee, O Rama, the Lord of Sita and deliverer from the feverish wheel of birth and death, protect Thy servant who is stricken with fear. O Ruler of Avadh, God of gods, Lord of Sita, O God, Thy ward seeks Thy protection; Thou destroyer of Ravana with his ten heads and twenty arms, hast ridden this big earth of its great maladies. The crowd of devils who stalk abroad during the night are like so many fire-flies. The scorching splendour of the fire of Thy arrows has burnt them to ashes. Thou art the excellent ornament of this earthly system. Thou art the shining sun to dispel the deep darkness of the night of arrogance, infatuation and immense egotism. Cupid is hunting down the helpless people who will not give up greed and lust and who have lost the true path in the midst of self-gratification. O Lord, save them. People are afflicted with diseases and bereavement. This is the result of want of devotion to Thy blessed feet. Those who are not attached to Thy lotus feet have to go through the eternal wheel of life and death. Those who are not so devoted are ever helpless, sorrowful and miserable. Those who delight in Thy praise and who always like the company of wise and holy men have neither passion nor greed nor pride nor arrogance; prosperity or adversity are the same to them. It is for this reason that sages leaving aside dependence on yoga rejoice in becoming Thy servants. The holy people take vows, offer eternal devotion to Thee, with true hearts serve Thy lotus feet, regard alike insults or honours and thus contented roam about the earth. Thou art like the bee to the lotus hearts of the sages. O Thou steadfast and unconquerable warrior, I take Thy name, I bow to Thee Lord. Thou art the enemy of the misery of death and life cycle, infatuation and arrogance. Thou art the treasure house of virtues, Thou art the great seat of mercy; I always bow to Thee O Lord of Sita. O Son of Raghu remove this darkness of the pairs of opposites. O Lord of the earth, look at Thy helpless servants. O Lord of Lakshmi, I repeatedly ask of thee this boon: grant me everlasting devotion to Thy lotus feet and the company of holy men always.

6-8-1930

99

तुलसी बोध—मौक्तिक

There is no religion like the service of others, and O brother, there is no sin like doing evil to others. Since the Puranas and the Vedas proclaim that good and evil are to be found in our hearts, there is happiness where there is good and misery for certain where there is evil. Blessed is the king who walks along the right path, blessed is the Brahmin who will not swerve from the faith, blessed is the moment when one is in the company of the holy ones, blessed is the life that is devoted to the unbroken worship of God.

Lives of holy men are beautiful like cotton; though tasteless the fruit is white and durable. Those who bear the hardships of others and relieve them attain fame on this earth and are adorabe.

There is no doubt that one gets what one’s heart is truly set upon. Nothing on this earth is difficult for him whose mind is saturated with the thought of serving others.

It is the tradition of the Raghu clan handed down from time immemorial that they would stake their life rather than break the plighted word. Sins mountain-high cannot be heavier than untruth, can crores of चन्दनाक ोटी outweigh a mountain?

The sages proclaim and the Vedas and the Puranas witness that all good deeds depend for their merit on truth.

1 Coral bead
There is no one so helpless as I and there is none so merciful to them as Thou; therefore Thou jewel of the Raghu race, deliver me from this intolerable cycle of birth and death.

7-8-1930

I bow to the lotus feet of the great Hari. Surdas says: I bow again and again to the feet of that merciful God whose mercy enables the lame to ascend mountains, the blind to see everything, the deaf to hear, the dumb to speak and the pauper to have people holding umbrella over him.

8-8-1930

O Lord, keep me as Thou wilt. Thou knowest the happiness and the sorrows of the people; what need can there be for me to relate them. O God of mercy, sometimes I get enough to eat, other times I have to suffer pangs of hunger; sometimes I ride horses or stately elephants, other times I myself carry loads; Surdas says: O Lotus-eyed one, Ghanashyam, lovable God, may I be ever Thy servant, devoted to Thy feet.

9-8-1930

O God, Thou removest the woes of the afflicted and comfortest the holy ones. Take Ajamil, the Vulture, the Hunter, which of them was a sadhu? Simply because the Prostitute taught a parrot Thy name Thou savedst her. Thou gavest a kingdom to Dhrula, Thou savedst Pahlad, for the sake of Thy devotees Thou built a bridge and reduced Lanka to ashes. A handful of raw rice pleased Thee, Thou wast satisfied with mere vegetable leaves. Thou thoughtst nothing of berries if they were half bitten or unripe or sour. When the alligator seized the elephant and Dushasana began to strip Draupadi naked and [she] called out Krishna, Krishna, Thou respondedst and (savedst the elephant) and multiplied Draupadi’s clothing. Surdas the blind beggar knocks at the door, O Lord.

10-8-1930
I have heard that Rama is the help of the helpless. I can produce the evidence of those saintly people who were helped by him in their adversity. So long as the elephant relied upon his own strength, his case was hopeless, but when in his helplessness he invoked the assistance of Rama, he responded when hardly his name was half pronounced. When Draupadi felt helpless, He felt the call in his seat and God having multiplied her clothing Dushasana grew tired of hopelessly trying to strip her naked. Man relies on his own strength or his austerities or the strength of his arms or fourthly his wealth. Surdas says that when a man has exhausted all his resources and invokes the name of God, His grace descends upon him.

11-8-1930

I belong to my devotees—and they to me. O Arjuna, hear my promise, it can never be recalled; taking heed of my devotees' necessities, I rush to their assistance barefoot. I deliver my devotees whenever they are in difficulties. He who is against my devotees is against me. Having well considered your welfare, I am driving your chariot. My devotees' victory is my victory, their defeat is my defeat. Surdas says: God destroys with his Sudarshana those who come in the way of devotees.

Now it is my fixed resolve; keep Thou my honour, O Lord! Even as during the Bharat war Thou keptst Arjuna’s honour by wearing Thy Sudarshana Chakra and driving Arjuna’s chariot, Thou didst not let Thy devotee’s honour be sullied or even as Thou keptst Draupadi’s honour and didst not let her be stripped naked though Dushasana made repeated attempts till he was tired out, Thou didst multiply her saris; keep Thou Surdas’s honour, he has no other protector; O Thou Lord of Lakshmi and Radha the daughter [of] Brihbhan, he seeks Thy protection.
106

मो सम कौन कुठिल खल कामी।

Who can be so crooked, bad or dissolute as I? I am so faithless that I have forgotten the very God who gave me this body. Even like the village dog I have been fattening myself and running after pleasures. I have given up the company of God’s people and day and night slave for those who revile Him. Who can be a greater sinner than I, I am the chief among them. Surdas says: O God, listen, where is the resting place for a sinner like me?

12-8-1930

107

प्रभु मोरे अवगुन चित न धरो।

O God, do not lay to heart my faults. Thou art called equi-minded towards all. Thou canst save me if Thou wilt. One volume of water is called a river, another which contains dirt is called a drain but when they meet and become one they are called the Ganga. One piece of iron is used for worship, another in the hands of a thief for stealing, the paras makes no distinction and turns by its touch either to gold. Surdas says: this is all called the maya of Brahm[an]. Now,

O Lord, save me and let not Thy promise go in vain.

13-8-1930

108

अखियाँ हरिद्वारनकी प्यासी

I am pining to see God as the divine child (Krishna). I would love to see the lotus-eyed One and not being able to do so I feel miserable day and night. O Uddhav! This child of Brindaban with the

1 Philosopher’s stone
saffron mark on his forehead and a pearl necklace round his neck—he conquered our love and then forsook us. What do the people understand of the pangs of the forsaken ones, they will only laugh. Surdas says: O God, without seeing Thy face there is nothing left for me but to go to Kashi and seek deliverance by death.

14-8-1930

109

The best tie is the tie of love. God partook of Vidura’s leaves and left Duryodhana’s dainties. He ate with relish the berries tasted by Sabari. His love prompted [Him] to serve the king for when Yudhishthira performed the royal sacrifice He served as a menial. Not minding His high status, He drove Arjuna’s chariot. His love was so great for Brindaban that He danced with the Gopis. Surdas says: I am a wretch unworthy of such love; how much shall I praise Thee, O Lord?

15-8-1930

110

O Gopal, I have danced away my life in self-indulgence. Desire and anger were my garment, passions were my garland, infatuation was my ankle-bells, backbiting was the sweet sounding tune, poisoned mind was the tabor, evil company was the step, insatiableness was the accompanying measure of various kind, maya was the waist-band, ambition was the mark on my forehead and I showed much cunning. So much so that I forgot all about time or place. Surdas says: O Nandalal, remove all this ignorance of mine.

16-8-1930

1 The source has “is”.
111

अब तरे प्रगट भई जग जानी ।

Now is the thing known all over. Eternal devotion to God cannot be kept secret from anyone. That beautiful face is ever before my eyes. Try what I will that face is unforgettable. I am filled with that love. It is inseparable even as milk and water are. Surdas says: God who knows the hearts of us all knew those of the gopis.

17-8-1930

112

लज्जा भोरी राखौ स्याम हरी ।

O God, guard me against insult. Dushasana has held me by my hair and is molesting me and in the presence of the assembly wicked Duryodhana is intent upon stripping me naked. The five Pandavas are powerless to help me. Bhishma, Drona and Vidura are dumbfounded and silent. Now I have neither mother nor father nor son nor brother, Thou art my all. Merciful God then made her sari endless and the whole host of Duryodhana was defeated. Surdas says: When God appears as protector what need for his lambs to fear?

18-8-1930

113

दे पूतना विष र अमृत पायो

Although Putna administered poison (to Krishna) she attained salvation; the Vedas have sung in vain that man reaps as he sows. King Bali performed a hundred sacrifices and yet was tied up and sent to the nether world. King Nriga donated one lac cows and yet he was turned into a serpent. Friend Sudama was born a pauper and suddenly found himself in a golden palace. Surdas says: O God, strange are Thy ways, well have the Vedas said, ‘not this, not this’.

19-8-1930

114

अबके नाथ मोहि उधारि ।

O Lord, save me now. O Fount of mercy, there is no pathway in this ocean of the universe. Maya is its deep waters, ambition are the waves. Passion like the alligator is dragging me in deeper waters. The senses bite like fishes and there is a load of sin on the head. In my infatuation the feet are unsteady and get entangled in the seaweed. Animal passion, anger, desire like the winds toss me to and fro. Wife and children do not let me think of Thy name as my sheet-anchor. O Thou seat of Mercy, I am fatigued, powerless and distressed in this mid-ocean. O Lord, take me by the arm and pull me up to the shore.

20-8-1930

रे मन ! मूरख जनम गँवायो ।

O my foolish soul, thy life has been wasted; in thy pride thou hast dissipated thy life and forgotten the Giver of life. Having thought this earthly life beautiful like the semar flower thou hast forgotten thy true self. But as thou wast about to taste it, it was not, thou foundest nothing. What is the use now of thinking of the lost past? Thou didst not do thy duty whilst there was time. Surdas says: Thou didst not serve God and hadst to repent.

21-8-1930

नाथ मोहि अवकी बेर उथारो

O Lord, save me this once; Thou art Lord of lords, Thou art named the Giver, and I am without luck, blind from birth, who can be more unworthy than I? Thou art the protector of the three worlds, I am Thy slave; Thou hast saved people both worthy and unworthy; be Thou gracious unto me. I am the chief among the fallen, sardar among the sinners, thousands of sinners put together hardly equal me, Ajamil is nothing compared to me. God Yama, having heard of me had the gates of hell even locked. There is now no room for me anywhere; remember Thou Thy promise (to such like me). O Lord of Lakshmi, Thou hast saved many a sinner, do not withhold Thy grace. Surdas will count Thee true when Thou hast saved him.

22-8-1930

पूर्णष्टका पट खोल रे लोको पीछे मिलिएँ ।

Open thy face, thou wilt see thy beloved. He is in everyone; therefore say nothing bitter of anyone. Do not brag about thy riches or youth; this case made of five elements will play false to thee (one day). Light up thy dark heart and do not move from thy purpose.
Wake up in this temple for thou hast got the priceless treasure thy Lord. Kabir says: Let there be rejoicing for the Lord’s voice is heard within.

23-8-1930

118

O good man, natural meditation (lekf/k) is best. Ever since its manifestation by the grace of God, it has waxed. Wherever I rander, it is a circuit (round a temple), whatever I do is for service, whenever I lie down, it is my prostration (before God). I worship to other god but God. Whatever I utter, it is God’s name, whatever I hear is a remembrance of God. My eating and drinking re puja (worship), whether a home is established or it is destroyed is the same thing to me; I do not allow any other feeling to possess me. I do not shut my eyes nor stuff my ears, I do not porture the body. I open my eyes and delight to see God and contemplate His beauty. My mind is ever intent on Him; all corupt thought has left me. I am so much engrossed in the thought of Him that I think of Him whatever I am doing. Kabir says: This is the excellent life and I have sung of it; there is a state beyond misery and happiness, my mind is fixed on it.

24-8-1930

119

When the soul is saturated with the Holy Spirit there is no need for speech. When a man finds a diamond he puts it in a safe and does not open it now and again to look at it. When here is doubt about the weight of a thing it is weighed but how should a thing in itself weighty need weighing? One who is intoxicated with love drinks it not in drops weighed in scales. When the swan reaches the divine lake, he does not wander about in search of lakelets. Thy Lord is within thee, why strain thy eyes to see Him outside? Kabir says: Hear O good people, I have found the Lord for the search.

25-8-1930
We are not to stay here long, it is a foreign land (for us). The world is like a paper parcel which is reduced to pulp on a little water being poured on it or it is like a hedge of thorns in which we get entangled and die or it is like a meadow full of shrubs and grass which a fire destroys (in no time). Kabir says: Listen all ye good people, the only safety lies in seeking the protection of God.

26-8-1930

O friend, my mind is fixed on a fakir’s life. The happiness which one derives from meditation on God is not to be found in indulgence. Bear whatever befalls thee—good and evil; live in poverty. Let us live a life of loving service. It will be well to cultivate patience. When one goes about with a mere begging bowl and a staff, one has the whole world as one’s kingdom. What is the use of pride when one realizes that the body is soon to be reduced to ashes? Kabir says: Listen O ye all good men, contentment is the pathway to self-realization.

27-8-1930

O my soul, my dear friend, knowest thou not that one who is in love has no sleep; when thy bread of sorrow is butterless and dry, what need to judge whether it is tasty or tasteless? If thou hast tasted love, give it, O friend, having received thou canst not lose it. He for whom sleep has become irresistible does not think of a pillow or a mattress. Kabir says: Listen O good men, there is no wailing after complete self-surrender.

28-8-1930

Be thou absorbed in God, let the world go its way. There is paper and there is black ink, let those who wish write or read. The elephant does not abandon its gait despite the barkings of dogs. Kabir says: Listen O ye good men, those who are intent upon evil will go their way.
124

मत कर मोह तू हरि–भजन को मान रे।

Do not give way to self-deception but sing the praises of God; for eyes are given to see God, ears to hear words of wisdom, the mouth to sing His praises, hands to give in His name. Kabir says: Hear O ye good one, gold is (also) produced in mines (not merely dust and pebble)

28-8-1930

125

गुरु बिन कौन बतावे बात?

Without the master, who can show the path? The way is terribly difficult. Doubt crosses the path like rivers gliding through mountainous regions and there is egotism like big boulders in the rivers. There are too passion and anger like two huge mountains on either side; ambition dogs the footsteps like a thief. And pride and vanity descend like rain from overhanging clouds; self-deception violently tosses one like the winds. Kabir says: Listen O ye good men, how can one traverse the path (without a master as guide)?

29-8-1930

126

नाहि छोड़ू, रे बाबा [राम] नाम

O Father, I will not give up Ramanama. I have nothing to do with the other lessons. The King sent Prahlad to school and he had many companions. He said: “Why do you teach me nonsense? Write on my slate Shri Gopal.” This Shandamara duly reported and the King immediately sent for Prahlad to whom he said, “Leave thou the name of Rama. If thou wilt do what I tell thee I will set thee free.” Prahlad replied, “Why vex me again and again. God made the ocean, the earth, the sky and the mountain. I swear by my guru that I will not give up Ramanama, you may burn me, you may bury me alive, you may kill me anyway you choose.” On this the King was enraged, drew his sword and challenged Prahlad to show his deliverer. God in His might rose from the pillar of fire and with His paws killed the King. O Great One, God of gods, Thou becamest Narasinha for the sake of Thy devotee. Kabir says: I can fill pages with the stories of how He delivered Prahlad from many a danger.

30-8-1930
This sheet (called body) is finely woven. What is its warp and woof? Of what is the thread made? Ida and Pingala (nerves invisible recognized by Hinduism) are respectively warp and woof. The sheet is woven with the Sushumna thread (one of the invisible nerves)—The eight-petaled lotus (at the navel) is the wheel. The sheet contains the five elements (earth, etc.,) and the three qualities (sattva, rajas, tamas). The Maker takes ten months to weave this sheet and the thread is well packed. Gods, men, even sages have to wear this sheet and it becomes dirty as soon as it is worn. The servant Kabir says: Although we wear this sheet with ever so much care, it has to be given up even as it is.¹

31-8-1930

What is the use of taking pride either in this body or wealth? They vanish in the twinkling of an eye. A man builds a palace for himself and is often obliged to take refuge in the woods. On death, the bones will burn like faggots and hair like grass. Kabir says: O virtuous people, listen, when man dies, all his airy castles crumble to pieces.

1-9-1930

O Brother, sing the praises of Rama, Govind, Hari. The effort requires no jap, tap or the like, nor does it involve any expense. Children, wealth, etc., promoting as they do a feeling of satiety, often lead one astray. Kabir says: He on whose lips is not the name of God has lived in vain.

2-9-1930

¹ Note by Gandhiji: Kaka says the only possible meaning is: “Kabir says that he on the other hand wore it with such care that he was able to discard it without defiling it.”
O my soul, how shall I reason with thee? If thou wert gold I would melt thee to a liquid. If thou wert a horse I would bridle thee, put a saddle on thy back, ride thee and whip thee to action. If thou wert an elephant I would chain thy feet, ride thee and goad thee with the hook. If thou wert iron, I should secure an anvil and hammer thee and turn thee into wire. Kabir says: If thou wert wise I should give thee wisdom and lead thee onto the straight path and send thee to the abode of the immortals.

3-9-1930

I have obtained the name of God as garland for my neck. My abode is in a little cot and there are five weak cot-bearers. The guru has given me the lock and key so as to enable me to open the door when I choose. Love is the garment which I wear and dance when I like in the city Kabir says: Listen O good men, there will be no return to this city again.

4-9-1930

With fight in front a brave person will never flee and he will not be considered brave who flees in the face of danger. In the field of battle the fight has begun in right earnest and passion, anger, pride and ambition are the foes to be fought. Restraint, piety and contentment are one’s companions and the sword in the shape of Ramanama is flourishing freely. Kabir says: True warriors will fight bravely, cowards will be conspicuous by their absence.

5-9-1930
133

O God, I seek refuge in Thee. On seeing Thee, all my doubts have disappeared. Without my mentioning it Thou hast known my trouble. Thou hast made me remember Thee. My misery is gone and I am all happiness. Joyfully do I sing Thy praise. Thou hast taken me by the arm and pulled me safe out of the dark well of maya. Nanak says: The Lord has removed my bondage and brought me back though I had strayed away.

6-9-1930

134

O good man, give up thy pride. Flee away from passion, anger, evil company. He to whom happiness and unhappiness, praise and blame are the same thing, who is neither elated nor depressed, knows the secret of life. Nanak says: O man, it is a difficult thing to be unaffected by praise or blame and to be intent only upon the true path; a few only know this through a true teacher.

7-9-1930

135

O God, ever since I have had the companionship of the good, the distinction between mine and thine has disappeared. I deem no one as enemy or stranger. I am on friendly terms with everyone. From the good I have learnt to consider as good whatever comes from God. Nanak takes delight in finding that one God resides in all.

8-9-1930

136

O my soul, dedicate thyself to God. Listen to His praises and sing them. Cultivate the company of the good and ever think of God; thus wilt thou be purified of sin. Remember, O friend, that time is biding its opportunity like a serpent with its mouth wide open to swallow thee. Nanak says: Time is fleeting, remember therefore thy God.

9-9-1930
Why dost thou search for Him in the jungle? He is in thee always though unaffected by thee. Even as the fragrance abides in the flower or the likeness in the mirror so is God everywhere, always. O brother, look for Him within thyself. The guru teaches us that He is both within and without. Nanak says: O man, without knowing thyself the darkness of illusion cannot be dispelled.

10-9-1930

O my soul, remember thy God, thy years are rolling by without His sacred name—man without Harinama is even like a well without water or a cow without milk or a temple without light or a fruit tree without fruit or body without eyes or night without the moon, or the earth without rain or a pundit without a knowledge of the Vedas. O good man watch thy desire, anger, pride and ambition and give them up. Nanakshah says: O God there is no one to befriend save Thee.

11-9-1930

Why hast thou given up Ramanama? Thou hast not given up anger nor falsehood, why hast thou abandoned the original home? Thou hast treasured a cowrie, why hast thou neglected the ruby? Why hast thou given up remembering that which is the source of all happiness? Khalus says: Why wilt thou not trust God and leave body, mind and wealth?

12-9-1930

All intentions came to naught. Neither was God worshipped nor more holy places visited. Time has thee in his grip. Wife, friends, children, chariot, wealth, kingdom of earth filled with riches and ryots and the like are useless; the one thing needful is the worship of God. Thou wanderedst much and wast defeated although thou reachdest man’s estate. Nanak says: Why wilt thou not remember thy Maker even though it is time to appear in His presence?

13-9-1930
141

पायो जी मैंने रामरतन धन पायो ।

I have obtained a jewel in the shape of Ramanama. The true guru gave me this priceless jewel and showed his great favour to me. I have obtained wealth for eternity, what though I have lost everything of this earth? This jewel cannot be used up by use nor can it be stolen by thieves. It increases greatly from day to day. In the vessel called truth with the true guru as the captain I have been able to cross the ocean of birth and death. Mira says: I have sung the praise of the Lord in great glee.

14-9-1930

142

नाहि ऐसे जन्म बारंबार ।

Such a birth does not come often. What do I know of the merit that has given me the human state! This body appears to be growing moment by moment but it is also at the same time waning, and it takes no time to perish altogether even as the leaves of a tree do which once they are torn from their branch cannot be reattached. This ocean of birth and death is mighty and has strong terrible currents. But if a man would take meditation on God for a raft he can cross the ocean. The sages and great men have loudly proclaimed as they have gone, says Mira the servant of God, that man has but a few days on earth.

15-9-1930

143

मने परस सहिके चरन

O my soul, touch the feet of Hari; they bring fortune, they are cool to the touch, soft as lotus and the touch removes the threefold affliction. The touch of these feet enabled Prahlad to attain Indra’s status, gave Dhruva permanent stability, enabled Vishnu to rule the whole universe, gave the wife of Gautama her salvation, enabled Krishna to show his powers among the shepherd lads and to capture the Kali snake and to lift the mount Govardhana and thus humble the pride of Indra. The servant Mira says that the touch of those feet enables a man to cross the great ocean.

16-9-1930
For me there is none else but Giridhar Gopal, let the whole world be witness. I have given up brothers, friends, and other relatives. In disregard of popular talk I sit in the midst of sadhus. I rejoice to see God’s devotees and weep to see worldly people. I have reared the creeper of love with my tears. I have churned the curds, extracted from them the butter and thrown away the rest. The King sent me a poison cup which I drank with pleasure. Now does everybody know the story about me. Mira says: Come what may, I am intent upon God and God alone.

17-9-1930

O mother, I have bought Govind. Some say He is cheap, some say He is dear. I have weighed Him. Some say He is to be found in the house, some say in the jungle, and some others say He is sporting with Radha. Mira’s Lord is to be found in the cradle of love.

O my Ranaji, I must sing the praises of Govind. If the King is angry he is welcome to his capital but if God is angry where is one to flee? Rana sent a poison cup, I drank it as if it was nectar; he sent a black snake in a box, I took it for God Saligram. Mirabai the love-stricken says: I want Krishna as my Lord and Master.

My mind is fixed on the guru’s feet. I am ill at ease without those feet. Everything else is like a mirage, a dream. The ocean of birth and death has dried down and I have no anxiety about crossing it. Mira says: O my God, now is my inner sight opened.
148

O God, Thou deliverest. Thay servants from difficulties. Thou savedst. Draupadi’s honour by extending her garment infinitely For They devotee Thou becamest man. Thou destroyedst Hiranyakashipu; didst not tolerate him. Thou savedst the sinking elephant and pulled him out of the water. Says Mira the servant and beloved of Giridhar: Where there is grief there is the cry of distress (sent to heaven).

149

म्हॉने चाकर राखो जी

O God, make me Thy slave. I shall be Thy gardener and every day feast my eyes with the sight of Thee, I shall sing about the deeds of Govind in the groves and lanes of Brindaban. For service I shall have daily darshan and shall have as pocket money the memory of Thee; I shall get as estate intense devotion to Thee; thus will I have the three excellent things. My Lord has worn a peacock feather crown and a yellow dhoti; He has worn a garland of vaijanti flowers. He grazes cows in Brindaban and plays upon his pipe. I shall build me a lofty palace and have windows in it; through them I shall look at my Lord with my kusumbi (red) sari on. Among the inhabitants of Brindaban are to be found yogis doing yoga, sannyasis doing tapas, sadhus singing bhajans. Mira’s Lord is deep and mysterious; keep thou thy patience—He appears to His devotees even at midnight on the banks of the Jamuna.

17-9-1930

150

निन्दक बाबा वीर हमारा

One who speaks ill of me is a hero for me. He works without pay. He is instrumental in enabling me to wash off my old sins. He renders me service without reward. He sinks and saves others. He is such a beloved fellow. O Rama, I pray for his long life. Dadu says: The vilifier is a benefactor in disguise.

18-9-1930

151

अज्जू ने निकसे प्राण कठोर ।

Still does cruel life cling obstinately to the body. O my beloved God, I have been long separated from Thee. Four periods are like four cycles, the night is gone, the day has broken. O Thou Thief of my heart, where art Thou, though the promised time is past?
O Thief I am looking out for Thee on the way but do not see Thee.
Dadu says: Pangs of separation from one’s beloved are like the pangs of the fabled chakor bird separated from the moon.

19-9-1930

152

O God, Thou art sandal, I am as water, Thy sweet scent pervades everything; Thou art the cloud, I am the peacock of the forest looking for rain like the chakor bird for the moon; Thou art the lamp burning day and night, I am the wick; Thou art the pearl, I am the string, and we unite as does gold with surokhar.

Raidas the devotee says: Thou art the Lord, I am the slave.

20-9-1930

153

O God, my mind is distracted, how shall I worship Thee? Thou seest me, I should see Thee, that were a sign of mutual love. Thou seest me but I do not see Thee, this is a state of a lost mind. Though Thou art in all always, yet have I not learnt to know Thee! Thou art full of virtue, I am full of vice, I have not even acknowledged the debt owing to Thee. I am floundering between I and Thou, Thine and mine, how can I be saved? Raidas says: O God of mercy, hail to Thee, the only stay of the universe.

21-9-1930

154

O dullard, why dost thou carelessly sleep away thy time, awake O man, awake. The yogis or voluptuaries or thieves keep vigil; likewise do beloved saints who are intent upon God. O brother, keep vigil like Prahlad and Dhruba and Dhruba got a permanent seat of honour, Prahlad got a kingdom. The soul is the traveller, the body is the hotel. How long shalt thou be attached to it? Thou hast but a night’s stay in the hotel, on the day breaking thou hast to go, seek the company of the good, serve thy Master and thou shalt be

1 The original Hindi bhajan has “suhaga” meaning ‘borax’, a substance used to purify gold. Gandhiji has used the Gujarati word ‘surokhar’.

368 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
happy.

Nitanand says: O proud man, worship Rama; only those who are fortunate know how to keep vigil.

22-9-1930

A knowing man uses his knowledge at will. Just as a vessel moving in all directions is always guided by the polar star, even so does the knowing one although moving about on earth has his gaze fixed on the heavens; and just as the ice melts in water so does he attain his independence by merging himself in the divine. The condition is indescribable of him whose abode is where the beginning is unknown and the end never is and where neither the mind nor the speech can reach. This divine play is wonderful and incomparable. He who has known it from ancient times speaks as it were from the heavens. Akha says: Only a rare knowing one recognizes it.

23-9-1930

O brother, the morning has broken. Wake up and remember thy Maker. What the true guru says comes after full deliberation; therefore beware, O brother. There is no one to befriend thee. There is no sister, no brother; for who will deliver thee when the god of death pronounces thy doom? Father, mother and others are relatives only for self. Apart from the remembrance of God there will be no company, thou wilt be alone. I seek refuge in the feet of Murari the cleanser from sin and deliverer from bondage. Sahajram says: Worship Rama, he will remove evil and grant happiness.

24-9-1930

That ornament of Nanda’s home, Yashoda’s darling, Haladhar’s brother, Radha’s beloved is the giver of supreme happiness. He is all in all to the good people, He is the wealth of Siva and the Vedas and Puranas have sung of His greatness, He is greater than Indra, He is God of gods, He is Brahm[an] to Brahma, greater than the greatest. He is death to death, Lord among lords. He is beyond measure. Giridhari is the life of Nandadas and the darling prince to the villagers of Gokul.

25-9-1930
To whom shall I bear ill will? God himself proclaims: “I am in everything and everyone and regard all equally, only I fear most my devotees”. Shri Haridas says: By the grace of God I wander about daily fearlessly.

26-9-1930

Let those who will, praise and those who will, blame, let them say what they like; I love Rama, come what may.

1 had a bundle and the water was deep. But Ramachandra became a tortoise and carried her on his shell. Even as He endows the sun and the moon with light, sustains the sky without pillars, makes stones to float on the sea, why will He not save His servants? Siva, Sanak, sages like Narad and others worship Him. Jasvant is the servant of Rama—his Lord from birth to birth.

27-9-1930

In the world the saints do the greatest good. They lead us manifestly towards God and dispel our ignorance. They are kind to all and like God Himself assist us in our troubles. They are above the three moods and have no thought of physical comforts. They are different from the worldly men. Brahmanand says: The company of saintly people enables us to know God.

28-9-1930

\[1\] Gandhiji has left the words “कमल प्याने मोट बांधी” untranslated. Vide also”Letter to Premabehn Kantak”, 28-9-1930.
161
प्राणि! तू हरिसों हरे । तू कथों रहा निंदर रे?

O man, fear God, how canst thou be indifferent? Do not be careless, be on thy guard whilst there is yet time and have the fear of God in thee—Do thy allotted task quickly, know that death is hovering about thee, do not pride thyself on thy beauty, for thy body will be reduced to ashes. Messengers of Yama will catch thee by the throat and make thee smart there. O man, worship thy Maker. Braj Kishore says: Cling to the feet of Hari and save thyself.

29-9-1930

162
हे जगताता, विश्व-विधाता

O Thou Protector of the universe, Ruler of its destiny, Abode of happiness and peace, Ocean of mercy, Friend of the poor, Destroyer of the pangs of pauperism, Everlasting, Whole, Unending, Beginningless, Perfect Brahma, Ancient of days, Refuge of the people, their Lord, Adored of them, Matchless, Indescribable, Beloved of the heart, Guardian of the three worlds, Mainstay of life.

30-9-1930

163
वर्णमणि मीन मयादमणि रामचन्द्र

Among fishes the Fish incarnation is the best; among self-restrained persons Ramachandra is the best; among lovers Krishna is the best; among the powerful Narahari; in hardness the Tortoise incarnation; in strength Varaha, the Boar; in elusiveness Vamana who put on a big body; among mountains the Golden Mount (Meru); among waters the Ocean; among lakes the Mansarovar; among rivers the Ganges; among birds the Garuda; among trees the Tree of fulfilment of desires; among monkeys Hanuman; among cities Ayodhya; among warriors Parashurama; among instruments the discus Sudarshana; among feminine strength Parvati the beloved of Shankara; among devotees prahlad; in love Radhika is the best. Thus has Kanhar made a garland of jewels for his neck.

1-10-1930

VOL.50 : 23 AUGUST, 1930 - 5 JANUARY, 1931 371
O God, my friend, I ask of Thee this boon: do not forget me. I am dull-witted, know nothing, nor do I show any love for Thee. Thou never forsakest those whom Thou hast taken under Thy shelter; Thou wilt give me victory over Thee. I know that I have no merit to commend itself to Thee, on the contrary, I have terrifying shortcomings and O my Life, if Thou, knowing my shortcomings, wouldst give me up, I shall be undone. But I have a certain faith in me that Thou wouldst not forsake me. It is Thy habit of old that Thou ignores Thy devotee’s blemishes. Thou art the friend of the poor, Thou art gentle of nature. I adore Thee. Premsakhi says: I do not know Thy mysteries, only I believe in Thee.

2-10-1930

O Beloved, I seek refuge in Thee. I have neither means nor strength, nor wisdom. My sole faith is in the touch of Thy feet, O Lord. I am like the bitter fruit of low-lying ground, but Thou, Ocean of mercy, hast raised me high. I am but a poor child seeking Thy protection. O Lord do not forget me who am so helpless. O Beloved, keep Thou me believing me to be Thy slave. Premsakhi says: I ever stake my all on Thee.

3-10-1930

O Star of my eyes, darling of Nanda, show Thy dear self to me. O Thou Friend of the distressed, Fount of mercy, Representative of all virtue, full of youth and of handsome appearance, I can no longer restrain myself. I am intent on seeing Thee face to face. Rasik says: In the hope of that happy meeting day and night I meditate on Thee alone.

4-10-1930
167

चेतन! अब मोहि दर्शन दीजे।

O Divine Spirit, let me have a sight of Thee. By it I shall attain supreme bliss; by it shall the endless chain of birth and death be broken. For Thee I have resorted to austerities, penance and many ceremonies; how long am I to continue? Without Thee all these are useless, for the heart does not melt; some foolish ones hug action, others knowledge. The joy and the value of union with Thee neither of them knows. Thou art above them. Thou art and art not in all. In Thy perfection Thou art unique. Thy action is a mystery; Thou art both master and disciple. Though formless and indescribable, yet Thou art all forms. Thou alone knowest Thyself. The Vedas declare Thee to be unknowable. Thy servants sing Thy praises.

5-10-1930

168

अब हम अमर भये न मरेंगे

I have now become immortal, I shall not die. Why should I have to put on a new body when I have given up self-deception which is its cause. Desire and anger bind one in the world. These I shall destroy. From time immemorial, man has died, now I shall destroy time itself. Body is mortal; soul is immortal, it would revert to its original state. I shall do away with the mortal and become an inmate of the abode of the immortal. I shall cleanse myself and be pure. I have died many times because of my ignorance; now I shall be [free] from the pair of happiness and unhappiness. Anandghan says: Those who will not take shelter under the two-lettered name that is so near everyone will surely die.

6-10-1930

169

राम कहो रहमान कहो कोऊ, कान्ह कहो महादेव री।

All is Brahm[an]. Call it Rama or Rahman, Kanha or Mahadev, Parasnath or Brahma; pots are different but as earth they are one. Even so do we make imaginary differentiations; in essence Truth is one and indivisible. He who is restraint incarnate is Rama, he who is mercy incarnate is Rahim, he who puts an end to all work (by renouncing fruits) is Kanha, he who attains Nirvana is Mahadev, he who touches reality is Parasnath, he who knows himself is Brahm[an].
Thus, says Anandghan, I am spirit (not body) and am still.

7-10-1930

170

बंधन काट मुरारी हम्रे बंधन काट मुरारी

O God, break my bondage. The alligator and the elephant fought in the lake, the latter was dragged deep down and when the elephant’s cry of distress reached Thee, Thou left Thy pleasures to help him. For the sake of Draupadi Thou madest haste to reach her Thy help when the tyrant was pulling her garment in the midst of the assembly. The wife of Gautama Rishi attained salvation by the touch of Thy feet. The prostitute and Sabari too reached the same state (by the same devotion to Thee). O people, listen to the acts of the saints and praise God. Vidhuband who is pining for the sight of Thee says: O God accept me.

8-10-1930

171

मैं तो जिरद भरोसे बहुनामा

My reliance is on the celebrated promise of God. O God, my Master, I know nothing of service or Ramanama. Thou hast saved the elephant, the [vulture]¹, the prostitute and the sinner Ajamil. I have sought Thy protection on the strength of this evidence of Thy mercy. Premanand says: O all-powerful and all-knowing Lord, save me or kill me.

9-10-1930

172

अगर है ईश्वर मिलनेका, तो हरदम ली लगाता जा ।

If Thou wouldst see Him with each breath think of Him. Burn thy pride and smear thy body with its ashes; take up the broom of love and with it wipe out the distinctions of me and thee; reduce the notion of duality to dust and sprinkle it on thy prayer carpet; leave the carpet, break up the rosary, throw the sacred books in the river, seek the help of angels and be their servant; do not fast nor keep ramzan, do not go to the mosque nor make obeisances; break to pieces the water jar for prayer cleansing and drink the wine of the joy of union; eat and drink but never be off thy guard; enjoy thy intoxication continuously; burn thy egotism. Be neither Mulla nor Brahmin; leave duality and worship Him alone. Shah Kalandar has proclaimed: say, ‘I am He’. Mad Mansur says: My heart has known truth, that is the wine shop of the intoxicated, make that the object of thy visit.

¹ The source here is indistinct.

10-10-1930

173

है बहरे बाग दुनिया चंद रोज़!

Life in this world called beautiful garden is only for a short while; you will enjoy the spectacle for a few days only. O traveller, prepare for the march; residence on earth is short. When the great hakim Lukman was asked, “How long will you live?”—rubbing his hands in despair he replied: “Only a few days.” After burial the angel of death said in the grave: you will sleep here only for a few days. O friends, you and I will have to separate in a few days. O tyrants, why do you oppress innocent people, your days are numbered. Nazir says:
Remember the day of death; you cannot rely upon life but for a short while.

11-10-1930

174

बस अब मेरे दिलमें बसा एक तू है

Yes, now Thou art the only King of my heart, Thou art my only Beloved. O Creator, now my meditation is solely upon Thy sacred feet day and night. My heart receives consolation only from Thee, Thy love possesses me. People generally consider me to be mad; everywhere Thy name is on my tongue. I have nothing to do with the pleasures of the world, Thy love is the only thing to please me, my heart’s case I shall paint with Thy love; knowledge has united me to Thee; the prayer of Thy servant is that I may have nothing to do with Satan.

12-10-1930

175

अजब तेरा कानून देखा, खुदा था!

O God, Thy law is mysterious. Wherever the heart is set, there Thou art to be seen; with Thee there is neither temple nor mosque. Thou lookest only for a true heart in Thy seeker.
Thou exhibitest the splendour of Thy love to him who has surrendered himself heart and soul to Thee. He who becomes enamoured of Thy divine qualities, takes all his colouring from Thee. He in whom there is still egotism left is like one who has lost his way and he is united to Thee who has lost his egotism. He who believes in Thee sees Thee face to face. It is like a beggar finding a priceless pearl.

13-10-1930

176

नैया मेरी तन्कसी बोझी पाधर भार

My boat is tiny and is laden with stones; eddies are tossing it from all sides and the helmsman is drunk and the boat is in midstream; there is whirlwind and on the top of it all rain is pouring in torrents. Giridhar poet says: O Lord be Thou the helmsman; let Thy mercy be the oar and let the boat reach the shore safe.

14-10-1930

177

कर ले सिंगार चतुर अलबेली

O good woman, put on thy best garments. Thou art to go to thy Lord. There the shroud will be of earth, the bed will be of earth and thou wilt be united to earth. . . . Wash, bathe, dress thy hair; there is no returning from there.

14-10-1930

178

वैष्णव जन तो तेंने कहीए जे पीड़ पराई जापे रे

He is a Vaishnava who identifies himself with others’ sorrows and in so doing has no pride about him. Such a one respects every one and speaks ill of none. He controls his speech, his passions and his thoughts. May his mother be blessed. He is equidispersed towards all, has no desires, regards another’s wife as his mother, always speaks the truth and does not touch other people’s property. He labours neither under infatuation nor delusion and withdraws his mind from worldly things; he is intent on Ramanama; his body is his sacred shrine for pilgrimage; he is no miser and is free from cunning and he has conquered passions and anger. Narasaiyo says: His presence purifies his surroundings.

15-10-1930
Know him to be a true man who takes to his bosom those who are in distress. Know that God resides in the heart of such a one. His heart is saturated with gentleness through and through. He receives as his only those who are forsaken. He bestows on his man servants and maid servants the same affection he shows to his children. Tukaram says: What need is there to describe him further? He is the very incarnation of divinity.

God is near indeed. He is within us. Yet we did not see Him in our lifetime. He pervades the three worlds, yet the world knew Him not. Fortunately saintly men appeared and we saw God. Ramdas says: Through that happy event we began to see God within ourselves.

O God, Thou Who art known to be an ocean of mercy, why hast Thou hardened Thy heart? For on the elephant’s scream of prayer Thou ranst to his assistance; for the devotion of Prahlad Thou roaredst in the fiery pillar; for the piteous appeal of Draupadi Thy heart melted. Eknath says: By the grace of guru Janardana my mind is intent upon the feet of God.

O God, let me not be witness to desire for sin, better make me blind; let me not hear ill of anyone, better make me deaf; let not a sinful word escape my lips, better make me dumb; let me not lust after another’s wife, better that I disappear from this earth. Tuka says: I am tired of everything worldly, Thee alone I like, O Gopal.
स्मरता नित्य हरि, मग ती माया कै सूरी?

What can maya do to one who always remembers God? By listening to God’s word, by laying it to heart and by meditating on man’s oneness with God, death ceases to frighten one. The great God Who is a fount of mercy and giver of boons blesses such a one. Amrit says: I therefore drink in nectar by always contemplating Oddhav’s feet.

17-10-1930

संतपदाची जोड, दे रे हरि।

O God, grant me love of companionship of the good. It brings forth lovely sprouts of internal bliss. O God by fully granting man’s lawful desires Thou satisfiest his heart’s craving. Amrit says: O God, Thou sweetenst the end of Thy devotees.

17-10-1930

भाल भरा रे, अपुलासा देव करा रे।

Give thyself to devotion and merge thyself in God. Let people say what they like for this, thou shouldst store up overwhelming love. Be indifferent to praise or blame, leave off ‘me and thee’ give up all desire and devote thyself to desireless worship, abandon all vain imaginings and doubts; old age has crept over thee. Man’s estate is difficult to reach, it will not come again for ages. Having understood this, seek out a teacher. Shivdini has no other determination; he has given himself body and soul to his teacher Kesarinath; for him the world has ceased to exist. Worship now God the friend of his devotees.

18-10-1930

---

1 Note by Gandhiji: “Oddhav was Amrit’s teacher” 186

अशास्वत संग्रह कोण करी?

Who will lay by stores that are bound to perish? Why should one build houses, verandahs and storeys? The humble cottage is good enough; covering made of tattered rags is also good enough. I should eat with relish whatever it pleases God to give me from day to day. Amrit says: What is filled in the beggar’s bowl gives all the relish one wants; it is such a joy.

19-10-1930

187

हरिभज्जननीवीं काठ धालवू नको रे ह

Do not let thy time pass without the praise of God. Thou fearest the wheel of life as one fears a rope for a snake and thus preventest union between soul and the Maker. Do not put out the lamp of knowledge within. Weigh thy word so that it will be evidence of steady balanced judgment. Do not plough the sand and waste time by parading thy opinion. Having informed thy mind properly know the reality through the companionship of the good. Never commit thyself to anything till thou hast had experience. Sohira says: There is no alternation of night and day where there is the lamp of knowledge; without it thou maystn’t even move the eyelid.

20-10-1930

188

पवित्र ते कुल पावन तो देश

Blessed is that family and that country where servants of God take birth. God becomes their work and their religion. The three worlds become holy through them. Tell me who have become purified through pride of birth? The Puranas have testified like bards without reserve that those called untouchables have attained salvation through devotion to God. Tuladhar, the Vaishya, Gora, the potter, Rohidas, a tanner, Kabir, a Momin, Latif, a Muslim, Sena, a barber, and Vishnudas, Kanhopatra, Dadu, a carder, all become one at the feet of God in the company of hymn singers. Chokhamela and Banka, both Mahars by birth, became one with God. Oh, how great was the devotion of Jani the servant girl of Namdev! Pandharinath (God) dined with her. Meral Janak’s family no one knows, yet who can do justice to his greatness? For the servant of God there is no caste, no varna, so say the Vedic sages. Tuka says: I cannot count the degraded and the forsaken saved through God’s grace. You may consult the sacred books if you would know them all.

21-10-1930

189

नियम पाठावे, जरि महानशिल योगी व्हावे।

If thou wouldst be a yogi, thou must attend to the necessary observances. Know that he who is slave to his tongue and sold himself to the goddess of sleep will never practise yoga. The candidate for yoga should be moderate in sleep and food and must not indulge in vain disputations. Make up thy mind thus to regulate thy food and all thy movements; practise internal concentration and then thou wouldst have internal peace. When thy mind is taken off external objects it will easily turn inward and be fixed even as a light protected from winds becomes steady and fixed.

190

जे जातो जे ते तू माझा सांगाती

Wherever I go, Thou art my companion. Having taken me by the hand Thou movest me. I go alone depending solely on Thee. Thou bearest too my burdens. If I am likely to say anything foolish, Thou makest it right. Thou hast removed my bashfulness and madest me self-confident, O Lord. All the people have become my guards, relatives and bosom friends. Tuka says: I now conduct myself without any care. I have attained divine peace within and without.

22-10-1930

191

न कल्पतो अतर करावा उपाय

When one does not know, what is one to do so as to have devotion to Thy sacred feet? When will it so happen that Thou wilt come and settle in my heart? O God, when wilt Thou so ordain that I may meditate on Thee with a true heart? Remove Thou my untruth and, O Truth, come and dwell Thou in my heart. Tuka says: O Panduranga, do Thou protect by Thy power sinners like me.
To the servants of Vishnu there is no yearning even for salvation; they do not want to know what the wheel of birth and death is like; Govind sits steadily settled in their hearts; for them the beginning and the end are the same. They make over happiness and misery to God and themselves remain untouched by them, the auspicious songs sing of them; their strength and their intellect are dedicated to benevolent uses; their hearts contain gentleness; they are full of mercy even like God; they know no distinction between theirs and others'. Tuka says: They are even like unto God and Vaikuntha is where they live.

23-10-1930

How now shall I describe (the praises of the good); my speech is not enough (for the purpose). I therefore put my head at their feet. The magnet leaves its greatness and does not know that it may not touch iron. Even so good men's powers are for the benefit of the world. They afflict the body for the service of others. Mercy towards all is the stock-in-trade of the good. They have no attachment for their own bodies. Tuka says: Others' happiness is their happiness; nectar drops from their lips.

193

Saintliness is not to be purchased in shops nor is it to be had for wandering nor in cupboards nor in deserts nor in forests. It is not obtainable for a heap of riches. It is not in the heavens above nor in the entrails of the earth below. Tuka says: It is a life's bargain and if you will not give your life to possess it better be silent.

24-10-1930

He is a devotee who is indifferent about body, who has killed all desire, whose one object in life is (to find) Narayana, whom wealth or company or even parents will not distract, for whom whether in front or behind there is only God in difficulty, who will not allow any difficulty to cross his purpose. Tuka says: Truth guides such men in all their doings.

196

चेद अनंत बोलिला

The essence of the endless Vedas is this: Seek the shelter of God and repeat His name with all thy heart. The result of the cogitations of all the Shastras is also the same; Tuka says: The burden of the eighteen Puranas is also identical.

25-10-1930

197

आणीक दुसरें मुज नाहीं आतां

This heart of mine is determined that for me now there is nothing else; I meditate on Panduranga, I think of Panduranga, I see Panduranga whether awake or dreaming. All the organs are so attuned that I have no other desire left. Tuka says: My eyes have recognized that image standing on that brick transfixed in meditation unmoved by anything.

198

न मिठो खावया, न बाढौ संतान

What though I get nothing to eat and have no progeny? It is enough for me that Narayana’s grace descends upon me. My speech gives me that advice and says likewise to the other people —Let the body suffer, let adversity befall one, enough that Narayana is enthroned in my heart. Tuka says: All the above things are fleeting; my welfare consists in always remembering Gopal.

26-10-1930

199

महाराष्ट्री शिवें, कोपे ब्राह्मण तो नहे ।

He who becomes enraged at the touch of a Mahar is no Brahmin. There is no penance for him even by giving his life. There is the taint of untouchability in him who will not touch a Chandal. Tuka says: A man becomes what he is continually thinking of.
Let the body persist or perish, my heart must be fixed on Panduranga. I swear by Thee O Pandharinath that I shall never let go the hold of Thy feet. On my lips must be Thy name, in my heart everlasting devotion to Thee. Namdev says: O Keshav such is my vow but it is for Thee to make it good.

27-10-1930

Merit consists in doing good to others, sin in doing harm to others. There is no other pair comparable to this. Truth is the only religion (or freedom); untruth is bondage, there is no secret like this. God’s name on one’s lips is itself salvation, disregard (of the name) know to be perdition. Companionship of the good is the only heaven, studious indifference is hell. Tuka says: It is thus clear what is good and what is injurious, let people choose what they will.

28-10-1930

O God, grant only this boon. I may never forget Thee; and I shall prize it dearly. I desire neither salvation nor riches nor prosperity; give me always company of the good. Tuka says: On that condition Thou mayest send me to the earth again and again.

28-10-1930

O Thou Dweller in my heart, open it out, purify it, make it bright and beautiful, awaken it, prepare it, make it fearless, make it a blessing to others, rid it of laziness, free it from doubt, unite it with all, destroy its bondage, let Thy peaceful music pervade all its works;
make my heart fixed on Thy holy lotus feet and make it full of joy, full of joy, full of joy.

205

वहे निरनार अनन्त आनन्दधारा ।

Endless stream of joy flows eternally, ancient music sounds in the boundless sky, innumerable suns, moons and stars rise. That matchless King of kings shines in all his glory in the whole universe. A crore hearts of devotees astonished, motionless, speechless bow their heads before the feet of the Almighty.

29-10-1930

206

तुमि ब्राह्मु, तुमि नाथ

Thou art Brother, Thou art Lord, day and night Thou art mine, Thou art my happiness, Thou my peace, Thou the way immortal, Thou art the Abode of joy, unite me to Thee, remove sorrow, the touch of Thy feet quenches all agony, O Thou boundless shelter of the distressed!

[30-10-1930]¹

207

एकटि नमस्कारे प्रभु एकटि नमस्कारे

In one prostration O Lord, Thou givest rest to all Thy creatures in Thy world.²

[30-10-1930]

208

GUJARATI CONTINUED

भूतल भक्ति पदरथ मोटू, ब्रह्मलोकमां नाहि रे

On this globe worship of God is the greatest thing, there is nothing like it even in the heavenly world. By acquiring merit one reaches only paradise from there to come again to earth in the end. But men of God ask not for salvation; they desire to be born again for everlasting service, praise and singing and to meet God face to face. Blessed are the parents of him who being born on India’s earth has ¹ The source does not bear any date, but presumably this and the following bhajan belong to this date.

² Note by Gandhiji: “These Bengali verses of the Poet have been authoritatively translated and so the renderings so far made here should be corrected and replaced by the authoritative versions.”
praised God for he has fulfilled the purpose of his birth. Blessed be Brindaban and the deeds performed therein, blessed be the inhabitants of Vraj for all the eight great siddhis are at their disposal and they can have salvation for the asking. The relish of that joy is known to Shankar or to the Yogi Shukadevji as also somewhat to the maids of Vraj, says Narsaiyo, who enjoys himself in the sunshine of His presence.

31-10-1930

209

नारायणं नाम जलतां, बोरे तेने तजीरे रे

We should forsake him who dissuades us from taking God’s name; we should worship God with all our mind, speech and deed. For doing this we should (if necessary) leave caste, family, mother, father, sister, son, wife, even as the snake discards his skin. Prahlad left his father but would not give up God’s name, Bharata and Shatrughna gave up their mother but never Rama. Rishis’ wives gave up their husbands for the sake of God. Thereby they not only lost nothing but gained all the four ends. Narsaiyo says: The women of Vraj gave up their all for the sake of Vitthal and sported with the Lord.

1-11-1930

210

समर्ने श्रीहरि, मेल ममला परी

O Good man, remember God and give up thy egotism, think of the source from which thou hast come. What art thou and what dost thou cling to? Without understanding (the root of things) thou sayst ‘this is mine, that is mine’ but if thou wilt use thy judgment thou wilt observe that the body is not thine for try what thou wilt, thou canst not keep it (for ever), it is bound to perish. When this body perishes there will be many more new ones and thy wife, children and others will deceive thee. Thou thinkest always of wealth and that is the greatest stumbling block in thy way. Thy lord is near thee and thou dost not know Him, thou hast lost thy chance and wasted thy time. Thou art in deep sleep and suffocated; why wilt thou not listen to the words of the sages and wake up? Narsaiyo says: It is a matter of shame thou wilt not wake up, if thou only wilt, thy age-long desires will abate.

2-11-1930

211

अविलब्रह्मांमेकं तुं श्रीहरि

Throughout the whole universe Thou alone art; Thou appearest as many, taking diverse forms. Thou art the informing Being in the material body. Thou art the essence of light, Thou art the word of the Vedas in the void, Thou art the air, water, earth. O Lord, Thou spreadest out high up in the trees, similarly having created a multitude of forms and a variety of tastes from One Being Thou hast become many. The Vedas declare and the other Shastras bear witness that there is no distinction between a nugget of gold and a gold earring; when it undergoes shapes, it wears different appearances and different names but in reality it is all gold. Thou art the seed in the tree and Thou art the tree from the seed and from this phenomenon one sees change in form. Narsaiyo says: This is all a matter of the mind but if I worship Thee in true faith Thou wilt appear as Thou art.

3-11-1930

212

अस्मात् तस्मिन् चिन्ता संक्षिप्त न

As long as the secret of the soul is not known, all practices are useless; thy life as a human being has passed away uselessly like the rains out of season. What though thou bathest daily and performest worship and dost service in the temples, what though thou givest alms staying in thy own house, what though thou adoptest long hair, smarest thy body with the sacred ashes. What though thou hast removed thy hair, performest austerities and visitest holy places, what though thou takest the rosary and takest His name; what though thou markest the sacred mark on the forehead and keepest the tulsi leaf, what though thou drinkest the Ganges water; what though thou canst recite the Vedas and knowest the grammar and pronouncest correctly; what though thou knowest the tunes and their effect; what though thou knowest the six systems and the permutations and combinations of letters. All these are devices for finding the wherewithal for one’s support if thou hast not known the soul of souls. Narsaiyo says: Thou hast wasted the priceless human heritage if thou hast not known the secret of the universe.

4-11-1930

1 Basil

386 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
It is useless to sorrow over what God ordains. Without His will we cannot move a blade of grass. If we do fuss about things, what is left over is a legacy of sorrows. It is ignorance that prompts one to say ‘I have done this’, even as a dog under a cart fancies himself shouldering the weight of the cart. A few yogis only know that the whole universe depends upon Him. If a man could dispose things, he would root out all enemies and have only friends, he would have no kings and no beggars, he would plant on every house flags betokening (limitless possession of wealth). Even as a creeper gives in its season leaves, fruit and flowers so does man receive what is his due in due time; a foolish man only will therefore resort to vain cogitations. Often does man write much and fails to say the right thing. People worship what they like and they seem to believe whole-heartedly that theirs is the only true belief. But Narsaiyo says with folded hands: Consider wordly happiness to be vain; everything is nothing without Krishna; I want my God from birth to birth.

5-11-1930

As I awake I see no world, the world was a conglomeration of enjoyments perceived in the dream-land. The joys are all transformations of mind and its sports are identical. Life is but the sport of Brahm[an]. The five elements spring from Parabrahm[an] and they cohere (through His will). The flowers and the fruit are of and from the tree, the branch is not separate from the stem. The Vedas declare and the other Shastras bear witness that . . . Life springs from Siva’s will. He has devised the fourteen worlds. Narsaiyo says: Many a saint has found salvation through realizing 'Thou art That'.

6-11-1930

O lazy man of poor wit, contemplate God so that the miseries of life may be alleviated. By engaging in any other pursuit, thou wilt gain nothing. God of Death will fool thee by leading thee into snares.

1 Note by Gandhiji: “For this verse see 107 of which this is an exact repetition.”
All the good flows from dedication to the feet of Shrikrishna; there is immeasurable bliss in seeking that shelter. Regard all other things as useless and treasure Krishna’s name in thy heart. Put away infatuation at a safe distance and rest before the feet of Hari. Do not turn away when the real thing is brought to thy notice. O fool, thou hast castles in the air; know that they are without any foundation. The world praises those who weave into their acts the qualities of the Deity. Poor Narsaiyo dedicated himself to God; he considers nothing comparable to the praise of God.

7-11-1930

This temple is worn out and the dweller is yet young. This body, O dweller, is tottering, the teeth are gone, only the gums are left. Thou art attached to the body but thou hast flown and the body remains. Mira says: O God (this being the condition), may I love Thee and drink in Thy love.

8-11-1930

I will not forget Hari who is in my heart. I went to the Jamuna to fetch water and on the way I found that priceless Lord. In passing through Brindaban I fell at Thy feet. Thou hadst worn saffron-colour dhoti and embroidered frock, Thou hadst saffron mark painted on the forehead; Thou hadst a peacock-feathered crown and rings in Thy ears; Thou wast playing on the flute. Mira says: What need is there to describe Him further? I have surrendered my all to Him who is my Lord and Master.

9-11-1930

Do not utter anything else than Radhakrishna. Do not take the bitter leaf when thou hast sugar-cane in front of thee; do not take shelter under the light of the firefly when thou hast the sun and the moon before thee; do not take lead in the place of jewels like diamonds and rubies. Mira says: I have given my all against Giridhar (God).

10-11-1930
O dear Lord, I love Thy face; as soon as I saw Thy face, the world became useless to me and my mind became detached from it. The happiness that the world gives is like a mirage, one should move about deeming it of no account. Mirabai says: Blessed Lord, my only hope is in Thee and I consider myself fortunate (in that I have seen thee face to face).

11-11-1930

Thou hast not yet become a devotee of God; what is thy pride based on? Thy heart does not swell with joy to see men of God, it does not melt to sing God’s praises. Thy desires have not abated, thy eyes are red with anger, thou wilt be a true Vaishnava if thou canst draw another towards thee, thou art nothing so long as thy contact does not influence one for the better, thou art not pained to see others in pain, thou dost not hesitate to speak ill of others, thou hast no true love for Vitthal (God), thou art not ashamed of repeating ‘I, I’. Thou hast no liking for serving others, thou canst not give up selfishness, thy acts don’t accord with thy speech, when challenged thou deniest thy speech(?); thou hast no relish for prayer, thou hast no faith in Hari (God), so long as thou hankerest after the world, the world is thy master and thou its slave; if thou wilt master thyself thou wilt find, the true thing Daya says: Whether thou likest it or not, I must say what is true.

12-11-1930

O God, such as I am, I am Thy servant. O Ocean of Mercy, take me by the hand, Thou art companion in distress, Thou art protector of the fallen. Thou dost not dismiss from thy presence the wretch who seeks Thy protection no matter how much sunk he may be in sin. O Thou deliverer, Thou shieldest Thy devotees who may be tempted to do wrong, Thou givest fortune to the unfortunate and O Giver of boons, Thou givest capacity and satisfaction, O good Lord, Thou makes crooked straight even when human endeavour has failed. O God who deliverest from misery, Thou washest the sins of the undeserving sinner, Thou protectest Thy devotees without their asking, Thou reckonest their faults as merit, Thou removest the difficulties of those who invoke Thy aid, Thou dost not distinguish between the great and the small, Thou art the help of the helpless, Thou knowest the aches of men’s hearts, Thou art the friend of the afflicted, Thou sufferest, Thou takest away fear from men and Thou overlookest blemishes, Thou art the Lord of all, the Soul of souls, Thou alone art independent, Thou art the beloved of Pritam, Thou art the guardian of Thy servants, Thou art my Rock.

13-11-1930

You may call to mind the sages of all the four yugas and you will find that no one saw God without much pain and tribulation. Brave men have great regard therefore for the devotees of Vishnu, only the cruel-hearted are against devotion. Dhruva, Prahлад, Bhishma, Bali, Bibhishana, Vidura, Kunti’s sons, Vasudeva, Devaki, Nand, Siva, the devotees of Vraj, all these pillars of devotion had to suffer tribulation. Again Nala, Damayanti, Harishchandra, Taramati, Rukmangada, Ambarish, Narasinha Mehta, Jayadeva, Mira, all these seekers had to go through purgatory before they tasted real happiness, Vyasa had his troubles both mental and physical, so had Tulsi and Madhav. The world carps at the asceticism of Siva; Sita, who was like mother of the universe had to undergo the fiery ordeal. The world bows to her for she suffered though sinless. Even those saints who have burnt all the past, present and future acts have the fear of suffering. It is God’s mystery inexplicable. One can only say such is His will. After all virtue and vice are products of man’s imagination; the world dances to the tune of Krishna. Dayaram says: Without the will of the Beloved not a blade moves but the weak mind is under hallucination of ‘I did it’.

14-11-1930

Returning again and again to the world, aeons have passed away. O God, now the limit is reached, take Thou me by the hand, scorched by the three agonies I have flown to Thee for protection, cool down the fevers. I entreat Thee, O Thou Fount of Mercy, let Thy blessed feet be my abode of refuge, let Thy merciful glance burn up my sins. If Thou wilt look at my sins, Thou wilt cease to be paramount Lord.
How [can] a ruby be compared to चण्ड, I am a slave, Thou art Master, Thou wilt therefore be generous to me Thy slave? Full of hope I have come before Thee, eternal God, knowing Thee to be all-powerful. O Thou upholder of dharma how can I leave Thy door in disappointment? Make me Thine own, don’t say nay to me. O Thou Deliverer, listen the prayer of one so helpless as I am. Look at me but once and fulfil my yearning, speak to me with Thy divine smile and say ‘Daya, thou art mine’.

15-11-1930

19

हरिगार खेल छे शूरानो, नहि कायरनु काम जोने

Godward way is for the brave not for the cowardly. Before one can treasure the sacred name in the heart, it is necessary to be ready to lay down one’s life. He only gets that divine joy who surrenders children, wife, wealth and his own head. Those who would find pearls risk their lives in going in deep waters. Such people face death bravely and have no doubts lurking in their minds. But those who watch these brave deeds from a safe distance shiver even to think of the risks. The way of love is a fiery ordeal, cowards flee before it. Those who are in it enjoy rare happiness, the spectators are scorched. Love is a bargain of life not to be easily had. Those who have attained the heights have passed through the fire of self-purification. Those who have drunk deep of the nectar of Ramanama are an object of envy. But those only who know what divine love is recognize them when they see them. They witness the divine sport of Pritam’s Lord.

16-11-1930

225

जननी जीवों रे गोपीचन्दनी

Blessed be Gopichand’s mother who planted in her own son the seed of vairag. Her preaching resulted in the world appearing like a furnace to Gopichand. Blessed be Dhruva’s mother who said bitter things to her son Dhruva so that he left a kingdom to seek the shelter of the forest. Sage Bajand when he saw his camel in a prostrate condition was shocked and learnt from the event the lesson that the world was a fleeting show and left it. Great was the self-denial of Bhartrihari who left 1,600 queens, left his palaces and went into the wilderness. I dote on all these who forsook this vain show. There have been others, worldly men good and bad too numerous to count. Where is Ravana with his brood? Where are the eight thousand children of Sagar king? Where is the fortune of Nand? All has passed away like a dream. Dwellers in palaces have gone and so have kings from their kingdoms. The Gods, the demons, the munis and ordinary folk all have vanished like dreams. O men, it were good then if you would deliberately leave this empty show; for the God of Death will surely compel you to do so one day. Nishkulanand says: I take my oath upon it that that fate awaits every one of us.

1 Note by Gandhiji: “‘Asceticism’ is an approach to the meaning.”

17-11-1930

त्याग न टके रे बैशाग विना

No matter what one does, self-denial will not last unless it is based on dislike for the thing given up. If there is deep down the desire for it, it will not be relinquished. A man may wear the garb of a sannyasi but that will bring him no nearer the goal if the garb only hides the desire that has its full possession of the wearer. So long as desire, anger, greed and passion are not rooted out, the thing will come to the surface the moment there is an opportunity; the very sannyasa may become an additional source of self-indulgence. Just as the seed does not sprout during the dry hot season but does so as soon as the rains come, so is it with man’s desires; they await the due season. Just as iron moves in front of a magnet so do the senses move when they are face to face with their objects. They are still for want of opportunity but they run riot as soon as the opportunity comes. Therefore mere external renunciation will not answer if there is no corresponding response within. Such external renunciation will mean licence even from the restraints of Varnashrama (the four divisions) and is likely to result in harm. Such a man becomes useless like milk gone bad. It won’t yield ghee or butter and is unfit to drink. Nishkulanand says: A man’s renunciation is wrong when he hovers between self-denial and self-indulgence, household affairs and their relinquishment.

18-11-1930
The yogi has migrated to the forest. He has given up all love of the body. He cares not to talk about the world, he has become indifferent about its comforts. He who had richly upholstered cots and lived in palaces has not even straw to lie on, lives in the shade of trees. He who had rich shawls and embroidered robes now sports a ragged blanket and bears heat and cold. He who had a variety of tasty foods now lives upon pieces of chapati thrown in the begging bowl. He at whose call thousands answered and who was followed by large armies is now wandering alone and unshod. O king, if you would stop I would prepare food for you; I would prepare rice puddings in no time and it will be put in your begging bowl. (The king answers:) He who waits for food, expects to have a dish, is no yogi, he is a householder desirous of enjoyment. He is doomed. He who gives up his kingdom and adopts sannyasa may not fix his mind on wealth and family, he considers all indulgence as a malady. Nishkulanand says: Blessed be he who gives up all desire for physical comforts and adopts sannyasa, he has left his family, it is true, but he has gained an imperishable family.

19-11-1930

Those yogis who are like Jada Bharata have full control like a powerful foe over the senses including the mind. They remain immovable like a rock in the face of temptations. They will perish rather than be weak in faith or patience. During the whole day they never allow themselves with the body. He is the true man who will not indulge the body. They move about in obedience to God’s will and serve mankind. He who comes across such yogis is on the way to obtaining salvation. Such a man when he comes in contact with such yogis whether by design or accident is, Nishkulanand says, surely purified.

20-11-1930
They are patient and brave and true warriors who have shed all fear of death. Even if there are crores against one they will regard them as straw. They have to face the determined enemy called temptation, but they will not flinch even though they should die. Poets, noted pundits, are very intellectual but they would not [sic] such an enemy—for in that army desire, anger, vanity, ambition are chief warriors, for them (the learned) there is no standing against this army. Wandering yogis, ascetics and the like fight under the shelter of God. Against such an army true warriors alone fight. Yogis know through the mouths of their teachers the art of fighting. Muktanand says: After having defeated this army of temptations they enjoy immortal bliss.

21-11-1930

Those [who] will not break their plighted word are real heroes. They will not be moved from their purpose by any of the three fevers. They will act with decision and patience. They would never harbour doubt about their action or its timeliness. We have to die some day without fail, some sooner, some later, let us not flinch for the sake of worldly enjoyment. He who understands things clearly through the heart and then acts in the teeth of all danger is a hero. He will not entertain suspicions about others. He will never forget Brahmanand’s God.

22-11-1930

We must risk life itself but realize God, we may never recede from the attempt. I looked within, did not chip [sic] wisdom and placed my head at the feet of Hari. One may not move without knowing the wisdom of the step but having moved forward there should be no looking back; in the field of strife we must fight unto death. With what face can one return who bravely goes forward and then at the critical moment beats a hasty retreat? It is wise to make calculations beforehand; it is no use going out to battle in bravado.
But having once gone, there should be no retreat even though one may be cut to pieces. We must sing of Hari with zest and may not step back when the call comes. Brahmanand says: We should rather die than accept defeat.

23-11-1930

232

सदगुरु शरण विना अज्ञानतिमिर टज्ज्ञेश नन्हे रे

Without the help of a true guru this dark ignorance cannot be dispelled nor can the seed that generates life and death be burnt. Not without listening to the nectar-like speech of a loving teacher, nor without acquiring the capacity for distinguishing between truth and untruth, nor without knowledge based on experience will the knots of the heart be undone. Even though one may read the Shastras daily and keep the mind and the ears under control, true happiness will be unattainable without true thought. There is no gain in harping on ‘mine and thine’. A wise man distinguishes between right and wrong. Nothing is to be gained from concentration on wife, children and domestics. Keshav says: We will never meet good men who can show us the way to perfect bliss without serving God and without diligent search.

24-11-1930

233

मारी नाड़ तमारे हाथ हरि संभाळजो रे

My pulse is in Thy hands, O God. Take care of me, regarding me as Thine keep Thy prestige. I do not know what is good for me and what is not, misery always stares me in the face. O God, look at me, what is happening to me? Thou art the true physician from time immemorial; Thou knowest all the remedies, my time is near, do Thou be punctual. O God, why art Thou waiting? Why dost Thou give me up whilst there is yet hope? O God, do Thou remove my great misery. Keshav says: What will happen to me? I am undone if the whole battle is lost, be Thou warned. O my Protector, Thy prestige will be lost (if anything happens to Thy servant).

25-11-1930
234

O Lord of the afflicted, do not desert me. In this great ocean of birth and death I am tossed about, do not let the occasion of saving me slip by. Thou art my only refuge, I do not know the means, O Keeper of my life, do not give me up because I am so worthless. Thou art Mother, Father, Family, all in all. O Ocean of Mercy, do not dry up for Thy slave’s sake. Keshavlal has Thy protection, O Lord of the Universe, desert me not on any account.

26-11-1930

235

God comes to us through devotion. If He did not come, we should not be free from the bondage of birth and death. Devotion is a means of attaining true bliss and makes birth on this earth worthwhile. Even the Vedas testify that God comes to His devotees. He who is prowess personified allows Himself to be tied up as if He was helpless. He appears wherever His servants are in distress. He, the Lord of the Universe, Fountain of Mercy is unattainable without devotion. Meditations, austerities, vows and the like are useless without devotion. Without it, wealth, youth, strength, intellect, cunning all these put together are useless (if there is no devotion). Colour, beauty, family, caste cannot help (where devotion is absent). Ajamil, Narad, Sabari, the prostitute, the elephant—these declare the virtue of devotion. Keshav says: No one person is able to recite all the power of devotion.

27-11-1930

236

There is no help for thee but God. Thou art the least in strength and yet in thy egotism owing to possession of house, land and riches thou sleepest in peace; instead thou shouldst worship God with devotion and with due observance of self-restraint. Why wilt thou needlessly slave for others? Think deeply and realize that terrible time is fleeting. Keshav says: Thou canst do what thou wishest with this priceless body.

28-11-1930
He only knows what it is who is smitten by love of Rama. Dhruva had that experience and so had Prahlad and they found their goal. The Shastras say that Shukadevji was smitten even while he was in the embryo. God came to King Mordhwaj and dominated his mind. He went to Kashi and submitted to being sawn by his wife and son. Rana came upon Mirabai in anger with a drawn sword in his hand and presented her with a poison cup. God turned it to nectar. He accepted Narasinha Mehta’s draft and helped him in the nick of time. Devotee Dhano says: He has thus saved thousands of His servants.

29-11-1930

Who can destroy him whom God would keep? I see no one else besides God. At His pleasure he makes a rich man poor and a poor man king; He makes a lake of a desert and a desert of a lake. He reduces a mountain to a straw and a straw He converts into a mountain. He saved manjari’s young ones from a furnace. He saved the eggs of a lizard. Such is His power. O God, Thou helpest Thy servants in the nick of time. The hunter has his bow strung, [a falcon] is about to dart but a snake bites the hunter and [the falcon] has a wound in his head. The eagle has fallen and the happy birds have flown. He the mighty Tailor sits with his yardstick and scissors, adjusts everything and takes care of all. The Lord of Dhiro is the sole personification of Truth.

[1-12-1930]

1 Cat’s
2 The Gujarati text of the bhajan has “कंठोरी”, which means a sandpiper.
3 The source has “घण्जलिन्”. Gandhi has left the word untranslated.
4 Note by Gandhi: “This is marked as on 30-11-1930 but done in the early morning of 1st December.”
The mountain is in the straw but no one sees it in it even as none would notice a lion hidden among a flock of sheep. But he can discover himself by his roar, as the musk deer among the ordinary flock. The Absolute is hidden in the phenomenal as oil in the seed, fire in the wood, ghee in milk. Who will listen and to whom shall I talk of the Illimitable and the Unknowable? Speech does not reach it. There is an abode which is beyond the intellect. Though the mind is swift like the wind it cannot overtake it. This Immortal, Indivisible essence pervades everything movable and immovable. It has made this universe, there is not an atom where It is not. But by the grace of a true guru It is attainable. Why go in search of It here and there when It is in you? Servant Dhiro says: Thou art wherever I look.

1-12-1930

Beware O my mind, you have to walk on the edge of a sword; with courage you have to fight for truth; time is the enemy, the year is the lord, the twelve months are the generals, each month has thirty days which are the under-officers and then there is the day and the night and so in the year seven hundred and twenty. The hundred years of a lifetime are the besiegers of the body fort; these have to be defeated. There are five senses after you and then there are anger, desire, greed, infatuation, illusion, egotism—these are all first-class warriors tyrannical. You have to fight a very powerful foe. You have love, knowledge, true teacher, purity, contentment, forgiveness, hymns, faith. With these on your side you have to give battle. Meditation and yoga practices and the like will, Dhiro says, enable you to stand the heat of the battle.

2-12-1930
The world is mad, it respects humbug. The fool does not know the Maker though He is nearest him. He worships lifeless stocks and stones as Siva. How dark are people who ignore life? Under the sun’s blaze one does not see the philosophers’ stone. Put a stone vessel in the sea and try ever so hard, it is bound to sink. How can you press oil from sand or milk a metal cow? What avails a daily clean bath to a man who is unclean within? What is the use of destroying the snake-hole after the snake has bitten you? Knowers alone know how love is wounded. God is not far, He is near; only look within, clean thy heart and see the Lord within—the powerful Lord of Dhiro is everywhere in the world.

3-12-1930

Resolve upon enthroning Ramanama in thy heart. Yoga is no use, nor is the saffron-coloured robe nor mixing up all thy food. Whether thou wearest bhagava or white garments is of little consequence, the thing to do is not to hurt any creature and to wish it well. Put the worldly men on one side, the yogis on the other and then show me the yogi who has seen God face to face. Because they served God, Narasinha Mehta, Mira, Prahlad, Sena barber, Dhano, Peepo, Rohidas, Koobo, Potter Goro, Rajput Bodano, Gangabai saw God face to face. Poor good people, good-hearted butchers, worshipped God and found peace; show me the yogi who did likewise. Rama is not to be attained by smearing oneself with ashes or by hanging head downward nor by leaving wife and retiring to the forest. God can be attained only by diligent search. Rama is for him who can be happy in the jungle and who regards palaces as jungle, who regards bitter as sweet and sweet like bitter. Even as oil is hid in the seed, ghee in milk, so is God hid everywhere, says Narbho.

4-12-1930
Men of God should have abundant love for all; they should shed all egotism. Through God’s name they should banish the threefold afflictions, leave off sinning and take Ramanama. They should consider all to be good and themselves to be unworthy. They should in perfect humility distribute alms. They should devote themselves to their faith body, mind and speech and regard God as the giver and the enjoyer. They should not weaken in their decisions; they should speak sparingly. They should entrust secrets only to the trustworthy and their speech should be humble and [they should] be serious in giving opinions; they must not talk big before those who know how to discriminate, they should take the name of the limitless God and attain salvation and help others to do likewise, their devotion should be as of poor people. Bhojo a humble servant says: By the grace of God the three afflictions do not go near such people.

5-12-1930

Devotion is for the brave, they do not turn back after having once begun. Having made up their minds, they go forward in full faith. They have killed desire, anger, arrogance and greed. When the temptations swelled and when the heat commenced, the cowards trembled and fled. The true men stood their ground and fought with God as their Help and Guide. They outdistanced many and then began to have a glimpse of Brahm[an]. They destroyed the effect of past action and met God face to face. They would not wish for the various gifts. To such salvation is easy. Bhojo Bhakta says: Those who have given up themselves body and mind and all and are ever equi-minded are the true devotees and they have heaven as their abode.

6-12-1930
O teacher, you say Brahm[an] is in me but I see Him not; tell me what distinguishes Him. Is the head He or is the head in Him, is He in the eyes or are the eyes themselves Brahm[an] ? Is He in the nose or in the mouth ? I am puzzled. Pray help me out of my doubt and delusion. Is He in the feet or in the hands, in the heart or the chest? If He is in the feet—where is He? O teacher, teach me. When the pupil was rested, the teacher spoke: O pupil, listen, today the ignorance must be dispelled. He the loved one is not in any particular limb, let me warn you betimes; He eludes one unless one enquires within. He is as near as you are intent upon Him. Therefore when one is absorbed in Him, one sees Him though He has neither form nor colour. Bapu says: Yet you will see Him in many forms.

7-12-1930

O tongue, why dost thou tire of singing God’s praises? Thou hast not enough time for gossip which is ever on thy lips. Thou art expert in talking ill of others. Thou art ever ready for tasty things; thou art ready also for quarrelling but when it comes to the matter of praising the Lord, thou art too busy. At the time of death no one is of any use, the dear ones are like so many foes. . . . 1 You will then rub your eyes. When the time approaches sesame is sent for and so is tulsi leaf, Ramanama is also taken but when you were young you carried yourself with a high head. What is the use of Ramanama on death-bed? Is it any use digging a well after a house has caught fire? Of what use is a light brought after the thieves have stolen things? You are intoxicated with your own infatuation; wake up and look around. What is the use of weeping when time knocks at the door? It costs nothing to sing Hari’s praises, not a hair is touched. The weary way will not be passed without effort but the whole can be easily covered by reliance upon God.

8-12-1930

1 Here Gandhiji has left untranslated the words: “चन्द्र भ्रूणे सङ्गीत्य लेने”
Worship God, take Ramanama which is the talisman. This body is a vessel, have true faith in thy heart; the world ocean contains unfathomable waters in the shape of endless desires. The earthly body chains thee; thou art filled with egotism. By the aid of a true guru thou canst cross the ocean. This human body is unattainable even by the gods. Being in it cultivate the companionship of the good and gain the inestimable end. If thou wilt not, thou wouldst repent. Time is fleeting. From the little insect to Brahma all embodied ones have the fear of death hovering over their heads. This body is a momentary thing, a mere morsel for the God of Death. Why all this arrogance about so momentary a thing? Thou hast been born again and again and carried the load of egotism, delusion and infatuation, thou hast not known God and hast therefore suffered. Gavaribai says: Have faith in the true guru, sing the Lord’s praise and attain bliss; accept this advice of mine; if thou wilt not thou art doomed.

9-12-1930

By the grace of the good, delusion disappears and the body becomes pure. By thinking of God at every breath the five sins are washed away. Even as a herd of elephants flees on hearing the roar of a lion even so does a man attain freedom if he has the courage (of a lion) ; white ants do not affect fire, the fabled gem is not affected by dirt; so does a knowing man remain unaffected in the midst of this limitless ocean of turmoil. The son of a magician knows all his tricks;
even so do men of God know the tricks of God and remain untouched thereby; one acquires merit by cultivating the companionship of the good and he reaches his goal. Pritam says by worshipping the Lord the worshipper attains the eternal kingdom.

10-12-1930
Those who trust in God have never yet been known to have suffered discredit. The Vedas testify that it is ever well with those who are intent upon God. He saved (His devotee) Prahlad and destroyed Hiranyaksha. He gave the kingdom to Bibhishana and destroyed Ravana. He gave a necklace to Narasinha Mehta. He gave an eternal kingdom to Dhruva and made him His own. He turned in to nectar the poison given to Mirabai. He clothed Draupadi and stood by the side of the Pandavas. Premaldas says: God will remove the misery of those devotees who would thus worship Him.

11-12-1930

The works of him who has an inner experience do not bind him for he has known God. He is the knowing one who has broken all ties. He is beyond everything and is a mere witness of everything; he is independent of all the six worlds. Being above these he stands alone. Of millions the fewest only realize this. One who has the inner experience knows the Nameless One. He has attained salvation for he is past the dual state, without striving for the One indivisible, he perceives It as if naturally. The truth is that all created things have to perish and so this endless ocean of life and death continues to roll on. The last stage is beyond the waking, dreaming, sleeping and the state beyond these three. It is beyond the physical and ethereal. That which is above even the first cause is described by the Vedas as ‘not this, not this’. I dote on the mother of him who has dedicated himself to common good, who is goodness personified and who is like the true guru. Nirant says: He who is eternal though nameless has many names.

12-12-1930
Light thy heart and sweep out from there evil thoughts and anger. Let mercy be oil and love the oil tray, let meditation on God be the wick and let knowledge of Brahm[an] be the light. When the heart is thus truly lighted all darkness will vanish and then thou shalt recognize Brahmaloka (God’s abode). O men, recognize this light that dispels darkness. Ranchhod says: I have entered the home, have found the key and opened the lock and there is light on earth.

13-12-1930

When will the matchless time come so that I would be rid of all knots external and internal? When will I give up all the subtlest ties and go the way the great sages have gone? Would that I was indifferent to all the moods and that the body was used merely for self-restraint, that there was nothing to bind me for any cause imaginable and that I had no illusions about the body. Would that I should gain knowledge that comes from removal of obstruction in the path of perception, that I regarded body as separate from the soul and that I had recognition only of the soul. Would that obstruction to right conduct too was removed and there was concentration on pure self. Would that there was steadfastness of the three yugas (?) running practically to the time of death and that steadfastness was incapable of being shaken by sufferings however great. Would that even the yoga was only for attaining greater restraint over self and that there was implicit obedience to the precepts of the Jina for the sake of the soul. Would that even that activity also perceptibly decreased and I was absorbed in self-realization. Would that there were neither likes nor dislikes in matters received through the senses and that I was unaffected by their play. Would that I engaged in activities that came to me in due course and was not enslaved by time, place or circumstance. Would that I was angered against anger and that against respect paid to me I had humility enough not to be affected by it.
Would that in respect of maya I was but a witness to its blandishments and against ambition I had ambition to thwart it, I had no anger against even the extreme wrongdoer and had no pride if an emperor paid respects to me, that I was unmoved even if the body perished and had no desire even for the greatest gifts. That I was the same to friend and foe alike as towards praise or insult, that there was [in-]difference in me whether I lived or died, that even regarding the cycles of birth and death or salvation I had only the simple natural state that I had crossed the alluring ocean of different temptations and was intent upon the state where all the passions are quenched, that at the time of death I would shed all desire and had perfect knowledge, that all the four kinds of activities were to me like a burnt hope—mere ashes, that I was living out only this life and that after that there was no more birth. That I had no desire for even an atom, that I was sinless, immovable and intent upon self-realization, that I was absorbed in the spotless, eternal everloving, neither small nor big, formless self-acting Being, that owing to past actions I was fit for the abode of the released—where there is eternal bliss, perfect perception and perfect experience. This is the state which the all-knowing Jina realized but could not describe. How can any other person describe it? It is capable only of being experienced. I have set my heart upon that state though it may be at present beyond my capacity. Nevertheless Rajchand is determined that God willing he will attain that state.

14-12-1930

253

मारं नयर्णनी आद्यसं न नीरख्या हरिते जरी

How neglectful must my eyes be that they never saw Hari. They never set their gaze upon Him, they would not be calm enough even to have a glimpse of Him. They have been immersed in sorrows or enjoyments, have burnt themselves with their heat. They have not devoted themselves to having God’s darshan (sight) and yet God is everywhere, He fills His creation. Among the movable and the immovable objects there is not an atom but has His presence in it. He is like the heavens pervading all. He is like the air inhabiting my heart. If I would but look at Him, He is there staring me in the face. Brahma

1 The source has “were”.

VOL.50 : 23 AUGUST, 1930 - 5 JANUARY, 1931 405
and His creation cannot be separated even for a moment. But we of the earth earthy have no inkling of that vital principle. An owl may live for a hundred years and still will not know what the day is like. The Lord is like the ocean—too big for the eyes to scan. The tongue gets fatigued to tell of Him and so simply says He is vast. O God, when will the spiritual sight be opened? When will this deep darkness be dispelled? O God, listen to my petition and lift this dead curtain. O my eyes, look deep and there is Hari. O eyes, get rid of the laziness and calmly see Him. Just set the gaze upon Him and look at Him to heart’s content.

15-12-1930

END

From a photostat: C.W. 4903. Courtesy: Mirabehn

459. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

SATURDAY MORNING, DECEMBER 13/16, 1930

CHI. NARANDAS,

This time I got your packet at 12 noon on Wednesday. I got a copy of the booklet Gitabodh. I take it that those who make notes about the work they do as yajna do so in their dairy. If you remind people often enough about this, they will be careful. See that everyone is soon able to use the instruments for weighing yarn and testing its strength. I have replied to Mahadev’s questions in my letter to Durga, and to questions about my health in my letter to Kakasaheb. Therefore read both the letters.

Afternoon

There was a letter from Jayaprakash saying that Prabhavati would go over there. She may have even arrived there before you get this letter. If she comes, look after her very carefully. She gets fainting fits and these should stop immediately in the Ashram. You may buy any fruits which may be necessary for her. Consult a doctor if necessary. You may write to me about her whenever you wish to.

1 Gandhiji’s discourses on the Bhagavad Gita, given in letters to Narandas Gandhi; vide, 1st footnote of “Letter to Narandas Gandhi”, October 30/November, 4, 1930. For the text of these discourses, vide “Letters on the Gita”, 21-2-1932.
Night, December 15, 1930

I got Manilal’s letter. I felt relieved. Let him observe as many restriction as he chooses, but not at the cost of his health. 110-115 lb. is certainly low weight. Manilal should maintain his weight between 120 and 125; if, however, he has kept up his strength, he will regain that level after he is released. He should guard against any disease insidiously attacking him. The reading which he has done is quite good, but in order to derive the fullest benefit from his work he should carry out my suggestions as far as possible. Really speaking, however, when he has the benefit of the company of a person like Nanabhai¹, and will now have the benefit of Mahadev’s company, there should hardly be any need for me to guide him. The reading he is doing at present is good indeed. There is little in it, however, to be remembered and digested. The reading which I have suggested will, while developing his memory and power of thinking, also beinteresting to him. Jivanshodhan² can be understood only if it is read carefully twice or thrice. He is doing right in reading it once again. One reason why my writings are easy to follow is that these days I write with the sole aim of making myself easily understood by all the inmates of the Ashram. Formerly too I wrote with the general public in view, and not for men of learning. It is natural, therefore, that my writings should be easy to understand. Let him write to me again. He should write as often as he gets time and is permitted to do so.

I have had no reply to my inquiry about Devdas’s letter. I have even suggested that he should write again. If the Bombay air suits Jamna, do not insist on her returning to the Ashram. Do you still make bread there? If you do, of what quality are you able to make it, and who actually makes it? If it is of good quality and if anyone is coming on a visit here, send a sample. You had described the process of making it, but it did not succeed here. I have not been able to discover where the error lay.

I can say that, up to this evening, the bhakhari of jowar and bajra seems to have done me no harm. I eat very little in bulk but can keep up my strength all right. No one should worry on my account. I will not be obstinate and cling to the experiment.

¹ Nrisimhaprasad Kalidas Bhatt
² By Kishorelal Mashruwala, a Navajivan publication
I did not find Hariyomalji’s and Gijubhai’s letters. I wonder if Gijubhai was written in place of Haribhai. I did not find the latter’s name in Radha’s note.

_Blessings from_

_BAPU_¹

_Tuesday Morning, December 16, 1930_

_Pranyama_ (control of breath) and _asanas_ (yogic postures) are referred to appreciatively in this chapter, but we should remember that at the same time the Lord has stressed the need for _brahmacharya_, i.e., keeping the observances calculated to take us nearer and nearer to God. It should be clearly understood that the mere practice of _asanas_ and the like can never take us to the goal of even-mindedness. _Asanas_ and _pranayama_ may be of some slight help in steadying the mind and making it single-purposed, provided that they are practised to that end. Otherwise they are no better than other methods of physical training. They are very useful indeed as physical exercise and I believe that this type of exercise is good for the soul, and may be performed from a bodily standpoint. But I have observed that these practices do only harm when indulged in for the acquisition of supernormal powers (_siddhi_) and the performance of miracles. This chapter should be studied as a summary of the teaching in the preceding three chapters. It cheers us up in our spiritual struggle. We should never be down-hearted and give up the endeavour to reach evenness of temper.

_BAPU_

[PS.]

There are 71 letters.

From a microfilm of the Gujarati : M.M.U./I

¹ For the text of the _Gita_ discourse (Ch. VI) which followed, _vide_ “Letters on the _Gita_”, 21-2-1932
460. LETTER TO SANKERJI

YERAVDA,
December 16, 1930

MY DEAR SANKERJI,

I was glad to hear from you of your progress. Can you give me the figures of khadi production in Malabar, or at least in Cochin? Do you know where Ramachandran is? Do please write to me from time to time.

Yours,
BAPU

The Hindu, 29-12-1930

461. LETTER TO PREMLILA THACKERSEY

YERAVDA MANDIR,
December 16, 1930

DEAR SISTER,

Please send me four pounds of cotton. Kakasaheb’s place is now taken by Pyarelal. He spins faster and, therefore, a greater quantity of cotton will be consumed than formerly. Kindly inform the people you buy the cotton from, that it is full of particles and seeds. As a result, we have to spend much time in cleaning it and some of the cotton is wasted.

I hope I do not give you too much trouble. I do believe that, if you store cotton for my sake, you will also be able to use it for other purposes.

I hope all your sisters are quite well.

Blessings from
MOHANDAS

From a photostat of the Gujarati : C.W. 4817. Courtesy : Premlila Thackersey
462. LETTER TO MANSHANKAR J. TRIVEDI

December 16, 1930

CHI. MANU,

I got your letter. Though you are so near the Ashram, I do not send this letter along with the other post for the Ashram, and delay its reaching you by some days. Instead, I am taking the risk and writing it directly to you. I believe you will get it. Why do you give way to despair? One who believes in God can never feel despair. Since you are very eager to work, you earn merit as if you had been actually working. Why, then, do you feel impatient? Who knows for what service God has destined you? Or how can we say that your aspirations in themselves are not sufficient for His work? You do perform the daily yajna of spinning; what else is it, if not service? Start repeating Ramanama and rouse yourself. Shake off despair. Banish the very thoughts of weakness and disease. If you take interest in the Gita and the Ramayana, go on repeating to yourself verses from them. Write to me direct. And write often.

Blessings from
BAPU

CHI. MANU
C/O PROF. TRIVEDI
TILAK ROAD, POONA CITY

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 7773

463. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

YERAVDA MANDIR,
December 16, 1930

BHAI GHANSHYAMDAASI,

I have your letter. Even if I agree to see you I am afraid the permission will not be granted. Therefore for the time being, we must be content with letters alone. By speculation I did not mean that no forward transactions should be entered into. Speculation means gambling. With the expectation that market prices will go up I buy 1,000 bales of cotton. I do not need any cotton, I do not even store it in any warehouse. Only a book transaction is made. Now I await a rise in price. I sell the cotton when it rises; this I consider gambling. The nation or, rather, the world has lost a great deal through such transactions. This was what I meant in my letter. Yes, I expect much more than this, but, at present, you will not be up to that. Without at all depending upon future market prices, to sell the commodities at a little more than the cost price is what I consider unsullied trade. Today it might be difficult to conduct such business, but ultimately, it might bear fruit. You might remember this is what I visualize for khadi. But I know this is a tall order. I shall be very happy and content if you brothers can give up speculation. However, do only what is intelligently acceptable and within your power. I would not at all wish that you should act upon the suggestion simply because it happens to be mine and that, too, sent from jail. Faith should not have a place where reasoning is applicable.

Jayaprakash informs me that, although you are not recruiting any new people just now, he will be absorbed somewhere because of my recommendation. I certainly hold that Jayaprakash is a worthy young man but I do not wish that a post be created where none exists today.

I was a little worried to read of Malaviyaji’s fever in the newspapers. I am relieved now. I hope he will emerge from the jail in good health. I am glad about your health too. I am again experimenting with a milkless diet. This time constipation was responsible for it. Now I am taking chapatis prepared from millet for the prisoners, vegetables, three tolas of almonds and dates. I am trying to give up dates. Constipation has disappeared. I shall revert to milk if I lose strength. It is nearly a month since I gave up milk.

Yours,

MOHANDAS

From Hindi : C.W. 6191. Courtesy : G.D. Birla

464. LETTER TO UDIT MISHRA

YERAVDA MANDIR,

December 17, 1930

Bhai Udit Mishraji,

Your letter. I have in general given the literal translation of Bhajanavali. Now it is up to Mirabehn. I do not consider the translation worth publishing. It cannot even be published while I am 1Vide”Letter to G.d. Birla”, 3-12-1930.

2ibid
3Ashram Bhajanavali.
in jail. How can I choose from the bhajans? Different bhajans appeal on different occasions. We might say that all are well liked. But I do wish to drop a few in the new edition. In “Who is not devoted to Rama and Vaidehi” I take Rama to mean Daridranarayan and it is our duty to forsake the company of one who does not serve Daridra. Non-co-operation emanates from that.

Thanks for making a start in Gujarati. Considering all this connection with Gujarat, it is good to learn the language too. As a matter of fact, the more Indian languages one knows the better.

I do not use the enema regularly. I regard it efficacious to use only when the need arises. To use it daily is not good. It can also prove harmful.

My blessings to the children. I hope the ear-trinkets taken off have not been replaced. My hope is that now the children would have become simpler than ever before.

Yours,

MOHANDAS

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 4218

465. LETTER TO KASHINATH TRIVEDI

YERAVDA MANDIR,
December 18, 1930

CHI. KASHINATH,

A person without art is like a beast. But how will you define art? Art is “skill in work”. The yoga of the third chapter of the Gita is perfect art. And this is also true about the activities generally known as art. Any activity in which the masses cannot participate is not art, but a kind of self-indulgence, whether it concerns the voice or clothes or stone. Large numbers singing Ramdhun in unison is art, which ought to be cultivated. Many temples have art, and their art is something which can be appreciated by the masses. The daily worship and readings from holy books which take place in temples, if kept within measure and done with genuine faith, are the best form of art. Thus, there is art wherever harmony prevails as regards the time, the place and the occasion. I do not like films. I have never gone to a cinema.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5267

1 A verse from Vinaya Patrika by Tulsidas
466. LETTER TO MAHALAKSHMI MADHAVJI THAKKAR

December 18, 1930

CHI. MAHALAKSHMI,

I got your letter. I understand what you say about the children. They ought to gain strength. If their present diet is kept up and they get regular exercise, they certainly will. You may write and make whatever suggestions you think necessary regarding them to the people at Calcutta and then stop worrying about the matter. For you cannot do more than that at present.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6807

467. LETTER TO BHAWANIDUTT JOSHI

YERAVDA MANDIR,
December 18, 1930

Bhai BHAWANIDUTT,

I was glad to have your letter. God grants an opportunity to those devoted to service. Much work can be accomplished through Prabhdas’s charkha when you have gained mastery over it.

Blessings from
MOHANDAS

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 104.

468. LETTER TO SUMANGAL PRAKASH

YERAVDA MANDIR,
December 18, 1930

CHI. SUMANGAL,

I had fully and promptly answered the letter you wrote me from your home. Have you not received it yet? I am happy to learn that you have improved health. I know you see the letters I write to Kanta, so there is little need to write to you. Yes, I have great hopes of Kanta. Let us see what happens. Her health causes some worry.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: Sumangal Prakash Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library
469. LETTER TO ANAND T. HINGORANI

Y. M.,
December 19, 1930

MY DEAR ANAND,

Before you can throw off tenderness you will have to realize that it is bad. I am quite clear that you should not take Rs. 25 for clearing the debt to Father-in-law. There is no hurry about paying it off. It is good for you to nurse the feeling that you should pay. As you become hardy, you might save something out of Rs. 75. But you may not deny yourself necessaries. You will have an opportunity later of being able to repay the debt.

Love.

BAPU

From a microfilm. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

470. LETTER TO RADHABAI OAK

December 19, 1930

DEAR, SISTER,

You must have got my message. I was happy to learn that you are working hard in the field of public service. But it seems you fight shy of khadi saris. How can you serve the poor if you feel averse to the sacred products of their labour? Think over this.

Vandemataram from

MOHANDAS

SMT. RADHABAI OAK

C/O SUSHILA

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 6726
471. LETTER TO SUSHILA GANDHI

December 19, 1930

CHI. SUSHILA,

The letter to Radhabai is enclosed. Why do you write vancha vish? Why did you split the word? And why vish? It should be veesh. The dictionary published by the Gujarat Vidyapith contains rules for spelling; acquaint yourself with them. Tara is bound to know about this. Is not language also included in our love for things Indian? We ought not to murder a language.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat the Gujarati : G.N. 4780.

472. LETTER TO BALBHADRA

YERAVDA MANDIR,

December 19, 1930

CHI. BALBHADRA,

I have your letter. You seem to be rendering good service. And simultaneously you have been improving your weight. That is indeed creditable. Explain what you mean when you say that you eat everything. Do not overstep the limits of propriety. Do not beg from anyone. Be content with what you get.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 9215

473. LETTER TO PURUSHOTTAM GANDHI

YERAVDA MANDIR,

December 19, 1930

CHI. PURUSHOTTAM,

Since you have been doing your duty with sincere devotion, you should feel no other desires. What path should I suggest to you? We daily recite the verse Prajahati yada kaman. You should burn up

1 Meaning ‘I shall give to read’
2 Jodanikosh; vide”Jodanikosh”, 7-4-1929.
3 Bhagavad Gita, II. 55
every personal desire. You will then yourself discover the path. Reflect over the verses describing the qualities of the *sthitaprajna*¹ and know that they are for persons of your character. Think which of those verses you are not able to follow in conduct, and why. If you do this, all your mental problems will disappear. Write to me from time to time. My respectful greetings to the elders, and blessings to Jamnadas.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati : C.W. 901. Courtesy : Narandas Gandhi

---

474. LETTER TO KUSUM DESAI

_October 19, 1930_

CHI. KUSUM (SENIOR),

I got your letter. Is Kripalani all right? Kanti and others will meet me in a few days. Pyarelal tells me that his books about the rules governing sandhi and samas in Sanskrit are with you, or that you know where they are. Send them here. He requires them for a systematic study of the _Gita_. Both of us keep good health. So far, _rotlas_ of _jowar_ and _bajra_ seem to have agreed with me.

I give detailed news about my health in the letter meant for all, and so I do not write about it separately in each letter.

You can send letters to Pyarelal through Trivedi².

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 1814

---

¹ _Bhagavad Gita_, II. 55

² Jayashankar Trivedi of Poona
475. LETTER TO VIDYA HINGORANI

Y. M.,
December 19, 1930

MY DEAR VIDYA,

I am sorry you have not got my letter. I have forgotten your question. You must repeat it, if you want the answer. I trust you are keeping well. Are you taking enough daily exercise? You should set apart at least a few minutes daily for Hindi.

Love.

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Hindi. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

476. LETTER TO MIRABEHN

YERAVDA MANDIR,
4.30 p.m., December 20, 1930

CHI. MIRA,

Your letter betrays about my health an anxiety which is wholly unnecessary. The weight which was taken on Thursday showed an increase of 1 1/2 lb., a very good increase in seven days. Nor do I feel any weakness. I do my two hours’ spinning on the takli standing as a rule without feeling any appreciable fatigue. I have just now sat down to write this after finishing the takli. All the mistakes made last time are being avoided. Stools are well formed. Pyarelal tells me there is no smell worth noticing. The food is all well cooked, i.e., vegetables and chapati. The letter is rebaked when I receive it. Last time, you should remember, it was all raw food including cereals and pulses. As a matter of fact, I am now taking practically what I was taking before starting the raw cereals. The only difference is taking bajri or jwari in the place of wheat. Perhaps it is a change for the better. I am taking once boiling water, lemon and salt. In spite of all this apparent improve [ment] if I find any irregularity about the stools or weakness (persistent) or a continuing decrease in weight, in any one of the three things happening, I shall go back to milk. But just now with the good feel about the health I must not deprive myself of the joy of avoiding milk and taking the bajri or jwari chapati. And what is more, I like the taste of these chapatis. This detailed explanation and description ought to give you and other friends full satisfaction and free you from all worry as to the future.

1 In Bapu’s Letter to Mira, Mirabehn explains: “I had reminded Bapu in a letter of the severe attack of dysentery he had had at the end of a previous food experiment he had carried out in Sabarmati Ashram.

In my opinion, while it is necessary, so far as you are concerned, to keep a watch on your menu, your chief trouble is mental. Any pressure on the mind reacts immediately on your body. This anxiety complex, you should try to throw off. “Be careful for nothing.” “Look at the lilies of the field, they toil not, neither do they spin and yet Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these.” I do not know whether I have quoted correctly. Anyhow the lilies only seem neither to toil nor to spin. They do both but so naturally that we do not notice their toilsome spin. If they did not toil, they would wither. Only they have not the egotism and hence attachments, likes and dislikes that we have. But when we toil like them detachedly, our toil will not be noticed and therefore will not adversely affect the body.

7.30 p.m.

You and I and all of us have to make a conscious and deliberate effort to realize this blessed state. Or else, our reading of the Gita is vain.

You will take care not to burn yourself with the primus. You know how Gujarati women have burnt themselves over the use of the primus. The loose saris lend themselves to the wick especially at the time of lighting it. As it is kept on the floor, they have to bend and the rising flame easily catches a fold or a loose end of the sari. It may be wise for you, therefore, to keep it on a metal-mounted stool. Then too there is precious little room in your little dormitory. Anyway, you have my warning. You will now take what precautions you may think right.

In my seclusion, the idea of your bringing out a paper does not at all commend itself to me. That ties you down and I should like you to remain free for what comes to your lot. And then the paper will absorb the labour of several others. I dread the idea. But my opinion has no value. You and the other workers are the best judges.

Yes, I have just finished the first part of the introduction to my translation of the Gita. I hope to do at least a paragraph every day. If I succeed, the introduction cannot take long.

The new Gandiv has almost all the improvements I had contemplated. It has two springs for the two mals. It is working like a musical instrument and requires very little attention. For the execution of these improvements I am thankful to the Superintendent and an English co-prisoner, who is a clever mechanic and who takes a serious interest in the work. He has applied the spring to the holder in an original way. The idea is incredibly simple and equally effective. But I must not keep you over this any longer.

---

1 Anasaktiyoga
2 A new type of spinning-wheel

I am glad you have taken Surendra in hand. It is criminal how he neglects his body. Even St. Francis, though he called his body an ass, took some care of it. And after all the ass is a most useful and patient animal. The brother ass can be equally useful if properly treated and neither pampered nor neglected.

And now here is the first verse of the morning prayer:

“Early in the morning, I call to mind that Being which is felt in the heart, which is sat (the eternal), chit (knowledge), sukhamb (bliss), which is the state reached by perfect men and which is the super-state. I am that immaculate Brahman which ever notes the states of dream, wakefulness and deep sleep, not this body, the compound made of the elements (earth, water, space, light and air).” You will be interested to know that the first verse was commended on 6th May last.¹

I am sorry that the very first verse needed correcting. The more I think, the more clearly I see the meaning. And then I don’t mind how often I cut about the translation. Formerly I used to shudder to utter this verse thinking that the claim made therein was arrogant. But when I saw the meaning more clearly, I perceived at once that it was the very best thought with which to commence the day. It is a solemn declaration that we are not the changeful bodies which require sleep, etc., but deep down, we are the Being, the witness pervading the countless bodies. The first part is the recalling to mind the presence of the vital principle and the second part is the affirmation that we are that vital principle. The description of the Being, the Brahman, is also quite apposite. It is, nothing else is (sat), it is all knowledge or light (chit), and naturally, therefore, it is all bliss (sukham) or the word generally used is anand. The rest is simple. You will compare this translation with what you have already, translated by Valjibhai. If there is a material difference, let me have his translation. In scholarship I should yield the palm to him. So now God willing, you may expect a present of this character every week. And here goes the bugle telling me it will presently be 9 p.m.

¹ Vide “Ashram Bhajanavali”, 15-12-1930.
Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: C.W. 9284. Courtesy: Mirabehn

477. LETTER TO MAHALAKSHMI MADHAVJI THAKKAR

December 20, 1930

CHI. MAHALAKSHMI,

I got your detailed letter, which was fully worthy of your name. Its enthusiasm pleased me. But, according to our principle, I cannot give any decision about the work being done there. Nor should you rely upon the opinion of a prisoner. I have already explained the proper relations between a leader and the volunteers working under him or her. You should discuss with Mithubehn herself your differences with her. This is the attitude I have adopted from the beginning and I do not wish to go further than this. You are free to follow what seems to you your dharma. We observe the rules and regulations in order that we may know this dharma. The inner voice does not speak in every person. It speaks only in one in whom it is awake.

May God bless you.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6808

478. LETTER TO MAHAVIR GIRI

December 21, 1930

CHI. MAHAVIR,

You may ask me any question that may arise in your mind. I have plenty of time here to reply to people’s questions. If we cannot overcome all our shortcomings at a time, we may first overcome those which we can easily remove. If we proceed thus, we shall gradually be able to overcome all of them. Your handwriting cannot be described as bad, but you can improve it and make it better still.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6222

420 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
479. LETTER TO MANIBEHN PATEL

YERAVDA MANDIR,

December 21, 1930

CHI. MANI (PATEL),

Is it possible that I should go on writing to you even if you never drop me so much as a line? Have you forgotten your promise that you would be writing to me? But better late than never. Realize the importance of keeping promises. Give me an account of your jail experiences. Did you keep good health? What food did you take?

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-4: Manibehn Patelne, p. 75

480. LETTER TO CHANDRAKANTA

Y. M.,

December 21, 1930

CHI. KANTA,

There is again no letter from you.1 How is that? You should not put off writing till the last day. You should write early. From Narandas’s letter I thought that your letter would be enclosed but it was not. This is your third lapse. Do not commit it a fourth time.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: Chandrakanta Papers. Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library

1This sentence is in Hindi.
481. LETTER TO MRIDULA SARABHAI

December 21, 1930

CHI. MRIDULA,

So you came away before time, did you? How was your health? Write to me your experiences. Tell Khurshedbehn to write. What was your diet while you were in the nursing home? How did you spend your time?

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C.W. 11110.Courtesy: Sarabhai Foundation

482. LETTER TO NIRMALA GANDHI

December 21, 1930

CHI. NIMU,

I got your letter. Are you not pleased that Ramdas has once again been honoured? Or, do you repent having married him? If not, you too, should be ready. How many teeth has Sumitra got now? What all has she started eating now? Does she suffer from constipation?

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Mrs. Sumitra Kulkarni Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

483. FRAGMENT OF LETTER TO SHANTILAL J. MEHTA

[December 22, 1930]¹

CHI. SHANTI,

You did well in writing to me. I hope you are quite well. I will do nothing on my own responsibility. Manilal himself will do what seems best to him. I am afraid he will not be able to leave India just now. At a time like this . . .³

19 FIRST AVENUE, DURBAN

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./XXII

¹ Presumably by courting imprisonment
² From the Gandhi Sangrahalaya Records
³ The rest of the letter is not available.
CHI. GANGABEHN (SENIOR),

It no doubt puts a very heavy responsibility on us when parents of grown-up girls entrust them to us. God will help us to bear it. When, however, you feel in a particular case that the responsibility will be beyond your strength, plainly refuse to accept it. Send away any girl who refuses to submit to your discipline. Explain the position clearly to the parents and the girl before you accept her. If we do not take such steps of practical wisdom, God will not help us. He never helps the timid, the lethargic and those who are not vigilant.

Have any facilities you require, but safeguard your health. If you think that tea and coffee are essential for it, take either without the slightest hesitation or without feeling ashamed about doing so. Giving up tea or coffee is not at present the purpose of your sadhana; that purpose is the service of those among the inmates of the Ashram who suffer.

I cannot think of one single remedy which will help Madhu and all others in the Ashram who suffer from constipation. I will tell you how I overcame it in my case. For three or four days, I ate only cooked greens like tanka. That completely restored my bowel movement. Then I added almonds to the diet. You do not need them for the people there. Perhaps you will not get even greens. But you can certainly get onions. If those who suffer from constipation eat boiled onions, that, too, will probably help them. If you can get tomatoes, you may mix them with onions. If simple boiled onions do not taste well, even with the addition of salt, and if tomatoes are not available, they may use kokum.

The persons may try shirhasan. It has helped people to overcome constipation from which they had suffered many years. The asana should be done only on an empty stomach. It is quite easy to do. The skirt should be tucked up behind and one should stand on one’s head, supporting the body against a wall. After some practice the support of the wall will not be necessary. The head should be supported by the palms joined together.

I suppose you know that these days I eat the rotlas of jowar and bajra, and vegetables, served to prisoners in jail. The vegetables for me have to be cooked separately, because those cooked for other prisoners contain spices. I continue to eat dates. In place of milk I take four tolas of almonds. I keep fairly good health. If I do not keep it up, I will resume milk.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 8768. Courtesy : Gangabehn Vaidya

485. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

YERAVDA MANDIR,
December 22, 1930

CHI. PREMA,

I got your letter full of information. Both the meanings of nij-anamagrahi1 are good. The meaning suggested by Narandas may suit Gujarati better, but the one suggested by you is not altogether inappropriate. I imagine that you yourself are a little girl and reply to your question about prayer. Just as we have parents who gave birth to us, so they had their parents who brought them into the world. If we go further and further back like this, He whom we can conceive as the Father of all is God. It is because He is that that we also call Him the Creator. As our parents often come to know what we want without our telling them, so does God know our wishes. If our human parents have this power to know what we want, the Creator of all must have infinitely greater power to know our heart. That is why we also think of God as Antaryami, the Dweller within. It is not necessary that we should be able to see Him. We have never seen a good many of our relations. Somebody’s parents may have gone away to a foreign country or died while he or she was a child, but such a man or woman trusts other people and believes that the parents live or lived. Similarly, we should trust the testimony of saints about the existence of God and believe that the Antaryami does exist. If that is so, it is easy to understand why we should sing bhajans to Him and pray to Him. If we are good children, we bow to our parents, prostrating ourselves before them, the first thing in the morning after leaving bed and the last thing at night when going to bed. We should do the same to God. And as we tell our parents what we desire, so we should tell God. This should be enough for today. If you do not understand anything in this, do not hesitate to question me.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 10247

1 One who clings to the Name, which is his very self

424   THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
486. LETTER TO PREMLILA THACKERSEY

December 22, 1930

DEAR SISTER,

I got the two boxes of dates and the cotton send by you. Need I thank you for them? Write to Vithaldas and tell him that the dates were excellent. This does not mean, of course, that he should send me such dates more often. My request was that he should communicate the price to the Superintendent here and supply the dates as and when required, provided his brother orders enough quantity to spare some and sell it. I got your letter too. I will write to you when I require more cotton.

Blessings from

MOHANDAS

From a photostat of the Gujarati : C.W. 4818. Courtesy : Premlila Thackersey

487. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

YERAVDA MANDIR,

December 22, 1930

CHI. LILAVATI,

You are being really tested. See that you do not fail in the test. One preserves one’s self-respect better by giving up the very desire for being respected. You will not get another Gangabehn who will look after you like a mother as she does. She has an overbearing temper. Endure it. Understand and appreciate her zeal for service and her sympathy for all. Anyone who wishes to serve must learn to act as a member of an organization. To do this means to obey somebody’s authority. One’s superior has his or her superior too. Think over the verses of Chapter XII of the Gita. One of them says that a devotee and lover of God is equally indifferent to respect and disrespect, to praise and censure, and holds friend and foe in equal regard. Let this be true about you. Do not feel it a burden to write to me.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 9318
488. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

YERAVDA MANDIR,

December 22, 1930

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I have your letter. From your postcard received yesterday, I thought I would receive a letter today, but I did not get one. From Jayaprakash’s letter it would seem you have now gone to the Ashram. But it is not clear from your letters whether you have. I should like you to go to the Ashram as soon as possible. I do not like your continuing to get the fainting fits. I must now get a report of your talks with Father. Incidentally, that will give me news about his health too. I am quite well. So far, I have been able to digest jowar and bajra.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 3385

489. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

Thursday Morning, December 18/23, 1930

CHI. NARANDAS,

I got your packet yesterday evening. The letters to the Ashram which I handed in this time, that is, on Tuesday last, should reach you on Thursday, that is, today. I suggested to the official here to post them immediately, if possible, and he told me afterwards that this week’s letters were posted on Tuesday itself.

I welcome your long letters, but I shall not be happy if you take special trouble to make them long. I can understand what a burden you are carrying. I did not want an explanation in regard to Keshu. But I can understand your having given it so that you could pour out your heart and satisfy yourself.

I had a postcard from Surajbhan, in which he says that he would be happy if Yashodadevi was called to the Ashram. She lives with the family of Lala Dunichand, a lawyer, in Ambala. Write to him.

The Ratilal episode is both happy and painful. His foolishness is painful, but the display of humanity by the merchant, who returned the diamond, and by Gopi, who returned the money, makes one happy. In my eyes, their subsequent conduct wipes out their initial guilt. Champa, of course, has always been foolish. She listens to no persuasion and re-mains fond of diamonds and other jewels, and loses money in conse-quence. Ratilal must have returned. Even if he has not returned, that will not worry me. God always saves him. But this is what life is. We pass our time in undoing the consequences of one another’s error. For those who can remain unattached while doing this, their labour is not wasted. To them it is a spiritual striving and they realize God through it. I had an experience of this yesterday when I saw God in a worm and a weevil. You are wrong if you think that you know Pyarelal fully. Being a poet, he is bound to be dreaming always. I asked him to remove a worm from the dates. He should have put it in a safe corner, but, instead of thinking about his duty, he was thinking of something else, God knows what, and he put the worm in the wash-basin. The weevil, too, was dropped into the same. If now I washed my hands or face in the basin, I would be the cause of the death of both. I therefore, decided not to wash in it. But when, after I had finished my work, I got ready to wash my hands, I did not see the worm and the weevil in the basin. They had slowly moved away. I look upon this experience as seeing God in the two worms. An atheist or a rationalist would describe the incident as mere accident. It was an accident, no doubt, but seeing God is also an accident. If we but understand the truth, we would see Him every day; otherwise our whole life would pass without our seeing Him. But I will not dwell further on this. I wanted to note this incident in the diary yes-terday, but, in my preoccupation with other work I wrote in it only about the daily sacrificial work and forgot to note this. While writing about the merchant and Gopi, I remembered this holy experience and have shared it with you. I learnt much else, too, from it yesterday. God alone knows whether I shall be able to digest all that. I will now answer your question here. As we reflect deeper and remain peaceful, the meaning of ahimsa and truth becomes clearer. I even realize the supreme utility of these two. I believe we realize God in the degree to which we practise them. I am gett-ing more convinced than ever in my view that seeing God except through truth and ahimsa is an impossibility. How can members of a group practise ahimsa towards one another? They can do so by displaying generosity towards co-workers and their faults and everyone regarding his own faults with strictness. Anyone who observes the faults of others believes, whether he is conscious of the fact or not, that he does not have the same faults. This gives rise to pride. The true rule is that one should oneself observe all rules strictly and tolerate others who seem slack in observing them. This is not kindness but strict justice. Do we really know what effort is made by a person in observing a rule even as slackly as he does? If our seeming strictness in observing rules comes naturally to us, what is the value of that strictness? Is it any cause for wonder if a man like Bhima can lift a weight of four pounds with the utmost ease? A girl, however, might slip down while trying to lift one pound; what would we think of that Bhima if he laughed at her then? Really speaking, the effort of that girl to lift one pound is of much greater value than Bhima’s lifting the weight of four pounds. If Bhima had not lifted that weight, somebody else as strong would have lifted it; but by her effort to lift one pound that girl taught the world a lesson in doing one’s duty and earned God’s grace. Our dharma therefore does not lie in criticizing others and thereby committing violence; it lies in becoming more vigilant ourselves. If a strong bullock is yoked with one seemingly or really weak, the former’s duty is to do more work and make up for the deficiency of the latter. The driver goads it to labour harder. If the strong bullock does not do the work expected of it, it is looked upon as a shirker; it is selfish and has no pity on the other one. Let us never be shirkers. Let us always do our duty. God will judge us and our co-workers. He can see into the hearts of all. We scarcely can see into our own. We easily learn this if we strive sincerely to cultivate ahimsa.

Through the pursuit of truth, we know the measure of purity in our motives. It increases our vigilance in regard to the smallest social duties and to our daily work. If we strive for truth, we would not be content merely to attend prayers but would try to concentrate our attention on them. We would try to follow the songs and the discourses, be punctual in attending the prayers and respond to them as to a fresh experience every day. The freshness does not consist in the variety of bhajans or other recitations, but should result from the increasing purity of our heart. We should grow daily more contented and feel greater peace of mind. If we do not have this experience, the fault will lie not with the quality of the prayers but with the element of untruth-fulness in us. If we attend the prayers with sincere devotion to truth, we would experience nothing but peace. The faithful who visit temples do not observe the lack of cleanliness in them, or pay attention to the hypocrisy of the priest. They do not see the image as a stone. They experience peace in the midst of noise and return from the temples purified in heart. A person like me who feels suffocated by the noise there and sees the image only as a piece of stone should never visit a temple. God appears to us in the form in which we worship Him. For He is not outside of us. He is in the hearts of us all. If we understand this truth, our simplest and smallest actions would shed lustre on us and help us to see God. In order that we may learn this, prayers, spinning, and other daily duties are like a spiritual lighthouse to us or a right angle which is the standard of measurement.

Saturday Morning

If Giriraj remains quiet, that problem will then be over. I see that it will not be possible now to get the children to the Ashram. He has entrusted them [to somebody else]. Trust them to their fate now. I am going on quite well at present. I have gained a pound or a pound and a half in weight this week. I cannot say that I have at last succeeded in giving up dates and raisins. Only a few days ago, Jamnabehn and Vithaldas sent some dates and I ate them for two or three days. And now again I have stopped eating them. I am thus observing the effect of eating them and not eating them. I do want to give them up if I can. At present, therefore, my diet includes a little quantity of greens or cabbage or beetroot or turnip or pumpkin, bhakhari of bajra or jowar, four tolas of almonds, and lemon. If God keeps me fit with these, so far so good; otherwise I will humbly resume milk or curds. I cannot say yet that I am able to live on this diet. I will not say, either, that I shall not be able to do so. I had never expected that I would be able to digest jowar and bajra. At present, however, I seem to have no difficulty in doing so.

I have noted what you say about yourself. Your selection of the items and their quantities is correct. I see that you have given up ground-nuts; there is nothing wrong in that. The fact that you are losing weight will do you no harm at all. You should not lose strength, however. If you find it necessary, increase the quantity of milk or curds. It will perhaps help you if you add just one tola of almonds to your diet. Solve the problem of Parnerkar firmly. It seems to have turned out a painful chapter. I got the chapters of Gitabodh. So far I have not received the piece of leather.

You may extract from any of my letters what I say about the yajna of spinning and publish it. There is no harm in publishing similar other material of public interest. The more the people do yajna for self-purification, the better. A mass yajna has an altogether miraculous effect. If you can, keep up with what you have started. The spinning-wheels and all other things must be in perfect condition. These things produce an effect on our minds and make a difference to the speed. Your speed has increased well enough. I have not been able to go beyond 200 on the spinning-wheel and 60 on the talki. But I do hope to do so. I do not know if there is something wrong with my fingers. If the nerves running through them are weak, it is possible that they may not be active enough. Just as you go to bed early, it will also be good if you make it a rule not to rise earlier than a fixed hour. You should do what you can between 4 and 9 and then stop. If you have more things to do than you can finish during that time, you may omit those which you safely can. You should entrust to others the things which they can attend to. It is really not necessary to give you advice in this matter, but I have said something all the same in order that you may be more careful. One test of non-attachment is that a person who is non-attached always feels as if he had no work, though he is never inactive even for a single moment. At present, however, that state of mind “is a wish beyond our reach”. All the same, we should grasp with our intellect the meaning of that verse and, having done so, strive to reach that state. The condition of a non-attached person should never seem pitiable. He should never have an expression on his face which might make anybody feel sorry for him and think that he was carrying an excessive burden of work. Think what “burden” of work God has to carry. Nevertheless He is the king of those who do not work. He is an object of pity to no one. On the contrary, we hunger for His mercy. We should never be satisfied with a state a whit inferior to His, though He may carry the burden of the entire universe and we that of something smaller than even a particle of dust. Just as He ever feels light, though carrying the burden of the universe, so should we do though carrying the burden of a mere fraction of a particle of dust. We can easily attain such a state of mind if we reduce ourselves to a cipher. Mirabehn finds it impossible to become non-attached, but she is a good woman and, therefore, will one day approach that state. From here I think she would do well not to undertake the responsibility of a new paper. I had understood about Sitla Sahay even without a letter from him, and that is why I wished to get one from him.

I do not like to give to anyone the impression of my palm. Apart from that, it would be against jail rules to do so. I have, therefore, no choice in the matter. Kakasaheb could not even give his signature on his photograph. And I think that it is a good rule too. I have written a letter¹ to Purushottam; read it. Kanu, too, seems to have been upset a bit.

Sunday Morning

It was not at all satisfied by . . . ‘s² letter. I take it that you will see him personally, or probably you have already seen him. Discuss the matter with him and convey to me the impression you form. This case, too seems like . . . ‘s³. The latter would not admit anything more than what had come out and produced an impression on Surendra, Chhaganlal and others that nothing wrong had happened. He did not succeed in producing that impression on me, and ultimately confessed having been guilty of a serious lapse. I would not be surprised if a similar thing should happen in . . . ‘s⁴ case. His language gives the impression of a guilty person attacking an innocent. Look into this.

Kusum has referred in her letter to the problem that has arisen about the offer of a job to her in Porbandar. Read my reply to her and guide her as you think best. My compliments to Jaya for having gone to the rest-house⁵. Has she any relation there to whom I can write? If Kakasaheb has not been able to win over the others, I think it would be best to let the Gita recitation go on as at present. The suggestion to complete the whole recitation in seven days by reciting some verses in the morning and some in the evening has not appealed to me. I will congratulate ourselves if we can improve upon the present practice. I have noted that you took two and three-quarter hours to write your letter to me. The time taken in dispatching the letters must have been in addition to this. It is fine indeed if you can get all this time. If you can reduce it a little, however, you should certainly do so.

I see that I made an amusing mistake about Vidyabehn⁶. I will be more careful in future when several persons claim the same name.

I think you did right in detaining Bhagwanjibhai’s⁷ Manibehn. She will be welcome to the Ashram when the two reach a level so that they feel as brother and sister to each other. At present it is best that they remain away from each other.

¹ Vide “Letter to Purushottam Gandhi”, 19-12-1930.
² The names have been omitted.
³ ibid
⁴ ibid
⁵ Prison
⁶ There were two women of this name: one, the wife of Anand Hingorani, and another, the daughter of Raojibhai Manibhai.
⁷ Bhagwanji P. Pandya
Bhansali has been testing you a good deal. I got two Godrej boxes. I have written to the dealers to inquire for more. You may use the donation by Soniramji for any cause that you think good. Inform him to what account you credit the sum. Take Nayan to a doctor, if necessary. She must be helped to get rid of her fever. Your solution concerning Kashinath seems all right.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]
The responsibility for Amina’s Urdu education rests on us. Giriraj used to teach her. He should start doing so again, or some other arrangement should be made.

December 21, 1930

If you have kept a copy of my letter to Hari-ichchha, show it to Radha. Read my letters to Kaka and to Mirabehn. Did you show Shanti’s letter to Manilal? If you did not and if you remember its contents, acquaint Manilal with them. Read my letter to Shanti. I have gone through Gitabodh again. I have not been able to read your letter, though. If you do not follow any point or if my explanation is incomplete, write to me about it.

BAPU¹

[PS.]
There are 72 letters.

From a microfilm of the Gujarati : M.M.U./I

490. LETTER TO HORACE G. ALEXANDER

YERAVDA CENTRAL PRISON,
December 23, 1930

DEAR FRIEND,

I was glad to hear from you. If the R.T.C. results in doing something worthy of the great sacrifice of the nation and therefore of acceptance, I should be delighted. But as I have told you, having been filled with distrust nothing but an accomplished result will reassure me.

¹ For the text of the Gita discourse (Ch. VII) dated December 23 which followed, vide “Letters on the Gita”, 21-2-1932.
The question of debts is incredibly simple. The Lahore resolution has an explicit condition about reference to an impartial tribunal.\(^1\) But you have my assurance that no Congressman has ever enunciated the doctrine of total repudiation. What Congressmen, including myself, demand is that the nation’s representatives should have the right of having any portion of the so-called national debt, concessions and the like, being referred to an independent tribunal whose decision should be final and binding on both the parties. I feel I am quite safe in saying this even for Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru. Not to adopt the course above indicated would be disloyal to the nation as total repudiation without just cause would undoubtedly be dishonourable.

Whatever Maulana Mohamed Ali may think of me, I have nothing but kindly feelings about him. And I feel sure that time will remove misunderstandings. Having no feeling either against Islam or Mussalmans, I feel absolutely at ease.

My love to Reginald. I know Charlie Andrews is not now with you.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

---

491. LETTER TO MANMOHANDAS GANDHI

YERAVDA MANDIR,
December 24, 1930

BHAISHRI MANMOHANDAS,

I have your letter. I have not however received the proofs of the book. I am making inquiries. I will go through them when I get them.

Your being my namesake has at least this advantage for me, that I am saved from a good deal of correspondence.\(^2\)

Blessings from

MOHANDAS

---

1 Vide “Speech at Subjects Committee, A.I.C.C. —II”, 1-1-1930.
2 Part of Gandhiji mail used to be misdelivered to the addressee.
492. LETTER TO SHANTIKUMAR MORARJEE

YERAVDA MANDIR,

December 27, 1930

CHI. SHANTIKUMAR,

I have heard from you after a long time. I did not get your detailed letter which you mention. It will be better, therefore, if you write again. I have not been able to read the book sent by you. The better part of the day is spent in spinning and carding, and the remaining time is taken up by correspondence. I can, therefore, do very little reading.

I am very glad indeed that you have gone to live at Juhu. Grandmother will enjoy peace of mind there.

Does Sumati keep well?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 4720. Courtesy: Shantikumar Morarjee

493. LETTER TO MANIBEHN PATEL

YERAVDA MANDIR,

December 27, 1930

CHI. MANI (PATEL),

At last I have a letter from you. You have somewhat made up for previous neglect. Do build up your health at any rate. You had a great deal of work\(^1\) on your hands, so there was no need to read any books. You did well to put up a fight\(^2\).

I am now all right. Due to constipation I had stomachache one day; therefore I had my bowels flushed and took only vegetable soup the next day; this cured my constipation. Since that day I have not taken milk. I take one roti made of local jowar or bajra and vegetable with a few almonds. There is no reason for anxiety on my score.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-4: Manibehn Patelne, pp. 75-6

\(^1\) That of looking after numerous fellow-prisoners

\(^2\) On the question of women prisoners’ right to wear bangles
494. LETTER TO VANAMALA PARIKH

December 27, 1930

CHI. VANAMALA,

You have written your letter in a beautiful handwriting. It is not enough that your speed on the takli is the same as mine. Can an old man and a child have equal capacity? Have you heard with what speed they spin in Wardha? Even a girl of your age spins 80-85 rounds in half an hour.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 5757

495. LETTER TO RAMACHANDRA KHARE

December 27, 1930

CHI. RAMBAHUA,

A resolution is as good as a vow if we regard it as such. You are in the sacred land of the Himalayas. Shake off your laziness, etc., to which you confess. Remember that you have gone there to serve Prabhubhai and to become a good boy. Therefore, spin regularly on the Magan spinning-wheel. Follow Prabhubhai’s advice and get rid of the last trace of laziness.

Your handwriting is not too bad nor the mistakes too many.

Blessings from
BAPU

From Gujarati: C.W. 287. Courtesy : Lakshmibehn Khare

496. LETTER TO MATHURI KHARE

December 27, 1930

CHI. MATHURI,

Is not this coloured paper lovely? It is a very good thing that you no more doze off during prayers. With effort handwriting can become as beautiful as pearls.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati : C.W. 258-a. Courtesy : Lakshmibehn Khare

1 Presumably Prabhudas Gandhi who was in Almora
497. LETTER TO SHARDA C. SHAH

December 28, 1930

CHI. SHARDA,

I have your letter. I invariably write to you. But if I fail to do so, you too do not write to me. I agree to this condition, though children should not insist on this. You have each to write one letter to me and I have to write one letter to each; but I have thousands or lakhs of children. So I write as many as I can. But everyone who writes to me expects me to write to them myself. What is to happen then?

You should get rid of your cough.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original : C.W. 9896. Courtesy : Shardabehn Chokhawala

498. LETTER TO KALAVATI TRIVEDI

December 28, 1930

CHI. KALAVATI,

Your letter. The handwriting is better than before. It shall certainly improve through effort. You must regularly write something in a clear hand, be it only for ten minutes. Keep a model before you. Be engrossed in service.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi G.N. 5269

499. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

December 28, 1930

CHI. VASUMATI,

Does the doctor say that your ear-drum has been damaged, and that, if it cannot be cured, it would be advisable to remove it? If that is so, you should get it removed even at the risk of certain deafness which might result from its removal, and save yourself from the present pain. Is there a continual discharge from the ear? You should not ignore this disease. I am still able to carry on without milk.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : S.N. 9297
500. LETTER TO MADHAVJI V. THAKKAR

December 28, 1930

CHI. MADHAVJI,

It is not unlikely that you will get this letter. It is the same to us whether we are in jail or outside. Even self-purification is a form of service, and we must strive for it wherever we are whether in jail or outside. Even if we devote ourselves to service, we must make our hearts pure.

Surendra himself is responsible for his bad health.

I am acting with proper caution. If, none the less, I do make mistakes, how can that be helped? I would rather that I made mistakes in dealing with the body than in matters concerning the soul.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 6809

501. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

December 28, 1930

CHI. PREMA,

I do not want you to bind yourself with a promise. I am satisfied with your assurance. Do not shout so loudly as to harm your throat. Did the fast have any beneficial effect on it? I should like somebody to go through the letters which the children write to me from the point of view of both language and handwriting.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 10248

502. LETTER TO BHAGWANJI P. PANDYA

December 28, 1930

CHI. BHAGWANJI,

You have not wasted your time in shortening your long letter. This practice will ultimately make your thinking clear. And as our thinking becomes clearer we are able to express in a few words whatever we have to say. Quest for exploring the soul is nothing but our detecting, in the process, attachment, hatred, etc., lurking in our heart. This is similar to the exploring of the Himalayas which involves facing a number of difficulties and cliffs.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 332. Courtesy: Bhagwanji Purushottam Pandya

503. LETTER TO CHANDRAKANTA

_December 28, 1930_

CHI. KANTA,

I got both your letters together. You have done well to return to the Ashram. Go back only when you have fully recovered. If you drink hot water with salt, it will relieve the cough. Take deep breaths. You must breathe only through the nose. Though you do not like onions, can you not eat them as medicine? Onions boiled in water should not smell. Do not eat oily foods. _Rotlo_ and salt will be enough. Drink plenty of boiled water with it. You may take milk and ghee whenever offered. You should keep soda handy and use it when you are offered buttermilk.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

504. LETTER TO KUSUM DESAI

_December 29, 1930_

CHI. KUSUM (SENIOR),

It would be very good if Shanta spends some time with you. If I know what you wish in regard to punishment, I can consider and suggest something. A fast may contain an element of violence in it. If it is likely to take the form of blackmail, it should be avoided. I do not remember if you had asked this question before.

Has not Shankarbai’s passing away increased your responsibility? Has the widow any children? Is she educated? Apart from that, was there any other responsibility on Shankarbai? If the widow desires to remarry, I assume that you will help her to do so. Give me all the facts.

My weight has again reached 101.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1815

505. LETTER TO N. M. KHARE

December 29, 1930

CHI. PANDITJI,

Cannot we lead children playing in streets in “singing processions”? They will acquire, in the process, some education in letters too. But I need not write about this, since you are already discussing the matter with Kaka. It is very necessary to keep the people and children occupied in useful activities.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 214. Courtesy: Lakshmibehn Khare

506. LETTER TO RAIHANA TYABJI

December 29, 1930

MADAM TEACHER,

You say that everything is all right. Excellent! To say that all is well after finishing me!1 I hope you will be satisfied with this lesson for today. I will not follow the frog in the stroy simply because you praise me much. I am quite aware how fine my Urdu is, but I am not ashamed of it. Words of love need no more ornament than love itself does, no matter how foolish they are or how like the mere prattle of a child. You are quite right in comparing with music an operation by skilled doctors. Let us be thankful that the gentlemen spared your nose although they made away with all the bones. We must now think of some punishment for Father. All of you should help me in that. How could youths with white beard go to a hospital? What sort of a

1 These sentences are in Urdu.
make-believe is that? I hope he is now as strong as an Arab horse.

To Mother, vandemataram; to Father, bhur-r-r-r; to you,

Blessings and many good wishes from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : S.N. 9625

507. LETTER TO JUGATRAM DAVE

YERAVDA MANDIR,
December 29, 1930

Bhai Jugatram,

I have been expecting a letter from you every day. You have piled up a fairly big heap of facts before me. It requires a special art to deal with Mithubehn. Use all the art you have. I have received complaints against her from the women too. In any case, Time is the friend of all. He sets everything right. Probably that is why in English they call Him Father Time. We believe Him to be God Himself. If He destroys the worlds, He does that too for their good.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 2690

508. LETTER TO KUNVARJI MEHTA

December 29, 1930

Bhai Kunvarji,

Your letters contain useful information. If we do not forsake truth and non-violence, even our misfortunes will help us. Hence follow them scrupulously and persuade other also to do the same. Write to Pragji and tell him that he should not become impatient.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

I am still able to carry on without milk.

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 2691

1 Mithubehn Petit

440 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
509. LETTER TO GANGABEHN JHAVERI AND NANIBEHN JHAVERI

CHI. GANGABEHN AND NANIBEHN,

December 29, 1930

I got your full letter. I cannot guide you from here in detail. Is it not our principle that a prisoner should not take interest in problems outside nor guide anyone? I have merely drawn your attention to the principle which we have accepted. Think over it and then unhesitatingly follow what seems to you your dharma. If you cannot decide where your dharma lies, you may consult Pannalal or Narandas. Now Kakasaheb also is there. Discuss the matter with him and then do what you conscience tells you. Write to me from time to time. Both of you, take care of your health. Has Pannalal completely recovered now?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 3109

510. LETTER TO KASHINATH TRIVEDI

CHI. KASHINATH,

December 29, 1930

I got your letter. I fully approve of what you did about Shanta’s husband. It is enough if Shanta keeps up her courage. Whatever happens, Shanta should refuse to go to him. Let him, if he wishes, come again to attack her. She should resist if he comes to carry her away by force. She should not be alone at any time. You need not take the trouble to find out where the man has gone. It is enough that you have written about it to his people at home. Be vigilant lest he come stealthily and attack her again. If Mother is of the same mind as you in this matter, you will meet with no difficulty in following the course which you have adopted.

I have already replied to the question regarding marriage. I see that it is not enough, and also that it is. I have only pointed out the Vedic ideal modified to suit modern times. If one is unable to follow it, one may modify it further as much as necessary. It is not for me to take measure of anyone’s inability in this regard.
I don’t mind your having written about Gangabehn. She is not intentionally partial to anyone. She may act in that manner through haste and lack of understanding. However, she is the fittest to be the women’s leader. For Kalavati and others, therefore, service lies in doing as she says, and they ought to be satisfied with that. They should not lose heart if people give no co-operation in the work regarding cleanliness, khadi, etc. In the long run people are bound to yield to love and their daily experience of other people’s conduct. Their presence by itself is enough in such places, provided they spend the whole day in work. And they must carry the takli and the spinning-wheel with them. They should also clean people’s latrines, etc.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 5289

511. LETTER TO BHAGWANJI P. PANDYA

_Chi. Bhagwanji,_

I have your letter. If you regarded the world as unreal, i.e., transitory, does it in any way go contrary to reason? Whatever is transitory is unreal because it does not endure for ever. And there is no question of being attached to what is transient. After all you will seldom find reason being exercised in matters of faith. If it could be grasped by reason it ceases to be a matter of faith. Faith might indeed one day lead to experience.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati : C.W. 333. Courtesy : Bhagwanji Purushottam Pandya

512. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

_Saturday Morning, December 27/30, 1930_

_Chi. Narandas,_

This time I got your packet only yesterday (Friday) after 2 o’clock. Because of Christmas there seems to have been some confusion in the post office. Here the officials seem quite careful about my post. That is why you got my packet on Thursday.

I got the piece of leather for sandals. I see Mahadev’s name in your list, but I did not find his letter. Perhaps there was a letter by Durga, but I do not find even that. I did feel that Ratilal would return. Where had he gone on his pleasure trip? Send with a visitor some time a sample of the bread which you make there. We do not know when Giriraj will see reason. Go on doing your best. His heart is pure and he is filled with the spirit of self-sacrifice. One day, therefore, he is bound to see reason. “No one seeking to do good ever comes to harm.”

I understand everyone being nervous about my experience in diet, for I have not fully succeeded in it. But perhaps you may tell people that you know that I wake up in time and make necessary changes, and that my body responds to them. How can I give up a dharma which has come to me unsought? I was weighed yesterday and again seemed to have gained a pound and a half. I advisedly say “seemed” because on the previous occasion I was weighed after I had passed stool and this time before I had done so. The weight of the stool is not real gain in weight, but an unnecessary load. We may therefore count half a pound less; even then there has been a gain of one pound. But more important than the weight is the energy which I feel in my body. I feel no sign of weakness yet. I eat without difficulty one bhakhari of the size which they make here, half a piece at one meal. The quantity of almonds which I eat comes to nearly two ounces. At present at any rate I feel that, if I can continue to digest this amount of food, I shall be able to keep up my strength. There is, therefore, no reason at all for worry. I am taking the utmost care, and, after all, even in this matter one needs to practise non-attachment. Who can say when that thing, more fragile than glass, will slip from one’s hand and break?

I suppose you remember that you sent to Kantu a diary made of handmade paper. He has now sent it for my autograph. The binding is very bad. Not only that there is no neatness about it, but he has so bound it that one cannot turn the pages at all. The art of binding books is easy to learn. It can be learnt in a very short time. Someone from among us should learn it. Or we should get our binding done outside. I intend to get the diary re-bound in the press here. This is just by the way. I have mentioned the matter for future guidance. “Yoga is skill in work.” This should be illustrated even in our least important activities. “Skill in work” lies also in not attempting what we cannot do. That is a case of action in inaction. Even refraining from something is a form of action. There is a saying in English borrowed from Persian. “He who knows that he knows not is wise.” I am prompted to say all this form my own unhappy experience. I observe that my spinning displays too much evidence of lack of skill and slackness despite all the care that I take. There may be a knot in the thread which I observe, but I let it go. At times the yarn is much too loose, but I let it remain. I have acquired no proficiency at all in joining broken thread. But I go on, all the same. What kind of yajna is this? Whether you call it carelessness, laxity or indifference, I observe every day this weakness in me in regard to this great yajna of spinning. I try every day to improve myself, and fail. But I keep hoping that one day I shall do well in my yajna. Even if I do not, I derive consolation from the verse : “After man lives, the enlightened one attains Me”. It is a dangerous verse. One may use it to remain content with one’s lethargy. If a person pays attention to the meaning of every word in it, he will not fall, otherwise the verse can be the cause of much harm to one. I hear the bugle sounded every day at 5.30. It is now time for me to pace up and down.

1 Bhagavad Gita, VI. 40

7.30, Tuesday

If you send your packet by unregistered parcel, it may be delayed. Make inquiries, however, and do what you think best. This time I have been hard pressed for time to cope with the work. Ordinarily, I should be spinning at this hour. I get letters from Prabhavati from time to time. She should arrive in the Ashram any day now. Drop me a postcard as soon as she arrives. Most probably I shall get it. Read my letters to Kaka and Mirabehn. Today I stop here.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]
Did you read the account about Amidas? If you have not read it, get a copy from Harivallabhdas. He seems to have preserved one."

[PPS.]
There are 82 letters.

From a microfilm of the Gujarati : M.M.U/I

1 Bhagavad Gita, II. 50
2 ibid
3 For the text of the Gita discourse (Ch. VIII) which followed, vide "Letters on the Gita", 21-2-1932.
513. LETTER TO MIRABEHN

December 29/30, 1930

CHI. MIRA,

Your letter. This time I must be very brief as the post came two days late. I start therefore with the translation of the 2nd verse¹: “In the early morning I worship Him who is beyond the reach of thought and speech yet by whose grace all speech is possible. I worship Him whom the Vedas describe as neti, neti (not this). Him they (the sages) have called God of gods, the unborn, the unfallen, the source of all.”

I do not think that this calls for any explanation. The translation of the preface² is proceeding apace. And as there was no Ashram post till Friday, I devoted the spare time to translating more paras. The result is that now there are only 10 more left. It will be time then to consider whether I can translate the Gita notes I am writing for the Ashram inmates. Just now the 100 rounds on the takli take up much time. But I am now showing an increase in speed. The speed on the Gandiv today was for me quite a record, i.e., 169 rounds in 40 minutes. This means 255 in 60 minutes. The improvements are primarily responsible for this speed. If I continue to show improvement, I may have some more time for writing work. For I do not want to be greedy just now in the way of increase in the output. I shall stick to 300 on the wheel and 100 on the takli till I show a permanently marked increase in speed.

I was quite sure you would get your foreign mail.

Of my health which is excellent more in the general letter.

Of your journalistic venture my opinion remains unaltered and is reinforced by the recent ordinance. But, as I have said, my opinion ought not to count one way or the other.

Love.

BAPU

From the original : C.W. 5425. Courtesy : Mirabehn; also G.N. 9659

¹ Of Ashram Bhajanvali; vide “Ashram Bhajanvali”, 15-12-1930.
² To Anasaktiyoga; vide “Anasaktiyoga”, 27-6-1929
514. LETTER TO SHANTA S. PATEL

YERAVDA MANDIR,
December 30, 1930

CHI. SHANTA (SHANKARBHAI),

I have your letter. Let me give my blessings just now for the new year. If you take a vow, do so after full deliberation and, having taken one be firm in keeping it. There is no need at all to undertake a seven days’ fast. It is likely to prove too much for you. It is enough if you fast on the birthday. Write to Shankarbhai and to me and tell us what vow you take. Take the vow in the presence of the girl friends living there. If possible, spend that day with Kusumbehn. It would be good before taking your vow to consult her. The difficulty which you point out about eating food without spices is only an excuse. One who is determined to eat unspiced food will certainly find out what to eat. Surely, there are no chillies in rotla, rice and buttermilk. [Is it not so?] One should be satisfied with a rotla, buttermilk and salt. Just as we eat and drink every day, we should also write the diary every day. Everything can be done if one has the will. Kamu has not acknowledge my letter. Ask her whether she got it. What will her husband do at Ahmedabad?

How can anyone say that there is no sin in killing bugs and fleas? Even in cutting up vegetables there is sin. However, we do commit some sins which we regard as unavoidable. When we smoke a place to protect ourselves against fleas, countless fleas are killed, but we feel helpless and do that all the same. However, we realize through such necessities that it is everyone’s duty to seek deliverance from bodily life.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 4057

515. LETTER TO HARILAL DESAI

December 30, 1930

CHI. HARILAL (DESAI),

I am hard pressed for time just now and will not, therefore, write a long letter. You did well in giving me all the details. I do not wish Valji to know my opinion for the present. He may be told about it after he is released. I am confirmed in my opinion after reading Hari-ichchha’s letter. But what happened has happened. I have written to Hari-ichchha and explained to her how she can now make the best of an unfortunate event. She will probably show you that letter if you have not seen it already. Ask her to show it to you.

Your duty now is to cling to the job which you have accepted. You may think of something else to do only when circumstances arise in which you on your own leave it—for I have already observed your unsettled state of mind. I have faith in you despite that, for you belong to Valji’s family and are sincere at heart. Such persons often become steady all at once. What has Dudhibehn decided to do?

Blessings from
BAPU

516. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

December 30, 1930

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I got four letters from you together. You should not forget that after all I am a prisoner. I get the letters when the Superintendant visits [me]. However, I continue my efforts to see that I get my letters immediately. When will you now go to the Ashram? I should like you to do so without delay. Your weakness must disappear. Don’t be eager to start working as soon as you reach the Ashram. Take milk, curds and fruits in sufficient quantities. And you of course know the benefits of open air. May God protect you in every way. Don’t worry about me. I had given up eating fresh fruits during the [Dandi] march itself. Nor do I feel any need for them. I seem to be able to digest four or five tolas of almonds and that keeps up my strength.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 3386

1 She was married to a widower.
2 Valji Govindji Desai’s wife
517. LETTER TO PRABHUDAS GANDHI

YERAVDA MANDIR,
December 30, 1930

CHI. PRABHUDAS.

For want of time, only this much now. I have understood your problem with the takli. Do you have that problem with the bamboo one or the iron takli? Your faith will produce the right means even in material things for you. Hence, be patient. For the present, keep a watch on how much yarn the Magan spinning-wheel, in its existing form, gives. You should not have any problem when a devotee of the Magan spinning-wheel, i.e. Dhiru, is with you. If the takli has started giving 330 rounds of yarn per hour, why cannot the Magan-wheel give 3330 rounds per hour? Do not be alarmed by it. Initially, the takli gave only 30 rounds, now it easily gives ten times more. It is not impossible to produce on Magan wheel ten times more than the takli.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original S.N. 32964

518. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

December 31, 1930

CHI. PRABHAVATI.

I get your letters. But I put off writing to you thinking that you will soon be in the Ashram. The more you stay on there, the more I feel worried. Why don’t you go away immediately and leave matters to take care of themselves? If Jayaprakash cannot go immediately, cannot he ask Harasubabu? I see that the longer you delay in going to the Ashram, the weaker you are becoming. What further can I now write even to Jayaprakash?

What is your diet in your present condition of health? Who watches over you when you are in a swoon? What did Father tell you when you met him? I feel afraid even to ask you questions, for it may be a burden on your mind to think and reply to them. I dismiss my worries in the faith that God has been protecting you and will continue to do so. I am quite well.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 3387
519. A LETTER

YERAVDA MANDIR,
December 31, 1930

CHI.,

It is possible that, from an academic standpoint, my interpretation of the phrase “धूर्त जन पूर्ण न” is of no value. But I think it is possible to interpret it to refer both to the self and the body. The self unclouded by ignorance knows neither birth nor death. However, one who believes that it dies must believe also that it is born again. For, nothing in this world suffers total destruction, not even physical body. It ceases to exist in one form and takes another. It goes on ever changing its form. After the body has been reduced to ashes it will not remain unchanged for ever in the form of atoms, for the atoms will change too. “When turned into ornaments, gold acquires different names and forms but it, ever remains gold.” Does this appeal to your reason in any way? As Vinoba’s style is very lively, he wins our interest. However, I have come to the conclusion that it is possible to put more than one interpretation on the words of the Gita and that all of them may be right. The central meaning would remain the same, and consistent with it there may be as many interpretations as one may wish, which together, like the numerous instruments in an orchestra, produce a beautiful symphony. As regards “is seated,” “sits” and “walks,” it is possible to draw out three distinct meaning. But the Gita is not a technical or scientific work composed with such precision. It abounds in repetitions, and there is looseness of expression too. This is not a defect, but it is there.

These days I have been spinning on the takli at least 100 rounds a day. I have given up the iron takli, after having tried very hard to spin well on it, and now I am back to the bamboo takli. I feel a little better with it. The speed has risen to 75 per hour. It will go up still. After I have mastered the bamboo takli fully, I will return to the iron one.

Blessings from

BAPU

From Gujarati : C.W. 9317. Courtesy : Narandas Gandhi
520. LETTER TO BHAGWANJI P. PANDYA

[December 1930]

CHI. BHAGWANJI,

You have construed the answers to your questions all right. Even then I will add a little here.

There is no end to conflicts of loyalties and to miseries. True desire for knowledge arises from this.

The body can be said to be an abode of \textit{punya} in spite of its origin in \textit{papa} in so far as it is a means to realization of the \textit{atman}.

Knowledge means the realization of the self. One who has fully realized truth and non-violence is a perfect \textit{jnani} in spite of being unlettered. This includes the answer to the question why we should obtain, etc.

Non-attachment means absence of attachment. Attachment means the desire for a certain fruit. Attachment is implicit in wanting to climb the Himalayas. Climbing the Himalayas when it falls to one’s lot is doing it free of attachment.

Yoga : Action performed without attachment. You write books but you do not crave for honour on that account, nor money nor praise from anyone. And since it has been your lot to render service through writing what you do is yoga.

Generally I do not forbid asking questions. But the better and correct way is to solve such problems by oneself and to consult others in case of doubt. Unless we did it our discrimination will not develop.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati : C.W. 331. Courtesy : Bhagwanji Purushottam Pandya

521. LETTER TO GANGABEHN JHAYERI

[1930]

CHI. GANGABEHN,

Neither you nor Nanibehn should worry. For now I will not part with those of you who have remained behind. I shall see the result

1. As supplied by the addressee
2. Merit
3. Sin
4. From the contents; \textit{vide} “Letter to Narandas Gandhi”, 26-4-1930.
5. Wife of the addressee’s stepson, Pannalal Jhaveri.
of the step I have taken. You and Nanibehn should try to teach Mahalakshmi what she finds difficult. Tell Ba that I shall most probably reach there tonight.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G. N. 3129

522. LETTER TO DURGA GIRI

[1930]

CHI. DURGA

I have your beautiful letter. Go ahead. Work well. Never forget to get up early. Be fully awake during the morning prayers.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Hindi]
_Bapuki Virat Vatsalta_, p. 30

523. LETTER TO SATYADEVI GIRI

YERAVDA MANDIR,
_Silence Day [1930]

CHI. SATYADEVI.

There will be no end to my troubles if you girls or other people start thinking that I have forgotten those to whom do not write. Can anyone write to each member of such a large family? But you all can certainly write.

Your handwriting is good, and the sketch of a flower-pot with flowers standing upright is so good that the flowers seem to emit fragrance. Are you doing everything carefully? Is Dharma still naughty?

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Hindi]
_Bapuki Virat Vatsalta_, p. 33

1 According to the source, this was written from Yeravda Central Prison; also, this and the two following items were originally written in Gujarati.

2 ibid

3 Addressee’s brother.
524. LETTER TO DHARMAKUMAR GIRI

YERAVDA MANDIR
Silence Day [1930]

CHI. DHARMAKUMAR,

Your letter. You must form the habit of writing in ink and produce print-like alphabet. You indulge in mischief, don't you?

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Hindi]

Bapuki Virat Vatsalta, p. 35

525. LETTER TO SHANTA

January 1', 1931

CHI. SHANTA,

Your letter. Be brave and remain firm. You are facing an intricate problem.² Ponder well over the verses recited during the prayers in the women’s section. Understand their meaning.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 5274

526. LETTER TO MANMOHANDAS GANDHI

January 1, 1931

BHAISHRI MANMOHANDAS,

I got the pages of your booklet. I have gone through them. You have collected some useful statistics. But the title of the booklet is certainly not appropriate. It gives more and more reliable information about mill-cloth than about handloom cloth. After reading it, I felt that its title “How to Compete with Foreign Cloth” was too ambitious for the contents. You have not attempted a careful and detailed examination of hand-spinning. If you have realized that the master-key for the solution of the problem is hand-spinning, you should put ¹ In the source ‘1’ appears to have been corrected to ‘7’, presumably the date on which the letter was posted.

² Vide “Letter to Kashinath Trivedi”. 29-12-1930.
the truth in your own manner. If you are not convinced that it is so, you should not give it a place in your scheme yielding to the present atmosphere. I am becoming more and more convinced that, without hand-spinning, permanent boycott of foreign cloth will be impossible and that even hand-weaving cannot survive without it. If you share this view, you should explain it convincingly.

Despite my partiality for hand-spinning, I don’t think that Talchekar’s contention is supported by facts. I have even had correspondence with him on the matter. His claim that handspun yarn is superior is not borne out by experience. By carefully co-ordinating a variety of factors, it may be possible to produce hand-spun yarn which would be stronger than mill-yarn, but the ordinary hand-spun yarn will always be weaker than mill-yarn. But what does it matter? As compared to hand-made bhakhari, the biscuit produced in a factory with the help of dies will always be perfectly round in shape, smooth and attractive in appearance, and still the former will continue to be preferred to it. You have tried to convince the readers that mill-cloth and handloom cloth can supplement each other. It may be possible for some time to regulate things in that manner, but not permanently. The division of the booklet into sections is not accurate. Go through it again. I have nothing more to add.

Vandemataram from
MOHANDAS

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 8

527. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

January 1, 1931

CHI. PREMA,

This week’s post, too, seems to have been delayed. Meanwhile I have started writing my letters.

When the mind is occupied with nothing else, it starts thinking about the boys and girls. Probably the children don’t know why the 23rd of December is the shortest day. In trying to explain this, you will automatically explain to them some facts of geography and astronomy. Will you not try this? While explaining the reason for the 23rd being the shortest day, speak about the longest day and about the dates on which the day and the night are equal. Simultaneously, you may explain the change of seasons. While doing so tell them what Christmas means. In such discussions, both the parties should feel interested. This is also true about the indigenous tables and methods of oral calculation. These things, too, can be taught to children in an entertaining way. From this, I am generally led to think about botany. I can a complete ignoramus in this field. You, perhaps, know something of the subject. If you do not, you can pick up some general knowledge without much trouble and impart it to children, and to me through letters. You can teach as you learn. But you should not feel this as a burden on your mind. It will be a boon to the children and to me if you make some such effort.

I constantly feel that we don’t give to children all that we ought to. We should, therefore, give that at any rate which we can without much trouble to ourselves. Discuss this matter with Narandas.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 10249

528. LETTER TO KRISHNADAS

[Before January 2, 1931]

MY DEAR KRISHNADAS,

Your letter of 16th instant does not acknowledge my letter in reply to your previous letter. Did you not receive it? In it I expressed my joy at hearing from you and asked you to tell me about Guruji, etc.

I have now received the pieces of khadi which, of course, I shall use with great pleasure and share with Pyarelal if and when he needs any clothing. Please thank all the co-workers for these beautiful pieces. There need be no apology for coarseness or unevenness. Beauty lies in the gentleness and evenness of the heart behind the work. I am using only coarse and uneven khadi, and by reason of this habit, thin and glossy stuff will feel probably unpleasant.

Do write to me all about you. How are your parents? Where is Guruji now? Do you ever go to see Hemprabha Devi? If not, do go now. How are you keeping? Tell me also all about Panditji. We are both keeping fit and well.

Love.

BAPU

The Hindustan Times, 2-1-1931

1 Six pieces of khadi, woven from yarn spun by political prisoners in Dum-Dum jail on October 2, were sent to Gandhiji.
529. LETTER TO ANAND T. HINGORANI

January 2, 1931

DEAR ANAND,

I am glad you got all my letters. The problem you present is incredibly simple. With all your faults and limitations, you should unreservedly offer your and Vidya’s services to Father whenever he can accept them. only you must not interpose yourself between Father and Mother. If he wishes to retire for a while or longer you need not grieve. It is a natural and proper thing. It would be better if he took some social or humanitarian service. There need be no question of his approaching you or you him. Let him know that you are his for ever. The rest will be easy.

As for your distraction the greater your faith in God and your losing yourself in your task, the greater will be the inner peace.

Love to you both.

BAPU

From a microfilm. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

530. LETTER TO SHIVABHAI PATEL

YERAVDA MANDIR,

January 2, 1931

CHI. SHIVABHAI,

I have your letter. I had also got your letter describing your difficulties at Pij, and replied to it. I hope you received my reply.

You have done well in confessing everything. In my opinion, you should certainly not have physical relations with your wife. You should make some arrangement for her education so that her intellect may develop. If you are firm in your decision to have no physical relations with her, you should plainly tell her about that so that she may not remain discontented and may not go on hoping. You should also let her marry again if she wishes to do so. You should not do that if deep in your heart you crave for physical gratification. In any case, you should make it clear to her that you cannot satisfy her as long as the present movement lasts. Since she is poor, you should bear the burden of maintaining her. You should ask her to go and live in the Ashram. The remedy against attacks of lustful thoughts is to devote oneself to work. How can a person who is always absorbed in work ever get time for such thoughts?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9503

531. LETTER TO MAITRI GIRI

YERAVDA MANDIR,
January 2, 1931

CHI. MAITRI,

You certainly are careless in writing to me. I should be happy if you change. Why do not all of you who are there immediately give water to Dheds and Bhangis? And you can also plead with the people who give their left-overs to the latter to eat. Do you tell Gangabehn about all this? I don’t mind your growing fat, but you should take care to make your body firm and as strong as steel. The only way to do this is hard physical work.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6223

532. LETTER TO RAMABEHN JOSHI

YERAVDA MANDIR,
January 2, 1931

CHI. RAMABEHN,

I understand your enthusiasm. But the Gita tells us that, even if paradharma looks more attractive, swadharma is better for us.1 We may die while doing swadharma. Somebody else’s work is fraught with danger. Swadharma means one’s own work. Your work is what Mithubehn may assign to you. You and others who support you should reason with Mithubehn. Till she is won over, you should keep patience. You yourself say that you get something to learn every day. Why then should you be impatient? In any case, a prisoner has no right to say what work she will do and what work she will not do. My

1 III. 35

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
blessings to all who have returned from jails. I should know why Joshi has returned with ten pounds less.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5329

533. LETTER TO MIRABEHN

January 3, 1931

CHI. MIRA,

I have read the two renderings you have sent me of the first verse of the morning prayer. For use and perhaps conveying the meaning, I prefer my rendering. If you find any obscurity anywhere, please tell me. The second I sent you by the last mail. Here is the third.

“In the early morning I bow to Him who is beyond darkness, who is like the sun, who is perfect, ancient, called Purushottam (the best among men) and in whom (through the veil of darkness) we fancy the whole universe as appearing even as (in darkness) we imagine a rope to be a snake.”

The idea is that the universe is not real in the sense of being permanent, it is neither a thing to be hankered after nor feared because it is supposed to be God’s creation. As a matter of fact, it is a creation of our imagination even as the snake in the rope is. The real universe like the real rope is there. We perceive either when the veil is lifted and darkness is gone—compare. “And with the morn, those angel faces smile which I have loved long since and lost awhile.” The three verses go together and I think are Shankar’s composition. You do know of Shankar, do you not? Five more days and I shall have finished the translation of the preface. My suggestion is that I continue to send you the verses and the bhajans with such comments as then occur to me. You should for your own satisfaction, with the help of whoever comes your way, translate the weekly notes on the Gita. The plan I am now following is well thought out, i.e., that of looking through the translation of the whole Gita in the light of my rendering and translating the notes. The attempt may lead to

1 Vide “Letter to Mirabehn”, 29-30-12-1930
2 Vide Ashram Bhajanavali, 15-12-1930.
something good of which we have no knowledge today. If I begin the translation of the weekly notes, the above plan may fall through altogether. It would not be right. Of my food experiment, you will learn everything from Narandas. The assurance, that the moment I find it necessary I shall revert to milk, should remove all cause for anxiety.

By the travelling wheel I suppose, you mean the box wheel of the Pratishthan type. Whatever it is, your speed is certainly quite good. Let the Gandiv disappear from your mind unless Kaka has something to show. . . .

I was sorry to learn about Romain Rolland’s health. Do please send him my love and tell him I often think of him and pray that he may be long spared in the service of humanity. . . .

Love.

BAPU

Bapu’s Letters to Mira, pp. 146-7

534. LETTER TO CHAND TYAGI

January 3, 1931

Bhai Tyagi ji,

I have your letter. Why does not Balbir write to me? He should let me know his wishes. He could certainly go to the Ashram if he really wants to. Who is now the Principal of Prem Mahavidyalaya? Why has Devasharmaji been transferred to Kanpur [jail]? Write out your ideas on fasting and other subjects. We shall see about their publication later on.

Give in detail your daily routine.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 3267

1 Omissions as in the source
2 ibid
3 Also known as Acharya Abhaydev
535. LETTER TO MOTIBEHN MATHURADAS

YERAVDA MANDIR,
January 3, 1931

CHI. MOTI,

If you wish to continue to be Moti\(^1\) of Vijayanagar and not Motibehn in Vijayanagar, you must learn to make your hand-writing as beautiful as pearls. The handwriting in your letter was quite good, but you should improve it a little every day. It is one of the virtues of a person devoted to dharma that he or she is exact in every matter, small or big. Will no one in Cochin agree to keep Shantu exclusively on fruit? Write to them and see. One should not be lazy in such matters. If pus continues to issue from a child’s gums, we ought not to remain indifferent. If we do, the child will not live long. It is easy to cure such diseases in childhood. The alternative is for you to keep Shantu with you and bring him up yourself. I am glad that you have taken up the task of keeping children clean.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3750

536. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL JOSHI

YERAVDA MANDIR,
January 3, 1931

CHI. CHHAGANLAL (JOSHI),

I just read the news of your having been released. Is it true that you lost ten pounds of weight in jail? How did that happen? Describe to me your experiences in jail.

I will certainly expect your weekly letter now. What a pleasant surprise it was to learn that Dhiru had stuck to the Ashram, though left alone! But there have been no end of such pleasant surprises. You are bound to hear everything about me and Pyarelal.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5497

\(^1\) Literally, ‘pearl’.
537. LETTER TO MANIBEHN PATEL

YERAVDA MANDIR,
January 3, 1931

CHI. MANI,

I have your letter.

If you meet Father, tell him that I envy his lot, for he is both in and out of the house of rest and is able to visit the doctor every day. He never received such delicate attention so long as he was a free man. And I hope that in this way he will get rid for good of the trouble in the teeth and in the nose.

Will he be my neighbour this time too?
If you meet Rajendrababu, ask him to write to me. Did he get my reply to his letter?

Keep on giving me all the news as long as you are not arrested. Dahyabhai seems to have taken a vow never to write to me.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro-4: Manibehn Patelne, pp. 47-8

538. LETTER TO TARAMATI MATHURADAS

TRIKUMJI

January 4, 1931

I was very happy that all of you got an opportunity to visit the Ashram. I would have been happier still if you could have spent a few days there. I get news about Mathuradas from time to time. I am sure his days will pass peacefully. This is a good experience he is getting. Pyarelal is quite well. My love to children.

[From Gujarati]
Bapuni Prasadi, p. 103

1 The source explains: “The Sardar was then in Arthur Road Prison and was taken every day for a month under police escort to Dr. D.M. Desai’s dental clinic in Whiteaway Laidlaw Building, Fort, Bombay.”
539. LETTER TO MAHAVIR GIRI

January 4, 1931

CHI. MAHAVIR,

I got your letter. It seems you are getting daily new experiences. Wherever you go, live with the utmost self-restraint. If the experiment of starching yarn succeeds, that will undoubtedly help us very much.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6224

540. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

YERAVDA MANDIR,

Sunday Morning, January 4, 1931

CHI. VASUMATI,

I am writing this immediately after morning prayers. Taste ultimately is a matter of the palate and the mind. Our vow is that we will not gratify the craving of the palate. The latter will always feel and recognize the taste of every food. But to gratify the craving of the palate means to eat food which it likes and avoid food which it dislikes. We may certainly eat whatever food the body requires, but only at the time when and in the quantity which the body requires, and it does not matter then if it gives us pleasure. When Mahavir has conquered the palate, he will gladly accept what is for his good. Ordinarily, a man does not care for his spiritual good and does what will give him pleasure for the time being even if that is likely to harm him spiritually. Hence the attitude, that one should accept whatever is offered to one at any time, is not the right one for a spiritual seeker. We do not know from experience how a person who has attained perfection acts, and need not concern ourselves with the question. Let us wait till we have attained perfection. The question then will not arise at all. It this does not answer all your question, ask me again.

It is a good sign that we notice even our small defects. We ought to know whether we are striving to overcome them. If I see that I have pride in me and if I am a spiritual seeker, I am bound to make an effort to get rid of it. I shall not feel easy in mind till I have got rid of it. If there is a snake in the house, we shall not feel easy in mind till we have caught and removed it. If asked, we can certainly say whether we are trying to remove it. This is also true about snakes and other such poisonous creatures in our hearts. I am glad that your ear is now all right.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9316.

541. LETTER TO RAIHANA TYABJI

January 4, 1931

MAD. RAIHANA,

A girl whose brother is mad is hardly likely to be wise! I have written a letter to Dahyabhai.¹

I am glad that you are improving, but do you think you will improve so much that you can shoulder the burden of leadership of the Kadi division? If you do indeed, we shall have to present an address to the doctor sister. A person with a grey beard, I am afraid, cannot escape suffering. A white beard is bound to have some effect at any rate. But all’s well that ends well. I am not surprised to hear about Father’s exploits. Isn’t he also a branch of the same tree?

_Khuda Hafiz._²

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9626

542. LETTER TO KASHINATH TRIVEDI

January 4, 1931

CHI. KASHINATH,

Your long letters are no trouble to me to read. Narandas has also written to me about you. He says that you refused to show him your diary. If this is true, your action was not right. Narandas is an extremely straightforward man and always does what he thinks right. You can tell him everything. Have a quiet talk with him and, if there has been any misunderstanding, remove it. If you wish to live in the Ashram and are not opposed to any of its rules, Narandas on his part will certainly take you back. He has even written to me to say so.

Whether or not you live in the Ashram, you can keep up

¹ These two sentences are in Urdu.
² A farewell greeting, meaning: ‘May God protect you.’
connection with it for other purposes. You can ask for papers relating to your work. Difference of opinion should not mean personal enmity.

If you think it necessary to engage a lawyer to defend your brother-in-law, you may do so. If you have sufficient courage, however, do without a lawyer. Your actions seem all right. I did not understand your reason for refusing to sign the summons. But that is a minor matter. I have written to Shanta, Kalavati, Raghavdas and Banarsidas. Read those letters. You had asked the same, or a similar, question about art in your previous letter. I have already replied to it.¹ Did you get that letter? I got the booklet on vows. I did not see any letter from Ramnarayan. There was one from Haribhau², and I have replied to him. Convey my blessings to all.

Mother should take only so much of milk as leaves her hungry. If, however, she cannot remain hungry and begs repeatedly for something to eat, you may give her a khakhara³. If she can continue milk and light diet for some time longer still, she will become all right. You should do everything with the utmost patience. Don’t feel unhappy about anything. “What God, World Teacher and Master has willed for the day, it is futile to grieve over. Without His will we cannot move a blade of grass. If we do fuss about things, what is left over is a legacy of sorrows.”⁴

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5270

543. LETTER TO DURGA DESAI

YERAVDA MANDIR,
January 4, 1931

CHI. DURGA,

It is 7 o’clock on Sunday morning just now. It is extremely cold. The hands shake, but I cannot give myself a holiday from writing. After I have finished this letter, I will start the spinning yajna. You have done well in starting the experiment of eating oranges. While it continues, write to me regularly. Tell me in detail the effect

¹ Vide “Letter to Kashinath Trivedi”, 18-12-1930.
² Haribhau Upadhyaya
³ Crisp chapati
⁴ From a poem by Narasinh Mehta which it has. Weigh yourself from time to time. Enemas will also have to be continued. I suppose you take sun-baths too. If you have enough strength, you should slowly walk about a little.

Now for Mahadev:

I don’t hope at all to leave this place with any new discovery about the spinning-wheel. Along with enthusiasm, one must have knowledge of the craft, too, which I don’t possess. I shall be satisfied if I can make sufficient changes which will enable me to increase my speed. I do feel that one can acquire good speed despite one’s age. If, however, the nerves of my hands have become weak, the speed will not increase. But I do make changes from time to time to see if they help me to increase my speed. I see that I displayed great wisdom in not going to England despite Sastri’s view that I should go. Really speaking, it required no wisdom to come to that decision. My heart simply did not consent, however much I tried to persuade myself. The reins are held by that Master of the Play. Why, then, need we worry at all? On the contrary, we should daily leave the reins more and more in His hands and strengthen His hands.

If any trace of fissure is noticed, [he] should immediately take steps to cure it. And [he] should not give up milk or ghee. It is our duty to obtain whatever facilities we can get and which are essential for our health. If we clearly see that we hold the body as a trust, that it is not our own, we shall think no more about the problem. It is good that Devdas has been working at Sanskrit to increase his proficiency in it. Mahadev will be able to help him in that. My blessings to all prisoners. Pyarelal spins daily 375 rounds on the spinning-wheel and 100 on the takli, and the work takes up the whole of the morning and an hour and a half in the afternoon.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 16900

544. LETTER TO CHANDRAKANTA

Y. M.,
January 4, 1931

CHI. KANTA,

Your Gujarati letter is excellent. There are only minor errors. Your handwriting is good. Write to me anything you want to, important or unimportant. You need feel no embarrassment.
It is good that Mother has come. Shower her with love. While remaining firm in your resolve, do not forget patience and courtesy. Go to Bohasan only after you have fully recovered. I see no harm if you have occasionally taken tea as medicine. I do not even remember Brother’s questions. He had written a fairly long letter. If the questions are repeated, I can reply again

_Blessings from_

_BAPU_

545. LETTER TO RAMDAS GANDHI

January 4, 1931

CHI. RAMDAS,

While your case is pending, should not I write to you? What is Surendra’s diet? I have heard that he has gone down in health. Give me particulars of your daily routine. What is your diet there? Do they let you spin?

_Blessings from_

_BAPU_

From the Gujarati original: Mrs. Sumitra Kulkarni Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

546. LETTER TO HEMPRABHA DAS GUPTA

YERAVDA MANDIR,

January 4, 1931

CHI. HEMPRABHA,

It is surprising that there is no letter from you for the last two weeks. This must not happen. Even if there is nothing worth writing it will do if you send a few words about your welfare. How are Charu and Arun? When are Satisbabu and Kshitishbabu to be released?

_Blessings from_

_BAPU_

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N.1680
547. LETTER TO BENARSIDAS CHATURVEDI

YERAVDA MANDIR,
January 4, [1931]

BHAI BENARSIDAS,

There is no reason to be so despondent. One who recognizes his weakness and desires to remove it is already half-way to success. The resolve to devote the rest of your life to service is all to the good. Derive greater strength from the calamity that has befallen you. So much in the line of service lies before you. It is gratifying to learn that the baby is doing well.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 2523

548. LETTER TO RADHAKRISHNA BAJAJ

YERAVDA MANDIR,
January 4, 1931

CHI. RADHAKRISHNA,

Keep on sending me letters. They contain the news I look forward to. When Janakibehn arrives, tell her to write to me. They may certainly arrest Vinoba if they wish. Is there any news of Chhotelal? How is his health?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 3036

1 Gandhiji had written ‘1930’, which is obviously a slip. The letter (G. N. 2524) under reply was dated December 24, 1930.

2 The addressee’s wife had died in September 1930 leaving behind a newborn child.
549. LETTER TO S. D. SATAVALEKAR

YERAVDA MANDIR,
January 5, 1931

BHAJI SATAVALEKARJI,

I am grateful for your promptitude in sending me Gitashlokardhasoochi and other books. Are handmade slives strong enough to yield 19,000 yards of yarn in eight hours? What is the count? Will this charkha be entered in the prize-winning charsha competition? If possible, send me the pocket-size charkha.

Yours,

MOHANDAS

From a photostat of the Hindi: C.W. 4761. Courtesy: S. D. Satavalekar

550. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

January 5, 1931

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I get your letters. Generally they are quite regular now. But I have not been very regular in writing to you thinking that you will now be leaving for the Ashram any day. Of course I think of you every day. I don’t at all like your remaining there. If Jayaprakash cannot leave just now, and if he wishes, someone from the Ashram will come to fetch you. Since Kamala has gone to the rest-house, will you have to go to Prayag now? I have not received the letter which Jayaprakash was to write to me.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3402

1 Kamala Nehru
551. LETTER TO VANAMALA PARIKH

January 5, 1931

CHI. VANAMALA,

I get your letters. Your speed on the spinning-wheel can be described as good, but you should increases it still further. Can a mistake committed through carelessness be forgiven? After writing a letter, you should go through it once.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

I saw your slip after writing this letter.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5758

552. LETTER TO MATHURADAS PURUSHOTTAM

January 5, 1931

CHI. MATHURADAS,

I have your letter. I will now find some time and read about the carding-bow. This time I got the post two days late. You have got a good band of workers with you. You should only think about the work and not feel worried about it. Never doubt that you are doing God’s work, provided, of course, you do it in the spirit of yajna. I have read what you have written about carding. It is good. When you gain further experience, you will be able to make more definite statements.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3751

553. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

January 5, 1931

CHI. PREMA,

I have your letter. In my opinion, the view of Vivekananda and Dhourandhar is one-sided. One should feel in the heart what one says. Surdas, Tulsidas and other bhaktas have described themselves as cunnings, lustful, etc. In doing so, they were not merely using the language of modesty, but speaking from the heart. The truth is that we feel both ways. In an enlightened state, we know ourselves to be Brahman, but in the ignorant state we feel meek and humble before that Merciful One. He who does not feel so but knows himself as the perfect Brahman may not sing bhajans praying for God’s mercy. You will not come across one such person in millions. To realize one’s smallness is the beginning of being great. The drop of sea-water which has become separated from the sea would dry up if it thought that it was still the sea. If it admitted to itself that it was no more than a drop, it would flow towards the sea, merge in it and become one with it.

“Culture” means refinement of feelings and “education” means knowledge of literature. Education is a means and culture is the end. The latter is possible even without education. For instance, if a child is brought up in a truly cultured family, it will unconsciously imbibe culture from its environment. In our country at any rate, present-day education and culture have no connection with each other. If the educated still retain some culture, that is in spite of their education. This fact shows that the roots of our culture are deep.

My blessings and compliments to Prasannabehn. I should like her to draw her husband also to the Ashram.

You seem to be running a competition in the opposite direction with Narandas with regard to weight. It is good. You can afford to put on some more weight, and Narandas to lose some.

I like the translation of Gitabodh which Dhurandhar is making.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 10250
DEAR SIR TEJ BAHADUR,

I have to thank you for informing me of the results of the conversations held by Mr. Jayakar and yourself with the Congress leaders now in prison and for sending me copies of their joint letter of the 15th August and of your reply thereto. I should wish you and Mr. Jayakar both to know how great has been my appreciation of the spirit in which you have pursued your self-imposed public-spirited task of endeavouring to assist in the restoration of normal conditions in India. It is worth recalling the conditions under which you entered upon your undertaking. In my letter of 16th July I assured you that it was the earnest desire of myself, my Government and I had no doubt also of His Majesty’s Government, to do everything we could to assist the people of India to obtain as large degree of management of their own affairs as could be shown to be consistent with the making of provision for those matters in regard to which they were not at present in a position to assume responsibility. It would be among the functions of the Conference to examine in the light of all the material available what those matters might be and what provision might be made for them. I had previously made two other points plain in my speech to the Legislature on the 9th July. The first is that those attending the Conference would have the unfettered right of examining the whole constitutional problem in all its bearing. Secondly, that any agreement at which the Conference was able to arrive would form the basis of the proposals which His Majesty's Government would later submit to Parliament. I fear as you will no doubt recognize that the task you had voluntarily undertaken has not been assisted by the letter you have received from the Congress leaders. In view both of the general tone by which that letter is inspired and of its contents, as also of its blank refusal to recognize the grave injury to which the country has been subjected by the Congress policy, not the least in the economic field, I do not think any useful purpose would be served by my attempting to deal in detail with the suggestions there made and I must frankly say I regard discussion on the basis of the proposals contained in the letter as impossible. I hope if you desire to see the Congress leaders again you will make this plain.

There is one further comment I must make upon the last paragraph of your reply to them dated 16th August. When we discussed these matters, I said if the Civil

1 Vide “Statement to T. B. Sapru and M. R. Jayakar”, 5-9-1930
Disobedience Movement was in fact abandoned, I should not desire to continue the Ordinances (apart from those connected with the Lahore Conspiracy Case and Chittagong) necessitated by the situation which EX-HYPOTHESIS would no longer exist. But I was careful to make it plain that I was unable to give any assurance, if and when the Civil Disobedience Movement ceases, that local Governments would find it possible to release all persons convicted or under trial for offences in connection with the movement not involving violence, and that while I should wish to see a generous policy pursued in the matter, the utmost that I could promise would be to [ask] all the local Governments to consider with sympathy all the cases individually on their merits.

Upon the point of your reference to the representation of the Congress at the Conference in the event of their abandoning the Civil Disobedience Movement and desiring to attend, my recollection is you explained that the demand of the Congress was not for predominant, in the sense of majority, representation at the Conference and that I expressed the view that I should anticipate little difficulty in recommending to His Majesty's Government to secure that the Congress should be adequately represented. I added that if events so developed, I should be ready to receive a panel of names from the leaders of the Congress Party of those whom they would regard as suitable representatives. I feel that you and Mr. Jayakar would desire to be clearly informed of the position of myself and my Government as it may be desirable that the letters should be published at an early date in order that the public may be fully informed of the circumstances, in which your efforts have failed to produce the result you hoped and they so certainly deserved.

Your sincerely,

IRWIN

The Hindu, 5-9-1930

APPENDIX II

NOTES OF CONVERSATIONS WITH VICEROY

(a) On the constitutional question, the position would be as stated in the four fundamental points in para 2 of the Viceroy's letter to us of 28th August.

(b) With reference to the question whether Mr. Gandhi would be allowed to raise at the Round Table Conference the question of India's right to secede from the Empire at will, the position was as follows: “As the Viceroy has stated in his said letter to us, the Conference was a free conference. Therefore, anyone could raise any points he liked, but the Viceroy thought it would be very unwise for Mr. Gandhi to raise this question now. If, however, he faced the Government of India with such a question, the Viceroy would say the Government were not prepared to treat it as an open question. If, in spite of this, Mr. Gandhi desired to raise the question, the Government would inform the Secretary of State of his intention to do so at the Round Table Conference.”

1 Held at Simla with Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru and M. R. Jayakar between August 21 and 28. Vide also 1st footnote of “Statement to T. B. Sapru and M. R. Jayakar”, 5-9-1930

(c) As regards the right to raise the question at the Round Table Conference of India's liability to certain financial burdens and to get them examined by an independent Tribunal, the position was that the Viceroy could not entertain any proposition amounting to total repudiation of all debts, but it would be open to anyone to raise, at the Round Table Conference, any question as to any financial liability of India and to call for its examination.

(d) As regards the granting of relief against the Salt Act, the position of the Viceroy was that (1) the Salt Tax was going to be provincialized if the recommendation of the Simon Commission in that behalf was accepted, and (2) there has been already great loss of revenue and therefore the Government would not like to forgo this source, but if the Legislature was persuaded to repeal the Salt Act and if any proposal was put forward to make good the loss of revenue occasioned by such repeal, the Viceroy and his Government would consider the question on its merits. It was not, however, possible for the Viceroy to condone open breaches of the Salt Act so long as it was law. When goodwill and peace were restored and, if Indian leaders desired to discuss with H. E. the Viceroy and his Government how best economic relief could be given to the poorer classes on his behalf, the Viceroy would be glad to call a small conference of Indian leaders.

(e) With reference to picketing, the position was that if picketing amounted to nuisance to any class of people or was coupled with molestation or intimidation or the use of force, the Viceroy reserved to the Government the right of taking such action as the law allowed or taking of such legal powers as might be necessary to meet any emergency that might arise. Subject to the above when peace was established the Ordinance against picketing would be withdrawn.

(f) With regard to the re-employment of the officers who resigned or had been dismissed during the Civil Disobedience campaign, the position was that this matter was primarily a question for the discretion of local Governments. Subject however to there being vacancies and as long as it did not involve dismissing men who had proved loyal, the local Government would be expected to re-employ men who had thrown up their appointments in a fit of excitement or who had been swept off their feet.

(g) As for the restoration of printing presses confiscated under the Press Ordinance, there would be no difficulty.

(h) As regards the restoration of fines and properties confiscated under the Revenue Law, that required closer definition. As to the properties confiscated or sold under such law, there might be the rights of third parties involved. As to refunding fines, there were difficulties. In short, all that the Viceroy could say was that the local Government would exercise their discretion with justice and take all the circumstances into consideration and try to be as accommodating as they could.

(i) As to the release of prisoners, the Viceroy had already explained his views in his letter to us dated July 28th.

The Hindu, 5-9-1930

APPENDIX III
NOTE FROM NEHRUS

NAINI CENTRAL PRISON, August 31, 1930

We have had further interviews with Mr. M. R. Jayakar and Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru yesterday and today, and have had the advantage of long talks with them. They have given us a copy of the letter, dated August 23, addressed to them by His Excellency Lord Irwin. In this letter, it is stated clearly that Lord Irwin regards discussion on the basis of the proposals contained in our joint letter of August 15 to Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru and Mr. Jayakar as impossible, and under the circumstances, he rightly concludes their efforts have failed to produce any result. This joint letter, as you know, was written after a full consideration by the signatories to it, and represented the utmost they were prepared to go in their individual capacities. We stated there that no solution would be satisfactory unless it fulfilled certain vital conditions, and that a satisfactory declaration to that effect was made by the British Government. If such a declaration was made, we would be prepared to recommend to the Working Committee the advisability of calling off Civil Disobedience, provided simultaneously certain steps indicated in our letter were taken by the British Government in India.

It was only after a satisfactory settlement of all these preliminaries, that the question of the composition of the proposed London Conference and of the Congress being represented at it could be decided. Lord Irwin, in his letter, considers even a discussion on the basis of these proposals as impossible. Under the circumstances, there is or can be no common ground between us. Quite apart from the contents, the tone of the letter and the recent activities of the British Government in India clearly indicate that the Government has no desire for peace. The proclamation of the Working Committee as an illegal body in the Delhi Province soon after a meeting of it was announced to be held there, and the subsequent arrest of most of its members can have that meaning and no other. We have no complaint against these or other arrests or other activities of the Government, 'uncivilized' and 'barbarous' as we consider some of these to be. We welcome them. But, we feel, we are justified in pointing out that a desire for peace and an aggressive attack on the very body, which is capable of giving peace and with which it is sought to treat, do not go well together. The proscription of the Working Committee all over India and the attempt to prevent its meetings must necessarily mean that the national struggle must go on, whatever the consequences, and that there will be no possibility of peace, for those who may have some authority to represent the people of India will be spread out in British prisons all over India.

---

1 Vide 1st footnote of “Statement to T. B. Sapru and M. R. Jayakar”, 5-9-1930

Lord Irwin's letter and the action taken by the British Government make it plain that the efforts of Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru and Mr. Jayakar have been in vain. Indeed, the letter and some of the explanations that had been given to us take us back, in some respects, even from the position that was previously taken. In view of the great hiatus that exists between our position and Lord Irwin's, it is hardly necessary to go into details, but we should like to point out to you certain aspects of his letter.

The first part of the letter is practically a repetition of his speech to the Legislative Assembly and of the phrases used in his letter dated July 16, addressed to Mr. Jayakar and Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru. As we pointed out in our joint letter, this phraseology is too vague for us to assess its value. It may be made to mean anything or nothing. In our joint letter, we have made it clear that a complete National Government responsible to the people of India, including control over the Defence Forces and economic control, must be recognized as India's immediate demand. There is no question of what are usually called safeguards or any delay. Adjustments there necessarily must be for the transference of power and in regard to these we stated that they were to be determined by India's chosen representatives.

As regards India's right of secession at will from the British Empire and her right to refer British claims and concessions to an independent tribunal all that we are told is that the Conference will be a free conference and any point can be raised there. This is no advance on the previous statement made. We are further told, however, that if the British Government in India were definitely faced with the possibility of the former question being raised, Lord Irwin would say they were not to treat it as an open question. All they could do was to inform the Secretary of State of our intention to raise the question at the Conference.

As regards the other proposition, we are told that Lord Irwin could only entertain the idea of a few individual financial transactions being subjected for scrutiny. While such scrutiny may take place in individual cases, its scope will have to extend to the whole field of British claims including, as we have stated, the so-called Public Debt of India. We consider both these questions as of vital importance and previous agreement in our joint letter seems to us essential.

Lord Irwin's reference to the release of prisoners is very restricted and unsatisfactory. He is unable to give an assurance that all of the non-violent civil disobedience prisoners even will be discharged. All he proposes to do is to leave the matter in the hands of the Local Governments. We are not prepared to trust in such a matter to the generosity or sympathy of Local Governments or local officials but, apart from this, there is no reference in Lord Irwin’s letter to other non-violent prisoners. There are a large number of Congressmen and others who were sent to prison for political offences prior to the Civil Disobedience Movement. We might mention in this connection the Meerut Case prisoners who have already spent a year and a half as under-trials. We made it clear in our joint letter that all these persons should be released.

Regarding the Bengal and the Lahore Case Ordinances we feel no exception should be made in their favour as suggested by Lord Irwin. We have not claimed release for those political prisoners who may have been guilty of violence not because we would not welcome their release but because we felt that as our movement was strictly non-violent, we would not confuse the issue. But, the least we can do is to press for ordinary trial for these fellow-countrymen of ours and not by an extraordinary court constituted by an Ordinance which denies them the right of appeal and the ordinary privilege of accused.

Amazing events including the brutal assaults that have occurred even in open court during the so-called trial make it imperative that the ordinary procedures should be followed. We understand that some of the accused in protest against the treatment accorded to them have been on hunger-strike for a long period and are now at death’s door. The Bengal Ordinance, we understand, has been replaced by an Act of the Bengal Council. We consider this Ordinance and any Act passed on it most objectionable, and the fact that an unrepresentative body like the present Bengal Council has passed it does not make it any the better.

As regards the further picketing of foreign cloth and liquor shops, we are told, Lord Irwin is agreeable to the withdrawal of the Picketing Ordinance, but he states that if he thinks it necessary, he will take fresh legal powers to combat picketing. Thus, he informs us that he might re-enact the Ordinance or do something in Simla to it whenever he considers it necessary. The reply regarding the Salt Act and certain other matters referred to in our joint letter is also wholly unsatisfactory. We need not deal with it at any length here as you are an acknowledged expert on salt. We would only say we see no reason to modify our previous position as regards these matters.

Thus Lord Irwin has declined to agree to all the major propositions and many of the minor ones laid down in our joint letter. The difference in his outlook and ours is very great, indeed fundamental. We hope you will show this note to Mrs. Sarojini Naidu, Mr. Vallabhbhai Patel, Mr. Jairamdas Doulatram and in consultation with them give your reply to Mr. Jayakar and Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru. We feel that the publication of the correspondence must no longer be delayed, and we are not justified in keeping the public in the dark. Even apart from the question of publication, we are requesting Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru and Mr. Jayakar to send copies of all correspondence and relevant papers to Chaudhri Khaliq Usman, the Acting President of the Indian National Congress. We feel we ought to take no steps without immediate information being sent to the Working Committee, which happens to be functioning.

MOTILAL
SYED MAHMUD
JAWAHARLAL

The Hindu, 5-9-1930
1. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

8 p.m., January 1/6, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

This week, too, I have not received your packet so far. It must have been posted as unregistered parcel and, if so, I shall probably get it tomorrow. But I started writing the Ashram letters today, or rather yesterday.

I had a letter last time from Danibehn from Bombay. My reply to her is enclosed. She is from Marwar, it seems. If you know, inform me whether that is so. I have given her address in the letter itself, thinking that you may not have it with you. Last week there were a few remarks in pencil by way of criticism of Anasakatiyoga by a Maratha friend; the remarks were unsigned. If you remember the name, let me know it.

We were both weighed today. My weight came to 100 and Pyare-lal’s to 122. I have lost a pound; it is not worth taking note of. The weight may increase or decrease by a pound or two even if the time of weighing changes or according as one is weighed before or after passing stool. If a person gets himself weighed immediately after drinking water, his weight will be found to have increased. If he gets himself weighed after passing urine, there will be corresponding decrease in his weight. So long as I myself feel quite fit, pass stool without difficulty, have an appetite and eat well, there is no reason at all for concern. If I can carry on like this for six months, the experiment will have succeeded. I have made an important change, which I describe here for those of you who may be interested to know about it.

Almonds are soaked in hot water and the peel is removed. They are then crushed into a paste. This is mixed with four ounces of water and the mixture is boiled till the water evaporates and a butter-like jelly is left behind. I eat it with vegetables. It not only tastes good but seems to be more easily digested than almond paste not boiled in water. It is possible that, even if the almonds are crushed into very fine paste but the latter is not boiled in water, the stuff remains undigested and passes out with stool. But I have no doubt that the jelly which I eat is digested. Even a person with very delicate stomach may be able to digest almonds cooked in this manner. The jelly may again be mixed with water and turned into milk. It will, of course, have no taste. One can add a little jaggery or sugar, or even lime juice and salt, to the liquid. I don’t advise anyone just now to make this experiment. But the information which I have given may perhaps be useful to anyone who is interested in making such experiments or cannot digest milk. Apart from this change, my diet remains what it was. The quantity, too, remains unchanged.

I hope to reach very high speed on the Gandiv spinning-wheel. I had never been able to reach 200, let alone 255, per hour before now. On the takli I have not been able to go beyond 75-80 rounds. I cannot spin even 75 comfortably. I spin about 60 comfortably. But I can say that my hand has now set well on a bamboo takli. It still seems a hard task for me to spin 100 rounds.

2 o’clock, Saturday

I got your packet yesterday. Since it was a parcel and they do not carry packets during holidays, two days were wasted. But I see that it cost you only three annas to send the packet as a parcel, whereas, if it had been sent as a letter, the postage would possibly come to as much as a rupee. You may, therefore, follow whichever method you think right. I have mentally reconciled myself to getting the packet on Fridays and adjusted my programme accordingly. Here they are very careful in handing over the packet immediately to me after examining its contents. They are equally careful in dispatching the packets from here.

Who is Palibehn? Her question is the same as Premabehn’s. I need not, therefore, write separately to her. Send her a copy of my letter to Premabehn, or show it to her if she is in the Ashram.

As regards printing extracts from my letter, what I have written about yajna can certainly be given below Chapter II. Any other portions which seem useful can also be printed. But where and in what manner is for you to decide. You can include such material in the Gitabodh in footnotes at relevant places or as independent extracts.

Keep the Doctor informed about Ratilal and deal with the latter tactfully so that he may keep to the right path. Look upon him as an animal, uncultured and enslaved by passion. When he is overcome by passion, he goes mad. There are many kinds of passion; Ratilal is enslaved by three: for sex, for eating and for spending money extravagantly. He becomes when these passions are not satisfied. Running away from the Ashram has a beneficial effect on him in some measure. He calms down after a few days. God alone knows how he will end up. Sometimes such persons even attain jnana. He is certainly not wholly wicked.
The quantity of spinning which you are able to do seems much indeed to me. One can do with the left hand any work which the right hand does. Bhau can spin on the takli equally well with either hand.

It will not be bad if Kanu goes to Wardha and learns Bhau’s skill, and also gets some experience of the place. If there is any other boy, besides Kanu, who can and wishes to go, I see no harm in sending him.

Your body seems to have changed altogether. Personally, I am confident that ultimately it will become purer in its functioning.

Will not Parnekar leave the Ashram for a while and go somewhere else to improve his health?

The fact that the bull was brought back and the manner of its being found were a miracle indeed.

Do you follow our method or some other method in preparing mava from milk? Do you experience any difficulty in selling it? If that is so, you may write to Ghanshyamdas, Mahavirprasad, Jivanlal and others and they will probably buy it up. If you can supply it regularly, even an advertisement in a newspaper will help.

Do not give up walking. It is a practice worth clinging to at any cost. If you follow fixed rules in your work, you can include many things in the day’s programme.

Devdas had written a letter to me; what has been done in regard to it? I have requested that he should recall the contents of the letter and write again to me. I have received no reply to this.

6.45 p.m., Monday, January 5, 1931

I have acknowledged having received the leather for sandals. The address of the lady to whom letter No. 82 is addressed is known to Ramnarayan1 (of Ajmer). If you send the letter to Martand of somebody else, he will post it.

Read my letter to Kashinath. I need not add to what I have written in it.

Jivandas is in Sabarmati Jail. Does anyone visit him? If not, some-body should go and visit him. Tell him that I often remember him.

Blessings from

BAPU

January 6, 1931

1 Ramnarayan Chaudhary
[PS.]

I started this letter on the first and I described the position with regard to my experiment in diet as it was on that day. I had a feeling of indigestion on Saturday night and on Sunday diarrhoea started. But this time I suffered no pain at all. There was no griping even. There were frequent motions. They continued even yesterday, but the number was less. I am writing this at 5 a.m., after prayer. I think the motions will be much fewer today. My work was not interrupted in any way. Yesterday I sat up for exactly ten and a half hours and finished all the work. This time there were a good number of other letters too. Of course eating has been stopped. The cause of diarrhoea seems to be jowar and bajra. I shall know it by and by. I have not decided how to resume eating. There is no cause at all for worry. I have informed you because I thought I must. At present I take lime juice with jaggery and soda bicarb. I will write again tomorrow.

BAPU

[PPS.]

There are 83 letters.

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U/I

2. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

12 Noon, Wednesday, January [7]† 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

You must have received the packet dispatched yesterday. Today I feel better. I started with diluted curds yesterday. Today I ate raisins and a little quantity, twice, of crushed, cooked almonds. These is no complaint about stools. That is, after 4 in the morning, I have felt no call. Don’t worry at all. Ba and Mirabehn must not worry. I will drop a postcard again tomorrow. I am able to do all my work.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U/I

† The source has “6”, but Wednesday was 7th.
3. LETTER TO KASHINATH TRIVEDI

YERAVDA MANDIR,

January 7, 1931

CHI. KASHINATH,

I have your letter. What you say about Shanta is correct. Kuhne baths cannot but benefit her.

I have written about Mother in my previous letters. Has she really given up the traditional notions of pollution? I have had no letter from Mama.

I have read Babu Bhagwandas’s article. He has suggested the first two remedies ironically to show their impossibility. He believes in the third one. I have thought much about the problem and written about it and suggested every remedy I could. I don’t think unity will be brought about through artificial means. If either we or they display pure love, the problem would be solved immediately. It is difficult to say definitely in what form such love will express itself. What you say about the Maulana Saheb is correct. There is no doubt about his patriotism. He said what he believed. Even if we think someone’s views to be erroneous, how can we blame him for holding those views? It is on such occasions that tolerance is required. Leva Patidars in Gujarat do observe the purdah. It is observed among other communities, too, in Kathiawar.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5271
4. LETTER TO KALAVATI TRIVEDI

January 7, 1931

CHI. KALAVATI,

Yes, purdah is observed here and there in Gu[jarat] too. After all Gu[jarat] is a part of India! Hiraben is in a pitiable plight. Teach the people of Ras to spin on the takli and make bamboo takli locally. I don’t understand about Samalbhai. Do write again. I shall enquire into the dispute. Keep yourself fit. Learn shirhasana or sarvangasana for your feet. Learn the method. Kashinath can read from the book available at the Ashram and write to you.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 5272

5. LETTER TO SHANTA

YERAVDA MANDIR,

January 7, 1931

CHI. SHANTA,

I have already sent you a letter.¹ What more can I say? You are being tested. Be brave.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 5273

6. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

Thursday, January 8, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

The news about my having had diarrhoea must not be published. I passed a little stool yesterday at four in the morning. After that, I passed stool again today at 10 o’clock. I have therefore, taken half a spoon of castor oil, and, after I have had a motion, I will take milk or curds, whichever I think will suit me. Or I may take something else which may be equally harmless. The body is quite fit.

¹ Vide “Letter to Shanta”, 1-1-1931.
The tongue is perfectly clean. There is no cause at all for anyone to worry. As I thought I ought to inform you about the attack, I wrote about it on Monday and will continue to write every day till I am completely all right so that you may all feel relieved.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./I

7. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

YERAVDA MANDIR,
January 8, 1931

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I have your letter. It is a good sign that there are some days in between when you don’t suffer from your usual complaint. You must have received my previous letter. I am very eager indeed that you should go over to the Ashram without delay. Why doesn’t Jayaprakash write to me? And what is the position about him now? Is it now fixed that he is joining that college? Is he waiting for any letter from Ghanshyamdasji?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3393
8. LETTER TO ANAND T. HINGORANI

Y. M.,
January 9, 1931

MY DEAR ANAND,

Your letter. Your reply to Jairamdas is correct. But now that Vidya’s people will not take back the money, the immediate problem is solved. Your idea to treat it as a gift to the nation is quite good. The right course now is so to shape and simplify your life that you will not henceforth have to fall back upon either father for pecuniary help. For the past you need not think of returning debt to the nation in coin but return it in kind, i.e., through your joint labour. And when you dedicate yourselves wholly to the nation you have repaid the debt. Is this clear?

There is no question of being physically near me whilst you are out. If you become a prisoner again, even then there is only a remote possibility. Your satisfaction must be derived from serving not me personally but what I stand for.

Love to both of you.

BAPU

From a microfilm. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

9. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

January 9, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

I think I am very well today. I am writing this after the midday meal. I had a normal motion. In the morning I took almond paste mixed with water and dates. Just now, I had fenugreek leaves, liquid curds and dates. The diet tomorrow, God will decide. There is no cause for worry. The weight is bound to go down after four days of fasting. It came to 96. If things go well tomorrow, I shall recover some of the lost weight during the next week. Tell Mirabehn that I got yesterday the card she posted on Tuesday. I got your packet only today.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U/I

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
10. LETTER TO VIDYA HINGORANI

January 9, 1931

CHI. VIDYA (HYDERABAD),

I have your letter. You have to improve your handwriting. You should practise with a printed book before you or you should learn from someone who can write Devanagari well. Do not be lazy in taking hip-baths.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Hindi. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

11. LETTER TO SHARDA C. SHAH

January 10, 1931

CHI. SHARDA,

If you get my letters late, is that my fault alone? Are you so busy that you have to write in the night and spoil your hand-writing? Why should you not stay there if it suits you?

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original : C.W. 9897. Courtesy: Shardabehn Chokhawala

12. LETTER TO ROHINI K. DESAI

January 10, 1931

CHI. ROHINI,

I got your letter. The handwriting was beautiful, but the letter was written in pencil. As far as possible, you should not write a letter in pencil. I have also understood that Kanajibhai will be released. When he is released, ask him whether the people outside have done him any harm that, having up chewing pan during his stay in the rest-house, he should resume the practice outside and deprive the poor of the money spent on it.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2656
13. LETTER TO KUSUM DESAI

January 10, 1931

CHI. KUSUM (SENIOR),

It pains me every time you fail to keep your resolution.

The books you have sent are not the ones which I meant. Pyarelal thought that you knew his books and that probably they were with you. Now don’t worry about the matter. The grammar which you have sent will be useful to him. The Gita is not required. We have a good many editions here. You will know about my health from the general letter. Pyarelal’s is good. You must have noted that I have had to give up eating jowar and bajra for the present.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1816

14. LETTER TO GOVIND PATEL

January 10, 1931

CHI. GOVIND,

I got your beautiful letter. The word is not dandvrat but dandavat and the phrase means respectful greetings offered by prostrating oneself straight like a stick on the ground. In the original phrase, dandavat is an adjective and the noun, *pranam*¹, is understood. But we have been using the word dandavat as a noun too.

Blessing from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3496

¹ Salutation
15. LETTER TO VANAMALA PARIKH

YERAVDA MANDIR,
January 10, 1931

CHI. VANAMALA,

If you do not know how to do oral sums in arithmetic, you should learn it. Can you tell me orally how much $2\frac{1}{2}$ lb. of ghee would cost if one maund costs Rs. 30?

Your handwriting is good, but you can make it better still.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5759

16. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

YERAVDA MANDIR,
January 10, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

This is the last postcard about health. Today I feel very good. I am writing this after the midday meal. The diet today has been the same as it was yesterday. For the evening meal yesterday I had almonds and dates, stirred in water. Today, too, I had curds for mid-day meal. I had a normal motion.

Durga should add potassium permanganate to enema water, enough to turn it into pink. Two or three crystals make the water pink. She should also swallow every day 30 grains of soda bicarb with water. If gas continues even after this, she should give up oranges for a day or two. If it becomes necessary to write to me about her health, you may write whenever you wish to.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U/I
17. LETTER TO GANGABEHN VAIDYA

January 10, 1931

CHI. GANGABEHN,

You should have no objection to drinking tea as a medicine. Bear the harmful effect which it may have. After all, one must learn to live with a delicate body. There would be pride or obstinacy in not taking tea even if it is necessary for one’s health. One must be humble and take it, as I take dates.

Shirshasana can certainly be done in the presence of others. Why should a woman mind doing so, since she will have tucked up her skirt!

Do not worry about me at all. It had become a religious duty to give up papaya. Giving it up has done me no harm. Friends can help each other best by practising self-denial in their own person.

Are there any quarrels among the women inmates of the Ashram? There was a hint about them in Kalavati’s letter. I would not be surprised if that is so. We have not become perfect. As we strive to become so, we shall stumble and fall and rise again.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 8769. Courtesy : Gangabehn Vaidya

18. LETTER TO ISHWARLAL JOSHI

January 10, 1931

CHI. ISHWARLAL,

I was eagerly awaiting a letter from you. I have met Jagannath. I was glad to learn that Premshankar is all right now. I hope you exer-cise the utmost care in all that you do.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 9288. Courtesy : Ishwarlal Joshi
19. LETTER TO MANIBEHN PATEL

YERAVDA MANDIR,

January 10, 1931

CHI. MANI (SARDARIJI),

I had guessed what you wrote about Harilal.¹ I think there was no harm if the facts had been published. For then perhaps Harilal would have come to his senses. Whether he does, or does not, the path we have to tread is straight. Everyone in the world is our kith and kin, or else everyone is a stranger.

There is a good improvement in your handwriting. Where will you stay now?

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—4 : Manibehn Patelne, p. 48

20. LETTER TO NIRMALA GANDHI

January 10, 1931

CHI. NIMU,

You just cannot leave Sumitra alone. It will suffice it you do whatever work of public service you can, keeping her with you. It should be enough for you that Ramdas has gone back to jail. I think all the requirements will be satisfied if you stay on in Vijapur. The atmosphere there is good for Sumitra and also you can do a lot of service from there.

If Sumitra’s nose continues to run, it probably means that she is troubled by cold. I understand what you mean by saying that a baby girl having been born is nothing but Hari-ichcha. She seems to be keeping well. As for my giving blessings to Sumitra, I will have to think. For the present . . .

¹ The source explains: “Harilal asked for an interview with the Sardar in Arthur Road Prison, but the Sardar refused to see him, as he was drunk and as the interview asked for appeared to have been arranged by the British Government of India for propaganda purposes. All the same, an account of the interview—that never took place—appeared in the Evening News of India and words were placed in the Sardar’s mouth which he had never uttered. The Sardar strongly resented this and his contradiction appeared in the papers the next day.”

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Mrs. Sumitra Kulkarni Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

21. LETTER TO HEMPRABHA DAS GUPTA

January 10, 1931

CHI. HEMPRABHA,

I have your two letters together. So far I have received no letter from Birla about khadi. What is the harm in his taking over charge of all the khadi stock at the Pratishthan? Let him sell at any price. I want to understand all this. Do everything with patience. It is for us to perform our duty, the result lies in God’s hands. I have no anxiety as you are already blessed with patience.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1681

22. LETTER TO GANGABEHN JHAVERI

YERAVDA MANDIR,
January 11, 1931

CHI. GANGABEHN (JHAVERI),

Your handwriting has improved considerably. See that you keep up the improvement. Regarding your work, follow your conscience. But first you should examine yourself and decide whether it is your conscience or your ego that speaks. Do not neglect your health and let it suffer again. You should feel no hesitation in eating what your health demands. No one will grudge your eating what is necessary for your health, and if anyone does you should not mind. Why should we care if we get no reward for doing our duty?

1 A few words here are illegible in the source.

No one at present can fully appreciate the value of the work which the women all over the country are doing. But the whole world is watching it.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 3110.

---

23. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

_January 11, 1931_

CHI. VASUMATI,

Whether a person should be particular about spinning even if he has not taken a vow to do so, should be left to his own inclination. No one rule applicable to all persons can be laid down.

You must have heard that the dream castle of _jowar-bajra_ which I had built lies shattered. I do not, therefore, write more about it here. If an opportunity occurs, I will try the experiment once again. But perhaps my stomach is no longer strong enough for such experiments. There is, however, no cause at all for worry. I have lost a little in weight, too. It is now 96. But I have resumed milk and curds and, therefore, I shall probably regain the weight lost.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : S.N. 9317
24. LETTER TO SUSHILA GANDHI

January 11, 1931

CHI. SUSHILA,

I have your letter. You did well in going round and meeting everyone. Surendra was not keeping good health; has it improved now? Since you don’t write anything about Sita, I believe that she is improving satisfactorily. Don’t be parsimonious in supplying her fruit. She must not become ill.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4782

25. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

YERAVDA MANDIR,

January 11, 1931

CHI. PREMA,

I got your letter. I could once say which verse in the Gita I liked most. It was the one beginning, “The impressions of senses, O son of Kunti.” Today I cannot be positive about it. Different verses appeal at different times according to the state of mind at the moment. I feel no interest now in deciding which I like most. The entire Gita is dear to me. She is the mother. If anyone asks a child which limb of its mother is dear to it, the question would be meaningless. That is how I feel in regard to the Gita.

It was quite cold here for two or three days. It is no longer so now. Probably that is because of the wall on the four sides. Of course both of us sleep in the open.

Cannot Kashinath teach Hindi because he has left the Ashram? Dharmakumar should be treated for his cough without delay. And Nayan too. I remember Kamalabehn. Send my blessings to her. I understand what you say about Dhiru.

I was glad that prayers were offered for Rolland. Even apart from his relation with me, his sincerity draws one towards him.
Try and cure the defect in your throat which persists. How are things with Sarojinidevi? Has Sheela got over her illness?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 10251

26. LETTER TO MAHALAKSHMI M. THAKKAR

January 11, 1931

CHI. MAHALAKSHMI,

I got your letter. Patience and single-minded devotion to the service one has undertaken cannot but yield good results. If you cultivate close contacts with drink addicts and share their joys and sorrows, their lives will be transformed. They themselves will then start working, each in his own circle.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 6810

27. LETTER TO RAOJIBHAI N. PATEL

YERAVDA MANDIR,

January 11, 1931

CHI. RAOJIBHAI,

I hope your asthma has completely left you now. Whenever it is possible, you should take a sun-bath. We should not feel concerned at the arrests of Dahibehn and Sharinabehn. I do feel a little worried about Dahibehn’s health, but I ask myself why we should worry when there is God to worry for us all and then I straight get back my peace of mind.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 8990
28. LETTER TO MAHAVIR GIRI

CHI. MAHAVIR,

Your inference, from your experience of carding on a carding-bow without the usual leather-strip at the end of the string, about the capacity of the string to bear the blows of the rod is correct. If we have overcome the fear of death, we shall have progressed very far. Write to me and tell me what facilities of boarding and lodging you have in Palanpur, who your companions are, and so on.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 6225

29. LETTER TO TEHMINA P. JOSHI

DEAR SISTER,

You seem to be very greedy. Where is the need to write long letters from here? You can write long ones. I can write long ones if I write about my speeches to the birds and the talks in silence with the stars. But how can I expose to the human race my lectures delivered to the birds? And my talks with the stars are after all secret. Hence I can write only short letters but must receive long ones from you. Perhaps they may not pass on to me the cutting carrying your speech. But don’t I know what you would say? I am glad you went to see the Ashram.

Blessings from

MOHANDAS

From a photostat of the Gujarati : S.N. 116
30. LETTER TO SUMANGAL PRAKASH

January 11, 1931

CHI. SUMANGAL PRAKASH,

I have your letter. It is difficult for me to remember what I wrote. Was the letter long? I do remember having said that you had done no wrong in going back home. I had answered all your questions. I hope you have now fully regained your health. What work are you doing there?

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Sumangal Prakash Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

31. LETTER TO CHANDRAKANTA

January 11, 1931

CHI. CHANDRAKANTA,

It is now 5 o’clock in the morning. It is all right that you wrote a long letter. I think it is your duty to go to your parents once for a fixed period. It will be better if you go there to improve your health or after you have recovered. It is necessary to take Ganga-behn’s permission. If there is much pending work there, it would be better to go after finishing it. That will also be the way to save Brother from further reproaches. Your going will appease your parents’ anger. After all, are they not Sumangal’s elders too? We should put up with our elders’ anger and even their hostility. As your manner and behaviour towards them increase in humility, they will gradually calm down.

As for your expenses, you should accept the money from them as long as they are willing and in a position to send it. But you should assure them and yourself that you can earn your expenses. You should now consider yourself a daughter of the Ashram. You may rest assured that you will be able to earn your livelihood even outside should such a necessity arise.

I know that you still have a craving for literary knowledge. You may increase it as and when you get opportunities for it. But do not think that those who have more of literary knowledge serve better. The capacity for service depends solely on selflessness and character. How much service Gangabehn renders! And what is her store of literary knowledge—or Mithubehn’s, or Laxmidas’s, or Imam Saheb’s? If you go over such examples from present and ancient times, you will at once see the truth of what I am saying. On the other hand, there are hundreds of highly educated persons in the country. They lack either the ability or the will to make sacrifices, and therefore they live useless lives, if they are not actually a burden on others. All this argument certainly does not mean that I am against that type of knowledge, or that there is nothing more for you to acquire. Do increase your fund of knowledge when you get an oppor-tunity. But consider the present as a time to gain experience, to serve, and therefore, while cherishing the desire to increase your knowledge, restrain it just now and cheerfully devote yourself to service.

It was natural that Mother’s grief made you feel unhappy and you cried. But we do wish to train ourselves to control such crying too. Mother’s grief sprang from ignorant attachment.

About your having been tempted to eat chillies it is not so much that you did something wrong, but that you weakened in your resolve and were therefore guilty of a lapse. We should never depart from our resolutions in matters big or small. But don’t worry. Forget the lapse and start again. No point now remains unanswered.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]
I have destroyed your letter to respect your wish. Pyarelal has not read it. But you must give up being so sensitive. Let the world know all about us, good or bad. I have no secrets from Pyarelal. How can I have any?

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: Chandrakanta Papers. Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library
32. LETTER TO BUDHABHAI

January 11, 1931

CHI. BUDHABHAI,

I received your letter. Your diet is all right. Be very careful how you behave towards Parvati. Never be alone with her and never allow impure feelings to come anywhere near you. Such feelings towards one whom you have accepted as a sister should be unthinkable. Be content with whatever she accepts of what you tell her with a detached mind.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: S.N. 33126

33. LETTER TO MIRABEHN

January 7/12, 1931

CHI. MIRA,

Though the Ashram post has not yet been received as it generally is, in order to avoid pressure on my time I commence the letters now. Here is the fourth verse:

“O Goddess Earth, with the ocean for thy garment, mountains for thy breasts, thou consort of Vishnu (Preserver), I bow to thee; forgive the touch of my feet.”

Bowing to the earth we learn or ought to learn to be humble even as the earth is humble. She supports the beings that tread upon her. She is therefore rightly the consort of Vishnu. This conception in my opinion does no violence to truth. On the contrary it is beautiful and is wholly consistent with the idea that God is everywhere. There is nothing inanimate for Him. We are of the earth earthy. If earth is not, we are not. I feel nearer God by feeling Him through the earth. In bowing to the earth, I at once realize my indebtedness to Him and if I am a worthy child of that Mother, I shall at once reduce myself to dust and rejoice in establishing kinship with not only the lowliest of human beings, but also with lowest forms of creation whose fate—reduction to dust—I have to share with them. And if considered as mere life without the earthy tabernacle, I regard myself as imperishable, the lowest form of creation is just as imperishable as my soul is.

This attack of diarrhoea is a positive blessing for me. It has caused no pain, meant no interruption of my work. And it has taught me lessons. I feel a greedy eater. The bajari and juwari are new foods for me. I should have taken them sparingly and omitted them occasionally. Even one bhakhari per day was evidently too much for me. But I did not do it. I thought I would make up for lost weight quickly. I know no such thing as full satisfaction of hunger no matter how much I eat, i.e., within my limitations. I always rise with an empty stomach. I therefore learn my mistake after the event. And then everything practically is tasty for me. I went to bajari and juwari for feeling tangibly akin to the fellow-prisoners. But for me these bhakharis had a definitely pleasant taste. In these mixed circumstanes to practise not only moderation but spare eating is a difficult performance. An occasional fast and at least once per month is a good thing it seems even for light weight people. But I seem to have will control over this crisis, if it can be so called. I am not interrupting the experiment altogether but shall modify it from time to time as may be found necessary. I took curds, as you know, yesterday. Feeling quite well at 11 o’clock I took finely powdered twice cooked almonds and soaked raisins. This is how matters stand today (Wednesday). This will be posted six days after. You will have further developments either through this letter or through the general letter. I give you these details to put you and others at ease. The knowledge that the slightest derangement in my health upsets you all causes me more anxiety than the derangement itself. Complete abandonment of dietetic experiment will be for me the worst evil. It is part of my search. But the evil is not in the experiment, the evil is in me. I have not learnt the art of taking food as medicine pure and simple. That means complete mastery over the palate. I am far from it still. I believe that if I acquire it, the giving up of milk will be an easy job. That it is not a healthy human being’s food I have not a shadow of a doubt. In health, I have lived without it for six years. Through my folly that health was under-mined. To undo the effect of that folly, instead of paying with my life for it, I went to milk always hoping to struggle out of it again. The struggle must continue. Every defeat humbles me, chastens me and opens up newer outlooks. The urge for struggle becomes intenser with defeat. The continuance gives one peace. Col. Steele the Civil Surgeon who comes to see me every fortnight and Major Martin came today. Their first remark was that I was looking exceptionally well. And this after practically three days’ fast! And they were right. I am not feeling any the worse for the ‘crisis’. Then and in any case be careful for nothing.

January 12, 1931

I take up the letter where I left it on 7th. I seem to feel quite all right. The bowels are again quite regular. My food is almond paste dissolved in water and dates in the morning, curds and dates at noon, dissolved almond paste and dates in the evening. Hot water lemon and salt 7.30 a.m. Cold water lemon and soda 1.30 p.m. If all goes well and the bowels become constipated, I may take vegetables. So again there is nothing further to report. I would warn you against publishing anything about these interrup tions in health, as they will be magnified by the public and there will be unnecessary alarm and unwarranted reflections against the Government. In this case, at any rate, no blame of any kind can be cast on them.

I have your letter and the postcard. Let us thank God that Rolland is quite out of the wood. The world needs him for many years yet. His work, so far as we can see, is not finished. Please send him my loving regards and say he must hold on for a while. Premabehn has described to me the prayer you had for his recovery. I do not know that these prayers add a single second to the life prayed for. But they elevate those who pray and comfort those for whom the prayers are offered. The comfort has the appearance of prolongation of life.

I finished the translation of the preface two days ago and have taken up nothing further. But I feel like taking up the original plan. I am likely to come to a decision tomorrow, after the Ashram post is finished.

Having taken up the news-sheet, you will give up the formal editor ship if it can be without any disturbance. Not to take up a service is wisdom, but it is folly to give it up afterwards unless it is found to be demonstrably immoral. Such is the general principle of ethics. Of the particular application you and those who are outside are the only judges. As to secrecy, there seems to be some confusion of thought as expressed by you. If a butcher asks me in which direction a cow is gone, I am in no way bound to disclose the information to him. I may not mislead him but nor may I lead him to where the cow is. Not only that, I may even hide away the cow. Indeed, it would be my duty to do so. From this instance one may shape one’s conduct in given circumstances.

Love.

BAPU

[PS.]

Your description of Totaramji’s love of gardening is enchanting. I wish some youngsters will learn the art from him. You should discuss this with Narandas.

From a copy: C.W. 5428. Courtesy: Mirabehn; also G. N. 9662

34. LETTER TO JAMNA N. GANDHI
January 12, 1931

CHI. JAMNA,

You are welcome to the Ashram, but see that you do not lose there what you have gained in Bombay. If you think that your health suffers in the Ashram, you should see no harm in staying in Bombay for education. Really speaking, we should know the art of adjusting our mode of living to any climate. If we do not know it, however, and if we can easily go and live where we can keep good health, it is best that we do so.

Blessings from

BAPU

From Gujarati: C.W. 846. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

35. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI
YERAVDA MANDIR,
January 12, 1931

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I got your last letter, but not the one which you wrote before that. I am making inquiries. If you think it necessary to live in the U.P., by all means do so. How was Brijkishorebabu’s health? What arrangements have been made about his meals? Give me a detailed report. Tell Swarupraniji that she should keep up courage. My blessings to Swarup and Krishna. Where is Jayaprakash at present?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3394
36. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

YERAVDA MANDIR,
January 12, 1931

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I am writing this letter though I have nothing special to write about. Probably you will get this letter at the Ashram. You must have received my previous postcards. I keep very good health.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 3410

37. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

YERAVDA MANDIR,
[January] 12, 1931

CHI. BRIJKRISHNA,

I have your postcard. I did not get your earlier letter. When were you released? Who else were released with you? How is your health? How is Dr. Ansari? What are you doing at present?

We are both well.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi : G.N. 2387

38. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

Monday Morning, January 12, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

This time I take up your letter last for replying. I have started writing after the evening prayer. You must have received the postcards I wrote including Saturday’s. After that, my health has remained all right. You will find details in my letter ¹ to Mirabehn. It contains something else, too, which will interest you. It is desirable that the news about my health should not spread outside.

1 The source has “12-12-1931” which appears to be a slip, for on that date Gandhiji was in Rome. From the reference to the addressee’s release from Gujarat Jail which, according to the addressee, took place some time during the last week of December 1930, it is clear that the letter was written in January.

Though Mahadev’s name was in your list, I believe that you carry the impression that there was a letter by Mahadev because Chandrashankar’s handwriting is very much like Mahadev’s. Was there really a letter by Mahadev in his own handwriting? If there was, what were its contents? Durga would certainly know. There has been no special letter about her health, so I believe that she is all right. You must have got the letter in which I made a suggestion about her. Champa recovered even the lost ring! All this seems a miracle. Perhaps this is how God protects the fools. Champa had said in her letter that they might all go to Rajkot for some time. She said that that was the advice she was given by Nanalal’s wife. If she wishes to go, I certainly like the idea. You must have thought about the matter independently and done what you thought proper, or you will do what you think proper. I don’t remember to have encouraged Parasram to hope that we might give him some help. If, however, his work is efficient and clean, I would certainly be tempted to help him. Before you do anything, consult Shankerlal and follow his advice. You can send to me the small box received from Polak. If it is of a kind which you think should be preserved carefully, keep it there or put it in the Gujarat Vidyapith museum. If you don’t think that necessary, you can send it to me through Trivedi. A lady from as far away as Canada had sent to me a bag containing about two pounds of salt. The authorities passed it on to me.

Take careful measures and help Kusum to get rid of her fever. Consult a doctor, if necessary. Chandrashankar has discovered a Punjabi vaid. He will probably give you some ordinary medicine. If you think it worth while, inquire about him.

Have a quiet talk with Bhagwanji and draw his attention to his shortcomings.

I let you off with this today.

Blessings from

BAPU

Two conclusions can be drawn from my experiment. Perhaps three. One of them is as good as proved. Two require to be tested further. Those who suffer from constipation should live for some days only on fenugreek leaves, tandalja, tanko and spinach. That is how I overcame my constipation. Pyarelal, too, seems to have overcome his. For the past four days he has been eating only fenugreek leaves. The jelly of almonds which I have described, besides being nourishing, is free from the defects of milk and so does not cause constipation. The rotlas of jowar and bajra seem to have a laxative effect on those who are not used to them. Ghee should not be taken during this experiment. All the vegetables should be merely boiled. But I cannot say that the experiment of jowar and bajra has proved successful. I do not think, either, that it has failed. If I have had to suspend it just now, it is in order that people there may not feel worried.¹

BAPU

There are 83 letters.

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U/I

39. LETTER TO VIYOGI HARI

January 13, 1931

Bhai Viyogi Hari,

I have your letters and the books. I did devote five to ten minutes. How shall I find more time? I remember our meeting.

Yours,

Mohandas

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1079

40. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

January 14, 1931

Chhi. Prabhavati,

I have your long letter. Since you have stayed on there of your own free will, what can I say? Personally, I don’t like your decision at ¹ For the text of the Gita discourse (Ch. X) which followed, vide “Letters on the Gita”, 21-2-1932.

all. There will always be something or the other in a home requiring one’s presence to attend to. I fear the longer you stay on there the greater will be the delay in your recovery. From what source did you arrange to get the money to pay your rent? Whenever you happen to be in such difficulties about money, you may write to the Ashram. My daughter is a daughter of the Ashram. You have, therefore, every right to request and get money from there.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3395

41. LETTER TO PREMLILA THACKERSEY

YERAVDA MANDIR,
January 14, 1931

DEAR SISTER,

I got the loving gift of dates sent by you. I have now a larger stock of them than I require. The quantity sent by Shri Jerajani is still not exhausted. May I request you to maintain an account of the dates which you send to me, as you do of the cotton? You may send them whenever I request you to do so. I shall require some more cotton in four days’ time. Kindly, therefore, send four pounds at your convenience.

Blessings from

MOHANDAS

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 4819. Courtesy: Premlila Thackersey

42. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL JOSHI

After Morning Prayers, January 15, 1931

CHI. CHHAGANLAL,

It is good that you sent me . . . ’s letter. He also may write to me direct. I agree with you that he should discuss the whole matter with Kakasaheb.

As far as I have been able to understand the situation, it seems to

1 The names have been omitted.

28 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
me that he should make . . . free. It is unlikely that she will marry again, but in her heart of hearts she will welcome her freedom. If even now she is leading an immoral life, . . . will not be able to reform her, just as he cannot reform any other woman like her. He should not mind what effect his action, right in itself, produces on society. He should get rid of the idea that she belongs to him. And if he sincerely repents having married a second time, he should regard . . . purely as a friend and live with her accordingly. But one cannot force oneself to act in such a manner. If he cannot live thus, he should humbly live with . . . as her husband, exercising as much self-control as he can. There are many other issues which arise from this, but I do not wish to discuss them here.

The criticism about camps in your letter is a painful story. Truth and non-violence have not yet found a place in the hearts of people. They are accepted only as policy. Hence, even public workers have not realized that truth and non-violence in social life depend upon their practice by individuals, that is, upon self-purification by them. The Ashram was established to demonstrate the truth of this idea through actual practice. Our duty is to go on serving, unaffected by the atmosphere round us no matter how polluted it is. This is true about women workers too. All of them should be as strong as Khurshedbehn, who will never fall in any atmosphere however evil it may be. It is true that we have not yet reached this level. We have got this golden opportunity of testing our strength. Maybe some of us, both men and women, will receive burns in this ordeal. Let that be so, if it cannot be helped. If on the whole our effort in the Ashram is sincere, God will protect us. The prayer-song of the turtle and his wife is worth meditating over in this connection.

The second part of your letter also is interesting. What can I say in reply? Work as hard as you can but not at the cost of your health. We ought to preserve good health, and not merely refrain from sacrificing the body unnecessarily.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5498

---

1 The names have been omitted.

2 ibid.
43. LETTER TO RAOJIBHAI N. PATEL

YERAVDA MANDIR,
January 15, 1931

CHI. RAOJIBHAI,

I have your letter. You should try to check a disease as soon as it makes its appearance. I hope you have consulted a nose specialist and taken proper treatment. I had read Father Elwin’s articles. I was glad to learn that Dahibechn and Sharinabehn had been arrested. I used to complain, too, against the . . .’ khadi in the Kheda district. I would be happy if the cause is removed now. I am sure the people of Kheda at any rate will continue their sacrifices.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 8991

44. LETTER TO MANIBEHN PATEL

YERAVDA MANDIR,
January 15, 1931

CHI. MANI,

I have your letter containing news about the Sardar. We know about Harilal. How long is Father likely to stay on for dental treatment? Even if it is infested with mosquitoes, it is desirable that this course of treatment should be completed. I believe that you too will stay on there during that period. We are both all right.

Blessings from
BAPU

PS.

How is Sumitra? Can Yashoda move about? Is Vithalbhai staying on there?

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—4 : Manibehn Patelne, p. 78

1 A word here is not legible in the source.
2 Arthur Road Prison
3 Bombay
4 Dr. Kanuga’s daughter
45. LETTER TO RADHAKRISHNA BAJAJ

YERAVDA MANDIR,
January 15, 1931

CHI. RADHAKRISHNA,

Tell Chhotelalji to write to me if he is permitted to write letters. Has he also been released under [Section] 160? Essential silk means that which is required for the borders in khadi or without which khadi itself cannot be sold. If the question of principle is settled, the rest can be done as suits the occasion.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi : G.N. 3037

46. LETTER TO R. V. MARTIN

YERAVDA CENTRAL PRISON,
January 16, 1931

DEAR MAJOR MARTIN¹.

With reference to your talk about interviews, I regret that I am unable to depart from the position I took up at the outset. It is the only position that I can take up. For years I have erased the distinction between blood relations and others. There are friends and inmates of the Ashram who are, if possible, more to me than blood relations, But I have endeavoured to appreciate the Government’s position and therefore submitted a list² of possible friends who should be permitted to visit me on the same terms as relations by blood and marriage. I have excluded from the list all noted political leaders. I offered too that if there was any specific name to which the Government had objection I should be informed. Further than that I could not go then and cannot now.

Yours etc.,
M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat : S.N. 19985

¹ Jail Superintendent, Yeravda Central Prison, Poona
² Vide “Letter to R.V.Martin”, 8-7-1930.
47. LETTER TO R. V. MARTIN

YERAVDA CENTRAL PRISON,

January 16, 1931

DEAR MAJOR MARTIN,

Babu Ramananda Chatterjee of The Modern Review has, as you know, written to me asking me to sign an appeal for a Golden Book of appreciations to be presented to the Poet Rabindranath Tagore on his forthcoming 71st birthday. The appeal is signed by Sir J. C. Bose, R. Rolland, and Einstein among others. I would like, if I may, to respond to the invitation. If you feel that you have no authority to give me the permission, will you please ascertain the Government’s wishes in the matter? I should like an early reply.¹

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat : S.N. 19986

48. LETTER TO KUSUM DESAI

January 16, 1931

CHI. KUSUM (SENIOR),

I have already written to you about the books. Don’t worry about my health on any account. It is certainly good. How old is Tara? I hope you write the diary regularly. It is my experience and of many others that doing so helps us to keep a watch over our truthfulness.

¹ The Golden Book of Tagore, 1931
² The permission was given on January 26, the day Gandhiji was released. The following notings, reproduced from Bombay Secret Abstracts, were recorded on this letter:
   “I see no reason why he should not be allowed to sign this appeal. There is nothing political about it. He and Tagore have been friends for many years. HOTSON/22.1.
   “May go U.O. to I.G. of Prison to issue the necessary orders. G.C/22.
   “The prisoner may be permitted to sign the appeal. E.E. DOYLE. 25-1-31.
   “The appeal has been handed over to the prisoner. R. V. MARTIN. 26-1-31.”
What is the position about Chandubhai’s hospital now? For what purpose is the rest of the building being used? Pyarelal is in fine health.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 1817

49. LETTER TO MATHURI KHARE

January 16, 1931

CHI. MATHURI,

I got your letter. So you did not like staying in a hut in Bochasan? Before the Ashram was built, we also lived in such huts.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : C.W. 259. Courtesy : Lakshmibehn Khare

50. LETTER TO PRABHUDAS GANDHI

After the morning prayer, January 16, 1931

CHI. PRABHUDAS,

You are fortunate to have Vallabhdas’s company. Without being impatient, do what you can with readily available means. Cultivate, the attitude of detachment even while doing such good work. It was a wise statement of Raychandbhai based on his own experience that one should cultivate equimindedness even in one’s striving for moksha. To say that I have been trying to invent a new model of spinning-wheel is an exaggeration, if not an untruth. I know my limitations fully well. I have no skill at all for inventing a new model of the spinning-wheel. What I am trying to do is to effect some improvements in the Gandiva model. But even in that, there is some element of imitation of the Jivanchakra model. Even so, the information you give me will help me in effecting even the modest improvement I am trying to bring about. I see some difficulty in adopting the ‘V’ shape pulley. The one I have, has a shape between that of ‘V’ and ‘U’. I have felt no neces-sity at all for a ball bearing. I therefore like its design. The takli will be a child’s play for you if you wish to try the experiment. But you may forget about it. The one object of your devoted effort is your spinning-wheel.
Rambhau’s foot must have got all right. Do not get tired of him. Be content with what he does. Keep reminding him of his duty and that too by mero hints. What ‘You’ or ‘I’ cannot do, ‘He’ will do. Who is this ‘He’? ‘He’ means ‘Time’ which has arisen to destroy the peoples’. Their destruction includes destruction of their bad habits, too. Good habits even Time cannot destroy, for they are sat. That which is sat, can never cease to exist. But let us leave alone such learned talk. In Rambhau’s case, forbearance is the only remedy. These forces are operative in everyone’s life—the tendencies acquired in one’s previous existence, the present environment and one’s own effort. The answer to your question why two persons of opposite characters are found born in the same family, is that we do not know all the good and bad qualities in the characters of Panditji and Lakshmibehn and their forbears, and therefore do not have sufficient material to base our decision on. We should not even wish to have such knowledge. We will have sufficient explanation if we accept the law of karma.

You are unnecessarily making yourself unhappy regarding Chandradutta. It is not incumbent on you to give up anything. If an ant aspires to kill an elephant, it is a form of pride. You were impelled by your nature to do some service to Chandradutta. He accepted from you what he could. You may write to him if you can do so gently but at the same time intelligently. Otherwise give up the thought of even writing to him. “What you have written to me is not proper. If it is proper God will make me see my error. It is not right for you to do what an unhealthy man like me does. But since you no longer have the loving faith in me, I cannot guide you. God will make somebody else the instrument of guiding you. Meanwhile you do what you think proper. God is looking after you and me. We are but perishable creatures.” Write to Chandradutta this or something to this effect and then stop thinking about him. If you have not followed what I have written, ask me to explain. Devdas’s interpretation of the verse ‘Tena Tyakten Bhunjithah’ can by analogy be applied to this case. ‘Renounce it and then enjoy it’. So, we can enjoy all this that belongs to God, can we? From the point of view of grammar, the meaning I have given to the verse will appeal to those whose knowledge is

1 The reference is to verse 32, Chapter XI of the Bhagavad Gita.
2 ‘That which is’; the reference is to verse 16, Chapter 11 of the Bhagavad Gita.
3 Part of the first verse of the Ishopanishad imperfect. After all we are concerned with the spirit of the verse, and that is observed by both readings of the verse.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: S.N. 32999

51. LETTER TO CHANDRAKANTA

Y. M.,

January 16, 1931

CHI. KANTA,

There is no cause for you to be scared. Man is shaped by difficulties. One need not therefore be scared of them. And if we do feel scared we should remember what the _Gita_ says. It teaches us to be equi-minded in happiness and suffering. We should not get elated by happiness and depressed by suffering. And what reason do you have to feel unhappy? It is all a matter of the mind. If a person who gets food to eat and water to drink and a place to live and sleep in feels unhappy it may be said that he does so only because he wishes to be unhappy. It is surprising that your cough still persists. Take only milk and papaya. Drink warm water with soda bicarb. Take deep breaths. Consult a doctor if necessary. You can engage yourself in service even there. He who spins and cards in the spirit of _yajna_ does serve.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: Chandrakanta Papers. Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library

52. LETTER TO MOOLCHAND AGRAWAL

YERAVDA MANDIR,

January 17, 1931

BHAI MOOLCHANDJI (CARE KASHIRAMJI),

I have an impression that I have answered your letter. Your question is not such as to warrant a reply from me. Rising early can become effortless by practice. In order to rise early one must go to bed early. Even the habit of evacuating the bowels immediately upon rising can be acquired by and by. During winter you can begin studies after taking some exercises. The primary thing is to acquire the habit of rising early. If we cannot be firm even in such a small matter, the capacity to carry an important job to its conclusion will be difficult, if not impossible, to achieve.

Yours,

MOHANDAS

From a photostat of the Hindi : G.N. 835

53. LETTER TO KALAVATI TRIVEDI

January 17, 1931

CHI. KALAVATI,

Your letter. Pay no heed to anyone’s criticism. Pay attention to what the chief says. Shamalbhai and Gangabehn do not wish to save you. Resolve this problem by talking it over with them. No father has the right to forcibly send away his daughter to her husband’s house.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi : G.N. 5275

54. LETTER TO RAMACHANDRA TRIVEDI

YERAVDA MANDIR,

January 17, 1931

CHI. RAMACHANDRA,

You are making great effort to write a good hand I like it. Similarly continue your effort to be good too.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi : G.N. 5276
55. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

January 17, 1931

CHI. VASUMATI,

It would be cowardice to run away to the Himalayas. Every page of the Gita teaches us to regard equally respect and disrespect. We should not feel hurt by anything that somebody may say about us. We should pay attention only to what our conscience tells us. But I know that you have merely poured out your heart. Since you continue to do your best, everything will be all right. Surendra’s help was certainly very valuable.

The work of educating children is of very great value. While giving them a knowledge of letters, we should also try to mould their ideas and behaviour. We should pay proper attention to their general habits too. We should examine their nails, ears, eyes, teeth, etc., and, if they are not clean, make the children wash them in the school itself. They should be quick in oral sums. We should also pay attention to children’s habit of using foul words among themselves.

I keep good health. Pyarelal is fine, too.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : S.N. 9318

56. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

YERAVDA MANDIR,

January 17, 1931

CHI. PREMA,

What courage I must have! Or love for Indian languages! Howsoever incorrect, was it not Marathi? But the time for writing to you in Marathi is not yet.

You have taken upon yourself a fairly difficult responsibility. Do not lose hope about Durga. If you continue to coax her, that very Durga will begin to take interest in reading.

You can get some general knowledge about plants from Totaramji. Shouldn’t the children be able to recognize the trees and plants growing in the Ashram, and should they not know how they grow and when they bear fruit and be able to tell their age? I of course cannot do this.

I would not have remembered the Sankranti Day, were it not a half-holiday here. I got the tilgul\(^1\) sent by you. They again reminded me of it. For us, one may say, every day is a Sankranti Day.

With Narandas’s permission, you can send to people any extracts from my letters which you wish to.

“Hero” means one worthy of reverence, a god, so to say. In the political field, Gokhale holds that place for me. The persons who have influenced my life as a whole in a general way are Tolstoy, Ruskin, Thoreau and Raychandbhai. Perhaps I should drop Thoreau from this list.

Great men seem to be the cause of revolutions in the world. In truth the people themselves are the cause. Revolutions do not take place by accident but obey laws as rigid as the law governing the motions of the planets. Only we do not know those laws and causes and, therefore, regard revolutions as accidents.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 10252; also Bapuna Patro—5: Ku. Premabehn Kantakne, pp. 40-1

57. LETTER TO KASHINATH TRIVEDI

January 17, 1931

CHI. KASHINATH.

I think the more important reasons for your decision to live outside the Ashram were your own wish to do so and the facilities which you would enjoy thereby. I too do not believe Narandas to be a perfect man. But I believe that his mistakes are unintentional, and that he makes fewer mistakes than others would. I, therefore, think that we should put up with his method of running the Ashram. You may take your own time to return to the Ashram, but if you really had no objection to showing your diary, you should show it even now, and ask to be admitted to the Ashram when you wish and are ready to go there. I have not been able to understand why the teaching of Hindi at the Ashram was discontinued. Did Narandas forbid it, or did you yourself stop teaching?

I am glad that your father has joined you. But you should continue to maintain a firm attitude. I have no doubt that, no matter

---

\(^1\) An offering prepared from sesame and jaggery how much he insists, you should prevent her from going. I, however, hope that in the present circumstances she will not wish to go. If that man decides to marry again, we need not object.

It seems that Mother’s health is improving. It will get even better if she observes the restrictions on diet, remains in the open air and takes other precautions.

I was satisfied with Kalavati’s answer. Just now at any rate she seems to be progressing.

I know Gadreji. I have carefully gone through the extract quoted by you. I felt that it showed more emotion than calm reflection. It attributes to me something that I have never held or said. I have never asserted that the Pandavas, Krishna and other characters are not historical persons. My view is that, though all of them might be historical persons, the Mahabharata is not a work of history in the modern sense of the term. Caesar, John, Henry, etc., were historical kings, but we know that Shakespeare’s plays named after them are not works of history. He used historical events and characters for his dramatic purpose in the plays. Further, I never thought or said that the Gita was composed for expounding non-violence. On the contrary, I have believed and have said, that at the time of the Gita, war was accepted as normal, though they believed in the dharma of non-violence. Nevertheless, I believe that the teaching of the Gita does not justify war, even if the author of the Gita had intended otherwise. I hold that physical warfare, armed warfare can never be non-violent. Those who perform animal sacrifice may, and do, say that belief in non-violence does not forbid such sacrifice. But whatever they say, animal sacrifice is a violence. And this also is true about armed warfare. To regard it as a necessity and not subject to the general rule, and then to regard it as sanctioned by religion is one thing, but it is quite another to say that it is non-violent. I feel that Gadreji’s article suffers from looseness and confusion of thought. Being a prisoner, I cannot make a public reply, but it is open to you to send my reply to Gadreji for his information.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 5283
58. LETTER TO VANAMALA PARIKH

YERAVDA MANDIR,
Saturday [January 17, 1931]

CHI. VANAMALA,

What an intelligent girl you are! A sum which would seem difficult to other children, you found quite easy. Here is another, a little more difficult, sum. If a girl spins 252 rounds in an hour, how many would she spin in twenty minutes?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 5760

59. LETTER TO MIRABEHN

January 14/18, 1931

CHI. MIRA,

Again I commence the Ashram letters with yours and that just after the morning prayer.

The 5th verse is: “May the Goddess Saraswati (of learning) the Destroyer completely of black ignorance, protect me, she who is white as the mogra flower, the moon and a garland of snow, who has worn white robes, whose hands are adorned with the beautiful bamboo of her veena (a kind of violin), who is seated on a white lotus and who is always adored by Brahma, Vishnu, Shiva and the other gods.”

January 18, 1931

To me the thought here is very beautiful. Learning of course means wisdom. The emphasis on threefold whiteness—that of snow, moon, flower—and the white dress and white seat is intended to show that uttermost purity is an indispensable part of wisdom or learning. As you explore the deeper meaning of these and kindred verses, you will find every virtue personified and made a living reality instead of a dead dictionary word. These imaginary gods are more real than the so-called real things we perceive with our five senses. When I recite this verse, for instance, I never think that I am addressing an imaginary

1 Vide letter to the addressee, “Letter to Vanamala Parikh”, 10-1-1931. This letter was presumably written on Saturday week.
2 Of Ashram Bhajanavali; vide “Ashram Bhajanavali”.

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
picture. The recitation is a mystical act. That when I analyse the act intellectually, I know that the goddess is an imaginary being, does not in any way affect the value of the recitation at prayer time. If all this is not clear to you, you must unhesitatingly tax me.

So you are to be travelling again. I can only say ‘do not over-do it, do not strain yourself endurance.’

I telegraphed about Surendra¹. He must have given up his fast. For me, I am quite right. I have not yet gone back to vegetables or bread. Almonds, dates and a little milk or curds and lemons seem to keep me perfectly fit. To be able to keep standing at the takli for nearly two hours is not a bad feat for me and I sit at the wheel for nearly two hours without any support to the back. Add to that nearly 45 minutes for carding and sliver making.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 5429. Courtesy: Mirabehn; also G.N. 9663

60. LETTER TO DURGA DESAI

5 a.m., January 18, 1931

CHI. DURGA.

I hope that your experiment of eating oranges is going on. I also suppose that you are taking enemas regularly. The belching must stop. If you suffer from headaches, you may apply mud packs to the head.

Tell Mahadev that I have not seen Hill’s translation of the Gita. I have written to Kaka and asked him to suggest any changes that he may wish to in Anasaktiyoga and ask me any question he may want in regard to it. I shall be glad if he does. I send to Mirabehn the translation of one bhajan every week. If it is decided in future to publish them, Mahadev will certainly see them. Even otherwise, you may get the translations from Mirabehn. I have got with me translations of all bhajans except the Bengali ones. It would be a fine thing if Devdas turns out a Sanskrit scholar. It would be good if he improves his Urdu too. If Mahadev has not read what Mathuradas has written on the carding-bow, he should do so. It is necessary to make this science as exact, and introduce as much art in it, as possible. My love for the spinning-wheel increases as I take more and more interest in it. The spinning-wheel means all the processes through which cotton passes. God is no doubt the sole help of the poor, but the spinning-wheel is His hands and feet, and, the poor man or woman who holds it holds God. We may not be able to live on simple fare as the poor do, but we ought to ply the spinning-wheel for their sake. And to ply the spinning-wheel means to examine its infinite capacity and reveal it to the world. This is a study of no ordinary value. And to pursue it means to live the teaching of the Gita. I need not say all this to Mahadev, but, at this hour of prayer, these deeper sentiments of my heart come out spontaneously as I think of him. Perhaps I would not be able to express them before others in the same manner.

¹ Who taught Hindi to Mirabehn

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : S.N. 16901

61. LETTER TO SHIVABHAI PATEL

January 18, 1931

CHI. SHIVABHAI,

I have your letter. I understand the situation in which you are placed. If you only remain firm in your vow about the struggle, many of your problems will be solved. I don’t remember having written anything special to you in reply to your letter about jail life.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : S.N. 9504

62. LETTER TO JAMNA N. GANDHI

January 18, 1931

CHI. JAMNA,

I don’t at all remember having received a letter from you about Dharmadas and Kalyandas. If I had received any, I would have replied to it.

If you don’t keep good health in the Ashram, I should certainly like you to go to Bombay and adopt the diet I have suggested.
Tell Kusum that she should not be impatient to start eating solid food. One can live on fruits and milk for the whole of one’s life. She must fully regain her health. There is nothing wrong with my health.

Blessings from

BAPU

From Gujarati: C.W. 847. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

63. LETTER TO FULCHAND K. SHAH

YERAVDA MANDIR,
January 18, 1931

Bhai Fulchand,

I was eagerly waiting for a letter from you. I know your enthusiasm. I need not say anything from here whether or not picketing would be proper. It will be enough, so far as I am concerned, if people do not swerve from the path of truth and non-violence even for the sovereignty of the three worlds.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 2865. Courtesy: Shardabehn Shah

64. LETTER TO GANGABEHN VAIYA

January 18, 1931

Chi. Gangabehn,

When children grow up, they become our friends. One can only advise a friend. He may then do what he thinks best, and one should not mind if he does so. Moreover, we hold all human beings in equal regard; how, then, can we be pleased with some and offended with some others? You should not, therefore, feel hurt about Kaku in any way.

Take care of your feet. You should keep them in warm water for a long time and then apply kokum oil. That will be enough.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 8770. Courtesy: Gangabehn Vaidya
65. LETTER TO JANAKIBEHN BAJAJ

January 18, 1931

CHI. JANAKIBEHN,

Shouldn’t I say that you have done me a favour by writing to me after many days? The task in Calcutta is a difficult one, but not so for you. Ghanshyamdasji is making a good contribution through his work.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Panchve Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, p. 73

66. LETTER TO SHARDA C. SHAH

January 18, 1931

CHI. SHARDA,

If your health remains good in Ras, I would like you to stay there for the present.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C.W. 9898. Courtesy: Shardabehn Chokhawala

67. LETTER TO RANI VIDYAVATI

January 18, 1931

CHI. VIDYAVATI (LUCKNOW JAIL),

I was very happy to have your letter and more so to learn that Laxmi Devi is also there. When next you have the opportunity to write, let me know your routine there. Jang Bahadur is also showing courage. What food do you get? Blessings to all sisters. I am well.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Hindi original: Rani Vidyavati Papers. Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library
8 p.m., January 14/19, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS.

I got the post today at 8 in the morning. I found on the cover stamps worth eleven annas. On the packet, the stamps used to be three annas worth. I don’t feel, however, that paying the extra eight annas every time will be an extravagance. This time at any rate I didn’t feel that it was so, for your letter contained news of Surendra’s fast and I could send a wire to you to persuade him to give it up. These days the officials here are careful about the post received from and addressed to the Ashram. At both ends, therefore, we are likely to receive it regularly.

Inform Surendra. Show this to Nathji or write to him. I see ignorance and impatience in Surendra’s step. The ignorance is on two counts. There is ignorance in the belief that, when imprisoned, one is prevented from doing work of service and, secondly, in the belief that one does service by giving up one’s life in this manner. The duty of everyone in Surendra’s circumstances is to preserve his body carefully and use it for service. In jail one can spin and weave and do many other kinds of productive work. Upright conduct will have its effect on the masses. That is also part of service. I see cowardice and lack of understanding in ending one’s life by fasting. Surendra’s motive is noble, but the goodness of the motive does not by itself condone the intrinsic badness of an action. Considered from every point of view, therefore, Surendra’s action in embarking on a fast was blameworthy. Obtain Nathji’s opinion and let me know what he thinks. If Surendra has anything to say in defence of his action, let him. I don’t wish to suggest that one may not give up one’s life in any circumstances. All that I mean is that Surendra’s circumstances are not such as will justify his doing so.

Madhavji has decided to follow my example in experimenting with jowar and bajra. Dissuade him from doing so. For one thing, my experiment, cannot be considered to have succeeded. Even if it is so considered, an experiment of this kind should not be imitated too hastily. Milk and dates have agreed with him, and let him cling to them. I may say that I have earned the right to make experiments and play with my body after many years’ practice till it has become accustomed to such experiments. This can be said about few others. Moreover, this is not the time for such experiments.

Let us not shed tears over your not having received my postcards regularly. After all, am I not a prisoner? What facilities are given should be accepted as a kindness. I have no complaint to make about my health now. At present my diet consists of dates, almonds, curds and lime juice. I am watching the effects of these. I do not take more than ten tolas of curds, whether in liquid or semi-liquid form. I take them only once. I don’t think I can digest more just now. The total number of almonds at two meals comes to forty, and that of dates, at three meals, to seventy. I will not increase the number for some time. Perhaps I may reduce it. I am proceeding cautiously. This quantity of food contains plenty of energy. It is yet six days before this letter will be posted. If I make any changes during this period, I will write about them. There is not the slightest cause for worry. The almonds are first soaked in water and peeled, they are then roasted and crushed into a jelly. I follow this method in order to save time. The other method of crushing the almonds without roasting them and then boiling the paste in water is of course an excellent one.

We should realize that we can never do our yajna work too methodically. The vigilance which we exercise in such work will keep us vigilant in all other matters, provided of course we are sincere at heart.

If even now Keshu calms down and devotes himself to work, I will not believe that he has wasted his time so far. You took a very good step indeed.

Tell Devdas that I agree with what he says. I would be ashamed to be released on the ground of illness. I would rather prefer to take milk and curds and preserve my health. That is actually what I am doing. The primary aim of my experiment is to keep up my health here by exercising self-restraint. The experiment was started entirely for the sake of health, but, since it also satisfied my conscience, a spiritual motive has entered it.

Do what is necessary to settle the affair of Nanibehn and Budhabhai. When you think it necessary that I should write to anyone in the matter, let me know.

Tell Sarja that I regard her as very fortunate. She should now pick up great courage and go forth and make good use of every moment of her time.

Mathew should not be permitted to use the name of the Ashram for working outside. In any case he cannot be paid money for doing so. If he can, he may do some teaching work in the Ashram or the Vidyapith. But shouldn’t he first acquire sufficient proficiency in spinning, carding, etc., and obtain a certificate? And in Hindi, too? Till he has done this, he cannot be entrusted with responsibility for outside work. I will write to him also to this effect.

I suppose Mirabehn’s paper has closed down completely. Did she issue any statement or let the public merely guess as much? What about the money received from people? Who was, or is, in charge of the financial affairs?

Be firm in dealing with Sarojinidevi. If Padma herself wants to leave, I think it would be best to let her go. You should tell her plainly that if, after leaving once, she wants to return, you will have to consider then whether to re-admit her. If the mother or the daughter or both leave, they should understand just now that they will be leaving for ever.

Ask Devdas to send my compliments to Lala Hansraj and tell him that every thread which he spins brings swaraj nearer. I hope that he will excel me in speed.

Night, January 18, 1931

Read my letter to Sarojinidevi. If she has calmed down and if you fear that she will be upset again by my letter, do not give it to her. There was a complaint in one of the letters (I forget whose) that the children have again started playing mischief among themselves and making noise at prayer meetings. Please look into the matter if there is any substance in this complaint.

Night, January 19, 1931

Prabhavati’s husband has gone to Delhi and may, therefore, send for some inmate of the Ashram. If he does so, send someone immediately to bring her to the Ashram. If she recovers, we shall have earned the merit of saving a cow from the slaughter-house. My health has remained very good. I continue the same diet and in the same quantity.

Blessings from

BAPU

For the text of the Gita discourse (Ch. XI) which followed, vide “Letters on the Gita”, 21-2-1932.
69. LETTER TO E. E. DOYLE

January 19, 1931

DEAR MAJOR DOYLE,

Sjt. A. Patwardhan is an old associate of mine in political, educational, social and religious work. He is at present in R. prison. I read in the papers that he is fasting because he is not permitted to spin during leisure hours. I hope the report is not true. The prohibition is unthinkable when A and B class prisoners are permitted. I may say that with many of us the duty of spinning comes before the pleasure of eating. Will you be so good as to let me know whether there is any truth in the report? I am sure you will appreciate my anxiety.¹

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

¹ The Inspector-General of Prisons replied the same day:
“The report is perfectly true. The privilege of spinning has not been extended to C class prisoners—as it would be impossible, for administrative reasons, to have charkhas, taklis and cotton all over the prison.”

“If any C class prisoner can show special reasons why this privilege should be extended in his case, I am sure his request will receive sympathetic consideration.

“The case of the prisoner in point is now before Government for orders.”

S. P. Patwardhan, popularly known as Appasaheb Patwardhan, was later allowed to spin; vide “Letter to E. E. Doyle”, 20-1-1931.

70. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

January 19, 1931

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I have all your letters. I get them fairly regularly. I understand that I should wait for a wire from you. But I don’t understand now the reasons about home affairs which you give. What help can a person who is almost bed-ridden give? And even if she can give any help, others should not let her give it. But I understand your argument. Since I have not lived in a home of mine for many years, I have lost the faculty of understanding the problems of a home. I very much hope there will be no unexpected difficulty on the 24th. My health is very good.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 3404

71. LETTER TO GANGABEHN VAIDYA

YERAVDA MANDIR,

Tuesday [On or before January 20, 1931]

CHI. GANGABEHN (SENIOR).

I do not know where you are. I am sure your agitation must have subsided now. The central teaching of the Gita is that we should preserve peace of mind and be happy in all conditions of life. The first verse of the morning prayer, too, speaks of sat-chit-sukh. Till we have attained that state, all else in us is imperfect. We should be indifferent to honour and insult. We should, therefore, do, to the best of our ability, the task that has fallen to our lot.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati : C.W. 8772. Courtesy : Gangabehn Vaidya

---

1 Gandhiji was released from Yeravda Prison on January 26, 1931.
I have gone through the pages of your book in the form of proofs. You have presented some good statistics in the book. The information given about mills is more than that of handlooms.

After reading it, I feel that “How to compete with Foreign Cloth” will be more appropriate as its name.

You have not referred very minutely to the importance of hand-spinning in the achievement of boycott of foreign cloth. If you are convinced that hand-spinning is the master key, you ought to present that fact clearly. It is my growing conviction that a permanent boycott of foreign cloth is impossible without hand-spinning, and without hand-spinning, it is difficult for hand-weaving to exist. If you agree with this opinion, you must make this very clear. In spite of my partiality for hand-spinning I do not agree with the contention of Mr. Talcherkar that machine-spun yarn is weaker than hand-spun yarn. I consider this claim of superiority of hand-spun yarn unfounded and it is unproved by experience. But what does it matter? The machine-made bread, in spite of its being more round, smooth and attractive than hand-made bread, will always be considered unacceptable when compared to the hand-made bread.

I visualise some difficulty in sending back your letter. You are at one with me in regard to hand-spinning. Therefore, what more can I wish? Make this point as clear as you can.

Mills and handlooms are mutually antagonistic. Mills do have a place the national economy of India will surely continue for many years to come, perhaps they may live for ever. My contention is that those who understand should not argue that they are mutually helpful. Mills are independent. They do get help from Swadeshi movement, and they should get it, but in saying that both handlooms and mills deserve help, the handlooms get less help.

The import of artificial silk deserve to be objected to at all times.

I personally believe that we can take necessary raw cotton from other countries, but at the moment, I would not bother about elaborating on this matter.

What you have suggested for protection to hand-weaving is quite proper. Regarding the name of the book, I still feel that what I have suggested will be better. But you may keep whatever name you like.¹

MOHANDAS GANDHI

From a copy: S.N. 33159

73. LETTER TO E. E. DOYLE

January 20, 1931

DEAR MAJOR DOYLE,

I thank you for your prompt reply. The Times of India’s latest report says that Sjt. Appasaheb Patwardhan commenced his fast on 10th instant. I know that he has not superfluous flesh on him and it is a matter of great anxiety to me to feel that he may be still fasting. Could you please ascertain how he is doing and let me know also whether permission has been granted him to spin.

Your reply raises what is to me a very big question. You call the labour of spinning a privilege. But to all who spin for sacrifice it is a sacred And why is it impossible for administrative reasons to have instruments of this labour all over the prison if it is not impossible to have instruments of labour? In 1922 all the prisoners who wished were allowed to spin in this prison and their work was used for the prison as may be done again. The wheels too were made in the prison. I am not idly raising this question of spinning. It is, as you as well as the Government are aware, a matter of vital importance for me and some of my associates. It goes politics and economics. With some of us life would not worth living if we could not serve God through this little labour. Evidently C class prisoners who have been spinning in Sabarmati, Nasik and perhaps other prisons have been doing so without authority and with the unwarranted connivance of the local officials. But such a sacred duty cannot be performed in a precarious manner under connivance. Either the Government should recognize the right of prisoners to spin even as they recognize their right to pray and eat and perform the other necessary functions although their performance may, as it does, cause inconvenience or they should say they are not prepared to recognize this right in which case in justice it should be withdrawn from all classes of prisoners. In reality the discrimination in such a matter between A class and B class prisoners on the one hand and C class on the other shows clearly the absurdity and the injustice of the classification of prisoners. And I feel myself with all the conveniences given to me regarding spinning to be a much pampered and privileged prisoner. I have no desire to enjoy a single privilege that any other prisoner may not for similar reasons enjoy. I would ask you please therefore to treat this matter of sacrificial spinning as one of urgency. I am sorry again to put you and the Government to trouble but you and they will appreciate my position.¹

¹ A note by M.P. Gandhi, the writer, reads: “The necessary alterations were made in the book in the light of Bapu’s comments and certain paragraphs were elaborated as suggested by Bapu.”

Yours sincerely,

From a photostat S.N. 19988

74. LETTER TO MANMOHANDAS GANDHI

YERAVDA MANDIR,
January 20, 1931

BHAISHRI MANMOHANDAS,

I foresee a difficulty in returning your letter.

1. Since you agree with me about the importance of hand-spinning, please make it as clear as you can what more you expect from me.

2. The interests of the mill and handloom industries are mutually opposed. There is certainly a place for the mill industry. It will have a place for many more years to come, perhaps for ever. My position is that those who understand the problem should not argue that the two industries are complementary to each other. The mills require no support. The swadeshi movement itself helps them, cannot but help them. If we plead, however, that both require help, the handloom industry will receive less help. Perhaps I am not able to explain my meaning clearly. Even if we do not plead for the mill industry, it does receive help. If we plead for it, we may possibly harm it and will certainly harm the other.

¹ To this Doyle replied the next day: “Provisional sanction has already been accorded to S. P. Patwardhan to spin, pending receipt of Government orders. To enable me to understand your point of view on the subject of spinning—I shall be glad if you will explain what exactly you mean by the term ‘sacrificial spinning’. Vide also “Letter to E. E. Doyle”, 22-1-1931.

3. The manufacture of artificial silk should always be opposed.

4. Personally, I believe that we can import the required cotton. But I would not bother to explain this just now.

5. The measures which you suggest for protecting the handloom industry seem quite all right.

The title which you have suggested does not appeal to me. I prefer the title which I have suggested. You may, however, give whichever you like.

I keep good health. I don’t eat fresh fruits these days.

Vandemataram from Mohandas

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9

75. LETTER TO PREMLILA THACKERSEY

January 20, 1931

DEAR SISTER,

You must have received my last postcard in which I had acknowledged receipt of the dates and requested you to send cotton. I got the tin box of cotton on Sunday. It contained 13/4 pounds. That will last ten days. At present I require exactly four pounds every month. Please, therefore, send the balance before the end of this week. You need not put the cotton in a tin box. It will be enough if you pack it in paper which has not been used. Here I store the cotton in a bag.

Blessings from

Mohandas

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 4820. Courtesy: Premlila Thackersey
76. LETTER TO E. E. DOYLE

YERAVDA CENTRAL PRISON,
January 22, 1931

DEAR MAJOR DOYLE,

I thank you for your prompt reply. Will you please tell me how my friend is doing?

With reference to your inquiry, sacrificial spinning means spinning in the name of God for the sake of the poor without any expectation of personal gain. I suggest that all those who wish to do sacrificial spinning should have permission to do so. Two more cases of fasting have occurred for prohibition to spin. Both the men are connected with the Ashram. They have observed the rule of spinning for some years. I would therefore ask you, if you can, to issue provisional instructions in such cases.

Yours,

M. K. G.

From a photostat: S.N. 19989

77. LETTER TO SHARDA G. SHAH

January 22, 1931

CHI. SHARDA.

Since you like to stay there rather than at your home, do stay there and get rid of your ailment.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C.W. 9899. Courtesy: Shardabehn Chokhawala

78. LETTER TO NIRMALA DESAI

January 22, 1931

CHI. NIRMALA,

The correct word is anasakti and not anashakti. Shakti means strength. Asakti means desire, ignorant attachment. Anasakti means . . . 1 absence of such attachment. . . . 2 Do you understand the Anasaktiyoga?

You should keep a diary and write your thoughts in it. If we do so, we are able to keep a watch over our minds. That makes us good. Today . . . 3 after many years . . . 4 can.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9458

79. LETTER TO KUNVARJI MEHTA

January 22, 1931

BHAI KUNVARJI,

It seems doctors have let you off quite soon. Before you get this letter, you will probably be on your feet. But see that you are not overhasty and, in consequence, become bed-ridden again. My blessings to Shivlal.

Tell Abbas Saheb that the hospital seems to have done him much good, and that, having come out of it a young man again, he is bound to do something striking. I keep good health.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2692

1 The original appears to have been damaged at these places.
2 ibid.
3 ibid.
4 ibid.
80. LETTER TO JAMNA N. GANDHI

January 22, 1931

CHI. JAMNA,

I advise you to put yourself under the treatment of the Punjabi vaid who had treated Chandrashankar. Chandrashankar says that he practises in a spirit of service. You and Kusum ought to get strong.

Blessings from

BAPU

From Gujarati: C.W. 848. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

81. LETTER TO MANIBEHN PATEL

YERAVDA MANDIR,

January 22, 1931

CHI. MANI,

I have your beautiful long letter. Do I have to send back an equally long reply? My travels are from one end to the other of the compound. There is no guard or anybody else here to quarrel with. The sky is the ceiling of my train. If I were to attempt a description of its innumerable stars, I would fail. And the stars I see, you too see them. So I have nothing to write about. I too understand that you will remain outside prison for only a few days. For at present jail is our real home.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—4: Manibehn Patelne, pp. 78-9
82. LETTER TO KRISHNAMAIYA GIRI

January 22, 1931

CHI. KRISHNAMAIYADEVI,

What has happened to you? How did you fall from the terrace? Give me full details. Get well.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 6232

83. LETTER TO KALAVATI TRIVEDI

January 23, 1931

CHI. KALAVATI,

Be patient with people. The lethargic will become industrious by observing your scrupulous diligence. We become forgetful by thinking about too many things. Therefore we must concentrate only on the task on hand and nothing else. The memory is thus sharpened.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

You are now entering the seventeenth year. Keep growing in character as well as in age.

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 5278

84. LETTER TO KASHINATH TRIVEDI

YERAVDA MANDIR,

January 23, 1931

CHI. KASHINATH,

I got your letter. You should lovingly bear Father’s anger. If Shanta herself cannot show firmness, I don’t think it will be possible to protect her. The self is its own friend or enemy. About that matter of child-marriage, you may try to do what you can and should then stop worrying about it. We cannot fight every wrong. Solving the

1 Widow of Dal Bahadur Giri
then stop worrying about it. We cannot fight every wrong. Solving the problems of family and social life is not unconnected with the struggle for swaraj. A reform effected in any field takes us a step nearer to swaraj.

As regards the oppression in the Badvani State, you may make due representation to the Kathiawar Political Agent and try to rouse public opinion against it, and then leave the matter. You may carry on such public agitation about it as you can. The remedy for every evil is self-purification. If there is but one self in all, you should have faith that self-purification contributes to the welfare of the entire world. And through it we, too, immediately know our duty in particular circumstances. Self-purification is tapas. Think over what Tulsidasji says in “Bal Kand” in praise of tapas and its power.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5277

85. LETTER TO MATHURADAS PURUSHOTTAM

5 a.m., January 24, 1931

CHI. MATHURADAS,

I heard about your request for permission to leave the Ashram. If you have made the request so that you may cultivate greater purity outside, what you have done is all right. But if you have asked for permission to leave the Ashram in despair, thinking that, since you have committed an error once, you are certain to commit more errors in future, then your action is wrong. No one in the world is totally free from shortcomings. We have come together in the Ashram not because we are perfect, but in order that we may know our shortcomings and overcome them. We should not feel unhappy if on some occasion we commit an error. We should feel unhappy only if in committing it we had willingly yielded to a weakness in us or had not been vigilant enough, if we had not struggled, or not sincerely enough, to overcome it. You should never lose heart.

Think over this letter and do what you think proper.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3752
86. LETTER TO CHANDRAKANTA

January 24, 1931

CHI. KANTA,

It would be proper to go to Kashi only when Gangabehn and Narandas permit. Has your cough stopped? Have I not advised you to take deep breaths in open air on an empty stomach? You should drink warm water with five grains of salt and five grains of soda bicarb. The salt must be clean. The water should be quite warm. You and other women should be able to go to Kashi or anywhere else as freely as men. If you feel confident, I see no objection to your going. But do as Narandas says. I for one would not like the expense of a special escort. It is another matter that you may find a fellow-traveller. Does not Mani-behn go alone wherever she wants?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: Chandrakanta Papers. Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library

87. LETTER TO SUMANGAL PRAKASH

January 24, 1931

CHI. SUMANGAL PRAKASH,

I see nothing wrong in your having had to go home because of illness.

I have not read Kropotkin’s book. My views concerning India are well known. In a general way on economics I liked Ruskin’s Unto This Last. Write to me and tell me about your present activities and whether you have fully recovered.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Sumangal Prakash Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

1 Prince Kropotkin (1842-1921), Russian anarchist; presumably the reference is to the book The Conquest of Bread
88. LETTER TO MANGALA S. PATEL

YERAVDA MANDIR,
January 24, 1931

CHI. MANGALA,

Had you gone to Baroda to while away the time? What did you do there? Let me know what time you got up in the morning, etc. Your handwriting is passable. You must still further improve it. Kamala is now at Ahmedabad. When you meet her, ask her if she has received your letter.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

This slip is torn from your letter. If you tear a sheet, you must tear it straight.

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 11092. Courtesy: Pushpa Naik

89. LETTER TO MIRABEHN

January 21/25, 1931

CHI. MIRA,

It is again Wednesday morning after prayer. If I am fortunate like last week, I may get the post about 8 a.m. today. But it gives me pleasure to copy out the verses (this time they will be two) for you before I commence the weekly batch of letters. Here then are 6th and 7th verses¹ with the notes made at the time:

6. “O God with a curved mouth and big body, refulgent like ten million suns, keep me ever free from harm whilst doing beneficent acts.”

NOTE. This is addressed to God represented by the mystic letter pronounced ‘Om’; mark its curved mouth and big body. Its mystic splendour has been sung by the Upanishads.

7. “Guru (teacher) is Brahma, he is Vishnu, he is Mahadev, he is the great Brahman itself. I bow to that guru.”

¹ Of Ashram Bhajanavali,
NOTE. This refers of course to the spiritual teacher. This is not a mechanical or artificial relationship. The teacher is not all this in reality, but he is all that to the disciple who finds his full satisfaction in him and imputes perfection to him who gave him a living faith in a living God. Such a guru is a rarity at least nowadays. The best thing therefore is to think of God Himself as one’s Guru or await the Light in faith.

No further comment beyond the notes seems necessary.

The decision as to further translation is made. For my own satisfaction, must embark upon the translation. Any short cut will be longer in the end. There will be no stopping after making the commencement. I seem, therefore, to be dreading the commencement whilst the present pressure continues. The dread is more mental than real. But mind supersedes reality.

I see you are already in Sind. I hope the Sind cold has not worried you. It can be as cold as the Punjab in Sind. You must have met Jamshed Mehta—a noble type of man. He is by himself an institution. And I expect to hear from you about Kikibehn, Gangabehn and Mrs. Malkani and Mrs. Jeramdas, and of course Anand and Vidya.

January 25, 1931

I have your letter from Sind. The rendering of the 2nd chapter is excellent. There are two correction I would suggest. Instead of ‘notion’, I should have ‘weakness’ at page 1 and at page 7 instead of ‘followers of Vedas’ I should have ‘the Vedic literalists’. The second correction is vital, not so the first. The followers of the Gita are also followers of the Vedas. But these follow the spirit. The literalists, as the very name implies, follow the letter. I do not know whether I was to return the notes you have sent. I shall not re-read your letter, but am preserving the notes till I hear further from you. They are no longer required for immediate publication, though this one is good enough any day for publication subject to the vital correction.

What you say about rebirth is sound. It is nature’s kindness that we do not remember past births. Where is the good, either, of knowing in detail the numberless births we have gone through? Life would be a burden if we carried such a tremendous load of memories. A wise man deliberately forgets many things even as a lawyer forgets the cases and their details as soon as they are disposed of. Yes, ‘Death is but a sleep and a forgetting.’

My health is quite good. Energy sometimes astonishes me. I fancy that could not negotiate two hours’ continuous standing at the takli whilst I was at the Ashram. I was weighed on Thursday and I was 98 lb., a gain of $2\frac{1}{2}$ lb. in one week. It is an achievement. I am, have been for the past five days on vegetables, brown bread, almonds (paste), dates and sour limes. Dates I take principally in the morning. Brown bread is well toasted. I have not felt the need of milk or curds; if I did, I should take either. You will thus see that there is no cause what-soever for anxiety. It may be that I may need a does of milk or curds periodically. If I do, I shall take it as I may take medicine.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 5430. Courtesy: Mirabehn; also G.N. 9664

90. LETTER TO ANAND T. HINGORANI

January 25, 1931

MY DEAR ANAND,

Why did you fall ill? You should make your mind and body disease-proof. I am glad you came in such close touch with Mirabehn. I expect to hear all about your experiences. I hope the illness has now entirely left you.

Love to you both.

BAPU

From a microfilm. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

91. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

January 25, 1931

CHI. VASUMATI,

What has happened is for the best. It is only thus that we shall be really tested. Even if somebody assaults us, we should wish well of him and serve him. I am perfectly all right. I have hardly taken two pounds of milk and curds after I had resumed them. For the last four days, I have not taken them at all. I eat some toast of brown bread, vegetables and almonds crushed into paste. For breakfast I eat dates almonds, soaked in water.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9319
92. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

January 25, 1931

CHI. LILAVATI,

What may I write to you from here? May God bless you and give you the courage of a lioness. Take care of your health. Give up all idle thoughts and live happily.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9568

93. LETTER TO BALBHADRA

January 25, 1931

CHI. BALBHADRA,

Your letter was very good. If you can get ink and a pen, write in ink. If you otherwise keep good health, you need not weigh yourself. How many children attend?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9216

94. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

Sunday Night, January 25, 1931

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I got the wire you sent from Mugalsarai and it has relieved me. You should now wind up your affairs as soon as possible. Let there be no weight on your mind. After reading about Harasbabu’s illness in your letter received yesterday, I had given up all hope and had thought that you would not be able to come in the immediate future now. But God wills your welfare. I shall know by and by how it became possible for you to leave. After reading your letter yesterday, I sent a wire to Jaya-prakash to inquire about Harasbabu’s health. I expect a reply tomorrow (Monday). Since it has become possible for you to leave, Jayaprakash, too, must have gone to Delhi.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3405
95. LETTER TO RAIHANA TYABJI

January 25, 1931

RAIHANA THE CRAZY,

What a strange girl you are! You fall ill, return home, go out again to work and again fall What wonderful enthusiasm the cause!

Is that enough for an Urdu lesson? Why do you say Father may have to be operated upon again? How much longer will he be in hospital? He seems to have fallen in love with it. I did not know that you had to undertake a three-day fast. What is the cause of your illness? Did you get the co-operation of women in Patan? How many had joined in the fast? Have you become stronger after the operation?

Khuda Hafiz.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9627

96. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL JOSHI

January 25, 1931

CHI. CHHAGANLAL (JOSHI),

I got your letter which you finished in Vaso. It is full of information. What shall I write in reply? Strange and yet charming are His ways—thus has He been described.

In this running about from place to place, see that you do not neglect your health. The secret of preserving good health is in our own hands:

1. We should not worry.
2. Even in the midst of ceaseless running about, one should inwardly cherish the feeling of rest.
3. We should drop a meal when we get food which may not agree with our system, rather than load the stomach with such food.
4. We should lie down for rest and snatch a nap at any time and at any place.

1 These sentences are in Urdu.
All these are beads which would form a good rosary, with the string of Ramanama to join them; without it, they would remain loose and not hold together.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5499

97. LETTER TO MAHALAKSHMI M. THAKKAR

January 25, 1931

CHI. MAHALAKSHMI,

Conditions are the same in every home. Since all of us try, consciously or unconsciously, to seem better than others, it is necessary for us to be vigilant. You of course are. I have started eating cereals because I had always wanted to give up milk. If I could have lived, like the other prisoners here, on jowar and bajra, that would have made me happy, and served other purposes too. But jowar-bajra did not agree with me. Now I eat only wheat. Nobody else should copy me. As for you, the diet which you have adopted is the right one. If I succeed in my experiment, I shall advise others. Till then, milk and fruits remain the best diet. I keep well. At present, I eat dates once, bread and boiled vegetable twice, and twice or thrice almonds crushed into paste.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N.6813
98. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

YERAVDA MANDIR,
January 25, 1931

CHI. BRIJKRISHNA,

I have your letter only now. Do not allow your good health to be impaired. I have not so far received the Conversations\(^1\) by Aurobindo. Even the copy sent by you has not reached me yet. Where is Krishnan Nair? We are both well.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 2386

99. LETTER TO MAHAVIR GIRI

YERAVDA MANDIR,
January 25, 1931

CHI. MAHAVIR,

What you heard in Palanpur is true. A Muslim weaver from a village named Kanodar, near Palanpur, had come to the Ashram to teach weaving. He was sent by the late Nawab Saheb. A good carder always cards in such a manner that his strokes fall rhythmically. Mirabehn cards in that manner. I also keep time in my strokes, but imperfectly. If we card in this way, we feel less tired and are able to card more cotton during the same period of time.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6226

100. LETTER TO KUSUM DESAI

January 25, 1931

CHI. KUSUM (SENIOR),

I got your letter. This time, too, I cannot think of anything to write about” this is how you begin practically every one of your letters. Should I laugh at this or weep over it? Answer the question for yourself.

\(^1\) The reference is to Conversations (Special Edition 500) by Mother. Copies of the book with the Mother’s autograph were distributed in the Ashram.

What reason is there now for you to worry about my health? Every time there was a set-back, however slight, I informed people about it, took immediate measures and recovered. My strength has remained unchanged. Why, then, should you worry?

Shanta must have arrived there by now.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1818

101. LETTER TO RUKMINI BAZAJ

January 25, 1931

CHI. RUKMINI,

If one wishes to write, one will certainly get the time to do so. If not every week, remember me once in a while. It seems you are being really tested. That is the experience of the whole world. You do not say anything about your own health. How is Benarsi employed there? There are many other relations and friends in that place, but it seems your household duties leave you no free time at all. Can you go out for a walk occasionally? Do you get time to read?

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

I read Benarsi’s letter after I had written the letter above. It gives me news about your being ill—that you get fainting fits? How is that?

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9056

102. LETTER TO BENARSI Lal BAZAJ

January 25, 1931

CHI. BENARSI,

I was eagerly waiting for a letter from you. I was sorry to learn that Rukmini gets fainting fits. If she wishes to go to the Ashram and her circumstances permit her to do so, you may send her there. She may possibly improve in the Ashram. She had a fit only once or twice in all the years that she lived here. What you say about her is quite correct. She is of a brooding temperament. Medicine is not very likely to help. How are you employed at present? It seems outsiders fall ill in your home.

_Blessings from_

_BAPU_

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9055

103. LETTER TO HEMPRABHA DAS GUPTA

January 25, 1931

CHI. HEMPRABHA,

I see that Satisbabu is utilizing his time very well. How nice it would be if he improves his health too? Do send the Hindi translation of the primer. I wish I could read it in Bengali itself but it seems difficult to attain proficiency in Bengali to that extent.

Your desires, being pure, will gradually be transformed into tranquility. There is no harm in a desire provided it is accompanied by detachment. For example we may desire an increase in the sale of khadi but no harm will come from so desiring if there is no dejection in case the sales do not increase.

_Blessings from_

_BAPU_

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1682

104. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

Night, January 20/26, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

I handed over the post this morning and am writing again at night. I am doing this in order to write about something which I have been forgetting to mention in the letters for the past several weeks.

Ba had glasses. There were three pairs. Please inquire who has them now. Perhaps Premabehn may have them. If you find them send all the three pairs. I cannot explain from here which pair I require. The one which I have with me gives me a little trouble when I spin on the _takli_. It is intended to serve two purposes, and, therefore, I have to strain the eyes when spinning on the _takli_. Send them with any intending visitor or by parcel.
Thursday, January 22′, 1931

I got your packet yesterday evening at seven. I had done my best to see that you got my postcards regularly. But after all a prisoner is a prisoner. That you got them is ganimat. Do you know this word? It is a very good one. It is much in use in Urdu. It means “enough”, “thank God”.

Surendra’s problem seems to have been solved for the present. His power of thinking has become weak. That has happened with many others who, instead of working, get caught in idle thinking. But Surendra’s heart is pure and so I believe that he will ultimately come out safe from this. His faith in Nathji will also help to save him. Meet Khurshedbehn. If she requires anything, send it to her.

Inquire about Madhavji’s diet and inform me about it. I think he should stick to milk and dates.

When you find a serial number omitted in my letters, you should certainly inform me. I leave it to Pyarelal to check the numbers and trust that he does so. Last time, however, I myself had checked the letters and put them into the envelope. I had corrected two errors. The numbers on Kaka’s and Maganlal’s letters were repeated. As I did the checking in a hurry, I may have overlooked some other error. I will be more careful in future. Do what you think best about Keshu. Ask yourself what your duty is, rather than what I would wish, and take the reply to that question as my own wish and act accordingly. If I permit myself at this distance to have my own wish in the matter, I would be guilty on two counts. In the first place, having handed over the reins to you, I should have no wish of my own. Secondly, at this distance I would not have sufficient data to decide what would be desirable. Hence, from either point of view, it would be attachment or ignorance of blind desire on my part to have any inclination in such matters. Yes, I can come to certain tentative conclusions from this distance. These should be intended merely to guide you. You may act on them only if they find an echo in your heart.

This rule should be applied to the business of the land in Vijapur. I have written to the same effect to Chhaganlal too. If you deal firmly with Sarojinidivei, everything will be all right. this manner once. I have already written to you what I felt in regard to Padma.

In a general way I approve of your reading my letter to all and the letters addressed by others to me. It will be good if you now tell everyone this: ‘I read, with Bapu’s consent and at my leisure, all letters received from and addressed to him, except those which Bapu himself of the individual concerned may ask me not to read. Everyone, therefore, may rest assured that, if he does not wish me to read letters by or to him, I will not read them. If anyone feels embarrassed to tell me this personally, he may write to me and that will suffice. I see again and again that such secrecy does much harm. But we cannot get rid of the evil through compulsion. Hence we have no choice but to endure it.

1 The source as “21”.

VOL. 51 : 6 JANUARY, 1931 - 28 APRIL, 1931 69

Mathuradas’s affair is a painful one. You must have read the letter which I wrote to him last week. If his having got himself released is the result of greater self-knowledge and self-examination, it is all right. I am doing something from here about Appa.¹

I was happy that Lilavati had to suffer. That is, it is always better that, instead of some other woman, a woman of the Ashram should have to suffer. An inmate of the Ashram should have more endurance and the spirit of ahimsa in her.

Did Shankarbhau finally get a takli?

I have written to Hariyomal. He must have got the letter with the last mail.

Evening, January 22, 1931

I had raised here the issue of Appa and others. I am informed today that they will be permitted to spin. The general problem, too, will be solved. This news, that is, the information about my intervention, should not be published.

I told Kashinath in my last letter to him about my opinion regarding him to which you refer. You may now do what you think best.

Write to Swami and inform him that I have not received The Prophets of New India.

By the time you get this, Prabhavati will have been there for quite some days.

I suppose I wrote to you, didn’t I, suggesting that you should try the treatment of one Punjabi vaid for Prabhavati.

What you say about Mathew is correct.

Night, January 25, 1931

As I have given the information about my health in the letter to Mirabehn, I do not repeat it here. There is no cause for alarm; on the contrary, I think my health is excellent. I don’t require enemas at all. I had a wire from Prabhavati today saying that she had started. The wire was dispatched from Mugalsarai and was dated yesterday. Hence, by the time you get this letter, she will have settled down there. If necessary, get her examined by Dr. Haribhai. If you prefer Dr. Talwalkar, consult him. My own hope is that it will not now be necessary to consult any doctor and that she will recover by herself.

Afternoon, Monday [January 26, 1931]

We were informed this morning that Pyarelal and I are to be released. When, therefore, you get this letter, we shall have been released, but I don’t know where I shall be. My present feeling is that I shall be leaving peace and quiet and going into the midst of turmoil.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

There are 80 letters.

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./I; also C.W. 8149. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

105. TRIBUTE TO RABINDRANATH TAGORE

[January 26, 1931]¹

In common with thousands of his countrymen I owe much to one who by his poetic genius and singular purity of life has raised India in the estimation of the world. But I owe also more. Did he not harbour in Santiniketan the inmates of my Ashram who had preceded me from South Africa? The other ties and memories are too sacred to bear mention in a public tribute.

The Golden Book of Tagore, 1931

106. INTERVIEW TO ASSOCIATED PRESS OF INDIA

January 26, 1931

While waiting on the platform of the Chinchwad station to board the train for Bombay, Mr. Gandhi gave the following message to the Indian people:

I have come out of jail ² with an absolutely open mind, unfettered by enmity, unbiased in argument and prepared to study the whole situation from every point of view and discuss the Premier’s statement with Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru and other delegates on their return. I make this statement in deference to the urgent wish expressed in a cable sent to me from London by some of the delegates.

When asked whether he had any statement to make regarding Mr. Ramsay Mac Donald’s speech, he said he had studied it carefully, but was not yet prepared at that stage to make any comment whatsoever especially owing to the appeal of Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru.

Questioned as regards his movements in the near future, he said:

I have no plan and no policy mapped out. I am proceeding to Bombay to talk over things with some friends but I do not know just where I shall go from there or how long I shall stay in Bombay.

Q. What is your opinion regarding the immediate release of all political prisoners?

A. I most sincerely believe that every political prisoner now in jail for being connected with my civil disobedience movement should be liberated immediately, and none of us as leaders should be happy as long as any of our brethren or sisters are in jail.

Q. What will you do if the Government do not see eye to eye with you in this matter?

A. I cannot say at this juncture as I have made no plans.

Asked if he was happy at being free once again, he replied:

I really do not know.

Mr. Gandhi expressed great appreciation of the treatment he received in jail, and when asked if he expected to go back again in the near future, Mr. Gandhi replied:

Possibly, you never know.

The Hindu, 28-1-1931

---

2 Gandhiji was detained in Yeravda Central Prison, Poona, from May 5, 1930.

1 Of January 19, 1931; vide “Prime minister’s declaration at R.T.C.”, 19-1-1931.
107. LETTER TO JAISHANKAR TRIVEDI

January 27, 1931

BHAI TRIVEDI,

I was not happy that I had to come away without meeting you or seeing Manu, but I was not free to decide my own plans. I did receive your gift. I gave the vegetables to co-workers and I am taking with me the tomatoes, dates and almonds. I write this letter in the train. I am writing it for the sake of an English prisoner named Wheeler. He served me in many ways while I was in jail. He is an intelligent man and has great love for animals. I liked him. He has no teeth, though he is only middle-aged. I wish to help him to get a denture. I have obtained Major Martin’s permission for this. If you know any person in Poona who makes good dentures, persuade him to do this act of service. Or you yourself may bear the expense and get a denture made for him. Perhaps Major Martin will not send him there. In that case, take the doctor in your car to Yeravda. Meet Quinn or the Major and do what is needed. Let me know afterwards what you did. Ask Manu to write to me.

I got the books which you gave to Pyarelal.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 1002

108. INTERVIEW TO THE PRESS

BOMBAY,
January 27, 1931

I personally feel that the mere release of the Working Committee members makes a difficult situation infinitely more difficult and makes any action on the part of the members, if not altogether impossible, almost impossible.

The authorities evidently have not yet perceived that the movement has so much affected the mass mind that the leaders, however eminent they may be, will be utterly unable to dictate to the masses a particular course of action.

This, in my opinion, is a very healthy condition, because independent thinking is the very essence of the spirit of democracy. The thousands therefore who are in different prisons of India are better able to deliver the goods than all the released leaders combined.

In my opinion, therefore, if the release of leaders is to be effective, the release of all the satyagrahi prisoners is a necessary condition and this release will, in its turn, be ineffective if repression is not stopped altogether.

I would like to draw the distinction which is very vital between civil disobedience and the action of those thousands who are now in prison. Civil disobedience is deliberate disobedience of non-moral laws by way of protest not necessarily against the laws covered by disobedience but any general grievance. In the present case, however, the men and women have not in the vast majority of case resorted to civil disobedience, but a wholly artificial condition has been produced by the Viceregal ordinances. The satyagrahis have not resisted any natural or moral laws, nor have they resisted the common law of the country, nor yet the statute law of the country; but they have been forced to resist autocratic ordinances which were designed to interfere with common law rights such as the right of persuading addicts to the drink or drug habit to give it up, of persuading the drink and drug dealers to give up that calling or the dealers in, or purchasers of, foreign cloth to give up the sale and purchase of such cloth.

It may be said that a breach of the salt law is undoubtedly civil disobedience. I hold, however, that even in connection with the salt law the people have merely exercised a natural right that millions possess of manufacturing salt out of the waters in their neighbourhood. The only instance, therefore, of civil resistance that I can just now recall is in connection with the salt raids and possibly the forest laws. The raids have a history into which I do not wish to go at the present moment.

What I am anxious to clear is that, even if, after conference with the friends who are coming from the Round Table Conference, it is found that the Premier’s statement affords sufficient ground for the Congress to tender co-operation, the right of picketing cannot be given up, nor the right of the starving millions to manufacture salt; and, if these elementary rights are recognized, most of the ordinances will naturally have to be withdrawn.

It is, therefore, highly necessary for the public, as also the Government, to understand the fundamental Congress position.

Manufacture of salt and boycott of foreign cloth and of liquor are not intended to register the resistance of the nation to the existing misrule, but they are intended to achieve these three things for all time. No amount of goodwill established between Great Britain and India, so far as I can see, will reconcile the public to the drink evil, the foreign cloth evil or the prohibition to manufacture salt. Speaking for myself, I am hankering for peace, if it can be had with honour; but, even if I stood alone, I could be no party to any peace which does not satisfactorily solve the three questions that I have mentioned.

I should, therefore, judge the Round Table Conference tree by its fruit. I have given the three tests that are in operation, but, as the public knows, there are eight more.¹ I want the substance of independence—no shadow—and, even as a doctor names the disease of his patient after a proper diagnosis so will I name the tree of the Round Table Conference after I have examined the fruit in the light of the eleven points which are conceived in terms of the man in the street.

Replying to a further question as regards his treatment in the Yeravda Jail,
Mr. Gandhi said:

I was a pampered prisoner, in one sense. So far as physical comforts were concerned, the prison authorities left no stone unturned to supply them. I have, therefore, so far as I am concerned, nothing but good to say of the authorities regarding my food. Of course, I was strictly isolated from the fellow-satyagrahis and conditions were imposed which made it impossible for me to see those who were near and dear to me.

But the general treatment of the C class prisoners leaves much to be desired. The Superintendent of the Yeravda Prison, Major Martin, I think, is a good man. He is anxious to make the prisoners in his charge happy; but he is hidebound by rules and regulations which make it impossible for him to make the prisoners comfortable even so far as their daily meals are concerned.

To give one instance, there is a rigid rule to the effect that the ordinary prisoner can have only jowar or bajra roti, and of these he must have that grain which is the cheapest at the time.

Here there is no consideration whatsoever of the bodily wants of the prisoner.

To quote another instance, these prisoners cannot have even a grain of salt extra. They must be content with what is put in their dal or vegetable. I can multiply such instances. In a sentence, I can sum ¹ For the eleven points, vide “Clearing the issue”, 30-1-1930.

up my impression by saying that there is no human touch generally between the officials and the prisoners.

I have appreciated The Times of India’s efforts to better the lot of the numberous C class prisoners. If there was any human touch, the very simple suggestion made by Mr. David would have been acted upon long ago. Up to the time of leaving the jail, I saw no such sign. I am convin-ced that C class prisoners have to undergo much avoidable suffering. The classification into A, B and C, I regard to be highly irritating and wholly unjustified. What is wanted is real relief for the vast majority of prisoners and that cannot come through classification but through humane considerations.

Answering a question as to what he meant by the statement that he was a “pampered prisoner”, Mr. Gandhi explained that, while all his physical wants, by way of food, etc., were provided, he was mentally and spiritually tortured by being kept in splendid isolation and by way of compensating him for such isolation he was provided with all the food that he wanted.

Mr. Gandhi was reminded of the passage in the Viceroy’s recent statement that there was little difference between the goal which the Government had before them and that of the Congress and that the difference was only with reference to the method of reaching that goal. Speaking on this point Mr. Gandhi said:

In the first instance, I am not at all satisfied that a common term has been used to mean the same thing. Secondly, the Congress has pursued nothing that the situation did not render absolutely necessary. In my opinion when the history of the last decade comes to be written the palm will be given to the women of India. They have brought swaraj nearer. They have added several inches to their own height and that of the nation.

Mr. Gandhi was next referred to the report from Yeravda to the effect that he had handed some mysterious document in sealed envelope to the Superintendent of the jail before his departure. He denied having given any such document to the Superintendent. . . .

In the course of further conversation Mr. Gandhi said he was unable to say anything about his future plans at present. He was proceeding to Allahabad to see Pandit Motilal and his programme would depend upon Pandit’s state of health. He had suspended his judgment on the Premier’s speech in response to the Rt. Hon. Mr. Sastri’s cable pending consultation with Mr. Sastri and his fellow-delegates.

The Times of India, 28-1-1931

1 Here the interview was interrupted when Gandhiji was given a message to which he dictated a reply; vide the following item.
109. A TELEGRAM

January 27, 1931

OWING TO THE PANDIT’S SERIOUS ILLNESS PROCEEDING ALLAHABAD.
AWAIT FURTHER WIRE.

The Times of India, 28-1-1931

110. LETTER TO ANAND T. HINGORANI

Y. M.,
January 29, 1931

MY DEAR ANAND,

I have your letter. I understand your craving. Some day let us hope you will have that satisfaction. Meanwhile write when you can.

I will translate the speech for you some day. But not just now as you cannot publish it. A prisoner cannot write such things for publication.

Love.

BAPU

From a microfilm. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani
111. CABLE TO “DAILY HERALD”, LONDON

January 30, 1931

EXAMINING PREMIER’S STATEMENT IN TERMS CONGRESS DECLARATION AND ASPIRATION. STATEMENT ON FACE OF IT WOULD APPEAR WHOLLY INADEQUATE BUT IN COMMON WITH MAJORITY CONGRESSMEN HAVE ABSOLUTELY OPEN MIND AND HAVE SUSPENDED JUDGMENT IN VIEW URGENT REQUEST OF RIGHT HONORABLE SASTRI DOCTOR SAPRU AND MR. JAYAKAR. PERSONALLY AM EAGERLY SEARCHING FOR AVENUES LEADING HONORABLE PEACE THAT WOULD GIVE INDIA FREEDOM SHE DESIRES AND IS ENTITLED TO. BUT MERE RELEASE OF MEMBERS CONGRESS WORKING COMMITTEE AND THEIR WIVES WILL BE OF LITTLE HELP. EVEN FOR CREATING ATMOSPHERE SUITABLE FOR CALM DISCUSSION RELEASE OF ALL SATYAGRAHI PRISONERS WITHDRAWAL OF REPRESSIVE ORDINANCES AND RESTORATION CONFISCATED PROPERTY ABSOLUTELY ESSENTIAL. ON TWENTYFIRST INSTANT WELL-KNOWN LADIES OCCUPIED IN NO UNLAWFUL ACTIVITIES BUT FORMING PROCESSION LEADING TO MEETING OF PROTEST AGAINST RECENT ILLTREATMENT OF FELLOW WORKER WERE INDECENTLY ABUSED AND MERCILESSLY BEATEN RESULTING IN INJURIES TO OVER HUNDRED AND FIFTY. ON INDEPENDENCE DAY THE TWENTYSIXTH INSTANT MEETINGS IN CALCUTTA WERE PROHIBITED CONTRARY EXPECTATION AND FORCIBLY DISPERSED. MAYOR CALCUTTA SUBHAS CHANDRA BOSE BELABOURED THEN ARRESTED AND SENTENCED SIX MONTHS RIGOROUS IMPRISONMENT. SAME DAY IN BIHAR FIVE MEN KILLED AND DOZEN WOUNDED IN DISPERSING SIMILAR MEETING. CONGRESS AND OTHER ORGANIZATIONS INCLUDING WOMEN’S ARE STILL BEING DECLARED UNLAWFUL. THIS CONTINUING REPRESSION ROBS

1 In reply to a cable dated January 25 which read: “Following your release would welcome two hundred words statement your views Premier MacDonlad Indian declaration. Cable. Company will accept message gratis.”

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
SAID         RELEASE        OF       ALL     GRACE       AND      MAKES       IT    VALUELESS
FOR PURPOSE INTENDED.

GANDHI

From a photostat: S.N. 16904

112.  TELEGRAM TO M.S. ANEY

ALLAHABAD,
January 31, 1931

I TREASURE YOUR WIRE. I KNOW THAT YOU MEAN BERAR AND MUCH MORE. YOU KNOW MY REGARD FOR YOU. IT GIVES ME ADDITIONAL STRENGTH TO KNOW THAT I HAVE YOUR HEARTY CO-OPERATION IN ANYTHING. WILL YOU, WHEN YOU HAVE THE TIME, GIVE ME YOUR VIEW OF THE GENERAL SITUATION AND OF THE STATE OF THING LOCALLY?

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

113.  LETTER TO RUKMINI BAZAJ

January 31, 1931

CHI. RUKMINI,

I have just heard about your illness. I read your letter to Jamnalalji. What should I write to you? Get all right quickly. I had hoped to be able to see you both. But this time that could not be.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9057

114.  SPEECH TO CONGRESS LEADERS, ALLAHABAD

January 31, 1931

I would never give up my demand even if I stood alone and the whole of India were against me. Still, I seek your advice also in the matter. After receiving the telegram from Sapru and Sastri, I decided that we should not consider MacDonald’s statement. Even so, I have explained on what terms we might consider the statement of enter into negotiations on the basis of it. They are truce terms. For myself I am bound by my declaration in Bombay that I continued to adhere to the condition which I had laid down in Yeravda. I have now added one more condition. Why should we not demand an inquiry into the incident the memory of which brought tears to the eyes of a person like Sardar Sardul Singh? What we have suffered so far is nothing in comparison with what we shall be made to suffer in future. We are, therefore, justified in demanding that a tribunal should be set up for an independent inquiry into such incidents, that a report of the inquiry be published and the officers found guilty be removed. Though we do speak of forgetting and forgiving the misdeeds of others, it would be a sin to forget certain things. We may forgive Dyer and O’Dwyer for the Jallianwala massacre, but we cannot afford to forget it. We may also forgive the authors of the atrocities here, though some of the incidents here have been more cruel than the massacre at Jallianwala Bagh. History offers no parallel to the atrocities committed on women in the Kaira District. The papers could not even report what cruelty was inflicted on women—mere women—who were never guilty and could never be guilty of any violence. Under the present conditions, how could any such reports appear in the papers? An independent court should go into all these incidents, and in future also there should always be an inquiry into incidents such as the arrest and beating up of advocates, of a person like Sunnab.

1 In reply to his telegram which read: “Assure you that Berar will stand like one man to uphold any decision on future policy and programme you may arrive at as result of deliberations with leading Congressmen and other friends.”

Mention was made of the prisoners. Those under a death sentence should not be hanged. My personal religion tells me not only that they should not be hanged but also that they should not even be kept in prison. However, that is my personal opinion, and we cannot make their release a condition. The death sentence on the Sholapur men was executed in spite of the doubt expressed by the judge and in spite of so many earnest appeals from the public. Shall we say that, if such death sentences continue to be executed, we shall not enter into negotiations with the Government? There is a risk in making any such condition. We can with justice demand only the release of those who had joined the present struggle. We should not, therefore, include in the truce terms the release of others. Hence I adhere to my statement. Yes, those who have not been regularly tried in a court should of course be released. We can decide even today to enter into talks with the British Government, but only on the condition that I have laid down. That condition holds good also for a truce.
Who would describe the breaking of the salt law as civil disobedience? Breaking of a law would be civil disobedience only if we intended to obey it after peace was concluded.

We cannot give up even one of the demands put forward in the negotiations carried on from Yeravda. I do not believe that Mac Donald’s statement grants us anything. However, even a consideration of it can be undertaken only if the Government concedes our demands. As for myself, I felt even when I started on the Dandi march that I had done my part, and I left it to the Congress to act as it wished or to stop the movement. If you tell me that my work is over and that I should return to the Ashram, I would immediately do so. How shall I describe to you the shock that I feel on coming out of jail? You have played your part so well that I was lost in admiration and felt no need to make any suggestion. I have no shadow of doubt in my mind that I could lead the people better. They have taken up the fight. It is God who conducts it. I do not know who will lead it to success, but I do know that God will take us across.

You may say what you wish about your Province, and say it frankly. What do we have to hide from the Government? It gets all the information somehow, I do not know whether through radio messages or in some other way. But there can be no question of the people yielding. After all these sacrifices, are they likely to yield? I have no doubt that we can carry on this fight for any length of time. But the Government’s capacity for brutality is so great that we must gird up our loins to face more of it. We have still to free the oppressed millions in the world, to free the entire world. It waits for a miracle from India. For my part, I should like you to go from here with the firm determination that you will give up your life, to do whatever is yet necessary for winning swaraj. I fear that yet more beastliness will be let loose on us—I say “fear” because we can never wish that man may become still more beastly; but if he does, how can we help it?

[From Gujarati]

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy : Narayan Desai
115. TO THE READER

ALLAHABAD,
February 1, 1931

In renewing your acquaintance after so many months, I feel within me a glow of pleasure that under the greatest difficulty the paper has continued publication.¹ I had told my co-workers that, in the event of suppression by the authorities, the paper were to continue publication even though it was a hand-written sheet multiplied to the extent of volunteers coming up to make copies. Where there is perfect coordination and willingness, copies can be thus multiplied without end and no printing press in the world can compete with such an effort. But I know that this is true in theory. In practice, one does not find that willingness. But nothing is impossible for ahimsa or active, unadulterated love. It surmounts all difficulties. My companions have chosen an effective though in my opinion a method less in keeping with the spirit of ahimsa and truth which know no secrecy. But I do not judge them. On the contrary, their organizing ability has commanded my admiration and respect. I do not yet know how over seven thousand copies are being issued with such regularity. I must content myself with thanking the invisible helpers and the numerous readers who have continued their association with Young India. In renewing contact with the readers through these sheets, let me redeclare my faith.

Over eight months' contemplation in solitude has, if possible, increased my faith in truth and ahimsa. At the risk of incurring ridicule, I repeat what I have said so often that voluntary universal adoption of khaddar with all its vast implications means purna swaraj and that civil disobedience becomes a necessary duty only because khaddar has not yet obtained the hold it should. But of all this hereafter.

Young India (Supplement), 5-2-1931

¹ The reference is to its cyclostyled publication during Gandhiji’s incarceration.
116. WORKING COMMITTEE RESOLUTION

ALLAHABAD,
February 1, 1931

The Working Committee having, out of regard for the wishes of Srijuts Sastri Sapru and Jayakar, suspended the publication of its resolution passed on January 21, 1931, an impression got abroad that the movement of civil disobedience has been suspended. It is, therefore, necessary to reiterate the decision of the Committee that the movement is to continue unabated until explicit instructions are issued to the contrary. This meeting reminds the public that picketing of foreign cloth and drink and drug shops, in itself is no part of the civil disobedience campaign, but that it is the exercise of ordinary right of a citizen, so long as it remains strictly peaceful and causes no obstruction to the public.

This meeting further reminds the sellers of foreign cloth, including foreign yarn, and Congress workers that the boycott of foreign cloth, being a vital necessity in the interest of the masses, is a permanent feature of national activity and will remain so till the nation has acquired the power to exclude foreign cloth and foreign yarn from India, whether by total prohibition or prohibitive tariff.

Whilst appreciating the response made by dealers in foreign cloth and foreign yarn to the appeal of the Congress to bring about a boycott of foreign cloth, this meeting reminds them that it is not open to any Congress organization to hold out hopes of their being able to dispose of their existing stock in India.

1 Presumably drafted by Gandhiji
117. LETTER TO VICEROY

ANAND BHAWAN, ALLAHABAD,
February 1, 1931

H.E. THE VICEROY, DELHI

DEAR FRIEND,

You have made a public appeal\(^1\) to me for co-operation in connection with the further work of the recently held Conference in London and ascribed to me a belief in the sincerity of British promises and declarations. I wish that I could endorse your ascription. I told you on the 23rd December 1929, that subject to honourable exceptions I had found to my great sorrow that British declarations and promises were insincere. Had I not found them so, the active voluntary co-operation that I had tendered to British officials in India and outside would never have been withdrawn.

But I assure you that I am simply waiting for a sign in order to enable me to respond to your appeal. I confess, however, that some of the signs are highly ominous. In Borsad, in the district of Kaira, on the 21st January, a cruel, uncalled for and unchivalrous lathi-charge was made upon wholly innocent women and girls who were forming a procession which was marching to a women’s meeting that was to be held in order to protest against the brutal treatment of a girl\(^2\) 17 years old by a police official. Neither the procession nor the meeting was prohibited. The injuries were severe in several cases. Some of those who were assaulted belong to the Satyagraha Ashram at Sabarmati. One of them, an old widow\(^3\), a member of the Managing Board of the Ashram, was drenched in blood. To give you some idea of the nature of the police barbarity, I give you a free translation of her letter\(^4\) to me. The facts stated in that letter are capable of easy proof. The Collector himself was in Borsad on this date. At the time of writing this, I cannot recall anything in modern history to parallel this official inhumanity against wholly defenceless and innocent women. I may complete the outline of this picture by stating that there were no men

---

1 Vide “Viceroy’s statement”, 26-1-1931.
2 Lilavati
3 Gangabehn Vaidya
4 Vide “Letter from Gangabehn vaidya”.

84 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
in this meeting or procession except a few volunteer guides.

On the 26th at Calcutta, as you may be aware, the meetings advertised to be held for the purpose of re-declaring the Independence Day Resolution were put under the ban and the procession marching to the principal meeting and headed by the Mayor of Calcutta, Syt. Subhas Chandra Bose, was dispersed by a cruel lathi-charge.

In Begusarai (Bihar) on the same date a party of men returning from a similar meeting was fired upon by the police resulting in six killed and several wounded. The police are reported to have fired even into a school. You have probably read the official defence of the police proceeding. My informants deny the main part of the official defence, and if their version is correct, the firing was wholly uncalled for.

On the top of these three events comes the news that Sjt. Bhasyam, a member of the Madras Bar Council, and Sjt. V. A. Sundaram, a well-known worker, were, whilst they were picketing foreign-cloth shops, with the concurrence of their owners, assaulted and treated in a manner unworthy of a civilized State. They were taken, after the assault, to an out of the way place and out of reach of medical or other assistance. Had it not been for the chance passing of a car, it is difficult to say what would have happened to these gentlemen.

I do not ask you to accept the versions given here, but I do ask you to fell with me that it is not possible for those like me who believe in them to tender co-operation with any confidence, much less enthusiasm. Whether, however, such co-operation, for which many other things are necessary, comes forth in the end or not, it is, I hope you will agree, highly necessary to have an unbiased judgment over happenings like those I have narrated. Such an enquiry is necessary because I assume that the Government of India do not want to countenance methods such as I have described. The four cases I have cited are but recent examples. I invite you, therefore, to appoint an impartial and representative committee of enquiry acceptable to the Congress to investigate the allegations of excesses against officials in different parts of India since the inauguration of the civil disobedience campaign. If such a committee is appointed I am sure that the Congress will lead evidence before it to show that in very many cases the conduct of officials has been contrary to the expectations raised in the preambles to your ordinances and in your repeated declarations.
Till I hear from you and know your wish in the matter1 I am not sending this letter to the Press. I am in Allahabad till Tuesday. I expect to leave Allahabad on Tuesday evening for Bombay where I expect to be till the 6th instant.

I remain,

Your faithful friend,

Enclosure : Translation of a letter
Bombay Secret Abstracts 750(14)0 Pt-A, pp. 159-63

118. INTERVIEW TO REUTER

ALLAHABAD,
February 1, 1931

Interviewed by Reuter’s special correspondent, Gandhiji said:

All speculation regarding split among the members of the Working Committee is pure myth. On the contrary the proceedings yesterday and today were perfectly unanimous, and the behaviour of the members cordial. All were of one mind that the movement cannot be withdrawn or suspended unless truce is declared. It should be obvious to everybody that a mass movement like the one now going on cannot be suddenly and without a reasonable hope of a final settlement stopped, nor can it be called off unless the hope of a settlement is shared by the vast mass of the people; and this can never happen so long as repression in its virulent form continues, as witness, the latest example in the shape of wanton assaults upon Srijuts Bhashyam and Sundaram. I have been daily receiving reports from men and women of unimpeachable character giving me details of repression not confined to any particular part of India. A friend has handed me a letter containing harrowing details of atrocities said to have been committed by the police in the district of Midnapore (Bengal).

1 In his letter dated February 4, addressed to Gandhiji, G. Cunningham wrote: “His Excellency regret that he is unable to accept the suggestion. He would equally decline to entertain any similar proposal to initiate any general enquiry into the responsibility for excesses committed by adherents to the civil disobedience movement. . . . His Excellency therefore sees no profit in the general exploration of charges and counter-charges that would be made. Nor can he feel that it would assist the discharge of what he considers at the present time the most important task of affording opportunity to all, who are willing to do so, to join in the constructive work of bringing to fulfilment the purpose clearly stated by the Prime Minister.”
In my opinion nothing short of an absolutely impartial and thorough going enquiry into these charges can satisfy either the public mind or the requirements of justice. I do not see how it is possible to conduct negotiations for peace with repression fouling the atmosphere hour after hour.

The Hindu, 2-2-1931

119. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, ALLAHABAD

February 1, 1931

Speaking in Hindi while seated on the dais, Mahatma Gandhi said that it afforded him great pleasure in seeing an assembly of such a large crowd as had gathered at the meeting and he offered his thanks to God and congratulations to the people for the great deeds of bravery and sacrifices done by the people during the period of eight months. He said that whenever he thought of those brave deeds and sacrifices he was at once reminded of his sisters. The whole world was surprised, said Mahatma Gandhi, at the considerable sacrifices made by people in the national struggle, especially at the share taken by the women of India.

The women who were considered absolutely ignorant and always lived in purdah gave up their purdah forthwith at the nation’s call, they sacrificed their children, offered for the struggle even their little girls and did not put any obstacles in the way of their husbands participating in the fight. And, he said, the women’s sacrifices were not confined to that alone but they themselves discarded the purdah and went out to participate in the fight.

Proceeding, Mahatma Gandhi said that any number of families would be found in the country, which would have given every one of its members for the national struggle. In a fight with guns, old men, women, boys and girls were exempted, but India’s fight for freedom was such that everybody could participate in it.

Resuming the speech, which Mr. Shiva Prasad Gupta repeated, Mahatma Gandhi, while busy at his takli, said that the women of the country had been lifted high on account of their sacrifices, by three or four inches and consequently the height of the whole country was also raised by three or four inches which naturally provided an occasion for the Indians to feel proud.

Young children had also given proofs of their bravery, said Mahatma Gandhi. When he heard in the jail the name of vanarasena he could not think that that sena would include children aged six and eight also. And when he heard, Mahatma Gandhi added, an account of their brave deeds and sacrifices, it at once struck him that in this

1 As the loud-speakers failed national struggle God was also with them. It was a heavenly precept that victory was bound to come if they remained on the path of truth and non-violence, and in such a victory there would be the share of not one individual but of all people and all the communities. There could be no considerations of superiority and inferiority in the case of people participating in such a struggle and it was Mahatma Gandhi’s conviction that if they really remained on the path of righteousness and peace the danger of communal quarrels with which they were faced frequently, would altogether disappear.

Mahatma Gandhi, therefore, appealed to the people that whether there be war against the Government or disputes among themselves, they should never leave the path of peace and righteousness, the result of which would be that they would never suffer defeat.

He realized that sufficient observance of the principle of non-violence had been made but at the same time he wished to warn the public that the least mistake on their part in that matter would ruin them as they had taken a pledge before God and the whole world that they would carry on the fight peacefully and with firm devotion to the motherland. So long as that pledge stood, if they deliberately made a departure from it they would be regarded, said Mahatma Gandhi, as cheats before God and the world.¹

Resuming, Mahatma Gandhi said that he would reiterate what he had been saying all along, namely, that every man, woman, boy, and girl should start spinning at the charkha and use khaddar made of the yarn spun by him or her and throw away foreign clothes. They should also give up drinking and gambling and everything that was bad, for Indians wanted to govern the country themselves and if the government went into hands polluted with misdeeds, the country would be ruined.

As the noise continued on account of the inability of the audience to hear, in spite of Mr. Gupta’s repeating the speech at the top of his voice, Mahatma Gandhi said that he did not want to take much of the time of the people on account of the noise, and with blessing to the people he concluded his speech abruptly to the utter disappointment of those who expected some pronouncement from Mahatma Gandhi with regard to the situation arising out of the declaration of the British policy, it being the first public speech delivered by him after his release from the Yeravda Jail.

The Leader, 4-2-1931

¹ At this stage the speech was interrupted by two C.I.D. inspectors forcing their way into the meeting. They were, however, asked by Jawaharlal Nehru to quit the place.
120. MESSAGE TO PEOPLE OF MIDNAPORE

ALLAHABAD,
February 2, 1931

I have made myself acquainted with your condition to the extent it was possible without a local visit. I tender my congratulations for your courage and patience with which you have borne your sufferings. Out of such sufferings will be born a new nation pulsating with life. Earthly possessions are no compensation for loss of liberty. It is a matter of joy that you have preferred deprivations of these to that of your liberty. I hope you will not neglect the duty of manufacturing free salt.

M. K. G.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

121. NOTE TO URMILA DEVI

ALLAHABAD,
Silence Day, February 2, 1931

Hunger-strike can be resorted to in matters of self-respect. It is a weapon to be most sparingly used.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai
122. LETTER TO K. SANTANAM

February 2, 1931

MY DEAR SANTANAM,

I have just heard from Rajaji the awful news of your wife’s death. But I know that you are god-fearing and brave—for those who believe in Him nothing is awful. He gives and has the right to take away. If you are permitted let me have a line that you are at peace with yourself.

Yours,

BAPU

SJT. K. SANTANAM
B. BLOCK
CENTRAL PRISON
VELLORE
S. INDIA

From the original: Courtesy: K. S. Ramanujan

123. LETTER TO N. P. RAGHAVAN

February 2, 1931

MY DEAR RAGHAVAN,

I have your letter. Since you do not get the time, the prayer hours you mention are quite good. I hope you are keeping well.

Yours,

BAPU

SJT. N.P. RAGHAVAN
KHADI DEPOT
PAYYANUR
MALABAR

From a photostat: C. W. 10864. Courtesy: N. P. Raghavan

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
124. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

February 2, 1931

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I got your letters. Do you get fewer fainting fits there than you used to do in Bihar? Do you eat well? Have you recovered strength? What do you do about baths, etc.? Give me all these details.

Jayaprasad saw me here. He has joined Ghanshyamdas. Rajendra is here. Mrityunjaya, too, has come here today. I shall reach Bombay on the 4th or the 5th. Write to me there. If you recover strength enough to be able to travel, we shall meet earlier. Let there be no weight on your mind at all. Where have you been accommodated? I am all right.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3403

125. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

February 2, 1931

CHI. VASUMATI,

How fortunate you are. You got beaten and were also awarded a jail sentence. All of you have upheld the honour of the Ashram and brought glory to your sex. All people do not yet see the full significance of this incident\(^1\). Its real value will be appreciated after some time. I hope you did not even feel angry with the person who beat you. All of them are like our brothers. If we do not feel angry, they are bound to change some day.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9320

\(^1\) At Borsad; vide “Letter to Viceroy”, 1-2-1931.
CHI. CHHAGANLAL,

I got all your letters. But I have had no rest after leaving the rest-house. Today is my silence day and so I have got some time, though the stream of visitors continues.

I simply cannot forget the Borsad incident. The people have not yet realized its significance. I am taking up the matter.

The Ashram women have immortalized themselves and the Ashram. Our prayers and the vows of self-discipline have borne fruit. Other women also have shown such courage. There were some in this procession too. But I have formed the impression that the special merit of the sacrifice made by the Ashram women lies in the religious spirit which inspired it.

My future movements are uncertain. Probably I shall reach Bombay on the 4th. Panditji’s ship is in mid-ocean, so that even for his sake I may have to stay on here. I keep good health. About other developments, you will read in the papers. I am trying for the release of the other prisoners, but only within limits proper for us. Those who are released by the Government on the expiry of their sentences try to return to the jails immediately. Write to me wherever I am. For the ensuing official year of the Congress, Sardar has been elected President. This increases the responsibility of Gujarat. It may have been necessary for women from outside Kaira District to go there. Who took the lead in showing this discourtesy?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5500
127. LETTER TO SHAKARIBEHN

February 2, 1931

CHI. SHAKARIBEHN,

All of you behaved wonderfully well. Send me an accurate description of Mir.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : S.N. 24388

128. LETTER TO DUDHIBEHN V. DESAI

February 2, 1931

CHI. DUDHIBEHN,

I got your letter. I see that it is still very necessary to be careful. You should not exert yourself too much. Naturally, therefore, your food also should be light. Let us see—I think we shall now be able to meet somewhere.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : C.W. 7412. Courtesy : Valji G. Desai

129. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

February 2, 1931

CHI. LILAVATI,

I got your letter. Make full use of the opportunities there. But do not be impatient while doing that. Follow Khurshedbehn’s advice. If the food does not agree with you, tell them so. Write to me whenever permitted to do so.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 9319
130. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

February 2, 1931

CHI. PREMA,

This is just to drop a line to you. I have before me only one sheet of your letter. The rest seem to have got mixed up with other papers. I shall get them by and by.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 10253

131. LETTER TO MAITRI GIRI

February 2, 1931

CHI. MAITRI,

You have acted as befits the brave daughter of a brave father and brought honour to the Ashram. Do not nurse the slightest ill will against the person who beat you. I hope you don’t feel any pain now. Write to me. Most probably I shall soon arrive there.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 6227

132. LETTER TO GANGABEHN VAIDYA

February 2, 1931

CHI. GANGABEHN,

How shall I compliment you? You have shown that you are what I had always thought you were. How I would have smiled with pleasure to see your sari made beautiful with stains of blood. I got excited when I knew about this atrocity, but was not pained in the least. On the contrary, I felt happy.

I would have certainly felt unhappy if none of you were among the victims of that assault. I know that there is ignorant attachment even in feeling thus, but I cannot conceal my attachment to the Ashram even if I tried to do so. The shortcomings of the inmates of the Ashram are intolerable to me. Likewise, I feel happier when I see their virtues than when I see the virtues of others. Is it a great thing that you did not feel angry with those who hurt you? Would you be angry with Kaku if he beat you? These others who beat you were also your sons, who had become blind through ignorance.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati : C.W. 8771. Courtesy : Gangabehn Vaidya

133. LETTER TO MAHALAKSHMI M. THAKKAR
February 2, 1931

CHI. MAHALAKSHMI,

The kindness which Gangabehn and others have tasted, all of you will taste by and by. You should be patient and keep yourselves ready for it. It is not enough that we should suffer beating. When beaten, we should not get angry with the person who beat us but, on the contrary, should pray for his welfare. I think we shall now be able to meet somewhere.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 6814

134. LETTER TO RAMESHWARDAS PODDAR
February 2, 1931

BHAJI RAMESHWARDAS,

Everything is possible with patience and effort.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi : G.N. 178
135. LETTER TO HEMPRABHA DAS GUPTA

February 2, 1931

CHI. HEMPRABHA,

I have no idea when I shall reach Calcutta. If at all I go there, I cannot ignore Khadi Pratishthan. But it may not be possible to stay there all the time. Tell me about Arun’s health. I shall leave for Bombay tomorrow or the day after.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi : G.N. 1683

136. LETTER TO KALAVATI TRIVEDI

February 2, 1931

CHI. KALAVATI,

You have shown great courage. Give me a full account.¹

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi : G.N. 5279

137. LETTER TO SHANTA S. PATEL

February 2, 1931

CHI. SHANTA (SHANKARBHAI),

You have taken a good vow. May God give you the strength to keep it. You have given me no news about Shankarbhai. On hearing about his fast in connection with his demand for a takli, I had taken steps while in jail and had heard that orders had been issued that a takli should be supplied to him.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 4058

¹ The addressee had taken part in the women’s procession at Borsad and was one of those who received injuries when the police lathi-charged the processionists.
138. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

February 2, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

I am writing this at about 10 p.m. on silence day. I started observing silence at 11.30 p.m. yesterday and so a little more time must pass before I can give it up. After my release it is only today that I may say I had some time for rest, though of course even today I had to listen to many people and hear their stories. All the same, I have certainly been able to write, for the first time after my release, the letters enclosed with this and some others. See if you can pass on their letters to Surendra1, Gangabehn2 and Vasumati3, or inform them of their substance. How is Durgabehn’s health? I have not asked Mahadev about it. I don’t know where he is at present. What is the position about Madhavji’s diet? Tell him that he cannot insist on being supplied milk and dates and that he should be satisfied if they agree to provide them at his own cost. Though I have been released, I feel as if I had not been released. If others are not released and if the situation does not improve, I shall have no choice but to court imprisonment. My programme in general is as follows:

I intend to start from here tomorrow evening so as to reach Bombay on Wednesday evening. I shall be there up to Friday at any rate. If, however, Panditji’s health deteriorates, I may not be able to leave even tomorrow. Or it may also happen that, after meeting Sastriji and others, I may have to leave on Friday to return here. Address the post accordingly. That is, address it to me at Bombay till I inform you otherwise. I am yearning to visit Kaira district. I intend to go there if I am free on Friday.

God alone knows when and where we shall meet. Unless some reason connected with the struggle brings me to the Ashram. I wish to visit neither the Ashram nor Ahmedabad. For permanent headquarters, I should naturally choose Karadi, but I see no possibility at present of my wish being fulfilled. I feel unhappy at the thought that I shall no longer be able to send discourses for Gitabodh. If you come to know more about Kaira, let me know.

1 They were in jail.
2 ibid.
3 ibid.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./I

139. LETTER TO CHANDRAKANTA

February 2, 1931

CHI. KANTA,

Your question is all right You can find the answer only in my letters. Happiness and unhappiness are states of mind. But how can we perceive that they are so? Certainly not by reading. We can do so only by experience. That is why suffering is necessary. Here by suffering I mean what is regarded as such by the world. Illness of the body, physical assault, hunger, getting robbed, being insulted, etc.,—it is the mind which experiences all these forms of suffering. A devotee of God, a yogi, one who has merged in the Brahman, has become a sthitaprajna, —these are not affected by such sufferings but remain content even in their presence as they do in so called happiness. When one becomes equi-minded in this way one will attain self-knowledge. Is this clear?

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

You too may have occasion to be assaulted¹. Remain unconcerned whether such occasion arises or not.

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: Chandrakanta Papers. Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library

---

¹ Gangabehn Vaidya had been assaulted on January 21, when she took part in a procession of women in Borsad in protest against the brutal treatment of a 17-year-old girl; vide “Letter to Viceroy”, 1-2-1931.
CABLE TO “DAILY NEWS”, LONDON

February 3, 1931

CABLE JUST RECEIVED. UNABLE PRONOUNCE FINAL OPINION ON CONFERENCE BUT WHAT WORRIES ME IS THE LOOK OF THINGS HERE. IF CONFERENCE HAS REALLY OFFERED FREEDOM TO INDIA THE REACTION SHOULD HAVE BEEN FELT HERE. ON CONTRARY WHAT I FIND IS BLACK REPRESSION CONTINUES UNABATED. UNPROVOKED ASSAULTS ON INNOCENT CITIZENS STILL CONTINUE. RESPECTABLE PEOPLE BEING SUMMARILY AND WITHOUT APPARENT REASON DEPRIVED OF THEIR IMMOVABLE AND MOVABLE PROPERTY BY MERE EXECUTIVE ACTION. PROCESSION OF WOMEN FORCIBLY DISPERSE[d] AND THEY WERE SEIZED BY THEIR HAIR AND KICKED WITH BOOTS. CONTINUANCE SUCH REPRESSION WOULD MAKE CONGRESS COOPERATION IMPOSSIBLE EVEN IF OTHER DIFFICULTIES WERE GOT OVER.

GANDHI

From a photostat : S.N. 16920-1
141. LETTER TO RAIHANA TYABJI
February 3, 1931

CHI. RAIHANA,

I got your letter. Now in a few days we shall meet somewhere.¹

I got your letter. If the climate of Kadi suits you and if the burden of work does not impose an excessive strain on you, the present arrangement will certainly do you good.

I had met Father and Mother in Bombay. The operation has given them good rest. Panditji’s condition is still critical. The doctors are trying hard. But after all, the thread of our life is in God’s hands. He may draw it back whenever He wills.

Khuda Haftiz.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : S.N. 9628

142. LETTER TO UMA BAJAJ
February 3, 1931

CHI. OM,

You knew enough Gujarati, have you forgotten it all? For you, Hindi, Gujarati, Marathi, Marwari, all should be the same. Write your next letter in Gujarati or Marathi and tell me how much you spin and card and what is your speed with the takli. Do you take a large helping of food and waste some or do you take only as much as the poor should and clean your plate? Do you read the Gita?

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Hindi]
Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, p. 335

¹ These two sentences are in Urdu.
143. SPEECH TO BOATMEN’S ASSOCIATION, ALLAHABAD

February 3, 1931

Gandhiji received an address today from the representatives of the Allahabad Boatmen’s Association in the “Swaraj Bhawan”.

Speaking to the boatmen’s representative and some Congressmen, Gandhiji referred to the no-rent campaign, and advised the people not to use force against cultivators who were not disposed to stop payment of their rents. He also referred to Sunday’s incident of the villagers travelling without tickets,¹ and deprecated their action as the Congress had not launched a campaign of travelling without tickets. He added that even when they attained swaraj, some fare would have to be charged for railway service.

A purse containing Rs. 101 was presented to Gandhiji on behalf of the boatmen.

The Hindu, 4-2-1931

144. LETTER TO MANU GANDHI

Sunday [Before February 5, 1931]²

CHI. MANUDI,

You remember you had asked me or a photograph? Since then I have been keeping all the pictures that come to me. One of these days they shall be sent to you. Write to me what you do the whole day.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C W. 1508

¹ To attend the public meeting at Allahabad; Jawaharlal Nehru paid the money to the Railway authorities in order to get all those who were arrested released.
² From the contents; ibid., p. 150.
145. LETTER TO ANAND T. HINGORANI

February 5 [1931]

MY DEAR ANAND,

The description of your sister’s wedding was interesting. I hope that her husband has nothing of the spirit of the Sindhi youth who are reported to be cruelly exacting in their demands upon the parents of their wives. You will be naturally anxious to come to me. But I hope you will restrain yourself as you are wanted there. So long as you are wanted, you must not think of coming to me. If I am able to settle down anywhere for a time, Vidya may come and be under observation for her health and complete her Hindi besides imbibing what there might be from the surrounding atmosphere.

Love to you both.

BAPU

[PS.]

I am keeping excellent health.

SJT. ANAND T. HINGORANI, B. A.
C/O SJT. JAIRAMDAS DOULATRAM
MARKET ROAD
HYDERABAD
SINDH

From a microfilm. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

146. LETTER TO MANU GANDHI

LUCKNOW,
February 5, 1931

CHI. MANUDI,

I can now send the pictures which I collected for you. Preserve them all carefully and ask someone who can understand their

1 The original has “1930”, obviously a slip, for the postmark bears the date February 5, 1931.
meaning to explain it to you. We shall now meet some time. Write to me. Where is Ramibehn? Ask Balibehn and Kamubehn to write to me.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : C.W. 1509.  Courtesy : Manubehn Mashruwala

147. LETTER TO D. B. KALELKAR

February 5, 1931

For anything to be achieved five factors have to co-operate. Among them, fate has been placed the last, but it is in effect the first. What can we do when fate itself is against us? Panditji suffered no inconvenience during the journey. It is like the kettle calling the pot black. Last night I sat down to spin after ten o’clock and could go to bed only at half past one. A lady has just left a papaw from her own garden. But I wish to eat papaw only when you offer it some day. I do not feel like eating it today.

[From Gujarati]

Mahadevbhaini Diary, Vol. XIV, p. 26

148. LETTER TO SOONABAI SIRWAI

ALLAHABAD,

February 5, 1931

DEAR SISTER,

I have your letter. I thank you for it. I am sorry that you were harassed. You suggest my fasting in expiation. It certainly calls for a fast. However, I feel that I should not resort to such a strong measure so soon after being released from prison. For the present, therefore, I am making enquiries with regard to this sad affair. After the enquiries are over, I will do what is necessary. I would request you to regard those who harassed you as your brothers and harbour no grudge against them. Their exercising coercion is bad, but considering that boycott of foreign cloth is a worthy cause I expect help from women like you.

Yours sincerely,

MOHANDAS GANDHI

[From Gujarati]

Mahadevbhaini Diary, Vol. XIV, pp. 25-6
149. LETTER TO HEMPRABHA DAS GUPTA

February 5, 1931

CHI. HEMPRABHA,

I have your letter. I have come to Lucknow on account of Panditji’s illness and I shall stay here for the time being. It will do no harm if Satisbabu fasts once every month. Those who join the Ashram on condition that they will observe its rules must observe them. But old inmates should not be turned out if they do not follow new rules. But the rules formulated for the sake of good management must be followed at all cost. The point is that rules should be such that no one can say that they are something new, that is, they should be in keeping with local conditions.

Write to me at Lucknow, care of Kalakankar House.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi : G.N. 1684

150. INTERVIEW TO “THE PIONEER”

ALLAHABAD
February 5, 1931

I am a man of peace, but circumstances have made my life one of struggle. I shall, however, leave no stone unturned to attain peace. It is no joy to me to submit thousands who have a childlike faith in me to suffering.

In answer to a question whether he found the Prime Minister’s declaration satisfactory, he said that he had resolutely refrained from coming to definite conclusions on the subject.

Mr. Sastri, Mr. Jayakar, and Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru have cabled to me to suspend judgment and I have the highest esteem for these patriots who love their country as intensely as I claim to do. They may be able to explain to me satisfactorily that Mr. Ramsay MacDonald’s declaration conveys something beyond what I have been able to make out on a cursory reading, and if in the light of my eleven points, I see that a settlement is possible, I shall readily advise the calling off of the civil disobedience movement.

Mr. Gandhi proceeded to discuss the allegations made against the police and said he had a large file on the subject containing evidence from men upon whose word he relied. When reminded that his version was one-sided, he added:

I do not ask you to accept my allegations against the police. Let us have an impartial investigation and I am quite prepared to lead evidence and abide by the verdict of the tribunal.

On its being pointed out that the police had generally conducted themselves with the utmost forbearance under the most difficult conditions, he replied:

I do not complain about ordinary repression. If I violate the law, I expect to be arrested. The Government may want to maintain order but there must be some relation between offence and punishment. Departure from this rule has been much more general than you suppose.

Responding to a question whether it was not inevitable that there should, in extraordinary times, be a certain amount of severity as it must be impossible exactly to measure action, Mr. Gandhi interjected:

Why should it be inevitable? It was not so in South Africa and the reason for that was that they had a national Government there.

Explaining himself further, Mr. Gandhi made a specific grievance of confiscations said to have taken place in Gujarat and Bengal.

Many have lost their homes. The sufferers may have been guilty of non-payment of taxes or not, but if property worth, say, Rs. 50 lakhs has been appropriated for dues, say, of about a lakh, it must be restored. The Government have nothing to gain by refusing to restore the property and my suggestion is not without precedent.

He insisted that the matter should not be left to Local Governments, but should go before an entirely impartial tribunal.

The presentation of an inventory does not, however, establish a claim, and I quite see that confiscations must be satisfactorily proved by the complainants.

Mr. Gandhi referred also to the release of political prisoners. On attention being drawn to the promise of the Government to release prisoners on the termination of the civil disobedience movement, he remarked:

I know that they will be released. But I have difficulties, though not insuperable, facing me. Some of our people are already perturbed.
at my conciliatory statements. But when I am convinced that I should call off the movement, I hope also to convince them. When I called off the last non-co-operation movement at Bardoli, I had only to act on my own and not wait for any indication from the Government. The circumstances today are different.

Dealing with the proposed Constitution, Mr. Gandhi said that with 80 per cent of the budget placed beyond the purview of the legislature and only 20 per cent left which would be inadequate for “nation-building” purposes, there was not much satisfaction to be gained.

If our co-operation is wanted, it will not do to tell us simply to adhere to a consideration of the unsettled questions. We must have the freedom to reopen the discussions on the so-called safeguards.

Mr. Gandhi also said that, in regard to the Indian States, there seemed to be no protection for the people of the States.

The Congress would be untrue to itself if it did not seek it, and I cannot bring myself to believe that Mr. Ramsay Mac-Donald would deny in his dealings in the matter all the teachings of a lifetime.

Mr. Gandhi, however, felt hopeful that the States and communal questions could be adjusted. But he was clearly of opinion that the Congress participation depended on two things: first, satisfactory adjustment of the preliminaries of suspension of the civil disobedience movement; and secondly, satisfaction regarding the Conference. He concluded:

I am doing everything to terminate civil disobedience which will be done if I am sure that full restoration will be made, prisoners are released, an impartial inquiry is held into the alleged police excesses led to, in many cases, by action taken for offences created by the proclamation of new regulations, and generally certain other necessary adjustments are made.

The Pioneer, 6-2-1931

151. INTERVIEW TO THE PRESS

LUCKNOW,

February 5, 1931

Asked by the Free Press representative at Lucknow about some message for the country, Mahatma Gandhi said:

I have no message to give. I can only emphasize what I have been saying, that continuous repression about which evidences are daily accumulating makes it well nigh impossible to contemplate peace. From all over the country I am getting reports that the authorities are ruthless and sometimes even devoid of all decency. And that, on the top of this, they do not hesitate to deny the truth of the allegations made on behalf of the suffering public.

The most painful part of the whole affair is that the Political Departments at the top defend the conduct of the police and wilfully—that is the only expression I can use—shut their eyes to everything said on behalf of the public, no matter how well supported the allegations might be. I have not a shadow of doubt in my mind that the allegations about the unchivalrous and cruel conduct of the police in respect of women’s processions in Borsad are true, and yet the Director of Public Information has made what reads like an oracular statement incapable of being contradicted. I am sure that if a really impartial enquiry is made, it would be found that the Director of Public Information had become a tool in the hands of unscrupulous officials who have not hesitated to add falsehood to their barbarity.

I know that I am using strong language, but anything less strong will be untruthful on my part. I would like to be proved wrong in having believed the reports I have received, in which case I should tender my apology to the officials concerned.

When asked by another Press representative about his future programme, he said that it depended upon the health of Pandit Motilal Nehru.

The Hindustan Times, 7-2-1931

152. MESSAGE TO “DARIDRANARAYANA”

LUCKNOW,
February 6, 1931

As Daridranarayana is the name given, I trust the performance too will match the name. In the present times if a raja brings out a paper for his subjects he has to be doubly careful. If he considers himself the master, the subjects are brought to ruin, but by regarding himself as their servant he uplifts both himself and the subjects.¹

MOHANDAS GANDHI

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 8695; also C.W. 2891. Courtesy: Kumar Suresh Singh

¹ This appeared in the first issue of the weekly published on October 26, 1931, from Kalakankar.
153. LETTER TO MANMOHANDAS GANDHI

LUCKNOW,
February 6, 1931

BHAISHRI MANMOHANDAS,

I got your letters. I could not reply to them owing to Pandit Motilalji’s illness. He passed away today and I am now disposing of the correspondence which has accumulated. It is not in the least necessary to translate my comments into English and give them in the booklet. A translation does not read well. It may also be improper to publish comments which I made from jail.¹ If your booklet is translated into Gujarati and if I can write anything on that occasion, I may say there whatever I wish to. My criticism was for your benefit only.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

I had read the figures of imports of foreign cloth, etc. They were excellent.

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 10

154. LETTER TO KUSUM DESAI

February 6, 1931

CHI. KUSUM,

You know well enough what time I can spare when out of jail. I shall not, therefore, be able to write as often as I used to do from jail. Panditji passed away today. And so it has become uncertain where I shall be going from here and where I shall stay. If you wish to write, you may do so at Allahabad.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 1819

155. LETTER TO GANGABEHN JHAVERI

February 6, 1931

CHI. GANGABEHN JHAVERI,

I got your letter. You should remain firm. You should tell the people very clearly that we are not fighting at present for redress of individual hardships. This matter must be fully clarified. We shall then know the weak from the strong. And that is necessary.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 3111

156. LETTER TO NIRMALA GANDHI

LUCKNOW,

February 6, 1931

CHI. NIRMALA,

I have your letter. If children do not like milk, the fault lies with the mother. If milk is good and is kept in a clean vessel children will readily drink it. Flavouring must not be added. Do not be put out if the infant does not accept milk for a day or two. If we show the firmness to give only milk when she is hungry, she will come to accept it. It is only a matter of habit. Tea of course must not be given. Start teaching Sumitra from today to breathe properly. If she learns to do it her nose will not run.

I should no doubt be happy if you could stay at the Ashram At suggested Bijapur because I felt that with Kashi there it might suit you better and you would also not suffer from constipation there. At present I eat only wheat rotis. I feel all right. Jaggery and sugar are certainly harmful. If the infant asks and if you feel that you must give her something, you may give large red raisins after washing and removing the seeds and teach her to suck them. Juice of black grapes may certainly be given. It can be given warm or cold. But it will be better if she forms the habit of sucking the grapes. Do not let her swallow them whole. Give one grape at a time.

There is no harm in applying kohl to the eyes. On the contrary, it is beneficial. The grease in it is useful. I do not know if the soot itself has any beneficial property. Possibly it helps the grease to stick.
well to the eyelids. The eyes should be swabbed daily with warm water. The pad should be of clean cotton. Letting the infant’s hair grow, up to a certain age, protects it. It does become necessary to cut the hair after the age of, say, three. oil should be rubbed daily to the roots of the hair. Never apply so much of it that it drips from the hair. After massaging the oil should be wiped off with a dry cloth.

_Blessing from_

BAPU

[PS.]

For the present I have to be in Lucknow. Where afterwards is uncertain.

From the Gujarati original : Nirmala Gandhi Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

157. LETTER TO NANIBEHN JHAVERI

_February 6, 1931_

CHI. NANIBEHN JHAVERI¹,

I have your letter.

You have to stay far away. The struggle at present is not for relieving personal distress. This point has to be clearly conveyed to the people. Matters should be made clear. The weak will stand apart from the strong. And that alone will be right.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

_Manavtana Prahari—Pannalal Jhaveri, p. 25_

---

¹ Wife of Pannalal Jhaveri
158. SPEECH AT MOTILAL NEHRU’S FUNERAL,
ALLAHABAD

February 6, 1931

Though a great leader of India has passed away today, I see on your faces not grief but elation. That should be so. When leaders leave us, it does not behove us to shed tears. For, what is happening here is not consigning to the flames the lifeless flesh of a devotee, but our witnessing great sacrifice that the nation has made. This is not the first such occasion in my life. At the time of the Lokamanya’s death also we had such a vast crowd. I see before me a scene similar to the one I had seen then. The people had been praying and singing songs. They were filled with a certain kind of exaltation. At first I could not realize that, but as soon as I recovered from the grief which had momentarily clouded my reason, I understood how the people had felt that the Lokamanya’s death was the crowning glory of his lifelong sacrifices. I witnessed similar scenes at the time of Deshbandhu’s death and of Lalaji’s, Hakimji’s, Mahomed Ali’s. What a great effect on the world and on Londoners had Mahomed Ali’s death made! The reason was that he had gone to England to serve the country’s cause and that he sacrificed his life in it. I am happy that today also the people have displayed the same feeling. If you have fully understood the significance of this, it is well that you have thus observed the occasion. Otherwise, the world would call us fools and say that a crowd of unfeeling people had collected at a fair. What we see before us is a national sacrifice. On this occasion, I ask of you that you disperse only after taking some definite vow to do whatever little you can for the country. You will indeed deserve praise if you do this.

Now, on this occasion, I will narrate to you an interesting story. Panditji was a huge lion and he had fought big battles in his life. And similarly he fought the god of death. You may say that he was defeated, but I do not believe that it is true. During this last illness of his, I visited him daily and occasionally he sent for me too. He did that yesterday. I joked with him. I have no words to praise the doctors. They had done their very best, and would have given their lives if that would have saved his life. It is because they had such faith that they had taken him to Lucknow for treatment. Their faith was the result not of Panditji’s physical condition, but of his courage. I told Panditji that, if he recovered, I would believe that swaraj was won. He smiled and said that it had been won already. Though he could not speak distinctly, he had enough peace of mind to be able to say this. Why did he believe that swaraj had already been won? Could anyone say that swaraj was not won when sixty thousand people had gone to jail, when people had faced numerous lathi-charges and made so many sacrifices? I did not visit him last night, but I tell you what Panditji’s wife told me. During his life he had not followed the practice of praying with Ramanama, and used to make fun of religion, because he abhorred hypocrisy and false show and was angered by men practising irreligion in the name of religion. But I know his heart and knew that he believed in God. Last night he had been uttering Rama’s name aloud. Panditji’s tongue had never uttered a word of grief or despair—only a weak man like me would do that. But he never uttered Rama’s name either. However, yesterday he remembered that name. He also used to say that he had forgotten gayatri—he had given up the practice of reciting it because of the irreligion he saw around him. But, as he told his wife, he had recollected the gayatri verse that day. This means that Panditji departed a pure man. May his pure self-sacrifice result in making us purer too. Before leaving here, resolve what you will do for the cause for which this great man sacrificed his son, daughter and son-in-law.

The pledge which has stirred you is to win swaraj with the twin means of non-violence and truth. Keeping these two means in your mind, take whatever vow you wish to before you leave. In your enthusiasm today, you forgot yourselves and used thoughtless words. We are here today to serve the cause of peace, and it behoves us to be peaceful. Even soldiers, the men who work with weapons of steel, remain disciplined and peaceful, though of course outwardly. Leave this place with that peace in your mind and that discipline in your outward behaviour. Take, with this fire as witness, whatever sincere pledge you can fulfil. May God inspire you to take that pledge.

[From Gujarati]

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai
159. A NOTE

[After February 6, 1931]

The ashes may certainly be preserved and something erected over them—memorial subscriptions cannot be collected just now. If we close the struggle with success, much can and will be done.

Jawaharlal has to go tomorrow. The ashes will be consigned to the Ganges. But he should reserve some for the Swaraj Bhavan and bring them in an urn.

From a photostat: G. N. 5084

160. STATEMENT TO ASSOCIATED PRESS OF AMERICA

February 7, 1931

Panditji’s death cannot affect the Congress position at all. Whether it may stiffen Congress attitude I do not know, but that it will not weaken it I am quite sure.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

161. TELEGRAM TO G. D. BIRLA

February 7, 1931

GHANSHYAMDAS
CARE “LUCKY”, BOMBAY
NO INSTRUCTIONS FAST NOW CONTINUE. DO WHAT IS BEST. AM HERE TILL 14TH.

From a microfilm: S.N. 16924

162. MESSAGE ON MOTILAL NEHRU’S DEATH

ALLAHABAD,
February 7, 1931

Motilal’s death should be the envy of every patriot. He died after having surrendered his all for the country and up to the very last thinking only for the country. Let us deserve this hero’s sacrifice by 1 From the contents. Motilal Nehru died at Allahabad on February 6, 1931; vide also “My Notebook”, 19-2-1931.

2 To its special representative James Mills each sacrificing, if not all, at least enough to attain freedom, which he was yearning after and which is within easy grasp now.

_The Bombay Chronicle_, 9-2-1931

163. LETTER TO V. S. SRINIVASA SASTRI

ANAND BHAWAN, ALLAHABAD,

_February 7, 1931_

DEAR BROTHER,

Jawaharlal was much touched by your wire¹. Thank you for it. I would love to see you and hear all you have to say to me;² for I am not at all sanguine of fruitful result. The atmosphere in India does not seem to me to support your and other friends’ jubilation. I would like however to feel that there was no foundation for my fears. You may come whenever you are free. The Working Committee meets here on the 13th instant. If it is at all possible, we should meet on or before 11th instant.

_Yours sincerely,_

M. K. GANDHI

Letters of Srinivasa Sastri, p. 207; also the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy : Narayan Desai

---

164. LETTER TO SHIVABHAI PATEL

_February 7, 1931_

CHI. SHIVABHAI,

I got your letter. Kaira is foremost in my thoughts. It is because I am helpless that I have not run down there. But I shall take the first opportunity to do so. Write to me from time to time and keep me informed.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9505

---

¹ Of condolence on Motilal Nehru’s death
² Regarding the first Round Table Conference which the addressee had attended
165. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

February 7, 1931

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

Only today I got your letter of the 3rd. Why do you go on worrying even there? If by the time I reach Bombay you have recovered sufficient strength, do come there. I hope you got the letter in which I had asked you some questions. What do you eat? And how much? Do you sleep well? Have you gained any strength there? Can you sit up or leave the bed? Let me have as many details about the state of your health as you can give. Till the 14th at any rate, I shall be in Prayag. Write to me every day.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3406

166. LETTER TO CHANDRAKANTA

February 7, 1931

CHI. KANTA,

I got your letter. I understand your impatience to meet me. I am going to Kheda in any case. It would be good if you could meet me there. But if you cannot restrain yourself till then, you may certainly come to Bombay. But it is not certain, either, whether or not I shall now be going to Bombay. I will be at Prayag till the 14th at least. Has your cough stopped? Write everything.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: Chandrakanta Papers. Courtesy : Gandhi National Museum and Library
167. TELEGRAM TO BOWMAN

[On or after February 7, 1931]

EFFECT OF GREAT PANDIT’S DEATH WILL DEPEND UPON HOW PEOPLE AND GOVERNMENT REACT TO IT. IF PEOPLE RESPOND TO HIS NOBLE SACRIFICE AND GOVERNMENT APPRECIATE MODERATION OF ONE WHO WAS SATURATED WITH COUNTRY’S LOVE WE CAN HAVE HONOURABLE PEACE. BUT WHILST I HAVE HOPE OF PEOPLE’S RESPONSE I HAVE NOT MUCH HOPE OF GOVERNMENT RESPONSE. WHATEVER MAY BE TRUE OF ATMOSPHERE IN BRITAIN I SEE NO CORRESPONDING CHANGE IN INDIA.

GANDHI

From a photostat: S.N. 16923; also microfilm S.N. 16924

168. MESSAGE TO “LIBERTY”

Press Message February 8, 1931

My position is worse than widow’s. By faithful life she can appropriate the merits of her husband. I can appropriate nothing. What I have lost through Motilalji’s death is a loss for ever.

“Rock of ages cleft for me,
Let me hide myself in Thee.”

GANDHI

BAKSHI

“LIBERTY”

CALCUTTA

From a microfilm: S.N. 16924

1 Editor, Englishman. This was in reply to his telegram dated February 7, which read: “Please send short telegram on effect passing Motilal political situation. Convey deepest sympathy Jawaharlal.”

2 Up to this is in Gandhiji’s hand.

3 The Bombay Chronicle, 10-2-1931, published this as Gandhiji’s “exclusive statement to Liberty.”
169. NOTE ON MOTILAL NEHRU

February 8, 1931

Pandit Motilalji adored his children, but his adoration was divine, because instead of interfering with his and their growth it promoted that of both. For the sake of them he gave himself and them to the country.

M. K. GANDHI

From the original: C.W. 9331. Courtesy: Municipal Museum, Allahabad

170. LETTER TO T. RANGACHARI

February 8, 1931

I thank you for your letter. I am at one with you in desiring peace. But I confess to you that I see no sign on the Indian horizon of an honourable peace coming. The deliberate screening of the police, high and low, shows that they are to rule as they have done, no matter what happens to the constitution. The man in the street and now the woman also must, if the authorities can help it, for ever lie under the police heels, a situation that I for one cannot tolerate for a moment longer than I can help.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

171. LETTER TO SUSHILA GANDHI

February 8, 1931

CHI. SUSHILA,

Now that I am out of jail, I no longer get the time which I had there for writing letters. I shall have to stay in Prayag for one week still. After that, as God wills. My own wish is first to go to Ahmedabad and thence to Kaira. I am all right. Write to me regularly. If you write in time so that the letter should reach me here, address it to: Anand Bhawan, Allahabad. Otherwise, post it to the Ashram. They will redirect the letter to me wherever I am. My blessings to all.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6695

1 In reply to his letter which read: “. . . What a supreme occasion has arisen for entering into an honourable peace and settlement with Britishers. . . .”
172. STATEMENT TO THE PRESS

ALLAHABAD,

February 9, 1931

Mahatma Gandhi has issued a statement to the Press today at 11 a.m., asking that the fifteenth of February, the Shraddha Day, should be observed all over India as “Motilal Day”. The following is the full text of the statement:

Next Sunday (15th instant) is the first day of the shraddha ceremony for the soul of the late Panditji Motilal Nehru. I suggest that as a mark of respect for his memory and to commemorate his unexampled sacrifice for the country, all work should be suspended and the day observed by the nation as one of greater dedication to the cause he loved and for which he lived. Those who believe in purificatory fast will fast for the day breaking it in the evening.

I suggest the following programme:

1. Meetings all over the country at 3 p.m. so far as possible and so as to enable the peasantry to return to their homes in due time.

2. People should march in silent procession to the meetings with national flags.

3. Perfect silence should be observed at the meetings.

4. The following declaration may be made by the assembly speaking word for word after the chairman: “We assembled in this meeting for commemorating the great and noble sacrifice of the late revered Pandit Motilal Nehru hereby solemnly resolve to dedicate ourselves more fully than hitherto to the cause of the country so as to hasten the advent of purna swaraj.”

Dedication may be in any of the following ways, for instance:

(a) giving up intoxicating drink or drugs and persuading others to do so,

(b) undertaking to picket peacefully and without obstruction such drink and drug shops till such time as total prohibition becomes the law of the land or for a period,

(c) treatment similar to (a) and (b) regarding foreign cloth,

(d) resolution to spin a minimum quantity of yarn per day,

N.B. Spinning includes a knowledge of carding and so far as possible preparing one’s own slivers.

(e) resolution to wear nothing but hand-spun and hand-woven khadi,
(f) buying or selling such khadi on the memorial day,
(g) giving to the national cause whatever is within one’s capacity or at least the day’s earnings,
(h) doing any service or any act of self-denial not covered by the preceding clauses.

He further says:
1. It is of the utmost importance that all suspension of work and every other act should be absolutely voluntary. There should be no compulsion of any kind whatsoever.
2. To make the demonstration impressive perfect discipline is essential.
3. Men, women and children belonging to all classes and communities are expected, in their tens of thousands, to take part in the demonstration.
4. If the people at large will it, complete boycott of foreign cloth can be accomplished on the memorial day. It would be the noblest monument that is within the power of the nation to raise in one day to a patriot who himself at one time was given to all sorts of foreign luxuries and who when he realized his duty discarded and burnt his costliest clothes as we generally discard worn out clothings.
5. So far as possible people should declare their individual act of self-denial or resolution at the meeting and in every case to the Congress sub-committee of his or her taluk or firka. An abstract of results should be sent to headquarters.

_The Hindustan Times, 9-2-1931_

173. _TELEGRAM TO PURUSHOTTAMDAS THAKURDAS_
_February 9, 1931_

PURUSHOTTAMDAS THAKURDAS
PADAMDHAM
NEW DELHI
YOUR LETTER. THANKS. EARLIER YOU COME BETTER.
GANDHI

From a microfilm : S.N. 16924

---

¹ In reply to his Gujarati letter dated February 8, 1931, in which he had sought an interview with Gandhiji before the latter took a final decision, presumably, about the Round Table Conference after his talks with T. B. Sapru. (S.N. 16925)
174. LETTER TO KUSUM DESAI

ALLAHABAD,
February 9, 1931

CHI. KUSUM,

You must have received the postcard which I wrote directly from here. I understand your shrinking. But the fear that it implies does not seem proper to me. We shall now meet somewhere and, if I have time then, I will explain this to you. What is there to explain though?

I will not give up the hope I have built on you.

There was a letter from Shanta. She says that she will go to you in a few days.

My health is very good indeed. It seems I shall be here up to the 15th. I don’t know where I shall be after that. Your handwriting in English is good.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1820

175. LETTER TO KASHINATH TRIVEDI

PRAYAG,
February 9, 1931

CHI. KASHINATH,

Your letter of the 25th reached me only today after a long, round about journey.

For showing your diary [to Narandas], do not wait till you have gone back to live in the Ashram.

When the path of dharma is clear, you should not be deterred from following it by Father’s or Mother’s threat to commit suicide or the former’s threat to leave the home and become a mendicant. Such threats are rarely carried out but even when they are carried out we may rest assured that that is for our good. In my view, Mother’s health has improved considerably.

‘Non-violent violence’ is certainly a meaningless phrase. Do not enlarge the field of your work beyond your capacity.

We should never seek work and, when new work comes to us unsought, we should think about our capacity before accepting it. It should be enough if we improve what we are doing and put it on firmer foundation. If we do that, we shall be able to produce all the results we aim at.

I am here up to the 14th or 15th at any rate. After that, I shall have to consider where I should go.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5280

176. LETTER TO CHIMANLAL

PRAYAG,
February 9, 1931

CHI. CHIMANLAL,

If you are ready to take in Annapurna for six months or more, you may as well accept her without any such definite limit. If she is found to be of pure character, she will not prove a burden. If she is found to be unworthy, she cannot stay even for one day. I see no harm in taking her in after making this clear to her. However, Narandas and you should think and decide for yourselves what to do.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 24370

177. LETTER TO MANAGER, “YOUNG INDIA”

February 9, 1931

BHAISHRI,

After reading in the papers about the attack on you, I stopped sending articles to you for the journal. The loss of the cyclo-styling equipment is, from our point of view, certainly a sort of defeat for us. It has had no effect on me. For we have no right at all to own property. In a tyrannous state, the tyrant claims every pie as his property and, through that claim, he is able to oppress the subjects. If, in such a state, an individual or group of individuals becomes indifferent to property, the tyrant’s power of oppression ends.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan, 22-2-1931
178. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

[Before February 10, 1931]¹

CHI. NARANDAS.

I got your third letter today. I am here up to the 14th at any rate. I do not know at present where I shall go after that. I will inform you when it is decided. I should certainly like you to come and see me somewhere. Others, too, may be eager to see me. But I certainly do not wish to come to the Ashram. I can go only if there is a settlement. Instead, I intend to go to Kaira District via Ahmedabad so that all can see me at little expense and with little trouble. But I cannot say what I may be obliged to do.

Give me detailed information about Prabhavati’s health. If she continues to get fainting fits, ask the doctor to come and examine her. If he makes any suggestion, follow it.

I get no time at all to attend to correspondence, etc. I hope I shall get some now. I shall be getting letters from you regularly now.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

Have Gangabehn and Vasumati been tried and sentenced? If yes, to what term of imprisonment? Sitla Sahay informs me that you get fever and that Kusum has become very thin? How is this?

From a copy of Gujarati: C.W. 8152. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

179. STATEMENT ON INDIA’S PUBLIC DEBTS

[February 10, 1931]²

Mr. Gandhi was shown Reuter’s telegram about the Daily Mail’s comments on the demand for the repudiation of public debts. Mr. Gandhi made it quite clear that it was no question of repudiation, but what he wanted was the matter should be placed before an impartial tribunal, who would judge whether the loan was raised in the interests of India or not; and if not, the loan should be charged to the British revenues.

The Hindu, 11-2-1931

¹ From the reference to the addressee getting fever; vide “Letter to Narandas Gandhi”, 10-2-1931.
² Released on this date from Allahabad, by the Associated Special Service
180. LETTER TO GANGADHARAO DESHPANDE

ALLAHABAD,
February 10, 1931

MY DEAR GANGADHARAO,

Your letter. Confusion is worse confounded. Motilalji’s death has upset my apple cart. What cruel fate has in store for me I do not know. “One step enough for me.” I am here till 15th perhaps. Everything uncertain then. If ever a truce is declared, restoration of property like yours is a certainty. Meanwhile it is well that we become houseless, landless and luckless. Under organized despotism lucklessness is luck, poverty a blessing, riches a curse, evil is enthroned, goodness nowhere, in one clause all values are transposed. We have only felt from afar the heat of the fire we must pass through. Let us be ready for the plunge. That is my reading just now. And it fills me with joy. A halting peace will be dangerous and I can see no sign of real peace coming.

Yours,
BAPU

From a photostat : G.N. 5214

181. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

Tuesday Morning, February 10, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

It seems you have started forwarding my post. I suppose I shall know by and by how you came to have an attack of fever.

Kanta has asked me about the land revenue dues payable by the Ashram.

I am still not in a position to give a considered opinion from here. We should carefully read the notice, etc. We should ascertain the law in regard to gift-lands. I have, however, just asked Mahadev and he tells me that a decision has already been taken not to pay the land revenue. It is, therefore, not necessary for me to express any opinion. I suppose the decision is, not to pay the land revenue, let the Government do what it will. Yes, I think that is the only proper course. It will test us. Or, rather, how do we know what will test us?
Though Prabhavati does not wish to be examined by a doctor, for our satisfaction it is necessary that Haribhai should examine her.

I suppose Mahadev keeps you informed about my programme. It is, however, likely to go on changing for some time. The only certain thing in a war is that nothing is certain. I shall know only on the 15th where I shall have to proceed on or after that date. We cannot, therefore, know for certain where and when we shall meet. If you have anything to ask me, write to me about it. If we meet, we shall discuss the matter further. I say “if we meet” deliberately. I see no signs of a settlement, and, if there is none, I think they are bound to arrest me. In these circumstances, I think it would be advisable to proceed in every matter as if I were in prison. If the Lord of Janaki did not know what was to happen the next morning, how can we possibly know what the future holds in store for us?

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

There are 40 letters.

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U/I

182. LETTER TO RAMABEHN JOSHI

PRAYAG,

February 10, 1931

CHI. RAMA,

I have your letter. You should not get tired so soon. If we are imprisoned, we should welcome that. If they beat us, we should suffer the beating with Ramanama on our lips. A person who is out to serve, what choice can he or she have? How do we know that we shall escape with beating? We may even have to face bullets. We should show patience and be ready to pass through any test God may ordain for us.

If, while doing service, we go to bed late and get up late, we need not feel unhappy about that. However, there should be no self-deception in this matter.

Write to Vimu and ask her how, after hearing that in Borsad women were dragged by their hair, she still wants to have long hair. After this incident, the right course for all women engaged in service is to get their hair cut short. But how can I convince women about this?

I am here up to the 15th. Where I shall be after that, God alone knows. But it seems to me that we shall meet now.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5330

183. LETTER TO CHANDRAKANTA

Tuesday morning, February 10, 1931

CHI. KANTA,

I got your three letters together. I have answered your question about the Ashram in the letter to Narandas. Even if you have the slightest cough, get rid of it. Prabhavati’s company is company of the good. Though young, she is wise. You can learn a lot from her. Her spirit of service is extraordinary. Serve her well and make her forget her sorrow. If I do not go to Ahmedabad you may come with Prabhavati to Bombay and meet me. In the meantime get well.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: Chandrakanta Papers. Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library

184. SPEECH TO STUDENTS, ALLAHABAD

February 10, 1931

Hundreds of students and Congress volunteers, mostly from the villages, assembled at Anand Bhawan, on Tuesday afternoon to have a darshan of Mahatma Gandhi. Mahatma addressed the gathering for nearly ten minutes urging that the students should learn carding and spinning and should wear nothing but pure, hand-spun and hand-woven khaddar. He emphasized that by so doing, they would best perpetuate the memory of the late Pandit Motilal Nehru and at the same time strengthen the efforts of the Congress to win purna swaraj for India.

Gandhiji spoke in Hindi and in an extremely low tone. A Mysore student made a request that Gandhiji should address the gathering in English for the benefit of those who could not understand Hindi quite well, and added that, despite his stay for two years and a half at Allahabad, he could not follow Gandhiji’s Hindi speech.

If I remain in Mysore for two and a half years and if I cannot learn Canarese quite well, I should really feel ashamed of myself, remarked Gandhiji and smilingly asked the student:
Are you not ashamed to confess that you do not know Hindi?
The Hindu, 12-2-1931

185. MESSAGE TO BENGAL

[On or after February 10, 1931]

I have always entertained high hopes of Bengal and have had no cause for disappointment but I know that Bengal has the capacity to do much more if only youth of Bengal uniformly turn to non-violence not merely as a policy but even as the creed and I have never despaired of Bengal doing this notwithstanding warning of some Bengal friends to contrary.

From a photostat: S.N. 16926

186. TELEGRAM TO “TEJ”

February 11, 1931

EDITOR

“TEJ”

DELHI

RATHER THAN TALK SING OR WRITE ABOUT
MOTILALJI’S MANY QUALITIES IT WOULD DELIGHT HIS SOUL AND PROFIT US IF WE WOULD EMULATE HIS NOBLE SACRIFICES AND THUS HASTEN
THE ADVENT OF SWARAJ.

GANDHI

From a microfilm: S.N. 16924

1 In reply to Har Dayal Nag’s letter dated February 10, 1931, in which after expressing his condolences on the death of Motilal Nehru, he had requested Gandhi to send a message for Bengal.
187. LETTER TO PACHA PATEL
February 11, 1931

Received your wire. It was not necessary to send a telegram. My heart is roaming about in Bardoli and Borsad. It seems I shall be again arrested there.

But everything depends on God. Man may strive to achieve a thing. Only when God wills it, I shall be there.

My blessings to all men and women. Particularly let everyone carry out his or her pledge.

The Bombay Chronicle, 17-2-1931

188. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL JOSHI
After Prayers, February 11, 1931

CHI. CHHAGANLAL (JOSHI),

I do not know whether you will get this letter. This time, be satisfied with a postcard. I do wish to go to Kaira District at the earliest opportunity. Whatever settlement is reached,—I have little hope that any will be reached—I will certainly try to safe-guard fully the interests of the cultivators who had joined the struggle. I have not received the note sent by you.

Write to me from time to time and ask others to write too. I shall be here up to the 15th at any rate. After that, wherever God takes me. If I can carry out my plan, I wish to go to Kaira via Ahmedabad. I need not write anything in this letter about the events here.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 5501.

189. LETTER TO TARA MODI
February 13, 1931

CHI. TARA,

I got your letter. I do not understand the complaint against Mithubehn. Whatever the truth in it, our only aim is to serve. We neither desire nor ask for any reward. The reward of service is greater zeal for service. You need not get frightened by any false charge. I take it you got the clothes, etc. You should continue to write to me. Take care of your health.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 4171

190. CABLE TO “DAILY HERALD”1

February 14, 1931

“NEWS CHRONICLE” INTERVIEW IS A FAIR SUMMARY
OF MY MENTALITY. I CAN ONLY ASSURE YOU THAT I AM MAKING A DESPERATE EFFORT IN SPITE OF MYSELF TO SECURE PEACE, IF OBTAIN-ABLE WITHOUT SURRENDER FUNDAMENTAL
POSITION. POSITION TAKEN AT YERAVDA INTERVIEWS
BY LATE PANDIT MOTILAL NEHRU PANDIT
JAWAHARLAL NEHRU MYSELF AND OTHER COWORKERS
TOUCHED VERY EXISTENCE OF NATION. IF INDIA IS TO FEEL GLOW OF FREEDOM SURELY SHE MUST HAVE CONTROL OF HER OWN DEFENCE
RECEIVING SUCH ASSISTANCE AS MAY BE NECESSARY FROM BRITISH EXPERIENCE. IF IN CERTAIN MATTERS WE ARE UNABLE TO GIVE GOOD ACCOUNT OF OURSELVES FAULT IS NOT
OURS BUT INCAPACITY DUE TO WHAT I HOLD WAS DELIBERATE SUPPRESSION OF A WHOLE
NATION IN MATTERS OF SELF-DEFENCE. NOR AM
I ABLE TO RECONCIL MYSELF TO ANY EXTERNAL CONTROL IN FINANCIAL MATTERS.
ENGLISHMEN CAN HAVE NO CONCEPTION OF
THE GROWING PAUPERISM OF THE MASSES WHO

1 In reply to a cable (S.N. 16927) dated February 13, 1931, from its Editor, which read : “News Chronicle interviewer today records you saying, ‘I want substance of independence. Round Table Conference proposals do not give me that substance. I content with nothing less. Civil disobedience movement must go on. I am looking for every opportunity of peace. At present I see none.’ Is this correct statement? Your definite final conclusion.”

128 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
IN LATE LORD SALISBURY’S WORDS HAVE BEEN SYSTEMATICALLY BLED TO PROVIDE A REVENUE OUT OF ALL PROPORTION TO THE CAPACITY OF THE INHABITANTS OF THIS UNHAPPY LAND. I HAVE SINGLED OUT BUT TWO MATTERS OUT OF SEVERAL OTHERS I CAN MENTION BUT I AM AN OPTIMIST AND BY NATURE LOVER OF PEACE. EFFORTS ARE THEREFORE NOW BEING MADE TO FIND IF THERE IS ANY WAY WHEREBY COOPERATION CAN BE TENDERED. I PLEAD FOR AN ACCURATE STUDY OF WHAT THE CONGRESS STANDS FOR AND OF THE SITUATION AS IT IS DEVELOPING FROM DAY TO DAY. IT IS HARDLY REALIZED BY EVEN SINCERE WELL-WISHERS IGNORANT OF THE CONDITION OF THE MASSES THAT THEY ARE NOT ONLY UNABLE TO BEAR FURTHER TAXATION BUT THAT THEY ARE UNABLE EVEN TO BEAR THE WEIGHT OF THE EXISTING DEMAND MADE UPON THEM IN A VARIETY OF WAYS. SUCH A COUNTRY CANNOT BEAR THE EXPENDITURE OF A FOREIGN ADMINISTRATION RELATIVELY TO THE AVERAGE INCOME THE MOST EXPENSIVE IN THE WORLD OVER AND ABOVE COST OF FOREIGN ARMY OF OCCUPATION.

From a photostat : S.N. 16928
DEAR FRIEND,

As a rule I neither wait for outward prompting nor stand on ceremony, but straightway seek personal contact with officials whenever I feel such contact is needed in the interest of a cause. But somehow or other, in the present case, I have missed the guidance of the inner voice. But I have received suggestions from friends whose advice I value that I should seek an interview with you before coming to any decision. I can no longer resist this advice. I am aware of the responsibility resting on my shoulders. It is heightened by the death of Pandit Motilal Nehru. I feel that without personal contact and heart to heart talk with you, the advice I may give my co-workers may not be right. The friends I have referred to read into the proceedings of the London Conference a meaning and a hope I would like to share. There are other difficulties to be overcome before I can advise suspension of civil disobedience and co-operation in the remaining work of the Conference. It was felt that, before the Working Committee took any final decision, it might be better for me to meet you and discuss our difficulties with you. I therefore ask you, if you are willing, to send me an appointment as early as may be possible.¹ I would like to meet not so much the Viceroy of India as the man in you.

Could I expect a reply by Monday next? In the absence of a reply I propose to leave Allahabad on Tuesday for Bombay, where I am expected to pass four days. My address in Bombay is Laburnum Road.

I am,

Your faithful friend,

From a photostat: C.W. 9332. Courtesy: India Office Library

¹ Vide “Telegram to Viceroy”, 15-2-1931.
192. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

February 15, 1931

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I got your letter. I don’t require any more details about your health now. If you give up all worries, your health will improve very rapidly. Let there be no weight on your mind. It is I who have to worry for you; why, then, do you worry? As you give up worrying, the body will become free from tensions and the fainting fits will gradually disappear. For your headaches, you should bandage your head with a mud pack before going to bed, as I used to do. Twice or thrice every day, you should lie down flat on a bed, and rest. Even if you don’t get sleep, you should lie down. And see that you don’t suffer from constipation. Your diet is all right. I certainly cannot wish that you should eat beyond your appetite.

Father came and stayed here for four days. On the whole, I found his health good just now. Rajendrababu was of course there, and with them was Anugrahababu.

I cannot say when I shall be able to go to Bombay. Come and see me wherever I settle down for a few days.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3407

193. LETTER TO VALJI G. DESAI

February 15, 1931

BHAJ VALJI,

I got your letter. Do stay there as long as necessary. Do [not] forget mother khadi and mother cow. The Government is acting like one who is doomed to destruction and whose reason, therefore, is perverted, for it has been issuing all sorts of arbitrary ordinances. I am hanging in mid-air. It seems likely that I shall have to go to Delhi. How long it will be necessary for me to stay there will depend on the Viceroy's attitude. From Delhi, it seems I shall have to go to Bombay. I very much wish that you would learn the art of preserving your health. As for your questions, you must wait till we meet.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 7413. Courtesy: Valji Desai
At 3 p.m. Mr. Gandhi arrived at the meeting with, among others, Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru and took his seat on the rostrum...

After the . . . flag song by a few ladies, Mr. Purushottam Das Tandon requested, at the suggestion of Mahatma Gandhi, Maulana Abul Kalam Azad to preside at the meeting.

Mr. Gandhi, who sat on the rostrum spinning on the takli, then addressed the audience. It was a belief, he said, entertained in all religions that a person’s soul never dies and the shraddha ceremony was performed with a view to giving peace to the deceased soul. A person generally does not leave his body without a single desire. Some desire is always left in him unfulfilled. Pandit Motilal Nehru, said Mr. Gandhi, died with a longing for swaraj. It was his constant wish that the entire country should be free and the reins of her government should be in the hands of her own representatives, and that justice should be done to the poorest in this land, be they Hindus, Moslems, Christians, Parsis, or Sikhs. It, therefore, struck him, said Mr. Gandhi, that some such things should be done that day as would real shraddha for giving peace to the soul of Pandit Motilal Nehru. He, therefore, issued an appeal for the celebration of the memorial day.

Proceeding, Mr. Gandhi said that a bath in the Ganges was no shraddha. It certainly cleansed the body but purification of the inner selves could only be done by inward act. Such act was the pledge which they had just then taken. But it was useless if they did not act up to it. They had to do something that would hasten the advent of swaraj and that they knew would give peace to the soul of Pandit Motilal Nehru. He knew of thousands of people giving their lives simply because of their anxiety not to break their pledges. Mr. Gandhi hoped that the people who had taken the vow to work for the attainment of complete swaraj would abide by their pledges.

In the course of his observations Mr. Gandhi also appealed to the people to continue their efforts for bringing about Hindu-Muslim unity of which he was reminded by the recent disturbances in sacred Kashi. He added that the attainment of Hindu-Muslim unity was also the mission of Pandit Motilal Nehru’s life and it was Mr. Gandhi’s conviction that if the people combined to bring about that unity and attained it, other work for the attainment of swaraj would become very easy. He had learned, said Mr. Gandhi, that Hindus and Muslims in Kashi were cutting each other’s

---

1 The tenth-day shraddha ceremony of Motilal Nehru; vide also “Statement to the press”, 9-2-1931.
2 Then Purushottam Das Tandon, President of the provincial Congress Committee, moved the resolution embodying the vow prescribed by Gandhiji. The pledge was repeated word for word by the audience.
throats. He did not want swaraj at the expense of a single party. Neither he nor Pandit Motilal Nehru cared for swaraj exclusively for Hindus or Muslims. Swaraj under which Hindus and Muslims and others could live together was the aim of his life. It was, therefore, a matter for great shame if either community committed excesses against the other. It would be appropriate if everyone in the audience took the pledge to promote communal unity.

He added that in the course of the struggle they had lost Lokamanya Tilak, Hakim Saheb Ajmal Khan, Lala Lajpat Rai and Deshbandhu Das; and now Pandit Motilal Nehru was gone. It was time, therefore, that they did their duty and attained the good for which their leaders had died.

The Pioneer, 18-2-1931

195. TELEGRAM TO VICEROY

[On or after February 15, 1931]

THANKS WIRE HOPE WAIT ON YOU TUESDAY TWO O’CLOCK. IF HOUR INCONVENIENT PRAY APPOINT ANOTHER. IN DELHI STAYING WITH DR. ANSARI.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

196. TELEGRAM TO PRABHASHANKAR PATTANI

ALLAHABAD, February 16, 1931

SIR PRABHASHANKAR BHAVNAGAR

THANKS WIRE. LETTER RECEIVED. DEPEND UPON MY DOING BEST. HOPE YOU ARE WELL.

GANDHI

From a photostat: G.N. 5912

---

1 In reply to his telegram received on the night of February 15 which read: “Your letter. Ready see you any time Tuesday, Wednesday. Please wire.”

2 Which read: “Hope you have received my letter. When in 1919 you not without difficulty persuaded Amritsar Congress to accept and try Montagu’s reforms, eyes of India were on you for guidance. On the present occasion expectant eyes of the whole world are turned to you for peace. Everything points to an honourable settlement if Congress would help.” (Manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary)
197. MESSAGE TO PEOPLE OF UTKAL

February 16, 1931

I hope that you all will make sacrifices in the yajna for swarajya according to your mite.

MOHANDAS GANDHI

From Hindi : C.W. 9756. Courtesy : Government of Orissa

198. LETTER TO GUNAVATI KUNWAR MAHARAJ SINGH

ALLAHABAD,
February 16, 1931

DEAR SISTER,

Under the impulse of pure affection and contrary to my wont, I ate your bread without inquiring how it was prepared. In order to be able to copy it, I asked for the recipe. Now that I know it I must tell you that it is forbidden food for me. I do not eat eggs nor cow’s or buffalo’s milk and at present no milk at all. Nor do I take sugar as a rule. I may not therefore take the loaf you have so kindly sent again. Let this discovery cause you no distress. That the loaf was forbidden food for me causes me none. The remembrance I have of your affection for me, I shall treasure. If I have given you the information, I have done so to tell you why I may not eat the second loaf and also to appear before you as I am with my limitations.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy : Narayan Desai

199. LETTER TO PRABHASHANKAR PATTANI

ALLAHABAD,
February 16, 1931

SUINA BHAISHRI,

I got your letter and wire. I sent a wire in reply to your wire. One need not advise the teeth to take care not to hurt the tongue. I feel like that real mother in the story. Was she not ready to let go her claim to her son so that he may remain alive? Surely, women being dragged by their hair and boys being whipped for no crime cannot make me happy. I am, therefore, eager to go to any length to secure peace. If, however, that peace would be like the peace between the wolf and the lamb, rather than accept it I would let women be dishonoured, backs of innocent boys stained with blood, people’s homes looted and innocent people hanged. I always pray to God that I, who am standing at Death’s door, may not put my signature to anything which might prove a trap for the country. I am going to Delhi today with this prayer in my heart. I do not feel presumptuous like the dog in the story who was walking under the cart. I know the limits of my strength. I am but a particle of dust. Even such particle has a place in God’s creation, provided it submits to being trodden on. Everything is done by that Supreme Potter. He may use me as He wills. Whether it is victory or defeat, it will be His. There is, therefore, no question of defeat, or, say, rather, that it is ever defeat for us. I think I have written enough. I have been able to write even as much as I have done because today is my silence day. But all this is by way of preface. My intention in writing this letter was to request you to persuade the princes to acknowledge the rights of their subjects. They wish to be partners; will they not, then, agree to give an account of their actions to the other partners?

1 Exhibited at the Orissa pavilion of the Gandhi Darshan Exhibition held in Delhi during 1969-70.

How much did Lady Pattani spin and how much khadi did she sell? What have you done for cow-protection?

Vandemataram from

MOHANDAS

[PS.]

Give me news of your health. Address: C/o Dr. Ansari.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5917

200. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

February 16, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

If you have not received from Swami the yarn which I spun in jail, write to him and obtain it from him; after giving to the All India Spinners’ Association and the Cow-protection Society such quantity from it as may have to be given to them, I should like you to use the rest to get a sari woven for Ba. Whether this can or should be done, you may think over.

A good many people seem to be ill there. Since you are there I don’t worry on this account. It is surprising how we invite illness the moment bread and other starchy foods are included in our diet. I have been able to keep away illness from me for many years by living only on fruits and nuts. If possible, exclude bread from your diet unless you find it necessary for your health. Ratalu and other vegetables are as good as bread. I wish that you should take whatever measure may be necessary so as not to fall ill. Have Krishna and Kanu returned from Wardha? We are proceeding to Delhi today. I shall be meeting the Viceroy tomorrow. I let the events take their own course, and the Chief Potter alone knows whether the outcome will be a pot or a jar. My address in Delhi will be C/o Dr. Ansari, Daryaganj.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.] An article for Navajivan is enclosed with this; pass it on to Jivanji.

An old co-worker in the Champaran Campaign has a widowed sister and he wants her to be admitted in the Ashram. She may arrive there towards the end of March. Her name is Girinandini and she is aged 36. I have told her to write to you when she decides to join. She has agreed to observe the Ashram rules. As for her expenses, the brother will give what he can. He was a lawyer but gave up practice.

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U/I

201. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL JOSHI

[February 16, 1931]

CHI. CHHAGANLAL (JOSHI).

I am sending this letter along with the Ashram post to ensure that it reaches you without fail. I do not get enough time these days to write long letters to you from here. I am now going to Delhi, so I suppose I shall be able to come to some decision very soon. However, we should learn to feel certitude even in the midst of doubt.

1 Sweet potatoes
2 From the contents of this and the following two items, it is clear that they were written on February 16, 1931, before Gandhiji left for Delhi.
What can be more uncertain in its time of coming than death? A person lying on his death-bed may survive and live to a ripe old age, and a robust young man may die suddenly in a moment. Still, we go on doing our work as if we shall never die. What right, then, do we have to expect certainty in any other matter.

It will be enough if we resolve about one thing:
Abandon all duties and come to Me, the only Refuge.
If we can do this, what more do we require?
Whatever thou dost, whatever thou eatest,
Whatever thou offerest as sacrifice or gift,
Whatever austerity thou dost perform, O Kaunteya,
Dedicate all to Me.

Put all this before co-workers and tell them to be vigilant. Our work will end only with our death; or, rather, we may say that our work will remain even after our death.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

[PS.]
My address is Delhi: C/o Dr. Ansari, Daryaganj.

[From Gujarati]
_Bapuna Patro –7 : Shri Chhaganlal Joshine, pp. 211-2_

202. LETTER TO RUKMINI BAZAJ

[February 16, 1931]

CHI. RUKMINI,

I got your letter. I am leaving for Delhi this very evening. I cannot say when I shall come to this side again. It is also uncertain how long I shall be in Delhi. Probably I shall have to go from there to Bombay. I shall be happy if you write to me regularly in Delhi, C/o Dr. Ansari, Daryaganj. I hope you are much better now. I suppose you know that quite a number of people in the Ashram are ill at present.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 9292. Courtesy: Benarsilal Bazaj
203. LETTER TO MANIBEHN PATEL

Silence Day [February 16, 1931]

CHI. MANI,

I did get your letters, but I have not the time to send you a reply. Please therefore go on writing to me, whether or not I am able to write to you. We start for Delhi today. Address: C/o Dr. Ansari, Daryaganj. The Sardar is going to Bombay.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro–4 : Manibehn Patelne, p. 49

204. LETTER TO DIKSHIT

[February 16, 1931]

I see that the boycott of the census cannot be given up. It will be another matter if a settlement is arrived at and it becomes possible to give it up. There is no cause to entertain the fear you do in regard to the boycott. If the boycott is even reasonably successful, it will not be possible to use the figures for any purpose. And, moreover, nobody's progress is going to depend on statistics. It will depend only on moral strength. I would therefore advise you fully to support the boycott if you can.

Vandemataram from

MOHANDAS

[From Gujarati]
Mahadevbhai Diary, Vol. XIV, pp. 47-8

205. LETTER TO HEMPRABHA DAS GUPTA

PRAYGA,
February 16, 1931

CHI. HEMPRABHA,

I am leaving for Delhi today. My headquarters there will be Dr. Ansari's place, in Daryaganj. I do not know how long I shall stay

From the Diary
there but it will be for two or three days at least. How is Arun and what is the news about Charu?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi : G.N. 1685

206. SPEECH AT DELHI

February 17, 1931

At about 9 a.m., as Mahatmaji came out into the park, he was received with vociferous cheers by the crowd.

Addressing the people gathered there, Mahatma Gandhi said he was sorry that he saw no takli in Delhi, everywhere else he had seen taklis being plied by men and women.

Continuing, he said, because he was going to see the Viceroy today, it did not mean that they should go to sleep. They must continue to do something for winning swaraj.

Gandhiji laid great stress on the need of using pure khaddar.

The Hindustan Times, 19-2-1931

207. INTERVIEW WITH VICEROY (VICEROY’S VERSION)

February 17, 1931

There was no one present except Gandhi and myself. We began with general talk, in the course of which I dwelt upon the change in British opinion, which I hoped India would not make of no avail.

1.Future procedure. I sketched the ideas as they at present stand.

2.Scope of further discussions. I said there were three main principles in the Conference structure : Federation; Indian responsibility; reservations and safeguards. These were fundamental, but the detailed application of these principles was open to further examination and discussion. It would be as unprofitable for his friends to try to pull out the linchpins of federation and safeguards as it would be, say, for my Conservative friends to go back on the principle of responsibility.

3.He said that Congress could not give an undertaking in no circumstances to resume civil disobedience. I said that I could not bind them to any such pledge; but that the whole point was whether he and his friends had in mind a temporary and grudging truce or a genuine attempt to make a permanent peace. He said : “Certainly the latter”, but that he only wished to guard himself against imputations of bad faith if, as he trusted would not be, they found themselves wholly mistaken in the spirit of the later discussions.

4. He asked about the right of raising “dissolution of partnership”. I said that I regarded the question as academic, but presumed he could discuss it if he so desired. But I added that it would have a very damaging effect on British opinion if he made any public statement to this effect. He agreed, and said that he desired to be able to say that he was not precluded, if he should so desire, from raising the question, and to protect himself from the charge that he had taken His Majesty’s Government unawares if he did.

5. He then referred to the question of debts. I said there could be no discussion on repudiation (which he said was not intended), but that if it was a question of the examination of particular apportionment of liability between Great Britain and India, or India and Burma (in the event of separation), I did not suppose that objection would be taken on principle, however unprofitable such discussions might seem to me likely to be.

6. He raised the question of the States’ subject. I said that I presumed he could raise the matter in discussion, but he would be up against the Princes. He acknowledged this and left me with the impression that Congress felt they had to raise the question, but did not attach undue importance to it.

7. Proportion of representation in the later Conference discussions. He did not anticipate much difficulty. He attached no importance to proportions, provided they could get enough to have their various elements represented and to enable them to pull their due weight on Committees, etc. If necessary, other sections of opinion could be increased too. He said he thought it might be necessary to ask the Working Committee for a few more key men. I told him that I had contemplated a Congress representation of about 12, and 15 or 20 were larger figures than I could think necessary. He agreed to keep the numbers as low as he could; and said he would consider a suggestion I made about working on the plan of “substitute” delegates, to bring others in without swelling the official numbers.

8. We then got on the practical points, if, as he said civil disobedience was suspended. I at once took him upon the word ‘suspended’ and said that what I had in mind was effective abandonment. He said he did not attach importance to the word, but wished to protect the position defined in paragraph 3 above.

Practical points were:

1. Release of satyagrahis, including some sentenced under martial law in Sholapur. I said that my distinction of principle was violence and inciters to violence on the one side, about whom I could do nothing, and non-violent satyagrahis on the other.

2. Meerut prisoners. He argued for their discharge, but not, as I understood, as a condition. I said that they had nothing to do with civil disobedience, but I was as much disturbed as he was at the protracted proceedings, and would examine the case with a view to seeing whether anything could be done to accelerate the conclusion of the trial. More than that I could not say, as I could recognize no association between Communists and non-violent satyagrahis.

(3) He raised the question of the Bengal detenus, not, as I understood, as a condition, but in order to inform me that a great many people had been locked up who in no way deserved it. I omitted to make the obvious point that each case was submitted to two Judges, but told him that, if he wished to submit any evidence of a case in which the police had dropped on the wrong man, I would pass it on to the Governor of Bengal who would look into it personally. He did not seem to attach great importance to the question.

(4) Land and property. I said that third parties who had bought could not be disturbed. Any adjustment that was requisite for settlement would have to be through unofficial agency. He brought forward a good many technical points, on which I said little beyond adhering to the main principle that Government could be generous with what was still in its own possession, but not with what third parties had acquired. He promised to submit a note.

(5) Remission of fines. Those that were uncollected I said could probably be remitted. But I could not press local Governments to entertain the suggestion of restoring fines already collected. This was a matter on which local Governments would exercise their own discretion. He did not press this very hard.

(6) Restoration of presses and securities. I said the same principle must apply, i.e., what was in Government’s possession could be restored, but securities that had been forefeited fell into same category as fines paid.

(7) Reinstatement of officials resigned or dismissed. I said that I could not press any local Government to reinstate any officials whose places had been filled; and that the utmost I could do would be to invite local Governments to examine all cases on their merits with the object of acting as generously as circumstances permitted towards those who had resigned, whether out of pressure or because they had been swept off their feet by the civil disobedience movement. Dismissals stood in a somewhat different category, and I anticipated Governments would feel greater difficulty about this class of case inasmuch as officials had presumably not been dismissed without cause; but I was ready to invite local Governments to examine these cases also on their merits.

(8) Repressive ordinances. I said these could go, except the Burma Terrorist Ordinance, adding that, if the Press reverted to encouragement of violence, it would be necessary for Government to take action against it.

9. Punitive Police, he asked, should be withdrawn. I said it was a new point to me, but would if necessary invite local Governments to consider it.

9. Enquiries into police excesses. He dropped the idea of a general enquiry, but pressed very hard for special enquiries, if necessary in camera. I put the counter-arguments, and said that I could not go further than promise investigation by local Governments and if desired by myself of specific complaints. This he said was not much, as the truth could only be ascertained by cross-examination of evidence on both sides. I told him that there was so much on the other side that I did not think he was entitled to press for enquiries that could only have the purpose of placing the police in a position of defendants, and to this I was not able to agree. I would see any matter he chose to submit and he must trust to my assurance that local Governments would examine it fairly. I had also no objection to publicly exonerating those who had brought charges from any imputation of bad faith. He was not satisfied with this.

10. He read over to me other points on which he proposes to speak tomorrow. Salt; Peaceful picketing and there may have been something else.

11. I told him that I thought it was of great importance, if we were to succeed in our peace efforts, that the temperature should be lowered, and asked him to get Bombay to go slow in picketing, etc. He promised to do so.

12. We agreed to meet again alone tomorrow with possibly a larger meeting with others in to follow.

13. Although I made the point in Paragraphs 3 and 8 that I drew a clear distinction between action by Congress on the basis of a temporary truce with the intention of resuming the campaign, and a genuine desire to co-operate in constructive work, it is important to leave him in no doubt when we meet again (though I don’t think there is any) that the various items of action by Government are dependent on effective abandonment of the movement.¹

(Sd.) IRWIN

From a photostat : G.N. 8946

¹ For Gandhiji’s report of interview, vide the following item.
The Viceroy had impressed me very well. He had impressed me as much as Lord Reading had done, except that Lord Reading was clever and he took undue advantage of my discussions with him. Lord Irwin talked to me in a friendly way and frankly admitted that it was his mistake that we had not met so far. The second thing he admitted was that the British public had been aroused the most by my movement. This attitude of his shows that he wants to make peace. He desires peace because he has been touched by the struggle. He is wondering how long he can allow the struggle to continue and feels that now he would be obliged to rely on the gun alone.

I took out the resolution at the very outset.

MAHADEV DESAI. Was there no talk about your letter?

GANDHIJI. No, there was no specific mention of that but I felt that he liked the letter. I certainly told him that I was ready for a settlement and in the mean time Shuaib had come and asked me whether I would not write a letter in this manner, that I had placed that matter before the Working Committee and they approved of it, and so I had written. I went on reading the resolution. About the initial portion regarding the constitution, he said: “There is no difficulty about discussing anything, but I can’t say how much you will gain out of it. But you can certainly open the discussion.” I did not make any attempt to know what his views were. But he said if we wanted to discuss the clause regarding secession we should do that only in the Conference. But no one was going to listen to it and if I pressed the point too much, persons like him who wanted to help me would be put in an awkward position.

Then immediately he came to the truce terms. We discussed which of the conditions could be dropped. And the discussion on the inquiry itself took up half the time. The greatest difficulty is about the issue of the inquiry. He is not against it but he said that it made his position very delicate. “Will you be satisfied if I conduct the inquiry?” Thus by asking this question he had given up his case. I asked him: “How will you conduct the inquiry? Have you ever heard of a person having dis-pensed justice without hearing both the sides? You have our unsifted account and a similar account given by the police. What will you make out of it?” He agreed that nothing could be achieved. “The position today is that you have declared us liars before the whole world. How will it behove you to negotiate with liars like us? Have a look at the whole communique. Should we swallow the allegations that everything we said was fabricated?” He had no reply to give to all this (At this point Ansari came, so some things had to be repeated.) One thing was clear from his talk that those people are also tired just as some of us are. “I shall cer-tainly send a cable that you want the clause regarding secession to be in-cluded but the position of people like me who want to help you will become very awkward.” I can understand that. He apologized about the matter of the public debt. He said, “So far I thought you wanted repudiation of the debts, but you have certainly every right to demand distribution of the war expenses. We shall see how we can examine the question of fair distribution. I also desire the same thing as you do regarding the Native States, but you have to persuade the States themselves. We shall not prevent you from doing so. I wish to give you as much help as I can.”

1 In the source the report by Gandhiji of the interview is given under February 18, 1931.

He admits that all our demands are just. He did not say that even one of them was unjust but only put forward his diffi-culties. At the very beginning I explained to him whatever I had to say about our conditions. He said it would be difficult to release the Meerut prisoners and he wondered how much pressure he could bring to bear upon the Governor of Bengal regarding the release of detenus there. Moreover, all these things might be done but he asked, “How can we do them if you want to make that a condition prece-dent? We have collected fines from many; how can we refund them all? How can we pay compensation for property burnt down or destroyed? The proceeds of property sold, however, can be refunded.” I said: “Can you say this even in those cases where the market value has not been taken into acount and you have got rupees ten for a property worth rupees one thousand? Is there equity in this?” He saw the point and asked us to give him a list of the losses incurred. He saw the point regarding taxes also. “How can you exact taxes from people who have been ruined?”

About the fairness of taxation, I told him the story of Mahmood. Once a woman went to him to seek justice. Mahmood told her
"You live so far away that I cannot carry justice there." She said: "Stop ruling over us." Mahmood said, "Yes, that region should be excluded from the empire." Irwin laughed and said that justice should be done.

(While speaking of my keenness for peace, I casually told him: "I wrote to you a letter even from Yeravda but you did not reply to it. I do not complain but I want to show you how keen I am on a settlement.")

He asked me, "How can we throw the police to the wolves?" I said, "We do not want that. We want the enquiry only to establish whether the police have committed any atrocities."

The discussion about the inquiry alone took half the time. That means they consider the condition to be very difficult. Only for that reason will it be an acid test for us.

The Governor of Bombay was sitting outside. I was introduced to him. I could not talk to him because I was in a hurry for my meal and the A.D.C. came and told me that my car had arrived. The Viceroy had also asked me whether it would do if the Governor conducted an independent enquiry. I asked him "In what way is the Governor in a better position than you to do so? Why should we submit to the excesses of the police? Why shouldn’t they, over whom we are going to rule one day, consider themselves our servants right from today itself?"

The gist of the whole talk is that he very much wants a settlement and the other thing is that if we give up a single point of ours, our whole case will be ruined. I on my part told the Viceroy that if he granted that the Congress was something to reckon with, he must accede to our reasonable demands.

The reference to Mirabehn came up in the beginning and in the end. At the end, I said, "She must have cooked my meal and must be waiting for me." In the beginning I had said, "How can I sever my connection with you? I have so many English friends. Take for instance Mirabehn. I don’t know her family and her father and yet she has completely lost herself in me. Andrews keeps sending me cables from Cape Town asking me to arrive at a settlement. How can I give up this Andrews? Horace Alexander also writes to me and he advises me not to arrive at a settlement. Having written that he apologizes! Is it possible for me to sever all these relations? And yet if co-operation is not possible, I shall have to do so.
“If both of us desire not to quarrel, we shall not quarrel. I have come with a determination not to fight as far as possible.” I had assured him that “I do not want to tell you anything except the truth. I do not want to conceal anything from you, I do not want to have a single mental reservation. Hence you can tell me whatever you wish to. You can say whatever you have heard about my associates and tell me whatever you want, can question me about them.”

Talking about the release of the Meerut prisoners, he expressed his difficulty but he described the sentence passed on the Sholapur Martial Law prisoners as preposterous.¹

[From Gujarati]
From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy : Narayan Desai

209. TELEGRAM TO PERIN CAPTAIN
[February 17, 1931]²

PERINBEHN CAPTAIN
NEAR ISLAM CLUB
CHOWPATI, BOMBAY

HEAR VIOLENCE BEING USED PICKETING FOREIGN CLOTH. PLEASE PLACE MATTER CONGRESS AUTHORITIES TELL THEM SCRUPULOUSLY AVOID ALL VIOLENCE DIRECT INDIRECT PASSIVE OR ACTIVE.³

From a microfilm : S.N. 16924

¹ For the Viceroy’s version of the interview, vide the preceding item.
² Vide “Interview with Viceroy (Viceroy’s Version)”, 18-2-1931.
³ Addressee’s telegram (S.N. 16936) dated February 20, 1931 read : “Wire received. Instructions will be carried out.”
210. MESSAGE TO VISITORS

DELHI,

February 18, 1931

Mahatmaji came out\(^1\) at 1.40 p.m. and was cheered by hundreds of visitors, including a large number of ladies, who were anxious to have his darshan.

Mahatmaji put two questions to the crowd assembled. He first asked:

How many of you are dressed in khaddar?

Everybody raised his hand. Then Mahatmaji asked:

I want only those to raise hands who are dressed in hand-spun and hand-made khaddar.

Nearly thirty per cent of the assembled raised their hands. Then he asked them how many were dressed in foreign clothes. Only three hands were raised. He told them:

Use khaddar. This is my message. Now go home, all of you.

Then with a smile he hurried to his car which drove him to the Viceregal Lodge. The crowd raised shouts of “Mahatma Gandhi ki Jai” and melted away.

The Hindustan Times, 20-2-1931

211. INTERVIEW WITH VICEROY (VICEROY’S VERSION)

February 18, 1931

I had a further talk with Mr. Gandhi this afternoon. He began by telling me that he had, as requested by me yesterday, sent a telegram\(^2\) to Bombay saying that he had been informed that picketing was taking a serious form and was in danger of leading to violence, and that that kind of thing must be stopped. He promised to let me know the result.

He then proceeded to develop the points left over from yesterday beginning with:

(1) Punitive Police. I told him that, as I had said yesterday, it was a new point to me and that I imagined the action of local Governments would be dictated by the circumstances of each case. I could imagine cases in which local Governments might be willing to withdraw them as also others in which such withdrawal would have to be postponed. We left it at the point that I said in the event of a settlement being

\(^1\) Of Dr. Ansari’s house

\(^2\) Vide “Telegram to Perin Captain”, 17-2-1931.
reached I would draw local Governments’ attention to the matter.

(2) He developed an argument of which this was the gist. In districts where resort has been had to coercive processes for collection of taxes due, such further collection shall be suspended pending examination of cases by an officer through an enquiry, in which the people will be afforded an opportunity of stating their case. His point was that many of the coercive processes have been extra legal, and have imposed far greater material damage on the people than the value of the tax due to be collected. He was only asking for the right of proving such a case as would lead Government to redress real injustice.

I said that without fuller knowledge of the facts and the issues involved I could express no opinion beyond telling him that it seemed the kind of thing in which serious difficulty would be likely to arise. I told him that in my view, as in the case we were discussing yesterday of enquiries into police excesses, I regarded the whole state in which we now found ourselves as that of something very like a state of war. Under such conditions no doubt great hardship was unavoidable, but it had by no means been confined to one side. His presentment of the case seemed to me to suggest that we were dealing with unjustifiable departures from a state of affairs which had in other respects been normal, and appeared to rest on the assumption that Government was in the dock and under the necessity of justifying its action to people who had themselves been wholly free from blame. He would not expect me to accept that kind of interpretation of the present position.

He answered this by reverting to his original argument that he was pleading for no more than redress of what he believed he could show to be a manifest excess of administrative action leading to real injustice.

(3) Salt. Here he developed the romantic side of the salt campaign, dwelling much on the inhumanity of depriving families who had natural opportunities of doing so, of taking advantage of them to manufacture salt. (I am not sure whether it confined to salt for their own use or not.) What he desired was that Government should either alter the law or acquiesce in its breach, by way of not prohibiting such private action. He instanced the Sarda Act and the Age of Consent Act as examples of Government looking the other way in matters of administration.

I told him that there was a wide distinction in my view between Government administering a particular law with discretion, through instructions communicated to its own officers, and Government advertising to the world that it was prepared to condone such breaches. The latter really amounted to an invitation to all and sundry to commit them. If, as he said, such informal breaches of the Salt Law had been in the habit of taking place before, I had no reason to suppose that Government would wish to administer the Salt Law any more or any less strictly than had been the case hitherto.
He said that he was not asking for any public declaration, but for a private assurance that Government would not interfere with private breaches of the law; he had not in mind raids on salt depots or anything on that scale.

I told him that I felt considerable difficulty about his proposition having regard to the fact that the circumstances surrounding private breaches of the law had greatly altered since his salt campaign.

(4) Peaceful picketing. He asked me whether I took any objection to its continuance. I told him that peaceful picketing appeared to me a misnomer. I had a long list of cases on my table showing the violent results that had flowed from so-called peaceful picketing, and I found it impossible to believe that peaceful picketing could fail to produce similar results in future. I quoted Benares, Amritsar, etc. I further said that I could not tolerate interference with legitimate trade, as evinced by Congress intimidation in the matter by way of sealing foreign cloth, mock funerals and all the rest. Lastly, I said that picketing as a political weapon was objectionable and its continuance was quite incompatible with Congress coming into Conference discussions. He was really setting about his principal purposes of swadeshi and temperance in the wrong way by pursuing a policy at once negative and belligerent; why could he not apply himself to the positive and pacific programme of preaching swadeshi and temperance without interference with personal liberty?

To all this he said he had no wish to do more than peacefully persuade; he only attached importance to it as a social and economic business, not primarily political. He and the Congress would prohibit violence, mock funerals and all such forms of pressure; but he could not see why people might not stand near a grog-shop in the endeavour to reform the drunkard; if violence or molestation occurred, it could be dealt with under the ordinary law I told him that experience was against him in this matter, and that I feared it would not be easily possible for him to get the subtle distinction present to his own mind observed in practical action by many different people in different parts of the country.

2. I then took up a few general matters. First of all I explained to him that in everything I had said I was only speaking personally for myself, and that on many matters it would be necessary to consult local Governments or the Secretary of State, and on all matters it would be necessary for me to consult my own council. This he recognized. I then told him that I had heard of the probability of himself and Vallabhbhai Patel visiting Gujarat. I could have little doubt that, if they went there, they would stimulate the civil disobedience movement, in which the Government of Bombay could evidently not acquiesce. I asked him therefore to keep himself and Vallabhbhai away for the present at all events. He told me that he had just summoned Vallabhbhai to come here and went on to say that, if our negotiations succeeded, no difficulty would arise; if they failed, I understood him to say that he and his friends had decided, or might decide, to offer themselves for re-arrest. It would then be for Government to do what they wished, but he would certainly when his work was finished here wish to go to Gujarat and could not do otherwise.

3. I finally told him that everything I had said about possibilities of reciprocal action by Government was dependent upon the effective abandonment of the civil disobedience campaign. He asked me what this meant; it would be impossible for him to agree to a period of ten days or fifteen days before reciprocal action was taken by Government. I said I had not that in mind; what I was rather concerned with was that before Government took reciprocal action they should be satisfied that the Working Committee’s instructions had in fact reached local organizations and that they were being loyally carried out. There was no question of impugning the trustworthiness of the Working Committee, who might reach an agreement with Government here; on the other hand, it was not unreasonable that Government should be satisfied that the agreement honourably reached by the Working Committee was in fact being honourably given effect to by the local organizations.

He appeared to accept this.

4. I then recurred to the question we had discussed yesterday as to the contingent resumption by Congress of civil disobedience. I said that it would be an impossible position for me to recommend to His Majesty’s Government to take all the steps we had been discussing if they were at any moment in the course of subsequent discussions liable to be told by Congress that the provisional conclusions arrived at, at any stage, were unpalatable and they therefore broke up and went back to their campaign. Could he give me any assurance on the point?

He said that, as he had explained yesterday and as I had accepted, Congress could not pledge themselves, either for all time or in this particular matter, not again to have resort to civil disobedience; but if they went into the Conference he would be prepared to say that they went in meaning to strain every nerve to make it a success. He did not however wish to conceal from me that, if, when the discussions had concluded, the scheme was still unsatisfactory to them, they must reserve their liberty to return to civil disobedience. He could not anticipate what their decision might be; circumstances might alter, they might desire to wait and see what happened in Parliament; but in no case would he anticipate recurrence to civil disobedience while the discussions were proceeding; and he hoped that it would never be necessary at all.

5. I asked him whether he thought, in spite of the attitude I had felt necessary to adopt as regards salt, peaceful picketing, enquiries into excesses and other matters on which I had been unable to meet him, it would be desirable to have a somewhat more formal discussion? In such event I should contemplate that we might have invited Sastri, Sapru, Jayakar, Shafi, Chhatari, possibly a non-official European from the Assembly, another non-official Moslem, Malaviya, Ansari, Bikaner and Bhopal. He appeared to welcome the idea rather warmly, saying that he thought Malaviya was indispensable, but added that he might like to bring one or two of his own and instanced Jawaharlal, Vallabhbhai and Sen Gupta. He might have liked, he added, to have had Subhas Bose, but he was at present in prison. I said that in such case I should propose to reinforce myself by representatives of my Government.

I told him that I would consider this and let him know, if I could, tomorrow, adding that I thought, if such further talks were held, a formal communique should be issued after each meeting to avoid public misunderstanding. He agreed and said that he would hold himself at my disposal.

6. The general impression I gathered was that, though there are a good many snags still in the road, he is disposed to co-operate. The principal snags evidently are the question of the scope of further discussions and of contingent resumption of the campaign. On the latter however I believed it to be impracticable to get any greater measure of assurance than he was willing to give me in our final interview this evening.

In conclusion and not connected with the above, he mentioned the case of Bhagat Singh. He did not plead for commutation, although he would, being opposed to all taking of life, take that course himself. He also thought it would have an influence for peace. But he did ask for postponement in present circumstances. I contented myself with saying that, whatever might be the decision as to exact dates, I could not think there was any case for commutation which might not be made with equal force in the case of any other violent crime. The Viceroy's powers of commutation were designed for use on well-known grounds of clemency, and I could not feel that they ought to be invoked on grounds that were admittedly political.¹

(SD.) IRWIN

From a photostat : G.N. 8947

¹ For Gandhiji’s report of the interview, vide item “Letter to Viceroy”, 7-3-1931.
212. INTERVIEW TO ASSOCIATED PRESS OF INDIA

DELHI,

February 18, 1931

Mahatma Gandhi unlike yesterday had taken leave of the Viceroy inside the room and went straight to his car. He was met by the Associated Press correspondent who asked him whether the talks were over. He looked thoughtful and with his usual smile said:

All I can say is I am not coming tomorrow.

Will you consult the Working Committee before coming back?

I cannot say yet but am not coming tomorrow.

Replying to another question, he said humorously:

You can say, it is all hanging up in the clouds.

Are you issuing an official statement?

No.

The Hindustan Times, 20-2-1931

213. INTERVIEW WITH VICEROY (GANDHIJI’S REPORT)

February 18, 1931

Today we were with the Viceroy for slightly less time than yesterday, and so reached home at 5.30 p.m. Today’s talk was more concentrated and the man was more cautious than yesterday. It was a most strenuous fight today, but it left no unpleasantness in the mouth at the end. Once or twice we felt that the hope of a settlement was dwindling but thereafter did not feel like that. Today the salt tax, suspension of collection of land revenue and picketing alone were discussed. When I explained to him the whole position about salt, the Viceroy said: “You think any Government in the world can tolerate disobedience of its laws?”

GANDHIJI. I may enunciate a counter-proposition to it: No Government in the world can enforce all its laws.

I then cited the example of the Sarda Act and mentioned Act III of 1885 of South Africa and the Gold Law, and told him that the Government was supporting the demand for the protection of those who were guilty of their breach. I talked about the Age of Consent Act and asked him why the Government tolerated the breach of all those laws. “I know that you have issued a circular that no action should he taken under the Sarda Act.”

VICEROY. That is a confidential circular.
G. I do not want you to issue a public circular. We shall tell our people quietly that they can make and collect salt without any fear.

V. I am seized of your position.

He used these words repeatedly. About the Salt Act, he even said that when we would have our own Government, we could repeal it.

G. How can I betray the thousands of people whom I advised to break this law?

About the land tax also, the Viceroy had administrative difficulties.

G. Our case is that the Government has taken more coercive steps than were necessary and the officers have exceeded the instructions given to them. In such cases the tax ought not to be collected.

V. Who is to decide that?

G. You may appoint an officer for the purpose, but he should have our approval. He should only inquire whether there have or have not been excesses as alleged by us.

The Viceroy opposed picketing strongly. I explained to him that it had been going on all the time. “It is being done for many years now and there is nothing against it in the Common Law. You can take action under the Common Law if there is breach of peace or violence.”

V. But you have made picketing a political weapon.

G. It may have a political result, but essentially, it is an economic, social and moral weapon. Even if Lancashire stops its textile business, we would still have to declare boycott of foreign cloth and also continue picketing. Even if you forgo the revenue from the sale of liquor, we would still have to take steps against those who drink.

In short, the Viceroy was convinced of the justice of all our demands, but he talked of administrative difficulties. I reminded him: “There is no just grievance in law without a remedy.” After this he asked me many questions.

V. If you attend the Round Table Conference and the results are not to your satisfaction, must you resume civil disobedience?

G. I will have to unless we feel that we shall get something from the changes proposed. Otherwise I shall have no choice but to resume the movement.

V. On further thought, I find this position dangerous for the Government. How can we stultify ourselves like that? In that case, would it not be better that you do not attend the Round Table Conference?

Then there was again some discussion about safeguards. Regarding defence, the Viceroy said: Suppose a committee of military experts proves to your satisfaction that India cannot defend herself without British troops, even then would you wish that that safeguard should be removed?

G. What do you mean by “proving to my satisfaction”? I would invite German, American and other experts and confront your military experts with them. If, after their discussions, I feel that we must retain the British army for some time, I would definitely agree to do so.

The Viceroy found this whole discussion embarrassing.

V. Now I am fully seized of your position. I shall discuss the whole thing with my advisers and we shall then resume our discussions if necessary. Meanwhile those three friends' desire an informal committee to be set up, consisting of my advisers, the Maharaja of Bikaner, Malaviya and the Nawab of Chhatari. You also may ask some members of the Working Committee to join it.

G. All right, we are prepared to place all our cards on the table.

During the evening walk, Bapu made some more remarks about these discussions.

G. The suggestion regarding informal talks came from those three friends. They had it in their mind right from Allahabad. I believe that their intention is honourable, but the thing may also be the Viceroy’s diplomacy. But that does not matter. He may invite as many persons as he likes. I did not suggest any name. It will serve as a means of propaganda for us.

BIRLA. Did today’s discussions give any cause for disappointment?

G. No, he was as sweet as before. We had a few sharp exchanges, but they were of little moment. There were one or two small but rich titbits which cannot be made public, but which will give you an idea of how cordial the talks had been. Once he told me that it was his dream to take me to England and introduce me to members of all the parties there. He appealed to me to forget about civil disobedience and to have faith in their sincerity and proceed accordingly. Then as I was going to his bathroom, he accompanied me and said: “Now tell me whether I did not do well in not arresting you in your Ashram?” I said: “How do we know it? A crowd of thousands had assembled in the Ashram, and I heard that a special was waiting for me and that I would be arrested at 12 o’clock. So I peacefully went to sleep.” At this, the Viceroy had a hearty laugh. I continued: “Many friends had thought that this salt movement would fizzle out, and said that Mahatma Gandhi would get tired in 20 days or so and that the Government would not take any notice of the movement. But who knew what was going to happen?” The Viceroy said: “You planned a fine strategy round the issue of salt.”

1 Sapru, Jayakar and Srinivasa Sastri

These two titbits are not worth narrating anywhere. Now the third one. I talked about Bhagat Singh. I told him: “This has no connection with our discussion, and it may even be inappropriate on my part to mention it. But if you want to make the present atmosphere more favourable, you should suspend Bhagat Singh’s execution.” The Viceroy liked this very much. He said: “I am very greateful to you that you have put this thing before me in this manner. Commutation of sentence is a difficult thing, but suspension is certainly word considering.”

I said about Bhagat Singh: “He is undoubtedly a brave man but I would certainly say that he is not in his right mind. However, this is the evil of capital punishment, that it gives no opportunity to such a man to reform himself. I am putting this matter before you as a humanitarian issue and desire suspension of sentence in order that there may not be unnecessary turmoil in the country. I myself would release him, but I cannot expect any Government to do so. I would not take it ill even if you do not give any reply on this issue.”

When they were talking about members of the Working Committee, Bapu mentioned Subhas Bose too.

V. Subhas is not a member of the Working Committee.

G. No, he is not. And he is my opponent and will denounce me; still, if he wants to attend, we must give him a chance to do so.

The Viceroy said that he would think about this suggestion too.

Last evening we walked for about 1 1/2 hours. During that time we discussed the proposal to hold informal talks and talked about those pleasant titbits. The question was why we should join these informal talks.

G. It behoves satyagrahis to do so. The suggestion for informal talks was not the Viceroy’s, but of those three friends. If we join the talks afterwards and break them, that would be deceiving them. Instead, we should discuss the matter right now and state our demands. We would then be able to decide whether we should join the talks or not. I did not demand that all of us should join the talks, but merely said that anyone who wanted to attend might do so. I even said that probably no one would like to join. For me, it would provide an excellent opportunity for propaganda.

¹ February 18

JAWAHARLAL. The Viceroy has the virtues and weaknesses of the average Englishman.

G. Yes.

PATTABHI. He has got the weaknesses of an Englishman.

G. No. These two days’ talks have not given me the impression that he is a weak man. He is a strong man and a thoroughly capable man. He is also a democrat. I know, he says, “I can do the thing but I will not do the thing myself.” I have read some of his speeches wherein I have observed his firmness with admiration and despair. I remember his reply to a deputation of the Ahmediya community. They wanted him to do according to the Muslims’ wishes in the matter of Palestine. He said the British Government had always adhered to certain fundamental principles of justice and they would never swerve from them. They would not do so in this instance as they have not done up to now. He did not give them any empty promises, he did not use any vague phrases, but was as firm as he could be. That is his strength.

In the titbits I mentioned yesterday, I forgot one. The Viceroy had received a telegram about picketing. He asked me: “Do you approve of such picketing?” I said that I had already sent a telegram that I did not approve of it. He also mentioned another telegram. He said that there was a telegram from Gujarat saying that Gandhiji and Vallabhbhai would now visit Gujarat and that their presence was likely to prove very dangerous. He wanted me to call away Vallabhbhai here! Gandhiji laughed and said: “I have called him here.” So the Viceroy said: “That’s capital.”

[From Gujarati]

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

214. LETTER TO SOONABAI SERWAI

[Before February 19, 1931]

I do not see how strikes and hartals, brought about by force, are in any way useful to national interests.

Mr. Gandhi has desired his correspondent to draw his attention in future to cases in which violence or force was used by Congress workers. He has again implored Mrs. Serwai to take to swadeshi.

The Pioneer, 21-2-1931

1 In reply to her letter describing “a couple of incidents in which the so-called non-violent Congress volunteers had used violence to bring about a complete hartal”

2 Published under the date-line “Allahabad, February 19”
Pandit Motilalji’s death means to me more even than to the brave widow whose sorrow it is my privilege during these days to share. I take the blow as an additional test of my faith in God’s greatness and goodness. Panditji has died a true warrior’s death. It is therefore well with him. He lives more amply and more truly by dying. I pray to God that he may endow me with greater consecration to the service of the cause for which alone life is worth living in these days of purification through sacrifice and suffering.

MEMORIAL

Friends have asked me to advise a memorial subscription such as was raised to the memory of the late Hakim Saheb Ajmal Khan, Deshbandhu Chittaranjan Das and Lala Lajpat Rai. I have resisted the temptation because (1) I personally cannot shoulder the burden; (2) I may any day be summoned to Yeravda or some such place of recreation; and (3) the only true memorial that can just now be raised to the memory of the deceased patriot is by intenser dedication to hasten the advent of swaraj.

MAULANA MAHOMED ALI

I was privileged to offer my tribute to the memory of Maulana Mahomed Ali by sending from Yeravda a cable message to Maulana Shaukat Ali. But I cannot resume the Editorship of Young India without publicly declaring that in him I have lost one whom I rejoiced to call brother and friend and the nation has lost a fearless patriot. We had differences of opinion between us, but love that cannot stand the strain of differences is like “a sounding brass and tinkling cymbal”.

PEACE NEGOTIATIONS

It is not for the soldier to worry about peace. For him both struggle and peace are alike. He has to do with the utmost joy the task that comes to him without counting the costs or the consequence. The consequence he knows. The cost is never too high for him.

PICKETING

Picketing is a dharma only when it is absolutely non-violent. Those who have no faith in non-violence had better give it up altogether. I can find out ways and means of combating the inroads of foreign cloth even though there be no picketing, but I know for certain that boycott brought about by violent picketing is bound to fail in the end. It was this knowledge that induced me last March to entrust picketing of foreign-cloth shops and drink and drug shops to women who are instinctively non-violent.

Violence in picketing can be both active and passive. The passive type can be more dangerous than the active. Both must be shunned.

KHADI

Without khadi there is no boycott. Therefore we must concentrate on khadi.

_Young India, 19-2-1931_

216. _TELEGRAM TO BALWANTRAI MEHTA_

_February 19, 1931_

GENERAL SECRETARY

INDIAN STATES’ PEOPLES’ CONFERENCE

CARE NIMBPURI

BOMBAY

CAN SEE SATURDAY MORNING EIGHT O’CLOCK.

GANDHI

From a microfilm: S.N. 16924

217. _TELEGRAM TO JADHAV_¹

_February 19, 1931_

JADHAV

DEOLALI CANTT.

CAN SEE YOU SATURDAY MORNING NINE O’CLOCK.

GANDHI

From a microfilm: S.N. 16924; also photostat: S.N. 16932

¹ In reply to his telegram dated February 17, which read: “Nasik District depressed class leaders desirous of waiting upon your holiness this week. Request date, time, place convenient for same. Matters urgent. Wire reply.”
218. TELEGRAM TO JAMSHED MEHTA

February 19, 1931

JAMSHED MEHTA
KARACHI

THANKS. TELL KIKIBEHN DAILY PRAYING. SHE MUST GET RID FEVER.

GANDHI

From a microfilm: S.N. 16924; also photostat: S.N. 16931

219. INTERVIEW WITH VICEROY (VICEROY’S VERSION)

February 19, 1931

Mr. Gandhi came to see me at 2.45 p.m. this afternoon.

I explained to him that, before any further conference of a more extended character was possible, I felt it would be necessary to make a reference \(^1\) to the Secretary of State as to the scope of the discussions and also to local Governments on the specific matters raised. I said that I supposed His Majesty’s Government would want a few days for consideration, and that in the mean time I was exploring with my Council the idea of a wider conference. I said I thought it was unlikely that this could take place before next Thursday or Friday.

Mr. Gandhi replied that he was in general agreement with what I had said, though he was disposed to regret the delay suggested. He said he would naturally have desired to go to Gujarat, but would defer to my representations that for himself and Vallabhbhai to go there at this juncture would create new difficulties, and would accordingly not do so. I understood this to apply to Vallabhbhai also.

I said I would do my best to expedite matters and would warn Shafi and Sapru that it might be necessary to call them earlier than Thursday next week.

I pressed him again on the question of resuming civil disobedience if they came in, and he said firmly that he would certainly not resume in any circumstances till the conference discussions were concluded. He hoped it would never be necessary to resume at all, but at the present stage could not give me an undertaking beyond the end of the conference discussions.

---

\(^1\) In reply to his telegram dated February 16, which read: “Kikibehn fever continues but progressing. Takes regular diet.”

\(^2\) Vide “Viceroy’s cable to secretary of state.”

He said in everything he had said he had expressed his personal view only, but that I could rely upon him to do his best to get the Working Committee’s concurrence in any arrangements he made.

I told him I would communicate with him as soon as I could as to whether I thought a further conference would be profitable, and in the light of what I might be able to tell him as to the scope of discussions and the particular matters on which I might be unable to meet him, he could then consider whether from his point of view a further conference as suggested yesterday would be useful. He agreed.

He concurred in the issue of a brief communique in the following terms:

“His Excellency the Viceroy granted a further interview to Mr. Gandhi today. It is understood that various matters emerging from the discussions are now under examination, and it is possible that some days may elapse before further stage of discussions is reached.”

(SD). IRWIN

From a photostat: G.N. 8948

220. INTERVIEW WITH VICEROY (GANDHIJI’S REPORT)

[February 19, 1931]

In the afternoon an invitation was received from Cunningham to meet the Viceroy. Bapu replied that he would meet him at 2.45 p.m. The interview lasted half an hour and thereafter, to use Bapu’s words, he met the sub-Viceroys, i.e., Sapru and Jayakar. The interview with the Viceroy was very satisfactory. The Viceroy recounted for him the gist of the previous interviews.

VICEROY: I shall repeat this in your presence so that you can correct me if I make a mistake anywhere: You have promised that even though the conference were to break up as a result of your being dissatisfied with the progress, you would not resume civil disobedience until after the conclusion of the conference.

GANDHIJI: Yes, I have.

V. I am very glad; now could I have a further promise from you that you would not resume civil disobedience until after the conclusion of the proceedings in the Parliament?

G. I am afraid I cannot promise that.

V. What you have promised is enough for me. I will cable all this to the 1 For Gandhiji’s report of the interview, vide the following item.

Secretary of State.\(^1\) I must request you to stay here till I receive the reply to it. Sir Tej and Jayakar have got engagements, so they cannot come until next Saturday.

I cannot do that. Both of us, Sardar and I, are here and the people are expecting us. I have to go to Bardoli as also to Borsad. Even today we have asked our associates to go slow and so the pace of the struggle has somewhat slowed down and if this continues it will harm the movement.

Along with Rajaji, I asked the Viceroy: “Can’t you ask those friends to stay back?” He promised to me that he would try to persuade them to do so.

V. Just as you have given instructions to your co-workers, I have also asked the Governors to send orders everywhere to go slow. I have spoken to the two Governors who are here and have also intimated the other Governors. Bapu talked also about the Pratapgarh firing.

Our position in this respect is the same as in regard to Borsad. How can we rest without an inquiry? I have already sent a telegram regarding the picketing excesses in Bombay.

The Viceroy was pleased at this and said that a cable had been sent to the Secretary of State. On receipt of his reply, an informal conference would be held by Tuesday.

[From Gujarati]

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

221. TELEGRAM TO ANAND

February 20, 1931

ANAND
HYDERABAD (SIND)
WISH ENTERPRISE EVERY SUCCESS.

GANDHI

From a microfilm: S.N. 16924

222. TELEGRAM TO JADHAV

February 20, 1931

JADHAV
DEOLALI CANTT.
ONLY OTHER TIME AVAILABLE SUNDAY MORNING DELHI.

GANDHI

From a microfilm: S.N. 16924

\(^1\) Vide “Viceroy’s cable to secretary of state”.

VOL. 51 : 6 JANUARY, 1931 - 28 APRIL, 1931

161
223. TELEGRAM TO KONDA VENKATAPPAYYA

February 20, 1931

DESBHAKTA VENKATAPPAYYA
GUNTUR
DELIGHTED. HOPE YOUR FAMILY WELL. SEND SUCH PARTICULARS YOU THINK NECESSARY.

GANDHI

From a microfilm : S.N. 16924

224. TELEGRAM TO GANGADHARRAO DESHPANDE

February 20, 1931

GANGADHARRAO DESHPANDE
BELGAUM
YOUR WIRE. HAVE EVERYTHING IN MIND. HAVE NOT WORRIED YOU COME BUT IF YOU THINK NECESSARY YOU MAY. ANY CASE WRITE FULLY.

GANDHI

From a microfilm : S.N. 16924

225. REMARKS ABOUT VICEROY

February 20, 1931

I cannot yet say that he is sincere, but he was friendly and frank, both of which go a great way to make a man sincere. But I may say that I find much less to justify my prejudice against him. To a certain extent I may say I have found him sincere, but that was because he had to reciprocate my sincerity. And you know people can be sincere with certain people and not sincere with all. My letter was received by him in the spirit in which it should have been received. He did not accept the terms, but he admitted the justice of it and urged administrative difficulties.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy : Narayan Desai

1 In the course of a conversation with J. M. Sen Gupta, Mayor of Calcutta

162 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
226. SPEECH AT DELHI

February 20, 1931

Mahatma Gandhi began by offering Id felicitation to his Muslim brothers and sisters. He said on such an occasion and in the presence of such an unprecedented gathering, his thoughts went to Maulana Mahomed Ali whose death had pained him a great deal. Ever since he had returned to India from South Africa he had thought of Delhi as the Delhi of Maulana Mahomed Ali, Swami Shraddhanand and Hakim Ajmal Khan so much so that even now, though their physical presence was to be missed their unseen presence could still be felt. He was equally pained to miss at such a critical juncture as the present Pandit Motilal Nehru whose death was so recent that their eyes were yet wet with tears. Mahatmaji, continuing, said:

I know you are all anxious to hear something from me of the talks I am having with His Excellency the Viceroy. I am afraid I may not take the public into confidence about what happened between His Excellency and me. For one thing I am pledged not to do so and secondly it is not going to help us. But I may say this much, that these talks have been conducted in a most friendly manner and with much sweetness. What will be the result I cannot say. The result is in the hands of God. It is His will that will prevail. Your duty is that you must continue to do what India expects of you.

Dr. Ansari belonging as he does to Delhi has naturally spoken highly of the part played by Delhi; but I am a witness to the great sacrifices that have been made throughout India and I can say how Delhi stands in comparison with any other province. For that you deserve my congratulation.¹

Resuming his speech, Mahatmaji said:

Here as elsewhere the part played by women is indescribable. When the history of this movement comes to be written, the sacrifices made by the women of India will occupy the foremost place and just as with women so also with children. Their wonderful awakening has fortified me in my faith that God is with us in this struggle. These young folk had never been organized for such work, never been trained for it. How they came to achieve all this I have not been able to divine nor has anyone else whom I have consulted been able to enlighten [me] as to who guided them; only God could have done so. But remember that, in the sacred battle, whatever sacrifices you have made are trifling. Let them not puff you up with pride, what we want for India is purna swaraj. And who can calculate what further sacrifices India will have to make to achieve that goal? I assure you that I am doing as much as is humanly possible to bring about peace so that the people may not have to go through further suffering and sacrifices but everything is in God’s hands and if it be not His will that any understanding be arrived at, then I will have to tell the people that they must be ready for much further suffering.

¹ At this stage the speech was interrupted on account of disorder among a section of the people who could not hear Gandhiji.

The sacrifices that we have made are as nothing before the sacrifices other nations have made for the sake of freedom. But there is a reason why we have not had to suffer as much as other nations. It is as clear to me as daylight. The reason is that when we pledged ourselves to achieve purna swaraj we also took the vow that whatever we do in furtherance of the goal would be in consonance with truth and non-violence. And when I think of the part played by the whole of India, especially by the rural population, I think we have substantially fulfilled the pledge of truth and non-violence. But I cannot deceive myself nor will I permit you to deceive yourselves. We have followed truth and non-violence, but we have not made them an article of faith. They have been to some a matter of policy, but even if you have accepted it as a policy, you may not act or think in terms of violence so long as you adhere to the policy. The very thought of untruth or violence is a breach of the pledge. You will remember that at the Ahmedabad Congress this matter was thoroughly thrashed out in the presence of leaders like Hakim Ajmal Khan and Dr. Ansari and, after full deliberation, it was decided that so long as we bound ourselves to adhere to our policy of truth and non-violence in thought, word and deed, the slightest breach of that pledge meant a breach of faith.

I may tolerate the allegation that Indians are not fit for swaraj, but I cannot for a moment tolerate the allegation, if it were true, that my countrymen were untrue or dishonest. There can be no greater tragedy than this, that Hindus, Muslims, Sikhs and Christians who believe in God were ungodly and guilty of a breach of faith. Such people are not fit for freedom. They are fit for slavery and worse.

1 In December 1921.
For this reason, I have always laid the greatest stress on the point that it was open to you to abandon the policy and adopt a different one but so long as you pin your faith to truth and non-violence, do not deceive yourself or the world. Therefore when I heard that there has been some excesses on the part of our people in the picketing of foreign cloth, I was deeply pained. I have not been able to investigate into the allegations but you know that in 1921-22 I expiated for the excesses by suspending the movement. That sort of expiation is today out of the question but I must say that wherever these excesses are going on, they must stop.

It is better that dealers in foreign cloth continue to sell it and those addicted to drink continue to do so, than that we resort to excesses in picketing. But there is another danger I wish to warn you against. If we take to these excesses, we shall be opening the door for self-destruction, when we have swaraj, for there will then be no third power with machine-guns to intervene and restore peace. We shall be fighting one another and fratricidal war will spell destruction. If, therefore, you have the slightest apprehension in your mind that picketing cannot be done without resorting to excesses, you had better give it up. I want you to remember that I am an expert in these matters. I am sure we have in the past done considerable picketing without the slightest resort to violence. Do not be afraid that the moment we eschew the excesses our work will fall through. I would ask you not to worry. Rest assured that the man who is asking you today to keep to your moorings must have some alternatives to suggest but I shall not dwell on it today.

I have received letters of complaint and I am making enquiries. It is possible that we have committed mistakes. I will ask all Congress workers to consider these carefully and correct whatever mistakes we may have been guilty of. I appeal to you to eschew all excesses. You may like to know what I mean by ‘excesses’. I invite the curious to come to me for the explanation.

And now a word to the foreign-cloth dealers. Do not deceive your-selves or the country by thinking that you have done your duty by refraining from selling foreign cloth for a few months. This foreign-cloth trade must stop for ever, because it is only by this means that we can promote the well-being of millions of our countrymen. I will respectfully submit to the foreign-cloth dealers that a complete boycott of foreign cloth is their dharma. Sacrifices they will have to make but what are those sacrifices compared to the greater sacrifices that are being made by other sections of the public? I believe that through the charkha and khaddar, the boycott can be made a success and I am working according to my belief.

Cloth merchants are arriving here the day after tomorrow. I want the pressmen to convey my message to them. Thus they will be able to realize their duty.

Citizens of Delhi, I do not flatter myself that you have gathered here in your thousands to do honour to me; you have come to proclaim to the world that you are all determined to achieve purna swaraj. Let not my talks with the Viceroy worry you for a moment. Do not think of them. But go on with your work. Only remember that the result is not in my hands, not in the hands of Dr. Ansari of Pandit Malaviya, but in your hands. I am but an instrument, and I am acting only as your humble ambassador. Everything will depend upon what you do and what you will fail to do. May God give you strength to keep the pledge of truth and non-violence.

Gandhiji delivered his speech in Hindi and it was not wholly audible to large sections of the vast throng and Gandhiji made a special request to newspaper correspondents to publish only authorized text or summary of the speech and announced that the Press report of the speech would be looked through by him.

The Hindustan Times, 22-2-1931

227. TELEGRAM TO POLITICAL PRISONERS

DELHI, February 21, 1931

HEARTY ID GREETINGS TO ALL OUR COMPANIONS MUSLIMS HINDUS SIKHS AND CHRISTIANS.

The Hindustan Times, 23-2-1931

228. INTERVIEW TO “NEWS CHRONICLE”

[February 21, 1931]

Mahatama Gandhi in an interview to a representative of the News Chronicle of London, described the prospects of a settlement negatively as less hopeful than 1 This appeared as message from Gandhiji and M. A. Ansari “to all the political prisoners in various jails in India.

---

2 From The Hindu, 22-2-1931
before but declined to make any statement at the present stage.

Questioned as to whether he would still retain his first impression created by the Viceroy which Gandhiji had described in his previous interview, he replied that he must revise that opinion now. Personally, in the course of the conversations he had found Lord Irwin to be frank, cordial and friendly.

Replying to the last question as to whether he would expiate by calling off the movement if there was a recrudescence of violence by Congressmen, as in 1922, Gandhiji said:

Last time when I did expiate, the method of non-violence in politics was a new one and people were unused to what I call absolute, downright plain-speaking on the part of leaders. Therefore I said with regard to myself that people very often thought as if I spoke with mental reservations and even said what I did not mean. And that only hurt me but I at once realized that it would injure the cause itself and so I felt it necessary, in order to drive home the truth to the masses, that they must take me literally in all I spoke and that there was no conscious mental reservation. This I could only do by some definite drastic action which even millions could understand in a moment and hence I deliberately adopted the method of public expiation by open fasting and I saw that the very first experiment along this line had produced effective and startling results and I continued that till the Chauri Chaura culmination in 1922.

That having been brought home and I having declared myself only responsible for the initiative of the campaign and not for the further conduct of it or its stoppage, it would be improper on my part now to interfere through the method of fasting. It is the Working Committee which is responsible for the campaign now and it alone can interfere with or shape its conduct. This, however, should not be taken to mean that I disown my moral responsibility for the violence done by a single Congressman, and if some violence is done by Congressmen it produces such a sore on my system that I cannot bear it. I cannot say what I shall then do, for in all such things I am not guided by reason, but by instinct or in other words by the inner voice and one never knows where that voice would lead you to.

The Hindustan Times, 25-2-1931

229. TO READERS

You should not be misled or confused if I approach the Viceroy or if the Congress Working Committee holds talks regarding a settlement. Your dharma is to carry on the task which lies before you, viz., that of serving the nation.

If you do so, there will be an honourable settlement, if one is at all possible. But if as soon as you hear of negotiations for a settlement, you either fall asleep or start enjoying yourselves or become even slightly slack, the settlement will fall through. You should know that the Congress would never accept a dishonourable settlement. A satyagrahi can neither add to nor subtract from [his demands]. Just as an honest business man maintains fixed prices, similar is the case with the satyagrahi. A soldier’s demands are not reduced just because he becomes slack; similarly, soldiers cannot add to their demands when they become advancing and getting more daring. Hence, neither I nor any other Congressman can accept anything which is even slightly less than our demand. Therefore if the nation becomes lax, there will be no settlement and the struggle will drag on. The settlement will be reached early if the people keep up their fervour.

You should realize that at present the most important task is the boycott of foreign cloth. This boycott can be made to succeed only by convincing the people through reason and not through force. This requires intelligence and organization and constitutes the test of our sacrifice.

MILL-OWNERS

If these mill-owners so desire, they can make a success of the boycott. The following is the plan of action:

1. They should prepare a list of those who trade in foreign goods.

2. They should give their own goods in exchange for foreign cloth with traders who are prepared for this exchange. Dealers in foreign cloth should let go a certain percentage in valuing their stocks of foreign cloth. Mills should put the minimum prices of their goods.

3. The mill-owners can sell the above-mentioned foreign cloth outside the country or they may set fire to it, or they may seal it up and set it aside for being dealt with after swaraj has been won or, in other words, they can ask for some compensation from the new Government in case they have to suffer a heavy loss.

This requires the following—some intelligence, some sacrifice, some order, some self-confidence, some foresight, some faith in the people and whole-hearted determination to boycott foreign cloth. Just as this is something that can be readily suggested, it can also be readily put into practice.

No one should look for guidance to anyone else; instead, those who are convinced should begin to act and plead with other mill-owners to follow suit. A good beginning can be made even if a few mill-owners get together and act jointly.

CONGRESS

The contribution which the Congress can make in this regard depends upon the beginning which the mill-owners make. The contribution of the former can be secured through picketing.

DEALERS IN FOREIGN CLOTH

1. You must give up the temptation of trading in foreign cloth; it is poison.
2. Do not entertain the false notion that this trade can be resumed under swaraj or within a short time. There is no swaraj for the poor, at any rate, if this trade is not stopped in India.
3. No one asks you to lay down your lives, no one asks you even to sacrifice all you have. However, everyone asks you to rid yourselves of the filth which you have gathered. You must realize that it is not as if you cannot trade in anything except foreign cloth. People cannot do without cloth; hence there is no alternative for them but to buy cloth which is made in India.
4. If only you can see it, your true interest lies in this boycott.

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan (Supplement), 22-2-1931

---

230. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

February 22, 1931

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I got your letter. I am happy to know that you are improving. If for some time I cannot write to you, you should not worry. I get no free time. I cannot say with certainty how long I shall have to stay on here. I shall be here for at least three or four days. You should go on writing to me. I hope you also write to Father. Jayaprakash is here. He seems to be giving satisfaction to Birlaji.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3411
231. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL JOSHI

February 22, 1931

CHI. CHHAGANLAL (JOSHI).

I got your letter.

It seems to me that we shall be able to meet only if there is a settlement. If the negotiations break down, we shall not be allowed to remain free, and that would be the only right course for the Government to adopt. Only God knows whether or not there will be a settlement. A satyagrahi should remain unconcerned whether there will be any. He will strive for peace, but will always keep himself ready for a fight.

I do not wish to advise you just now with regard to the work there. You should go on doing it to the best of your ability and judgment, and, as you do so, you will learn from experience. Even if I cannot write to you, you should go on writing to me.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 5502

232. SPEECH AT COUNCIL OF ALL-INDIA MUSLIM LEAGUE, DELHI

February 22, 1931

MR. PRESIDENT AND BROTHERS OF MY COUNTRY.

You all know, I am physically so weak that I am unable to make a speech while standing; when I try to do so, every part of my body trembles.

Maulvi Mohammad Yaqub has said that my coming here meant the coming of 21 crores of Indian brethren.

I am a Bania, and there is no limit to my greed.

It has always been my heart’s desire to speak, not only for 21 crores but for 30 crores of Indians.

Today you may not accept that position of mine but my early upbringing, my childhood and youth, has been to strive for Hindu-Muslim unity. No one may dismiss it today as merely a craze of my old age. My heart is confident that God will grant me that position to speak for the whole of India one day, and even if I die striving for it, I shall achieve peace of mind.

I do not know what the result of my talks with the Viceroy would be, nor can I say when the talks will result in something, but if God wishes that Congress should participate in the Conference and if there is a settlement between the Government and the Congress, the question of Hindu-Muslim unity will be one which will engage our first attention. And I give you all the assurance at my command that what I can do to achieve that end we will be always willing to do.

Hindu-Muslim unity is not a question of bargain—that we should continue fighting for one, two or five seats. Unity can be achieved by giving up mutual fears and mistrust. Unless our hearts are purified and we regard Hindus and Muslims as one, unity cannot be established.

Rest assured that it is not a matter of loaves and fishes, but of trust and love. If Hindus and Muslims are two eyes of the country, as Sir Syed Ahmed said, there should be no occasion for quarrel or distrust—no one can say that one eye is better than the other. It is quite conceivable that two brothers may have different faith and yet both may live in harmony and peace. I wonder why the people fight in the name of religion and for the sake of religion.

I am ready to serve you in the matter of establishing Hindu-Muslim unity and now since you have made a way for me into your heart, I shall try to enter it. It is a question of lover and beloved. I am in search of it; I was anxiously waiting for it. If Hindu-Muslim unity is achieved, the mission of my life would be fulfilled.

Thanking the League for the invitation, Mahatmaji said:

I wish you may continue to invite me as you have invited me today and you shall have no occasion to repent. (Laughter and cheers)

The Hindustan Times, 25-2-1931

233. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI
February 22/23, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS.

My daily programme has become most uncertain these days. I have to keep awake till late at night. All the same I get up at four, and so the body is put to considerable strain. However, I manage to take some rest during the day and keep fit.
I have suggested to Sitla Sahay that he should call Sarojinidevi to Allahabad. She should forget the attraction of the Ashram for some time. Rukmini is with me at present and keeps cheerful. Her health, too, is good on the whole. No one can say what will happen here. I spare no effort. But, at the same time, I will not give in on any matter of principle. Nothing that I say in my letters should appear in newspapers.

Blessings from
BAPU

Morning, February 23, 1931

For some days I shall have to be satisfied with what I can write in the morning every day. As the forefinger of my right hand had an accidental cut by a knife, I am writing with the left hand. The wound is not deep. I have sent two wires to Surat about Shankarbhai. The news in the Chronicle seems to me to be baseless, for I had a letter about him even while I was in jail, informing me that he had been permitted.¹

How does Purushottam keep in jail? How is Jamnadas? Who lives with the elders these days? Rukmini is quite happy here. Keshu must have returned by now.

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati : M.M.U/I

234. TELEGRAM TO DISTRICT MAGISTRATE, SURAT

February 23, 1931

HEAR SHANKARBHAI PATEL PRISONER SUBJAIL SURAT FASTING
FOR NOT BEING ALLOWED SPIN ON TAKLI. I POSSESS
INSPECTOR GENERAL’S LETTER SAYING HE WAS PERMITTED
USE TAKLI. KINDLY MAKE INQUIRIES AND WIRE RESULT
DARYA-GANJ DELHI.

GANDHI

From a microfilm : S.N. 16924

¹ Vide the following item.
² Addressee’s father and mother
235. Telegram to KalyANJI Mehta
February 23, 1931
INQUIRE SHANKARBHAI SURAT SUBJAIL FASTING FOR TAKLI.
WIRE INFORMATION.
GANDHI

From a microfilm: S.N. 16924

236. Telegram to E. E. Doyle
1 DARYAGANI, DELHI,
February 23, 1931
MAJOR DOYLE
INSPECTOR-GENERAL OF PRISONS
POONA
SHANKARBHAI PATEL OF WHOM I WROTE YOU FROM YERAVDA PRISON AND WHO YOU HAD INFORMED ME BEING UNDER VOW WAS PERMITTED USE TAKLI SPINNING WAS I
UNDER-STAND PREVENTED FROM SO DOING SURAT SUBJAIL.
HEAR NOW TRANSFERRED SABARMATI JAIL. AM PAINFULLY SURPRISED
WHY HE WAS PREVENTED SURAT SUBJAIL. PLEASE ISSUE
INSTRUCTIONS SABARMATI SO AS SAVE INNOCENT MEN FROM FURTHER PRIVATIONS IF NOT WORSE.
GANDHI

From a microfilm: S.N. 16946

237. Telegram to Narandas Gandhi
1 DARYAGANI,
February 23, 1931
NARANDAS
SATYAGRAHA ASHRAM
AHMEDABAD
SHANKARBHAI TRANSFERRED SABARMATI. FAST MUST CONTINUE IF TAKLI NOT ALLOWED.
BAPU

From a microfilm: S.N. 16947
238. LETTER TO SURESH CHANDRA BANERJI

CAMP DELHI,

February 23, 1931

MY DEAR SURESHBABU,

For the present I will not write anything about the business part of your letter\(^1\). Let me ask you just now to follow the treatment as a doctor should [advise] and restore your body to its original healthy condition. Annada Babu may come any day he likes and take his chance. I say this because my movement is so uncertain. I have already opened discussion with Mr. Banker.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI SURESH CHANDRA BANERJI

P-39 FERN ROAD, BALLYGUNJ, CALCUTTA

From a microfilm: S.N. 16935

239. LETTER TO R. R. BAKHALE

CAMP I DARYAGANI, DELHI

February 23, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter enclosing six copies of your report\(^2\). Having had some minutes at my disposal, I have gone through the report as carefully as was necessary and I have no hesitation in saying that it is well written and it is free from exaggeration and declamation. It is a

---

\(^1\) Dated February 20, 1931. Among other things, writing about the financial commitments of Abhoy Ashram, S. C. Banerji had suggested: “Instead of making us responsible for the payment of all our debts both to banks as well as private creditors, the A.I.S.A. should also bear a burden of loss. . . . The amount of loss sustained by the Ashram during the last three or four years has been too much for the Ashram to resume khaddar work any more unless substantially backed by the A.I.S.A. . . . I request you to devote some time for the matter and, if convenient, give Annada an opportunity of talking over the whole matter to find out a practical solution to save the Ashram. . . . Mr. Banker knows everything in detail and I trust he will be able to explain the whole situation.” (S.N. 16934)

\(^2\) On the lathi-charge on women’s procession at Borsad

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
report such as I would expect from anyone connected with the Society.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI R. R. BAKHALE
SERVANTS OF INDIA SOCIETY
BOMBAY-4

From a microfilm : S.N. 16945

240. LETTER TO H. S. L. POLAK

CAMP DELHI,
February 23, 1931

MY DEAR HENRY.

I wish I could write to you at length but for the present I must content myself with the line that you want, namely, that I was glad to receive the little box of salt. I have not seen it yet. Please thank Mr. . . .¹ for the thoughtful gift. My love to you all. Of the happenings in Delhi, I need not write anything because you are having everything by cable.

Yours sincerely,

HENRY S. L. POLAK, ESQ.
FIFTH FLOOR, DANES INN HOUSE
265 STRAND, LONDON, W.C. 2

¹ The name is omitted in the source.

From a photostat : S.N. 16941
241. LETTER TO REGINALD REYNOLDS

CAMP DELHI,
February 23, 1931

MY DEAR REGINALD,

I honour you for your long, frank and emphatic letter. It will help me to remain firm where firmness is required. Having said this, let me tell you that I do not at all agree with you that I was wrong in suspending judgment or action pending the arrival of the three friends. Satyagraha can afford to wait. It can be gentle, and should be gentle, where gentleness is a duty. However mistaken their judgment may be found to be, I regard these friends as equal lovers of their country with me. I have no business to judge them as I would not have them judge me and by waiting I assure you that the cause has not suffered a bit. It may be that the friends there who are whole-hoggers may feel embarrassed to find me acting contrary to their expectation. But, as time goes by, you and they may discover many such shocks. I regard myself as a seasoned soldier in satyagraha. I have acted before, as I have acted now, at similar critical junctures and I cannot recall a single occasion when the cause espoused had lost by waiting. On the contrary I can recall many an occasion when the waiting had proved fruitful. Let my assurance therefore be sufficient for you that so far as I am concerned there will be absolutely no surrender on principle, i.e., on the substantial part of the demand and I doubt not that there will be none on the part of the Congress. Remember too that satyagraha is a method of carrying conviction and of converting by an appeal to reason and to the sympathetic chord in human beings. It relies upon the ultimate good in every human being, no matter how debased he may be for the time being. If this does not satisfy you, do by all means strive with me. You are entitled to do so and demand satisfaction from me. I need not say a word about the brave manner in which you are fighting there. May God bless you and give you strength. Of the doings in Delhi I need say nothing because the talks are still going on and I have no doubt that the cablegrams are keeping you informed of the doings from day to day. Anything, therefore, that I can say today would be out of date when this letter reaches you.

---

1 In his book To Live in Mankind, Reginald Reynolds writes: "As soon as negotiations were re-opened with the Government, I wrote. It was not, as it might appear, impertinent interference. I had a perfectly legitimate motive, which was that—as one of the few exponents of the Congress case in Britain—I ought to know just where they stood. It was of vital importance to me that I should understand the reasons for this change of front if I was to continue writing and speaking in defence of India and her leaders. Gandhiji’s reply to this first letter was written from Delhi on February 23rd, 1931 . . ."

What about your marriage?

With love.

BAPU

REGINALD REYNOLDS, ESQ.
8 FAIRDENE ROAD
BOULSDON, SURREY

Dear Friend,

As I am now at least temporarily out of jail, I have an opportunity of writing to you more fully than I could from Yeravda. I have followed with gratefulness all the efforts that you have been good enough to make on behalf of India. I feel more and more convinced that if India comes to her own, it will be perhaps the largest contribution to the world peace which we are all praying for. It is too early to give you any idea of the negotiations that are now going on. All I can say is that I am leaving no stone unturned to attain peace with honour. But in the last resort peace or war is the same thing for the satyagrahi He strives always for peace and has to hold himself in readiness for war. In either case he follows the path that truth dictates to him.

I hope you got over all your illness in quick time and that this letter will find you fully restored to health.¹
178

Yours sincerely,

J. H. HOLMES, ESQ.

THE COMMUNITY CHURCH OF NEW YORK

12 PARK AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY (U.S.A.)

From a photostat: S.N. 16943

243. NOTE TO DR. THORNTON²
Silence Day, February 23, 1931

If the missionary friends will forget their mission, viz., of proselytizing Indians and of bringing Christ to them, they will do wonderfully good work. Your duty is done with the ulterior motive of proselytizing. I was one of the first to raise a note of warning in this matter. To realize what harm the missions are doing you have to see a man like Mr. Andrews. He could tell you how his soul rebelled against the missionaries’ presumption to give the Indians new religion. He belonged to the Cambridge Mission, but he left it in as much as seeing God everywhere he realized that every religion taught devotion to God, however defective it may be. You may certainly point out and help to correct the defects in my religion, but insist on my finding my salvation through my own religion. I am reminded of a simile. What is the use of my going to a higher altitude when I am born on the plains and must find what nourishment and health the plains can give? The fact is there are no irreconcilable differences between different religions. If you were to probe the surface, you will find one and the same thing at the bottom, forget your missionary spirit and simply live your life in the midst of people. Help certainly you have [brought], viz., what comes through contact with you and in spite of you, i.e., the spirit of inquiry about the shortcomings of our own religion. You did not want us to pursue the inquiry because you saw immorality where we saw spirituality. When I go to your

¹ In his reply Holmes had cabled: “Hastily approved of your message. American friends of India sustain you in the struggle for the independence of your country, through peace if possible, through war if necessary.” (The Hindu, 3-3-1931)

² A Christian missionary institutions I do not feel I am going to an Indian institution. That is what worries me.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

244. TELEGRAM TO TIRATH SINGH

February 24, 1931

TIRATH SINGH
SECRETARY
SWADESHI EXHIBITION COMMITTEE
KARACHI

SWADESHI IS DECEPTIVE WORD. UNABLE JUDGE WITHOUT KNOWING MORE. ANY CASE YOU MUST SECURE APPROVAL RECEPTION COMMITTEE.

GANDHI

From a microfilm: S.N. 16924

245. MESSAGE TO KHADDAR PRACHARINI SABHA, DELHI

February 24, 1931

I notice that people are getting disappointed for want of khaddar. But we must remember that to put on khaddar is a religion to Congressmen, and once we forget this, it would be difficult to boycott foreign cloth. Mill-made cloth is only for those who have not understood the message of khaddar.

The Hindu, 24-2-1931

246. LETTER TO K. M. MUNSHI

February 24, 1931

DELHI,

BHAISHRI MUNSHI,

I got your letter. It certainly does credit to a lawyer. In sending the wire which I did to Perinbehn, my own satisfaction was the chief consideration. A satyagrahi never hides his shortcomings from the world; if he does, his vow of truth would be compromised. Hence his words, written or spoken, are always unambiguous. I do not see this in your letter. If coercion is being used in Bombay, how can we say that

---

1 This was read out by Jamnalal Bajaj at a public meeting organized by the Sabha.
it is used without the approval of Congressmen? Every volunteer is a Congressman. I could see even from Yeravda Jail that coercion was being used. If you believe that coercion will not help our cause, you should do your utmost to see that not even a trace of it is left in our movement.

Vandemataram from
MOHANDAS

From a copy of the Gujarati : C.W. 7514. Courtesy : K. M. Munshi

247. PREFACE TO “PARDESHI KAPADNI SAME HARIFAI KEM KARAVI”

DELHI,
February 25, 1931

This is Bhai Manmohandas’s translation of his own English book. I have not been able to go through the translation; I however read the original while in the Yeravda Mandir. This is a timely publication. It proves that boycott of foreign cloth cannot be achieved without the spinning-wheel and khadi. The write has made a commendable effort to show how to achieve complete boycott. The book contains much useful statistical information and it is obvious that those who are anxious to understand the dharma of boycott can get considerable help from it.

MOHANDAS GANDHI

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 11; also Pardeshi Kapadni same Harifai Kem Karavi

248. LETTER TO MANMOHANDAS GANDHI

DELHI,
February 25, 1931

BHAI MANMOHAN,

You are like the man who, with one leg in the stirrup, would have instruction regarding the nature of the Brahman. But one cannot manage it always. As my eyes chanced to fall on your letter

1 The book has “1932”, which is obviously an error as Gandhiji was in jail then. The preface was sent to Manmohandas Gandhi; vide the following item.

2 How to Compete with Foreign Cloth

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
among the many lying before me, I am able to reply to it. But just as that man who wanted instruction about the nature of the Brahman while he was getting astride a horse could have only one or two sentences, so my preface will have no more. Here they are: . . .

_Blessings from_

MOHANDAS

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 11

249. _LETTER TO SHIVABhai PATEL_

DELHI,

_February 25, 1931_

BHAI SHIVABhai,

I have just enough time, or can spare it, to answer your questions. I had got your long letter. Coercion should have no room at all in the picketing of foreign cloth. It does not matter if without coercion picketing does not succeed. I certainly do not believe that fasting is always a form of coercion. I have written on this subject for the next issue of _Navajivan_. Read that article and, if you have any questions to ask me, ask them. If we have resolved not to tolerate coercion in any circumstances, we shall continuously discover new methods of picketing and new means of bringing about complete boycott. In consequence of the picketing of liquor booths, drink addicts will make illicit liquor in their homes and some of them will even sell it. This evil may be tolerated if we have taken the necessary measures to make it bearable. Most of the addicts, however, will have stopped drinking. My impression is that, in picketing liquor booths, our main, or only, aim, has been to deprive the Government of the revenue which it receives from the sale of liquor, whereas our real duty is to stop drink addicts from drinking. If we realize this clearly and if we get workers, we can visit each addict in his home and persuade him to give up his habit, and we can also teach him to enjoy harmless drinks in place of liquor. Wherever the workers act in a manner contrary to truth, persons like you should stop them from doing so and, if they fail, break off relations with them.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati : S.N. 9506

1 Vide the preceding item.
2 Vide “What Should One Not Do?”, 1-3-1931.
250. LETTER TO HEMPRABHA DAS GUPTA

DELHI, February 25, 1931

CHI. HEMPRABHA,

Your letter and a portion of the translated Gita-praveshika have arrived. I shall read the translation when I have time. I have had some news from Shankerlal.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1686

251. SPEECH AT HINDU COLLEGE, DELHI

February 25, 1931

Mahatmaji next unveiled a beautiful portrait of the late Lala Lajpat Rai amid loud shouts of "Jai" and then proceeded to deliver his speech.

He said he felt very grateful to them for having asked him to unveil the portrait of Lala Lajpat Rai. It was in the fitness of things, that at a time when India’s fight for freedom was on, the portrait of a great patriot should be unveiled. But mere unveiling of his portrait was not sufficient, they must resolve in their minds that they shall install in their hearts the noble qualities of Lala Lajpat Rai. He was also grateful to them for the purses they had presented then. He said he always felt great pleasure in sitting among students, chatting with them, playing with them, flattering them, and snubbing them, because he had a self-interest and that was “complete independence” and that could not be achieved unless he had attracted every student’s heart and won over his power of sacrifice for balidan (sacrifice) in the yajna (fight) which was going on in the country.

The whole world was looking towards the students and he would feel much pain and sorrow, if they did not come out successful in their trial. He was sorry that the students had not taken their legitimate share in the fight for freedom. No doubt they did shout “inquilab” loudly, but he wanted them to cultivate three things: (1) maryada (discipline), (2) sanyam (self-control) and (3) charitrabal (power of character). Where else could we find these three things? The fight for swaraj was a yajna of self-purification and he expected the students to contribute the largest share in that yajna.

But, he was sorry that they had not fulfilled his expectations in the matter.

1 After welcome address by S. K. Sen, Principal, three purses were presented to Gandhiji on behalf of the Hindu, St. Stephen’s and Law Colleges.
They had lagged in making the sacrifice that was expected of them. Mother India expected much more sacrifice from them and he was sorry that they had not offered that. The Mahatma said:

I am an optimist and will not give up. I still felt hopeful that you would fulfil the expectations of the country.

It was with these hopes that he had come to address them.

Mahatma said, there were three tasks before them. (1) Hindu-Muslim unity. Let the old men (Hindus and Muslims) fight, because they had in them mistrust arising out of cowardice, which was inevitable for men nearing death. But youth should not entertain mistrust and should work whole-heartedly for Hindu-Muslim unity because they were the best messengers of the cause. What, if they had different religions? Like the five fingers of one hand, they should protect and help each other. It was a pity that we people were doing unreligious things in the name of religion. He wanted students to promise to live like brothers in perfect harmony and establish goodwill and cordiality between Hindus and Muslims. The second task before them, said Mahatma, was doing away with the curse of untouchability which did not mean simply touching the so-called untouchables, but it meant regarding the humblest and the poorest in the land as our equal. Thirdly, they must use khaddar and promote the use of charkha, which in itself was a great science. Sir C. W. Raman and Sir J. C. Bose deserved praise for their scientific discoveries but the charkha too was a powerful science, which would bring salvation to crores of our countrymen.

Concluding, he said if crores of people were his followers today and called him a Mahatma, it was not because he had given up practice at the Bar, but because he regarded the poorest among the poor as his brother and he believed that the salvation of the country lay in charkha and Hindu-Muslim unity. He was devoting every minute for the achievement of these ideals.

Mahatma smilingly added:

If you follow me you can all become Mahatmas (Laughter) and then I will have many companions to help me in the attainment of our object. (Laughter)

Mahatma concluded with a prayer to God to inspire the students with the will and power to sacrifice.

The Hindustan Times, 27-2-1931

252. PICKETING

It is an unshakable faith with me that a cause suffers exactly to the extent that it is supported by violence. I say this in spite of appearances to the contrary. If I kill a man who obstructs me, I may experience a sense of false security. But the security will be short-lived. For I shall not have dealt with the root cause. In due course other men will surely rise to obstruct me. My business therefore is not to kill the man or men who obstruct me but to discover the cause that impels them to obstruct me and deal with it. Even so must one deal with the cause of people selling foreign cloth and not lay violent hands on those who happened to be the dealers for the time being. The cause lies on the surface. So long as there are buyers of foreign cloth, there will be sellers. I must, therefore, gain the ear of the buying public. If we would but recognize this cardinal fact we would lay the greatest stress upon work in the villages which send their millions to the foreign-cloth market. But I must not be understood to mean that we may neglect the cities and the merchants. Only under the plan suggested by me need there be neither despair, nor the slightest trace of violence. Moreover my plan if fully executed contains within itself the surest chances of success and need never degenerate into rowdyism. Let us not forget that we are wedded to non-violence and truth. The strictest and closest striving towards these two beacons would certainly bring us ashore; and whilst reaching us there in the quickest possible time it would enable us in difficult circumstances to discover effective ways out. Those who have faith would not be disheartened if they found that some dealers have defied Congress instructions and demands. Such disappointments should be used for perfecting our own internal organization and discovering our defects, never for losing faith.

Young India, 26-2-1931

253. LETTER TO RAIHANA TYABJI

DARYAGANI,
DELHI,
February 26, 1931

MY DEAR REHANA,

I have your letter. I wrote only two days ago for Navajivan on picketing and there pointed out that your fasting was ideal and appropriate picketing. The reasoning is simple. There must be a bond of affection between the parties. In your case there was that bond. They knew you as a member of the family which the people of Patan knew had served them in common with the people of the whole State. That bond had never snapped. You had therefore a perfect right to entreat them and, if your entreaty was lost upon them, to fast even as you would be entitled to fast against father and mother if, in your opinion, they were going wrong and they did not listen to your entreaty. That the Patan dealers in sealing their stock were actuated not so much by their regard for you as by the fear of an enraged populace may be quite true and is highly probable. But that need not be considered in weighing the merits of a particular action. In the language of the Gita ours is but to do and not to mind the result. If the motive and the action are pure, the doer is not responsible for the manifold consequences that may arise from it. I hope this is clear. Write again if necessary.

1 Vide “What Should One Not Do?”, 1-3-1931.

Things here are still indefinite, but for a satyagrahi is not one step enough? We must not seek “to see the distant scene”.

Love.

BAPU

MISS REHANA TYABJI
C/O SHRI DAHYALAL HIRALAL DESAI
NEAR THE BANK OF BARODA
MEHISANA

From a photostat: S.N. 9629

254. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

DELHI,

February 26, 1931

CHI. MATHURADAS.

Vallabhbhai told me that this time you could not accompany him because of Dilip’s illness. Except for satisfying of political curiosity and facing Delhi’s biting cold, I do not think you have missed much. And if by remaining there, you have been able to comfort Taramati and solve difficulty, at least something will have been accomplished.

Here the negotiations are still in mid-air. The talks have been warmer and more friendly than I had expected, but it is not possible to come to any conclusion from them.¹

It has already been explained to some extent which are the mills whose products are to be boycotted. But which of the goods of the mills thus listed should be boycotted is difficult to say. But if a resolution can be drafted in consultation with Shankerlal, I shall get it passed.

¹ The reference is to the Gandhi-Irwin talks begun on February 17.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

255. SPEECH AT SISGUNJ GURDWARA, DELHI
_February 26, 1931_

I have followed with painful interest the details of police firing\(^1\) into the sacred precincts of this Gurdwara that have been narrated by the previous figure\(^2\) and I assure you that my grief and resentment at the outrage are not less than yours. But as I told my Sikh brethren at the time of Nankana Sahib tragedy when I visited Nankana Sahib in company with Abul Kalam Azad in 1921, we are today fighting not for one Gurdwara but for the bigger Gurdwara, which is the common sacred possession of all of us, _viz._, _purna_ swaraj. _Purna_—complete—because it is as much for the prince as for the peasant, as much for the rich landowner as for the landless tiller of the soil, as much for the Hindus as for the Mussalmans, as much for the Parsis and Christians as for the Jains, Jews and Sikhs, irrespective of any distinction of caste or creed or status in life. The very connotation of the word and the means of its attainment to which we are pledged—truth and non-violence—preclude all possibility of that swaraj being more for someone than for the other, being partial to someone and prejudicial to the other. Truth and non-violence leave no room for fraud or falsehood. The Congress has attracted the attention of the world for the simple reason that it is pledged to win freedom by means unemployed by nations heretofore. The world has so far been familiar with only one method of achieving freedom and that by the use of physical force. But luckily for itself and the world, India has launched on the method of non-violence and truth for the attainment of its

---

1. This appeared under the caption: “God and Our Bond” as “a condensed translation” of Gandhiji’s speech.
2. On May 6, 1930
3. Balwant Singh independence. It is a unique thing in history and the world which began by regarding it with scepticism is today watching India's great non-violent experiment with bated breath. In physical warfare even chicanery and fraud have a place but non-violence precludes the use of all other weapons except that of truth and justice. Swaraj under this method, therefore, can never be achieved by usurping the rights of any community big or small but by ensuring even-handed justice and fair treatment to all—even the poorest and the weakest in the land. That being so how can the Congress want to keep even a child out of its own.

The beauty of non-violence is that it carries within it its own security.

I venture to suggest that the non-violence creed of the Congress is the surest guarantee of its good faith and our Sikh friends have no reason to fear betrayal at its hands. For the moment it did so, the Congress would not only thereby seal its own doom but that of the country too. Moreover the Sikhs are a brave people. They will know how to safeguard their rights by the exercise of arms if it should ever come to that.

Sardar Madhusudan Singh in his speech has asked for an assurance that the Congress would do nothing that might alienate the sympathies of the Sikhs from the Congress. Well, the Congress in its Lahore Session a resolution that it would not endorse any settlement with regard to the minority question that failed to satisfy any of the minorities concerned. What further assurance can the Congress give you to set you at ease I really fail to understand.

Then there is the controversy about the inclusion of the Sikh colour in the national flag. No blame can possibly attach to the Congress in this respect. The present design was suggested by me. The Congress has not even formally adopted it. I had offered to the Sikh friends to place before the A.I.C.C. their viewpoint if they could apprise me of it. But as it turned out, the A.I.C.C. could not meet after that and no one knows as to when it would be able to meet at all. Even the Working Committee is out today on sufferance. To raise this controversy at this time—a time when the Congress is fighting for its very existence—would be, to say the least, unseemly act. You may not obstruct if you cannot help.

The Sikhs have given their loyal and unstinted co-operation to the Congress in many parts in India like Bombay and Delhi, etc. But these brave people have never bothered themselves about the flag question. The flag controversy is being conducted mostly by those who have held aloof from the present movement. A brave man always gives credit to the other party for its bona fides. Why can you have not faith? If the Congress should play false afterwards you can well settle surely with it, for you hold the sword. I would ask you therefore to cast out suspicion and distrust from you and to plunge into this sacred yajna of freedom whole-heartedly. You will find that when you are ready to make the extreme sacrifice you will disdain to ask for guarantees. It will be for others who will look up to you as the champions of their rights as it will be for you to fulfil their expectations. I hold Granth Sahib in high reverence. Several parts of it have passed into our daily speech. So far as my reading of it goes it inculcates faith, valour and an invincible belief in the ultimate triumph of right and justice. I would like you to derive your inspiration and guidance from it.

I ask you to accept my word and the resolution of the Congress that it will not betray a single individual much less a community. If it ever thinks of doing so, it will only hasten its own doom. No nation determined to immolate itself at the altar of freedom can be guilty of breach of faith. My life has been an open book. I have no secrets and I encourage no secrets. I pray you therefore to unbosom yourselves of all your doubts and apprehensions and I shall try to meet you as best I can. What more shall I say? What more can I say then this that let God be witness of the bond that binds me and the Congress with you.

Young India, 5-3-1931

256. INTERVIEW WITH VICE-ROY

February 27, 1931

I saw Mr. Gandhi again today. I began by reference to the scope of the further constitutional discussions—in regard to which I said—“The object of future discussions is to consider further the scheme for the constitutional government of India discussed at the Round Table Conference. Of the scheme there outlined, Federation is an essential part; so also are Indian responsibility, and safeguards, explained by the Prime Minister, as being needed to secure such matters as Crown control of defence and external affairs; the position of minorities; the financial credit of India, and the discharge of obligations. The character and form of the arrangements, by which effect should be given to these fundamental principles of Federation, responsibility and safeguards, are matters for discussion.”

To this he assented.

I then referred to the question he had raised as to an examination into debt charges. I told him that the position of His Majesty’s Government was that, for reasons of Indian credit, it was impossible for them to assent to an investigation into the Indian debt, and as to any particular charges it was impossible for His Majesty’s Government to express an opinion without knowing more precisely to what these might relate.

In reply to this he said that he would wish to raise particular subjects, though these he was not willing or able precisely to define. He instanced however the £100 million gift in the war. I told him that I could only make His Majesty’s Government acquainted with what he had said, and that in any event I had no doubt that His Majesty’s Government must reserve to themselves complete liberty of decision as to how they dealt with particular subjects if raised. To this he replied that, while appreciating the position of His Majesty’s Government, he must make it clear that, in the event of the attitude of His Majesty’s Government on questions raised being such as Congress could not accept, he must reserve to Congress the right to withdraw from participation in the Conference proceedings.

He said that he did not contemplate or desire any public pronouncement on this subject.

The next matter to which I referred was secession, on which I told him that, as I had made plain at our first interview, I regarded the question in present circumstances as academic, and that, though I presumed he could raise it if he so desired, public expression of any intention to do so would have the worst possible effect and could hardly fail to damage his own cause. To this he assented.

We then turned to the practical questions arising in the event of peace restored. I made it plain to him that any reciprocal action by Government depended on the effective discontinuance of the civil disobedience movement, of which I detailed the various activities set out in the memorandum I had before me, and of which I promised to send him a copy.

He raised a variety of points on particular issues, which were not of great importance, and, after much discussion, the position emerged that apart from these, three matters appeared to present great—and in his phrase, insurmountable—difficulty. These were picketing; enquiries into police excesses; and salt.

On each of these I developed the attitude of Government as defined in the memorandum, and said that I could not hold out any hope of Government going further.

He argued all three points on lines which after several hours’ discussion have now become familiar, and promised to send me a note¹ tomorrow, showing precisely what he had in mind as regards picketing. I told him that I would consider this when I received it, but that I scarcely thought it could affect my view. This was that whatever might be the logical arguments in favour of peaceful persuasion, by way of picketing, the whole experience of the last month showed that it was a conception that had no relation to practical facts, and that it inevitably led to abuses and violence, of which we had had examples in plenty. As regards the points of police enquiry and salt, he was frankly dissatisfied.

I promised to send him a note on all the points discussed, in which I would state clearly the position of Government. He could then consider whether any further meeting would be useful. He said he would leave this to me. I concluded by again urging him to exert his influence on the side of peace to which he replied by saying that he desired peace, but that when in doubt he fell back on “Lead Kindly Light” and “One step enough for me”. . . .²

SD. IRWIN

From a photostat: G.N. 8949

257. INTERVIEW TO ASSOCIATED PRESS OF INDIA

February 27, 1931

The Gandhi-Irwin talks³ concluded at six in the evening. Mr. Gandhi, interviewed by the Associated Press, said:

I have no statement to make. The Viceroy’s House may issue one.

Are you satisfied with the conversations?
It all depends.—

Will the discussions be resumed?
These may be resumed.

The Hindu, 28-2-1931

¹ Vide “Note on Picketing”, 28-2-1931.
² The note concluded with the remark: “He was in very obstinate mood throughout the conversation and left a pretty clear impression on my mind that, beneath the guise of reasonableness, he was either bluffing or had made up his mind that he did not mean to settle except on his full terms.”
³ Vide the preceding item.
258. NOTE ON PICKETING

February 28, 1931

In the event of peace being established picketing of foreign cloth and drink and drug shops will be unaggressive and though, to the extent that it is successful, it must produce political consequences, it will be predominantly for social and moral ends as it was before the political consequence was thought of, or intended. It will, therefore, be largely confined to villages, and even in cities attention will be directed not so much to the sellers as to the buyers. It will thus be predominantly educative. There will be no cordons, and no crowds, such as now are the special feature of picketing. There will be no hostile demonstrations against those who insist on selling foreign cloth in defiance of public opinion. Naturally it will be absolutely peaceful and conducted so as to cause no public obstruction, and will not be in defiance of the common law.

From a photostat: C.W. 9334. Courtesy: India Office Library; also G.N. 8950

259. LETTER TO VICEROY

DELI,

February 28, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I understood that you would send your note on the points you expounded yesterday and that, thereafter, I was to send you my note on picketing. But, as it is getting late in the day, without further waiting I enclose my note1 on picketing.

I would like to know early, if I may, whether I shall be wanted tomorrow. I am anxious to know early, as I have an important public engagement tomorrow which I must postpone, if I am to be at the Viceregal House tomorrow.

I am, etc.,

From a photostat: C.W. 9333. Courtesy: India Office Library; also G.N. 8950

1 Vide the preceding item.
260. LETTER TO CHANDRAKANTA

DELHI,
February 28, 1931

CHI. KANTA,

I have not been able to write to you at all. It has troubled me but I was helpless. Your health must now fully improve. I can understand your being impatient to meet me. But I am afraid we shall not be able to meet. Let us see what happens. I have no time just now to dictate more.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat to the Gujarati: Chandrakanta Papers. Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library

261. WHAT SHOULD ONE NOT DO?

Let me note down what, in my opinion, are the things one ought not to do while picketing liquor shops and foreign-cloth shops.

1. We should not abuse either the seller or the buyer and should never be discourteous in our behaviour.
2. We should not lie down before a shop or a vehicle.
3. We should not cry out “shame! shame!”
4. We should not take out effigies for burning or burying.
5. Even while ostracizing people, we should not obstruct their obtaining food or any other service. But we should not take meals in their homes or accept any service from them. How far service should be rendered, however, requires careful consideration.
6. We should not fast in protest against them in any-circumstances. The commonly accepted rule regarding fasting is as follows: Where there is a bond between two parties, one of them may fast if the other violates a condition or a moral law, just as Raihana fasted in Patan.

Some may say that the boycott of liquor shops or foreign-cloth shops cannot succeed through such limited picketing; I would then say that the boycott had better fail in that case. Those who raise such doubts, it may be said, do not have full faith in the unfailing success of non-violence. Observance of non-violence was the object behind entrusting both these tasks to women. I am convinced that we can achieve both these boycotts within a short period of time if a non-violent atmosphere is maintained. On the contrary, if we transgress our limits, however welcome the immediate results may appear to be, bitterness will spread among us in the end and the atmosphere of internecine strife will prevail. And if we become victims of family feuds, the boycott will end and, swaraj itself will remain a mere dream. Hence my advice and hope is that everyone will accept this prescription as that of an experienced vaid and put it into practice.

If despite people following my advice—regarding what should be done and what should not be done—the boycott does not succeed, I am aware that the burden of the failure will rest on me. I am prepared to shoulder it.

KHADI AND BOYCOTT OF FOREIGN CLOTH

As I continue to examine the activities of the past six months, I find that, to some extent, we have deviated from our path. Of late, I have been hearing from many quarters voices of swadeshi which are opposed to khadi. Some regard themselves as having fulfilled their objective by claiming that they wear swadeshi, i.e., mill-made cloth. But, from the long-range point of view, it will be seen that those who wear Indian mill-made cloth and disdain khadi are in the long run harming both khadi and the Indian mills. The reason is that without khadi boycott is impossible. Here is the proof. About 50 per cent of India’s requirements of cloth are imported from abroad. Our Indian mills cannot meet this requirement within a short period. This task can be accomplished by khadi alone, since our capacity to produce it depends solely on our keenness. Just as we insist on making bhakharis (or cooking rice) ourselves and do not get them made or cooked in Indian or foreign factories, like-wise, if we desire it, we can produce as much khadi as we need. If this much is understood, it is easy to show why a disregard for khadi harms the cause of Indian (textile) mills. The latter by themselves cannot make a success of the boycott. Hence foreign cloth would enter into such fierce competition with Indian mills, that the latter could not but suffer a set-back. We have had this experience on many occasions before now. Hence those who rest satisfied with thoughtlessly wearing Indian mill-made cloth deceive themselves and harm the boycott movement. I hope, therefore, that
262. LETTER TO GANGABEHN VAIDYA

DELHI,
February 28/March 1, 1931

CHI. GANGABEHN,

By the time you get this letter you will have been out of jail for many days. If it again becomes necessary to let your clothes be stained with blood, let them be. This colour is more pleasant than that of \textit{kumkum} or \textit{sindoor}. I expect a letter from you describing your experience in jail.

I cannot say yet whether we shall be able to meet.

\textit{Sunday Morning}

I dictated the lines above yesterday. I saw today the wire expressing your wish. In fact I am impatient to see you all. I do hope to be able to start before Wednesday. But who can say what will happen? It will be the same to me whether I am able to leave this place or whether I am arrested. If I am arrested and we cannot meet, do not worry at all. It is not very necessary that you should consult me on any matter. If God has willed it so, we are bound to meet.

\textit{Blessings from}

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 8773. Courtesy: Gangabehn Vaidya
263. INTERVIEW WITH VICEROY

March 1, 1931

Mr. Gandhi came to see me this afternoon, and before he came I had, after very careful examination of the various points raised, come to the conclusion that, apart from minor and technical points, there were three main matters of principle on which, so far as I could judge, accommodation was impossible. These were: picketing and boycott; enquiries into police excesses; and salt. I accordingly began the interview with a firm determination on one point, which was that on no account must I allow the break which I anticipated to come, as I felt certain Mr. Gandhi would try to engineer it, on Police alone. I accordingly began by taking Mr. Gandhi through the memorandum I had sent him the previous day inviting him to let me know on what points he was unable to agree with the Government attitude. We soon came to a stoppage over the question of boycott, and on this matter I, with his concurrence, brought in the Home Secretary, Emerson, to deal more fully than I could with some technical points. After rather a wandering discussion the position emerged that Mr. Gandhi was apparently willing to concentrate his claim and his energy upon the business of substitution of Indian cloth and goods for foreign, giving up boycott of British goods, and giving up boycott as a political weapon. Merchants would be at liberty to abrogate restrictive agreements, and no element of coercion would be applied to them.

On picketing we had also a long talk in which we respectively re-stated our position, he saying that all he meant to do was perfectly peaceful picketing, which was entirely permissible under the common law, I maintaining the view that, whatever his common-law rights and the persuasiveness of his logic, peaceful picketing was a thing that in present circumstances just would not happen. People were in too excitable a temper for so simple and speedy a transition as he contemplated from one sort of picketing to another to be possible. He was very frank and said that he had been discussing with the Congress Committee, and they were going to stop picketing where it was not working smoothly, and was very emphatic that they could get their orders obeyed in these matters. We left the point at this stage for further discussion in order to see how we got on on other things.

We then came to Police, in regard to which he said the formula in the memorandum was quite unsatisfactory, and he could not possibly accept it. I said that I appreciated that because, as I presumed, he would feel that however good the evidence he might have to bring about particular cases, my formula left it open for local Governments to refuse to enquire any further on the ground that they already had the facts. On the other hand, were I to admit his very justifiable point, it would mean that I must either open the floodgates to enquiry, or something like it, in innumerable cases all over India, wherever anybody wished to get back on the Police, or must adopt the line of saying that he could select, say, three cases, which would inevitably have the effect of suggesting to the world that these were three selected instances typical of a generally prevailing state of police savagery. I therefore told him that, inasmuch as I could do neither of these things and inasmuch as we really wanted peace, would not it be better to drop it altogether? No formula that the wit of man could devise would really be much good, or was indeed possible. I should in fact be pretending to give him something that I knew local Governments did not intend. He seemed a good deal impressed with this kind of line and, after some talk, said that he had himself been thinking of dropping it. We accordingly, after some further talk, drafted a formula to the effect that he had had brought certain allegations to the notice of Government, but that Government were unwilling to institute specific enquiries because they didn’t think that this would help peace, and that, having regard to those considerations, Mr. Gandhi did not press his demand. He took the formula away, but I am not without hope that we shall eventually get settled in that fashion.

We then passed to Salt, on which we covered ground over which we had been before. He attached far greater importance to it than I had expected, and I imagine it is mainly vanity. I told him that we could not condone publicly the breaches of law; that would be to give too great encouragement to evil influences; nor could we in present financial circumstances sacrifice revenue by repealing it. I was quite willing to consider the question of making some alteration in the executive administration of the law, if this could be done by regular order, with the object of extending privileges already enjoyed by the inhabitants of some areas to others, but the matter demanded fuller knowledge than I possessed and I suggested he should see Schuster. This he said he would be very glad to do, and is to see him on Tuesday. One of the possible ways of dealing with it that I put to him was that the terms of reference of the existing Salt Committee should be enlarged so as to bring in the points in which he is particularly interested and on which he might give evidence to the Committee. If this were done, I assured him that the Government would be willing to give sympathetic consideration to recommendations that the Committee might make. I think it may be necessary to do something to meet him on Salt. I fully recognize the psychological objection to doing anything on a matter so publicly identified with his inauguration of the civil disobedience campaign. A good deal will turn on how it can be done, but I do not believe that we ought to allow settlement to wreck on the abstract principle that Salt is the inviolable ark on which no hand must be laid.

The discussion up to this point therefore left us with:

Police—very promising; picketing and salt—unsettled, but with a good deal of manoeuvre-room if desired.

I accordingly suggested that he should come again after dinner and discuss the actual details of any proposals he might wish to make about picketing with Emerson. I would join them if I could.

Second Interview : 9:30 p.m., March 1, 1931

I joined Mr. Gandhi and Mr. Emerson at 9.30 p.m. and found that by that time Emerson had got Mr. Gandhi hitched to the point of abandonment of the boycott as a political weapon and an assurance of complete freedom for cloth merchants to do what they liked. These seem pretty substantial gains. We discussed Picketing for a long time, and I eventually said to him, in pursuance of what we had said earlier in the day, that I would press him to accept this sort of solution, i.e., that the statement should record the common-law right as it stood of peaceful picketing; that Government did not challenge this common-law right, but that Mr. Gandhi and Congress, realizing the circumstances of the country, did not intend to make any use of their common-law rights for a period of two months, or six weeks, in order definitely to dissociate the peaceful picketing they want liberty to employ, from peaceful picketing as it has been employed during the last 12 months. Mr. Gandhi made it plain that, if Congress did not succeed in maintaining the peaceful character of the picketing he desired, he could have no objection to Government taking any steps they wished to deal with it, that we should be entitled to tell him he must call it off. This he would almost certainly himself desire to do. He promised to think over my suggestion and said that he did not think it would be difficult to find a formula on which we could both meet. I am inclined to agree with him and, although I should like to get rid of picketing for ever, I have very little doubt that, if you can get rid of the political-weapon drive of it and have it purely as an economic and social thing, it will be dead in three weeks. This is the very strong view of all the Indians who come and talk to me about it.

After saying that I would put him in touch with Schuster about Salt tomorrow, he ran over various points of smaller importance that some of his people had put to him on the other matters in the note. He produced difficulties on the subject of Additional Police, which I think may be obstinate, but we shall not break on this.
Vallabhbhai Patel had produced a few particular difficulties from Gujarat, but these too I think can be surmounted. The position therefore left is that:

1. we have got to find the right settlement of picketing, which I believe can be done;
2. we have got to persuade him to be satisfied with including his salt points in the reference to the existing Committee, or see whether we can satisfy him about this in some other way;
3. he has got to make up his mind to accept our wash-out on police in some form that fits with our position. I think it is permissible to hope that we shall succeed in resolving these points and, if we do so, we will be pretty clear for the question of his attitude about debts on which I must telegraph to the Secretary of State. I believe this question will prove, when it comes to the point, not to be at all impracticable. Sapru is very emphatic that, when they actually get round the table discussing it, they will be able to knock it out, or at least knock out any objectionable developments of it. There remain “the scope of the discussion”, on which he has accepted His Majesty’s Government’s formula, and the question of secession, on which he also accepted the formula that I read to him and which has already been reported to the Secretary of State. On both these points of debts and secession he does not want any public statement to be made.

(Sd.) Irwin

From a photostat : G.N. 8952
264. A NOTE

[March 2, 1931]

I want you to take me literally in what I said yesterday. You seem to be feeling lonely and almost uninterested. That must not be, my strength depends upon you. I want your active support in what I am doing. And that I cannot get unless you criticise, alter, amend, reject and do many other things. You have a whole day at your disposal. Make the fullest use of it for considering these notes. I have not hitherto minded the language. But after prayer I carefully examined the language. Consider the notes with the linguistic changes and make suggestions as to wording even where you approve of the substance. Consider also the Viceroy’s draft regarding the inquiry question. I have made some alterations. Personally, I am reconciled to the substance of the suggestion which was, in the first instance, mine, given as a possible solution of the difficulty.

A.I.C.C. File No. 329, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

265. NOTE TO V. S. SASTRI, T. B. SAPRU

AND M. R. JAYAKAR

NEW DELHI,
March 3, 1931

You must not leave. Your presence here is indispensable. There are many difficulties yet to be smoothed over.

The Tribune, 5-3-1931

1 This appears to be a Silence Day note addressed to Jawaharlal Nehru after the Working Committee meeting held on March 1, 1931 had discussed the provisional settlement which was finally approved at the meeting held on March 4, 1931. For Jawaharlal Nehru’s note on the provisional settlement, vide “Jawaharlal nehru’s note on provisional settlement”. For the text of the provisional settlement, vide “Provisional settlement”, 12-3-1931.

2 In Clause 8 of the provisional settlement

3 In reply to a note expressing their desire to leave Delhi
I saw Mr. Gandhi again yesterday. Emerson was present at our discussions at Mr. Gandhi’s request.

We began with a few of the less important points, working up to the question of return of the land that had been sold to third parties. He accepted the position of Government that if this was to be recovered for the original owners it must be a question of third parties doing it. At the same time he said that it would be difficult in fact for this to get done unless Government officials were sympathetic. I adhered to the position that the Government of India was debarred from putting pressure of any kind on the Government of Bombay, that the Government of Bombay would be very sticky about doing anything, but that they would be neutral in the matter, leaving third parties to do what they could. He wasn’t at all happy about this, and said that Vallabhbhai Patel was frankly doubtful whether he could carry the settlement in Gujarat unless they got some accommodation of this question. I told him however that it was not in my power to vary my position.

After clearing up the question of Additional Police in which we eventually agreed to treat the money question on the same logical basis as remission of fines (i.e., that moneys collected should not be refunded unless they were in excess of the amount required, but that moneys not collected should be washed out), we came on to boycott and picketing. I pressed him very hard either (a) to give up picketing altogether on his own on the ground of disturbance and communal feeling; or (b) to accept an agreement with Government that there would be no picketing for a specified period. He would not hear of either, assuring me with the utmost conviction that, if I would only trust his honour in this matter and the honour of Congress, there would be no picketing to which anybody could take objection. All he desired to do was to return to the status quo before the civil disobedience movement was started. There might be a little more picketing than was done before that movement began, because people had begun to think more constructively about swadeshi, but he could guarantee that there would be no interference or intimidation or the rest. After much wrangling we came down to the boycott and picketing formula of the agreement. I think it is not too bad. It ties it up pretty tight, and pledges Congress at once to suspend it if there is any abuse.

We had no trouble about the Police formula. He had made one or two verbal alterations that on the whole improved it from my point of view. In the course of a short discussion we had about this, he revealed what I have by now discovered as the right method of dealing with him. He said: “When you or Mr. Emerson use your best arguments it does not always have much effect on me, but, when you tell me that

---

1 The report was prepared on March 4.
Government is in a difficulty and cannot do what I want, then I am inclined to capitulate to you”! This was exactly the history of the Police discussion.

The last subject we tackled was Salt, on which he had had a discussion with Schuster in the morning and on which they had arrived at a working formula. While our talks were proceeding the afternoon had been getting on, and it looked as if he was again going to have a race for his evening meal, which he cannot take after the sun has set. I accordingly asked him what he would wish done about it. It was eventually decided that Mirabai (Miss Slade) should bring it up here, which was done. I was greatly interested in meeting her, of whom I had heard much. She evidently venerates him very profoundly, and one felt one had suddenly been switched into a rather different world.

We could not finish all the matters for discussion, and I accordingly asked Gandhi to come back at 9 o’clock to get on with them as far as he could with Emerson, and I promised to look in and see how matters were progressing after finishing a dinner-party.

Later Interview : 9 p.m.

I joined them again at 10.30 and found they had pretty well agreed to the statement in the form in which it now stands. A good deal of verbal redrafting had to be done which took time, but the back of it was broken when we got the Police enquiry off and got agreement about withdrawal of the boycott of British goods.

We have given more than I like about Salt, but I don’t think we could have got away with much less. We concluded, with the old man telling me that he was going to throw his whole heart and soul into trying to cooperate in constitution-building, and that, while he felt greatly oppressed with the responsibility of decision, he prayed with all his heart that it might be successful. I was impressed, as I have been throughout, with his sincerity. He told me, in reply to a question, that he was quite firm about not re-starting civil disobedience till the end of the conference discussions anyhow, and hoped never.¹

(Sd.) Irwin, 4-3-31

From a photostat : G.N. 8953

267. LETTER TO VICEROY

1 DARYAGANI, DELHI,
March 4, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I write this letter in connection with the lands of civil resisters sold in Gujarat in respect of revenue dues. Overworked as you are, it is distressful to me to have to write to you on a matter which may appear to be trivial. But I fear that on it hangs the successful working of the settlement just made. With all the desire to give the fullest effect to the settlement, Sardar Vallabhbhai tells me that he will find it utterly impossible to implement the Congress obligation of the settlement unless the lands can be restored to the rightful holders. I am well aware that as head of the Government of India you cannot by reason of a previous undertaking intervene in the matter, but as an Englishman interested in the successful working of a settlement built up by your patient and unwearied toil you can perhaps exercise your influence to see justice done and thereby assist its smooth working. Shrimati Gangabehn, whose name I have already introduced to you in a previous communication and who has been working in the taluk of Borsad in Kaira District, tells me that the land in Ras, where or near which her social work was being done, was sold to the Dharalas for a song, and that it was bought by them at the instigation of the previous Mamlatdar and in collusion with him. If there was proper enquiry I should undertake to prove the alleged collusion. But I know that at the present moment I must not, so far as possible, whisper a word about the past. That all the lands sold were sold for a song will, I think, be readily admitted. To say the least it will be conceded that it was the height of unwisdom, on the part of local authorities, thus practically to give away the lands.

¹ For Viceroy’s report to the Secretary of State on the outcome of the talks, vide “Viceroy’s cable to secretary of state”, 4-3-1931.

I therefore ask your assistance so far as it can be given in surmounting the difficulty. It is in the confidence that you will do all that is possible to obtain the co-operation of the Bombay Government in finding a solution which will restore peace that Sardar Vallabhbhai and I can allow the settlement to go through.¹

I am,

Yours, etc.,

From a photostat: C.W. 9335. Courtesy: India Office Library

268. INTERVIEW WITH VICEROY

March 4, 1931

Mr. Gandhi came up and had two or three hours’ talk with Emerson at 12 o’clock mainly about the detailed draft of the agreement we had reached and about the methods to be employed for its implementation. I did not participate in these discussions, but saw him for a short time in the afternoon about a letter\(^1\) he had written to me concerning the land in Gujarat.

¹ For Irwin’s views on this letter, vide the following item.

The point of the letter was that unless I could give him an assurance that the land sold would at some time unspecified be returned to their original owners he could not go on with the settlement. It had unhappily in his mind attained the importance of a moral scruple which outweighed everything else. His trouble was that according to his information some land at Ras had been sold by a dishonest Mamlatdar improperly and unjustly to Dharalas. This had been deliberately done according to his information in order to have revenge upon the Patidars, of whom the Dharalas are the natural enemies. I told him, as I had repeatedly told him before, that I was under the most strict obligation to the Bombay Government to accept the position, as stated in our note that these transactions must, so far as the Government were concerned, be regarded as final. It was impossible for me, in justice to these undertakings, to put pressure on the Bombay Government in a matter on which I had assured them my support. He recognized the force of this, but said that his difficulty must in some way be met. I told him that I could not vary the position as stated above, nor could I agree, as he suggested, to omit any reference to land that had been sold from the statement of settlement. To do this would inevitably carry the implication that the question was left open, and that Government had no fixed attitude in regard to it. The utmost that I could do would be to write to Sir Frederick Sykes drawing his attention to any statement on the matter that Mr. Gandhi cared to make to me, and ask him to give his personal attention to the task of finding an equitable solution. This I was willing to do, though I was not sanguine of Sir Frederick Sykes being able to find a solution that would meet the case. In any event it was highly unlikely that anything could be done at once. What might be possible under different conditions when things had quieted down, might be another matter. Mr. Gandhi said that he did not care about the time that elapsed before the question could be settled, but he felt so strongly that, without some settlement, the thing would remain an open sore in the Kaira District that he could never reconcile himself to it.

At this point we left it and I went to a Garden Party where I met Sapru, Jayakar, Sastri, Purshotamdas and Rahimtullah. I told them of the difficulty and exhorted them to put their full pressure on Gandhi to save the settlement from being wrecked.

Sapru, Sastri and Jayakar came to see me at 10.30 p.m. with alternative suggestions:

1. that we should omit the paragraph from the statement;
2. that we should insert the words “justly and lawfully sold” as a conditional limitation on non-return of land sold.

I told them both these things were impossible, and finally after much discussion we came to the suggestion of the addition of a note\(^2\) in the form it appears

\(^1\) Vide the preceding item.
\(^2\) Vide “Note”, following paragraph 17(C) in “Provisional settlement”, 12-3-1931.
in the statement as published. This seemed comparatively innocuous and they went off at 12.30 a.m. to get Gandhi to accept it. This he later did.

The impressions left on my mind by this incident were

1. that it is essential to give no more time for moral scruples to develop. Clearly, though imponderable, they are very weighty;

2. that there may be a real grievance in the methods adopted for the sale of some land and, whether this is so or not, the position of the Dharalas owning coveted land in the midst of Patidar villages is not going to be a very happy one. I should have supposed it might after two or three months have been possible for friendly arrangements to be made by which the Dharalas might be either bought out at satisfactory profit, or possibly assisted to buy land somewhere else, where it would not give rise to these acute difficulties.¹

From a photostat : G.N. 8954

269. LETTER TO G. CUNNINGHAM
DARYAGANJ, DELHI,
March 4, 1931

DEAR MR. CUNNINGHAM,

I have had a full discussion with the Working Committee on the moral issue raised by me at the interview with His Excellency the Viceroy this afternoon. The responsibility for the final decision rests upon my shoulders. I must apologize to His Excellency for my obvious limitations.

As to the issue, I repeat the alternative I suggested to Mr. Emerson, viz., that words “justly and lawfully” be added after “sold”. I am sure the Government of India do not seek to protect unjust or unlawful transactions.

If, however, this amendment does not commend itself to His Excellency, I would be prepared to consider any alternative amendment along the same lines.

I understand that Sjts. Sastri, Sapru and Jayakar are to see His Excellency on this matter. Pending settlement of the issue raised, I am not sending the letter² I handed to His Excellency this morning and which has to be somewhat reshaped.

Yours sincerely,

From a photostat : C.W. 9336. Courtesy : India Office Library

¹ For Viceroy’s version of the interview of March 5 which follows, vide “Interview with Viceroy”, 5-3-1931.
² Vide “Letter to Viceroy”, 4-3-1931.
It is a matter of great joy to me as it is I hope to the readers of Young India that numerous men and women took on the Motilal Shraddha Day\(^1\) vows leading to self-purification for the purpose of swaraj. My faith in self-purification tells me that these vows if carried out to the full will bring us many steps nearer our goal. From the letters and information otherwise received I know that those who have taken vows include men and women, boys and girls drawn from all classes and all religious groups. Of these Hindu, Mahomedan and Christian names have already come under my observations. The vows are varied. Some have vowed to observe brahmacharya, some to abstain from smoking, some to refrain from using any cloth but khadi. The reader will not ask me or himself how these vows can possibly advance swaraj. It is not a matter for demonstration through reason. The experience of the world shows that wherever people have taken to purity of life there has been self-rule, in other words swaraj. And self-rule by millions is swaraj of millions. Any other is not swaraj but mirage. The history of past twelve months is a progressive realization of the fact that purification undertaken not merely for the purpose of individual peace but for the purpose of national happiness does result in promoting such happiness. Happiness here means an enlightened realization of human dignity and a craving for human liberty which prizes itself above mere selfish satisfaction of personal comforts and material wants and would readily and joyfully sacrifice these for self-preservation.

AM I SELF-DELUDED?

A friend writes saying that I delude myself in believing that the boycott of foreign cloth has been attained largely through non-violence. I must deny the charge. For I am not unaware of the violent spirit that has crept into our picketing. In my opinion any contribution made by violent picketing will be found to be not only transitory but is likely to lead to reactions which we will all deplore. There shall be no compulsion in matters of trade and the like\(^1\) is a sound maxim of conduct. Picketing is valuable, even indispensable, aid to conviction and conversion. But a man who yields to threat or physical coercion resents it and simply awaits a suitable opportunity to revert to his original ways and resorts to reprisals when he is able to exact them. I wish therefore that I could induce the reader to share my belief that every form of violence is harmful in the end and that we shall be able to assimilate only that much result of the past sufferings which was obtained without violence, i.e., through the voluntary sufferings of the people.

---

KUMARAPPA

The reader I know will feel proud of the statement made by J. C. Kumarappan before the court. Who that has read it can say that he did not deserve the punishment he received? His was a pure and full sacrifice in more ways than one.

Young India, 5-3-1931

271. WORKING COMMITTEE RESOLUTION ON PROVISIONAL SETTLEMENT

March 5, 1931

The Working Committee having considered the terms of the provisional settlement1 arrived at between the Government of India and Mahatma Gandhi on behalf of the Congress endorses them and directs all Congress Committees to take immediate action in accordance with them. The Committee hopes that the country will carry out the terms agreed to in so far as they relate to the various Congress activities, and is of opinion that on a strict fulfilment of the obligations undertaken on behalf of the Congress will depend the advance of India towards purna swaraj.

A.I.C.C. File No. 329, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

---

1 The resolution was presumably drafted by Gandhiji.
2 Vide “Provisional settlement”, 12-3-1931.
272. STATEMENT TO THE PRESS

DELHI,

March 5, 1931

In the first place, I would like to state that this settlement, such as it is, would have been impossible without the Viceroy’s inexhaustible patience and equally inexhaustible industry and unfailing courtesy. I am aware that I must have, though quite unconsciously, given him causes for irritation. I must have also tried his patience but I cannot recall an occasion when he allowed himself to be betrayed into irritation or impatience. I must add that he was frank throughout these very delicate negotiations and I believe he was determined, if it was at all possible, to have a settlement. I must confess that I approached the negotiations in fear and trembling. I was also filled with distrust but at the very outset he disarmed my suspicions and put me at ease. For myself, I can say without fear of contradiction that when I wrote my letter inviting the invitation to see him, I was determined not to be outdone in the race for reaching a settlement, if it could be reached at all honourably. I am, therefore, thankful to the Almighty that the settlement was reached and the country has been spared, at least for the time being, and I hope for all time, the sufferings which in the event of a breakdown would have been intensified a hundred fold.

For a settlement of this character, it is not possible nor wise to say which is the victorious party. If there is any victory, I should say it belongs to both. The Congress has never made any bid for victory.

In the very nature of things the Congress has a definite goal to reach and there can be no question of victory without reaching the goal. I would, therefore, urge all my countrymen and all my sisters instead of feeling elated, if they find in the terms any cause for elation, to humble themselves before God and ask Him to give them strength and wisdom to pursue the course that their mission demands for the time being, whether it is by way of suffering or by way of patient negotiation, consultation and conference.

I hope, therefore, that the millions who have taken part in this struggle of suffering during the past twelve months will now, during

1 This appeared as “Press Statement” on “the terms of truce to a gathering of American and Indian journalists and Pressmen”.

VOL. 51 : 6 JANUARY, 1931 - 28 APRIL, 1931

207
the period of conference and construction, show the same willingness, the same cohesion, the same effort and the same wisdom that they have in an eminent degree shown during what I would describe as a heroic period in the modern history of India.

But I know that, if there would be men and women who will feel elated by the settlement, there are, also those who will be, and are, keenly disappointed.

Heroic suffering is like the breath of their nostrils. They rejoice in it as in nothing else. They will endure unendurable sufferings, be they ever so prolonged, but when suffering ceases they feel their occupation gone and feel also that the goal has receded from the view. To them I would only say, ‘Wait, watch, pray and hope.’

Suffering has its well-defined limits. Suffering can be both wise and unwise, and when the limit is reached, to prolong it would be not unwise but the height of folly.

It would be folly to go on suffering when the opponent makes it easy for you to enter into a discussion with him upon your longings. If a real opening is made, it is one’s duty to take advantage of it and, in my humble opinion, the settlement has made a real opening. Such a settlement has necessarily to be provisional as this is. The peace arrived at is conditional upon many other things happening. The largest part of the written word is taken up with what may be called ‘Terms of Truce’. This had to be naturally so. Many things had to happen before the Congress could participate in the deliberations of the Conference. A recital of these was absolutely necessary. But the goal of the Congress is not to get a redress of past wrongs important though they are: its goal is purna swaraj which, indifferently rendered in English, has been described as complete independence.

It is India’s birthright, as it is of any other nation worthy of that name, and India cannot be satisfied with anything less and throughout the settlement one misses that enchanting word. The clause which carefully hides that word is capable, and intentionally capable, of a double meaning.

Federation may be a mirage or it may mean a vital organic state in which the two limbs might work so as to strengthen the whole. Responsibility, which is the second girder, may be a mere shadow or it may be tall, majestic, unbending and unbendable oak. Safeguards in the interests of India may be purely illusory and so many ropes tying the country hand and foot and strangling her by the neck, or they may be like so many fences protecting a tender plant requiring delicate care and attention.

One party may give one meaning and another may give the three girders the other meaning. It is open under that clause to either party to work along its own lines and the Congress if it has shown readiness to take part in the deliberation of the Conference, it is because it seeks to make Federation, Responsibility, Safeguards, reservations, or whatever other names they may be known by, such as would promote the real growth of the country along political, social, economic and moral lines.

If the Congress succeeds in making its position acceptable to the Conference, then, I claim that the fruit of that effort will be complete independence. But I know that the way to it is weary. There are many rocks, many pitfalls, to be found across the way. But if Congressmen will approach the new task to which they are called, with confidence and courage, I have no misgivings about the result. It is, therefore, in their hands either to make something noble and worth looking at out of the new opportunity that has come to them or, by lack of self-confidence and want of courage, to fritter away the opportunity.

But I know that in this task Congressmen will require the aid of the other parties, the aid of the great Princes of India, and last but by no means the least the aid of Englishmen. I need not make any appeal at the present juncture to the different parties. I have little doubt that they are no less eager than Congressmen for the real freedom of their country.

But the Princes are a different proposition. Their acceptance of the idea of Federation was certainly for me a surprise, but if they will become equal partners in Federated India, I venture to suggest that of their own free will they should advance towards the position that what is called British India has been all these long years seeking to occupy.

An undiluted autocracy, however benevolent it may be, and an undiluted democracy are an incompatible mixture bound to result in an explosion. It is, therefore, I think, necessary for them not to take up an uncompromising attitude and impatiently refuse to listen to an appeal from or on behalf of the would-be partner. If they refused any such appeal they would make the position of the Congress untenable and, indeed, most awkward. The Congress represents, or endeavours to represent, the whole of the people of India. It recognizes no distinction between those who reside in British India or in Indian States.

The Congress has, with great wisdom and equally great restraint, refrained from interfering with the doings and affairs of the States and it has done so in order, not to unnecessarily wound the susceptibilities of the States, but, also, by reason of the self-imposed restraint, to make its voice heard by the States on a suitable occasion. I think that, that occasion has now arrived. May I then hope that the great Princes will not shut their ears to the Congress appeal on behalf of the people of the States?

I would like to make a similar appeal to the English. If India is to come to her own through conference and consultation, the goodwill and active help of Englishmen are absolutely necessary. I must confess, that what seems to have been yielded by them at the Conference in London is not even half enough—no approach to the goal that India has in view. If they will render real help, they must be prepared to let India feel the same glow of freedom which they themselves would die in order to possess. These English statesmen would have to dare to let India wander away into the woods through errors. Freedom is not worth having if it does not connote freedom to err and even to sin. If God Almighty has given the humblest of His creatures the freedom to err, it passes my comprehension how human beings, be they ever so experienced and able, can delight in depriving other human beings of that precious right.

Anyway, the implication of inviting the Congress to join the Conference is most decidedly that the Congress may not be deterred from any consideration, save that of incapacity, from pressing for the fullest freedom. And the Congress does not consider India to be a sickly child requiring nursing, outside help, and other props.

I would like also to register my appeal to the people of the great American Republic and the other nations of earth. I know that this struggle based as it is on truth and non-violence from which, alas, we the votaries have on occasion undoubtedly strayed, has fired their imagination and excited their curiosity. From curiosity they, and specially America, has progressed to tangible help in the way of sympathy. And I can say on behalf of the Congress and myself that we are all truly grateful for all that sympathy. I hope that in the difficult mission in which the Congress is now about to embark, we shall not only retain their sympathy but that it will grow from day to day. I venture to suggest, in all humility, that if India reaches her destiny through truth and non-violence, she will have made no small contribution to the world peace for which all the nations of the earth are thirsting and she would also have, in that case, made some slight return for the help that those nations have been freely giving to her.

1 The source has “There”.

210
THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI

My last appeal is to the Police and the Civil Service departments. The settlement contains a clause which indicates that I had asked for an inquiry into some of the police excesses which are alleged to have taken place. The reason for waiving that inquiry is stated in the settlement itself. The Civil Service is an integral part of the machinery which is kept going by the police department. If they really feel that India is soon to become mistress in her own household and they are to serve her loyally and faithfully as her servants, it behoves them, even now, to make the people feel that when they have to deal with the members of the Civil Service and the police department, they are really dealing with their servants, honoured and wise undoubtedly, but nevertheless servants and not masters.

I owe a word to hundreds, if not thousands, of my erstwhile fellow-prisoners on whose behalf I have been receiving wires and who will still be languishing in jails when satyagrahi prisoners who were jailed during the past 12 months will have been discharged. Personally, I do not believe in imprisoning, by way of punishment, even those who commit violence. I know that those who have done violence through political motives are entitled to claim, if not the same wisdom, certainly the same spirit of love and self-sacrifice that I would claim for myself. And, therefore, if I could have justly secured their liberty in preference to my own or that of fellow-satyagrahis I should truthfully have secured it.

But I trust they will realize that I could not in justice ask for their discharge. But that does not mean that I or the members of the Working Committee have not them in mind.

The Congress has embarked deliberately, though provisionally, on a career of co-operation. If congressmen honourably and fully implement the conditions applicable to them of the settlement, the Congress will obtain an irresistible prestige and would have inspired Government with confidence in its ability to ensure peace, as I think it has proved its ability to conduct disobedience.

And if the people in general will clothe the Congress with that power and prestige, I promise that it will not be long before every one of these political prisoners is discharged including the detenus, the Meerut prisoners and all the rest.
There is, no doubt, a small but active organization in India which would secure India’s liberty through violent action. I appeal to that organization, as I have done before, to desist from its activities, if not yet out of conviction, then out of expedience. They have perhaps somewhat realized what great power non-violence has. They will not deny that the almost miraculous mass awakening was possible only because of the mysterious and yet unfailing effect of non-violence. I want them to be patient, and give the Congress, or if they will, me, a chance to work out the plan of truth and non-violence. After all it is hardly yet a full year since the Dandi march. One year in the life of an experiment affecting 300 millions of human beings is but a second in the cycle of time. Let them wait yet awhile. Let them preserve their precious lives for the service of the Motherland to which all will be presently called and let them give to the Congress an opportunity of securing the release of all the other political prisoners and maybe even rescuing from the gallows those who are condemned to them as being guilty of murder.

But I want to raise no false hopes. I can only state publicly what is my own and the Congress aspiration. It is for us to make the effort. The result is always in God’s hands.

One personal note and I have done. I believe that I put my whole soul into the effort to secure an honourable settlement. I have pledged my word to Lord Irwin that in making good the terms of the settlement in so far as they bind the Congress, I should devote my heart and soul to the task. I worked for the settlement, not in order to break it to pieces at the very first opportunity, but in order to strain every nerve to make absolutely final what today is provisional and to make it a precursor of the goal to attain which the Congress exists.

Lastly, I tender my thanks to all those who have been unceasing in their efforts in making the settlement possible.

Young India, 12-3-1931
273. TELEGRAM TO PROVINCIAL CONGRESS COMMITTEES

1 DARYAGANI,
March 5, 1931

IN VIEW PROVISIONAL SETTLEMENT ARRIVED AT BETWEEN WORKING COMMITTEE ON BEHALF CONGRESS AND GOVERNMENT OF INDIA REQUEST YOU TAKE IMMEDIATE STEPS INFORM ALL CONGRESS COMMITTEES YOUR PROVINCE TO ACT IN ACCORDANCE WITH IT. CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE AND NO TAX CAMPAIGNS TO BE DISCONTINUED AND NO FURTHER DEFIANCE OF LAWS OR REGULATIONS. BOYCOTT OF BRITISH GOODS AS SUCH TO BE DISCONTINUED AND COMPLETE FREEDOM REGARDING THEM GIVEN BUT BOYCOTT OF INTOXICATING DRINK AND DRUGS AND OF ALL FOREIGN CLOTH AND LIQUOR SHOPS IS PERMITTED AND SHOULD BE CONTINUED WHEREVER NECESSARY. SUCH PICKETING SHOULD BE UNAGGRESSIVE AND SHOULD NOT INVOLVE COERCION, INTIMIDATION, RESTRAINT, HOSTILE DEMONSTRATION, OBSTRUCTION TO PUBLIC OR ANY OFFENCE UNDER ORDINARY LAW. IF THESE CONDITIONS NOT SATISFIED IN ANY AREA PICKETING TO BE SUSPENDED THERE. INSISTENCE ON SWADESHI GOODS IN PREFERENCE TO ALL FOREIGN GOODS ALSO TO BE CONTINUED. NO ORGANIZED DISOBEDIENCE OF SALT LAWS AND NO RAIDS BUT VILLAGERS RESIDING IN AREAS WHERE SALT COLLECTED OR MADE ARE PERMITTED TO CONTINUE TO COLLECT OR MAKE SALT FOR DOMESTIC CONSUMPTION OR SALE IN NEIGHBOURHOOD BUT NO SALE OR TRADING OUTSIDE, UNAUTHORIZED NEWS SHEETS SHOULD BE STOPPED. TAXPAYERS SHOULD PREPARE PAYMENT LAND REVENUE AND RETURN VILLAGES WHERE VACATED. IN CASES ECONOMIC DISTRESS OR INABILITY PAYMENT OTHER METHODS FOR REMISSION OR SUSPENSION SHOULD BE ADOPTED. IN VIEW PENDING RELEASE PRISONERS SPECIAL DIRECTIONS FOR ELECTION DELEGATES KARACHI CONGRESS BEING ISSUED PRESS.

SAYED MAHMUD
GENERAL SECRETARY
A.I.C.C. File No. 329, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

1 This was presumably drafted by Gandhiji.
274. TELEGRAM TO SWAMI ANAND

March 5, 1931

SWAMI ANAND
CARE SHREE
BOMBAY

DATE UNCERTAIN. WILL TRY COME BOMBAY. CAN GIVE VILEPARLE ONE DAY.

BAPU

From a microfilm: S.N. 16924

275. TELEGRAM TO NARANDAS GANDHI

March 5, 1931

NARANDAS
ASHRAM
SABARMATI

TELL PRABHAVATI VASUMATI OTHERS TRYING REACH EARLY.

BAPU

From a microfilm: S.N. 16924

276. TELEGRAM TO MOHAMMAD SHAFFEE

March 5, 1931

SIR MOHAMMAD SHAFFEE
LAHORE

THANKS YOUR WIRE. WITH HELP FROM FRIENDS LIKE YOU DO NOT DESPAIR OF UNITY WHICH IS SO ESSENTIAL JUST NOW FOR FREEDOM MOTHERLAND.

GANDHI

From a microfilm: S.N. 16924

277. INTERVIEW WITH VICEROY

March 5, 1931

I heard from Mr. Gandhi this morning saying that he was willing to accept the addition of the note as I had drafted it last night, and saying that, while he understood my commitments in the matter to the Bombay Government, he relied on me to use my influence to secure a solution of the difficulty.¹ I replied to him repeating the facts of my earlier undertaking on this particular subject given to the Bombay Government, but saying that, within the limits imposed on me by that undertaking I would certainly convey to the Governor what he said on the subject, and do everything that I properly might in the direction of asking him to address himself to the task of finding an equitable solution of the difficulty.

(Sd.) IRWIN

From a photostat: G.N. 8954

278. LETTER TO G. CUNNINGHAM
1 DARYAGANI, DELHI,
March 6, 1931

DEAR MR. CUNNINGHAM,

I thank you for your two letters. Pray convey my thanks to His Excellency for the prompt action he has taken on my letter of the 4th instant regarding the sold lands.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: C.W. 9337. Courtesy: India Office Library; also A.I.C.C. File No. 16-C, 1931

279. LETTER TO G. CUNNINGHAM
1 DARYAGANI, DELHI,
March 6, 1931

DEAR MR. CUNNINGHAM,

In the course of the conversations, I had occasion to refer to the difficulties that are said to be experienced by the people in the North-West Frontier Province. His Excellency jokingly remarked that, if I went there, perhaps things might settle down. What I understood to have been said in joke has now been said in all seriousness by three friends from the Province. They tell me that accompanied by Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru and Maulana Abul Kalam Azad and Dr. Syed Mahmud and Mrs. Naidu, I should proceed to the Province and they promised that, with the willing help of the authorities, things can return to the normal, not only in the Province, but among the frontier

¹ Vide “Letter to Viceroy”, 4-3-1931 & “Letter to G. Cunningham”, 4-3-1931.
² Vide “Letter to Viceroy”, 4-3-1931.
tribes living on the border. As my purpose now can only be to see peace restored everywhere and to assist in the process wherever possible, I do not want to go anywhere, for the time being, without His Excellency’s approval. It may not be possible for him to give me the reply without consulting local authorities, and therefore, it may not be possible for him to send me the answer today. But I would appreciate an early reply, and I shall hope that the local authorities will not reject my advance.

I am in Delhi up to Sunday next and hope to leave for Ahmedabad Sunday night. If His Excellency favours the idea of my going to the Frontier Province, it is my intention to do so immediately after the Karachi Congress.

Yours sincerely,

From a photostat: C.W. 9338. Courtesy: India Office Library; also A.I.C.C. File No. 16-C, 1931

280. LETTER TO WALCHAND HIRACHAND

March 6, 1931

DEAR WALCHAND,

I thank you for your letter. In my opinion the meaning of the clause relating to boycott is absolutely clear. The word boycott may be omitted for its origin, when it was first coined, or for its recent memories. Let me then say that the exclusion of British in favour of Indian goods, Indian companies, shipping, insurance, etc., is not only permitted but favoured by the clause. What is however a taboo under the clause is preference to non-Indian foreign goods and foreign services over the British even irrespective of merits, a weapon the country used as a political lever with terrible effect during the civil

1 In reply to his letter which read: “In today’s Government communiqué about the terms of settlement reference to boycott is made which requires, to my mind, to be cleared. I understand it to mean that wherever an indigenous industry, commodity or service is available we are still justified in boycotting all non-Indian items of such commodities or services even if they happened to be only British.

“To make my point clear, I will cite shipping and insurance on the coast. There is only British shipping against Indian shipping. I take it that the Indian shippers can not only boycott British shipping interests but you will expect them to boycott these in order to encourage Indian shipping. The same can be said about Indian insurance companies and Indian cloth.

“I should be grateful if you will kindly let me have your views in detail and permit me to publish them.”
disobedience campaign. If a permanent settlement is the aim of the provisional settlement, as it undoubtedly is, boycott or exclusion, by whatever name we call it, should cease whilst an attempt at perpetual friendship continues. But preference for swadeshi over non-swadeshi is, apart from political consequence which it may not have, a permanent obligation which no nation can ignore without hurting its interests.

M. K. GANDHI

The Tribune, 8-3-1931

281. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

DARYAGANJ, DELHI,
March 6, 1931

CHI. VASUMATI,

I got your letter. Do not be impatient now. We shall meet on Monday. I intend to leave Delhi on Sunday. My health is fairly good.

MAHADEV
FOR BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9321

282. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

DARYAGANJ, DELHI,
March 6, 1931

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I got your letter. I can understand your eagerness to meet me. I hope to leave this place on Sunday and arrive there on Monday. We shall thus be meeting on Monday evening.

MAHADEV
FOR BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3408
In the course of the interview Mr. S. Hasan Ali Khan put a number of questions to which Mr. Gandhi gave prompt and satisfactory replies.

The first question naturally related to the settlement just arrived at between the Viceroy and Congress, and Mr. Gandhi expressed himself perfectly satisfied with the compact as it stands.

Q. What would be the position of zamindars in the coming Constitution?
A. They will have the same privileges and the same rights as at present. Every justice will be extended both to the zamindars and the tenants, provided they go hand in hand with us.

You know the welfare of the country depends on agriculture and the agriculturists form the great bulk of the country. In the course of the recent movement some of the young Congress workers have attempted to set the tenants against the landlords. Further, Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, in his presidential address at Lahore, explicitly expressed his views against the landlords of the country. May I know what the significance of that statement is? May I also know how Congress views the question concerning this important class of people?

Yes, I know that the country entirely depends on agriculture, which in turn depends on zamindars and tenants, the two chief factors of the country. No such instruction was sent by the Working Committee. We do not want that the tenants should stand against the zamindars. I was present at the Lahore Congress session. The late Pandit Motilal, myself and Pandit Jawaharlal drafted the resolution concerning the zamindars and ruling chiefs, which was only meant to establish democracy. We never meant that there would be no room for the zamindars or for the so-called relics of the past. As a matter of fact, we have every sympathy for the zamindars if they show a fair attitude towards the peasantry. We assure the zamindars that their rights will be given due consideration in a swaraj constitution. I appeal to them to be generous to the Congress.

The Pioneer, 16-3-1931

---

1 Of the U. P. Zamindars’ Association
Mahatmaji gave me special interview yesterday in the course of which he paid a glowing tribute to the great services which the Kaiser-i-Hind and its proprietor, Mr. Hirjibehedin, rendered to the national cause and expressed great admiration for the noble part which the Parsi community had played in effectively advancing the country’s fight for freedom. Mahatmaji said:

Kaiser-i-Hind khub seva bajavi. [Kaiser-i-Hind had rendered great services.]

Gandhiji added that he was sure the services of Parsi ladies and gentlemen will be written with gold in the history of India, and he asked me to assure the community through the medium of your paper that he will not forget these services.

I told Mahatmaji that minority communities were clamouring for special rights and protection and that although there were three Parsis on the Round Table Conference none had pleaded the rights of Parsis; and I asked Mahatmaji whether he would advocate their rights as the Congress had decided to give all consideration to the rights of minorities. Mahatmaji said that Parsis were so strong that they could take care of themselves, that if he said that he would champion their cause it would look like egotism. Their case did not require special pleading and there was no necessity to remind him of not neglecting their interests. He cannot ignore their claims and their services.

After reflecting carefully Gandhiji said:

If it was shown to me that the Parsis had suffered any loss I will repay it with compound interest.

He gave me permission to convey this message to our beloved community.

The Bombay Chronicle, 12-3-1931

---

1 Of Bombay; this was reported by the special representative on March 7.
285. INTERVIEW TO JOURNALISTS

[March 6, 1931]

At exactly 11.30 this morning Mahatma Gandhi invited the various journalists, Indian as well as foreign, who have been reporting the peace negotiations, to interview him for approximately an hour.

Q. You say that complete independence is an indifferent rendering for purna swaraj. What then is the real meaning of purna swaraj?

A. Proper translation I cannot give you. I do not know any word or phrase to answer it in the English language—I can, therefore, only give an explanation. The root meaning of swaraj is self-rule; ‘Swaraj’ may, therefore, be rendered as disciplined rule from within and purna means ‘complete’. ‘Independence’ has no such limitation. Independence may mean licence to do as you like. Swaraj is positive. Independence is negative. Purna swaraj does not exclude association with any nation, much less with England. But it can only mean association for mutual benefit and at will. Thus, there are countries which are said to be independent but which have no purna swaraj, e.g., Nepal. The word swaraj is a sacred word, a Vedic word, meaning self-rule and self-restraint, and not freedom from all restraint which ‘independence’ often means.

Is the settlement consistent with the Lahore resolution?

It is, most decidedly. There is nothing to prevent the Congress at Karachi from reaffirming the Lahore resolution, and there is nothing to prevent Congressmen from taking up that position at the forthcoming Round Table Conference. In fact, I do not think I am betraying any confidence, when I say that I took good care to ascertain that point and make the Congress position clear before approaching the question of settlement. I should feel bound to press for purna swaraj at the Conference and we should deny our very existence if we did not press for it.

What did you mean by ‘swaraj without the Empire if necessary’, as you used to say?

---

1 This appeared under the title “The Settlement and Its Meaning” with an introductory note by Mahadev Desai given under the sub-heading, “A Catechism”. It read: “Questions are asked everywhere about the meaning and implications of the settlement, and it may be useful to present to the reader a catechism which is likely to satisfy many doubts and queries. The answers are as nearly in Gandhiji’s language as possible.”

2 From Amrita Bazar Patrika, 10-3-1931
The Empire no longer remains, it having turned into a Commonwealth, and swaraj within the Commonwealth is perfectly possible. We may be an independent state and yet form part of a Commonwealth, as the U.S.A.

Do you think the coming Federation will be like the U.S.A.? Have you received any guarantee as regards the composition of the Federation?

No guarantees. But it can in no case be less than Dominion Status.

But how can you say that, having agreed to the safeguards?

I have agreed to no safeguards that are not in the interest of India. The word has a bad odour, I know; it is a dangerous word. But I can quite conceive of safeguards essentially in the interests of India. The principle of safeguards in the Indian interest has undoubtedly been accepted but no specific safeguard has been accepted. The safeguards of my conception are of a totally different character. You will, therefore, see no mention even of transition in the clause. They can never be burdens imposed from without. They should be protective, that is, in the real interest of the country. I cannot endorse safeguards which compromise the interests of India.

But you had the same thing presented to you in December 1929. Why should we have gone in for this terrible suffering to get no further than the position of 1929?

You are making a great mistake. It is not the same position. Lord Irwin could or would then promise nothing. He simply reiterated the goal of Dominion Status. Today Dominion Status is in words a certainty and it is within our power to make it as comprehensive as possible so as to mean complete independence. In 1929 we had no knowledge of the attitude of the Indian members. Today we know.

There seems to be a gulf of difference between the position at Lahore affirming complete independence and the present parleys leading on to a settlement.

Even when I moved the Lahore resolution, I made it quite clear that independence need not mean complete dissociation from British connection. If we had been fighting a violent war there might have been ruin for one or the other party. But ours has been a non-violent war presupposing compromise. We have all the while assumed it, desired it. My letter to Lord Irwin was conceived in that spirit. The provisional compromise now makes an opening for us to go and ask for what we want. As a satyagrahi it was my duty to seek for such an opening.

You have said that you can conceive of safeguards which may be in the interest of India. Are the present safeguards such?

They are not. They are an intolerable burden. Englishmen may say they are in India’s interest. But they have yet to convince me.

Would you be prepared to admit any safeguards in the future constitution?

Yes, those that may be reasonable and wise. Take, for example, the question of minorities. I can understand that we cannot achieve our purpose as a great nation if we do not regard the right of minorities as a sacred trust. I should regard it as a legitimate safeguard. Then, as regards Finance, if we have a public debt, it may need to be safeguarded. The nature of such safeguard, I have not yet thought the thing out for myself. As regards the army and the services, I admit that we should guarantee the pay and fulfilment of any other condition that we may have undertaken, in connection with British officers and soldiers. But we must determine whose services are necessary for the welfare of India and under what conditions as to pay, etc.

Will you repudiate India’s debts?

I will not repudiate one single farthing that can be legitimately debited to us. But, unfortunately, there has been a great deal of confusion about this talk of repudiation. The Congress has never sought to repudiate a single rupee of the national obligation. But what the Congress has asked for, and will insist upon, is proof of the justness of the obligation that might be sought to be imposed on the incoming Government, even as a buyer would like to know what obligation he has to undertake when entering on a new purchase. The Congress has suggested that in case there can be no agreed adjustments, an independent tribunal should be appointed.

Do you think the League of Nations a proper tribunal?

So far as I can say off-hand, the League of Nations may be a proper tribunal, but, I do not know whether England would agree to get the question examined by the League, and I can well understand that hesitation. Besides, the League of Nations may not undertake such a responsibility. There should be no difficulty in securing an acceptable tribunal.

Will you press this question at the Round Table Conference?
It will be necessary to do so when the question of examination and acceptance of national obligations comes up. We would express our views as to the items that should be borne by us. But if England holds another view then the question of arbitration would arise and would be necessary. What, therefore, we want is a proper audit. Does this provisional settlement represent the practical application of the Sermon on the Mount as suggested by the Hindustan Times this morning?

I do not think I can judge. It is for the critics to judge which principles have been applied by either party to the settlement.

What is your idea of 'purna swaraj?' Would it be possible within the British Empire?

It would be possible but on terms of absolute equality. Complete independence may mean separation and popular imagination does understand it in that light. But, if we remain part of the Commonwealth, on terms of absolute equality, instead of Downing Street being the centre of the Empire Delhi should be the centre. India has a population of 300 millions and that is a factor that cannot be ignored. Friends suggest that England will never be able to reconcile itself to that position. But I do not despair.

The British are a practical people and as they love liberty for themselves, it is only a step further to desire the same liberty for others.

I know if the time comes to concede equality to India, they will say that that was what they had all along meant. The British people have a faculty of self-delusion as no other people have. Yes, to my mind equality means the right to secede.

Would you like to have purna swaraj under the British flag?

There may be common flag or each party may have its own.

Young India, 19-3-1931
286. TELEGRAM TO HIRALAL A. SHAH

March 7, 1931

HIRALAL AMRITLAL

BOMBAY

SARDAR THERE INTERPRET [TERMS OF SETTLEMENT] GIVE INSTRUCTIONS.

GANDHI

From a microfilm: S.N. 16924

287. TELEGRAM TO KRISHNADAS

March 7, 1931

KRISHNADAS

KHADI BHANDAR

CALCUTTA

PICKETING TERMS SETTLEMENT PERMISSIBLE BUT SUSPEND IF ANY TROUBLE EXPECTED TRYING DEVISE MEANS WEANING DEALERS.

From a microfilm: S.N. 16924

288. TELEGRAM TO PRABHASHANKAR PATTANI

DELI, March 7, 1931

SIR PRABHASHANKAR PATTANI

BHAVNAGAR

LEAVING FOR AHMEDABAD SUNDAY EVENING BY METRE GAUGE.

GANDHI

From a photostat: G.N. 5914; also microfilm: S.N. 16924

1 Khadi worker of Bombay
289. LETTER TO VICEROY

1 DARYAGANJ, DELHI,
March 7, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

Your very affectionate letter has touched me very deeply. It will always be a joy to me to renew the heart-to-heart talks, only now, let us hope, under less trying circumstances. Your kindly nature made the trial itself a pleasing work to which I had learnt to look forward. I heartily join in your prayer—may God answer it.

I am,

Your sincere friend,

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: C.W. 9339. Courtesy: India Office Library

290. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

DELI, March 7, 1931

DEAR MR. EMERSON,

An urgent message from Ambala draws my attention to cantonment orders issued against persons suspected of sympathy with or assisting the Congress to leave cantonment limits and residents outside to enter those limits, and asks whether such persons are not protected by the settlement. The telegram reminds me that there are such orders in many cantonments. If it is clear to you, as it is to me, that such persons are protected by the settlement, will you please issue the necessary instructions?

Yours,

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-B, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

1 In reply to his "private" letter (C.W. 9340) dated March 6 which read: "I want to write you a personal note of my own. Very great thanks to you for all you have done, while we have been working together during these last difficult days. It has been a great privilege to me to be given this opportunity of meeting and knowing you; and I hope that, either before I leave India or in England, you will give me the pleasure of seeing you again. I do pray—as I believe—that history may say you and I were permitted to be instruments in doing something big for India and for humanity. Believe me, with again much thanks, and with deep understanding, . . ."
291. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, DELHI

March 7, 1931

Before I begin, I must tell you how much I miss Maulana Shaukat Ali here. He arrived this morning and it is a matter of inexpressible sorrow to me that he should not be here, and I have no doubt you also will share my sorrow. But I may assure you that I shall miss no opportunity, leave no stone unturned, to persuade the Maulana and other Mussalmans to work with us on the same platform. It is a matter for shame that the ‘Big Brother’ with whom I travelled through the country for over two years and whom I took particular pleasure in describing as capable of carrying me in his pocket should not be here with me today. But if it is a matter for shame, I do not know how far I am responsible for it. I have spared no effort to remove that shame, but I have not succeeded. In this there is nothing surprising, inasmuch as we find even blood-brothers divided by sharp differences of opinion. But our differences have not in the least affected our friendship. I regard him, even today, as my friend and brother, and I have no doubt that he also has the same regard for me. But that affords me little consolation, for I want him to work shoulder to shoulder with me for the welfare of India, and I want his co-operation on my terms, as indeed he once used to give me. But that work ceased to appeal to him at a certain stage and he left the Congress platform.

That preamble will give you an inkling of what I am about to say today. The settlement that has been just arrived at will fail of effect without a real heart-unity between Hindus and Mussalmans. Without that unity our going to the Conference will be of no avail. No one will pretend that the Conference can help us to achieve that unity. A heart-unity can be achieved between pure hearts purged of distrust and that can be achieved only outside the Conference. In this I seek your cooperation and ask you to count on my doing my utmost.

In a letter I received yesterday the correspondent asks me why I should not make the same advances to the Mussalmans as I did to the Viceroy. Why, he asks, should I not wait on esteemed Mussalman friends who are desirous of unity and beg on bended knees for their co-operation? I like the suggestion and the correspondent may be sure that I shall leave nothing undone to plead with my Mussalman friends. But you must understand that there are limits to the capacity of an individual, and the moment he flatters himself that he can undertake all tasks, God is there to humble his pride. For myself, I am gifted with enough humility to look even to babes and sucklings for help. And that reminds me that in this mission of mine I can count on the hearty and active co-operation of my sisters who beat all previous records of suffering and sacrifice during the last heroic campaign. To them I say: If you are convinced that Hindu-Muslim unity is a sine qua non I ask you to use against your own countrymen the same weapon of satyagraha that you used so effectively against Government. Tell your men that you will non-co-operate with them, you will not cook for them, you will starve yourselves and them so long as they do not wash their hands of these dirty communal squabbles. Assure me of your co-operation, and you will add tremendously to my strength and to my power of pleading.

---

1 This appeared under the title “Delhi Speech” with an introductory note by Mahadev Desai which read: “Addressing a mass meeting attended by over 50,000 people at Delhi on the 7th of March, Gandhiji delivered a speech in Hindi of which the following is a condensed rendering.”

We Hindus are described, to a certain extent rightly, as the majority community. Well, to them I would say the same thing as I used to do in 1921, viz., that voluntary surrender on the part of either community—preferably by the majority community—of all rights and privileges would immediately effect this unity. It would be a great thing, a brave thing, for the Hindus to achieve this act of self-denial. Let them say to the Mussalmans: ‘Have as big a share of the spoils as you want; we will be content to serve you.’ What after all are the things you are quarrelling for? Not indeed for air and water. It is for seats on legislatures and local bodies. What has the vast majority of you got to do with them? How many of you can go there? And what can you do there? Outside the legislatures you did wonderful things; you defied the ordinances, you defied lathi-charges and ‘firing’ orders, because you were conscious of your strength. If you retain the same consciousness, what would it matter to you if your Parliament had all Mussalmans in it and no Hindu? I am sick of these squabbles for seats, this scramble for the shadow of power. How I wish I could bring home to all Congressmen that they should have nothing to do with these legislatures? The very act of voluntary surrender will clothe you with a power undreamt of before.

And you my sisters, what would you do by going to the Parliament? Do you aspire after collectorships, commissionerships or even the Viceroyalty? And what would you do if one of you were to be the Viceroy of India? I know you would not care to, for the Viceroy has got to order executions and hangings—a thing you would heartily detest. Supposing we, the ‘leaders’, were to run a race for getting the Viceroyalty, we would simply strangle ourselves. That is not the prize we have set our hearts on. We crave to be humble servants of the country. It is this spirit of service which I want to permeate the atmosphere. I want you to join me and share this aspiration. But if it does not appeal to you, you had better give me up, for that is the condition on which I tender my service. I have no other secret but that of voluntary surrender.¹

‘Where is peace?’ asks the nameless writer of this leaflet. ‘The late Pandit Motilal thought of the Garhwalis on his death-bed, what have you done for them?’ that is another question that has been put to me. Well, I may tell you that when on the last day of his presence on earth he referred to the Garhwalis only I was by his side, no one else, not even Jawaharlal. I consider that as his last will and testament to me, as those were the last words I heard from him. But I know, much better than you, what he was thinking of. The writer subscribes himself ‘Young India’, but I may tell him that I am still the editor of Young India. Let him who would oust me from the editorship come to me and I will tell him what Pandit Motilal was referring to. You must remember that there were no ‘peace talks’ at that time, the peace ambassadors had not even arrived then, and the question of the freedom of Garhwalis could not be in the late Panditji’s mind. He was asking whether the relations and dependants of the Garhwalis were being properly looked after.

The next question is about Bhagat Singh and others who are under sentence to death. How can there be peace, I am asked, when a sentence of death is hanging over the heads of these patriots? It is unfortunate that the young men distributing these pamphlets should not understand such a simple thing. They ought to understand that we have entered into no peace treaty. It is a provisional, temporary settlement we have arrived at. I beseech the young men not to bid goodbye to common sense, to cool courage, to patience, to reason. I have claimed to be a young man of 62. But even if I were to be labelled as a dilapidated old fogey, I have a right to appeal to your good sense. I do not want you to take for granted all that old men say to you, but I want you to consider it and weigh it, and if you find that we ‘old’ men have bungled, that we have been guilty of weakness get us to abdicate, and assume the reins yourselves. But that presupposes cool courage and solid common sense.

¹ At this stage a ‘red’ leaflet full of posers addressed to Gandhiji was handed to him.

But let me tell you why Bhagat Singh and the rest have not been released. Maybe, if you had been negotiating you might have secured better terms from the Viceroy, but we the Working Committee would secure no more than what we have. I may tell you that throughout the negotiations I was not acting on my own, I was backed by the whole Working Committee. We brought all the pressure we could to bear on our negotiations and satisfied ourselves with what in justice we could have under the provisional settlement. We could not as negotiators of the provisional truce forget our pledge of truth and non-violence, forget the bounds of justice.

But it is still open to us to secure the release of all you have named—and that can be done if you will implement the settlement.
Let ‘Young India’ stand by the settlement and fulfil all its conditions, and if, God willing, Bhagat Singh and others are alive when we have arrived at the proper stage, they would not only be saved from the gallows but released.

But I will address to ‘Young India’ a word of warning. These things are sooner asked for than obtained. You want to secure the freedom of those condemned of violence. There is nothing wrong about it. My creed of non-violence does not favour the punishment of thieves and dacoits and even murderers. I cannot in all conscience agree to anyone being sent to the gallows, much less a brave man like Bhagat Singh. But I tell you, even you could not save them unless you fulfil the conditions of the settlement. You cannot do so by violent means. If you pin your faith to violence, take it from me that you will not only not secure Bhagat Singh’s release but will have to sacrifice thousands of Bhagat Singhs. I was not prepared to do so, and hence I preferred the way of peace, of non-violence. The way that you have adopted has been on trial for centuries and history records numerous instances of the truth that those who use the sword shall perish by the sword. You will not stop at using the violent weapon against your rulers, you will use it against your brothers and sisters too, and others of your way of thinking will use it against you.

I beseech you then, if you want the release of the prisoners, to change your methods, to accept the settlement, and then come and ask me about the Garhwalis and Bhagat Singh. Come to me six months hence, after you have implemented the settlement and gained in strength, and ask me the question you are asking today and I promise to satisfy you.

Having suspended civil disobedience we now enter a period of disciplined obedience. We are now pledged to eschew all passive and active violence, direct and indirect violence in picketing foreign-cloth and liquor shops, but we are further pledged to relax our boycott of British goods minus British cloth. The settlement is an attempt at re-establishing friendly relations and it therefore means that we must lay down all weapons of punishment. Boycott of British goods was conceived, essentially, as a weapon of punishment and has, therefore, to be suspended. But we have to go ahead, even more energetically with the constructive programme, i.e., boycott of foreign cloth and liquor, the programme which means the economic and moral salvation of our poor starving millions.

I must also explain that the relaxation of the boycott of British goods does not mean that we should prefer British goods to Indian goods. Indian goods you will prefer to all foreign goods for all time. Under the settlement you are pledged not to direct the weapon of punishment against the Britisher and accord a favoured treatment to other foreigners. And even that condition does not bind you to prefer British goods to other foreign goods; it binds you not to pursue the policy of aggressive boycott that you did heretofore.

The boycott of foreign cloth and liquor, as I have said before, should not be relaxed, cannot be relaxed. It is our permanent programme; but it should be purged of all its aggressive forms, e.g., social boycott, and persecution of the seller and the consumer. If you say boycott without these elements will lose all its edge, I will tell you that it argues want of faith in the efficacy of non-violence. Work achieved through aggressive picketing will be of doubtful worth, work achieved through loving persuasive pressure will be lasting. I ask you therefore to plead with the foreign-cloth seller and liquor seller to give up dealing in foreign cloth and liquor and take to some more honourable and cleaner calling. As to the constructive part of foreign-cloth boycott I want you to understand that it is impossible to achieve it without khadi. Mill-cloth is for those whom the Congress has not been able to reach; for Congressmen there can be no cloth other than khadi. It is a pity that where a few months ago there were thousands of taklis working, they should now be conspicuous by their absence. The period that follows should be one entirely devoted to constructive efforts.

In conclusion, I would beseech you to realize the supreme importance of discipline. It is open to you to press for a different policy and different programme at Karachi. But let it not be said that we are a people incapable of maintaining discipline. Indiscipline will mean disaster, and make one like me who is pining to see swaraj in his lifetime perish in sorrow and grief.

It is my earnest prayer that God may give you the power to appreciate what I have said and to attain swaraj by pursuing the path of truth, justice and non-violence.

Young India, 12-3-1931

---

292. TELEGRAM TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

_March 8, 1931_

VALLABHBHAI PATEL
BOMBAY

FINLAY wires their godown under picketing. Think godown pickets should be withdrawn without affecting ban their cloth.

GANDHI

From a microfilm: S.N. 16924

---

1 The Finlay Mills, Bombay
293. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

DARYAGANJ, DELHI,
March 8, 1931

DEAR MR. EMERSON,

Here is a telegram from Nellore (copy telegram). I suppose the lathi-charge was due to the fact of the settlement not having been received there. Anyway I feel that I should bring all such matters to your notice unless you want me to do otherwise.¹

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-B, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

294. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

DELHI,
March 8, 1931

DEAR MR. EMERSON,

I thank you for your prompt reply. I quite agree with you that the instructions must take some time to reach all the different places. I thought it my duty to pass on the wire for such action as you might think necessary. And I feel grateful that you have taken action on the wire.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-B, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

295. CABLE TO “SPECTATOR”¹

[Before March 9, 1931]²

THANKS. INDIA’S STAYING WITHIN THE COMMONWEALTH DEPENDS ON PROPER BRITISH BEHAVIOUR. THIS CAN

¹ Replying to this on the same date, Emerson wrote : “. . . it is the desire of the Government to give the earliest and fullest effect to the settlement and we have addressed local Governments. . . . We shall request the Madras Government for a report.”

² In reply to a cable from the Editor which read : “Hearty congratulations for compromise. I shall do my utmost to strive for the good of India within the British Commonwealth.”

³ Published under the date-line “New Delhi, March 9, 1931”
NEVER BE A CONDITION FOR SWARAJ AND WILL DEPEND ENTIRELY ON THE SINCERE WISHES OF BOTH PARTIES ALONE.

[From Hindi]
Aaj, 12-3-1931

296. INTERVIEW TO THE PRESS

AHMEDABAD,
March 10, 1931

Q. If the Karachi Congress should reject the terms of the provisional settlement, what do you propose to do?

A. In that case I will not be asked to be present at the Round Table Conference. I did not meet the Viceroy in my individual capacity but in the capacity of a Congress member.

Will you go to your Ashram?

I cannot go to the Ashram; if I went to the Ashram, the inmates of the Ashram would drive me out, I shall stay where I shall be able to get charity. If at the Round Table Conference the form of Government acceptable to the Congress could be decided upon, then I shall be able to return to the Ashram.

Could you advise the farmers to pay the land revenue?

The farmers have promised to pay the land revenue when Shri Vallabhbhai Patel asks them to do so. They will not do what I ask them to do.

Will the details of the talks between yourself and the Viceroy be released to the Press?

It is possible that the Viceroy may do so; I cannot do this.
Aaj, 12-3-1931
297. TELEGRAM TO PRAFUL SEN

[On or after March 10, 1931]

YOUR WIRE. DEEPLY GRIEVED. AM MOVING. SEND FURTHER PARTICULARS. WIRE OCCASION FOR PROCESSION ARAMBAGH.

BAPU

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-B, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

298. TELEGRAM TO H. W. EMERSON

March 11, 1931

BENGAL TELEGRAM SAYS ELEVEN LADIES ASSAULTED BY POLICE WITH LATHIS AND RIFLEBUTTS IN PROCESSION AT ARAMBAGH NINTH INSTANT. IF TRUE NEWS IS MOST DISCONCERTING.

GANDHI

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-B, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

299. TELEGRAM TO KRISHNADAS

March 11, 1931

KRISHNADAS

134-B MECHHUA BAZAR STREET
CALCUTTA

AM MOVING. BUT SUGGEST PATIENCE. KEEP ME INFORMED.

BAPU

From a microfilm: S.N. 16924

1 In reply to his telegram dated March 10, 1931, which read: “Eleven ladies assaulted by police with lathis and rifles and riflebutts yesterday’s procession at Arambagh.”

2 Vide the following item.

3 Sengupta’s wire to Gandhiji read: “Ninth Arambagh truce celebrations procession dispersed.”

4 The source has “by”.

5 In his letter, dated March 13, to Gandhiji Emerson wrote: “The Government of India have asked the Government of Bengal for the facts of the incident.”

6 Vide the preceding item.
300. TELEGRAM TO SARDUL SINGH CAVEESHAH

March 11, 1931

SARDUL SINGH
LAHORE

NOTE          DATE          MEETING          SIKH          FRIENDS.          IF          LEAGUE¹ MEETING AT DELHI          ATTENDANCE POSSIBLE OTHERWIE NOT.

GANDHI

From a microfilm: S.N. 16924

301. INTERVIEW TO THE PRESS

March 11, 1931

Interviewed on Mr. Baldwin’s decision about the non-participation of the Conservative Party in the Indian sessions of the Round Table Conference, Mr. Gandhi said:

Mr. Baldwin’s statement does not come upon me as a surprise. I must say that the Congress position is unequivocal and quite simple. The Congress is out to win purna swaraj at the earliest possible moment. It will, therefore, look with grave suspicion upon any dilatory tactics. The Conservative fears about the so-called safeguards are justified. The Congress would accept no safeguard which is not clearly proved to be in the interest of India, and those that were discussed in London were certainly not in India’s interest.

On questions of vital importance to India equivocation would be a dangerous pastime.

If the Congress is represented at the Round Table Conference it will do so with the clearest conscience and with all cards laid on the table. I therefore welcome Mr. Baldwin’s statement of Conservative policy. It will lead the Congress to understand the forces that will be arrayed against it.

The Times of India, 12-3-1931

¹ Sikh League, which met at Amritsar on April 8, 1931
302. SPEECH TO VOLUNTEERS, AHMEDABAD

March 11, 1931

Addressing a small gathering of men and women volunteers this morning, Gandhiji explained the principles of the new programme. At the outset, he congratulated the volunteers on their work and said that though the lady volunteers were less in number, their share was greater. Very few believed and the outside world did not at all believe that so many lady volunteers would come forward to go to jail cheerfully and undergo beating. The world was greatly impressed. It was not to be supposed that they (volunteers) made no mistakes. No man was perfect, but on the whole Gandhiji felt that their virtues outnumbered their defects.

Speaking about the future programme, Gandhiji said it involved greater responsibility and had to be prosecuted in a calmer atmosphere. Those who needed external enthusiasm would find it dry. Peaceful picketing meant that even a harsh word could not be used. Such great work could not be expected to yield fruit instantaneously like the magician’s mango tree. They should not lose interest in the future work of picketing. They should decide how far that work should be done by men and women together. Mahatma Gandhi desired that women alone should do that work. The atmosphere would thereby be elevated. Women might take the help of men in the work of organization, etc., but picketing should be their special work. The rest of the men should take to production of khaddar without which the boycott of foreign cloth was impossible. Concluding, Gandhiji said that volunteers might be paid a subsistence allowance, but their dignity should be greater than that of the Indian Civil Service.

Searching questions were then put to Gandhiji regarding the boycott of British goods. Gandhiji said they could not whip a man for all time. They should lay aside the whip, when they were carrying on negotiations for settlement. Boycott of British goods was a form of punishing the British people, but if the British befriended them and gave them complete swaraj, they might prefer British goods. One should buy goods from a friend.

Asked what those who had taken pledges of boycott of British goods should do, Gandhiji replied that they could not take a pledge to give two stripes to an individual every day.

Questioned if they could enter Government colleges, Gandhiji replied in the negative and said they could do so after the final settlement.

In reply to a question regarding the discipline that volunteers should follow in camps, Gandhiji said they should not tell lies, abuse, smoke or eat sweets. When asked if they could drink tea Gandhiji humorously replied that they could drink tea from the river Sabarmati.

The Bombay Chronicle, 12-3-1931

1 At Sheth Ranchhodlal’s bungalow
March 11, 1931

As I think of you may heart goes out for you and I pray to God that the bond of affection between us may be stronger and that you may realize that there is no difference of any kind between you and me. I go about among mill-owners, I accept their hospitality, but my heart is always with you. It is my fervent prayer to God that He may never separate me from you, and that I may lay down my life in the service of the poor.

You have in your statement rightly said that the swaraj of my dream is the poor man’s swaraj. The necessaries of life should be enjoyed by you in common with those enjoyed by the princes and moneyed men. But that does not mean that you should have palaces like theirs. They are not necessary for happiness, you or I would be lost in them. But, you ought to get all the ordinary amenities of life that a rich man enjoys. I have not the slightest doubt that swaraj is not purna swaraj until these amenities are guaranteed to you under it. I do not know when we will win it but we have all to strive for it.

Your work is making you known throughout the world. Students from the West marvel at the beauty of your organization and try to make a study of it. Your Union strikes them as unique. The members of your Union are jealous of their rights, and are prepared to lay down their lives for them, but their leaders, who guide them, have no ill will against the capitalists. In their welfare and their power you see your own welfare and power. That is the secret of your strength. Outside people cannot understand your position. They have thought of capitalists and working men as exploiters and exploited. All capitalists, according to some, are born ogres. But there need be no such inherent antipathy between the two. It is an erroneous notion. If the capitalists are apt to be proud of their wealth, the working men are apt to be proud of their numerical strength. We are liable to be swayed and intoxicated by the same passion as the capitalists, and it must be our prayer that both may be free from that passion. I feel that no class war poisons the relations between the mill-owners and the working men in Ahmedabad. I hope and pray, that the present cordial relations may be maintained between them.

1 Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter”
But the secret of your success is that the men and women, who guide you, have no axes to grind. They have no base interest to serve.

It is the beauty of this organization, moreover, that made it possible for the Union to take an active part in the civil disobedience movement. 165 members of the Union took part as volunteers in the Dharasana Raid, and 191 went to jail as volunteers or pickets. It is a record of which any union may be proud.

Young India, 26-3-1931

304. HOW TO DO IT

The reader will find in this week’s issue the text of the provisional settlement¹, my Press statement², the reprint of my cross-examination by the Press correspondents³ and some of my speeches⁴ which I hold to be important for the sake of understanding the settlement. I am sure, the reader will appreciate the reprint, if only, for the sake of ready reference. My statement, cross-examination and speeches have been carefully revised by Mahadev Desai.

Those who will read the reprints with attention will not fail to discover that, if the last twelve months’ heroic and hurricane campaign has brought us the hope of early attainment of swaraj, the cent per cent observance of the conditions of the settlement to be fulfilled by the nation will make the Congress an irresistible power for vindicating the national position. By our future conduct shall our immediate past be judged. Even if we have understood non-violence as the best policy, we shall now realize that whilst the truce lasts, it is obligatory on us meticulously to respect the laws and orders thereunder. I dare say, we shall find it sometimes difficult to carry out orders which to us may appear capricious. We need not expect a change of heart in the official world all of a sudden. If, therefore, we are conscious of our strength and our ability to resume civil disobedience, whenever it becomes necessary, we should find no difficulty in obeying even irksome orders.

The greatest difficulty, however, consists in duly observing the limits of picketing. I would like all Congress organizations to bear in mind that it is profitable for foreign cloth or liquor and drugs to be sold, now that picketing has to be unaggressive, rather then that there

---

¹ Vide “provisional settlement”, 12-3-1931.
² Vide “Statement to the press”, 5-3-1931.
³ Vide “Interview to journalists”, 6-3-1931.
⁴ Vide “Speech at public meeting, Delhi”, 7-3-1931.
should be any aggressive picketing smelling of violence in any shape or form. Picketing under the settlement has to confine itself to pure educative effort. Every conversion brought about by educative effort must lead to permanent result. I have no doubt that in the long run unaggressive picketing will be found to be far more effective and the shorter method. Such picketing should not mean any undue restraint upon the seller or the consumer. After the picketer’s appeal, the seller or the consumer must be free to sell or buy, as the case may be. There should be no social boycott, such as, stopping barber’s services, cutting off the water or food supply. But we are not obliged to deal with or receive services from those whose conduct we may disapprove. Thus, we may refuse to attend the social functions of one who has turned a deaf ear to public opinion or to have dealings with him even in matters other than his business of a seller of foreign cloth or drink and drugs. The golden rule is to err on the safe side, i.e., not to do the thing about which there is the slightest doubt. It should be borne in mind that whenever there is a clash between the dealer and the pickets, picketing has to be suspended. This clash can be avoided if we are gentle in our dealings with the sellers or consumers.

It will be found on experience that unaggressive picketing will have to be done more in respect of the consumer than the seller. In other words, it means Congress penetration into villages. After all real service has to be rendered there than in the cities.

The other most important thing is communal unity. It demands urgent attention. Without it, it would be vain at least for the Congress to attend the Conference and expect great results. How this unity is to be achieved I have shown in the Delhi speech printed elsewhere. The tangle can be loosened only by Hindus daring to trust and being content with the remainder left over after the minority have satisfied themselves.

Young India, 12-3-1931

305. “YOUNG INDIA”

It is possible again to resume publication of Young India under the law. The typed sheets were issued to show that possible to distribute several thousand copies among the readers even in spite of the prohibitive law called Ordinances. The moment however was declared these sheets were discontinued. Fortunately discontinuance only meant a delay of a couple of days in bringing out the printed issue. The reader did not know how it was possible to distribute seven thousand copies of Young India sheets and ten thousand of Navajivan week after week. But he will be proud to know that this was possible only because of the willing, brave and self-sacrificing help of the old Young India and Navajivan staff who worked for less pay and numerous other volunteers. Both the publications cost over two thousand rupees monthly. The sheets were sent free of charge as owing to the Ordinance the subscriptions might be confiscated. This was done in the hope that when the papers resumed normal publication the generous subscribers would make it a point of honour to pay their arrears of subscriptions. This hope, I doubt not, will be realized and from now the arrears will pour in. For a few weeks the paper will continue to be sent to the subscribers after which the dispatch will discontinue in respect of those who may be in arrears.

Here I take thankful note of the fact that many subscribers, whom it was impossible to serve, never, in spite of the offer made by the management, asked for a refund of the balance of their paid subscriptions. These will now receive their paper without further payment till the balance is exhausted.

Last, but not least, to be thanked is J. C. Kumarappa, who, after my imprisonment, added to his ordinary duty the onerous one of editing the paper. To him and all the staff and volunteers my thanks are due. I hope that the public will join me in the tangible manner they can, namely, by patronizing Young India and what is more fulfilling the mission for which Young India stands. The readers know that Young India and Navajivan do not exist for a commercial purpose. They are published for the sole purpose of educating the nation to win purna swaraj through truthful and non-violent means.

Young India, 12-3-1931

306. LETTER TO SHANKERLAL BANKER

BORSAD,

Phalgun Vad 9 [March 12, 1931]¹

DEAR SHANKERLAL,

I learnt about your pain only at night. I have been in panic since then. I cannot perform for you the functions of a father or an elder. You do not regard me as your fellow-worker. This is not the right situation. It was your duty to inform me about your pain. You hid it from me so that I should not be disturbed. You must have with you an attendant and a cook. And if you cannot exercise control in the matter of food, you should take non-vegetarian food. In vegetarian food you will stumble unless you exercise great restraint. You will find non-vegetarian food satisfying. Then you will not desire to have different types of vegetarian dishes. So long as you are not convinced about the spiritual reason for giving up non-vegetarian food, there is no need to give it up at the cost of your health.

¹ From the contents this letter appears to belong to the year 1931.

I insist that you should not leave Bombay till you have regained your health. You can continue to serve the country even from there.

Write letters to me regularly. Get the statistics about the mill workers. And explain to everyone the significance of the struggle in Kheda. Do not worry that you will miss the experience here.

Vandemataram from

MOHANDAS

From a photostat of the Gujarati . S. N. 32715

307. SPEECH AT BORSAD
March 12, 1931

Instead of killing and getting killed, we have accepted the principle of seeking justice by laying down our lives and you, it may be said, have observed that principle to a large extent. It is not that there was no anger in you. But you Patidars of Kheda and others who are well known for their fiery tempers, who are given to drawing their swords at the slightest provocation and who are a fervent, vigorous people, deserve to be congratulated on having courageously put up with everything. The fact that you young men sat quiet while in the by-lanes of Borsad women were being beaten with sticks, kicked and subjected to indignities is something that is incredible. But you allowed the women to be beaten and did not raise your little finger even in their defence. If this had happened in other circumstances, those who had allowed women to be beaten would have been called cowards. However, who would use this word with reference to the young men of Borsad? The reason was that all of you were bound by your pledge. It was your pledge not to use violence on the Government’s men who had harassed you in various ways. You were pledge-bound like Bhima and Arjuna. At the time when Draupadi’s hair was being pulled, Bhima was boiling with rage, his eyes were red, but he did not raise his club; the other brothers too were passive spectators the entire scene. Would anyone, however, refer to those five husbands as cowards? On the contrary, we congratulate them, regard them as having attained spiritual merit; history sings their praises. History will sing your praises also, my heart is doing so now and I am expressing it here. If I have been guilty of exaggeration in saying that there was a Thermopylae at various places in Kheda, you yourselves should correct that mistake. My task is not that of a professional pane-gyrist, I wish to make you worthy of that fame. Hence, accept praise to the extent you deserve it.

I was merely an instrument used for the settlement which has been reached. That settlement has taken place between the Congress and the Government despite the fact that it may have been called the Gandhi-Irwin Settlement. It is the dharma of the Sardar and myself to explain this settlement. Some persons have been disappointed by it and ask whether this is to be called a settlement or a disgrace? It seems that some persons have a doubt that a person like me has become tired of carrying on a struggle, has become despondent and hence has thrown away his self-respect. It is said that this taluk has suffered a loss of Rs. 13 lakhs. People must be wondering what kind of a settlement this is in which there is no mention whatsoever of making good this loss. I ask you to point out to me if I had at any time promised to make good this loss. If I had ever done so, it would be tantamount to breach of a pledge. I am also not aware of the Sardar having given any such promise. Your servants, your leaders, can be called traitors if they do not keep their promise after having given it. And, if that happens, how will you have faith in us in future? You would come to the conclusion that since these people betray you in this manner, why should you support them any longer? In this case, however, no pledge given to you has been broken.

This settlement is not the end of the struggle. That will come only after securing swaraj. And perhaps it may not come even after swaraj has been secured, because an occasion may arise when satyagraha may have to be offered against the swaraj Government. The settlement which has been made now is a step forward in our journey towards swaraj. The settlement has been made in the hope that what has now to be secured will be done through talks, discussions and negotiations. I do not recall having said anything, or the Sardar having said anything, about compensating you for your losses. If any volunteer had given you such hopes, I must admit that he had done so thoughtlessly. You must not hold the [Congress] Committee the Sardar or me responsible for it. After the Dandi pilgrimage, I have all along been saying that this is a do-or-die struggle, you may be ruined in it and how can those who are prepared to be ruined ask for compensation for loss? You have been told by beat of drum that your homes will be robbed, you along with your family will become destitute—you were told that you should join the struggle if you were prepared to suffer this, otherwise, not. Hence you and I will have to differ if you hold that a settlement has not been reach-ed so long as you have not been compensated for your losses amounting to Rs. 13 lakhs. If this amount is to be forthcoming, where is it going to come from? It will be taken out of your own money—that loss will be compensated with the tax of which the greater amount comes from the pockets of the poor rather than the rich. Even if we had the power to empty out the entire treasury, I would still not agree to do so and would ask you to choose another trustee. This is not the occasion to calculate the amount which we have borrowed or lent out. Whether this settlement should have been concluded or not is another question, but did it involve any lowering of our self-respect? I say to you that it did not involve that in the least. How can you ask for any compensation? Even if we lose our life and property, the compensation indeed will be there—compensation in the form of swaraj. If you are not prepared to suffer even this loss, it will be said that the people of Kheda were misers, they were not prepared to be robbed. Even when we have won swaraj, even if we have the capacity to make good this loss, you will be undoing swaraj if you ask for compensation.

Of course, there is one thing that the Sardar and I would regard as a slap in our faces. The land which belongs to you and which has been given away to someone else is surely something which you cannot afford to lose. We cannot ask for compensation for any loss which has been incurred because we do not ask for the dead to be restored to life or ask for compensation for a period of imprisonment undergone. But this land must be recovered. If Durbar Gopaldas was a fool, he would believe that he had lost Dhasa, but he is no fool. He believes that if he is alive, he will regain many Dhasas. If we were to be satisfied with recovering Dhasa alone, we would have included it even in this settlement. But where was the need to do so? Whoever had heard of the Durbar when he lived at Dhasa? Kalyanji did not write his biography when the Durbar was staying there. By leaving Dhasa and coming over here, the latter gained fifty Dhasas. Even if he gets back that Dhasa today, what would he do with it without swaraj?

Likewise, this land is yours, and will continue to remain yours—unless water submerges the land and the latter becomes an island, that is, if God swallows it up, then that is a different matter. Although the Sardar had agreed to have your land restored to you, I had not. But there is no doubt that that land will be restored to you; it cannot be said when and how this will be done, but you will certainly get it back. Just this one thing is sufficient to test the Sardar and me, viz., the land which has been lost must be restored. And until this is done, you must believe that swaraj has not been won, that we are not your true servants. In order to do so, we shall ruin ourselves and not spare you either.

How can we say that we shall take that land back from the Baraias by fighting? How can I speak of fighting in this manner? The responsibility of getting that land back rests with me and the Sardar.

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan, 15-3-1931

308. SPEECH AT RAS

[March 12, 1931]

Not only have the Dharalas not joined you, but they have taken up your land as well. In appropriating your ancestral land, they have defiled our tradition and dishonoured our country. You apprehend a quarrel with the Dharalas while entering the village. If you want to win swaraj, how can you bypass the Dharalas? You cannot put up with it if the village headmanship which was held by Patidars for ages passes to the Dharalas. But that should not be so. A Mukhi is not your leader, he is your servant. How then can you fear a servant? If you have thoroughly grasped the idea that right from the Mukhis and the Ravanias up to the Collector and the Governor all are servants of the people, there is nothing to be afraid of. You do such a lot for us because the Sardar and I are your servants. If we were to act as your masters, you would not have cared for us. At the moment let a Dharala be the Mukhi. As long as he conducts himself properly, you may carry out his orders. At the appropriate moment, he will resign of his own accord. If my words reach the Thakore of Dahevan, I request him not to take your land, because he will not be able to hold it for long. For one thing, he has not paid its full price, and for another, even if he had done so, the land could not become his own. He will have merely taken advantage of the plight of the people who are fighting the Government. I urge all those who have appropriated the land to return it to those from whom it was taken. A time is coming when even the most backward community will not remain out of the scope of swaraj. Under swaraj, there will be no such divisions as Dharalas, Patidars and others but all alike will be Indians. Despite 30 crores of names, they will all be one. Under Ramarajya, even a dog should receive a fair deal; why then talk of men? Since we want to establish such a rule, I have asked you not to fear the Dharalas and the Headmen. Have self-confidence and go and live in your homes from the morning of the 16th. If everyone who stole anything goes back and quietly replaces it in those houses, we shall be having Ramarajya. When you start for your homes, I shall inform the Government too. A satyagrahi entertains neither ill will nor fear. When the women have faced lathi-charges, what can the men fear?

1 From The Bombay Chronicle, 13-3-1931

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan, 15-3-1931

309. SPEECH AT SUNAV

[March 12, 1931]

This last paragraph seems to wash out all the heroic suffering that you have gone through. The proportion of losses to the revenue that you have worked out is unfair to you and to your suffering. Revenue amounting to Rs. 69,000 was in question here, but supposing it was a single rupee even then I would have called upon you to go through the same suffering and the same losses. The amount of the revenue was not the issue. The issue was the refusal to pay and to take the consequences. You say you have suffered so much that now you will have to borrow if you are to pay the revenue dues. If you cannot pay, as I know many of you cannot, there is provision for suspension. But do not give the impression that you are unwilling to pay. Ask for suspension wherever necessary and promise to pay up as soon as you are on your legs, and let your word be your bond.

Young India, 19-3-1931

---

1 Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter”
2 From The Bombay Chronicle, 14-3-1931
3 Mahadev Desai had reported that a worker who read out a statement had mentioned that “the village had incurred a loss of something like Rs. 3,00,000 in order to avoid payment of revenue amounting to Rs. 69,000.”
Addressing a large public meeting, Mr. Gandhi said he was glad they continued their work, and made Gujarat known to the world after his arrest. Now they should apply themselves to the work that was to be prosecuted.

Proceeding, Mr. Gandhi said now they had not to practise civil disobedience of laws, but to do constructive work. He emphasized what he had said in 1922 that if they prosecuted constructive work for six months, swaraj would be won. But constructive work, which they had to prosecute now, was of a different type. Those who could pay should pay up land revenue. If there was occasion to renew the fight, they could stop payment of land revenue, which was paid every year.

Mr. Gandhi added that they had also not to manufacture salt with a view to court jail. Those people living near the seashore might manufacture salt for their own consumption. They might even sell among themselves such salt but they could not sell it in distant towns and cities. Salt was being manufactured for consumption by the poor and not for trade. They could manufacture salt for trade when they had secured political power.

Continuing, Mr. Gandhi said they had to carry on peaceful picketing of liquor and foreign-cloth shops. They had to approach drunkards in their homes and persuade them to give up drink. They might similarly picket foreign-cloth shops if there were still any in their villages, but they must take to production of khadi. The speaker felt satisfied that they had established a panch in their village and urged the panch to manage all their affairs from settlement of disputes to sanitation and policing. If such panches were established in all villages it was easy to win swaraj.

The Hindu, 15-3-1931

This function appears to me to be to a great extent out of place and uncalled for. The association of merchants, dealers as they are in foreign cloth, ought not to have thought of presenting the address to me or the Sardar. The presentation, if it must be made, ought to be accompanied by a pledge that they would never in future have anything to do with foreign cloth and also the intimation that they have either burnt their present stock or sealed it. How can we, whose daily prayer is for the entire extinction of this trade, accept an address and a purse from dealers in it? I would, therefore, plead with the friends to take back their purse and their address. The address affords no information about the association and reads as though it was a citizens’ address. That smacks some-what of a bogus translation, as I said to the Sardar. Satyagraha eschews all make-believe. I have no relish for the title of the Mahatma given me by the people, if only because I am unworthy of it, but I have given myself a title of which I am proud. I call myself a satyagrahi, and as I must live up to it. I cannot but utter the bitter truth, whenever there is an occasion for it. The acceptance of the purse and the address would be a bitter dose for me, as its presentation should be for you too. But, if I cannot convince you, I must ask you to take both of them back. I have had occasions in my life when I have practised satyagraha against my brother and my wife, and today’s occasion can be no exception. I would have to return the address and the purse, as I would return a title from a government with which I non-co-operate or a gift from a liquor seller. I want you to understand that I would compromise myself to the cause if I agreed to accept your address. I would, however, spare you a sudden shock, hold the address and the purse in trust for you. You can ponder over what I have said and decide whether you will present them on my terms or take them back because you will not give up foreign-cloth trade.

Young India, 19-3-1931

312. MY NOTES

TO WORKERS

You may be tempted to go to Karachi for the Congress session. Resist the temptation. A Congress session is not a show, not a picnic. It is intended for drawing up the next year’s programme; hence the rule is that only that worker goes there who has to go in order to serve. One should not delude oneself that one can learn a lot there. He who goes there at the call of duty would surely learn something. Ordinary people who can spare time, who have no work to do at their places, have a right, and some may even have the duty to attend the Congress. The duty of the worker who serves is the opposite of this. If his leader sends him there, it is incumbent on him to stick to his duty. This duty at the present time particularly holds good for Gujarat. When the refugees go back to their villages, it is the duty of every worker to stay with them.
SOME PICKETING RULES

In picketing foreign cloth or intoxicating drinks and drugs, let it be remembered, that the aim is to convert the addict or the buyer. Our object is moral and economic reform. The political consequence is but a by-product. If Lancashire ceased to send us its cloth and the Government ceased to use the abkari revenue for any purpose save that of weaning the drunkard or opium eater from his vice, we should still be engaged in picketing work and allied propaganda. The following rules therefore must be read in that light:

1. In picketing shops your attention must be riveted on the buyer.
2. You should never be rude to the buyer or the seller.
3. You may not attract crowds or form cordons.
4. Yours must be a silent effort.
5. You must seek to win over the buyer or the seller by your gentleness, not by the awe of numbers.
6. You may not obstruct traffic.
7. You may not cry hai hai or use other expressions of shame.
8. You should know every buyer and his address and occupation and penetrate his or her home and heart. This presupposes continuity of same picketers.
9. You should try to understand the difficulties of buyers and sellers, and where you cannot remove them you should report them to your superiors.
10. If you are picketing foreign cloth, you should have some khadi or at least sample book with prices and should know the nearest khadi shop to which you could take the buyer. If the buyer does not wish to buy khadi and insists on mill-cloth, you should direct the buyer to an indigenous mill-cloth seller.
11. You should have relevant literature upon your person for distribution among the buyers.
12. You should join or organize processions, lectures with or without magic lantern, bhajan parties, etc.
13. You should keep an accurate diary of your day’s work.
14. If you find your effort failing do not be disheartened but rely upon the universal law of cause and effect and be assured that no good thought, word or deed goes fruitless. To think well, to speak

---

1 The translation of these Rules is reproduced from Young India, 19-3-1931.
well is ours, reward is in the hands of God.

NOTE. If you think of any other rule please forward it to me.

APPEAL TO FOREIGN-CLOTH MERCHANTS

1. Remember that you hold in your hands the economic independence of India.
2. Remember that a potent cause of India’s slavery is your involvement in the dirty foreign-cloth trade.
3. If you get ruined for the purpose of atoning for this sin committed by you knowingly or unknowingly, that atonement will be regarded as none too great.
4. Remember that you are responsible for the impoverishment of India, the destruction of its extensive industry and the continuing loss.
5. Remember that it is the people’s dharma always to boycott foreign cloth.
6. Remember that even under swaraj, there will be no trade in foreign cloth.
7. If you sell the goods you have with you clandestinely, that is a different thing, however regrettable and shameful. But the Congress can never give you permission to sell those goods in India.
8. If you decide not to engage in this trade, you can certainly export at a loss the goods lying with you.
9. You know that efforts are afoot to extend to you such help as can be given.
10. You cannot certainly say that you had not received an adequate warning. The Congress has made great efforts since 1920 to wake you up.

[From Gujarati]
Navajivan, 15-3-1931

313. TRAGEDY OF THE ELEVENTH

We can see that the present awakening among the people has goneday by day out of our control. We got its sad proo on the eleventh at the massive women’s meeting in Ahmedabad. After I left, there was such a stampede that seven sisters got crushed in it and received injuries. Among them was the wife of shri Moolchand Asharam. She survived for a few hours and then died. Another sister whose name I do not know was injured seriously and, until I left Ahmedabad, her life was in danger. The remaining five sisters received some injuries. Who is to console and how can anyone console all these and the husband of the departed sister? How can one condole such deaths? Who can be blamed for this? Even such tragedies are like offerings at the altar of the swaraj yajna. Until we cultivate the ability to regulate, until we learn to organize such mam-moth gatherings, accidents will certainly occur. Only through them shall we learn discipline and order. None can block awakening; meet-ings cannot be abandoned and police men cannot be engaged to maintain order. No-where are they engaged for this purpose. Only volunteers maintain order at such meetings and many have already acquired the ability to keep order.

At the present moment we have been maintaining such order as there is in meetings through a corps of volunteers. But the sad and shameful thing is that no rules as to how to maintain order at meetings have been framed for the benefit of the volunteer corps. The latter should draw up such rules and train volunteers, and should make these rules widely known among the people too. I give herewith some by way of suggestion.¹

1. The meeting should be always held in the open when thousands are expected to attend. It should be circular in shape, the centre containing the dais to be reached by ways protected by strong wooden fences, running radius-like to the centre.
2. The dais should be made up of planks, and strong enough to support several people.
3. The ways to the dais should be clear of spectators and guarded at each end by volunteers.
4. The fence should be so constructed as to leave no room for ingress through the fencing.
5. The leaders when they enter should not be surrounded by cordons of volunteers.
6. The volunteers should stick to their posts firm as a rock.
7. The way should be absolutely clear before leaders are taken to the dais.
8. Volunteers should be posted at fixed places in the meeting. They should not stand, but their presence should be indicated by flags held in their hands.

¹ The translation of the paragraphs 1-15 is reproduced from Young India, 19-3-1931.
9. Volunteers ought to know flag signalling.

10. If the meeting is held in an enclosed space, it should have a sufficient number of exits, and the attendance should be strictly limited to the capacity of the space.

11. Leaflets of instructions should be distributed at every meeting.

12. The organizer should read aloud to the meeting these instructions before the proceedings begin.

13. Water and other emergency accessories ought to be available whenever needed.

14. If there is a large attendance and people arrive long before the hour of the meeting, there should be arrangement for Ramdhun (repetition en masse by the meeting of God’s name) and for preliminary lectures.

15. Proper care should be taken to prevent people from rushing to the dais. They should not be allowed to push in to get a nearer seat, but should be asked to stay where they are.

These rules are given merely by way of sample. I have jotted down those that struck me while writing. I know that many important rules many have been left out, that some may even be useless. It is the task of the volunteer corps to study them and to modify them.

Lady volunteers ought to be very vigilant. They ought to prepare themselves to tackle the sudden awakening among women. Even if at the moment they need to take the help of men volunteers, they should do that. Let none say that accidents took place on account of want of possible care on our part.

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan, 15-3-1931

314. TO “NAVAJIVAN” SUBSCRIBERS

I congratulate the subscribers to Navajivan on the help given by them and those co-workers who by self-effacement very cleverly ensured that the journal reached about ten thousand subscribers, when it was being published illegally. We had been able to supply it to almost all subscribers at that time. Despite the fact that those who did not want Navajivan during that period were requested to ask for a refund of the balance of their subscription, hardly anyone must have done so. Navajivan will continue to be sent every week to those whose subscriptions are still running. Those who were receiving the issues that were being published illegally are requested to send in their outstanding subscriptions. If they do not send in their subscriptions within about a month, the management will assume that they wish no longer to remain subscribers to Navajivan. Nevertheless, as they used to receive the illegal issues of Navajivan, I hope they will send in their subscription to cover those issues.

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan, 15-3-1931

315. TO PROUD GUJARAT

Gujarat has immortalized its name and at the same time added to India’s glory. The whole world has come to know Bardoli and Borsad. Europe celebrated one Thermopylae, but Tod has recorded that a Thermopylae was staged in every street in Rajputana. Those Thermopylae were sanguinary. It is no exaggeration to say that in Gujarat, nay in India, non-violent Thermopylae have been enacted almost everywhere. Only men took part in those other Thermopylae. In these non-violent Thermopylae women have played an important role.

But that is not enough.

We have to do more yet and what is more difficult. What is required for this is quiet strength, not fiery force. What a man can do when excited, he cannot do when he quiets down. We like excitement, not industry and constructive work. Now industry and constructive work are implicit in action. However, if we wish to develop our capacity for swaraj, we must build up both our destructive and constructive capacities. We must clear our field of weeds; but he who lets his field lie fallow after weeding it wastes his effort and unwanted grass grows in it again. However, he who sows his field after weeding it is a wise farmer and becomes prosperous. In exactly the same way, if we do not sow seeds in the form of constructive activity, the weeding in the form of the past twelve months’ non-violent movement will go waste.

Some people hold that this settlement is no settlement but that we have committed a serious mistake and have lost everythings. I hope that no Gujarati will entertain such a doubt. But I do know that just as there are doubting Thomases elsewhere, Gujarat too has its share of them. It is Navajivan’s duty to allay their fears.

Here is a doubt:

Has any great change occurred in the circumstances to warrant my attending the Round Table Conference without those guarantees which we had demanded in December 1929 and again from Yeravda Jail?

Let us consider this question. We did not know in 1929 or while I was in Yeravda what stand the British parties and our people would take at the Round Table Conference. Today we have to decide the matter after knowing that the Conference has made some headway. That makes a lot of difference. On those two occasions, we knew nothing of the set-up of the Round Table Conference. Today we know it somewhat. Today we know that the leaders of India have asked for a fully responsible government. The British parties have accepted the demand. It is true that all those who attended the Round Table Conference have agreed to retain the Empire link. We of course are asking for the right to snap that link at our discretion. We have complete freedom to demand this right at the Round Table Conference. We shall be guilty if we do not attend the Conference, despite getting the right to demand complete independence.

Moreover, on those two occasions, we did not have a complete measure of our strength. Today we have some idea of it. If a weak person undertakes negotiations, he is a beggar. A strong man is always ready for parleys. If a strong party declines to negotiate, it is regarded as arrogant and blameworthy.

Therefore, by effecting a settlement, the Congress has shown its wisdom and has enhanced its prestige.

There are other criticisms too. The answers to them are covered by my statement¹ after the settlement and by my interview² to Press reporters thereafter. And since they will certainly appear in Navajivan, I do not refer to them here.

Readers whose doubts have been laid at rest can easily understand that if we observe in full the conditions of the settlement which we have to honour, the prestige of the Congress will rise high. And if we do not observe them or observe them half-heartedly, we shall forfeit the prestige already gained.

In addition to observing these conditions, we must do three things: boycott of foreign cloth, prohibition of intoxicants and khadi production and propaganda. I have already explained these matters thoroughly. Hence I content myself only with mentioning them here. These topics will be discussed occasionally in Navajivan. At the present moment through its first issue to be legally published again, I should like merely to request Gujaratis to make their full contribution to this programme.

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan, 15-3-1931

¹ Vide “Statement to the press”, 5-3-1931.
² Vide “Interview to journalists”, 6-3-1931.
316. TELEGRAM TO PRIVATE SECRETARY TO VICEROY

BOMBAY,
March 16, 1931

WITH REFERENCE YOUR LETTER ABOUT CONGRESS REPRESENTATION IT SEEMS IMPOSSIBLE TO GIVE NAMES BEFORE WORKING COMMITTEE MEETING KARACHI 24TH AND MATTER MAY HAVE TO GO TO OPEN SESSION CONGRESS. MEANWHILE MR. BENN’S STATEMENT THAT BRITISH GOVERNMENT POLICY ABOUT FINANCIAL SAFEGUARDS IS FIXED AND THAT CONFERENCE MAY NOT MEET INDIA AT ALL RENDERS POSITION DIFFICULT. IF POLICY OF HIS MAJESTY’S GOVERNMENT ABOUT SAFEGUARDS IS IRREVOKABLE WILL IT BE WORTHWHILE CONGRESS BEING REPRESENTED AT CONFERENCE? MUCH AS I WOULD LIKE NOT TO TAKE UP HIS EXCELLENCY’S TIME I WOULD DRAW ATTENTION THAT REPORTS POURING IN SAYING MANY CIVIL RESISTANCE PRISONERS BEING STILL DETAINED INCLUDING SHOLAPUR PRISONERS AND THOSE CHARGED UNDER SECTION 124-A ALSO THAT PUNITIVE POLICE TAX CONTAIN BEING STILL COLLECTED. AM BOMBAY TILL NOON 19TH LEAVING FOR DELHI BY FRONTIER MAIL.

From a photostat: C.W. 9341. Courtesy: India Office Library; also G.N. 8956

1 Wedgwood Benn, Secretary of State for India
2 A district in Bengal
3 Gandhiji left Bombay on February 18.
4 The Private Secretary’s telegram (C.W. 9342; G.N. 8957) dated March 17, in reply to this, read: “Thank you for your telegram. His Excellency appreciates position regarding selection of names of Congress representatives and will be ready to see you any time after your return on twentieth to Delhi. As to particular matters mentioned in your telegram he thinks it would probably be most convenient if you could have a talk to Emerson. His Excellency proposes call an informal meeting on Saturday morning of such Conference delegates as may be in Delhi for private exchange of views and he would be glad if you and two or three of your colleagues who might be here were able to attend.”
March 16, 1931

I knew that there were Communists in India, but I had not met them outside the Meerut Jail, nor even heard their speeches. I made a point of interviewing the Meerut prisoners two years ago during my tour in the U.P. and thus managed to know them somewhat. I have heard one of them this evening, and I may tell them that such as they claim to win swaraj for the working men, I have my doubts about their ability to do so. I had made the working men’s cause my own long before any of the young Communists here were born. I spent the best part of my time in South Africa working for them, I used to live with them, and shared their joys and sorrows. You must therefore understand why I claim to speak for labour. I expect at least courtesy from you if nothing else. I invite you to come to me and discuss things with me as frankly as you can.

You claim to be Communists, but you do not seem to live the life of communism. I may tell you that I am trying my best to live up to the ideal of communism in the best sense of the term. And communism does not, I fancy, exclude courtesy. I am amongst you today, within a few minutes I will leave you. But if you want to carry the country with you, you ought to be able to react on it by reasoning with it. You cannot do so by coercion. You may deal destruction to bring the country round to your view. But how many will you destroy? Not tens of millions. You may kill a few thousands if you had millions with you. But today you are no more than a handful. I ask you to convert the Congress if you can and to take charge of it. But you cannot do so by bidding goodbye to the elementary rules of courtesy. And there is no reason why you should be lacking in ordinary courtesy, when it is open to you to give the fullest vent to your views, when India is tolerant enough to listen patiently to anyone who can talk coherently.

The truce has done no harm to the labourers. I claim that none of my activities has ever harmed the workers, can ever harm them. If the Congress sends its representatives to the Conference, they will press for no swaraj other than the swaraj for workers and peasants. Long before the Communist Party came into existence the Congress had decided that that swaraj would have no meaning which was not the swaraj for workers and peasants. Perhaps, none of you workers here gets less than a monthly wage of Rs. 20, but, I am working for winning swaraj not only for you but for those toiling and unemployed millions who do not get even a square meal a day and have to scratch along with a piece of stale roti and a pinch of salt. But I do not want to deceive you, I must warn you that I do not bear any ill will to the capitalists, I can think of doing them no harm. But I want, by means of suffering, to awaken them to their sense of duty, I want to melt their hearts and get them to render justice to their less fortunate brethren. They are human beings, and my appeal to them will not go in vain. The history of Japan reveals many an instance of self-sacrificing capitalists. During the last satyagraha, quite a number of capitalists went in for considerable sacrifice, went to jail and suffered. Do you want to estrange them? Don’t you want them to work with you for the common end?

---

1 This appeared under the title, "A Word to the Communists", with an introductory note by Mahadev Desai which read: "Addressing a labour meeting in Bombay which was disturbed by some young Communists, Gandhiji made a Hindi speech of which the following is a condensed translation."

You have asked me about the Meerut prisoners. I want you to know that I would release every convict from our prisons, if I had the power. But I could not in justice make their release a condition precedent for the settlement. I may tell you that I am striving my utmost to get them released, and if only you will decide to cooperate with me by creating a calm atmosphere we may be able to get all of them released, including even the Garhwalis. You are talking of independence. Do not I want it as much as you? (Cries of “substance of independence”.) Yes, I want substance and not shadow. For the present, I want you to cultivate a little patience and see what the Congress puts forward as its minimum when the time comes. I assure you we will repeat the Lahore resolution at Karachi and if we chance to go to the Round Table Conference we will either return with what we want or with nothing at all.

‘What about the eleven points?’ you have asked me. They contain the substance of independence to my mind. Peasants and working men are well protected under them. But I could not repeat the points at the time of the settlement for the simple reason that they were submitted as an alternative to the launching of civil disobedience. We have now been through civil disobedience and if we are invited we have to go to the Round Table Conference to press our national

---

1 The source has “warn”.

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI 256 demand. If we succeed there all the eleven points are secured. You may be sure that no swaraj which does not satisfy the eleven points can be acceptable to me.

God has given you intellect and talent. Turn them to proper account. I beseech you not to lay an embargo on your reason. God help you.

_Young India_, 26-3-1931

318. SPEECH AT LABOUR MEETING, DADAR

_March 16, 1931_

I am returning from a meeting of workers at Parel. I have very little time to spare, but I am confident that the workers do not need any lengthy speeches. I have just received a letter asking me several questions. I shall not deal with them here. If the writer is here he should note that replies to his questions will appear in _Young India_ and _Navajivan_.

To me and to the Congress, swaraj means freedom to the masses. It means that Congress will never agree to any scheme which does not protect the rights of the workers and peasants. Rest assured that the truce has not in any way affected adversely the rights of the workers. It has not given us swaraj.

We have not called off the movement because we are cowards. I have been receiving letters not to go ahead. Such letters did not influence me in the least. I do not think there is anything in the truce for which we need be ashamed. Unwittingly, I must have erred, but it is only human to err. In my opinion there is nothing in this truce which I can call a mistake. It might be that I was in a position to ask a few things more which I did not. But that was because I did not want to be unfair. The question of Meerut and Bengal prisoners was in my mind but I could not press for it to the extent of breaking off the negotiations.

The workers have not yet sufficiently realized their strength. They are not properly organized. If they do it they can rule India. But they must improve themselves before they are able to do it. They must clean themselves of the many vices that are a curse to them. They must give up drinking and gambling. If they do so and understand the message of peace and non-violence we can attain swaraj even with the strength of the workers. If you read the history of the South African struggle you will see that the success was due to the workers. When 60,000 workers out of the total population of 1,00,000 organized themselves for satya-graha they could attain in six months what they had not been able to do in several years.

\(^1\) _Vide_ the preceding item.

Do not be misled that the movement is finally stopped. It is only a temporary suspension. We are pledged to the Lahore resolution of independence and if that demand is not satisfied there will be no other way for us but to continue the fight and next time I feel we will have to do it much more intensively. May God give you the strength to continue the fight.

The Bombay Chronicle, 17-3-1931

319. INTERVIEW TO SUBHAS CHANDRA BOSE

BOMBAY, March 16/17, 1931

At 10 p.m. Gandhiji received Mr. Subhas Bose who kept him engaged till 2.30 a.m. I understand Mr. Subhas presented his case for the release of all Bengal political prisoners and the right to carry on propaganda in favour of independence.

Gandhiji explained to him that the Delhi Truce Pact had only suspended hostile activities and the civil disobedience programme, and did not prevent anybody from carrying on propaganda for independence for India. As a matter of fact, the Congress could present its case for independence at the R.T.C. As regards the release of political prisoners convicted of violence and Bengal Ordinance detenus, Gandhiji is reported to have said he could not place it as a condition precedent to truce, as he was not in a position to give an undertaking to the Government that prisoners convicted of violence would not again resort to it during the truce period if released. He was sure their detention was only a question of six months at the most, and at the time of concluding peace finally the Congress would be justified in making release of all political prisoners a condition precedent.

The Hindu, 17-3-1931

320. SPEECH TO VOLUNTEERS, BOMBAY

[March 17, 1931]

I would surely see to it that the Government observes the truce terms just as the Congress does. It is natural that the Government would take more time as it has to function officially according to all the rules. But if we ultimately come to know that the truce terms have been violated, we too are not bound to observe them. Volunteers should spin regularly. If I were your captain I would strictly enforce

1 From The Hindu, 17-3-1931
that rule on you. I would not enrol you as volunteers as long as you do not agree to spin regularly. If our demand for complete independence is not accepted, then you will have to join the struggle again and that fight would be fiercer than the present one.

[From Gujarati]
Gujarati, 22-3-1931

321. INTERVIEW TO “SCRUTATOR”

BOMBAY,
March 17, 1931

I have said nothing publicly yet and I have not yet complained but I am daily receiving evidence that in certain parts things are not going on as well as they might. I am certain Lord Irwin and the Central Government are playing the game, and doing their utmost to fulfil the letter and spirit of the settlement. But it appears to be very different with some of the provincial Governments. It is the old question of the district officer, who is really powerful enough to set Viceroy and Governors at nought. Again and again it has been my experience that the district officer has the power of making or marring the policy of the Govern-ment. In some places there was reason and common sense, in some others there was unreason, fierceness and brutality; and in between, there was mere caution and hesitancy. Lord Irwin’s spirit has not yet perco-lated down to the districts.

I do not think there should be any difficulty about people who are said to be guilty of a violent speech under Section 124. No one was more violently seditious in this sense than I was, and yet I am out and others are still in jail. I am hoping that, within the next few days, most of these people will be released. But at the present moment I am receiving far too many complaints to be entirely happy about the situation. I am afraid in far too many cases the line between sedition and violence was not drawn in the proper spirit.

The Hindu, 18-3-1931
322. INTERVIEW TO MERCHANTS’ DEPUTATION

BOMBAY,
March 17, 1931

The members of the Indian Merchants’ Chamber, Bombay, headed by the President, Sir Chunilal Mehta, waited in a deputation on Gandhiji last evening at his residence.

The question of trading rights was discussed. It is understood Sir Chunilal Mehta and Mr. Walchand Hirachand drew Gandhiji’s attention that, from the last London Conference report, it was clear that there would be no discrimination between Indian and British industries and trades. They argued that, in the present unorganized and undeveloped state of indigenous industries, absence of discrimination would militate very strongly against the development of the latter in competition with British and foreign interests. They urged on Gandhiji the necessity of demanding protection for Indian industries at the next Conference quoting the Nehru Report in support of their argument.

Gandhiji told the deputationists that they ought to have approached Sir Tej Bahadur in the first instance, and asked him how he proposed protection to Indian industries without discrimination. The Congress had to overcome other difficulties affecting more vital issues, but he assured them that the Congress for its part would see what could be done to support them. In the mean while, he asked the deputationists to carry on an agitation for what they were demanding.¹

I am not in a position to say at this stage whether the Congress representatives will attend the Round Table Conference or not but you can rest assured that the Congress is with you in your protest against this demand for so-called equality of rights made at the Round Table Conference.

¹ Which consisted of Walchand Hirachand, Husseinbhoy Laljee, Rattansi Morarji, J. K. Mehta and Jamnalal Bajaj
² What follows is from Young India. This gist of Gandhiji’s advice formed part of a letter dated March 19, 1931 from Walchand Hirachand to Gandhiji requesting his permission for the publication of the letter so that “the correct version be placed before the public”. For Gandhiji’s remarks, vide “The Giant and the Dwarf”, 26-3-1931.
Whatever other countries might have done or not done, India should take such steps to protect and develop her industries as it might suit best her own interests.

That the right of the future Indian Parliament to discriminate between Nationals and non-Nationals, whenever Indian interests require it, shall remain intact and unimpaired.

The claim of Europeans to be treated as minority community needing protection is untenable.

No one has any right to pick up a paragraph from Nehru Report and fling it in our face when other parts of the Report are discarded.

I would advise you to carry on propaganda in connection with this important matter.

As regards the report of the statement said to have been made by Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru about the paragraph appearing in Nehru Report of the definition of citizenship, it should be read together with the interpretation given by Pandit Motilal Nehru on the floor of the Assembly and the decision taken by the All-Parties Convention at Calcutta on the subject of the definition of a ‘citizen’.

The Hindu, 18-3-1931; also Young India, 26-3-1931
An age has passed since I appeared before you on my release and the impossible size of the meeting prevented me from delivering my message to you. A new age has begun and I appear before you this evening to deliver again my message which however is far different from the one on the previous occasion. That day’s message was simple, today’s is comparatively complex. For full twelve months we have developed a war mentality, we thought of war, we talked of war and nothing but war. Now we have to sing a completely different tune. We are in the midst of truce. With some of us, I know the very mention of the word ‘truce’ sends a shiver through their body. That is because we had thought of nothing but war and had believed that there could be no compromise. But that was not a position becoming a true satyagrahi. The satyagrahi whilst he is ever ready for fight must be equally eager for peace. He must welcome any honourable opportunity for peace. The Working Committee of the Congress saw such an opportunity and availed itself of it. The essential condition of a compromise is that there should be nothing humiliating, nothing panicky about it. You may be sure that whilst I was being inundated with telegrams to make peace at any price, I was absolutely unmoved by them. I am inured to such things and I was absolutely firm that I must not allow any of these telegrams to make me flinch from whatever decision my inner voice gave me. Whilst however a satyagrahi never yields to panic or hesitancy, neither does he think of humiliating the other party, of reducing it to an abject surrender. He may not swerve from the path of justice and may not dictate impossible terms. He may not pitch his demands too high, neither may he pitch them too low. The present settlement, I submit, satisfies all these conditions. One of the terms of the settlement seems to have caused some disappointment in certain quarters and some have rushed in to condemn the settlement on that account. They complain that we ought not to have entered into the settlement until we had secured the release of all political prisoners. I may tell you that we could not in justice make this demand. Not that there was any lack of will on our part, but the power to make the demand irresistible was lacking. That power will come as soon as we fulfil in letter and in spirit all the terms of the settlement that apply to us.

1 This appeared under the title “More about the Settlement” as a condensed rendering by Mahadev Desai. Jawaharlal Nehru presided over the meeting.

I may inform you that local Governments have been remiss in fulfilling their part of the contract. Some prisoners who ought to have been released are still in jail, some prosecutions—like the Chirner firing case—that ought to have been withdrawn are still going on. It is a matter for sorrow. If the remissness or failure is deliberate it would be culpable. But it would add to our power and make our case for swaraj more irresistible than ever. One would like to think however that such remissness would not be deliberate in view of the stupendous machinery of Government. There is likely to be unintentional delay and inadvertence. But if there is deliberate breach of faith, we have our sovereign remedy. If you look at the settlement the last clause empowers Government to set its machinery of law and order in motion in the event of failure on the part of the Congress to fulfil its part of the settlement. Need I tell you that the clause necessarily includes its converse? Even as it would be open to Government to set its machinery in motion, it is open to us also to resort to our infallible weapon as soon as we find that there is a deliberate breach.

But the present delays need not agitate or irritate you. For there is no occasion for it. A satyagrahi has infinite patience, abundant faith in others, ample hope.

And now a word of warning. The settlement is obviously provisional. But it necessitates a change in our method of work. Whilst civil disobedience and jail-going, or direct action was the method to be followed before the settlement, the way of argument and negotiation takes its place. But let no one forget that the settlement is provisional and the negotiations may break down at any stage. Let us therefore keep our powder ever dry and our armour ever bright. Failure should not find us napping, but ready to mobilize at the first command. In the mean while let us carry on the process of self-purification with greater vigour and greater faith, so that we may grow in strength day by day.

And now a word of explanation. The settlement does in no way commit us to a position less than the Lahore resolution. It is of course open to us to revise the position taken at Lahore but nothing in the settlement would oblige us to do so. And you may be sure that we are going to ask for nothing less than independence. Whether we will get it is another matter. It depends upon what power we can exert on the delegates belonging to the other parties in India, on what conviction we carry with them. But the fact is there that we may go the whole hog and there is nothing in the settlement to prevent us. There is the matter of the much-talked-of safeguards. Now my position is this, that it is open to us to ask for a revision in toto of the safeguards as suggested by Mr. Mac-Donald. How far we shall be able to achieve what we want will depend on the extent to which we fulfil the constructive programme which has its own three girders—communal heart-unity, complete boycott of foreign cloth and prohibition of drink and drugs. Let us strain every nerve to fulfil our programme and thus make our demand irresistible.

Young India, 19-3-1931

324. TELEGRAM TO H. W. EMERSON

BOMBAY

[March 18, 1931]¹

YOUR MESSAGE HAS JUST BEEN DELIVERED TO ME. IT SEEMS TO BETRAY GRAVE MISUNDERSTANDING. BOYCOTT OF FOREIGN GOODS ESPECIALLY CLOTH PROTECTED UNDER SETTLEMENT. WHAT IS UNDOUBTEDLY EXCLUDED IS BOYCOTT OF BRITISH GOODS AS DISTINGUISHED FROM OTHER FOREIGN GOODS. MY SPEECH AND WRITINGS IMMEDIATELY AFTER DATE OF SETTLEMENT MAKE THE POSITION CLEAR. IN OUR DISCUSSIONS TOO I ENDEAVOURED TO BRING OUT POSITION TO WHICH NO EXCEPTION WAS MADE. EXCLUSION BY SWADESHI OF FOREIGN GOODS AND FOREIGN ENTERPRISE BY LAWFUL METHODS VITAL NECESSITY. INVITE YOU RE-READ CLAUSES SIX AND SEVEN.

Home Department, Political, File No. 33/6, 1931. Courtesy: National Archives of India

¹ Forwarded on this date by the Bombay Government to the Home Department in reply to the latter’s telegram of March 15, 1931; vide “Telegram from home department to Bombay Government”, 15-3-1931.
I am grateful to you for the purse and the address, which are rendered more welcome by the fact that the president today is my friend Sjt. Natarajan, that the welcome address was read by Mrs. Lukamani, a well-known member of the Tyabji family with whom I am bound by unaccountable ties of affection, that the purse was presented to me by Kamalabehn, a prominent lady who has not only helped the movement by most liberal contributions, but also by going to jail. I am happy to think that I am going to Delhi loaded with all this wealth of affection.

I thank you for the reference in the address to the sacred memory of the late Pandit Motilal Nehru. His death meant to me a personal loss of an irreparable character. I was not at all exaggerating, when on the day of his death, in a message to a newspaper,\(^3\) I said that I felt more widowed than Mrs. Motilal Nehru. For her the sacred memory of her husband, coupled with a pious life, would be some compensation, but all my piety and self-restraint cannot give me the warmth of his wise counsel that I need so much today. I missed it sorely during my conversations with the Viceroy and my conference with the members of the Working Committee. His presence would have meant a heavy load off my head and your touching reference to him recalls sacred memories of my friend and counsel.

It is needless to congratulate you on the great record of work that has been briefly described in your statement. My joy knows no bounds when I recollect that the work here was inaugurated by some of my nearest and most faithful co-workers. But now, we are entering on a stage which will try our patience and our skill to the utmost. Civil disobedience was difficult enough, but once it is understood, it is easy. A number of women practised it successfully and the vanaras also covered themselves with glory.¹ The spirit of revolution makes the difficult easy. But scrupulous obedience to irksome rules and constant work are a much more difficult process. There will be occasions of irritation and grave annoyance, but, even on those occasions, the tendering of obedience may be duty. For that obedience will in itself be a preparation for a future struggle, if it becomes necessary.

I am being blamed for having surrendered too much. We might have won much more, it is said, if we had kept on fighting. This is easier said than done. Certain things could be done in a fit of enthusiasm, but the constructive work in front of us will necessitate patient, ceaseless toil. That will be a preparation of swaraj. Governing a sub-continent like India is no easy task. It will need not only patient toil, but cool-headed statesmanship.

Complaints pour in about the dilatory methods of local Governments in implementing the settlement.

Some delay is unavoidable. I would plead for patience. If we find that there is a deliberate, continuing breach of the settlement, we have our remedy, as the Government have theirs if we break it. The last clause in the agreement implies its obvious converse. But we cannot at any and every moment unsheathe our sword. We cannot make our unfailing instrument so cheap. It is, therefore, my obvious duty to urge my co-workers to be patient. One has to consider the difficulties of a stupendous machinery like Government. It is not possible for them to reach their local Government as quickly as it is for us. It is because the system is so rotten and so top-heavy that we had to make war against it. It takes some time for an order to reach Bombay from Delhi; then it has to be sent to the district officer who in turn passes it on to his subordinates. The vicious process is hardly complete, when some local official takes it into his head not to respect the order. We have to take all these factors into consideration, and then, if we find that the breach or the dilatoriness is deliberate or inten-tional, we resume hostilities. But the present interlude necessi-tates a good deal of precaution and patience.

You have told me about the liquor-shop picketing done in your suburbs. When you have put out 150 women in the field the work is half done. Both, foreign-cloth picketing and liquor-shop picketing, are things for which women are particularly suited. And unless you put forth your best effort, the work of those who go to the Conference will be of no avail. Argument and negotiation may go on there, but it will be meaningless without constructive effort here to back it.

¹ Vide also “Speech at public meeting, Allahabad”, 1-2-1931.

Let there be, therefore, no slackening of effort, no fatigue or weariness in our ranks. Foreign-cloth boycott is a stupendous business requiring the harnessing of all our resources and sacrifice of the purest type. Swaraj is close at hand, if only we exert all our powers to the utmost to grasp it. May God give you the strength and will for the task.

Young India, 26-3-1931

326. THE CONGRESS

The Congress will be upon us in a few days from now. The broken-up organizations will hardly have been put together by that time. The delegates, half of whom will be ex-prisoners, will hardly have had time to collect themselves. And yet, it will meet with a greater prestige than ever before, and with a consciousness of its new strength born of a knowledge of sufferings undergone by tens of thousands of men, women and children, and perhaps unparalleled in history in the sense that the sufferers suffered without retaliation.

But it would be wrong to brood over the sufferings, to exaggerate them, or to be puffed up with pride. True suffering does not know itself and never calculates. It brings its own joy which surpasses all other joys. We shall, therefore, be guilty of suicide if we live upon the capital amassed during the past twelve months. Whilst we must try always to avoid occasions for needless suffering, we must ever be ready for them. Somehow or other, those who will walk along the right path cannot avoid suffering notwithstanding the attempt to avoid it. It is the privilege of the patriot, the reformer and, still greater, of the satyagrahi.

The settlement, provisional though it is, has come through God’s grace. During the negotiations there were times when breakdown seemed a certainty. Beyond doubt, the suffering would have been ten times multiplied if a breakdown had taken place. And yet, I would have been obliged to ask the nation to go through it, had an honourable peace proved impossible. But I am not sure that it will be possible to reach the goal without further wider and deeper suffering. The measure of our purification seems hardly equal to the prize to be won. We have not yet consciously, and on a national scale, got rid of the curse of untouchability, we have not shed distrust of one another. Great though the awakening has been among the rich, they have not yet made common cause with the poor; their life bears no resemblance to that of the poor. Though much progress has been made in the case of drink and drugs, much more yet remains to be done; the progress made is still uncertain. The drunkard has yielded to pressure of public opinion. He has not yet definitely given up the habit. He knows the evil but has not been taught to shun it as poison. The word ‘taught’ has been used advisedly. The workers have confined their attention to the drink and drug shops, they have not made a serious attempt to touch the heart of the addict. We have not shed the desire for foreign cloth and fineries, nor have the cloth merchants fully realized magnitude of the wrong they have done to the nation by their trade. Many of them still parade the doctrine of individual freedom. These and several other evils that can be easily recalled show how much still remains to be done in the matter of self-purification. And so, it is little wonder if we do not find the atmosphere of purna swaraj pervading us. How far, therefore, the method of consultation and conference will succeed, it is difficult to forecast. This much is certain that argument is not what will carry conviction. The British conviction will be in exact proportion to the strength we have developed. And since the nation has decided that we will acquire strength only through self-purification, if we have not attained the wisdom during these good months of grace to rid ourselves of the evils I have enumerated, then we must go through a fiercer fire of suffering than ever before. Let us, therefore, approach the Congress with a humbled spirit and with a will bent on removing every form of weakness from our midst. We must not give undue weight to conferences and the like. The past twelve months have made it clear for us that swaraj will come when it does, from within, by internal effort, not as a free gift from above or by simple argument.

Young India, 19-3-1931

327. NOTES
THEIR PART OF THE OBLIGATION
Reports continue to pour in upon me from Tamil Nad, Andhra, Bihar, the Punjab, Bengal and other places to the effect that the local authorities are not carrying out the terms of the settlement or are illiberal in giving effect to it. Even prisoners convicted under Section 124A of the I.P.C. have not yet been discharged. The fact is, that civil resisters were convicted under many sections, even those dealing with violence, although they had never done or meant any violence. The Sholapur prisoners, numbering about 150, are also not yet discharged. The majority, if not all of them, are no more guilty of violence than I am. They were to be discharged. I cannot understand why they are being still detained. In Contai, things are reported to be still worse. There the punitive tax is said still to be realized. A procession too is reported to have been broken up. I have drawn attention to these cases in proper quarters and I hope that the settlement will be given effect to by the local authorities. Some delay on the part of the local Governments in giving effect to the settlement was inevitable. But there must be a limit to it. And the continuing exaction of the tax, if the report be true, is an unpardonable and manifest breach of the settlement. So much for the cases covered by the settlement.

There are also the Bengal detenus and other political prisoners. It was not possible to press for their discharge as condition of the settlement. But I can assure the public that they were not forgotten. And I am not without hope that they will be discharged in due course. I can only urge patience and in spite of reported laxity on the part of the local authorities a due discharge by us of our part of the obligation. That will enable us more effectively to secure the discharge of those not covered in name by the settlement. In any case, let the public understand that for the Congress it is only a question of months when either the power must pass into the hands of the nation or it must, God forbid, reembark, if no other course is left open, upon the well-trodden course of suffering. Those, therefore, who have faith in the national awakening will not be over-hasty or anxious about many things that need to be set right.

FOREIGN-CLOTH DEALERS

Foreign-cloth dealers seem to think that the settlement gives them the licence to carry on their business just as they please. It is true that picketing is to be robbed of every element of compulsion and that those who feel they have sealed their stock through coercion, are free without the slightest molestation to unseal their packages. But they must realize that neither will picketing stop altogether nor will public opinion against foreign cloth wane. Complete banishment of foreign cloth is a vital necessity for the nation for all time, so far as we can foresee the future. If these merchants have any faith in the country they must know that swaraj is not far off. But, whether it is far or near, the agitation against the foreign cloth as against intoxicating drink and drugs will continue. And when swaraj is attained, among the first measures of such government must be prohibition of foreign cloth and drugs. One impoverishes the nation, the other destroys the very soul.

Young India, 19-3-1931

328. INTERVIEW WITH VICEROY

March 19, 1931

Mr. Gandhi came to see me today on his return from Bombay. The first point to which he drew my attention was the statement of the Secretary of State during the debate in the House of Commons, in which he had emphasized that in the considered view of His Majesty’s Government there could be no abatement of the financial safeguards proposed in the Federal Structure Committee. He put the point, as I had expected, that if the attitude of the Government was unalterable on the particular proposals in this field, as distinct from the broad necessity of ensuring the general purpose of safeguarding India’s credit, he was very doubtful whether it would be useful for Congress to participate.

I told him that I did not see the need for any complaint on the ground that the Secretary of State had explicitly stated the position of His Majesty’s Government. His own friends and he himself were constantly stating in terms no less explicit the position of Congress. I had, for example, seen only this morning a speech of Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru in which he had said that Congress could agree to nothing, unless the last British soldier was withdrawn from India. It might no doubt be that Mr. Gandhi and his friends would find difficulty in accepting the statement of the considered position of His Majesty’s Government, just as His Majesty’s Government would find great difficulty in accepting the position laid down by Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, but surely it was unnecessary to despair of reconciliation of views by full discussion, in which it would be the duty of all those participating to bring forward arguments and reasons in defence of their position. I had no hesitation in saying that the fundamental purpose of His Majesty’s Government in this matter was simply to make India’s financial credit and stability as sure as it could be made. In the view of the Secretary of State and of His Majesty’s Government the particular methods suggested were the best for achieving this result; but I should not suppose that if anybody could bring forward better methods, not less effective, on which greater agreement might be reached, there would be any reluctance on the part of His Majesty’s Government to give them careful consideration. He said he would consider the position with his friends; and his attitude on this point, as well as his subsequent conversation, led me to feel that he would not run out over it.
I then referred briefly to the matters that he was going to discuss with Mr. Emerson. These were, first of all, the complaints that I understood him to have made on the subject of particular failures on the part of Government to implement the agreement in individual cases of release. As to this, I told him that I had naturally not been able to inform myself of individual cases, but that from communications I had from Governors I was quite satisfied that local Governments were playing the game very fairly, and that it was a remarkable achievement to have got rid of something like fourteen thousand prisoners in a few days. There were no doubt a number of cases in which the element of doubt arose. These were now being examined as expeditiously as possible, but it must be recognised this examination took more time than the treatment of cases in regard to which there was no doubt, and that the discretion in doubtful cases was vested with local Governments. I told him that I thought his people were very impatient and with this view he seemed not to disagree.

We then had a good deal of discussion about the methods being employed by Congress for the encouragement of swadeshi production, and I told him that the method of blacklisting particular mills, which did not conform to terms laid down by Congress, seemed to me wholly outside the spirit of our agreement, in that it seemed to impose severe economic coercion of individual liberty. His line of defence in reply was to say that no objection could be taken to exhortation to buyers to purchase only Indian cloth; that in pursuance of this Congress were clearly entitled to make information available as to what were the mills which made Indian cloth; and that this automatically led to other mills wishing to ascertain the conditions that had to be fulfilled by them in order to qualify for inclusion in the approved list. He strenuously denied that this was either outside the letter or the spirit of an agreement that gave full latitude for the encouragement of Indian industry. He added that their action was purely economic, and that they had expressly withdrawn by circular any injunction against the purchase of British goods as compared with foreign in branches of goods which India could not supply; and also added that many of his people had told him that without effective picketing, which in their view was impossible under the agreement, his plans could not succeed. I left this subject saying that I would have all the facts examined, and asked him to discuss the matter in greater detail with Mr. Emerson.

The last subject we discussed was the future procedure of the Round Table Conference. On this he said that it would make it very difficult for Congress to participate if no British delegation came to India before the resumption of the full Round Table Conference in England. Already there was suspicion, consequent upon the abandonment of the original idea of a British delegation visiting India. It would not be expected that a delegation coming to India would be in a position to take decisions, and the final stages could well be taken in London. But he did attach very great importance to a British delegation coming out to India in June or July for the purpose of making contact, getting into touch with Indian feeling and thought and, if this were done, he saw no great difficulties about the subsequent assembly of the full Conference in London.

---

1 Vide “Emerson’s note on interview with Gandhiji”, 19-3-1931.

I told him that Jawaharlal’s attitude, as reported in the Press, seemed to me impossible. Frankly, he appeared to have no spirit of peace and all his utterances left a clear impression on my mind that he certainly regarded the present arrangement merely as an uneasy truce, which had to be used only for the purpose of strengthening Congress for the next encounter. He said that Jawaharlal was very mercurial, but was already beginning to come down. Of this, however, I told him I saw no sign.

In conclusion, he told me that he anticipated no great difficulty at Karachi and said that he proposed to attend my informal meeting\(^1\) on Saturday and hoped to accept my invitation to bring two or three others with him.

His general attitude was friendly and he seemed not less anxious than he was last week to tread the path of peace.

As he was leaving, he asked if he might mention the case of Bhagat Singh, saying that he had seen in the Press the intimation of his execution for March 24th. This was an unfortunate day, as it coincided with the arrival of the new President of the Congress at Karachi and there would be much popular excitement.

I told him I had considered the case with most anxious care, but could find no grounds on which I could justify to my conscience commuting the sentence. As to the date, I had considered the possibility of postponement till after the Congress, but had deliberately rejected it on various grounds:

(i) that postponement of execution, merely on political grounds, when orders had been passed seemed to me improper;

(ii) that postponement was inhuman in that it would suggest to the friends and relatives that I was considering commutation; and

(iii) that Congress would have been able legitimately to complain that they had been tricked by Government.

He appeared to appreciate the force of these arguments, and said no more.

(SD.) IRWIN

From a photostat: G.N. 8958

---

\(^1\) Vide “Discussion at meeting of R.T.C delegates, Delhi”, 21-3-1931.
329. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

DELIHI,

March 20, 1931

DEAR MR. EMERSON,

As promised, I send you translations of a circular and a notice issued by the Mamladhar of Borsad. They speak for themselves. They are, in my opinion, clearly contrary to the terms of the settlement.

Yours sincerely,

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-B, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

330. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

1 DARYAGANJ, DELHI,

March 20, 1931

DEAR MR. EMERSON,

I thank you for your letter just received. I knew about the meeting you refer to. I have already taken every precaution possible and hope that nothing untoward will happen. I suggest that there should be no display of police force and no interference at the meeting. Irritation is undoubtedly there. It would be better to allow it to find vent through meetings, etc.

Yours sincerely,

H. W. EMERSON, ESQ.
CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA
NEW DELHI

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-B, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

DEAR MR. EMERSON,

I send you two telegrams one from Ranpur regarding salt and the other from Patna regarding satyagrahi prisoners. The latter is from one of the best and the most cultured of co-workers who is most careful in making statements. The wire about salt is from one who has been a member of the Legislative Council, Bombay, and is the Editor of an influential, widely-read weekly newspaper. The arbitrary limit of one mile practically nullifies the relief clause of the settlement and has been evidently fixed without knowledge of the actual condition of the villages in relation to the salt areas. In my opinion there cannot be a mileage limit. The limit, as I suggested at our conversations, can be easily and justly fixed by issuing instructions that the villagers, so long as they walk from their villages to the salt areas, should not be interfered with. The relief clause was intended to give substantial help to the poor, which it can never do under the one-mile formula. I hope that both the matters will receive prompt attention. I shall thank you to return the telegrams after use.

Yours sincerely,

H. W. EMERSON, ESQ.
CHIEF SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA
NEW DELHI

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-B, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

1 Dated March 20, from Amritlal Sheth, which read: "Government orders are received fixing only those villages as salt area villages which are one mile distant from creek. Out of about sixty villages reasonably entitled to benefit under truce terms only five will be benefited. This situation totally nullifies truce terms. Volunteers and villagers greatly perturbed pressing for fight. Please give guidance. I learn authorities think impossible to cope truce terms salt situation with present staff."

2 Clause 20; vide "Provisional settlement", 12-3-1931.

332. INTERVIEW TO THE PRESS

DELHI,
March 21, 1931

If Lord Sankey and Mr. Wedgwood Benn regard the safeguards evolved by the Round Table Conference as final in substance and form, then there is no use of our going to London and the Second Round Table Conference, as far as the Indian masses are concerned, must fail.

Gandhiji pointed out that, under the terms of the recent truce with Lord Irwin scope is allowed not only for a full and free discussion of the whole question of safeguards, but it is expressly stipulated that safeguards are to be considered in the interests of India.

I feel therefore that the statements in Parliament made by Mr. Wedgwood Benn and Lord Sankey that the safeguards must be in the interests of England as well as of India are not strictly in conformity with the spirit of the truce.

Concerning the Hindu-Muslim question, Gandhiji expressed grave doubts as to whether unity could be achieved before the National Congress at Karachi. He hoped however that some measure of accord would be reached which might save the way for an eventual agreement between these two groups, whose dissensions had torn India for centuries.

Asked if he would favour Geneva for the Second Round Table Conference, Gandhiji, replied:

Geneva would be desirable if the British delegation were sitting as an impartial judge over India’s future status, but it is not. The British are, in a sense, our opponents. Therefore the procedure must be by direct negotiation. In such negotiations the atmosphere, surroundings, and local influences play a vital part. I am sure England would never agree to Geneva. If I had my way I would hold two conferences, the first in India and the second in England. That would make for fairness all around. But wherever the Conference is held, it is of the utmost importance that it should be convened without loss of time.

Q. Do you expect to hold the National Congress to the terms of the truce with Lord Irwin?

A. Yes, but if Bhagat Singh is hanged, as it now seems almost certain, it may have highly unfavourable repercussions upon the younger element in the Congress who may attempt to split the Congress.

Q. Do you entertain any hope that Bhagat Singh may be saved at the last minute?

A. Yes, but it is a very distant hope.

Gandhiji laughed over the speculation in the London Press as to whether he would bring Mirabai to London.

If I go to the Second Round Table Conference why should not I bring her? She is a most useful assistant and besides she is anxious to see her mother who lives in England.

Turning from politics to general subjects, Gandhiji answered a number of questions.

Q. Do you think the League of Nations will succeed in exterminating war?

A. War will never be exterminated by any agency until men and the nations become more spiritual, and adopt the principle of brotherhood and concord rather than antagonism, competition, and brute force. Those in the West do not recognize the power of spiritual things, but some day they will and then they will be free from war, crimes of violence and things that go with these evils. The West is too materialistic, selfish and narrowly nationalistic. What we want is an international mind, embracing the welfare and spiritual advancement of all mankind.

Q. How would you cure the evil of armaments?

A. By non-violence, which will eventually be the weapon of all nations. I say 'eventually' deliberately, because we shall have wars and armaments for a very long time. It is two thousand years since Christ preached His Sermon on the Mount and the world has adopted only a fragment of the imperishable lofty precepts therein enunciated for the conduct of man toward man. Until we take all Christ's principles to our hearts, war, hatred and violence will continue.

Q. What is your remedy for the prevailing crimes of violence, divorce, and drink in the United States?

A. I would cure them all by self-purification and non-violence.

Q. Why did you refuse to allow the Ahmedabad Municipality to erect a monument to you?

A. Because man's best monument is not a thing of stone, but consists in living deeds and in memory which survives in the minds of those he served. Such funds should be used for the uplift of the poor and not to glorify or immortalize in marble a man who merely served his brother man.

Q. How long do you expect to live?
A. Until eternity.

Q. Do you believe in immortality?
A. Yes, reincarnation and transmigration of souls are fundamentals of the Hindu religion.

Q. If all men adopted your simple mode of living, fasting and exercising, do you think they should live to be hundred?
A. Yes, but that can he determind better after I die.

Q. Which Government most nearly approaches your idea of an ideal Government?
A. None. It should be government wherein man reaches his full stature in every phase of life, and where his interests are paramount over all others.

Q. Will socialism accomplish that?
A. Not socialism, as it is practised politically today.

Asked if he would favour the retention of American and other foreign missionaries when India secured self-government, Gandhiji replied:

If instead of confining themselves purely to humanitarian work and material service to the poor, they do proselytizing by means of medical aid, education, etc., then I would certainly ask them to withdraw. Every nation’s religion is as good as any other. Certainly India’s religions are adequate for her people. We need no converting spiritually.¹

_The Hindu, 22-3-1931_

333. DISCUSSION AT MEETING OF R.T.C. DELEGATED, DELHI

March 21, 1931

His Excellency met this morning (21st March, 1931) at 11 a.m. the Ruling Princes and the delegates to the Round Table Conference who are at present in Delhi. Mr. Gandhi, Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and Sir Hugh Cooke also attended.

¹ For Gandhiji’s clarification of this paragraph, vide “Foreign missionaries”, 23-4-1931.

² Only excerpts are reproduced here.
His Excellency opened the proceedings by welcoming the gentlemen who were present and by describing the rough heads to which, it seemed to him, discussion might profitably be directed.

These heads were five in number, namely:

(i) The statement made by the Secretary of State in Parliament “about the practical programme which we hope to pursue”.

(ii) Special investigations recommended by the Round Table Conference.

(iii) What may we suppose is happening in India itself, for instance as regards communal settlement and the discussions in States regarding Federation?

(iv) How do people see the work of the Federal Structure Committee developing and when will the time be ready for its further discussions?

(v) Would it be useful for the Indian side of the Round Table Conference with additions to meet in India during the summer?

HEAD I. Under the first head His Excellency enquired what people thought of the general plan described by the Secretary of State so far as it related, in particular, to no British delegation coming to India... His Excellency put to the Conference the direct question whether it was the general view that it is desirable to get out a British delegation to India. Many of the delegates answered ‘Yes’...

Mr. Gandhi expressed the view that, at this stage, nothing useful could be done by bringing out a delegation (though from what he said later, it might be inferred that he merely meant to convey that it was useless at present, i.e., until the communal position was more clear.)...

His Excellency closed the discussion on this head by remarking that the problem was whether a delegation of whatever kind to India could do useful work in clearing ground so that the Round Table Conference in autumn could get to work more quickly in London.

HEAD II. His Excellency then turned to the special enquiries recommended by the Round Table Conference. The first of these was the Franchise Enquiry. The Government of India favoured the appointment of a Commission by the Secretary of State and thought that it might tour and be employed, say, for six months. But the problem which immediately arose was whether an enquiry into the franchise must not await a settlement of the communal problem... Mr. Gandhi, being asked if there were prospects of a communal settlement being reached at an early date, stated that every endeavour was being made to reach a solution from the Congress standpoint and apart from everything else that was happening here and outside. The Congress, he said, will be hard put to it to take a share in the deliberations of the Round Table Conference in India or in England unless the communal question is settled. The Congress is driven more and more to these conclusions. So he will leave no stone unturned to reach a settlement. They had found help in making their explorations in the assurances first given by Begum Shah Nawaz and then by Sir Muhammad Shafi and by others who are not here. The main position, he said, was that the Congress will entertain no solution of the communal question which does not satisfy the parties concerned. Mr. Gandhi mentioned this point in order to show that it is the bounden duty of Congress to find a settlement. If Congress unhappily should fail in that duty, it will inform His Excellency and the country. Mr. Gandhi could not say if he had a hope of immediate solution but he found no grounds for despair as things were now proceeding. If Congress succeeded, it would make an announcement in the near future. If Congress failed, its failure would be a discredit to it, and others must take up the task. Congress will approach everyone. Difficulties are very great but not insurmountable. Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya agreed with the expression of opinion made by Mr. Gandhi.
Sir Muhammad Shafi approved of the admirable summary made by Mr. Gandhi and had nothing to add to it. His Excellency remarked that, as one standing outside, he could only lend all his prayers and good wishes to those slaving in the cause of peace.

It was concluded unanimously that it is no use setting up the Franchise Commission while the communal question is still pending.

His Excellency then propounded the question, “If this question is not settled, what would this conference advise His Majesty’s Government to do? In these circumstances, should His Majesty’s Government itself make an award?” Sir Muhammad Shafi, Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru, Sir. A. P. Patro and Sir B. N. Mitra said that in these circumstances Government must make a decision. Mr. Gandhi, however, remarked:

If we have in our helplessness to say to His Majesty’s Government that we had failed, I should not like to live to make that announcement. On the domestic solution of this problem lies the future happiness of this much distressed country. I would not like to say off-hand that His Majesty’s Government should arbitrate between us, for that is what it comes to; but as we proceed in our talks with Muslims and Sikhs we are fast approaching the conclusion that it will be an indispensable condition of any solution that there should be adult franchise. In the peculiar conditions of India adult franchise may appear a hard task, but it would be harder still not to have an adequate solution of our communal problems. Muslims and Sikhs feel the same. Muslims may not be unanimous, but there is a large body of Muslim opinion which feels that adult suffrage is the real solution. Let no one be frightened by the strength with which I put this proposition. Adult suffrage will not be so unwieldy as it may appear at first sight. We must consider fully the scheme which is now being evolved. At the proper time I shall be prepared to discuss this scheme. Meanwhile I have wished to let people know in what way Congress mind is working. Adult suffrage may prove to be an indispensable condition of the communal solution.

Sir Akbar Hydari pointed out that a Franchise Committee cannot get to work on the franchise and the constituencies for the Federal Legislature until we know what the strength of the two Houses will be. His Excellency remarked that this shows how closely all questions are joined up, but you must begin somewhere, either with the fowl or with the egg. People charged with particular tasks must draw alternative pictures.

HEAD II (b). His Excellency then referred to the two enquiries in the North West Frontier Provinces which the Round Table Conference had recommended. He explained the action which the Government of India had in contemplation. The conference approved. His Excellency made a similar explanation in regard to Sind with a like result. The conference also approved of departmental examination of the classification of subjects but expressed no opinion about the enquiries regarding separate railway authority.

Mr. Gandhi was understood to remark that the idea of separating Orissa had the support of Congress.

HEAD V. Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru asked the question “if a British delegation comes out, what then?” His Excellency expressed the opinion that the whole Conference must then meet. . . . Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru wanted to know what Mr. Gandhi’s views were.

Mr. Gandhi said that when he and his friends were considering this question they had built on three things that the Secretary of State had repeatedly said. The Secretary of State held out a prospect of a delegation to India, which Mr. Gandhi and his friends had thought was a good idea, because it afforded them an opportunity of discussing matters with the degree of freedom, which they could not take in full Conference in London. They had also welcomed the idea of a preliminary conference being held in India, and of the Round Table Conference then assembling in London, to wind up the business and to declare its considered opinion. He and his friends still adhered to that opinion. Accordingly, Mr. Gandhi was glad to hear today expressions of opinion that the idea of a delegation to India which had been abandoned by His Majesty’s Government should be revived and that a delegation should come out. But the Congress did not yet fully know its own mind because of internal difficulties, such as the possibility of a failure to find a solution of the communal problem. Just as Congress would welcome the coming of a delegation to India and might indeed consider it almost indispensable, in order that Congress might have its mind informed, so it was true of British Parties or so many as might elect to come to India that their minds should be informed in this way. The third consideration leading Congress to welcome, or indeed consider indispensable, the holding of a Conference in India did not overlook the disadvantages of which Mr. Gandhi was aware. Some persons thought that it was a handicap to meet and conduct negotiations in an Indian atmosphere. But Mr. Gandhi felt that distrust still persists. There is distrust between Indians and Europeans. There is still greater distrust of the bureaucracy, that is, of officials. He and his friends thought that impediments were being placed in the way of reaching an honourable settlement. He himself did not dread these things. He felt that if India is to take over its own Government, it will have to deal with this very bureaucracy under altered conditions. He asked himself the question if officials did not help, what will India have to face if it embarked on the serious responsibility of self-government. So far as Congress was concerned, it seemed desirable, and even necessary, to have a Conference in India. Such a Conference would not act as judges or arbitrators. If it did that, he felt that logically it should do so in a neutral place and deliver its verdict. He did not feel that these were precisely the conditions. By its sittings the Conference will both affect its surrounding atmosphere and be affected by it. It seemed to him to follow that the Conference must meet in India. If there are disadvantages of sitting in India, there are also disadvantages in sitting in London. The Conference would be incomplete if it did not face the full consequences and sit in India as well as in London. So far as time goes, Congress was impatient to reach a decision. He felt three things. First, the earlier the British delegation comes out the better; second, the earlier the Round Table Conference meets the better; third, the earlier the Round Table Conference winds up its proceedings in London the better. Referring to the various Sub-Committees which had been mentioned, Mr. Gandhi expressed himself as ignorant of their probable internal working and proceedings. But he felt that it will be necessary that all should hear the Congress view before the Committees proceed to their discussions. If these committees went on with their work now, it would be a handicap to Congress. The tentative conclusions reached in London were conclusions to which the Congress cannot at present subscribe. Congress must submit its considered view on the problems on which provisional views had been reached there. Mr. Gandhi, therefore, urged that no further steps should be taken before the Congress was fully heard. The Maharaja of Alwar asked whether Mr. Gandhi would be satisfied with a weak British delegation, Mr. Gandhi said ‘Yes’. He could well understand the inability of His Majesty’s Government to send the very best representatives to a Conference in India. He said he did not mind that. He felt that we should break the ground and arrive at some unanimous conclusions. We need not be always thinking of producing an effect on first-class politicians in England. That is desirable, but we are equally concerned in converting ourselves to unanimous conclusions and in concentrating upon ourselves. There are officials and communal communities here. They will remain here. They will not be transported to London. So, all things considered, it appeared to him to be necessary that a Conference should be held in India. Indians themselves have to come together and they could not come together under better auspices than those of Congress. Indians should find themselves and find where they are before going to London. Addressing Their Highnesses, he said that, if to his horror he found that they were divided among themselves, he would say let us not go to London. But if they agreed and were of one mind, he would proceed to London in the greatest hope and confidence and absolutely certain of making their own position felt and appreciated by Englishmen. Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya endorsed all that Mr. Gandhi had said. He said that England had never been faced with a greater problem and that it was necessary that the work already undertaken should be carried on with the least delay possible. English statesmen owed it to India that they should find or make time to come out to India. All parties should be represented. Let English statesmen so arrange their work in England that the best men could come to India. His Excellency should, he thought, make an appeal to English statesmen to that effect. The ultimate work of the Round Table Conference would, he thought, become easier if discussions first took place with the British delegation in India. An Indian delegation to London would be necessary only to give the thing its final shape.

His Excellency referred to two arguments—one used by Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya and one by Mr. Gandhi. As regards the former, he pointed out that the formulation of the united wish of India and its presentation to His Majesty’s Government did not necessitate the presence of British delegation in India and that such an idea was inconsistent with the general Conference idea of reaching agreements through discussion between British and Indian representatives. Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya explained that that had not been the intention of his remarks. As regards the point taken by Mr. Gandhi that until Congress had been fully heard no further steps should be taken, His Excellency enquired whether that referred to those special and expert investigations recommended by the Round Table Conference of which His Excellency had given a detailed account earlier. Mr. Gandhi explained that he did not object to these separate enquiries being carried on at once, but his objection was to the Federal Structure Committee meeting and continuing its explorations, until Congress had explored and declared its mind upon the general recommendations already made.

His Excellency thanked the gentlemen present for coming to the conference and for expressing their views. In the light of the statement recently made by the Secretary of State on behalf of His Majesty’s Government, he himself at this stage expressed no opinion about the coming of a British delegation from England, or on the situation which might arise if that did or did not happen. There might indeed be insurmountable difficulties in the way of such a procedure. But His Excellency hoped that if the best could not be attained, everyone would feel that we must be content with the next best method if we really meant to proceed by way of searching for agreement.

From a photostat: C.W. 9347. Courtesy: India Office Library

334. MY NOTES

A TERRIBLE ACCIDENT

Shri Chhaganlal Joshi writes:

Such accidents awaken us for a moment and later we fall into stupor again. As nature alone is responsible for this accident, we do not even get the satisfaction of blaming anyone for it.

In the event of such accidents, whom should we condole with? It is not one family alone but the entire nation that has been bereaved.

Such accidents will continue to occur. In a great struggle they are like drops in the ocean. Both the migrants and the neighbours seem to have made good use of this accident. The neighbours have rendered all possible help, the migrants have not given way to the least despair. In this manner, they have transformed a calamity into an occasion for purification and given us a reminder that death should be neither feared nor grieved over.

The Sardar and I salute the migrants and their neighbours.

“What God, World Teacher and Master has willed for the day, it is futile to grieve over.”

We have to march on towards our objective with our eyes shut tight.

UNTOUCHABILITY IN THE SUBURBS

In the meeting at Vile Parle, Swami Anand had included a sentence in his review especially in order to draw my attention to it. In the so-called national schools there, untouchables do not yet find a place. What a sad and shameful thing it is that even at the end of a twelve-month struggle this failing will persists. It may be said that the higher classes in the suburbs, after having done much, have washed it all off. Despite their contributing funds, going

1 The letter is not translated here. A fire had broken out in Isnav town which destroyed 19 marriage pandals. The afflicted farmers would not accept charity and showed great courage in facing the calamity.

2 Vide “Speech at Vile Parle, Bombay”, 18-3-1931.
to prison and running other risks, if they do not wash off the dirt in the form of untouchability, all else that they have accomplished may perhaps become barren. Under swaraj, public temples, public schools and public wells will be used equally by Brahmans and Bhangis. If this does not happen, it cannot be regarded as swaraj. Rather than win swaraj in name only, let us not get swaraj so long as untouchability persists. The victory of one who fights battle in the way of satyagraha consists in fighting itself, so that such a person will never compromise the rights of the untouchable in his impatience to grasp the fruit of swaraj.

TO THE MAHATMA GOING TO THE CONGRESS SESSION AT KARACHI

Where Gandhi is the guide, and Vallabhbhai the fighter there will always be victory, wisdom and prosperity.¹

For the Sardar and me, this couplet is not something by way of praise, but is a form of blessing. We are setting out at a difficult time. May these blessings bear fruit at such a time. They have been given by the aged Shri Narsinhraobhai. The programme at Vile Parle had commenced with these symbolic blessings. I pointed out to Narsinhraobhai that there was something comic too in it. He rejected this and said that the poem was the sincere outpouring of his heart, that there was no room in it for humour. God alone knows what we are. But in this country we should certainly wish for victory and prosperity, through whatever instrument it may come.

[From Gujarati]
_Navajivan_, 22-3-1931

335. OF PRINCES AND PAUPERS

The following question² was asked at the meeting of the Congress workers which took place in Vile Parle.

I have slightly enlarged the question, but I have not altered its sense. It is a good question and must occur to many minds. Let us consider it now.

If there was anything like Ramarajya in the world once, it

¹ Vide “Gandhi” has been substituted for “Krishna” and “Vallabhbhai” for “Arjuna”.

² “Swaraj of your dreams, as you say, will protect the rights of the haves as well as of the have-nots which in itself sounds contradictory. Their conflict is eternal. This may be the order of nature which you are seemingly opposing in vain.”
should be established again. I believe that Ramarajya did exist. Rama means the Panch; the Panch implies God, implies public opinion. When public opinion is not artificially created, it is pure. A government founded on public opinion is Ramarajya for that particular place. We find such a government in some places even today. Nowadays some landlords are competing with their tenants in the matter of simplicity, and are trying to become one with them. It is not as if all rulers are robbers. In my tours I have come across good ones as well as wicked ones. All owners are not heartless. It is true that I have not come across many instances of the wealthy acting as friends and protectors of the poor. It is also true that even in the instances that I have noticed, there is room for improvement. I have had these experiences under a government which I regard as demotic. But is it surprising that even in Lanka there was an exception in the person of Vibhishana? Where there is one such person, we can certainly hope for many more. When an exception is multiplied, it becomes the general rule. I have spoken here of what is possible, but the person who has posed the question would not be satisfied with this.

Satyagraha is an attempt to make the possible real. Truth implies justice. A just administration implies an era of truth or swaraj, dharma, Ramarajya or the people’s raj (democracy). Under such a government the ruler would be the protector and friend of his subjects. Between his way of life and that of the poorest of his subjects, there would not be such a gulf as there is today. There would be an appropriate similarity between the King’s palace and the hut of his subject. The difference between the needs of the two would be slight. Both would enjoy pure air and water. The subjects would get sufficient food. The ruler would give up eating fifty-six different kinds of delicacies and be satisfied with only six. If the poor use utensils made of wood or mud, the ruler may well use utensils made of such metals as brass. For the ruler who wants to use utensils of gold or silver must be robbing his subjects. The poor should be able to obtain sufficient clothing. Let the king have more clothes, but let not the difference be such as to cause envy. The children of both should be studying in the same primary school. The ruler should become a senior member of the family of the poor. If he does anything for the good of the poor, he should not regard it as a favour that he has conferred upon them. Benevolence has no place in dharma. It is the dharma of the ruler to serve the subjects. What has been said in regard to the ruler applies to all wealthy persons; likewise, it is the dharma of the poor not to bear malice towards the rich. That their poverty is largely due to their own fault, their own failings, is something that the poor should realize. Even while making an effort to improve their lot, the poor should bear no ill will towards the king, should not wish his ruin, but rather hope for his improvement. The poor should not cherish the desire to replace the monarch; but should be content with fulfilling their own needs. In the swaraj which I visualize, the two would help each other in this manner.

In my opinion, in order to win this swaraj, important changes have to be made in the education of both the ruler and the subjects. Both the robber and those who are being robbed are groping in darkness. They have lost their way. Neither should tolerate this situation. But this is something of which the ruling class or the wealthy class will not be easily convinced. I have chosen to serve the poor on the principle that if one party is convinced, the other will automatically be convinced. Everyone cannot become a ruler, but everyone can be subsumed under the heading “all”. And, swaraj would be here today if the poor become aware of their rights and at the same time of their duties. This awareness can be brought about by no other means as quickly as through satyagraha. We have had actual experience of this during the past twelve months. Our attainment of swaraj has been obstructed to the extent that corruption has crept into our satyagraha.

Satyagraha is the most important tool for the people’s education and awakening. Self-purification is another name for satyagraha. To the ruling class one may only speak of self-purification; it takes time for any impression to be made on it. The poorer classes constantly look for some comfort, they are already aware of their sufferings, but not of the remedy. Hence they try out remedies when someone suggests these to them. In such circumstances, if they can get a devoted worker, they cling to him and accept his remedies to the best of their abilities. Hence, from a particular standpoint this class may be regarded as being eager to learn. Swaraj can also be secured through it. It should become aware of its strength and yet make only a limited use of it. When this happens, the swaraj which I visualize may be regarded as having dawned. Having attained such strength, the people can successfully withstand any force—whether foreign or native—which stands in their way.

Hence the only dharma of workers is to serve the people. Public service can be rendered only through the path of truth and non-violence. The progress of the nation will be hindered to the extent to which corruption creeps in.

Meanwhile, if the ruling class and the rich recognize the demands of the age, they would cease to become owners of the wealth they own and their capacity to earn it and rather become its trustees and establish the right of the trustee to earn his living too. If they do not do so, ultimately a bitter struggle between the ruler and the subjects, between the rich and the poor is bound to ensue. In the hope that the force of satyagraha will check the poison, persons like me have sacrificed their all for that instrument.

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan, 22-3-1931

336. A DICTIONARY

Readers must be aware that the second edition of the dictionary published by the Vidyapith has come out. The novel feature of this new edition is that an attempt has been made in it to give in brief current meanings also. In order to compile a scientific and comprehensive dictionary, a Herculean effort and many lovers of the language are needed. This attempt of the Vidyapith is a preliminary step towards such a comprehensive dictionary. The price, which is Rs. 4, has been kept at the lowest. Copies can be had from the Principal of the Vidyapith by sending him a money order.

That errata had to be included in the dictionary is one of its drawbacks. But such shortcomings are inevitable at the present moment in our country. We are a poor nation, there is little love of language, compositors are only half-educated—errors persist because of many such reasons. I would suggest to those who use the dictionary to correct the errors before using it.

Despite its errors, I regard the dictionary as very useful. Those who love the language must write it with correct spellings. Not to do so is to show disrespect towards the language and it is also a sign of indolence. Where there is love, there is no room for indolence. However, despite this, if the tool is not there, how can even an enthusiast write correct spellings? Moreover, somewhat chaotic situation has prevailed in Gujarat, regarding spellings. The Vidyapith has ended such anarchy and, after having received the concurrence of as many learned men as possible, has adopted a uniform style of spelling. It is increasingly gaining acceptance day by day. I hope that libraries and such other institutions as also those States which accept the spellings of the Vidyapith will carry on propaganda for the dictionary. A copy of the dictionary should be found on the desk of every clerk and in every office.

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan, 22-3-1931

337. INTERVIEW TO “CHICAGO TRIBUNE”

DELHI,

[Before March 23, 1931]¹

The Mahatma is pledged not to say anything publicly which might prejudice the present negotiation, but he consented to discuss general questions.

My method is love and truth, and no force can avail against them. Ask me any question you like. I will answer if I can.

Q. Have you still faith in the British and in British promises?

A. I had faith in them until 1919. But the Amritsar massacre and other Punjab atrocities changed my heart, and nothing has happened since to make me regain my faith. Certainly, not in the past ten months. But my faith in my own people has increased, especially in the past ten months. Consider the part played by women and children in the present movement. The world has never seen such a magnificent spectacle before, especially the awakening amongst children.

Q. How do you account for the children?

It can only be the work of God. Certainly, God is with us in this struggle.

He spun away and talked on. He still stands, he said, for his eleven points which last year formed the minimum national demand, upon the granting of which by the Viceroy he offered to refrain from launching civil disobedience. They included the total prohibition of alcoholic drinks, the abolition of the salt tax, the reduction of land revenue and military expenditure by 50 per cent., the discharge of political prisoners and a prohibitive tariff on foreign cloth.

I still stand by them as the vital needs of India, and any constitution will be judged by its capacity to satisfy these demands. The situation, however, is changed and the method whereby I hope to attain them is accordingly subject to change.

¹ The interview took place at Dr. Ansari’s house before Gandhi left for Karachi.

Q. If you obtain swaraj would you consider your labours finished and retire, or would you take an active part in the reconstruction of India by the Indians?

I should like to take an active part in the reconstruction of my country provided I retain my health and vigour and my people's confidence in me and my methods. That, indeed, would be a labour of love.

Do you think most of India's ills will be solved with the coming of self-government?

Naturally not without trouble and difficulty. I have ever been optimistic.

Q. But the great social and economic questions, such as the relations of capital and labour, landlord and tenant, your own special communal problems and those of the depressed classes—do you think mere self-government will solve those so easily?

Yes, all those problems will be fairly easy to settle when we are our own masters. I know there are difficulties, but I have faith in our ultimate capacity to solve them, not by following your Western models, but by evolving along lines of non-violence and truth, whereon our movement is based and which must constitute the bedrock of our future constitution.

Q. How could a capitalist under those conditions stand for inequalities and injustices?

No, I think these problems will be solved quickly and successfully.

Q. And your languages? What about English under the nationalist government?

English would still be retained as a cultural language. It would be as useful to us as French to Europe. Hindustani would become the national language used in courts and universities. Native vernaculars, many of which possess rich literatures, and are spoken by 2,00,00,000 to 4,00,00,000 are to be encouraged.

It is not true that I would abolish schools. I am as anxious as any to maintain our great culture by education. But in our schools today we learn only what our foreign masters want us to learn. We do not get the training we most need.

Twenty-three years ago Gandhiji wrote a book, Indian Home Rule, which stunned India and the rest of the world with its terrible onslaught on modern Western civilization. “It is Satanic, and the Hindus call it the dark age,” he wrote, and... envisaged the ideal State with no factories, railways, armies or navies and as few hospitals, doctors, and lawyers as are possible.

Q. Have you changed your mind about these things?

Not a bit. My ideas about the evils of Western civilization still stand. If I republish the book tomorrow, I would scarcely change a word, except perhaps a few changes in the setting.

The Bombay Chronicle, 28-3-1931

338. LETTER TO VICEROY

1 DARYAGANI, DELHI,

March 23, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

It seems cruel to inflict this letter on you, but the interest of peace demands a final appeal. Though you were frank enough to tell me that there was little hope of your commuting the sentence of death on Bhagat Singh and two others, you said you would consider my submission of Saturday. Dr. Sapru met me yesterday and said that you were troubled over the matter and taxing your brain as to the proper course to adopt. If there is any room left for reconsideration, I invite you attention to the following.

Popular opinion rightly or wrongly demands commutation. When there is no principle at stake, it is often a duty to respect it.

In the present case the chances are that, if commutation is granted, internal peace is most likely to be promoted. In the event of execution, peace is undoubtedly in danger.

Seeing that I am able to inform you that the revolutionary party has assured me that, in the event of these lives being spared, that party will stay its hands, suspension of sentence pending cessation of revolutionary murders becomes in my opinion a peremptory duty.

Political murders have been condoned before now. It is worth while saving these lives, if thereby many other innocent lives are likely to be saved and maybe even revolutionary crime almost stamped out.

Since you seem to value my influence such as it is in favour of peace, do not please unnecessarily make my position, difficult as it is, almost too difficult for future work.

Execution is an irretrievable act. If you think there is the slightest chance of error of judgment, I would urge you to suspend for further review an act that is beyond recall.

If my presence is necessary, I can come. Though I may not speak¹ I may hear and write what I want to say.

“Charity never faileth.”

I am,

Your sincere friend,

From a photostat: C.W. 9343. Courtesy: India Office Library

339. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

DELHI,
March 23, 1931

I have to thank you for your letter² of 21st instant regarding non-payment of land revenue in the United Provinces. At my request Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru has prepared a note³ on the ques-

¹ Being Monday, a silence day. On the very day in his letter superscribed “confidential” the Viceroy wrote: “I have again thought very carefully over everything that you have said—and the last thing I should wish to do would be to make your task, especially at this juncture, more difficult. But I am afraid, for the reasons I sought to explain fully to you in conversation, I cannot see my way to feel that it would be right to take the action you request. . . .” (C.W. 9344)

² In which, alluding to the talks (vide “Emerson’s note on interview with Gandhiji”, 19-3-1931) which he had on March 19 with Gandhiji, Emerson had quoted a telegram received from the U. P. Government and written: “You will, I am sure, agree that if the facts are as stated, the spirit of the settlement is not being observed in this respect, and I feel confident that you will take the necessary steps to remove any cause for misunderstanding.”

³ Referring to this in his letter dated March 31, Emerson wrote: “It appears from the first paragraph of this note that Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru is under the impression that, during the course of the conversations between His Excellency and yourself, it was understood that, while the Congress would abandon the movement in the United Provinces against the payment of land revenue and rent as part of the civil disobedience movement, they would take an organized and active part in matters relating to the payment of land revenue and rent. I am to say that His Excellency’s recollection of the conversations is that, while you rightly pointed out that the abandonment of the movement against the payment of land revenue and rent would not affect the difficulties arising out of economic distress experienced by the zamindars and tenants in the payment of land revenue, respectively [and rent], there was no suggestion that the Congress intended to use their organization for the purposes indicated in the first paragraph of the Pandit’s note.

“In the conversations that you and I had on the matter I certainly did not gain the impression that this was the intention. I recollect observing that the question of economic distress was a matter of revenue administration to which the tion which I enclose herewith for your information. The action taken by the local Congress Committee as reflected in the note appears to me to be free from reproach. Naturally the propriety or otherwise of the action will depend upon the manner in which the whole thing is done. In my opinion all will be well if the local authorities do not repel the advances made by the Congress Committees and do not look upon their activities with suspicion. As you will observe from the note the whole scope of the movement is changed. It is no longer for non-payment of rent. It is a movement purely for seeking economic relief.

Young India, 20-8-1931

340. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

DELHI,
March 23, 1931

DEAR MR. EMERSON,

I thank you for your letter of 22nd instant regarding Congress action about foreign cloth. The draft questions and answers suggested by you seem to me to be in order.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

Home Department, Political, File No. 33/6, 1931. Courtesy: National Archives of India

341. STATEMENT ON EXECUTION OF BHAGAT SINGH AND COMRADES

NEW DELHI,
March 23, 1931

Bhagat Singh and his companions have been executed and have become martyrs. Their death seems to have been a personal loss to many. I join in the tributes paid to the memory of these young men. And yet I must warn the Youth of the country against following their Government of India and the local Government attached the greatest importance and that local Governments were alive to the necessity of giving such relief as the circumstances required.”

\(^1\) Vide “Letter from H.W. Emerson”, 22-3-1931.
example. We should not utilize our energy, our spirit of sacrifice, our labours and our indomitable courage in the way they have utilized theirs. This country must not be liberated through bloodshed.

About the Government I cannot help feeling that it has missed a golden opportunity, to win over the rebels to its side. At least from the point of view of the settlement, it was its duty to postpone indefinitely the carrying out of the death sentence. The Government has by its own act dealt a severe blow to the settlement and has shown its capacity to disregard public opinion once again and to exhibit the great brute strength it possesses.

The reliance on violence is perhaps ominous and it suggests that in spite of high-sounding and pious proclamations, it does not want to part with power. But the people’s duty is clear.

The Congress must not swerve from the path it has chalked out for itself. According to my view, notwithstanding the gravest provocation the Congress should endorse the settlement and test its capacity to secure the result hoped for.

We must not put ourselves in the wrong by getting angry. We must realize that commutation of the sentences was not a part of the truce. We may accuse the Government of violence but we cannot accuse it of breach of the settlement. It is my conviction that the grave blunder committed by the Government has increased our power to win freedom and Bhagat Singh and his comrades have embraced death therefor. Let us not throw away this opportunity by doing anything in anger. It is beyond dispute that there will be a general strike and we cannot honour the deceased patriots better than by taking out absolutely peaceful and dignified processions.

[From Gujarati]

Gujarati, 29-3-1931

342. INTERVIEW TO “MANCHESTER GUARDIAN”

[Before March 24, 1931]

Mahatma Gandhi has given an important interview to the special correspondent of the Manchester Guardian in India. According to the special correspondent Mahatma Gandhi declared in the interview that he was certain in mind that the Congress attendance at the Round Table Conference would serve no useful purpose unless the question of safeguards was re-opened on the basis of providing India with an efficient and stable form of self-government. Mahatma Gandhi says:

---

1 The interview appeared under the date-line “London, March 24, 1931”.
I have been very much disturbed by the tone of Mr. Benn’s statement with reference to safeguards. I must emphasize that the Round Table Conference cannot succeed if it is prejudiced by declarations which imply that certain demands made by Britain are final.

Referring to the debated question of equality of trade rights to Britishers in India, Mahatma Gandhi said :

The rights of the existing business interests must be a matter for negotiations in which India does not desire to act unfairly or ungenerously. India must retain freedom the future economic development of her resources along lines which commend themselves to Indians.

Discussing the question of Federation, Mahatma Gandhi declared that the princes must give their subjects a certain minimum of rights as it is impossible to combine complete autocracy and democracy.

_The Tribune, 27-3-1931_

343. LETTER TO MAHALAKSHMI M. THAKKAR

BORSAD,
March 24, 1931

CHIL. MAHALAKSHMI,

I had got your letter, but I could not reply to it earlier. You have given a good description of the work being done by you both sisters. What did you have in mind when saying that the atmosphere had become impure? I have been hearing many stories. That is why I ask you so that I may have more information. Visiting a drink addict daily and talking to him about the same thing over and over again does not help. Remember what I said in my speech at Maroli. You should take personal interest in the life of an addict and persuade him to take up some work. If he does not wish to spin, he may do some other work. You should encourage him to talk about his joys and sorrows and listen to him with sympathy. You should meet his wife and children, take the latter in hand and make them look more pleasant. If you serve him in this manner, he will probably give up drinking. Also you should not say that, if one of you gave all her time to one person, we cannot influence all the hundreds of thousands like him in the country in that manner. This is the only way to influence such a large number. If one person sincerely reforms himself, many others follow his example. By serving one person selflessly, we serve all.
I understand what you say about the children.
I don’t think Madhavji has committed any error. He has not informed me again about the court case against him.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 6812

344. QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

WHAT SHOULD THEY DO?

“What are those scholars who left their schools during the struggle to do now?” was one of the questions asked at the workers’ meeting in Bombay, but which for want of time I was unable to answer.

My answer now is:
1. The struggle is not yet over, it has assumed a different, i.e., constructive form.
2. Scholars can penetrate the homes and the hearts of the drunkard, the opium-eater and the user of foreign cloth.
3. Scholars can assist those sisters who are engaged in peaceful picketing.
4. Scholars can settle down in villages and there organize khadi work.
5. Scholars can hawk khadi in city.
6. All scholars should work at the wheel or the takli at least for half an hour daily.
7. For further reference they should write to the registrars of the national universities.

FOREIGN-CLOTH DEALERS

Another question asked was, now that picketing has become mild, new orders for foreign cloth are being given and the sales of existing stock are also brisk. What are you going to do to prevent this?

This question presupposes that picketing has hitherto amounted to coercion. If such was the case, it is better that freedom of action is restored than that any single person is coerced into acting against his will. My conviction is that if the workers will carry on sustained propaganda, the buying public will be converted. We have concentrated too much upon the dealers and too little on the buyers. Sustained public education in this matter is what is wanted. Conversion is our motto, not coercion.
Coercion is an offspring of violence. Conversion is a fruit of non-violence and love.

Can You Avoid Class War?

The third question, I find, is, if you will benefit the workers, the peasant and the factory hand, can you avoid class war?

I can, most decidedly, if only the people will follow the non-violent method. The past twelve months have abundantly shown the possibilities of non-violence adopted even as a policy. When the people adopt it as a principle of conduct, class war becomes an impossibility. The experiment in that direction is being tried in Ahmedabad. It has yielded most satisfactory results and there is every likelihood of its proving conclusive. By the non-violent method we seek not to destroy the capitalist, we seek to destroy capitalism. We invite the capitalist to regard himself as trustee for those on whom he depends for the making, the retention and the increase of his capital. Nor need the worker wait for his conversion. If capital is power, so is work. Either power can be used destructively or creatively. Either is dependent on the other. Immediately the worker realizes his strength, he is in a position to become a co-sharer with the capitalist instead of remaining his slave. If he aims at becoming the sole owner, he will most likely be killing the hen that lays golden eggs. Inequalities in intelligence and even opportunity will last till the end of time. A man living on the banks of a river has any day more opportunity of growing crops than one living in an arid desert. But if inequalities stare us in the face the essential equality too is not to be missed. Every man has an equal right to the necessaries of life even as birds and beasts have. And since very right carries with it a corresponding duty and the corresponding remedy for resisting any attack upon it, it is merely a matter of finding out the corresponding duties and remedies to vindicate the elementary fundamental equality. The corresponding duty is to labour with my limbs and the corresponding remedy is to non-co-operate with him who deprives me of the fruit of my labour. And if I would recognize the fundamental equality, as I must, of the capitalist and the labourer, I must not aim at his destruction. I must strive for his conversion. My non-co-operation with him will open his eyes to the wrong he may be doing. Nor need I be afraid of someone else taking my place when I have non-co-operated. For I expect to influence my co-workers so as not to help the wrongdoing of employer. This kind of education of the mass of workers is no doubt a slow process, but as it is also the surest, it is necessarily the quickest. It can be easily demonstrated that destruction of the capitalist must mean destruction in the end of the worker and as no human being is so bad as to be beyond redemption, no human being is so perfect as to warrant his destroying him whom he wrongly considers to be wholly evil.

WHAT OF THE UNEMPLOYED

The fourth question was, what of the civil-resistance prisoners who are discharged and are out of employment?

If they are willing to work and are honest they can, I doubt not, be employed in some Congress organization. Nor need everyone look to the Congress and the allied organizations to give them employment. A labourer is worthy of his hire. And those who are honest and do not mind labouring, no matter what they were previous to imprisonment, can always rely upon being suited.

SACRIFICING COUNTRY FOR TRUTH

Here is the fifth question:

How can you explain away your inconsistency involved in your making fond and easy advances to the R.T.C. after the Congress deciding not to participate in it, and Jawaharlal ironically calling them only a few months ago ‘old women’?

Are you always going to sacrifice your country for Truth and treat us like test-tubes in your experiment of non-violence and Truth? Do you realize that you are staking the whole nation for your individual self-evolution?

Many of us feel that you have become a National Habit which is useful for the capitalist but tragic for the exploited.

Manners change with the times. Foolish consistency is the hob goblin of little minds.” If I am inconsistent I am wisely so. But I see no inconsistency between my present conduct and the past. There never was any question of permanent boycott of the Round Table Conference. The Congress refused when it could not go there on its terms, it may go now because in its opinion the way is open. And I hope that those who go will deliver the nation’s message in no uncertain tones. Here there is no question of my ‘sacrificing the country for Truth’. In the first place the decision is that of the Working Committee and in the second place there is no sacrifice of the country. But writing parentheticaly I have no hesitation in saying that I should, if there could be such a choice, most decidedly sacrifice the country for Truth which to me is God. I further hold that no individual or nation has ever gained by the sacrifice of Truth, there therefore, no such thing as sacrifice of country for Truth.
Those who join me in my experiments in Truth-seeking are not my ‘test-tubes’, they are my valued fellow-workers, sharing with me the joy that the search for Truth brings as no other search does.

I do not realize that I am ‘staking a whole nation for self-evolution’. For self-evolution is wholly consistent with a nation’s evolution. A nation cannot advance without the units of which it is composed advancing and, conversely, no individual can advance without the nation of which he is a part also advancing.

The last charge is thoughtlessly made. My experiments began in South Africa and they were made on behalf of the exploited. The latter gained. They gained again in Champaran, Kheda and Ahmedabad. If I may share the merit of the first Borsad campaign, brilliantly fought by Sardar Vallabhbhai during my absence but in strict accord with my prescription, and then again in Bardoli, I may say that the peasants had the benefit of the two fights. What may be the last experiment on a nation-wide scale is still being tried. It is yet too soon to forecast the result. But he who runs may see that the phenomenal mass awakening cannot have taken place without the masses having added considerably to their stature. This recital has not been made here to claim credit for myself. I am but an humble instrument in the hands of God. Credit belongs to Truth and non-violence. The writer’s question seems to doubt the efficacy of Truth and more perhaps of non-violence. The series of examples I have given ought to set at rest all doubt. If we were offering civil disobedience, it was for gaining purna swaraj and if now we have suspended it and are ready to join the Round Table Conference, other conditions being fulfilled, we shall be going to it also for the same noble end. That we may fail to achieve the end is quite possible. Even so we shall be putting ourselves in the wrong if we rejected the advance made by the Government. If we make the right use of suspension, if we carry out the terms of the settlement to the fullest extent possible, if we complete the two boycotts, if we intensify the khadi spirit, at the end of the period of grace we shall find ourselves stronger for battle, if we have not by then already gained our end. We must work away with faith in the settlement leading us to our goal.

Young India, 26-3-1931

345. THE GIANT AND THE DWARF

The reader’s attention is invited to Sjt. Walchand Hirachand’s letter published elsewhere. It has undergone some corrections in order to represent my views correctly. The discussion to which the letter refers arose out of the formula that “there should be no discrimination between the rights of the British mercantile community, firms and companies trading in India and the rights of Indian born subjects.” The formula reads innocent enough but it covers the most dangerous position.

The situation today is this. The Britisher is the top-dog and the Indian the under-dog in his own country. In the administration of the country, the Indian generally is a mere clerk. In business he is at best a commission agent getting hardly five per cent against his English principal’s 95 per cent. In almost every walk of life the Englishman by reason of his belonging to the ruling class occupies a privileged position. It can be said without fear of contradiction and without any exaggeration that he has risen upon the ruin of India’s commerce and industries. The cottage industry of India had to perish in order that Lancashire might flourish. The Indian shipping had to perish so that British shipping might flourish. In a word we were suppressed in order to enable the British to live on the heights of Simla. It was not a mere picturesque expression of Gokhale’s when he said that our growth was stunted. To talk then of no discrimination between Indian interests and English or European is to perpetuate Indian helotage. What is equality of rights between a giant and a dwarf? Before one can think of equality between unequals, the dwarf must be raised to the height of the giant. And since millions living on the plains cannot be translated to the heights of Simla, it follows that those entrenched in those heights must descend to the plains. The process may seem harsh but it is inevitable if the millions of the plains are to be equals of the privileged few.

It is to be feared therefore that before we reach the state of equality, the levelling process will have to be gone through. Justice demands this. It will be a misnomer to call the process one of racial discrimination. There is no such question. There is room enough in our country for every British man, woman and child, if they will shed their privileged position and share our lot. They must then exchange the British army and the force of the cities for the goodwill of a whole nation, which is at their disposal for the asking. Our goodwill is the truest safeguard that we can offer to them and I make bold to say that will be infinitely better and more dignified both of us. In the process there will be apparent discrimination felt everywhere. It need not be felt by those who realize that the present is a wrong and unnatural

¹ Vide “Interview to merchants’ deputation”, 17-3-1931.
To show that no racial discrimination is involved in this demand one has only to state that Indians who occupy entrenched positions behind their British patrons will also be expected to come to the level of their brethren of the plains. The true formula therefore should be this. In order to remove the existing unnatural inequalities the privileges of the ruling class and those others who have shared them shall be reduced so as to reach a state of equality between all classes and communities.

On the Indian side it must be a point of honour with us to hold British lives and honour as sacred as our own. This does not, need not, mean the ruin of British trade or interest. Those who are resident can rely on their disciplined habits, trained intellect, great industry and powers of organization to carve out for themselves careers of distinction all the while serving the country of their adoption with the loyalty they have tendered to their own motherland.

British trade where it is not hurtful to India’s interest can be placed, when we reach a state of honourable association, on a favoured basis. And an India free from exploitation from within and without must prosper with astonishing rapidity. With growing prosperity, her wants must grow. With her growing wants, must grow also her imports. If at that time Britain is a partner or ally, she may well become India’s chief supplier.

That is a dream I should love to realize. I have been party to the settlement for the realization of that dream. I seek every Englishman’s help to enable India to gain that end. My notion of purna swaraj is not isolated independence but healthy and dignified independence. My nationalism, fierce though it is, is not exclusive, is not devised to harm any nation or individual. Legal maxims are not so legal as they are moral. I believe in the eternal truth of sic utere tuo ut alienum non laedas.

Young India, 26-3-1931

---

1 “Use thy own property so as not to injure thy neighbour’s.”
346. INTERVIEW TO THE PRESS

KARACHI,
March 26, 1931

I failed in my efforts to bring about the commutation of the death sentences on Bhagat Singh and his friends, and that is why the young men vented their wrath against me. I was quite prepared for it.
Although they were incensed against me, they gave vent to their wrath in what I would call a most dignified manner. It was open to them to do physical injury but they refrained from doing so. It was open to them to insult me in many other ways, but they confined their resentment and insult to handing me black cloth flowers representing,
I imagine, the ashes of the three patriots. These also they could have showered on me or thrown at me instead of which they gave me the option of receiving the flowers from their hands which I did gratefully. Of course, they shouted, “Down with Gandhism”, “Go back Gandhi”. This I consider to be a legitimate expression of their anger. Having been used to such an exhibition and that in a much worse and in more serious form, I was unruffled and took these insults as only a mild expression of their deep grief and consequent anger. I am only hoping that they will exercise the restraint that they did yesterday throughout the Congress session for they know I am trying to reach the same goal with them. Only I am following a method wholly different from theirs. I have not a shadow of a doubt that as time goes they will discover the error of their ways. Whatever may be true of other countries, in this country which is teeming with famished millions the cult of violence can have no meaning. In this country of self-suppression and timidity almost bordering on cowardice we cannot have too much bravery, too much self-sacrifice. One’s head bends before Bhagat Singh’s bravery and sacrifice. But I want the greater bravery, if I might say so without offending my young friends, of the meek, the gentle and the non-violent, the bravery that will mount the gallows without injuring, or harbouring any thought of injury to a single soul.

Does the execution of Bhagat Singh and his friends alter your position in any way with regard to the settlement?

1 Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter”
2 Gandhiji refers to the demonstration by members (wearing red shirts) of Naujawan Bharat Sabha, on his arrival at Malir station near Karachi; vide also “Speech at Karachi congress”, 26-3-1931.
My own personal position remains absolutely the same, though the provocation has been of the most intense character. I must confess that the staying of these executions was no part of the truce, and so far as I am concerned, no provocation offered outside the terms will deflect me from the path I had mapped out when I agreed to the settlement.

Do you not think it impolitic to forgive a government which has been guilty of a thousand murders?

I do not know a single instance where forgiveness has been found so wanting as to be impolitic.

But no country has ever shown such forgiveness as India is showing to Britain?

That does not affect my reply. What is true of individuals is true of nations. One cannot forgive too much. The weak can never forgive. Forgiveness is the attribute of the strong.

Young India, 2-4-1931

347. STATEMENT ON KANPUR RIOTS

KARACHI,
March 26, 1931

Gandhiji who was at the Working Committee meeting was informed of the state of affairs in Cawnpore by the representative of the Associated Press and he made the following statement:

The Working Committee which is sitting at the time of giving this message having read the report of the awful communal strife going on in Cawnpore has felt troubled and grieved over the events there. I cannot too strongly condemn this strife. A committee will certainly investigate the causes, but indications have been coming in from other sources also to show that the slightest thing disturbs the mental balance. I can only hope that the poison will not be allowed to stay and that people will remain calm and not allow the harmonious relations to be disturbed. I hope also that the local leaders in Cawnpore will put their heads together and quickly restore peace. Let it be remembered by those who are in a hurry to achieve India’s freedom that every such strife makes progress towards the goal more and more difficult.

The Bombay Chronicle, 27-3-1931
348. REPLY TO INDIAN MERCHANTS’ ASSOCIATIONS, KARACHI

March 26, 1931

A deputation of Indian merchants of Karachi representing Buyers’ and Shippers’ Chambers and Indian Merchants’ Association led by Mr. Jamshed Mehta waited on the Congress Working Committee this morning, in connection with the demand of British commercial interests for equality of trading rights with Indians.

Gandhiji who replied on behalf of the Working Committee stated that the Congress needed no urging in that connection and would take all possible steps to get the clause about the equality of trading rights totally rescinded. The Congress, he added, felt even more strongly on the question than the merchants themselves and would certainly go further than the demand put forward by the deputationists in safeguarding Indian interests.

Gandhiji compared the demand for equality of the powerful British commercial community with Indians, as a demand on behalf of an elephant to be on equal plane with an ant. Gandhiji said he had dealt with the question in Young India in connection with a letter addressed by Mr. Walchand Hirachand regarding the interview a Bombay merchant had with him. Gandhiji said it however was not possible nor politic to exaggerate the power of Congress as was seen in the case of Bhagat Singh and his comrades whose execution the Congress has been helpless to prevent, despite their best efforts.

But on behalf of the Congress he wanted to assure the deputationists that whether it was Dominion Status, or anything else, any constitution which impaired in any way the right of the future Indian Parliament to discriminate against non-national, whenever necessary, as in the national, interest, was worthless and would not be acceptable to the Congress. Gandhiji added that the assurance was a pledge. On his part he urged the Indian mercantile community to play a greater part in national struggle than what they had hitherto done and suggested them to treat the poorer sections of the people, including labourers and untouchables, as their own kith and kin.

The Bombay Chronicle, 27-3-1931

349. SPEECH AT KARACHI CONGRESS

March 26, 1931

The first speech in the Congress pandal, or the inauguration address if I may so call it, was delivered by Gandhiji on the 26th, when a vast audience listened to him

1 As reported by Mahadev Desai, under the title “Under the Canopy of Heaven” spellbound. The canopy of heaven, under which the Congress is meeting for the first time in its history, lent not only special charm and colour to the address, but also a rare inspiration, to which the great silence around him also contributed. This is how he began:

We are accustomed to think of heaven as the Kingdom of God. We imagine that He sends us His messages and commands from above and we thus establish communion with Him. Until now we had a screen between God and us. I am thankful that the Reception Committee has rent it asunder and put us into direct communion with God. Let us not now by allowing impurities to creep in create a fresh screen and let us commence our business with this communion as our valuable asset. We have chosen for our march towards freedom the ancient path of truth and non-violence, and we must let God’s covenant that those who tread on the strait and narrow path shall never come to grief inspire us with faith and hope.

By the executions the Government have given the nation grave cause for provocation. It has shocked me too inasmuch as my negotiations and talks had made me entertain a distant hope that Bhagat Singh, Rajguru and Sukhdev might be saved. I am not surprised that young men are angry with me for not having been able to save them. But I have no reason to be angry with them. For one thing, this is not the first occasion of its kind in my life. It is the duty of him who claims to serve humanity not to be angry with those whom he is serving. As for myself non-violence being my creed, I cannot afford to be angry with anybody. But even if it is not his creed, it is the duty of a genuine servant not to be angry with his masters. Anger ought to be taboo with him. But if he cannot help being angry, he must abdicate his function as servant of humanity. For one do not want to do so and therefore I said they had a right to be angry, not I. But I must tell them I had been serving the peasants and workers long before the young men were born. I have lived amongst them, cast my lot with them. Ever since I took the pledge of service, I have dedicated my head to humanity. It is the easiest thing in the world to chop off my head, it does not take the slightest preparation or organization. And outside protection I have never sought. In fact it is futile to think of protecting me for I know that God Almighty is the only Protector. Having said this, let me declare that the demonstrations\(^1\) of the young men yesterday far from making me angry delighted me, inasmuch as there was no discourtesy about them.

\(^1\) On Ghandiji’s arrival at Malir station
They might have laid hands on me; instead, they formed my bodyguard and escorted me to my car. I must confess that when I saw them, I felt that my experiences in South Africa, where I was mobbed and assaulted, were going to be repeated.

But there was no cause for apprehension. The young men were simply shouting, “Gandhi go back”, “Down with Gandhism”. They had a right to do so inasmuch as they thought that I had not done everything in my power to save Bhagat Singh, or that being a believer in ahimsa, I had simply neglected Bhagat Singh and his comrades. But they had no intention to molest me or for the matter of that anyone else. They allowed everyone to pass, and then a young man handed to me flowers made of black cloth. They might have thrown them on me and insulted me, but they had no such intention. Flowers are given me everywhere, I am usually indifferent about them, even when they are received from dear sisters and sometimes even chide them for wasting the flowers on me. But these I seized and have treasured them. I shall also tell you what I want to do with them. If the young men come and tell me that they should not have been angry and that their suspicions about me were groundless and that therefore they want the flowers returned to them, I shall gladly give them back. But if they do not do so, they will be sent to the Ashram to be preserved as heirlooms.

Those young men wanted to proclaim to the world that however great the Mahatma may be, they were sure that he was doing harm to India. I think they had a right to expose me, if they felt that I was betraying the country. I want you to understand my attitude. I cannot behave otherwise with these young men inasmuch as I want to win them over by love. Having flung aside the sword, there is nothing except the cup of love which I can offer to those who oppose me. It is by offering that cup that I expect to draw them close to me. I cannot think of permanent enmity between man and man, and believing as I do in the theory of rebirth, I live in the hope that if not in this birth, in some other birth I shall be able to hug all humanity in friendly embrace.

I have dwelt at length on this little episode, in order that you may not think ill of the young men. Do not seek to protect me. The Most High is always there to protect us all. You may be sure that when my time is up, no one, not even the most renowned physician in the world, can stand between Him and me.

And now a message for the young men. If you want my service, do not disown me come and understand everything from me. You must know that it is against my creed to punish even a murderer, a thief or a dacoit. There can be therefore no excuse for suspicion that I did not want to save Bhagat Singh. But I want you also to realize Bhagat Singh’s error. If I had had an opportunity of speaking to Bhagat Singh and his comrades, I should have told them that the way they pursued was wrong and futile. I declare that we cannot win swaraj for our famishing millions, for our deaf and dumb, for our lame and crippled, by the way of the sword. With the Most High as witness I want to proclaim this truth that the way of violence cannot bring swaraj, it can only lead to disaster. I wish to tell these young men with all the authority with which a father can speak to his children that the way of violence can only lead to perdition. I shall explain to you why. Do you think that all the women and the children who covered themselves with glory during the last campaign would have done so if we had pursued the path of violence? Would they have been here today? Would our women known as the meekest on earth, would women like Gangabehn, who stood the lathi-blows until her white sari was drenched in blood, have done the unique service they did if we had violence in us? With God’s name on their lips she and her sisters hurled defiance at their oppressors, without anger in their hearts. And our children—our vanarasena (monkey-army). How could you have had these innocent ones, who renounced their toys, their kites and their crackers, and joined as soldiers of swaraj—how could you have enlisted them in a violent struggle? We were able to enlist as soldiers millions of men, women and children because we were pledged to non-violence. I beseech the young men to have patience and self-control. Anger cannot take us forward. We need not consider the English-men as our enemies. I have used satyagraha against them but have never thought of them as enemies. I want to convert them and the only way is the way of love. Rowdy demonstrations cannot help us. Could they call Bhagat Singh back to life? They can only retard the advent of swaraj. I agree that the Government has given sufficient cause for provocation, but I want the impatient youth in the name of God, in the name of our dear Motherland, to throw themselves heart and soul in the non-violent struggle. I ask them to trust my unbroken experience of forty years of the practice of non-violence.

But if they will not, they might kill me but they cannot kill Gandhism. If Truth can be killed Gandhism can be killed. If non-violence can be killed Gandhism can be killed. For what is Gandhism but winning swaraj by means of truth and non-violence? Will they refuse swaraj attained through truth and non-violence? I ask them therefore not to mar the wonderful work done by the workers of Sind. The workers have in the course of three weeks created this Congressnagar, so that swaraj for the peasant, the labourer, the scavenger—all of whom have worked cheek by jowl in creating this city of huts—the lame and the blind, the starving and the well-fed, the wretch and the poor, may soon be a living reality. I beseech you not to mar the beautiful work they have done.

This leads me to the events in Cawnpore which has been a scene of carnage. This is due largely to the violence we had harboured against one another. It is the handwriting on the wall. Though we have shown ourselves capable of limited non-violence, we have harboured violence in our hearts, we have been guilty of using coercion. The papers allege that Cawnpore Hindus went mad over Bhagat Singh’s martyrdom and started with intimidating the Mussalmans who would not close their shops in Bhagat Singh’s honour. You know the sequel. I am quite sure that if the spirit of Bhagat Singh is watching what is happening in Cawnpore today, he would feel deeply humiliated and ashamed. I say this for I have heard him described as a man of honour. And what havoc we have done! Women insulted! Children done to death! Let no Hindu comfort himself with the thought that they were Mussalman children; let no Mussalman feel happy in the knowledge that it is Hindu children who have been killed. I do not know their religion. Let it be recognized that both Hindus and Mussalmans had lost their senses. They were all children of the soil, children of our common Motherland.

I have felt deeply ashamed of these deeds of blood, and to who-ever my voice may reach I wish to declare that such things may any day prove more than I can bear. How can we, with Hindus and Mussalmans slaughtering one another, continue to assert that we have been non-violent? How can I, a votary of truth, hug the belief that we as a nation are non-violent if the mischief spreads? If I did so, I would be untrue to myself and to my Maker. With carnage going on about me I cannot bear to live unconcerned. Let me declare, that as soon as I feel that life is unbearable, I should hope to have the courage to fast myself to death rather than witness these blood feuds. You know by this time that I cannot bear denial of pledges solemnly and voluntarily undertaken. I would sooner be dead than see merchants and others break their pledged word, than see those calling themselves Congressmen and swearing by the creed of the Congress break it in their hearts or openly. If I can witness this contradiction with equanimity, with what face can I stand before the world and my Maker? He will tell me I have been living a life of falsehood, a life of sham and fraud. I may not deceive myself and the world. Every moment of my existence is dedicated to the winning of swaraj by means of truth and non-violence.

I know you will say that that sort of thing has been going on all these years, and I have done nothing to stop it. Penances with me are no mechanical acts. They are done in obedience to the inner voice. I am telling you what has been going on within me all these days. The crisis may never come, either because I am unnecessarily agitated, or because I have lost courage to face reality. I must be true to my Maker, and the moment I feel that life is insupportable for me, I hope not to be found wanting. What better reparation can I do than willing surrender of the body that has ceased to evoke response and may be a hindrance to the discovery of the true way?

As he was about to close, the question mentioned above was asked him not by one who wanted to be cantankerous but by one who wanted everything to be known to the public. He replied:

Well, I was not on my defence, and so I did not bother you with the details of what I did to save Bhagat Singh and his comrades. I pleaded with the Viceroy as best I could. I brought all the persuasion at my command to bear on him. On the day fixed for the final interview with Bhagat Singh’s relations I wrote a personal letter to the Viceroy on the morning of 23rd. I poured my whole soul into it, but to no avail. I might have done one thing more, you say. I might have made the commutation a term of the settlement. It could not be so made. And to threaten withdrawal would be a breach of faith. The Working Committee had agreed with me in not making commutation a condition precedent to truce. I could therefore only mention it apart from the settlement. I had hoped for magnanimity. My hope was not to materialize. But that can be no ground for breaking the settlement.

And it was not I alone who did what was humanly possible. The revered friend Panditji and Dr. Sapru tried their best. But why should that failure worry us? Success is in God’s hands. Our failure should spur us to greater effort. That effort lies in being true to ourselves, in Hindus and Mussalmans determining to live as brothers in heart unity, merchants and others keeping their voluntary pledges, in workers eschewing violence in thought, word and deed. May God help us to

---

1 Given as sub-title in the source, which read: “What Did You Do to Save Bhagat Singh?”
mend our ways. May He help us to be strong enough to be true to ourselves and to Him.

Young India, 2-4-1931

350. LETTER TO RUKMINI BAZAJ

KARACHI,
March 27, 1931

CHI. RUKMINI,

I got your letter. You should not expect a reply from me every time. You yourself, however, should write regularly. As for my programme, I intend to reach Delhi on the 4th. My health is fairly good. Everyone is all right. Radha keeps well on the whole. Keshu has come here.

PRABHAVATI FOR BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati : C.W. 9293. Courtesy : Benarsilal Bazaj

351. INTERVIEW TO CONGRESS WORKERS

KARACHI,
March 27, 1931

On the question of Federation, Gandhiji, in the course of his conference with workers who interviewed him, is reported to have expressed his view that the Congress should not put express conditions because the Princes were shy and were likely to be frightened. He was not prepared to allow the Princes to break away by the Congress insisting on too many conditions precedent. But he was going to use his influence with the Princes, if necessity arises, to make them recognize the need for satisfying the States people’s claims to a reasonable extent.

Gandhiji continues to feel that he is not able yet to see light in respect of the communal settlement and appears to think that the Congress would be well advised not to say anything definitely about it.

Among the earliest interviewers today were Mr. Subhas Bose and Mr. Satyamurti, both of whom pressed for insisting on the release of all prisoners sentenced in connection with the civil disobedience movement, the former going further and urging release of all Bengal detenus.

Gandhiji is reported to have assured them that there was no need to make any express conditions in these matters, because he had always insisted upon these things in his conversations with the Viceroy and he was satisfied that, after some time, all prisoners would be released.Delay might be due to the administrative difficulties or even dilatory tactics on the part of local officialdom. If the Congress found, after a reasonable time, that all prisoners who came within the pact were not released, it would certainly be justified in breaking the pact.

The Hindu, 28-3-1931

352. SPEECH ON KANPUR RIOTS, SUBJECTS COMMITTEE MEETING, KARACHI

March 27, 1931

Let us not try to apportion the blame. Let us forget the fact that we are Hindus and Mussalmans. Let us remember that we are Indians, and the shame of Cawnpore is the shame of India. As for the Hindus, however, newspapers say that it was likely that Hindus were more to blame. And what for was all this carnage? How could we go so mad? I am grieved to have to inform you that Sjt. Ganesh Shankar Vidyarthi is reported to be missing or killed. Who would not be grieved over the death of such a genuine and earnest selfless comrade? But there is another view of the case. Rather than that a number of insignificant poor Hindus be killed, is it not well that a leader like Ganesh Shankar should have been killed? Rather than the death of a number of hapless poor Mussalmans, would not the death of Dr. Ansari in the cause of peace or unity be more welcomed? For the knife in Dr. Ansari’s body would act as the knife in the bodies of us all. It was therefore fortunate that Ganesh Shankar Vidyarthi, who was so eminently free from communal bias, who was an institution in himself, and who was the foremost worker of the place, should have laid down his life in the cause of peace. Let his great example be an inspiration to us all, let it awaken us to our sense of duty. I ask you to give your anxious consideration to the matter and help in the solution of the vexed question. Let the shame of Cawnpore teach us a lesson so that we may feel that even the loss of 300 men and women was not too high a price to be paid for permanent peace.

Young India, 2-4-1931

---

1 Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter”
A few representatives of the Red Shirts waited in deputation on Gandhiji and he had a long heart-to-heart talk with them. They explained that it was never their intention to do any physical harm to him, that his life and his health were as dear to them as to anyone else, and that individual terrorism was not their creed. They were adamant in their quarrel with the truce which, they believed, can never lead them to their goal of Workers’ and Peasants’ Free Republic in India. Gandhiji said:

But my dear young men, go and see Bihar and you will find a workers’ and peasants’ republic working there. Where there was fear and slavery ten years ago, there is courage and bravery and resistance to wrong. If you want capital to be extinct or you want to abolish moneyed men or the capitalists, you will never succeed. What you must do is to demonstrate to the capitalists the power of labour and they will consent to be the trustees of those who toil for them. I do not want anything more for workers and peasants than enough to eat and house and clothe themselves and live in ordinary comfort as self-respecting human beings. After that condition of things is brought about the brainiest among them will certainly manage to acquire more wealth than the rest. But I have told you what I want. I want the rich to hold their riches in trust for the poor or to give them up for them. Do you know that I gave up all my property when I founded Tolstoy Farm? Ruskin’s Unto This Last inspired me and I built my farm on those lines. You will now recognize that I am, so to say, a "foundation member" of your peasants’ and workers’ republic. And what do you prize more, wealth or work? Supposing you were to be stranded in the desert of Sahara with cart-loads of money, how would it help you? But if you can work you may not have to go hungry. How then is wealth to be preferred to work? Go and see for yourselves the Labour Union of Ahmedabad at work and see how they are trying to establish a republic of their own.

Q. Punjab is goonda-raj, Mahatmaji. Where do find the change of heart?
A. But I never said that there had been a change of heart on the part of the Government.

Q. Why then did you give such a certificate to Lord Irwin?

---

1 Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter”
2 From The Bombay Chronicle, 28-3-1931
A. Just as I have given a certificate to you, young men! I have admired your self-restraint, though I disapprove of your action against me. In the same way I was struck with Lord Irwin’s frankness, sincerity and friendliness and I paid a tribute to it. That was nothing unusual for me. There was no question of a change of heart. The settlement I had never regarded as an indication of change of heart, and so the executions did not alter the position. But I should certainly have given Government credit for some change of heart if they had commuted the sentences.

Young India, 2-4-1931

354. SPEECH ON PROVISIONAL SETTLEMENT, SUBJECTS COMMITTEE MEETING, KARACHI

March 28, 1931[^1]

Gandhiji spoke both in the Subjects Committee and the open Congress on the resolution on provisional settlement. Here is a report of the English speech in the Subjects Committee:

Though the resolution before you is very brief, I venture to suggest to you that it is very comprehensive and capable of passing the most rigorous test that a man who believes in complete independence can exact. The resolution makes it incumbent upon any delegation that may take part in the Conference deliberations to bear in mind the Congress goal, or as it is called the Congress objective of purna swaraj as stated in the Lahore resolution, and not in the Madras resolution which was a pious wish. Purna swaraj is not a pious wish today. Purna swaraj is the incessant yearning of the soul of the nation which is impatient to get it, and its impatience was demonstrated during the past twelve months. And so it is the immediate objective that the delegation has got to keep in view in agreeing to any single thing that may happen in the Conference. But that is not enough. Some idea or some inkling of purna swaraj or complete independence has also been given here as essential, and so it is incumbent upon your delegation to obtain control over the defence forces, etc.

[^1]: Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s report under the title, “Gandhiji on the Main Resolutions”

[^2]: From The Hindu, 29-3-1931

[^4]: For the text of the resolution, vide “Resolution on provisional settlement”, 29-3-1931.
But the trap—or sting as you would call it—is in the tail of the resolution: “Provided, however, the Congress delegation would be free to accept such adjustments as may be necessary in the interests of India.” Now in this there is a trap and there is no trap. There is no trap if you will choose your delegation well and trust it. There is a trap because ‘adjustments’ is really synonymous with ‘safeguards’. The principle of safeguards is accepted in the terms of the settlement, but the safeguards that might be accepted have to be in the interests of India, and they must be demonstrably necessary, not merely absolutely necessary as it has been suggested in one of the many amendments. Demonstrably for our purpose is a superior word to absolutely. I have given my meaning of the ‘safeguards’ very fully elsewhere¹ and I will not dilate upon it.

Having said this, I want to say something about another amendment that has been suggested, that whatever action the delegates may take should be subject to ratification by a special session of the Congress or by the All-India Congress Committee. I venture to suggest to you with all the force at my command, that this is not only unnecessary but unbecoming of a Congress that has lived progressively for the past 45 years and has acquired a prestige unrivalled by any other organization in India and a prestige now acquired by it throughout the world. Surely this Congress is not so poor as not to be able to produce representatives who can fully represent the Congress at any conference or any assembly. Therefore if you send your delegation, that delegation should have the same powers as if the whole Congress was being transported to the Conference. Without that matters such as those that confront us really cannot be adjusted. We will be one among many parties. Those who go to the Conference are expected to have full credentials and full authority to bind their principals. But if they go there and have to say, ‘We have come here, we will discuss; but we cannot bind our principals, we shall have to refer to our principals’, the procedure becomes interminable, cumbrous and wholly ineffective for the purpose in view. Hence it is absolutely necessary not to put any such proviso as has been suggested.

What is the position of the Congress, inter se? What is the position of the Congress with reference to the intermediate bodies, the All-India Congress Committee and the Working Committee? Although the committees are given a general power of attorney to act on behalf of the Congress, still the right of repudiation is a right of which the Congress can never divest itself. No organization or no principal can really divest himself of this right. The power of attorney to be given to your delegation is to act within the four corners of this resolution. So long as your delegation acts within the four corners of this power of attorney, it would be improper for you to repudiate them. If they go beyond this resolution, you have every right to repudiate them. That is one thing. But the more effective repudiation comes into play when they have turned traitors and have sold your cause, or when they have become so idiotic, so unintelligent as not to be able to see the many traps that might have been laid for them and thus fall into one of these traps. Even then they would have gone outside the four corners of their power of attorney. In that case, you have absolute right to repudiate all that they may have done, and that power is good against the whole world. The power of repudiation is absolute if your agents act outside the power that you give them. You may take it from me that this is the legal position, if I may so call it. Hence I suggest to you that it is not only superfluous, not only unnecessary, for you to attach the condition of ratification to this resolution, it is unbecoming of you to do so. It will really hamper the progress of the very thing you want them to do. Therefore I hope you will, without entering upon any further discussion, withdraw this particular amendment.

¹ Vide “Interview to Journalists”, 6-3-1931.

I would next suggest to you, if you will follow the warning I have uttered from this platform so often, that having brought into being your Working Committee, you should not thoughtlessly or hastily interfere with the build of the resolution that the Working Committee may place before you, because you should give the credit to the Working Committee for having examined all the pros and cons and all the objections that might possibly be raised against the several parts of the resolution. It will really be like interfering with the creation of your own architects. But you can do one thing, and that is to exercise the precious right which you possess, viz., the right of total rejection of this resolution. Although the thing itself is a completed whole, and you may not therefore interfere with it in detail, still you have the right of totally rejecting it. I would therefore urge you, that if you really feel that the resolution does not satisfy you as a whole, you will marshal all your forces, intellect, and resourcefulness in a full-dress debate and reject the resolution. The choice before you is either to reject or accept the resolution as it stands, because it is a resolution framed by your trusted representatives after many and anxious hours of thought which you could never give to this resolution; for one thing, you have not the leisure for it, nor can such a large body of people give one mind to a resolution of this character. So far, therefore, as the body of this resolution is concerned, tear it to pieces if you like, examine it as mercilessly as you please, and then if you come to the conclusion that after all it is not in the interest of the nation, then destroy the resolution. But if you feel that the nation cannot lose but will gain by endorsing the settlement, you must say so boldly and act up to it. Endorsement means an honest endeavour to act up to it cent per cent. I do not want you to accept this resolution in a niggardly or half-hearted spirit, or because it is a Mahatma who is behind it, or because the Working Committee is behind it. You, as representatives of the nation, will not lose in dignity or in the estimation of the world, if you, after the fullest deliberation, come to the conclusion that it should be rejected, because this settlement is, in your opinion, not worth considering and that it is really a trap laid for the people. It will then be your bounden duty to reject it.

But do not for heaven’s sake let the recent executions be an obsession in your way. We shall have provocations in our march towards the goal, in our march towards the Conference. Let no provocation deflect you from the right course. Let no provocation blind your judgment. Use your intellect in an absolutely unbiased manner. Examine the settlement on its own merits. Do not be carried away also by the fact that all the prisoners covered by the truce or the provisional settlement have not yet been discharged. Let not that worry you. It is up to the Working Committee to see that all those who are covered by the truce are discharged. If a single prisoner covered by the truce remains in prison, it must be a point of honour with the Working Committee to repudiate the truce. Therefore you must not be turned away from your course by any side issues. What you should concentrate upon is this. What does the settlement amount to? What scope does the settlement give the Congress to assert its claim? What scope is there in this resolution for the delegation, even unconsciously, to go beyond the authority it confers on them? If you find it is not sufficiently comprehensive to tie down the hands of the delegation, no matter how clever it may be, you have every right summarily to reject the resolution.

I warn the English-speaking people that next year they would not call upon a single speaker to speak in English. I hope that by next year they will have learned sufficient Hindustani to be able to follow the proceedings and really be able to speak in Hindustani also.
Day after day and year after year we ourselves have accustomed the people to consider Hindustani as the common language for inter-provincial intercourse. Now it is too late to retrace our steps and habituate vast audiences to English.¹

I have expressed my views in this matter² in my statement to the Press immediately after the settlement. The princes are naturally touchy, and we should do nothing to touch them on the raw, if we can help it. We may only make it clear to them that a Federation of the people and princes will have meaning only when the princes will stoop to conquer, will stoop to the level of their people, just as we ask the Englishmen to descend from the heights of Simla to the plains. But we do not want to give them any notice of this. We will trust them to conform to the spirit of the times, and I am sure that if we succeed in getting everything else the princes will offer no difficulty.

Young India, 9-4-1931

355. BHAGAT SINGH

Brave Bhagat Singh and his two associates have been hanged. Many attempts were made to save their lives and even some hopes were entertained, but all was in vain.

Bhagat Singh did not wish to live. He refused to apologize; declined to file an appeal. If at all he would agree to live, he would do so for the sake of others; if at all he would agree to it, it would be in order that his death might not provoke anyone to indiscriminate murder. Bhagat Singh was not a devotee of non-violence, but he did not subscribe to the religion of violence; he was prepared to commit murder out of a sense of helplessness. His last letter was as follows: “I have been arrested while waging a war. For me there can be no gallows. Put me into the mouth of a cannon and blow me off.” These heroes had conquered the fear of death. Let us bow to them a thousand times for their heroism.

But we should not imitate their act. I am not prepared to believe that the country has benefited by their action. I can see only the harm that has been done. We could have won swaraj long ago if that line of action had not been pursued and we could have waged a purely non-violent struggle. There may well by two opinions on this conjecture of mine. However, no one can deny the fact that if the practice of seeking justice through murders is established amongst us, we shall start murdering one another for what we believe to be justice. In a land of crores of destitutes and crippled persons, this will be a terrifying situation. These poor people are bound to become victims of our atrocities. It is desirable that everyone should consider the consequences of this. Further, we want a swaraj which is theirs and for them. By making a dharma of violence, we shall be reaping the fruit of our own actions.

¹ This paragraph is reproduced from the Report of the 45th Indian National Congress, pp. 104-5. In the source, what follows was translated from Gandhiji’s speech in Hindi.
² Regarding Federation; vide “Statement to the press”, 5-3-1931.

Hence, though we praise the courage of these brave men, we should never countenance their activities.

By hanging these men, the Government has demonstrated its own brute nature, it has provided fresh proof of its arrogance resulting from its power by ignoring public opinion. From this hanging it may be concluded that it is not the intention of the Government to part with any real power to the people. The Government certainly had the right to hang these men. However, there are some rights which do credit to those who possess them only if they are enjoyed in name only. If a person exercises all his rights on all occasions, in the end they are destroyed. On this occasion, the Government would have brought credit to itself if it had not exercised its rights and this would have been highly useful in maintaining peace.

However, it is obvious that the Government has not to date developed such discretion. It has given a clear reason for the public to get enraged. If the latter shows anger, it will lose the game which it is about to win. Some officials may even hope that the public will give vent to its anger. Whether they do so or not, ours is a straightforward path. While negotiating the settlement, Bhagat Singh’s hanging was weighing upon us. We had hoped that the Government would be cautious enough to pardon Bhagat Singh and his associates to the extent of remitting the sentence of hanging. We should not break the pledge we have taken just because our hopes have not been fulfilled, but should bear this blow which has fallen upon us and honour our pledge. By doing so under even such trying circumstances, our strength to get what we desire will increase rather than decrease, while, if we break our pledge or violate the truce, we shall suffer loss of vigour, loss of strength and it will add to our present difficulties in reaching our objective. Hence our dharma is to swallow our anger, abide by the settlement and carry out our duty.

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan, 29-3-1931
I had had plenty of experience of Dr. Ansari’s generosity, but during my recent trip to Delhi I had more of it at his house. He insisted that all the members of the Working Committee should put up with him. Besides these, there were other guests also. His large bungalow having proved incommodious, tents had to be put up in his compound. There must have been some hundred guests having their meals at his home every day. On the one hand, there was his large practice and the time which had to be devoted to it and, on the other, there was a stream of people from the native States coming and going and then again there was his hospitality to be offered to so many guests and the talks to be held in connection with the work of the Congress. Despite all this, I have never found Dr. Ansari overcome by worry, become impatient or lose his temper. An ordinary man would have got tired if he had to accommodate such a large number of guests. I never found any trace of fatigue in Dr. Ansari.

What must be the explanation for such good organization? It was Begum Ansari. One day I asked Dr. Ansari in the presence of Begum Ansari, “How is it that you can cope with so many persons having their meals and so on, with you?” He replied, “The credit for all this goes to the Begum Saheba. I make over to her whatever I earn. She is very well-versed in Urdu and maintains an account of every single pie spent. She orders whatever she wishes and spends whatever she likes. Hence I have never borne the worries of running a household.” Hearing this, I bowed my head to Begum Ansari. It is not that there is only one such woman among Hindus and Muslims, there must be countless numbers of them in every nook and corner. We do not know of them.

Readers will be happy to learn that there are two kitchens running in Dr. Ansari’s home. Brahmin cooks prepare separate meals for those who are vegetarians.

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan, 29-3-1931
357. TELEGRAM TO CHHOTUBHAI

March 29, 1931

CHHOTUBHAI
JAMBUSAR (BROACH DISTRICT)
YOUR WIRE. SEND FULL PARTICULARS SIR PURUSHOTTAMDAS. TRY PREVENT RESALE.

GANDHI

From a microfilm: S.N. 16924

358. TELEGRAM TO CHHOTELAL

March 29, 1931

CHHOTELALJI
SATYAGRAHASRAM
WARDHA (C.P.)
YOUR LETTER. REPORT BALKRISHNA’S CONDITION. HERE TILL SECOND.

BAPU

From a microfilm: S.N. 16924

359. RESOLUTION ON BHAGAT SINGH AND COMRADES

March 29, 1931

This Congress, while dissociating itself from and disapproving of political violence in any shape or form, places on record its admiration of the bravery and sacrifice of the late Sardar Bhagat Singh and his comrades Syts. Sukhdev and Rajguru, and mourns with the bereaved families the loss of these lives. The Congress is of opinion that this triple execution is an act of wanton vengeance and is a deliberate flouting of the unanimous demand of the nation for commutation. This Congress is further of opinion that Government have lost the golden opportunity of promoting goodwill between the

1 The resolution was drafted by Gandhiji.
two nations, admittedly held to be essential at this juncture, and of winning over to the method of peace the party which, being driven to despair, resorts to political violence.

Report of the 45th Indian National Congress, p. 32

360. RESOLUTION ON PROVISIONAL SETTLEMENT

[March 29, 1931]

This Congress, having considered the Provisional Settlement between the Working Committee and the Government of India, endorses it, and desires to make it clear that the Congress goal of purna swaraj (complete independence) remains intact. In the event of the way being otherwise open to the Congress to be represented at any conference with the representatives of the British Government, the Congress delegation will work for this goal and, in particular, so as to give the nation control over the army, external affairs, finance and fiscal and economic policy, and to have a scrutiny, by an impartial tribunal, of the financial transactions of the British Government in India and to examine and assess the obligations to be undertaken by India or England, and the right to either party to end the partnership at will; provided, however, that the Congress delegation will be free to accept such adjustments as may be demonstrably necessary in the interest of India.

The Congress appoints and authorizes Mahatma Gandhi to represent it at the Conference with the addition of such other delegates as the Working Committee may appoint to act under his leadership.¹

From a photostat: C.W. 9345. Courtesy: India Office Library

361. SPEECH ON PROVISIONAL SETTLEMENT, KARACHI CONGRESS

March 30, 1931

Our young brothers and sisters are unhappy about the settlement. I have nothing but love in my heart for them. I can

¹ Presumably drafted by Gandhiji
² Vide “Letter to G. Cunningham”, 4-4-1931.
³ The Congress Working Committee resolution No. 3 of April 2 read: “With reference to the Congress resolution No. 5 [on Provisional Settlement] appointing the delegation to the Round Table Conference, the Working Committee is of opinion that Mahatma Gandhi should be the sole delegate on behalf of the Congress.”
understand their sorrow. They have every right to doubt the wisdom of this settlement. Their opposition does not irritate me. I am not even angry. We opposed the Round Table Conference; we were also saying that we would get nothing from this Conference. What has happened now to justify our hopes of gaining something by attending the Conference? There is no magic in me, nor is there any in the Congress that will change the attitude of the Round Table Conference, and that we will attain everything. Therefore, please understand clearly that I make no promise that by attending the Round Table Conference we shall secure complete independence. My mind is full of misgivings and again and again I ask myself the question: “What shall we gain by attending this Conference?” Between what we demand today, and the demands that have been put forward at the Round Table Conference up to date, there is such an ocean of difference that the usefulness of going there may well be doubted.

But it is a sin not to do what circumstances have made it a duty to do. It is a principle of satyagraha that if there is an opportunity for talks with the party against whom satyagraha is being offered, then talks should be tried. We should strive to win over by love the person whom we consider our enemy. To conquer him in this manner should be the satyagrahi’s resolve. If he does not possess this attribute but harbours enmity, jealousy and hatred in his heart, then he cannot be called a satyagrahi but a duragrahi. In the oft-repeated goal of the Congress there is no place for wilfulness. There is only place for truth and non-violence. Therefore, if we admit that there can be no compromise with those with whom we have tried the method of satyagraha, then that will be a great mistake. This error must be dispelled. Truly, I myself am doubtful of the outcome. Still, when we have been invited, when we have been asked to say what we want, to state our position rather than fight, then what other duty can we have but to do that? This is what the Prime Minister has said. The Viceroy also has uttered similar words. When I was in prison, even then he sent word to say that I could meet him whenever I wished to do so. Then he delivered a speech; and after that we were released. On my release, I wrote him a letter and as a result we decided to meet. Our meetings and talks ended in the present settlement. There is nothing in the settlement for us to be ashamed of. I do not want to explain here why certain things are not in the settlement and why certain matters were left untouched. But I shall explain to you how it became the duty of the Working Committee to make this compromise.
When the Government set free the Working Committee, it became the duty of the latter either to break the law by offering civil disobedience and go back to prison, or do something other than that. Had we not exercised our discretion in choosing this second course, the world would not have cheered us, it would have censured us.

This is one question. Another thing is that we have not ended this struggle because we had grown weary. I did not like what Swami Govindanand\textsuperscript{1} said. He said, “We were prepared to continue the struggle for another year.” I agree. I may even go further and add that we could have continued this fight not for one but for another twenty years to come. We are thirty crores in number out of which one crore would fight. And a satyagrahi fights on even when all have wearied and given up the struggle. So, it is not right to say that the Working Committee has accepted the settlement because we had become tired. He who suspends satyagraha because he is tired, deceives God, deceives the nation, deceives his country. But this settlement was not concluded in this manner. It was concluded because it had to be. We cannot argue that we should continue to fight because we have the strength to fight. Even if we had continued the fight for another year more, in the end this very same question would have come up. Would you even then say, “No, we shall continue to fight”? That soldier who says, “I shall keep on fighting”, has false pride, and is guilty in the eyes of God. Therefore, the settlement ought to have been concluded.

Then, another thing. We do not yet quite know whether we shall reach the stage of the Round Table Conference or not. Even if we do, there is no reason to assume that we shall bring back something from there. Even if we return empty-handed you have no right to abuse us, nor can you laugh at us. Because I do not promise that, if I go, I shall necessarily bring back something or other. This is certain however: we shall not return with slavery. We shall not bring anything that is not contained in this resolution. But if we do not bring anything, how does it follow that we should hand over the work of the Congress to others? Even today the work of the Congress is in your hands. It is you that made Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel your President today. If you choose you can remove him from office tomorrow. If you wish to change the Working Committee you can do so. Therefore please do not say that it is the Mahatma who is behind this resolution. The Working Committee is behind it; so you have to let go the Mahatma. It is far better that you do not vote for the resolution. It should not be that simply because some of us have done something we should be kept on. If we have proved ungrateful or if we have acted foolishly, then certainly remove us from office. And instead of removing us on our return from the Round Table Conference, you can do so now. We are your servants; we shall resign and get away. Even if there is the slightest self-respect in us, we shall resign, and you will not be blamed for this. The world will say we did the right thing.

\textsuperscript{1} A Sind Congress leader, who along with Subhas Chandra Bose had opposed the Gandhi-Irwin Pact

But if you feel that because I am a Mahatma this cannot be done, then it is weakness on your part. If swaraj cannot be had without the Mahatma, then, believe me, you will never be able to rule yourselves. When I left for Dandi, I said that even if all the leaders were jailed the fight would not stop. Those outside would continue it. You have shown it in action. Not only all the leaders, but all the workers were jailed, yet our work did not stop. The women took it up and were in turn imprisoned; even then the work did not stop.

Was Kikibehn Lalwani, who was dictator of Karachi, fit to be made dictator? The poor lady was suffering from phthisis. But she plunged into the battle, became dictator, and entered jail. The sick woman was cured, and she became a brave fighter. So, you can see that the Mahatma is not indispensable. I may add further that to the extent I deserve the title Mahatma, it was given to me for my spirit of service. Once I give up serving others I shall cease to be Mahatma from that very moment. Therefore do not feel that because this resolution was drawn up by the Mahatma, or by the Working Committee, therefore it cannot be opposed. If after deep consideration you reject this resolution then I shall defend you before the world.

But if you accept that you must do exactly as you are told by those who have started the fight, then I tell you to be with me and put up a sincere fight. That is, do not worry if your spokesman returns empty-handed. If he brings back something so much the better; but if he does not bring anything we shall fight again. So many have gone to jail, so many have faced lathi-charges, and undergone hardships that we do not wish unnecessarily to repeat all this. But, having done our duty, if we do not get what we asked for, then our resolve to fight stands. And, when we are there those who remain here—supporters and opponents—must finish the work that remains.

I do not agree with Dr. Kitchlew that when we are away attending the Round Table Conference, the work that remains to be done should be done by the youth. Who else can picket like the women who picketed the foreign-cloth shops and the liquor shops? They shall abide by the rules of picketing that we have laid down and do the work of picketing. Men like Jamshed Mehta, who is known here by the name of Bhagat had to complain strongly—bitterly—against us. Let all read his article, and avoid the mistakes that he has pointed out and do picketing according to the rules laid down. Khadi work should be taken up in order to complete the boycott of foreign cloth. All this work is not only for the youth to do but for all.

I shall say a few words about the simple and candid speech of Khan Abdul Gaffar Khan—a speech that so well becomes a Pathan. I was very glad to hear what he said. It is good that we invited him and gave ourselves that opportunity of hearing him. I have lived among the Pathans. I have had Pathans as my clients. I know the Pathans’ nature. If the Pathans believe that they have benefited by the Congress—and I believe that they have—then I wish to assure them further that we shall do nothing that will curtail their freedom. We shall do our best to see that the Frontier Province attains the same kind of independence as the other States will receive. I had intended to visit that province, but I regret that I shall not get the opportunity to do so. I was told that the Afghans on the other side of the Frontier Province also wished for my release. Why should the Afghans have wanted my freedom? I have worked for the Pathans of the Frontier, but I have done nothing for the Afghans. Yes, I shall certainly say that in our freedom lies theirs too. Today, however, beyond showing this much of fellowship, we are not able to render them any special assistance. On attaining freedom India has no designs to fight any other country. I can give this assurance to the Pathans and the Afghans. It is a great thing for the Pathans to join us in our fight, because we shall have a whole army of fighters.¹

I will say one or two words with reference to what has been left out in the resolution before you. One thing that has been left out is the Federation. What is the meaning of the word ‘Federation’? Is it a Federation between the princes or the States on the one hand and the provinces put together on the other? What are the conditions under which that Federation is to take place we do not know at all. But the princes have taken up one position, viz., that there shall be no intervention on the part of the Federal Government in their internal affairs. All I have suggested in connection with the Federation is that they should acknowledge that the fundamental rights of the people of the States should be the same as those of the citizens in what is called British India. If those rights are guaranteed under the federal constitution, then there should be naturally some federal institution to protect those rights, i.e., a federal supreme court or whatever you might like to call it, to which an appeal would lie. I hope the princes will of their own accord recognize these two things and also allow representation for the subjects of the States. To do this would possibly be somewhat of a derogation from the sovereignty which the princes enjoy. But if they would be part of the Federation in which the larger part is to be governed by a spirit of absolute democracy, it is up to them to part with some of their power and that of their own accord and free will. I am hoping that some such thing would happen and that is why you find no mention made of Federation in this resolution.

¹ What follows is extracted from Young India, 9-4-1931. It appeared under the title, “Gandhiji on the main Resolutions”.

He also said a word about an important reservation in the resolution viz., “in the event of the way being otherwise open”.

Supposing that we do not arrive at any settlement whatever over this delicate question of Hindi-Muslim unity, what is to be the position of the Congress? So far as I can see at the present moment, it will be useless for the Congress delegation to take part in the Conference if we cannot possibly arrive at a proper communal solution. But I am not able just now to give you my final decision or final opinion. I do not know. Many things may happen, which may make it necessary or highly desirable that the delegation should take part in the Conference. But that is for the future really to decide.

Towards the conclusion, he addressed the following warning both to those who would reject it or accept it and gave a solemn promise of loyalty.

If the Congress rejects the settlement summarily, nothing can possibly be said against the Congress. The Congress is a paramount authority. The Working Committee is its creature. The action taken by the Working Committee, or taken by myself, may not commend itself to you. There should be, therefore, no question of toleration or patronage. It is open to every one of you to reject the resolution and to repudiate the settlement if you wish to. But if you endorse the settlement, then it is also your duty actively to support it, carry out all its items faithfully and honourably and do the various things which are set out before you in the resolution, so that you daily increase the power of the Congress and make it possible for the Congress delegation to vindicate the position of the Congress and possibly to bring the very thing for which you have suffered for the last twelve months.

One thing more. If this delegation goes as far as the Conference, it does not mean that the delegation will bring in its pocket purna swaraj. If it does not bring purna swaraj, it does not mean that it returns humiliated. Nothing of the kind. All that we expect to be able to do is to go and tell the British people and the British Minister what we want, and if we do not get what the Congress expects the delegation to accept within the terms of the resolution, we are bound to return empty-handed and receive your compliments, not curse. But you will be entitled to give us curses if we return having sold the interests of the country. That is what you have a perfect right to do. But it will not be proper for you to say, ‘you were not able to fulfil your promises.’ No promise has ever been made. No promise is being made now that if the deputation goes to the Conference, whether here or in England, or enters upon further negotiations, that deputation is going to bring purna swaraj. Purna swaraj will come when the full authority of the Congress has been manifested and not a minute before. It will be the greatest achievement of the Congress to bring swaraj if it does. All that I promise faithfully to you on my own behalf and on behalf of any delegation that you might wish to send with me is that we shall not be disloyal to the Congress in any shape or form.

The appeal did not fall on deaf ears, practically all the amendments were withdrawn, and the resolution was passed without the change of a comma or colon.

[From Hindi]

Hindi Navajivan, 6-4-1931
This Congress is of opinion that to enable the masses to appreciate what swaraj, as conceived by the Congress, will mean to them, it is desirable to state the position of the Congress in a manner easily understood by them. In order to end the exploitation of the masses, political freedom must include real economic freedom of the starving millions. The Congress, therefore, declare that any constitution which may be agreed to on its behalf should provide, or enable the Swaraj Government to provide, for the following:

1. Fundamental rights of the people, including:
   (a) freedom of association and combination;
   (b) freedom of speech and of the Press;
   (c) freedom of conscience and the free profession and practice of religion, subject to public order and morality;
   (d) protection of the culture, language and scripts of the minorities;
   (e) equal rights and obligations of all citizens, without any bar on account of sex;
   (f) no disability to attach to any citizen by reason of his or her religion, caste or creed or sex in regard to public employment, office of power or honour and in the exercise of any trade or calling;
   (g) equal rights to all citizens in regard to public roads, wells, schools and other places of public resort;
   (h) right to keep and bear arms in accordance with regulations and reservations made in that behalf;
   (i) no person shall be deprived of his liberty nor shall his dwelling or property be entered, sequestered or confiscated, save in accordance with law.

2. Religious neutrality on the part of the State.

3. Adult suffrage.

4. Free primary education.

\[1\] Presumably drafted by Gandhiji
5. A living wage for industrial workers, limited hours of labour, healthy conditions of work, protection against the economic consequences of old age, sickness and unemployment.

6. Labour to be freed from serfdom or conditions bordering on serfdom.

7. Protection of women workers, and specially adequate provisions for leave during maternity period.

8. Prohibition against employment of children of school going age in factories.

9. Rights of labour to form unions to protect their interests with suitable machinery for settlement of disputes by arbitration.

10. Substantial reduction in agricultural rent or revenue paid by the peasantry, and in case of uneconomic holdings exemption from rent for such period as may be necessary, relief being given to small zamindars wherever necessary by reason of such reduction.

11. Imposition of a progressive income tax on agricultural incomes above a fixed minimum.

12. A graduated inheritance tax.

13. Military expenditure to be reduced by at least one half of the present scale.

14. Expenditure and salaries in civil departments to be largely reduced. No servant of the State, other than specially employed experts and the like, to be paid above a certain fixed figure which should not ordinarily exceed Rs. 500 per month.

15. Protection of indigenous cloth by exclusion of foreign cloth and foreign yarn from the country.

16. Total prohibition of intoxicating drinks and drugs.

17. No duty on salt manufactured in India.

18. Control over exchange and currency policy so as to help Indian industries and bring relief to the masses.

19. Control by the State of key industries and ownership of mineral resources.

20. Control of usury—direct or indirect.

It shall be open to the A.I.C.C. to revise, amend or add to the foregoing so far as such revision, amendment or addition is not inconsistent with the policy and principles thereof.

A.I.C.C. File No. 199, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library
March 31, 1931

In moving the resolution\(^1\) on fundamental rights in the open Congress Gandhiji, speaking in Hindi, said:

This resolution is meant for those who are no legislators, who are not interested in intricate questions of constitution, who will not take an active part in the administration of the country. It is meant to indicate to the poor, inarticulate Indian the broad features of swaraj or \(\text{Ramarajya}\). Before my march to Dandi I had included some of these features in my eleven points. These have been made more comprehensive. They are now presented to you in a separate resolution. They were advisedly omitted from the main resolution because that would have made the mandate for the delegation burdensome. But by passing this resolution we make it clear to the world and to our own people what we propose to do as soon as we come into power. Let Government also take note of it. Let those who may have to deal with us at the Round Table Conference also take note of the fact that the Viceroy, under swaraj, should not get more than Rs. 500 per month. The position has been made as clear as possible, in order that we may not be accused of having sprung sudden surprises on those who have to deal with us. They are also meant to forewarn all concerned. Let them prepare themselves for the coming legislation by modelling their lives in the light of coming changes.

I shall take a few instances. Clause I (d) of the fundamental rights protects the culture, language and scripts of the minority. Now though I am sure that Islamic and Aryan cultures are not mutually exclusive and fundamentally different, I must recognize that Mussalmans look upon Islamic culture as distinctive from Aryan. Let us therefore cultivate tolerance. Let us try to learn the Urdu language and Urdu script and understand the Mussalmans’ insistence on it.

Then there is the abolition of all disabilities attaching to women, in regard to public employment, office of power or honour, etc. The moment this is done many of the disabilities to which the women are subjected will cease. So far as the Congress is concerned, we have admitted no such disability. We have had Dr. Besant and Shrimati Sarojini Devi as our presidents and in the future free State it will be open to us to have women presidents.

---

\(^1\) This appeared under the title “Gandhiji on the Main Resolutions” with a sub-heading “The Twenty Points”.

\(^2\) For the text of the resolution, vide the preceding item.

Religious neutrality is another important provision. Swaraj will favour Hinduism no more than Islam, nor Islam more than Hinduism. But in order that we may have a State based on religious neutrality, let us from now adopt the principle in our daily affairs. Let not a Hindu merchant hesitate to have deserving Muslims as his employees, and let every Congressman make religious neutrality his creed in every walk of life.

Item number five deserves the immediate attention of all mill and factory owners who should anticipate humane legislation fore-shadowed in the clause.

The last item relates to the control of usury. Islam strictly prohibits the charging of interest but there is no reason why usury should not be regarded as criminal in a Hindu. The Pathans have forgotten the Islamic injunction, have followed our bad example and are known to charge from 200 to 300 per cent interest. I wish I could persuade Khan Abdul Gaffar Khan to go to our parts to wean his co-religionists from usury. Let also our bankers and money-lenders betimes make drastic reductions in their rates of interest, lest drastic legislation should find them unprepared. The peasants are being crushed to extinction. So let the money-lenders adopt 8 per cent as the maximum rate to afford them some relief.

Let the zamindars and the Maharajas be assured that the Congress does not seek to destroy them, but is determined to destroy all wrong and injustice. Let them make an earnest endeavour to understand the grievances of their tenants and introduce adequate measures of relief before legislation overtakes them. It is open to them to join the Congress as Raja Saheb of Kalakankar and Chowdhary Raghuvir-narayan Sinha have done.

Let it be understood that this resolution by no means has any finality. It is open to the A.I.C.C. to revise, amend or add to the twenty points and so let no one oppose the resolution for mere difference on matters of detail. Those however who are opposed to the policy and principle must reject it, but they must bear in mind that the poor man’s swaraj is soon coming and let them not be found unprepared when it actually comes.\(^1\)

Young India, 9-4-1931

364. TELEGRAM TO BALKRISHNA SHARMA

KARACHI, [April 1, 1931]

I HAVE BEEN TOO BUSY TO WIRE OR TO WRITE. THOUGH HEART BLEEDS I REFUSE TO SEND CONDOLENCES OVER A DEATH SO MAGNIFICENT AS GANESH SHANKAR’S. IT MAY NOT DO SO TODAY BUT HIS INNOCENT BLOOD IS BOUND SOME DAY TO CEMENT HINDUS AND MUSSALMANS. HIS FAMILY THEREFORE DESERVES NO CONDOLENCES BUT CONGRATULATIONS. MAY HIS EXAMPLE PROVE INFECTIOUS.\(^4\)

The Bombay Chronicle, 3-4-1931

365. LETTER TO CHANDRAKANTA

CONGRESS CAMP, KARACHI, April 1, 1931

CHI. KANTA,

I have your letter. Do not expect letters from me at present. I have no time at all. But you keep writing regularly. You have decided correctly about yourself. Do whatever Sumangal Prakash considers right. I shall be reaching Delhi on the 4th. I have to reach Ahmedabad on the 10th. I have to be there till the 13th and then at Broach till the 15th. I do not know the programme after that. Everything else is fine.

PRABHAVATI

FOR BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: Chandrakanta Papers. Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library

---

\(^1\) The resolution was passed.

\(^2\) Editor, Pratap, Kanpur

\(^3\) The telegram appeared as “wired by the correspondent on April 2, 1931”. However, an identical telegram addressed to Harishankar Vidyarthi, brother of Ganesh Shankar Vidyarthi, was published under this date in the “Ganesh Shankar Vidyarthi Memorial Number” of the Narmada.

\(^4\) Vide also “Speech at Kanpur riots, subjects committee meeting, Karachi”, 27-3-1931.
In an hour’s conversation with me early this morning, Mr. Gandhi indicated in some measure the manner in which he would put his case at the Round Table Conference, his attitude on the question of safeguards, his fears and hopes for the communal problem and last, but not least, his faith in the honesty of Great Britain’s present policy towards India, however mistaken that policy may be.

He said that on the whole he was very well content with the week’s work in Congress.

I asked Mr. Gandhi if he felt secure in the freedom of the mandate that Congress had given him for his work at the Round Table Conference. He replied:

The mandate is not an absolutely free mandate, for I am bound by the terms of the main resolution passed by the Congress this week. I do not think you could say that those terms are exactly ambiguous, but rather that they are fairly comprehensive.

Yet they do allow me some latitude, for obviously there must be latitude in a discussion such as we shall have at the Conference. For instance, the words “such adjustments as may be demonstrably necessary in the interest of India” mean what they say, but they give us an opportunity to modify as well as to constrict our present ideas about safeguards and other things if we find that must be done for the sake of freedom.

We are prepared to surrender what can be surrendered with honour, but there can be no dishonourable surrender.

Q. What exactly do you mean by this new term ‘equality of partnerships’? Does it mean a national status like Australia’s within the British Commonwealth of Nations?

A. No, it does not mean that. Until a short time ago I thought that such a status would be suitable for India, but now I have come to see that certain things stand in the way.

You see, the nations in the British Commonwealth are essentially British or, as in the case of South Africa, are closely identified with British ideas and culture. Their people are racially British and their institutions are British. We cannot say that of India. We do not aspire... to identify our culture with British and the West. We are content and passionately want to retain and develop our own culture and order of society. So there is no real analogy at all between, say, Australia’s status and India’s future status within the British Commonwealth.

There can, however, be a partnership between Britain and India which will mean a bandobast between the two countries for assistance, one to the other, in many things and for reciprocal obligations.

You mean, a kind of semi-contractual alliance. Just as England has an alliance with France for certain purposes of war, so you want an alliance between Britain and India, only this alliance will cover several other things besides war and will be a more fruitful and, let us say, a happier partnership than an alliance merely for war?

Yes, yes, that’s it exactly.

And you do not want any more Viceroy’s, any more Lord Irwins?

No, I do not want any more Lord Irwins, any more Viceroy’s.

But when you get to the Round Table Conference, will you keep your mind open to conviction that Dominion Status will be suitable to India? If you come to see there that membership of the British Commonwealth would be in India’s honourable interests, would you accept Dominion Status?

I am open to conviction about that, but I cannot conceive of its possibility. If I were persuaded of what you say, then I should frankly confess it and I should do my utmost to bring Congress round to the same point of view.

Acceptance of Dominion Status is outside the mandate. There must therefore be previous reference to the All-India Congress Committee and may be even to the Congress. But there will not be any quarrel about words. If there has to be a quarrel, it will be about the substance.

And what about these safeguards, Mr. Gandhi? The Working Committee admits the necessity for certain safeguards. Is one of them the retention of British troops in India?

I myself do not believe that any Army, Indian or British, is necessary at all, but there the Working Committee disagrees with me. That being so, I am prepared to agree that for a transitional period the Indian Army will need some British officers, because you have never allowed our own officers to learn all that must be learned about modern warfare. Perhaps some British regiments would be necessary.

---

1 Arrangement
also, partly for the same reasons. But they must be subject to the control of the Indian Government.

But how and why do you expect that they will be willing to serve here under an alien Government?

Well, we have known of mercenary armies in Europe in the past and though the inspiration of patriotism has supplanted pure mercenarism, the soldier asks for and receives monetary wages for his services. Why should he not be willing to lend his services on similar terms for the common good of humanity? But if your officers and men will not serve here under our own Government—well, we shall have to do without them.

Will you not admit that English troops are necessary in communal disturbances?

I do not. If our own troops are found wanting, the most that can happen is that we might have to put up with civil war for a time. But it is better that we should have communal strife and fight our own battles against it than that we should have to appeal to another country to set our house in order with troops over which our people have no control.

Very possibly there will be some serious communal strife when we have got swaraj, but only for a little while. If you will not help us to stop it in the way I suggest, then it may perhaps end itself in the exhaustion or destruction of one community or the other. There may be jealousies and disputes between factions, interests (if you insist on the point), even whole provinces.

It is not consistent with the self-respect of a country or a race that it should give carte blanche to the power of another nation or another race or individual members of it to say, ‘These people cannot manage their own affairs, so they gave us a free hand to do it for them.’

Whatever the differences between us here, we are all Indians and our land is India. But I am not so pessimistic as to think that the lesson will be learned too late.

And what other safeguards have you in mind? There is finance, for instance. You have slightly alarmed some people in India who cannot afford a depreciation of the rupee’s purchasing power. There are other people, Indians who have sent much capital out of the country with the intention of bringing it back to their own great profit when, as they hope, self-governing India will have sunk the rupee’s value to very little.
Yes, I know that is being done and it is very bad. It must be stopped. And I know that there are people in some parts of India who do not want the rupee ratio reduced. But, I do not see why the rupee should not return to its old value of 1s. 4d.

As to the financial safeguards to be discussed at the Round Table Conference, well, we should of course, be under an obligation to pay for whatever assistance we seek from you.

The British came here first simply for the sake of trade. Now they say that they have a trust. Their rule has been disastrous for India, but nevertheless I will agree that the man in the street is honest in his belief that he has a trust to fulfil for India. The mischief is due to ignorance—the ignorance of insularity.

I have said that I cannot conceive of my accepting Dominion Status when I go to the Round Table Conference. I should welcome a closer association in equal fellowship that can make an outstanding contribution to spiritual greatness in international and inter-racial affairs.

_The Statesman, 2-4-1931_

367. SPEECH PROPOSING WORKING COMMITTEE,
A.I.C.C. MEETING, KARACHI

April 1, 1931

Mahatmaji, in consultation with the President and Mr. Jawaharlal Nehru, had prepared a list overnight, which he placed before the Committee and explained the inclusion of new names and the exclusion of other names to find accommodation.

Mahatmaji walked into the A.I.C.C. meeting and moved, besides the office-bearers, the following for the new Working Committee: Gandhi, Dr. Ansari, Maulana Abul Kalam Azad, Messrs Rajendra Prasad, Sen Gupta, Aney, Nariman, Dr. Alam, Mrs. Naidu and Sardar Sardul Singh. He said that Messrs Rajagopalachari, Pattabhi, Satyapal and Shiva Prasad Gupta had to be left to find places for Dr. Alam, Mr. Nariman, Mrs. Naidu, and Mr. Aney. Speaking in Hindi, he referred to the convention established in the matter and desired that the A.I.C.C. should accept this Congress Cabinet for the current year.

Mr. Punniah Sastri (Andhra) questioned why Bombay was given eight seats while Andhra, Tamilnad, Karnatak, and Utkal went without any.
Gandhiji replied that in these matters they ought not to think provincially. They must consider the work ahead and see if the names he had suggested were not necessary.

A number of members rose and proposed names which they considered were left out.

Gandhiji then replied:

It is most unfortunate that my friends from the South are not able to follow Hindustani. Otherwise most of the remarks that Mr. Satyamurti had made just now would probably have not been made. I said that the South was deliberately omitted and I said also that it was an omission purposely made by me. I made that omission deliberately in order to find accommodation that I personally thought was necessary. When I made the omission I had hoped that if I coupled the omission with the information that the omission was not the joint act of the Working Committee but it was my own suggestion it would not be misunderstood. People of the South know that some of my staunchest co-workers are from the South. They also know that I owe all that I am today to the South. I became known to India because of my identification with the South in South Africa and that identification was through an indentured Indian, by name Somasundram. Probably the Indian world and much less the whole world would not have heard of Gandhi but for the accident of Somasundram being severely hurt and receiving my assistance. Since then my connection with the South not only with Hindus but with Mussalmans and Christians ripened. What more explanation do you want from me as to why then the South was omitted in my list of members to the Working Committee? Do you suppose that because I have omitted Dr. Pattabhi I shall not get any assistance from him? After all he was a party to the contract. The relations between members at meetings of the Working Committee are not at all of a strained character. Everything was discussed in the Working Committee. All persons affected were there except Mr. Satyapal. It was an accident that he was not there. Mr. Rajagopalachari was there and do you think I am capable of omitting his name purposely. Do you think I am not going to take from him such work as he is capable of? You are mistaken if you think that is going to happen. To my friends I would say that the 1 Obviously a slip for Balasundaram; vide “The grievances of the British Indians in South Africa: An appeal to the Indian Public”, 14-8-1896 and “An Autobiography”.

---

336 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
A MEMBER. Also Mr. Rajendra Prasad.

MAHATMAJI. He was deliberately omitted last year. You do not know him as well as I do. I know him. So I summarily rejected his name at Lahore. If you want to know why Rajendrababu is put in this time, it is because the Working Committee wants his assistance.

A MEMBER: Do you not want Mr. Rajagopalachari’s assistance?

MAHATMAJI: Yes, I do. I want his assistance also. But he has been removed in order to make room for others. These are the names. The whole of India knows my connection with some of them. Therefore it was no question of North or South. I was not present when the debate on the deletion of the sentence in the General Secretaries’ report took place. I have not read the report of it in the newspapers. I have no time to read newspapers. Whatever I must read, I read. Other things are given to me. I know one sentence was deleted from the report. I overheard a conversation between Mr. Rajagopalachari and Pandit Jawaharlal on the matter. Beyond that I do not know anything. This motion has absolutely no connection whatsoever with whatever reflection you think had been cast by the report on the South. It is wholly an independent thing, and it comes out of my guilelessness, simplicity of nature and my abundant trust in them. . . .

A VOICE. Was Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya’s name considered?

GANDHIJI. It is deliberately not there.

DR. SASTRI. What about Mr. Rajagopalachari?

THE PRESIDENT. I withdrew it on his behalf. I know Mr. Rajagopalachari more than you do.

DR. SASTRI. The future Congress work in the South requires that Mr. Rajagopalachari should be in the Working Committee.

GANDHIJI. An endeavour will be made by the Working Committee whenever it needs to invite people from the provinces not represented here. That is all right, I suppose.

The Hindu, 2-4-1931
There are many gentlemen belonging to the Jamiat-ul-Ulema with whom I am acquainted. Many of them are persons who have made great sacrifices during satyagraha and have helped us in many ways. I am grateful to them for this. Everyone feels that at present the atmosphere in India has become noxious. Hindus and Muslims lost their sanity in Kanpur, Banars and Mirzapur. I have heard that the Hindus started the riots in Kanpur. I admit that it was a grave error. Ever since the time of the non-co-operation movement, I have been shouting from the house-tops that if we wish to accomplish our task peacefully, we should try to reason with all people and make an impression upon their minds. If we carry out our task through the use of force, we shall be held guilty in the court of God. Even while picketing foreign cloth and liquor shops, the people overstepped the limits. It is possible that this may have had immediate good results, but we have seen, in Kanpur, how it is fraught with danger. When reports of the atrocities committed by Hindus reached me, my head bent low in shame, I was ashamed of myself. I should feel ashamed whenever either of the two communities commits atrocities, but those committed by the Hindus naturally put me to greater shame. It is a matter of regret that till today neither of the two communities—Hindus or Muslims—has regained its sanity. Nowadays we have established the practice of returning a blow for a word of abuse and a bullet for a blow. This is an uncivilized practice. I say that not even a blow should be returned for a blow. In this matter, I humbly beg the Ulema to assist me. Please use whatever influence you have with the Muslims.

In political matters also, we quarrel with one another. Here, too, I wish to take as much help from you as possible. If we do not succeed in this, it will be practically futile to attend the Round Table Conference. I do not desire that this Government should become an arbitrator between the two of us and give an award. I shall humbly tell the Jamiat-ul-Ulema that it can be of great help in this matter. As a Congressman and as a Hindu, I say that I wish to give the Muslims

1 At the Idgah Maidan
what they want. I do not wish to act like a Bania. I wish to leave everything to the honour of the Muslims. I would like you to put down whatever you want on a blank sheet of paper and I shall agree to it. Jawaharlal too had said the very same thing in prison. The Pathans of the Frontier Province carry rifles and swords, but in this war they did not make use of either, like brave men they received the bullets upon their chests, they bore in silence whatever suffering fell to their lot. Jawaharlal said: “I would put a pen into the hands of such people and ask them to write down what they wanted and I would affix my signature to it.” It has become the duty of the Congress to settle matters now with minority communities in this way alone. Those who belong to the Congress cannot make any distinctions between Hindus and Muslims. From here we shall be proceeding to Delhi. We have received a telegram from Maulana Shaukat Ali asking us to send a delegation on behalf of the Congress to a conference of Muslims which is being held there. Sardar Patel has already sent in the names of the members of this delegation. That conference is being held on the 4th and the 5th, where every effort will be made [for a settlement]. A mountain of difficulties faces us, but if you too try, the problem will be solved within two or three days. I too shall do likewise. I am aware that the Muslims are greatly enraged by the incidents which took place in Kanpur and other places but, at this juncture, it is our duty to resolve this issue somehow.

The Congress has, by passing a long resolution, set its own standards, from which it can be seen that the swaraj which will be established will be for benefit of the poor. The Congress belongs to the poor, it belongs to the peasants.\(^1\)

It is not right to say that the Congress is a Hindu organization. What is the Congress to do if Muslims would not care to go into it? The Congress is based on adult franchise, and any adult Hindu or Mussalman can join the Congress. No community is excluded. Ask the Muslim friends who are members of the Congress, and they will tell you that they have not come to grief by having joined the Congress. I ask you therefore not to suspect that the Congress is a Hindu organization. I ask every one of you to join the Congress and to take charge of it. But one cannot take charge of it by force. It can be done only by willing service. Ever since the Congress was started,

\(^1\) The paragraph that follows is from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter” in Young India, 16-4-1931.
those who have served it have had charge of it. And yet the Congress does not belong only to them, does not stand only for them, it belongs to and stands for all. It is the swaraj Government in embryo. Its prestige is ever so much superior to that of the British Government, and the Congress President is greater than the Viceroy. Only moneyed people and men in high places know the Viceroy. One needs a motorcar to reach the Viceregal House. But the poorest man knows the Congress President (at present Sardar Vallabhbhai) and can walk up to him. The Sardar has dedicated himself to the service of the country, and he who serves the poor is great in the eyes of God. If you want to be in power under swaraj, I invite you to assume the reins of the Congress now by joining it in large numbers. It is the most powerful organization in the country, join it. We will welcome you.

At this juncture, I am reminded of the simplicity and determination of Hazrat Umer. He could not permit for himself or for his wealthy associates any luxuries or adornments. He made those who wore muslin or velvet discard those garments and made them wear khadi. He made those who were fond of finely ground flour give it up. Will not the Muslims today make such sacrifice for the sake of the poor?

The Spinners’ Association, which is an organization under Congress, has to date spent Rs. 30 lakhs for this purpose. Who received this money? I would like to inform you that the larger portion of this amount has gone to poor Muslim women, as they form the majority among the spinners. The larger quantity of fine khadi is woven from yarn spun by sacred Muslim hands. Many of the weavers of khadi are Muslims. Is khadi made in this manner prohibited to you under a religious injunction, whereas cloth made in Manchester is something permissible? But forget the Muslims, for that matter. It is merely an accident that the major portion of that amount goes to the Muslims, but are not Hindu weavers your brothers? Cannot articles made by them be fit enough for your use? You refer to God as Rahim, you recite kalams. I am an insignificant individual, but I too have read the Koran Sharif. But there is not a single kalama in it which gives you the right to wear foreign cloth. Although thus the Koran permits you to do nothing else, only a handful of Muslims are wearing khadi. At the most, some wear mill-made cloth, but the majority wear only foreign cloth. If the Jamiat-ul-Ulema has any love for the poor, it is

---

1 From Koran, embodying the central faith of a Muslim its duty to take up khadi work. I know of an old woman of sixty who earns her living by spinning yarn. How much must she be earning in this way? And yet she breaks into tears if no one buys her yarn.
Whether a cowrie has any value for you or not, that poor woman values it. From the money she gets from yarn every week, she does not buy tobacco or cigarettes, but lentils, vegetables, ghee and milk for her child. I have merely cited an instance to you. Do you feel no compassion for thousands of such poor people? If you do feel no compassion towards them, I tell you that you cannot attain heaven even by performing the namaz five times. A Hindu, with great humility, wishes to tell this to you learned Ulema. Moreover, I would humbly tell you that you may as well not recite namaz, but fear God and fear no man. If I am mistaken in saying this, forgive me, but understand the feeling in my heart.

Now I wish to address a few words to the Muslim zamindars of Sind. I am of opinion that Sind should be made a separate province.
However, nowadays I receive hundreds of telegrams and letters from the Hindus of Sind. Today too a deputation of Hindus met me. I replied to them in accordance with my understanding of the situation, but I also asked them to go and meet Muslims first as came and met me. Now I ask you why are they afraid of meeting you? Why do you not go to them to see their privations? Why is it that the Hindus of Sind distrust you so much? They are afraid of you. Why are they afraid of you? Is it not your duty to rid them of their fear?
If they are afraid of you, is it not a matter of shame to you? With a great deal of humility, I appeal to you, the Ulema, to persuade the Muslims of Sind to win the confidence of the Hindus there. I wish that the Hindus and the Muslims would jointly send me telegrams that both are agreeable to having Sind made into a separate province.
Sind does not belong to the Muslims only but to both the communities. It is in your hands to make it into the best province.
There are fakir-devotees like Jamshed Mehta in Sind. The Sind Muslims are a wealthy people. There are intelligent, rich Amils residing in Sind. Sindhis have gone forth to all the corners of the world. By combining all your abilities, you can turn Sind into the most advanced province. If the Hindus stop sending me telegrams, the country will save money, I can spin more yarn and devote my time to more important work. If you can do this, your achievement will produce a good impression on other provinces. This is my humble request. It is my prayer to God that my words may touch your hearts and that He cleanse the hearts of all of us.

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan, 19-4-1931

369. SPEECH AT PARSİ RAJAKIYA MANDAL, KARACHI

[April 1, 1931]²

I did not suspect that my Parsi friends were so timid, but Sjt. Sidhwa has disillusioned me. Let me therefore reassure you that the Parsi community’s interests do not need to be safeguarded in any scheme of swaraj, in as much as the handful of men and women belonging to that adventurous and resourceful community have never found any difficulty in any corner of the globe wherever they may have chanced to go. There were for instance only a few Parsi families in Porbandar in the days of my childhood when my father was Prime Minister there. But those families had carved out a status for themselves in the State. Why? Was it because their interests had been specially safeguarded by the State? Parsi Rustomji of happy memory enjoyed a unique position in the public life of the Indian community in South Africa not because he enjoyed any special privileges but because he had that resourcefulness and tact and public spirit with which Parsis are specially endowed.

And who am I to safeguard your interests under swaraj? Proportionately, perhaps, out of a population of a hundred thousand your community had more jail going satyagrahis and khadi wearers than any other community, or at any rate the Hindus. I have never met with a Parsi anywhere in the world content with the lot of an under-dog and wherever you have gone you have made your way in the world. What need have you for any special guarantees or safeguards? Supposing you were given proportional representation on the legislatures and on the Cabinet, how many of you would be elected? But by your qualities of head and heart your men hold the foremost positions everywhere. I would therefore ask you to cast off

¹ An organization of Parsis, which owed its existence to Jamshed Mehta, R. K. Sidhwa and Barjorji Bharucha. The speech appeared in Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter” under sub-title “Parsi Rajakiya Sabha, Karachi”.

² From Bombay Secret Abstracts such fears. You are called fire-worshippers keeping the fires eternally blazing. I assure you that your sun is never going to set.¹

But having praised you let me now criticize you a little. How can you talk of your habit of wearing silk saris? You may as well say that you have been habituated to slavery. Sidhwa told me that 50 persons among you wore khadi, but that will not satisfy me. All of you should take a pledge to boycott foreign cloth. I congratulate you on not permitting a person who consumes liquor to be a member of the Congress. There are many among you who talk of giving up liquor, but how can they give up toddy, that tasty drink? Your mouth waters when its name is mentioned. On a sad occasion, it is toddy; and on a happy occasion, it is toddy; if it is cold, it is toddy; and if it is hot, it is toddy; this is all wrong. For one merit it may have, it has many defects. Hence the rule you have made is a good one. In accordance with it, all of you should join the Congress and do prohibition propaganda among the Parsis. Despite many threats, Mithubehn fights against the keepers of liquor-booths. A self-sacrificing Parsi like Durbari Sadhu has taken up his abode in Karadi and is doing this very work as his profession and, as a result has gone to jail. Even in remembrance of these servants, give up those poisonous drinks that dry up your blood. There are few communities which make charities to equal yours. But remember, you will not be able to maintain your ascendancy if you keep up your habit of taking liquor. The author of the Bhagavata has said that the Yadavas perished because of drinking. Remember another thing, that under swaraj the Head of State will not draw a salary of over Rs. 500; hence give up comforts and pleasures, else it will be difficult for Parsis to participate in the swaraj government.

When I arrived here, the Sardar told me to rest and said that he would go and meet the Parsis. I replied that elsewhere I would ask him to deputize for me but here that would not do. Here I must place my statement of account before you, and ask for yours. Mine is of course an open book. On scrutiny, yours shows large debits against khadi and prohibition. Clear both of them and join the Congress in large numbers, so that you will always win victory, victory, victory.

Young India, 16-4-1931

¹ What follows is from Navajivan, 12-4-1931.
The Congress is finished. It was an object-lesson in quick organization. Without the willing cooperation of nearly three thousand volunteers, men, women and children, and the public, a city accommodating twenty thousand persons with all the conveniences could not have been brought into being in twenty-five days. A band of merchants undertook the kitchen work, ensuring efficiency, economy and good service. The women volunteers vied with the men in hard work often involving prolonged vigils. But the real credit belongs to the Lord Mayor of Karachi, the great Parsi humanitarian and philanthropist, Jamshed Mehta. There are seasoned Congress workers who strove to make the organization so perfect. These I need not mention. The chief architectural feature of the Congress was its vast pandal which had no canopy but that of the blue sky. It became thus possible to ensure freedom from suffocating air and to provide ample accommodation. It saved enormous expenses. Instead of building the dais and galleries they were obtained by excavation as at the time of the Ahmedabad Congress. Another feature was the great khadi exhibition which beat all the previous ones in scientific arrangement. Although it was not part of a big show, it attracted vast crowds and was thoroughly successful from the financial standpoint.

Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel’s address was perhaps the briefest of all presidential addresses. He was able to finish the proceedings in two days—not a bad record. A day saved means much saving of expense and more of the fagged out exertion of the over-worked volunteers.

The Congress has endorsed the provisional settlement and issued in the clearest possible terms its delegation.

Much has yet to happen before the delegation can take part in any conference that may be held. The duty of Congressmen is now clear. They must faithfully observe the terms of the provisional settlement. They must clear the atmosphere of every trace of violence and therefore first examine and purify themselves. The nation must achieve the boycott of foreign cloth and see that the gospel of the wheel spreads through every village of India. Before this can be accomplished, we must develop much greater love of the famishing millions than we have. The drunkard and the drug addict must be induced, not forced to give up their vice. These things require greater organization, greater co-operation among ourselves and a living faith in non-violence in thought, word and deed. Whether it is taken up as a policy or a creed, mind and body must act together while the policy or the creed is in operation.

While the truce lasts we must not boycott British goods as such. Last but not least, one must achieve Hindu-Muslim unity. How this is to be done I know. The Hindus have to dare to trust them and let the Mussalmans and the Sikhs take what they want. This rids the nation of all communal taint. But of this hereafter.

Young India, 2-4-1931

371. LET US REPENT

But the hatred which was created and which has been shown in words and actions has been so intolerable that it must set one to think whether release of such mighty forces of hatred all round the country is advisable. From morning till late night one heard through talks, songs, through slogans and felt such mighty torrents of hatred that it was sickening to find such a degradation in large mass of people. I use the word ‘degradation’ with full responsibility. It appeared that speaking lies was a matter of full licence and liberty. To attack Government officers, police officers, men who disagreed, for something which was entirely untrue, for something which never happened, was a daily common event seen on the roads and everywhere. More than words can express the cruelties and the injustice inflicted on the traders of British goods especially, and some other foreign goods were wide, intolerable and unbearable. To request a man not to deal in one article and to request another not to purchase an article is one thing, but to force a man by all possible means, by abusing him, by obstructing him, by making his life miserable in every way is another thing, and there, I must admit, non-violence has miserably failed. I am certain in my mind that the hatred created and the cruelties inflicted were far from non-violence and against all principles and teachings of Mahatmaji. It was a common practice to obstruct and inflict with all kinds of tactics to make persons’ lives miserable whenever one disagreed with the general movement. In every province there were different types of activities and it appears that either one had to accept such dictation of somebody or one had to go through whatever was inflicted upon him by any small or large band of children, ladies or full grownup men. According to them, to differ in any way was pro-British, pro-Government or unfaithfulness to the country, and today one can see clearly mental victims of these forces of hatred in several houses.
But the danger is still greater. The taste of the blood—breaking laws—has been so attractive that one finds today this blessed satyagraha on the lips of everyone. As soon as you differ anywhere, be it in a school, in a house, in a group, in a circle of friends, in business, in an office, you find immediately threat of satyagraha pointed out to you at every time. Between employer and employee, landlord and tenant, parents and children, teachers and pupils, brothers and friends, everywhere this pointed bayonet of satyagraha seems to be ready for use. To break laws and rules of society or of the State seems to be so easy and handy. If a college professor suggests discipline, if a municipal officer recommends extra tax, if children are requested not to make noise, if hawkers are told to remove obstructions on roads, if changes or transfers are being arranged, if anything is done which does not suit anybody else, there is this dagger of satyagraha pointed at you. Discrimination where to use and how to use seems to have been entirely lost in the whole nation, and this is a danger signal for any nation or country. It is exactly like an aeroplane, which is being used generally to fly from one country to another speedily and is also used for throwing bombs. It is exactly like matches, which give light, and are also used for burning a house. One can clearly see this danger signal in the satyagraha weapon also. Satyagraha can be used to advantage but it can also be misused to entire destruction. I feel that unless those who proclaim satyagraha as the best weapon to the wide world did feel their responsibility in this matter, they would soon find the tables turned not only against themselves but on the whole country. If I can humbly suggest, I feel that some of the rigidly trained leaders, free from hatred, should now do nothing else but pass some years of their lives in each province and each city and village to make people understand what real satyagraha or true non-violence means, how it can be brought into operation and when it ought to be brought into operation. I would humbly suggest a regular school of non-violence in every province, where high-minded souls who thoroughly understand this subject scientifically and religiously ought to be teachers to the students of policies who in return should be kept as all-time workers to go round the country, give this message and teach what it is in reality. This can be the only safeguard for saving the country in my opinion.

Jamshed Mehta, the Lord Mayor of Karachi, is a patriot of the purest type. But for his identification with the Congress to the extent he was capable of and but for his having placed at the disposal of the Reception Committee all the resources of his Municipality, the wonderful Congress city would not have been brought into being in the incredibly short space of twenty-five days. His sympathy for the satyagrahis when the campaign was going on is well known. Any criticism from one like him must therefore arrest attention. The quotation given above is an extract from Sjt. Jamshed Mehta’s article in a Karachi Anglo-Gujarati weekly called Parsi Sansar and Lokasevak. The criticism I have copied follows a glowing tribute paid by him to the satyagrahis who bore suffering without retaliation. But we have no reason to be puffed up with pride over certificates of merit. In so far as we observed non-violence we only did our duty.

It is then the warning of this true friend of humanity and his country that we must treasure and profit by. What he has said of Karachi is likely to be true more or less of other places.

Non-violence to be a potent force must begin with the mind. Non-violence of the mere body without the co-operation of the mind is non-violence of the weak or the cowardly and has therefore no potency. It is, as Jamshedji says truly, a degrading performance. If we bear malice and hatred in our bosoms and pretend not to retaliate, it must recoil upon us and lead to our destruction. For abstention from mere bodily non-violence not to be injurious, it is at least necessary not to entertain hatred if we cannot generate active love. All the songs and speeches betokening hatred must be taboo.

It is equally true to say that indiscriminate resistance to authority must lead to lawlessness, unbridled licence and consequent self-destruction.

If Jamshedji’s criticism was not more than balanced by his appreciation, that is to say, if the sum total of real non-violence had not overbalanced the unreal, India would not have gone forward as it has done. But better even than the Karachi Lord Mayor’s appreciation is the undoubted fact that the villagers have instinctively observed non-violence in a manner never before thought of. It is their non-violence that has conduced to the growth of national consciousness.

The mysterious effect of non-violence is not be measured by its visible effect. But we dare not rest content so long as the poison of hatred is allowed to permeate society. This struggle is a stupendous effort at conversion. We aim at nothing less than the conversion of the English. It can never be done by harbouring ill will and will pretending to follow non-violence. Let those therefore who want to follow the path of non-violence and yet harbour ill will retrace their steps and repent of the wrong they have done to themselves and country.

Young India, 2-4-1931
Institutions like yours ought to be governed by strict rules and restrictions. The question put to me is whether workers who join the institution should take something for their livelihood or not. There are some who consider it below their dignity to take something and prefer to work in an honorary capacity. Some others say that even the nation’s servants must get a subsistence allowance or else we shall have to seek millionaires as servants. I must say that there is false pride in holding that one would serve without taking money; there is no shame in taking just a subsistence allowance; it is one’s duty. Mr. Gokhale began with Rs. 40 and never took more than Rs. 75. He lived all his life Rs. 75. He used to be a member of commissions, etc., and whatever he got by way of allowances, etc., he made over to the Servants of India Society. He used to consider it a part of his religion to take just enough for subsistence; how can we regard that as an error? It is desirable that even a millionaire’s son should not rely on his millions but should donate his property to such an institution and then like other workers draw as much as is required for his livelihood.

The other point is whether such institutions ought to be bound by rules. A man without a pledge is like a ship without a rudder. I am not convinced by the argument that here one cannot manage without a hundred rupees. The Sindhis may well believe that they cannot manage with less, but my experience tells me that one can manage without difficulty on a much smaller amount. The institutions of Lalaji and Gokhaleji are well because of their names, but there are many other institutions which function in face of difficulties and restrictions and which have people who draw barely Rs. 25 to Rs. 30. Not more than Rs. 15 to Rs. 20 are ever drawn in Orissa. Hence we should lay down our requirements taking into consideration our country’s condition.

---

1 Sind National Service League, an institution “whose object is to organize public activities through the agency of whole-time workers, either in the capacity of permanent member or temporary workers”. The speech was made on its second anniversary.

2 From Bombay Secret Abstracts
Till today we worked in a wrong way—we did all our work in cities and formulated all our schemes keeping cities in view. We stayed away from village folk, hence they have so far regarded their privations as the result of divine wrath and could think of no other causes. Institutions of public service should be located among the people, be partners of their joys and sorrows and render service by spreading knowledge among them.

[From Gujarati]
Navajivan, 12-4-1931

373. LETTER TO G CUNNINGHAM

Dear Mr. Cunningham,

April 4, 1931

With reference to your letter of the 9th March, I am now in a position to inform you that in virtue of the Congress resolution, of which copy is herewith enclosed, I was appointed by the Working Committee sole delegate to represent the Congress at any Conference at which Congress delegation is considered desirable by the Government of India, the way being open at the time for the Congress to be represented. I shall be obliged if you will kindly place this letter before His Excellency the Viceroy.

Yours sincerely,

Enclosure:

1. Congress resolution No. 5 of March 29th—the Provisional Settlement...
2. Congress Working Committee resolution No. 3 of 2nd April...

From a photostat: C.W. 9345. Courtesy: India Office Library

1 For the texts of the resolutions No. 5 and No. 3 which followed, vide “Resolution on provisional settlement”, 29-3-1931.
2 ibid.
374. UNIQUE OPPORTUNITY

A well-known merchant of Bombay writes:

If there is any truth in this, the traders referred to should think over it. This much is certain:
1. The import of foreign cloth into India will certainly cease.
2. Permission will never be granted to sell the stock still lying with them.
3. This boycott will succeed eventually through khadi alone. Even if it can be achieved without khadi, it will not serve the cause of crores of people. The special value of this boycott lies in its being beneficial to the latter.
4. Although the boycott of foreign cloth is bound to have political consequences, it was not conceived with a view to these consequences. When it is complete, the economic condition of crores of poor people will immediately improve and an unemployed nation will be busy at work. For crores of people living in villages, this is swaraj. They cannot derive any greater benefit than this from swaraj.

The role of picketing will become clearer once this is understood. The above letter indicates that the majority of traders are not convinced even after a struggle of twelve months. They are eager at any cost to carry on the trade in foreign cloth. Farmers have been ruined, but despite this, these traders are not prepared to carry on an innocuous business in place of their sinful one. As this is the prevailing situation, picketing should be taken up. But it should be pure, i.e., non-violent. The traders may laugh today, may abuse women, may sell their goods at places where there is no picketing; despite all this, women have got a unique opportunity. I have already shown elsewhere while discussing Shri Jamshed Mehta’s article that our picketing was not free from blame. Boycott which is forcibly imposed can never succeed. Hence when we have got this opportunity those women who have realized the necessity of boycott and, in addition, have also realized that picketing should be wholly peaceful, should try and evolve a technique of peaceful picketing. If they do not see results, they should not accept defeat. As excitement

---

1 The letter is not translated here. It described how several traders had attempted to circumvent the boycott of foreign cloth.
2 Vide “Let us repent”, 2-4-1931.
subsides, they should not be disappointed if some women who love excitement leave the ranks. They should carry on their work with steadfast faith and determination.

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan, 5-4-1931

375. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

April 6, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

Mahtabbabu is a rich gentleman of Orissa, but he has given up that life now. He has come into close contact with Bhai Jivaram. He wants to spend some days in the Ashram and then open an Ashram of his own in Orissa. See that he is comfortable in the Ashram. Show him the Ashram rules, and give him every type of work to do. He is of a straightforward nature.

As you know, I have no time to write about other things. I hope to return there on the 10th. I will stay with Ambalalbhai.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati : M.M.U./1; also C.W. 8155. Courtesy : Narandas Gandhi

376. INTERVIEW TO THE PRESS

NEW DELHI,

April 6, 1931

Mr. Gandhi was shown the speech delivered by Mr. Zahur Ahmed at the All-India Muslim Conference today in which Mr. Zahur Ahmed had stated : “Mr. Gandhi had stated that there would be civil war in the country which would continue till one community was completely exhausted. I say why not test our mettle today and take decision on it?”

Mr. Gandhi told a Press representative :

There can be no more mischievous distortion of what I have said regarding internecine war than what you show me as having been said by Mr. Zahur Ahmed.

The Bombay Chronicle, 7-4-1931
I see that much misrepresentation is going on with reference to my attitude on the Hindu-Muslim question. My own personal view is quite clear. It is that of full surrender to any unanimously expressed wish of the Mussalmans and the Sikhs. I would like the Hindus to see the beauty of the solution. It can come only out of consciousness of moral strength. It follows that before I can cultivate Hindu opinion on a particular formula, I must have that formula. That is not forthcoming. That which was given to the Congress deputation at the Muslim Parties’ meeting on the 4th instant was not a unanimous minimum. For one thing I had the warning of the Nationalist Muslims not to accept anything that did not proceed on the principle of joint electorates based on adult suffrage. Some of the Nationalists are my oldest co-workers to whom Maulana Shaukat Ali gave certificates for honesty, bravery and true love of Islam and who have proved the truth of the Maulana’s certificates. When they tell me that separate electorates are bad for Mussalmans, I must listen to them. They further claim that the Mussalman masses do not want separate electorates. Be that as it may, I cannot identify myself with any solution which is frankly based on communalism and yet has not what may be called unanimous support of the community concerned. A solution that is admittedly defective and antinational must, to be acceptable, have the merit at least of almost unanimous support from those affected by it.

I am unable to understand the anger that is being shown against those who do not at once subscribe to the separate electorate idea. There is no doubt that it is possible for any large body of opinion to stop the country’s march towards swaraj. Swaraj based on non-violence cannot be obtained if it is resisted by even a respectable minority. It is wrong to say suggest that under swaraj there will be majority rule. In true swaraj there can only be the rule of justice. In spite of the great awakening that has taken place, I for one would be content to wait if the accredited leaders of the Mussalmans or the Sikhs would oppose the attainment of a swaraj constitution. The fight for swaraj once begun can only end when the constitution which is its visible symbol is framed and passed. The next phase of the struggle in the absence of a communal solution may, therefore, assume a different form, the goal still remaining the same.

---

1 From The Hindu, 7-4-1931

Members of the All-India Muslim Conference have made angry references to the occurrences at Cawnpore, Benares, Mirzapur, Agra and other places. But will anger solve the question? I find highly exaggerated statements being made. Some of them are without foundation. If the goal of these friends is freedom for Hindus, Mussalmans and all others for whom India is their home, they will not allow themselves to be deflected such events from the path of justice. I join them in detesting the horrors perpetrated in these places. I am ashamed of them, whether perpetrated by Hindus or Mussalmans. Greater shame overtakes me when I find Hindus perpetrating butchery. But we have no data as yet for distributing blame. I do not believe in retaliation. For me as a Hindu, therefore, whether as aggressors or defenders, those who resorted to murders, arson and unnamable cruelties are undoubtedly to blame and call for the greatest condemnation. But I would implore everyone to avoid the language of anger and hatred for, without doing any good to anybody, it can only add fuel to the fire that has hardly yet died out.

A.I.C.C. File No. 332, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

378. SPEECH TO FEDERATION OF INDIAN CHAMBERS OF COMMERCE AND INDUSTRY, DELHI

April 7, 1931

I hope the English friends here will forgive me for addressing you in the national language. I recall on this occasion the War Conference in Delhi which was held in this very hall in 1918 and in which after some discussion with the Viceroy I consented to participate. But when I consented to do so I requested the Viceroy to permit me to address the Conference in Hindi or Hindustani. I knew there was no need to ask for this permission, but courtesy required that I should do so, lest my speaking in Hindi should shock the Viceroy. In this very same hall today I propose to follow the same practice. And I would suggest to you, members of the Federation, that it is your duty to carry on your proceedings in the national language, looking to the fact that the members of the Federation are all Indians and that you are allowing yourselves to be influenced by the present national spirit. Whilst I was listening to the President’s address with attention, I wondered whether in speaking in a foreign language he would succeed in making on you and on me the impression that he desired. In no other country, dependent or independent, was such an anomaly to be met with. In South Africa, which is a thinly populated country, there has been a long struggle for precedence between English and Taal (a dialect of Dutch) with the result that the English colonists had to yield to the brave Dutch in recognizing Taal as the official language on the same footing as English.

1 This appeared as a condensed translation under the caption, “Question of Safeguards”. Among those present were Sir George Schuster, Vallabhbhai Patel, Jawaharlal Nehru and Madan Mohan Malaviya.

2 For Gandhiji’s speech, vide “Speech on Swadeshi, Bombay”, 17-6-1919.

Your President has dwelt at length on the insistence of the Englishmen that in any constitution which may be granted to India the rights of Englishmen, especially of the English commercial and mercantile firms in India, should be safeguarded. The Congress has considered this question carefully, and I should like to state its position. It has been said that Indian swaraj will be the rule of the majority community, i.e., the Hindus. There could not be a greater mistake than that. If it were to be true, I for one would refuse to call it swaraj and would fight it with all the strength at my command, for to me Hind Swaraj is the rule of all the people, is the rule of justice. Whether under that rule the ministers were Hindus or Mussalmans or Sikhs, and whether the legislature was exclusively filled by the Hindus or Mussalmans or any other community, they would have to do even-handed justice. And just as no community in India need have any fear of swaraj being monopolize by any other, even so the English should have no fear. The question of safeguards should not arise at all. Swaraj would be real swaraj only when there would be no occasion for safeguarding any such rights.

How is it that the insistence on equal rights by Europeans comes to us with a shock of surprise? How is it that it does not strike us as natural and legitimate? The answer puts me in mind of an incident in South Africa. You know that I fought General Smuts in South Africa for a number of years. With reference to the question of race prejudice and colour prejudice there he once told me a story which impressed me very much. He said:

---

1 Shri Ram
When I was about the same time as you studying in England, I had no race prejudice or colour prejudice against your people. In fact if we had known each other we should have lived as friends or brothers. Why is it then that now we have become rivals, that we have conflicting interests? It is not colour prejudice or race prejudice, though some of our people do ignorantly talk in those terms, but there is one thing which I want you to recognize. It is this. I may have no racial legislation, but how will you solve the difficulty about the fundamental difference between our cultures? Let alone the question of superiority, there is no doubt but that your civilization is different from ours. Ours must not be overwhelmed by yours. That is why we have to go in for legislation which must in effect put disabilities on you.

I understood what he said and recognized that we could not have any other standard there. I also appreciated the fear of being swamped in these days of swift communications. If, therefore, we wanted to live in South Africa, I said to myself, we must adopt their standard of life, so long as it was not against morality.

Let us try to understand the genesis of this talk of equal rights in the light of what I have said. With all deference I would tell the Englishmen that at the back of their insistence is their insistence on living their standard and civilization. There is a wide gulf between our way of life and that of the Viceroy however good he may be. Our people, when they go abroad, adopt the manners and customs of those countries, but shed them as soon as they come back home, and if they retain them, they become strangers. It is a mercy that the Western way of life has not yet taken deep root in our country. But the fear at the back of the Indian’s mind is lest he should be swamped by the onrush of Western civilization. In this problem I invite the help of all Englishmen who, if they choose to stay here, must live in conformity with our way of life and as the servants of our country. The same cause has been at the root of the clash between the Chinese and the Europeans and the Chinese and the Americans. I want our English friends to understand what I am saying. The whole trouble arises out of the Englishman’s insistence on living according to his Western way of life and according to Western standards. I am quite aware that our civilization has its blemishes,—untouchability is an indelible stain on Hinduism and I have called it Satanic,—but I do not want to give Hinduism up, for the simple reason that I was born and bred in it. I would purge it of its blemishes. If then we contemplate examining so-called vested rights in the light of India’s interest, it is not because of racial prejudice but because of vital necessity. Their vested rights may not smother nascent indigenous enterprise.

Your President has paid a tribute to the Congress, and suggested, that the Congress should confer with commercial experts in economic matters. I welcome the suggestion. The Congress would always be glad of your advice and help. I may tell you that the Congress does not belong to any particular group of men; it belongs to all, but the protection of the poor peasantry, which forms the bulk of the population, must be its primary interest. The Congress must, therefore, truly represent the poor. But that does not mean that all other classes—the middle classes, the capitalist or zamindar—must go under. All that it aims at is that all other classes must subserve the interest of the poor. The Congress stands for the industrial prosperity and progress of India. The industrial classes are slowly coming within the Congress fold. During the past year they rendered it help for which we cannot be too grateful. In fact your invitation to me to address you is not due to my name, but because I am humble servant of the Congress and representative of Daridranarayana. I cannot forget the services rendered by the commercial classes, but I want you to go a step further. I want you to make the Congress your own and we would willingly surrender the reins to you. The work can be better done by you. But if you decide to assume the reins, you can do so only on one condition. You should regard yourselves as trustees and servants of the poor. Your commerce must be regulated for the benefit of the toiling millions, or as Pandit Malaviya would put it, you must be satisfied with earning the ‘pure cowrie’, i.e., an honest penny. I do not for a moment believe that commercial prosperity is incompatible with strict honesty. I know business men who are absolutely honest and scrupulous in their dealings. It is thus easily open to you to take charge of the Congress. You know that there is no constitution more democratic than the Congress constitution, it has worked for ten years without a hitch. It is based practically on adult suffrage.

If we want your co-operation in our task, I want that of the Englishmen too. I want to remind them of the services rendered to the Congress in the past by distinguished Englishmen and Englishwomen like Hume, Yule, Wedderburn and Dr. Besant. In fact the Congress owes its birth to the genius of a large-hearted Englishmen. And I want English-man now to join us in our work of serving the poor. It is entirely a matter of good-will, a matter of the heart. Give your heart to the poor of India.

In conclusion, I repeat the Congress seeks to represent all. Our nationalism can be no peril to other nations, in as much as we will exploit none just as we will allow none to exploit us. Through swaraj we should serve the whole world. In this task I invite your greater co-operation so that civil disobedience may not have to be resumed. With your material and intellectual co-operation heartily rendered, our demand for swaraj would be absolutely irresistible.

Young India, 16-4-1931

379. DISCUSSION WITH SIKHS, AMRITSAR

[April 8, 1931]

GANDHIJI. But I am prepared to meet and discuss things with as many of you as you like. . . . Here you find me prisoner of my own people. . . . But tell me now what you want me to do. Have you anything new to tell me?

SIKHS. No.

Then why should you have said my presence was indispensable?

S. We wanted you at the Sikh League.

Master Tara Singh summed up the Sikhs' attitude as he had done in his own speech: 'We are pledged to fight communalism tooth and nail. You suggest a national solution and we will submit to it. The total surrender that you suggest is not a national solution, we will not allow ourselves to be bullied by a community.'

But if you insist on the national point of view, the way you have adopted is hardly the way.

S. The only way to fight communalism is by counter-demands of the same

1 From the “Weekly Letter”; Mahadev Desai reports: “At the place where Gandhiji was put up on an upper storey it was a bedlam let loose. From the moment of his arrival—or several hours before it—until late at night, the house was closely besieged by crowds which all hours of the day yelled and yelled until they compelled Gandhiji to go every now and then to the balcony to ‘give his darshan’. It was most tiresome, but inevitable. Going out of this besieged house was out of the question and headache and temperature made conditions worse. The Sikh friends, who had now realized everything, were genuinely sorry for having called Gandhiji and themselves suggested that he should not go to the Sikh League.”

2 From The Bombay Chronicle, 9-4-1931
You cannot fight communalism by communalism. But mine is the only solution, communal or national. The moment you realize that we do not want a third power to arbitrate for us, we will for the moment agree to surrender everything—not because it is the ideal solution or a just solution but because it is the only expedient. And why do you fear willing surrender to a community as such? Take my attitude on the National Flag question. The flag is my own personal creation. It has been before the country for ten years, a lot of sentiment has gathered round it, much sacrifice and suffering has been gone through to keep it flying. Do you think it is a pleasure to me to agree to its being altered? But I know that you are dissatisfied and if only to please your community I agreed to have a Committee about the flag. In the same way we might be called upon to do many things to satisfy a particular community.

But this did not seem to carry conviction.

Well, then I suggest that you should meet the nationalist Muslims, discuss the situation with them and arrive at a solution which satisfies them and you and place it before the country.

Young India, 23-4-1931

380. SPEECH AT AMRITSAR

_April 8, 1931_

In a joint reply¹ in Hindi Mahatmaji, though ill, in a clear and low voice said that the piece of cloth tied round his head showed that he was not keeping well. A few months ago he was a prisoner of the Government but today he was a prisoner of the people. Since he had arrived in the morning the crowd had so besieged the bungalow that he had not been able to go out once and, therefore, begged the forgiveness of the Municipality for not being able to receive their address at Town Hall. The address had referred to communal question. They were all faced with the question of this communal settlement. He was trying his best to find a solution that would satisfy all parties. It was not the work of one man or of the Mahatma alone. If they could all make up their minds that they would not be afraid of each other and would not quarrel with each other, if they really wanted to live together at peace with each other, the matter could be settled without much difficulty. It was for them to give the lead. What Amritsar would do today, the rest of Punjab would do tomorrow and subsequently the whole of India would do the

¹ To addresses, presented at the place where Gandhiji was staying, by Amritsar Municipal Committee and the City Congress Committee
If what they had said in their address fully proceeded from their hearts he hoped they would prove their sincerity by living up to their professions.

Replying to the address of the Congress Committee, Mahatmaji said the name of the Congress had become great in the country. The eyes of the whole world had been fixed towards the Congress. By the Gandhi-Irwin agreement they had not as yet attained swaraj. He did not know how far or near it was. But let there be no mistake. The Congress had declared purna swaraj, i.e., complete independence as its immediate goal, and they dared not rest till it was reached. Its early attainment depended on the nation’s capacity to live up to the ideal of absolute non-violence. In proportion they had failed to do so, their progress towards it had been hindered. He did not want the nation to adopt the path of non-violence out of weakness. The non-violence which he wanted the nation to follow was really the weapon of the strong. The Congress was pledged to the creed of non-violence.

Concluding, Mahatmaji said he was feeling weak and therefore couldn’t say more. He thanked both the Committees for their addresses. Whatever work they were doing in India, said Mahatmaji, if they all did with united strength, they would surely win swaraj. To him swaraj meant insaf raj or rule of justice.

Mahatma Gandhi then once more stood on the balcony and gave darshan to the crowd below. They again lustily cheered him.

The Tribune, 10-4-1931

381. OTHER POLITICAL PRISONERS

There has been much heart-burning over the fact that the release of all political prisoners whether convicted of violence or otherwise should not have been made a condition of the settlement. This was clearly impossible in the sense that the demand would not have been just or wise. It could not be made as a condition for suspending civil disobedience. It could be made as a condition in a final settlement. Some people have thoughtlessly argued that I would not demand the release of prisoners convicted of violence because of my non-violence. The fact is that my non-violence to be worth anything would have made the demand obligatory on me, had it been otherwise just in my estimation. But what was not possible for me to do in connection with the settlement, I had no hesitation in recommending the Congress to do. The Congress resolution in the matter is published elsewhere. It is, I admit, sweeping in character and includes all possible prisoners or persons under restraint. It includes those who being out of India are prohibited from re-entering, and it includes the Punjab Martial Law prisoners who have been rotting in the jails since 1915 and are all old men by this time. It includes also over 400 detenus of Bengal and Punjab against whom no crime has been proved. They were arbitrarily arrested and are as arbitrarily detained. It includes also the Meerut undertrial prisoners whose long-drawn-out trial is a perfect scandal. Sjt. Nariman has been appointed to make an exhaustive list of all these prisoners. It will be possible to take some step under the resolution as soon as the list is made. I hope, therefore, that all concerned will help Sjt. Nariman so as to enable him to prepare the list at the earliest possible time.

Of course the Government need not even wait for the list. I admit that from their standpoint all the prisoners will not stand on the same footing. Let them begin by releasing without being asked those at least whose case, I shall hope to show through these pages, is unanswerable. A strong Government never errs when it releases prisoners before the expiry of their sentences, for it ever possesses the power to rearrest them should they commit crimes. And political crime becomes rare when there is no political injustice.

Young India, 9-4-1931

---

1 When the Defence of India Act was passed as an “essential war measure”
NOTES

GANESH SHANKAR VIDYARTHI

The death of Ganesh Shankar Vidyarthi was one to be envied by us all. His blood is the cement that will ultimately bind the two communities. No pact will bind our hearts. But heroism such as Ganesh Shankar Vidyarthi showed is bound in the end to melt the stoniest hearts, melt them into one. The poison has however gone so deep that the blood even of a man so great, so self-sacrificing and so utterly brave as Ganesh Shankar Vidyarthi may today not be enough to wash us of it. Let this noble example stimulate us all to similar effort should the occasion arise again. I tender to the bereaved widow and her children not my condolences but my congratulations for having deserved Ganesh Shankar Vidyarthi. He is not dead. He lives today far more truly than when we saw him in the body and knew him not.

HINDI OR HINDUSTANI

It is becoming increasingly difficult year after year to conduct the Congress proceedings or the A.I.C.C. proceedings in English. The majority in the A.I.C.C. do not follow English as well as they can Hindustani. And of those that do, the vast majority demand Hindi. At the open session Sardar Vallabhbhai had difficulty in obtaining a hearing for English speakers. For the next year the people from the South have promised to learn Hindi enough to be able to talk and follow the proceedings in Hindustani. If they will give three hours per day for three months most of them will have no difficulty in gaining a passable knowledge of the language. I hope the friends from the South and Bengal will make the necessary effort and save the nation’s time. At any rate I propose to keep the members to their promise and not heed the demand for English if it is made in spite of the promise not to make it.

Young India, 9-4-1931
The appointment by the Working Committee of me as the sole delegate to any conference to which the Congress delegation is desired by the Government was made after over two hours’ exhaustive discussion. The idea behind it was that what was to be presented was not several points of view but only the Congress view. The Congress view was set forth in the mandate. What was not in the mandate was to be covered either by a letter of instructions from the Working Committee or instructions received from time to time. Either therefore the whole Working Committee should be appointed or only one member holding its power of attorney. The latter arrangement thus easily became the best, most efficacious and most economical in every sense of the word. For not only would money be saved but energy. What is more, Congress could not afford to keep away from the country without sufficient cause its best workers for any length of time. It is the implicit belief of Congressmen that in the end it will not be work at the Conference that will bring swaraj; it can only be work in India that can do it. Not the ability of the delegation will tell at the Conference but the power behind it. It was further thought that the Congress delegation was not designed to enter into or examine details but to discuss and examine principle and their application. And whether at the end of the Conference it was to be peace or war, every available hand was needed in the country. We want all our men and women in the country to avoid war. For the best way to ensure peace is to push up the constructive programme and to implement the conditions of the provisional settlement. Moreover the reader should know that the people directly affected by the settlement are not at all satisfied with the way in which the agents of the Government are carrying out its conditions. Constant vigilance on the spot is therefore necessary. From every point of view, therefore, the appointment of sole delegation was not only desirable but almost necessary.

But this appointment enchances my responsibility a thousand fold. My task, however, becomes light with the thought that I have but to carry out the instructions of my principals. For the rest I have to seek God’s infalliable guidance and ‘be careful for nothing’. And then who knows that if and when the time comes, the way will be open for me to attend the Conference?

Young India, 9-4-1931

---

384. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

ON WAY TO AHMEDABAD,

April 9, 1931

DEAR MR. EMERSON,

I thank you for your letter of 2nd instant, which shall receive immediate attention.

Though I am still feverish and travelling, I dare not delay writing to you on the matter mentioned in your letter of 31st March¹ and discussed² between us on 6th instant, when we met at your house. The only way I can account for the impression left on H. E. the Viceroy and later on you, is that we have been thinking at cross purposes. I could never surrender the primary function of the Congress, viz., to speak for and represent the peasantry. The Congress, as I told you, is predominantly a peasants’ and workers’ organization. The Congress could not possibly implement the terms of the settlement if the local authorities refused to recognize and treat with sympathy the advances of the Congress when speaking for the peasantry. The difficulties you mentioned about U.P., I am convinced, could all have been solved if the local authorities had sent for the Congress officials in their respective districts. Many of the Congress officials are well known to them. I suggest that any other attitude would be contrary to the spirit of the settlement, and must defeat the very purpose we both have in view. It would be wrong to accuse the Congress of breach of the settlement if the local authorities by ignoring local Congressmen render it impossible for them to implement it. After all the terms have to be carried out through the people and the Congressmen must fail if they could not interpret the people’s wishes and woes to the authorities.

It is possible that the Congress officials may err as the Government officials may. These errors can be easily rectified. But the Con-

¹ Vide footnote 3, p. 334.
² For the note on the interview, vide Appendix XIV.
gress may not, even on that account, be looked upon with suspicion or distust whilst the settlement lasts.

After my investigation of the complaints received by you about Gujarat and after my interviews with Mr. Garrett\(^1\) and then His Excellency the Governor of Bombay I shall be able to give the illustrations of the application of the principle I have endeavoured to set forth.

Lastly I hardly need to give you my assurance that I shall strain every nerve to see that the terms of the settlement are carried out by the Congress so far as it is humanly possible.

My movement is. . . .\(^2\)

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

H. W. EMERSON, ESQ.

A.I.C.C. file No. 16-B, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library; also Young India, 20-8-1931

385. INTERVIEW TO “TEJ”

DELIHI,

April 9, 1931

While Gandhiji was passing through Delhi on his way to Broach, he was interviewed by a representative of the Tej who drew Mahatmaji’s attention to the news regarding the murder of the Midnapore Magistrate\(^3\). Gandhiji said:

I am deeply grieved. The young men who resort to such murders do no good to the country. I make an appeal to them. They must recognize that the country has gained immeasurably by the non-vviolent campaign. I contend that the progress would have been still greater, if there had been no violence done or preached. I still urge those who believe in the utility of political violence to stay their hands, whilst the Congress retains the creed of non-violence. If they are impatient, let them fix their own time-limit. But having done so, they must religiously abide by it and do propaganda work in that behalf.

The Tribune, 11-4-1931

\(^1\) J. H. Garrett, Commissioner, Northern Division

\(^2\) The source is blank here.

\(^3\) Peddie
386. LETTER TO NARSINHRAO B. DIVETIA

April 11, 1931

SUNNA BHAISHRI,

I did not know that you had gone to live in another house. I got your gift. Many thanks for it. The Bhajanvali contains one more English hymn. Take up that, too, for translation, when you have free time.

Vandemataram from

Mohanandas

[From Gujarati]

Narasinhraoni Rojnishi, p. 513

387. SPEECH AT CONVOCATION, GUJARAT VIDYAPITH, AHMEDABAD

April 11, 1931

My blessings were already bestowed on you, that is, on the snatakas, and the gramdikshits when I read out the address. But my inward blessings are to be given now. I hope you will take pride in the certificates you have received and will not underrate yourselves. I also hope that you will adhere to the pledge that you have just taken. It is easy to repeat a vow that is either written or printed. To grasp it fully and make up one’s mind to act upon it is difficult. I also expect that you will not utter a single thought less or inadvertent word about the Vidyapith or other current national activities. I consider that to be the foundation of progress. The students must have this foundation; otherwise I have no doubt the superstructure will remain weak. Here a distinction has been made between the snatakas and the gramdikshits and that is right. If you want to preserve truth, you cannot do without distinguishing between the two. The curriculum for the snatakas is different and they have to put in more years. Because of that I hope the village dikshits will not think less of themselves than the snatakas. Theirs is no small task. I should not be surprised if they beat the latter ¹ This appeared under the title “A Proud Record”; the first and the last paragraphs are translated from Navajivan, 3-5-1931.

² Graduates
³ Village workers
by their record of work. I for one would say that there is more need for these dikshits than these snatakas for since the inception of the Vidyapith I have been repeating that through it we must reach the village. The snatakas’ ambition should also be to qualify themselves for service in the villages. We have not yet fully realized how the Vidyapith has served the nation.

I am delighted beyond measure to know of the part you have played in the great struggle. The Bihar Vidyapith and Kashi Vidyapith also distinguished themselves in a like manner. When the history of the fight comes to be written, the contribution of our Vidyapiths to the struggle will occupy a large space in it. Even the world will be proud of your glorious record. When in jail I read something about the students and teachers of the Vidyapith, I naturally drew a comparison between Government educational institutions and the national ones, and I felt that our programme for boycott of Government educational institutions had more than justified itself. When I say this, I do not lose sight of the fact that Government schools and colleges are still full of students. There is also the more painful fact that students are so eager to go to those institutions that they do not hesitate to sign the most abject apologies and to pay fines to get admission to them. I have known circulars by heads or directors of the educational department that those who may have directly or indirectly taken part in the struggle or who may have gone to jail may not be readmitted until after the previous sanction of these heads. What is one to say of those students and of those directors of education? I wonder if you know anything about the Government’s attitude with regard to the Hindu University. It would have lost its grant, but for the fearlessness and the readiness for sacrifice of Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviyaji. But even if the grant had been forfeited, Malaviyaji would not have shed a single tear. He was determined that the University should rather go without the grant than that any teacher or student who served the country be penalized for his service.

Let the proud record of the Vidyapith fill the snatakas and dikshits with pride that they are the alumni of no less an institution than the Gujarat Vidyapith. Let them not feel that they had joined the institution through sheer helplessness. Let them not be depressed by the thought that they are a handful. Though a handful they are like the ocean, and though the students of Government institutions resemble by their numbers the ocean, they are as unreal as mirage. For the education that they receive and the life they are taught to live cannot give them the vital energy to win swaraj, whereas an institution like the Vidyapith can do so in a large measure as one can see from the last year’s record. Let those who have helped to maintain the Vidyapith realize that their money has been spent to noble purpose and that it has come back to them with compound interest. Let them study the Registrar’s report and see if any institution in India can boast of a prouder record. I invite their attention to Kakasaheb’s appeal for funds and trust that the money needed will be paid up automatically.

But that led him to the question of economy in national expenditure and the duty of those who would have to run the swaraj Government in future.

I want you to study the Vidyapith accounts. You will see that strict economy has been maintained. I do not think anyone can beat me in my passion for guarding and expending public money like a miser. The reason is obvious. Public money belongs to the poor public of India than whom there is none poorer on earth. That is why I asked the Sardar to make drastic cuts in the next year’s budget for Gujarat. I am hoping that the provisional settlement may lead on to permanent peace, and I shall leave no stone unturned to achieve it. But man is often powerless before Nature. I at any rate cannot strive with Nature, and Nature seems for the time being to be against us. And if God wills that there should be no peace, you may be sure that the next struggle will be fiercer than the last and will engulf us all. And it may have to be fought without any resources. Gujarat may be always ready to contribute funds, but even the resources of Gujarat are not inexhaustible. Let us therefore think twice before we expend a pie and curtail our expenditure in all directions. I have often wondered where we get all our cars from, and whether we need them really. I know I often use motor-car but let no one follow my bad example. Let the snataka and the dikshit of the Vidyapith make a point of going out to the villages on foot whenever possible. Let us be worthy of swaraj when it comes. Let us remember that we have 20 points now instead of 11 which contain the quintessence of swaraj, and let me tell you that it was not I who fixed the maximum salary of the Swaraj Viceroy at Rs. 500 but Pandit Jawaharlal. He has given his thought to the problem and he has deliberately fixed that amount. And if that is to be salary of the Viceroy, what is to be the remuneration of an ordinary worker? Let us keep that ideal in the mind and cut our coat according to our cloth. The Government of today collects taxes by force and recovers revenue at the point of the bayonet. In swaraj we shall not be able to do so, we will have numerous Garhwalis to refuse to use arms against their brethren. Let us therefore order our affairs in the terms of the poor of the land. Let us not go to sleep, now that there is a provisional settlement. We have to be more wakeful, more cautious, more careful and let us be ready to account for every pie that we receive from the public.

It is my duty to ask you to make real sacrifices. May the _snatakas_ and _gramdikshits_ fare well and may God grant them the strength to observe the pledge they have taken.

_Young India_, 16-4-1931

388. _THE NATIONAL WEEK_

It may be said that I had forgotten the National Week this time, or you may say that ever since I came out of Yeravda Prison, it has been one unbroken National Week for me. Under pressure of continuous work which keeps coming up, I become oblivious of the day of the week, the date, whether according to the English calendar or the Indian one. I was not even aware of the single meal that I was to take on the 6th. Luckily, of late owing to travelling and lack of sleep, I eat practically only one meal a day, hence it may be said that I unknowingly observed the 6th.

I know that what happened to me also happened to others, as I am not aware of anyone in the camp having recalled this fact. If even a single person had thought of it. I would have known it. The truth of the matter is that the awakening of the past twelve months has made us forget such special days like the National Week. Prior to this, we pretended to be active during the National Week, thus making some amends for our year-long idleness. That idleness is no longer there and the impatience to win swaraj has kept many of us busy in the final bid for it.

This is as it should be. But it may be said that our effort is, to a small or large extent, blind. We would have reached our destination long ago if our effort were equally matched by knowledge and discretion. Although there is enthusiasm, it tosses us hither and thither for want of a lighthouse in the form of discretion. If that were not so, the unfortunate incidents which took place in Kanpur, Benares, Agra, Mirzapur and other places would not have occurred. Both Hindus and Muslims lost their sanity. Both descended to a level lower than even that of beasts. These are no signs of eagerness on our part to win swaraj. Those Hindus who used to blame the Muslims started indulging in the very acts which they had condemned. Our peacefulness turned out to be merely verbal. Those who have learnt the lesson of peace know that a peaceful attitude has to be maintained not only towards the British, but also amongst ourselves. However, I hope to write more on this subject when I find time to do so.

What applies to peace also applies to khadi. I have regarded khadi as the very embodiment of peace, that is, non-violence. For, khadi implies pure love towards the poor, it implies unalloyed cooperation with them. Although those who give alms to the starving may be said to be compassionate, their cooperation with the poor is not untainted; they put the latter under an obligation and so regard them as inferior to themselves. Those who wear khadi made by the hallowed hands of the poor—whether it be fine or coarse, expensive or otherwise—become their comrades and always help them to become industrious as also preserve their self-respect. The propaganda for khadi becomes an important activity during the National Week.

And so too with untouchability. At the Jallianwala Bagh, the blood of all was shed together. There was no distinction there between the “touchables” and untouchables, between the Hindus, the Muslims and the Sikhs. A further attempt is also made during the National Week to make people forget these differences. In other words, this Week is celebrated for the purpose of self-purification. This article should be in the hands of the reader on the 12th instant, so that two days of the Week would still remain. Every reader who has not undergone these three kinds of purification should wake up and make his contribution to the best of his ability.

[From Gujarati]

_Navajivan_, 12-4-1931
389. VIDYAPITH’S APPEAL FOR FUNDS

I draw the attention of readers to the Vidyapith’s annual appeal for funds. The contribution made by the national Vidyapiths in the last struggle cannot be regarded as negligible. If the part played by the professors and students—both men and women—is taken into account, it is not an exaggeration to say that the Vidyapiths have justified their existence and have given adequate return for the money spent on them. I have had personal experience of the services rendered by the professors—both men and women—of the Gujarat Vidyapith. It is my hope that the Rs. 40,000 appealed for will soon be forthcoming. It should not at all be necessary for the Principal or the professors to go from door to door. It would do credit to both the Vidyapith and the people and a double purpose would be served if the Vidyapith gives an annual account of its services and the public, without any effort, meet its demands for the coming year.

[From Gujarati]
Navajivan, 12-4-1931

390. MY NOTES
THOUGHTLESS ARGUMENTS

The following extract is from a letter written by a resident of Ahmedabad who has given his name and address.

There is a good deal of thoughtlessness in this argument. I do not harm the cause of the spinning-wheel when I stay at a mill-owner’s place. Though I love the spinning-wheel, I bear no ill will towards mill-owners. I started propaganda for the spinning-wheel twelve years ago and my association with the mill-owners also dates back to the same time. This is not the first time that I have stayed with these people.

A satyagrahi bears no ill will towards anyone. He accomplishes his task through love. Even while staying with the mill-owners, I make them render some service to the cause of khadi. I take funds also from them for khadi. I have such friends among the mill-owners who, along with their families, habitually wear khadi. This is no outward show on their part, but it indicates their faith in khadi.

\[1\] Not translated here

At present, the textile mills are doing no harm to khadi as the entire country has not become khadi-minded. The mill-owners would readily given up the textile mills if the entire country took to khadi and the spinning-wheel plied in every home. I believe they would not be against khadi even for a moment. I also believe that, if they are depraved enough to oppose it, their attempt to do so would prove futile. It is almost impossible to prevent the setting up of new textile mills so long as there are innumerable people who wear mill-made cloth. The mills should be prevented from competing with khadi. This has been done to some extent and attempts are being made to stop the mills’ competition altogether. Hence the duty of the citizens of Ahmedabad and others is to carry on propaganda for khadi and to spread spinning far and wide. This task cannot be accomplished by bearing ill will towards the mill-owners or by severing my connection with them.

FOREIGN-CLOTH DEALERS

It is a matter of sorrow that foreign-cloth dealers do not still seem to be able to resist temptation. They should realize that foreign cloth—whether English, Japanese or any other—will no more be consumed in India. The opposition to it is increasing and not decreasing and it will keep on gaining in tempo. The golden remedy for the hunger of crores of people lies hidden in giving up foreign cloth. In order to make a success of this renunciation, some have laid down their lives, thousands have suffered lathi-blows, thousands have courted imprisonment. Do not the foreign-cloth merchants regard this as an adequate sacrifice? As compared to the loss suffered by the country, these people will find that they have no right to bemoan their own loss. The latter means their giving up a portion of the income which they have gained by carrying on an immoral trade for many years, and their being satisfied with perhaps a smaller income in future. Why do they not exchange their business for that of khadi? The art, interest and purity in the khadi trade are not there in the trade in foreign cloth. As the former is something new, there is scope in it for the full use of one’s intelligence and courage. Both self-interest and benevolence are subsumed in it. Hence if it is carried on with integrity, it will be regarded as an untainted form of business.
But the subject-matter of this article is not trade in khadi, but the abandonment of trade in foreign cloth. After giving up the latter, merchants may trade in anything else they like. They should, however, shun foreign cloth looking upon it as sinful.

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan, 12-4-1931

391. LETTER TO J. H. GARRETT

[April 12, 1931]

DEAR MR. GARRETT,

Perhaps you have heard from the Government of India that I would seek an interview with you regarding the Gujarat affairs arising out of the settlement. If you are agreeable and can spare the time, I would like to wait on you today at any time convenient to you.

Yours sincerely,

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-C, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

392. LETTER TO MIRA

[Before April 13, 1931]

CHI. MIRA,

I get your love-letters regularly. I note that you will meet me at Bombay on 16th instant for certain. The Broach appointment is cancelled. I therefore leave Ahmedabad on 15th instant. Therefore it is likely that you will travel by the same train as I shall. I leave by the first mail.

This should reach you just the day you would be leaving Karachi. Romain Rolland cabled to Ambalalbhai inquiring about your and my health. Evidently the reporters had done the mischief. He had wired back saying both of us were doing well. I wonder if you had anything from your mother. In any case she must have had anxious days for nothing. Your system will be all the purer for the measles.

1 The meeting with the addressee requested by Gandhiji in the letter took place on this date; vide footnote on “Letter to J.H. Garrett”, 13-4-1931. as also the postscript to “Letter to J.H. Garrett”, 13-4-1931.

I did not tell you that my blood pressure was found to be lower than 160 which was better than the last and the nervous system was quite good. Dr. Ansari had expected deterioration in both. Of course, I am still weak and disinclined to work. But that is natural. The terrible strain of Karachi has not still worn out.

Prabhavati has gone to Patna, her father-in-law being bad. Krishnadas and Balkoba are dangerously ill. Krishnadas is in Brijkrishan’s house. Balkoba has pleurisy and high fever. Krishnadas has pneumonia and is now having gas treatment.

Imam Saheb too is faring none too well. I have not yet seen him. I must go and see him. I have prohibited his being brought to me.

Love.

BAPU

From the original : C.W. 5431. Courtesy : Mirabehn; also G.N. 9665

393. MESSAGE TO CONFERENCE OF GUJARAT VIDYAPITH GRADUATES

AHMEDABAD,
April 13, 1931

I congratulate the graduates on the sacrifice they made in the fight but behind that congratulation is entertained a great hope. Graduates might be experiencing perhaps better than I do that the atmosphere is at present full of violence. Without entering into the reasons why it is not widely prevailing, I reminded the graduates that they are the special representatives of non-violence and truth. If these two powers are dominant in their minds they might be able to rid the atmosphere of violence to a great extent.

The Bombay Chronicle, 14-4-1931

1 In Bapu’s Letters to Mira, Mirabehn explains : “I fell ill with chickenpox in the Congress camp at Karachi and had to be removed to the fever hospital.”
DEAR MR. GARRETT,

Here is the promised statement about the new Mukhis or Patels whom we regard as undesirable with a summary of the evidence that can be led against them.

Babar Chatur Patel, Saijpur, Borsad Taluk:
He armed the outlaw Babar Deva with a rifle and was convicted and sentenced to two years’ imprisonment but was later released by the Sessions Court. He has about 60 to 70 decrees against him. After his appointment, four houses belonging to the old Mukhi and two to other neighbours were burnt.

Lahri Mangabhai, Vasna, Borsad Taluk:
He was sentenced to six months’ imprisonment three years ago. This Mukhi got Jhaver Gaba appointed as Rakha, although he knew that the latter was five times convicted. In his own street, three houses of Hijratis were burnt. He would not move to help put out the fire.

Mahomedkhan Nachhekhan, Porda, Borsad Taluk:
He has no stake in the village. He abducted a potter’s wife and ultimately ‘sold’ her elsewhere. He similarly abducted a Dhed’s wife. He is heavily in debt and there are warrants of arrest against him in the Gaekwad’s territory.

Mirsab Majmudin, Davalpura, Borsad Taluk:
He was dismissed by the Baroda State for bribery. He does not belong to the village.

Jama Gaga, Palaj, Borsad Taluk:
He has been thrice convicted.

Jhaver Vaja, Ras, Borsad Taluk:
He has been imprisoned for two months for receiving stolen property. During his incumbency the crops of Ras were looted. His is a temporary appointment. He applied on the 11th instant for permanency.

1 Watchman or guardian
Sandasar:
The Mukhi is a drunkard.

Anand and Boriavi:
These Mukhis had distress warrants against them, but these were stopped at the instance of the Collector.

Jehangirji Cawasji, Varad Bardoli:
The affidavits in any possession show that he has a force of 100 Dublas whom he uses for terrorizing the people, he has been taking bribes, he has a canteen, he severely assaulted a teacher who was a temperance preacher, and was found guilty by a Board of Arbitrators before whom he publicly apologized.

Abumia, Buhari, Bardoli:
He was convicted for theft and sentenced to three months’ imprisonment.

Umarmia, (1) Shaku, (2) Ambada, Jalalpur Taluk:
He was convicted for one and a half years.

Dayalji Bhaga, Dandesar, Tarsadi and Quabi, Jalalpur Taluk:
Drunkard.

Prema Gopal, Tighra, Jalalpur Taluk:
Drunkard.

Govan Rama Akoti, Bardoli:
Several statements. He was guilty of keeping people under duress and recovering without permission for his use private carts and bullocks. He has no stake in the village. Also that he refuses to pass receipt for revenue recovered.

This list is not exhaustive, nor are all the complaints against the respective parties summarized. I have given a sample list from the papers before me. There should be a full impartial enquiry into these cases and similar cases unless the general suggestion made by me is adopted. Apart from the point of view of peace and expediency, I have suggested that the appointments which are admittedly temporary and “until further orders” can in no sense be regarded as permanent in terms of the settlement. However, the consideration that generally applies to the appointment of a Mukhi, viz., that he should be of the people and more or less a representative enjoying among them a status and influence is lacking in every case. In any event there seems to have been much dilatoriness in the reappointment of Mukhis and Talatis. As to the latter, I also drew your attention to the fact that in Bardoli several Talatis have not been reappointed on grounds of retrenchment. As I told you yesterday, there are men acting for these old Talatis. It is ominously strange that not one of the Talatis in Bardoli has been reinstated.¹

CONFISCATED AND OCCUPIED PROPERTY

Property in Bardoli confiscated under the Criminal Law Amendment Act has been restored practically intact, but in Kaira District, there are serious allegations of misappropriations. A number of articles belonging to the Kaira District Congress Committee are missing (fountain-pens, watch-chain, currency notes worth Rs. 10/-, etc.). 250 maunds of fuel in possession of the Ras Chhawni seems to have been appropriated by the Police. In Tranja in Mater, 20 maunds of cotton and five maunds of tobacco in Devataj were attached. Both are undisposed of, but lying in the chora, instead of being restored to the rightful owners. There has been vexatious delay in restoring confiscated property. There can be no question of contumacy as the revenue is being steadily paid wherever possible. Confiscated property should therefore be returned automatically under the settlement whereas in some [cases] Mamlatdars have asked for applications from those who want their lands back. As the sowing season is fast approaching, it is essential that people should be put in possession of confiscated property as soon as possible.

ASSESSMENT

As to assessment I have suggested that there should be no coercive processes and no fines or payments on account of Rakhas should be demanded. I have suggested that in every case the Collectors should confer with our local workers and come to an understanding as to the assessment. A place like Ras where movables are taken away, locks of houses broken, houses burnt, crops destroyed can hardly be expected to pay anything. I brought to your notice a case in which for Rs. 10/- revenue, Rs. 50/- worth of grain was removed and Rs. 10/- had been kept for annas 10/-. Here is another case.

In Ober (Jambusar Taluka, Broach District), lands belonging to some of the satyagrahis were forfeited and third parties who offered to pay up the revenue dues in respect of them were put in possession of the land. They paid the revenue and took the whole crop. They think that the lands have been transferred to them for good and refuse to give up possessin. On the other hand, the Talati has passed no receipt to the original owner for dues recovered out of the crops thus made over to third parties and the original owners are asked to pay up the dues before they can be put in posse-

¹ In his letter dated April 15, Garrett wrote: “Referring to our conversation of 12th, I am glad to inform you that 16 resigned Patels have already been reinstated in the Surat District.”

One Pragji Vasanji of Ugat (Jalalpur) had migrated during satyagraha and had not been able to reap his crop. He approached the Mamlatdar with an application for suspension. The latter admitted the application, but four days later issued orders for attachment of applicant’s buffaloes which were returned only on his promising to pay half the assessment within a month.

I bring some of these instances to your notice to show how the spirit of the settlement is being broken probably unintentionally.

It is possible to bring counter complaints against the people, I repeat the assurance I gave you yesterday that it is Sardar Vallabhbhai’s any my desire that the settlement should be observed fully by the people. Any case of breach on the part of the people brought to our notice shall receive prompt attention.

PENDING PROSECUTIONS

There are no less than 82 prosecutions in Borsad pending since long before the truce. There are several in Bardoli and Anand and Jalalpur. I append a detailed list. Several cases have arisen, since the truce, as a result of the lack of information regarding confiscated lands. They are separately mentioned.

There is the case of one Ratanji Dayaram of Bajipura who with two others was prosecuted under Section 435 I.P.C. and sentenced to six months’ imprisonment and fine. His companions have been released under the settlement but he is still in jail.

I gave you the name of Babalbhai, a Vidyapith student who is still in prison for disobeying the deportation order under the Foreigners’ Act. His full name is Balkrishna Pranjivan Mehta. He has not only not been released, but has been asked, before he can be released on the expiry of his term, to sign an undertaking to the effect that he must inform the Dhrangadhra State of his movements whenever he moved out.

1 Not traceable
There is a similar case of Fakirbhai Dhanjibhai. He disobeyed the order before the truce.

SOLD LANDS

I refrain for the time being from saying anything about sold lands beyond repeating that the least that I am entitled to is the list of sold lands, their acreage, and names of the buyers, the dates when they were sold and how.

Yours sincerely,

2 enclosures.¹

[PS.]

I was thankful for the conversation of yesterday and hope that all the matters will be amicably and satisfactorily settled.²

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-C, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

395. LETTER TO PRABHUDAS GANDHI

BARDOLI,

April 13, 1931

CHI. PRABHUDAS,

I had your long letter. It was not possible to reply to that. Today I have received your second letter.

Let Dhiru stay there as long as he can. It would be better to send back Rambhau if he is not doing any work there and wishes to return. You alone can take this decision.

The takli has great potential, there is not a trace of doubt about it. How does the Magan spinning-wheel fare? Is your mind at rest now?

I may have to go to Nainital in the beginning of the next month. If that happens, I take it for granted that you will see me. Do not make this information public as it is not yet decided.

Can you not write a familiarisation note on stars and planets in such a way that a person like me understands. Do not write if it would take up days. I want it only if you can write it within one or two hours. I would certainly want the pictures of the stars. Why is the Orion

¹ Not given here; these were copies of two Notices dated April 14, 1931, issued by the Mamlatdar of Borsad to the defaulting Khatedars.

² Garrett replied on the same day: “I will take steps to inquire into the matters referred to by you.”
called a hunter? Why is Sirius called a dog, etc.? Kakasaheb was to do this work, but now he is supposed to be as busy as I am. So, how can I give him the trouble? Are you still continuing with your writing about the Ramayana, etc. I will be in Bardoli till the end of the month.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]
It is better to write to the Ashram address.

From the Gujarati original: S.N. 32963

396. LETTER TO K. M. MUNSHI

April 14, 1931

BHAISHRI MUNSHI,

I was glad that you wrote to me. I have indeed received innumerable complaints against you. I had even decided to discuss them with you some time. I don’t take any action on the basis of a complaint till I have discussed it with the person against whom it is made. I have followed this rule in your case too. But as you yourself have now written to me in the matter, I will avail myself of the earliest opportunity to discuss the complaints personally with you. I am arriving there on the 16th.

Vandemataram from
MOHANDAS

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 7515. Courtesy: K.M. Munshi

1 In Bombay; vide the following item.
397. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI
April 14, 1931

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I got your letter and your wire. I shall be in Bombay on the 16th, the 17th and the 18th. I will be staying at 7 Laburnum Road. On the 20th and the 21st, I shall be in the Ashram, when it is proposed to perform the betrothal of Senior Lakshmi. My health is fairly good. Perhaps I get a little temperature in the afternoon. Mirabehn arrived here yesterday.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 3396

398. LETTER TO FULCHAND K. SHAH
April 14, 1931

BHAISHRI FULCHAND,

I got your letter. You will find with this a letter from Shri Goradia. Read it and think over it.

I don’t see any serious cause for a dispute.
I think that it should be possible to settle the matter peacefully with courtesy and politeness.

Do what is necessary. You who are on the spot can judge better than I. Satyagraha means the utmost humility.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 9192
399. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

April 14, 1931

CHI. BRIJKISHAN

How much I extract from you! And what service! God will bless you; only He can reward you for this whole-hearted devotion.

My blessings to other workers.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 2385

400. LETTER TO RALPH BORSODI

[After April 14, 1931]

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter. I have not yet received your book This Ugly Civilization. When I do, I shall try to look into it.

Yours sincerely,

From a microfilm: S.N. 17005

---

1 In reply to his letter dated April 14, which read: “Dear Sir: Since you made the revival of homespinning and weaving a part of your work for India, I have followed with special interest the gallant struggle you have been making against some of the follies of industrialism. I am writing you because I believe that there are some ideas in my latest book—which is a criticism of this industrialized civilization of ours—which may be interest and perhaps of help to you. For this reason I am sending you today through my publisher, Simon & Schuster, New York City, a copy of my book This Ugly Civilization. It would make me very happy to have you read it. In any event, I wish you would look over the several references made to you, which you will find paged in the index. I am very confident my analysis of the diseases from which industrialism suffers is unusual, and that the remedy I propose would utilize in a totally new way the very machines which have destroyed India’s prosperity for the purpose of restoring her to economic independence and self-sufficiency. With cordial good wishes, I am, very truly yours,” . . .
401. INTERVIEW TO ASSOCIATED PRESS OF INDIA

AHMEDABAD,
April 15, 1931

Mahatma Gandhi again visited his Ashram this morning. Asked by a representative of the Associated Press if his visits to the Ashram were a breach of the vow\(^1\) taken by him last year, Mahatma Gandhi said:

I have been going to the Ashram recently every day to see Imam Saheb, who is very seriously ill and other patients. It is quite untrue to suggest that this is in any shape or form a breach of my vow about not going to the Ashram. The vow has reference to settling down in the Ashram and leading there the ordinary settled Ashram life but it does not in any way preclude me from visiting the ashram for seeing the patients or in furtherance of the very thing for which the vow was taken.

Indeed, nothing in the vow prevents us from staying at the Ashram whenever I come to Ahmedabad but I deliberately refrain from doing so in order not to create any confusion in the minds of the large body of people who would not and have no time to understand the full significance of the vow. I consider it to be an important pledge having been taken by many of my companions. I wanted, therefore, to be extra cautious and hence did not stay in the Ashram even temporarily, but I should be defeating the very and of the vow if I heartlessly refuse to go there and see and console patients, or attend to some such matter.

Asked if he had permitted some of the volunteers with whom he had marched to Dandi last year, [and who were bound by the] pledge to stay at the Ashram, Gandhiji said:

If I found that it was necessary to keep any of my fellow-pilgrims for the furtherance of the cause, I should not hesitate to keep them at the Ashram without laying them open to the charge of a breach of the vow.

The Bombay Chronicle, 16-4-1931

\(^1\) Gandhiji, at the time of Dandi march, had taken a vow not to return to the Ashram before India attained swaraj. Vide “Speech at prayer meeting, Sabarmati ashram”, 12-3-1930 and “Violation of pledge”, 26-4-1931.
402. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL JOSHI

[April 15, 1931]

CHI. CHHAGANLAL JOSHI,

Why do you worry? If you have no work to do in Kheda, you need not stay there. If it is necessary to let the Ashram workers remain at the places where they have been working, their expenses should be provided by the residents of those places. Or you should decide for yourself whether they should be kept there and their expenses met by the Ashram. You may treat your decision in this regard as mine.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—7 : Shri Chhaganlal Joshine, p. 214

403. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL JOSHI

[April 15, 1931]

CHI. CHHAGANLAL,

I got your letter.

You should come and see me and discuss in detail what the duty of the Ashram workers is. A rule that applies to me does not necessarily apply to all of you. Since I suggest the rules, I ought to be strict in observing them, even outwardly, though this may not be necessary in the case of some rules. You will be able to think of numerous instances of both types of rules and understand the reasons why they ought to be or need not be observed literally.

1 In reply to his letter asking Gandhiji as to how to meet the expenses of the Ashram workers in Kheda District.

2 According to the source, this and the following letter were written about or after the Gandhi-Irwin settlement. Vide also the preceding item.
If, when your work in Kheda is over, you have of other work before you, you also should go and live in the Ashram. You should so plan your work that, as soon as one task is completed, you have another waiting. It is certainly true that no one ought to return to the Ashram for the sake of an easy life. Does not our vow not to return to the Ashram before we have won complete swaraj mean the same thing? In other words, the Ashram is a place of ease and comfort and one goes to it for rest. But the volunteers who had joined the march are not free to enjoy such rest. But what should one do if it become necessary to return to the Ashram so that one may be able to work for purna swaraj? Or if life outside the Ashram is found easier? Be that as it may, I am not impatient, nor do I insist that my own view should be accepted. Think over all this and follow whatever rule you think proper for yourself and for others.

“The practice of yoga is to learn self-control.”

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro–7 : Shri Chhaganlal Joshine, p. 213

1 From a poem by Rajchandra
404 THE CULT OF VIOLENCE

Mr. Peddie's murder and the making of the murderer of Mrs. Curtis a hero at the Sikh League meeting bring out in clear light the tragic fact that the cult of violence has still many votaries. The extolling of murderers is being overdone. If we are to sing the praises of every murderer because the murder has a political motive behind it, we should proceed from praising the deed to the deed itself. The praising of Sajjan Singh as a hero raises a doubt in my mind about the wisdom of my having been the authour of the Congress resolution about Bhagat Singh. My motive was plain enough. The deed was condemned. The spirit of bravery and sacrifice was praised. The hope behind was that we would thereby be able to distinguish between the deed and the motive, and ultimately learn to detest deeds such as political murders, no matter how high the motive might be. But the effect of the Congress resolution has been perhaps quite the contrary. It seems to have given a passport for extolling murder itself. I repeat my deliberate opinion that whatever may be true of other countries, in India at least political murder can only harm the country. This is much more true whilst an experiment on the largest scale yet known to the world is being made to win liberty through strictly peaceful methods. He who runs can see that the experiment has proved its merit beyond all expectation, and is almost on the point of succeeding. I make bold to say that had the experiment not been interrupted by political murders and the violence in thought and less often in speech and still less often in action of civil resisters, India would by this time have been free.

Non-violence is the weapon not of the weak but of the strong. Non-violence means forgiving an injury and not retaliating.'Forgiveness is an ornament of the strong,' says a Sanskrit proverb. Yudhishtihra gave an exhibition of this quality when he even though

---

1 The District Magistrate of Midnapore. He was shot dead by the terrorists on April 7.
2 Wife of a British officer, she was murdered at Lahore on January 13.
3 Vide "Resolution on Bhagat Singh and comrades", 29-3-1931.
4 श्रम वीरस्थ भुपुपम्
provoked beyond measure by Virata not only for-gave him but took extraordinary measures to protect him against the wrath of his brother Arjuna who would but for those precautions have killed him for insulting and injuring the great king Yudhishthira.

Non-violence is not a mechanical performance. It is the finest quality of the heart and comes by training. When it comes, it seems, because it is, natural, and the posessor wonders that it should have cost any trouble at all in its attainment. What can be more natural than to return blow for blow, says the beast in us. What can be more natural or more human than that we should return a blow with forgiveness, says the man in us. He who gave the blow was ignorant and forgot himself. Why should the injured person betray ignorance and forget himself? Are the many wives who suffer the brutalities of their brutal husbands more than human because they forgive their husbands? They would of course do better if they would not add pampering to their forgiveness and would withdraw co-operation from their husbands for the the latter’s own sakes.

But let me not go into deeper waters. Those who profess nonviolence should realize their strength and be non-violent in thought, word and deed. Let those who still doubt the efficacy of the non-violent method and are not sure of that of the violent method, ponder over the following :

1. India’s millions have no tradition of the violent method.
2. They, the villagers, have never been known to have combined on any large scale to use the violent method.
3. They have no definite ideas as yet of political freedom in terms of India as one country.
4. Where, as in Europe, the people have gained their freedom by the violent method, the people were more or less trained in the use of arms.
5. They, the peoples of Europe, gained their freedom by being able to use greater violence than the enthroned authority.
6. It is at least doubtful if they, not excluding the English, have got real freedom. The masses there still feel that they are being ground down by the moneyed classes who have the reins of government in their hands. Look at their varied problems ever increasing in perplexity.

7. In India on the other hand we know that it is through the non-violent method alone that the phenomenal massconsciousness, including the awakening of women, has come into being.

8. We know as a proved fact that where the people erred and became violent, they lost ground, became demoralized and were cowed down.

If I were to give more thought to the past twelve months I could elaborate the list. But as it is, it is perhaps enough for my purpose.

To those who have settled convictions in favour of the violent method, I say: You will give me the same credit that you claim for yourselves for love of the country. If so, you should accept my testimony that by mixing your method with mine you protract the agony. The belief which, I know, some of you hold that an occasional murder of an official helps the cause is wholly unfounded. On the contrary I know that every murder has hampered me in my pursuit. I know that you are as anxious as I am—you will probably say you are more anxious than I am—for the release of all political prisoners. You must admit that the terrorist method can only retard their discharge. Constituted as this Government is, all governments are, they will not discharge political offenders convicted of violence when political violence takes place. All things considered, therefore, you will do well to listen to my advice and request, and suspend your activities whilst the nation is giving a trial to my experiment.

Young India, 16-4-1931
405. AN ENGLISHMAN’S DILEMMA

India knows the Englishman who carried my letter containing the eleven points to the Viceroy and who waged a ceaseless struggle in the face of heavy odds in England whilst the Civil Disobedience was going on. Mr. Reginald Reynolds now writes the following plaintive letter:

I was very glad to hear from you in reply to my letter. Before this reply came the newspapers had already informed me, of course, of all that happened at Delhi, which from my point of view so badly needed explanation.

I must frankly confess that your letter leaves me entirely unconvinced. No one who knows you would doubt your sincerity, and so long as you can still speak for India, it is hardly the business of any Englishman to criticize your actions. Nevertheless, you will be the first to recognize my complete right to disagree with you, which I do emphatically on the following points:

1. The Government is not pledged to grant purna swaraj, and it would be thrown out if it attempted to do so. MacDonald only remains in office because he has not the courage to deal justly with your country, and justice would cost him that office. If you accept less than purna Swaraj—less than your birthright, that is to say,—where does the Independence Resolution at Lahore¹ come in, and how does it differ from “Dominion Status”? What advance was made, and what did the pledge really mean?

2. Oppression still continues. How do you hope for freedom from the hands of those who defy Indian public opinion and use their armed forces to drive bargains with you on your own soil for a ‘truce’? Where is the ‘change of heart’?

3. From time to time you have put forward terms—the Delhi Manifesto of November 1929², your own Eleven Points³, the terms you gave to Slocombe⁴, the ‘Gandhi-Nehru Terms’⁵. What has become of these? The Government meets them in graceful ‘concessions’ whereby a few are to be fulfilled in some measure at its own discretion. But:

   They have not pledged themselves to anything in the way of self-government.

¹ Vide “Draft resolutions for A.I.C.C., Lahore”, 26-12-1929.
² Vide “All-parties leaders’ joint statement”, 2-11-1929.
³ Vide “Clearing the issue”, 30-1-1930.
⁴ Vide “Interview to Daily Herald”, 20-5-1930.
Nothing secures the proper and adequate representation of Congress in the forthcoming Conference (where you may easily be swamped by reactionaries appointed by the Government as supplied or the previous Conference) [sic].

There is no promise of the conditional release of all political prisoners (including those in jail before the present campaign).

And so on—you know the points infinitely better than I do.

I wish you Indian leaders could realize how extraordinarily difficult this makes things for those who want to help and look to you for leadership. If you do not stand by your terms, what surety is there in our case? We believed your terms to be minimum terms, from which you would never depart. Instead, we find you bargaining and whittling these terms down. How can we even speak with certainty again, and who would believe us if we did?

4. From the purely tactical point of view I cannot see what you have gained. Civil disobedience was commenced, I take it, because the Government would not accept the Delhi Manifesto. They have not accepted it today—not one of your four points. The arguments you use now for conciliatory methods are they very arguments which were then used by many to dissuade you from your course and bring you to the Round Table Conference. Those arguments you then rejected; why do you now advance them? The country has suffered terribly, but what for? Many are still in prison, much confiscated property is unrestored, so are the dead, and the work of the lathi cannot be expiated—what have you to show for this? What offer has Lord Irwin made that he was not ready to make before Civil Disobedience began? With the exception of the small concession in the matter of salt, I can see no single right or principle that has been established. The truce does not even represent the status quo ante bellum: it is a partial and patronizing restoration on the part of the Government of some of its spoils acquired during the struggle, but not of any of those rights for which the struggle itself was fought.

You will, I know, forgive my bluntness. I have neither age nor experience, but I have, I believe, enough common sense to appreciate such a situation as this. You will see that I attack your position from two sides, as it were. Firstly, because it is too moderate and secondly because (having regard to the moderation of your find position) your methods seem to me now needlessly drastic. Had you been moderate throughout I should have disagreed but understood. But to adopt the method of a non-violent revolution with all its suffering in order to gain nothing at all—that is a policy I do not understand. Will India understand it?

I would like to venture one more final criticism. You live for the Indian masses—for the peasant and the labourer. Everywhere in this country I have made that clear, and done my best to dispel the common idea that swaraj means the rule of the Brahmin and the Bania and the oppression of the poor. How then can the reactionary proposals of St. James’ Palace in any way satisfy you? There has always been one point on which I have agreed with our worst English reactionaries such as Churchill—though I doubt whether they seriously care about it. They say that the so-called “reforms” are only designed to benefit and conciliate the propertied classes of India and increase their power over the illiterate millions. I agree with this, and I have always said, swaraj is not that: it is the opposite of that: it is the overthrow of the present conspiracy between British Imperialism and Indian Capitalism, and its replacement by a living and conscious democracy, which alone can protect the classes now socially or economically depressed. If this is true—and nothing less would have led me to the service of swaraj—what do you hope from conferences of princes, zamindars, industrialists and the like? I know there are men among them who are above the interests of class; but what do these as a body represent that is not more bound up with British Imperialism than with Indian democracy?

I have removed nothing from the letter except domestic and personal references. I publish the letter at Mr. Reynolds’s wish. And I do so with pleasure as I know that though by reason of amazing faith in me the Congress endorsed the Pact1, there are Indians who share this brave Englishmen’s views. There must be also some Englishmen, be they ever so few, who are puzzled like Reynolds over my moderation and so-called inconsistency. I must, therefore, attempt to answer Reynolds’s complaints for his and their sakes. India will want their active help and sympathy for many a year to come.

The charge of moderation I must admit. Friends who know me have certified that I am as much a moderate as I am an extremist and as much a conservative as I am a radical. Hence perhaps my good fortune to have friends among these extreme types of men. The mixture is due, I believe, to my view of ahimsa.

Inconsistency is only apparent. It appears so to many friends because of my responsiveness to varying circumstances. Seeming consistency may really be sheer obstinacy.

The real point is this. Charges of moderation or extremism or inconsistency ought not to matter. What must count with a public servant is the approbation of his own conscience. He must be like a rudderless vessel who, leaving the infallible solace of his own cons-

---

1 Gandhi-Irwin Pact, vide “Provisional settlement”, 12-3-1931.
Science, ever seeks to please and gain the approbation of the public. Service must be its own and sole reward. Whether therefore the argument and facts I am about to set forth serve their purpose or not, it must be sufficient for the reader as it is, I am aware, for Reynolds to know that in entering upon and advising the acceptance of the Settlement, I have done what in my opinion was not only right but obligatory.

Now for the facts and the arguments. Reynolds and those who think like him have been led into confusion because he and they have missed the historical perspective. A single new factor may change a whole situation. Reynolds mentions four events: (1) The Delhi Manifesto of November 1929, (2) The Eleven points, (3) The terms given to Mr. Slocombe, (4) The Gandhi-Nehru terms.

The Delhi Manifesto was an answer to Lord Irwin’s famous declaration and was therefore just confined to that declaration.

The Eleven-point letter was written as a precursor to Civil Disobedience and set forth the conditions on which Civil Disobedience could be averted. It had therefore to be different from the November Manifesto.

The terms to Mr. Slocombe were given just after the commencement of civil disobedience. There was therefore a slight variation from the Eleven-point letter but no reduction of it.

The Gandhi-Nehru terms were given during the height of the movement and whilst we were all in custody and thus by being shut out of the world at a disadvantage. In all the four stages the Round Table Conference had not been held, the Government policy was not declared.

The Settlement is the natural evolution from the first stage. Whatever the variations between the stages, they are due to the varying situations. Unlike as in the four stages, the Round Table Conference had been held and the Government policy declared before the fifth stage, i.e., the Settlement, was reached.

At no other time was it possible to offer cooperation at the Round Table Conference because the British Government would not declare its policy and the intention of the delegates to the Conference was not known. But at Delhi last March the demand of the Conference delegates was known as was also known the British policy. The demand was Dominion Status. The British policy was a declaration tantamount to the acceptance of the demand.
Not that either the Indian demand for Dominion Status or the British declaration satisfy the Congress requirement, especially as they are hedged in by the so-called safeguards which, according to the Congress notion, certainly are not designed in the interest of India.

Nevertheless this is an unmistakable advance upon the past uncertainty. And when it was ascertained that it was possible for the Congress to press forward its view to the fullest extent, it was felt that the Congress would put itself in the wrong if it had declined to put forth its demand and press for its acceptance at a Round Table. The Congress would have been bound at any stage to enter upon a discussion of its claims after such declaration as has been made by the British Government. A satyagrahi never misses, can never miss, a chance of compromise on honourable terms, it being always assumed that in the event of failure he is ever ready to offer battle. He needs no previous preparation, his cards are always on the table. Suspension or continuation of battle is one and the same thing to him. He fights or refrains to gain precisely the same end. He dare not always distrust his opponents. On the contrary he must grasp the hand of friendship whenever there is the slightest pretext. The pretext here was the unexpectedly unanimous Indian demand, the British response, inadequate though it was, and the utter sincerity running through Lord Irwin’s conversations.

I have never claimed any change of heart on the part of the powers that be. That has still to come. When it comes, there will be a settlement not merely provisional but absolutely permanent. Then there will be full surrender on the part of the satyagrahi; for change of heart means surrender to the Indian demand in toto and without any mental reservation.

Lastly, throughout all the stages there never has been a lowering of the flag. Dominion Status was given up on 23rd December 1929. It is now Complete Independence, i.e., association if possible with the British on equal terms and with the right to either party to dissolve it at will. That this may not be attained through conference as yet is quite possible; that the so-called safeguards may remain the halters that they are is also highly possible. If so the Congress will not be responsible for failure, but it will come out with enhanced moral prestige and its demand more fully known and equally fully justified. It is true that all the political prisoners are not discharged. Their discharge could not be demanded as part of the Provisional Settlement. They will be discharged if full settlement is reached. If it is not reached, those who are temporarily out will then be in and increase the army of political prisoners. For a satyagrahi a prisoner’s life is no disability, no unhappiness. Prison for him is the gateway to freedom.

Lastly, let there be no mistake as to what purna swaraj means to the Congress. It is full economic freedom for the toiling millions. It is no unholy alliance with any interest for their exploitation. Any alliance must mean their deliverance.

Young India, 16-4-1931

406. NOTES

MALAVIYAJI AND WORKING COMMITTEE

A reader asks:

You explained to the Subjects Committee at Karachi why you kept out the members from the South; you never explained why you kept out Pandit Malaviyaji.¹

The explanation was so obvious that nobody called for it. There could be no question of offending Malaviyaji. He is above being offended. No organization can add to his status or importance by enrolling him as a member. His membership can add to its prestige. The Working Committee deliberately kept him out in order to preserve his independence and freedom of action at a given moment. Without being a member, since the release of leaders, he has always been attending the Working Committee meetings and taking an active part in its deliberations. Valuable as his work on the Committee has been, the members thought that his being subjected to the Committee’s discipline might prove embarrassing to him. Indeed Dr. Ansari was so eager for Malaviyaji to be on the Committee that he preferred to be dropped out in favour of Malaviyaji. But the consideration I have just mentioned was so effectively urged by Jamnalalji that Dr. Ansari too became reconciled to Malaviyaji being kept out. This arrangement permits the Committee to avail itself of Malaviyaji’s advice at its deliberations and at the same time leaves intact his freedom of action. Indeed even the Government has recognized his unique position in society by separately inviting him to the Round Table Conference.

¹ Vide “Speech proposing working committee, A.I.C.C. meeting, Karachi”, 1-4-1931.
BOYCOTT THROUGH KHADI

Last year saw a striking increase in the production and sale of khadi all over the country. This was in the main due to the phenomenal demand stimulated by the struggle of which khadi at once became the symbol. Sales so far outran the demand that workers were hard put to it to organize new fields of production to meet the sudden rise in demand.

The ground thus gained during the year of national awakening should not be lost, but on the contrary, should be made the basis of still further expansion. The devotion of war time must continue during the period of peace, if the fruits of the work are not to be lost. The Congress attitude in favour of khadi remains the same in spite of the recognition of indigenous mills as a part of the boycott programme. It must not mean supersession of khadi. Mill manufacture is to supplement khadi where the latter is absolutely unobtainable. But at the present moment khadi can overtake all the demand that can be made upon it. Khadi holds the key position in the foreign-cloth boycott programme. Not merely is no effective boycott of foreign cloth possible without working up the vast possibilities of khadi production, but if the fruits of the national boycott are to benefit the millions of our village population and not merely the moneyed few, it can be done only by the widest possible spread of the life-giving wheel. That is why the Congress at Karachi has again emphasized the unique position of khadi in the boycott programme, and has appealed to all “Congress organization and allied bodies to intensify foreign-cloth boycott by increasing khadi propaganda.” The experience of the last year has shown the capacity of khadi production to respond promptly to any increase in demand; and we have to maintain not merely the existing work, but extend the spinning activities still further. The least that we must do is to reach the level of last year if we cannot show a substantial increase upon it.

Young India, 16-4-1931
407. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

April 18, 1931

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I got your letters. You seem to have made a mistake in going there. However, don’t feel unhappy and spoil your health. I feel that, now that you have gone, you will have to stay there for at least some days for the sake of form. If Harasbabu recovers, you should come away. Today I am in Bombay, and will return to Ahmedabad tomorrow. It seems I may have to remain there for some days. Let that not give you a fright. I am all right.

Mirabehn is here.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 3398

---

408. INTERVIEW TO THE PRESS

BOMBAY,

April 18, 1931

Answering questions put to him by a group of pressmen, regarding the recent complaint in a section of the Press, to which the retiring Viceroy also had alluded in his reply to the Mill-owners’ Association address, Mahatma Gandhi declared:

I have no war mentality. I have peace mentality at the present moment and I should strain every nerve to retain that mentality and establish permanent peace in the country for which my companions also are striving.

Proceeding, he reiterated his view that the would not go to the Round Table Conference until the communal problem was solved. He added that for the present he had dismissed the idea of going to the Round Table Congerence until a communal solution was found.

Asked what his next programme was, he said he didn’t know it and would not be able to evolve one until he felt that no solution to the communal problem was in sight.

Q. Can you make any statement regarding the communal problem?

A. I am unable to make any statement except that I shall leave no stone unturned and pray for success because I know prayer can move even mountains.
Q. Are you against separate electorates?
A. I am against nothing that will end the communal trouble.

Q. Will not separate electorates widen the gulf between communities?
A. These are not things for me to consider.

Q. Do you expect to satisfy every section of Muslims?
A. I hope to satisfy all sections.

Q. What do you say about Mr. Shaukat Ali’s recent statement about you being a danger in Indian politics?
A. Seeing that he is an old friend of mine, he was perfectly right to say that thing about me.

Q. What do you say to the complaint made in the Anglo-Indian Press that the Congress is not keeping the terms of the Truce?
A. I say emphatically “No”, except there have been isolated cases and I am surprised to read Mr. Benn’s reply. In Gujarat, there was satisfactory response. In Bardoli, for instance, peasants have been paying up dues as quickly as possible. Up to the 16th instant, Bardoli and Valod have paid Rs. 1,16,658 while Jalalpur paid Rs. 1,96,453, after the announcement of Provisional Settlement. I regard these as handsome figures and I cannot help saying they have been grossly misinformed. Regarding lands already sold to third parties, he said he would ask on bended knees these purchasers to return them and felt sure that every inch of land would be returned.

Asked if he was not keeping the country in suspense, he said that the country knew that every effort was being made to achieve lasting peace and if it be not available, the country should be prepared to suffer.

Asked if he thought that by negotiations he could achieve permanent peace, he declared that in negotiations backed by real strength, he most definitely believed real peace could be had. Referring to the re-export of foreign cloth, he said that the scheme was being put into execution and also contradicted the report that he had any talk with Mr. Geoffrey Corbett about the same.

The Hindu, 19-4-1931

---

1 At a meeting which Gandhiji had with the mill-owners, it was decided to appoint an executive committee “to proceed with the scheme of speeding up re-export” (The Bombay Chronicle, 17-4-1931)
409. SPEECH IN REPLY TO CORPORATION ADDRESS, BOMBAY

[April 18, 1931]¹

I had thought that the one address you had given me six years ago² was quite enough, but love knows no bounds and your love has prompted you to present to me another address. But you may be sure that I am not so unthinking as to appropriate all that love for myself, for I know that as in 1924 so now it has been given to me as a representative of the toilers of the land. I claim to live for the semi-starved paupers of India and swaraj means the emancipation of these millions of skeletons. Purna swaraj denotes a condition of things when the dumb and the lame millions will speak and walk. That swaraj cannot be achieved by force, but by organization and unity. Your address I take it is a token of your sympathy for Daridranarayana.

You have in your address referred to my endeavour for the uplift of the so-called untouchables. Their rights should be our sacred trust, but one of the indispensable conditions of swaraj is that Hindus wipe out that stain on Hinduism.

India does not live in its towns but in its villages. But if the cities want to demonstrate that their populations will live for the villagers of India the bulk of their resources should be spent in ameliorating the condition of and befriending the poor. We must not lord it over them, we must learn to be their servants. When the cities realize that they must live for the welfare of the poor, they will make their palaces and institutions and the life of their inhabitants correspond somewhat to our villages. Whilst therefore I am accepting an address from you for a second time you will permit me to hope that you will more and more make the cause of the poor your own and as an earnest of you desire to do so I want you to identify yourselves with the thousands of workers in the city. I want you to make them feel that the Corporation is theirs as it is of the well-to-do. Handsome is that handsome does, and Bombay the beautiful must do beautiful things for the poor. If Bombay is the premier city in India it is chiefly because of the Parsis whom the world recognizes as the most generous in their charities.

¹ Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter”; Gndhiji spoke in Gujarati.
² The date is from The Hindu, 19-4-1931.
³ Vide “Speech in reply to corporation address, Bombay”, 29-8-1924.
Does not this Corporation owe its influence to the signal services of Sir Pherozeshah Mehta who was justly called the father of this Corporation? You may not then lag behind in the service of the poor.

You have referred to the question of communal unity. Let all of us Hindus, Mussalmans, Parsis, Sikhs, Christians, live amicably as Indians, pledged to live and die for our motherland. Let it be our ambition to live as the children of the same mother, retaining our individual faiths and yet being one, like the countless leaves of one tree. You have blessed my endeavour to achieve communal unity. But it cannot be achieved by the efforts of a single individual.

One word more. If the appeal I have made in the cause of the poor has gone home and if you will identify yourselves more with the villages, a beginning can be made by introducing handspinning in your schools and making your 80,000 boys and girls spin on the takli. This can be done at the least expense and without any difficulty, and in the wake of the takli khadi will follow as a matter of course. What can be better education for our boys and girls than that they should learn through spinning to identify themselves with the poor. May God give you the strength and the will to serve the inarticulate millions of India.

Young India, 23-4-1931
410. TO THE SATYAGRAHI FARMER

Many satyagrahi farmers in the Kheda, Surat and Broach districts forfeited their lands, lost their crops, had their homes robbed; they were rendered homeless, the homes of some were burnt down and a settlement was made without getting anything in return for this and, going even further, those who could pay have been asked to pay up their revenue dues and, as if this was not enough, so many Patels and Talatis have not been restored to their offices—those who think along these lines can never be satisfied.

But another line of thought can be as follows. The farmer has no grounds whatsoever to complain. This is so because when he joined the struggle, he had decided to risk the loss of his fields, his home, his livestock and his life and property. He was prepared to lose his all in order to win swaraj. Hence, if he gets something back now, it should be regarded as a windfall. If he reasons on these lines, he would have no cause for complaint at all. Some may argue in their impatience: How can we be reconciled to the losses as long as swaraj has not been won? The reply to this is that this Truce has been signed in the midst of the struggle; it is not the end of it. While suffering a total loss, whatever has been spared should be gladly accepted. We should welcome any opportunity of sacrificing our all, till such time as swaraj is won. Hence no one should have any reason for despondency because of losses incurred. This Settlement has not been made in order to make good our losses; rather, it is a step towards swaraj. Underlying it is indeed the idea that we should spare ourselves any avoidable loss. This is already being realized. Whatever has been made good from the loss already incurred should be regarded as a fresh gain. Those who realize this should not become impatient; let those who are being tried be released at a later date, let there be delay in returning lands which have been attached, let some time elapse before Patels and others who had resigned and relinquished their offices can take up their posts again. This may involve a violation of the Pact in some respects on the part of the Government. We should put up with it and continue to observe the conditions which bind us. If we do so, we shall add to our strength in every way.
As we are not at present practising non-co-operation with the Government, we can meet its officials and put before them whatever complaints we wish to.

One of the biggest complaints is in respect of the lands which have been sold. It is necessary to be patient in regard to this. Owners of lands should be convinced at heart that in the end they will certainly be restored to them. But we wish to do so only in a straightforward way and not through force. We have a right to reason and plead with those who have bought these lands. I believe that we shall succeed in persuading them. But even if we fail, what does it matter? That should not make anyone conclude that we shall never recover the lands. We should have the self-confidence that we shall secure swaraj within a short time. The first task of the government under swaraj should be to redress such acts of injustice. Here I am speaking not of the distant future but of the immediate future. Suppose we do not win swaraj in the near future, then the time will again come for us to abandon our lands and our homes, and the Sardar, I and others will be enjoying ourselves in the prison-palace. Hence those whose lands have been sold, should have patience.

However, I myself have not lost hope of persuading those who have bought the lands. These are our own brethren. It is reported that there are Parsis, Muslims and Dharala Thakores amongst them. All of them have a heart. They all know that they have bought the land cheap. They too would be ashamed of this fact. I believe that they will certainly return the land if they realize the fact that the land had been owned by those who had come forward to suffer for the sake of swaraj. The Patidars have a special duty towards the Dharala Thakores. They should remove whatever injustices the latter have suffered in the past; they should be made to feel one with the rest of us. It does no credit to a swarajist to give up hope of ever persuading the purchasers. Whatever happens, we should not start a struggle of any kind against them. We should avoid all such situations which would lead to a clash with them. The land will remain untilled this monsoon. It is our dharma to put up with this loss and those who have self-confidence will do so.

A few words now regarding the payment of revenue dues. It is the dharma of those who can to pay up their dues. Let no one believe in the topsy-turvy justice that if one person pays up, others must necessarily do so; likewise, it is contrary to law to believe that no one should pay up because someone does not do so. The right course is the one which I have suggested. Those who can should certainly pay up. There is no question here of paying up by contracting debts. It is solely a questions of one’s own capacity. Our goodness and our strength lie in abiding by the conditions of the Settlement even at the cost of some hardship to ourselves.

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan, 19-4-1931

411. LETTER TO REGINALD REYNOLDS

SABARMATI,

April 19, 1931

MY DEAR ANGADA¹,

You will see I have dealt with your letter in Young India² as you had wished. Tell me if it gives you any satisfaction. If you are not convinced of the correctness of the step now, you will in course of time. It is either war or the attainment of the goal. Do not therefore desert the cause of give me up.

But I am concerned more with your personal references than with your spirited attack on the Settlement. Why has the engagement been again broken? What are you doing now? If you are not at peace with yourself there, will you not come here? You know that the Ashram is your second home.

For the first time after my discharge,³ I feel I have a little time today.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat : C. W. 4540. Courtesy : Swarthmore College, Philadelphia

¹ The messenger sent by Rama to negotiate the return of Sita by Ravana, in the Ramayana; vide also “Letter to Narandas Gandhi”, 6-4-1930, footnote 2. Reginald Reynolds had carried Gandhiji’s letter of March 2, 1930 to Lord Irwin; ibid
² Vide “An Englishman’s Dilemma”, 16-4-1931.
³ On January 26, 1931, from Yeravda Central Prison
412. LETTER TO SAHABJI MAHARAJ

AHMEDABAD,
April 19, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

It is only today that I find a little quiet to attend to the arrears of my correspondence. I thank you for your letter.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

SHRI SAHABJI MAHARAJ
DAYAL BAGH
AGRA

From a photostat : G.N. 2158

413. LETTER TO DR. SYED MAHMUD

April 19, 1931

DEAR DR. MAHMUD,

Twice I took up the pen to write to Syed Hassan Imam and twice I lacked the courage to write. I felt and still feel that it is best for me not to write to any Muslim friend so as to influence him in favour of the Nationalist Muslim view. But I shall redeem my promise to you if you still want me to write to Syed Hassan Imam.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

DR. SYED MAHMUD
SWARAJ BHAVAN
ALLAHABAD

From a photostat : G.N. 5077
414. LETTER TO GOKIBEHN

VIDYAPITH,
April 19, 1931

DEAR SISTER,

Lakshmidas has already written to you and informed you that it has been decided to marry Chi. Lakshmi to Chi. Jivandas immediately. I am dictating this letter in case Lakshmidas has not communicated the *tihi*¹ to you. The ceremony will commence at 7.15 p.m. next Tuesday. I know that we should not expect your presence on that occasion. But the bride and the bridegroom must get your blessings. You should get this letter tomorrow, that is, Monday. If you do, you may send your blessings even by a letter and the couple will receive them in time. If, however, you get this letter on Tuesday, send your blessings by wire. All of us doubted whether it would be proper to celebrate this wedding so soon. We all share your grief. If any impropriety has been committed in fixing this wedding, the blame and the responsibility for it rest on me. As usual, Lakshmidas has taken no responsibility upon himself. He has not even arrived here till now—he will arrive tomorrow. I had only one reason for deciding to fix the wedding immediately. I don’t look upon marriage as an occasion for enjoyment. I look upon it as a purely religious ceremony. We cannot postpone a religious ceremony, whatever the circumstances. Both Lakshmi and Jivandas desired that the wedding should take place early, and the former was keen that the ceremony should be performed in my presence. Since it was quite uncertain where I would stay now and how long, I selected the earliest muhurt.² I thought that it was necessary to tell you all this, and I satisfy my wish to do so while begging you to send your blessings. Send the letter or the wire c/o the Ashram. The marriage ceremony will take place in Dr. Mehta’s bungalow near the Ashram. Give my blessings to Mani. I am sure she fulfils all your expectations. Also ask her to write to me.

Jai Shri Krishna from

MOHANDAS

From a photostat of the Gujarati : S.N. 9812

¹ Date
² Auspicious day and hour
April 20, 1931

I enclose herewith a translation of what purports to be a notice from the Borsad Mamlatdar. You had left me under the impression that you would investigate the matters I had discussed with you and that I would know from you what was intended to be done. The notice seems to ignore these conversations and the Congress as the intermediary between the Government and the people. If this is to be the position to be finally taken up by the Government it will, in my opinion, be a distinct breach of the Settlement.

After the conference with the local workers Sardar Vallabhbhai and I have come to the following conclusions:

1. Ras has been so hard hit that it can hardly pay anything.

2. The remaining villages will endeavour to pay one year’s dues to the utmost extent possible. I am having an exhaustive note prepared on this matter.

3. Taqavi and the balance of arrears should be suspended. If the Government notice of 11th March last re-suspends suspended arrears in all cases, how much more are the villages affected by the movement in need of such relief? That in the opinion of the Government their misfortunes may be considered to be due to their own fault is an irrelevant consideration after the Settlement.

4. The Settlement clearly contemplates waiver of Rakha, attachment, and notice-fee charges. These therefore should not be demanded.

On receipt of a reply from you I shall arrange with the people for payment in accordance with the foregoing offer.

I leave Ahmedabad for Bardoli on 21st by the 10.55 p.m. passenger train.

Young India, 20-8-1931

1 Garrett was then Commissioner, Northern Division.
416. LETTER TO MANILAL AND SUSHILA GANDHI

AHMEDABAD,
April 20, 1931

CHI. MANILAL AND SUSHILA,

I kept thinking about you the whole of yesterday and today. I can-not spare time to write a long letter. I pray that in East Africa all three of you may make great progress in every direction. Do all work without attachment. Read the preface to Anasaktiyoga frequently, if it does not tire you. The more you study it, the more clearly will you understand how to act, and in consequence you will experience spiritual contentment.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 4783

417. FRAGMENT OF LETTER TO HARI GANESH PHATAK

[After April 20, 1931 ]

The Congress cannot permit any seals to be broken. By British cloth I suppose you mean foreign cloth. Under the terms, the

1 President, Swadeshi Sabha, Poona
2 The letter was written in reply to addressee’s letter dated April 20, 1931, which read : “We are putting the following urgent matter before you for your advice. In last December the cloth merchants of Poona entered into an agreement with the Swadeshi Sabha that they would put seals on the British cloth in their stock, that they would not import foreign cloth and would not order cloth from mills boycotted by the Congress. They took assurance from the Sabha that it would not picket their shops. These terms were entered into under pressing circumstances. All merchants without exception entered into this agreement. Some 80 shops have their British cloth sealed till the Gandhi-Irwin Settlement and 50 shops are yet remaining. We stopped to seal the cloth as we thought it would run counter to the terms of settlement. But as the agreement was made before the Settlement of Truce terms and only its execution was left we do not think it would affect the Truce. We know that in Delhi the agreement prior to the Gandhi-Irwin Settlement has been allowed to stand as it was. If our agreement stands the vigilance committee would see that not an inch of foreign cloth comes to Poona hereafter. However, we would like to know from you whether we should proceed with our work or should give it up and allow the merchants to break their seals. The matter is very urgent and we hope it will claim your early attention.”
Cong[ress] cannot distinguish between British cloth and other foreign cloth and give preference to the latter.

From a microfilm : S.N. 17006

418. LETTER TO J. H. GARRETT
GUJARAT Vidyapith,
AHMEDABAD,
April 21, 1931

DEAR MR. GARRETT,

I have to thank you for your exhaustive reply.¹

The chief point of the moment is with reference to the status of the Congress in the Settlement. If you agree that the Settlement is between the Congress and the Government, and if it is the Congress that has to implement its terms so far as they are applicable to the people, it follows that the Congress must be recognized as the intermediary between the Government and the people whom the Congress represents. If such was not the case, I suppose that I should have no right to see you or to correspond with you or to receive your replies in the several matters arising out of the Settlement. Your letter raises a question of the first magnitude, and on your reply to it will depend the action to be taken by me in connection with the Settlement. Meanwhile, I refrain from dealing with the details covered by your letter.

Yours sincerely,

J. H. GARRETT, ESQUIRE
AHMEDABAD

A.I.C.C., File NO. 16-C. 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

¹ Vide “Letter from J. H. Garrett”, 21-4-1931.

406 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
419. LETTER TO BALKRISHNA BHAVE

April 21, 1931

CHI. BALKRISHNA,

All these days I had no free time at all when I could write to you. But you were constantly in my thoughts and I used to inquire after you daily. I should advise you to remain peaceful in mind now and let things happen as they will. The best remedy is to do as follows:

1. Drink every fifteen minutes as much warm water as you can.
2. Take an enema daily.
3. If you feel hungry, drink the juice of oranges, pomegranates, pineapples or fresh grapes.
4. I put Ramanama last, but I believe it to be the best remedy. The other three to with this japa.

If you are destined to live longer, these measures will suffice. If not, I have no doubt at all that other remedies will fail, too.
I am sure that your mind is at peace.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : C.W. 804. Courtesy : Balkrishna Bhave

420. SPEECH AT SABARMATI ASHRAM, AHMEDABAD

April 21, 1931

Mahatma Gandhi was present this evening on the occasion of the marriage ceremony of Lakshmi, daughter of Lakshmidas Gandhi, a khadi worker, in Dr. Pranjivandas’s Bungalow near Sabarmati Ashram. The marriage ceremony was very simple and brief. Mahatma Gandhi administered the marriage oath.

Before the marriage ceremony, Gandhiji entered his Ashram and attended the evening prayer for the first time after his Dandi March. Addressing a small congregation consisting of the inmates of the Ashram, Mahatma Gandhi said that he did not expect to be back in the Ashram at so short a time. He had, however, not returned to the Ashram after the conclusion of peace. He had come for a special occasion, viz., the marriage of a girl who was brought up in the Ashram. The marriage of one connected with the Ashram during the time of war would cause surprise, but this marriage was not to serve as an example. Those who could not do without marriage were at liberty to marry. Celibacy was enjoined in the Ashram, but it was not compulsory. Those who could not remain celibate, might leave the Ashram.

1 Recitation

It was not known, when the fight would be resumed. But it would be a fierce fight, if it was resumed. The inmates of the Ashram should therefore be alert and augment their strength. Courage and purity of the people had been fully awakened, and if the fight was resumed, crores would take part. But if all of them lost heart and remained aloof they (inmates of the Ashram) were to set example and give the lead.

_The Bombay Chronicle,_ 23-4-1931

421. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

_April 22, 1931_

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I got your letters. Why is it that you fell ill as soon as you got back there? Cannot you again run away from there and go to the Ashram? If there is nothing particular you have to do there, you should come away. I am writing this from Surat on my way to Bardoli. I think I shall have to stay in Bardoli for at least eight days. I am more or less all right.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 3399

422. LETTER TO R. M. MAXWELL

_BARDOLI,_
_April 22, 1931_

I enclose herewith copies of the latest correspondence between the Commissioner, Northern Division, and myself. If His Excellency too takes the same view that Mr. Garrett does about the Congress mediation, I feel that it nullifies the whole Settlement. It was only when the Government of India and the British Government recognized that the Congress truly represented the people that there was the Settlement between it and the Government. To repudiate the Congress as the intermediary between the people and the Government means repudiation of the Settlement.

1 Private Secretary to Acting Governor of Bombay
In the light of this extraordinary development, the other matters about which I complained on the 17th instant pale into insignificance. But I recapitulate the main points here to show how far Government have till now failed to implement the Settlement.

1. Some of the Sholapur prisoners and several other prisoners who the Congress claims are covered by the Settlement still remain undischarged.

2. Several such prosecutions are still continued.

3. Civil resisters coming under the Foreigners’ Act have not yet had the ban removed.

4. Vatan and Inam cases against civil resisters have not yet been withdrawn.

5. Officials such as Patels, etc. who resigned during the Civil Disobedience period still remain unreinstated though the appointments held by the new incumbents are all, so far as I am aware, temporary or “until further orders”, and although several new Patels are undesirable.

6. Confiscated movables and immovables have not yet under some pretext or other been returned.

7. Liquor vendors still continue their unlicensed business in spite of the knowledge of the authorities.

8. Names and prices of the forfeited lands with the dates of sales and the way in which they were sold have not yet been supplied.

9. On the ground of ‘non-co-operation’ during the Civil Disobedience period, the Government still withhold grants from the Ahmedabad municipality for education, dispensation from revenue dues for lands used for purposes of sanitation and for a hospital and maternity home. This matter though not specifically mentioned in the Settlement clearly falls within its scope.

I would like to have Government’s final decision on all these points. I promised to furnish Mr. Collins with details of the cases under clauses 1 and 4. These are being collected. But I think a general order will cover these cases. But if the Congress is not recognized as the proper intermediary, everything else recedes in the background.1

Young India, 20-8-1931

1 For addressee’s reply, vide “Letter from R. M. Maxwell”, 24-4-1931.
423. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

BARDOLI,
April 22, 1931

DEAR MR. EMERSON,

It grieves me to have to bother you again. But the Settlement, so far as Gujarat is concerned, is in imminent danger of a breakdown. I enclose copies of the correspondence between the Bombay Government and myself. I am straining every nerve to prevent a breakdown. I am trying all the powers of persuasion I can command. But the strain is proving unbearable.²

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

Home Department, Political, File No. 33/XI & KWs/1931. Courtesy: National Archives of India

424. LETTER TO T. B. SAPRU

BARDOLI,
April 22, 1931

DEAR SIR TEJ,

Many thanks for your letter. I am getting better.

I am trying in my own way to reach a solution of the communal tangle. If there is no success I would not have the heart to go to London. I said as much to Lord Irwin. I did not meet the new Viceroy¹ in Bombay. I shall await the volumes on the Round Table Conference I thought something was already printed.

Yours,
M. K. GANDHI

SIR TEJ BAHADUR SAPRU

19 ALBERT ROAD, ALLAHABAD

From a photostat: G.N. 7591

¹ Home Secretary to the Government of India
² For the addressee’s reply, vide “Letter from H.W. Emerson”, 2-5-1931.
³ Lord Willingdon
425. LETTER TO RAMDAS GANDHI

April 22, 1931

CHI. RAMDAS,

I am guilty in regard to all you brothers. I get letters from you but do not write. I could hardly talk with Manilal and Sushila. What sort of a father am I? I am writing this while waiting for the train for Bardoli. Ba and Devdas are at Bombay. The marriage of Lakshmi and Jivandas was celebrated yesterday. I shall be at Bardoli for some eight days. Write to me there. My health can be considered good. Let me know your programme too.

Blessings from

BAPU

RAMDAS GANDHI
MUMBAIKAR’S BUNGALOW
P.O. BORDI
VIA GHOLWAD
B.B. & C.I. RLY.

From the Gujarati original: Ramdas Gandhi Papers. Courtesy: Nehru

426. TELEGRAM TO LAXMIDUTT

[ On or after April 22, 1931 ]

EXPOSE THEM.

GANDHI

From a microfilm : S.N. 17014

1 Daughter of Lakshmidas Asar
2 This was in reply to the addressee’s telegram dated April 22, 1931, from Indore, which read: “Foreign cloth dealers have broken promise. Please advise what to do. Laxmidutt Swadeshi Pracharak Mandal.”
427. FOREIGN CLOTH AND OTHER BRITISH GOODS

It is devoutly to be wished that Englishmen in general and Lancashire mill-owners in particular will realize that India to be free from chronic starvation must for ever banish foreign cloth whether English, Japanese or any other. This is an economic necessity which will not be removed even when India acquires the most complete independence. Among the very first acts of a popular government would certainly be complete prohibition of foreign cloth.

And foreign cloth will be replaced not by indigenous millecloth but by khaddar spun and woven in 7,00,000 villages of India. Though the indigenous mills undoubtedly and automatically benefit by the foreign-cloth boycott, the Congress concentrates its main energy in this boycott, on behalf of khaddar, i.e., the toiling millions. Let all the foreigners understand that this boycott movement is a mass movement, it is a humanitarian movement. Foreign manufacturers will in the end advance their own and their operatives’ interest by realizing and recognizing the intensity and the purity of the movement. It has political consequences, but being a purely economic and humanitarian movement it should command the support of the whole world.

And yet needlessly bitter and unwarranted agitation has been launched out against foreign-cloth boycott in England. The tremendous advantage gained by England owing to the removal of the boycott of British goods is hardly ever noticed. This is not fair play. This suppression of a fact of very great importance makes much more difficult the solution of the Indian question which is already difficult enough. Do the English public know that the British goods boycott movement is over thirty years old? Do they realize that it gained the greatest impetus during the last struggle and that it attained success almost as great as the movement against foreign cloth? India will for a long time to come, if not always, need certain things from foreign countries. Today the Settlement is provisional. Suppose there is a lasting settlement and an honourable partnership between England and India, will not the trade with England in other articles that India may need to import more than compensate for the loss of the piece-goods and yarn custom which England must forgo in every case?

The things to realize is that India can no longer be the dumping ground for every thing English or foreign whether she wants it or not. The days of exploitation are over. We may or may not achieve communal unity. If we fail, we may not have immediate independence. But the world will find that all Hindus, Muslims, Sikhs, Christians, Parsis, Jews, for whom India is their home, will fight unitedly to resist the exploitation of India’s resources for the benefit of the foreigner. They will resist the ceaseless annual drain which starves all the communities with ruthless impartiality.

Young India, 23-4-1931

428. FOREIGN MISSIONARIES

Correspondents angry or curious have sent me clippings from the Press or their comments on what has been ascribed to me by interviewers on the subjects of foreign missionaries. Only one correspondent has been cautious enough to ask me whether I am correctly reported. Even George Joseph, my erstwhile co-worker and gracious host in Madura, has gone into hysterics without condescending to verify the report. That is the unkindest cut of all.

This is what a reporter has put into my mouth:

It instead of confining themselves to humanitarian work and material service to the poor, they do proselytization by means of medical aid, education, etc., then I would certainly ask them to withdraw. Every nation’s religion is as good as any other. Certainly India’s religions are adequate for her people. We need no converting spiritually.

I have given so many interviews that I cannot recall the time or the occasion or the context for the statement. All I can say is that it is a travesty of what I have always said and held. My views on foreign missions are no secret. I have more than once expounded them before missionary audiences. I am therefore unable to understand the fury over the distorted version of my views.

Let me retouch the statement as I should make it:

‘If instead of confining themselves purely to humanitarian work such as education, medical services to the poor and the like, they would use these activities of theirs for the purpose of proselytizing, I would certainly like them to withdraw. Every nation considers its own faith to be as good as that of any other. Certainly the great faiths held by the people of India are adequate for her people. India stands in no need of conversion from one faith to another’.

1 Vide “Interview to the press”, 21-3-1931.

Let me now amplify the bald statement. I hold that proselytizing under the cloak of humanitarian work is, to say the least, unhealthy. It is most certainly resented by the people here. Religion after all is a deeply personal matter, it touches the heart. Why should I change my religion because a doctor who professes Christianity as his religion has cured me of some disease or why should the doctor expect or suggest such a change whilst I am under his influence? Is not medical relief its own reward and satisfaction? Or why should I whilst I am in a missionary educational institution have Christian teaching thrust upon me? In my opinion these practices are not uplifting and give rise to suspicion if not even secret hostility. The methods of conversion must be like Caesar’s wife above suspicion. Faith is not imparted like secular subjects. It is given through the language of the heart. If a man has a living faith in him, it spreads its aroma like the rose its scent. Because of its invisibility, the extent of its influence is far wider than that of the visible beauty of the colour of the petals.

I am, them, not against conversion. But I am against the modern methods of it. Conversion nowadays has become a matter of business, like any other. I remember having read a missionary report saying how much it cost per head to convert and then presenting a budget for ‘the next harvest’.

Yes, I do maintain that India’s great faiths are all-sufficing for her. Apart from Christianity and Judaism, Hinduism and its offshoots, Islam and Zoroastrianism are living faiths. No one faith is perfect. All faiths are equally dear to their respective votaries. What is wanted therefore is living friendly contact among the followers of the great religions of the world and not a clash among them in the fruitless attempt on the part of each community to show the superiority of its faith over the rest. Through such friendly contact it will be possible for us all to rid our respective faiths of shortcomings and excrescences.

It follows from what I have said above that India is in no need of conversion of the kind I have in mind. Conversion in the sense of self-purification, self-realization is the crying need of the times. That however is not what is ever meant by proselytizing. To those who would convert India, might it not be said, ‘Physician heal thyself’?

Young India, 23-4-1931
429. ONE OF THE MANY (?)

The open letter written by “One of the Many” is the late Sukhdev’s letter. Sjt. Sukhdev was Sardar Bhagat Singh’s comrade. The latter was delivered to me after his death. Want of time prevented me from giving the letter earlier publication. It is printed without any alteration.

The writer is not “one of the many”. Many do not seek the gallows for political freedom. However condemnable political murder may be, it is not possible to withhold recognition of the love of the country and the courage which inspire such awful deeds. And let us hope that the cult of political assassination is not growing. If the Indian experiment succeeds, as it is bound to, the occupation of the political assassin will be gone for ever. At any rate I am working in that faith.

The writer does me less than justice when he says that I have made no more than sentimental appeals to the revolutionaries to call off their movement, and I claim on the contrary that I have given them hard facts which, though they have been often repeated in these columns, will bear recapitulation:

1. The revolutionary activity has not brought us near our goal.
2. It has added to the military expenditure in the country.
3. It has given rise to reprisals on the part of the Government without doing any good.
4. Whenever revolutionary murder has taken place, it has for a time and in that place demoralized the people.
5. It has in no way contributed to mass awakening.
6. Its effect on the masses has been doubly bad in that they had to bear the burden ultimately of additional expense and the indirect effect of Government wrath.
7. Revolutionary murder cannot thrive in the Indian soil, Indian tradition, as history teaches us, being unfavourable to the growth of political violence.
8. If the revolutionaries seek to convert the masses to their method, we would have to wait for an indefinitely long time for it to permeate the masses and then to gain freedom.

1 Vide “Letter from Sukhdev”, 23-4-1931.
9. If the method of violence ever becomes popular, it is bound to recoil, as it has done in other countries, on our own heads.

10. The revolutionaries have an ocular demonstration of the efficacy of the opposite method, i.e., non-violence, which has gone on in spite of sporadic cases of violence on their part and in spite even of violence occasionally done by the so-called votaries of non-violence.

11. Revolutionaries should accept my testimony when I tell them that their activity has not only not done any good to the movement of non-violence, but it has on the contrary harmed the cause. In other words, if I had a completely peaceful atmosphere we would have gained our end already.

These, I claim, are hard facts and no appeal to sentiment. But the writer further objects to my making public appeals to the party and suggests that thereby I help the bureaucracy to crush the movement. Surely the bureaucracy is in no need of my help to deal with the movement. It fights for life both against the revolutionary and me. It scents more danger from the non-violent movement than from the violent. It knows how to deal with the latter. It is baffled by the former which has already shaken it to its foundations.

Moreover, authors of political murder count the cost before they enter upon their awful career. No action of mine can possibly worsen their fate.

And seeing that the revolutionary party must work in secret, I have no other way open to me but that of making public appeals to its unknown members. I may say parenthetically that my public appeals have not altogether fallen on deaf ears. I count many past revolutionaries among my co-workers.

The open letter complains that prisoners other than satya-grahis have not been released. I have explained in these pages the reasons why it was impossible to insist on the release of the other prisoners. Personally, I want the release of all of them. I would make every effort to secure their release. I am aware that some of them ought to have been discharged long ago. The Congress has a resolution in that behalf. Sjt. Nariman has been appointed by the Working Committee to collect all names. As soon as he has got the list, steps will be taken to secure their release. But those who are out must help by preventing revolutionary murder. We may not have the cake and also eat it. Of course there are political prisoners who should be discharged in any case. I can only give the assurance to all concerned that the delay is due not to want of will but to want of ability. Let it be also remembered that when the final settlement comes, if it does, in the course of a few months, all political prisoners must be discharged. If it does not come, those who are trying to secure the release of the other political prisoners will find themselves in prison.

Young India, 23-4-1931

430. VADAPALLI SHOOTING

The following report¹ deserves public attention and action. Since my discharge from prison, I have had many stories of police highhandedness in the South. The impression left on my mind was that in no other part of India was it worse than in the South and in the South nowhere worse than in Andhra. This verified instance perhaps bears out the previous evidence.

Young India, 23-4-1931

431. AGAINST PICKETING

A retired Government officer from the South writes:²

I gather from the Hindu of Madras that you have published in Young India³ a new code of picketing liquor and foreign-cloth shops, and have invited your readers to send you any other rules for picketing they might think of. May I venture to suggest Punch’s famous advice: “Don’t” in this connection? In your most excellent address⁴ to the journalists explaining the terms of the Peace Pact you said among other things that freedom was not worth having if it did not include freedom to err and even to sin, and you pointed out that when Almighty God Himself had given the humblest of His creatures full freedom even to sin it was unthinkable that any man should dare to deny the same complete freedom to his fellow-creatures. May I most respectfully ask you then why you are toiling night and day to prevent people from drinking liquor or wearing foreign cloth if they liked to do so? . . . with results that would be totally embarrassing. I hope you will not fail to bestow your best thought on ¹ Not reproduced here. It had stated that the police firing on March 30 during the car festival at Vadapalli, 15 miles from Rajahmundry, was unjustified.

² Only excerpts are reproduced here.
³ Vide “My Notes”, 15-3-1931.
⁴ Vide “Statement to the press”, 5-3-1931.
the matter and be quite sure that in encouraging picketing in any form you are not helping to ‘sow the wind’.

The writer is plausible but not convincing. He forgets that picketing is as old as time. It does not need legalizing. The Settlement does not legalize that which was illegal before it. Picketing is the right of a reformer which he may not give up without giving up his cause.

The writer has been betrayed into the common error of thinking that because a man has the freedom to err or to sin, any warning against sin would be an unpardonable interference with the freedom. The fact is that individual freedom to sin carried with it the freedom on the part of the public to wean the sinner from his sin and even to legislate against it. ‘The wages of sin is death.’ No one can sin or err with impunity. What I have protested against and what the world has always resented is the arrogant and unctuous assumption by authority to force people against their will to be ‘good’ and to claim infallibility about its standard of what is good and what is bad. Peaceful picketing on the other hand is a friendly warning against a practice that a reformer thinks to be bad. When it goes beyond that point, and becomes violent, the law steps in and prevents the person from interfering with the human liberty. The writer has pictured the dangers of picketing in certain conditions. He is not even original in his illustrations. Temples have been picketed before now. Only the attempt proved futile and was given up. And there is nothing to prevent any person from renewing such picketing so long as he observes the rule of the game and does not mind public opprobrium. Picketing of drink and drug shops and foreigncloth shops has been possible and largely successful because there is a public feeling against these shops. There is therefore no danger of the Congress having ‘sown the wind and reaping the whirlwind’. Picketing of the educative type has come to stay, for it has proved its usefulness.

_Young India_, 23-4-1931
432. AN INGENIOUS SUGGESTION

A correspondent sends the following ingenious suggestion for solving the communal puzzle:

The Hindu and Muslim communities should have equality of votes in every province. As an adjustment of communal voting, this is obviously unjust to the majority community. The idea, however, is not to adjust but to nullify communal voting. The result of adopting my suggestions will be that every question on which the two communities find themselves ranged on opposite sides at the polls will in effect be decided by the votes of the other (minority) communities. It is understood that these other communities will have proportional representation.

I make no comment on it for the simple reason that everything will commend itself to me if it commends itself to the communities concerned. Will the Mussalmans be satisfied, and how would the Sikhs fare?

Young India, 23-4-1931

433. LETTER TO RAMBHUAU KHARE

April 23, 1931

CHI. RAMBHUAU,

You seem to have become so lazy that you never write to me. Why is that so? You should now shake off your lethargy and do some work. Otherwise your having gone there will have served no purpose.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : C.W. 288. Courtesy : Lakshmibehn Khare
434. CABLE TO “DAILY HERALD”

[After April 23, 1931]

EDITOR
“DAILY HERALD”
LONDON

YOUR WIRE. REPORT ABOUT FOREIGN MISSIONARIES WAS DISTORTION OF MY VIEWS. HAVE PUBLISHED “YOUNG INDIA” FULL ARTICLE SETTING FORTH VIEW. AM CERTAINLY AGAINST USE OF HOSPITALWS SCHOOLS AND LIKE FOR PURPOSES CONVERSION. IT IS HARDLY HEALTHY METHOD AND CERTAINLY GIVES RISE BITTER RESENTMENT. CONVERSION MATTER OF HEART AND MUST DEPEND UPON SILENT INFLUENCE OF PURE CHARACTER AND CONDUCT OF MISSIONARIES. TRUE CONVERSION COMES IMPERCEPTIBLY LIKE AROMA OF A ROSE. THUS AM NOT AGAINST CONVERSION AS SUCH BUT AM CERTAINLY AGAINST PRESENT METHODS. CONVERSION MUST NOT BE REDUCED TO BUSINESS DEPENDING FOR INCREASE UPON POUNDS SHILLINGS PENCE. I ALSO HOLD THAT ALL GREAT RELIGIONS ARE OF EQUAL MERIT TO RESPECTIVE NATIONS OR INDIVIDUALS PROFESSING THEM. INDIA IS IN NO NEED OF CONVERSION OF TYPE DESCRIBED. WHILST UNDER SWARAJ ALL WOULD BE FREE EXERCISE THEIR OWN FAITHS. PERSONALLY I WOULD WISH PRESENT METHODS ADOPTED BY MISSIONARIES WERE ABANDONED EVEN NOW AND THAT UNDER CONVICTION NOT COMPULSION.

GANDHI

From a photostat: S.N. 17027

---

1 The article “Foreign Missionaries” referred to in the text was published on April 23.
435. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

BARDOLI,
April 24, 1931

CHI. VASUMATI,

I got your letter. Take proper case of your health while working. Be patient in everything you do. Let service be its own reward, no matter what the results of your work. Who are the others with you?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : S.N. 9322

436. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

BARDOLI,
April 24, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

I got your letter. Ranchhodbhai should take Santok to Robinson for treatment of her molar.

Lilabehn may leave if she wishes, but she should be told that she should not hope to be permitted to return.

Can I take it that Jamna is responding to treatment? If Kusum, too, responds, you may call Radha there. She has still not recovered.

I will write about the vow\(^1\) if I get the time. I spend the little time I have got in overtaking the correspondence which has accumulated. I keep fairly fit.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati : M.M.U./I.

\(^1\) The swadeshi vow; vide “The Law of Swadeshi”, 31-5-1931. Gandhiji had written earlier on the other Ashram vows but had omitted the swadeshi vow since in writing about it he might have had to touch upon political matters.
437. LETTER TO DHIRAJLAL R. MEHTA

April 24, 1931

CHI. DHIRAJLAL.

I have your letter.

May you have a happy married life free from all impurities, and may you both be ever engrossed in service. Do come to meet me sometime.

I remember Jivanlalbhai quite well.

Blessings from

MOHANDAS

CHI. DHIRAJLAL RATILAL MEHTA
Bhaga’s Tank
Bhavnagar

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 10849

438. ADVICE TO PEASANTS, BARDOLI

April 24, 1931

Mahatma Gandhi had an informal discussion for an hour this afternoon with those peasants of Bardoli taluka whose confiscated lands have been sold by Government to third parties.

It is understood Ghandhiji advised them not to obstruct the purchasers of their lands if they came to take possession and to work on the lands. Mahatma Gandhi added that they should have faith that they would get back their lands at no distant date. For the present they might consider them lost in the struggle for freedom.

The Bombay Chronicle, 25-4-1931
439. VIOLATION OF PLEDGE

A friend writes:¹

It is my confirmed belief that my pledge not to visit the Ashram is still intact and that it has not been violated in the least. To abstain from going to the Ashram implies not staying there for any length of time. This never implied, and should not imply, that in case of need I cannot visit the sick there. Moreover, it did not and does not mean that I cannot go there if it becomes necessary to do so for the sake of the struggle itself. I cannot go there for my convenience or other selfish ends.

The Ashram is everything to me. I feel an attachment to it, as it is my creation. For me it is the place where my ideals can be realized. It is a source of inspiration to me. Ever since my return to India, it is there that I derived the inspiration for many, if not all, of the fresh steps which I have taken. By beginning this latest struggle through the Ashram inmates, I hope that even in the unhappy event of everyone being defeated someone from the Ashram will come forward to continue the fight to the very end. Regarding the Ashram I cherish the hope and the delusion that at a time when violence prevails, a witness for non-violence will come forth from the Ashram. It may be that there are no grounds for this hope. It may well be that the person of whom we may entertain expectations may disappoint us, whereas one from whom we expect nothing at all may surpass our hopes. This may well happen. I am publicly giving expression to my fond hopes. I am pointing out where my expectations lie. My prayer is that many non-violent, truthful persons may arise in the country who will fight unto death. For me who has the illusion that even if this prayer is not granted, some fruit will at least be reaped from the Ashram—it is too much to give up the Ashram. My renunciation holds good only so far as my self-interest is concerned; it cannot imply the giving up of any occasion for rendering service. Such renunciation cannot involve doing harm to its very object.

¹ The letter is not translated here. The correspondent had referred to Gandhiji’s vow not to return to the Ashram before India attained swaraj. Vide also “Speech at prayer meeting, Sabarmati ashram”, 12-3-1930 and “Interview to associated press of India”, 15-4-1931.
I find no substance in the opposition to the red bungalow. The only offence which it has committed is that it is in the neighbourhood of the Ashram. It is absolutely detached from the Ashram. Why should I not stay in the red bungalow if I have some work pertaining to the Ashram but do not wish to live in it? If there is no harm in staying at the Vidyapith, if there is no harm in staying at Ambalalbhai’s house, why cannot I stay at the red bungalow?

As a matter of fact, I would not regard it as a violation of my pledge even if during my visits to Ahmedabad I put up at the Ashram. But I gave up the idea of doing so as that would have been misunderstood by people and from experience I find that it was all to the good.

It is not right that we should interpret a pledge literally. Rather than stick to the letter, we should consider its spirit. This is the golden rule of interpreting a pledge. If more than one interpretation is possible, we should give up that which is favourable to us and suffer any inconvenience which results from an unfavourable interpretation and stick to it. Hence I cannot go to the Ashram or stay there for accepting some service there. If I am hungry and the Ashram is nearby, I cannot go there to get food but should suffer my hunger until I find food elsewhere.

[From Gujarati]

_Navajivan_, 26-4-1931
440. THE SARDA ACT

A correspondent asks the following questions:

In my opinion, the following are the replies, in the order of the questions:

1. One can go and register complaints.
2. A true priest would not yield to threats or pressure.
3. Risks have to be taken in trying to do a good deed. Hence when a certain course of action clearly seems to be our dharma, it should be followed even at the risk of one’s life and property. Every individual should decide for himself on every occasion whether his duty demands risking his life and property.
4. The Congress does not stop with mere political activity. It takes up all tasks which help in the uplift of the people. All servants of the nation—whether men or women—should bear this in mind while making their own decisions. Making a decision is not always an easy task. There are many reforms which have to be abandoned in the larger interests of the country. Hence the question that arises is always as follows: “By taking up the cause of this reform, do I increase or diminish my overall usefulness?” If the reply tends towards the latter, we should think twice before taking up the cause of that reform.

[From Gujarati]
Navajivan, 26-4-1931

441. WOMEN VOLUNTEERS AND KHADI

There is an association of women volunteers in Nadiad and this question has come up there. Some people claim that a woman volunteer can carry on picketing while clad in a mill-made sari, etc; that it is no longer necessary now for those working for the Congress to wear khadi. This reasoning is erroneous and the use of mill-made saris and other clothes is not permitted. The rule passed by the Congress is almost eight years old now. It was attacked by many and was fully discussed at the annual session. Despite this, Congress representatives have refused to alter the clause relating to khadi and hence khadi has

---

1 This required that at the time of marriage a boy should be at least 18 and a girl of 14 years of age.
2 These are not translated here.
now taken deep roots. No member of the Congress has the right to violate that rule or break that tradition. In my opinion, therefore, the above question should not have arisen at all.

But I have been told that if the condition in regard to khadi is not relaxed, there will be a sharp fall in the number of women volunteers and perhaps not a single woman volunteer will be forthcoming locally in the Kheda district who would be prepared to wear khadi. If this is a fact, it is a sad thing. Nevertheless, as the person who has laid down the Shastra of khadi, I am prepared to put up with this set-back.
If there is real strength in khadi and if there is any tapascharya behind it, it will overcome this new difficulty which it is facing.

In the world, wherever people have swerved from the path of truth they have done so to evade such difficulties. There is no other motive for swerving from the path of truth. Human nature tries to avoid difficulties. It seeks an easy way out. The easy way takes one downhill, the difficult way leads one upwards. The rule of physics applies also to spiritual matters. An object drops heavily to the ground due to gravitation, whereas trying to lift it up makes one breathless.
Hence neglecting khadi in our impatience to boycott foreign cloth is like abandoning the path of truth. Every volunteer—man or woman—should bear in mind that the boycott cannot succeed by deviating from that path, and even if succeeded, it would not be worth while. We regard the boycott of foreign cloth as our dharma because in it we see the means of satisfying, more or less, the hunger of crores of persons and the spinning-wheel is the means and this implies khadi. Hence no Congress volunteer, whether a man or a woman, can use anything but khadi.

What, then, of mill-made cloth?—some people thoughtlessly
ask. The movement for boycott was not started for the sake of the Indian textile mills. However, mills too grow under the shade of the great tree of khadi. Khadi spreads at a snail’s pace. Its use has not yet become widespread. It is not available in every town and every locality. In such circumstances, the Indian mills can readily sell their stocks. But if these compete with khadi, both would be faced with ruin. Whereas khadi needs the assistance of advertising and exhibitions, the Indian textile mills stand in no need of these. The latter get protection through the khadi movement.

A woman volunteer who is aware of this situation, while pleading for boycott will insist upon the use of khadi and never ask the people to use mill-made cloth. She would not recommend the use of mill-made cloth even to those who refuse to use khadi. Patiently and lovingly, she will refute the arguments against khadi and to the very end she will recommend its use. Fearlessly, yet with determination, she will say, “Indian mill-made cloth is not meant for you, it is only for those who have not heard the message of the Congress.”

[From Gujarati]
Navajivan, 26-4-1931

442. WORTH WHILE QUESTIONS

A co-worker has sent me the following questions which were put to him:

I do not know of any freedom to import foreign cotton. I personally believe that if foreign cotton is required to produce fine cloth, there is no harm in importing it. I see no harm in importing raw material from abroad if we can make use of it. We have seen that much harm is done by exporting raw material which we can utilize, but just as it is advantageous to export that which we cannot utilize, even so it is good to import any necessary raw material.

Like raw cotton, raw silk may be imported from abroad, if that is necessary. Silk in its raw from means cocoons. If these can be imported from abroad and anyone orders them, there is no harm in doing so from the economic stand-point. However, from the standpoint of non-violence I would not approve of this trade.

I have not heard of woollen “tops”. But just as in accordance with the rule mentioned above, we cannot import foreign cotton or silk yarn, likewise we cannot import woollen “tops”. However, I do not know if an exception has been made in regard to this.

How is it possible that no one would have to undergo any suffering while a country, steeped in slavery and reduced to dust, is attempting to recover from this plight? This has not happened

1 Not translated here
2 The question was why import of foreign cotton was permitted while boycott of foreign yarn and cloth was being advocated.
3 The question was whether import of foreign raw silk was permitted like that of foreign cotton.
4 Indian mills were importing woollen tops for the manufacture of high quality woollens. Would the Congress policy permit such import?
5 The question was: “Since the Congress advocated boycott of foreign yarn anywhere in history. A much larger number of weavers than those engaged in weaving foreign yarn at present were once engaged in weaving exclusively Indian yarn. If I had my way, I would make these weavers who are unemployed at present weave Indian yarn alone. With regard to such hardships, it is sufficient to realize that if those who have used foreign yarn or traded in it suffer losses or hardships now, it is their atonement for the sins they have committed so far.

The answer to this is contained in the above. In great struggles we cannot like Banias make petty calculations. Such calculations go ill with noble sentiments.

The success which was achieved was due to the sentiment for khadi and the knowledge that the poor were being helped thereby. However much the Indian mills step up their production, boycott cannot be achieved if this sentiment is absent. The suggestion not to buy new cloth will not find acceptance without such sentiment. The shortage of khadi was experienced for one or two months only. At the end of that period, large quantities of khadi began to be produced. If there is a demand, the requisite amount of khadi can be produced within a short time. This is because the means which are at hand for the production of khadi are not available for the production of cloth in Indian mills. Nature is favourable to khadi. Indian mills have to take risks by opposing nature. I do not cite this as a drawback. Man goes in for many adventures by opposing nature and some of these are even desirable. At this juncture, by bringing in nature and showing that khadi is in keeping with it, I am only describing an existing situation. Experience has shown us that it is only after the advent of khadi era that we began to believe in the possibility of the boycott of which was largely used to feed handloom, there might be unemployment among handloom weavers and as the yarn produced by the mills and on the handloom did not come up to 40 counts, was it not prudent to postpone the boycott of such yarn, until the same could be produced in the country?"

1 That foreign silk yarn and woollen yarn were being used hitherto because they could not be produced indigenously. The stoppage of their import would lead to large-scale unemployment. Moreover, 60 to 75 per cent of the value of the cloth so produced remained in the country. Why then prohibit this import?

2 It was stated that Gandhiji had said that boycott of foreign cloth was possible only through khadi, that when the boycott proceeded well the previous year and the stocks of khadi ran out, there were two factors responsible for its success, viz., cutting down cloth requirements to a minimum and increasing indigenous mill-made cloth. Was it then not wise to make the boycott easy by resorting to these means rather than insisting on the use of khadi only?
foreign cloth, it is only after that that there was an awakening among the people. It is only through the presence of khadi that we can, to some extent, save the mill-owners from the clutches of self-interest.

[From Gujarati]
Nanajivan, 26-4-1931

443. LETTER TO J. H. GARRETT

BORSAD,
April 26, 1931

I have your letter of 24th instant.

It is hardly fair to tear from its context a sentence\(^1\) from my letter so as to give it a meaning wider than what it would bear if the sentence was read in its context. If you accept the representative character of the Congress, the party to the Settlement, is it right to issue over the heads of the representatives the notice that the Mamlatdars have issued in the place of the one about which I complained?

I must confess that I miss the friendly response which I had hoped our interview would evoke. I still ask you to approach the Settlement in the spirit that actuated Lord Irwin. The way you are going is the way of war. I assure you that I want to work the Settlement in the friendliest spirit possible. Will you not reciprocate?

Young India, 20-8-1931

444. LETTER TO R. M. MAXWELL

AS AT BORSAD,
April 26, 1931

DEAR MR. MAXWELL,

I thank you for your letter\(^2\) of the 24th instant. I must apologize for the omission to send you a copy of my letter of the 20th instant to Mr. Garrett. I repair the omission now and send you a copy herewith as also translation of the circular now recalled. From the copy you will observe that I never claimed that the Government and the people can have no dealings with one another except through the Congress. My

---

\(^1\) Vide the following item.
\(^2\) Vide “Letter from R.M. Maxwell”, 24-4-1931.
objection was to the Mamlatdar’s notice issued over my head whilst negotiation was going on between Mr. Garrett and myself. Mr. Garrett, you will note, gave the following categorical reply:

You refer to the Congress as an intermediary between the Government and the people. This is not one of the matters agreed upon in the Settlement and I am unable to agree to the suggestion.

The position taken up in your letter under reply is surely different from this as also different from what Mr. Garrett has taken up in his latest letter of which I attach copy herewith. He writes under date 24th instant.

You write that ‘the Congress must be recognized as the intermediary between the Government and the people whom the Congress represents’. I am unable to see anything in the terms of the Settlement which bears on this point. There is nothing to prevent the Congress advising people as to what they should do, nor can any restriction be placed on the duty of the Government officers to perform their functions directly with those concerned.

It will be observed that the quotation from my letter is torn from its context and is thus made to bear a meaning which is wider than the one it bears when read in its context. Mr. Garrett wrote the letter after having ordered the issue of a revised notice by Mamlatsdars not very different from the notice which is substitutes.

My contention is that even the new notice is premature and that in any case it should not have been issued without consultation with the local workers. Such notices become necessary only when it has become clear that the people affected are deliberately withholding payment. That this is not the case at present is manifest from the fact that the people have been paying as fast as it is possible in spite of the non-fulfilment in several respects by the Government of the terms of the Settlement. This is hardly consistent with the terms of the Settlement which contemplates amicable relations and mutual trust. I confess that here, in Gujarat, see not only no trust but a secretiveness and distrust which one see when the relations are strained. I hope that the matter will receive His Excellency’s immediate attention. Notwithstanding the serious grievance, I want to give my assurance that I am anxious that the people should carry out their part of the Settlement to the fullest extent possible.
If His Excellency the Acting Governor thinks that any useful purpose can be served by mutual discussion let him consider me to be at his disposal.

Yours sincerely,

A.I.C.C., File No. 16-B, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Also Young India, 20-8-1931.

445. LETTER TO SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA

BARDOLI,
April 26, 1931

DEAR SATIS BABU,

I have not been able to overtake the immense arrears of correspondence, but now that I have got shorthand assistance, I hope to overtake them, if I get a few more quiet days that I have been getting just now. Your letters make instructive reading. I wholly agree with you that it would be better for you to suspend your picketing activity till the atmosphere is clearer and you are not liable to be misunderstood. I like also the idea of your steering clear of all parties. Please give my love to Dr. Roy. I hope he is now fully restored. He has yet plenty of service to see through. In launching out on *Rashtravani*¹, you will follow the golden prescription that it must be self-supporting.

What is your food now and how many pounds of weight have you regained? It is probable that for some days to come I may be in Gujarat.

Did you see Mr. Mujibar Rehman and if you did, what happened?

Yours sincerely,

SHRI SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA
15 COLLEGE SQUARE, CALCUTTA

From a microfilm : S.N. 17017

¹ A Bengali Weekly
DEAR FRIEND,

Your open letter has come upon me as a shock, the more so as you yourself distrusted the report and have suffered yourself from misreporting. If you had just dropped a line before writing your long open letter how much precious time, that for you and me belongs to God, would have been saved. As it is, in the language of the Gita, you have been guilty of theft and, in the bargain, have done a wrong to a friend.

It will please you to know that three unknown friends have been more cautious. They have written to me to enquire whether the report correctly sets forth my view. Next time you see something about me which may appear to you to misrepresent me as you have known me, may I ask you to refer to me before you pen another open or private letter. Lastly, If you have loved me before, as I know you have, I hope that after reading my article¹ in Young India on the subject matter of your open letter, you will feel that you have no cause to change your attitude. And why will you not love me even though I may err in your estimation? Or must love require a consideration?

Yours sincerely,

REV. E. STANLEY JONES
SAT TAL ASHRAM
SAT TAL (DT. NAINI TAL)

From a photostat : S.N. 17015

¹ Vide “Foreign Missionaries”, 23-4-1931.
DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter as also a copy of the speech you would have made at the Sikh League. With some parts of your letter I can heartily agree and I wish that we were rid of the slightest communal taint. But it seems that, if there is any settlement in the immediate future, there would be at least some communalism about it.

I have never been able to understand the nationalism which remains nationalistic only if all the rest do so and otherwise become uncompromisingly communalistic.

I have not the dread that you have of adult suffrage. Every form of suffrage will be liable to abuse, adult suffrage perhaps the least so. And I have an effective antidote that might, to a certain extent, obviate the mischief. But I need not dilate upon it at the present moment.

I am also in agreement with you that we should have education on the widest scale possible of the masses, not so much of children as of grown-up men and women who will presently be armed with great powers for good or evil. That education, I think, the Congress has given not always successfully, not always well, but on the whole undoubtedly successfully and well.

I do think that the association of high salaries with efficiency and public honesty is an hypnotic effect produced by the rulers. The sooner we get out of it the better it will be for us. The present civil service is open to influences which are far more subtle and deadly than open bribery. Nor do I consider the administration to be efficient except in so far as it guarantees at the point of the bayonet safety for the lives of the European population but certainly not of the masses. I think that we have patriotic men and women enough in the country who, when we come to our own, will gladly give their services for maintenance money that will easily bear comparison with the average income of the toiling but starving millions. Poverty, if it is due to ignorance, is no less due to heartless unparalleled exploitation.

---

1 Of the Ministry of Agriculture
2 The meeting of the Sikh League was held at Amritsar on April 8.
Thus though we have differences of opinion I have valued your letter and the enclosure, both of which I have read with a great deal of interest. Do please therefore favour me again whenever you have anything of importance to tell me.

Yours sincerely,

SARDAR SUREN德拉 SINGH
PUNJAB CIVIL SECRETARIAT
LAHORE

From a photostat : S.N. 17016

448. SPEECH TO VILLAGERS, AKOTI

April 26, 1931

When Mr. Gandhi arrived the villagers told him that all their rice crop worth about Rs. 50,000 which was the main crop of the village, had been attached and sold to a parsi for Rs. 1,400. They had no means of support and depended on the relief given by the Congress, but still the Mamlatdar called upon them to pay land revenue.

Mr. Gandhi said that in view of their condition they were entitled under the terms of the Truce to get time for the payment of land revenue. He advised them as well as all peasants in Gujarat to pay land revenue if they could, but if they could not pay they should not be afraid to refuse to pay land revenue and patiently bear all the consequences . . .

The Bombay Chronicle, 29-4-1931
449. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

AS AT BORSAD,
April 27, 1931

DEAR MR. EMERSON,

When I wrote to you last copy of an important letter¹ was not sent to you for which I apologize and which I now send. More correspondence has grown since. I send you copies of these also. There are other ominous things which I need not mention now.

You will recall that the Government of India authorized coercive measures on the strength of the Bombay Government report of which you gave me a copy. I have already shown to you how misleading that report was and how nobly, in my opinion, the people have paid in spite of the fact that even now the terms of the Settlement in several matters remain unfulfilled by the local officials. I attach hereto a list which will enforce what I have said. These people deserve better treatment than notices of coercive processes. If the matters brought to your notice are not clear to you, and if you think it necessary, you may drag me to Simla. And if you do, it will be necessary for you to stop all coercive processes at least pending our conversations.

I want your help in preventing a breakdown of the Settlement. I have pledged my honour to Lord Irwin that I shall do nothing that I could honourably refrain from doing to prevent a breakdown. But it takes two to play a game. I feel safe in the confidence that you on your part will not, if it is at all possible, allow a breakdown in regard to what you have rightly said is a gentleman’s agreement.

Yours sincerely,

H. W. EMERSON, ESQ.
HOME SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA
SIMLA

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-B, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Also Young India, 20-8-1931

¹ To J. H. Garrett”; vide “Letter to J.H.Garrett”, 20-4-1931.
DEAR MR. MAXWELL,

A friend has given me a copy of Government instructions about relaxation of salt laws in terms of the Settlement but I have seen nothing in the papers about the Government resolution. I have purposely refrained from giving any guidance to my co-workers or the public as I was given to understand by Mr. Emerson that instructions regarding salt administration would be publicly issued. Will you please tell me whether the Bombay Government propose to issue definite public instruction so that the parties interested may know exactly how they stand? I have already enquiries from many quarters.

Yours sincerely,

R. M. MAXWELL, ESQ.
PRIVATE SECRETARY TO H. E. THE GOVERNOR OF BOMBAY
MAHABALESHWAR

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-C, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library
APPENDICES

APPENDIX I

PRIME MINISTER’S DECLARATION AT R.T.C. \(^1\)

January 19, 1931

The view of His Majesty’s Government is that responsibility for the Government of India should be placed upon Legislatures, Central and Provincial, with such provisions as may be necessary to guarantee, during a period of transition, the observance of certain obligations and to meet other special circumstances, and also with such guarantees as are required by minorities to protect their political liberties and rights.

In such statutory safeguards as may be made for meeting the needs of the transitional period, it will be a primary concern of His Majesty’s Government to see that the reserved powers are so framed and exercised as not to prejudice the advance of India through the new constitution to full responsibility for her own government.

His Majesty’s Government, whilst making this declaration, is aware that some of the conditions which are essential to the working of such a constitution as is contemplated, have not been finally settled, but it believes that as the result of the work done here, they have been brought to a point which encourages the hope that further negotiations, after this declaration, will be successful.

His Majesty’s Government has taken note of the fact that the deliberations of the Conference have proceeded on the basis, accepted by all parties, that the Central Government should be a Federation of all-India, embracing both the Indian States and British India in a bi-cameral legislature. The precise form and structure of the new Federal Government must be determined after further discussion with the Princes and representatives of British India. The range of subjects to be committed to it will also require further discussion, because the Federal Government will have authority only in such matters concerning the States as will be ceded by their Rulers in agreements made by them to entering into Federation. The connection of the States with the Federation will remain subject to the basic principle that in regard to all matters not ceded by them to the Federation their relations will be with the Crown acting through the agency of the Viceroy.

\(^1\) Vide “Interview to associated press of India”, 26-1-1931 & “Interview to The Pioneer”, 5-2-1931.

With a Legislature constituted on a federal basis. His Majesty’s Government will be prepared to recognize the principle of the responsibility of the Executive to the Legislature.

Under existing condition the subjects of Defence and External Affairs will be reserved to the Governor-General, and arrangements will be made to place in his hands the powers necessary for the administration of those subjects. Moreover, as the Governor-General must, as a last resort, be able in an emergency to maintain the tranquillity of the State, and must similarly be responsible for the observance of the constitutional rights of minorities, he must be granted the necessary powers for these purposes.

As regards finance, the transfer of financial responsibility must necessarily be subject to such conditions as will ensure the fulfilment of the obligations incurred under the authority of the Secretary of State and the maintenance unimpaired of the financial stability and credit of India. The Report of the Federal Structure sub-Committee indicates some ways of dealing with this subject including a Reserve Bank, the service of loans, and Exchange policy, which in the view of His Majesty’s Government will have to be provided for somehow in the new constitution. It is of vital interest to all parties in India to accept these provisions to maintain financial confidence. Subject to these provisions the Indian Government would have full financial responsibility for the methods or raising revenue and for the control of expenditure on non-reserved services.

This will mean that under existing conditions the Central Legislature and Executive will have some features of dualism which will have to be fitted into the constitutional structure.

The provision of reserved powers is necessary in the circumstanced and some such reservation has indeed been incidental to the development of most free constitutions. But every care must be taken to prevent conditions arising which will necessitate their use. It is, for instance, undesirable that Ministers should trust to the special powers of the Governor-General as a means of avoiding responsibilities which are properly their own, thus defeating the development of responsible Government by bringing into use powers meant to lie in reserve and in the background. Let there be no mistake about that.

The Governor’s Provinces will be constituted on a basis of full responsibility. Their Ministries will be taken from the Legislature and will be jointly responsible to it. The range of Provincial subjects will be so defined as to give them the greatest possible measure of self-government. The authority of the Federal Government will be limited to provision required to secure its administration of Federal subjects, and so discharge its responsibility for subjects defined in the constitution as of all-India concern.

There will be reserved to the Government only that minimum of special powers which is required in order to secure, in exceptional circumstances, the preservation of tranquillity, and to guarantee the maintenance of rights provided by Statute for the Public Services and minorities.

Finally, His Majesty's Government considers that the institution in the Provinces of responsible government requires both that the legislatures should be enlarged, and that they should be based on a more liberal franchise.

In framing the Constitution His Majesty’s Government considers that it will be its duty to insert provisions guaranteeing to the various minorities, in addition to political representation, that differences of religion, race, sect or cast shall not themselves constitute civic disabilities.

In the opinion of His Majesty’s Government it is the duty of the communities to come to an agreement amongst themselves on the points raised by the Minorities sub-Committee but not settled there. During the continuing negotiations such an agreement ought to be reached and the Government will continue to render what good offices it can to help to secure that end, as it is anxious not only that no delay should take place in putting the new Constitution into operation, but that it should start with the goodwill and confidence of all the communities concerned.

The various sub-committee which have been studying the more important principles of a Constitution which would meet Indian condition have surveyed a considerable part of the structure in detail and the still unsettled points have been advanced a good way to an agreement. His Majesty’s Government, however, in view of the character of the Conference and of the limited time at its disposal in London, has deemed it advisable to suspend its work at this point, so that Indian opinion may be consulted upon the work done, and expedients considered for overcoming the difficulties which have been raised. His Majesty’s Government will consider, without delay, a plan by which our co-operation may be continued so that the result of our completed work may be seen in a new Indian Constitution. If, in the mean time, there is a response to the Viceroy’s appeal to those engaged at present in civil disobedience, and others wish to co-operate on the general lines of this declaration, steps will be taken to enlist their services.

I must convey to you all on behalf of the Government its hearty appreciation of the services you have rendered not only to India but to this country, by coming here and engaging in these personal negotiations. Personal contact is the best way of removing those unfortunate differences and misunderstandings which too many people on both sides have been engendering between us in recent years. A mutual understanding of intention and difficulty, gained under such conditions as have prevailed here, is by far the best way for discovering ways and means of settling differences and satisfying claims. His Majesty’s Government will strive to secure such an amount of agreement as will enable the new Constitution to be passed through the British Parliament and to be put into operation with the active goodwill of the people of both countries.

India in 1930-31, pp. 652-4

APPENDIX II

VICEROY’S STATEMENT

NEW DELHI,

January 26, 1931

The following statement has been issued by His Excellency the Governor-General this afternoon:

“In order to provide opportunity for the consideration of the statement made by the Prime Minister on the 19th January, my Government, in consultation with local Governments, have thought it right that the members of the Working Committee of the All-India Congress should enjoy full liberty of discussion between themselves and with those who have acted as members of the Committee since 1st January, 1930.

“In accordance with this decision and with this object, and in order that there may be no legal bar to any meeting they may wish to hold, the notification declaring the Committee to be an unlawful Association under the Criminal Law Amendment Act will be withdrawn by all local Governments and action will be taken for the release of Mr. Gandhi and others who are now members of the Committee, or who have acted as such, since 1st January 1930.

“My Government will impose no conditions on these releases, because we feel that the best hope of the restoration of peaceful condition lies in discussions being conducted by those concerned under term of unconditional liberty. Our action has been taken in pursuance of a sincere desire to assist the creation of such peaceful condition as would enable the Government to implement the undertaking given by the Prime Minister that if civil quiet were proclaimed and assured, the Government would not be backward in response.

“I am content to trust those who will be affected by our decision to act in the same spirit as inspires it. And I am confident that they will recognize the importance of securing for those grave issues calm and dispassionate examination.”

The Hindustan Times, 28-1-1931

---

APPENDIX III

LETTER FROM GANGABEHN VAIDYA

You know that there was to be a procession in honour of Lilavati and as a protest against the outrageous assault on her by the police. It was not possible for me to keep out of the procession. In fact I took it upon myself to organize the procession by placing the Ashram girls at the head of small batches of women coming from various parts of the town. Whilst I was leading my batch I was informed that Shakariben and Kalavatiben who were at the head of the Ras batch were being belaboured by the police with lathis. I immediately ran to the spot. I found that a girl was profusely bleeding. I went and cheered her up and asked the rest of the sisters to march forward reciting Raghupati Raghava Raja Ram. I was also asking the passers-by to keep on one side of the road so as not to obstruct the procession, when all of a sudden the policy came down upon us with a shower of lathi-blows. I came in for a big share of them, receiving several on the head, the arms, the back, the face and the ears. Blood streamed out from a wound caused on my head but I did not budge an inch and asked the other sisters to sit down. Seeing that I would not be deterred the Foujdar came and arrested me and handed me over to the police. I was taken, bleeding, to the police choki where I found Shakariben, Kalavati, Padma, Lakshmi and Madhu who had all had their share of the blows. My head was still bleeding and I sat down allowing the sun’s rays to fall on the bleeding part. I was perfectly peaceful. Some time after the police came and asked every one of us if we had been injured. “Can’t you see with your own eyes?” I told them. To which he replied: “You would like to be taken to the hospital?” “No”, said I, “suppose we can get well without medical aid.” At this moment another police official arrived on the scene and sternly said to the man who was gloating over our agonies: “Don’t you see that she is still bleeding? Take them quickly to the hospital. How could you allow them to remain here unattended so long?” Thereupon we were taken to the hospital where we found Maitri, Lalita, Lakshmi and other girls who had all been hammered and already admitted as in-patients. My wound was then dressed. It was, the doctor told me, three quarters of an inch to one inch. The others were treated, but were later turned out, evidently because they had chosen to arrest only Vasumati and me.

We are in the lock-up. My wound is being dressed daily and I am quite happy and peaceful. I have my prayers regularly, but have not yet been given my takli. It was on this occasion that I understood somewhat the meaning of ahimsa. I was quite fearless when the blows were coming down upon me and I assure you that I had no hatred or anger in me. Even now I feel no resentment towards the police, and it is growing upon me that we shall achieve success only to the extent we cultivate the spirit of ahimsa. The other sisters bore the blows with exemplary bravery. In some cases the assaults were outrageous, many being kicked on their chests with the hells of the policemen’s boots. Not one budged an inch, everyone stood unflinching at her post. Wherefrom came this sudden access of courage and strength, I wonder. God was with us I am sure. He gave us the strength.

I will not trouble you with more details. The girls will write themselves.

Bombay Secret Abstracts, 750(14)-0-PTA

APPENDIX IV

VICEROY’S CABLE TO SECRETARY OF STATE

Immediate, Private and Personal

I HAVE HAD TWO LONG TALKS WITH GANDHI. APART FROM THE VARIETY OF IMPORTANT POINTS RELATING TO ACTUAL TERMS ON WHICH CONGRESS WOULD CALL OFF CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE TO WHICH I WILL REFER LATER, THE MAIN MATTERS OF SUBSTANCE WE DISCUSSED WERE:

(A) THE SCOPE OF FUTURE CONSTITUTIONAL DISCUSSIONS;

(B) THE INTENTIO OF THE CONGRESS, IF THEY CAME INTO THE DISCUSSION, REGARDING POTENTIAL RESUMPTION OF CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE.

2. AS TO THE FIRST I TOLD HIM THAT THREE MAIN PRINCIPLES OF THE CONFERENCE WERE FEDERATION, SAFEGUARDS AND INDIAN RESPONSIBILITY. THAT THESE WERE FUNDAMENTAL, BUT DETAILED APPLICATION OF THESE PRINCIPLES WAS OPEN TO FURTHER DISCUSSION.

3. HE ASKED ABOUT THE RIGHT TO RAISE IN DISCUSSION THE QUESTION OF DISSOLUTION OF PARTNERSHIP BY WHICH HE PRESUMABLY MEANT THE RIGHT OF SE-CESSION FROM THE EMPIRE. I SAID THAT I PRESUMED HE COULD RAISE IT, IF HE SO DESIRED, BUT THAT IT WOULD BE VERY DAMAGING IF HE MADE ANY PUBLIC STATEMENT TO THIS EFFECT. I GATHER HE DID NOT ATTACH MUCH IMPORTANCE TO THE POINT AND THIS IMPRESSION HAS BEEN CONFIRMED BY SAPRU AND OTHERS.

4. HE ALSO MENTIONED QUESTION OF STATE SUBJECTS. I SAID I PRESUMED HE COULD RAISE THE MATTER IN DISCUSSION, BUT THAT HE WOULD FIND HIMSELF UP AGAINST THE PRINCES. HERE AGAIN, MY IMPRESSION IS THAT HE DOES NOT WISH TO PRESS THE MATTER.

1 Vide “Interview with Viceroy (Viceoy’s version), 19-2-1931 & “Interview with Viceroy (Gandhiji’s version), 19-2-1931.
5. I feel we must be very careful not to get into a position of confusion and misunderstanding about the constitutional position. I have, I hope, kept it clear up to date; but I am sure it would be dangerous to permit Congress to say to the world that everything was open for discussion, and that they had made it clear as a condition of participation that if they were not satisfied they would resume civil disobedience. In such circumstances it would probably be better not to have them in at all. Much depends upon a clear statement of the scope of discussion. If this is confused, we may later get a big landslide in all parties both here and at home and so lose all the advantage gained by the conference. Prime Minister in his announcement promised that steps would be taken to enlist service of those who wish to co-operate on general lines of his declaration, but I feel that in dealing with the Congress it is necessary to have clearer definition, and I am inclined to a statement in the following sense. Federation is an essential of the scheme, so also are safeguards securing crown control of defence and external affairs, the financial credit of India and the discharge of obligations. The exact method by which effect may be given to principal of federation and to such safeguards is matter for discussion. If Congress cannot accept this position then discussion with them would be unprofitable. I should be grateful if you could consider and be prepared to let me have as precise a statement as possible showing the position of His Majesty’s Government in these matters. I discussed this with Sapru, Sastri, Jayakar and Safi today and they agreed to above definition of scope of discussions. They were averse to any more narrow definition.

6. In regard to potential resumption of civil disobedience movement after its abandonment, Gandhi told me that he could not give assurance that Congress would in no circumstances resume civil disobedience movement, but that if they came into these discussions they would do so with the genuine desire to make them a success and would not, in any case, resume civil disobedience before their conclusion. I understood his meaning to be that there would be no question of resumption while the constitutional discussions continued in India, but that he could not bind himself further than this. Sapru and the others regarded it as essential that there should be definite understanding that peaceful atmosphere should prevail during discussion in India, and they considered that if this was not forthcoming it was useless for the Congress to come in. I agree with this view, but doubt whether we can tie him down more closely.
7. MATTERS RELATING TO GOVERNMENT ACTION, SUCH AS AMNESTY, SALT, ETC., WILL ONLY ARISE IF CONSTITUTIONAL POSITION IS SATISFACTORILY CLEARED UP. I ANTICIPATE CONSIDERABLE TROUBLE IN REGARD TO THEM, BUT WE SHALL OF COURSE CONSULT YOU BEFORE WE COME TO ANY CONCLUSION, IF WE GET TO FAR.

8. GENERAL ATMOSPHERE OF OUR DISCUSSION WAS QUITE FRIENDLY AND I HAVE LEARNT THAT GANDHI IS PLEASED AND WANTS PEACE, BUT I AM VERY APPREHENSIVE OF HIS MANOEUVRING YOU AND US INTO A POSITION WHERE CONGRESS COULD PLAUSSIBLY REPRESENT THAT THEY GOT BEHIND THE WORK OF THE CONFERENCE AND HAD SECURED THE RIGHT TO REOPEN THE WHOLE SUBJECT. THE PROBLEM THEREFORE IS HOW TO SECURE OURSELVES AGAINST THIS, WITHOUT REFUSING TOO FULL A LATITUDE OF DISCUSSION WITHIN THE WIDEST LIMITS THAT CONFERENCE AGREEMENTS LEAVE POSSIBLE.

9. IF DISCUSSIONS ARE TO PROCEED FURTHER I FEEL THAT THEY MUST RESUME WIDER SCOPE. ON RECEIPT OF YOUR REPLY I PROPOSE TO SEE GANDHI MYSELF AND STATE TO HIM PRECISE LIMITS OF CONSTITUTIONAL DISCUSSIONS. IF HE ACCEPTS THESE OR IF AFTER HEARING THESE HE IS PREPARED TO PURSUE THE MATTER FURTHER, I PROPOSE THAT OUTSTANDING QUESTIONS SHOULD BE EXAMINED AT A CONFERENCE OVER WHICH I WOULD PRESIDE AND CONSISTING OF SENIOR EUROPEAN INDIAN MEMBERS OF MY COUNCIL—HOME SECRETARY, SAPRU, SASTRI, JAYAKAR, SAFI, CHHATTARI, PROBABLY ANOTHER MUHAMMADAN, A EUROPEAN NON-OFFICIAL MEMBER OF THE ASSEMBLY WITH GANDHI AND TWO OR THREE CONGRESS REPRESENTATIVES NAMED BY HIM. I ANTICIPATE THAT, IF EVERYTHING WENT WELL, THIS CONFERENCE MIGHT MEET ABOUT THE 27TH AND WOULD ASK FOR YOUR APPROVAL TO IT.

From a photostat: G.N. 8951
APPENDIX V

JAWAHARLAL NEHRU’S NOTE ON PROVISIONAL SETTLEMENT

In consequence of the provisional settlement between the Working Committee and the Government of India a period of truce has been proclaimed. It is with regret that, on the morrow of this agreement, I have to strike a note of discord. I recognize that, in many respects, the terms of settlement are honourable and give evidence of the strength that the nation has gained by the sacrifice and suffering of the past year. I recognize also that the settlement is provisional, leaving all the vital questions open, and the final settlement is yet to come. But I feel that there is a certain commitment in it regarding the scope of discussions and a certain limitation of our ideal as laid down at Lahore. Safeguards and reservations are referred to and, although these are said to be in the interests of India, they may be, and I fear will be, interpreted to mean a limitation of our freedom in regard to defence, external affairs, finances and the public debt. The Congress and the Working Committee are pledged to the full control by the people of India of the defence services, the financial and economic policy, and the . . . many of my colleagues of the W.C. are of opinion that the reference to safeguards and reservation does not limit their freedom in any way to work for the independence of India. I hope they are right and will prove their contention by their achievements in the coming Conference. But, as I cannot get over my doubts in regard to this phraseology, I am unable to accept or reconcile myself to any reference to safeguards and reservations. I do not desire however that any impediment should be placed in the way of those who interpret the words differently from me and who propose to extract independence out of them. Truce having been proclaimed by the Working Committee, I trust all of us will honour it and carry out the directions of the W.C. in regard to it.

A.I.C.C. File No. 329, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

---

1 Vide “Note”, 2-3-1931.
2 The source is blank here.
APPENDIX VI

PROVISIONAL SETTLEMENT

The following statement\(^1\) by the Governor General in Council published in the Gazette of India Extraordinary of 5th March 1931 gives the conditions on which the civil disobedience movement is to be suspended pending final terms of settlement.

1. Consequent on the conversations that have taken place between His Excellency the Viceroy and Mr. Gandhi, it has been arranged that the civil disobedience movement, be discontinued, and that, with the approval of His Majesty’s Government certain action be taken by the Government of India and local Governments.

2. As regards constitutional questions, the scope of future discussion is stated, with the assent of His Majesty’s Government, to be with the object of considering further the scheme for the constitutional Government of India discussed at the Round Table Conference. Of the scheme there outlined, Federation is an essential part; so also are Indian responsibility and reservation; or safeguards in the interest of India, for such matters as, for instance, defence; external affairs; the position of minorities; the financial credit of India, and the discharge of obligations.

3. In pursuance of the statement made by the Prime Minister in his announcement of the 19th of January 1931, steps will be taken for the participation of the representative of the Congress in the further discussion that are to take place on the scheme of constitutional reform.

4. The settlement relates to activities directly connected with the civil disobedience movement.

5. Civil disobedience will be effectively discontinued and reciprocal action will be taken by Government. The effective discontinuance of the civil disobedience movement means the effective discontinuance of all activities in furtherance thereof, by whatever methods pursued and, in particular, the following:

   (i) The organized defiance of the provisions of any law.

   (ii) The movement for the non-payment of land revenue and other legal dues.

   (iii) The publication of news-sheets in support of the civil disobedience movement.

   (iv) Attempts to influence civil and military servants of village officials against Government or to persuade them to resign their posts.

\(^1\) Of the Gandhi-Irwin agreement
6. As regards the boycott of foreign goods, there are two issues involved: firstly, the character of the boycott and secondly, the methods employed in giving effect to it. The position of Government is as follows. They approve of the encouragement of Indian industries as part of the economic and industrial movement designed to improve the material condition of India, and they have no desire to discourage methods of propaganda, persuasion or advertisement pursued with this object in view, which do not interfere with the freedom of action of individuals, or are not prejudicial to the maintenance of law and order. But the boycott of non-Indian goods (except of cloth which has been applied to all foreign cloth) has been directed during the civil disobedience movement chiefly, if not exclusively, against British goods, and in regard to these it has been admittedly employed in order to exert pressure for political ends.

It is accepted that a boycott of this character, and organized for this purpose, will not be consistent with the participation of representatives of the Congress in a frank and friendly discussion of constitutional questions between representatives of British India, of the Indian States, and of His Majesty’s Government and political parties in England, which the settlement is intended to secure. It is, therefore, agreed that the discontinuance of the civil disobedience movement connotes the definite discontinuance of the employment of the boycott of British commodities as a political weapon and that, in consequence, those who have given up, during a time of political excitement, the sale or purchase of British goods must be left free without any form of restraint to change their attitude if they so desire.

7. In regard to the methods employed in furtherance of the replacement of non-Indian by Indian goods, or against the consumption of intoxicating liquor and drugs, resort will not be had to methods coming within the category of picketing, except within the limits permitted by the ordinary law. Such picketing, shall be unaggressive and it shall not involve coercion, intimidation, restraint, hostile demonstration, obstruction to the public, or any offence under the ordinary law. If and when any of these methods is employed in any place, the practice of picketing in that place will be suspended.

8. Mr. Gandhi has drawn the attention of Government to specific allegation against the conduct of the police, and represented the desirability of a public enquiry into them. In present circumstances Government see great difficulty in this course and feel that it must inevitably lead to charges and counter-charges, and so militate against the re-establishment of peace. Having regard to these considerations, Mr. Gandhi agreed not to press the matter.

9. The action that Government will take on the discontinuance of the civil disobedience movement is stated in the following paragraphs.
10. Ordinances promulgated in connection with the civil disobedience movement will be withdrawn. Ordinance No. 1 of 1931 relating to the terrorist movement does not come within the scope of the provision.

11. Notifications declaring association unlawful under the Criminal Law Amendment Act of 1908 will be withdrawn, provided that the notifications were made in connection with the civil disobedience movement.

The notifications recently issued by the Burma Government under the Criminal Law Amendment Act do not come within the scope of this provision.

12 (i) Pending prosecutions will be withdrawn if they have been filed in connection with the civil disobedience movement and relate to offences which do not involve violence other than technical violence, or incitement to such violence.

(ii) The same principles will apply to proceedings under the security provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code.

(iii) Where a local Government has moved any High Court or has initiated proceedings under the Legal Practitioners’s Act in connection with the civil disobedience movement, it will make application to the Court concerned for permission to withdraw such proceedings, provided that the alleged conduct of the persons concerned does not relate to violence of incitement to violence.

(iv) Prosecutions, if any, against soldiers and police involving disobedience of orders will not come within the scope of this provision.

13 (i) Those prisoners will be released who are undergoing imprisonment in connection with the civil disobedience movement for offences which did not involve violence, other than technical violence, or incitement to such violence.

(ii) If any prisoner who comes within the scope of (i) above has been also sentenced for a jail offence, not involving violence, other than technical violence, or incitement to such violence, the latter sentence also will be remitted, or if a prosecution relating to an offence of this character is pending against such a prisoner, it will be withdrawn.

(iii) Soldiers and police convicted of offences involving disobedience of orders—in the very few cases that have occurred—will not come within the scope of the amnesty.

14. Fines which have not been realized will be remitted. Where an order for the forfeiture of security has been made under the security provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code, and the security has not been realized, it will be similarly remitted.

Fines which have been realized and securities forfeited and realized under any law will not be returned.

15. Additional police imposed in connection with the civil disobedience movement at the expense of the inhabitants of a particular area will be withdrawn at the discretion of local Governments. Local Governments will not refund any money, not in excess of the actual cost, that has been realized, but they will remit any sum that has not been realized.

16 (a) Movable property, which is not an illegal possession and which has been seized in connection with the civil disobedience movement, under the Ordinances or the provisions of the Criminal Law, will be returned, if it is still in the possession of Government.

(b) Movable property, forfeited or attached in connection with the realization of land revenue of other dues, will be returned, unless the Collector of the District has reason to believe that the defaulter will contumaciously refuse to pay the dues recoverable from him within a reasonable period. In deciding what is a reasonable period, special regard will be paid to cases in which the defaulters, while willing to pay, genuinely require time for the purpose, and if necessary, the revenue will be suspended in accordance with the ordinary principles of land revenue administration.

(c) Compensation will not be given for deterioration.

(d) Where movable property has been sold or otherwise finally disposed of by Government, compensation will not be given and the sale proceeds will not be returned, except in so far as they are in excess of the legal dues for which the property may have been sold.

(e) It will be open to any person to see any legal remedy he may have on the ground that the attachment or seizure of property was not in accordance with the law.

17 (a) Immovable property of which possession has been taken under Ordinance IX of 1930 will be returned in accordance with the provisions of the Ordinance.

(b) Land and other immovable property in the possession of Government, which has been forfeited or attached in connection with the realization of land revenue or other dues, will be returned unless the Collector of the district has reason to believe that the defaulter will contumaciously refuse to pay the dues recoverable from him within a reasonable period. In deciding what is a reasonable period special regard will be paid to cases in which the defaulter, while willing to pay, genuinely, requires time for the purpose, and if necessary the revenues will be suspended in accordance with the ordinary principles of land revenue administration.

(c) Where immovable property has been sold to third parties, the transaction must be regarded as final, so far as Government are concerned.
NOTE. Mr. Gandhi has represented to Government that according to his information and belief some, at least, of these sales have been unlawful and unjust. Government on the information before them cannot accept this contention.

(d) It will be open to any person to see any legal remedy he may have on the ground that the seizure or attachment of property was not in accordance with the law.

18. Government believe that there have been very few cases in which the realization of dues has not been made in accordance with the provisions of the law. In order to meet such cases, if any, local Governments will issue instructions to District Officers to have prompt enquiry made into any specific complaint of this nature, and to give redress without delay if illegality is established.

19. Where the posts rendered vacant by the resignations have been permanently filled, Government will not be able to reinstate the late incumbents. Other cases of resignation will be considered on their merits by local Governments who will pursue a liberal policy in regard to the reappointment or Government servants and village official who apply for reinstatement.

20. Government are unable to condone breaches of the existing law relating to the salt administration, nor are they able, in the present financial conditions of the country, to make substantial modifications in the Salt Acts.

For the sake however of giving relief to certain of the poorer classes, they are prepared to extend their administrative provisions, on lines already prevailing in certain places, in order to permit local residents in villages, immediately adjoining areas where salt can be collected or made, to collect or make salt for domestic consumption or sale within such villages, but not for sale to, or trading with, individuals living outside them.

21. In the event of Congress failing to give full effect to the obligations of this settlement, Government will take such action as may, in consequence, become necessary for the protection of the public and individuals and the due observance of law and order.

H. W. Emerson
SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA

Young India, 12-3-1931

1 Vide “Letter to Viceroy”, 4-3-1931.
APPENDIX VII
VICEROY’S CABLE TO SECRETARY OF STATE

Private and Personal March 4 [1931]

CONVERSATION WITH GANDHI CONCLUDED SATISFACTORY LAST NIGHT. WE ARE TELEGRAPHING TO YOU OFFICIALLY GIVING TEXT OF STATEMENT THAT WE SHALL ISSUE AS SOON AS YOU HAVE FINALLY APPROVED, AND AS SOON AS WE ARE ASSURED, WHICH I HOPE WE SHALL BE TODAY, THAT THE WORKING COMMITTEE ACCEPTS. IF THEY HAVE ANY MINOR VERBAL AMENDMENTS TO SUGGEST, WE WILL TELEGRAPH THEM FOR SIMULTANEOUS ANNOUNCEMENT AS YOU DESIRE. WE ARE TELEGRAPHING OFFICIALLY ABOUT TIME OF RELEASE FOR PUBLICATION. TEXT OF STATEMENT IS I THINK SELF-EXPLANATORY. IMPORTANT SECTIONS ARE BOYCOTT, PICKETING, POLICE AND SALT. SCOPE OF DISCUSSIONS. THE FIRST TWO ARE AS SATISFACTORY AS I COULD SECURE, AND WE ARE PRETTY WELL ASSURED THAT WE HAVE GOT IT IN A FORM THAT MAKES IT CERTAIN THAT PICKETING IN ITS OFFENSIVE FORMS WILL QUICKLY DISAPPEAR AND PROBABLE THAT ANY FORM OF PICKETING WOULD ONLY BE PRACTISED ON VERY SMALL SCALE. THE POLICE FORMULA IS GOOD. SALT IS A CONCESSION I DO NOT LIKE ON POLITICAL GROUNDS, THOUGH ON REVENUE GROUNDS IT IS UNIMPORTANT. BUT IT WAS IMPOSSIBLE TO SECURE SETTLEMENT WITHOUT IT. YOU WILL OBSERVE THAT WE HAVE VARIED THE FORMULA ABOUT CONSTITUTIONAL DISCUSSIONS AND ON THIS I WAS DISAPPOINTED THAT OWING TO MISUNDERSTANDING HE WAS UNABLE TO APPROVE AS I HAD THOUGHT ORIGINAL WORDING. BUT I THINK THIS FORMULA GIVES US ESSENTIALS WE WANT. ON QUESTION OF DEBTS AND SECESSION WHICH ARE NOT MENTIONED, GANDHI’S POSITION REMAINS AS STATED IN MY TELEGRAM OF FEBRUARY 28TH, EXCEPT THAT HE ASSURES ME HE DOES NOT THINK THERE WILL BE ANY DIFFICULTY ABOUT HIS NOT WALKING OUT OF CONFERENCE ON ANY DEBT QUESTION BEFORE CONCLUSION OF CONFERENCE DISCUSSIONS. HE HAS GIVEN ME ASSURANCE THAT IN NO CASE WILL HE RESTART CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE TILL CONCLUSION OF CONFERENCE DISCUSSIONS, AND THAT AFTER THAT HE WOULD HOPE NOT TO RESTART AT ALL THOUGH HE CANNOT GIVE DEFINITE UNDERTAKING BEYOND CONFERENCE STAGE.

I MUCH HOPE YOU WILL FEEL ABLE TO APPROVE STATEMENT AS IT STANDS.

From a photostat : G.N. 8955

1 Vide “Letter to Viceroy”, 4-3-1931.
APPENDIX VIII

TELEGRAM FROM HOME DEPARTMENT TO BOMBAY GOVERNMENT

NEW DELHI,
March 15, 1931

KINDLY ARRANGE TO COMMUNICATE FOLLOWING TO GANDHI FROM EMERSON. BEGINS. GOVERNMENT OF INDIA HAVE RECEIVED COMPLAINTS THAT CONGRESS ARE CONTINUING SYSTEM BY WHICH MILLS ARE PLACED ON A BOYCOTT LIST IF THEY DO NOT SIGN AN AGREEMENT OR DECLARATION. I HAVE NO DOUBT THAT IF FACTS ARE AS STATED YOU WILL RECOGNIZE THAT USE OF A BLACK LIST IN CONNECTION WITH MILLS UNWILLING TO SIGN AGREEMENT PLACES THIS SYSTEM OUTSIDE THE SCOPE OF METHODS OF PERSUASION AND INTERFERES WITH THE FREEDOM OF ACTION OF INDIVIDUALS. THIS WOULD ALSO BE THE CASE IN REGARD TO ANY SIMILAR METHOD BY WHICH CONGRESS ORGANIZED THE BOYCOTT OF MILLS COMPANIES, ETC. WHICH DID NOT SIGN AGREEMENTS. IT THEREFORE SEEMS CLEARLY CONTRARY TO LETTER AND SPIRIT OF SETTLEMENT AND I ACCORDINGLY BRING MATTER TO YOUR NOTICE IN CONFIDENCE THAT YOU WILL PUT IT RIGHT. ENDS.

2. THIS IS RELEVANT TO TELEGRAM FROM SECRETARY OF STATE REGARDING FINLAYS WHO SHOULD BE ADVISED THAT GOVERNMENT OF INDIA ARE TAKING UP THE MATTER.

Home Department, Political, File No. 33/6, 1931. Courtesy: National Archives of India

\[1\] Vide “Telegram to H.W. Emerson”, 18-3-1931.
APPENDIX IX

EMERSON’S NOTE ON INTERVIEW WITH GANDHIJI

March 19, 1931

I had a talk for about three hours with Mr. Gandhi this evening relating to difficulties arising out of the settlement. I made it clear throughout that any opinions which I expressed were my own and not those of Government. Mr. Gandhi first mentioned the points he desired to bring to the notice of Government which were as follows:

(a) He mentioned the case of the Raja of Kalakankar in which according to the A.P.I. message, elephants, motors, etc., had been attached for arrears of land revenue. He stated that he did not himself know the facts of the case, but did know that the Raja was a Congress sympathizer. He had, he said, written to ascertain the facts. I said that Government had no information, but that I personally thought it probable that the attachment had been made in the ordinary course of land revenue administration and that, if this was so, the settlement did not of course affect cases of this kind, since the revenue administration must pursue its normal course. I promised to ascertain the facts.

(b) He next mentioned a case that occurred some months ago in the district of Colaba in connection with forest satyagraha, when in the course of a riot a Mamlatdar was accidentally shot by the police. The case, he said, was now under trial in the Sessions Court, to which it had been committed. According to his information no provocation had been given by the accused and some of them certainly had not committed actual violence. He suggested that the case against those accused, at any rate, should be withdrawn. I told him that I had not seen the papers for some months; but my recollection was that the case was one of serious violence in which the police had had considerable difficulty in escaping and that, so far as I remembered, one or two forest guards had been killed. I explained that this was not a case which we could possibly represent to the local Government and that, in so far as the Government and Congress versions differed, the Court would decide.

(c) He then got on to the question of whether offences under Section 124-A, Indian Penal Code, and 108, Criminal Procedure Code came within the terms of the amnesty. His contention was that all such cases did come within it and that offences involving incitement to violence should only be regarded as exceptions, if the result of the incitement had been actual violence. He also urged that where the incitement has not resulted in violence it should be regarded as technical. I explained to him that, so far as I was concerned, there was no room for misunderstanding, since

1 Vide “Interview with Viceroy”, 19-3-1931.
when technical violence was included in the amnesty the intention was made quite clear, and I mentioned the illustration that had been given when the settlement was being discussed, namely, that convictions for rioting would have to be examined on their merits and that, while a trivial fracas might properly be regarded as coming within the term “technical violence”, a serious riot could not be so regarded and that all persons who were concerned in it whether they had been guilty of actual violence or not would be excluded from the amnesty. He admitted that this was so, but said that he had not realized that Section 124-A, Indian Penal Code, and Section 108, Criminal Procedure Code, would come within the exceptions. I explained that, under both the sections, there were cases in which persons had been prosecuted for speeches which included incitement to serious violence and that, while it could not always, or indeed ordinarily be said that the direct result was violence, there was no doubt that speeches of this sort had gained recruits to the terrorist movement and so had been indirectly responsible for violence. In any case the criterion of actual violence had not been adopted. I said that the matter was not one merely of interpretation but of great practical importance, and I took the opportunity of stating to him the position in the Punjab and in Delhi. I mentioned the meetings in Lahore and in Amritsar, the general campaign there had been in favour of Bhagat Singh and violence generally, and the apprehensions of the local Government that a serious situation would arise. I told him that I had just received a letter from the Punjab Government giving accounts for speeches made by Dr. Satyapal and Sardul Singh Kaveeshar, both of whom were members of the Working Committee. I said that the local Government had held its hands in the desire to avoid action which was likely to prejudice the settlement, that we had told them that, while the Government of India naturally hope that the necessity of action would not arise, we did not desire to fetter their discretion if circumstances so required, and that it was no part of the settlement that action should not be taken under the ordinary law against persons who violated it. Mr. Gandhi agreed that this was so. I then mentioned the case of Delhi, told him of the meeting in honour of Chandra Shekhar Azad and the concern of the Chief Commissioner, Delhi, and of the Deputy Commissioner that the situation might deteriorate, and that it might be necessary to prohibit meetings. I said that we were anxious if possible to avoid resort to the Seditious Meetings Act, but that we could not allow a situation of danger to arise, and that, if excitement grew, we might have no alternative; but in that case we would, so far as possible, restrict the use of the Act to meetings in support of violence. I then asked him if he had seen in the papers that the Governor-General in Council had rejected the petition for mercy on behalf of Bhagat Singh. He said that he had and that he was apprehensive regarding the consequences. I did not mention the date on which the execution would be carried out, but I did explain to him that the question as to whether it should take place before or after the Karachi Congress had been very seriously considered by Government who realized the difficulties of either course, but thought it would have been unfair to the condemned persons to postpone execution and also not fair to Gandhi to allow the impression to gain ground that commutation was under consideration when this was not the case. He agreed that of the two alternatives it is better not to wait, but he suggested, though not seriously, that the third course of commutation of the sentence would have been better still. He did not seem to me to be particularly concerned about the matter. I told him that we should be lucky if we got through without disorder, and I asked him to do all that he could to prevent meetings being held in Delhi during the next few days and to restrain violent speeches. He promised to do what he could.

I then applied these facts to the matter under discussion, namely, inclusion of all cases under Section 124-A, Indian Penal Code, and Section 108, Criminal Procedure Code, in the amnesty. I explained that we could not possibly approach local Governments with a suggestion of this kind in present conditions. The violence movement was serious menace with which we could not afford to trifle, and that, before we could even think of making a suggestion of this kind, there must be a cessation of the campaign of violence and of incitement thereto. He argued that to keep persons convicted of such offences in jail increased rather than lessened the danger by embittering feeling and he said that he would himself like an understanding by which all persons convicted before the amnesty under Section 124-A, Indian Penal Code, and 108, Criminal Procedure Code, were released while no quarter was given, in regard to prosecutions, to persons who preached violence in future. He said that Government’s interpretation of the settlement on this point placed him in a difficult position and he would like to consider it further. The matter was left in this position, but I said that I did not think the Government could possibly alter its position in this respect.

(d) He mentioned two specific cases under Section 124-A and Section 108, namely, that of the two Delhi women and of a Professor Kripalani in the United Provinces. I said that the former had been carefully examined and that it had been definitely considered that it did not come within the amnesty. In regard to Professor Kripalani, he said that he was sure that he had said nothing in his speeches which incited to violence. I said that I would ascertain the facts from the United Provinces Government. At the same time, however, I was able to give him facts and figures of the action taken by the United Provinces Government which, he admitted, showed that that Government had acted in a very liberal spirit.

(e) He then mentioned Sholapur cases and said that, so far as he knew, no prisoners of Sholapur had been released. I said that the position in regard to Sholapur was the same as in all other cases, namely, that the test was violence or incitement to violence not being technical violence and that subject to this test there was no distinction, whether convictions were in the civil or military courts. I said that the matter was necessarily one for the discretion of the local Government and that, while
I imagined they would naturally take a serious view of offences connected with the outbreaks of violence, they would not exclude from the amnesty persons convicted of breaches of Martial Law regulations, etc., where no question of violence or incitement thereto arises. I promised to ascertain the position from the local Government.

(f) He then raised the question of additional police. He said that he had received complaints regarding realization of cost after the 5th of March. I said I thought it very improbable that any such cases had occurred, but would ascertain the facts if he mentioned specific cases. He asked that, where realization had been made after the 5th owing to non-receipt of orders by District Authorities, the sums collected should be refunded. I said that I thought this was reasonable. I again made it clear to him that it has always been contemplated that some delay is likely to occur in the withdrawal of additional police, and that local Governments would wait until satisfied that conditions had become normal. He agreed that this was the understanding.

2. I then mentioned various matters which from the Government point of view were causing difficulty and misunderstanding.

(a) I first mentioned the question of the boycott of Indian mills by a system under which Congress placed on a black list those mills whose agents did not sign an agreement. I said that the principle on which Government stood was that the encouragement of Indian industries should not involve interference with the freedom of action of the individual and that my own view was that a system which involved placing a mill on a black list which did not take a certain course necessarily involved coercion amounting almost to blackmail, and further that any pressure on the consumer (which went beyond persuasion) to induce him to boycott the products of a mill was a breach of the settlement. I also expressed the opinion that a mill, which was placed on a black list, would have civil action for damages. Mr. Gandhi said that it was not the intention to use methods other than persuasion either with the manufacturer or consumer, but he regarded it as justifiable propaganda to let customers know that particular mills did not observe the swadeshi creed. I explained that the Directors and Agents of mills definitely objected to a boycott list as amounting to coercion and that, while, so far as I knew, they did not object to persuasion, they did most strongly object to the methods employed in the past. I said that, while I did not know the view of Government on the subject, they might not object to certificates to be used for purposes of advertisement to mills, which adopted swadeshi creed, and to the replacement of the black list by a list of swadeshi mills—such a list being used for propaganda purposes only. He said that there would be no difficulty in this.

(d) We then discussed the new scheme for the export of foreign cloth. I said that the principle in this case was that dealers should be free from any interference with their liberty of action and that no one who did not wish to join in the scheme should be forced to do so. Also that sellers and buyers who had refrained from dealing in foreign cloth should be left free without any form of restraint to change their attitude if they so wished. He said quite definitely that this was the intention. I said I could conceive that there might be dealers who were honestly convinced that the sale of their stocks of foreign cloth in India was contrary to the good of the country and who, therefore, had real scruples against selling it and that, in cases of this kind, I myself saw no ground on which objection could be taken. I then quoted to him a reported speech of Babu Rajendra Prasad of Patna, made on the 10th of March, in which the following passage occurred:

A word to the merchants. They should not suppose that the effect of the truce was to give them perfect liberty to sell and import British cloth. The speaker was aware that they had suffered and he was grateful for the help that they had given. But what was the suffering of the rich merchants compared to that of poor people who had lost their all, whose houses had been looted and everything found either taken away or destroyed. The merchants had at least ten years’ notice not to deal in foreign cloth, and if they suffered no one else was to blame, but the Congress was anxious to see that some way was found to save them from ruin or heavy loss. The way, however, could not be to permit them to sell their stocks in India. Mahatma was in consultation with business magnates of Calcutta, Bombay, Ahmedabad and Delhi and other places to devise a scheme which would enable the existing stock to be disposed of outside India. It was a very big scheme as it involved ten or twelve crores worth of foreign cloth, and there was a likelihood of loss even when the scheme was put through. This will have to be borne by dealers and possibly a way would be found to give some relief. They had to wait and see how the thing developed.

I said that the sentence underlined seemed to me to be quite inconsistent with Mr. Gandhi’s position. He said that this was in fact not so and that he himself had taken the same line with merchants who asked him for permission to deal in foreign cloth. He explained that it was contrary to the Congress creed specifically to give such permission, since this would amount to repudiation of the doctrine to which they attach great importance, that it was one thing for Congress to recognize that merchants were free to do as they liked and another thing for the Congress specifically to accord this permission. I then asked him how merchants were to know how they stood, and said that Government regarded it as essential that they should be in no doubt on this point. He said he had no objection whatever to Government making the position clear. He added that, so far as he knew, there was not any doubt on the matter and that the hesitation of merchants to deal freely in foreign cloth was due to uncertainty as to what might happen in the future. I pointed out that, in accordance with what had been said in (b) above, the description of the scheme which relates to the “certification of handloom cloth made for such Indian mills as may not be under the Congress ban” would have to be expressed in different terms since no question of a Congress ban now arises. Mr. Gandhi agreed.

(c) On the general question of the boycott of foreign cloth he was quite candid and said that he had no doubt himself that the movement would gain great momentum without resort to coercion or pressure, that Indian and English mill-owners were convinced of the benefit to themselves of the swadeshi movement and that before long those who had so far stood out would voluntarily come in. He appears to be firmly convinced that the propaganda he intended to pursue would have very big results, and he pointed out quite truly that the boycott on an extensive scale of a particular class of goods must, however unobjectionable the methods might be, influence the dealers in their future course of business and so indirectly affect their freedom of action. He was very vague about the export scheme and admitted that details had not been worked out. His chief argument in support of it was that men like Sir Ness Wadia and accepted it as workable.

(d) I then got on to the more difficult question of what seemed to me failure on the part of the Congress to observe the general spirit of the settlement. I repeated what I had told Gandhi when I first met him that, if a settlement was to be a merely paper one without any intention on the part of Congress honestly to try to find a solution of constitutional problems, then it was better not to have one at all and that it was not possible for Government to stand by and watch Congress definitely organizing for a fight with no real wish to obtain peace. I mentioned in this connection various points that I myself regarded with uneasiness, e.g., Pandit Jawaharlal’s circular No. 12; the message to the peasants of Rae Bareilly; what appeared to be a movement in the United Provinces to replace a no-tax campaign as part of the civil disobedience movement by similar campaign on economic grounds; various speeches of Pandit Jawaharlal; reference to a “truce” with a preconceived idea that no final settlement would be attained; talks of a future war and reference to Government as opponents and enemies. I also mentioned the way in which Congress had attempted to exploit the settlement as a victory. Gandhi saw nothing objectionable in circular No. 12 and said that he could not dismiss the possibility that peace would not ultimately be reached. At the same time, he fully accepted the position that it was wrong to refer to the settlement as a truce, to talk about a future war, to prejudge the issues and refer to Government as enemies and opponents. He also expressed disapproval of the exploitation of the settlement by Congress as a victory.

I told him that I was particularly disquieted by the indication of a campaign of the Congress in the United Provinces to stir revenue payers against Government and tenants against landlords, that it was very easy to raise a rural agitation on these lines and that the consequence could not fail to be serious. That, in so far as there was economic distress, local Governments were fully alive to the gravity of the situation and would deal with it as liberally as circumstances permitted and that any attempt by Congress as an organization to intervene would merely make the situation more difficult. I mentioned to him the report I had seen that the Congress Committee or Council in the United Provinces had made a recommendation that 50 per cent of land revenue and rents should be remitted and had advised revenue payers and tenants to withhold payments pending decision by the local Government. Unfortunately I did not have the reference with me and so could not verify it. Mr. Gandhi agreed that if the facts were as stated it was wrong to advise tenants to withhold rents. I promised to look out the reference and to let him have it.

1 The source has “(e)".

(c) I next mentioned definite disquieting reports from Gujarat saying that land revenue was not being paid, and I told him that I had seen a speech by Vallabhbhai Patel suggesting that Government would be quite content to wait a year or even two years for revenue where there was difficulty in paying it. I suggested to him that statements of this kind would naturally be taken advantage of by revenue payers who could easily pay and that, while I had no doubt that the local Government would consider any genuine cases of distress, our information was that there should be no difficulty at all in paying up by far the greater part of the revenue at once. I said that the inevitable result of unwarranted delay on the part of revenue payers would be the recommencement of coercive processes and the creation of an unfavourable atmosphere. He expressed surprise that land revenue was not coming in and said that, so far as he was concerned, there was no intention to discourage people, who could pay, not to do so.

3. He then himself mentioned certain correspondence he had with the Collector of Kaira regarding forfeited lands and other matters. He regarded the correspondence as unsatisfactory, but did not say what it was about and dropped the subject. He mentioned, however, a circular issued by a Mamlatdar of Kaira to the effect that village servants who had resigned had not only to apply for reinstatement, but had to express regret for their conduct and also to pay a penalty before reinstatement. He regarded this as contrary to the spirit of the settlement. I said that I could express no opinion on the matter in ignorance of the policy of the local Government. He said he would let me have a copy of the circular.

4. I then read to him a letter received today from the United Provinces Government mentioning a case of forcible picketing in Agra. He agreed that, if the facts were correct, it was a clear case for suspension of all picketing. I promised to let him have a copy. I also mentioned cases which had been brought to my notice by non-officials of picketing in Amritsar and Cawnpore where the transport of goods from one place to another had been prevented; but, as I had no official confirmation of these facts, I could not press for effective action.

5. The general impression left was that Mr. Gandhi is anxious to implement the settlement and to obtain a genuine solution. He seemed to be confident about the Karachi Congress; but he expected opposition from the left and said that the execution of Bhagat Singh might seriously complicate matters. He was very loyal to Pandit Jawaharlal, but, I gathered, did not regard it as altogether improbable that he would take his own line sooner or later. He recognized the difficulties that would be created by an undiluted resolution in favour of complete independence at the Karachi Congress and by a declaration that the Congress would go on fighting until they achieved this. It seemed to me that he himself had made up this mind to see that a course of this kind was not taken and that the actual resolutions of this nature would be qualified by speeches which would avoid banging the door in the way of peace.

From a photostat: C.W. 9363. Courtesy: India Office Library; also Bombay

APPENDIX X

LETTER FROM H. W. EMERSON

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA,
HOME DEPARTMENT, NEW DELHI,
March 20, 1931

DEAR MR. GANDHI,

I write to thank you for your letter of today enclosing translations of a circular and of notice issued by the Mamlatdar of Borsad. I will bring the matter to the notice of the local Government.

2. With reference to our conversation last night regarding the danger of excitement being worked up in connection with the execution of the sentences passed on Bhagat Singh, etc., the Chief Commissioner informs me that notice has been given in the city that Mr. Subhas Chandra Bose will address a meeting of protest tonight at 5.30. I fully realize your difficulties in the matter and I think that you realize the difficulties of Government and also their desire at the present time to avoid, if possible, preventive action, which may, however, be unavoidable if excitement grows. If a meeting is held tonight, it is almost certain to increase feeling, especially if speeches of an inflammatory character are made. Government

2 Vide the preceding item.
will much appreciate any assistance you feel able to give to prevent this and to check the creation of conditions which, if uncontrolled, may have serious consequences.

Yours sincerely,

H. W. Emerson

M. K. Gandhi, Esq.
1 Daryaganj, Delhi

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-B, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

APPENDIX XI

LETTER FROM H. W. EMERSON

HOME DEPARTMENT, NEW DELHI,
March 21, 1931

DEAR MR. GANDHI,

I write to thank you for your letter of March 20th, and return the telegrams enclosed with it after taking copies. I am ascertaining from the Finance Department the exact orders which have issued regarding salt, and I will let you know further what the position is.1

2. I have also requested the Government of Bihar and Orissa to report the facts regarding the release of prisoners.

Yours sincerely,

H. W. Emerson

M. K. Gandhi, Esq.
1 Daryaganj, Delhi

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-B, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

APPENDIX XII

LETTER FROM H. W. EMERSON

D.O.No.D. 2246/31-Poll.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA,
HOME DEPARTMENT, NEW DELHI,
March 28, 1931

DEAR MR. GANDHI,

In my letter of the 21st of March I promised to let you know what the

2 Vide the following item.
4 Vide the preceding item.
position was regarding the salt concession. I now learn that general orders were issued on the 9th of March by the Central Board of Revenue to the various local authorities asking them that:

1. Orders might be issued immediately directing all officers concerned to act forthwith in accordance with the spirit of the arrangement, and to refer any difficulty or doubtful point that might arise to superior authority before taking punitive action in cases where there appeared to be any abuse of the concession; and

2. draft standing orders governing the operation of the concession might be worked out, with the least possible delay, and submitted for the approval of the Government of India.

The telegram, a copy of which you sent to me, presumably referred to the draft instructions by the local authority. These have not yet received the approval of the Government of India, and the latter have no intention of imposing a limit of distance within which people must reside in order to be eligible for the concession. As you yourself recognize, it is difficult to translate the formula used in the Statement of the Governor General in Council into an exact definition, but I understand that the Central Board of Revenue will prescribe as a rough working test that villagers should neither come to the salt sources nor take their salt away otherwise than on foot. From the administrative point of view the main check against the abuse of the concession will be its withdrawal from any area, after such warning as may be reasonable, where it is clearly abused. But Government hope that the people themselves will avoid the necessity of action of this kind by refraining from any abuse of the concession.

Yours sincerely,

H. W. EMERSON

M. K. GANDHI, ESQ.

CONGRESS CAMP, KARACHI

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-B. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

APPENDIX XIII

LETTER FROM H. W. EMERSON

NEW DELHI,

March 22, 1931

DEAR MR. GANDHI,

In accordance with our conversation yesterday, I enclose the drafts of two questions, which by arrangement could be asked in the Legislative Assembly.

1 Of Gandhi-Irwin Agreement, as announced by the Governor-General in Council, vide “Provisional settlement”, 12-3-1931.

462 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
and of the replies thereto. I have not been able to take orders of Government thereon in time for this letter to reach you before you leave Delhi, and they may therefore be regarded as provisional. I will, of course, let you know if any changes are made in them. Will you kindly inform me whether you regard them as suitable?

2. I do not know the particular forms of agreement or declaration which are now signed by the agents or managers of mills, and, in any case, you will understand that Government could not place themselves in a position where they appeared to approve of any particular form of agreement. The questions and replies are, therefore confined to the general principles included in the statement of the 5th of March and are not to be taken as connoting acceptance by Government of specific provisions of any agreement or declaration.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. Gandhi, Esq.
1 Daryaganj
Delhi

[Enclosure]

Question

(a) Have Government seen the following notice issued by the General Secretary1 of the Indian National Congress, which appeared in The Times of India of the 9th2 of March 1931:

“Mills on the boycott list, mills with whom negotiations were pending and therefore were not placed on the boycott list and also Bombay mills which were temporarily placed on the approved list pending negotiations regarding some clauses of the Congress declaration, for instance, the use of artificial silk, etc., are hereby informed that my office will issue the final list of all mills by the 20th March, 1931, for the Karachi Congress, and if such mills are at all anxious not to be placed on the boycott list, they will kindly settle the matter with Mr. Shankerlal Banker (Mirzapur, Ahmedabad) and sign the declaration form on or before the 15th instant. Mr. Banker will be in Bombay on the 16th March. I hope and trust that the mills concerned will please expedite the matter. The Congress is taking up this matter earnestly and seriously.”

(b) Will Government say that the position is in regard to this notice?

1 Syed Mahmud
2 The source has “10th”.
REPLY

(a) Yes.

(b) They understand that while methods of persuasion will be used with manufacturers, dealers or consumers, these methods will not, in accordance with the terms of the settlement, interfere with the liberty of action of individuals. They understand, further, that no boycott list of manufacturers, who are unwilling to enter the scheme, will be issued, and that any action taken will be confined to the purposes of propaganda or advertisement, e.g., the issue of a list for propaganda purposes of manufacturers or dealers who voluntarily enter the scheme, and the issue to them of certificates for purposes of advertisement.

Home Department, Political, File No. 33/6, 1931, p. 18. Courtesy: National Archives of India

APPENDIX XIV

EMERSON’S NOTE ON INTERVIEW WITH GANDHIJI

April 7, 1931

1. I had five hours’ talk last night with Mr. Gandhi regarding various matters arising out of the settlement. We talked first about the communal situation, which he recognized as very serious. He obviously had little hope of an early settlement with the Muhammadans and he expressed himself as very grieved that not only was the feeling extremely bitter, but that non-Congress Muhammadans were challenging the honesty of proposals he made. I took the opportunity of rubbing in that in the present state of feeling throughout Northern India any trivial incident would suffice to start serious trouble and that it was, therefore, the more necessary that the Congress should avoid interference with the liberty of individuals, which was an important cause of the keen resentment felt by Muslims. I also emphasized the great danger of trouble spreading into the villages, especially in the United Provinces, and the difficulties that would arise in stamping it out, if it once began in rural areas. He was obviously fully aware of the danger, and the impression I gained was that he will use his influence with Congress to avoid causes of offence to Muslims. I gathered that the Congress were already using much more discretion in picketing the shops of Muhammadans and that Gandhi’s own desire was that picketing of their shops should cease.

2. We then got on to the subject of Gujarat, about which he said he was receiving very distressing accounts. Some of the new Patels were men of bad character, etc., and were making the lives of the villagers unbearable; there was no real spirit of co-operation between Government and the Congress; the latter had, for instance, asked for a list of the lands which had been sold and the persons to whom they were sold, but this had been refused, although in fact, according to his account, previous owners of land had not, in some cases, correct information on this point. It was understood that Government would remain neutral regarding the recovery of lands sold to third parties, but they were not doing so. For instance, they were using the Police to put purchasers in possession of lands they had bought, although according to law the purchasers ought to have obtained possession by a regular suit in cases where they had not obtained more than formal possession from Government. Again there were some temporary Patels who had not yet been replaced by previous incumbents who had resigned. Generally, the burden of his complaint was that he had made a mistake in agreeing about the non-restoration of lands sold to third parties and the non-reinstatement of Patels whose places have not been permanently filled, and, although he had no intention of going back on the settlement, he now realized what difficulties were involved.

I then gave him the other side of the case. I told him that for every complaint he had made I had seen several from the other side, that the position, as reported to the Government of India, is that in particular taluks land revenue collections are at a standstill, continuous pressure is being brought to bear on loyalists, on purchasers of land and movable property and on new Patels, and that generally from the Government point of view the situation is very unsatisfactory. So far as Patels are concerned, I imagined that the actual position is that villagers are trying to obtain the reinstatement of the old Patels by securing the dismissal of the new ones, that the District Officers are, therefore, naturally sceptical in regard to complaints about the latter, but that I did not think that they would desire to keep any Patel in office if his conduct was such as to render him liable to dismissal under the rules. On the other hand, the District Officers would naturally defend the Patels against frivolous complaints. He admitted that the complaints were not against all the new Patels, but against some of them. I said that, as regards the neutrality of Government, this could not be interpreted as meaning that Government should not give purchasers of land the legal rights to which they were entitled, and that, if they were, in fact, entitled under the ordinary revenue law to summary possession, it was obviously right to give it.

I then read out to him extracts from the demi-official letters of the Bombay Government, dated the 2nd and 4th April, which showed clearly that in certain taluks, e.g., Borsad and Bardoli, collections of land revenue had practically stopped since the settlement. He seemed to be surprised at these figures and asked for a copy of the extracts, which I promised to give him. I said that it was absurd to suppose that this general suspension of payment was due to economic distress, that our information was that crops were very good and that cases in which persons would find any difficulty in paying were extremely few, that Government regarded the delay in payment as a serious breach of the settlement and that, even if it were true, as he said, that people in one or two villages were having trouble from the new Patels, that was no reason why land revenue should not be paid, that the Bombay Government had recently informed the Government of India that they proposed to resume coercive processes within the next ten days and on the information before them the Government of India could not possibly take exception to this proposal, although naturally both they and the local Government hoped that it would not be necessary to resort to them, since it was clear that, once the use of coercive processes began on a considerable scale, the atmosphere in Gujarat would again become seriously disturbed and more ill-feeling would be engendered. Mr. Gandhi admitted the great desirability of avoiding resort to coercive processes, but recognized that the local Government could not reasonably be expected to wait beyond the period stated. He expressed his desire that the settlement should be scrupulously observed and said that he would be in Ahmedabad on the 12th, when he would very much like to have a heart-to-heart talk with the Commissioner of the Northern Division. I said that I thought it was an excellent idea and would pass on his wish to the Bombay Government. He said that he hoped that later His Excellency the Governor of Bombay would be able to grant him an interview.

The impression left on my mind by the talk about Gujarat was that Vallabhbhai Patel and his friends are making it as difficult as possible for Gandhi to honour the settlement; that they are holding up the payment of land revenue on one pretext or another in the hope that all Patels will be reinstated and all lands restored; that they are communicating to Gandhi all sorts of complaints, few of which have any foundation, and that Gandhi himself would like to find a way out, but cannot. I am inclined to think that when he returns to Gujarat he will play the game regarding the payment of land revenue, but that he will meet with considerable opposition and that there will be attempts to exploit any pretext for non-payment. I think it would be a good thing if the Commissioner, Northern Division, were able to hear what Mr.
Gandhi has to say to give him the other side of the picture with specific examples.
Gandhi himself recognizes that the settlement must stand regarding lands and Patels, and I think it might be possible to satisfy some of his doubts and misgivings, if he were assured that

(a) the policy of reinstating Patels, whose places have not been filled, will be liberally pursued,

(b) Government, while protecting new Patels against frivolous complaints, will be prepared to deal under the ordinary revenue rules with Patels, if any, who abuse their position,

(c) local officers will give such information as might reasonably be expected regarding the sale of lands.

I venture to make these suggestions, because I am quite clear that Gandhi does not want to break the settlement and that he is fully alive to the undesirability of collection by coercive processes.

466  THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI

In the meantime I made it quite clear to him that the Government of India do not intend to raise any objection to the proposal of the local Government to start coercive process in the near future.

3. I mentioned the cases of delay in the payment of land revenue in the Kanara and Dharwar Districts. He said that this delay was entirely due to bad harvests and economic distress, and that when he saw His Excellency the Governor, he would mention the matter to him. I did not pursue the subject.

4. Mr. Gandhi then raised the question of the United Provinces which he discussed for about two hours. I read out to him the gist of letters of the Collectors of Allahabad and Muttra, last week's report of the special branch of United Provinces and the instructions sent by the Provincial Congress Committee to the District Committee of Fatehpur. I told him that Sir Frank Noyce and I had recently discussed the situation with His Excellency the Governor of the United Provinces, and that the Government of India and the local Government regarded the situation in several districts with great concern. There was no doubt that the situation had deteriorated very rapidly and that in one or two districts there was imminent danger of serious disorder at any time. If disorder began, it might easily spread and there was very grave danger that, although it might begin as agrarian, it would end as communal. Mr. Gandhi was very obviously surprised at the facts placed before him and he at once admitted that the following Congress activities were wrong:

(a) Advocating tenants to withhold payment of rent and land revenue in whole or part,
(b) the establishment of a Congress Tahsildar in the Muttra District,
(c) dissemination of the idea that swaraj had been attained and that revenue and rent need no longer be paid,
(d) attacks by tenants on zamindars,
(e) interference with Muslims.

He was particularly concerned about the last item and I laid stress on the fact that, if Muslims generally had reason to believe that the Congress were attempting to come between Muslim landlords and their tenants, communal bitterness would be increased and there would be grave danger of trouble. I said that Government regarded the activities of the Congress in the United Provinces in regard to rent and revenue as a very serious breach of the settlement, that it had never been contemplated that anything of the sort would be done and that Government were satisfied that, under cover of economic distress, the Congress were in fact carrying on the campaign for political purposes. I had been instructed by Government to tell him that the local Government propose to take what measures were possible under the ordinary law to deal with the situation and that the Government of India approved of this course; further it was anticipated that, if this action did not suffice, the local Government would come forward with proposals for special measures, e.g., the renewal of powers conferred by the Unlawful Instigation Ordinance or action under the Criminal Law Amendment Act; and that the Government of India directed me to let him know that, if such proposals were made, they would receive the serious consideration of Government. I added, as my own opinion, that, if Congress activities continued, action under the ordinary law would almost certainly prove inadequate and that an irresistible case would be made out for special measures. I said that this would almost certainly break the settlement, a result which Government were very anxious to avoid, if this were possible.

I then briefly explained to him the statement of land revenue policy made by His Excellency the Governor a few days ago in the Provincial Legislative Council and said that the local Government considered that it would meet the requirements of the economic situation; at any rate, it was essential that it should be given a trial; and that, if the consequences above outlined were to be avoided, Congress should cease to interfere. Mr. Gandhi asked me whether Government considered it as part of the duty of the Congress to secure the payment of land revenue. I said that, so far as the United Provinces were concerned, I thought that Government would be satisfied if Congress abstained completely from any sort of interference, and that they would not wish to impose on Congress any obligation in this respect. I explained that the position in Gujarat was different.

Mr. Gandhi said that he had heard complaints from the other side, as, for instance, brutal treatment of tenants by landlords, and that the real problem was how the Congress could co-operate with Government in regard to the situation. He said that the methods so far pursued were on the facts given by me undoubtedly open to objection, but that was no reason why the matter should not be put on the right lines which he proceeded to develop. The proposals as they eventually emerged were that in each tahsil there should be a Congress Committee which would co-operate with the local officers in land revenue matters. In ordinary times, the Congress Committee would have nothing to do, since the full demand would be accepted as a matter of course; but in times of distress the Congress would collect facts and figures themselves, would ascertain the views of the zamindars and the tenants and would make representations to the Collector which the Collector would examine. He asked me whether Government would object to this scheme. I said that I thought that the Government of India and the local Government would object very strongly to it. He suggested that this showed distrust of Congress which was not warranted, that the reasonable course was for the Government and Congress to work together, that in fact Government were now at peace with the Congress; they had entered into a settlement with it, and that there could be no reason why this principle should not be extended. I pointed out to him that the settlement reached related to the abandonment of the civil disobedience movement in which Government and the Congress were solely, or at any rate mainly, concerned, that it was a different matter for Government to use the Congress as an intermediary in matters in which other parties were concerned, that, while it was regrettable that there was distrust, he could hardly expect Collectors of districts, in view of the facts that had been placed before him, to welcome the scheme. Moreover, however unobjectionable it might appear in theory, it was open to grave practical objections and would certainly lead to a continuous agitation on the part of tenants, at any rate, in regard to their rents. No Government could abrogate its functions in the manner suggested and provincial autonomous governments of the future would have grave cause of complaint against the present Government, if they allowed any political party to intervene in the way suggested. Mr. Gandhi asked whether I objected to a combination of tenants, for common purposes. I said that I could not take legal objection to it, but I thought that such combinations almost inevitably led to trouble and disturbed the relations between landlords and tenants. He then said that, if there were no objections to a combination of tenants, what objection could there be to Congress representing the interests of the tenants, Congress assisting the cause of tenants by appeals to zamindars on the grounds of humanity. He suggested that zamindars themselves would find such an arrangement advantageous. I pointed out that Congress did not command the universal support he seemed to think. Muslims, for instance, were intensely hostile to it, and there were many zamindars who regarded its activities with the greatest apprehension and suspicion. In fact the general tendency of the Congress to interfere in other people’s affairs was the cause of a good deal of existing unrest. I then explained that the objections would apply equally whatever political party was concerned. I asked him whether, for instance, he considered that it would conduce to harmony if the Muslim League interfered in the Punjab between a Hindu landlord and a Muhammadan tenant.

Mr. Gandhi then said that Congress had always supported the cause of tenants and that it would be impossible for him to stand by and see tenants ill-treated by landlords without trying to help them. I said that I was quite sure that the local Government would do everything to discourage ill-treatment of tenants in order to enforce payment of rent and that they would be only too glad if tenants filed criminal complaints. In any case, whatever might be the theoretical position, organized interference by Congress at the present time in matters affecting land revenue and rent would inevitably lead to serious trouble and had to be ruled out. He then asked what he was to do about it. He had previously said that he was very concerned about affairs in the United Provinces and felt that he himself would have to try to put matters right there. He had also mentioned his desire to discuss matters with the Governor. I suggested that the proper course for the Congress was to leave things alone so that the scheme of the local Government might be put into operation, that it might be presumed that, if incidental adjustments in the scheme were necessary, these would be made and that the local Government would pursue a policy in accordance with the requirements of the situation. I said that I could not say anything about his interview with the Governor, but, if one were granted, I felt that the Governor would be able to satisfy him that there was no intention of demanding land revenue in excess of the capacity of the land revenue payers to pay, that it was the desire of the local Government that landlords should not demand excessive rent, and that they would actively discourage ill-treatment by landlords for the purpose of exacting rent. I gathered that Mr. Gandhi would not, in any case, be able to see the Governor before the return of Sir Malcolm Hailey.

The final understanding was that Mr. Gandhi would do what he could to stop the present activities in the United Provinces relating to land revenue and rent and that he would seek an interview with Sir Malcolm Hailey on his return. My impressions regarding this part of the conversation were that Mr. Gandhi was ignorant of a great deal that had been going on and that he generally disapproved of it. He was also evidently apprehensive regarding the possible consequences of agrarian and communal trouble combined. At the same time, the scheme of Tahsil Committees (which I take to be Jawaharlal’s) had certain attractions for him and it no doubt represents one side of the Congress programme to get hold of the rural classes by acting as an intermediary between Government and the people and exercise functions which belong properly to Government. I doubt whether Jawaharlal and other leaders of the United Provinces will readily give up their programme, and I should not be surprised if Gandhi had considerable difficulties in dealing with them. In the mean time he is in no doubt regarding the action which the local Government will at once find it necessary to take and the further measures that may be necessary if the activities continue. This knowledge should operate in making him exercise greater control over Jawaharlal, for he does not want a breach of the settlement and it appeared that even before our conversation he was uneasy regarding the United Provinces.

5. I next brought up the subject of the issue by the All-India Congress Committee of a directory which includes a list of mills that had not given a certain undertaking. Mr. Gandhi said that the directory had been issued before the arrangement had been finally reached by which the Congress were not to issue any such list or to make any reference to the Congress ban. He said that he had already given instructions that no such list would issue in future. I again emphasized what Government regarded as essentials in connection with the movement in favour of Indian goods, namely, that the methods should be confined to persuasion, propaganda and advertisements and that the object should be economic and not political. I said that, if Government found that other methods were being pursued, they would take what action they considered to be necessary. Mr. Gandhi agreed.
I then mentioned the question of racial discrimination which appeared to be involved in some of the undertakings which the agents of mills had given, e.g., provisions regarding share capital and personnel of the management. I said that, although the matter had not been raised during the course of the conversations which led to the settlement, it should be understood that Government regarded as objectionable activities which involved discrimination between British and Indian firms engaged in business in India; that the views of the Government of India were contained in their Reforms Despatch and that these held good. Further, although we had not received specific complaints on this matter, it was not improbable that we might receive them, and that there was no doubt that attempts to get undertakings from English firms in India involving provisions of this kind would create much feeling in India and would emphasize the necessity of making provision against discrimination in the new constitution. I suggested to him the folly of the Congress in pursuing a course which was likely to alienate English feeling and so prejudice the friendly atmosphere created at the Round Table Conference. Mr. Gandhi was non-committal on this subject, but said that he had given the question of discrimination much thought, that he recognized the advisability of going slow in matters on which British opinion was strong, that the question of discrimination mainly arose in matters such as shipping, and he gave expression to sentiments about the preservation of Indian civilization (which I see he mentioned in his address today to the Federation of Indian Chambers of Commerce and Industry).

6. I mentioned a report just received from the Punjab Government to the effect that “a dealer in foreign cloth in Amritsar had been 'persuaded' by Dr. Kitchlew to pay fine of Rs. 3,000 to Congress funds”. He had refused to make a public apology in the Jallianwala Bagh. I said that, while the dealer in question would probably say if questioned that the so-called fine was a free gift, it was very difficult to believe that this was so, and incidents of this kind which were coming to the notice of Government left little doubt that the principle of individual freedom of action was not being observed. He promised himself to make enquiries during his forthcoming visit to Amritsar. Incidentally he observed that picketing had been much reduced and that the sale of foreign cloth was on the increase, but I do not know what basis there is for these statements. I told him that we were still receiving a number of complaints from Bihar and Orissa about picketing which seemed to be worse there than in any other province. I said that I would send him another batch of complaints just received and that it was his duty to see that matters were put right.

7. I told him that local Governments had, since the settlement, deliberately abstained from prosecutions on account of political activity, so that the settlement might not be prejudiced, that there was, however, no reason why they should further abstain and that the Government of India intended to inform local Governments that they did not wish them to hold their hand in cases where they considered prosecutions to be necessary. Mr. Gandhi merely observed that it was right that those who brought themselves within the mischief of the law should suffer the consequences.

8. Amongst the complaints which Mr. Gandhi himself made were the following:

(a) The case of a few persons expelled under the Foreigners Act. I said that I would try to discuss with the Bombay Government next week.

(b) A few cases of persons expelled from Cantonment areas. I explained the position and asked Mr. Gandhi to give me information of specific cases.

(c) The general question of civil disobedience prisoners still in jail. His complaint, which was not seriously pressed, was that some prisoners coming within the amnesty had not been released. He mentioned, in particular, a case in Muttra and again referred to Sholapur prisoners. He said that this question of prisoners was causing him difficulty. I said that there could be very few, if any, cases of non-release of prisoners coming within the amnesty, and that local Governments had acted very liberally; the question was really one of leniency towards persons not coming within the amnesty, and that we could not approach local Governments even informally in this direction so long as conditions of peace were not very definitely established and Congress were not implementing the spirit of the settlement. I promised to go through a long memorandum which had been prepared for Mr. Gandhi and which he confessed he had not had time himself to digest.

(d) To my surprise he did not raise the question of political prisoners in general—in regard to whom a resolution was passed at the Karachi Congress. He apparently does not wish to ask for anything outside the settlement.

9. I found Mr. Gandhi very friendly and reasonable. He was pleased with his success at Karachi, but depressed regarding the communal situation. He did not conceal his keenness to go to the Round Table Conference or to reach a final settlement of constitutional problems. His demands will, I fancy, be far less extravagant than some of his earlier speeches indicated, and, if he goes to London, he is likely to pay more regard to the spirit in which problems are approached and the attitude of British parties towards Indian aspirations than to the actual terms of the settlement, although he will require to be convinced that, if certain demands are not met, there are adequate reasons for not meeting them. Financial safeguards will give the most trouble and after them possibly discrimination. I believe that his present intention is to go to London not with the object of wrecking the Conference by excessive demands, but to obtain a settlement which, according to his lights, he can honourably accept. I do not think he will lightly return to India and confess failure. On the other hand, he does not profess to be over-confident of success, and he is quite candid in saying that, in the mean time, Congress will attempt to consolidate their position in case there is another fight. This is the big danger involved in the present position and the practical question that will almost certainly arise sooner or later is how far Government will be able to remain inactive. Gandhi, however, realizes the disadvantage, from his point of view, of forcing Government to take action and it is to be hoped that this knowledge will act as a brake on Congress activities. I made it quite clear to him that the so-called consolidation of the Congress position might easily produce a situation which Government could not tolerate.

From a photostat: C.W. 9363. Courtesy: India Office Library

APPENDIX XV

LETTER FROM J. H. GARRETT

AHMEDABAD,
April 21, 1931

I have received your letter of 20th instant regarding land revenue matters in the Kaira District.

2. I have already informed you in my letter of 13th April 1931 that I am inquiring into the matters referred to in our discussion and supplied to me with your letter of the same date.

3. The translation of the notice from the Mamlatdar of Borsad has already received my attention and necessary instructions have been issued to modify it where it conflicts with the terms of the Settlement.

The recovery or collection or charges for watchmen has already been waived although this goes beyond the terms of the Settlement.

As regards future action, you are aware that in case of default in payment Government has clearly reserved the right to use coercive measures where necessary. This of course includes the right to charge notice-fees and to impose one-fourth fine as well as to adopt the more severe measures of distraint and sale of movable property and forfeiture and sale of immovable property.

4. In the first paragraph of your letter you refer to Congress as the intermediary between the Government and the people. This is not one of the matters agreed upon in the Settlement and I am unable to agree to the suggestion. The people are perfectly free and able to approach Government officers direct in any matter that affects them.

5. As regards the points mentioned in paragraphs 2, 3 and 4 of your letter my reply is as follows:

(i) Payment of land revenue by Ras and other villages.

The present position is that they are required to pay the current year’s land

1 Vide “Letter to J.H.Garrett”, 21-4-1931.
revenue and all unauthorized arrears except those arrears which became unauthorized owing to the operation of A.O. XXIX. All fines, penalties and charges for watchmen are remitted.

The terms of the Settlement further lay down in paragraph 16(b) the conditions under which recovery will be suspended in cases where defaulters while willing to pay genuinely require time for the purpose. All officers will strictly conform to this clause.

(ii) Tagavi and balance of arrears (unauthorized arrears of land revenue).

These are matters which are receiving the attention of Collectors. It is not possible to make any general order on these points. All cases of hardship which are brought to the notice of the Collector by the persons affected will be duly considered.

(iii) Orders have already been issued not to recover charges for rakhas (watchmen) and notice fees.

As regards charges for attachment of movable property, the matter is under consideration.

Young India, 20-8-1931

APPENDIX XVI

LETTER FROM R. M. MAXWELL

Bombay,
April 24, 1931

I am to acknowledge your letter of the 22nd April, enclosing copies of Mr. Garrett’s letter of the 21st April to you and of your reply of the same date to him. As you have not enclosed a copy of your letter of the 20th to Mr. Garrett, to which his was a reply, it is difficult for His Excellency to appreciate the exact point of the misunderstanding which appears to have arisen. His Excellency does not imagine that you have ever claimed that the Congress is the intermediary between the Government and the people in the sense that the Government and the people can have no dealings with one another except through the Congress; and unless such a claim is asserted, he does not see that exception can be taken to the terms of Mr. Garrett’s reply. In your letter of the 21st to him you appear to acknowledge the extent to which the Government have been prepared to recognize your own representative position, and His Excellency had hoped that the full discussion which he had with you on various problems affecting the observance of the Settlement would have enabled you to realize the sincerity of the Government in its dealings with yourself and those whom you represent. As you know His Excellency, on his part, recognizes the great influence for good which you are in a position to exercise in securing faithful observance of the Settlement among your supporters and encouraging general acceptance of the terms to which you agreed and he feels sure that you, as he, will continue to exert yourself in the interests of that peaceful atmosphere which is so essential to the future work with which you will be associated.

If, however, you wish to claim for the Congress any status which is not implied in the treatment which you as its representative have already received from this Government and the Government of India, His Excellency feels that the question raised is one which fundamentally affects the interpretation of the agreement which you entered into directly with the Government of India, and he regrets that he is unable to express any opinion on it. He can only say that neither Mr. Garrett nor the Bombay Government itself would have been justified in accepting any interpretation of the agreement which has not hitherto been understood, and he feels that your correct course would be to approach the Government of India yourself on the subject if you have not already done so.

With regard to the matters of detail mentioned in your letter, I am to say that his Excellency has recently discussed many of these points with you and that he will be very glad to go into them further. In the meanwhile it is only necessary to assure you once more that the Bombay Government have every intention of taking all action which can be shown to be in accordance with the terms of the Settlement, and that they will be ready to investigate any cases which you may specifically bring to their notice in which there is reason to suppose that any further action would be appropriate.

Young India, 20-8-1931

APPENDIX XVII

LETTER FROM H. W. EMERSON

SIMLA,
May 2, 1931

I write to thank you for your letter of April 22nd and its enclosures and for the confidence you expressed that no effort will be spared to avoid a breakdown of the Settlement. I do not think there is imminent danger of this, but apart from any difficulties that may have occurred in Gujarat—about which we are consulting the Bombay Government—there are several matters in regard to which Government think a personal discussion with you will be of value. For instance, there are several features in the general situation, which call for improvement. Then there is the case of the North-West Frontier Province, about which you wired to me yesterday. So far as I know, you are mistaken in thinking that the agitation against Abdul Ghaffar Khan is inspired, for Government have been, and are, very anxious to avoid affairs in the North-West Frontier Province coming to a crisis, and the last thing they desire is to make out situation to be worse than it is. The position, however, is far from satisfactory. You have also mentioned in your telegram the speech of His Excellency the Governor of the Punjab. The events and tendencies, of which he gave illustrations, are not peculiar to his province. Incidentally I am trying to obtain details of the instances he mentioned. There is, therefore, plenty for us to talk about, and reluctant as I am to drag you up to Simla at this time of the year, I am sure that, if we have a heart to heart talk, we shall find the difficulties much less than they seem to be at a distance. I have not yet heard from Sir Malcolm Hailey, but I hope that it will be possible to make the two visits fit in. Subject to this, it would be convenient if you could come here about the 11th of May. I am not suggesting an earlier date, because you have probably made your plans for the next few days, we have to obtain certain material, and also by that date the question of procedure regarding the Round Table Conference will, I hope, reach a stage where it can be usefully discussed.

\[1\] Vide “Letter to H.W. Emerson”, 22-4-1931.

Young India, 20-8-1931

APPENDIX XVIII

LETTER FROM SUKHDEV

MOST GRACIOUS MAHATMAJI,

Recent reports show that since the successful termination of your peace negotiations you have made several public appeals to the revolutionary workers to call off their movement at least for the present and to give you a last chance to try your non-violent cult. As a matter of fact, the calling off of any movement is neither an ideological nor a sentimental act. It is the consideration of the peculiar needs of different times that force the leaders to change their tactics.

Let us presume that at the time of peace parley, you did not overlook the fact even for a single moment, and did not make a secret of it, that this was not going to be the final settlement. I think all intelligent people would have understood quite easily that after the introduction of all the reforms you acquire it would not be thought that the final stage was reached. The Congress is bound by its Lahore Resolution to carry on the Struggle relentlessly till the complete independence is achieved. In face of that Resolution, the peace and compromise is but a temporary truce which only means a little rest to organize better forces on a larger scale for the next struggle. The possibility of compromise and a truce can be imagined and justified in the light of the above consideration alone.

1 Vide “One of the many (?)”. 23-4-1931.

As regards the proper opportunity and the conditions on which any truce can be effected, it rests with the leaders of the movement to decide. In face of the Lahore Resolution you have thought it expedient to call off the active movement for the present, but nevertheless that Resolution stands. Similarly, as is evident from the very name—the Hindustan Socialist Republican Party the revolutionaries stand for the establishment of the Socialist Republic which is not a half-way house. They are bound to carry on the struggle till their goal is achieved and their ideal is consummated. But they would be quite apt to change their tactics according to the changing circumstances and environments. Revolutionary struggle assumes different shapes at different times. It becomes sometimes open, sometimes hidden, sometimes purely agitational and sometimes a fierce life-and-death struggle. In the circumstances, there must be special factors, the consideration of which may prepare the revolutionaries to call off their movement. But no such definite idea has been advanced by you. Mere sentimental appeals do not and cannot count much in the revolutionary struggles.

Since your compromise you have called off your movement and consequently all of your prisoners have been released. But what about the revolutionary prisoners? Dozens of Ghadar party prisoners imprisoned since 1915 are still rotting in jails, in spite of having undergone the full terms of their imprisonments. Scores of martial law prisoners are still buried in these living tombs. And so are dozens of Babar Akali prisoners. Deogharh, Kakori, Machhua Bazaar and Lahore Conspiracy case prisoners are amongst those numerous still locked behind bars. More than half a dozen conspiracy trials are going on at Lahore, Delhi, Chittagong, Bombay, Calcutta and elsewhere. Dozens of revolutionaries are absconding and amongst them are many females. More than half a dozen prisoners are actually waiting for their executions. What about all of these people? The three Lahore conspiracy case condemned prisoners, who have luckily come into prominence and who have acquired enormous public sympathy, do not form the bulk of the revolutionary party. Their fate is not the only consideration before the party. As a matter of fact their executions are expected to do greater good than the commutation of their sentences.

But in spite of all this, you are making public appeals asking them to call off their movement. Why should they do so? You have not mentioned any very definite thing. In these circumstances your appeals mean you are joining hands with the bureaucracy to crush that movement, and your appeals amount to preaching treachery, desertion and betrayal amongst them. If that were not the case, then the best thing for you would have been to approach some of the prominent revolutionaries and to talk over the whole thing with them. You ought to have tried to convince them to call off their movement. I do not think you also share the general conservative notion that the revolutionaries are devoid of reason, rejoicing in destruction and devastation. Let us inform you that in reality the case is quite the contrary. They always consider the pros and cons of every step they take and they fully realize the responsibility which they thus incur and they attach greater importance to the constructive phase of the revolutionary programme than to any other, though in the present circumstances they cannot but occupy themselves with the destructive part of their programme.

The present policy of the Government towards them is to deprive them of the sympathy and support of the masses which they have won in their movement, and then crush them. In isolation they can be easily hunted down. In face of that fact any sentimental appeal to cause demoralization amongst their ranks would be utterly unwise and counter-revolutionary. It would be rendering direct assistance to the Government to crush them.

Therefore we request you either to talk to some revolutionary leaders—they are so many in jails—and come to terms with them or to stop these appeals. Please for goodness sake pursue one of these two alternative courses and pursue it wholeheartedly. If you cannot help them, then please have mercy on them. Let them alone. They can better take care of themselves. They know that the hegemony of the revolutionary party in the future political struggle is assured. Masses are rallying round them and the day is not far off when they will be leading the masses under their banner towards their noble and lofty ideal—the Socialist Republic.

Or if you seriously mean to help them, then have a talk with them to understand their point of view, and discuss the problem in detail.

Hope you will kindly consider the above request and let your view be known publicly.

Yours,

ONE OF THE MANY

Young India, 23-4-1931
1. TELEGRAM TO THAKURDAS KHUSHALDAS

[After April 28, 1931]
WHEN PEOPLE WON’T LISTEN TO REASON YOU MAY FOR THE TIME BEING LET THEM DO WHAT THEY LIKE.

2. TO THE CULTIVATORS OF KHEDA

[April 29, 1931]
I had written in Navajivan that no cultivator is obliged to pay revenue by incurring debt. I write the following further to clarify the matter.

1. Whether the cultivator has gone on ‘Hijarat’ or not if he has suffered substantially by reason of satyagraha movement such a satya-grahi Cultivator is not obliged to pay revenue by incurring debt.
2. The duty of all other cultivators—those who have not taken part in the satyagraha movement and those who have not suffered substantially—is to pay the revenue even if it becomes necessary to incur debt for such purpose.
3. The cultivators covered by item I should realize that in my opinion their interest lies in keeping the Truce. I shall make every endeavour to get suspension of their land revenue up to next year but if I fail the peasants will have to undergo considerable suffering and this suggestion does not apply to those who are not prepared to undergo such suffering.

[From Gujarati]
Navijivan, 3-5-1931

1 Secretary, District Congress Committee, Mirpurkhas (Sind), who in his letter dated April 28, had sought Gandhiji’s views on Mirpurkhas cloth merchants’ decision to sell sealed foreign cloth against the Congress directive and the counter-decision of satyagrahis to resort to picketing and hunger strike.
2 From The Hindu, 30-4-1931
3 Dated 19-4-1931; vide “To The Satyagrahi Farmer”, 19-4-1931
4 In a translation of the item found in Home Department Political file the word “Khatedar” has been used.
3. LETTER TO CHARU PROBHA DEVI

BORSAD,
April 29, 1931

DEAR CHARU PROBHA,

I was delighted to have your letter. You would certainly not reject the company of the young men who may not hold the same view on non-violence that you and I do but you will expect to convert them by your affection and still more by proving the efficacy of your own method in daily conduct. You will not expect me to give you long letters. No apology is needed for faulty English. Why should we be ashamed of making errors in a foreign tongue? What, however, I would like you to do is to pick up Hindi and begin to write in Hindi. Hindi you can learn in a very short time.

BAPU

CHARU PROBHA DEVI
RAJBARI [BENGAL]
From a photostat: G. N. 8701

4. LETTER TO C. F. ANDREWS

[AS AT] SABARMATI, ¹
April 29, 1931

I have had so many letters² from you but I have seemingly neglected you. The fact is I have had no time. Karachi washed me out completely. The fatigue has not yet left me entirely. I am obliged to sleep two or three times during the day so as to keep me fresh for work that I must do.

I hope your sister is better if not completely restored. Anyway I am glad you are by her side. Please give my love to her.

You have taken it for granted that I am going to London. I am not at all sure and I am certainly not going if there is no Hindu-Muslim solution. There is no immediate prospect. And then the Settlement itself runs the risk of being broken to pieces in Gujarat. Of course I am making every endeavour to see that it is honoured by the officials here. But it is an uphill fight and you know how tender the ¹ Gandhiji was at Borsad up to May 11 when he left for Simla. This address was given in this and in other letters for convenience of reply.

² Written from the United States and England officials are over revenue matters. If I do come and if I have the choice, I would like to accept Muriel Lester’s invitation. If however you think that it would be better not to do so and to occupy Ghanshyam Das’s hostel you will please see her.

And now for the Transvaal question. It is becoming more and more difficult day after day. Unless India comes to her own in the near future, I see no prospect of improvement in the situation. Of course the resident Indian population will somehow drag on its existence there. They have sufficient resourcefulness but it would be living from hand to mouth. However we must do all we can. Yours I know is just now the largest share. I have become almost incapacitated for that work. But when we meet we must discuss the situation and I might be able to find out some effective method of dealing with it.

I hope yor are getting your copy of Young India. This letter is merely a supplement to that weekly letter.

C. F. ANDREWS, ESQ.

From a photostat: S. N. 17024

5. LETTER TO C. VIJAYARAGHAVACHARIAR

BORSAD,
April 29, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

Ghanshyam Das Birla asks me to write to you if it is only a few lines. I have failed because up to last week I had practically ceased to deal with voluminous correspondence that comes daily. Pyarelal and Mahadev dealt with it as they liked and I knew that in that pressure you did not expect anything from me. And now that I have a few moments to dictate some letters what shall I say to you? Why do you think that because you had no acknowledgments, your wires and letters were not considered? They were. But the unfortunate fact is that your suggestion could not be accepted. The legality of the convictions was discussed threadbare by jurists like Sir Tej Bahadur Sapru with the Viceroy and you know what great influence he had with him. But it was all of no avail. The Congress therefore had to take up the only attitude that was open to it. I would ask you please therefore not to be sensitive. Remember that we have a new generation of men and women dominating the Congress. They brush aside legal forms. They

1 Of Bhagat Singh, Sukhdev and Rajguru have found by experience how powerless these forms have proved for advancing freedom and they have by bitter experience realized how powerful they have been for curbing freedom. Why will you not therefore be satisfied with blessing these young men and women knowing that they are, on the whole, on the right track[?] This of course does not mean that you should not continue to give the Congress and especially me the benefit of your advice. But that you should do without expectation of its being always followed. I hope, in spite of old age creeping on you, you are well and able to follow the vast changes that are taking place in the country.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. C. VIJAYARAGHAVACHARIAR
THE ARAMA, SALEM

Copy to Sjt. Ghanshyam Das Birla
From a photostat: S. N. 17022

6. LETTER TO R. B. GREGG

[AS AT] SABARMATI,
April 29, 1931

MY DEAR GOVIND,

I have your letter and I read your letter to Mira. I quite understand and appreciate all the anxiety shown by you in your letter to her. I do not know that I shall be going to London at all and I shall certainly not go if the way is not clear for me to deliver my message.
That it is not likely to be accepted just now I have realized all along.
But had the Congress not accepted the offer to discuss terms, the Congress would have put itself in the wrong. As it is we are safe either way. It will be great, good and grand if peace can be made permanent through negotiation. I shall therefore leave no stone unturned to reach that state but it will be equally good and grand if the negotiations proved fruitless. Then India will be put upon her mettle and will have to show her capacity for further suffering. There is no question of my being invited to parties, feted and lionized. I can eat nothing and thank God my loin-cloth will protect me from being exhibited as a specimen in Barnum’s show. If therefore I go to London I go for solid business and to drink in the deep affection of chosen friends there. I refuse to speculate. I would go where the light leads me in the fullest faith that all will be well if I follow it.
Do not believe the rumours about my intended visit to America. Much as I should like to visit that great country I know that my time is not yet and I do not want to come as a nine day’s wonder.

Love to you and Radha.

Yours sincerely,
BAPU

R. B. GREGG, ESQ.
543 BOYLSTON ST.
BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS

From a photostat: G. N. 4663; also S. N. 17023

7. LETTER TO JAMNADAS GANDHI

BORSAD,
April 29, 1931

CHI. JAMNADAS,

How is it that you do not write to me at all? I cannot write to you, but I do think about you. What is your present state of mind? How are Father and Mother? 'How is the school? Write to me and describe some of your experiences in jail. What kind of person is the new ruler? Ask Purshottam to write to me.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 9291. Courtesy: Jamnadas Gandhi

8. LETTER TO PRABHUDAS GANDHI

BORSAD,
April 29, 1931

CHI. PRABHUDAS,

I have gone through your letter of 19th February 1931, the budget of the Magan spinning-wheel and the khadi scheme. My desire of setting up an ashram in Almora still persists. I believe we can pay upto Rs. 15,000/- if we get a good house. Write to me if you come across a good place at a reasonable price. I may like to buy it.

I would certainly need a person to run this ashram. At present, I have only you in mind. You must decide to stay there. Finding fault with others is a great sin and leads to self-deception. One should not vie with others. You should utilize whatever you have received as your share and derive pleasure out of it.

I have not received your.... 'If it is in the Ashram, I will have it sent to me. Many improvements have been made in “my” spinning-wheel. Let there be more and call for the sample then. Two persons are behind it—Laskshmidas and Keshu.

I find your budget for the Magan spinning-wheel all right. Draw that much money if Chhaganlal and Narandas sanction it. Even if they do not, send me your spinning-wheel if you want to. I will try to learn from Padma or anyone who knows how to ply it.

Your khadi scheme is no doubt impracticable. Its conditions are very difficult. Give it up for the time being. Do whatever you can by raising men and money there. These are my views. I am sending this letter to Chhaganlal. He will send it to you after reading it. Let me know if he has made any changes.

Today I am in Borsad. Who knows about tomorrow?

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original S.N. 32974

9. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL GANDHI

April 29, 1931

CHI. CHHAGANLAL,

Now for the last eight days or so, I am able to write a few letters. That is to say, I have that much time, mainly after the morning prayers. That is true of today also. I can say that my health on the whole is good. I do not have any after-effects of fever now. Whatever after-effect I had, was from exhaustion. Even now I need rest. I can take that while working and I am doing that.

I have your letter. I have your earlier one also. It is good news that both of you are keeping well. I am happy that you have got the work of your liking. I do not at all like . . ." Vijapur. He has not even thought about it. I feel like writing to Diwan directly. Do you think it is necessary? The owner of the neighbouring land died but his heirs would be there. Find out.

1 A word here is illegible in the source.
2 A few words here are illegible in the source.

I have come to Borsad as there is a danger of Government reprisal here. With me are Ba, Mirabehn, Mahadev, Pyarelal and a young man from Utkal. We will have to stay here for a few days. I will decide after that. I will have to go either to Mahabaleshwar or Simla or Nainital.¹ I do not foresee my going to Europe.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original : S.N. 32868

10. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

BORSAD,
April 29, 1931

BHAI GHANSHYAMDAS.

I have your two letters. I send you a copy of the letter² I have written to Vijayaraghavachariji.

What shall I write about the Hindu-Muslim problem? The Nawab of Bhopal is doing something. Whenever you have an opportunity of rendering service to a Muslim you should do so. It does not mean financial assistance. Financial assistance of course has to be rendered in the case of a deserving but poor Mussalman. And it is also our duty to try and remove the rowdyism among Hindus. The atrocities committed by Hindus in Cawnpore and Kashi do not help the Hindu religion, but undoubtedly harm it.

I have as yet no idea whether I am to go to England or not. The situation here is rather serious.

Do go to America. It will certainly do some good.
Do whatever is possible for the boycott of foreign cloth.
I am well.

BAPU

From Hindi: C. W. 7885. Courtesy: G. D. Birla

¹ Gandhiji went to Simla on May 13 and thereafter to Nainital on May 18, 1931.
² Vide “Letter to C. Vijayaraghavachariar”, 29-4-1931
11. THE LOIN-CLOTH

A critic has fallen foul of my remark made before the meeting of the Federation of Chambers of Commerce at Delhi that the Indian civilization must not be allowed to be wiped out by the inroads from the West. The critic has confused Indian civilization with the loin-cloth and then condemned it.

Mr. Churchill has been kind enough gratuitously to advertise my loin-cloth to the whole world. It has therefore become the fashion to laugh at it as the said critic has done. Let me then explain what it means.

In 1921 Maulana Mahomed Ali was arrested at Waltair whilst he and I were going on a tour to the South.\footnote{Vide “Message to Bomba Citizens”, 14-9-1921} He was torn from Begum Mahomed Ali who was travelling with us. I was deeply moved, she bore the separation bravely and attended meetings in Madras. I left her at Madras and went as far as Madura. On the way I saw in our compartment crowds that were wholly unconcerned with what had happened. Almost without exception they were bedecked in foreign fineries. I entered into conversation with some of them and pleaded for khadi. For I had no other way open to me to secure the release of the Ali Brothers save through khadi. They shook their heads as they said, “We are too poor to buy khadi and it is so dear.” I realized the substratum of truth behind the remark. I had my vest, cap, and full dhoti on. When these uttered only partial truth, the millions of compulsory naked men, save for their langoti four inches wide and nearly as many feet long, gave through their bare limbs the naked truth. What effective answer could I give them, if it was not to divest myself of every inch of clothing I decently could and thus to a still greater extent bring myself in a line with the ill-clad masses? And this I did the very next morning after the Madura meeting?\footnote{Held on September 22, 1921; vide}

Here then there is no question of loin-cloth civilization. The adoption of the loin-cloth was for me a sheer necessity. But in so far as the loin-cloth also spells simplicity let it represent Indian civilization. It is a mingling of the cultures represented by the different faiths and influenced by the geographic and other environment in which the cultures have met. Thus Islamic culture is not the same in Arabia, Turkey, Egypt and India but it is itself influenced by the conditions of the respective countries. Indian culture is therefore Indian. It is neither Hindu, Islamic nor any other, wholly. It is a fusion of all and essentially Eastern. I had in mind that culture. And every one who called himself or herself an Indian is bound to treasure that culture, be its trustee and resist any attack upon it.

European civilization is no doubt suited for the Europeans but it will mean ruin for India, if we endeavour to copy it. This is not to say that we may not adopt and assimilate whatever may be good and capable of assimilation by us as it does not also mean that even the Europeans will not have to part with whatever evil might have crept into it. The incessant search for material comforts and their multiplication is such an evil, and I make bold to say that the Europeans themselves will have to remodel their outlook, if they are not to perish under the weight of the comforts to which they are becoming slaves. It may be that my reading is wrong, but I know that for India to run after the Golden Fleece is to court certain death. Let us engrave on our hearts the motto of a Western philosopher, “Plain living and high thinking”. Today it is certain that the millions cannot have high living and we the few who profess to do the thinking for the masses run the risk, in a vain search after high living, of missing high thinking.

Young India, 30-4-1931

12. HE LIVES BY DYING

Sjt. G. V. Ketkar writes of an example of great bravery which is worthy of record:

Sjt. Purushottam, who was popularly known as Bapu Gayadhani, was a young worker of Nasik. For the past few years he was working as assistant Secretary of the Gulalwadi public gymnasium of Nasik. He was also occasionally taking part in Congress and swadeshi propaganda. On the 4th of April a house in Nasik caught fire. Bapu Gayadhani took leading part in the work of quenching the fire. On learning that there were children in the house he rushed in without caring for consequences and rescued all the children. He re-entered the house to save the cattle also. Unfortunately the fire had spread all over the house and burning beam crashed over his head. He was badly burnt and bruised all over his body and was taken to the civil hospital where he succumbed to his injuries on the 11th instant.”
His parents, if they are alive, should be proud of their brave son. Bapu Gayadhanī lives through his glorious death.

Young India, 30-4-1931

13. THE GUJARAT FARMER

“Give a dog a bad name and hang him.” Say that the Gujarat farmer is contumacious and sell him out. In a Press interview¹ I said some days ago that it was unfortunate that Mr. Benn was misled into saying that the Gujarat farmer was not playing the game; in other words, he was not paying up. When the suggestion was first made I was startled, for I had faith that the Gujarat farmer though hit hard would carry out the terms of the Settlement to the full extent of his ability. The Settlement expects nothing more.

The complaint made to me in Delhi was that whereas large sums were collected in Bardoli and Valod before 28th February, only Rs. 3,212 were collected during the fortnight ending 15th March. The implication was that since the Settlement very little was paid.

Now, the Settlement was announced on 7th March. Sardar Vallabhbhai and I reached Bardoli on 14th March. It is clear that nothing could be expected before we arrived in Bardoli and explained the position to the farmers and they could return to their homes. Here, however, are the figures of payment:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>DATE</th>
<th>BARDOLI</th>
<th>VALOD</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Collections before 15-3-31</td>
<td>Rs. 2,500-0-0</td>
<td>Rs. 20,000—0-0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>On 16th March</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>17th,,</td>
<td>200-0-0</td>
<td>..</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>18th,,</td>
<td>400-0-0</td>
<td>..</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>19th,,</td>
<td>200-0-0</td>
<td>136—0-0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>20th,,</td>
<td>..</td>
<td>228—0-0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>23rd,,</td>
<td>500-0-0</td>
<td>379—0-0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>24th,,</td>
<td>1,700-0-0</td>
<td>1,114—0-0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>25th,,</td>
<td>800-0-0</td>
<td>364—0-0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>26th,,</td>
<td>1,000-0-0</td>
<td>..</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>27th,,</td>
<td>1,000-0-0</td>
<td>117—0-0</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

¹ Vide “Interview to the Press”, 18-4-1931
VOL. 52 : 28 APRIL, 1931 - 1 JULY, 1931

30th ,, 2,000-0-0          2,229—0-0
31st ,, 1,500-0-0          1,949—0-0
1st April 4,000-0-0          1,361—0-0

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>DATE</th>
<th>VALOD</th>
<th>BARDOLI</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>2nd  April</td>
<td>Rs. 2,000-0-0</td>
<td>Rs. 1,208—0-0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7th  ,,</td>
<td>10,000-0-0</td>
<td>1,829—0-0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8th  ,,</td>
<td>900-0-0</td>
<td>2,246—0-0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9th  ,,</td>
<td>2,200-0-0</td>
<td>2,429—0-0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10th ,,</td>
<td>5,500-0-0</td>
<td>1,379—0-0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>11th ,,</td>
<td>6,800-0-0</td>
<td>1,700—2-3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>13th ,,</td>
<td>20,000-0-0</td>
<td>6,932–11-9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>14th ,,</td>
<td>6,500-0-0</td>
<td>1,455–15-9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>15th ,,</td>
<td>10,028-0-0</td>
<td>1,011–12-7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>16th ,,</td>
<td>11,446-0-0</td>
<td>2,791—5-4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>17th ,,</td>
<td>7,622-0-0</td>
<td>3,736—0-0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>18th ,,</td>
<td>9,981-0-0</td>
<td>5,545—14-0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>20th ,,</td>
<td>11,518-0-0</td>
<td>6,349–11-0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>21st ,,</td>
<td>7,365-0-0</td>
<td>1,856–11-0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>22nd ,,</td>
<td>6,162-0-0</td>
<td>3,421—6-6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>23rd ,,</td>
<td>4,456-0-0</td>
<td>1,090—4-0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>24th ,,</td>
<td>9,000-0-0</td>
<td>4,006–10-7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>25th ,,</td>
<td>7,129-0-0</td>
<td>1,162—3-5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>26th ,,</td>
<td>. .</td>
<td>5,500—0-0</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

1,54,407-0-0          83,528-12-2

I claim that the Bardoli farmers have done exceedingly well and this in spite of the fact that the forfeited lands had not yet been returned, that some of these had even been sold, that the old Patels and Talatis had not been reinstated, that all the prisoners had not been released and that prosecutions against them were still pending.

But here I must draw the curtain. I may say that great difficulty is being experienced in establishing friendly touch with the local officials. The result is that many things that should have long ago been done on behalf of the Government are still not done and though there is no unwillingness to pay, threats of coercive measures are kept hanging like Damocles’s word over the heads of the people. The process has begun with Kaira. They do not seem to realize that there is peace now, provisional though it is, between the people and the Government and that efforts are being made to make enduring what is today only temporary and provisional.

The difficulties in the way are enormous. But I have pledged my word to Lord Irwin that so far as it is humanly possible, I shall prevent the Truce from breaking. The Settlement has been called a gentleman’s agreement. I know that Lord Irwin was sincerely anxious to see that it was fully carried out by the Government’s agents as he testified more than once that I was to see it being as fully carried out by Congressmen.

It has hurt me to take the public into confidence even to the extent I have done. But I feel that I can no longer suppress the fact that there are ominous signs on the horizon. A satyagrahi has no weapon at his disposal but that of public opinion and suffering. Let the public read no more into this article than the natural meaning the written word conveys. I shall hope and pray that next week I may be able to report that the threatening cloud has lifted.

Young India, 30-4-1931

14. OUR DUTY TO THE VILLAGERS

The intensive political struggle of last year brought out prominently the importance of foreign-cloth boycott in the fight for national freedom. That the boycott programme has been in a measure effective, is evidenced by the fall in the import of foreign cloth. We have reason for satisfaction in the results achieved, but let us not in our satisfaction at the measure of success gained, forget the true purpose and implications of the boycott programme. Let us remember that our nation lives in the millions of village homes and the true and primary aim of the boycott programme will be missed if the boycott is not worked in such a way that the benefits accrue pre-eminently to the villagers. If it is to benefit them it can only be by the nation according to khadi a position above all other indigenous cloth.

In order to do this it is necessary for us to revise our taste. We must take to coarse, thick khadi. The cotton grown in India is mostly short stapled and can yield only low count yarn. The spinners who have been spinning generally only for themselves or the neighbourhood are accustomed in most of the areas only to the spinning of coarse yarn and it is difficult therefore at once to raise the count of yarn spun. This is the case with practically the whole of North India. In the Punjab, Rajasthan, U. P., Bihar, and Bengal, where lakhs of unemployed or partlaily employed charkhas exist, only thick khadi is being woven. A limited quantity of fine and medium khadi is available in the South, but even there the largest quantity is only made of low count yarn. The activities under the auspices of the All-India Spinners’ Association, much as they have grown, have not touched even a tenth of the known and definitely ascertained facilities for production in these provinces. There are practically no limits to the possibilities of thick khadi production and if only the nation can give its reasoned preference to thick khadi, it can to a very large extent take the place till now occupied by foreign cloth and the fruits of the national programme will go to benefit the vast majority of the population of the country and not merely the moneyed few.

This general plea for khadi from the point of view of the boycott is further strengthened by one peculiar feature of the economic situation of the country in the current year and the year that is past. The abnormally low prices of cotton and indeed of all agricultural produce, have caused great distress in the villages. The prices prevailing do not, in many cases, fully meet even the cultivation and other expenses. The smaller cultivators of cotton, therefore, have sought to earn something more on their cotton by plying one or two spinning wheels in their homes. The cultivators of other agricultural produce have also similarly sought to add to their scanty income by spinning. The result is that in many parts of the country spinners from surrounding villages in great numbers flock to the nearest khadi depots offering the yarn for sale. The output of hand-spun yarn even before last year was very much more than what the existing depots could manage. But now the position has become more difficult still. With their very limited capital resources the depots are unable to take in all the yarn and have therefore to turn away many of the spinners. If the demand for khadi can be increased the consequent increased turn-over may enable the depots to afford a greater amount of relief to the spinners. More private capital may also flow into khadi, as to some extent it did last year. Both from the general viewpoint of the boycott, therefore, as well as the affording of immediate relief for present distress the duty of the country to give preference to khadi is obvious.

If large numbers of people, even if they feel it difficult to wear a khadi dhoti or sari because of its heaviness, choose only khadi for their other requirements—towels, shirting, coating, and bed sheets, carpets, and the like—it will become possible not merely to absorb all the hand-spun yarn that is produced today but also many times the present output. It requires only a proper exercise of imagination to realize all the possibilities. And if we would adapt our dress to the climatic requirements and the resources of villagers, we would discard the many articles, reduce the size of the dhoti or sari, change the turban for the cap and in the bargain secure greater comfort and greater cleanliness, not to speak of the great reduction in the cost of clothes.

Young India, 30-4-1931

15. WHAT IS THE TRUTH?

Sjt. S. D. Nadkarni of Karwar writes a letter from which I take the following:

I have just noticed that in a letter addressed to you and already published in the Press Mr. Mushir Hussain Kidwai, one of the leaders of the ‘All-Parties Muslim Conference’, referring to the minority problem in Egypt, says: ‘In my opinion, the attitude of the Hindus here should be what Zaglul’s was in Egypt, i.e., they should sign blindfolded the demands of the minority. . .’

Without concerning myself here with any other statement made by Mr. Kidwai in his letter to you, I should like to draw your attention to the true fact about the one above, where a parallel is sought to be drawn from Egyptian politics. The enclosed excerpt from a leading article in the Servant of India of August 15, 1929, whose writer had to deal with a similar statement made about that time by Sir Ibrahim Rahimatoola, will show you how the truth about affairs in Egypt (where the Muslims are the majority, and the native Christians called Copts are the minority) is just the opposite of what your correspondent Mr. Kidwai would have you believe.

Every single statement in the excerpt, I am sure, can be vouched for by reference to any work on contemporary history or any standard work of reference.

From the excerpt referred to by Sjt. Nadkarni, the following relevant parts are taken:

Indeed Sir Ibrahim seems to have misread history. Look, for instance, at what he says about Egypt. In pleading for a generous treatment to be meted out by the majority community to minority communities, he cites the example of what Saad Pasha Zaglul did to the Christians in Egypt. He appears to think that Zaglul’s sensitive regard for the rights and interests of the Copts persuaded the latter to accept the rule of the Moslems. The facts, however, are just the contrary. It is the throwing in by the Copts of their lot unreservedly with the nationalists in Egypt that has persuaded the Muslims to treat them so liberally as they have done. The Copts were not entirely free from persecution before. The improvement was solely due to the fact that they were not only not hostile or indifferent to the national campaign for freedom, but took a very prominent part in the Wafd. This was a very wise policy for the Coptic community to follow, to which they owe the inclusion of Copts in the Ministry.

I give the extract for what it is worth. I have verified neither the statement made in the extract nor the one to which it purports to be an answer. Nor am I interested in it except for the sake of truth.

As a satyagrahi I believe in the absolute efficacy of full surrender. Numerically Hindus happen to be the major community. Without reference therefore to what the Egyptian majority did they may give to the minorities what they may want. But even if the Hindus were in a minority, as a satyagrahi and Hindu I should say that the Hindus would lose nothing in the long run by full surrender.

To this argument a retort has thoughtlessly been made, ‘Why then do you not advise India to surrender to the English? Give them the domination they want and be happy.’ The hasty retort ignores the vital fact that I have not advised surrender to the bayonet. In the code of the satyagrahi there is no such thing as surrender to brute force. Or the surrender then is the surrender of suffering and not to the will of the wielder of the bayonet. A satyagrahi’s surrender has to come out of his strength, not out of weakness. The surrender advised by me is not of honour but of earthly goods. There is no loss of honour in surrendering seats and positions of emoluments. There is loss of honour in haggling about them. Let the Englishmen give up the bayonet and live in our midst as simple friends and I should plead for them. The law of surrender and suffering is a universal law admitting of no exceptions.

Young India, 30-4-1931

16. LETTER TO PADMA

BORSAD,
April 30, 1931

CHI. PADMA,

I got your letter. I had certainly not forgotten you. But I was helpless. I am glad that you are trying to learn verses from the Gita by heart. How many rounds do you spin in an hour on the Magan spinning-wheel? For how many hours at a stretch can you spin?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati original : G.N. 6118

17. LETTER TO MANGALA S. PATEL

BORSAD,
April 30, 1931

CHI. MANGALA,

I have your letter. I would certainly like to write to everyone if I had even a moment’s leisure. True, I get a little time here. I wrote to Durga because Anandi had written that she wanted a letter from me.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C.W. 11093. courtesy: Pushpa Naik

18. INTERVIEW TO “FOX MOVIETONE NEWS”

BORSAD,
[April 30, 1931 ]

The following is the full text of the interview intended for the Talkie that the Fox Movietone News and the Associated Press of America had with Mahatma Gandhi at Borsad. The copy has been corrected by Gandhiji before releasing for publication, says The Bombay Chronicle.

Mr. Gandhi prefixed the interview with the following remarks: I do not like this kind of thing, but I shall reconcile myself to it, if not more than a few minutes have to be given: Although I know this sort of enterprise will advertise you, which is your primary object, I know also that it will serve to advertise the cause which I represent—India’s independence. I do not discount the value of propaganda. I have been described as the greatest propagandist in the world. I may deserve the compliment. But my propaganda is unlike the ordinary. It is that of truth which is self-propagating. Truth abhors artificiality.

You will therefore excuse me for declining to pose for you from which, apart from the reason I have given above, I am debarred by a solemn vow I made in 1905.

1 From The Hindu, 1-5-1931
He therefore declined to give a sitting in a suitable courtyard. The interview took place in his room.

Q. Mr. Gandhi, Fox Movietone News and the Associated Press of America, which combined, reach an audience of several hundred million people throughout the world, have sent us their representatives across the Seven Seas from New York to India to see if you will be good enough to give the American people, through the medium of Fox Movietone News, a message of greeting and friendship. As you probably know, there is a great deal of interest and sympathy in the United States for India’s struggle for independence, because America itself had a similar struggle for liberation 150 years ago.

A. I appreciate all the interest and sympathy America has shown in our struggle, and I hope we shall be able to retain the friendship and goodwill of the American people to the end of our struggle.

Q. When do you expect to visit America?

A. Much as I should like to visit your country, I have absolutely no notion about it except that I should not like to visit America until the present struggle for India’s freedom has proved demonstrably successful.

When do you expect to leave for London for the second Round Table Conference?

About this also, I have no idea, except that I don’t expect to go to London unless the Hindu-Muslim communal question is satisfactorily solved. Of course, if there should be a break in the present Truce, I will not go to London at all.

Have you given Lord Irwin any written message for the British Prime Minister?

It is wholly wrong to say I gave Lord Irwin any such message for Mr. MacDonald.

Do you expect England will grant all your demands at the second Round Table Conference?

It is more than I can say.

But you are really hopeful England will this time grant your demands?

All I can say is I am an optimist.

If England does not give you what you want, what course of action will you follow?

Of course, Civil Disobedience and all other phases of satyagraha, (obedience to the principles of truth) are always at our dispo-
But whether we shall resort to these weapons immediately, or what other steps we shall take, it is not possible to say offhand at present.

Are you prepared to go back to jail if England refuses to grant your demands?
I am always ready to go to jail in the cause of India’s freedom.
Are you willing to die in such a cause?
That is a bad question.

If England should accede to your demands, do you intend to have complete prohibition in the new Indian State?
Yes, I expect to see absolute prohibition enforced in the new Indian State.

Do you intend to abolish child-marriages when the new Indian State is established?
I should very much like to see child-marriages abolished even before that time.

Do you expect in the new Indian State to exterminate the present caste system which makes social outcasts of India’s so-called sixty million “untouchables”?
Most decidedly.

Do you intend to abolish the present system of Indian widows living lives of strict seclusion and celibacy?
There is nothing now to prevent widows from remarrying if they so wish. It is likewise wholly wrong to say, or to suggest, that Indian widows in general live in seclusion.

I refer to the system of widows living in purdah.
The system of purdah is in fact confined to a very small number of the middle-class people, and that too not over the whole of India.

In the new Indian State, do you expect there will be complete communal social unity and harmony between Hindus and Muslims?
I certainly look forward to seeing complete social harmony and unity established between these two great branches of the Indian family in the new State.

If the King of England invites you to dinner at Buckingham Palace when you attend the second Round Table Conference, will you dress in native Indian attire or will you appear in European dress?
It would be a discourtesy to the King for me to appear in any dress other than my customary Indian apparel. If the weather permits, I shall dress in England exactly as I do in India, that is, in loin-cloth.
Mr. Gandhi, you have frequently said that you number among the British people some of your best friends and partisans. Will you be kind enough to give a brief message of greeting to those friends and other members of the great British public, through British Movietone News, which reaches a vast audience throughout the British Empire?

I am glad to be able to say that the circle of my British friends is increasing. It could not be otherwise, as the present satyagraha movement, however much it may be mixed with dress, is nothing but a movement for promoting the establishment of goodwill with those against whom we seem to be fighting. Therefore, I have no misgivings as to the ultimate result.

Will you give to the world a new Decalogue, or a new Ten Commandments in the light of present-day needs?

That is too big an order.

The Hindu, 5-5-1931

19. TELEGRAM TO H. W. EMERSON

BORSAD, May 1, 1931

MR. EMERSON
HOME SECRETARY
SIMLA

I OBSERVE THERE IS INSPIRED AGITATION AGAINST ABDUL GAFFAR KHAN OF CHARSAADA. HE LEFT ON ME AT KARACHI IMPRESSION FOR BEING QUITE SINCERE IN HIS PROFESSIONS OF NON-VIOLENCE. IF THERE ARE COMPLAINTS AGAINST HIM WOULD LIKE TO HAVE THEM SO AS TO ENABLE ME APPROACH HIM. BELIEVE HIM AMENABLE REASON. IT WOULD BE EMBARRASSING IF HE WAS ARRESTED WITHOUT GIVING ME OPPORTUNITY GETTING EXPLANATION FROM HIM. LORD IRWIN’S WISH THAT I SHOULD NOT GO TO FRONTIER PROVINCE IS ADDITIONAL CAUSE ANXIETY FOR ME. FEEL SURE MY PRESENCE THERE MUST HAVE SOBERING EFFECT. AS TO PUNJAB GOVERNOR’S SPEECH' COULD YOU SEND SPEECHES, WRITINGS OR PARTICULARS OF ACTIVITIES HE HAD IN MIND WHEN HE GAVE PUBLIC WARNING.

GANDHI

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-B, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

1 Following the agitation over the execution of Bhagat Singh the Governor of the Punjab, on April 25, 1931, had issued a warning that the ordinary law about incitement to violence would in future be vigorously enforced against Congressmen as well as others.
20. LETTER TO G. N. COLLINS

[May 1, 1931]

DEAR MR. COLLINS,

I had hoped to be able to write to you about the various cases I had in mind. But I am sorry I am not yet ready. I write this therefore purely about Mr. Rajwade’s case.

You told me he was not discharged because he had incited to violence. I have now got the certified record of the case and the writing on which the case was based. The charge-sheet has ‘committing an act which is to the prejudice of good order and of public safety and evading arrest’. There is no violence here.

I have read the writing in the original Marathi. It is an unvarnished report of the events. So far as I can see, there is not a trace of incitement to violence in the report. In my opinion, therefore, the case clearly falls within the Settlement.

If there is any other writing placed before the court you will please let me have it. If there is nothing more, I hope Mr. Rajwade will be discharged without delay.

Yours sincerely,

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-C, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

21. LETTER TO LAKSHMINARAYAN GADODIA

BORSAD,
May 1, 1931

BHAI LAKSHMINARAYANJI,

I have your letter. I am grateful to you for the help you extended to Ramanandji. Have you seen his work?

Give me the news about the foreign-cloth trade.
What is the dispute in the Congress Committee about?

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi : G.N. 5617

---

1 From the addressee’s reply of May 9 on behalf of Home Department Government of Bombay
2 A noted business man of Delhi

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
22. STATEMENT TO THE PRESS

BORSAD, May 2, 1931

There was no Patel who had not expressed the desire to resume service and there was no question of giving an assurance of working faithfully. That assurance was implied in the resumption of service. Such terms were, at the beginning stages of the settlement, issued to Patels, and on complaint being made by me, they were withdrawn.

If 25 per cent of forfeited lands has not been returned, because owners had not paid land revenue, it is a distinct breach of clause 17 B of the Settlement, because forfeited lands have to be returned unless there is reasonable ground for supposing that there is any contumacy on the part of the holder. It is common ground that there is no question of contumacy in Bardoli or any of the effected districts.

It is wholly wrong to suggest that there is lack of discipline in any of the Congress camps and whilst I have pressed every one of the Congress workers to implement the terms of peace as zealously as they fought during the struggle I have had no occasion to admonish any of the workers.

On the contrary, it gives me great joy to find complete response to every one of the instructions given to the workers. I have no knowledge of any worker in Congress organizations, especially in the districts of Surat and Kaira on which Vallabhbhai Patel and I are concentrating attention, having been dismissed for embezzlement of Congress funds except one unfortunate case.

The Bombay Chronicle, 4-5-1931

23. TELEGRAM TO HARIBHAU UPADHYAYA

BORSAD, May 2, 1931

HARIBHAU
“TYAGBHUMI” AJMER
YOUR TELEGRAM. HAVE NO CONFIDENCE ABOUT MY TELEGRAM UDAIPUR.\(^1\) LET JAMNALALJI OR MALAVIYAJI INTERVENE.

From a microfilm: S.N. 17049

GANDHI

\(^1\) This was issued to contradict certain reports which had appeared in a Bombay newspaper.

\(^2\) Vide “Letter to Haribhau Upadhyaya”, 6-5-1931.
24. LETTER TO MANAGER, OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS, BOMBAY

BORSAD, May 2, 1931

DEAR SIR,

I thank you for your letter. I do not know how far Mr. Andrews’s volumes¹ would be affected by your suggestion. Personally I have no objection to your publishing a selection of extracts. You perhaps know more than I do about the first difficulty. So far as the proposed book is concerned I would like you to expand your suggestion so as to enable me to give it fuller consideration.

Yours faithfully,
M. K. GANDHI

THE MANAGER
OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
BOMBAY

From a photostat : G.N. 5685

25. LETTER TO J. C. KUMARAPPA

BORSAD, May 2, 1931

MY DEAR KUMARAPPA,

I quite agree with you that Mr. Wadia² should have some work given to him. Here is another letter also for your consideration. I hope your work is making steady progress. I would like your report to be a text book on the subject.³

BAPU

Encl. 1
SYT. J. C. KUMARAPPA
CONVENER, CONGRESS SELECT COMMITTEE
ON INDO-BRITISH FINANCIAL SETTLEMENT
65 ESPLANADE ROAD, BOMBAY

From a photostat : G.N. 10093

¹ Mahatma Gandhi’s Ideas (1929) and Mahatma Gandhi : His Own Story (1930)
² Prof. P. A. Wadia
³ Vide also “Bahadurji Committee’s Report”, 23-7-1931.

22 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
26. LETTER TO SAILENDRA NATH GHOSE

[AS AT] SABARMATI,
May 2, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. I do indeed know what a life of exile means both from my own experience and that of others. I admit that my own experience has not the same value as yours for the simple reason that mine was a self-imposed exile but I can easily make it a rule of three and imagine that if my self-imposed exile meant much to me how much more must enforced exile be to friends like you. If things shape themselves properly, exiles won’t have to remain away at the outside beyond a year. As for my rumoured visit, there is nothing in it and therefore we need not discuss it any further. I must not visit America till the experiment here has become a proved success.

Yours sincerely,

SAILENDRA NATH GHOSE, ESQ.
31 UNION SQUARE, NEW YORK CITY

From a photostat : S.N. 17046

27. LETTER TO MARTIN C. MILLER

[AS AT] SABARMATI,
May 2, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter for which I thank you. In reply to your question I can say that I have profited much by a prayerful reading of the Sermon on the Mount. I regard Jesus to have been one of the greatest teachers of the world. I do not believe in his exclusive divinity.

Yours sincerely,

MARTIN C. MILLER, ESQ.
THE CLEVELAND GRAPHITE BRONZE CO.
CLEVELAND (U.S.A.)

From a photostat : S.N. 17047

1 Ghose was President of the Indian National Congress of America, New York City
28. LETTER TO UPTON CLOSE

[AS AT] SABARMATI,
May 2, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your two letters, the last one dated 8th April. My visit to America must still remain a rumour and your anticipation of what is likely to happen if I come to America makes me still more nervous. At the present moment therefore I must not think of even tentatively discussing arrangements about an event which is not likely to happen in the near future.

Yours sincerely,

UPTON CLOSE, ESQ.
NEW YORK CITY (U.S.A.)

From a photostat : S.N. 17048

29. LETTER TO KARAMCHANDANI

BOROSAD,
May 2, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter\(^1\). I share your feelings about the Garhwali prisoners and if I can get them discharged today I should do so. I need not therefore argue about our views. But I can say broadly that any one whose conscience tells him to disobey certain instructions or orders is certainly at liberty to do so, but is also expected to suffer the consequence. You will excuse the delay in replying to your letter.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. KARAMCHANDANI
KARACHI

From a microfilm : S.N. 17050

\(^1\) In this the addressee had pleaded the case of the Garhwali soldiers who had disobeyed orders and had been sentenced to various terms of imprisonment.
30. LETTER TO LALJI PARMAR

May 2, 1931

CHI. LALJI,

I got your letter. Be patient. I am inquiring into the matter. If you wish, you may come over here.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3291

31. LETTER TO GULAM RASUL QURESHI

BORSAD,
May 2, 1931

CHI. QURESHI,

I had both your letters. I wanted detailed news about Imam Saheb’s health. It is good you have given it. Follow Dr. Rajabali’s instructions. It will certainly be good if Imam Saheb goes to Mussoorie or some such place. If he does, accommodation will be no problem. But any arrangement Dr. Rajabali makes is bound to be the best. Our relations with him are such that we may accept any services from him. Please do keep me informed about Imam Saheb’s health.

Is Amina going on with her Urdu?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 10805. Courtesy: Gulam Rasul Qureshi

32. LETTER TO KISHORELAL MASHRUWALA

May 2, 1931

CHI. KISHORELAL,

How can you be released so soon? If all of us applied what Tolstoy said the way you want to apply it, we should all be the plight of the man in the ghee-and-water story. Should a drink addict not make a resolve to give up drinking? Should one given to pleasures of the flesh go on with his ways? It only means that one should not vainly attempt to scale the mountain of one’s cravings. But the resolve was hardly yours. If at all, it was mine—and Jamnalalji’s. But while the resolve was made by us, the blood had to be supplied by you. But hasn’t the pain now subsided? I must now have a letter from you every day.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 10719. Courtesy: Gomatibehn Mashruwala

33. A TWENTIETH CENTURY SATI (?)

I

I hope that the incident as reported in the Press is not true and that the lady in question died through illness or through accident, not by suicide. A sati has been described by our ancients, and the description holds good today, as one who ever fixed in her love and devotion to her husband signalizes herself by her selfless service during her husband’s lifetime as well as after, and remains absolutely chaste in thought, word and deed. Self-immolation at the death of the husband is not a sign of enlightenment but of gross ignorance as to the nature of the soul. The soul is immortal, unchangeable and immanent. It does not perish with the physical body but journeys on from one mortal frame to another till it completely emancipated itself from earthly bondage. The truth of it has been attested to by the experience of countless sages and seers and can be realized by anyone who may wish to even today. How can suicide be then justified in the light of these facts?

Again true marriage means not merely union of bodies. It connotes the union of the soul too. If marriage meant no more than a physical relationship the bereaved wife should be satisfied with a portrait or a waxen image of her husband. But self-destruction is worse than futile. It cannot help to restore the dead to life, on the contrary it only takes away one more from the world of the living.

The ideal that marriage aims at is that of spiritual union through the physical. The human love that it incarnates in intended to serve as

1 The Gujarati original of this appeared in Navajivan 3-5-1931. This is a translation by Pyarelal, with the following introductory note: “A lady correspondent from Ghaktopar having invited Gandhiji to express his opinion on an alleged case of sati that was recently reported in a Bombay vernacular paper Gandhiji has delivered himself on the subject in an article in the Navajivan as follows.” Vide also “Opinion Unchanged”, 17-5-1931.
a stepping-stone to the divine or universal love. That is why immortal Mira sang: “God alone is my husband—none else.”

It follows from this that a sati would regard marriage not as a means of satisfying the animal appetite but as a means of realizing the ideal of selfless and self-effacing service by completely merging her individuality in her husband’s. She would prove her satihood not by mounting the funeral pyre at her husband’s death but she would prove it with every breath that she breathes from the moment that she plighted her troth to him at the saptapadi ceremony, by her renunciation, sacrifice, self-abnegation and dedication to the service of her husband, his family and the country. She would shun creature comforts and delights of the senses. She would refuse to be enslaved by the narrow domestic cares and interests of the family, but would utilize every opportunity to add to her stock of knowledge and increase her capacity for service by more and more cultivating renunciation and self-discipline, and by completely identifying herself with her husband, learn to indentify herself with the whole world.

Such a sati would refuse to give way to wild grief at the death of her husband but would ever strive to make her late husband’s ideals and virtues live again in her actions and thereby win for him the crown of immortality. Knowing that the soul of him whom she married is not dead but still lives she will never think of remarrying.

The reader will here be perhaps tempted to ask, “The sati that you have pictured is a being untouched by passion or animal appetite. She can have no desire for offspring. Why should she marry at all?”

The reply is that in our present-day Hindu society, marriage, in a vast majority of cases, is not a matter of choice. Again, there are some who believe that in our ramshackle age marriage is necessary as a shield to virtue and as an aid to selfrestraint. And as a matter of fact, I personally know several instances of persons who, though at the time of the marriage, were not free from animal passion later on became imbued with the ideal of absolute chastity and found in their married life a powerful means for realizing their ideal. I have cited these instances to show that the ideal of sati that I have depicted is not merely a counsel of perfection that has no place outside the world of theory but something that has to be lived up to and realized in this very matter of fact world of ours.

1 Seven steps

But I readily concede that the average wife who strives to attain the ideal of sati will be a mother too. She must therefore add to her various other qualities mentioned above a knowledge of rearing and bringing up children so that they might live to be true servants of their country.

All that I have said about the wife applies equally to the husband. If the wife has to prove her loyalty and undivided devotion to her husband so has the husband to prove his allegiance and devotion to his wife. You cannot have one set of weights and measures for the one and a different one for the other. Yet we have never heard of a husband mounting the funeral pyre of his deceased wife. It may therefore be taken for granted that the practice of the widow immolating herself at the death of her husband had its origin in superstitious ignorance and the blind egotism of man. Even if it could be proved that at one time the practice had a meaning, it can only be regarded as barbarous in the present age. The wife is not the slave of the husband but his comrade, otherwise known as his better half, his colleague and friend. She is a co-sharer with him of equal rights and of equal duties. Their obligations towards each other and towards the world must, therefore, be the same and reciprocal.

I therefore regard the alleged self-immolation of this sister as vain. It certainly cannot be set up as an example to be copied. Don’t I appreciate at least her courage to die?— I may perhaps be asked. My reply is ‘no’ in all conscience. Have we not seen even evil-doers display this sort of courage? Yet no one has ever thought of complimenting them on it. Why should I take upon me the sin of even unconsciously leading astray some ignorant sister by my injudicious praise of suicide? Satihood is the acme of purity. This purity cannot be attained or realized by dying. It can be attained only through constant striving, constant immolation of the spirit from day to day.

Young India, 21-5-1931

34. NOTES

TO CORRESPONDENTS¹

Letters rain down on me. Even if I am in absolutely good

¹ A similar item “To Private and Personal Correspondents,” under “Notes”, also appeared in Young India, 7-5-1931.
health, I can neither read all those letters immediately nor can I reply to them. In my present delicate state of health, it is impossible to cope with those letters, to attend to the Settlement, to write for Navajivan and Young India and do other jobs. Hence only a select number of letters are put up to me and from among these I reply immediately to as many as I can and deal later with the rest. I am not happy about this situation. I know that my correspondents expect timely replies. But my helplessness is my defence. My correspondents can help me and my co-workers. They should oblige me by abiding by the following conditions:

1. They should not write letters unless absolutely necessary.
2. They should not use lead pencils for writing.
3. They should not write long letters.
4. They should not repeat the same arguments again and again.
5. As far as possible, they should not argue at all.
6. They should write in a beautiful hand.

These rules are simple and all stem from non-violence. My handwriting is very poor. I have full experience of what difficulties readers find in deciphering it. To do anything which causes hardship to others implies violence. Hence everyone can see that bad hand writing constitutes violence. The same can be said in regard to the other conditions. The above rules have permanent application and, in my present state of health, they are doubly relevant. Be that as it may, if my correspondents receive no replies, they should not conclude that this is due to lack of civility.

'THERE IS NO BASIS FOR UNITY'

The second question posed by the same correspondent is as follows:

There is imperfect reasoning underlying this question. Distinctions such as those which have been described are there for other reasons even in countries like England and the United States of America; despite this there is political unity in those countries. Moreover, it is only in cities that some of the distinctions mentioned above are to be found. There are no distinctions in villages. What is required is not the so-called unity achieved through schools, gymkhanas or through games and sports. Unity of hearts is all that is necessary. If this cannot be had, all else is futile; if this is accomplished, nothing else is necessary.

\[1\] Not translated here. The correspondent had pointed out the artificial separation of Hindus and Muslims in various fields and suggested that these barriers be broken. For the first question, vide “Power of Ahimsa”, 7-5-1931

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan, 3-5-1931

35. LETTER TO COLLECTOR, KHEDA DISTRICT

May 3, 1931

It is a common cause between us that the people should pay revenue to the utmost of their capacity. I know that in defining the word “capacity” there may be a difference, or there is a difference as I now see from your letter. During our talk I thought that you agreed that no one need borrow money in order to pay the revenue dues. I am carrying out that healthy formula. I know that is has not been carried out before, and may not be carried out in future. In any case, for this exceptional year, I think that there is no way our of it, as I hope to show conclusively in due course. This of course, does not mean that those who wish to pay by borrowing should be prevented by me from doing so. Only I could not take it upon me to press them to do so.²

The Bombay Chronicle, 8-10-1931

36. LETTER TO JAMES T. RUTNAM

BORSAD

May 3, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I am publishing your letter and a brief reply to it in the forth coming issue of Young India. I hope that the reply will satisfy you and those friends who had any misgivings about my attitude.

Yours sincerely,

JAMES T. RUTNAM, ESQ.
ST. XAVIER’S
NUWARA ELIYA (CEYLON)

From a microfilm : S.N. 17028

¹ Mr. Perry
² In reply, the addressee wrote : “I agree with you about borrowing on interest. We do not exclude arrangements amongst friends or the like.”
³ Vide “Foreign Missionaries Again”, 7-5-1931
MY DEAR HARIDAS!

Your letter of 26th March and the snatch from your diary have come upon me as a surprise. Your certificate could not be worth much if a cablegram containing a garbled report of my doings or even an act of mine truthfully reported which you could not understand should create such a revulsion in you as to undo your previous certificate. Do you see the terrible implication, namely, that your first certificate was based upon just as hasty calculation as your recantation? But more surprising still is your protestation that your personal loyalty remained as deep, intense, whole-hearted and unquestioning as it was a year ago. Do you not see the flat contradiction between this statement and your latest opinion of me? Surely your loyalty had no other foundation than your estimate of me and when your estimate had to be revised your loyalty became baseless. If you have kept copies of your letters you will understand more fully than I can convey the implications of your letters. However there is this consolation for me that I have survived ruder shocks than you have given.

Yours sincerely,

HARIDAS T. MUZUMDAR, ESQ.
EDITOR, “INDIA TODAY AND TOMORROW”
20 VESEY STREET, NEW YORK (U.S.A.)

From a photostat : S.N. 17053

---

1 Dr. Haridas T. Muzumdar, author of Gandhi the Apostle (1923); Gandhi versus the Empire (1932); Gandhi Triumphant (1939), Mahatma Gandhi : Peaceful Revolutionary (1952), Mahatma Gandhi: A Prophetic Voice (1963) and The Grammar of Sociology: Man in society (1966). He visited India during the Lahore Congress, 1929, stayed with Gandhiji at the Sabarmati Ashram during January-March 1930 and accompanied him on the Dandi March. He was also with Gandhiji during the Round Table Conference.

2 Not available; the addressee, it would appear, had written a strong letter accusing Gandhiji of letting down the people by agreeing to attend the Round Table Conference without securing an impartial inquiry into police brutality.
38. LETTER TO KISHORELAL MASHRUWALA

Sunday, May 3, 1931

CHI. KISHORELAL,

I have your letter. Doctors have divided their work into so many branches that sometimes they make great mistakes which we never know about. A specialist in ear diseases does not understand diseases of the chest, and a throat specialist does not understand inflammation of the stomach. As a result a number of doctors lay siege to the same body and make a mess of the patient’s condition. But on the whole they are honest and so it is better to die at their hands.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C.W. 10720. Courtesy: Gomatibehn Mashruwala

39. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

BORSAD,

May 3, 1931

CHI. BRIJKRISHNA,

I continue to get your letters. My health is all right, but the programme is uncertain. I have no knowledge as to when and where I may have to go. The diet consists of milk, dates and any fruit available locally. I am unable to take more than \(1\frac{1}{2}\) lb. of milk. My weight is 103 lb.

How are you and how is your brother-in-law?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi : G.N. 2389
40. TELEGRAM TO FRAMROZE B. GARDA

BORSAD,
May 4, 1931

SARDAR FRAMROZE GARDA

NAVSARI

HEAR POSSESSION NOT YET GIVEN OWNERS OF LAND YOU KINDLY RESTORED. PREPARATION FOR CULTIVATION MUST SOON BEGIN. WOULD LIKE YOU THEREFORE GIVE IMMEDIATE POSSESSION. CASES TOO NOT YET WITHDRAWN. HOPE DELAY NOT DUE NONPAYMENT AGREED AMOUNT. YOU KNOW THAT PAYMENT IS ASSURED. IF YOU HAVE ANY COMPLAINTS WOULD GLADLY INVESTIGATE. PLEASE WIRE REPLY.

GANDHI

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-C, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

41. LETTER TO DR. SYED MAHMUD

BORSAD,
May 4, 1931

DEAR DR. MAHMUD,

I was anxiously awaiting your letter. I am thankful you have absolved me from having to write to Mr. Hasan Imam. Of course I have been following your movements. I am not going to shower congratulations till I see some definite shape being given to the work. If it is to be lasting it must touch the masses. And you will not touch the masses until you fulfil two conditions:

1. Your programme must appeal to the Mussalman mass mind. It must therefore be in their interest.

2. You must have an army of workers to give effect to it.

Why do you say I have broken the contract? Have I spoken or written about the question anything in contravention of the contract? I could not very well reject Bhopal’s well intentioned advances. And after all he was to have sent for you all to discuss the possibilities. Since our meeting in Bombay, I have heard nothing from him. Nor have I

1 Vide “Notes” sub-title Sold Lands”, 7-5-1931
2 Vide “Letter to Dr. Syed Mahmud”, 19-4-1931 seen the Big Brother¹ save for half an hour in Bombay. Mrs. Naidu brought him and I greeted him as warmly as before. Beyond this I have done nothing save liberal praying even as I said to a newspaper reporter. Of course I saw the Mullaji too at his request. Did I do wrong?

Yes, the old widow’s² condition must be pathetic in spite of her bravery. I suppose you see her daily. Please give her my loving regards. Is Sarup³ there?

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

[PS.]
I may have to go to Simla about 11th instant.

From a photostat : G.N. 5080

42. LETTER TO TAN YUN-SHAN⁴

[AS AT] SABARMATI,
May 4, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

You must come again whenever you like.

My message to the Chinese students is : “Know that the deliverance of China is through ahimsa pure and unadulterated.”

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat : G.N. 9673; also The Sino-Indian Journal—Gandhi
Memorial Number, Vol. I, Part II, p. 37

¹ Shaukat Ali
² Motilal Nehru’s widow
³ Vijayalakshmi Pandit
⁴ The addressee had met Gandhiji at Bardoli and requested him to bless the Chinese students with a message. The message “was widely published in almost all the important Chinese Journals and was appreciated, not only by the students, but by the whole people”.

34 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
43. LETTER TO DALAI LAMA

[AS AT] SABARMATI,

May 4, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your gift. I am sorry I cannot understand your language. My desire and hope is that Tibetans should understand and follow the secret of the message of ahimsa given by Lord Buddha.

Your friend,

M. K. GANDHI

HIS HIGHNESS THE LAMA TIBET

From a photostat: G.N. 9674. Also C.W. 6208. Courtesy: Mirabehn

44. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

May 4, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

There will be one more burden on you. Jamnadas will tell you about Ratilal\(^1\). When he arrives there, lodge him in the bungalow. If he gets out of control, there will be no option but to put him in chains. Call in Dr. Kanuga and Dr. Haribhai. Pay them their fees and do as they advise. Dr. Haribhai may keep Ratilal in his own hospital or may get him admitted to the asylum, as he thinks best. It is possible that he will come round. All the same, it will be necessary to be careful about

---

1 Tan Yun-Shan had brought a letter from the 13th Dalai Lama of Tibet. It was written in Tibetan and no one could read it. Gandhiji said that he would acknowledge the message in Gujarati so that the Dalai Lama might enjoy it without understanding it. According to Mirabehn’s note this is an English rendering of the Gujarati original which is not available.

2 Son of Dr. Pranjivan Mehta, who had become demented him. See that no knife or other sharp instrument is within his reach at any time. If necessary, appoint some person to keep watch over him. It does not matter if you have to engage a person especially for that and pay him. I don’t wish that you should have to spend much of your time over this, but you have to accept the responsibility. Perhaps Ratilal may respond to love. If Champa¹ accompanies him, I don’t think she will be able to stay with him. If she comes, let her stay in the Ashram. But she may certainly stay with him if she herself has the courage to do so.

The second problem is about Lakshmi². She has been so brought up that she will not be happy if she is married to an Antyaja. Fortunately Maruti wishes to marry her. Read Lakshmidas’s letter and let me have your opinion. From a moral stand-point, the proposed step seems to me justified and even necessary. Even then I wish to have your independent opinion.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./I.

¹ Ratilal’s wife
² Dudhabhai’s daughter adopted by Gandhiji
45. LETTER TO KISANSINH CHAVDA

BORSAD,
May 4, 1931

BHAI KISANSINH,

I got your letter. I read no new argument in it. All the objections which you urge have been answered several times in Young India and Navajivan. All that I can do now is to discuss the question briefly with you if you come and see me some time. I cannot spare the time for this before the month of June. I would advise you meanwhile to think again over what I have been writing.

Vandemataram from

MOHANDAS

From a photostat of the Gujarati : C. W. 9295. Courtesy : Kisansinh Chavda

46. LETTER TO JAMNADAS GANDHI

May 4, 1931

CHI. JAMNADAS,

Arrange to deliver the accompanying two letters to the addressees. I have sent a long telegram to the Doctor and also written to him. Write to me regularly. It would be good if you write to the Doctor. I have mentioned you in my letter and telegram to him.

Write to me about Manu after ascertaining the facts. If you have seen Kelly, write to me about him too.

Blessings from

BAPU

From Gujarati : C.W. 9320. Courtesy : Jamnadas Gandhi
47 LETTER TO SHARDA C. SHAH

BORSAD,
May 4, 1931

CHI. SHARDA,

Can you expect my letter without writing me one yourself? Right now, all of you can write to me even if I do not write. Anandi is not here. What are your five classes and who teaches you?

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C.W. 9900. Courtesy: Shardabehn G. Chokhawala

48. LETTER TO GULAM RASUL QUERSHI

BORSAD,
May 4, 1931

CHI. QURESHI,

I have your letter. How did Imam Saheb’s health deteriorate so suddenly? Was there any change in food? At his age he should eat only a measured quantity of food however good his deception may be. Write to me daily.

Is Amina going on with her Urdu?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 10822. Courtesy: Gulam Rasul Qureshi

49. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

Silence Day, May 4, 1931

CHI. LILAVATI,

I have your letter. You are too sensitive. You should not be angry over what Gangabehn1 wrote. It is better she expresses herself instead of keeping her feelings bottled up. Understand her love and her service. You should continue to work patiently and remain quiet. Do not get into argument with anyone. Do not brood too much.

1Gangabehn Vaidya
Reflect over what you read and remain cheerful. Do keep writing to me.

_Blessings from_

_BAPU_

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

50. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

_BORSAD, May 4, 1931_

DEAR MR. EMERSON,

I have taken some time in getting a reply to the various charges about Bihar of which you were good enough to send me copies. I now send you Babu Rajendra Prasad’s summary of the enquiry that he caused to be made into all the allegations. I am not burdening you with the report itself. I would be pleased to send it to you if you would care to follow up the summary.

I send you also a copy of the complaints made by Babu Rajendra Prasad with reference to the implementing by the local government of the various clauses of the Settlement. Technically, about the lawyers, I know that the Government cannot be held responsible. But there are ways.

_Yours sincerely,_

H. W. EMERSON, ESQ.
HOME SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA
SIMLA

_[May 5, 1931]_

_[PS.]_ This was dictated yesterday. Today is my silence day. I have your kind letter of 2nd instant. By mistake the first Bihar statement was not given to my typist. I am therefore sending the original. Please return.

You have said ‘about 11th’ for my coming to Simla. 11th is a Monday. Will it be enough if I reach Simla on 13th instant? Please wire the latest date. I want to finish the Kaira affair so far as I am concerned, if it is at all possible. But, of course, I will interrupt the work if my early presence is necessary.

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-B, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library
51. LETTER TO FLORENCE ROSENBLATT

[AS AT] SABARMATI,
May 5, 1931

DEAR YOUNG FRIEND,

I have your good letter. You should possess your soul in patience. Whatever good you might have seen in my life you can adopt even being there and it would be as good as seeing me, indeed much better. What you can do effectively for India is to put in a good word whenever anybody talks uncharitably about India and her people and in order to be able to put in that good word with confidence, you have to find time to study the Indian struggle. You can then speak with authority.

Yours sincerely,

FLORENCE ROSENBLATT
BROOKLYN, NEW YORK (U.S.A.)

From a photostat : S.N. 17029

52. LETTER TO V. T. KRISHNAMACHARYA

BORSAD,
May 5, 1931

DEAR DIWAN SAHEB,

In Vijapur there is an industrial institution called Udyogalaya. I procured through the good office of your predecessor a plot of ground for founding a centre for spinning and weaving especially through women and it was registered in the name of a lady co-worker. She has now retired from that work and so far as she is concerned the legal right has been transferred to the trustees of the Satyagraha Ashram. One of the trustees is working in the Udyogalaya. He has tried to get the land transferred in the name of the trustees of the Satyagraha Ashram. After waiting a long time the officer concerned has rejected the application. He has given, so far as I am aware, no reasons for it. At one time it seemed that by giving an undertaking that the institution will have nothing to do with politics there would be no difficulty about the transfer. Then, I believe, there was a change of officer. Of course, from its very conception according to my own method of work like my activities in other Indian States, this institution has been kept out of politics altogether. It remained so during the last struggle. As you may be aware, the Baroda State has been receiving the help of the All-India Spinners’ Association for village reorganization through the spinning-wheel. The Vijapur activity is also a kindred activity. Could I trouble you to interest yourself in this matter and if you are satisfied about the facts presented by me, could you please order transfer of the land in the name of the above-mentioned trustees? At the present moment this land is given by the State for a nominal sum for benevolent purposes. But I would like to buy it right out if the State has no objection. It was offered before. I may add that we have buildings on this land which have cost over Rs. 12,000. Through the institution we are supporting several poor women of Vijapur by giving them spinning work and we are supporting a colony of weavers and carders. The institution engages in no other activity. I am sorry to have to trouble you over a matter which may appear to be trifling. But it is not so to me as a guardian of the several interests entrusted to my care.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

V. T. KRISHNAMACHARYA, ESQ.
DIWAN OF BARODA
BARODA

From a photostat : S.N. 17030

53. LETTER TO BOYD TUCKER

BORSAD,
May 5, 1931

MY DEAR BOYD,

I was delighted to have your letter and to find that you were having a little respite from the heat of India’s plains. Of course there is no truth in the rumoured visit to America. But as soon as the rumour went abroad, I got a peremptory cablegram signed by Mr. Page, Dr. Sherwood Eddy, Rev. Holmes, Dr. Ward and others warning me against going to America. They say emphatically that I would be exploited if I went there and that I would serve the cause better from a distance than by appearing in the midst of the people of America. All this, mind you, in the cablegram. And by this mail I have received a letter from an unknown American friend who, whilst appreciating my work and message, pleads with me not to go to America. I do feel exactly like these friends. Therefore even if I went to London and could spare a few weeks I should not care to go in the teeth of these warnings from friends whose opinion I respect. Would not yours coincide' with theirs after further reflection?

1 Vide also “Notes” sub-title A Cry in The Wilderness”, 14-5-1931

Now about London. There is no probability of my going there so long as the Hindu-Muslim problem remains unsolved. Even if I went there, whilst I should value your society, I do not know of the use I could make of your services. Andrews is already there and as you know he will take possession of me body and soul. I have a letter from him in which he takes my London visit for granted, has appointed himself as my chap-rasi, tells me where I should stay. There is again Henry Polak who was in my office in South Africa for years. Then there is Muriel Lester. Therefore if you went with me to London you would not go as Secretary. Then I must not forget Mira. She will of course be with me. But of course everything is premature. I felt that you should now all about the appointments should the visit come forth. I was glad you were with me in Karachi. I was only sorry that I was not able to have long chats with you. That you continually lost your things was certainly bad but that would be no disqualification for taking you with me. I could have much better use for you than to make you keeper of my belongings.

BOYD TUCKER, ESQ.
C/O POSTMASTER
SRINAGAR (KASHMIR)

From a photostat : S.N. 17031

54. LETTER TO RAJENDRA PRASAD

BORSAD,
May 5, 1931

DEAR RAJENDRABABU,

In order to save time I am dictating this letter. I have sent copy of your letter addressed to the Secretary, All-India Congress Committee, as also your two statements to the Government, and I expect to go to Simla next week where I shall discuss the Bihar affairs

1 The source has “Would you not coincide”.

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
together with the others. I shall therefore write to you after a visit to Simla. I hope you are keeping good health. How is Brijkishore Babu?

SYT. RAJENDRA PRASAD
SADAQUAT ASHRAM
DT. PATNA

From a photostat : S.N. 17032

55. LETTER TO C. F. ANDREWS

[AS AT] SABARMATI,
May 5, 1931

This is to write to you about Reginald Reynolds. His address is Turner’s Court, Benson, Near Oxford. He is disconsolate towards the Settlement. The engagement with the girl whom he was to marry is broken. His pecuniary condition is bad. My whole heart goes out to him. I do not think that my reply to his letter in Young India' has given him any satisfaction. I would like him to know that all is well and that the Settlement is not a surrender of principle. I would like you to go to him, argue out the matter with him and otherwise help him and draw him out of his seclusion. He is as good as gold and is very brave. Perhaps all that I have written to you is superfluous and that you have met him and had already known more about him than I have told you. But I could not restrain myself and you can sympathize with me having done such things much more often than I do. Gujarat still absorbs my attention to the exclusion of everything else. Implementing the Settlement in the teeth of official sullenness, unwillingness and even opposition is a very difficult business. It tries even my patience but I hope not to be baffled. The atmosphere is already somewhat clearer. I expect next week to go to Simla over this and other matters arising out of the Settlement as also over the Round Table Conference. We are no nearer Hindu-Muslim solution and till that barrier is removed there is no question of my going to London.

C. F. ANDREWS, ESQ.

From a photostat : S.N. 17033

1 Vide “An Englishman’s Dilemma”, 16-4-1931
56. LETTER TO NANIBEHN JHAVERI

BORSAD,
May 5, 1931

CHI. NANIBEHN1.

I got your letter. We should be satisfied if you somehow recover your health. Where is Gangabehn now? How is she?

You have selected a good number of books. Amritlal Maniar’s books are worth reading.

Pannalal may write to me again and again if his questions have not been satisfactorily answered.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 3112

57. LETTER TO MAHAVIR GIRI

May 5, 1931

CHI. MAHAVIR.

I got your letter. In writing, the case terminations should not be separated from the stem. The constituent parts of a compound phrase also should not be written separately. Hence, one should write, not charan kamal man2, but charankamalman. Do you write your daily diary? Are you learning the Gita by heart?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 6228

58. LETTER TO RAMDAS GANDHI

BORSAD,
May 5, 1931

CHI. RAMDAS.

I got your letter. You may by all means go to Almora. But you will get three hundred rupees only. Ask Manibhai to give the amount to you and debit it to my account. Show this letter to him. If, afterwards, you find the amount not enough, write to me. Do not

1 Wife of Pannalal Jhaveri, manager of the dairy in the Ashram
2 Literally, ‘at the lotus feet’ spend much on warm clothes. There also, it is not so cold in this season. Moreover, you will get some warm clothing even there. Some warm thing to cover yourself with will suffice. I may have to go to Simla next week.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original Mrs. Sumitra Kulkarni Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

59. MESSAGE TO PEOPLE OF BHUTAN

BORSAD,
May 5, 1931

I am glad to meet you. I hope the people of Bhutan will fully understand the message of truth and non-violence and act according to it.

The Bombay Chronicle, 6-5-1931

60. MESSAGE ON KHADI

BORSAD,
May 5, 1931

People ask me why I am khaddar-mad. There are seven lakhs of villages. A large number of these villages are living in a condition of semi-starvation. There is no employment for them for nearly six months in the year. It is necessary to find for them some supplementary occupation. We must give them an occupation they are used to. Such an occupation is hand-spinning. If hand-spinning is to be introduced in the villages, it is but natural that we should be expected to wear khaddar. Hence it is that I have become khaddar-mad.

The Bombay Chronicle, 6-5-1931

---

1 It was given in Hindi when the brother of the Kind of Bhutan presented Gandhiji with two small boxes of gold and silver and a few pieces of hand-woven cloth.

2 Given to an Indian film company first in Hindi and then in English
61. TELEGRAM TO FRAMROZE B. GARDA

BORSAD,
May 6, 1931

SARDAR FRAMROZE GARDA
NAVSARI
RECEIVED SURPRISING WIRE. DO I UNDERSTAND YOU REPUDIATE AGREEMENT. HAVE ASKED YOU NATURE HARASSMENT CONCRETE CASES.

GANDHI

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-C, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

62. TELEGRAM TO SIR COWASJI JEJANGIR

[May 6, 1931]

SIR COWASJI JEJANGIR
NEPEAN SEA ROAD
BOMBAY
SARDAR GARDA WIRES PRACTICALLY REPUDIATING AGREEMENT ON VAGUE CHARGES CONTINUING HARASSMENT. HAVE ASKED HIM GIVE SPECIFIC INSTANCES. PLOUGHING SEASON APPROACHING.

GANDHI

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-C, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

63. LETTER TO HARIBHAU UPADHYAYA

BORSAD,
May 6, 1931

BHAI HARIBHAU,

I get your letters. But I have not yet got your acknowledgement of the telegram I sent you." You should have sent one. The telegram only stated that I would not be able to wire to someone in Udaipur as I knew no one there, and suggested that Malaviyaji or Jamnalal might do so. You have written to Ram at any rate. That was good. I do not even know where Manilal is. I had addressed a telegram to him, to which there has been no reply.

1 In reply to the addressee’s telegram which read : “Sorry nothing can be done in the matter. Behaviour of people even after negotiations most harassing.”

2 Vide the preceding item

3 Vide “Letter to Haribhau Upadhyaya”, 2-5-1931
You are put in a difficult situation. It is possible that the State may pay no attention to your complaint. Though Trench\(^1\) will not be able to appreciate the letter which you have written to him, you did well in writing it. It will do no harm. If the people’s grievance has not been redressed you should, since you have accepted their leadership, cross the border and court imprisonment. If the peasants remain truly non-violent, they are bound to win. Of course the question will remain how far non-violence can be observed in taking possession of land. What will the people do when the State police come to dispossess them of the land? Will they oppose them? Will they remain there squatting? Several questions arise here. I have found that the non-violence observed in such cases is merely physical. Do what you think right in the light of the circumstances prevailing there, no matter if what you believe to be non-violence appears to me violence. We can do nothing more than act sincerely according to our lights. If everything was as clear to me as daylight I would not have thrown on you the responsibility for deciding. From what is happening in the States, for similar things are happening in the other Indian States too and in British India, it seems to me that the effect of all that happened during the last struggle was only temporary and not enduring. That experiment in non-violence was on a mass scale, but it was not, or did not remain uniformly pure in quality. Our non-violence was the non-violence of the helpless. I do not feel unhappy about this. Nothing more than that was possible. The foregoing criticism has no other aim but to help us to understand the real facts about the nature of the struggle.

I understand what you say about Tyagbhumi and also about advertisements. Do what is possible.

Ramnarayan ought to go somewhere and take complete rest. See that he gives up work. Perhaps he will have fewer difficulties if he goes to Almora. Wherever he goes he may be sure that he will get some opportunity for service.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Immediately after the morning prayer.

From Gujarati: C.W. 6073. Curtesy: Haribhau Upadhyaya

\(^1\) Revenue Commissioner of Udaipur State
64. LETTER TO ABBAS TYABJI

BORSAD,

May 6, 1931

MY DEAR BHRRR¹,

I have not received your letter sent to the Vidyapith. I suppose it will come to me in due course. I am delighted that you have had a successful operation. I hope this will be the last. How long will they keep you in the hospital? I am in BORSAD up to Monday at least. I might then have to go to Simla.

I have now got your Vidyapith letter. I am writing to the Gaikwar. I wonder if it will be too late. I must not go to Baroda just yet.

Yours,

BAPU

SJT. ABBAS TYABJI
K.E.M. HOSPITAL
BOMBAY

From a photostat: S.N. 9575

65. LETTER TO YOUSUF HUSSAIN

[AS AT] SABARMATI,

May 6, 1931

DEAR YOUNG FRIEND,

I was delighted to receive your letter of 10th March. You will forgive me for not having acknowledged it earlier. I have been so busy and constantly on the move. Young students can certainly do a great deal for the country. First of all they can wear khadi and thus support the poor people who spin and weave in their own homes. They can also do hand-spinning and carding themselves. They will thus add to national wealth and, when they have finished their studies, become competent village workers. Young students can also promote goodwill between the two communities by making friends with one another and doing all kinds of mutual service and, at times of tension,

¹ A form of greeting used between Gandhiji and the addressee whenever they met or wrote to each other risking even their lives in serving and saving those who may be in danger.

Yours sincerely,

YOUSUF HUSSAIN, ESQ.
MUSLIM UNIVERSITY
ALIGARH

From a microfilm. S.N. 17035

66. LETTER TO H. HARcourt

[AS AT] SABARMATI,
May 6, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter. You will forgive me for sending you a belated reply but I was helpless. I am not able to say that the Round Table Conference has established lasting goodwill between the two nations. But it can do a great deal of good if the representatives of both the nations are determined to come to an agreement. I am quite aware and I am thankful that I have a very large circle of unknown friends in the British Isles.

Yours sincerely,

H. HARcourt, ESQ.
LONDON S.E. 19

From a photostat : S.N. 17036

67. LETTER TO C. RAJAGOPALACHARI

[AS AT] SABARMATI,
May 6, 1931

Here is a letter from Chinnapavu of Coimbatore. He refers to you in his letter. Please tell me all about him and his activity. I would like you to deal with this letter by writing to him. Can it be true what he says about the treatment of Adi-Dravidas in Singanallur?

Encl. 1

SJT. C. RAJAGOPALACHARI
TIRUCHENGOudu (S. INDIA)

From a photostat : S.N. 17037
68. LETTER TO H. RUNHAM BROWN

[AS AT] SABARMATI,

May 6, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter of 4th February. You will excuse me for not acknowledging it earlier. It was practically impossible to do so. I think that Prof. Einstein’s suggestion is sound. And if it is right for those who do not believe in war to refuse war service, it follows that they are entitled at least to the sympathy of war resisters even if the latter are too weak to follow the example of those who suffer for their conscience’s sake.

Yours sincerely,

H. RUNHAM BROWN, ESQ.
11 ABBEY ROAD, ENFIELD
MIDDLESEX, (ENGLAND)

From a photostat : S.N. 17038

69. LETTER TO KHAN CHAND DEV

[AS AT] SABARMATI,

May 6, 1931

DEAR LALA KHAN CHAND,

I have your letter. I am in correspondence with the Government in all these matters and I am likely to go to Simla to discuss every one of them. At the present moment, therefore, I can only advise you to keep me informed of what is going on there. I would advise you also not to start picketing and even stop picketing if absolute peacefulness cannot be ensured. There should be no rowdyism. I do not now what truth there is in the Punjab Governor’s charge that there has been wild speaking. Are you able to control the Punjab Press? I know that there is often violent writing. I would not like anybody connected with the Congress to speak or write violently. Our case is weakened by such writing or speaking.

Yours sincerely,

LALA KHAN CHAND DEV
PUNJAB PROVINCIAL CONGRESS COMMITTEE
BRADLAUGH HALL, LAHORE

From a microfilm : S.N. 17039

50 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
70. LETTER TO GULZARI LAL NANDA

BORSAD,
May 6, 1931

MY DEAR GULZARI LAL,

You should firmly tell Mr. Gidney that there is absolutely no coercion used. But you have the right of fixing conditions of membership. What the Settlement requires is that picketing shall be absolutely peaceful, which it admittedly is. And in no case can the Government connive at direct breaches of liquor laws. I am likely to have to go to Simla next week in connection with the breaches of the Settlement alleged to have taken place on the part of the Government as well as of the people. Please therefore give me all the particulars. I have got the sections you have sent me.

SJT. GULZARI LAL NANDA
TEXTILE LABOUR ASSOCIATION LABOUR OFFICE
LAL DARWAZA, AHMEDABAD

From a microfilm : S.N. 17040

71. LETTER TO KONDA VENKATAPPAYYA

[AS AT] SABARMATI,
May 6, 1931

MY DEAR VENKATAPPAYYA,

Please read the enclosed. Tell me all you know about Needu1 or enquire and let me know. Is he responsible for all this misfortune himself? I am anxious to help him if only for the memory of Anna-purna2. But you have to guide me.

Encls. 2

SJT. KONDA VENKATAPPAYYA
GUNTUR (MADRAS PRESIDENCY)

From a microfilm : S.N. 17041

---

1 Maganti Bapi Needu; vide the following item.
2 Needu's wife who had died in 1927; vide “A Good Servant Fone”, 27-10-1927
MY DEAR NEEDU,

My whole heart goes out to you in your trouble though, if you will take it calmly and correctly it will be your making. It is not prosperity but adversity that makes a man. Prosperity spoils him. And after all, if you belong to the starving group, you are one of the many millions. But I know that this philosophy, however correct it is, will bring you no solace. Before therefore I can make a concrete suggestion, you must let me know what your minimum requirements are, and in fixing this, do not think of what you have been materially but think of what you should be.

In fact in doing this you will have to be courageous and even apparently heartless. You are telling me you have to support your own people and Annapurna’s. This is absurd. You have to support those who may be physically maimed and therefore incapable of doing anything for themselves. You have no such in either family. Nor must they be pampered. They must all, men and women, work for their living and if they will do so, you will find that the problem is satisfactorily and honourably solved. Now you know what I want from you. Give me a letter full of particulars and it shall receive prompt attention.

Yours,

BAPU

SJT. MAGANTI BAPI NEEDU
ELLORE (WEST GODAVARY DT.)
MADRAS PRESIDENCY

From a photostat : G.N. 8826; also S.N. 17042
73. LETTER TO K. KELAPPAN NAIR

[AS AT] SABARMATI,
May 6, 1931

MY DEAR KELAPPAN,

I have your letter. Please continue to send me full report of whatever irregularities you may notice. I might have to go to Simla to discuss all these things. Meanwhile you must use all the tact you are capable of using.

Yours sincerely,

SJT. K. KELAPPAN NAIR
KERALA PROVINCIAL CONGRESS COMMITTEE
MATHRUBHUMI BUILDINGS
CALICUT

From a microfilm : S.N. 17043

74. SPEECH AT BOCHASAN

May 6, 1931

I thank you all for giving me the honour of laying the foundation of this Vidyalaya. This institution has been named “Vallabh Vidyalaya” and hence it has become the duty of all—the present and future managers of the Vidyalaya and those who will receive education here—to imbibe Vallabhbhai’s virtues and to teach others to do the same. Vallabhbhai is an embodiment of sacrifice; Vallabh-bhai is synonymous with courage; Vallabhbhai stands for heroism, for removal of distinctions between high and low. Vallabh-bhai does not regard Patidars as high and the others as low because they are Bhangis, Baraias and Patanwadias.¹ To disprove these distinctions, the laying of the foundation has been entrusted to me.

Bhai Narahari has stated in his speech that for the most part the children of Dharala Thakores, and Patanwadias will receive education in this Vallabh Vidyalaya. I put aside my work and came here only to meet the Dharala Thakores. Ever since I made your acquaintance, I have recognized you as Thakores [leaders]. Those brothers among you who attended the mammoth meeting at Vadtal² will remember that I had described you all as Dharala Thakores. Just as Kaliparaj became Raniparaj, the Dharalas became known as Thakores. You have only benefited from the great struggle, even though some of you purchased the lands of others, proved faithless to the people, and vacillated. But, can one forget the fact that in Bochasan the Baraia brethren are with the people? That way, no one can claim that the Patidars are a hundred per cent on the side of the people. If all Muslim brothers here did not stand by the people, they have done so in other parts of the country.

¹ Names of certain backward communities in Gujarat
² Vide “Speech at Public Meeting, Vadtal”, 19-1-1921

There is element of compulsion or force in our struggle, it is a voluntary fight. Hereafter whenever we have to fight, all will join in. I wish the temporary Truce with the Government to become permanent. Let the Truce end in our winning complete swaraj. Complete swaraj means a government in which we can run our own administration. If the dream entertained by Sardar Vallabhbhai, my many comrades and myself comes true, then that government will belong to the Patidars, the Dharala Thakores and the Bhangis also. It will belong to the Muslim brethren too. That government will not belong to any one community, but to all the men and women, boys and girls, of India. That alone is to be called complete swaraj. A government other than this is no government. None should hope that the government should be his and not of the Muslims and the Bhangis. That will indeed be the government of the thirty crores of people of India. If all of them do not receive a fair deal, that will not constitute swaraj at all. Therefore the Vidyapith thought that the job would be only half done if they did not serve the backward classes. Dharala Thakore brethren come to see me. They cannot even sign their names. But I do not care if they do not know how to sign their names, they should know what is swaraj. You ought to know what our duty to the people is, why we should spin, why we should wear only khadi and why we should not wear cloth made even by mills in our country. What a sad and shameful thing it is if you do not know all this! If you do not know this, how can our administration run? The Dharala Thakores, the Bhangis and all other communities can participate in our administration. It is for this that Shamalbhai is here. You may say that the Patidars have exploited you to the uttermost limit. Perhaps there may be some truth in it. There may not be unity between the Patidars and the Dharala Thakores in all matters. But an organization of youths has arisen from among the Patidars themselves which has deemed it its duty to serve you. They believe in serving others first and themselves afterwards.

---

1 A Scheduled Tribe in Gujarat

You few Dharala Thakore brothers who have come here, please carry my message to everyone in his home. The Patidars and we are not adversaries. If you have considered them as your enemies, forget it. The Patidars and the Dharalas are both brothers. Only just now I was introduced to a brother who had presented yarn to me. He used to drink liquor and even offer it to others—but he has given it up and is making others follow suit. Everyone ought at any rate to give up liquor and also thiev-ing and looting. Have you ever seen a thief becoming a millionaire? None has become a rich man through theft. And even if anyone has done so, ultimately he has remained a beggar only. One cannot, like the merchant, become a millionaire through theft. Nothing is to be gained through theft, looting, violence, etc. But if we want to live in this world cleanly and thus present ourselves at God’s court, take it for certain that our hands, legs, eyes, ears and hearts ought to be pure. Else we would not be fit to remain in His court. In order to make all this possible, the Vallabh Vidyalaya has been established. It is my hope that Shamalbhai will complain to me that there are so many children of the Patanwadias and Dharala Thakores that the school is too small to accommodate them. In this Vidyalaya, those who have no money are going to be fed and clothed. But none should take wrong advantage of it. It is my desire that those who have money should study even by paying fees and there will come a time when I shall have to say that I shall set up as many schools as you require. You may know that we have a plentiful supply of teachers and we shall get them from anywhere. We shall teach boys and by and by even girls. But all that depends on the extent to which you give encouragement to the Vallabh Vidyalaya.

You have asked for my blessings. Them you certainly have. But you have them on the condition that you impart lustre to this Vidyalaya and its name. The Patidars also should benefit by it and should disgrace neither the Vallabh Vidyalaya nor my name. I do not care for the sort of Vidyalaya which may prove a millstone round my neck and be a burden to me. Education liberates us, frees us from bondage, helps us to shine, adds to the country’s wealth, enriches character; our boys and girls become smart and intelligent thereby. This Vidyalaya has been established with this end in view. May this end be realized. I express gratitude to all those who have given donations for this Vidyalaya and have offered lime, labour and other types of help. What we build with our own money will shine forth better than what we do with money got from the rich men of Bombay.

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan, 10-5-1931

75. INTERVIEW TO THE PRESS

BORSAD,
May 6, 1931

Interviewed by the Associated Press correspondent regarding the resolution passed by the Manchester Royal Exchange, Mahatma Gandhi said:

The resolution of the Manchester Royal Exchange is partly based on misapprehension. There is no hostility towards Britain in the present movement but, on the contrary, the Congressmen are trying against heavy odds to promote goodwill as far as it is possible under the present circumstances. It is not sufficiently realized what tremendous step the Congress had taken in lifting boycott of British goods.

The boycott of foreign cloth should not be mixed up with British goods. It is a misnomer to call boycott of foreign cloth as boycott. That name therefore has been intentionally omitted from the Delhi Settlement. I use the word boycott even for the exclusion of foreign cloth because it has become a current popular expression. Nobody, however, mistakes its purpose. The exclusion of foreign cloth does produce political consequences but it is a predominantly economic and social proposition and an economic necessity for the semi-starved millions. Instead therefore of agitating against the permanent movement of economic uplift, if the leading men in Lancashire will find out ways and means of disposing of their manufactures in other countries where they are wanted, they will save much time and really promote goodwill between the two countries.

I regard the attempt to suppress peaceful picketing as fruitless. Surely Lord Irwin did not accept peaceful picketing of foreign cloth and liquor shops without sound reasons and anyone who studies this question as patiently as he did cannot but come to the same conclusion as Lord Irwin.

The Hindustan Times, 8-5-1931
To sell a farmer’s land and that for a song is vivisection. The sale of forfeited lands in Gujarat was such an operation. The clause in the Settlement about these lands was for Sardar Vallabhbhai the biggest bite to swallow. But he swallowed it because ultimately he shared my faith that the lands could not long be withheld by the buyers from the original owners and in any case they were bound to be restored when the full settlement was attained. It must be said to the credit of the buyers that they are one by one realizing the necessity of restoring the lands they made the mistake of buying. The reader already knows how through the kind intervention of Sir Cowasji Jehangir, Syts. Nariman, Vimadalal and Modi, Sardar Garda has agreed to restore to the original holders the lands bought by him in Bardoli Taluka and how Syt. Cowasji of Kukadbeda and Thakur Khumansing of BORSAD have returned lands bought by them without asking for a refund of money paid by them. The latest instances are those of Sheth Virchand in Bardoli and Thakore of Dehvan in BORSAD. The Thakore would not think of having even the price paid by him returned to him. He had paid Rs. 1,200 for nearly 120 acres of good land. Three poor Dharalas too returned eleven acres which they had bought for Rs. 48 stating in their letter addressed to me that they were sorry that being poor they had to ask for the refund of the actual amount paid by them although they recognized that they should not ask for it. It reflects credit on all these buyers for their having patriotically returned the lands. I say patriotically for there was no pressure save that of silent public opinion brought to bear upon these buyers. Their friends certainly approached them but there was no threat or coercion employed by anybody. Healthy public opinion has an influence of which we have not realized the full significance. But we are not yet out of the wood. There are yet tough buyers who have not come forward. But I have little doubt that if the workers don’t lose patience and the Settlement does not otherwise break down, they will also respond to the influence of that opinion. Public opinion becomes intolerable when it becomes violent and aggressive.

I am happy to be able to inform the reader that otherwise too the things in Gujarat seem to be moving, though very slowly, towards a settlement. How we are implementing the Truce in Gujarat

1 A similar note also appeared in Navajivan, 3-5-1931 on behalf of the Congress is partly told by Mahadev Desai in his weekly letter.¹

At this juncture, it is necessary for me to add that it is not dharma for a satyagrahi to harass anyone. He should wish well even to those who hate him. Sardar Garda is afraid that the farmers may harass him. He was even complaining of harassment. I have told him that I would look into the matter if he sent me the details of any specific complaint, and I have also assured him that no satyagrahi will harass him. I have no doubt that the farmers will fully honour this assurance which I have given on their behalf. If we wish to win swaraj without delay, it is our dharma to live amicably with everyone and win everyone’s heart. It should not be forgotten that this includes the official class as well.

POLICE TYRANNY

A correspondent asks: “Do you advise taking legal proceedings against the police or other officials for their lawlessness during the struggle?”

Whilst this is provided for in the Settlement, I cannot advise such proceedings except where the lawlessness persists in some shape or other and where it is possible to produce conclusive evidence of the past lawlessness. But generally speaking, we must, in view of the Settlement try to bury the dead past and hope and work for a lasting settlement.

IN THE NAME OF ‘CASHMERE’

Sjt. Kotak of the A. I. S. A., Kashmir, writes:²

People have by now begun to know real khadi from the base imitation. Fine woollen things come only from Kashmir, and so it has become the fashion nowadays to palm off foreign woollens as cashmere, i.e., fabrics hand-spun and hand-woven in Kashmir.

Can you not do anything to stop this fraud?

Let those who go in for fine wollens and silks take note of the warning. One moral is to trace every article to its source. This can only be done by confining one’s sales to things manufactured in one’s own neighbourhood. But this is not always possible. The next thing therefore is to buy from certified stores or from those whose managers are personally known to us. Swadeshi dharma like every other dharma is difficult to observe. Lovers of swadeshi must never therefore mind the trouble of knowing the history of every piece of cloth and for that matter every article they use. While khadi is both the centre and the circumstance of swadeshi, there is much else to fill in the intervening spaces. A person who, using khadi, gives himself or herself the license to buy everything else foreign does not know the spirit behind khadi and discredits it.

¹ The paragraph that follows is from Navajivan.
² Only extracts are reproduced here.

Young India, 7-5-1931, and Navajivan, 3-5-1931

77. POWER OF AHIMSA

A correspondent writes a Gujarati letter of which the following is a translation:

If I have anywhere referred to India having received the fullest support from world opinion, it should be set down as an unconscious exaggeration. I should like to be shown such a statement of mine if I have made one. For myself I have absolutely no idea of having made any such statement.

The correspondent, by comparing the condition of unarmed India pitted against the British military power to that of a defenceless woman thrown at the tender mercy of a ruffian, has done an injustice to the strength as well of non-violence as of woman. Had not man in his blind selfishness crushed woman’s soul as he has done or had she not succumbed to ‘the enjoyments’ she would have given the world an exhibition of the infinite strength that is latent in her. What she showed in the last fight was but a broken and imperfect glimpse of it. The world shall see it in all its wonder and glory when woman has secured a equal opportunity for herself with man and fully developed her powers of mutual aid and combination.

And it is wrong to say that a person is unarmed in the sense of being weak who has ahimsa as his weapon. The correspondent is evidently a stranger to the real use or the immeasurable power of ahimsa. He has used it, if at all, only mechanically and as an expedience for want of a better. Had he been saturated with the spirit of ahimsa, he would have known that it can tame the wildest beast, certainly the wildest man.

If, therefore, the world’s blood did not boil over the brutalities

---

1 A similar article also appeared in Navajivan, 3-5-1931 under the heading “Why Did Not Their Blood Boil?”
2 Not reproduced here
of the past year, it was not because the world was brutal or heartless but because our non-violence, widespread through it was, good enough though it was for the purpose intended, was not the non-violence of the strong and the knowing. It did not spring from a living faith. It was but a policy, a temporary expedient. Though we did not retaliate, we had harboured anger, our speech was not free from violence, our thoughts still less so. We generally refrained from violent action, because we were under discipline. The world marvelled even at this limited exhibition of non-violence and gave us, without any propaganda, the support and sympathy that we deserved and needed. The rest is a matter of the rule of three. If we had the support that we received for the limited and mechanical non-violence we were able to practise during the recent struggle, how much more support should we command when we have risen to the full height of ahimsa? Then the world’s blood will certainly boil. I know we are still far away from that divine event. We realized our weakness at Cawnpore, Benares, Mirzapur. When we are saturated with ahimsa we shall not be non-violent in our fight with the bureaucracy and violent among ourselves. When we have a living faith in non-violence, it will grow from day to day till it fills the whole world. It will be the mightiest propaganda that the world will have witnessed. I live in the belief that we will realize that vital ahimsa.

Young India, 7-5-1931

78. DANGERS OF DEMOCRACY

There is no human institution but has its dangers. The greater the institution the greater the chances of abuse. Democracy is a great institution and therefore it is liable to be greatly abused. The remedy therefore is not avoidance of democracy but reduction of possibility of abuse to a minimum.

The Congress has become a vast democratic body. It reached a high water-mark during the past twelve months. Without being technically on the register millions took possession of it and added lustre to it. But goondaism also entered the Congress to a much larger extent than hitherto. It was inevitable. The ordinary rules prescribed for the selection of volunteers were practically set aside during the last

1 Navajivan, 3-5-1931; also published an article on the same subject, under the title “A House Divided Cannot Stand”.

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
stage of the struggle. The result has been that in some places goondai dasm has made itself felt. Some Congressmen have even been threatened with disaster if they will not give the money demanded of them. Of course, professional goondas may also take advantage of the atmosphere and ply their trade.

The wonder is that the cases I have in mind are so very few compared to what they might have been, regard being had to the great mass awakening. My conviction is that this happy state is due to the Congress creed of non-violence, even though we have but crudely followed it. But there has been sufficient expression of goon-dasm to warn us to take time by the forelock and adopt preventive and precautionary measures.

The measures that suggest themselves to me are naturally and certainly a scientific and more intelligent and disciplined application of non-violence. In the first place if we had a firmer faith in nonviolence than we have shown not one man or woman who did not strictly conform to the rules regarding the admission of volunteers would have been taken. It would be no answer to say that in that case there would have been no volunteers during the final stage and therefore there would have been a perfect failure. My experience teaches me to the contrary. It is possible to fight a non-violent battle even with one satyagrahi. But it, i.e., a non-violent battle, cannot be fought with a million non-satyagrahis. And I would welcome even an utter failure with non-violence unimpaired rather than depart from it by a hair’s breadth to achieve a doubtful success. Without adopting a non-compromising attitude so far as non-violence is concerned, I can see nothing but disaster in the end. For, at the critical moment we may be found wanting, weighed in the scales of non-violence, and may be found hopelessly unprepared to meet the forces of disorder that might suddenly be arrayed against us.

But having made the mistake of indiscriminate recruiting how are we to repair the mischief in a non-violent way? Non-violence means courage of the highest order and therefore readiness to suffer.
There should therefore be no yielding to bullying, bluff or worse, even though it may mean the loss of a few precious lives. Writers of threatening letters should be made to realize that their threats will not be listened to. But at the same time their disease must be diagnosed and properly treated. Even the goondas are part of us and therefore they must be handled gently and sympathetically. People generally do not take to goondaiism for the love of it. It is a symptom of a deeper-seated disease in the body politic. The same law should govern our relations with internal goondaism that we apply in our relations with the goondaism in the system of government. And if we have felt that we have the ability to deal with that highly organized goondaism in a non-violent manner, how much more should we feel the ability to deal with internal goondaism by the same method?

It follows that we may not seek police assistance to deal with the disease although it is open, during the Truce, to any Congress-man to seek it precisely in the same manner as any other citizen. The way I have suggested is the way of reform, conversion, love. Seeking police assistance is the way of punishment, fear, want of affection if not actual disaffection. The two methods therefore cannot run together. The way of reform appears at some stage or other to be difficult but it is in reality the easiest.

Young India, 7-5-1931

79. FOR ‘FOLLOWERS’

A friend sends me the following:

It will be very helpful if you will kindly guide your followers about their conduct when they to engage in a political controversy. Your guidance on the following points is particularly needed:

(a) Vilification so as to lower the opponent in public estimation.
(b) Kind of criticism of the opponent permissible.
(c) Limit to which hostility should be carried.
(d) Whether effort should be made to gain office and power.

I have said before in these pages that I claim no followers. It is enough for me to be my own follower. It is by itself a sufficiently taxing performance. But I know that many claim to be my followers. I must therefore answer the questions for their sakes. If they will follow what I endeavour to stand for rather than me they will see that the following answers are derived from truth and ahimsa.

(a) Vilification of an opponent there can never be. But this does not exclude a truthful characterization of his acts. An opponent is not always a bad man because he opposes. He may be as honourable as we may claim to be and yet there may be vital differences between him and us.

(b) Our criticism will therefore be if we believe him to be guilty of untruth to meet it with truth, of discourtesy with courtesy, of bullying with calm courage, of violence with suffering, of arrogance with humility, of evil with good. ‘My follower’ would see not to condemn but to convert.

(c) There is no question of any limit to which hostility may be carried. For there should be no hostility to persons. Hostility there must be to acts when they are subversive of morals or the good of society.

(d) Office and power must be avoided. Either may be accepted when it is clearly for greater service.

Young India, 7-5-1931

80. FOREIGN MISSIONARIES AGAIN

DEAR MAHATMA,

. . . A friend of mine gave me a copy of the Madras Catholic Leader of the 26th March, and it is there that you are reported to have given expression to the . . . remarks. . . . “Every nation’s religion is as good as any other. Certainly India’s religions are adequate for her people. We need no converting spiritually.”

I am a Christian, but I certainly am against Christianity being brought as an instrument of Imperialism. But as a message of love and fellowship, who will deny it a place in Indian life? In this great struggle for swaraj, are we not fighting for liberty, liberty to worship our God as we please, liberty to convince our fellows who are willing to be convinced by us, liberty to be convinced by our fellows who can convince us? . . . Is India so bigoted as to think that within her are confined all the riches of the world, all the treasures of knowledge and human experience? . . .

Religion, I deem, is a matter between an individual and his own conception of right conduct. Religion belongs to the great realm of thought and personal experience which knows neither boundaries nor nations. . . . But I would like to know, if you made those remarks, what you meant by them, or I confess they are a mystery to me.

ST. XAVIER’S
NUWARA ELIYA, CEYLON
11th April, 1931

I remain,

Yours respectfully,

JAMES P. RUTNAM

I do not know that in reply to this letter I need do more than refer the writer to my article in Young India. It might be as well to add that in mentioning Hinduism, Islam, Zoroastrianism, etc., as India’s religions, I had no desire to claim them as India’s exclusively

1 Of which only excerpts have been reproduced here.

2 Vide “Foreign Missionaries”, 23-4-1931 or to exclude Christianity. The issue was Christianity on the one hand claimed as the one true religion and other religions on the other being regarded as false. In joining issue I contended that the great world religions other than Christianity professed in India were no less true than Christianity. It was thus neither relevant nor necessary for me to assert before Christian missionaries and their protagonists that Christianity was true. Moreover, with my known partiality for the Sermon on the Mount and my repeated declarations that its author was one of the greatest among the teachers of mankind I could not suspect that there would be any charge against me of underrating Christianity. As for Christian, Indians, I count among them many warm friends and I have had no difficulty whatsoever in establishing friendly touch with the Christian masses wherever I have gone. Nor is there any fear of my estranging even the foreign missionaries among whom I claim many personal friends. The attack against me has therefore surprised me not a little especially because the views I have now enunciated have been held by me since 1916, and were deliberately expressed in a carefully written address read before a purely missionary audience in Madras and since repeated on many a Christian platform. The recent criticism has but confirmed the view, for the criticism has betrayed intolerance even of friendly criticism. The missionaries know that in spite of my outspoken criticism of their methods, they have in India and among non-christians no warmer friend than I. And I suggest to my critics that there must be something wrong about their method or, if they prefer, themselves when they will not brook sincere expression of an opinion different from theirs. In India under swaraj I have no doubt that foreign missionaries will be at liberty to do their proselytizing, as I would say, in the wrong way; but they would be expected to bear with those who, like me, may point out that in their opinion the way is wrong.

Young India, 7-5-1931
81. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

[AS AT] SABARMATI,
May 7, 1931

DEAR MR. EMERSON,

I thank you for your letter of the 30th.¹ I can fully understand what Sir Malcolm Hailey says and nothing would please me better than to find that my visit to him is rendered unnecessary by the cultivators getting the relief which they need.

I thank you too for your enquiry about my health. There is now nothing wrong with it. I still need some rest which I am taking as far as possible in the circumstances.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

H. W. EMERSON, ESQ.
HOME SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA
SIMLA

Home Department, Political, File No. 33/XI & K.Ws 1931 p. 170. Courtesy : National Archives of India

82. LETTER TO R. M. MAXWELL

[AS AT] SABARMATI,
May 7, 1931

DEAR MR. MAXWELL,

I thank you for your letter of the 4th instant. I shall await your further letter. May I however remind you that your receipt of a copy of the revised notice referred to in your letter will only enable His Excellency to deal with one matter whereas my original letter² covers several matters out of which unlicensed liquor selling is becoming more and more urgent daily because it seems to be increasing. His Excellency will perhaps agree that this is a manifest breach of the Settlement.

There is one other matter which I wish to add. There is the

¹ Vide “Letter from H. W. Emerson”, 30-4-1931
² Vide “Letter to R. M. Maxwell”, 22-4-1931
Young India press¹ still undelivered. The district officer suggests that the Manager should himself remove the press from where it is lying, I believe, in Bombay and a portion in Ahmedabad. The district officer in Kaira suggests a like procedure for a motor and a bicycle lying somewhere in Kaira. Cl. 16(a) of the Settlement clearly contemplates the return of movable property seized in connection with the movement. It does not say that the seized property is to be taken on application by the person but it is to be returned, and if it is not irrelevant to mention it here, I may inform you that the word ‘returned’ was chosen after discussion. I may also add that, whilst I do not know anything about the condition of the Young India press and other seized property, I do know that the motor-car, and the bicycle seized in Kaira are admittedly in a broken-up condition. It is also common ground that, when they were seized, they were in good order and condition. The district officer in Kaira in reply to my letter in connection with these articles says as follows in his letter:

Reference the delivery of a motor-car and cycle. Government have issued orders that ordinarily the owner of property attached under the ordinance should be asked to remove the property from the place where it is and that Government cannot undertake to undergo expenditure in restoring it. I have no funds to which I could debit the cost of towing the car—I understand it is not in running order—to Nadiad. I shall be in Kaira tomorrow morning and suggest that the owner should have it removed from my office there. If he thinks he has a right to recover from Government the cost of removal and reconditioning, he should send in his bill to Government and no doubt Government will call for a full report on the whole circumstances, and the matter can be thrashed out, but at present there is a which statemate results in the car still suffering depreciatin.

I venture to suggest that these articles should be returned in the same condition in which they were at the time of seizure. I do not know that the officials of the Government had any authority or right to use these articles. But even if they had and if they broke them, at the time of return they should be in good order and condition. I would like the Government to give these two matters prompt attention. Unlicensed liquor is causing daily havoc amongst those who are gradually being weaned from the drink habit and the detention of the seized articles which are of daily use is causing a loss and inconvenience to the owners.\textsuperscript{1}

¹ Which had been forfeited during the Civil Disobedience Movement of 1930 for non-payment of security under an ordinance of 27th April, reviving the powers of the Press Act of 1910. Vide also “Letter to H. W. Emerson”, 2-6-1931.

\textit{Yours sincerely,}

R. M. MAXWELL, ESQ.
PRIVATE SECRETARY TO H.E. THE GOVERNOR OF BOMBAY
MAHABALESHWAR

83. LETTER TO G. V. KETKAR \textsuperscript{2}

[AS AT] SABARMATI,

May 7, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. In order to enable me to give a decisive opinion I should certainly like to have Shankar Rao’s version also. But subject to that reservation I have no hesitation in agreeing with you that all parties should be represented on Congress Committees by agreement or there should be an open honest election without any \textsuperscript{1} In his reply dated May 13, Maxwell stated : “You have suggested that the word “returned” in clause 16(a) of the Agreement should be interpreted to mean “taken back to the place where the property was seized”. In the absence, however, of any such explanation in the terms of the Settlement itself, the Government are unable to attach to the word in question any but its ordinary meaning, viz., “given back”, and, while they are ready at any time to carry out the agreement in this sense, they do not feel justified in throwing on the taxpayers the expense of transporting the articles from the places where they now are. I am to say that your further contention that the Government are responsible for delivering such articles in the same condition in which they were seized, does not appear to be warranted by anything in the terms of the Settlement. On the contrary clause 16(c) of the Settlement expressly says that “compensation will not be given for deterioration”. I am to add that under section 4(3) of Ordinance IX of 1930 even property seized but not forfeited may be used in such manner as the Magistrate may direct. The motor-car and cycle now in question were, however, actually forfeited and had they been sold or destroyed, the original owners would have had no further claim to them, since clause 16(a) of the Settlement agrees to the return of seized moveable property only if it is still in the possession of Government. I am therefore to express the hope that you will now make arrangements to take delivery of these forfeited articles without more delay, since it will not be possible for Government to be responsible for their custody indefinitely if those interested do not choose to avail themselves of clause 16(a) of the Settlement.

\textsuperscript{2} Grandson (daughter’s son) of Lokamanya Tilak wire-pulling. You should show your letter and my reply to Shankar Rao and let him say whatever he likes in opposition to my opinion if he wants to oppose it. I would like to see the happy relation established in Maharashtra between the two parties not only to continue unbroken but to grow in strength.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

SRI G. V. KETKAR
THE KESARI AND THE MAHRATTA OFFICE
568 NARAYAN PETH
POONA CITY

From a photostat : G.N. 7962. Also C.W. 981. Courtesy : G.V. Ketkar

84. LETTER TO KHAN CHAND DEV

[AS AT] SABARMATI,
May 7, 1931

DEAR LALA KHAN CHAND,

Here is copy of a complaint received by me from the Central Government. Will you please make a detailed enquiry and let me know the result as early as you can?

Yours sincerely,

Encl. 1

LALA KHAN CHAND DEV
BRADLAUGH HALL, LAHORE

From a microfilm : S.N. 17058

85. LETTER TO G. RAMACHANDRAN

[AS AT] SABARMATI,
May 7, 1931

MY DEAR RAMACHANDRAN,

It was a perfect pleasure to receive a letter from you after such a long time. I did indeed enquire about you from so many persons by

1 Responsivists and Non-co-operationists word of mouth as also through letters. I did know that you were resting in some prison. Do come and see me whenever you wish and can.
SJT. G. RAMACHANDRAN
NARAYANATH HOUSE
TAIKAD
TRIVANDRUM

From a microfilm : S.N. 17059

86. LETTER TO H. W. B. MORENO

[AS AT] SABARMATI,
May 7, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. I shall certainly deal with the subject in the pages of Young India¹ as you desire and therefore need not give you a detailed reply. The original of which you have enclosed a copy was never received.

Yours sincerely,

H. W. B. MORENO, ESQ.
GENERAL PRESIDENT
THE ANGLO-INDIAN LEAGUE
9 MARSDEN STREET, CALCUTTA

From a microfilm : S.N. 17060

87. LETTER TO K. S. NAGARAJAN

[AS AT] SABARMATI,
May 7, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

Your letter of the 11th March has been on my file all these long weeks but the delay was inevitable.

If you are really free from any animal passion, you have a right to retain that freedom. You should share your opinion and your condition with your wife. If she on her part cannot restrain her animal appetites, seeing that there has been no consummation of marriage, she should be free to regard the present marriage as no marriage at all and to marry where she likes. If she is afraid of public opinion you should offer to help her to defy public opinion and in every way make her way smooth and easy. I am satisfied that in no case are you called upon to share the bed with your wife if you have really no desire.

¹ Vide “Anglo-Indians”, 14-5-1931

Yours sincerely,

SJT. K. S. NAGARAJAN
233 LOYOLA HOSTEL
CATHEDRAL P.O., MADRAS

From a photostat: S.N. 17062

88. LETTER TO JAIRAMDAS DOULATRAM

BORSAD,
May 7, 1931

MY DEAR JAIRAMDAS,

This letter is for your information. If you have anything to say you will please guide me.

Yours sincerely,

GANDHI

Encl. 1

SJT. JAIRAMDAS DOULATRAM
SWARAJ ASHRAM, BARDOLI

A.I.C.C. File No. 273, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

89. STATEMENT TO THE PRESS

BORSAD,
May 8, 1931

It is astonishing how ignorant responsible Englishmen, like Mr. Grey, are as to the real condition. I have to impute ignorance to Mr. Grey as I could not bring myself to believe that he was wilfully distorting the real condition. The Delhi Agreement tabooed threats, intimidation and coercion of every form in connection with picketing

---

1 From Vatan G. Gidwani, President, District Congress Committee, Mirpurkhas (Sind). He had mentioned that one Thakurdas, who had styled himself as Secretary of the Congress Committee, was inciting cloth merchants to revolt against the Congress decision to boycott foreign cloth.

2 Acting Chairman, Master Cotton Spinners and Manufacturers’ Association which has to be absolutely peaceful. I insisted that this condition was carried out and it is being carried out in a vast majority of cases. If a bona-fide case of intimidation, coercion or threat is made out I will have no hesitation in every such case in advising and insisting on suspension of picketing. I know how important it is from our own stand-point to carry out the Agreement in the strictest manner possible.

The Bombay Chronicle, 9-5-1931

90. TELEGRAM TO COWASJI JEHANGIR (JUNIOR)

BORSAD, May 8, 1931

SIR COWASJI JEHANGIR (JUNIOR)
NAPEAN SEA ROAD
BOMBAY

THANK YOU FOR EXHAUSTIVE TELEGRAM⁴. MAKING IMMEDIATE INVESTIGATION. CAN GIVE YOU DEFINITE ASSURANCE NO [HARM] WILL BE DONE TO SARDAR GARDA OR HIS MEN.

GANDHI

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-C, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

91. LETTER TO GANGABEHN VAIDYA

After Morning Prayers, Friday, [May 8, 1931]⁵

CHI. GANGABEHN,

I got you letter.

Do not grieve over the death of Kaku’s⁶ brother. Such tragedies will always occur in this world. The body is rightly compared to a glass bangle. It takes less time for the body to perish than for a glass

---

⁴ This read: “Garda complains harassment since Agreement. On twenty-seventh his men abused while taking cotton vakharis gin. On twenty-eighth Babla people scared away labourers threatened to burn huts and inmates. On twenty-ninth stones thrown from back of his bungalow Navsari same time lorry full of men threw stones from front proving concerted action. His son jeered hooted at Sabsorn showing militant attitude. Wiring Garda to send further specific instances. Earnestly request that if allegations true such harassment should immediately stop. Letter follows.”

⁵ From the reference in the last paragraph to his forthcoming visit to Simla

⁶ Purushottam D. Saraiya, addressee’s grandson
bangle to break. If we preserve such a bangle with care, it will remain intact for thousands of years, but the body never lasts for more than a hundred years. And it is rarely that one lives even that long. Kaku’s brother may have passed away, but the soul which dwelt in his body has not perished. It had no brother, or rather all were its brothers. When, therefore, there are deaths among relations, instead of letting ourselves be swayed by ignorance we should cultivate greater capacity for endurance, greater disinterestedness towards the world and greater knowledge . . .¹ (This death has no connection whatever with the fact of Kaku having strayed from the path of dharma. Do not remind Kaku of what he did). Let Kaku remain there now and work and earn. He may take up voluntary work if and when he feels inclined to do so.

I shall leave for Simla on Monday. Come and see me before that. I see no need for you to go to Bombay, but you may certainly go if you cannot restrain yourself.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

92. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

CAMP BORSAD,

May 8, 1931

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

I had your telegram and now I have your letter of 30th ultimo but not the previous letter. There is certainly no urgent need about your returning. From your telegram I have gathered that you were all A1 in spite of the chill of which you write to me in your letter. What you read in the papers about a break-down was not without foundation but just now in Gujarat there is no immediate danger of a breakdown. I am going to Simla next week to confer with Mr. Emerson about several outstanding matters and he says in his letter that incidentally there would be meeting with the Government about the Round Table Conference. He expects me also to go to Nainital on or about the 18th. I do not know how things are progressing in the U.P. just now. But it will be as well for me to go to Nainital. Of course you were quite right in writing to me on the Hindu-Muslim question as frankly as you have done. I should have felt hurt if you had done less. You have a perfect right to unburden yourself without the least fear of being misunderstood by me. Of course I do not plead guilty to your charge. I have always taken good care to say that I was speaking for myself. So long as we have not evolved a concrete policy how could I help expressing my own personal views? But the occasions have not been many when I have let myself go. I quite agree with you that Dr. Ansari’s proposal about arbitration consisting of the many names he suggests is highly unpractical. Nothing of course has come out of it. Dr. Mahmud’s fear is absolutely baseless. I did see Bhopal at the latter’s instance and when he discussed the Hindu-Muslim question I naturally said that he might call in Shaukat Ali and his other friends and then summon me to Bhopal if he thought that there was anything to be done. I could not say to him that he was not to move at all. That same day Mrs. Naidu brought Shaukat Ali to Mani Bhuvan and I related the conversation I had with Bhopal. Nothing more has happened. I have made no movement and have written not one single line beyond saying that I was praying, which I am literally doing. I wrote last week as much to Dr. Mahmud¹ when he complained that I had broken the pact that I was to be dumb. When you return completely restored, we must have a meeting of the Working Committee and if we can evolve a formula for the guidance of all Congressmen, nothing will please me more. Personally I think that we shall not be able to evolve any formula just now and I am more and more driven to the idea I adumbrated before you on the day of your departure or the day previous. When you reach Bombay of course you will first of all seek me out wherever I am. It is highly likely that I shall be by that time in BORSAD or Bardoli.

¹ Omission as in the source

No going to London without Hindu-Muslim unity.

Love to you all.

BAPU

PANDIT JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

NUWERA ELIYA

CEYLON

From Gandhi-Nehru papers, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library.

¹ Vide “Letter to Dr. Syed Mahmud”, 4-5-1931
93. LETTER TO DARCY LINDSAY

SABARMATI,
[AS AT] May 8, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter of the 24th April. The matter you refer to is very delicate. There is a romance around the life of Bhagat Singh. He was no coward. From all enquiries made by me I find that he was a man of spotless character and of great daring. He exercised also great influence on some young men. Somehow or other he had developed a belief that political assassination had its use. It was impossible not to notice the execution, I believe quite unwise, of Bhagat Singh and his comrades, whom the execution made martyrs. I have no doubt whatsoever that the execution has surrounded these lives with a halo which they would not otherwise have had. The only thing therefore that was possible and that the Congress was bound to do was to pass a resolution\(^1\) condemning murderous deeds as also the execution and at the same time appreciating the bravery and sacrifice underlying such deeds. I however quite agree with you that there is undoubtedly a great deal of thoughtless approval of political murder. But many of us are doing everything we can to counteract the growth of the violent revolutionary movement. Whilst it is being held under check, I fear that the spirit that is at times breaking out in violence will not altogether die till India comes to her own. I am not publishing your letter because the end both you and I have in view is not likely to be served thereby.

Yours sincerely,

SIR DARCY LINDSAY
MANDELIU CANNES, A.M.
[FRANCE]

From a microfilm: S. N. 17064

\(^1\) Vide “Resolution on Bhagat Singh and Comrades”, 29-3-1931
94. LETTER TO LIVINGSTON & DOULL

[AS AT] SABARMATI,
May 8, 1931

DEAR SIR,

With reference to your letter of the 3rd March last, I enclose herewith power of attorney from duly signed by me in favour of Mr. Doull.

Yours faithfully,

Encl. 1
MESSRS LIVINGSTON & DOULL
Solicitors & Notaries
DURBAN, NATAL.

From a microfilm : S. N. 17065.

95. LETTER TO ABDUR RAZZAQ MALIHABADI

[AS AT] SABARMATI,
May 8, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I was delighted to receive your letter. Of course I wish the Egyptians full independence and all the prosperity that their ancient and fertile land deserves. I do not know the precise nature of the boycott movement in Egypt and therefore you will excuse me for my inability to express any opinion on it.

Yours sincerely,

ABDUR RAZZAQ MALIHABADI, ESQ.
304 NEW CIRCULAR ROAD, CALCUTTA

From a microfilm : S. N. 17066

96. LETTER TO KUSUM DESAI

May 8, 1931

CHI. KUSUM,

I got your two letters. If you were not satisfied with those letters, neither was I. I did not understand what you wished to say. But I will not harp on the subject. I understood something and I will content myself with that.
See that your picketing does not become mechanical. If you are convinced of what I said, act upon it. Through your picketing, enter the homes of addicts. How long will you go on working like an automaton?

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]
I shall be leaving this place on Monday.
From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 1821

97. LETTER TO PANNALAL JHAVERI
May 8, 1931

CHI. PANNALAL,

My letter to Nanibehn must have been given to you to read. I don’t think that the Vidyapith course is for persons like Nanibehn and Gangabehn, though I see nothing wrong in their desire and would let them satisfy it without raising any objection. They lack self-confidence and long to acquire something more, but do not know what. If they go on trying like this they will discover one day what it is, for their hearts are pure. On Monday I shall leave this place for Simla.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI PANNALAL
THEOSOPHICAL COLONY
JUHU, SANTA CRUZ, BOMBAY

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 3113

98. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

BORSAD,
Friday, May 8, 1931

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I got your letter. I feel like writing to Jayaprakash about you. It will be good if you have a frank talk with him once. As long as you have not completely recovered, you ought to stay with me. The state of your health from time to time is closely connected with that of your mind. If you stay with me, probably both your body and mind will grow strong and then you may be fit enough to live with self-confidence anywhere. Do what seems best to you.

I will leave this place on Monday and proceed to Simla. You don’t require my address while I am there. If you write only my name on the letter, it will reach me the soonest. If you address it C/o the Congress Committee, the letter may be delayed a little. I am likely to stay in Simla for five days.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G. N. 3409

99. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

BORSAD,
May 8, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

I got your two letters.

I felt a weight off my mind to know that you approved of my suggestion regarding Lakshmi. Kaka and Vallabhbhai are also of the same opinion as yours. I have yet to hear from Vinoba and Kishorelal. I was not at all pleased by Dwarkanath’s bill. I have kept it back and written to him strongly about it. I will let you know after I hear from him. You need, therefore do nothing about it for the present. The general suggestion you have made concerning such bills does not require to be acted upon immediately.

I understand what you say about Shankarbhai. I wholly agree with your decision. Don’t mind what Bhagwanji thinks about it. You will have to pay Rs. 35 to that Punjabi vaid. All of them charge their fees in this way. If all the patients improve, the fee charged by him will not seem excessive. All the same, we should know on what basis he charges his fee. You, therefore, did right in writing to Chandrasankar about it. Don’t put too many persons under his treatment at a time. Watch how he treats each case and then proceed further. I shall be leaving for Simla on Monday. No address is necessary for writing to me there. I have replied to Pragji. Rukhi and Benarsi have arrived.

1 Physician practising the Ayurvedic system of medicine
2 Rukmini, Maganlal Gandhi’s daughter
3 Benarsilal Bazaj, Rukmini’s husband
The latter is returning today. Rukhi will stay on today at any rate. I may send her by some train tomorrow.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati : M.M.U./I

100. LETTER TO JAMNADAS GANDHI

BORSAD.
May 8, 1931

CHI. JAMNADAS,

I have the Doctor’s telegram: “Since Jamnadas and Nanalal are looking after Ratilal, he should stay at Rajkot till he gets well and may then go to Sabarmati. I am sorry that Champa was beaten.” I wonder how the Doctor came to think that you and Nanalal look after Ratilal. Tell this to Nanalalbhai too. It is likely he sent a telegram to Nanalal. Tell me in detail in what circumstances Champa was beaten.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

I am leaving this place on Monday evening for Simla.

From a copy of the Gujarati : C.W. 9321. Courtesy : Jamnadas Gandhi

101. LETTER TO KISHORELAL MASHRUWALA

May 8, 1931

CHI. KISHORELAL,

Do not be in a hurry to get up and walk so long as the wound is not healed. The diet should be such as would give you clear motions. I intend to marry Dudabhai’s¹ Lakshmi to Maruti who has been brought up by Lakshmidas². I consider it my duty to do so. A girl brought up in the Ashram from her childhood must not be married to an antyaja.

Blessings from
BAPU

¹ Dudabhai M. Dafda
² Lakshmidas P. Asar. The marriage of Lakshmi and Marutidas, a South Indian orphan boy, took place on March 14, 1933; vide also “Message on Wedding of Lakshmi And Maruti”, 8-3-1933
[PS.]
Gangabehn gave the news of Manu’s sudden death.

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 10718. Courtesy: Gomatibehn Mashruwala

102. LETTER TO MRIDULA SARABHAI

BORSAD,
May 8, 1931

CHI. MRIDULA,

I do hope that you will find time to go to Simla for a few days. Both Papa and Mummy were of course anxious and hoping that you would go and be with them at least for a week.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 11180. Courtesy: Sarabhai Foundation

103. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

BORSAD,
May 8, 1931

CHI. JAMNALAL,

Tell the people of Karnatak that they have already contributed much to the struggle; they must also now take part in the constructive work. Much still remains to be done for khadi; the boycott of foreign cloth is for the sake of khadi. Had the boycott not had the purpose of serving the poor, at least I would not have been as absorbed in it as I am now.

Some friends from Karnatak are possessed with the idea that Karnatak should form a separate province. Why do they worry? The Congress has already formed a province of Kannada-speaking people, it will come into being when we have purna swaraj.

1 Manu Damodar Saraiya, Gangabehn Vaidya’s grandson; vide also “Statement to T. B. Sapru and M. R. Jayakar”, 5-9-1930.
2 The sixth Karnatak Provincial Conference commenced on May 26, 1931 at Hukeri, District Belgaum, under the presidency of Jamnalal Bajaj; for the text of the message, vide “Message to Karnatak Provincial Conference”, 18-5-1931
I am happy that Lingayats and others have come together. It is as it should be.

MOHANDAS

[From Hindi]

Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, pp. 73-4

104. INTERVIEW TO THE PRESS

BORSAD,
May 8, 1931

Regarding the report published in a Bombay paper about the refusal by Sardar Garda to return the confiscated lands purchased by him in Bardoli Taluk, Mr. Gandhi, interviewed, said that the report was correct, but added that so far as he knew there was no obstruction deliberate or otherwise on the part of men who had strict instructions not to interfere with those who might be removing crops from the fields in question. He had undertaken to enquire into every complaint that might be made by Sardar Garda. He had asked for specific instances and not one was supplied to him. He was therefore pain-ed and surprised at Sardar Garda’s attempt to evade or repudiate the agreement which after full deliberation he had entered into. Mr. Gandhi had at ready brought the matter to the notice of Sir Cowasji Jehangir1 who was the principal negotiator.

Asked whether Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel had asked the people of Bardoli Taluk not to pay unauthorized arrears, Mr. Gandhi said it was not a question of Mr. Vallabhbhai Patel asking people not to pay arrears. It was a question of inability on the part of people to pay. The fact was it was really difficult to pay even the current year’s dues in many cases. In affected areas of both Surat and Kaira districts, they were obliged to ask for suspension even in some cases in respect of current year’s dues. The chief thing to aim at was not insisting on pound of flesh but to see that the political movement for non-payment of taxes was discontinued in a bona-fide manner and people paid whatever they could under the circumstances.

The Hindu, 9-5-1931

105. MESSAGE TO HINDUSTANI SEVA DAL

[Before May 9, 1931]2

Camping for Congress volunteers should mean greater dedication, greater self-purification, greater service of the poor, greater

1 Vide “Telegram to Sir Cowasji Jehangir”, 6-5-1931
2 The report was published on this date.
skill in hand-spinning and carding, greater skill in dealing with repairs to various machines required for spinning, ginning, carding, etc.; and above all, greater regard for truth and ahimsa. A Congress volunteer in camp should mean cleaning up of surrounding villages.

M. K. GANDHI

_The Bombay Chronicle_, 9-5-1931

106. MESSAGE TO LABOURERS, KARACHI

BORSAD,
_May 9, 1931_

I am clear that the movement initiated by Mr. Gajadhar is mischievous and unpractical and therefore must not be encouraged.¹

_The Hindustan Times_, 11-5-1931

107. LETTER TO CHIMANLAL SHAH

BORSAD,
_May 9, 1931_

CHI. CHIMANLAL,

Can you say positively that cod-liver oil has benefited Sharda visibly? You can ascertain by nothing her weight, etc. I have heard doctors praise cod-liver oil with great enthusiasm, though I have not come across much evidence of its value.

You should send for Annapurna when you can summon courage to do so. Remain in contact with her through letters. The only fear can be lest she should turn out to be a bad type. Even if you have such fear, you should not be guided by it provided you can get proof that at present she is all right. That way, there is risk in all things. According to Bhartrihari, the only state in which one can live free from fear is that of non-attachment. True non-attachment is that taught in the _Gita_, and it is cultivated by giving up interest in the fruits of action. In the present case too, if your duty lies in letting her come and in discarding all fear about the result of such a course, you should shed that fear and do the duty.

¹ _Vide also “Danger Looming”, 14-5-1931_
If Shakribehn remains absorbed in work, she will be able to recover peace of mind.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : S.N. 24371

108. THE PROBLEM OF FOUR LAKH DHARALAS

With this heading, someone has written the following letter\(^1\) under the pseudonym, “A Dharala”:

This letter certainly is full of bitterness, even after I have cut out certain sentences which were very venomous. The handwriting is very well formed and the language is very sophisticated. Hence I guess that it has not been written by a Dharala Thakore but by a person who has an animus against Patidars. Be that as it may, the letter calls for some clarification.

DHARALA THAKORES\(^2\)

Although the letter has a good deal of venom towards the Patidars, nevertheless there is some truth in the complaints listed in it. The failing which is found all over India is also there among the Patidars, viz., those who are more knowledgeable and richer enjoy a superior status and misuse it vis-a-vis those who are ignorant and poor. The feeling of superiority and inferiority is certainly involved in this. The greatest barrier to our progress, to our attainment of swaraj, is the fact that those who are better off do not become the protectors of those who are not so well placed. However, having admitted this with regard to the Patidars, I must say that there is much exaggeration in this letter. Some years ago, about fifty thousand Dharalas had assembled in Vadital and the Patidars had helped this effort. It was these who since then made the Dharalas known as Thakores. Today at all places in Gujarat the Patidar youths are destroying the idea of superiority and inferiority and many aged Patidars are helping them in it. Young Patidars are engaged in many kinds of service. They do not recognize any distinctions between Patidars and others. Their field of action is as wide as India.

\(^1\) Not translated here
\(^2\) The source consistently has “Thakars”, which is evidently a misprint.
SHRI RAVISHANKAR’S SERVICES

The correspondent had to admit that Shri Vithalbhai, Durbarsaheb Gopaldas, Shri Dadubhai and others looked upon the Dharala Thakores with a feeling of equality. Even a little child knows that to the Sardar all are equal. He wishes to serve all who are poor, whether they happen to be Brahmans or Bhangis, Gujaratis or Madrasis, and it is because the people have recognized this virtue in him that he has been made the Congress President. This correspondent regards Shri Ravishankar’s services as nominal. I do not know who renders true service if this very incarnation of sacrifice renders merely nominal service!

VALLABH VIDYALAYA

Although the above has been founded, I admit that much still remains to be done for the Dharala Thakores and such other communities. However, as the spirit of service grows, the unity among the various communities will become greater day by day. The school whose foundation stone was only recently laid in Bochasan and which has been named as Vallabhbh Vidyalaya—this too is for the sake of the Dharala Thakores.

Hence I would request the above correspondent not to add to mutual bitterness but rather seek and suggest ways which would promote friendliness among all. From the manner in which he wields his pen, it seems that he has the ability to do so. I invite him to put it to good use.

PATIDARS

A few words to the Patidars. They should look deep within themselves and rid themselves of any impurity which may be there. They have shown great courage and sacrificed much. They should find out any failings which they may still have and get rid of them.

[From Gujarati]
Navajivan, 10-5-1931

109. NOTES

HYPOCRISY DURING ELECTIONS

Only a handful voted at the elections to the Provincial Committee held in Bulsar. The elections had to be held because there were factions. Voters have to be habitual wearers of khadi. Now a friend writes thus about the kind of khadi-wearers these voters were:

1 Vide “Speech at Bochasan”, 6-5-1931

How great is the disrespect towards the Congress if after a year’s fierce struggle and after knowing how important a place khadi occupies in the boycott of foreign cloth, and ordinary rule of the Congress is violated in this manner! How will these members of the Congress fare during a crisis? Such hypocrisy sullies the fair name of the Congress. How are the elections so important that voters have to pretend that they abide by this rule? And however important they may be, how can work of any value be done through the practice of untruth?

It is likely that at other places in Gujarat also and in the whole country, wherever there are many candidates and keen rivalry, similar practices may have been resorted to. If there are such laxity and such hypocrisy in regard to the reputation of the Congress, it can be guessed with the help of the three how much this will increase on attainment of swaraj. In the elections following swaraj, there will be greater temptations because money will be involved then. I believe that such conduct is shameful and harmful for us. It will benefit neither us nor the country.

If we are averse to wearing khadi, if we do not believe in the necessity of khadi, why should we not start a movement for getting the clause regarding khadi deleted from the Congress regulations? If the khadi clause remains, we should abide by it. If that clause meets with disapproval or if many members of the Congress are not willing to respect it, they should try to get it removed through an agitation.

KHADI AND THE DESH SEVika SANGH OF NADIAD

Shrimati Kashibehn and Shrimati Gangabehn have written the following to the Taluka Committee on behalf of the Nadiad Desh Sevika Sangh.

Whatever injustice has been done to the women of Nadiad through my article should be removed. Along with it, let me draw their attention to one matter. The correspondents say in their letter that fifteen women have been using pure khadi in the past and still continue to do so while working for the Congress. If this is the case,

1. The letter is not translated here. It described how voters wore borrowed khadi clothes at the time of elections.

2. The letter is not translated here. It denied the accusation in Gandhiji’s note on “Women Volunteers and Khadi”, 26-4-1931 how many women wear khadi regularly? For those who believe in khadi, it is not a dress to be worn only on certain occasions—not a uniform, but something which should be habitually worn. Swaraj cannot be secured or the poverty of the starving masses cannot be removed by a few persons wearing khadi on certain occasions. That can be achieved only when khadi takes root in every home. Hence I hope that not only Nadiad but also all other towns will take to wearing khadi exclusively.

TWENTY-FOUR CAPS AND THREE SHIRTS

What would we say of a man who believes that crores of Indians are starving and half-naked and who at the same time somehow puts on twenty-four caps on his head and three shirts, one on top of the other? Should we not say that, although he is compassionate, his kindness is misguided?

Despite this, we come across many such persons. On reading this sentence, hasty persons will burst out laughing and some will think me a fool. However, there is no reason either to laugh or to think me stupid.

Let us consider the Kathiawari dress. It consists of a dhoti, a long shirt, a short shirt and a turban. In view of the climate there, so many clothes are not at all needed. Two short shirts can easily be made out of a single long shirt. Twenty-four caps can easily be made out of a twelve yard turban. Hence it cannot be regarded as an exaggeration but is rather the bare truth to say that such a person is wearing twenty-four caps and three shirts. Those reasonable Kathiawaris who understand this straightforward matter and who are kind-hearted will suggest a remedy for my perplexity.

This question is not directed towards politicians. They will defeat me with many arguments, namely, that they have to attend at the ruler’s court, etc. Neither is this question meant for employees of the agencies. Like Drona and Bhishma, they will point to their stomachs and may even go so far as to sing the lines of Shamal:

Stomach it is that makes us slaves
Who dance to the tune the piper plays.

This question is addressed to those who are free of such bondage. They should either give me a satisfactory answer or spare those twenty-three caps and two shirts for the poor.

1 A seventeenth-eighteenth-century Gujarati poet
MARRIAGE CONDITIONS

The common custom in regard to marriage in the Anavil community is that the bride’s father has to pay a handsome sum to the birdeggroom’s father. In the Bardoli swaraj Ashram, there is a gentleman named Shri Dayalji Gulabbhai who lives under the care of Shri Lakshmidas. He had married once and had lost his wife. That was some time ago and he has no children. He thought of marrying again. He felt, however, that he should not marry during struggle. When the Settlement came about, he was inclined to yield to desire. A father was prepared to marry his daughter to Shri Dayalji by paying him a sum of Rs. 800. He may have been momentarily tempted, but was later able to overcome the temptation. He will now marry a seventeen-year old girl named Shantabehn. As the conditions on which this marriage is to take place are both worth knowing and worth copying, I give them below:

The dowry will be accepted in the form of yarn instead of cash. And that yarn weighing eight and a quarter pounds should be spun exclusively by members of the family.

Not more than twenty-five persons in all consisting of fifteen persons from the bride’s side and ten from the bridegroom’s side (including men, women and children) should be invited and all of them must be clad in khadi.

Everyone should eat food cooked in a common kitchen and the meal should consist only of dal, rice and vegetables. As it is summer, there would be no harm in taking buttermilk. They would stop the custom of offering ghee to Brahmins.

Whereas no gifts in the form of cash from relations or as dowry will be accepted, giving of religious books will be permitted.

After the marriage takes place, those present will be allowed to take fruits or sherbet instead of betel-leaves and areca-nuts. Tea will not be served at all.

By way of dowry, only such things as a spinning-wheel, carding-bow, takli, or carpet or something to sit upon should be given.

Such edible items as sweet balls and puris or any such articles of food should not be accepted in any form.

At the wedding ceremony, the bride and the bridegroom will wear garments made of yarn spun with their own hands. No clothes will be bought for this purpose. Likewise, if anyone wishes to make a present, he would be permitted to give only yarn spun by him.

At the time of the wedding, the bride will wear no ornament other than a single piece of each item symbolizing her state of married happiness. Later, she may accept anything, which anyone wishes to give.
The interval between arrival and departure for the wedding will be three days during which the ceremony will be performed.

Bangles made of hand-spun yarn should replace those made of gold.

The marriage ceremony will be in accordance with Ashram practice. Gandhiji’s articles on the shastrik rites regarding marriage vows and his speeches will be read out. The officiating priest too will be clad in pure khadi and will accept no fee.

No band will be played and, while devotional songs may be sung, no vulgar wedding songs will be allowed.

Shri Dayalji and the bride’s father are signatories to this. The wedding will take place on the 13th. Even ordinary marriages in the Anavil community involve large expenses, hence it is no small matter that in this marriage only the religious ceremony has found a place and khadi is compulsory for the bride and the groom as well as for the guests present to bless the couple and the priest. Dhardhaman implies dowry. The bride’s father provides all household articles by way of dowry; whereas in this marriage only the implements needed for spinning may be given, if so desired. Let us hope that this example will be copied and such marriages will become a common practice among all communities and that the couples, united under such auspicious circumstances, will turn out to be true servants of the country.

[From Gujarati]
Navajivan, 10-5-1931

110. KHADI IN KAIRA

Shri Gopaldas Purushottam Desai sends the following account of khadi activity in Patlad—Nadiad:¹

Some corrections are required in the above note and figures. Where information has to be given regarding the actual state of affairs and where the figures are not beyond our capacity to get, no conjectures should be made. No meaning can be deduced from the sentence, “about 50 to 75 spinning-wheels are being plied”. The number may be below 50 or it may exceed 75. It is likely that the figure is actually below 50. Hence where the number can be easily counted, the exact figure should be given and neither one more nor

¹ The letters are not translated here.
Moreover, the various qualities of khadi produced in Patlad—Nadiad should be mentioned as also the count of the yarn. Mention should also be made of how much khadi has been received from other places. There should be a comparative statement of figures showing yarn spun for a living and that spun for becoming self-sufficient. Amongst the latter kind of spinners, there should be a break-up of the number of men and women. How much yarn they spin on an average should be indicated. Do they spin only for themselves or for others as well? Alongside the statement that the workers numbered 151, how much they had earned should also have been mentioned. There should be sub-divisions even amongst them. All this accounting without details cannot be regarded as scientific and no conclusions can be drawn therefrom.

With regard to the above figures, it may be noted that the figures for Petlad and Nadiad are given separately. It may be said in general that the figures for Nadiad are about half of those for Petlad. It is for Nadiad to say why this is so.

Let me now turn to Limbasi. Shri Vithaldas writes from there as follows:

Along with this, the names of those in whose homes the spinning-wheel is being plied have been mentioned. In regard to this report also, the above criticism should be regarded as applicable to the extent it is relevant. The reference to a dearth of spinning-wheels should put us to shame. At every place, we should develop the capacity to make spinning wheels. One or two samples should be obtained from Bardoli and spinning-wheels should be made everywhere. Moreover, this recommendation is far more applicable to places where inmates of the Ashram happen to be living. What kind of wood should be used for making spinning-wheels and other information should be obtained from Bardoli. All should remember that the workshop there is not meant for earning money but is a training centre. Hence everyone can get the necessary information from there. A time will come when people will demand spinning-wheels and taklis in every home. If even then we continue to depend on Bardoli, Satyagraha Ashram and such other places, our work will certainly come to a standstill. Even the largest single factory cannot provide crors of spinning-wheels. This is neither necessary nor desirable. The meaning of the khadi movement and its special feature is that every process

---

1 The letters are not translated here.
involved in its production can be carried out in every village. Khadi is not an enterprise that supports a single activity, but it feeds many activities. Hence every one of its limbs should blossom forth in every village.

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan, 10-5-1931

111. LETTER TO SHANTA PATEL

May 10, 1931

CHI. SHANTA,

I got your letter. The fact that you find the rules and the work there too much for you shows that, when you were living outside, you did not lead a disciplined life. Your desire to remain like a child is certainly good, but being like a child does not mean remaining lazy, it means being innocent and pure in mind. You are certainly not pure in mind. Are you innocent? If you are not, you should strive to be. It is a dangerous thing that you like very much to mix with boys, and not with girls. This will some day bring about your fall. Have a look at the world around. If all the girls wished to live as you wish no girl would have the company of another girl. Do you think you can jump about and play with boys as freely as you can with girls? It is dangerous for you to wish to cross the bar which God has created. Think over this and try to understand it. Show this letter to Premabehn and discuss it with her, and then reply to me. Obey her and help her in her work.

Your letters will not be read by anyone by whom you do not wish them to be read. Anandi will not accompany me. She is still at Bardoli.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 4059
112. LETTER TO GANGASHARAN SINGH

BORSAD,
May 10, 1931

BHAI GANGASHARAN SINGHJI,

I have your letter. Success must come where Rajendra babu is the leader. Boycott of foreign cloth, propagation of khadi and the boycott of liquor and other intoxicants are of the utmost importance for us today.

Yours,

MOHANDAS GANDHI

SHRI GANGASHARAN SINGH
CONGRESS COMMITTEE, AMHRA
P.O. NIHATTI, DIST. PATNA, BIHAR

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 11008

113. LETTER TO LAKSHMINARAYAN GADODIA

May 10, 1931

BHAI LAKSHMINARAYANJI,

I have your letter.

I saw the letter from Alexander Drew. Your reply is pertinent. I regard this loss as gain. The condition of the Congress committees is everywhere poor.

There is much risk in picketing the ships bringing foreign cloth. We shall see what is possible and proper if the struggle is renewed. The best work is to work among the masses.

I am proceeding to Simla tomorrow (Monday). The halt at Delhi will be for about three hours. Jamnalalji will be accompanying me.

Yours,

MOHANDAS

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 5621
114. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

May 11, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

I am writing this letter at midnight at Baroda station. Champa came and saw me here. I think Ratilal will not come at present. I shall be in Simla for about five days; and then in Nainital for five days. I expect to return to Borsad round about the 25th.

Buy the land at Bidaj. I was sorry to hear about Hanumansingh. Can you tell me how his condition became what it is? Keep him mostly on fruit.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U/I

115. LETTER TO MRIDULA SARABHAI

May 11, 1931

CHI. MRIDU,

I am writing this at the Baroda station after midnight. So do not expect a full reply.

I shall try to follow your suggestion with regard to the mills.

Nobody has prompted me regarding your going to Simla. When I was at Ahmedabad the matter was discussed. He had told me that you would not accompany him but might go subsequently. You have been constantly in my eyes. So I felt like writing to you and am writing. I do hope you will go. We may meet there if you come early.

Khurshedbehn should also go there if she can make it. Nargisbehn has already advocated her case to me. Perinbehn came later on and she also mentioned the matter. Pass on this message on my behalf.

If there is need to write more I shall write later provided I find the time. I do not have your letter with me right now.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 11111. Courtesy: Sarabhai Foundation
116. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

[On or after May 11, 1931]'

CHI. NARANDAS.

Since you are not likely to feel the burden, I have no worries on that account. I see that you will continue to have guests and visitors. See that those who come are well looked after. Try to dissuade people who may wish to accompany me.

Shri Malik is the Municipal Engineer there. He will visit the Ashram in a day or two and advise you how to pump more water. Take him to see chandrabhaga too. I have talked to him about Parner-kar. Cultivate Shri Malik’s acquaintance and introduce Parner-kar also to him.

How is Purushottam? Has he agreed to go for a change of air? If he had been in better health, I would have certainly, taken him with me. You may write to me for my opinion on any matter if you think it necessary to do so.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Courtesy : Narandas Gandhi

117. INTERVIEW TO THE PRESS

May 13, 1931

Asked by the Associated press representative for any ‘story’, Mr. Gandhi remarked:

You can write about the flowers and garlands that you see in the car.

At the octroi post, the car stopped for a minute when a letter from Mr. Emerson, Home Secretary, was handed to Gandhiji.

Gandhiji, interviewed by a representative of the Associated Press of India who stood on the running board of his car, stated that he had received no invitation from the Viceroy but from the Home Secretary. He would stay in Simla for two or three days, possibly longer, and then proceed probably to Nainital.

1 From the reference to Gandhiji taking Purushottam with him, most probably to Simla
Q. Will you be going to London?
A. I cannot say yet.

Q. What about the prospect of communal settlement?
A. I have been far too absorbed in affairs in Borsad and therefore could not tell you.

Q. You might have known of the proceedings of the Conference at Bhopal?
A. No.

Q. Do you expect to attend the informal meeting in Simla of Indian members of the Federal Structure Committee?
A. I have no notion.

_The Hindu, 14-5-1931_

118. NOTES

A CRY IN THE WILDERNESS

I take the following passage with slight changes from a communication in my file:

Protection of indigenous cloth by exclusion of foreign cloth and foreign yarn from the country—this is vague and gives room for suspicion. The starving millions living in the villages cannot be fed by the Indian mills. For the last four months the demand for khadi has been going down steadily and that for mill-cloth is increasing. The reason is that Congress organizations are supporting the Indian mill-manufacture. Gandhiji’s cry of boycott through khadi is a cry in the wilderness. Therefore the real position of the Congress with regard to khadi must be made clear.

I have had a similar complaint from other sources too. There is no doubt that the Congressmen think that because the Congress is having help from and dealings with mill-owners, Congressmen are free to use mill-manufactures in the place of khadi or at least to use either optionally. Such however is certainly not the case. The Congress policy in this matter remains unchanged. The Congress expects everyone under its influence to use hand-spun and hand-woven khadi to the exclusion of all other cloth. Any laxity in this observance is not only bound to harm khadi and therefore the villages but it is also bound to harm boycott of foreign cloth. It will be found that in the end the boycott will be possible only through khadi. The success

---

1 On May 10 and 11. The Nawab of Bhopal had invited the leaders of the All-India Nationalist Muslim Party and the All-India Muslim Conference to work out an agreed formula on the question of electorates.
hitherto obtained is due to khadi. This is not to say that the indigenous mills have played no part in the campaign against foreign cloth. But it is contended that the mills came in when the owners realized that khadi was doing it, that khadi had shown the way, that khadi had brought about the psychological change. What is however the most important to remember is that boycott of foreign cloth will not be worth the tremendous energy that has been put into it if it was designed merely to stimulate the dividends of a few hundred thousand shareholders. It is a national necessity only because through khadi the crores of money saved through boycott of foreign cloth will be distributed among the millions of villagers. It is therefore necessary for men and women belonging to the Congress not to slacken their effort for khadi.

RUMOURED AMERICAN VISIT

An American friend says in the course of a letter dated 6th April that

. . . This evening an Associated Press despatch from New Delhi, as given in the Boston Transcript, reports that 'Mahatma Gandhi is considering a visit to the United States, etc. . . .

The soul of India has greater tasks than can be performed through physical presence in the United States at this time. . . .

Whether I represent the soul of India or not is a debatable point. But with reference to the American visit I have felt exactly like my correspondent. The work in India, if it has any spiritual value, will affect America and every other country outside India far more than the physical presence. Indeed when the spirit is free the physical case often becomes a hindrance rather than a help. The invisible effect of the spirit free must be a million times greater than that of the spirit limited by the earthly tabernacle. Much therefore as I should love to visit America, the voice within warns me against feeding the wish. Happily other friends like Rev. Holmes, Mr. Kerby page, Dr. Sherwood Eddy, Dr. Ward sent me a cable about the same time the above letter was posted warning me against the visit. They thought that I would be exploited without serving the cause at the present juncture. I feel sure that these friends are right. Those friends therefore who have been pressing me to go to America would please excuse me till the time is ripe, if it ever is for me to go to their great country.

---

1 Of which only extracts are reproduced here
2 Vide also “Letter to Boyd Tucker”, 5-5-1931.
Meantime let them dispel, if they will, the ignorance and the misrepresentations that prevail in abundance about Indian affairs in their land.

Young India, 14-5-1931

119. DANGER LOOMING

The public know little of what took place in Karachi the other day. A half-cracked man like me by name Gajadhar Shau from Central Provinces but as little known there as in Karachi took it into his head that he could establish swaraj in a few days. He collected all the unemployed and other labourers, promising them two rupees per day and delivered an ultimatum to the merchants and moneyed men that they should stop export and import business, stop the manufacture of mill-cloth, collect one crore rupees in a fortnight and utilize it for giving employment to all who were in need at a level wage of two rupees per day through the spinning-wheel and the like. Meetings were held and fierce resolutions were passed. Keys of safes were demanded. The indefatigable Mayor of Karachi met the men and in a lucid moment Sjt. Gajadhar said he would stop his activity if I disapproved of it. This was good enough for Sjt. Jamshed Mehta and his friends and Sjt. Gajadhar who by this time had become a Mahatma came to me as also later Sjts. Sidhwa and Isherdas. I recognized in Sjt. Gajadhar an old correspondent who always tried my and my co-workers’ patience by sending long letters and even wires. We became friends on sight. I had to give him nearly two hours I could scarcely spare. The upshot of it all was that he promised to stop his activity though I did not carry conviction to him. Whether he will carry out his promise remains to be seen. Even if he does not, the workers of Karachi will be able to deal effectively with any crisis that may arise.

But the incident of Karachi is a portent. If the acts of Congressmen are not firm and absolutely correct, there is every danger of the Congress and all other healthy activities being swallowed up by the onrushing floods for want of the necessary embankment of discipline. Storms and floods there always will be. But discipline is to disorder what bulwarks and embankments are to storms and floods.

The awakening of the masses hitherto drugged into sleep by ignorance and despotism can easily prove their own undoing together with a wreckage of the social structure. The attempt of the Congress is to reform the social structure, remove abuses and at the same time help the masses to occupy the position of which they have been long deprived.

1\textit{Vide} also “Message to Hindustani Seva Dal”, 9-5-1931

Behind the crazy demand of Sjt. Gajadhar Shau there was a substratum of truth. Unemployment there undoubtedly was and still is in Karachi as elsewhere, as throughout the 7,00,000 villages of India. No society can long endure that harbours or creates an army of unemployed. There is something wrong in such society. There must therefore be some occupation always available for those who will work. The Karachi scheme asked for employment through the charkha. Unfortunately the author knew no more perhaps about the charkha than the name. But I do believe that in its extensive meaning so as to include all the cotton processes from picking to weaving and washing, colouring and tailoring, it does provide permanent and unlimited occupation for the city-dwellers as well as the villagers. This does not exclude other occupations. But this one thing may be adopted anywhere and everywhere.

One thing we must rigidly guard against and that is free kitchens. Free kitchens are a dangerous institution designed to manufacture paupers. Public kitchens may be run wherever they are a felt want. Everyone can work for a meal and be sure of getting a cheap clean meal in healthy surroundings. It is necessary for us to learn that it is a sin to give a free meal to one who is fit to do any remunerative work at all.

Young India, 14-5-1931

120. ‘NO CHANGE OF HEART’

This heading has no reference to change of heart among the rulers. It refers to absence of change of heart among ourselves according to the following impeachment¹ of a Sindhi correspondent.

I believe that the complaint about foreign cloth is substantially correct. There is not in the cities at least that real change of taste such that the people will not touch foreign cloth whether it comes from England, Japan, France or elsewhere. Though the intellect admits the desirability of abjuring foreign cloth, the heart yearns after the fineries which only come from foreign countries. Love of self predominates over love of the country or rather love of the semi-starved millions.

---

¹ Not reproduced here. The correspondent had complained that the old love for foreign cloth was still alive and blamed Gandhiji for having a soft corner for the mill-owners. Vide also “Foreign Cloth and Other British Goods”, 23-4-1931

Picketing of foreign-cloth shops has but a limited use. The real thing is the education of the masses in these matters. Better even than education is the example of workers and better still is teaching the people how to produce cheap khadi through self-spinning. In practice all the three methods will go together. There must be therefore imparting to the people a knowledge of the economics of boycott through khadi. People should know from well-chosen illustrations how khadi can bring and has brought prosperity to the villages. People should come in touch with sincere workers who are habitual wearers of khadi and should be enabled to know how to prepare their own khadi in their own villages. Congress workers should therefore have a competent knowledge of the boycott and khadi literature, they must be honest wearers of khadi and they must know the cotton processes sufficiently so as to be able to instruct those who would know how to gin, card, spin or even weave.

Those therefore who realize that boycott of foreign cloth and manufacture and use of khadi are permanent institutions of the highest economic value will welcome the Settlement which enables them to know how far the people have been converted to the national ideal. Our real strength must lie in the people doing in normal times the things they did in abnormal times under the severe pressure of public opinion or worse.

One word as to the mills. I have no tender spot in me for our mills. They are well able to take care of themselves. They have still many limitations to overcome. They have not yet put the national interest before that of the agents, owners and share-holders. But after having said all this I would like the correspondent to test the truth of the fact that they have striven this time to respond to the national call be it to ever so small an extent. And this apart from the financial aid they might have given to the movement. I should count that help of no import, if they did not regulate prices and production. I believe that they made an honest attempt in that direction.

Much however has yet to be done by them. They have not yet frankly recognized the premier place khadi has in national economy. They have not net organized the foreign cloth merchants for change.
of their trade to swadeshi, they have not yet learnt the inestimable value of regarding themselves as trustees for the whole nation including the mill-hands. But this change will come if the Congressmen will play the game. conversion, not coercion, must be the aim.

Young India, 14-5-1931

121. ANGLO-INDIANS

Dr. H. W. B. Moreno writes:

I can only say that every community would be on a par with every other under the swaraj Constitution. I invite the attention of all the minorities concerned to the Fundamental Rights Resolution of the Congress. So far as the Working Committee could, it took care to see that the rights of minorities were fully secured under that Resolution. That Resolution is now before the Congress Committee with a view to strengthening it. All those who have useful suggestions should send them to the Committee for consideration.

But I know that this is not what Dr. Moreno wants. He wants to know where the Anglo-Indians will come in specifically. My answer is they would come in where their merit would take them. There would most decidedly be nothing to prevent them from occupying the highest position that any other Indian may be capable of occupying. The fact however is that the Anglo-Indians as a class have occupied or attempted to occupy the position of rulers. They have not as a class taken part in the national movement. They have isolated themselves in their favoured position. Under swaraj there will be no favoured position for anybody. Hence like the Englishmen whose cry for equality means retention of favoured position the Anglo-Indians may feel aggrieved that they would be at a disadvantage under swaraj if they did not have the present favoured position guaranteed.

I hope however that Dr. Moreno has no such favouritism in view. If I know him correctly, I expect he seeks information about the submerged Anglo-Indians. Of them I can say with confidence that I should be surprised if they did not in common with the submerged of the other communities find themselves in a better position than they

---

1 The letter is not reproduced here. The correspondent wanted to know what the position of the Anglo-Indian community would be under the new constitution for India.

2 Vide “Resolution on Fundamental Rights and Economic Changes”, 31-3-1931 are in today. Anyway, there are enough Congressmen who are pledged to the abolition of all unjust privileges, all unnatural inequalities. If the condition of the masses is found to undergo rapid improvement under swaraj, the Anglo-Indian poor must share it to the fullest extent possible. The Congress aims at swaraj for the whole nation and not a section. And it will fight on till that end is achieved. I therefore invite all the minorities to join the national movement and to hasten the advent of the happy day. Let it not also be said of any of them that in the hour of the nation’s trial, they stood aside and came in to enjoy their share of the happiness. They will get the share but they will not relish it even as a man who has not toiled for his meal cannot enjoy it though it is placed before him.

Young India, 14-5-1931

122. THE ALLAHABAD CONGRESS HOSPITAL :

AN APPEAL

In June last year Pandit Motilal Nehru visited Bombay and saw the good work that the Congress hospital was doing there. He was impressed by this and, on his return to Allahabad, he expressed a desire that a similar hospital be started in Allahabad also. . . . Largely owing to the generosity of friends in Bombay, some funds and material were collected for the proposed hospital. On pandit Motilalji’s discharge from prison, the hospital was formally started in a wing of Swaraj Bhawan. . . .

The limited funds collected have now been exhausted and the committee had to consider whether it should continue the hospital or not. . . .

This appeal for financial assistance is therefore being issued in the hope that there will be a generous response to it. The question of having a permanent hospital in Swaraj Bhawan has not been decided yet. But the committee would like to have sufficient funds for the carrying on of the hospital for at least three years. The estimated expenditure on the hospital, if it is run on its present limited scale, is rupees one thousand a month. . . .

KAMALA NEHRU
MOHANLAL NEHRU
RAMAKANT MALAVIYA

May 11, 1931

I hope that the foregoing appeal will receive a quick response from the public. It has been purposely not signed by any except those who are connected with the management of the hospital, because it is not to be in any way considered as a national

1 Of which only extracts are reproduced above memorial. But the appeal is not the less important on that account. Thirty-six thousand rupees to carry out a wish of Pandit Motilal Nehru is a paltry sum. I hope, therefore, that there will be no delay and no hesitation in responding to the appeal made by Shrimati Kamala Nehru and her co-signatories. The reader should know that from the commencement of the hospital she has been its soul. The public may wonder why the appeal treats the hospital as a temporary thing. The idea is to watch how the institution works and by actual experience to know what will be the real need. Moreover, whilst everything is in the melting pot, it was thought that the wisest course would be for the time being to be satisfied with meeting the daily need.

Young India, 14-5-1931

123. FOR THE DANDI PILGRIMS

All the fellow pilgrims who undertook the march to Dandi on 12th March 1930 being scattered all over and not being in constant touch with me, it is necessary to remind them through these columns that they are still under the same discipline and vows that they took before beginning the march and after. They are therefore expected to keep an accurate diary of the day’s work from day to day, to attend to the two prayers, to keep their wants as low as possible and therefore to keep their diet as simple as possible and to do the daily sacrificial spinning. Those who are living in villages can conduct village schools, teaching the children in addition to a knowledge of the three R’s, hand-spinning and other processes of cotton, insisting on their attending to personal hygiene and village games and athletics, doing village cleaning themselves, seeking at the same time the assistance of the villagers and their children and collecting and tabulating all the necessary information about the villagers. The workers would also find out those using foreign cloth and intoxicating drinks and drugs and try to wean them from both by paying them friendly visits and otherwise creating public opinion in the villages in these matters. They will wherever possible and necessary organize peaceful picketing. Of course they would seek to remove untouchability. The workers should send to Sjt. Chhaganlal Joshi a report every month of their work including an abstract from their diary. Needless to say they are expected to keep an accurate account of every pice they may spend and receive.

While these instructions are meant for and binding on the original pilgrims, they may serve as a guide for all the national workers as well in cities as in villages. There will be naturally some changes in the cities. There is no Hindu-Muslim quarrel in the villages but national workers in cities have to add this essential service to the others.

Young India, 14-5-1931

124. HOW THEY ARE TAUGHT

A correspondent who gives his name and address writes from Wilmington, North Carolina.¹

The newspapers tell of your efforts together with many others of your nation for complete independence, which is good in itself, but they also give accounts of Indian life and that show that you lack understanding what freedom really is and upon what it rests in the beginning. . . .

India is trying for independence by her very endeavour from God’s Rule as well as from a Christian nation, whereas the greatest enemy of India are the majority of Indians, who neither thoroughly understand God’s Holy Will or even her Christian neighbour, England.

Just as it was an act of charity and goodness on the part of God to provide more ample clothing for the fallen and erring parents of ours, mine as well as yours, so is the endeavour of England and others to provide for India more cloth only as an act of Christian charity and goodness. . . .

India should first of all seek ample clothing and education on the Holy Will of God as narrated in Holy Scripture as a base to obtain independence. . . .

The greatest enemy of India causing the most oppression and suffering is ignorance on your own part and that of the people, not England. . . .

I have made hardly two alterations in the text for easier reading. The correspondent addresses me “Dear friend in Jesus Christ”. His sincerity is as clear as his ignorance. The reason why I publish the letter is to show how even in the enlightened West people can be mis-taught. In this letter there is ignorance of history and, if I may venture to say so, ignorance even of the Bible. This letter represents teaching of one type.

A correspondent from New York the other day sent me cuttings

¹ Only extracts are reproduced here.
showing how events in India were misreported and misrepresented. The correspondent warned me against being deceived by the attention paid to me by American Pressmen here into believing that the whole of America was bubbling with enthusiasm for us. He implied that for one sympathetic message or article there were ninety-nine prejudiced articles or reports belittling everything Indian.

Reginald Reynolds cites a third variety. He thinks that the English people from their infancy have no chance of knowing the truth about India. False history is dinned into the ears of boys and girls. The table talk too about India is no better. Of this type of teaching we here have also some experience. We know what history we learn in schools and what we have to unlearn by bitter experience. We are taught to imagine the blessings and virtues of British rule; we learn, as we grow, to know the contrary. Our greatest enemy is therefore ignorance spread often wilfully to prejudice us. It is true that we have also to clean our own stables but not in the sense and the manner suggested by the Wilmington correspondent.

Young India, 14-5-1931

125. ‘JUDGE LYNCH DECIDES’

A correspondent writes:

I am taking the liberty of enclosing herewith a small cutting from the Literary Digest which will speak for itself. I wonder what you think of the whole shameful affair? I dare say you meet many an American visitor or interviewer who often demand of you a message to their country or invite you to their continent. Would it be too much to ask of you to give them a message to see that such atrocities as lynching of a hapless and coloured race are put a stop to?

The cutting he referred to has the above heading and reads as follows:

This does make sad reading. If we had no faith in the ultimate Good, we would lose all hope. I have faith and therefore hope that this lynching will yield place to proper justice. I do not pretend to the influence over American opinion that the correspondent credits me with. But I have no doubt that the people of that continent are fully alive to the evil and are trying their best to remove this blot on American humanity.

Young India, 14-5-1931

1 The report is not reproduced here. It described how a Negro was lynched.
126. LETTER TO SYED AZMATULLAH

May 14, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter¹. I can only give you my assurance that I shall do my best to promote Hindu-Muslim unity. What I am striving for is a heart unity. The solution of the constitutional question rests in many other hands than mine.

Yours sincerely,

From a photostat : S.N. 17034

127. LETTER TO HENRY NEIL²

May 14, 1931

DEAR FRIEND.

I have your characteristic letter³. Only I am not going to America in the near future.

Yours sincerely,

From a photostat : S.N. 17072

128. LETTER TO S. RANGOO RAM

AS AT SABARMATI,

May 14, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. It is not at all certain that I am going to London. The odds are that I am not. But if I do, personally I would like to accept the offer of Miss Muriel Lester who has an institution of hers somewhere in the East End. But as I do not know the ins and outs I have simply left it with Mr. C. F. Andrews who is fortunately now there and who knows all about me. Naturally I would love to accept your offer also but I have already told Miss Lester that if the political

¹ The addressee had written : “If only you make it known to the Muslims that you would accept the other thirteen points of Mr. Jinnah, if separate electorates are given up, I assure you the Muslims would adopt a more accommodating attitude and agree to joint electorates. . . .”

² Judge Henry Neil, founder of the Centenarian Club

³ The addressee had written : “I would like to be of service to your campaign for freedom. Especially if you should come here.”
exigencies do not come in the way and if any reception committee that might be formed also does not come in the way and the choice rests with me, it shall be to live in her institution. Now you know my inclination. You will do what you like in consultation with Mr. C. F. Andrews or the committee that may be formed.

Please do not ask me to send anything for your magazine if only because I do not know what it is to be like. But you must forgive me also because I hardly get time to cope with the regular correspondence. I do not therefore like to take up even small things that may occupy only a few minutes because it is an aggregate of few minutes that makes a cycle.

Yours sincerely,

S. RANGOO RAM, ESQ.
INDIAN STUDENTS CENTRAL ASSOCIATION
LONDON S.W. 3

From a photostat : S.N. 17073

129. LETTER TO SURESH CHANDRA BANERJI
AS AT SABARMATI,
May 14, 1931

MY DEAR SURESH,

I have your letter. I do not see anything on the horizon to warrant the hope that peace will be established as a result of the Round Table Conference. On the contrary, as I have said openly, nature seems to be against us. I hold it to be impossible practically to get the constitution we want without a heart unity amongst the different communities. That unity is not likely to be forthcoming in the near future. There are many other things too that are against us. But as God confounds man’s hopes and out of his disappointments brings forth hope, it is difficult to say precisely what is going to happen. My business-like answer to you therefore is you should hope for the best, prepare for the worst, but a satyagrahi’s preparation for the worst and the best is always the same. You would still be spreading the gospel of the wheel. You would still be nursing the needy sick. You would still be looking after the pauper children and things of this kind are the best preparation for civil disobedience and the like when they come. Have I made myself quite clear to you? If not, tackle me again. Your own particular business is to become well. I have the extra Rs. 1,000 in mind. About the rest you will discuss with Jamnalalji when he comes to Calcutta which he will do some time or other. I am likely to be back in Borsad at the end of the month.

DR. SURESH CHANDRA BANERJI
ABHOY ASHRAM
COMILLA (BENGAL)

From a photostat : S.N. 17074

130. LETTER TO HARIBHAU UPADHYAYA

FIRGROVE, SIMLA

May 14, 1931

DEAR HARIBHAU,

Bapuji has received your letter of the 10th. He has already expressed his opinion about writing to Bhopal. As far as I remember the letter he wrote you was posted on 6-5-31 from Borsad¹. But your letter does not contain even an acknowledgement. I too had written to you a separate letter. In that letter I had suggested that you should inform Bapu of the latest and up-to-date position in regard to repression in princely states. That too you have disregarded. What does all this mean?

Your letter of the 10th was shown to Jamnalalji as per Bapu’s instructions. On pursuing it he remarked that Bapuji had already written regarding Bhopal, that he does not consider it proper for him to write to Nawabs and Rajas about such matters in the present circumstances. But Jamnalalji himself had written to Bikaner and he will do whatever else is necessary.

About satyagraha, he does think that it was launched in haste but now it cannot be remedied. He wishes to repeat the warning that we should guard against any kind of mistake or violence on our part.

Yours,

PYARELAL

From the Hindi original: Haribhau Upadhyaya Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

131. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, SIMLA

May 14, 1931

You will like to hear why I have come to Simla and what talk I am having with the Government. I cannot tell you everything, but I can tell you that I came to hold consultation with regard to the complaints on our side as well as on the Government side with regard to the Settlement arrived at between Lord Irwin and the Congress. These consultations still continue. What I have to emphasize is that if you are Congress sewak\(^1\) and want to serve Hindustan, then it is your duty to observe that Agreement irrespective of whether the Government observes it or not.

After we have fulfilled our obligation, and if after that we find the Government has not fulfilled it we can take whatever step we like. We know that whatever settlement has been arrived at is conditional, but if we can use the settlement for some work, we should do it.

As a satyagrahi, if we get an opportunity for service as a result of understanding, we should welcome it. That opportunity came your way through the Settlement.

The Karachi Congress practically unanimously adopted it. Now our duty is what I have described. Do not think that after this Settlement we have to go to war. We should, on the other hand, do everything to see that we are not led to war and that the Settlement should become permanent, so that we may get \textit{purna} swaraj.

You know the conditions that have been imposed by Congress on such of your delegates as will go to London to attend the Round Table Conference. But if, as the result of settlement, we cannot get complete swaraj, it is our ill-luck, and if our efforts towards a permanent settlement fail, we should be ready for a fresh struggle.

But there are two points more which I wish to emphasize besides the Settlement. If we wish to achieve what we want at the Round Table Conference, we must be properly equipped :and that equipment is that all the people of India—people who are born here and have made India their home, whether Hindus, Muslims, Sikhs, Christians, Parsis and others—should unite in the demand for swaraj. Unless we bring about such an understanding among ourselves my going to London is useless. Therefore we should all make such efforts as would make for unity among all communities in this country.

\(^{1}\) Volunteer
But I do not want unity on paper. If we write out a pact on paper, unity is not thereby achieved. The unity I want is the unity of heart and for that unity I always pray. And when that unity is achieved you will gain such strength as will give us success.

I am afraid my voice is not reaching you all and that you are feeling upset by rain. Let me pray to God that we may be saved a second struggle and that this Settlement may lead to final success.

As regards work, you have the Congress resolution before you and you have every scope for work in respect of the spread of khaddar and boycott of liquor. I thank you all.

The Hindustan Times, 16-5-1931

132. HOMAGE TO K. T. PAUL

SIMLA,

May 15, 1931

I had the privilege of knowing Mr. K. T. Paul. The nearer I came to him the more I respected him. His Christianity appeared to me to be broad and tolerant. It not only did not interfere with his being a thorough nationalist, on the contrary, in his case it seemed to have deepened his nationalism. And in nationalist circles it will always be remembered, to the credit of the deceased, that he stoutly opposed the demand for any special concessions for Christian Indians in the forthcoming constitution, believing as he did that character and merit would always command not only proper treatment but respectful attention. His death especially at this time in the life of the nation is a distinct loss to the country.

From a photostat: S.N. 17075

133. CABLE TO “EVENING STANDARD”

[May 15, 1931]¹

Replying to The Evening Standard’s question whether he is coming to London, Mr. Gandhi has cabled that it is contingent on certain circumstances, two of which are a satisfactory working of the Settlement and the solution of the communal question.

Young India, 21-5-1931, and The Hindu, 16-5-1931

¹ Reported from London on this date
134. LETTER TO S. SATYAMURTI

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 15, 1931

MY DEAR SATYAMURTI,

I have your letter. So far as I know there is no chance of my going to London. Several things have to happen before I could consent to go.

Yours sincerely

M. K. GANDHI

From the original: S. Satyamurti Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

135. INTERVIEW TO THE PRESS

SIMLA,
May 15, 1931

Mahatma Gandhi said his conversation was healthy and good and he was not seeing the Viceroy again in Simla. He would be seeing Mr. Emerson, the Home Secretary, again tomorrow and leaving Simla for Nainital positively on the 17th, Sunday.¹

Mahatma Gandhi refused the answer the question if he was more optimistic regarding his going to London and the general political situation, and added:

For any further information you must go to the Viceregal Lodge.

While walking towards Sir Fazl Hussain’s residence, he was asked whether he would favour Simla as the seat of the Swaraj Government. He replied:

We must go down five thousand storeys to the plains, for government should be among the people and for the people.

The Hindustan Times, 17-5-1931

¹ For the report of the interview with H. W. Emerson, vide “Note by H. W. Emberson on Interview Between Himeself and Gandhiji”, 18-5-1931
136. TELEGRAM TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

SIMLA,
May 16, 1931

SARDAR VALLABHBHAI

BARDOLI

IF YOU HAVE HEARD FROM JAWAHARLAL SUGGEST YOUR HOLDING MEETING NINTH BARDOLI OR ANY OTHER PLACE YOU MAY THINK FIT. PROCEEDING NAINITAL TOMORROW.

BAPU

A.I.C.C. File No. 273, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

137. LETTER TO KHAN CHAND DEV

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 16, 1931

DEAR DR. KHAN CHAND,

I was glad to receive your exhaustive note and it came just in time. There will be difficulty about the release of the remaining prisoners. I must now ask you to give me copy of judgment and evidence in each case if it is at all possible or have a note prepared there on each case showing why you consider that the prisoners concerned fall within the Settlement. You must give me also a full description about the cases still pending.

Yours sincerely,

DR. KHAN CHAND DEV
BRADLAUGH HALL
LAHORE

From a microfilm : S.N. 17082

138. LETTER TO SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 16, 1931

DEAR SATISBABU,

I have your two letters. Hemprabha Devi’s condition makes me feel anxious. Please keep me informed.
Your description of the squabbles there makes one sad and your reading of Subhasabu sadder still. I am glad you are entirely keeping out of party affairs. The Mussalman cutting has not given me satisfaction. The translations of Rashtravani are good. I think you ought to add salt to your food. I had long chats here with the authorities on matters arising out of the Settlement. They are fairly satisfactory. I am now going to Nainital and then reach Borsad about the end of this month.

S yat. S atis Chandra Das Gupta
Khadi Pratishtan
Sodepur (Bengal)

From a photostat: S.N. 17083

139. LETTER TO A. FENNER BROCKWAY

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 16, 1931

Dear Friend,

I thank you for your cablegram which has been redirected to me here. I am not replying by cable as my opinion remains the same as I explained to you in a previous letter. I gave you only one reason preventing me from going to London. But I should have mentioned another also namely the work of the Settlement. Though I am receiving help at the centre, local authorities are giving great deal of trouble in implementing the Settlement and they are accusing local Congressmen of breach on their part. I have ample evidence and I am investigating every case of breach on the part of individuals, but in the vast majority of cases Congressmen have fully implemented the Settlement. I am making no mention whatsoever of breach on the part of the authorities whilst I am still negotiating with them and in the hope that things will be put right in the near future. But this thing practically takes away all my time and keeps me in India.

Yours sincerely,

Fenner Brockway, Esq.
Rickmansworth
Herts. (England)

From a photostat: S.N. 17084

1 Between Subhas Chandra Bose and J. M. Sen Gupta over the affairs of Bengal Provincial Congress Committee; vide footnote to “Telegram to J. M. Sen Gupta”, 4-6-1931.
140. LETTER TO RAMLAL SINGH

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 16, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. Perhaps you do not know that I am under a vow not to live at the Ashram until a full settlement is made and India has got what she wants. If you would stay at the Ashram notwithstanding this fact, I would like you please to write to the Manager of the Ashram and I have no doubt that he will admit you for the few weeks’ stay.

Syt. Vithalbhai Patel’s address is: C/o Thomas Cook & Son, London.

Yours sincerely,

THAKUR RAMLAL SINGH
KANTIT ESTATE
P.O. BJAIPUR (MIRZAPUR)

From a microfilm : S.N. 17085

141. LETTER TO K. NATARAJAN

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 16, 1931

DEAR MR. NATARAJAN,

You will please excuse me for the delay in acknowledging your letter. You know the reason why. The statement imputed to me is a pure invention. The conclusion that the British regime is an evil was arrived at after laborious studies fortified by painful experiences. I have set forth the whole process in Hind Swaraj as also in My Experiments with Truth. It was good of Mr. Bittman that he refused to believe the report without verification. I may add that I do not even remember the meeting with Bishop Azariah. I return Mr. Bittman’s letter.

Yours sincerely,

Encl. 1

SYT. K. NATARAJAN
“INDIAN SOCIAL REFORMER” OFFICE,
BOMBAY

From a microfilm : S.N. 17086

1 Vide “Speech at Prayer Meeting, Sabarmati Ashram”, 11-3-1930
142. NOTES

HOW TO END DARKNESS?

A graduate asks:¹

This is partly true. In a letter which is lying along with the above, I find the following: “Amongst us, the expenses incurred on the death of a person have been completely stopped, there is less of weeping and wailing, marriages are becoming simpler, and less expensive.” This is not surprising. Such reforms ought to come about at the end of a great sacrifice. What, however, is surprising is that despite the sacrifice, despite correct understanding of the situation, untouchability has not been totally uprooted. At many places the untouchables are still prohibited from drawing water from the village well, their children cannot freely attend all public schools, caste distinctions and considerations of high and low still persist, mutual quarrels still take place, girls continue to be sold, young men continue to expect to receive cash from a girl’s father.

What is the reason for this?

Our attention is directed outwards, we do not look within ourselves. We find it exciting to fight the Government. We adopt those reforms which are absolutely necessary for carrying on that struggle and continuing it. But we find no excitement in fighting against ourselves, in carrying on a peaceful war against society, or we find it less exciting to do so.

Who will end this laxity?

Volunteers, graduates of the Vidyapith, women volunteers and vanarsena ² “But if the salt hath lost its savour, wherewith shall it be salted?” The volunteers—both men and women—find this work uninteresting. They do not realize that swaraj cannot be won if these tasks are not done, or even if it is won, it cannot be preserved. It is clear as daylight that swaraj is nothing but the development of all sections of the people. Hence if the rural workers now come forward in large numbers and carry out these tasks silently and with determination and diligence, darkness will disappear and dawn will break.

¹ The letter is not translated here. It had complained that the people continued to be ignorant in spite of a year of struggle.
² Literally, “monkey-army”—name given to volunteer bands of children during the Civil Disobedience Movement.
BHAGINI SEVA SANGH

Shri Karsandas Chitalia and Shrimati Surajbhn Manilal have jointly decided to set up an organization under this name. Thanks to the efforts of Shri Karsandas, the Bhagini Seva Mandir was built and opened in Vile Parle. He has now issued a pamphlet for the establishment of the Sangh. Whoever wishes to read the whole of it should obtain a copy from Shri Karsandas. It gives the following information about the Sangh:

Women who have the following qualifications can join it:

The pamphlet concludes as follows:

I wish Shri Karsandas success in this enterprise.

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan, 17-5-1931

143. OPINION UNCHANGED

Commenting on the article entitled “A Twentieth-Century Sati (?)”, Shri Mathuradas Devram writes as follows:

I have published this letter for the sake of fairness. My opinion remains unaltered even after having known all these facts. The facts as they were published have been corroborated and so my grief is all the greater and my opinion has been strengthened. This is an example not of love but of strong emotion. What does man not do when overcome by emotion? If that very woman had survived, she could have perpetuated her husband’s memory by her dedicated life. Having died, she did not accompany her husband. It is an error to believe that the relationship ends as soon as the body perishes. But even if that were at all true, she could not preserve that relationship. Just as her husband’s body was reduced to ashes, hers too was reduced to ashes; hence along with the departure of the one, the other too followed suit. In this pathetic incident, I find nothing at all praiseworthy. I hope that even this woman’s relatives do not consider this suicide as the act of a sati. Rather than teach women to love their

1 These excerpts are not translated here.
2 Ibid
3 Ibid
4 Vide “A Twentieth Century Sati (?)”, 21-5-1931.
5 The letter is not translated here. It had described and justified the action of the woman who had burnt herself on the pyre of her husband.
husbands blindly, we should liberate them and show them through our conduct that the soul in a woman has equal rights with the soul in a man.

Now about Shri Mathuradas’s last question. In the sentence “A woman who is a sati will participate in the function of procreation within limits,” the phrase ‘a woman who is a sati’ has been used to denote a woman of good character whose husband is alive. My ideal is to make husbands and wives practise total celibacy. If that is not possible, my purpose was to say that both should, within limits, participate in the function of procreation. That is to say, sexual union between the two should be permitted only for the sake of this function and that too for the limited number of children that both desire. This, in my opinion, is limited self-restraint.

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan, 17-5-1931

144. PUBLIC EXPENSE

No province in India has enjoyed such privileges in the matter of public funds as Gujarat. The Gujarat Provincial Congress Committee has never found its exchequer empty. Nor have its district or taluk branches ever been left to want the funds that they needed. It has been my conviction for years that such affluence cannot be good for any public institution. There comes a point in the life of every institution that has a prestige in public, when it experiences this plethora of funds and all the risks and dangers attendant on it. At that time, if it does not take care and does not spend like a miser, it is bound to come to grief. Because an institution happens to have plenty of funds it does not mean that it should anyhow spend away every pie that it possesses. The golden rule is not to hesitate to ask for or spend even a crore when it is absolutely necessary and when it is not, to hoard up every pie though one may have a crore of rupees at one’s disposal.

I am afraid that this golden rule has not been always followed by the Gujarat Committees. In fact I should not be surprised if I discovered the existence even of a certain laxity in this respect. I would therefore suggest to every Taluka and District Congress

---

1 The original Gujarati of this was published in Navajivan on May 17. This is a translation by Pyarelal.
committee in Gujarat to hold a close scrutiny into its accounts and to relentlessly apply the axe wherever it is found to be necessary. We may not build a pucca building when a thatched cottage would do. We may not use a motor-car when a bullock-cart would serve the purpose and we must avoid the bullock-cart when the journey can be made on foot. Similarly the rigidest economy should be exercised in regulating the expenses of feeding the workers. The best course would be for all Congress organizations to get their account books inspected by some experienced person who knows how to economize public expenditure and to invite criticisms and suggestions from him for future guidance. Ten years ago there used to be a golden rule in Gujarat that every District, Village or Taluka Congress Committee was expected to raise sufficient funds at least for its needs and to deposit them with the Provincial Congress Committee. The practice remained in force for some years and then fell into abeyance. Now all district organizations draw upon the Provincial Committee for funds. This is a dangerous situation. What guarantee is there that the exchequer of the Provincial Congress Committee will always remain brimful? Nor is it right for the Provincial Congress Committee to entertain such an ambition. It is therefore high time that the good old rule were revived. We may rest assured that funds will automatically come when there is good work done and there is need for them. Only we shall have to cultivate sufficient self-confidence and faith in our mission. It would be worth while to draw attention here to the rule laid down by the Congress in this connection. The All-India National Congress does not supply funds to the provinces; it is the latter that are required to contribute ten per cent of their income to the central organization. Why should not this rule apply to the provincial organizations as well? And why should not the districts be made to contribute ten per cent or a fair proportion of their income to provincial organizations? It is simply ridiculous for the provinces to be required to finance district organizations. In fact it is almost like a person trying to walk on his head instead of naturally on his feet. Such topsyturvydom cannot last for long.

“But what about times of emergency?” some doubting reader will perhaps, here, ask. “Do these rules of economy prescribed by you apply even when the country is in a state of war?” My reply is: “Certainly they do, even more when war is going on than when all is safe and well.” God forbid, but should fighting have to be resumed, we shall need to have the capacity to carry on with the minimum of funds or even without funds. It is a fundamental principle of satyagraha that the tyrant whom the satyagrahi seeks to resist has power over his body and material possessions but he can have no power over the soul. The soul can remain unconquered and unconquerable even when the body is imprisoned. The whole science of satyagraha was born from a knowledge of this fundamental truth. In the purest form of satyagraha there should be no need for conveyances, carriage fare or even of doing Hijrat. And in case Hijrat has to be performed it will be done by journeying on foot. The Hijratis would have to be satisfied with whatever hard fare falls to their lot and keep smiling when even that fails. When we have developed this ‘be careful for nothing’ attitude, we shall be saved from many a botheration and trouble and freedom will dance attendance upon us. Nor should one suppose that a ‘careful for nothing’ person shall have always to be starving. God that provides the little ant its speck of food and to the elephant his daily one maund bolus will not neglect to provide man with his daily meal. Nature’s creatures do not worry or fret about tomorrow but simply wait on tomorrow for the daily sustenance. Only man in his overweening pride and egotism imagines himself to be the lord and master of the earth and goes on piling up for himself goods that perish. Nature tries every day by its rude shocks to wean him from his pride but he refuses to shed it. Satyagraha is a specific for bringing home to one the lesson of humility. We have travelled so much distance during the last year, we have gone through so much suffering and had so many rich experiences that we ought to have sufficient faith in us to be able to feel that if we throw ourselves upon God’s mercy untroubled by doubt or fear, it would be well with us.

Young India, 21-5-1931

145. LETTER TO BHUPENDRA NARAYAN SEN

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 17, 1931

MY DEAR BHUPEN,

I have your letter. You will see the use I have made of your reference to Habu’s mother. Why have you not got her name? You should have known her age also and had a snapshot. Just now my

1 Emigration enjoined on Muslims when faced with religious persecution
2 Vide “A Woman’s Sacrifice”, 21-5-1931

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
movement has again become uncertain. I do not know when I shall go to Bardoli. But as soon as I am fixed up somewhere for some time, both of you may certainly come and stay with me.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. BHUPENDRA NARAYAN SEN
KHADI MANDAL
CALCUTTA

From a microfilm : S. N. 17087

146. LETTER TO A. SUBBIAH

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 17, 1931

MY DEAR SUBBIAH,

I got your letter just as I was moving from Borsad. Since then there has been no time before now. I understand your difficulties. I am therefore sending your letter to Rajaji and asking him to relieve you as soon as he can. This is unfortunate but it is inevitable. I agree with you that you must be with Seshan and you owe a duty to Lalita also. Your indifferent health is an additional reason for relieving you. I shall be in Borsad about the end of this month. We are leaving Simla this afternoon to go to Nainital which we reach tomorrow, Monday. If your health permits, you will not leave Rajaji till he is otherwise suited and you should leave him with the intention of returning to him whenever you are free and he needs you.

SYT. A. SUBBIAH
GANDHI ASHRAM
TIRUCHENGODU (S. INDIA)

From a microfilm : S. N. 17089

147. LETTER TO C. RAJAGOPALACHARI

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 17, 1931

Here is a letter from Subbiah. I think you should relieve him at the earliest opportunity. The question is what you will do.

Somebody had sent Mr. Emerson your printed circular of instructions. He was most enthusiastic about it and asked me specially to congratulate you on his behalf. I had a very busy time here, also profitable but exasperating. Local Governments have responded only up to a point. Evidently they have not liked the Settlement. To get them to implement the Settlement is therefore like drawing the lion’s teeth. All the grace is therefore lost.

With Lord Willingdon we exchanged courtesies, renewed the old acquaintance and the work being finished I am now off to Nainital to meet Sir Malcolm Hailey over the U. P. troubles. More from Mahadev if he has been writing to you. Do write if you have the time, but not otherwise.

Encl. 1
SYT. C. RAJAGOPALACHARIAR
GANDHI ASHRAM
TIRUCHENGODU (S. INDIA)

From a microfilm : S.N. 17090

148. INTERVIEW TO THE PRESS
May 17, 1931

Mahatma Gandhi stated that he was on the whole satisfied with his visit and he was able to understand that so far as the Central Government was concerned they were trying to give effect to the terms of the Delhi Pact. He reiterated his attitude that he would go to the London Conference if the communal question was solved and if there was a satisfactory working of the Pact throughout India.

As for the communal problem itself he recognized there was a good deal of mistrust but after Bhopal discussion; he was more optimistic.

Question. Supposing you or the Congress do not attend the Round Table Conference and the Conference produces a constitution which is approved by Parliament. What would be the attitude of the Congress?

Answer. I may speak on behalf of the Congress that it will examine the scheme and if good, will certainly work it.

Q. Do you believe in self-determination?
A. Yes.

Q. Would you allow any province to exercise self-determination and separate herself from India?
A. I shall fight through reason but shall not impose my will by force of arms.

Pressed regarding his views on the communal problem, he reiterated his position that if the Sikhs and Mohammedans presented agreed demands, he would accept them unhesitatingly.²

² What follows is from The Statesman.
When asked whether he did not think it a pity that nation-wide progress should wait for local settlements, he said:

Well, if we can look after the pennies, we can look after the pounds too. Why do I insist on this? These local settlements are like the straws which show the way the wind is blowing, and that wind may turn the weather-vane even of the Round Table Conference—even perhaps veer it right round.

Q. The Bombay Chronicle says: “Need we repeat that the most effective method speeding up the work of the Round Table Conference and making it completely successful, is to intensify the boycott of foreign cloth?” That obviously means that The Bombay Chronicle regards the boycott as a political weapon and as a discriminatory weapon, because a boycott of Japanese cloth could hardly speed up the work of the Round Table Conference. Don’t you think that that sort of talk is inconsistent with both the spirit and the letter of the Delhi Agreement?

A. I have not seen the article from which you have quoted. But I can say broadly that it would be inconsistent both with the spirit and the letter of the Pact to think of the foreign-cloth boycott as a political weapon. Foreign cloth includes Japanese cloth just as much as British cloth, if not much more at present, for the simple reason that it ousts khadi and Indian mill cloth far more effectively than British cloth. The economic and social reasons for the boycott are all-sufficing.

Q. How far are you prepared to go to conciliate the British Conservatives’ anxiety about safeguards?

A. To the utmost extent, consistent with the interests and honour of India.

In answer to the question whether he thought the local difficulties in respect of the Agreement would be removed, say by July, Gandhiji replied:

That I can’t say. But of course, I hope so, and I have hopes that they will.

Q. And the Hindu-Muslim question? What do you think of the steps taken at the Bhopal meetings of Muslims?

A. They are encouraging, and both the Muslim parties are evidently doing their best to arrive at unity among themselves. But, of course, when I speak of the Hindu-Muslim question I mean the entire communal question. When the Hindu-Muslim side of the matter is brought up, the Sikhs, for instance, will have their say. There will be difficulties. I hope that they will not prove insurmountable.
Q. So you will really go to Round Table Conference, whether early or late, when those two problems are out of the way?

A. Yes, certainly. And I shall be very pleased to go, because I hope that when I get to England I shall find the British people not uninterested in what I have to say and open to conviction by what I tell them. Or, at the worst, I hope I shall persuade them that I am only a harmless lunatic.

Q. And Lord Rothermere?

A. Oh yes. . . . even Lord Rothermere.

The Hindustan Times, 20-5-1951, and The Statesman, 19-5-1931

149. MESSAGE TO KARNATAK PROVINCIAL CONFERENCE

[May 18, 1931]

The resolution on fundamental rights is the most important resolution of the Congress. It shows what kind of swaraj the Congress wants to achieve. That swaraj is the poor man’s swaraj or Ramrajya. Rama symbolized justice and equity, Rama symbolized truth and charity.

The resolution insists on religious toleration, which means, that no one will be prevented from discharging his religious obligations, and the State shall favour no religion.

Justice and equity mean the establishment of just and equitable relation between capital and labour, between the landlord and the tenant. The landlord and the capitalist will cease to exploit the tenant and the labourer but will studiously protect his interests.

Not that these things will be there as a matter of course as soon as we get the powers. I only mean that they will follow as the natural consequence of truth and non-violence if swaraj is achieved by those means. The question is whether we are following truth and non-violence. Ramrajya cannot be the result of truth and non-violence followed as a mere temporary expedient or policy. Ramrajya can only come out of truth and non-violence pursued as a creed. Could a son ever fulfil his filial duties as a policy? Policy is essentially a temporary expedient which one might alter as circumstances altered.

1 Vide also “Letter to Jamnalal Bajaj”, 8-5-1931

2 According to Mahadev Desai, Gandhiji wrote this message “last Monday”. May 18 was a Monday.
It is easy enough to follow truth and non-violence so long as no sacrifice or suffering is involved, but he who adheres to them in all circumstances even at the cost of life follows them as a creed. It is time truth and non-violence were a creed and not policy with us Congressmen.

Let us therefore find out what parts of the resolution we can enforce even now. If we do not enforce the things that can be enforced today, swaraj will be meaningless, for we will not suddenly do after swaraj things which we can do but will not do today.

The resolution states that there shall be no untouchability under the swaraj constitution. Have we cast out the canker of untouchability? The resolution says under the swaraj constitution there shall be no facilities for the licensing of liquor and drug shops. Have we cast out the drug and drink evil from our midst? The resolution goes on to say that under swaraj all foreign cloth would be banned from India. But have we given up our infatuation for foreign cloth and become khaddar clad? Similarly under swaraj, according to this resolution, Hindus and Mussalmans and Christians will live together like true blood brothers. Have we cleansed our hearts of distrust and suspicion of one another? Under swaraj, which the resolution pictures, there shall be no hatred or ill-will between the rich and the poor. Have the rich identified themselves with the poor, and have the poor ceased to have ill-will toward the rich? Under the swaraj constitution we want the maximum monthly emoluments of officials not to exceed Rs. 500. But do those who are getting more today devote the balance to philanthropic purposes? Have our millionaires adjusted their standard of living to this scale of payment?

It is difficult to give a decisive reply to these questions today. We are today slowly groping our way towards our ideal of Ramarajya or the Kingdom of Righteousness. This resolution is intended to keep this goal constantly before our eyes and to stimulate our endeavours to attain it.

Young India, 28-5-1931
150. LETTER TO PRABHASHANKAR PATTANI

May 18, 1931

SUJNA BHAISHRI,

I got your letter. Your complaint is entirely justified. I have written to Bhai Fulchand. Need I give you a time to see me? If fact you do not come at all. You have a right to come and see me wherever I may be and whenever you may wish to. I am going today from here to Nainital, and from there I shall go to Borsad, where I shall reach by the 27th instant. You may come here. The air and water of the place are good and the accommodation also may be said to be fairly good.

Vandematram from

MOHANDAS

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5916. Also C.W. 3231. Courtesy: Mahesh Pattani

151. LETTER TO SHARDA C. SHAH

May 18, 1931

CHI. SHARDA,

I have your letter. Do not spoil your handwriting. Read the translation of a poem on handwriting by Ramdas Swami which I had sent. Send me a copy of it. I shall publish it in Navajivan some time.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati: C. W. 9901. Courtesy: Shardabehn G. Chokhawala
152. TELEGRAM TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

NAINITAL,
May 18, 1931

TO
SARDAR VALLABHBHAI
BARDOLI

SUGGEST YOUR SEEING COLLECTOR ALSO COMMISSIONER. AM WIRING SIMLA. HOPE REACHING BORSAD ABOUT TWENTYFIFTH

BAPU

A.I.C.C. File No. 273, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

153. LETTER TO JAMNADAS GANDHI

NAINITAL,
May 18, 1931

CHI. JAMNADAS,

We have just arrived here. Prabhudas and Dhiru have come with me. I got your telegram. If Prabhashankar agrees to take Ratilal under his care and Ratilal is willing, where is the need to consult me in the matter? We have of course to think how to meet his expenses. Discuss the matter with Nanalal and then write to me. I understand from Champa that at present she obtains the money she requires for her expenses from Nanalal. Did you write a detailed letter to the Doctor? The problem is becoming more and more complicated. Have a talk with both Ratilal and Prabhashankar and then write to me. I expect to reach Borsad about the 25th inst.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati : C.W. 9322. Courtesy : Jamnadas Gandhi

---

1 In reply to the addressee’s telegram which read : “Harassment peasants Valod Mahal continues. Pending cases not withdrawn still. Confiscated lands not returned in spite offer current year revenue. Yesterday police posted several places prevent peasants entering their fields. Wire programme.”
154. LETTER TO V. A. SUNDARAM

NAINITAL,
May 18, 1931

MY DEAR SUNDARAM,

    I had no time to give you a letter for the Austrian friends. Here is the letter now as also a hundi\(^1\) for Rs. 1000 on Jamnalalji’s firm in Bombay. If you do not go to Bombay you can cash it anywhere. You need not pay any discount. If it is demanded you should return the hundi to me and tell me where you would have the money.

    When will you be going? The money is earmarked for the European visit and no other purpose.

BAPU

From a photostat : G.N. 3203

155. LETTER TO DUDABHAI

NAINITAL,
May 18, 1931

BHAI DUDABHAI,

    I have decided to give Lakshmi in marriage to a non-Antyaja. It seems necessary to me to do that. Let me know what you think in the matter. It will do if you send your reply to the Ashram.

    Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 3243

156. LETTER TO MAHAVIR GIRI

May 18, 1931

CHI. MAHAVIR,

    I got your letter. I am glad that you have changed your mind. You should remain where you are and learn to study. Take the help of Shivabhai and others whenever it is available. Write to me from time to time. Tell me how you have planned your study. One should learn to study by one’s own effort. If a person has sufficient zeal to increase his knowledge he finds out for himself what and how to study.

    Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 6229

\(^1\) A bill of exchange or draft
157. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

NAINITAL,
May 18, 1931

CHI. PREMA,

I liked your letter very much indeed. I see that during the journey you had observed things intelligently. I should like Kisan also to send me a description of her experiences. She may write either in English or Marathi.

Take great care of Lakshmi. My idea is to marry her to a non-Antyaja. She should be able to take her place in such a family. She should know cooking and also how to run a home. She should know how to keep accounts. It would be excellent if she knew a little Sanskrit. Even if she does not know Sanskrit she should be able to recite the prayer verses and verses from the Gita with correct pronunciation.

All girls should know this. We ought not to neglect their education. Write to me in detail. Let me know your experience regarding Lakshmi.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 10254. Also C. W. 6702. Courtesy: Premabehn Kantak

158. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

May 18, 1931

CHI. VASUMATI,

Though there is no letter from you, I am writing this letter as today is my silence day. Have you started working among the people of Nagarwada and other places? I suppose you are now required to report yourself only once to the police station. I hope to reach Borsad about the 25th instant.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9323. Also C. W. 539. Courtesy: Vasumati Pandit
159. LETTER TO FULCHAND K. SHAH

NAINITAL,
May 18, 1931

BHAJ FULCHAND,

Pattani Saheb writes to tell me that at the Bhavnagar session you had resolutions passed on the policy of the Jamnagar State, and also indulged in criticism of that State. This is against our policy. If you agree with this view, you should write in the matter to Pattanji. Bhavnagar gives us many facilities and I do not wish that they should be misused.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 2843. Courtesy: Shardabehn Shah

160. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

NAINITAL,
May 18, 1931

CHI. LILAVATI,

I have your letter. Khurshedbehn will certainly want to have you, but I think it is better that you remain at the Ashram for the present and get trained. Your mind will become steady only when you find some quiet atmosphere at the Ashram. Take care of your health. Profit from Premabehn’s company. Abide by the instructions of Narandas. Be sure that it will be to your benefit.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar
161. Telegram to Jairamdas Doulatram

NAINITAL,
May 19, 1931

JAI RAMDAS DOULATRAM
HYDERABAD (SIND)

ABSOLUTELY PEACEFUL PICKETING ORIGINAL SHOPS MAY CONTINUE
BUT NOT FOR FINES.

GANDHI

From a photostat: S. N. 17103

162. Letter to N. R. Malkani

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 19, 1931

MY DEAR MALKANI,

I have your letter. I know nothing about the proposal to appoint you Secretary of the Sind branch of the A. I. S. A. Shankerlal does not worry me over the working of the Association. When he needs any opinion from me he writes. I am glad you have overhauled the Hyderabad Khadi Bhandar. I do not understand the opening of a central bhandar at Karachi. Are there not two or three going even at present including the one on behalf of the Meerut Ashram by Kikibehn? If there are these bhandars going on, would it not be an interference with the existing bhandars? You will do what Shankerlal suggests. If the Karachi project falls through or even if it does not, I would certainly like your settling down in a village. I attach far greater importance to it than to city work. But you can settle down in a village only if Syt. Choithram and Jairamdas agree. I have always felt that house to house propaganda is far more effective than picketing if the former is done systematically and persistently. I wish I could read and understand your translation.

BAPU

SYT. NARAINDAS R. MALKANI
C/O THE SIND PROVINCIAL CONGRESS COMMITTEE
HYDERABAD (SIND)

From a photostat: G. N. 898

In reply to the addressee’s telegram in which he had described how in Mirpurkhas seals had been broken and fresh foreign cloth had been surreptitiously introduced and had asked for telegraphic instructions whether “under above circumstances original shops may be picketed also if picketing permissible for recovery fines”. Vide also “Letter to Jairamdas Doulatram”, 7-5-1931
163. LETTER TO QUMER AHMED

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 19, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter. I would welcome anything that will remove the present deadlock. But what I notice is that the heart is lacking.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G. N. 5119

164. LETTER TO DENNIS C. TROTH

NAINTAL,
May 19, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter for which I thank you. I am very sorry to inform you that I have no time to write the article you want.

Yours Sincerely,

From a microfilm: S. N. 17003

165. LETTER TO SAILENDRANATH GHOSH

NAINTAL,
May 19 [1931]

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter. I appreciate your anxiety for me to visit America but I cannot summon enough courage for the visit as yet and you will have observed that many friends dissuade me from such a visit. You must have seen even my going to London is an uncertainty.

Yours Sincerely,

From a photostat: S. N. 17013

1 The name of the addressee is supplied from the G. N. register.
2 Professor of Education and Psychology, State College, Pennsylvania, U. S. A.
3 The year is inferred from the contents of the addressee’s letter in which he had written: “What America may mean to the coming negotiations between you and the British Premier will be understood by you only when you will come to this country. The importance of America can be judged from the fact that all the biggest guns of the British—Churchill, Baldwin and a host of lesser figures will be coming to this country next fall to speak on India. . . . For the success of your negotiations—for the interests of India—it is absolutely desirable that you make up your mind to come to this country after the London Conference. . . .”

128 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
166. LETTER TO DURGA PRASANNA CHATTERJEE

NAINITAL,
May 19, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. I have no power to help you in the matter referred to by you. But let me point out to you that to gain representation is surely not the way to deal with the undoubtedly critical economic situation in Bengal.

Yours Sincerely,

From a microfilm: S. N. 17071

167. LETTER TO GULSHAN RAI

NAINITAL,
May 19, [1931]

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter and the cuttings which I shall read with attention.

Yours Sincerely,

From a photostat: S. N. 17076

1 The addressee had written to Gandhiji for “directions as to the best course the poor Bengali merechants should adopt in their utter helplessness so far as their position is concerned in relation to the ensuring Indian Constitutional Reform measures, Franchise Committee and the Second Round Table Conference. . . .” He felt that “the absence of a competent representative from Bengal. . . has put the Bengali mercantile community in a sad plight. . . .”

2 The year is inferred from the addressee’s letter which is dated 15-5-1931.

3 The addressee had enclosed for Gandhiji’s perusal his articles published in The Tribune on the separation of Burma, Dismemberment of the Punjab, and the Minority or Communal Problem. He had written. “It is my conviction that the communal problem in the Punjab and Bengal will never be solved unless effective majority is assured to the Muslims in these two provinces. It would be better under the circumstances to constitute Chittagong, Dacca, and Rajshahi Divisions of Bengal in to a separate province. In that ase Muslims will be about 70% in East Bengal, and Hindus will predominate in West Bengal. Similarly if Ambala Division is separated from the Punjab, the Muslims population in the rest of the Punjab would be raised from 56% to 65%. If the Muslims got effective majority in the newly constituted provinces of Punjab and East Bengal, I am sure they will have no difficulty in accepting joint electrorates.”
168. LETTER TO DR. GOPICHAND BHARGAVA

NAINITAL,
May 19, 1931

DEAR DR. GOPICHAND,

I have your letter\(^1\) of 16th instant. I had to discuss a similar question with Mr. Emerson. I found that under ordinance 9, there was no question of compensation. I am afraid therefore that there is no prospect of getting any compensation.

Yours Sincerely,

From a microfilm: S. N. 17078

169. LETTER TO BODHRAJ

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 19, 1931

DEAR LALA BODHRAJ\(^2\),

I have your letter\(^3\) about Lala Lok Nath. Could you send me a copy of the full record of his case. I shall then see what can be done.

Yours Sincerely,

From a microfilm: S. N. 17079

---

\(^1\) The addressee had passed on to Gandhiji the information received from the manager of Peshawar Khadi Bhandar that in 1930 the Government had confiscated all the goods, cash registers and cash box containing Rs. 198 and personal effects of the manager and that even after the Settlement only one-fourth of the goods and the broken cash box had been returned. He had requested Gandhiji to take up this matter with Emerson.

\(^2\) President, Congress Committee, Multan city

\(^3\) The addressee had informed Gandhiji about the continued incarceration of Lok Nath of Multan who had refused to give a bond of good behaviour while Sham Dass convicted in an identical case had been released after the Settlement.
DEAR MR. DAVID,

I have your letter of the 14th. I see that you are pushing forward your programme of goodwill. You know that you have my sympathy in your laudable endeavour and just now I feel that I can best serve the common purpose by saying nothing in Young India that might in any way hamper you. The letter to Lord Irwin of young Europeans, I am ashamed to have to confess, I had not seen. I am therefore thankful for the copy you have considerately sent me. It is undoubtedly a good letter. Lord Irwin”s reply is worthy of him.

The proposed manifesto is still, I suppose, a private document. The reference to fair trade and living conditions requires a closer examination. I suppose you are aware that Indians in great Britain do not enjoy the rights 'the manifesto assumes they do enjoy. There can be no comparison between the Indian demands in South Africa and the European demand in India. The Indian in South Africa suffers from social, commercial and legal disabilities and is treated as an inferior being. The Indian demand therefore is to rise to a status of equality. The European in India enjoys in every walk of life a position of privilege and his demand for equality is tantamount to the retention of the privileged position. When, therefore, India comes [in] to her own, Europeans are bound to feel the pinch if they are not satisfied, that to be just, the position of privilege must be surrendered. Apart from this the European in Free India has not only nothing to fear but his resourcefulness and his ability will always make him a desirable citizen.

Yours Sincerely,

M. I. DAVID, ESQ.
FORT, BOMBAY

From a photostat: S. N. 17095
171. LETTER TO SUKHENDUBIKAS CHAUDHURI

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 19, 1931

Can I make public use of your letter? Can you prove the facts related?

SYT. SUKHENDUBIKAS CHAUDHURI
PATIYA, DT. CHITTAGONG

From a microfilm: S. N. 17096

172. LETTER TO C. VIJAYARAGHAVACHARIAR

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 19, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

Though your postscript tells me that you expect no acknowledgment to your latest letter, as I have a few moments I want to say that you ought not to be distressed by what you think is want of regard for you on the part of either myself or the other members of the Working Committee. What really is the case is that they do not see eye to eye with you on the things that are today agitating the country. And how shall you blame those who cannot see eye to eye with you even though they may wish to do so?

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

SYT. C. VIJAYARAGHAVACHARIAR
FAIRYFALLS VIEW
KODAIKANAL OBSERVATORY P.O.

From a photostat: S. N. 17098
173. LETTER TO KIRBY PAGE

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 19, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter. I deeply appreciated the cable sent by you and other friends. Without the cable too I had no intention of going to America just yet. But of course your cable and the letters since received have shown that my disinclination was well-grounded.

Yours sincerely,

KIRBY PAGE, ESQ.
NEW YORK (U.S.A.)

From a photostat : S. N. 17099

174. LETTER TO BOYD TUCKER

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 19, 1931

MY DEAR BOYD,

I have your letter. I understand more fully the reason for your wanting to accompany me to London should I go there. At the present moment however there is neither any prospect of going to London nor to America, to America much less. I shall certainly publish your letter regarding missionary enterprise.

BOYD TUCKER, ESQ.
C/O POSTMASTER
SRINAGAR (KASHMIR)

From a photostat : S. N. 17100

175. LETTER TO K. T. MATHEW

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 19, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter. I do remember having received the letters and documents mentioned by you. I made no original sugges-

1 Vide also “Notes”, sub-title A Cry in the Wilderness”, 14-5-1931
2 Vide “Christian Missions”, 28-5-1931
tion. Members of the rival organizations saw me and I certainly approved of the idea of amalgamation of the two. Whether it was to be under the auspices of the Congress or not was a matter for the Amalgamation Committee to decide. There seems to me to be nothing in your letter to warrant a different opinion.

Yours sincerely,

K. T. MATHEW, ESQ.
GENERAL SECRETARY
ALL INDIA STATES SUBJECTS’ CONFERENCE
KUNNAMKULAM (COCHIN STATE)

From a microfilm : S. N. 17101

176. LETTER TO NIRANJAN PATNAIK

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 19, 1931

MY DEAR Niranjan,

I have your letter. I hope you will soon be free from your pecuniary troubles.

There is just now not even a prospect of my going to London, still less the idea of building up a secretariat. Nor have I pictured to myself the number of secretaries to be taken with me. I do not recall the remark imputed to me by you and if I did, it must have been more by way of a joke than anything else. What could an Utkal Secretary do in London? The real redistribution will take place here and not in London.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. NIRANJAN PATNAIK
C/O UDYOGA MANDIR
BERHAMPUR, B.N.RLY.

From a microfilm : S. N. 17102
177. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

NAINITAL,
May 19, 1931

DEAR MR. EMERSON,

I have received the enclosed account of a lathi charge in Ludhiana\(^1\) from a member of the Ludhiana Congress Committee. Of course it has been given to me for publication. Although it has no direct connection with the Settlement I feel that its spirit should prevent such occurrences. If you agree with me, you will please enquire. I shall await your reply before publishing the details. An eye-witness came all the way from Ludhiana to Kalka to describe the whole scene.

Yours sincerely,

Encl. 1

H. W. EMERSON, ESQ.
SIMLA

178. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

NAINITAL,
May 18/19, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

We have just arrived at Nainital. But, today being my silence day, I have some peace. I am, therefore, trying to attend to part of the correspondence which has accumulated. I read Purushottam’s letter. I should know who the lawyers are. Are you sure that connections with them have not been broken off in haste? I cannot judge from here. I suppose whatever is necessary has been done about Purushottam’s demands.

Keep me informed about the success or failure of the Punjabi vaid.

I think we shall return to Borsad some time about the 25th. I shall know more definitely on Wednesday.

Prabhudas and Dhiru have arrived. Rambhau is yet to arrive.

Blessings from

BAPU

\(^1\) On May 16, 1931; vide, “Is It Crumbling?”, 9-7-1931.
[PS.]\(^1\)

Rambhau arrived yesterday evening.

[From Gujarati]

179. LETTER TO MADHAVJI V. THAKKAR

May 20, 1931

CHI. MADHAVJI,

I got your letter, and also Surendra’s. The news is painful, but cases like this are bound to occur at a time of awakening such as the present. We cannot inform the authorities, as that might lead to the punishing of innocent people. Informing the authorities would have been a breach of trust, and I cannot, at the moment at any rate, think of any case or example in which breach of trust becomes a duty. It is one thing when a man puts confidence in us and confesses a crime, another when we come to have indirect information regarding anybody’s crime. In certain circumstances it may be our duty to make use of the information indirectly received, but no such duty arises in this case at all. Hence your job at present is to bring about a reformation, by whatever means, among those now engaged in terrorism.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

[PS.]

I will leave for Gujarat in two or three days, or it may be even tomorrow.

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G. N. 6815

180. SPEECH AT NAINITAL

May 20, 1931

Replying to the address Mahatmaji referred to his interview with the Governor\(^2\) and said that at such a time as this a man in his position could not say as much as the public might be expecting from him. He further said that non-violence was their duty so long as the Congress did not decide otherwise. He further asked the citizens what they had done towards the propagation of khaddar which they had

---

\(^1\) This was added on May 19.

\(^2\) Vide “Sir Malcolm Hailey’s Note on discussions with Gandhiji”, 20-5-1931 promised to do two years before. He urged upon them the importance of khaddar towards helping the attainment of swaraj, without which, he said, India could not be free. He impressed upon them that by merely going to the Round Table Conference he could not achieve all that the Congress was fighting for unless the people stuck to their duties which is the precedent condition for the attainment of swaraj.

The Hindustan Times, 22-5-1931

181. CONGRESS VOTERS

A correspondent asks:

At the time of elections to Congress Committees

1. Can a Congress candidate register original Congress members and himself pay the four-anna fee?

2. In order to obtain votes can a candidate send conveyances at his own expense to the voters?

3. In order to influence voters can a candidate give feasts to voters?

4. Can a voter take part in voting although he is not a habitual wearer of khadi?

These are very relevant questions. My answer to the first three questions is that although the practice would be very reprehensible, I very much fear that there is nothing in the constitution and there are no bye-laws preventing it. My answer regarding the fourth is an emphatic ‘no’. Thus therefore though a candidate can, if he wishes, pay the registration fee on behalf of the members and send them conveyances and give them feasts in order to induce them to vote for him I do hope that for their own sakes and for the sake of the Congress and the country candidates will refrain from resorting to any practice that might amount to bribery or an improper inducement. I have never been able to understand this craze for membership of Congress Committees, and Congress Committees formed in such a manner instead of being instruments of service can easily become those of mischief and disservice. So far as the habitual wearing of khadi is concerned there is no doubt that the rule is more often broken than observed. It is a remarkable phenomenon that habitual wearers of khadi, and they are thousands, do not care to appear on the Congress register and those who are on the Congress register do not, in many cases, take the trouble of wearing khadi. One reason for the laxity is that partisans are brought in at the eleventh hour nominally to become members and to disappear from view as soon as the elections are over. New lists are made at new elections or even bye-elections. In spite of this tragic fact, the Congress is daily growing in power. It is becoming more and more popular. It attracts more and more crowds. Its mandates find ready acceptance from the vast mass of people. This phenomenon can only be explained on the supposition that though the Congress has indifferent representatives, somehow or other it represents and voices the wants and aspirations of the people who remain unaffected by the improprieties of the representatives and support the Congress merely for what it stands for without looking into or caring for the quality of its representatives. If my analysis is correct, the moral is obvious. The Congress will cease to be the power it is if the reprehensible practices referred to by the correspondent do not cease. Congress workers will not always be indifferent.

Young India, 21-5-1931

182. NOTES

PICKETING

Congressmen should know that the Government of India have been receiving complaints from the provincial Governments that picketing is not always peaceful. I do not know how far these complaints are justified. But we cannot be too strict in the observance of our part of the Settlement irrespective of how the authorities implement their part of it. Let us realize that the stricter we are, the greater will be our prestige and strength. I therefore repeat what I have said before:

1. There should be no coercion direct or indirect.
2. There should be no show of intimidation, hence not more than say five pickets should work at one and the same place at a time.
3. There should be no more than courteous entreaty and distribution of literature.
4. There should be no fine levied by Congress Committees for breach of promises by foreign-cloth dealers.
5. There should be no hooting of purchasers of foreign cloth.
6. There should be no cordons formed to surround the would-be purchasers.
7. There should be no lying down to block the passage of customers or trolleys carrying foreign cloth.

If there are those who think that picketing under such restrictions will be of no avail, they may give it up and run the risk of foreign cloth being sold under their noses. It is better that foreign cloth is sold than that, in order to prevent its sale, we should break the letter or the spirit of the Settlement.

\[^1\text{Vide “My Notes”, sub-title To Workers}\]

Boycott of foreign cloth will ultimately succeed only when the Congress message has penetrated the masses and the khadi spirit permeates them. The real work of propaganda and production lies in the villages.

We should remember too that boycott of foreign cloth is pursued for its great economic and social consequence. And it is just as necessary to boycott Japanese or Italian cloth or yarn as it is to boycott British cloth or yarn. Indeed it is more necessary to boycott Japanese cloth because it offers greater competition both to khadi and indigenous mill cloth. We have no ill-will against Japan. We pursue foreign-cloth boycott because it is an economic necessity for the nation.

What I have said about the method of picketing applies equally to liquor picketing. That too depends for its ultimate success in penetration into the home of the drinkers.

SETTLEMENT PRISONERS

I have been receiving complaints from many provinces saying that there are still unreleased prisoners covered by the Irwin-Gandhi Settlement. These are claimed by the Governments concerned as not covered by the Settlement. The only way relief can be obtained in such cases is to study the records of each case. I would therefore ask all Committees who have sent me lists to examine the cases themselves and where they are satisfied that the record shows violence (not merely technical, or incitement thereto), they should for the time being omit their names. Where the local examination shows that there is no violence or incitement proved, they should send the record to me and I shall go through such records myself and wherever necessary obtain the opinion of some philanthropic counsel and press for their release. Let it be remembered that according to the strict interpretation of the relevant clause of the Settlement we shall have to go simply by the record although those who know may be certain of the innocence of any particular prisoner. Of those against whom the record gives no proof of violence, we can demand release. Such was Sjt. Rajwade’s case.

The other prisoners and their friends may derive satisfaction from the assurance that in the event of a final Settlement their release is a certainty and in the event of a breakdown in spite of all efforts, they will find their old companions returning to them. For the result they will not have to wait long.

POORMAN’S SALT

I regret that as yet the public do not know how the salt law relief clause of the Irwin-Gandhi Settlement is being worked. I have suggested to the authorities that they should issue definite instructions so that the people concerned may know where they stand. My suggestion has been accepted by the authorities. The public therefore may expect publication of the instructions in the near future.¹

THAT AMERICAN VISIT²

Dr. Harry Ward writes

May I add a word to the cable which, with others, I sent you today. First let me emphasize the fact that the reason I previously gave against your coming to this country still holds now, and with increased force. Our papers have become increasingly sensational and you would be misrepresented by them, as well as exploited by the sensation-hunting section of our population. Thus your power to help us toward a better way of life would be seriously diminished, if not defeated. But the other reason against your coming is more important. I am sure that it would injure and not help the cause of India in your negotiation at London. There is under the surface a deep English resentment against the United States. This is due to her economic decline and our position of financial dominance. This feeling quickly seizes upon any utterances about British policy as a means for its expression. Thus a perfectly harmless appeal that some of us signed to MacDonald last year to meet with you face to face and seek an adjustment, was the occasion of much criticism of those who signed it, and of America in general, from British ministers of religion. Also there has been much complaint in British papers concerning our sympathy with the nationalist cause. Because British propaganda no longer dominated the situation here we have been told that we were only the victims of clever propaganda from nationalist sources. You can see at once, therefore, that any manifestation of sympathy with India which your presence here might evoke, would work strongly against you at London.

¹ Vide “Salt”, 28-5-1931
² Vide also “Notes” sub-title Remoured American Visit”, 14-5-1931
HOW HE SPENT HIS GOOD FRIDAY

Father Elwin writing to Mirabehn says:

I thought I might tell you how I spent my three hours on Good Friday. I did not go to Church but spent the time in my cell spinning. I am sending a little of the yarn—very poor I am afraid—but it is a token. While spinning I meditated on the crucifixion. It seemed to fit in very well—the cry of desolation of God’s poor stretched on the cross of exploitation, the age-long “I thirst” of those to whom the charkha with its message of love can bring relief, the wonderful patience of the poor—“Father, forgive them for they know not what they do.” The charkha then seemed to be the dual symbol of our union with the poor and our union with God. It would be very good if people would generally keep Good Friday in this way. It was a real experience of purification.

I have examined the yarn sent by Father Elwin. It is by no means poor in quality as he thinks. It is quite weavable. The count is somewhere near 20. Nevertheless, I agree that it is poor for the spirit of love and dedication that lay behind the sacrificial act. But no amount of love or dedication can make up for the want of regular and long practice. If therefore I have agreed with the self-abasing verdict of Father Elwin I have done so not by way of criticism but to tell those who might be induced to turn to the spinning-wheel that they will not be satisfied with merely drawing the thread, for the thread thus drawn will not be yarn, even as any angle drawn will not be a right angle. Just as all right angles must be 90 degrees so must all yarn be even and strong enough to be easily weavable. The count does not matter. A spinner who draws an even and strong thread will automatically draw at least a six count and if his wheel is good and his spindle straight and fine, he will draw without difficulty anything between 10 and 20 counts. I commend Father Elwin’s experience to all who love and would identify themselves with the semi-starved millions of India.

Young India, 21-5-1931

183. A NOTE

NANITAL,

May 21, 1931

It is my firm view that Rani Vidyavati should not involve herself with the editorship of any paper.

From the Hindi Original: Rani Vidyavati Papers. Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library
184. IN 1828

Sjt. Satis Chandra Das Gupta of the Khadi Pratishthan is editing a Bengali newspaper called Rastravani. He recently unearthed a letter addressed to the Editor of Samachar Darpan which was published in Bengali in the twenties of the 19th century. As the letter was of great importance showing how the charkha was being slowly destroyed and how it was valued by women in those days, he has published it in his paper and sent me its translation. I am sure, it will be read with interest by all who are at all interested in the khadi movement. Here is the letter:¹

The representation of a spinner

To the Editor, Samachar

I am a spinner. After having suffered a great deal, I am writing this letter. Please publish this in your paper. . . .

When my age was five and a half gandas (22) I became a widow with three daughters. My husband left nothing at the time of his death. . . . I sold my jewellery for his shraddha ceremony. At last as we were on the verge of starvation God showed me a way by which we could save ourselves. I began to spin on takli and charkha. . . .

The weavers used to visit our houses and buy the charkha yarn at three tolas per rupee. Whatever amount I wanted as advance from the weavers, I could get for the asking. This saved us from cares about food and cloth.

In a few years’ time I got together seven ganda rupees (Rs. 28). With this I married one daughter. And in the same way all three daughters. . . .

Now for 3 years, we two women, mother-in-law and me are in want of food. The weavers do not call at the house for buying yarn. Not only this, if the yarn is sent to market still it is not sold even at one-fourth the old prices. I do not know how it happened. I asked many about it. They say that Bilati² yarn is being largely imported. The weavers buy that yarn and weave. I had a sense of pride that Bilati yarn could not be equal to my yarn, but when I got Bilati yarn I saw that it was better than my yarn. I heard that its price is Rs. 3 or Rs. 4 per seer. I beat my brow and said, “Oh God, there are sisters more distressed even than me.” I know that all men of Bilat are rich but now I see that there are women there who are poorer than me. I fully realized the poverty which induced those poor women to spin. They have sent the product of so much toil out here because they could not sell it there. It would have been something if they were sold here at good prices. But it has brought our ruin only. Man cannot use the cloth out of this yarn even for two months; it rots away. I therefore entreat the spinners over there, that, if they will consider this representation, they will be able to judge whether it is fair to send yarn here or not.

¹ Only extracts are reproduced here. Concerning a doubt raised as to the authenticity of the letter, vide “Letter to Satis Chandra Das Gupta”, 2-6-1931
² Foreign

SHANTIPUR

A representation from a suffering spinner

Samachar Darpan

The reader will not fail to observe the nobility of the writer who in her blissful ignorance felt that yarn was spun by the hands of her Bilati sisters poorer than herself and therefore felt for them. Alas, her belief was baseless. She could have stood her own if the foreign yarn had been hand-spun. She could have stood her own even against the foreign yarn, if behind it there had been no policy of determination to capture the Indian trade and kill the national village industry.

Young India, 21-5-1931

185. A WOMAN’S SACRIFICE

During the great awakening that took place last year amongst women there were heroines whose mute work the nation will never know. Now and then however one gets information of such village work. Here is one such sample sent by a friend:¹

When our Congress camp was declared illegal and locked up by the police we shifted to the hut of a poor Mahishya woman—Habu’s mother of Baradongal. We have read of Gorki’s mother. We saw her incarnate in Habu’s mother. Night and day she used to cook for us workers. She nursed the sick amongst us. She consoled those that were troubled in heart and thus became real mother to us who would otherwise have felt motherless. We had graduates and M.A.s amongst us proud of their educational gifts but all of us were compelled to call Habu’s mother our own. Her sacrifice and great devotion to duty commanded that homage from us.

Young India, 21-5-1931

186. TELEGRAM TO CHAMPABEHN

NAINITAL, May 21, 1931

CHAMPABEHN
CARE RASHTRIYASHALA
RAJKOT

VERY SORRY ABOUT RATILAL. AM ARRANGING ABOUT SPECIALIST GOING RAJKOT SEE RATILAL.

BAPU

From a microfilm : S. N. 17108

187. TELEGRAM TO DR. MEHTA

NAINITAL, May 21, 1931

DOCTOR MEHTA
CARE SIR MANUBHAII
SIMLA

RATILAL SON DOCTOR MEHTA OF RANGOON COMPLETELY DEMENTED BOISTEROUS UNRULY. HAS TO BE KEPT IN CHAINS. HE IS IN RAJKOT. IF YOU KNOW ANY SPECIALIST AND THINK WORTHWHILE PLEASE ASK HIM PROCEED RAJKOT EXAMINE RATILAL. HIS FEES WILL BE PAID. WIRE REPLY NAINITAL.

GANDHI

From a microfilm : S. N. 17115

188. TELEGRAM TO SECRETARY, CONGRESS COMMITTEE CHITTAGONG

NAINITAL, May 21, 1931

SECRETARY
CONGRESS COMMITTEE
IMPOSSIBLE GIVE OPINION WITHOUT KNOWING FULL FACTS.

GANDHI

From a microfilm : S. N. 17116
189. LETTER TO DR. SYED MAHMUD

CAMP NAINITAL,
AS AT SABARMATI,
May 21, 1931

DEAR DR. MAHMUD,

I know you are doing most valuable work. I am not going to discuss with you how mass work can be most effectively done if only because I hardly scrape together a few minutes to attend to correspondence. I shall therefore reserve it for discussion when we meet.

As you see, I am writing this from Nainital where I saw the Governor yesterday. No final conclusion was reached about the revenue matters.

I leave for Gujarat in two or three days if not earlier. The earliest we shall meet, I suppose, will be when the Working Committee meeting takes place early next month. But of course you can anticipate that date and meet me whenever you like. You need no appointment.
Do you?

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

DR. SYED MAHMUD
BAR-AT-LAW
CHANRA (DT. SARAN)

From a photostat: G. N. 5109

190. LETTER TO MOHAMMED ISMAIL KHAN

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 21, 1931

DEAR NAWAB SAHEB,

I thank you for your letter of 19th instant. I have not seen the report you refer to in your letter. But I may state my position thus:

So far as I am concerned I should endorse without hesitation any solution that Mussalman friends as a whole may present but that by itself would not solve our difficulties. Our difficulties could only be solved by either Hindus and Mussalmans settling with the Sikhs or Hindus settling both with Mussalmans and Sikhs. But so far as I am personally concerned I should endorse any solution presented by Sikh friends as a whole as I would the Mussalman claim. But if there is a conflict between the Sikh and the Mussalman claim, then my endorsement of the claim of each would be of little value. I have therefore assumed that whatever Mussalman friends or Sikh friends present as a final claim would take note of the other party. If you find any flaw in this, you will not hesitate to let me know. All I want is an honourable settlement wholly satisfactory to the Mussalmans, to the Sikhs as also to all other communities who may wish a communal solution.

As to your other question supposing that I survive the future constitution and am allowed to have any hand in its working I would have no solution on any but strictly national lines and I would so work the constitution that I should disarm all suspicion.

So far as the Europeans are concerned, the question is not what privileges they should get by reason of their being in a minority but what privileges they will surrender so as to be on a par with us. Am I clear?

I would ask you to believe me to be the same man whom you were good enough to have as your guest in Meerut in those days when for the moment we had begun to think that we were but children of the same mother having the same aspirations and having full trust in one another.

Yours sincerely,

MAHARAJ KUMAR SAHEB OF VIZIANAGRAM
VIZIANAGRAM PALACE, BANARES

---

191. LETTER TO MAHARAJ KUMAR OF VIZIANAGRAM

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter. As I expect to deal with the subject discussed by you in the pages of Young India I need not send you a detailed reply.

Yours sincerely,

MAHARAJ KUMAR SAHEB OF VIZIANAGRAM
VIZIANAGRAM PALACE, BANARES

---

From a photostat: S. N. 17107

From a microfilm: S. N. 17108-a
192. LETTER TO SECRETARY, CONGRESS COMMITTEE, CHITTAGONG

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 21, 1931

THE SECRETARY
CONGRESS COMMITTEE
CHITTAGONG

DEAR SIR,

In reply to your telegram I have sent you the following:

Impossible give opinion without knowing full facts.

Subject to any change that might have to be made after knowing further facts I can say that punitive tax imposed for anything done since Settlement would be no violation thereof. Nor refusal to pay such tax will necessarily be violation of Settlement. But those who will embark upon no-tax campaign will do so after fullest consideration and on their own sole responsibility.

Yours sincerely,

From a microfilm : S. N. 17109

193. LETTER TO S. G. VAZE

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 21, 1931

MY DEAR VAZE,

You never failed to send me the usual anniversary notice and I have ever failed to attend the function. The fact however that I have never been able to attend the function, I am sure, will not be interpreted by any of the members to mean that I have ceased to be one of you. Though our views may be as poles asunder, though we may not seem to be working together on the same platform, I have always felt that we are at heart one, being disciples of the same guru.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. S. G. VAZE
SERVANTS OF INDIA SOCIETY
POONA

From a photostat : S. N. 17111
194. LETTER TO KRISHNA DAS

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 21, 1931

MY DEAR KRISHNA DAS,

Your old familiar handwriting shows that you have made remarkable progress. You will not be in a hurry to regain original strength. You must have no temperature at all. At the end of this dreadful sickness you should be stronger than you were before. Continue to write to me regularly. We all leave here for Borsad at the latest on Sunday.

SYT. KRISHNA DAS
SHAKTI ASHRAM
P.O. RAJPUR
(DT. DEHRA DUN),

From a microfilm : S. N. 17112

195. LETTER TO JAIRAMDAS DOULATRAM

AS AT BORSAD,
May 21, 1931

MY DEAR JAIRAMDAS,

You will see the enclosed. Do the needful and tell me who the writer is. Can the allegations be true?

SYT. JAIRAMDAS DOULATRAM
SWARAJ ASHRAM
BARDOLI

From a microfilm : S. N. 17113

196. LETTER TO A. FENNER BROCKWAY

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 21, 1931

DEAR MR. BROCKWAY,

Evidently you have made up your mind that I am coming to London. But as yet I see no sign on the horizon warranting even the hope that I shall be with you soon. But if I am, of course I should love to be with the members of your society and to engage in an informal heart to heart conversation.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

A. FENNER BROCKWAY, ESQ.
126 SHEPHERD’S BUSH ROAD
LONDON W. 6

From a photostat : S. N. 17114

197. SPEECH AT POLITICAL SUFFERERS’ CONFERENCE

KUMAON,
[May 21, 1931]

You must have seen the resolution regarding the declaration of fundamental rights passed by the Congress. There are a few items in it such as the reduction of military expenditure to one half, which cannot be achieved before swaraj, but there are other items such as compulsory primary education, ban on foreign cloth, equality of rights and opportunities, for which we should not wait till the establishment of swaraj. We should establish these conditions just now and this will bring us nearer swaraj. We can open schools in every village, manufacture and encourage khaddar and make wars on untouchability.

(Here Mahatmaji referred to each item in the declaration of rights as published in an old issue of Young India seriatim.)

Referring to the maximum pay of the public servants, Mahatmaji said as follows :—

You should not think that this proposal is meant to remain on paper. This will be enforced when swaraj is obtained. This was added to the declaration of rights after full and careful consideration. I am old and even if I die, Jawaharlal is certain to enforce it. But it is unjust to suppose that old people die before young men, because it is not God’s law. Let me assure you that this proposal will be enforced. In Japan, which is an independent country, the maximum pay of public servants is Rs. 500.

Ours is a country where the average income per individual is about Rs. 40 and this includes crores of millionaires. So anyone who lives on more than Rs. 500 lives on loot. We regard this amount as insufficient because seeing the exploitation of the foreigners and the life they lead, we want to copy them.

1 From the Hindu, 21-5-1931

It is said that lawyers and industrialists will earn more than Rs. 500 per month. I say they should not earn more than Rs. 500 per month. If they do so in a country like ours they will be living on loot. They should pay the surplus back to the country.

_The Hindustan Times, 31-5-1931_

198. TELEGRAM TO VICEROY

Important [On or before May 22, 1931]

I am grateful for your telegram of 21st received through His Excellency the Governor of the United Provinces then directly. I should be ... ² to visit London even upon this subject and explain to responsible statesmen that whilst insisting upon making India free, Congress wishes to live on friendliest terms with the English people. But for reasons given to Your Excellency I am unable to take part in the Round Table Conference. Though open to conviction, I still retain the opinion that I could not usefully serve on the Conference unless communal settlement is reached. Moreover, being directly responsible for the settlement between Government and Congress I could not leave India whilst anxious difficulties are experienced regarding its working. I still remain the sole representative on behalf of Congress.

GANDHI

From a photostat : C.W. 9367. Courtesy : India Office Library

199. TELEGRAM TO JAMNADAS GANDHI

TAKULA, NAINITAL,

_May 22, 1931_

JAMNADAS GANDHI

RAJKOT

DOCTOR KADAM OF THANHA WILL REACH RAJKOT EXAMINE RATILAL DO NEEDFUL. ESTABLISH COMMUNICATION WITH HIM.

BAPU

From a microfilm : S. N. 17122

¹ The telegram was quoted by the addressee in his telegram of May 22, 1931 to the Secretary of State for India.

² Omission as in the source
200. TELEGRAM TO RAMBHOROSELAL

TAKULA, NAINITAL,
May 22, 1931

RAMBHOROSELAL
CARE ARATIDHAR
BURDWAN
SEND FULL PARTICULARS PANDIT GOVINDBALLABH PANT.

GANDHI

From a microfilm: S. N. 17123

201. TELEGRAM TO MOHANLAL SAKSENA

TAKULA, NAINITAL,
May 22, 1931

MOHANLAL SAKSENA
CARE CONGRESS
LUCKNOW
HUNGERSTRIKE SEEMS WHOLLY UNNECESSARY. RIGHT OR WRONG EVERYBODY SHOULD SUBMIT DECISION SUPERIOR COMMITTEES.

GANDHI

From a microfilm: S. N. 17125

202. INTERVIEW TO THE PRESS

NAINITAL,
May 22, 1931

In the course of an interview to the Associated Press today, Mahatma Gandhi declared that he was unable to make any statement yet regarding his plans for going to London.1 His views in respect of the Federal Structure Committee meeting in London on the 29th June were in the hands of the Government of India and there the matters stand.

The Hindustan Times, 24-5-1931

1 The other delegates, including the princes, had agreed to sail on 13-6-1931.
203. CABLE TO V. S. SRINIVASA SASTRI

TAKULA, NAINTAL,
May 23, 1931

SASTRI
CARE KALOPI
LONDON

YOUR KIND JOINT CABLE. IN ABSENCE SOLUTION COMMUNAL QUESTION HERE HAVE NO CONFIDENCE ATTENDING ROUND TABLE CONFERENCE. MOREOVER SOME LOCAL GOVERNMENTS' ATTITUDE SETTLEMENT MAKES MY LEAVING INDIA DIFFICULT IF NOT IMPOSSIBLE BUT IF SATISFACTORY WORKING SETTLEMENT CAN BE ATTAINED AND IF I AM INVITED FOR DISCUSSION AND EXPLAINING CONGRESS POSITION WILL GLADLY SAIL ON SHORT NOTICE.

GANDHI

204. LETTER TO MALCOLM HAILEY

TAKULA, NAINTAL,
May 23, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have now completed my summary investigation. I have had the benefit of the advice of those taluqdar who were able to come to Nainital. I feel and perhaps you will agree that I must give some guidance to the kisans. I could not tell them to accept as sufficient the relief proposed to be given by the Government. Everything I have examined goes to show that it is wholly inadequate to meet the exceptional situation that faces the kisans. I propose therefore to do the next best thing possible. In the absence of response by the Government to any of the proposals made by me, I propose to tell the kisans what in my opinion is the least that they should pay, throwing

---

1 This was in reply to a joint cable from V.S.S. Sastri, C.F. Andrews and H.S.L. Polak saying : “. . . If communal minorities problem insoluble immediately India we urge it be brought here where atmosphere better. Failing everything else in last resort impartial arbitration still possible. We therefore convinced prompt announcement affirmative decision your earliest arrival urgently desirable. . . ”

2 Telegraphic address of H.S.L. Polak

3 Peasants
the responsibility upon them of paying more wherever it is possible for them to do so. I have accordingly drafted a manifesto1 which I enclose herewith. If you think that its publication will in any way embarrass the Government and if Your Excellency will show me a better way I shall gladly adopt it if it is at all possible for me to do so. And if you will have me to wait upon you in this connection I would gladly do so.

I have arranged, unless you have me to do otherwise, to leave Nainital this afternoon at 3 p.m.2

I remain,

Yours sincerely,

Encl. 1

HIS EXCELLENCY SIR MALCOLM HAILEY
GOVERNOR OF U.P., NAINTAL

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-E, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

205. TO THE KISANS OF THE U.P.

NAINTAL,

May 23, 1931

During the late struggle, in some districts, the non-payment of taxes was being organized as part of Civil Disobedience for the attainment of purna swaraj. But by reason of the Settlement between the Congress and the Government Civil Disobedience was discontinued and therefore also the non-payment of taxes.

But there was then deep economic distress among you. Bad as your condition was even in normal times, the unprecedented fall this year in the prices of the crops usually grown by you made it infinitely worse. And Congress workers reported that many of you were utterly unable to pay in full the rents due by you. In several districts inquiries were made in a few hundred villages disclosing a serious state of affairs. It was found that the price of your gross produce had fallen to such an extent that the sales were not enough to pay the rents. It was in this connection that I came to Nainital to see H. E. the Governor. His Excellency gave me a patient hearing and we fully discussed the situation. He was sympathetic. I told him that some Congress

1 Vide the following item.
2 For the addressee’s reply, vide “Letter from Sir Malcolm Hailey”, 23-5-1931 workers had assured me that the relief hitherto announced by the Government of the U.P. was hardly equal to the actual distress. And I submitted certain proposals which he kindly promised to consider.

I was bound meanwhile to tender you such advice as it was in my power to do. I have passed many an anxious hour discussing the situation with many co-workers. I have had the benefit of a frank and free discussion with important talukdars who were good enough to respond to my invitation to see me. I am glad to be able to say that they were in general agreement with the proposals suggested here under.

Concentrated work was done in the following among other districts: Agra, Muttra, Allahabad, Rai Bareily, Gorakhpore, Cawnpore, Lucknow, Pratapgarh, and Etawah. And for these it has been found that there should be a remission for the year 1338 Fasli of eight annas in the rupee in the case of statutory and non-occupancy tenants and four annas in the case of occupancy tenants. This general formula should be subject to variation as may be required by local conditions.

I have been told that in some districts the tenants are in a position to do with less reduction. Some districts again were hard hit by local calamities. The suggested reduction would naturally therefore not apply to the districts that might be able to pay more than what is suggested here, nor to those whose condition may be under the level found in the foregoing districts. Indeed even in the districts mentioned those of you who are able to pay more ought to do so. The Congress expects every tenant to pay as early as possible all the rent he can, and in no case as a general rule less than eight annas or four annas as the case may be. But just as even in the same district there may be cases in which a larger payment is possible, it is equally possible that there may be cases in which less than eight annas or four annas can only be paid. In such cases I hope the tenants will be treated liberally by the zamindars.

In every case you will see that you get against payment a full discharge from your obligation for the current year’s rent.

I understand that several tenants were ejected during the struggle and others have been ejected since. Not to restore these to their holdings would be clearly against the atmosphere sought to be created by the Settlement. I have every hope, therefore, that against payment on

1 A slip for ‘twelve’; vide “A Correction”, 11-6-1931
2 ibid
the scale suggested here the ejected tenants will be fully restored without any penalty.

I am hoping that payment will begin at once. It may be that you are not able to pay the full eight annas at once. In that case I trust you will get suspension, and that no coercive processes will be issued whether for the unpaid balance or for arrears if any, till the next harvest.

I would like to suggest to the Government, in view of the loss that your inability to pay the rents in full will cause to the zamindars, that they get a proportionate reduction in the revenue payable by them to the Government.

Lastly let me warn you against listening to the advice, if it has reached you, that you have no need to pay the zamindars any rent at all. I hope that you will not listen to such advice, no matter who gives it. Congressmen cannot, we do not seek to injure the zamindars. We aim not at destruction of property. We aim only at its lawful use.

It has been suggested that you will listen to the Congress when Congressmen tell you not to pay anything at all, but you will not listen to the Congress when it asks you to pay according to your ability. The opportunity has now come for you to falsify the calumny.

You have complained of very harsh treatment by or on behalf of some landlords. The Congress is trying and will try to investigate all your complaints, plead with the landlords and even advise legal relief where such becomes imperative. But let it be also owned that sometimes some kisans too have gone astray and committed murderous assaults. These acts spoil the fair name of kisans, harm their cause and impair the usefulness of the Congress for service. For in the ultimate end you are the Congress. The Congress is incomplete in so far as it represents you insufficiently.

Please remember that the Congress aims at reaching purna swaraj through Truth and Non-violence. And it will fail in so far as the kisans fail to observe these two cardinal principles. You are milli-ons. When millions become untruthful and violent, it will mean self-destruction. You will therefore suffer injury without retaliation. You have now perhaps learnt that the best way of resisting injury is never to injure the injurer, but ever to refuse, no matter how much suffering the refusal costs us, to do his will when we know it to be wrong.

I am,

Your friend and servant,

M. K. GANDHI

Young India, 28-5-1931
Dear Mr. Hailey,

With reference to the Etawah case wherein the Congress Secretary was supposed to have circulated after the date of the Settlement notice amongst tenants advising them not to pay any rent at all I have made full inquiry and find that such notice was circulated in February last, but none after the Settlement. On the contrary a general notice withdrawing the notax agitation was circulated throughout the province on behalf of the Provincial Congress Committee. This matter was brought to the notice of Pt. Govind Ballabh Pant by the Chief Secretary and on the day that he received the intimation he made inquiries. The Secretary, Babu Gaya Prasad, immediately wrote in reply giving the information above mentioned. Moreover he is no longer occupying position of General Secretary of the Local Committee in Etawah. It would be perhaps interesting to know how the police came by the notice and came to the conclusion that it was being circulated after the date of the Settlement.¹

Yours sincerely,

M. K. Gandhi

A.I.C.C. File NO. 16-E, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

207. Speech at Zamindars’ Meeting, Nainital:

[May 23, 1931]²

The Congress will stand by you certainly. But you will have to make your life correspond to your surroundings. In Bengal some years ago I was the guest of a zamindar who served me my milk and fruit in gold bowls and plates. The good host naturally thought that he was doing me the greatest honour by placing before me his costliest plate He could not know what was passing through my mind. ‘Where did he get these golden plates from?’ I was asking to myself, and the answer I got was: ‘From the substance of the ryots’. How then could I

¹ In his reply dated 29-5-1931, Hailey confirmed these facts and regretted the inconvenience caused by his wrong report.

² Extracted from Mahadev Desai’s “Weekly Letter”

³ From the Hindustan Times, 25-5-1931

156 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
reconcile myself to those costly luxuries? I would not mind your using gold plates provided your tenants were comfortable enough to afford silver plates, but where their life is one long-drawn-out agony, how dare you have those luxuries? You will remember, how, fifteen years ago, on the occasion of the opening of the Hindu University, I shocked the Rajas and Maharajas by a reference to their glittering pomp and glory, and raised quite an uproar.¹ My views are the same today; only experience and life among the humble folk have confirmed them all the more.

Young India, 28-5-1931

208. LETTER TO V. S. SRINIVASA SASTRI

[After May 23, 1931]²

MY DEAR BROTHER,

I had your touching cable. I have sent you a reply to soothe you. I am not shirking the R.T.C. But it is not possible through a letter to give you an idea of the difficulties that face me. Provincial governments are trampling the Settlement under foot. Repression is raising its spiked head. If you have the patience to follow the pages of Young India you can learn something of what I mean. I have published as yet not one tenth of what is happening. The question then may be: Can I leave India when trouble is brewing here? But I am in touch with Simla.

Letters of Srinivasa Sastri, p. 215

209. NOTES

REGARDING PICKETING

I extract the following questions from two letters:

1. Can fasting be resorted to while picketing those who break the seals of cloth which has been sealed?
2. Does fasting have a place in peaceful picketing?
3. If those against whom peaceful picketing is being carried on do not listen to reason, can social boycott be practised against them?
4. Can picketing be called off if a person promises not to import fresh foreign cloth and his old stock has already been sold out?

¹ Vide “Speech at Benares Hindu University”, 6-2-1916
² Vide “Cable to V. S. Srinivasa Sastri”, 23-5-1931
5. Should there be picketing against those who sell both foreign and Indian cloth?

6. Should we boycott those who have sealed up their stock of foreign cloth and promised to pay a certain fine if they break the seal? Should we sit a dharna\(^1\) before them?

The answers to these questions would be as follows:

1. Fasting can be resorted to only in regard to those who are closely associated with the person picketing, who have given a pledge out of the love resulting from that relationship and then broken it.

2. The reply to this is contained in the rule mentioned above.

3. Social boycott, which would imply denying the individual the services of the dhobi, the barber, the vaid, etc., should not be practised. But one is permitted to cut off relationship with such individuals by way of going to their homes for feasts on occasions such as marriages, and indeed one should do so. In short, they should not be harassed. The pain which they feel when we do not go to their homes for meals cannot be regarded as harassment.

4. It is our dharma to withdraw picketing if we are sure about the pledge.

5. Certainly.

6. We cannot resort to picketing if someone does not pay the fine, but we can do so if he sells foreign goods. With regard to boycott, refer to reply No. 4\(^2\). Dharna does not mean self-torture to press one’s point.

ONE ADVANTAGE OF BOYCOTT

I take the following extract\(^3\) from letters received by me:

I hope that these women have given up foreign cloth and started wearing khadi. Whether they have started doing so or not, the basic fact is that they have learnt simplicity along with the boycott of foreign goods. Everyone has got the experience that our craving for enjoyment increases with the acceptance of foreign goods and the idea gains ground that clothes are meant for adornment rather than for the purpose of covering our body. Our newspapers are not yet full of items on fashion but if we glance at English newspapers, we shall

---

\(^1\) Squatting and fasting for the redress of a grievance

\(^2\) This should perhaps be 3.

\(^3\) Not translated here. It described the simplicity of women in a particular household.
see every day under the heading “fashion” pictures of new types of dresses together with alluring descriptions of them.

Hence, along with the giving up of foreign cloth we also rid ourselves of the glamour for false fashion and for this very reason khadi though expensive becomes inexpensive. A woman who used to wear separate saris while she is at home, while going out, while paying social calls, while visiting the temple, or who thus has four or five saris for daily wear now makes do with a single khadi sari and, therefore, easily saves a lot of money. When a person wearing a turban made of twelve yards of mulmul\(^1\) starts wearing a khadi cap made of half a yard, however expensive khadi may be, he would easily save some money.

DISHONESTY OF BUSINESS MEN

An experienced gentleman makes the following compliant:\(^2\)

There is nothing in this that is not well known. If business men had thought only of the good of the country, they would never have imported foreign cloth at all. To a large extent, dishonesty is implicit in all business. Merchants dealing in foreign cloth catch the eye because their business it widespread and, like a huge serpent, it has coiled itself around India and is gradually crushing her. No one can escape from that grip. We have now become conscious of how we are being crushed and hence we have started criticizing merchants dealing in foreign cloth and that is only proper. This awakening provides a remedy for the abovementioned and many other similar dishonest practices. Picketing is the ready remedy. The true remedy lies in reaching the villages. All such question as, for in-stance, whether a particular cloth is Indian or foreign, whether it is made in a mill which is boycotted or not, whether this khadi contains warp which is mill-made or hand-made, etc., will automatically disappear when the villagers spin yarn in their own homes, get it woven by their own weavers and start using such khadi. And hence I tell you for the thousandth time that the remedy for all deceit lies in khadi that is woven from yarn spun by yourselves. Just as adding jaggery makes a thing sweet, likewise, if we spin fine yarn, we get finer and cheaper khadi.

---

1 Thin variety of plain muslim
2 The letter is not translated here. It reported various ways in which foreign cloth was passed off as Indian cloth.
There can be no other cloth which is as cheap or cheaper and, if there is such cloth, it deserves to be discarded as it is stained with the blood of the poor.

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan, 24-5-1931

210. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

AS AT SABARMATI,

May 24, 1931

DEAR MR. EMERSON,

I have just arrived at Muttra and have to wait for the Frontier Mail for about five hours. Local People have given me a version of what happened in a village called Bijhari near Muttra on 20th instant. I enclose herewith a copy of the statement they have given me. 18 men were arrested under warrant. The gravamen of the complaint however is that the police acted far in excess of their authority. There is no complaint against the warrant itself. It was perfectly right for the authorities to arrest the men if in their opinion they had done anything wrong.

I am going to Bardoli and I am likely to be there for at least two or three days.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

Encl. 1

H. W. EMERSON, ESQ.

HOME SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA

SIMLA

Home Department, Political, File No. 33/9, 1931. Courtesy: National Archives of India
211. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 24, 1931

DEAR MR. EMERSON,

I enclose herewith a copy of the report received from Lala Duni Chand of Ambala, who is a prominent pleader in that part of the world. I would esteem a line from you even by wire as to whether you propose to take any action in the matter. Duty perhaps demands that I should take public notice of this action on the part of the Magistrate unless it is possible for you to get some relief. If the facts are as stated by Lala Duni Chand, the action on the part of the Magistrate denoted by these facts is surely against the spirit of peace which it was the prime object of the Settlement to establish.

Yours sincerely,

Encl. 1
H. W. EMERSON, ESQ.
SIMLA
A.I.C.C. File No. 16-B, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

212. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 24, 1931

DEAR MR. EMERSON,

I have your three letters forwarding me extracts from reports received by you from Surat, Assam and the U. P. They are having attention.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

H. W. EMERSON, ESQ.
Home Department, Political, File No. 33/9, 1931. Courtesy: National Archives of India

1 Vide also “Letter to H. W. Emerson”, 19-5-1931
2 In which Duni Chand had stated “. . . I proceeded to Ludhiana on the afternoon of 18th May, 1931, to enquire into the happenings of the 16th May which had been reported to you at Kalka. . . . I am sorry to say that most of the officials at Ludhiana probably consider the Irwin-Gandhi Settlement as a scrap of paper. . . . In my opinion there should be an independent enquiry by the representatives of the Government and the public not only into the happenings at Ludhiana but also into the general policy of the local authorities that has been hitherto pursued. . . .”
213. LETTER TO GOSIBEHN CAPTAIN

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 24, 1931

I am waiting at Muttra Junction for the Frontier Mail to take me to Surat and thence to Bardoli. I have received your letter here. Did I say that even sewn pieces will be taken up? I do remember having said so about cut pieces. But let me have the number of people who want to get rid of cut pieces or sewn pieces together with the quantity and the market price.

I am glad the two sisters have at last gone to Panchgani for a little bit of rest and pure air. What about yours?

I reach Bardoli tomorrow noon.

MRS. GOSIBEHN CAPTAIN
78 NAPEAN SEA ROAD
MALABAR HILL, BOMBAY

From a microfilm: S.N. 17138

214. LETTER TO HORACE G. ALEXANDER

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 24, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter for which I thank you. Of course I passed on your cable to Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan as soon as I received it. Now that I know more about what you meant you may depend upon my doing all I can. One thing I am going to do is to put myself in correspondence with Capt. Barnes.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

PROF. HORACE G. ALEXANDER
144 OAKTREE LANE
BIRMINGHAM

From a photostat: G.N. 1410
215. LETTER TO SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 24, 1931

DEAR SATIS BABU,

I have your sad letter about Bholanath Sen. I have read all about the murder. I knew that both the picture and the writing were wholly inoffensive. But the complaint was that there was any portrait of the Prophet printed at all. Of course it is a silly complaint but anything is good enough to inflame the simple minded Pathan. In the face of such tragedies I know nothing so efficacious as prayer and utter silence when we can present no visible remedy. If the Hindu heart can be melted, the thing becomes easy. But before it can melt, you and I and perhaps thousands like us will have to give our lives and in order that they may become a pure sacrifice, we have to endeavour to become purer day by day, or better put, less impure day by day. Your description of the Bengal state of affairs is also sad. I am today in Muttra waiting for the Frontier Mail taking me to Surat. Most probably Subhasbabu will travel as far as Surat. I have not yet seen him. This is being dictated at the station. I am going to Bardoli on the Sardar’s orders. My destination is Borsad but when I shall be able to go there I do not know.

Subhasbabu is with me on the train.²

Love.

BAPU

SYT. SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA
KHADI PRATISHTHAN
SODEPUR (NEAR CALCUTTA)

From a photostat: G.N. 8033

216. LETTER TO CAPTAIN BARNES

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 24, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

Prof Horace Alexander writes to me a long letter with reference to the troubles, he says, you are having in your work in Peshawar.

¹ A book-seller who was murdered in Calcutta on 7-5-1931 for selling the book Prachin Kahani.
² This line is in Gandhiji’s hand.

VOL. 52 : 28 APRIL, 1931 - 1 JULY, 1931 163
Prof. Alexander tells me that you and Mrs. Barnes are real friends of India, but that things take place in your district which are not all as they should be. I would like you, if you could, to tell me all you know personally, not for publication, but for my private use and guidance. You will take my word when I tell you that the whole of my effort is directed towards establishing real peace in the land and in making people see that the way to progress lies not through bluster and violence but through quiet work and non-violence.¹

Yours sincerely,

CAPT. BARNES
PESHAWAR

A.I.C.C. File NO. 16-C, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

217. LETTER TO NIRANJAN PATNAIK²

May 24, 1931

MY DEAR NIRANJAN,

I have your telegram about Syt. Narasinha Sahu. You must give me full particulars about him including record of trial.

From a microfilm : S.N. 17105

218. LETTER TO PERCY LACEY

AS AT SABARMATI,

May 24, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your message received on my arrival at Muttra. I have purposely refrained from sending you a wire for there was no hurry about dealing with your message. Should I go to London I would certainly make it a point to visit Lancashire and demonstrate to the people of Lancashire that I personally and the Congress have no ill-will against Lancashire and that the Congress would do all in its power to help Lancashire. I would therefore naturally avail myself of and esteem the powerful help of the Manchester Guardian in facilitating my work in Lancashire. You will please keep the contents

¹ Vide also “Letter to Captain Barnes”, 19-6-1931.
² In reply to the addressee’s telegram which read : “Of Vizagapatam Agency State prisoners in Rajahmundry jail Narasinha Sahu released rearrested interned Bimlipatam Agency Regulation.”
of this letter from the Press but you are at liberty to show it to friends and undoubtedly pass it on to the Manchester Guardian.

Yours sincerely,

PERCY LACEY, ESQ.
HOTEL CECIL
SIMLA

From a photostat: S.N. 17128

219. LETTER TO PREMNATH BAZAZ

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 24, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. What young men can do is to make up their minds to marry only widows and if they cannot secure widows in the Pandit caste, they should travel outside if only by way of satyagraha. But if they are desirous of restricting themselves to their caste they should reason with the caste elders and give them notice that they would go outside the caste if they did not merely permit but encourage widows to remarry.

Yours sincerely,

PT. PREM NATH BAZAZ
CHONDEHPORA
SRINAGAR (KASHMIR)

From a photostat: S.N. 17129
220. LETTER TO WALTER B. FOLEY

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 24, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter and the two articles.

I would indeed be delighted to meet you if it is at all convenient for you to go to Surat or Anand. Generally I am to be found between Borsad near Anand and Bardoli. I received your letter while waiting for the Surat train at Muttra Junction. I am not likely to be anywhere between Lahore and Calcutta in the course of next month.

Yours sincerely,

WALTER B. FOLEY, ESQ.
3. MIDDLETON STREET
CALCUTTA

From a microfilm: S.N. 17130

221. LETTER TO C. RAJAGOPALACHARI

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 24, 1931

Here is another letter for you to read and deal with. I would like you to answer it directly. I have not acknowledged it. Please let me know whether there is any truth in the statement made.

Encl. 1

SYT. C. RAJAGOPALACHARIAR
GANDHI ASHRAM
TIRUCHENGODU (S. INDIA)

From a microfilm: S.N. 17131

222. LETTER TO JOHN BITTMANN

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 24, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter. If I visit London I would love to visit Denmark and other places, but I am not sure when I shall be able to do so. I am sorry to hear about Menon’s misfortunes. But Esther

1 Editorial Secretary, the Methodist Episcopal Church, Calcutta ought not to worry about his failure. Please tell her with my love that I expect greater faith and therefore greater pluck from her and please ask her to write to me.

Yours sincerely,

JOHN BITTMANN, ESQ.
PT. 55, GRONDAISVEJ
COPENHAGEN

From a photostat: S.N. 17132

223. LETTER TO ATUL PRATAP SINHA

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 24, 1931

MY DEAR SINHA,

I thank you for your letter offering your service should I come to London. At the present moment I see no chance of my coming but if I do, you will seek me out. I am sorry I cannot recall the incident narrated by you in your letter.

Yours sincerely,

ATUL PRATAP SINHA, ESQ.
VICE-PRESIDENT, INDIAN STUDENTS CENTRAL ASSOCIATION
BROMPTON ROAD, LONDON S.W. 3

From a photostat: S.N. 17133

224. LETTER TO CARL J. BRUNSKOG

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 24, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

My answer to your question is:
One way to promote world peace is to help India to attain her own through truth and non-violence.

Yours sincerely,

CARL J. BRUNSKOG
LILLA NYGATAN 4
STOCKHOLM

From a photostat: S.N. 17134
225. LETTER TO J. N. SAHNI

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 24, 1931

MY DEAR SAHNI,

I have heard that you had published a report of that interview. I must confess that I was grieved. Of course the proper thing for you was not to assume or receive consent either from Malaviyaji or Anasuyabehn because it was a matter in which I alone could have judged. I do not think that any very great harm has been done. But these little mistakes repeated by so many newspapers make up a heavy indictment and betray bad taste. These domestic conversations do not admit of reporting. They lose their weight and influence by reporting. Anasuyabehn has also written to me about it. She is deeply grieved and she tells me that there are many mistakes. But I do not think that anything is to be gained by publishing corrections. The best thing therefore is to forget all about it and the amends you can make is not to repeat such a mistake not only in connection with myself but in every case. I think the mistake will have been well made if the point I have made is quite clear to you.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. J. N. SAHNI

“HINDUSTAN TIMES”, DELHI

From a microfilm: S.N. 17136

226. LETTER TO ISHWAR DAS NAYYAR

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 24, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. As I am continuously travelling I cannot encourage you to see me. Staying with me is out of the question. But you can certainly stay at the Ashram for some time and feel your way there. If you accept my suggestion, You should write to the Manager and receive his permission before going there.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. ISHWAR DAS NAYYAR

HOUSE PROPRIETOR
PURANA BAZAR
GUJARAT

From a microfilm: S.N. 17137

1 A town in West Punjab (Pakistan)
227. LETTER TO SHANTA PATEL

BARDOLI,
May 25, 1931

CHI. SHANTA,

I got your letter. I had the same thing in mind that you now explain to me. But I still advise you to try to mix with girls and be satisfied with playing with them. Be as much as possible with Premabehn and secure a good certificate from her. Help younger girls, teach them, for instance. Pay attention to Pushpa’s diet. She should eat less rice than she does.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G. N. 4060

228. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

BARDOLI,
May 25, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

I arrived in Bardoli this morning. I had intended to go to Borsad, but came here. How can a mere servant have this way? You may not perhaps have read the accompanying letter from Bhagwanji. What is Hariyomal’s complaint? It seems that we have not, after all, been able to cultivate contact with the thieves. How could we do that since we have not gone into villages? Whenever thieves trouble us, I feel sorry about our failure to do so. It seems the Punjabi vaid’s treatment has not benefited Kusum and others.

I have sent a wire to Rajkot advising that Ratilal should be removed to Thana. I shall be here for a few days at any rate.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

Is Valji still in Bombay? And in a hospital?

From a microfilm of the Gujarati : M.M.U./I
229. LETTER TO ANASUYABEHN SARABHAI

BARDOLI,
May 25, 1931

CHI. ANASUYABEHN,

I had got your long and beautifully descriptive letter at Nainital and the one about Sahni\(^1\) in Mathura. Now matters cannot be remedied, but norms of discretion were violated in publishing the report. Our newspapermen have still not learnt that such things ought not to be reported. I have written to Sahni.\(^2\) But it will be better if you write the following:

“DEAR LADY WILLINGDON,

“Perhaps you have not seen the enclosed garbled report of the pleasant meeting between you and Mrs. Gandhi. I hasten to assure you that I had no hand in the publication. I know the writer. He is now sorry for the bad taste shown in publishing a private conversation of a domestic nature. Without my knowledge that he was a newspaperman, he overheard the conversation I was having with Pandit Malaviyaji about our meeting of which I shall always have pleasant recollections.

“The sari you want is being made and will be sent to you early.

Iam,
yours sincerely,”\(^3\)

She would like it if you wrote along these lines. If you want to make any changes in the draft, then do so. I am returning the clipping.

It was a good thing that you were able to accompany Ba yourself. That is how it was in Nanital. Lady Chinubhai\(^4\) (Junior) had escorted Ba.

I have reached Bardoli. From here I shall go wherever the Sardar or Fate takes me. Has Mridula arrived?

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: S. N. 32796

---

\(^1\) J. N. Sahni of The Hindustan Times

\(^2\) Vide “Letter to J. N. Sahni”, 24-5-1931

\(^3\) The draft of letter to Lady Willingdon is in English.

\(^4\) Wife of Sir Girijaprasad Chinubhai
230. LETTER TO MANAGER, OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS, BOMBAY

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 26, 1931

R. E. HAWKINS, ESQ.
MANAGER, OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS
NICOL ROAD, BOMBAY

DEAR SIR,

Owing to my journeys and preoccupations I have not been able to reply to your letter of the 7th May earlier. The suggestions made in your letter, I like. I have personally never copyrighted any of my publications. I left Mr. Andrews free to do what he liked with his condensation. But if there is any permission to be had from Mr. Andrews or his publishers you will please get it from them. I note what you say about the royalty. When you have actually decided to publish the proposed book in accordance with your letter, I would expect the manuscript for inspection and revision where necessary.

Yours sincerely,

From a photostat : G. N. 5686

231. LETTER TO COWASJI JEHANGIR

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 26, 1931

DEAR SIR COWASJI,

You will please forgive me for not having sent you an earlier reply. I returned to Bardoli only yesterday from Nainital where and at Simla I was so overwhelmed with local work that I had no time to frame my reply to you or to Sardar Garda. I am now sending you a copy of my reply to Sardar Garda¹ which will speak for itself. I am sending you also a copy of his letter to me. At best his allegations are vague and even these are really denied by the people. But the complaint he could legitimately make could only be about matters happening after his promise to restore the land. That should be after the receipt of Rao Bahadur Bhimbhai’s letter or so after the 25th April when we had the first conversation. If we were to take the 25th April as the date you will see that there is only one paragraph devoted to the happenings thereafter. It says: “On 28th April Babla people again scared away our labourers and cartmen that came from my bet. So also a Rajput family on the 3rd instant. With other threats they were told that their abodes would be burnt down together with the inmates.”

¹ In reply to the addressee’s letter in which he had mentioned certain specific complaints of Sardar Garda and pleaded with Gandhiji that “all kind of harassment shall immediately stop . . .”

² Vide the following item.

These allegations I have carefully enquired into and I have statements on oath made by the people concerned repudiating them. If, however, this investigation does not satisfy you, I am quite willing that you should nominate someone on your behalf who would investigate these two complaints.

As to Bhikhabhai who is said to have refused to take up his bungalow, I understand that he denies having made the statement ascribed to him. But even if he did not, how could we interfere in such matters?

With reference to the other complaint in your letter I was painfully surprised to find this sentence: “I desire to draw your attention to other cases of harassment of Parsis which have been brought to my notice.” This presupposes that you have taken the harassment of Sardar Garda for granted and you have generalized from two incidents yet unproved an indictment, I do not know against whom, for harassment of Parsis as a class. As a matter of fact throughout the last 12 years of intense political work the relations between the Congress and the Parsis have been of the happiest character. How can there be then any question of harassment of Parsis? And even if it can be proved, should the harassment of the lady¹ whose case you have mentioned affect Sardar Garda’s promise of restoration of land which on his own showing he bought for a song. I am however anxious to give you all the satisfaction I can that there is no desire whatsoever on the part of Congress organizations to harass Parsis. In the lady’s case there is an impeachment of Syt. Bharucha who has investigated the matter. In view of the fact that there are two contrary allegations by two Parsis of position, I can only ask you to name some person who would make the investigation and report to you. Pending receipt of your letter on this point, I am staying any further investigation into the lady’s complaint.

¹ Miss. Contractor who had foreign and country liquor shops at Thana and Ghatkopar.

Yours sincerely,

Encls. 2

SIR COWASJI JEHANGIR
READYMONEY MANSION
CHURCHGATE STREET
FORT, BOMBAY

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-C, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

232. LETTER TO FRAMROZE B. GARDA

DEAR SARDAR GARDA,

I am sorry that owing to my absence from Gujarat and other preoccupations I was not able to reply to your letter earlier. You will notice from your complaint that except two, the other complaints refer to times prior to your decision to restore the land to the original owners. With reference to the two incidents which you mention as having happened on the 28th April and 3rd instant. I have enquired into your allegations and the people point blank repudiate them. You have again mentioned some other cases before the 25th April which are before the courts. The rest I have enquired into. Although they are alleged to have happened before the 25th April, the allegations are denied by the people concerned. Of course you do not hold Congressmen responsible for things that may happen to your land in the Baroda territories through your tenants with whom Congressmen have no dealings of concern.

As a matter of fact it was up to you to have withdrawn the cases which are before the courts after the settlement with you. I cannot help therefore saying that you have shown absolutely no reason for going back upon your plighted word. In any case I suggest that your proper course was to seek redress for any wrong done to you after your promise of restoration by means of arbitration or other-wise but not to repudiate the promise made after the fullest deliberation.

Yours sincerely,

SARDAR FRAMROZE GARDA

NAVSARI

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-C, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

1 Vide also “Letter to Framroze B. Garda”, 6-5-1931
233. LETTER TO U. GOPALA MENON

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 26, 1931

MY DEAR GOPALA MENON,

I have your letter. I know all about the case of M.P. Narayana Menon. I had a letter addressed to Lord Irwin by some missionary friend given to me to be delivered to Lord Irwin which I gladly did and asked him to endeavour to secure Narayana Menon’s release. I have no doubt about the justice of the case. Unfortunately the talk with Lord Irwin took place only two days before he left Delhi. It is highly likely therefore that he was able to do nothing. Now as you say Sir. C. P. Ramaswami Iyer knows the case well you have to knock at his door continually.

I cannot give you any definite opinion upon the proposed Temple Entry Satyagraha unless I know what the other side has to say. The objection you have raised is certainly worthy of consideration. Beyond this I do not feel able to go.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. U. GOPALA MENON, B.A., B.L.
CALICUT

From a microfilm: S. N. 17143

234. LETTER TO JUGAL KISHORE

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 26, 1931

MY DEAR JUGAL KISHORE,

I have your letter of the 14th instant. On my way back to Bardoli I had to pass nearly five hours in Muttra and I saw the friend who was with you. What is his name Both he and I after discussion agreed that I should take no public notice of your appeal till you were ready with the programme for making the Mahavidy-alaya self-reliant by a definite date not distant. But I gave him a letter addressed to the Trustees in accordance with the terms we had discussed before.

I missed you at Muttra.

PROF. JUGAL KISHORE
PREM MAHAVIDYALAYA
BRINDABAN

From a microfilm: S. N. 17144
235. LETTER TO MAGANTI BAPI NEEDU

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 26, 1931

MY DEAR NEEDU,

I have your touching letter. You are unnecessarily despondent. There is no occasion for despondency. I could see that you will have to support your father, mother and child. I therefore suggest your going to Sabarmati Ashram. Rs. 33 per month will be paid for these dependents. You won’t have to pay anything for your boarding and lodging at the Ashram. If you take to teh Ashram life your problem is easily solved, and of course you serve the country by the mere fact of your living at the Ashram for the simple reason that the whole of the Ashram activity is national activity. If you do not know what Ashram life is in detail you should ask Narayana Razu who lived there, I think, for over a year. So many other men also from Andhra Desh have off and on lived in the Ashram.

Yours sincerely,

S. N. MAGANTI BAPI NEEDU
ELLORE (WEST GODAVARI DT.)

From a microfilm : S. N. 17145

236. LETTER TO SUBHAS CHANDRA BOSE

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 26, 1931

Here is a letter from Patiya, Chittagong District. I telegraphed¹ to the writer to ascertain whether I could make use of his name and whether he could vouch for the facts. The telegram was not delivered for want of sufficient address. I wrote² to him also, but there is no reply as yet. If the facts mentioned in the letter are true, the matter is serious. But you can inquire and take such action as it is necessary. I hope you had a nice time in Ahmedabad.

SYT. SUBHAS CHANDRA BOSE
C/O BENGAL PROVINCIAL CONGRESS COMMITTEE
CALCUTTA

From a photostat : S. N. 17146

¹ Vide “Telegram to Secretary, Congress Committee Chittagong”, 21-5-1931
² Vide “Letter to Secretary, Congress Committee Chittagong”, 21-5-1931
237. LETTER TO L. R. GURUSWAMY NAIDU

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 26, 1931

MY DEAR GURUSWAMY,

I have your letter describing the difficulties of picketing. If you have correctly described your picketing there seems to me to be nothing wrong about it and that the action of the authorities was not only contrary to the terms of the Settlement but in my opinion also illegal Please continue to give me information about any further development I would like you also to keep in touch with Syt. Rajagopalachari to whom I have sent your letter.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. L. R. GURUSWAMY NAIDU
PRESIDENT, TALUQ CONGRESS COMMITTEE
KOILPATTI (Madras PRESIDENCY)

From a microfilm : S. N. 17147

238. LETTER TO C. RAJAGOPALACHARI

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 26, 1931

Here is a letter from L. R. Guruswamy Naidu of Koilpatti Taluq Congress Committee. I enclose also a copy of my letter¹ to him. You should vigorously move in the matter if the facts are correctly set forth in Guruswamy’s letter.

I expect to see you in Bombay on the 9th.

SYT. C. RAJAGOPALACHARIAR
GANDHI ASHRAM
TIRUCHENGODU (S. INDIA)

From a microfilm : S. N. 17148

239. LETTER TO SHANKERLAL BANKER

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 26, 1931

MY DEAR SHANKERLAL,

With reference to the suggestion of Dr. Pattabhi Sitaramayya advising purchase of the site and building at Masulipatam I agree to the proposal if the purchase price is anywhere between five and six thousand rupees.

¹ Vide the preceding item.

SYT. SHANKERLAL BANKER
MIRZAPUR, AHMEDABAD

From a microfilm : S. N. 17149

240. LETTER TO DR. M. A. ANSARI

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 26, 1931

DEAR DR. ANSARI,

I have your telegram. I thought that you had agreed that if the communal question was not solved the Congress should not be represented at the Round Table Conference. Why do you now agree with the suggestion made by Sastri, Andrews and Polak? But whether you do or not, you have to consider my own want of confidence in myself if I went without the solution. What can I ask and what strength can I put forth in the national demand if we are a house divided against itself? But I have in my reply to the cable said that if I was invited to go to London to discuss things apart from the Round Table Conference I would gladly go if the Settlement was being properly worked.

Have you seen the announcement made by Maulvi Mohammad Yakub? I do not know what the papers have reported about my statement about the necessity of the Sikhs joining any solution that might be arrived at. Do you see any escape from it?

There was much left over to talk about at Simla. I am looking forward to the 9th June when we should be able to resume the conversations.

Dr. M. A. Ansari
1 Daryaganj
Delhi

From a photostat : S. N. 17150

1 Vide “Cable to V. S. Srinivasa Sastri”, 23-5-1931
241. LETTER TO ABBAS TYABJI

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 26, 1931

I have your cheerful letter. I returned to Bardoli yesterday on Sardar’s orders and under those orders I am here at least for a few days. About the 3rd or 4th June I may be still here or in Borsad unless I am suddenly called away somewhere else. You see I am not my own master. There is the Sardar as also the Sarkar and between the two I am having a fine time.

I never received even an acknowledgement of my letter to the Maharaja. Do you suggest my writing to him again? If you do, please let me know his address. Why don’t you see the Dewan yourself? I am glad Rehana has gone to Matheran. She must benefit by the rest.

SYT. ABBAS TYABJI
CAMP BARODA

From a photostat : S. N. 17151

242. LETTER TO SECRETARY, INDIAN ASSOCIATION, IRAQ

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 26, 1931

THE SECRETARY
INDIAN ASSOCIATION IN IRAQ
P. BOX NO. 71, RESIDENCY ROAD
BAGHDAD

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your printed letter of 28th April last. I do not know anything of the previous ones. They were probably received whilst I was in jail. I wish your Association every success. Will you give me some idea of the number and the profession of Indians resident in Iraq and will you also tell me whether the relations between you and the Arabs are perfectly cordial?

Yours sincerely,

From a microfilm : S. N. 17152
243. LETTER TO HARDAYAL NAG

DEAR BABU HARDAYAL NAG,

Although you are perhaps the oldest member of the Congress you are proving your youthfulness now and again by favouring me with letters. Your latest I do not propose to publish. The communal question is there whether we like it or not. And if we cannot settle it I cannot put forth the national demand with the strength that a solution of the communal question would give me. Do you not see this fundamental objection to participation by the Congress in the Round Table Conference? If there is to be a Swaraj Constitution there has to be a solution of the communal trouble.

I hope you are retaining the same vigour as before.

Yours sincerely,

S Y T. HARDAYAL NAG
CHANDPUR (BENGAL)

From a photostat : S. N. 17154

244. LETTER TO L. J. BURGESS

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter. Though I should perhaps word the third proposition differently I have no hesitation in endorsing the general tenor of all the three propositions. I have never said that other nations’ religion is as good as any other. I am trying to send you the two numbers of Young India which contain my views on the question. There never was any question of legal interference on my part with religious liberty.

Yours sincerely,

L. J. BURGESS, ESQ.
SALT HILL
DARJEELING

From a photostat : S.N. 17155
245. LETTER TO RAGHUBIR SINGH

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 26, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. My answer to your first question is that if your mind really hankers after the degree or the knowledge that the college course gives you in physics you should rejoin the college.

As to the help to your friends I think that you are entitled to and even bound to help them if they are starving but not to further their aims. In no case [may] even you disclose their names to the police.

Yours sincerely,

S Y T. RAGHUBIR SINGH
C/O BENGALI SAREM
COLLECTOR'S OFFICE
MEERUT

From a microfilm: S. N. 17156

246. LETTER TO M. G. DATAR

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 26, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. If I omitted the Tilak Vidyalaya in my speech in Ahmedabad the omission was certainly not intentional.¹ I simply took the names as they came to me. I do know the contribution of the Nagpur Tilak Vidyalaya. My purpose was not to single out a particular national organization but to emphasize the fact that national educational organizations were the real thing.

Yours sincerely,

S Y T. M. G. DATAR
HEADMASTER, TILAK VIDYALAYA
NAGPUR

From a microfilm: S. N. 17157

¹ Vide "National Universities", 18-6-1931.
247. LETTER TO SUREN德拉 SINGH

AS AT SABARMATI,

May 26, 1931

DEAR SARDAR SUREN德拉 SINGH,

You will pardon me for not having acknowledged your letter of the 30th April earlier. It will be difficult for you to convince me that the present administration really guarantees protection at critical times. I am at one with you in deploiring the decline of spirituality in the national life. And I am quite at one with you that we cannot have too much of selflessness or discipline. I am trying all I can to secure these.

Yours sincerely,

SARDAR SUREN德拉 SINGH
LAHORE

From a photostat : S. N. 17158

248. LETTER TO MANMOHANDAS P. GANDHI

May 26, 1931

BHAI MANMOHANDAS,

I am helpless. I have not been able so much as to glance at your book¹, thanks to constant travelling and pressure of other work.

1. How much cotton is imported from foreign countries for fine-count cloth?
2. Is it necessary to import that cotton?
3. Does the import harm the interests of indigenous cotton?
4. Does the growing of cotton harm or benefit the soil?
5. Would it be better to grow food crops instead of cotton?
6. Would it improve the soil?

Think over these questions and let me have your replies.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G. N. 13

¹ Pardeshi Kapadni Same Harifai Kem Karvi, a Gujarati translation by the author of his English work; vide “Preface to “Pardeshi Kapadni Same Harifai Kem Karavi” “, 25-2-1931

VOL. 52 : 28 APRIL, 1931 - 1 JULY, 1931
249. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

BARDOLI,
May 26, 1931

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I could not write to you from Nainital, but I did get your letter. I understand your difficulty. In what manner do you serve father-in-law? It would be very good indeed if he lets you serve all the time. That will keep your mind engaged and if, in consequence, the fainting fits stop, your health will improve. I completely forgot to write to Narandas about sending money to you, though of course he knows about it. Has there been any difficulty about the matter? Write to Narandas and request him to send you any sum you require. For some time I shall be staying in Bardoli.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 3413

250. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

BARDOLI,
May 26, 1931

CHI. VASUMATI,

I had your letter. Let me know about the effect of the vaid’s medicine. What does he give you by way of medicine? For what is Maitri being treated? Tell Mahavir and Maitri to write to me. When is Gangabehn expected to come? For the present I shall have to stay here. Ramdas and Nimu have reached Almora. Rambhau has returned to the Ashram.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S. N. 9324. Also C.W. 570. Courtesy: Vasumati Pandit
251. LETTER TO LAKSHMIBEHN KHARE

BARDOLI,

May 26, 1931

CHI. LAKSHMIBEHN,

I suppose Rambhau has returned there. Don’t get angry with him or beat him. Let him follow his own inclinations. If he does not like to study, he may do some manual work or learn some craft. There will be no harm either if he concentrates on cultivating his gift for music. Try to discover the bent of his mind and let him do what he chooses. No one else will be able to look after him or reform him better than you can. Be patient with him. Let me know what he decides to do.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 278. Courtesy: Lakshmibehn Khare

252. LETTER TO FIROZABEHN TALEYARKHAN

BARDOLI,

May 26, 1931

DEAR SISTER,

It was only yesterday I came here. I have your letter. You may come over whenever you wish. I shall spare some time [for you].

Vandemataram from

MOHANDAS GANDHI

PS.

The train to Bardoli starts from Surat.

SMT. FIROZABEHN TALEYARKHAN
CUMBALLA HILL
BOMBAY

From Gujarati: C. W. 9774
253. TELEGRAM TO PRABHASHANKAR PATTANI

BARDOLI,

May 27, 1931

SIR PRABHASHANKAR PATTANI

BHAVNAGAR

THANKS WIRE. COME BARDOLI WHENEVER YOU CAN.

GANDHI

From a photostat: G.N. 5915. Also C.W. 3230. Courtesy: Mahesh Pattani

254. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

BOMBAY,

Silence Day [Before May 28], 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

I remember your asking me to write to you on silence day and that is why I am writing this letter. Otherwise I really have no time.

Tell the inmates of the Ashram that they should not be very eager to receive letters from me. I have talked and reasoned much and what I taught I have practised as well as I could; let them assimilate as much as they can. We have with us those three shields to protect us, the Anasaktiyoga, the Bhajanavali and the Ramayana. I believe, and I want you all to believe, that the constant reading of these with faith will be a greater source of strength than letters from me or than living with me.

If the Punjabi vaid succeeds in his treatment of Jamna and Kusum, we shall have made a discovery. If he does indeed, we should put Radha and Anandi, too, under his treatment.

How does Santok keep now?

I have still not been able to find time for writing about the swadeshi vow.

Blessings from

BAPU

---

1 From the reference to the discourse on the swadeshi vow, despatched on May 28; vide “Letter to Narandas Gandhi”, 29-5-1931

184 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
[PS.]

I have received a request from Rajkot that I should arrange for a companion for Ratilal who would look after him. Can you think of anyone? The person will of course be well paid.

I am leaving for Borsad today. For the present, therefore, write to me there.

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—9: Shri Narandas Gandhine, Pt. I, p. 250

255. TO THE U.P. ZAMINDARS

In another column will be found my manifesto to the U.P. Kisans.¹ I know that H. E. the Governor does not quite like it inasmuch as it goes beyond the relief given by the U.P. Government. But the advice given to the kisans in the manifesto is an honest attempt to express their capacity for payment. I am hoping, therefore, that if the kisans pay according to the suggestion made in the manifesto, the zamindars and the local Government will accept the payments in full discharge of the kisans’ liability. But under the land revenue system prevalent in the U.P. the brunt will in the first instance fall upon the zamindars. I am hoping that the Government will grant proportionate relief to the zamindars who accept the tenants’ terms.

To the zamindars I can give my assurance that I endeavoured to study the rural condition as much as it was possible for me to do. With the authoritative figures before me, it was impossible to offer better terms. Here are the two tables of prices:

Index Nos. of the prices of the Principal Food-grains (Wheat, Barley, Gram, Rice and Bajra) on the basis of 1873=100

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Prices</th>
<th>Year</th>
<th>Prices</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>1880</td>
<td>118</td>
<td>1906-10</td>
<td>195</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1881-85</td>
<td>100</td>
<td>1911-15</td>
<td>194</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1886-90</td>
<td>119</td>
<td>1916-20</td>
<td>272</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1891-95</td>
<td>128</td>
<td>1921-25</td>
<td>294</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1896-1900</td>
<td>166</td>
<td>1926</td>
<td>300</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>1901-05</td>
<td>136</td>
<td>1931 (May, U.P.)</td>
<td>132</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

¹ Vide “To the Kisans of the U. P. 23-5-1931
They show that from 1915 there is 50% drop in the prices of staples. These prices go back to 1886. That means that within living memory they have never been so low as now. And if one were to go to the level of rents in those days, the tenants would have to pay much less than 8 as. or 12 as. as under the manifesto. It is admitted that the condition of the tenants has at no time been prosperous during recent years. Indeed an inquiry made in over three hundred U.P. villages in the eastern province shows that the price of the produce at the present rate does not even cover the rents payable. This makes no allowance for the cost of cultivation. I am prepared to admit that the inquiry was not made by experts. It therefore lacks scientific precision. But such as it is, it is revealing enough to make one pause and think.

Mr. Hooper, once a Settlement Officer, is said to have given the following landlords’ definition of the U.P. tenant:

One who is ready to live on one meal a day, and in native phrase to sell his wife and children to pay the highest possible rent for his holding, who submits to any cesses it may please his landlord to demand, and who is always willing to work for him without payment, to give evidence for him in court and speaking generally, to do any conceivable thing he is told.

The description is not flattering to the zamindars. But since Mr. Hooper’s time the zamindars’ ideas have undergone revolution. Many of them are sympathetic to their tenants. They try to make common cause with them. But the process has to be much faster than it has been. With the great awakening among the kisans there must be growing dissatisfaction with their lot, and a growing assertion of their rights.

I would like the zamindars to recognize the correctness of the kisans’ position and make a corresponding change in their own outlook. The present crisis will be somehow tided over. But it would be wrong to go to sleep after it is over.
The zamindars would do well to take the time by the forelock. Let them cease to be mere rent collectors. They should become trustees and trusted friends of their tenants. They should limit their privy purse. Let them forgo the questionable perquisites they take from the tenants in the shape of forced gifts on marriage and other occasions, or nazarana on transfer of holdings from one kisan to another or on restoration to the same kisan after eviction for non-payment of rent. They should give them fixity of tenure, take a lively interest in their welfare, provide well-managed schools for their children, night schools for adults, hospitals and dispensaries for the sick, look after the sanitation of villages and in a variety of ways make them feel that they, the zamindars, are their true friends taking only a fixed commission for their manifold services. In short they must justify their position. They should trust Congressmen. They may themselves become Congressmen and know that the Congress is a bridge between the people and the Government. All who have the true welfare of the people at heart can harness the services of the Congress. Congressmen will on their part see to it that kisans scrupulously fulfil their obligations to the zamindars. I mean not necessarily the statutory but the obligations which they have themselves admitted to be just. They must reject the doctrine that their holdings are absolutely theirs to the exclusion of the zamindars. They are or should be members of a joint family in which the zamindar is the head guarding their rights against encroachment. Whatever the law may be, the zamindari to be defensible must approach the conditions of a joint family.

I like the ideal of Rama and Janaka. They owned nothing against the people. Everything including themselves belonged to the people. They lived in their midst a life not above theirs but in correspondence with theirs. But these may not be regarded as historical personages. Then let us take the example of the great Caliph Omar. Though he was monarch of a vast realm created by his great genius and amazing industry, he lived the life of a pauper and never considered himself owner of the vast treasures that lay at his feet. He was a terror to those officials who squandered people’s money in luxuries.

Young India, 28-5-1931
Maharaja Saheb of Mahmudabad

The untimely death of the Maharaja Saheb of Mahmudabad removes one whose wisdom was needed at the present juncture in the life of the nation. He was genuinely anxious to promote Hindu-Muslim unity, and could be relied upon to give sound advice on national matters. I tender my respectful condolences to the deceased's family.

Poisonous Journalism

I have before me extracts from journals containing some gruesome things. There is communal incitement, gross misrepresentation and incitement to political violence bordering on murder. It is of course easy enough for the Government to launch out prosecutions or to pass repressive ordinances. These fail to serve the purpose intended except very temporarily, and in no case do they convert the writers, who often take to secret propaganda, when the open forum of the Press is denied to them.

The real remedy is healthy public opinion that will refuse to patronize poisonous journals. We have our journalists' Association. Why should it not create a department whose business it would be to study the various journals and find objectionable articles and bring them to the notice of the respective editors? The function of the department will be confined to the establishment of contact with the offending journals and public criticism of offending articles where the contact fails to bring about the desired reform. Freedom of the Press is a precious privilege that no country can forgo. But if there is, as there should be, no legislative check save that of the mildest character, an internal check such as I have suggested should not be impossible and ought not to be resented.

Navajuvan Bharat Sabha

A member of this Sabha asked me at Muttra Junction whether I had suggested that no Congress member should be a member of that body or vice versa. I told him that so far as I knew I had never expressed any such opinion. He immediately announced the purport of my reply to the young men on the platform, and said that some Congress member had ascribed such opinion to me, that it was wrong and that now every Congressman was free to join the Sabha as every

1 A leading nationalist Muslim who died on May 23 member of the Sabha was free to join the Congress. That I had expressed no such opinion as was ascribed to me did not certainly imply that all Congressmen should or were free to join the Sabha. Every Sabha has its own rules. And I should be sorry to find Congressmen joining any of these Sabhas or for that matter any other institution without first ascertaining the condition of membership, the men composing it and the methods of its working. Certainly no one can be bullied into joining an institution. The Navajuvan Bharat Sabha will flourish if it shows a record of constructive service of the nation, never otherwise.

RIVAL CONGRESS COMMITTEES

Whilst at Nainital I heard of rival Congress Committees in the U.P. and elsewhere. I heard too of election disputes in several places. This is a bad sign. There must be something wrong in a place where such unhealthy rivalries take place. The hunt for office in Congress Committees is also a very ugly sign. A Congress office is or should be an opportunity for service. And where service is the motive, there can be no unhealthy rivalry. A man or a woman can easily do service without needing, or hunting for office. Wise servants of the nation will find it more profitable to stand out than to enter into unhealthy competition. Nor need one form a separate organization for the sake of service. Why do I, for instance, need an organization, if I want to teach the children of my village or street, or to sweep it, or to nurse my neighbours, to carry on khadi propaganda or to do kindred acts, all of which promote national well-being and keep me going the whole time?

CONGRESS AND COMMUNALISM

A correspondent asks whether a Congressman who openly identifies himself with communal conferences, and other communal propaganda can hold any office under the Congress organization.

I do not think there is any rule prohibiting the election of any Congressmen to any office because of his communalism. But if the Congress is to remain a purely national organization, and is to be absolutely just to all and guardian of weak minorities, Congressmen will never elect those who are known for their communal bias or tendency.

Young India, 28-5-1931
I gladly publish the following from Rev. B. W. Tucker:

I am in full agreement with you in your protest against the methods employed by Christian missions in their efforts to gain proselytes through education, medical services and the like. Education when used for such purposes is really no education at all, but merely the perpetuation of the present substitute for education initiated by the Government, which no honest missionary, familiar with educational experimentation in the lands from which he comes would tolerate for a minute if his primary interest was education rather than proselytizing. While not denying the right of the sick to relief from their sufferings, it might not be altogether unfair to presume, that it has been proselytizing zeal rather than lack of intelligence that has caused missionary doctors to specialize in hospitals of healing to the neglect of preventive medicine and health work. All humanitarian work must necessarily suffer if men are not dealt with with a single eye to their welfare and development as personalities, and this cannot be the case when they are looked upon merely as candidates for conversion into another social or religious grouping.

... It is the spirit of the age, that one’s devotion to religion and God should find an immediate return in increased material prosperity, which is the negation of all spiritual religion. ... In fact the whole Christian community have had their character vitiated by this sort of thing, ... In no walk of life can the principle be justified that the end justifies the means, but least of all in religion where sincerity must reign supreme.

... Jesus had the same passion for social solidarity that has ever characterized Hindu religion at its best. While he was a devout Jew, he was never a communalist, and set his face sternly against everything, which hindered men from realizing their universal brotherhood. For this reason he was opposed to the nationalism of his day, even as you have been opposed to the current tendency towards a divisive nationalism in India. I believe that if modern Christian missions are to be true to their Lord and Master, they will eschew all efforts to proselytize and thus tear men away from their social order with the consequent lack of the sense of responsibility for the advancement of that social order.

... This Government has demanded that the non-British missionary not only remain neutral in such vital matters as the economic and political evils of this country, but has compelled him to give a pledge, which the Government has interpreted to mean that the missionary shall actively support the Government... In my own case they objected even to my attending political meetings as a visitor, frankly admitting that they had no charge of moral obloquy to make against me, but that the Government interpretation of the pledge I had given would not allow me even this privilege. It is a standing indictment of the alliance of Christian missions in India with the world’s greatest collective evil, imperialism, that they have acquiesced in this arrangement.

1 Only extracts are reproduced here.

It is for this reason that I am pleased that you have signified that you would not perpetuate this evil in a swaraj government by creating any legal enactment compelling missionaries to withdraw if they failed to give up their proselytizing activities. No government can afford to abridge freedom of religion in this way....

While I am sympathetic with your criticism of the exclusive claim of Christianity as the superior religion, I must protest against the implications of your statement that the religions of India are adequate for her....

I can have nothing to add to this letter. But I must adhere to the statement to which Rev. Tucker takes exception and which is, “Religions of India are adequate for her.” This surely means nothing more than that she does not need to change them. But as the context of the article in which the statement occurs shows, it does not mean that the professors of the respective faiths have nothing to learn. If there is sympathetic contact established between the various faiths and no evil designs suspected, each can gain a great deal from the rest.
What is resisted is the idea of gaining converts and that too not always by fair and open means.

Young India, 28-5-1931

258. PANCHAYATS

Panchayat has an ancient flavour; it is a good word. It literally means an assembly of five elected by villagers. It represents the system, by which the innumerable village republics of India were governed. But the British Government, by its ruthlessly through method of revenue collection, almost destroyed these ancient republies, which could not stand the shock of this revenue collection.
Congressmen are now making a crude attempt to revive the system by giving village elders civil and criminal jurisdiction. The attempt was first made in 1921. It failed. It is being made again, and it will fail if it is not systematically and decently, I will not say, scientifically, tried.

It was reported to me in Nainital, that in certain places in the U.P. even criminal cases like rape were tried by the so-called Panchayats. I heard of some fantastic judgments pronounced by ignorant or interested Panchayats. This is what comes to me from far off Assam:

It has been ascertained that the Congress Committee at Chaparmukh has set up a sort of rival administrative machinery there for the trial and disposal of civil and criminal cases. There are a few branch offices in the neighbourhood of Chaparmukh which dispose of similar business. At Chaparmukh office regis-ters are being maintained for civil and criminal cases. It is understood that fines are imposed in criminal cases, and decrees are passed in civil suits, and that in a few cases attachments of property have been made or attempted in execution of decrees.

This is all bad if it is true. Irregular Panchayats are bound to fall to pieces under their own unsupportable weight. I suggest therefore the following rules for the guidance of village workers:

1. No Panchayat should be set up without the written sanction of a Provincial Congress Committee;
2. A Panchayat should in the first instance be elected by a public meeting called for the purpose by beat of drum;
3. It should be recommended by the Tehsil Committee;
4. Such Panchayat should have no criminal jurisdiction;
5. It may try civil suits if the parties to them refer their disputes to the Panchayat;
6. No one should be compelled to refer any matter to the Panchayat;
7. No Panchayat should have any authority to impose fines, the only sanction behind its civil decrees being its moral authority, strict impartiality and the willing obedience of the parties concerned;
8. There should be no social or other boycott for the time being;
9. Every Panchayat will be expected to attend to;
(a) The education of boys and girls in its village;
(b) Its sanitation;
(c) Its medical needs;
(d) The upkeep and cleanliness of village wells or ponds;
(e) The uplift of and the daily wants of the so-called untouchables;

10. A Panchayat, that fails without just cause to attend to the requirements mentioned in clause 9 within six months of its election, or fails otherwise to retain the goodwill of the villagers, or stands self-condemned for any other cause, appearing sufficient to the Provincial Congress Committee, may be disbanded and another elected in its place.

The disability to impose fines or social boycott is a necessity of the case in the initial stages. Social boycott in villages has been found to be a dangerous weapon in the hands of ignorant or unscrupulous men. Imposition of fines too may lead to mischief and defeat the very end in view. Where a Panchayat is really popular and increases its popularity by the constructive work of the kind suggested in clause 9, it will find its judgments and authority respected by reason of its moral prestige. And that surely is the greatest sanction any one can possess and of which one cannot be deprived.

Young India, 28-5-1931
259. SALT

Simla has issued the following welcome communique:

Since the conclusion of the Settlement between Lord Irwin and Mr. Gandhi, the Government of India have been engaged in settling the details of arrangements and regulations in various districts to give effect to clause 20 of the Settlement, which related to the collection and manufacture of salt by local residents in villages immediately adjoining the areas where salt could be collected or made. These details in all cases are now practically completed, and the general manner in which effect is to be given to the arrangement may be stated as follows:

1. Clause 20 is intended to benefit the poor classes. It will be open, therefore, to those in villages adjoining the salt areas to make or collect salt for domestic use and sale in their respective villages.

   NOTE: Domestic use shall include use for manure, cattle or fishcuring by individual fishermen.

2. For this purpose villagers may make salt pans or beds.

3. There should be no sale of salt for purpose of trade outside the villages. It follows, therefore, that such salt an be carried only on foot and not in carts or such other conveyances.

4. Wherever manufacture of salt under the foregoing clauses is permitted, salt pans will not be directed or otherwise interfered with by Government officers, and regular watches will be withdrawn.

5. The concession will be withdrawn from the villages where it is found that it is abused. Wherever it is discovered that salt is manufactured or collected in quantities above the requirements of a particular village, the abuse of the concession will be presumed.

I hope that workers will understand and carefully explain these instructions to the villagers, so that the limits are not overstepped.

Young India, 28-5-1931

260. TO DESHSEVIKAS

May 28, 1931

When I was in Bombay, I wished to meet the deshsevikas. I tried to find time to do so, but I could not meet all of them. Finally, the women contented themselves with writing a letter signed by all. Till today, I have not been able to write even a few lines to express my gratitude to them. It is true that I was unable to find time to write while travelling, but the fact is that I also forgot to write when I could have done so. I hope these women will forgive me. Some account of the work done by the deshsevikas did appear in the newspapers and, as I received two or three newspapers while in prison, I could get some idea of their work. My heart used to dance with joy on reading about their ceaseless service and their fearlessness. It is my hope that, with the very same enthusiasm, these women will do hereafter the more difficult constructive work and bring credit to themselves and to the country. The world has certainly been astonished at what Indian women have achieved in the past twelve months. But their task does not end there. This is merely the beginning.

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan, 31-5-1931

261. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

May 28, 1931

CHI. PRABHA,

I got your letter. If the marriage cannot be celebrated before the end of June, you should come away just now and return afterwards for a week for the marriage. According to me, every day should be treated as an auspicious day on which a marriage can be celebrated. If, however, the marriage cannot be celebrated soon and if Father and Mother willingly permit you to come away, you should do so immediately. But you may stay on for the whole of June if they are likely to feel hurt. You may go to Sitabadiyara, too, and stay there for some time and do your duty to the family. If you have to stay on, you should write to uncle\(^1\), Babaji and Vinoba about it and get their permission. I, on my part, will also speak to them. You alone know all the relevant circumstances for deciding whether you should stay on there; you should, therefore, do what seems best to you in the light of the circumstances there.

Write a strong letter to Jayaprakash in regard to the pain from which he suffers. If you stay on there, take an opportunity to meet him.

Keep up some study.

Gangabehn gave birth to a daughter. The child lived for a day

\(^1\) Jamnalal Bajaj, according to Bapuna Patro—10: Shri Prabhavatibehnne and died.

Amtulsalaam feels rather unhappy. I cannot say whether she will continue to stay here till you return.

Why have you asked for slivers to be sent to you from here? Of course I will send them, but you yourself ought to card cotton. If the effort gives you pain in your hand, you should teach some others to card. Is there no one even in Chhapra who spins? And if a person spins, cannot he card? Wherever we stay, we should do our best to obtain slivers locally.

What is your weight?

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

I will leave on the 29th and return on June 3.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3412

262. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

BARDOLI.
May 28, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

I got your letter. Write to Hanuman Singh’s relations and tell them that his death has both grieved me and made me happy. His body had wasted away and it is good that it has perished. The soul which dwelt in that body is immortal. Since I knew him personally, I was bound to feel grieved at his passing away, but such grief ought to be suppressed. I, therefore, felt the pain only for a moment. Let the relations, too, feel in the same way. Translate this into Hindi and send it to them along with a copy of the Gujarati. Who is the Shankarrao who was bitten by a snake? How is he now? How did he come to be bitten by a snake? Did it get under his foot in the river or did it bite him unprovoked?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U/I
263. LETTER TO V. G. DESAI

BARDOLI,
May 28, 1931

BHAISHRI VALJI,

Did you in any way benefit from your stay in the hospital? Or, are things just as they were? Don’t let your constipation remain. If you come over here as soon as you get this letter, we will banish your constipation altogether.

I have written to Bhai Mohanlal about your article.

It seems that the Foreword did not reach you after all. Here is another:

“These eleven points have been explained so clearly that everybody may understand them. If every reader, having understood these points, immediately starts acting upon as many of them as he finds practicable, how very near would swaraj be?”

MOHANDAS GANDHI

Though I send you this Foreword, I wonder whether the eleven points have not become twenty now. Why won’t you write about all of them? But in this matter you know better.

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 7414. Courtesy: V. G. Desai

264. LETTER TO JAMNADAS GANDHI

BARDOLI,
May 28, 1931

CHI. JAMNADAS,

I have your letter of the 22nd; but the earlier one has not yet reached me. I fail to see why you are reluctant to write to the Doctor. Why should you feel any hesitation in explaining the facts as they are? I see nothing odd in your wish to ask Lallubhai to accompany you when you take Ratilal to Thana. He must be a strange man who, though he has enough money, refuses to spend it at such a time. For whose sake should he hoard and save? I did get the telegram about Anna, and I replied to say that he would not be able to go. It is possible, however, that he want on his own.
How is the State being ruled? What happened to that petition in regard to drinking?

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]
At present I am here only.
From Gujarati : C. W. 9323. Courtesy : Jamnadas Gandhi

265. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

BARDOLI,
May 28, 1931

CHI. LILAVATI,

Received your letter. Do come if you can get leave, I am going to be at Bardoli for the time being. You have to find peace by your own efforts. Do not mistake for real the peace you get through hectic activity.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

266. INTERVIEW TO THE PRESS

BARDOLI,
May 28, 1931

Interviewed in connection with the report appearing in a Bombay paper saying that an ugly situation was again developing in and around Bardoli, Gandhiji declared:

I urge upon the public to disbelieve all sensational statements and be unruffled by them. It is news to me that the peasants have no intention to pay the land revenue. I do know that the peasants have been paying to the utmost of their ability all the time and are still paying. I hope to be able shortly to make a public statement to show how punctiliously correct Sardar Vallabh bhai Patel and other workers in the Civil Disobedience Movement have been in implementing the Delhi Settlement.

The Hindustan Times, 30-5-1931
DEAR MR. MAXWELL,

May 29, 1931

I thank you for your several letters which I hope to deal with as fast as time permits me. But I must make time to reply to your latest, i.e., of the 25th instant and the previous one, i.e., of the 24th instant.

I do not know what there can be in the prabhat pheris to object to. Though they took from during the Civil Disobedience campaign they were in themselves quite innocent. I do not know how far they dis-turb the peace of citizens. During my recent travels, I found them more or less in vogue in the other cities too. I can understand prohibition of inflammatory songs. But I do not know that the Government will be right in interfering with this innocent and beautiful institution which reminds citizens of their duty towards their Creator in early morning.

With reference to the Seva Dals the practices they go through are not new. They have for years been going through them without any interference. If there is anything specific that is objected to, I would like it to be specified. I am unable without further information to endorse the suggestion that ‘these camps do not wholly reflect the spirit of the Settlement and that they are calculated in some degree to delay the restoration of normal conditions and feelings’.

As to the other letter, i.e., about liquor sales it comes upon me with painful surprise.

If whilst liquor picketing is recognized as legitimate, the Government counteract it through several practices even considered illegal, and contend that such practices are not in contravention of the Settlement, I venture to suggest that nothing that the Government may do or may not do need be deemed to be in contravention of it.

But your letter tells me that the present practice of sale out of ordinary hours and outside ordinary places of sale is perfectly legal. This I must confess is a revelation for which I was wholly unprepared. It means that the Collectors are guided by no legal restrictions or regulations that the public need know. Indeed if such is the condition of liquor law or rather if the sale of liquor is governed by no law save the will of Collectors, the sooner the public is informed of the fact the better for it. And it will be a serious matter for the Congress Working Committee to consider.

His Excellency will permit me to say that he is evidently unaware of the fact that picketing in Ahmedabad has been accepted by the previous District Officer and the Superintendent of Police as the most peaceful and inoffensive. His Excellency is also evidently unaware of the fact that the picketing was started by the Labour Union in the interest of labour long before the Civil Disobedience campaign was inaugurated. It has been admired by strangers from the West who have visited Ahmedabad.

His Excellency will pardon me for saying that the opening of the last paragraph of your letter betrays amazing ignorance of the working of picketing in Ahmedabad. I state here for his information that the Labour Union including the drinkers are thankful for this watch and it is the Union that has borne the expenses. It was surely His Excellency’s duty to be sure of his facts on which undeserved reflections upon the conduct of an honourable body of men and women are based.

The suggestion contained in the last sentence that such picketing cannot be peaceful implies a reflection on Lord Irwin who negotiated the Settlement which reflection I am sure His Excellency could never have intended.

In conclusion I repeat my humble opinion that if the practice of liquor sales now going on in Ahmedabad continues, the continuation will be in breach of the spirit if not the letter of the Settlement.

I am,
Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

A.I.C.C. File No. 4, 1931, part II. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

268. LETTER TO GANGABEHN JHAVERI
May 29, 1931

CHI. GANGABEHN,
Chhaganlal informs me that you have come to Nadiad. I also hear that you wish to see me. You may come whenever you wish. I shall not be required to go to Borsad for some time. Send the accompanying letter to Navin wherever he is.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3114
269. LETTER TO PADMA

BARDOLI,
May 29, 1931

CHI. PADMA,

I met your father in Nainital. Do you write to him? How is your health now? Write to me and give me all the news about yourself.

Blessings from
BAPU

270. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

BARDOLI,
May 29, 1931

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

You must have received my letter. For some days, I could get no time to write to you. I did write to Narandas, however, about sending you money. I shall most probably be in Bardoli up to 7th June. Write to me here and give all details. My health is good. The diet remains the same, milk and fruits.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]

271. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

BARDOLI,
May 29, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

I sent yesterday an article\(^1\) for Navajivan on the swadeshi vow. It will be one of the discourses on the Ashram vows, that is, the discourses included in the series Mangalprabhat. With this is a letter for Dahiben Sonabhai. She was a member of the Stri Swaraj Sangh,

\(^1\) Vide “The Law of Swadeshi”, 18-6-1931
Udwada Bazaar, but had asked for permission to resign from it. She may not, therefore, be in Udwada. Send the letter to her, wherever she is.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

I had sent from jail a translation of Ramdas Swami’s couplet about handwriting. If you can find it, send it to me. I am not enclosing Dahibehn’s letter. She is at Udwada.

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./I.

272. LETTER TO MANGALA S. PATEL

BARDOLI,
May 29, 1931

CHI. MANGALA,

I had your letter. But I can write only when I find time, is that not so? I shall search for the poem of Ramdas Swami and publish it in the Navajivan. You must then write as instructed in it.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 11094. Courtesy: Pushpa Naik

273. LETTER TO SUMANGAL PRAKASH

BARDOLI,
May 29, 1931

CHI. SUMANGAL,

I had your letter, but have so far never had time to answer it. I came to know afterwards that the two of you had come to the station at Moradabad to see me. But I was then asleep.

It will be good if Kanta can be admitted to Dakshinamurti. It will also be good if she studies at home and sits for the examination of the Karve Institute.

1 Das Bodha, XIX. 1
2 Maharashtrian saint-poet
It was difficult to have the ban lifted from the proscribed books. . .\(^1\) It seemed to be going beyond propriety to mix with the matter things which were to be decided in a matter of months.

I do hope you are now getting Young India and Navajivan.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Are you now fully recovered in health?

From a photostat of the Hindi: Sumangal Prakash Papers. Courtesy: Nehru memorial Museum and Library

274. LETTER TO CHANDRAKANTA

BARDOLI,

May 29, 1931

CHI. KANTA,

I have your letter. I have written about you to Brother and so I will not repeat it here. You should never worry about my health. It is all right. Keep to me. How is your health?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: Chandrakanta Papers. Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library

275. LETTER TO MANGALA S. PATEL

Silence Day,  [After May 29, 1931]\(^2\)

CHI. MANGALA,

I have your letter. Your handwriting is passably good. But there are too many blotches. Do you remember Ramdas Swami’s song I sent you in this connection?\(^3\)

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C. W. 11103. Courtesy : Pushpa Naik

---

\(^1\) Omission as in the source
\(^2\) From the contents; vide “Letter to Mangala S. Patel”, 29-5-1931.
\(^3\) For Gandhiji’s references to Ramdas Swami’s stanzas on the importance of good handwriting, vide “Letter to Hari-Ichchha Desai”, 10-8-1930 and “Letter to Vinodbala”, 27-9-1930
276. LETTER TO K. F. NARIMAN

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 30, 1931

MY DEAR NARIMAN,

I enclose herewith a copy of the latest from Sardar Garda and my reply. Unless you still think there is any use negotiating please follow up the suggestion made by you in your letter to Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel about legal procedure. If there is no cause of action and if there is to be no further negotiation, let us forget the matter at least for the time being.

Yours sincerely,

Encls. 2

SYT. K. F. NARIMAN
C/O BOMBAY PROVINCIAL CONGRESS COMMITTEE
CONGRESS HOUSE, GIRGAUM BACK ROAD
BOMBAY

From a photostat : S.N. 17165

277. LETTER TO F. KOTHAWALA

BARDOLI,
May 30, 1931

DEAR MR. KOTHAWALA,

I now send herewith a note on allegations against Patel Jehangir of Varad. If an impartial open inquiry is held, full evidence will be led before the tribunal in support of all the allegations. There is no objection on the part of the people to the inquiry being entirely open.

Moreover, according to my information, Patel Jehangir holds a liquor license which, in my opinion, should be an effective bar against the holding of a Patelship. As the allegations made against this Patel are serious and as complaints about his high-handed treatment of the villagers continue to come in I request an early public investigation or an early removal from the office he holds. I must add that the question of undesirability is raised without prejudice to the general question, namely, that the temporary appointments, no matter of what duration, are, in my opinion, only temporary in terms of the Settlement and in no sense permanent, especially when it is known that these appointments are for so many years or until further orders.

Yours sincerely,

Encl. 1

F. KOTHAWALA, ESQ.
COLLECTOR OF SURAT DT.
BARDOLI

A.I.C.C. File No. 16C-1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

278. LETTER TO FRAMROZE B. GARDA

BARDOLI,
May 30, 1931

DEAR SARDAR GARDA,

I have your letter. If you will not accept arbitration in the matter of your complaints, I do not know how to give you satisfaction. The matter must now pass into lawyers’ hands and if they advise that the letter written by you undertaking to restore the lands in question to the original holders against the consideration named by you gives sufficient cause of action, law must take its course.

Yours sincerely,

SARDAR FRAMROZE GARDA

NAVSARI

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-C, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

279. LETTER TO RATILAL

BARDOLI,

May 30, 1931

BHAI RATILAL,

I got your letter. Work patiently and overcome your difficulties. Do have a discussion with Narandas about weavers.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 7166
280. LETTER TO FULCHAND K. SHAH

BARDOLI,

May 30, 1931

BHAISHRI FULCHAND,

I have learnt about the Dhrol incident. My own view is that you should now forget all about the demand for the national flag. If you like, two or three of you may come to see me. It seems to me that many things are being done in haste. On your side, the right course at present is to apply yourselves exclusively to the boycott of foreign cloth through propagation of khadi, and to the campaign against drinking. Besides, there is no dearth of social reforms which need to be brought about.

Take every step after careful thought.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9193. Also C.W. 2844. Courtesy: Shardabehn Shah

281. LETTER TO NARAYAN MOreshwar Khare

May 30, 1931

CHI. PANDITJI,

I got your letter.

As for the boys and girls living in the Ashram who have joined the Vidyapith, I have already communicated my views to Kaka. Briefly, they are as follows: Though there is not much to justify the view that the students who had joined the movement should not return to the Ashram I would not oppose it either. The question is, what can they do if they cannot work elsewhere? Ordinarily, the Vidyapith would be the only choice. But we got alarmed when others, too, began to give up manual work and go away. It may also have happened that, under the pretext of excercising self-control and not returning to the Ashram, the students satisfied their desire for joining the Vidyapith. But we cannot hold back a flood. So I let the students do what they liked. There is a long history behind all this. It is difficult to say how far the students’ action is inspired by their desire to join the Vidyapith and how far by a clear sense of duty. Ask me if

1 A town in Saurashtra you fail to follow anything in this. Show this letter to those who had doubts in the matter.

Write to me from time to time and inform me how Rambhau is faring.

I have followed what you say about Chi. Gajanan. There is no harm in letting him satisfy his love of painting. It is very good indeed that, at the same time, he also does spinning, etc.

I was eager to revise the draft of Mananvishi while I was in jail. But I was released before I could do so, and found myself again in the thick of affairs. Now print the thing off as it is. I have already given you one “meditation” to be added.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : C.W. 215. Courtesy : Lakshmibehn Khare

282. LETTER TO GANGABEHN VAIDYA

BARDOLI,
May 30, 1931

CHI. GANGABEHN,

Why do you feel so unhappy? After all, no great tragedy has struck you down. There is no law that no one shall die young. Moreover, you and I have not one child, but countless children. Some of them will die and others will be born to take their place. Why, then, keep count of who dies and who lives? We should do our best to serve those who happen to be near us. It will then be the same to us that someone lives and another dies.

If the secretary has made the necessary arrangements, we need not think about the matter any further.

Cultivate non-attachment.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

283. LETTER TO KASTURBHAI LALBHAI

BARDOLI,
May 30, 1931

BHAISHRI KASTURBHAI,

The delay in implementing the resolution of the Swadeshi Sabha to take over the foreign goods lying with the merchants of Ahmedabad seems to me dangerous. Cannot the matter be settled soon? I am writing a letter to somewhat the same effect to Chimanlal also.

Vandemataram from
MOHANDAS

From the Gujarati original : S.N. 33145

284. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

BARDOLI,
May 30, 1931

Bhai GhanshyAMDAS,

I saw your letter to Mahadev. You have sent the correct reply to Polak. I had sent an almost similar reply to the cable from those gentlemen. Even now I hold that my going would be pointless until the Hindu-Muslim problem is resolved. But, to go to meet the members of the Cabinet and other people is another thing.

Subhasbabu met me again and we had a long talk. But it is difficult to say anything; I saw Sen Gupta’s letter in the newspapers yesterday. Let us see what happens on the 9th. I have asked Subhasbabu too to come over.

Yours,
MOHANDAS

From a copy of Hindi : C.W. 7886. Courtesy : G. D. Birla

Vide “Cable to V. S. Srinivasa Sastri”, 23-5-1931
285. TELEGRAM TO WILLIAM SHIRER¹

[On or after May 30, 1931]²

WILLIAM SHIRER
Cecil Hotel
Simla

YOUR WIRE. ALL REPORTS UNAUTHORIZED BEING UNINTELLEGENT ANTICIPATION. SO FAR AS I CAN SEE ABSENCE COMMUNAL QUESTION BLOCKS MY WAY PARTICIPATION ROUND TABLE CONFERENCE. DELICATE SITUATION AND IRWIN-GANDHI SETTLEMENT MAKES MY IMMEDIATE LEAVING INDIA DIFFICULT. APART FROM THESE DIFFICULTIES I AM ANXIOUS ATTEND ROUND TABLE CONFERENCE AND TAKE FULL SHARE DELIBERATIONS AND PRESS CONGRESS DEMAND. AM THEREFORE SEEKING WAY OUT OF DIFFICULTY. BUT IF COMMUNAL QUESTION IS NOT SOLVED HERE AND SETTLEMENT DIFFICULTY IS OVER AND IF I AM REQUIRED TO PROCEED TO LONDON TO EXPLAIN CONGRESS POSITION TO RESPONSIBLE STA-TESMEN AND PUBLIC IN GREAT BRITAIN I HAVE TOLD FRIENDS I SHOULD HOLD MYSELF READINESS PROCEED LONDON. IN SHORT I AM ANXIOUS SECURE PERMANENT PEACE BY NEGOTIATION CONSISTENTLY WITH FUNDAMENTAL POSITION CONGRESS.

From a photostat: S.N. 17167

286. THE LAW OF SWADESHI

Swadeshi is the law of laws enjoined by the present age. Spiritual laws, like Nature’s laws need no enacting; they are selfacting. But through ignorance or other causes man often neglects or disobeys them. It is then vows are needed to steady one’s course. A man who is by temperament a vegetarian needs no vow to strengthen his vegetarianism. For, the sight of animal food, instead of tempting him would only excite his disgust. The law of swadeshi is ingained in the basic nature of man but it has today sunk into oblivion. Hence the necessity for the vow of swadeshi. In its ultimate and spiritual sence swadeshi stands for the final emancipation of the human soul from its

¹ Correspondent of Chicago Tribune
² The addressee’s telegram, to which this is a reply is dated May 30.
³ The Gujarati original of this appeared in Navajivan, 31-5-1931. This is a translation by Pyarelal.
earthly bondage. For, this earthly tabernacle is not its natural or permanent abode, it is a hindrance in its onward journey, it stands in the way of its realizing its oneness with other lives. A votary of swadeshi therefore, in his striving to identify himself with the entire creation seeks to be emancipated from the bondage of the physical body.

If this interpretation of swadeshi be correct then it follows that its votary will as a first duty dedicate himself to the service of his immediate neighbours. This involves exclusion or even sacrifice of the interests of the rest but the exclusion or the sacrifice would be apparent only. Pure service of one’s neighbours can never, from its very nature result in disservice to those who are remotely situated, rather the contrary. ‘As with the individual so with the universe’ is an unfailing principle which we would do well to lay to heart. On the other hand a man who allows himself to be lured by ‘the distant scene’ and runs to the ends of the earth for service, is not only foiled in his ambition but fails in his duty towards his neighbours also. Take a concrete instance. In the particular place where I live I have certain persons as my neighbours, some relations and dependents. Naturally, they all feel, as they have a right to, that they have a claim on me and look to me for help and support. Suppose now I leave them all at once and set out to serve people in a distant place. My decision would throw my little world of neighbours and dependents out of gear while my gratuitous knight-errantry would more likely than not disturb the atmosphere in the new place. Thus a culpable neglect of my immediate neighbours and an unintended disservice to the people whom I wish to serve would be the first fruits of my violation of the principles of swadeshi.

It is not difficult to multiply such instances. That is why the Gita says: “It is better to die performing one’s duty or swadharma, but para-dharma, or another’s duty, is fraught with danger.” Interpreted in terms of one’s physical environment this gives us the law of swadeshi. What the Gita says with regard to swadharma equally applies to swadeshi also, for swadeshi is swadharma applied to one’s immediate environment.

It is only when the doctrine of swadeshi is wrongly understood that mischief results, e.g., it would be a travesty of the doctrine of swadeshi, it to coddle my family I set about grabbing money by all means fair or foul. The law of swadeshi requires me no more than to discharge my legitimate obligations towards my family by just means, and the attempt to do so will reveal to me the Universal Code of Conduct. The practice of swadeshi can never do harm to anyone and if it does it is not swadharma but egotism that moves me.

There may come occasions when a votary of swadeshi may be called upon to sacrifice his family at the altar of universal service. Such an act of willing immolation will then constitute the highest service rendered to the family. “Whosoever wants to save his life will lose it, and whosoever loses his life for the Lord’s sake will find it,” holds good for the family group no less than the individual. Take another instance. Supposing there is an outbreak of the plague in my village and in trying to serve the victims of the epidemic I, my wife and children and all the rest of my family are wiped out of existence, then in inducing those dearest and nearest to join me I will not have acted as the destroyer of my family but on the contrary as its truest friend. In swadeshi there is no room for selfishness, or if there is selfishness in it, it is of the highest type which is not different from the highest altruism. Swadeshi in its purest form is the acme of universal service.

It was by following this line of argument that I hit upon khadi as a necessary and the most important corollary of the principle of swadeshi in its application to society. ‘What is the kind of service,’ I asked myself, ‘that the teeming millions of India most need at the present time, that can be easily understood and appreciated by all, that is easy to perform and will at the same time enable the crores of our semi-starved countrymen to live, and the reply came that it is the universalization of khadi or the spinning wheel alone that can fulfil these conditions.

Let no one suppose that the practice of swadeshi through khadi would harm the foreign mill-owners. A thief who is weaned from his vice or is made to return the property that he has stolen is not harmed thereby, on the contrary he is the gainer consciously in the one case, un-consciously in the other. Similarly if all the opium addicts or the drunkards in the world were to shake themselves free from their vice, the canteen keepers or the opium vendors who would be deprived of their customers could not be said to be losers. They would be the gainers in the truest sense of the word. The elimination of the ‘wages of sin’ is never a loss either to the individual concerned or to society;
it is pure gain.

It is the greatest delusion to suppose that the duty of swadeshi begins and ends with merely spinning so much yarn anyhow and wearing khadi made from it. Khadi is the first indispensable step towards the discharge of swadeshi dharma towards society. One often meets men who wear khadi but in all other things indulge their taste for foreign manufactures with a vengeance. Such men cannot be said to be practising swadeshi. They are simply following the fashion. A votary of swadeshi will carefully study his environment and try to help his neighbours wherever possible by giving preference to local manufactures even if they are of an inferior grade or dearer in price than things manufactured elsewhere. He will try to remedy their defects but will not give them up because of their defects and take to foreign manufactures.

But even swadeshi like any other good thing can be ridden to death if it is made a fetish. That is a danger that must be guarded against. To reject foreign manufactures merely because they are foreign and to go on wasting notional time and money to promote manufactures in one’s country for which it is not suited wuld be criminal folly and a negation of the swadeshi spirit. A true votary of swadeshi will never harbour ill-will towards the foreigner, he will not be moved by antagonism towards anybody on earth. Swadeshism is not a cult of hatred. It is a doctrine of selfless service that has its roots in the purest ahimsa, i.e., love.

Young India, 18-6-1931

287. LIMITS TO FREEDOM

Some Digambar Jains have asked the Sardar how, in the face of the Congress resolution passed at Karachi regarding fundamental rights and duties, assuring religious freedom under swaraj, anyone can object to Digambar Jain sadhus roaming about naked in accordance with their religion. The Sardar had replied that religious freedom could not imply that an act which appeared indecent to many or hurts their feelings was permissible. And he had said it was his opinion that despite being sadhus, if they went about naked, it was bound to hurt people’s feelings.

I feel that the Sardar could have possibly given no other reply. I myself believe that the ideal state for all human beings is nakedness.

---

¹ Literally, those who regard the sky as their garment
But an ideal human being would always be innocent and free of passions or desires. Without such innocence, anyone roaming about naked would be regarded as a sinful man.

There is no reason to conclude that because Digambar sadhus are known as sadhus they would necessarily be free of all passions. Even if they are so, it is their dharma to keep within the bounds of social decency. A few Jains may understand the state of these sadhus. But society by and large will fail to comprehend it and its feelings will be hurt. These naked sadhus have no need to visit cities. If they have, they should observe the minimum bounds of decency prescribed for citizens. Instead of doing that if they insist upon entering cities in a naked state, or if the shravakas insist upon this, in my opinion it would be regarded as adharma. I myself am fond of the state of nakedness. If I were living in a lonely forest I would remain in that state, but in this world full of passions, there is little likelihood of this becoming the commonly accepted practice. For the preservation of morality even great men of every persuasion have to cover their private parts; it is their dharma to do so. Freedom, both individual and religious, has always had and will always have many limits. Religion does not hanker after rights, it hungers for restraints and restrictions. Anyone who knows religion and practises it does not think in terms of his rights. Nudity cannot be one’s duty. It is one’s duty to abandon all possessions. That is a dharma of the mind. If anyone puts any burden on me, that is not possession. But becomes so if I start enjoying that burden. The sadhu who bears the burden of the loincloth for the preservation of the social order does not violate the principle of non-possession but rather exercises selfcontrol. The sadhu who insists upon going about naked without worrying about the feelings of society is self-willed. The following dictum of the Gita is pertinent in this context: “For me there is naught to do in the three worlds, yet I am ever in action. If I were not to perform my task, these worlds would be ruined; I should be the cause of chaos and of the end of all mankind.” Sadhus should not do anything which would harm the people. Let society never encourage them to do so.

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan, 31-5-1931

1 Lay followers of Jainism
2 Violation of dharma
3 III: 22-24
Distinguishing Swadeshi from Foreign Goods

The following question has been received regarding this subject:

No royal road has been found for distinguishing foreign from swadeshi cloth. A picketer should acquaint himself well with this distinction. And hence the general advice is that no one should purchase from uncertified shops. These certificates are of two kinds: Those issued by the All-India Spinners’ Association in regard to khadi and those issued by the Swadeshi Sabha in respect of cloth manufactured by Indian textile mills. I do not know if this second type of certificate has yet been issued. But khadi exclusively is the simpler way out. Where falsehood has become almost universal, the sentiment for khadi alone will stand the people in good stead. Untruth has entered even the domain of khadi, or, in other words, deceit is being practised with regard to it also; yet there is minimum room for deceit in it. Moreover, those who spin at home have nothing to fear.

Then the question will arise as to what a picketing sevika should do. If she shares my faith in khadi, she would regard picketing as a means for carrying on propaganda for khadi and, while turning the customers away from shops selling foreign cloth, she would direct them towards those selling khadi. If the latter do not take this course, she will remain patient and have faith that there is no other way to boycott foreign cloth. And even if there is one, it is futile; moreover, it is also well worth remembering that there is no special merit in boycotting foreign cloth. Such boycott is both useful and necessary for khadi propaganda. The woman picket who realizes this basic truth will not be insulted—because she will not feel insulted—or perplexed. She has somehow to carry on khadi propaganda for the sake of the poor. Other activities involve fear, insult, dishonesty and result in no benefit to the poor.

Buyer’s Obstinacy

The answer to this question should be regarded as having been

---

1 Not translated here
2 A woman volunteer
3 This was in reply to a question how to satisfy a customer who insisted on a particular kind of khadi only.
included in the above. If the customer is obstinate, we should be a hundredfold so. The customer’s obstinacy has no ground, ours has a strong one. “The khadi that he wants” cannot mean that he should get khadi as soft as satin made in Paris at the very same price. Anyone who wears khadi has no other alternative but to wear khadi whether coarse of fine. We should remember that we cannot satisfy all people. It is not our job to satisfy everyone; rather, everybody should suit himself to the needs of the poor, that is, be satisfied. Khadi alone is the refuge of the afflicted. We should be patient even with those who disregard it.

SUCH PICKETS ARE TOO FEW

If the number of women pickets is five and there are five hundred shops, let them deal with only five shops or even with only one. Propaganda for khadi is a matter of dharma and not policy. Hence regardless of whether there is only one picket or many, that dharma must be performed. It will be good even if only one shopkeeper relents. It is not as if in this matter an individual shopkeeper did not have to act till all shopkeepers acted and gave up selling foreign cloth. Even if only one gives up, the five women should continue picketing, thinking that the work has progressed to that extent. Seeing them picketing, other women will come forward. If their picketing produces an effect on one merchant, there is a likelihood of its having an effect on the others also. If this does not happen, the merchant who relented will have no cause for regret. If trading in foreign cloth is a sin, although others may continue to be sinful he who has realized that this practice is sinful will give it up. It has always been thus. If I had waited for everyone, propaganda for khadi could never have been done. A Herculean task calls for Herculean courage.

“It is because of his courage that Columbus discovered a new world,” says a poet. But Columbus’s courage was exhibited for his own pleasure. It was not intended to serve anyone. Underlying it was his desire to discover a new world and to amass the wealth to be found in it. In order to do so, he navigated the seas; then how much more courage should we show in order to cloth the crores of naked people of

---

1 This was written in reply to a correspondent who had observed that picketing was going to prove infructuous from the practical point of view.
India? The sevika who shares Columbus’s faith and has his patience will continue her work even if she is alone. Day by day she will gain new strength and new faith, and will think of new ways of doing her work or, the “Kindly Light” will point out new paths to her. Meanwhile, she would sing:

“One step enough for me.”

POOR MAN

This question implies disparagement of khadi or one may say it implies ignorance of the importance of khadi. Has it been raised because it is supposed that producing khadi is an easy job or one for which only a few persons are needed? Khadi work is a great science which has so far been imperfectly studied. Let as many people, young and old, as may wish, take up this work; there cannot be too many of them. How many men will be required in order to meet the needs of seven hundred thousand villages? Khadi work is so vast that even if a hundred thousand men give eight hours a day to it, some work will still remain undone. In this very issue, there is a brief account of the production and sale of khadi in Gujarat alone. A glance at this should give everyone an idea of how many men are required for khadi work.

But I am aware that there is another question behind the above questio, viz, khadi work is all very well, but if a man finds it uninteresting, what should he do? Such men should remove the filth in villages; they should insted of making speeches for that purpose, take up a broom and clean up roads and latrines, stop garbage heaps from forming and spread rules of sanitation among the people. Although the women will do picketing, they will need much help in doing so; that help should be given by men; if the men are competent enough, they should sit under trees in villages and without any books run schools for children as also start night schools for adults. For anyone who is bent on serving, the field is limitless. And everyone should realize that, when the time for launching the struggle comes again, the strength for it will be generated only through such activities.

1 This was in reply to a question whether, during the Truce period, since women were assigned the work of boycott of foreign cloth and prohibition of liquor, men were expected to do any other work besides producing khadi.
Even the violent soldiers of the world have acted in this manner and continue to do so. It is only the mercenary soldier who, when not engaged in fighting, becomes a drain because he eats bread which he has not rightfully earned. He is therefore a nuisance as he is busy seeking pleasures and is a burden to the earth. We have seen from history that Garibaldi and his soldiers tilled the land when they were not fighting. The Boers were farmers by profession and when the time for fighting came, right from General Botha down to the poorest Boer, they gave up their plough shares and showed such courage on the battlefield that it astonished the world—this I have seen with my own eyes. If soldiers who believe in violence preserve their fighting strength by doing such constructive work, I cannot understand why the non-violent soldiers of India in this age should find it difficult to do constructive work. Every reader should remember that a great deal of penance and constructive work lay behind the enthusiasm which was generated last year.

IF POISON IS MIXED WITH MILK?

Just as milk in which even a drop of poison has fallen is fit to be shunned, so, in my opinion, should we have nothing to do with a shop selling foreign cloth along with Indian cloth. Just as a person who drinks pure milk at a brewer’s shop will be regarded as a drunkard, so too a customer who buys swadeshi cloth at a shop selling foreign cloth will be misunderstood. Is there any dearth of shops dealing only in swadeshi cloth? Even if there are only a few such shops and those are not in our neighbourhood, we should go to these wherever they are located. For those who are picketing, the way is straightforward: they should warn people who approach shops selling foreign cloth and turn them away, if possible. I have recently received even this question whether swadeshi goods can be bought at a liquor shop if they are being sold there. I didn’t hesitate to reply immediately that the answer was in the negative.

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan, 31-5-1931

---

1 This was in reply to the question whether customers could be asked to abstain totally from buying cloth from shops which sold both foreign and Indian cloth.
289. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

May 31, 1931

MY DEAR AMTUL,

If you are not keeping well, you should live on only milk and fruit. I can understand your delicacy of feeling about money matters. I am writing to Narandas about this. Do continue to write to me and pour out your heart to me. I want you to grow mentally, morally and physically in the Ashram.

BAPU

From a photostat : G.N. 239

290. LETTER TO M. REBELLO & SONS

May 31, 1931

GENTLEMEN,

I have your letter of 22nd instant. I have no copyright in my portraits but I am unable to give the consent you require.

Yours faithfully,

From a microfilm : S.N. 17120

291. LETTER TO ALLEN W. SAYLER

AS AT SABARMATI,

May 31, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

Mirabai has shown me your letter to her. I see several difficulties in your coming to the Ashram. A passport is necessary and it is highly likely that conditions will be attached to your passport. Therefore my advice to you is for the present to suspend the idea of coming to India to settle down with me but to follow the rules of the Ashram there and live the life as close to the Ashram life as possible in the circumstances. It is highly likely that then the way will be open for you to come to India without restrictions of any kind whatsoever.

If you are not getting Young India there you can look up the file in the University office.

Yours sincerely,

ALLEN W. SAYLER, ESQ.
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

From a photostat : S.N. 17168

1 The addressee had asked Gandhiji’s permission to use his photo as their trade mark for roofing tiles.
292. LETTER TO KIRAN SANKAR ROY

DEAR KIRAN BABU,

I have your letter. The Working Committee will go into the whole of the affair as Subhasbabu has lodged a formal complaint. You may depend upon my taking my full share in the investigation and assisting the conclusions of the Committee. I am not writing separately to Sisir Babu who has sent me a separate letter.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. KIRAN SANKAR ROY
44 EUROPEAN ASYLUM LANE, CALCUTTA

From a microfilm: S.N. 17169

293. LETTER TO ANAND KISHORE MEHTA

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter of the 27th instant which you have marked “Reminder”. I am not aware of the receipt of a previous letter. I am sorry to have to tell you that I cannot sympathize with the object of your memorial, much less give my name to he Committee. If I had any influence over the Committee I should advise its disbandment.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. ANAND KISHORE MEHTA
GENERAL SECRETARY, THE ALL-INDIA BHAGAT SINGH, RAIGURU, SUKHADEV MEMORIAL COMMITTEE
ANARKALI, LAHORE

From a microfilm: S.N. 17170

294. LETTER TO SHRIRAM SHARMA

DEAR SIR,

I have your letter. You do not tell me why the Congress workers were arrested. In any case there is nothing in the Settlement to prevent Government from undertaking prosecutions for offences, fancied or real. If the offence alleged was not committed, it is open to the arrested workers to be defended by pleaders.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. SHRIRAM SHARMA
GENERAL SECRETARY
DISTRICT CONGRESS COMMITTEE
ROHTAK (PUNJAB)

From a microfilm : S.N. 17171

295. LETTER TO R. S. RAJWADE

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 31, 1931

Not for Publication

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter. I learnt about your release when I was in Simla. It did cause a great trouble before the authorities could be moved but it was a pleasure because your case seemed to me to be so clear.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. R. S. RAJWADE
KARMAYOGI OFFICE
574 SOUTH KASABA
SHOLAPUR

From a photostat : S.N. 17172

296. LETTER TO KRISHAN GOPAL DUTT

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 31, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have not answered your telegram because I did not know how to. Now that I have got your letter I am able to answer your questions.

1) Since picketing is to be peaceful free of all coercion, there is no question of insistence on sealing up the present stock.

2) But if a cloth merchant declines to sign your pledge it is open to you to picket his shop even though it may contain swadeshi cloth.
(3) Naturally you would picket the shop of a merchant who breaks his pledge, but you may not impose any fine.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. KRISHNA GOPAL DUTT
CITY ROAD, SIALKOT CITY
From a microfilm: S.N. 17173

297. LETTER TO V. B. HAROLIKAR
AS AT SABARMATI,
May 31, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

Here are the answers to your questions:

(1) Yes, if the purchase is made from certified producers. But in every case it would be advisable to make large purchases through the all-India agency.

(2) I should consider A.I.S.A. certificate as necessary in every case.

(3) Congress Committee would relentlessly enforce the khaddar condition whilst it is part of the constitution.

(4) The relevancy of the fourth question, I do not understand, because it is open to the Congress, if it is not obligatory, to picket foreign-cloth shops provided of course that picketing is absolutely peaceful and free of all coercion direct or indirect.

I hope I have answered your question clearly.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. V. B. HAROLIKAR
CITY CONGRESS COMMITTEE
28 SUKRAVAR PETH
POONA

From a microfilm: S.N. 17174
298. LETTER TO C. Y. CHINTAMANI

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 31, 1931

MY DEAR FRIEND,

You are fishing for a compliment but I am not going to give it to you if only because it would be a repetition of what I have told you before. But you are quite right in thinking that I do not read newspapers. Even the local ones I read for a few minutes and that too grudgingly. Leading articles, as a rule, escape me. You did well therefore in sending me the Leader cutting. An inoffensive paragraph in Navajivan by Mahadev Desai has been made much of. I can only give you my assurance that I am not going lightly to declare war. I know what it would mean to Lord Irwin. The relations between us so developed during the negotiations that the very consideration that a declaration of war would hurt Irwin to the quick would alone make me wait a thousand times before embarking on any such step. But I can tell you in confidence that many occasions have arisen when, if I was so minded, I might have broken up negotiations with local authorities. But I have exercised and am still exercising immense patience. In any case I am not going to take any step without giving an ample opportunity to the Viceroy to review the situation and taking the public into confidence. It goes without saying that I would do nothing without first getting the sanction of the Working Committee.

So far for the peace or war part of your fears. The communal question is a horse of another colour. My position was made clear to Lord Irwin times without number and I made it clearer still at the farewell interview in Bombay. He greatly sympathized with my position. As you know, the Congress demand is far above what the Round Table Conference has hitherto discussed. If we do not reach a communal settlement, I could not make the demand with any confidence in myself. But my non-participation in the Conference need not mean war. Failure to arrive at a settlement cannot be debited to the British Government though the question at all arises because of the present system of administration. But I need not carry the matter any further. In this matter too I am feeling my way and if I at all can, I would certainly attend the Conference. I have come to no irretrievable decision. If the way at all opens up before me I will go to...

1 The source has “easy minded”.

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
London without the slightest hesitation. Do pleases write to me whenever you feel inclined.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. C. Y. CHINTAMANI
C/O THE “LEADER”
ALLAHABAD

From a photostat : S.N. 17175

299. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

AS AT SABARMATI,
May 31, 1931

DEAR MR. EMERSON,

I enclose herewith copies of the correspondence that has taken place between the Bombay Government and myself.

Yours sincerely,

Encls.
H. W. EMERSON, ESQ.
SIMLA

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-B, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

300. LETTER TO V. G. DESAI

BARDOLI,
May 31, 1931

BHAISHRI VALJI,

Do bring Dudhibehn with you. According to your plan, you will reach here on Wednesday, that is, on the 3rd. I am scheduled to leave here on the 7th.

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : C.W. 6415. Courtesy : V. G. Desai
301. LETTER TO DUDABHAI

BARDOLL,

May 31, 1931

BHAI DUDABHAI,

I got your letter. “A non-Antyaja Hindu” does not mean a Bhangi, it means a Hindu who is not an antyaja. The man I have in view is a Brahmin brought up in Gujarat. As the Ashram does not recognize distinctions of caste and community and as it is necessary to abolish the class of Antyajas from Hindu society, I really think that it would be good if Lakshmi could be married to a non-Antyaja. I am certainly very glad to know that Laksmi is not eager to get married just now. I hope I told you bout a house near Amreli.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

The visit to Amreli was prompted by this hope.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3244

302. LETTER TO RUKMINI BAZAJ

BARDOLL,

May 31, 1931

CHI. RUKMINI,

I got your letter. How am I to give you courage? We do not always get in this world what would satisfy us. We have to live in the world, but without attachment to anything. In no case should you think that your troubles are the result of your having married in a non-Gujarati family. If you have patience, everything will surely adjust itself. You should spend some time with me. I will look for such an opportunity. Remain calm meanwhile. I shall meet Radha on the 8th in Bombay, when I shall be able to decide where she should stay and what she should do. One cause of worry was over with the news that Santok had recovered her health.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9058
303. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

May 31, 1931

CHI. PREMA,

Why do Lakshmi and Padma keep falling ill? Do you think that they are careless about taking mediciness, etc.? If Padma continues to get fever, she will lose her health. Who is specially responsible for looking after her? No child in the Ashram should feel the absence of his or her parents. How is Krishnakumari? Write to me about the others too.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 10255. Also C.W. 6703. Courtesy: Premabehn Kantak

304. LETTER TO VITHALDAS JERAJANI

BARDOLI,

May 31, 1931

BHAI VITHALDAS,

Of course you are always in my thoughts. I have been inquiring after your health too. How did you get this disease? Don’t insist on returning to work immediately. First get all right. If necessary, go for a change to a place like Deolali.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9777

305. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

BARDOLI,

May 31, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

Some effective measures should be taken about Lakshmi and Padma. Request Dr. Kanuga to examine them both. If they do not recover even under his treatment, we shall have to think further what to do.

The vaid’s treatment does not seem to have helped Ba much. She seems to benefit rather by the water and the soda bicarb which she takes. She believes that the medicine merely suppresses the cough. Both the Gangabehns and Vasumati are here for a few days.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

I wrote to Mathew yesterday to tell him that if he wished to come and if he could be spared the Ashram, he might come. Read my letter to Amtulbehn and explain to her the position regarding her money.

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U/I

306. LETTER TO SHARADA G. CHOKHWALA

SIMLA,

[May-August 1931]

CHI. SHARADA,

Have you stopped writing letters to me because I have stopped writing? I have stopped writing because I am not in prison. I must be in prison to write letters regularly. Should I go to prison, or will you write even otherwise?

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 9960. Courtesy: Sharadabehn G. Chokhawala

307. LETTER TO SUBHAS CHANDRA BOSE

SWARAJ ASHRAM,

BARODI,

June 1, 1931

SUBHAS CHANDRA BOSE
WOODBURN PARK
CALCUTTA

ADVISE YOU SEE SEN GUPTA AND OFFER SUBMIT MATTERS ARBITRATION IF MUTUAL ADJUSTMENT IMPOSSIBLE. CANNOT ADVISE COUNTER PUBLIC MEETING OR PROPAGANDA. AM WIRING SEN GUPTA SUBMIT ARBITRATION.

GANDHI

From a photostat: S.N. 17178

1 From the contents. Gandhiji was in Simla in May, July and August in 1931; vide also letters to the addressee in

226 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
308. TELEGRAM TO J. M. SEN GUPTA

SWARAJ ASHRAM,
BARDOLI,
June 1, 1931

SEN GUPTA
ELGIN ROAD
CALCUTTA

INTERNAL DIFFERENCE MUST BE COMPOSED. PLEASE AGREE SUBMIT MATTERS ARBITRATION IF MUTUAL ADJUSTMENT IMPOSSIBLE.

GANDHI

From a photostat: S.N. 17176

309. TELEGRAM TO MURARILAL

SWARAJ ASHRAM,
BARDOLI,
June 1, 1931

DOCTOR MURARILAL
CIVIL LINES
CAWNPORE

YOUR WIRE. DEEPLY GRIEVED BUT CAN ONLY SUGGEST PARTIES SUBMITTING MATTER ARBITRATION. CAN GIVE NO OTHER OPINION OFFHAND.

GANDHI

From a photostat: S.N. 17180

310. INTERVIEW TO THE PRESS

June 1, 1931

Interviewed by the Associated Press regarding the statement recently made by Sir Chimanlal Setalvad in connection with Mahatma Gandhi’s attitude towards the Round Table Conference, Mahatma Gandhi said:

You embarrass me by asking question on anything that Sir Chimanlal Setalvad says about me. His age and his greatness entitle him to make statements on insufficient data and yet absolve him from criticism from one like myself.

1 Which read: “Quarrel between Hindus Muslims over Gandhi Seva Samiti signboard. Muslims refuse taking procession under it although board too high for interference with procession. Hindus refuse removing it even for few hours. panic all city . . .”
Moreover, whilst I am carrying on delicate negotiations, I may not be over-communicative, but I can make a general statement that I am not conscious of having done anything to endanger the Settlement or in contravention of it.

Though under given circumstances, I am anxious and willing to attend the Round Table Conference, there is nothing in the Settlement, so far as I can read it, to make it compulsory for the Congress to take part in the Round Table Conference, but that discussion is purely academic, for the question of non-attendance has not arisen at all.

Asked if it was true that his attitude was undergoing constant change, Mahatma Gandhi said:

I am not aware of having done such a thing.

Replying to a question whether he would take part in the Round Table Conference, he said:

If I succeed in attending the Round Table Conference, I should put forth the Congress demands with all zeal and power I may have and fully participate in the proceeding and not be a mere spectator at the Round Table Conference.

Questioned whether there was an impasse in Bardoli, Mahatma Gandhi said:

I have had a happy interview with the Collector along with Mr. Vallabhbhai Patel and I am hoping that everything would be fixed up satisfactorily.

Replying to a further question if there was any breach of the Truce terms in Bardoli or Borsad, he stated:

I would prefer not to answer that question, because negotiations are still going on for the settlement of outstanding questions both in Bardoli and Borsad.

The Bombay Chronicle, 3-6-1931
311. TELEGRAM TO TAMIL NADU CONFERENCE,
MADURA

SWARAJ ASHRAM,
BARDOLI,
June 2, 1931

TAMIL NADU CONFERENCE
MADURA
WISH CONFERENCE SUCCESS. CONVINCED BOYCOTT FOREIGN CLOTH DEPENDENT MORE ON KHADDAR THAN PICKETING.

GANDHI

From a microfilm: S.N. 17182

312. TELEGRAM TO KOMBRABAIL

SWARAJ ASHRAM,
BARDOLI,
June 2, 1931

KOMBRABAIL
BALMATTI
MANGALORE
MY OPINION PERMISSION CANNOT BE GRANTED.

GANDHI

From a microfilm: S.N. 17183

313. TELEGRAM TO J. M. SEN GUPTA

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 2, 1931

DEAR MR. EMERSON,
You will recall our conversation about the Navajivan and Young India press. I wonder if you have got legal opinion. Al l the opinion that I can gather is that the clause certainly means delivery at the place from where the property was removed. But I shall be interested to know what your legal advisers have got to say. Meanwhile Young India and Navjivan are still labouring under a

1 For Gandhiji’s earlier letter on the subject, vide “Letter to R. M. Maxwell”, 7-5-1931
2 Vide “Letter to Salvation Army, Bombay 14-6-1931

VOL. 52 : 28 APRIL, 1931 - 1 JULY, 1931 229
handicap in spite of the fact that the management own suitable machinery and other material.

Yours sincerely,

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-B, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

314. LETTER TO C. F. ANDREWS

AS AT SABARMATI,

June 2, 1931

MY DEAR CHARLIE,

I have your two precious letters. I see you are in a hurry to have me in England through the air mail if I would fly. But I can hardly hop. I see no light before me as yet. My desire is certainly to go there but the inner voice says ‘no’ and the external atmosphere confirms the guidance of the inner voice. As you know, the Congress demands are strung in a high pitch. They could not be otherwise. If we cannot set our house in order here so far even as the communal question is concerned I could not speak in London as with one voice. It therefore does seem to me that if the communal trouble is not finished and a workable formula is not arrived at by agreement I should not have the requisite self-confidence to deliver the Congress message. That is so far as the Round Table Conference is concerned. But of course if the British Minister require my presence in order to discuss the Congress position and understand it and if they would want me to do a little lobbying also I could come whenever required. But then there is the Delhi Settlement. I am bound to see, as far as is possible for a single human being, that there is no breakdown. The Bombay Government has given me cause enough to re-declare hostilities but if you knew everything you would yourself be amazed at my patience. In every little thing it is like drawing a live tooth. But I must not weary you with these troubles of mine. I am taking them cheerfully and breaking down opposition. Thank God, I do receive help from the Central Government. I believe Mr. Emerson knows me and he will play the game. But local governments may produce situations which neither he nor I can control. I can tell you that so far as the Congress is concerned, Congressmen are implementing the Settlement in a manner not even expected by me. Of course there is overzeal now and again in picketing but it is immediately brought under control. You can give this assurance to all who may need it that I am anxious to attend the Conference and try my utmost to secure lasting peace and an honourable settlement of the constitutional question by negotiation. It is only external circumstances which really detain me. But in any case for reasons unconnected with my hesitation the Round Table Conference and its Committees stand postponed. There need be therefore no hurry just now over my coming unless of course I am required there independently of the Conference. I have now told you all that you should know.

I am just now in Bardoli fixing up things.

Guru-dev seems to be ailing.

Love.

MOHAN

From a photostat: S.N. 968

315. LETTER TO SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA

AS AT SABARMATI, June 2, 1931

DEAR SATIS BABU,

I have your letter. Subhasbabu was here and he had a formidable list of countercharges. I have now telegraphed to both asking them to submit to arbitration by mutual consent, and if they will appoint some local men as arbitrators and abide by their decision, this unseemly squabble might end. In any case I am going to try whatever is possible on the 9th.

You are having success with the Gita and the Autobiography. I did not expect you would have any sale for these books.

I am glad you have gained in weight but you have to gain much more. And I am certain that you should not stint yourself about food that your system may require. It is quite enough that you deny yourself flesh and fish. You ought to take milk and curds liberally and take such fresh fruit as is easily available. I have written similarly to Hemprabha also. She is wrong in denying herself food that her body requires because Nikhil\(^1\) is no more. I feel more and more that this kind of self-denial not only carries no merit but is a violation of nature’s laws. Denial of food has merit when it is undertaken for control of the palate or as a medical necessity.

\(^1\) Addressee’s son; he had died in 1928.
Kishorelal Mashruwala raises a doubt as to the authenticity of the spinner’s letter of 1828 whose translation you sent me the other day and which I published in Young India. He thinks that the language is much too modern, as also the conception. If I understood your letter rightly, you had mentioned that the copy of the newspaper in which the letter appears is in your possession.

Love.

BAPU

SYT. SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA
KHADI PRATISHTHAN
SODEPUR (CALCUTTA)
From a photostat : G.N. 8034

316. LETTER TO A. G. BUTT
June 2, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. You can realize the truth of the statement made by me by prayer, purification, meditation, fasting and diligent study.

Yours sincerely,

From a photostat : S.N. 17164

317. LETTER TO DR. W. J. WANLESS
June 2, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter. Whilst I have a very vivid recollection of your personal services to me I have long ceased even to think of rewarding such services materially. I have rendered myself practically incapable of rendering such services. The only service therefore I have for years rendered for them has been heartfelt thanks, and heartfelt thanks of a poor man like me take the shape of blessings. I must confess that I have been the recipient of personal kindnesses

1 Vide “In 1828”, 21-5-1931
2 The addressee, writing from Simla on 29-5-1931, had referred to Gandhiji’s article “A Twentieth Century Sati (?)”, 3-5-1931 and said that his assertion about the soul’s immortality was unconvincing.
3 The reference apparently is to his sudden illness in 1927 during a tour, during which Dr. Wanless looked after him; vide from many quarters. Just imagine what would be my state and the state of rich men whom I only know in public life if I were to ask them for donations for the enterprise of my benefactors. You will therefore please excuse me for my inability to respond to your desire.

Yours sincerely,

DR. SIR W. J. WANLESS
1016 MATILIA ROAD
GLENDALE, CALIFORNIA (U.S.A.)

From a photostat : S.N. 17188

318. LETTER TO N. G. JOSHI
AS AT SABARMATI,
June 2, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter giving me facts of [the] criminal case of Nipani. Where there is any allegation of violence the matter rests with the local government. I am not likely to succeed in any representation I may make. I would therefore advise that a proper systematic defence is put up.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. N. G. JOSHI
PRESIDENT, DISTRICT CONGRESS COMMITTEE
BELGAUM

From a photostat : S.N. 17189

319. LETTER TO COWASJI JEHANGIR
AS AT SABARMATI,
June 2, 1931

DEAR SIR COWASJI,

I thank you for your prompt acknowledgement of my letter and the trouble you are still taking with reference to the land in Sardar Garda’s possession. It seems to me that he is legally bound to transfer the property having written the letter concluding the bargain. I have written to him to that effect in reply to his letter. I have been making

1 Vide “Letter to Cowasji Jehangir”, 26-5-1931
2 Vide “Letter to Framroze B. Garda”, 26-5-1931
further enquiries and I am able to give you my assurance that there is nothing in the charges made by him. On the contrary he is becoming a terror to the people. Youngsters under 12 years of age were arrested for having helped themselves to mangoes from his land. You do not know the taluqa. Mango trees are not protected and urchins all over the land help themselves often to mangoes during the mango season and nobody worries about them. I am not sure that the urchins whom he had arrested had touched his mangoes. But even if they had, they would be under nobody’s control. And yet he would press incidents like this into service to make up his indictment although these incidents have nothing to do with alleged harassment.

I shall await your letter regarding Miss V. Contractor’s complaint.

Yours sincerely,

SIR COWASJI JEHANGIR
TEMPLE HILL
MAHABALESHWAR

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-C, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and library

320. LETTER TO SHARDA C. SHAH

June 2, 1931

CHI. SHARDA,

I have your letter. You seem to be keeping good health these days. All of you have become lethargic in writing to me, even as I am.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original : C.W. 9902. Courtesy : Shardabehn G. Chokhawala

321. LETTER TO NANIBEHN JHAVERI

BARDOLI,

June 2, 1931

CHI. NANIBEHN.

I got your letter. In staying in the Vidyapith you have done nothing for which you need apologize. It is not a crime to live there. You will certainly learn there, and should, therefore, live there.
contented. Improve your health and cultivate the mind. Write to me from time to time. Most probably, Gangabehn also will go and live there.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 3115

322. LETTER TO MANILAL AND SUSHILA GANDHI

BARDOLI,

June 2, 1931

CHI. MANILAL AND SHUSHILA.

I had the letter you both wrote on board the ship. I also got news of your having reached there. I will now expect your regular letter by the next mail. Ba is with me at Bardoli. She was with me at Simla too. Nothing is certain as yet about my going to England. The solution of the Hindu-Muslim problem seems to be far away yet. As for the rest, everything is all right.

I have no time to write more.

Sita—I have forgotten her other name—must have now put on weight again. The climate there is such that one simply cannot fall ill. I should be equally happy if Sushila too puts on weight.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G. N. 4784.
323. LETTER TO HARI-ICHCHHA DESAI

BARDOLI,

June 2, 1931

CHI. HARI-ICHCHHA,

I got a letter from you after a long time. You should take care and improve your eyes soon. The remedy is this: Wash the eyes daily with bearable, warm water after putting a little salt in the water. The salt should be quite clean and very little in quantity. Sprinkle the solution on the eyes. If this remedy is likely to benefit you, you will know it in a day. That is, you will find that the lustre of your eyes has increased. At night, bandage the eyes with cotton pads soaked in milk before going to bed. I am leaving for Bombay on the 9th and shall return on the 11th.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Do bring the children with you.

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G. N. 7467. Also C.W. 4913. Courtesy : Hari-ichchha Kamdar

324. LETTER TO BABALBHAI MEHTA

BARDOLI,

June 2, 1931

CHI. BABALBHAI,

I got your letter.
1. Disobey any order issued under the Foreigners’ Act.
2. If they deport one to one’s native place, one should not submit to improper restrictions.
3. While in jail, pay no attention to any news about a settlement which you may hear. The men outside may do whatever they choose
4. There is no objection to passing a receipt for any order served on you.

236

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
It is a good thing that you observed the rules while in jail and are doing so outside.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

The views which I have expressed may change as may be required by the conditions prevailing at any time. Likewise, you are free to act as you think fit in given circumstances despite these views.

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S. N. 9453

325. LETTER TO NARAYAN MORESHWAR KHARE

June 2, 1931

CHI. PANDITJI,

Thakkar Bapa says in his letter that, though they had invited you to the gathering of Bhangis at Dakor, you could not attend it. Is this true?

How is Rambhau progressing?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 216. Courtesy: Lakshmibehn Khare

326. LETTER TO RAMBHAU KHARE

June 2, 1931

CHI. RAMBHAU,

You wrote very few letters from Almora. Will you remain lazy there too? Don’t you think you should now overcome your laziness?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 289. Courtesy: Lakshmibehn Khare
327. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

June 2, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

Can you think of anyone in the Ashram who would come forward for Antyaja work?

How does Lalji work? Does he work well enough to repay what is spent on him?

Does anyone live in the red bungalow or sleep in it at night? Is it true that Giriraj’s mind has become disturbed?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U/I

328. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL JOSHI

June 2, 1931

CHI. CHHAGANLAL,

Surendra’s letter seems to have confused you. He has mixed up several issues, with the result that you could not understand my real meaning. The idea that Surendra should return to the Ashram is independent of other considerations, and these are the reasons for my view:

1. It did not seem necessary to me to keep him at Karadi.
2. It is not proper for us, who have taken the vow of aparigraha, to make a special effort to find out another place and stay there.
3. In the present circumstances, it would not at all be wrong if persons like him return to the Ashram.
4. Sardar would certainly prefer that Surendra and other workers like him who cannot easily adjust themselves to circumstances should stay in the Ashram.

The following is the substance of the other points discussed along with these:

1. Those Ashram workers who were slack in observing the Ashram rules of discipline and who were unwilling to return to the Ashram on the pretext that they should work outside should return to it.
2. It was the duty of those Ashram, workers who were required outside the Ashram and who could observe the Ashram rules to stay outside it and do the required work.

3. It was preferable to have only one public worker in every village.

4. When there are more workers than one in a village, it is likely that they will not have enough work to do and that even small differences of opinion which may arise among them will confuse the minds of the residents.

5. It is probable that Darbari left the place because he felt, when he saw three or four Ashram workers there, that he no longer enjoyed the position which he did.

6. One should run away from a place where the necessity of one's services is not self-evident. Before accepting anybody's version of what I may have said, you should ask me.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro—7 : Shri Chhaganlal Joshine, p. 214-5

329. LETTER TO KHUSHALCHAND GANDHI

BARDOLI,
June 2, 1931

TO MY BROTHER, WITH DUE RESPECTS,

I was pained to read your postcard addressed to Narandas. It was evident from the writing that your hand was shaking while you wrote it. That is a sign of weakness. I hope you feel peace of mind now that Narandas is with you. We should be indifferent whether the body lasts or perishes. Write to me, dictating the letter to someone.

To both of you,

Humble greetings from

MOHANDAS

From a copy of the Gujarati : C.W. 9220. Courtesy : Narandas Gandhi
330. LETTER TO RASIK DESAI

BARDOLI,
June 2, 1931

CHI. RASIK,

I got your letter. Blisters are caused by impure blood and can be cured by living on milk and fruit.

Whether you wish to join the Vidyapith or any other institution, you should be fit to do so. Anyone who leaves his own tuition, you should be fit to do so. Anyone who leaves his own work to join the Vidyapith is not fit for it. Nor is one who wishes to join it for satisfying his desire for study under the excuse that the Ashram does not provide proper education. But one who is required in the Vidyapith for serving the cause of swaraj and who joins it with that end in view is fit to join it.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

Tell Jayant that I have not written to him as there is nothing in his letter which calls for a reply.

From a copy of the Gujarati: C. W. 4350. Courtesy: Rasik Desai

331. LETTER TO HEMPRABHA DAS GUPTA

BARDOLI,
June 2, 1931

CHI. HEMPRABHA,

I have your letter. You must have received my last letter.

To reduce food or to abstain from it because a son or a dear one has died is ignorance. I see no merit in it. Dharma and true shraddha consist in increasing work of service in the name of the departed one, recognizing the unity of all souls, and in realizing the transitoriness of the body. We should reduce food or give up some item of food only for the purpose of controlling the palate or removing a physical disorder. The loss of a dear one should have no connection with the giving up of food. So wake up; forget Nikhil’s death and try to improve your body for the cause of service. You need to take milk, curds and fruit. Tell me if you have any financial difficulty.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1687

332. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

AS AT SABARMATI,

June 3, 1931

DEAR MR. EMERSON,

There is still the fire-arms question to be decided. I do not know whether you obtained legal advice in the matter. Whatever the legal advice, I am quite certain of the conversation about this very matter at the time I suggested the expression “illegal possession”. If you will look up the original draft, you will perhaps recall the conversation because the original draft excluded fire-arms.

May I remind you about Mathura and Ludhiana incidents. These are both matters deserving close scrutiny.

Yours sincerely,

H. W. EMERSON, ESQ.
SIMLA

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-B, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library
333. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 3, 1931

DEAR MR. EMERSON,

You will remember we discussed the question of students who had suspended their studies. From everywhere complaints continue to pour in. I think that it is highly necessary to take back these students unconditionally. It is terrible to think that they alone should be singled out for punishment.¹

Yours sincerely,

H. W. EMERSON, ESQ.

SIMLA
A.I.C.C. File No. 16-B, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

334. LETTER TO G. V. KETKAR

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 3, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter.

Yes, Syt. Rajawade’s case caused me great deal of trouble and worry.

I have just got the complete file of Syt. Rajah’s² case. I am studying it.

¹ Emerson replied on July 2 that “...the student cannot be regarded solely as an individual. He is a member of a corporate institution, and in the interests of the institution, and not with the object of imposing any indignity on the individual, it is often necessary to make conditions which will secure discipline. These are considerations to which local Governments undoubtedly attach great weight, and it may be assumed that had the question been raised when the Settlement was under discussion, they would have taken strong exception to the re-admission of students without any guarantee for the future and irrespective of the reasons for which they had left, or been expelled from, educational institutions. In these circumstances the Government of India do not consider it fair to local Governments to impose on them a course of action outside the Settlement. . .”

² H. D. Raja
Nothing can be done in the Chirner case just at present.
Deo did write to me recently.¹

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

SYT. G. V. KETKAR
THE KESARI AND THE MAHARATTA OFFICE
568 NARAYAN PETH, POONA CITY
From a photostat : G. N. 7965. Also C.W. 980. Courtesy : G. V. Ketkar

335. LETTER TO J. C. KUMARAPPA¹

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 3, 1931

MY DEAR KUMARAPPA,

I have Dr. T. Das’s letter which you have sent. I do not know that we can do anything in the matter.

I expect to see you on the 9th in Bombay.

BAPU

SYT. J. C. KUMARAPPA³
BOMBAY
From a photostat : G. N. 10094

336. LETTER TO S. N. BATLIWALA⁴

June 3, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter of the 20th ultimo. You will see my article in Young India entitled ‘Is Boycott an Economic Necessity?’

Yours sincerely,

From a microfilm : S. N. 17106

¹ Gandhiji’s Secretary wrote the following postscript to the letter : “I hope you will succeed in finding out working formula—Gandhiji’s reply to Shankarrao Deo.” Shankarrao Deo had written to Gandhiji on the elections of Congress Committees in Maharashtra.

² In reply to the addressee’s letter of May 27 (S. N. 17162)

³ The source has “H. Kumarappa.”

⁴ The addressee had enclosed a copy of his article in the Times of India dated 19-5-1931, on the Indian Economic Crisis Wherein he had argued that masses of India suffered and only the Indian mills benefited by the boycott of foreign cloth.

Vide “Is it An Economic Necessity”, 4-6-1931
337. LETTER TO WILHELM HEYDORN

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 3, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter. If I succeed in going to London I would indeed like to go to various places. But whether such a thing will be possible, I do not know. If however I do visit places on the continent I would be delighted to make your acquaintance.

Yours sincerely,

WILHELM HEYDORN, ESQ.
HAMBURG 24 (GERMANY)

From a photostat: S. N. 17192

338. LETTER TO CHARLES S. FIELD

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 3, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I appreciate your letter and I would have made your acquaintance had I gone to America. But as you must have observed, it was a baseless rumour which created the hope and in some minds possibly also the fear that I might visit America.

Yours sincerely,

CHARLES S. FIELD, ESQ.
DALLAS, TEXAS (U.S.A.)

From a photostat: S. N. 17193

339. LETTER TO MAHARAJA OF DARBHANGA

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 3, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your telegram redirected from Borsad. I have not seen the landholders’ manifesto referred to by you. If you will kindly send it to me I shall see what can be done.

Yours sincerely,

MAHARAJA OF DARBHANGA

From a photostat: S. N. 17194
340. LETTER TO GERTRUDE EMERSON

AS AT SABARMATI,

June 3, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

You are quite right in thinking that if I did not get the quiet to read your book in Yeravda it was not likely that I should have any, outside that abode of peace. The book was taken away on his discharge by the prisoner friend who had borrowed it from me and he returned it on my discharge when I was in the midst of interminable work. Since my discharge, I have not been able to rest. The work before me exhausts such energy as I have still left in me.

You will be welcome to the Ashram whenever you come.

Yours sincerely,

MISS GERTRUDE EMERSON
C/O “ASIA”
468 FOURTH AVENUE
NEW YORK (U.S.A.)

From a photostat: S. N. 17195

341. LETTER TO KONDA VENKATAPPAYYA

AS AT SABARMATI,

June 3, 1931

DEAR VENKATAPPAYA,

I am glad you have given me an exhaustive letter about Bapi Needu. I have offered to take him in the Ashram and pay the sum mentioned by him, i.e., Rs. 33 per month, for his dependents. But if you can guide him there and he will accept your guidance do please give it to him. How is your wife? I was sorry to hear about your daughter, but really she ought to go to the hills every summer.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. KONDA VENKATAPPAYA
GUNTUR

From a microfilm: S. N. 17696

1 Presumably Voiceless India, published in 1930
2 Vide “Leter to Subhas Chandra Bose”, 26-5-1931
342. LETTER TO K. PANDAR CHETTY

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 3, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

With reference to your letter it does not appear that your gun licence was confiscated because of civil disobedience. Cases not arising out of civil disobedience are not covered by the Settlement.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. K. PANDAR CHETTY
CARDAMOM PLANTER
BODINAYAKANUR (S. INDIA)

From a photostat: S. N. 17197

343. LETTER TO MRS. C. A. HATE

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 3, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

Whatever energy I possess is due to regular habits and such self-restraint as I am capable of exercising. It is quite true that friends around me too notice my peace of mind. It is an object of envy. It comes from absolute faith in God and His goodness. That faith enables me humbly to do the task allotted to me without being anxious for the result.

I believe that indigestion is one thing which everybody can control and remove. Before I can advise you on your food, it is really necessary for me to know much more about you than you have told me in your letter. I should like to know what you feel when you say you are suffering from indigestion. Are your bowels acting regularly? How long have you suffered from indigestion? What food are you taking now and in what quantity and how many times? What exercises are you taking? How do you pass your days?

Yours sincerely,

MRS. C. A. HATE
INDU BHUVAN
343 THAKURDWAR, BOMBAY

From a photostat: S. N. 17198
344. LETTER TO S. SWAMINATHAN CHETTIAR

AS AT SABARMATI,

June 3, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter of the 25th May last. If a chairman deliberately defies any rule of the Congress constitution it is certainly open to any member present to challenge the decision and to move a vote of no-confidence or to take such other steps that are open to members.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. S. SWAMINATHAN
POTTAMARAI NORTH
KUMBAKONAM

From a photostat : S. N. 17200

345. LETTER TO THE SECRETARY,

INDIAN MERCHANTS’ CHAMBER

AS AT SABARMATI,

June 3, 1931

THE SECRETARY
INDIAN MERCHANTS’ CHAMBER
BOMBAY

DEAR SIR,

I thank you for your letter of the 19th ultimo advising me that I was unanimously elected an honorary member of your Chamber. Please convey my thanks to the Chamber for conferring on me this honour.

Yours faithfully,

From a photostat : S. N. 17201

1 Stating that the President, Kumbakonam Taluk Congress Committee, had allowed a lawyer member to participate in its deliberations over ruling the objection from other members that he was not a habitual wearer of khadi
346. LETTER TO A. G. SHEOREY

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 3, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. If you contend that the D.S.P.’s order is illegal, you should challenge it in a court of law. If there is any doubt about it, the procedure you have adopted is the proper procedure, namely, approaching the Home Member and ventilating the matter in public.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. A. G. SHEOREY
PUBLICITY OFFICER, PROVINCIAL POLITICAL CONFERENCE
SAUGOR (C.P.)

From a microfilm: S. N. 17202

347. LETTER TO DARCY LINDSAY

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 3, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter of the 30th April last. I thought that the proposition that the Indian is a mere clerk¹ in the administration of the country was not seriously disputed by anybody. Wish that you could read the minds even of the Indian members of the I.C.S. I know from personal experience of them that the vast majority of them do not feel anything more than mere clerks, somewhat glorified if you like. But when I wrote the passage I had not the few of these highly-paid Indians in mind but I had the army of actual clerks who, no matter what their ability may be, can never rise beyond the status of clerks.

When I said that the Indian at best was a commission agent I again thought that I was stating what was literally the truth. Take the largest item of foreign trade. Is not the Indian merely the agent of his foreign principals? If he makes five rupees for himself, he makes Rs. 95 for his principal. So long as the conditions of trade remain what they are it cannot be otherwise. If India remains principally a country exporting raw produce and importing manufactured articles, Indian merchants must be largely commission agents whether of England,

¹ Vide “The Giant and the Dwarf”, 26-3-1931
Japan, America or any other foreign country.

How shall I prove to you the daily humiliating experience of the Indian who, no matter how wealthy he is, gets no facility whereas his English rival gets many things done for the asking. Take the case of the British navigation companies, the concessions enjoyed by Europeans all over India whether in mining, banking or other commercial pursuits too numerous to mention.

When I say that the English trade is founded upon the ruin of Indian trade, I have simply written what historians have stated. If it was merely enterprise and grit that had brought about the state of things I should not grumble. But I would like you to study the rise of the East India Co. from the records of the India Office collected, be it said to their honour, by English historians.

In writing of the levelling process I certainly had not in mind the Soviet rule of Bolshevism. It is perhaps somewhat shameful that I have to confess to you that I do not yet know exactly what Bolshevism is for the simple reason that I have not had time to study the inner working of the Russian revolution. The levelling process to me simply means that the system of favouritism on which, as I believe, English commerce has been built should cease and for that purpose a double process has to begin. Favouritism should go and young Indian enterprises should receive State help and patronage.

I know that I must not expect to convert you by argument. What I would like Englishmen in India to do is to see them [selves] as the average Indian sees them and ask themselves why it is that the vast majority of Indians feel as I often write in the pages of Young India. Can it be that what some English economists have written and what most Indian economists, historians and administrators have written is all untrue? The case that I have presented is based upon their testimony and supported by personal experience.

Lastly, however much I may differ from your views, let me assure you that I appreciate your persistence in trying to convince me of my error. And if you will not give up the attempt I dare say that if I am not converted it is possible that in the process of friendly interchange of communications you might be able to see the other side of the shield.

Yours sincerely,

SIR DARCY LINDSAY
THE SPORTS CLUB
ST. JAMES SQUARE
LONDON, S.W.

From a photostat : S. N. 17203
348. LETTER TO VIDYANATH SAHAI

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 3, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter.
I certainly think that it is everyone’s duty and especially an educationist’s to speak the truth at all cost.
Discussion of politics in colleges should carry no stigma.
It was impossible to cover in the Delhi Agreement cases in Indian States.

I can understand the distinction between those who resigned on their own free will and those who were dismissed. A dismissal may take place on valid grounds apart from civil disobedience.

I should be astonished if it was true, that because you were dismissed from Kashmir State service for the reasons you state, other educational institutions will not take you up.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. VIDYANATH SAHAI
THE EMPIRE HINDU HOTEL
SIMLA

From a microfilm : S.N. 17204

349. LETTER TO CHARLES F. WELLER

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 3, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your warm letter of 17th April. 1933 is a far cry for me and I could not even make tentative arrangements for that year. You will therefore have to write to me, if all goes well, towards the middle of 1932 when I might be able to give a decisive answer. I am sure you will appreciate my difficulty.

Yours sincerely,

CHARLES F. WELLER, ESQ.
CHICAGO’S FELLOWSHIP OF FAITHS
CHICAGO (U.S.A.)

From a photostat : S. N. 17205
350. LETTER TO K. ROY CHATTI

AS AT ASHRAM,
June 3, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

Your enquiry need not be answered through the columns of Young India. The answer is so obvious. No Congress member can bid for opium shops.

Yours sincerely,

S YT. K. R OY C HATTI
SEETHANAGARAM,
Via KOVVOOR, EAST GODAVARI DT.

From a microfilm : S. N. 17206

351. LETTER TO SUBHAS CHANDRA BOSE

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 3, 1931

I have your letter. I do not think you should worry the Sadhu. That he is known to be mad rather appeals to me because of the fellow feeling between us. Even without his warning, I know that if I have to go to Europe I put my health in danger. But it does not matter; if I am destined to do some service there, somehow or other my health will keep.

S YT. SUBHAS CHANDRA BOSE
1 WOODBURN PARK
CALCUTTA

From a photostat : S. N. 17207

352. LETTER TO MRS. V. BANERJEE

AS AT ASHRAM,
June 3, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter and I feel that you have had to undergo many a trial. I do not know that I need guide you in the choice of service. There are so many ways open to you. I would therefore advise you to follow your own bent in making your choice. I would like to meet you if I happen to come in your direction.

Yours sincerely,

MRS. V. BANERJEE
LADY HEALTH VISITOR, BABY CLINIC COMMITTEE
RAJSHAHI (BENGAL)

From a microfilm : S. N. 17208

353. LETTER TO KRISHNADAS

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 3, 1931

MY DEAR KRISHNADAS,

Your firm hand in your letter of 25th May showed the rapid recovery you have made. I hope that there has been much more progress since then. You must not stir out till you are strong and are able to take fairly long walks without being fatigued. Whilst you are at it, it is much better not only to regain your original strength but to build up practically a new body. And all this should be possible after the terrible crisis which had reduced you to a shadow.

Subhashabu travelled with me from Mathura and we were together as far as Baroda. We had long chats. He came again to Bar- doli. I have advised him to submit the Bengal disputes to local arbitration.

I go to Bombay on the 9th returning here on the 12th.

SYT. KRISHNADAS
SHAKTI ASHRAM, P.O. RAJPUR (DT. DEHRA DUN)

From a microfilm : S. N. 17209

354. LETTER TO MOHAN LAL VIDYARTHI

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 3, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. There is no occasion for you to lose heart. You should take gentle exercise, increasing in quantity as you gain in strength. It should consist in a daily walk in the fresh air twice, in the morning and in the evening. You should eat as much milk as you can easily digest and fresh fruit. Omit every other food for the time being.
And you should take a hip-bath at about noon every day sitting in the tub about 10 minutes going upto 30 minutes if you feel comfortable.
If you do not know what hip-baths are you will find them described in my Guide to Health'.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. MOHAN LAL VIDYARTH
CAWNPORE CITY
From a photostat : S. N. 17211

355. LETTER TO ANANTA C. PATNAIK

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 3, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

My attending your conference is out of the question. But in wishing it every success I wish to draw the attention of every member that a great responsibility rests upon your shoulders in regard to the Congress session next year. One thing you have to prepare for from now. Khadi does not grow like the magician’s mango. You have to make preparations from now for an intensive programme so that you can show what Orissa is capable of doing in this most constructive Congress work.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. ANANTA CH. PATNAIK
PROVISIONAL SECRETARY, PURI DISTRICT CONFERENCE
PURI, P.O. BALIPATNA, (Vil. ATHANTAR)
From a microfilm : S. N. 17212

356. LETTER TO MAHALAKSHMI M. THAKKAR

June 3, 1931

CHI. MAHALAKSHMI,

Have you taken a vow not to write to me? Madhavji remains somewhat worried about the children, particularly about Chandra.
There is a proposal to send Chandra to the Ashram. Let me know

---

1 An English translation of a series of Gujarati articles on general know ledge about health published in Indian Opinion from January 4, 1913 to August 16, 1913; Vide
your view in the matter. Tell me about your daily programme of work there. I should like you and your sister to come if possible and see me here.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G. N. 6816

357. LETTER TO VITHALDAS JERAJANI

BARDOLI,
June 3, 1931

BHAI VITHALDAS,

I was glad to read your letter. The handwriting is as steady as ever. I would advise you to try mud packs on the head during noon. Do you lie down in the open during the day? Do you get plenty of fresh air in the room at night? In a disease like this, proper nursing is in fact the only medicine. Be in no hurry to get back to work. You need not worry about the disposal of the khadi stocks.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : S. N. 9776

358. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

BARDOLI,
June 3, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

You must have returned from Rajkot. Only yesterday I wrote to respected Shri Khushalbhai¹. I have also written to Bhagwanji and told him that, if he feels nothing but an atmosphere of untruth in the Ashram, he may certainly leave it. Surendra will go to Karadi and Untadi and then return there. He should start by the 15th. Apte and Sarja must have arrived there.

Shri Chhotalal Gandhi of Ankleswar writes to inform me that he had sent to you a sum of Rs. 543-4-0 during the Dandi March. Do

¹ Vide “Letter to Khushalchand Gandhi”, 2-6-1931

254 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
you have the money there? If you have and if the sum is credited in the khadi account, return it to him. Tell him that it is to be used for khadi work only.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

Have a talk with Kakasaheb about Vratvichar. If you have a large number of copies on hand, there is no need to reprint it.

From a microfilm of the Gujarati : M.M.U./I

359. LETTER TO KISANSINH CHAVDA
BARDOLI,
June 3, 1931

BHAII KISANSINH,

If you wish to come now, you should come not later than Sunday.

Vandemataram from
MOHANDAS

From a photostat of the Gujarati : C. W. 9294

360. LETTER TO PADAMLAL
June 3, 1931

BHAII PADALAJI,

I have your letter. The subjects of States have the right to take any steps including satyagraha in respect of the hardships they have to face. But the name of the Congress should not be associated with this because it will not be able to help them in their struggle; the States’ people should rely on their own strength.

Yours,
MOHANDAS GANDHI

[From a facsimile of the Hindi]
Madhya Pradesh aur Gandhiji, p. 136
361. Caste and Communal Question

A student who sends his name writes:¹

It is not quite correct to say that Hindus and Mussalmans do not greet one another on their respective sacred days. But one would certainly like much more frequent and extensive interchange of such greetings.

As for caste I have frequently said that I do not believe in caste in the modern sense. It is an excrescence and a handicap on progress. Nor do I believe in inequalities between human beings. We are all absolutely equal. But equality is of souls and not bodies. Hence it is a mental state. We need to think of and to assert equality because we see great inequalities in the physical world. We have to realize equality in the midst of this apparent external inequality. Assumption of superiority by any person over any other is a sin against God and man. Thus caste, in so far as it connotes distinctions in status, is an evil.

I do however believe in varna which is based on hereditary occupations. Varnas are four to mark four universal occupations, — imparting knowledge, defending the defenceless, carrying on agriculture and commerce and performing service through physical labour. These occupations are common to all mankind, but Hinduism, having recognized them as the law of our being, has made use of it in regulating social relations and conduct. Gravitation affects us all whether one knows its existence or not. But scientists who knew the law have made it yield results that have startled the world. Even so has Hinduism startled the world by its discovery and application of the law of varna. When Hindus were seized with inertia, abuse of varna resulted in innumerable castes with unnecessary and harmful restrictions as to intermarriage and interdining. The law of varna has nothing to do with these restrictions. People of different varnas may intermarry and interdine. These restrictions may be necessary in the interest of chastity and hygiene. But a Brahmin who marries a Sudra girl or vice versa commits no offence against the law of varna.

Marriage outside one’s religion stands on a different footing. Even here, so long as each is free to observe his or her religion, I can see no moral objection to such unions. But I do not believe that these unions can bring peace. They may follow peace. I can see nothing but disaster following any attempt to advocate Hindu-Muslim unions so long as the relations between the two remain strained. That such unions may be happy in exceptional circumstances can be no reason for their general advocacy. Interdining between Hindus and Mussalmans does take place even now on a large scale. But that again has not resulted in promoting peace. It is my settled conviction that intermarriage and interdining have no bearing on communal unity. The causes of discord are economic and political, and it is these that have to be removed. There is intermarriage and interdining in Europe, but the Europeans have fought amongst themselves as we Hindus and Mussalmans have never fought in all history. Our masses have stood aside.

¹ The letter is not reproduced here.

The untouchables are a class apart—a standing reproach to Hinduism. The castes are a handicap, they are no sin. Untouchability is a sin, a grievous crime, and will eat up Hinduism, if the latter does not kill the snake in time. Untouchables’ should no longer be the outcasts of Hinduism. They should be regarded as honoured members of Hindu society, and should belong to the varna for which their occupation fits them.

According to my definition of varna there is no varna in operation at present in Hinduism. The so-called Brahmins have ceased to impart knowledge. They take to various other occupations. This is more or less true of the other varnas. In reality, being under foreign domination we are all slaves, and hence less than Sudras—untouchables of the West.

The correspondent being a vegetarian finds it difficult to reconcile himself to dining with meat-eating Mussalmans. But he should re-member that there are many more meat-eating Hindus than Mussalmans. A vegetarian may with impunity dine with meat-eaters, Hindu and others, so long as he has eatable food cleanly prepared and placed before him. He will always have fruit and milk whereever he goes.

Young India, 4-6-1931
A correspondent writes from far off Cape Comorin:1

. . . In the car festivals here the Image is placed in the car and taken in procession. One set of people want that your photo should be placed side by side with the Image and taken in procession. Another set of riper men say that you would not like to be treated as God . . .

Another from Mathura sends me a horrible portrait representing me as lying stretched on the coil of the thousand-mouthed serpent with the roll of non-co-operation in one hand and the spinning-wheel suspended on the other arm. My poor wife is massaging my legs. The other celebrities have also been pressed into service. I must not violate the reader’s feelings by describing the other features. Suffice it to say that the picture is a caricature of the Vaishnavite legend representing Vishnu resting on the coil of Sheshanag. The correspondent who sends the picture asks me to plead with the publishers for its withdrawal. He rightly adds that though they may not publicly express their resentment, the picture must hurt the feelings of orthodox Vaishnavas. I whole-heartedly endorse the sentiments of both these correspondents. The motive in each case may be quite good. But this excessive heroworship borders on questionable idolatry, and is calculated to wound susceptibilities of the orthodox people without there being any excuse for giving such offence. Such excesses will defeat the purpose of the blind worshippers. If they have any regard for my feelings, let the organizers of the car festival who would put my portrait in the car and the publishers of the offending picture desist from their activity. There are many other healthy ways of giving expression to and promoting patriotic sentiment.

REPATRIATES FROM SOUTH AFRICA

Pandit Benarsidas Chaturvedi and Swami Bhavani Dayal Sannyasi have prepared a well-reasoned report of an independent enquiry they held into the condition of emigrants repatriated to India under the assisted emigration scheme from South Africa. This report and the Swami’s telegram dated 16th ultimo, asking me to comment on it, telling me, “Condition worst, many starving, women half naked, children begging”, have lain with me ever since. I am sorry that I have not been able to deal with the report earlier. The telegram from which I have quoted is an epitome of the report. The condition of our people, who find themselves strangers in their own land, is a disgrace alike to us and to the Government, but more to us than to the Government. No Government in the world can cope fully with such cases. Governments can only support to a limited extent voluntary public effort in such cases. It is really up to the merchant princes and other employers of labour in Calcutta to take a real interest in the welfare of such people, and find suitable employment for them.

1 Only an extract is reproduced here.

But the condition of these people is a small consideration, compared with the cause that has reduced those repatriates to the condition in which they find themselves. There should have been no agreed repatriation at all, and if there was to be any, there should have been ample provision previously made to ensure proper occupation for them, and in any case there should never have been any consent to the repatriation of colonial-born Indians, of whom there are fully thirty-three per cent in the Calcutta depot. But it is no use crying over spilt milk. The labours of the framers of the report will not have been in vain if at the time of the revision of the Cape Agreement, the rights of the poor labouring Indian population are not bartered away for doubtful concessions to the other Indian settlers. The position taken up by the latter is unassailable, and should depend on its own merits. The settlers themselves should therefore refuse to be party to any bargain, which would compromise the rights of their less favourably situated brethren. South Africa can easily absorb and accommodate the existing Indian population.

GANDHI ASHRAM, MEERUT

This Ashram, a creation of Acharya Kripalani, has issued a neat little pamphlet describing its activities. From a tiny thing which it was when it began life at Benares in 1920, it has now grown into a big thing with branches and its own premises in Meerut, the headquarters. It is now a registered charitable association. Its chief activity is production and distribution of khadi, but it runs free dispensaries and night schools wherever it is possible. Its production of khadi in 1921 was Rs. 48 and sale Rs. 3,100. The production in 1930 was Rs. 4,21,490 and sales Rs. 5,32,361. The price of its khadi 45" in width was Re. 1 per yard in 1921, and Rs. 0-5-6 per yard in 1930. It has departments of washing, calendering, and dyeing besides the cotton processes up to weaving. It takes and teaches apprentices in these departments, and finds work for the poor women of Meerut by giving them knitting, bordering of bedsheets, etc. Who can say that khadi has no future, or that it is not the help of the poorest in the land?

Young India, 4-6-1931

363. IS IT AN ECONOMIC NECESSITY?

A contribution in the Times of India (26-5-'31) has the following:

Mahtma Gandhi, in his latest pronouncement concerning the purpose and procedure of picketing, has reiterated his belief that the exclusion of foreign cloth is an 'economic necessity to India'. Perhaps he will explain, in the next issue of Young India, in what sense he uses that term. The information required can be supplied by answering certain questions prompted by the piecegoods situation as it is now developing.

1. To what extent has the decline of 1,000 million yards in the imports of cotton piecegoods in 1930-31 been balanced by the increased production of indigenous cloth based upon the processes of hand-spinning and weaving?

2. To what extent has it been balanced by increase in mill production?

3. Will the boycott be persisted in, regardless of the extent to which imported goods are displaced by hand-made and mill-made goods respectively?

4. If so, to what extent is the boycott in the interests of Bombay as distinct from other provinces?

Clearly, if the endeavour to revive the village industry has definitely failed, as appears to be the case, however reluctant Mahatma Gandhi may be to acknowledge defeat in a campaign so close to his heart, then the time has arrived, in the interests of public honesty, to transfer the formal control of the boycott campaign to the Cotton Millowners’ Associations, acting as principals, instead of continuing the camouflage of control by Congress, acting as agents.

The answers to the specific questions are:

1. It is impossible to answer the question in terms of yards because khadi is not all commercially produced. Home manufacture of khadi for use by manufacturers themselves is proceeding on an ever increasing scale, which it is impossible for the poor All-India Spinners’ Association to measure.

Vide “Notes” sub-title Picketing
2. The indigenous mills are undoubtedly playing an important part in making good the deficit.

3. It will be, subject to what follows.

4. The interest of Bombay is the interest of India. The writer perhaps includes Ahmedabad in Bombay, and evidently ignores the other important mills scattered all over India.

I have answered the specific questions for the satisfaction of the writer of the article than of myself or the public. The public should know that I should lose all interest in boycott of foreign cloth, if I really discovered that khadi was a failure, as the writer is sure it has proved to be already. I do not know the source of his assurance. But as the party chiefly concerned in khadi production and propaganda, I make bold to say that it is not only not a failure but is making sure though slow headway all over India. I therefore do reiterate the claim that boycott is an economic necessity for the masses. It may sound strange, but it is true that it is not in the same sense and to the same extent an economic necessity for the mills as for khadi. Mills have undoubtedly flourished beyond their expectations by reason of the boycott, but they could have, as they were doing, eked out an existence without the boycott. They could always share with Britain and Japan the exploitation of starving millions by dumping their manufactures among the ignorant, famishing millions, who, forgetting that by using their leisure hours they could manufacture their own cloth, would buy the flimsy mill calico and thus doubly injure themselves. Boycott cannot therefore be wholly transferred to the mills even if they wanted it. And if they undertook it, it would fail. The fact cannot be concealed that the mills are interested in the boycott chiefly for their agents’ and their share-holders’ profits. The Congress is concerned with the boycott wholly in the interest of the masses.

The writer and, for that matter, many others do not know that the khadi method is a new method in economics as non-violence is a new method in politics. The khadi method is bound to confound the orthodox economic theories, as non-violence has almost already confounded the orthodox political methods. The new method lends itself to the orthodox statistical demonstration only to a certain extent. It is the khadi spirit that is responsible for the phenomenal success of the boycott. Boycott itself is no new cry. It is as old as, if not older than, the Bengal partition period. But he hope of success was born with the rebirth of khadi in 1919, and the hope was partly realized last year when khadi spirit was at its highest. The real manifestation of the khadi spirit has still to come. And when it does, as it is bound to come, and that too sooner than most people expect, there will be neither picketing nor statistical demonstration required.

The Times of India writer suggests that the boycott is designed or calculated merely to benefit the mills to the injury of the masses. The suggestion would have foundation if there was no khadi behind the boycott. Let the writer and critics like him remember that the Congress formula in so many words is ‘Boycott through Khadi’. The India mills come in to supplement khadi. But the boycott would stand in spite of the Indian mills if they opposed khadi. Many did oppose it at one time. Their indifference to khadi was still more marked. But be it said to their credit that they have somewhat recognized the time spirit, and even though yet half-heartedly in the majority of cases, they have made terms with khadi. Some have become thorough converts to it, and will not even mind losing, if they must, for its sake. The Indian mills are therefore in no sense of the term principals in the boycott campaign. They benefit no doubt, and they will, at least for the time being, increasingly benefit, but the ratio of increase will be in direct proportion to the correctness of their conduct in their dealings with khadi.

The writer, as well as the reader, will now understand why India, that is to say, the masses must benefit in the long run even by the recent legislative protection given to the mills. The prices of mill cloth must of course go up. It is for the Congress to carry on ceaseless propaganda, so as to keep the mills from the profiteering temptation, and to teach the masses that their economic welfare lies in the manufacture of khadi in their own cottages through hand-spinning. When once foreign cloth is out of the way, indigenous mills will readily suit their prices and production to khadi, or will themselves face a boycott even like foreign mills.

Young India. 4-6-1931
364. R. T. C. AND CONGRESS

Had it not been for the necessity of observing reticence for the sake of the lasting peace, which it is the common object of all parties to reach, I should have long ago taken the public into confidence about my proposed visit to London to take part in the R. T. C. I am now in a position to say the following:

I have made no secret of my opinion, not new but held and expressed even while negotiations were going on in Delhi, that I should feel most reluctant to go to London to take part in the Conference, if we failed to solve the communal problem among ourselves. I have seen nothing as yet to make me alter the view.

There is another obstacle in the way of my leaving India, whilst delicate situations continue to arise regarding the Delhi Pact. I should sacrifice life itself to prevent a breakdown. And I flatter myself with the belief that my presence is necessary to prevent it.

Let us however hope that both the difficulties will be over by the time it becomes necessary to leave India for the September meeting.

I can but give my assurance that having entered upon the Settlement, I am eager for the sake of the good name of the Congress to proceed to London and deliver its message to the R. T. C. and the British statesmen, not excluding even Mr. Churchill. I know that he and his party do not realize that the Congress is no enemy of Great Britain. The Congress merely wants for India what he and his ancestors have fought to secure for Great Britain. I therefore need no persuasion to take me to London. I have even said to friends that if the communal tangle was not undone, and I was therefore unable to take part in the R. T. C. but the working of the Settlement left me free, I should, if so required, proceed to London for the sake of presenting the Congress position to the responsible statesmen. My supreme desire is to attain lasting peace, if it can be had with honour and without inviting the nation to engage in another fight involving untold suffering.

Young India, 4-6-1931
365. PRABHATPHERIS

It was in the Yeravda prison that I read of the inauguration of prabhatpheris. I thought that whoever originated the idea deserved thanks for it. I felt that apart from their propaganda value, they were spiritually beautiful. They summoned the sleeping to the call of duty. They reminded them that it was time to rise to the call of duty. They reminded them that it was time to rise from their beds and give thanks to God the first thing in the morning. For I had read that the members of the prabhatpheris sang songs of worship as also of topical public events. If wisely guided, this institution can become a great means of purification as also political education of the right type. But I hear that songs generating bad passion are also sometimes sung. I should be sorry if my information proved true. I would strongly advise the organizers of these parties to restrict their choice of songs not only during this time of peace but for all time to those of worship and those dealing purely with constructive activities such as khadi, liquor prohibition, communal unity, untouchability and other social reform. The parties must be trained to sing well and in tune and should keep to one hour throughout India. I remember the parties in Bombay not always keeping the same time and in Allahabad keeping a different time from Bombay. The institution has sprung up anyhow, but it will be well now for the prime movers, if there are any, to evolve a proper plan and publish a selection of songs which all, no matter belonging to what faith or party, can sing. This should be a non-party national institution. If parties spring up anyhow and begin singing anyhow and any time, they would disturb the people by their jargon. But good singing in the morning will be appreciated.

Young India, 4-6-1931

366. ‘AN HONEST DOUBT’ (?)

The now famous Gandhi-Irwin truce terms received an almost unanimous approbation, though not from the entire section of Congressmen in India, at least from a majority of them. The people and the Press, both in this country as well as on the continent of Europe, expressed their sincere appreciation of the success of the peace negotiations, and there was a consensus of opinion expressed, that honesty of purpose and sincerity in action on both sides lent sufficient weight to the success of the negotiations. In spite of this, there was and is still a very strong minority comprising especially the younger generation, which is totally against the truce terms, and emphatically declines to put its seal of approval upon them. They are of the opinion, and we think not without sufficient justification, that the flag of complete independence as the immediate goal of India, hoisted at the Lahore Congress, has been lowered by the truce terms, thereby committing the Congress and its followers to a less severe and entirely different programme of activities.

---

1 Literally, morning processions

No one for a moment seems to doubt the sincerity of purpose with which Gandhiji, as the one voice on behalf of the Congress, and Lord Irwin, as the spokesman of the British Government, carried out the peace negotiations to such a successful conclusion. The left-wingers, under the leadership of Sjt. Subhas Chandra Bose, had almost planned to oppose the Resolution at Karachi Congress ratifying the Delhi Pact, but better counsels prevailed with them, and we are thankful to them for having averted a very serious defection in the Congress, at a time like the present, when complete unanimity and cooperation mean much. With great reluctance they let Gandhiji have his own way and try once more his faith in the British Government.

Let us for one moment examine how far the terms of the truce have been observed since the Settlement. Government on their part have released the Civil Disobedience prisoners, withdrawn the various ordinances, and declared the Congress organization a lawful body. The Congress on their part have called off Civil Disobedience, aggressive picketing, boycott of British goods, etc., and have also acceded to the cancellation of the enquiry into police excesses. So much the better for all. But what passes our comprehension is whether or not the Government have strictly adhered to the principles underlying the terms. Reports of non-release of prisoners in various parts of the country, promulgation of Section 144 on political meetings, arrests and convictions for political reasons, and various other happenings, which are considered a total violation of the Agreement, are pouring into our ears morning. On the other hand, we are told that the local Governments contend that the people have not always observed the terms of the truce. Whether or not both parties are justified in their charges it is not for us to say.

In the light of the above, we honestly doubt if Gandhiji, behalf of the Congress, was sufficiently justified in having lowered the flag of independence hoisted at Lahore by agreeing to the truce. We honestly doubt again if he fully satisfied that there was a real change of heart on the part of the British Government, so as to commit the Congress to a truce of this sort. We honestly doubt thirdly, if Gandhiji really thought that the British Government would take up seriously the question of Indian independence at the next Round Table Conference, even if the Congress under his leadership participated. Fourthly, we entertain an honest doubt if Gandhiji thought for one moment that the British Government would totally abdicate in favour of the Congress after 150 years of continued exploitation of a land which is almost their entire subsistence and mainstay. Fifthly, we doubt whether he believed that they would surrender “the brightest jewel in the Crown of the British Empire” to those from whom no exploitation is possible in future, and thus pave the way for their own decline. And last but one, we honestly doubt whether Gandhiji remembered how he has been betrayed on more than one occasion in the past in his trust in the Government, and considered whether Young India would allow him to practise his political jugglery on the toiling millions once more and for ever.

Last but not the least is the honest doubt we entertain whether there is any ray of hope of success through Congress participation in the coming Conference. Who knows that once Gandhiji with his team has left India for London they will be allowed to return to the scene of their activities, in case the London conversations break down? Who can guarantee to the Indian delegation a hospitable reception in London during its stay there?

We honestly wonder whether it is not high time for us to present a united front, and if necessary, to wade through a pool of blood, of course pursing the creed of non-violence, to attain our one goal and that for now and for ever.

The foregoing has been sent me by “The Youth of India” with a duly signed covering letter. I have removed certain unnecessary passages and made some alterations without changing the substance of the charge. There is truth in the statement that there are charges and countercharges about breach of the Settlement by the parties concerned. But I am able to assure the public that so far the difficulties have been removed. The Central Government is anxious to implement the Settlement as I know the Congress is. And so long as that condition persists, there is no danger of a breakdown. Beyond this the public will not expect me to go, whilst the very delicate instrument is being worked and kept in tune.

As to the Settlement itself, I have no doubt whatsoever that the Congress would have put itself in the wrong if it had not entered upon it. And it was certainly patriotic on the part of Sjt. Subhas Chandra Bose and the young men who were behind him to have withdrawn their opposition and given their support to the Settlement Resolution at Karachi. The Karachi Congress did not lower the independence flag. The Congress mandate is clear on the point.

Whether the Congress will be able to make good its position at the Round Table Conference I do not know. But I do know that it would be wrong for the Congress to avoid the Conference for fear of rejection of its demands. The Conference is one way of showing the absolute justice of the national demand. It would have been foolish for the Congress to refuse participation when it was open to it to press its full demand without reservation. The Congress would have betrayed lack of courage if it had declined to avail itself of the opportunity, when it came, of presenting its case at the Round Table Conference.

Therefore I should not hesitate to go to London and attend the Conference if I found that I could safely go. My difficulty is fundamental and well known. I should not have the self-confidence to present the Congress case, if we could not set our own house in order by attaining a solution of the communal problem. But I am waiting, watching and praying. As soon as the way is open, I should not hesitate to go wherever wanted. The other difficulty is less serious, but none the less important. As the principal party on behalf of the Congress to the Pact, I should feel most uneasy leaving India, when serious questions arising out of the Settlement demand attention. I have pledged my honour to Lord Irwin that I shall leave no stone unturned to see that the Settlement does not break down. As I have already hinted, I am having some difficulty with local Governments, but I am hoping that with patience all will be well. In any case I believe in all humility that my presence in India is necessary to avoid a crisis.

As for the other doubts of the writer or writers of the letter, I can only repeat what I have said so often. I will not lose hope till I know that nothing is to be gained from negotiation. Since I believe in human nature, in spite of previous disappointments, I must trust. I regard it as practical wisdom. I rely for success upon the inherent justice of the national cause and the equally just means adopted for its vindication. I do not believe that the Congress delegation will be insulted in London. And if it is, the Congress will not lose its prestige. The loss will accrue to those who will insult. I therefore ask the youthful writers of the letter not to lose hope, but work with all their might to make the Settlement a success, and by working the constructive programme enhance the power of the Congress to vindicate the national position.
For the measure of success at the Conference, if the Congress is represented thereat, will be in strict proportion to the measure of the power of the Congress.

Young India, 4-6-1931

367. MISSIONARY METHODS IN INDIA

Gandhiji has given great umbrage to missionaries by his declaration against the prevailing methods of evangelization, and by challenging the claim to superiority put forward by them on behalf of Christianity. They strongly resent his assertion that their modus operandi is open to suspicion. . . . It was stated in the Indian Census Report for 1911 that the aboriginal tribes accept Christianity, “in the hope of obtaining assistance from the missionaries in their difficulties and protection the coercion of landlords.” . . . In 1821, Raja Rammohan Roy urged in the Brahmanical Magazine that the superiority of Christianity should not be advocated “by means of abuse and insult or by affording the hope of worldly gain.”

. . . Mrs. Charles Howard, Secretary, Society for the Education of the Women of India, Chicago, in a letter to Sr. Virchand R. Gandhi of Bombay, wrote in 1896: “But I am more concerned for poor India. Why should Christianity, which is a failure here, be thrust upon India?”

This comes from a retired Deputy Collector. The collection of quotations from named sources should, instead of offending missionaries, cause an inward search. I have several other similar articles, some from Christian Indians. The writers will excuse me for holding them. The controversy ought not to be prolonged. The incautious zeal of reporters, who trusted too much to memory, led to a discussion, which I would fain have avoided.

Young India, 4-6-1931

---

1 Only excerpts are reproduced here.
2 Vide “Foreign Missionaries”, 23-4-1931 & “Foreign Missionaries Again”, 7-5-1931
368. TELEGRAM TO JAMES MILLS

SWARAJ ASHRAM,
BARDOLI,
June 4, 1931

JAMES MILLS
CECIL HOTEL
SIMLA

YOUR WIRE. PLEASE CABLE INDIA NEEDS ALL HELP AMERICA CAN RENDER IN HER NONVIOLENT EFFORT FOR FREEDOM.

GANDHI

From a photostat: S.N. 17213

369. TELEGRAM TO J. M. SEN GUPTA

SWARAJ ASHRAM,
BARDOLI,
June 4, 1931

SEN GUPTA
ELGIN ROAD
CALCUTTA

THANKS WIRE. THINK YOU SHOULD REFER ALL MATTERS ARBITRATION UNCONDITIONALLY. ELECTIONS CAN BE SET ASIDE IF FOUND IRREGULAR.

GANDHI

From a photostat: S.N. 17214

---

1 Which stated: “... Having regard to Subhashabu’s wire to you and the attitude disclosed therein I agree to arbitration. Beg point out that arbitration may not be reduced to compromise but should be a decision on matters of principle and fact arrived at after detailed enquiry. Arbitrator or arbitrators will be expected to give decision as regards following question of principle. Whether District Congress Committees shall have the right of printing membership forms as they had formerly enabling wide enrolment without hindrance whether district Congress Presidents should not be ex-officio returning officers and when the President is not available rule number five of the rules for election
370. TELEGRAM TO VENKATESHNARAIN TIWARI

SWARAJ ASHRAM,
BARDOLI,
June 4, 1931

VENKATESHNARAIN TIWARI
KYDGANJ
ALLAHABAD

YOUR WIRE. LINE FIFTYTHREE OBVIOUS MISTAKE.
CORRECTING NEXT ISSUE.

GANDHI

From a microfilm : S.N. 17215

371. TELEGRAM TO MAQBOOL HUSAIN

SWARAJ ASHRAM,
BARDOLI,
June 4, 1931

HAKIM MAQBOOL HUSAIN
CARE CONGRESS
CAWNPORE

YOUR WIRE. RERER MATTER ARBITRATION.

GANDHI

From a microfilm : S.N. 17216

372. TELEGRAM TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

BARDOLI,
June 4, 1931

CHI. PREMA,

I got your letter. I, too, shall start on Monday. So both of us will reach Bombay on Tuesday. But I shall be reaching there a little earlier than you. Drop in on the same day when you get time. I will then decide if I can spare time for a talk with you. Your letter was quite full of information. Gangabehn has indeed many aspirations. You should have long talks with her and should

1 Vide “Virus of Untouchability”, 11-6-1931
2 Presumably the Hindu-Muslim tension in Cawnpore.
also help her. Her capacity for love is boundless and her desire for service intense.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 10256. Also C.W. 6704. Courtesy: Premabehn Kantak

373. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

June 4, 1931

CHI. VASUMATI,

I got your letter. I have carefully read Nanalal’s letter. If you are required to stay at Visnagar in connection with that work, my advice is against it. The work is full of difficulties. If Nanalal wishes to speak to me, he is welcome. In this matter I will trust Krishnadas’s judgment. Before coming to a decision, you should also know the views of Budhabhai, Mathuradas and Narandas. If you have to choose a place outside the Ashram for work, you should choose either Nadiad or Bochasan. I am inclined in favour of Bochasan, since the work there has been put on a firm foundation. However, if you are under a moral obligation to work for that school at Nadiad, you should certainly do your duty. If you have held out any hope, you ought to fulfil it.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9326. Also C.W. 571. Courtesy: Vasumati Pandit

374. LETTER TO GANGABEHN VAIDYA

BARDOLI,

June 4, 1931

CHI. GANGABEHN,

I got your letter. The Ashram is the right place for you. You cannot leave the girls. You should even take in others who may wish to join. You can, therefore, serve best in the Ashram.

Vasumati may live in Nadiad if she wishes to do so.

Santa Cruz khadi is very good.
Let me know when you are leaving. Write to me always and tell me how you think or feel about any matter.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro–6 : G. S. Gangabehnne, p. 54. Also C.W. 8776. Courtesy : Gangabehn Vaidya

375. LETTER TO MRIDULA SARABHAI

BARDOLL
June 4, 1931

CHI. MRIDU,

It is quite all right that you wrote a long letter. You will surely have benefited from your month-long stay at Simla. You will have walked a lot. The suggestion that a boycott committee be formed seems a good one. I am hoping to get something done at the meeting. Most of our difficulties are due to the fact that we want to achieve the boycott through khadi. The mills do have a place in the boycott campaign. That place is secondary to khadi and is automatically assured through our carrying on khadi work. Giving a special place to the mills will make the mills lose, khadi lose and the boycott will fail. Have you understood this key to boycott? If you have not understood, I wish you would ask me again and again and understand. Read carefully the article about boycott in the current issue of Young India.¹

You should never hesitate to write to me whenever you want to.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 11181. Courtesy: Sarabhai Foundation

¹ Vide “Is it An Economic Necessity”, 4-6-1931
376. LETTER TO MOOLCHAND AGRAWAL

BARDOLI,
June 4, 1931

Bhai Moolchandji,
I have your letter.
(1) Village sanitation is the duty of the State.
(2) If the State neglects it, the villagers may take it up.
(3) Municipality means the village service society. Villagers can themselves form such a society.
(4) Scavenging will cost nothing if performed by volunteers.
(5) In a small village even a few dedicated youths can do the scavenging.

MOHANDAS

From a photostat of the Hindi : G.N. 758

377. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

BARDOLI,
June 4, 1931

Bhai Ghanshyamdas,
Here is a copy of the letter from Sir Darcy Lindsay. Send a reply with facts and figures. I have already sent one¹, but a more informed reply is called for.
I got the wire about the dispute in Bengal. I have wired to Sen Gupta² unconditionally to accept arbitration.

BAPU

[PS.]
I shall be in Bombay from 9th to 11th.

From a copy of the Hindi : C.W. 7887. Courtesy : G. D. Birla

¹ Vide “Letter to Darcy Lindsay”, 3-6-1931
² Vide “Telegram to J. M. Sen Gupta”, 1-6-1931
378. TELGRAM TO G. D. BIRLA

SWARAJ ASHRAM,
BARDOLI,
June 5, 1931

GHANSHYAMDAS BIRLA
CARE LUCKY
CULCUTTA
IF AT ALL POSSIBLE TRY SETTLE BENGAL DISPUTE
THROUGH LOCAL ARBITRATION.

GANDHI

From a photostat: S.N. 17228

379. TELGERAM TO PRESIDENT, HINDI SAMMELAN, MADURA

SWARAJ ASHRAM,
BARDOLI,
June 5, 1931

PRESIDENT
HINDI SAMMELAN
MADURA
HOPE YOUR LABOURS WILL RESULT ALL DELEGATES
NEXT CONGRESS SPEAKING UNDERSTANDING HINDI.¹

GANDHI

From a microfilm: S.N. 17232

¹ This was read out at the conference on June 7.
380. TELEGRAM TO KRISHNADAS

SWARAJ ASHRAM,
BARDOLI,
June 5, 1931

KRISHNADAS
SHAKTI ASHRAM
RAJPUR (DEHRA DUN)

YOUR WIRE. YOU NEED NOT COME HERE OR WORRY. I AM DOING EVERYTHING POSSIBLE TO SETTLE MATTER.

BAPU

From a microfilm: S.N. 17229

381. TELEGRAM TO SADAGOPACHARI

SWARAJ ASHRAM,
BARDOLI,
June 4, 1931

SADAGOPACHARI
PRESIDENT, TALUQ CONGRESS
TIRUTANI

YOUR TELEGRAM. SEE CHAKRAVARTI RAJAGOPALACHARI. POST PARTICULARS.

GANDHI

From a microfilm: S.N. 17230

1 Presumably the Benal Congress dispute; vide “Letter to Mrs. V. Banerjee”, 3-6-1931
382. TELEGRAM TO FULCHAND K. SHAH

SWARAJ ASHRAM,
BARDOLI,
June 5, 1931
FULCHAND SHAH
NATIONAL SCHOOL
WADHWAN CITY
YOUR LETTER. YOU CAN COME SUNDAY OR AFTER RETURN BOMBAY.

GANDHI

From a microfilm: S.N. 17231

383. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 5, 1931
DEAR MR. EMERSON,

This liquor business is causing a great deal of trouble. The following extracts from a letter1 from Calicut will show you what is to be said on the Congress side. I have given you already facts about picketing in Ahmedabad. It is high time that this matter is settled finally.

Yours sincerely,

Encl. 1

H. W. EMERSON, ESQ.
SIMLA

A.I.C.C. File No. 16–B, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

1 The letter stated that “... with the help of the police and excise officials ... liquor which has no sale at the shops on account of picketing is diverted into the homes of the vendors or their friends, where it is being regularly sold”.

276 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
384. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

June 5, 1931

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

I hope you did not lose in S. India what you gained in Ceylon. If you are fresh and do not mind the journey do come to Bardoli for Sunday to that we might have a quiet chat here before beginning operations on Tuesday. I hope Kamala and Indu have profited by the rest.

Yours,

BAPU

PANDIT JAWAHARLAL NEHRU
C/O SJT. JALBHAI NAOROJI
NAPEAN SEA RD.
BOMBAY

From Gandhi-Nehru papers, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

385. LETTER TO J. C. KUMARAPPA

As at Sabarmati,
June 5, 1931

MY DEAR KUMARAPPA.

Please go through the enclosed and if you have access to the necessary literature and leisure also let me have your reply to it.

BAPU

Encl. 1

SYT. J. C. KUMARAPPA
65 ESPLANADE ROAD
BOMBAY

From a photostat : G.N. 10095

VOL. 52 : 28 APRIL, 1931 - 1 JULY, 1931 277
386. LETTER TO P. A. WADIA

As at Sabarmati,
June 5, 1931

Dear Prof. Wadia,

I enclose herewith a copy of a letter from an English friend. I have sent him a reply but I know that my reply cannot carry the same weight that a trained economist’s can. Will you kindly therefore send me your considered reply supported by facts and figures?

Yours sincerely,

Encl. 1

Prof. P. A. Wadia
Wilson College
Bombay

From a microfilm: S.N. 17233

387. LETTER TO EMMA HARKER

As at Sabarmati,
June 5, 1931

Dear Friend,

I have your letter. How can I remove the ban on foreign cloth and why? And what is the meaning of the ban? It is merely a method of persuasion. If people want to wear foreign cloth, there is nothing to prevent them from doing so. But if there was national government, the entry of foreign cloth would be surely prohibited as it was in the time of Elizabeth in England. It is true that the Lancashire workmen may have to suffer during the transition stage. But can it be any reason for India’s cottage industry. If in trying to undo the wrong, Indians cease to use foreign cloth which it is their duty to do Lancashire has to turn to a less injurious industry. Where is the harm and where is the wrong? I would like you to work out this problem in its details and you will find that ban on foreign cloth is a necessary condition of the life of the millions of villagers of India.

You have evidently not studied the prohibition question in America. I talked to both who are for prohibition and against prohibition. Whilst it is true that prohibition has given rise to fashionable crime it has saved tens of thousands of the labouring population of America, who, having the temptation put away from them, are now bringing up sober families. But the conditions in India are infinitely superior to those in America. In America drink was the fashion and yet its great men rose against it. We are too near the time to measure the greatness of America in having undertaken prohibition. In India drink is considered to be a vice and is confined to only a particular class of people. Prohibition will be therefore an unmixed good in this land.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

MRS. EMMA HARKER
6 BELGRAVE TERRACE
KARACHI

From a photostat : S.N. 17235

388. LETTER TO MADHAVANAR
AS AT SABARMATI,
June 5, 1931

MY DEAR MADHAVANAR,

I have your letter about picketing. At the present moment I cannot give you better advice than to ask you to discuss the whole thing with Syt. Rajagopalachari and act in consultation with him. I am sure that if orders under 144 are passed, for the time being at any rate you should obey them.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. MADHAVANAR
MATHRUBHUMI BUILDINGS
CALICUT (MALABAR)

From a microfilm : S.N. 17236
389. LETTER TO DR. JOSIAH OLDFIELD

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 5, 1931

MY DEAR OLDFIELD,

You have revived sweet memories of old. I am not going to England this summer. Whether I shall have to go in September I do not know. If I do and if I get ill, I might have to seek shelter in your hospital. Anyway it was good of you to think of me.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

DR. JOSIAH OLDFIELD
LADY MARGARET HOSPITAL
DODDINGTON, KENT (ENGLAND)

From a photostat : C.W. 4517. Courtesy : Dr. Josiah Oldfield

390. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

June 5, 1931

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I got your letter. It is intolerable that, despite such illness, you should compulsorily have to stay there. You should show courage and find some way. I have written to you a long and detailed letter. I hope you got it. I need not, therefore, write much in this. I shall be in Bombay only during 9-11. The address there will be: Laburnum Road, Bombay. I shall have to stay there for three days only.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 3401
391. LETTER TO LALJI PARMAR

June 5, 1931

CHI. LALJI,

Is Mamasheb displeased with you? Do you write to him? Have you been looking for a wife? Are you in a hurry to get married? Write to me and tell me frankly what your wish is.

I hope you are working hard there.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of Gujarati : G.N. 3292

392. LETTER TO NAJUKLAL N. CHOKSI

June 5, 1931

CHI. NAJUKLAL,

I have your letter. If an operation offers the only cure for Moti have it done quickly. You have done well to take up the job at a library. What is your salary there?

I have looked into the article about Champaran. That sugar can certainly be regarded as indigenous. How pitiable is our condition that if anybody wished to give up eating such sugar, he must stop eating such sugar, he must stop eating sugar altogether.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : S.N. 12148

393. LETTER TO NARAYAN MORESHWAR KHARE

June 5, 1931

CHI. PANDITJI,

I did not require such a detailed explanation about the gathering of Bhangis. You may arrange Rambhau’s programme if he lets you do so.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : C.W. 217. Courtesy : Lakshmibehn Khare
394. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

BARDOLI,
June 5, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

I got your letter. You did right in having paid a visit to Rajkot.

If you go on pleading with the elders through letters, they will probably listen to your advice regarding khadi.

Some days ago, I had a letter from Mukundrai, which I am sending on to you. It will help you to a better understanding of the facts about Mahalakshmi. I did not know that she was related to Gaurishankar. I should be happy if you can take her into the Ashram. Chhaganlal is also one of her relatives.

If the other lady is what she seems to you, you can admit her. You should try to know her husband. If she had such intense aversion against worldly happiness, why did she marry? How old is she? What has been her education? To which community does she belong? What are her husband and father-in-law? What is her father? In principle, we should admit such women.

If Ratubhai has gone to Bombay, we shall meet. I had indeed realized, when I went to Rangoon, that the Doctor was unhappy about Lilavati. But I will have a talk with Ratubhai when he meets me in Bombay.

The suggestion that Madanmohan should stay with Jamnalalji seems all right to me. Haribhau was here and I had a talk with him too. If he stays with Jamnalalji, there will be no need to pay him anything.

We should let Amtulbehn stay in the Ashram if she is ready to live in it till the end of her life. She may be permitted to receive money from outside. If no one sends her any money, we should bear the expenditure on her account. I think she will recover if she does very little physical work. You must have got the bill of exchange in Ba’s name which was received here.

If an inmate of the Ashram lives elsewhere, his expenses should be borne by the people there. If, however, Chhaganlal desires another arrangement in regard to any person, do as he suggests. I have written to Chhaganlal also to this effect.

I have advised Dwarkanath that he should live outside Gujarat till my suspicion against him regarding arms is removed. He will leave in a few days. We have got to decide what to do about his bill. Chhaganlal thinks that he is innocent. I have written to him and told him that, if he feels inclined to pay the bill, he may do so. If, therefore, he writes to you requesting you to pay the bill, please do.

I shall leave this place on Monday and return on the 12th, leaving Bombay on the 11th.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./I

395. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

June 5, 1931

Bhai GhanshyAMDAS,

Read the enclosed letter¹. I have an idea that I have already written to you in this matter. Whatever the case, I think this institution deserves to be helped if something can be given from the Raghumal Trust.

I have today telegraphed that if a settlement by arbitration in the Bengal dispute is possible, they should try for it. The matter should not come up before the Working Committee.

I shall be in Bombay from 9th to 11th.

MOHANDAS

From Hindi: C.W. 7888. Courtesy: G.D. Birla

¹ From Ramanand Sannyasi, of the institution for the welfare of backward classes in Delhi, about the meeting of the Raghumal Trust fixed for June 16 or 17.
396. TELEGRAM TO J. M. SEN GUPTA

SWARAJ ASHRAM,
BARDOLI,
June 6, 1931

SEN GUPTA
ELGIN ROAD
CALCUTTA

YOUR WIRE. YOU PUT YOURSELF WRONG BY RESIGNING OR ABSTAINING. HAVE NEITHER APPROVED NOR DISAPPROVED YOUR CONDUCT IF ONLY BECAUSE I DO NOT KNOW FACTS. DO NOT EVEN NOW KNOW WHAT SEPARATE ELECTIONS MEAN. HAVE NO DESIRE HUSH FRAUD WHEREVER PROVED. ONLY SUGGESTED DECIDING ALL ISSUES THERE BY LOCAL ARBITRATION INSTEAD WORKING COMMITTEE HAVING TO DECIDE AND THIS FOR SAKE BENGAL’S NAME AND EXPEDITION. SARDAR AGREES.

GANDHI

From a photostat : S.N. 17243

397. LETTER TO R. M. MAXWELL

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 6, 1931

DEAR MR. MAXWELL,

Reverting to your letter of the 13th May,¹ at practically the same time that I received your letter in Simla I received the news that Syt. Rajawade was discharged although the letter under reply left me no such hope. I was thankful to receive the telegraphic news which was conveyed to me by Mr. Emerson. I have now received the papers about Syt. H. D. Rajah and on a persual of the papers I can find no incitement to violence. The speeches themselves are not before me because I am told that they are not to be found in the record of the case, but the evidence of the Crown witnesses and the Judge’s summing up bring out the most relevant parts of the speeches, which though highly discourteous and equally seditious, contain no incitement to violence. On the contrary, the judge himself refers to the profession of non-violence by the accused but dismisses it as lip

¹ Vide “Letter from R. M. Maxwell”, 13-5-1931

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
service. In the absence of any direct incitement to violence I cannot see how it is possible for a judge to infer mere lip service when there is a direct assertion of non-violence. But I have not relied upon my own opinion. I put the thing before three legal friends, one of whom has kindly reduced his opinion to writing, copy of which I enclose herewith. In the circumstances I request His Excellency to reconsider his decision and beg to point out that under Cl. 13 of the Settlement there is no option but to discharge the civil disobedience prisoners who might not be guilty of offences involving violence other than technical violence or incitement to such violence. I venture to suggest that where there is no incitement on the fact of the evidence it is not open to the Government to deduce such incitement.

Then there is the case of Ratanji Dayaram of Bardoli Taluka. I have now studied the judgment and evidence in this case. There is certainly no violence as contemplated in Cl. 13 of the Settlement. It is also moreover incorrect to say that the accused burnt his tenant’s crop. The accused burnt his own crop which he owned jointly with the complainant Devalia Jagla. If the complainant suffered any damage it was open to him, as it is even now, to bring a civil suit against the accused. But where, on the evidence itself and the finding of the judge admitted by the Government, the crop was burnt in order to prevent the Government officials from collecting revenue from selling the crop, there was no question of intending to damage the partner. And may I point out the inconsistency of the Government in releasing the co-accused, Ranchhod, who had no ownership in the crop and keeping Ratanji Dayaram who was admittedly joint owner of the crop. I must, therefore, for the same reason as in the case of Syt. H. D. Rajah, ask for Ratanji Dayaram’s discharge in terms of the Settlement.

With reference to your second letter of 30th May last, I can only say that the position taken up by His Excellency causes me deep pain. The reasoning given for refusing to return the press seems to me to be extraordinary. It is giving back and not taking back. Cl. 16 throws the burden on the Government of returning and not on the party dispossessed of going to take back. The reasoning given in the third paragraph of your letter causes still greater pain. I was unprepared for the interpretation that is sought to be put upon the Ordinance. I cannot question the inter-pretation but I do question the propriety of putting an irritating interpretation in connection with a document of peace. What the Government seek to do is to justify wanton destruction of property by Government officials. But in order to bring within the smallest compass possible points of dispute between the Government and myself as representing the Congress, I have advised the owners of the motor-car and bicycle to remove them, if they chose to do so. So far as the press is concerned I am sorry to say that I must ask for due fulfilment of the terms of the Settlement. If the Government seriously question my interpretation I am quite willing to submit the question for decision to the Chief Justice of the High Court of Bombay or any other impartial authority.

Yours sincerely,

Encl. 1
R. M. MAXWELL, ESQ.
PRIVATE SECRETARY TO H. E. THE GOVERNOR OF BOMBAY
MAHABALESHWAR

A.I.C.C. File No. 4, 1931 Part I Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

398. LETTER TO DUNICHAND

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 6, 1931

DEAR LALA DUNICHAND,

I thank you for your letter. I shall await your analysis of all the cases.

Why was the meeting dispersed by the Magistrate? What was the ostensible cause and how was it dispersed?

Please let me know as soon as the Government publish their opinion about the Ludhiana outrage.

Yours sincerely,

LALA DUNICHAND
ADVOCATE
AMBALA

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-B, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

Vide also “Letter to H. W. Emerson”, 19-5-1931

286 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
399. LETTER TO K. V. VEL

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 6, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter of the 30th April last. My message is:

Let Japan study the non-violent movement of India and help her.

Yours sincerely,

K. V. VEL, ESQ.
POST BOX 9
AKASAKA, TOKYO (JAPAN)

From a photostat : S.N. 17238

400. LETTER TO JUGAL KISHORE

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 6, 1931

MY DEAR JUGAL KISHORE,

I have your letter. Happily, Acharya Kripalani is in Bardoli at the present moment. I have consulted him and if you personally approve of the suggestion, he is willing to be nominated by me in terms of the resolutions. The other name also he has suggested and I have accepted. It is Acharya Narendra Deva of Kashi Vidyapith. Both these are seasoned soldiers and have considerable experience in those matters. In view of these two names it is unnecessary for me just now to suggest names of experts at least at the present moment.

In the resolution, I suggest for better reading the following alterations: In the place of “on self-supporting basis” say “in order to make the institution self-supporting” and after the words “to collect”, add “and disburse”.

Yours sincerely,

PROF. JUGAL KISHORE
PREM MAHAVIDYALAYA
BRINDABAN

From a photostat : S.N. 17239
401. LETTER TO URMILA DEVI

DEAR SISTER,

I had your telegram and I have now your letter. Things in Bengal are certainly most deplorable but I do not know what can be done from here. I thought that arbitration was the only thing that can relieve the tension. What else could be done either by the Working Committee or me personally? Subhasbabu came here and gave Sardar Vallabhbhai a long indictment against Syt. Sen Gupta. Vallabhbhai has filed it hoping to be able to investigate the complaints when both the parties were present. Can you suggest any other way out of the difficulty?

SM. URMILA DEVI

40/1 RUP CHAND MUKHERJEE’S LANE
BHOWANIPUR, CALCUTTA

From a photostat : S.N. 17240

402. LETTER TO NILKANTA DAS

DEAR NILKANTA BABU,

I have your letter. I can well understand the position but in cases like the one you mentioned very little can be done just now. I can only say that if in spite of these provocations, peaceful picketing cannot be continued it should be suspended for a while. But propaganda of an intensive type should be taken by going to the people in their own homes.

CH. NILKANTA DAS
BHUBANESHWAR

From a microfilm : S.N. 17241
403. LETTER TO SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 6, 1931

DEAR SATIS BABU,

I have your letter and cutting from the Amrita Bazar Patrika. What can be done beyond suggesting arbitration in the place of the cumbersome procedure that will have to be adopted by the Working Committee if the matter has to be decided by it. Subhasbabu was here and gave Sardar Vallabhbhai a long list of complaints against Sen Gupta. Vallabhbhai could do nothing but said that when the matter came formally before the Working Committee, he will deal with the complaint. But when he and I began to receive wires from Bengal, I suggested local arbitration. Is there any other way besides such arbitration or decision by the Working Committee when the matter formally comes before it?

If you are well enough, you should come to Bombay and discuss the position at the All-India Spinners’ Association Committee meeting. I cannot advise Dr. Roy to come to Ahmedabad especially when several mill-owners are outside Ahmedabad.

If you have not seen the file of the Samachar of 1828 I think you ought to see it and verify the spinner’s letter yourself.

From a photostat : S.N. 17242

404 LETTER TO NANABHAI I. MASHRUWALA

BARDOLI,
June 6, 1931

BHAII NANABHAI

I have your letter. How can I ever come there? Ba is no longer fit to travel and visit any place. She gets inflammation of the mouth repeatedly. But it may be possible to send Swami and Devdas.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 6681. Also C.W. 4326. Courtesy : Kanubhai Mashruwala

1 Vide “In 1828”, 21-5-1931; also “Letter to Satis Chandra Das Gupta”, 2-6-1931
405. LETTER TO RAMDAS GANDHI

NAINTAL, U. P.

June 6, 1931

CHI. RAMDAS,

I am not able to write to you at all. Do not give whole milk to Sumitra. Add a measure of water to it. After adding water warm it and instead of sugar add honey to it. Her stomach should be very lightly massaged with oil every day. Mothers in these parts vigorously exercise their children. If Nimu or you do not know it, you should learn it. It is very useful. Laying the child flat on the back, raise and bend the legs so that the toes touch the forehead. The knees should not bend. Do you understand what I mean? The baby should be held tightly by the feet upside down for a minute or a half. The exercise should be given while putting the child to sleep or in the morning, on an empty stomach.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Motana Man, p. 60

406. WORKER-VILLAGE RATIO

How many workers would be needed to cover seven lakh villages? This question requires serious consideration. The British flag flies in each and every village, that is to say, all of them use the Government’s currency, and pay revenue in that currency. But the Congress has not been able to cover all the villages. Even its name has not reached every village, let alone its message. The Congress can reach every village through khadi, but we do not have enough interest in khadi for that purpose.

The reader will be surprised to know that, though the Government’s authority is recognized in every village, every one of them does not have a Patel, a talati or a constable. All that it has been able to do is to put a few villages under each talati and Patel. A talati should be an educated person, for he is supposed to keep accounts. He has, therefore, more villages under him than a Patel. If the Government does not have a talati and a Patel for every village, how can the Congress have a worker for every one of them. I know that the ratio of workers and villages should be exactly the opposite of that of talatis and Patels and villages. The Congress should have the capacity which the Government does not possess. But we must admit with shame that it is not so. The Government cannot afford to spend enough money to keep a talati and a Patel in each village. The Congress does not need to spend money. It can get volunteers but its name has not reached every corner so that it can have a volunteer in each village.

In these circumstances, it would be extravagance on the part of the Congress to have more than one worker per village. We should group the villages into blocks, each with a radius of ten miles. As our resources and the number of volunteers increase, we can increase the number of blocks but at present one volunteer should be able to cover ten miles from a central point. So the diameter of his working area would be twenty miles. But the volunteer will never have to walk twenty miles at a time. There is no rule that he must always sleep in the central village. Not only may he spend a night in any village within the limit of ten miles, but it would be actually his duty to spend a night in each of them by turn. There would be at least ten villages in such a block with a radius of ten miles. So, according to me, there would be one worker for every ten villages. Hence we require seventy thousand men and women volunteers to cover all the villages in the country. I said women volunteers. But really speaking we should count their numbers on a different basis. If, in early stages, two of them stay together then we would require more than seventy thousand volunteers, or the volunteers would have to be posted in different manner according to the number of women volunteers included in the total. It should be obvious that to post more than one worker per village would be a crime.

Let us now think each worker can do. He can easily:

1. collect children and teach them how to spin on the takli, card cotton, make taklis, and also teach them the three R’s; for this he can draw up a modest scheme and plan a curriculum;
2. look after the cleanliness of the villages and himself work to keep them clean;
3. give medicine to sick persons;
4. if there are quarrels among different groups and parties in a village, bring them together;
5. relieve the hardships of the untouchables, provide facilities for drinking water for them if they do not have any;
6. try to make the village self-reliant in regard to khadi;
7. Prepare a census of each village in his block, count the number of cattle in each under the heads of cows, she-buffaloes, bullocks, he-buffaloes and male and female calves, calculate average yield of buffalo’s milk and cow’s milk, prepare a census of the Antyajas and write a general description of their conditions, find out the area of each village, its crops, the amount of land revenue paid by it, its crafts and industries, the number of wells in it and note whether any fruits and babul trees grow in the villages or in the fields within its limits. Though I have mentioned this activity last, the volunteers should take it up first. This work does not require much time. But the volunteer who has gathered all this information would find his work much easier. He should record all this information in a small exercise book.

No volunteer should say that he cannot do all this work unaided in ten villages. Just as a school works only for a few hours daily, similarly we should not mind if it works only for one day in the week. It will not matter if the school in each village works on every tenth day. I have stated a extreme possibility. In actual practice, a newly-posted volunteer will immediately collect the statistics about the villages in his block and then train men and women volunteers in every village and assign them work according to their capacity. In this way he will become a supervisor-worker. On the days on which he is not present in a particular village, the local volunteers will carry on the work.

One quality is essential in such a worker and that is purity of character. If he is a slave of his eleven senses he will be able to do no work. These eleven senses are the five of perception, the five of action and the mind. If the mind is pure, then the ten senses automatically remain pure. If the mind is impure, then everything else will be impure. The senses of action are the arms, the legs, the mouth, and two private organs. The senses of knowledge are the skin, the sense of touch, the palate, the ear for hearing, the nose for smelling and the eyes for sight. Anyone who cannot control these should humbly refuse to become a volunteer. If he has become one and then later on finds that he is unable to control his senses, he should humbly resign. This is the right way if we want work to be done.

Some might say that this programme cannot be completed in a hundred years and we want swaraj just now. This objection has no force. We shall not have an abundance of workers when we get swaraj. Those who are workers now will run the country under swaraj. It is true that those who run the administration at present will be there when its control is handed over to the people. If, however, the Congress does not have the type of volunteers that I have suggested, then we shall lose control of the administration or it will become corrupt and there will be anarchy in the country. There is no reason to suppose that those who are hated now will become godlike overnight as soon as the control of the administration changes hands. Hence, as we sow now, so shall we reap. If we get sincere workers, the programme that I have chalked out can begin today. “Let us first have seventy thousand volunteers and map out the country into blocks of ten miles each and then we shall see what work to take up.” This is not the right way to start work. If we approach the task thus, we shall succeed in doing nothing.

The right method is this: Gujarat should start immediately. If work cannot be started in the whole of Gujarat, it should be started in one or two districts, or even talukas, and if even that is not possible, then the few workers in the different parts in Gujarat should begin as I have suggested and leave whatever is not essential or cannot be done well. They should start whatever they can do. If there are more workers than one at one place, they should disperse themselves. If they decide to stay together where they are, they should do so after considering whether that is necessary. They should not deceive themselves or the people through mental or physical lethargy.

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan, 7-6-1931
407. NOTES

HINDUS’ SHAME

In Dakor on 22nd May, 1931, there was a meeting of Bhangis of which Thakkar Bapa has sent me a report. I give below its substance:

About 1,500 Bhangis from 150 villages had gathered. They had erected a mandap1 of canvas with the ground also covered with canvas in which they could hold their meetings and sleep at night. The meetings were held in this mandap during the day and at night they slept in it. But no one would give them utensils for cooking and they could not get drinking water. The water of the Gomati pond is so dirty that there are municipal signboards at numerous spots warning people not to use it for drinking. But Bhangis can drink it! How could they drink such dirty water at a gathering like this? One Muslim gentleman took pity on them. He gave them utensils, helped them in cooking and gave them water too.

No Hindu of Dakor, which is a centre of pilgrimage, felt ashamed at this or took pity on the Bangis. The guests had come from distant places, but could get no water, no utensils and no food though there was an abundance of everything in the town. The women volunteers of Dakor could have cooked for them. It was the duty of the Mahajan2 in Dakor to supply water to these people. They failed in this duty and dimmed the luster of Hinduism.

“But this sort of thing happens everywhere and no one cares for Bhangis. Was it the duty of Hindus of Dakor specially on this occasion to do all that?” Yes, it was. The fact that one’s forefathers have been committing a particular sin gives one no right to go on committing it. As the days pass, the awakening among the Antyajas increases, this evil in Hinduism is being recognized and more and more caste Hindus feel ashamed of the practice. The person who drafted the report is a Hindu and the person who sent it is also a Hindu. All of us want to implement the resolution on rights passed by the Congress. Whatever may have

1 Covered enclosure
2 Traditional representative body looking after the affairs of a community or a professional or business group happened before now, even caste Hindus will not tolerate now the kind of injustice that was shown in Dakor. There will be no distinction between Antyajas and others under swaraj. Let us, therefore, wake up.

THINK CAREFULLY OVER THIS

There is a village named Bharthari in Thasara taluka. There a person named Dhanjibhai, an Antyaja, is trying hard to reform other Antyajas. From the report that I have received about his work I see that he silently bears the hardship which he has to suffer because of his activities. One of the reform which he is trying to persuade the Antyajas to adopt is to give up eating carrion and to this end to give up the work of disposal of dead cattle. To persuade them to stop eating carrion is of course good, but to persuade them to give up the occupation of disposing of dead cattle seems to me a very harmful move. I think myself the occupation is sacred, and certainly most useful. It is sacred because it helps in preserving sanitation. If dead animals were left unattended, the air would be polluted, diseases would spread and the country’s wealth would be wasted. Cattle serve the people after they die as much as they do while alive. We use their skin, bones, flesh and guts for many purposes. If we use living cattle properly and use the hide, etc., of dead cattle scientifically, their value would increase so much that it would not be profitable to slaughter them.

I would, therefore, suggest to reformers that they should not persuade Bhangis and Chamars to leave their occupation but they should, on the contrary, give them proper knowledge about their work. This requires training. It is only in our country that this occupation is considered low. In the West we find even millionaires engaged in it. If instead of becoming clerks, after graduation, young men learn the Chamar’s work, learn how to skin dead cattle and how to make use of the other parts, then the present drain of crores of rupees to foreign countries because of our ignorance in this matter would stop and Chamars would no longer look upon their occupation as low. We shall be able to eradicate untouchability not when the Chamars give up their work but only when the Hindus realize their sin and when the Antyajas rid themselves of some evils which have entered their lives.

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan, 7-6-1931

[From Gujarati]
Vithaldashbai complains from his sick-bed that khadi stocks are accumulating. The workers of Gujarat write to inform me that because of this they are forced to give less work to spinners. This complaint regarding khadi is a matter of shame for us. Those who wear khadi know that by doing so they help women who are among the poorest in the country. If all of us understand this fact, the demand for khadi will never go down. As we always get the cash value of a currency note printed on it, so we should always be able to get money for khadi at the price fixed by us. Khadi is a sort of hundi drawn by the poor. There should be men and women in cities who should always accept such hundis. And so long as this hundi is available, no one should touch any other hundi.

If I can have my way and if people co-operate, khadi will always be sold at a fixed price. The price of cotton may vary, but if the women who spin and the weavers are paid at uniform rates in their respective provinces and the rates of payment for the other processes are also uniform, there should be no difficulty in having a fixed price for every variety of khadi. Since we do not possess the requisite honesty, efficiency of organization and sympathy for the poor, the prices of khadi have been changing. However, anyone who takes the slightest interest in khadi knows that in every province the prices have declined from what they were ten years ago. I have already pointed out in these columns that, of the khadi produced in the Meerut Ashram, where it is manufactured in large quantities, those varieties which previously cost one rupee now generally cost less than six annas. This does not mean that the women spinners are paid less. It only means that the workers have acquired greater skill in all the processes of khadi manufacture. The quality of spinning has improved and, in consequence, the weavers’ work has become easier. This has made it possible to reduce the rate of payment to weavers without reducing their total earnings. It has been possible to bring about this happy result of reduction in prices because a philanthropic body is organizing khadi work. Thanks to this fact, the quality of khadi has progressively improved and the prices have come down. There is considerable scope for still further improvement in quality and reduction in prices and this will happen as more and more people patronize khadi. It is evident that, as the demand for khadi increases, a larger number of people and more skilled people will take interest in it and the quality will improve and the prices decrease. The shareholders in the poor man’s company are not limited to a small number, but are the thirty crores in the country. Then why should there be any difficulty in selling khadi? But the difficulty is a fact and it is, therefore, fruitless to ask that question. It would be wiser to discover ways of selling it. The following means suggest themselves:

1 Vide “Notes” sub-title Gandhi Ashram, Meerut, 4-6-1931

1. To go round hawking khadi. At all places women should do this only on fixed days, so that they will not have to go round every day. It would be enough if they give some hours on some days in the week. As in the West the wives of millionaires visit hospitals, etc., on certain days in the week, so the women here should go round hawking khadi.

2. Leaflets giving a list of the varieties of khadi and their prices should be distributed to every household.

3. Talks about khadi should be arranged in all residential streets.

I have only given a few suggestions for guidance. But those who love khadi and have resourceful brains will be able to think out many other ways of selling the accumulated stocks of khadi.

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan, 7-6-1931
409. USE ANOTHER NAME

An Antyaja friend writes :¹

Such a feeling is natural in this age of awakening. A person does not like the name which is applied to him in contempt, though its origin may have been quite innocent. Formerly the name Antyaja was not felt as expressing contempt. The names Dhed and Bhangi were disliked. I think the term ‘Dalit’ was first used by the late Swami Shraddhanand. Now it seems that name also is not liked. This real explanation is that as long as the poison of untouchability exists in our society, any name that may be given will probably come to be disliked after some time. Hence the right thing to do is to get rid of that poison and for this we need the co-operation of the Antyajas men and women. It is of course the duty of the Hindus to get rid of this poison unconditionally. Atonement for one’s sin need not depend on any condition being fulfilled. But however sincere the efforts of Hindus to atone for their sin, the evils which have crept into the lives of the untouchables because of the sin of Hindus can be eradicated only by their own efforts. They will require the help of caste Hindus in their efforts. They are getting it slowly and its tempo is likely to increase. But even after taking all this into account, ultimately the Antyajas will have to rely on their own efforts. Though it is thus necessary to attack the root cause, if a better word than Antyaja or Dalit occurs to anyone he may send it to me.

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan, 7-6-1931

410. A SUPERSTITION

I give below the substance of what one cultured and very pious mother writes: “After my son’s death I have left off milk and ghee. I live on rice, dal, roti, and buttermilk. I have lost interest in life but I pass my time by devoting myself to service in one way or another. I read Ramayana and other books, but deep inside the memory of my dear son continues to pain me.”

¹ The letter is not translated here. The correspondent had expressed his sense of humiliation at the word ‘Antyaja’ and requested Gandhiji to coin some new word to denote his community. For the choice of the word ‘Harijan’, vide “Notes”, 2-8-1931, sub-title, “Harijan”.

298 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
This mother’s health was already weak and now it has become weaker. It is not certain even whether she will survive or not. As I have summarized the mother’s letter, I also give the substance of my reply to her.

To mourn the death of either son or husband is meaningless and shows our ignorance. This should not be dismissed as merely wise talk; it is a truth to be pondered over till it sinks into our heart and to be acted upon. Since death is certain for all, the only question is whether it comes today or tomorrow. Why, then, should we grieve over anyone’s death? It is only the body which dies. That is its nature and therefore there is no cause for wonder when it dies. It is certain that the soul which dwells in the body never dies, it is immortal. When we know this as certain truth, why should we grieve over death?

Even if we assume that we are bound to be pained by death, is fasting or restriction of food a remedy for our grief? Whom does it help? The one who is dead? And if so, does it help the body which has perished, or the immortal soul? The body that used to eat is now ashes or is being eaten up by worms. The soul neither eats nor drinks. Why then should the mother or the wife restrict her food?

In other words, the mother or wife restricting her food has no effect on the body or the soul of the dead person. If we desire the welfare of the departed soul or wish to keep his memory alive for ever, we shall not be able to fulfil our wish by fasting but shall fulfil both aims by retaining his virtues in ourselves. We can also contribute to perpetuating his memory by making donations to worthy causes.

Does fasting or control over food then serve no purpose? In this case at any rate they serve none. They can be undertaken within certain limits, either for the purpose of self-purification or for curing a disease. We shall not discuss the second possibility. Control of the palate, then, aims at self-purification. Restriction of food or fasting, therefore, has this limit. Fasting is not the right way of atoning for a lie. The right way of doing so is to take a vow always to speak the truth in future, to renounce whatever serves as a temptation to us to tell a lie. If, however, a person cannot control his palate, the remedy is fasting or restriction of diet. Anyone who has overcome all cravings of the palate eats only for keeping his body alive. His diet is restricted to a few items and the quantity also is measured. Such men and women take food as medicine. If they practise further self-denial, they commit a sin because, if they do not eat, their bodies would become weak. The body is an instrument of service. Anyone who weakens that instrument is a thief. Such persons number hardly a few among crores. I have used this illustration only to explain my meaning.

1 Vide “Letter to Hemprabha Das Gupta”, 2-6-1931

We ordinary human beings daily indulge our palate. It is, therefore, necessary that we should occasionally fast and restrict our diet. But this should be done only to kill the cravings of the palate. To do it because of someone’s death or for some similar reason is a form of self-deception and may even be sinful.

[From Gujarati]

_Navajivan_, 7-6-1931

---

411. A LETTER

BARDOLI,

June 7, 1931

Sardar Garda met me at Swaraj Ashram, Bardoli, on April 25th in the company of Sir Cowasji Jehangir, Syt. K. F. Nariman, Sjt. Vimadalal, Rao Bahadur Bhim Bhai and another Parsi friend. He was brought by Sir Cowasji Jehagir and other friends in connection with the forfeited land belonging to Bardoli peasants which he had purchased during the Civil Disobedience Movement. He complained about the treatment he had received at the hands of the people. I told him that whatever complaints he might make I would undertake to investigate and give him satisfaction. All the friends persuaded him to return the said land. He insisted not only on the price he had paid for the land being returned to him, namely, Rs. 6000 in addition which he said he had spent on the land. Sir Cowasji assured him that sum also would be forthcoming. He then said that he would most probably decide to restore the land for the purchase price plus the said sum of Rs. 6000, but that he would have to consult his people and give a final reply which he would do inside of two days. In the course of the conversation Sardar Garda said that the land he had bought was fully worth four lakhs of rupees and that he would not have bought it but for the pressure that was brought to bear upon him on the part of the authorities. This, of course, he said in confidence. I asked him then whether I could announce to the people that most probably he would agree to restore the land, and he said “certainly”. Two days after, Sardar Vallabhbhai received a letter from Rao Bahadur Bhim Bhai saying that Sardar Garda had passed a note to him to the effect that he had decided to restore the land for the above sum. The enclosed is a copy of the letter passed by Sardar Garda to Rao Bahadur Bhim Bhai. The letter was also published in the papers and the agreement was duly announced to the people concerned. On May 7th I received a letter from Sardar Garda as per copy to which I sent a reply hereto attached. I also attach the further correspondence since passed between Sardar Garda and myself.

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-C, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

412. LETTER TO K. B. BHADRAPUR

AS AT SABARMATI,

June 7, 1931

DEAR MR. BHADRAPUR,

I write this letter in connection with the present Mukhi1 of Ras. I discussed the question of his removal and the appointment of the old Mukhi with Mr. Perry more than once and I had hoped that by this time at least the Ras Mukhi would have been removed. The this time at least the Ras Mukhi would been removed. The matter is now becoming urgent as a deputation on behalf of the non-Dharala inhabitants of Ras waited on me yesterday and complained that life was becoming unbearable for them there. I enclose herewith particulars of destruction that is alleged to have gone on in Ras during the past fortnights. They mentioned also that personal assaults were added to the injury to property. It is not suggested that the Mukhi himself has personally done these things but it is suggested that they have been done with his connivance, if not instigation. It will be readily admitted that if the statements made in the memorandum hereto attached are at all true, it won’t be possible for the non-Dharala population to proceed with the cultivation of their fields as soon as rains commence. Suggestion has already been made that the Mukhiship should be divided into three parts, each part being held by a different person. I need hardly say this will not do. Either the present Mukhi is an undesirable person or he is not. If he is an

---

1 Village headman undesirable person, in accordance with the terms of the Settlement and the admission made by the Commissioner, undesirable Mukhis should be removed. And in view of the fact that there is a conviction for theft against the present Mukhi of Ras, his removal is surely overdue. This I ask irrespective of and without prejudice to my contention that appointments of Mukhis for definite terms are not permanent according to the meaning of the Settlement. I shall therefore be obliged if you will kindly let me know as early as possible whether it is the intention of the Government to remove this Mukhi and protect the life and property of the inhabitants of Ras.

Yours sincerely,

K. B. BHADRUPUR, ESQ.
COLLECTOR OF KAIRA DT.
KAIRA

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-C, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

413. LETTER TO THOMAS B. LEE
AS AT SABARMATI,
June 7, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter. As a matter of fact I have got ample Christian Science literature with me. You will not mind my saying that somehow or other the message of Christian Science does not appeal to me. I met so many Christian scientists in South Africa. Their conversations also failed to convince me. And why do you say that the discovery that there is really no life or sensation in the body is the most important discovery of any kind that has ever been made? As a matter of fact the statement is not a complete proposition. By the body is evidently meant body without life is without sensation and every Hindu child is taught that from childhood. But I must not enter into a discussion. I felt that your long letter was entitled to a reasoned reply from me.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

THOMAS B. LEE, ESQ.
STERLING RADIO CO.
KANSAS CITY, MO.

From a photostat : S.N. 17248
414. LETTER TO MADHAV R. JOSHI

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 7, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. A man of God makes no distinction between individual and individual. He will bestow his affection impartially upon all, whether wife or sister or mother, brother or stranger, friend of foe and he will put himself last. After serving everybody he will serve himself. And this can only be done by having faith in God and following the light that He may give one in answer to prayer.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. MADHAV RAMKRISHNA JOSHI
C/O DISTRICT CONGRESS COMMITTEE’S OFFICE
AGRA ROAD, DHULIA (W. KHANDESH)
From a photostat : S.N. 17249

415. LETTER TO THAPPAN NAIR

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 7, 1931

MY DEAR THAPPAN,

I have your letter. You should diligently follow the columns of Young India. They might help you. So far as your immediate question is concerned, if you feel that there is no work for you there you are at liberty to return to the Ashram. Many have done so.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. THAPPAN NAIR
CONGRESS CAMP
PALKHAT (MALABAR)

From a microfilm : S.N. 17250
416. LETTER TO H. V. HODSON

AS AT SABARMATI,

June 7, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I thank you for your letter. If I do come to London I hope we shall meet and if I do not succeed in coming, you will please believe me when I tell you that the failure will be due not to any want of will or effort on my part but to circumstances wholly beyond my control.

Yours sincerely,

H. V. HODSON, ESQ.
10 WOOD LANE
HIGHGATE, LONDON, N. 6

From a photostat : S.N. 17251

417. LETTER TO M. I. DAVID

AS AT SABARMATI,

June 7, 1931

DEAR MR. DAVID,

I thank you for your letter of 9th May. I am most closely watching your activity not in terms of the newspapers but its reaction upon the communal spirit. Solution of the communal question may be beyond the powers of Conciliation Committees, but if they tend to promote peace it would be a very big step forward. You are also interesting me in another activity of yours, bee-keeping and honey-making. I would love to see the industry of bee-keeping becoming universal in India. The only question is whether it is possible to make bee-keeping profitable. I tried to make some experiments but I have failed hitherto. You will deserve the gratitude of people if you can devise method whereby poor people can take to this industry.

Yours sincerely,

M. I. DAVID, ESQ.
4 QUEENS ROAD
FORT, BOMBAY

From a photostat : S.N. 17252
418. LETTER TO ESTHER MENON

AS AT SABARMATI,

June 7, 1931

After having kept me waiting for many long months you have at last written to me. What a bad things that Menon has not yet got his diploma. I had a letter from a mutual friend saying that you were disheartened over this failure. This is unworthy of you as I have known you. No failure, no adversity should dishearten you who have a living faith in God and his goodness. We do not know that every failure is a matter for sorrow nor do we know that every adversity is an infliction. Do we not often find that prosperity and success mean the undoing of people whereas failure and adversity chasten them?

I do not know that I am going to London. If I do, I will of course love to go to Denmark and if I went there I should not like to miss you. But it is no speculating on a highly problematical thing.

I do hear from Maria, now and again.

After dictating this I came upon another letter which mentionns you more intimately. This letter is from Dr. Henning Dalsgaard. In that letter he says you are cheerful but he asks me concrete proposition. Have you any such in view? If you have, thing, you know also you can rely upon my doing it.

MRS. ESTHER MENON

M. QUEST HOUSE
SELLY OAK
N. BIRMINGHAM (ENGLAND)

From photostat : S.N. 17254
419. LETTER TO DR. HENNING DALSGAARD

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 7, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have read with great deal of interest your note at the back of the formal letter from the International People’s College. You will see from my reply to Prof. Manniche that my going to London itself is problematical and going to Denmark still more so.

I would like you to be more explicit about Menon. But now that you have mentioned him I am writing to Esther about his requirements.

Yours sincerely,

DR. HENNING DALSGAARD
LECTURER IN POLITICAL SCIENCE
ELSNORE, DENMARK

From a photostat : S.N. 17253

420. LETTER TO RAMSEVAK SHUKLA

June 7, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. You may send the particulars of your discovery with full explanation.

Yours sincerely,

From a microfilm : S.N. 17255

421. LETTER TO SHRI RAM SHARMA

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 7, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. The matters discussed in your letter, you should really discuss with the Provincial Congress Committee officials in the first instance so that a uniform policy can be adopted. I can only discuss general principles in the pages of Young India,

1 Of a new kind of spindle

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
and take concrete cases of injustice to the Government. Beyond that, you will admit, it is not possible for me to go.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. SHRI RAM SHARMA
GENERAL SECRETARY, DISTRICT CONGRESS COMMITTEE
ROHTAK (PUNJAB)

From a microfilm: S.N. 17256

422. LETTER TO N. P. RAGHAVAN

June 7, 1931

MY DEAR RAGHAVAN,

I was delighted to hear from you after so long. I hope Titus is better. Thappan¹ says you are all weary there and not wanted. If such is the case you may return to the Ashram.

Yours

BAPU

SJT. N.P. RAGHAVAN
KHADI VASTRALAYA
PAYYANUR
N. MALABAR

From a photostat: C. W. 10865. Courtesy: N. P. Raghavan

¹ Thappan Nair
423. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

June 8, 1931

MY DEAR AMTUL,

Never mind your incorrect English. But you must soon write Hindi. If you write a clear Urdu hand I can read it. You must cultivate a brief style.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat : G.N. 240

424. LETTER TO PADMA

June 8, 1931

CHI. PADMA,

I have your letter. It is good news indeed to hear that your health is improving steadily. Have you now given up the idea of going to U.P.P.? Take plenty of rest and get well.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 6120. Also C.W. 3472. Courtesy : Prabhudas Gandhi

425. LETTER TO SHARDA C. SHAH

Silence Day, June 8, 1931

CHI. SHARDA,

Your handwriting may be said to be good this time. You can still improve it. How can you not think of what to write? Can you not write about what you did and what you said during the week?

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original : C.W. 9903. Courtesy : Shardabehn G. Chokhawala
426. LETTER TO KANTI PAREKH

Silence Day, June 8, 1931

CHI. KANTI,

Here is the reply to your letter. The word ‘love’ has two meanings: one, ignorant attachment, and, two, non-violence. Love between man and woman mostly takes the form of ignorant attachment and, therefore, it is undesirable. It cannot become all-embracing love. If a man marries many women or a woman many men, the world would be destroyed. Only that love which takes the form of non-violence can become all-embracing, and anybody who wishes to cultivate such love must renounce the other love, born of ignorant attachment, which a man and a woman feel for each other. The wheel of worldly life is kept moving, and will be kept moving, by a love which is a mixture of the two kinds. It helps human beings to satisfy their own needs and also to serve the race. What I have written pertains to love in its purest form. If we are clear in our minds about the ideal, it will be possible on its basis to formulate proper norms for practical life. If we base the ideal on the prevailing practice, we would lower both the ideal and the practice. If you do not follow anything in this, ask me again. I am returning your letter herewith.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 6269
CHI. NARANDAS,

I got three of your letters together. I shall start this evening for Bombay. Pandit Jawaharlal has come here today to see me. He will return with me. Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan is still here. Devdas has written a fine article about him for Young India. Read it. What happened to Liladhār? If we can help him in any way, we should. As for Vithal, I will write to him.

Bhagwanji’s problem, we may take it, has been solved for the present. He is not at peace with himself and remains much excited. Yes, I have written to Chhaganlal and told him that those who do not do proper work outside should return to the Ashram. Surendra will explain to you my letter to him. You may even get a copy.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

I will leave Bombay on the 11th and reach Borsad on the evening of the 12th. If, therefore, you address the 11th post to Surat, I shall get it there.

Chi. Indu was there, and is now returning. He will arrive there on the 10th. Take care of him. He is Kanti Parekh’s brother. He is of an affectionate nature, and also loves fun. He is a straightforward boy. Exact hard work from him. In any case, see that he studies.

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—9 : Shri Narandas Gandhine, Pt. I, p. 272
428. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

ON WAY TO BOMBAY,

June 8, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

Credit to the khadi account the sum of Rs. 543-4-0 received from Ankleshwar on 1-4-1930 and send the amount to Shri Chhotubhai Gandhi at Ankleshwar to be spent on khadi work. Request him to send an account of how the money is spent.

Chhotubhai’s address: Taluka Samiti.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./I

429. LETTER TO MANGALA S. PATEL

Silence Day, June 8, 1931

CHI. MANGALA,

You must always write as neatly as you have written this time. If all of you improve your handwriting, mine will automatically improve. And how nice it would be if my handwriting improved!

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C.W. 11095. Courtesy: Pushpa Naik
430. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

June 8, 1931

BHAJ GHANSHYAMDAS.

I have your letter, as also the letter to Schuster1. I shall go through it. The situation is already delicate and it will grow more delicate still. Some good result can come out of it if we work for the larger good.

Sen Gupta has agreed to arbitration. He has given up the idea of postponing the election. Anyway, I am reaching Bombay tomorrow and trust that both of them2 will come.

BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: C.W. 7889. Courtesy: G. D. Birla

431. SPEECH AT BOMBAY

June 10, 1931

Prabhat Pheris were resumed this morning. About fifty members assembled at Choupatty at 5.30 a.m. today and led by Mr. K. F. Nariman, President, Bombay Congress Committee, went first to Mani Bhavan, Gandhiji’s residence, to receive his blessings.

Gandhiji addressed the processionists from a balcony. He said that they should finish their daily rounds before sunrise, singing selected songs of prayer and devotion to God and the Motherland. He said no objectionable songs, inconsistent with the Congress creed, should be sung.

The Hindu, 10-6-1931

---

1 Sir George Schuster, then Finance Member of the Viceroy’s Council
2 J. M. Sen Gupta and Subhas Chandra Bose
432. NOTES

WHO CAN BE CONGRESS OFFICE HOLDER?

A Sindhi correspondent asks:

1. Whether a man dealing in foreign cigarettes and tobacco can be a president of the Congress Committee?
2. Whether persons dealing in foreign cloth can be vice-president and treasurer of the Congress Committee?
3. Whether a person connected with foreign-cloth dealers can be secretary of the Congress Committee?

These are bad questions. If the correspondent had said whether such and such a person should be, I could have given my opinion for what it might be worth. But when he asks whether a particular type of person can be officer it betrays ignorance of the democratic character of the constitution of the Congress. Even a drunkard and a rake can become president of Congress Committee or a secretary if his constituents elect him to that office. But one may assume that so long as the constituents are sober and pure, they will not elect a drunkard or a rake. Similarly if they are believers in out-and-out swadeshi only, they will not elect anyone who deals in foreign cloth or such foreign goods as are now manufactured in India. And so far as things injurious to the nation are concerned, as for instance intoxicating drinks and drugs, Congressmen will make no distinction between foreign and swadeshi goods. All injurious things must be regarded as taboo whether they are foreign or home-made.

COARSE MILL CLOTH AS KHADI

Complaints are being received from several quarters, Madras, Bengal and Bombay Presidencies and elsewhere that coarse mill-cloth is being sold as khadi and that though since the understanding with the Congress, khadi labels are not used by mill-owners, in their invoices and otherwise, coarse cloth is shown as khadi. If the information is correct, it is clearly a breach of the agreement with the Congress. Mills ought to be satisfied with the profits they are making by reason of the Congress campaign, but if they will greedily and unlawfully appropriate the name ‘khadi’ somehow or other and at some stage or other for their wares, they will be following the example of the miser who, in the attempt to get a cocoanot free of charge, lost his life.
Swaraj Bhavan Hospital

Sjt. Mohanlal Nehru writes: ‘

This is apart from the collections in Nainital which will appear in this column in due course.

Young India, 11-6-1931

433. My Faith

A Bangali correspondent who gives his name and address even for publication if necessary has written a long letter which I condense as follows:

Much has been said about Bhagat Singh and his comrades, yet even now I find great difficulty in appreciating the wisdom of passing the resolution at the Karachi Congress.

I am afraid it will not be possible for me to explain to you properly the different peculiar and surreptitious ways in which your remarks about Bhagat Singh and the Karachi Resolution extolling him are being exploited here by some interested politicians to serve their own purpose and under-mine your influence.

1. They accuse you for the niggardly way in which the resolution had been worded by you. These people are trying to impress upon the minds of the young men that you really had no sincere sympathy for those unfortunate men and that you gave your support to the resolution and expressed your admiration for Bhagat Singh and his comrades only being prevailed upon by the Navajuvanwallas, whose strong agitation you could not resist, and you wanted to placate Pandit Jawaharlal.

2. They question your integrity and sincerity and try to belittle you (and your cause) by surreptitiously propagating an idea in Bengal that while you gave your active support to the resolution about Bhagat Singh at Karachi you severely criticized the late Deshbandhu Das for his responsibility in carrying out an exactly similar resolution at Faridpur Conference praising

---

1 The letter, containing a list of donors, is not reproduced here. For the appeal, vide “The Allahabad Congress Hospital an Appeal”, 14-5-1931
Gopinath Saha' who lost his life on the gallows under exactly similar circumstances; and in this they say you are not immune from provincial bias. They are taking every opportunity to undermine your influence in Bengal by appealing to the sentiment of local patriotism. They say that many Bengal youths sacrificed their lives even within this very year for the same cause for which Bhagat Singh and his comrades died. Among those who thus died in Bengal there were Benoy Bose and his comrade, there were the Chittagong raiders—the twenty-one lads, who died fighting bravely against the British troops on the Jalallabad Hills whose deeds were much more courageous and romantic than you would imagine, but how strange—you did not find romance there: not a word of sympathy passed from your lips! The insidious appeal made to their sentiment of local patriotism easily estranges them from you and your path of non-violence.

I have already expressed my doubts as to the propriety of my having drafted and sponsored the Bhagat Singh resolution not because it was wrong in principle but for the misinterpretation it has lent itself to. But the reader must know that it was neither the fear of the Navajuvans nor my love for Pandit Jawaharlal that prompted me to initiate the resolution. Not that I should be ashamed of yielding to Navajuvans or placating Jawaharlal. I should be foolish if I did not yield to Navajuvans, if yielding advanced the interest of the country and involved no sacrifice of principle. And I should go a very long way to please Jawaharlal and retain his affection which I have the privilege of possessing in abundance. But there was no prompting required in this case. I had interested myself in the movement for the commutation of the death sentence on Bhagat Singh and his comrades. I had put my whole being into the task. I had therefore to study the life of the principal actor in the tragedy. I had to come in contact with his devoted father and those who were attached to Bhagat Singh not for his deed but for his character. I was thus drawn to the resolution in the natural course. I am too sensitive not to be moved by circumstances demanding sympathy.

Therefore had I found myself impelled to interest myself in any of the Bengali youths and had fancied myself in possession of

---

1 Vide “Notes”, sub-title Rabbi May.
influence which I could exercise in their behalf, I should have with equal zest plunged myself into their case. I regard myself as incapable of having any provincial bias. Bengal is as dear to me as the Punjab. And I owe a special debt to Bengal for the inspiration it gave me in my youth. It is true that Deshbandhu and I differed as to the emphasis in the matter of Gopinath Saha resolution.

I do not know that my resolution\(^1\) on Gopinath Saha differed in substance from the Karachi Resolution. But the reader should know that whatever our differences, Deshbandhu and I always remained friends. Indeed towards the end of his all too short life, we came much nearer each other even in our ideals and methods of working towards them.

I should therefore be sorry to discover that there was any secret propaganda against me in Bengal. I have many precious co-workers in Bengal. I want the number to grow. I know the value of the cooperation of the youth of Bengal. I need it for their sakes, for the sake of the country they love so well, but sometimes, alas, blindly. They must not by their unwarranted prejudice deny themselves the service of a true friend. If I have any influence over the youth of the country, it is a treasure I want to use for gaining the freedom of the motherland. I am therefore glad that my correspondent has given me the opportunity of stating my position. But whether I retain my hold on the youth of Bengal or any other province or I do not, I must proclaim my creed from the house-top. Freedom of India’s starving millions is attainable only through Truth and Ahimsa.

Young India, 11-6-1931

\(^1\) Vide “The Acid Test”, 19-6-1924
434. A CORRECTION

My attention has been drawn to an unfortunate error that crept into my advice to the kisans of U.P.¹ in Young India 28th May last, p. 127, line 53. The line reads “as a general rule less than 8 annas or 4 annas as the case may be”. It should read “12 annas” instead of “4 annas”. I am sorry for the slip. I hope however no one was misled by the slip. The preceding lines left no room for doubt.

Young India, 11-6-1931

435. VIRUS OF UNTOUCHABILITY

All lovers of Hinduism will read the following with painful interest:²

Sjt. Subanagounder deserves warm congratulations for his bravery and pertinacity. The only advice I can give him is that he should take all risks in protecting the untouchables of his village and yet bear no ill-will to the villagers. He will find in the end that the villagers will cease to worry him. They will at first mistake his goodness for weakness and then perceive the strength lying behind his goodness. For they will soon find their mistake when they see that whilst he is gentle and forbearing towards them he is firm like a rock in his action in protecting the untouchables. As time passes, the villagers will forfeit all sympathy and Sjt. Subanagounder will gain the active sympathy and help of the public. The only condition is that he must be prepared to sacrifice everything, suffer even his fields to lie fallow if the sinful boycott by the villagers succeeds in scaring labour away from him. It is some consolation that he has four friends who stand by him. But he should be prepared to carry out his resolution, even if he loses these friends. For I am sure that he will lose only to gain. God loses these friends. For I am sure that he will lose only to gain. God sometimes does try to the uttermost those whom He wishes to bless.

Young India, 11-6-1931

¹ Vide “To the Kisans of the U. P.”, 23-5-1931
² This letter is not reproduced here. It described how K. K. Subanagounder of Coimbatore District was excommunicated and harassed for having allowed two untouchables to take water from his well.
436. MEANING OF GRINDING POVERTY

The Deshseva Mandal of Sind has published a little pamphlet on the economic condition of the Bhils of Sind. It consists of two articles written by Sjt. Jairamdas Doulatram after a careful study on the spot of the condition of the Bhils living in Tharparker district of Sind. The tract is a desert. “The profession of agriculture in the desert”, writes Sjt. Jairamdas, “is nothing but a stupendous struggle against nature.”

“The average net yield of cultivation in that tract is not more than Rs. 5 per acre. It is not every year that he (the cultivator) cultivates the whole area.” “With a sandy soil, low rainfall, locust pest, and cheaply priced crops, the khatedar can rarely keep his head above water.” “I have come across all types of Bhils, those, very few ones, who are for the time being out of debt, those who are in permanent debt and live a semi-starved life and lastly those who are living in hopeless pauperism. I cannot do better than give to the reader a few hard facts about specific villages.”

These men should for years have revenue-free land. It is for people such as these that I pleaded for free salt and I know that at the end of our discussions, it became a matter of pleasure for Lord Irwin to make the concession regarding salt. And I hope that the workers throughout the land will bring the message of free salt to the semi-starved villagers and discover all the salt areas which though not good enough for mass production are good enough for village use. It is to these people that the charkha brings hope and happiness. Village economics is different from industrial economics. Human economics is not the same as that of exploitation of mere dead matter.

Young India, 11-6-1931

---

1 Land-holder
2 The extract in question is not reproduced here.
437. AGRARIAN SITUATION IN ASSAM

Assam is in the grip of dire economic distress. From everywhere, from North Lakhimpur and Sibsagar, from Darrang and Nowgong, from Goalpara and Kamrup, come the tales of misery and woe of the ryots for this scarcity. Hundreds of people, generally immigrants from Mymensingh, . . . have been flocking to the towns of Goalpara and Dhubri for begging, with nothing to cover their loins excepting half-tattered pieces. . . .

In Goalpara and Sibsagar, Nowgong and North Lakhimpur there has been repeated failure of crops owing to the annual visitation of floods for some years past. An earthquake also came in as another visitation in July last. . . .

Affected by this economic depression, from everywhere comes the cry for remission of land revenue. . . .

It seems that the Government has not yet been able to shake off the Civil Disobedience complex from their minds. . . . They have taken their inability to pay land revenue to mean their unwillingness to do it and are seeking to test it till the last day of kist by all sorts of indirect pressure. . . .

The foregoing report has been received from the Assam Provincial Congress Committee. If the report is accurate, and there is no reason to doubt its accuracy, it is a clear case for remission.

Young India, 11-6-1931

438. UNDER SWARAJ

A Brahmin correspondent from Madras writes:

During his tour Sjt. Sen Gupta said that Swaraj Government would pass legislation to crush Brahmins and also referred to resolutions of the Karachi Congress. On account of that the Brahmin minority has begun to be highly restless and it has also created a sense of fear in the minds of the orthodox Hindus. Therefore please let me know what exactly you and the Congress mean by

1. The words of the resolution dealing with untouchability.
2. What exactly you and the Congress mean by saying therein that under the Swaraj Government the Government will observe religious neutrality. . . .

I do not believe Sjt. Sen Gupta said that Swaraj Government would “crush the Brahmins”. The congress resolution is clear. The

---

1. Of which only excerpts are reproduced above
2. Only extracts are reproduced here.
correspondent is unnecessarily nervous about the future which lies as much in his hands as in Sjt. Sen Gupta’s or mine. Let it also be remembered that the Congress resolution is not yet a part of the constitution. When it is, its interpretation will not rest with me or any single individual. It will rest with the courts duly established by law.

But I gladly give my opinion as to what is likely to be the interpretation of the Congress resolution on religious neutrality and untouchability. It is bound to be a part of any future constitution as there is no difference of opinion on it. Indeed, even the correspondent seems to concede as much as the Congress wants. Religious neutrality means that the State will have no State religion nor a system of favouritism. There will be no untouchability. The ‘untouchables’ will have the same rights as any other. But a Brahmin will not be made to touch anybody. He will be free to make himself untouchable and have his own well, his own temple, his own school and whatever else he can afford, so long as he uses these things without being a nuisance to his neighbours. But he will not be able, as some do now, to punish untouchables for daring to walk on public streets or using wells. There will be under swaraj no such scandal as that of the use of public temples being denied to untouchables when it is allowed to all other Hindus. The authority of the Vedas and the other Shastras will not be denied but their interpretation will not rest with individuals but will depend upon the courts of law in so far as these religious books will be used to regulate public conduct. Conscientious scruples will be respected, but not at the expense of public morals or the rights of others. Those who will have extraordinary scruples will have themselves to suffer inconvenience and pay for the luxury. The law will not tolerate any arrogation of superiority by any person or class whether in the name of custom or religion. But all this is my dream. I am not the Congress. Those who would have the Congress to do otherwise had better make haste to join it and make others of their opinion join it. The Congress represents, or it has a constitution wide enough to represent popular will.

Young India, 11-6-1931
439. SPEECH AT DESHA SEVIKAS’ MEETING, BOMBAY

June 11, 1931

Gandhiji, early this morning, addressed the Desh Sevikas for a few minutes, asking them to carry on picketing peacefully. Only habitual wearers of khaddar should have the privilege of picketing. If the audience had any stock of foreign cloth, they must consign them to the flames. If they had mill-cloth, they must give them to the poor and the needy. The object of khaddar was to help the starving peasants and workers who would obtain the full benefit of their labour if khadi was encouraged, while in the case of mill-cloth, they would receive only anna in the rupee. To help the humanitarian cause, they must wear khaddar.

The Hindu, 11-6-1931

440. SPEECH AT BOMBAY

June 11, 1931

I must first apologize to you for having called you at this early time. The Hindustani Seva Dal stands for the service of India. Till now whenever I heard the term ‘Servant of India’ it used to rouse great fear in my heart, because the rulers of India style themselves as ‘Servants of India’. These so-called ‘Servants of India’ can never in reality be what they call themselves. They are the servants of the British Empire and it is an impossibility to serve the British Empire and at the same time serve India. I can assure you, you can do no service to India if you try to follow the workings of these so-called ‘Servants of India’. You have to develop a desire for real service which these people totally lack. If on acquiring power you begin to cruelly enforce your authority on the people how is it possible to serve the people?

It is because we lack this feeling of real service that a great deal of rivalry and dissatisfaction has spread among ourselves. It has pained me very much to hear that out of a desire to attain high positions in the various Congress bodies people have been spending money, thus creating an atmosphere of unhealthy competition. The real worker is he who carries on the work with a steady mind in spite of his being in the furthermost rank. The perfection of real service does not solely depend on the magnitude of the task done but rests a great deal on the humble spirit in which it is undertaken. Those misguided people to whom I have referred desire by force, it seems, to serve their country. But it assuredly shows a most undesirable state of mind. One can never prosper or be capable of doing any good to anybody if one adopts questionable means to attain that end.

1 To the campers of the Officer’s Training Camp of the Hindustani Seva Dal who met Gandhiji at Mani Bhavan where Gandhiji used to stay while in Bombay.

It is decidedly wrong on my part to think that I shall be able to serve India better if I become King of India. This was exactly the state of affairs at one time in the political life of France and people used to employ the most cruel and drastic means to remove their opponents from the political field. But the workers of the Hindustani Seva Dal should work with Peace and Truth as their foundation.

They must also cultivate to the greatest extent a sense of humility nor must they ever relax their efforts or let the quality of the work be in the least affected by feeling that there is not proper appreciation. They should deal with their fellow beings in a spirit of fair tolerance and maintain a respectful reverence for their mothers and sisters. I know this perfect combination of humility—Truth, Love and Peace—is very rare in this world, but you must all strive to attain to it. Remember there will be no soldiers left to fight if everybody becomes a commander to give orders. I sincerely hope that you will try and live up to this ideal that I have portrayed for you at this most precious time of the day and I can confidently say that if you sincerely make an effort and keep the memory of this morning always in your mind you will be doing the best service both to yourself and to your motherland.

The Bombay Chronicle, 12-6-1931
441. LETTER TO JAMNADAS GANDHI

BORSAD,

June 12, 1931

CHI. JAMNADAS.

You are a strange man. After having spent days with me here, you go back and write from there a letter about an important matter. It raises several questions. Should I answer them by post, or call you back here? When I wanted to know why you thought of coming as far as Bombay, you could give no answer and hurriedly went back, and now you write to me a letter from there asking for Rs. 5,000. This is now my advice to you. Write to Kakasaheb and convince him about the propriety of your request. If you do this, my task will be easier. Have Manu and Babi reached there?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati : C.W. 9324. Courtesy : Jamnadas Gandhi

442. INTERVIEW TO EUROPEAN DEPUTATION

June 12, 1931

Gandhiji received a deputation of young Europeans, about 30 in number including four ladies. Gandhiji, at the request of the deputation, explained the attitude of the Congress towards Englishmen and other Europeans in India.

Gandhiji said that the Congress attitude was not one of hostility to them, but of active friendship. He recalled to them how the Congress was started by an Englishman, Mr. Hume, and was presided over by even members of Parliament. He wanted them to study the object and history of the Congress, which never meant any harm to any community or interests. If they sympathized with the Congress it was their duty to join it. In India it was but natural that Indians should have full rights to rule as Englishmen had in their own country. It was not reasonable for Englishmen to ask for safeguards and trading rights of a special character on which they were insisting. Perpetuation of these privileges, which they had carved in their 150 years of rule in India, would amount to friendship on unequal terms. The Congress was not merely not hostile to Englishmen, but welcome their association, assistance and cooperation and their organizing capacity. Co-operation of such a kind did not mean co-operation on unequal terms. The deputation waited on Gandhiji for about 15 minutes.

The Hindu, 12-6-1931
Mahatma Gandhi laid the foundation of the building of a Weaving School, started by Miss Mithubehn Petit. Addressing a big public meeting, he said that if he had been told ten years ago that Miss Mithubehn Petit, who belonged to a celebrated Parsi family of Bombay, would roam day and night in the villages barefooted and dressed in coarse khaddar, regardless of the heat and cold, to work among the poor people and teach their children spinning, weaving and other industries, he (Mr. Gandhi) would not have believed it. Although he had appreciated the work of Parsis, even when the campaign of prohibition was launched, he had thought that prohibition alone would not succeed without propagation of khaddar. The closing of liquor shops was not the principal thing. If drunkards did not give up the habit of drink, they would prepare illicit liquor and there would be illicit sale of liquor as at present. Drunkards would not give up drink till they were taught some industry. Workers working in big factories required something to be relieved of the fatigue. The speaker, who had never tasted liquor, had affectionately given liquor to the exhausted in South Africa. The Kolis, who were with him, demanded liquor, and the speaker brought liquor from a canteen-keeper and gave it to them. Men who were made to work like beasts would require liquor, but those working in a peaceful atmosphere in their homes could easily give up drink.

If rural industries like spinning, weaving, dairying, shoe-making, etc., were revived, rural areas would become richer. They did not want to be rich like the millionaires of the Bombay Stock Exchange but they should get rid of their debts. There would be a few silver coins in their cash boxes. Instead of borrowing money from sowcars, they should deposit their savings with sowcars. They would have then houses of their own, and the number of their cattle would increase. Such a process was going on in the area, and it should go on in the seven lakhs of villages in India. This was the work of swaraj. Last year, they had done the work of cleansing the field. Now they had to do the work of sowing. That was constructive work. The sowing work was of greater importance and had to be done for a longer time.

The Hindu, 12-6-1931

---

1 A small village about 12 miles from Surat in Gujarat
444. TELEGRAM TO MAHENDRA PRASAD

BORSAD,
June 13, 1931

MAHENDRA PRASAD

CHAPRA

RAJENDRA BABU WAS MUCH BETTER WHEN I LEFT HIM.
HE WILL BE JOINING ME IN FEW DAYS TIME.
RECEIVING BEST ATTENTION. WILL NOT LET HIM MOVE TILL HE IS STRONG AND HAD REST. WEATHER HERE QUITE good at this time year.

Gandhi

From a photostat: S.N. 17271

445. LETTER TO DUNICHAND

June 13, 1931

DEAR LALA DUNICHAND,

Suraj Bhanji writes to say that you are not paying even the money they have expended. I hope this is not correct. I think that the expenses incurred should be paid. If you have suggestions for the future please let me know.

Yours sincerely,

From a photostat: G.N. 5581

1 Elder brother of Rajendra Prasad
2 Rajendra Prasad was ill and could not participate in the meeting of the Working Committee held at Bombay on 9th and 10th June.
446. LETTER TO EMELIA MACBEAN

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 13, 1931

DEAR MADAM,

I have your letter for which I thank you. You are giving me credit of which I am wholly undeserving. You are thinking of another Mr. Gandhi¹ my name-sake but in no way related to me. He and I were however friends and lived together for some time. You will be sorry to hear that he died many years ago, leaving an only son. It was he who visited America and made many friends. I have never had the privilege of visiting your continent.

Yours sincerely,

Miss EMELIA MACBEAN
C/O MRS. MACBEAN
PRAIRIE AVENUE
CHICAGO (U.S.A.)

From a photostat : S.N. 17272

447. LETTER TO SURENDRA SINGH

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 13, 1931

DEAR SARDAR SURENDRA SINGH,

I have your letter for which I thank you. I am doing all I can and in the manner I know to spread the gospel of love all round but it makes very slow progress in the midst of growing hate and distrust between Hindus and Mussalmans. As to your solution of the communal question my observation is that the parties concerned want a solution for all the provinces or none at all. I agree with you that it would be a great advance if some provinces at least found out their own solution.

Yours sincerely,

SARDAR SURENDRA SINGH
DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE
PUNJAB GOVERNMENT
SIMLA EAST

From a photostat : S.N. 17273

¹ Virchand Gandhi
448. LETTER TO SECRETARY, CENTRAL SIKH LEAGUE, AMRITSAR

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 13, 1931

THE SECRETARY
CENTRAL SIKH LEAGUE
AMRITSAR

DEAR SIR,

I have your letter forwarded to me in my capacity as editor of Young India. So far as the recommendations about the flag are concerned I would advise you to send them to the Secretary of the Flag Committee appointed by the Working Committee of the Congress. The convener and the Secretary of the Flag Committee is Dr. Pattabhi Sitaramayya, Masulipatam, S. India.

Yours sincerely,

From a microfilm: S.N. 17274

449. LETTER TO DR. M. A. ANSARI

BORSAD,
June 13, 1931

DEAR DR. ANSARI,

I forgot and I had not the time to talk to you about the local quarrels in Delhi. A letter from Mrs. Asaf Ali reminds me that the quarrels are not yet over and that they have extended to the ladies also. Can you not put these quarrels down?

I hope you found your brother better. I wonder what Dr. Rehman was able to do.

DR. M. A. ANSARI
1 DARYAGANJ, DELHI

From a photostat: S.N. 17275

1 Mrs. Asaf Ali had written: “Members of the Delhi Mahila Seva Dal are being vilified by Congressmen. I resign and retire as the atmosphere is too dirty for any self-respecting woman to continue to work.”
450. LETTER TO SHAMLAL

BORSAD,
June 13, 1931

DEAR LALA SHAMLAL,

I have your letter.¹ I am glad you have written to me, and I want you to keep me informed of the doings in Rohtak. But I shall not be able to help you at this stage. The persecution will have to be too glaring to enable me to bring it under the Truce terms but where it is subtle as it appears to be in Rohtak, you must be resourceful enough to combat it. Of course you are entitled to take the fullest advantage of ability to put up a defence in lawcourts.

Yours sincerely,

LALA SHAMLAL
ADVOCATE
9 DAYAL SINGH BUILDINGS
UPPER MALL, LAHORE

From a microfilm : S.N. 17276

451. LETTER TO DR. B. C. ROY

BORSAD,
June 13, 1931

DEAR DR. BIDHAN,

I have your letter² for which I thank you. Your poetic description of Shillong makes me envy you.

You must have seen from the papers what has been done about the unfortunate quarrels in Bengal. You may depend upon my doing everything possible to assist in ridding the Bengal atmosphere of

¹ It stated : “. . . In each police station there is one Congress worker. We have enrolled about 2,500 members and established 125 Congress Committees in the district. This has upset the authorities and repression has been started in the district. Our treasurer, who . . . comparatively harmless, . . . was not even imprisoned in Civil Disobedience days, is now being prosecuted. . . . Two other workers have been arrested. . . . Authorities want to stop the normal activities of the Congress. In the Rohtak District the section takes special care that violent speeches are not made, but Rohtak alone has been selected for repression because there is organized Congress work in the district.”

² Which endorsed Gandhiji’s proposal to refer the Bengal quarrels to arbitration
When you see them please remember me to Basanti Devi, Mona, Baby and Sujata. Tell them I often think of them though I never write to them.

Yours sincerely,

DR. BIDHAN CHANDRA ROY
SHILLONG

From a microfilm: S.N. 17277

452. LETTER TO DR. B. S. MOONJE

AS AT SABARMATI,

June 13, 1931

DEAR DR. MOONJE,

I thank you for your letter of 6th June. Even if I succeed in going to London, at present I have no intention of taking experts with me. The scope of my work will be so limited as not to require much expert advice.

Yours sincerely,

DR. B. S. MOONJE
FIRGROVE
SIMLA

From a photostat: S.N. 17278
453. LETTER TO BHUPENDRA NARAYAN SEN

BORSAD,

June 13, 1931

MY DEAR BHUPEN,

I have your letter. I am glad you have written to me so frankly and freely. It is difficult for me to find the assistance that you need. I thought you had attached yourself to the Abhoy Ashram. In any case I would advice you to see Jamnalalji when he comes there which he expects to do next month.

You must make up for the lost weight. 30 lb. is a big drop.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. BHUPENDRA NARAYAN SEN
P.O. BARADOGOLE
DT. HOOGLY (BENGAL)

From a microfilm : S.N. 17279

454. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

BORSAD,

June 13, 1931

DEAR MR. EMERSON,

You must have seen from the papers that Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan has been with me for some time. During the few moments that I could spare for him from day to day, I carried on my conversations with him and he has left on me the impression that he is a truthful and out and out believer in non-violence. He has no connection with the Amanullah movement. His work is solely concentrated upon the Khudai Khidmatgar movement. This movement consists in enlisting men for service. The following pledge is administered to them: “I shall be truthful, I shall be chaste, I shall be non-violent and not quarrel with my neighbours. I shall not covet my neighbours’ property. I shall be prepared to suffer even unto death for the freedom of the country.” Those who take the pledge and enlist themselves as Khudai Khidmatgars are expected to attend a weekly roll call in their respective villages. He is most emphatic in his declaration that there has been on the part of himself and his followers no breach of the Settlement and he says that he has everywhere preached to the people the necessity for carrying out its terms in so far as they are applicable.
to the people. But he says there are several breaches of the Settlement on the part of the officials and he relates the following:

(a) Many civil disobedience prisoners are not yet discharged in the Frontier Province including the Agency areas.

(b) He says that the people are being molested on the slightest pretext. The soldiers as they pass the villagers’ houses cry “Islam Murdabad”, “Gandhi Murdabad”, “Ghafrar Khan Murdabad”, and he adds that he has prohibited among his followers all objectionable cries.

Khan Saheb admits that he did not visit the Commissioner and he says he refrained because he saw no change in the attitude of local officials and if he went, he was afraid of his being misrepresented. He is quite prepared to see you or His Excellency the Viceroy provided I accompany him. I do feel that you should make his acquaintance, and if you think it worth while I shall gladly visit Simla solely for the purpose of introducing him to you. I think that the Settlement presumes mutual trust and it will therefore perhaps be wise on the part of the Government to know Khan Saheb personally and then test his assurances. Pending reply to this letter I have detained Khan Saheb. As he has been long enough with me and as I do not want to detain him longer than is absolutely necessary, I would ask you please to send me a telegraphic reply. I should add that Khan Saheb is most insistent on my visiting the Frontier Province and seeing things for myself, making the acquaintance of the numerous Khudai Khidmatgars and studying his activity. I do feel that there should be no objection now to my visiting the Frontier Province.¹

Yours sincerely,

H. W. EMERSON, ESQ.
SIMLA

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-B, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

¹ Emerson replied on July 6 that such a “visit would be likely to cause considerable excitement and to add to the difficulties of the local administration . . .” Vide also footnote to “Letter to H. W. Emerson”, 17-6-1931.
455. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

BORSAD,
June 14, 1931

DEAR AMTUL,

Your letter. You must not brood over your weakness or the fact that you have to receive service from the Ashram. Everyone knows that you are eager to serve. If you will have patience God will give you the necessary strength for service. You must not worry.

Yours,
BAPU

[PS.]

Let Gangabehn treat you.

From a photostat : G.N. 241

456. LETTER TO M. I. DAVID

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 14, 1931

DEAR MR. DAVID,

I have now thought out a formula and here it is:

To provide a common platform for those Europeans and Indians who stand for the speedy creation of a system of Government which will enable India to take her rightful place among the free nations of the world.

The phrase “among the free nations of the world” takes the place of “as a fellow member of the British Commonwealth of free nations” in the original. You will see that this formula does not exclude British connection in the shape of equal partnership at will. Nor does it necessarily include it. I do not say much of the other two formulae.

Yours sincerely,

M. I. DAVID, ESQ.
4 QUEENS ROAD
FORT, BOMBAY

From a photostat : S.N. 17280
457. LETTER TO HAREKRUSHNA MAHTAB

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 14, 1931

MY DEAR MAHTAB BABU,

I have your letter for which there was no occasion for apology. You have an ambitious programme. But with faith and application there is no reason why you should not go through it.

I am glad that Matibas and Pur Bai are with you. It is a good thing to start an institution with little or nothing. Faith is the greatest asset. I need not worry about reading your budget as Jamnalalji fully represents my views and his judgment in such matters is correct and helpful.

Yours sincerely,

SHRI HAREKRUSHNA MAHTAB
GANDHI KARMA MANDIR
BALASORE (ORISSA)

From a microfilm : S.N. 17281

458. LETTER TO P. G. MATHEW

BORSAD,
June 14, 1931

MY DEAR MATHEW,

How is it you funkedit again. I had fully expected you at Bardoli. You could have passed a clear week with me. I do not mind your not coming if you are in love with your work. Give me an idea of your day’s work.

SYT. MATHEW
THE ASHRAM
SABARMATI

From a microfilm : S.N. 17282

1 The addressee had said that the rules of the Gandhi Karma Mandir of Balasore were rather hard, and had submitted simplified rules.
DEAR MR. DAVID,

I dictated a letter last night. Mahadev had handed me another letter from you of 11th instant in which you ask me whether I approve of the suggestion contained in the letter in connection with the proposed non-official conciliation committee to be formed under the auspices of the Mayor of Bombay. I would like to make one suggestion. It would be better not to have a rigid rule fixing a proportion between the numbers of Indians and Europeans. It would be better to adopt the natural method. It may be you will have more earnest Europeans than Indians to work on the Committee. In that event I should not hesitate to take more and vice versa.

Yours sincerely,

M. I. DAVID, ESQ.
4 QUEENS ROAD
FORT, BOMBAY

From a photostat: S.N. 17283

1 The addressee had suggested that the conciliation committee “should consist of an equal number of Indians and Europeans”.
460. LETTER TO JOHN KYTE COLLETT

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 14, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter enclosing some Children’s League cards and medals. I am not in touch with the Salvation Army nor do I know anything of the Army’s work amongst children. My work lies in a wholly different direction. You were therefore evidently misinformed if you thought that I was working in connection with the Salvation Army. I am therefore asking the Salvation Army people whether they would take these medals and cards from me. If they do not, you will please tell me what to do with the medals.

Yours sincerely,

JOHN KYTE COLLETT, ESQ.
PRESIDENT
THE CHILDREN’S LEAGUE OF PEACE AND GOODWILL
“SUNRISE”, PENARTH

From a photostat : S.N. 17284

461. LETTER TO SALVATION ARMY, BOMBAY

BORSAD,
June 14, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have a letter from Mr. John Collett which I enclose herewith. I send you also a copy of my letter to Mr. Collett.¹ Will you please tell me whether you will care to receive the cards and the medals for the use mentioned in the letter?

Yours sincerely,

Encls. 2
THE OFFICER COMMANDING
THE BOMBAY BRANCH
SALVATION ARMY, BOMBAY

From a photostat : S.N. 17285

¹ Vide the preceding item.
462. LETTER TO MRS. C. A. HATE

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. Some time when I am in Bombay you should try to see me. It is difficult to advise you in the matter of food just now. It is necessary to see you and cross-question you. Will you not see some naturopath in Bombay? Mr. Kambhatta of Hornby Road knows one and he has benefited by his treatment. His full address is Bairam Kambhatta, 275 Hornby Road, Fort Bombay.

It is difficult to say how many hours’ sleep a particular individual requires, but I can safely say for you that you should take as much sleep as you comfortably can. And you should take daily walks in the morning and in the evening. Once only is not enough. If you have the strength, you should take really three or four hours’ walk. You may divide it, if you like, in two or three periods.

You ask me what should be one’s ideal in life. All the sages in the world have said—self-realization.

The rumour about the burning of my foot was quite wrong. It would have been more correct if the report had said I had very narrowly¹ escaped burning my foot.

Yours sincerely,

MRS. C. A. HATE

INDU BHUVAN

343 THAKURDWAR, BOMBAY

From a photostat: S.N. 17286

¹ The source has “nearly”.

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
DEAR MR. EMERSON,

Your letter enclosing an unsigned opinion of the Legislative Department on the meaning of the word “return” in the Settlement came upon me as a bomb shell. I was wholly unprepared for such an opinion. I had flattered myself with the belief that my knowledge of law had not become absolutely rusty. But the opinion of your legal department shook what little confidence I had yet in my legal knowledge. I therefore hastened to refer the matter to the best counsel available in Bombay at the present moment. I am sending you a copy of their opinion. The first two signatories are ex-Advocates-General of Bombay and they are both today, as is also the third, distinguished practising lawyers. For the moment therefore my confidence is restored, but that can be of no avail to you. I can quite understand your not accepting the opinion of Bombay lawyers however eminent they may be, in the teeth of opinion from your legal department however contrary to common sense. I, therefore, suggest what I have suggested of the Government of Bombay. As the matter involved is one of principle for the Management of the Navajivan Press, I would repeat the suggestion I have made to the Government of Bombay that the Chief Justice of Bombay should be appointed sole arbitrator in the matter. The Managing Board is naturally anxious to end this controversy and also to avoid a continuing loss that the deprivation of the press causes to them. I hope therefore that the matter will be finished one way or the other without delay.

This impasse brings to me a matter of general importance. I am having, as I imagine, more trouble than I have told you from the Bombay Government in connection with the matters arising out of the Settlement. And there is trouble growing in the Madras Presidency over liquor picketing. Here is an extract from Syt. Rajagopalachari whose instructions on this very point you had seen and which you so admired that you asked me to congratulate him:

1 The opinion was that the phrase “will be returned” would mean “possession will be restored” and that the Gandhi-Irwin Pact was silent on the question of the place of delivery.

2 Vide “Opinion”, 13-6-1931
I had hitherto refrained from worrying you. The Government here are beginning to feel that peaceful picketing is not so harmless as they had imagined. They have discovered that it does stop drinking most effectively and as a result the revenue is threatened. They may hold renters to their contracts this year, but what about the next auction? They see that without any physical obstruction or coercion of any kind, picketing does keep people away from the shops.

The renters too expect that like last year the congress activities would soon be interfered with by the police and so they did not themselves do anything at first to interfere with the volunteers. But now they realize that the Truce has put an end to the old order to things. They are consequently in a fright. They have begun to make strong representations to Government demanding either police interference or writing off of dues. Both Government officials and renters are thus opening their eyes to the reality of the moral power of picketing and the implications of the Truce. Both Government officials and renters have, therefore, it seems, resolved on new tactics. There is almost by concerted action a number of cases cropping up everywhere of rowdyism to intimidate volunteers. Besides rowdyism, which might be expected, the renters whether instigated or encouraged by officials or not, I cannot yet say, are bringing up false charges through private complaints in order to get fines and imprisonments imposed on the workers and sympathizers and worry and tire out the Congress organizations. And magistrates, too, imagine that they should support the liquor-shop men. Further, even where they know the cases are false, they dare not expose themselves to the suspicion that they favour the Congress and do not support the revenue.

Local police authorities have begun to harass and interfere with the picketing. Finding that there is no sort of coercion or disturbance of the peace, and that they cannot legitimately object to the picketing, they are trying other ways. They are making demonstrations of police force, pushing the volunteers away to impossible distances from the shops and from each other and demanding the observance of conditions that reduce picketing to an ineffectual farce. Local police authorities are permitted to terrorize town and village folk and proclaim that any assistance or harbouring of Congress volunteers would amount to abetment of offenders. In fact, the 1930 atmosphere is being sought to be brought about.

I have conscientiously tried to put the best construction on all that Government officials are doing. But I am afraid I must confess failure. If you have time, please go through the enclosures.
You might be unable to interfere with the working or not working of the Settlement by local governments. Or your interference may not go far enough according to my view of the Settlement. Time has therefore perhaps arrived for the appointment of a permanent Board of Arbitration to decide question of interpretation of the Settlement and as to the full carrying out of the terms by the one party or the other. I would therefore like you to consider this suggestion.

Yours sincerely,

Encl. 1

H. W. EMERSON, ESQ.
SIMLA

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-B, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

464. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

June 14, 1931

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I have your letter. I understand your difficulties. God will protect you. Don’t worry, and stay on there. You may come when you can. I have had to come to Borsad for some days. But you should write to me at the Bardoli address, since I shall probably have returned there by the time I get your reply.

It is not at all certain whether I shall be going to England. Even if it is decided that I should go, I shall not have to leave before August 15.

What is your present diet?
How is Father’s health now?
Rajendra Babu was ill for some time. He is better now. He will be here in a few days.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 3414
465. INTERVIEW TO THE PRESS

BORSAD,
June 14, 1931

Interviewed by a representative of the Associated Press, Mahatma Gandhi said he arrived at Borsad principally to console the people of Ras who were perturbed over the continuous destruction of their hedges and stray assaults committed by Dharalas. They suspected that Dharalas had been emboldened by the continuance as the village headman of a Dharala who is an exconvict. Gandhiji had already asked for the cancellation of his appointment on two grounds in terms of the Delhi Settlement: one was that he was undesirable and the other was that his appointment was not permanent in the terms of the Delhi Settlement. He had also asked for protection of the non-Dharala population of Ras village. Both matters were engaging the attention of the Collector of Kaira District. There were other matters, too, which required his personal attention. He thought he need not go into these matters at present. Asked how long he would stay at Borsad, Gandhiji said as soon as he had finished his work he had instructions from Sardar Vallabhbhai to go to Bardoli which he would do.

In reply to a question whether it was true, as stated by his son Mr. Devdas at last night’s public meeting, that he intended shortly to visit the Frontier Province, Gandhiji said it was perfectly true that Abdul Ghaffar Khan was pressing him to visit that province. He was equally anxious to go there and see for himself how far the spirit of non-violence had prevailed among tribes inhabiting that province, but whilst the Truce lasted he did not want to do anything, as far as possible, that might embarrass Government. He was therefore in correspondence with Government on the matter. Asked how long Abdul Ghaffar Khan would stay with him, Gandhiji said he would stay pending the results of the correspondence between him and Government.

The Bombay Chronicle, 15-6-1931
466. CABLE TO H. S. L. POLAK

BORSAD,

June 15, 1931

KALOPH
LONDON

WILL GLADLY See LANCASHIRE FRIENDS IMMEDIATELY ON ARRIVAL IF I COME AT ALL. MALAVIYAJI WILL COME IF INVITED.

GANDHI

From a photostat: S.N. 17291

467. TELEGRAM TO “THE STATESMAN”, DELHI

BORSAD,

June 15, 1931

STATESMAN
DELHI

YOUR WIRE. INDIAN AMBULANCE CORPS REACHED AFTER DUSK AND JUST AFTER BATTLE COLENSO IN WHICH LIEUTENANT ROBERTS WAS KILLED. BEFORE WE HAD PITCHED TENTS I RECEIVED ORDERS FROM COL. GALLWEY REMOVE CORPSE DECEASED SOLDIER AND I SENT SEVEN MEN. I RECEIVED PERSONAL THANKS FOR PROMPT ATTENTION ORDERS. THOUGH CORPS WAS TOLD THAT IT COULD ONLY SERVE OUT-SIDE ZONE OF FIRE AFTER REVERSE AT SPION KOP GENERAL BULLER NEEDED OUR ASSISTANCE WITHIN ZONE OF FIRE. LED BY MAJOR BAPTY WE REMOVED SIXTY WOUNDED ON STRETCHERS FROM DANGER ZONE. THESE INCLUDED GENERAL WOODGATE AND MAJOR SCOTT MONCRIEF AND OTHER OFFICERS. NEXT TIME WE WERE WITHIN FIRE ZONE WAS AT VAAL KRANTZ. FOR THIS AND OTHER WORK I WAS MENTIONED IN GENERAL BULLER’S DISPATCH. CLEARLY COL. GALLWEY’S MEMORY BETRAYS HIM.¹

GANDHI

From a photostat: S.N. 17292

¹Vide “Interview to Associated Press”, 15-6-1931. Also “Speech at Calcutta Meeting”, 27-1-1902; and “An Autobiography”
468. LETTER TO MOHANLAL SAKSENA

BORSAD,
June 15, 1931

MY DEAR MOHANLAL,

I got your letter only today. I could not therefore discuss it with Jawaharlal.

In spite of what the D.C. says, I hold that my message\(^1\) to the kisans is no breach of the Settlement.

It was never the intention that each kisan’s money should be separately deposited. If such was the suggestion, I have forgotten all about it. The object is that the kisans should not use up the money that might have been saved for payment of rent.

I did receive Balkrishna’s wire. You will have noticed the correction\(^2\). It was a silly slip.

Just at present it is difficult for me to leave Gujarat. The things are looking none too bright here. On your side it is all well, so long as you hold the kisans in check. But Jawaharlal’s presence must now ease the situation. He has no difficulty in dealing with the kisans and restraining them.

In any event please keep me informed of the happenings there.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

SYT. MOHANLAL SAKSENA
34 AMINUDDAULA PARK
LUCKNOW

From a photostat : S.N. 17289

\(^1\) Vide “To the Kisans of the U. P.”, 23-5-1931
\(^2\) Vide “A correction”, 11-6-1931
469. LETTER TO W. E. LUCAS

BORSAD,
Via ANAND,
June 15, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I was delighted to receive your letter and would gladly meet you all on 24th instant unless I am summoned to Simla.¹ I shall bring with me Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel and one or two other friends. As I take no food at night I would like you to excuse me from joining you at the dinner table but the other friends may join you if you like. I would follow at the time to be named by you.

I appreciate your frankness. Of course I don’t expect you to surrender your independence or coincide with my views. These contacts are desirable and valuable for understanding one another and removing misunderstandings.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

W. E. LUCAS, ESQ.
AGENT’S OFFICE, B.B. & C.I. RY. CO.
BOMBAY

From a photostat : S.N. 17290

¹ For Gandhiji’s note on the meeting of the “Dinner Club”, vide “Young Europeans”, 2-7-1931.
470. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

BORSAD,

Silence Day, June 15, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

I have your letter. Shankarbhai has gone to Bombay. I have written to him and told him to bring Kamala\(^1\) to me.

If the building in which I used to occupy a room is not being used, use it now, including Ba’s room. The number of inmates has gone up very much, and will further increase a little. If you use the building, it will remain in good condition. I have discussed this with Ba. She has no objection. In fact she liked the suggestion. We are not likely in the immediate future to come and stay there. Why, then, should we let such a big building remain unoccupied?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./I

471. INTERVIEW TO ASSOCIATED PRESS

BORSAD,

June 15, 1931

Interviewed by a representative of the Associated Press regarding the controversy in respect of his services in the Boer War, Mahatma Gandhi said:

The Indian Ambulance Corps numbering over 1,100 reached Chieveley camp near Colenso after dusk just after the battle in which Lieutenant Roberts was killed. I received orders from Col. Gallwey that the deceased Lieutenant’s body had to be immediately removed. We had then hardly pitched the tents.

I sent seven men, not “coolies”, but educated men, who returned late at night and I received special thanks from Col. Gallwey for the prompt attention and was next day invited through Dr. Booth to meet him in his tent.

It is quite true that on this occasion there was no question of firing line, hostilities having been suspended for the collection of the wounded. It is also true that despite our desire to work under fire, we were told that we would not be allowed to do so but after the reverse at Spion Kop, the situation became grave.

\(^1\) Shankarlal’s daughter
General Buller came to my tent and said we would enter the firing zone in order to remove nearly 60 wounded from the foot of Spion Kop. My companions and I were delighted to have this privilege and led by Major Bapty, we crossed the pontoon, entered firing zone and removed the wounded including General Woodgate, Major Scott Moncrief and other officers and carried them on stretchers 25 miles.

We were again within the firing zone at Vaal Kantz soon after Kop. For these and general services I was mentioned in General Buller’s dispatch and with over 20 leaders was recipient of a War Medal.

The Bombay Chronicle, 16-6-1931

472. LETTER TO C. RAJGOPALACHARI

BORSAD, June 16, 1931

I have your long letter. You will see the use I have made of it from the copy herewith enclosed.¹

I feel that all the questions now outstanding have got to be referred to some board of arbitration and, if the Central Government want to play the game, as I think they do, they would accept my suggestion for the appointment of such a board. There may be some modification as to the board, but the principle, I think, they will accept. Do you suggest anything more to be done in this direction? Till the final answer is received, you should not embark upon any heroic measure. But I agree with you that if we do not get anything whatsoever, we have a perfect right to take such measures as we like including local and specific civil disobedience in so far as it may be necessary to resist lawlessness on the part of unscrupulous officials.

I want you to study carefully the article² I have written for the forthcoming issue of Young India on the Working Committee resolution. I do not like it. At the same time from its own stand-point the Working Committee’s position could be justified. The alternative I had suggested was much better. Some of those who voted with the majority, I think, even saw the point. But you will critically read the

¹ Vide “Letter to H. W. Emerson”, 14-6-1931
² Vide “substance not Shadow”, 18-6-1931.
article and tell me what you think of my alternative, because that alternative has to be enforced in the event of failure of our demand at the Conference.

Why do you not see the Governor yourself and at any rate discuss the liquor picketing?

SYT. C. RAJAGOPALACHARI
GANDHI ASHRAM
TIRUCHENGODU (S. INDIA)

From a photostat: S.N. 17293

473. TELEGRAM TO SITLA SAHAY

BORSAD,
June 17, 1931

SITLA SAHAY
CARE CONGRESS
RAE BARELI

YOUR LETTER. WIRED YOU FROM BARDOLI. CONSULT JAWAHAR

GANDHI

From a microfilm: S.N. 17306

474. LETTER TO DUNI CHAND

BORSAD,
June 17, 1931

DEAR LALA DUNI CHAND,

I now have your letter about Suraj Bhan. At Simla I understood that Lala Suraj Bhan had collected the money himself and that for doing village work. But if he is of unsound mind, naturally you will not give him any assistance. But I do feel that all the expenses incurred up to now should be paid and then he should be clearly told that he cannot get the money as this is not his property as it was

1 A khadi worker of U.P.
2 The wire is not traceable. But in his letter of even date to the addressee Gandhiji’s personal secretary said it was as follows: “where cultivators accept our conditions and are prepared to pay the rent but the zamindars are not prepared to accept it, the amount should be received by us and deposited into the bank.” (S. N. 17307) neither collected by him alone nor for the purpose he claims. The whole of this is a sad business. Lala Suraj Bhan is your trusted man. I therefore feel the greatest hesitation in writing to you about him.

I am glad you have sent his wife to Jullundur. I do hope she will be happy there.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

LALA DUNI CHAND
ADVOCATE, AMBALA

From a photostat: G.N. 5589

475. LETTER TO ANAND T. HINGORANI

BORSAD,
June 17, 1931

MY DEAR ANAND,

I hear all about you regularly through Mirabehn and occasionally through Jairamdas. I know that you are refraining from writing to me purely out of pity for me.

I should not consider father’s letter disappointing. I think that he took up the correct position. But Jairamdas tells me that later he modified his view. I think that it is a sound rule for people who are well-to-do not to go to their friends living in public institutions except when they are ready to make a grant to those institutions at least equal to what their visit to such institutions might have cost them. It need not be done offensively and can be done gracefully. If father had simply come or sent your mother or your sister and asked them quietly to slip into your pocket a hundred-rupee note, it would have been still more correct.

You must not be or feel feeble either in body or in mind. Nothing has to be done beyond your resolute to feel weak. There was no foot-burn to the healed. The whole thing was a creation of the reporters’ imagination.

It is good for Vidya1 to continue the diet of milk and fruit and even fruit alone if milk disagrees, till she has a real hunger and appetite for other food. But if she can go to Bombay for treatment under a nature-cure expert, it would, of course, be better.

1 Addressee’s wife

VOL. 52 : 28 APRIL, 1931 - 1 JULY, 1931 347
You must not consider yourself ill-starred. Think of the many millions who have not the opportunities that God has provided for you. It is the height of ingratitude to the Maker for anyone to consider himself ill-starred. You must shake yourself free of this pessimism that overtakes you so often.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. ANAND T. HINGORANI
C/O THE “HINDOO”
HYDERABAD SIND

From a photostat : S.N. 17300

476. LETTER TO A. Y. C. WULFSE

AS AT SABARMATI,
June 17, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter.
I return the ring herewith.
I hope that you will succeed in your desire to create a work of art that will benefit mankind.
I hope also that you have regained your health.
I got the two portraits for which too I thank you.

Yours sincerely,

A. Y. C. WULFSE, ESQ.
AMSTERDAM, HOLLAND

From a photostat : S.N. 17301
477. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

BORSAD,
June 17, 1931

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

Sitla Sahay writes to me about impending repression in Raw Bareli through the taluqdars.

You must have seen the enclosed notice about the flag on the University building. I am receiving complaints from other places also. As soon as you have the time I would like you to go into all these things and then tell me what you think about it all. If he matters can wait till we meet at Surat for the Working Committee we must discuss them then or you should write to me earlier.

PANDIT JAWAHARLAL NEHRU
ANAND BHAWAN, ALLAHABAD

From a photostat : S.N. 17303

478. LETTER TO HARDEVI SHARMA

BORSAD,
June 17, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter of the 15th instant. As to your first question I think you are entitled to and it is your duty to help the kisans in all legitimate ways open to men pledged to non-violence. What those particular ways should be can only be determined from time to time as circumstances arise. The general instructions you can glean from the pages of Navajivan and Young India. But I would advise you to confer with the Provincial Congress Committee members and Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru who is now in Allahabad.

With reference to your second question if Thakur Malkhan Singh was prosecuted he can be and should be defended.

Yours sincerely,

SYT. HARDEVI SHARMA
HATHRAS (U.P.)

From a microfilm : S.N. 17304
479. LETTER TO K. F. NARIMAN

BORSAD,
June 17, 1931

MY DEAR NARIMAN,

I have your letters about the Pathan Abdul Ghaffar Khan and his son. I shall begin working on them as soon as possible.

With reference to the National Flag Film I would like you to go into the regulations governing the censorship of films and enter first into correspondence with the Board of Censors and find their reason. Don’t you think that this is the first step to take?

Yours sincerely,

SYT. K. F. NARIMAN
CONGRESS HOUSE, BOMBAY

From a photostat : S.N. 17305

480. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

BORSAD,
June 17, 1931

DEAR MR. EMERSON,

I thank you for your telegram about Khan Saheb Abdul Ghaffar Khan. I have shown it to him.

I expect to hear from you in due course with reference to my desire to visit the Frontier Province.

Yours sincerely,

H. W. EMERSON, ESQ.
SIMLA

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-B, 1931. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

This read : “Your letter of June thirteenth. Government of India appreciate the value of personal contact but consider suitable course is for Abdul Ghaffar Khan to get in touch with the Chief Commissioner of North West Frontier Province rather than to visit Simla.”
481. SUBSTANCE NOT SHADOW

The public are entitled to know why after having made repeated declarations to the contrary the Working Committee had passed the resolution requiring me (other conditions being favourable) to attend the Round Table Conference, if thereto required, for the presentation of the Congress position.

Ordinarily a member of the Working Committee could not tell the public of discussions behind its resolutions, their defeated amendments or counter resolutions. But in the present case the Working Committee has made an exception and authorized me to take the public into confidence in order that I might clear my position and also explain that of the Working Committee.

It was my essentially democratic nature which, in spite of my very strong objection, impelled me to submit to the resolution. One may not make a principle of every objection and, if not carried, block the way by threatening to retire from an institution or by refusing submission to the opinion of the majority. I therefore fought the Working Committee, reminded it of my repeated public and private declarations and moved informally a resolution myself which I thought was far more consistent and desirable in the national interest. But I could not carry with me the majority who thought that not to attend the Conference by reason of the failure of a communal settlement would be to play into the hands of the enemy and expose the Committee to unnecessary misrepresentation.

Though there is much to be said for the majority view, I regard mine to be safer and more truly in consonance with the Lahore resolution on the communal question. There was, in my opinion, sound reasoning behind my declaration that I should not attend the Round Table Conference if there was no agreed settlement of the communal question. Absence of it would mean

---

1 On June 9. It read: “The Working Committee hope that the efforts that are now being made to secure honourable and satisfactory settlement of the communal problem will meet with success. The Committee is of opinion that, even should these efforts unfortunately fail, in order to avoid any possibility of the Congress attitude being misunderstood in any shape or form, other conditions being favourable, Mahatma Gandhi should represent the Congress at the R.T.C., if thereto required, for the presentation of the Congress position.”

2 Vide “Speech at subjects Committee, A.I.C.C.- III”, 1-1-1930 absence of unity and absence of unity would deprive the national demand of the strength required to secure its acceptance.

My proposition therefore before the Working Committee was that agreed settlement failing, the Congress should give up the hope of winning a swaraj constitution by the way of the present Round Table Conference and should wait till all the communities were satisfied to adopt a purely national solution. The Congress could meanwhile further consolidate its position and work with greater concentration for the masses including all the communities and thus make the toilers of all the other communities regard the Congress as theirs as the Hindus do.

This does not mean giving up the struggle for freedom.

It all depends upon what we mean by and want through purna swaraj. If we mean an awakening among the masses, a knowledge among them of their true interest and ability to serve that interest against the whole world and if through purna swaraj we want harmony, freedom from aggression from within or without and a progressive improvement in the economic condition of the masses, we can gain our end without political power and by directly acting upon the powers that be. One form of direct action is adult suffrage. The second and more potent form is satyagraha. It can easily be shown that whatever is needful and can be gained by political power can perhaps be more quickly and more certainly gained by satyagraha. If such is the case and if, in spite of all, [the] attempt to secure an honourable settlement of the communal question fails it is obvious that we should give up the attempt to secure a swaraj constitution at the present moment. It is better and quicker to wait till the Congress has become equally popular with the other communities than to attempt to force swaraj through highly artificial surroundings. If the Congress means what it says, it cannot be long gaining the adherence of all the other communities. Meanwhile the Congress must fulfil its mission of representing the starving millions by fighting for their relief, if it cannot do so by gaining power then by gaining that relief through the government existing at the moment. Whilst discussing this probability with English friends, I was reminded that this position was hardly fair, not to take the power to make the reforms and to force the hands of those who cannot carry on the administration if they grant the reforms, in their opinion only so called. I pointed out the fallacy underlying the rebuke. The Congress is ever ready to take the power if it is given to it but the Congress is too weak to seize power from unwilling hands in the artificial surroundings of the Round Table Conference and that in the absence of real unity between the chief actors, the communities.

The Congress wants the substance not the shadow. It can therefore wait for the shadow of power, it cannot wait for the substance of freedom which the dumb millions so badly need and can understand.

I have placed before the public the main part of the argument I placed before the Working Committee. It failed to convince its majority. It may fail therefore to convince too the majority of the public. Nevertheless my position will probably be the same as now if and when the Conference fails to meet the Congress position.

But having accepted the resolution of the Working Committee, I shall faithfully carry it out and work at the Conference with all possible zeal, if I am destined to attend it. I should not reject real power if it is real. I should put my whole soul into working for it. But I have wisdom and patience enough to wait for it if necessary and know that such waiting may be a process of hastening.

Young India, 18-6-1931

482. NATIONAL UNIVERSITIES

The head master of Tilak Vidyalaya thus rebukes me:

> I gladly publish the letter if only to advertise the very good work of the national school of Nagpur. As for the Tilak University, I am not sure that I omitted to mention it on the occasion referred to. My speech was not previously prepared. It had to be delivered extemporaneous. Whatever names I took were merely illustrative and not exhaustive. I can certainly recall many national institutions which rendered great service during the struggle. My object was to show the very marked contrast between the Government institutions and the national ones and to show that every anna spent in the latter was an anna spent for swaraj. I showed too that in the nature of things it

---

1 The letter is not reproduced here. It complained of Gandhiji’s failure, in his speech at Gujarat Vidyapith (vide “Speech at Convocation, gujarat Vidyapith, Ahmedabad”, 11-4-1931), to mention the Tilak Maharashtra Vidyapith of Poona and the Tilak Vidyalaya of Nagpur and their contribution to civil disobedience movement; vide also, “Letter to M. G. Datar”, 26-5-1931 could not be otherwise. However badly managed the Congress may be, it is still that and that alone which can usher in swaraj and not a Government department. It is once more a question of swadeshi v. videshi. The English paraphrase is: ‘a good Government is no substitute for self-Government’.

Young India, 18-6-1931

483. COLOUR BAR IN EDINBURGH

The Honorary Secretary, Edinburgh Indian Association, writes:

It will be recalled that in 1927 all the cafes, restaurants and dance halls, imposed the colour ban, but after representations being made to various authorities a compromise was reached and soon after the ban was raised, again this year two cafes in Edinburgh have renewed the colour ban. These two cafes (Strand Cafe and Cafeteria) refuse to admit coloured students as a whole without any reasons. Edinburgh Indian Association approached the Lord Provost of Edinburgh and the Students’ Representative Council of Edinburgh University, but so far no action has been taken by them and the colour ban still continues.

The Hon. Secretary does not say why the two Cafes have restored the ban or why it was originally introduced. Denial of the use of refreshment rooms in the West is an inconvenience of which we in India can have no adequate conception. Intense public agitation is the only way to deal with this prejudice. The Edinburgh Indian Association will do well to supply the public with full facts.

Young India, 18-6-1931

---

1 Foreign
484. HINDI IN THE SOUTH

It was a good sign that at the same time as the Tamil Nadu Conference a Hindi Prachar Conference too was held. The people of the Southern Presidency are under promise to send for the next year Congress delegates who would speak and understand Hindi. If we were not living in artificial conditions, the people living in the South will not consider the learning of Hindi as a strain on them, much less a superfluity. It is surely more necessary for them to learn Hindi than for the Hindi-speaking population to learn the Southern languages. There are two speaking and understanding Hindi against one speaking the Southern languages in all India. There must be for all India a common language of inter-provincial contact in addition to, not in the place of, the provincial language or languages. It can only be Hindi-Hindustani. Some who altogether dismiss the masses from their minds would regard English not merely as an alternative but the only possible medium. This proposition would be unthinkable but for the hypnotic influence of foreign domination. For the masses of the South who must take an ever-growing part in national affairs, what can be easier—learning Hindi which has many words in common with their languages and which at once gives them access practically to the whole of the North or learn English a wholly foreign tongue spoken only by a select few? The choice really depends upon one’s conception of swaraj. If it is to be of and for only the English-knowing Indians, English is undoubtedly the common medium. If it is to be for and of the starving millions, of the illiterate millions, of the illiterate women, of the suppressed untouchables, Hindi is the only possible common language. Those who think like me will therefore welcome the report of the great progress made by Hindi during the past twelve years of the existence of organized propaganda. Here is the record of work during the period:

Number of those who have taken to the study of Hindi 4,00,000
.. .. .. acquired a working knowledge of it 2,50,000
.. .. .. appeared for our examinations 11,000
.. .. .. passed the examinations 10,000
.. readers published by the Sabha in its own press 3,00,000
356. \textit{NOTES}

\textbf{Swaraj For Ceylon}

A Ceylon correspondent asks the following strange questions\footnote{Not reproduced here. The first question was whether an economically dependent country should seek swaraj; and secondly, whether India would help Ceylon in attaining freedom.}:

I do not know that Ceylon is a bankrupt island or that it is necessarily bankrupt because it does not manufacture all its own cloth or grow all the grains it eats. But assuming that Ceylon is as the correspondent describes, it has\footnote{The source has “is”.} all the greater reason for being free. Possibly Ceylon’s economic condition is bad, if it is bad, because of its dependence. I cannot conceive of a single occasion when slavery or dependence can be preferable to swaraj or freedom.

So far as India’s help is concerned, when India is free, whether she will or no, her freedom will automatically spur Ceylon to... deliverance, if it does not actually bring it. India’s freedom must mean more freedom to her neighbours and even other countries in the East as her slavery or dependence means a hindrance to their growth. Disease among neighbours can never be an advantage. And a diseased continent like India must be a perpetual menace to her neighbours. Dependence is perhaps the greatest disease. Mere physical illness is any day preferable to the illness of the soul. The latter brings in its train all kinds of physical afflictions and worse.

Young India, 18-6-1931

486. JAPANESE OR BRITISH?

That from the economic standpoint (and that is the only standpoint important for the millions) boycott of Japanese cloth is much the most important is clear from the following letter⁠¹ from Sjt. H. P. Modi, President, Bombay Mill-owners’ Association.

If therefore there is any laxity on the part of boycott workers, they will remember that emphasis on boycott of British cloth would be of no avail whatsoever from the economic viewpoint. Incidentally one can see how British cloth has been hit by Japanese cloth.

Young India, 18-6-1931

487. LETTER TO KUSUM DESAI

BORSAD,
Before Morning Prayers, June 18, 1931

CHI. KUSUM,

I had not understood your message, but I did understand your letter and felt unhappy. The very fact that there was no letter from you suggested that you were running away from me. Whether or not you should do that depends on you. Be wise and wake up. You can come here any day you wish to.

¹ Not reproduced here. The correspondent had pointed out that the most serious competitor of the Indian textile industry was Japan rather than Great Britain and that competition from Japan was as serious a menace to the Indian industry as it was to Lancashire trade.
We shall be leaving this place on the 23rd. I shall have to go to Bombay for two days.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1822

488. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

BORSAD,
June 18, 1931

DEAR MR. EMERSON,

I thank you for your letter of the 10th inst. enclosing copy of a letter from Messrs Ramjilal & Bros'. If the facts stated by them are correct, I quite agree with you that picketing should be suspended. I am therefore writing\(^1\) to the local Congress Committee to investigate the matter, telling them that unless they can satisfactorily prove the relevant allegations made in Messrs Ramjilal’s letter are incorrect, picketing should be suspended. I enclose copy of my letter for your information.

Yours sincerely,

Encl. I

H. W. EMERSON, ESQ.
HOME SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF INDIA
SIMLA

A.I.C.C. File No. 387, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

---

\(^1\) Importers and dealers of foreign piece-goods, who had complained of harassment and coercion by Congress pickets

\(^2\) Vide the following item.
489. LETTER TO SECRETARY, CONGRESS COMMITTEE, CAWNPORE

BORSAD,
June 18, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I enclose herewith copy of a letter received by the Central Government from Messrs Ramjilal & Bros. If the allegations about picketing are correct, it is a clear case for immediate suspension of picketing. Unless, therefore, you can satisfactorily disprove the allegations made in the 2nd and subsequent paragraphs of the letter, you will, I hope, suspend picketing at once. I would like you to wire to me what action you propose to take.

Yours sincerely

THE SECRETARY
LOCAL CONGRESS COMMITTEE
CAWNPORE
COPY TO MR. EMERSON.

A.I.C.C. File No. 387, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

490. LETTER TO RAIHANA TYABJI

June 18, 1931

MY DEAR RAIHANA,

I trust your truthful nature too well to be shocked by anything you say. But your thoughts are cloudy and confused. But we cannot discuss the thing today. There is no hurry. Perhaps the things will be clear because of your search and because of your promise to do what I have advised for the sake of discipline though not from conviction. Often an honest acceptance of discipline has brought conviction. And so may it be with you. You did well in writing to me so frankly.

Let me correct one belief of yours about me. You say, “I know that you are too pure for sex-consciousness yourself.” I wish this was a true certificate. I am sorry to have to disillusion you. I am trying to lose that consciousness. But I have not lost it. Loss of that consciousness cannot be relative; it must be absolute. I do not know any historical instance. It is difficult, I know, for history to record such instances.

1 Vide footnote 2, “Letter to R. M. Maxwell”, 26-4-1931

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: S.N. 9631

491. LETTER TO V. K. SADAGOPACHARIAR

BORSAD,
June 18, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter. I hope that you will vigorously defend the case in the court and take all the legal steps that will be necessary in order to vindicate your position. I am doing all I can at this end but when the allegation is that there is a breach of the Criminal Law, I am helpless. My function comes into operation only when a breach of any part of the Settlement can be proved. In this case therefore, unless picketing, admitted to be peaceful, is prohibited, the Settlement cannot be utilized to obtain relief.1

Yours sincerely,

SYT. V. K. SADAGOPACHARIAR
PRESIDENT, TALUK CONGRESS COMMITTEE
TIRUTTANI (CHITTOOR DT.), S. INDIA

From a microfilm: S.N. 17308

1 In a letter to C. Rajagopalachari which is not available, Gandhiji advised him about the details of the action to be taken. The latter had placed these before the Governor and hoped that favourable orders would be issued.
492. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

BORSAD,

June 18, 1931

CHI. JAMNALAL,

Shah Mangaldas Harilal Gandhi, Fanaswadi, 2nd Lane, Dadisheth Agiari Lane, Harilal Maneklal Gandhi’s Flats. This gentleman is Shah Harilal Maneklal Gandhi’s son. One Surajbehn regarded Shri Harilal as her father. He has all her money. His present condition cannot be described as good. Surajbehn tells me that at one time it was very good. I have written to Shri Harilal and told him that it was not at all proper to keep a widow’s money in a private firm, and that he should deposit it in the Bank of India and send Surajbehn a receipt in her name. I enclose his reply. It is possible that there is no risk about the money. But I feel worried. Request Shri Mangaldas to see you, or you yourself should call on him, and ask him what the position is. Get all the facts and see if you can persuade him to deposit the money in the Bank. It is to be deposited in Surajbehn’s name. Her jewellery is also in their custody. If possible, get that, too, in your possession, or secure the Safe Deposit receipts for it, which are in their possession. You will not immediately require a letter of authority from Surajbehn. But wire to me if you require one and I will send it. In any case arrange to see Mangaldas immediately.

I am going there on the 24th to see those English friends.¹ I shall be accompanied by Vallabhbhai.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2889

493. LETTER TO JAMNADAS GANDHI

June 18, 1931

CHI. JAMNADAS,

What I had in mind was that you should get the money from the Vidyapith, but you should get your demand examined and approved by Kakasaheb. Draw up a report and state the case as you understand it, and send it to Kakasaheb saying that you are sending it to him for his scrutiny. Are you sure you cannot postpone the plan now that everything is uncertain?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 9325. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

494. LETTER TO PRESIDENT, CONGRESS COMMITTEE, TIRUTTANI

[Before June 19, 1931]

Gandhiji has asked picketers not to disobey the order as that would amount to a breach of the Truce terms on the part of Congress, but he promises to correspond with the Home Secretary, Government of India.

Meanwhile Gandhiji has asked Tiruttani Congressmen to send him a copy of the order and details regarding picketing movement in Tiruttani.

The Bombay Chronicle, 20-6-1931

1 In reply to his question whether the local Magistrate’s order prohibiting picketing of liquor shops should be disobeyed

2 The report appeared under the date-line “Madras, June 19”.

362 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
495. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

BORSAD,
June 19, 1931

DEAR MR. EMERSON,

Here are copies of letters received by Syts. Morarji Desai and Durlabhji Desai, ex-Deputy Collectors for both of whom the Central Government had advised the Bombay Government to give pension or gratuity in lieu of pension. You will remember that this was arranged because you had suggested to Lord Irwin that it would be embarrassing for Provincial Governments to restore officials of high rank to their original position. I remember your having told me during our conversations in Simla1 that the Bombay Government had difficulty about giving anything to the two officials concerned. But I was unprepared for the letter according to the enclosed copy. Both these gentlemen had applied not for grace but in terms of the Settlement. May I therefore ask you to advise the Bombay Government to carry out the Settlement in respect of these two officials?

Yours sincerely,

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-B, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

496. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

BORSAD,
June 19, 1931

DEAR MR. EMERSON,

I do not know whether you obtained legal opinion regarding confiscated guns. Complaints are being received from many places that these guns are not being restored. In most of these cases, so far as I can see, the guns were possessed for defending owners and their property against wild beasts. I have several such cases from Karnataka.

Yours sincerely,

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-B, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

1 On May 13, 1931
497. LETTER TO CAPTAIN BARNES

BORSAD,
June 19, 1931

DEAR CAPTAIN BARNES,

I thank you for your very full letter. I was sorry to learn that your health had broken down, I hope however that you will be completely restored very soon. Your letter was redirected to me from Sabarmati and so I got it just after Khan Saheb had left me. He was with me quite a few days and for the first time I came in intimate contact with him. My experience of him is that he is a very sober and truthful man believing implicitly in non-violence. Your letter however gives a different picture of him. As he is still within reach I am sending a friend with a copy of your letter for explanation and if there is anything further to tell you I shall write again. Could you please send me a copy of the drama referred to by you with translation or without, if you cannot easily send me a translation.

Yours sincerely,

CAPTAIN BARNES
HAMALA COTTAGE
NATHIAGALI, N.W.F.P.

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-C, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

498. LETTER TO C. F. ANDREWS

PRIVATE SABARMATI,
June 19, 1931

MY DEAR CHARLIE,

I have your two letters, both of them quite like you. Here is my answer to the moral questions you have placed. It is perfectly true that I would have prohibition of foreign cloth by one blow if I could manage it and would not feel that there was the slightest trace of violence in it. At this conclusion I arrived in 1889 and ’90 when I was studying in London and keenly following the controversy between...

---

1 Sub-Divisional Officer for the Charsadda sub-division of Peshawar District in 1930; he wrote to Gandhiji on June 14, 1931 describing Abdul Ghaffar Khan’s speeches as “inflammatory”.

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
total prohibitionists and temperance reformers. The former were led by Sir Wilfred Lawson who contended that all public houses could be closed without any compensation being paid to the keepers. The temperance party which was really the party financed by the public-house keepers put up a strong and successful fight for compensation and graduation. If a man is making a living out of wrongdoing he gains no prescriptive right and therefore is entitled to no compensation or consideration when his business is stopped whether by the State or by his customers refusing to deal with him. It is irrelevant to consider what would happen to the many labourers who might be engaged unconsciously in helping the wrongdoer. The assumption at the back of this argument is that wrong must be righted at any cost and that the harm that may temporarily seem to result to the wrongdoer and his dependents is only apparent and that in the end he and they are all the better for it. If such was not the case, many a reform would become impossible. Of course it is open to you to say that you will not put foreign-cloth trade on a level with liquor or opium trade. But this is a matter of opinion.

If I was bolstering up the Bombay mills in any shape or form it would undoubtedly be violence. But my conscience is quite clear on that point. I am not only not bolstering up the Indian mills but I am fighting them in many matters. My intervention has resulted in steady improvement of the conditions of labour. If these mills interfered with khaddar I should desire their boycott just as strongly as that of foreign mills.

The remedy for unemployment in England is not thoughtless generosity of India but a complete realization by England of the awfulness of exploitation of people, violently brought under subjection by her, and consequent radical changes in her conception of the standard of life and a return to simplicity. Has generosity, in respect of a man more fortunate than himself, any meaning for the man who is living in a state of chronic starvation?

The South African analogy you have quoted is improper. What you regard as generous action was really necessary action in terms of non-violence. In order to show that my fight was not intended to embarrass the Government or to seize power I was bound in pursuance of non-violence to suspend the struggle in order to show

---

1 In 1914, during the European railway workers’ strike; vide “Interview to “Pretoria News””, 9-1-1914 that I had no sympathy with the Europeans who were bent on embarrassing the Government to the point of making it so powerless as to enable them to seize the reins themselves. Occasions here for what you would call generosity occurred at the time of the Delhi Settlement \(^1\) and are occurring whilst the Settlement is being worked and it would delight your heart if you knew how every such occasion has been fully availed of. And even with reference to the present unemployment in England, many a generous gesture is possible but none is possible if it means continuance of injury to India or fresh injury. If England ceased to think imperially, if India came to her own and instead of being a dependency of England became a real partner or ally, England could get preferential treatment in hundreds of things, which an awakened India on her road to prosperity would require from the West. If therefore Lancashire cannot keep all its labour going through spinning and weaving mills working for other markets, it should find out some other use for it. Lastly, remember that even if there was no boycott of foreign cloth and open competition Japan would outdistance Lancashire as it is already doing.

I have your cable. Of course if I came to London my movement will be in your hands and I would gladly go to Lancashire as early as you would want me to.

I quite agree with you that your name should remain in the background as much as possible.

What undignified controversy over my part in the Boer War. I had to give the facts to Reuter & The Statesman\(^2\).

Love.

MOHAN

From a photostat: G.N. 969

---

\(^1\) Gandhi-Irwin Pact; vide “Provisional Settlement”, 12-3-1931.

\(^2\) Vide, “Telegram to the Statesman, Delhi”: 15-6-1931 and “Interview to Associated Press”, 15-6-1931
499. LETTER TO COWASJI JEHANGIR

BORSAD,
June 19, 1931

DEAR SIR COWASJI,

I thank you for your letter of the 18th instant.

You may publish any of my correspondence. I am glad that the lady says that there is no ground now for complaint. But I cannot help repeating in fairness to the parties complained against that they have never admitted the charges made against them and they have courted the fullest inquiry. My own position has always been never to bolster up such charges because I have found by experience that large movements like ours can only be kept pure by exposing every weakness among workers.

Yours sincerely

SIR COWASJI JEHANGIR

FORT, BOMBAY

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-C, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

500. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

BORSAD,
June 19, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

I don’t have time to write much today. The information about Manjula causes me anxiety. She has got over so many illnesses before now that she will probably get over this one, too. We should do our best for her treatment. If Mahavir wants to join the Vidyapith, let him. Read my letter to him. Sitla Sahay asked me to send my letter to him through you, and I am doing so.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./I

1 Regarding alleged harassment by pickets at Ghatkopar
2 Mrs. contractor
501. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

BORSAD,

June 19, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS.

I got your letters. I understand what you say about Dwarkanath. I am in correspondence with him.

We should not pay the premiums on Sorabji’s policy. I see little possibility of our getting back the original sum. I can think of no remedy against this.

Has Jamna completely recovered now? Was it that she took too large a dose of the medicine through mistake, or was it the fault of the vaid?

Panditji wanted to talk to me about the students. He believes that the arrangement by which Premabehn teaches Gujarati is not right. It is not sufficient either. He, therefore, requested that Shivabhai should be employed. You acceded to the request but put him in the office. He had also much to say against Premabehn’s temper. The reading-room remains closed while she is in it, so much so that it is not opened even for Maganbhai. After hearing all this, I merely said that, if I inter-vened in the Ashram affairs just now, it would amount to my living in it, but that, when necessary, I might give some guidance. I, therefore, advised him to discuss the whole matter with you and solve the problem. I think you should have a frank talk with him. He is a straight forward man. If he has not talked to you about all this, you should use this letter and discuss the matter with him and reassure him. You may consult me if necessary.

Champa must have arrived there today. I have advised her to stay in the Ashram. If she does not do that, let her stay in the red bungalow or anywhere else. Some special arrangement will have to be made about Shashi’s education. It would be best if you could secure the services of a good lady teacher. Consult Kakasaheb. Savitabehn, too, may be able to guide you. Balvant, Champa’s brother, wants to be permitted to live in the Ashram. I have told him that he may do so if he agrees to obey the rules. He is also eager to stay with Krishnan Nair. I have written to him.

Blessings from

BAPU

368

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
I will leave this place on the 23rd and spend the 24th and the 25th in Bombay. I then return to Bardoli on the 26th. This last is not definite.

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./I

502. LETTER TO GANGABEHN VAIDYA

BORSAD,
June 19, 1931

CHI. GANGABEHN,

I had your letter. Take Indu under your loving care. That boy is pining away without his mother. The thing is that you should, like a mother, keep a watchful eye on all boys and girls. To any woman who wishes to serve as a mother, they are her children. Many women may act as mothers to the same children. If, therefore, any other woman feels such love in her heart, we should be happy about it. It is but right that she should feel such love. At any rate you should try to awaken it in other women.

Whenever you feel upset and worried, let me know. Never lose heart. Try and get to know personally the men and women who have recently joined. Remember that you are also a member of the Managing Committee.

You have taken a rather difficult vow in regard to your food. Since you take milk, no harm will follow. Keep me informed about the effects on your health.

Cultivate the acquaintance of Amtulbehn. She seems to have a very pure heart.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-6: G. S. Gangabehn, pp. 54-5; also C.W. 8777. Courtesy: Gangabehn Vaidya

[PS.]

VOL. 52 : 28 APRIL, 1931 - 1 JULY, 1931
503. LETTER TO RATANLAL MALAVIYA

BORSAD,
June 19, 1931

DEAR RATANLAL,

I have your letter. I saw the Government notice. It is no doubt improper. If the students have courage and the spirit of sacrifice they should not attend college till the flag goes up again.

Mohan Das Gandhi

SHRI RATANLAL MALAVIYA
LAW STUDNET
NEW HOSTEL
COLONELGANJ
ALLAHABAD-U.P.

From the Hindi original. Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library

504. LETTER TO VICEROY

BORSAD,
June 20, 1931

DEAR FRIEND.

I thank you for your kind letter of the 17th instant. So far as I am personally concerned I am concentrating on implementing the Settlement by the Congress, practically to the exclusion of every other activity.

Iam,
Yours sincerely

EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY
SIMLA

M. K. GANDHI

Home Department, Political File No. 33/9/1931. Courtesy: National Archives of India
DEAR MR. EMERSON,

I have your letter of 16th June enclosing extract from an account received from the Madras Government regarding picketing. It does make bad reading if the report is true. But what I am receiving almost daily from Madras from workers who are thoroughly reliable eye-witnesses makes me distrust the reports that you are receiving. But I know that this takes us no further. So far as the Congress is concerned I want it to implement the Settlement to the fullest extent. I therefore make an offer. Will you advise local governments to appoint a Board of Enquiry consisting of a nominee on their behalf and a nominee on behalf of the Congress to conduct a summary enquiry into the allegations on either side, and wherever it is found that the rule of peaceful picketing has been at all violated picketing would be entirely suspended, the Government undertaking on its part to stop prosecutions wherever it is found that they have been undertaken in spite of peaceful picketing. And if my suggestion does not commend itself to you, you will perhaps suggest something better and more acceptable. Meanwhile I am enquiring into the specific charge mentioned in your letter.¹

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: C.W. 9369. Courtesy: India Office Library

¹ For the addressee’s reply, vide “Letter from H. W. Emerson”, 4-7-1931
506. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

BORSAD,
June 20, 1931

DEAR MR. EMERSON,

With reference to your letter enclosing extract from a report dated 19th May from the District Magistrate, Surat, I now send you a translation of the statement that Naran Dulabh, the party named in the extract, has made.

Yours sincerely

M. K. GANDHI

Encl. 1.

Home Department, Political, File No. 33/9/1931. Courtesy: National Archives of India

507. LETTER TO BHUJANGILAL K. CHHAYA

BORSAD,
June 20, 1931

CHI. BHUJANGILAL,

I have your letter. I know that there has been a long-standing bond between your family and me. My letter to Jamnadas asking him to go and see you was in answer to your previous letter. You may see me here at Borsad on Tuesday. A bus for Borsad is always available at the Anand railway station.

Blessings from

MOHANDAS

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2602

1 Who had agreed to lease his land to Dhanjishaw Erachshaw, liquor seller, but, finding that village opinion was adverse, had decided not to lease the land.
508. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

BORSAD,
June 20, 1931

CHI. JAMNALAL,

I have read the resolution about Bhagat Singh which you sent. Dev, too, had sent a copy at your suggestion. I did not like it at all. The word “today” has affected the value of the resolution. The addition of “today” may suggest that even today the meeting has no faith in non-violence. Even those who do not look upon non-violence as an unalterable article of faith need not feel it necessary to add “today”.

I shall arrive there not on the 24th but on Thursday, the 25th. I at any rate will travel by Gujarat Mail. If you wish, you may discuss this matter further with me then.

Read the accompanying letter about Chaunde Maharaj and inquire into the matter if necessary.

Rajendrababu should give up the idea of going to Bihar at present. Has Radhika come there?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2890

509. LETTER TO PADMA

BORSAD,
June 20, 1931

CHI. PADMA,

I have your letter. I cannot understand why Vasumatiibehn should try to get your private notebook. Nobody is entitled to take anything belonging to somebody else without the latter’s knowledge. I am inquiring about the matter. Do not, however, take it very much to heart. You should be generous. Your chief aim should be to improve your health.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6121
510. LETTER TO NANABHAI I. MASHRUWALA

BORSAD,
June 20, 1931

BHAI NANABHAI,

If people, despite gentle persuasion, persist in disregarding the khadi rule persons like Deshpande should resign and give all their time to the propagation of khadi. In such circumstances, one can serve the Congress even from outside.¹

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6682

511. LETTER TO CHANDRAKANTA

BORSAD,
June 20, 1931

CHI. KANTA,

I have your letter. You must have forgotten Gujarati now. I am writing this letter in Gujarati so that you may not forget it completely. I have no interest in examinations at all. True examination is that to which your teacher himself submits you. A certificate from the place of study should be sufficient. The best certificate is one’s own. What is the point of my having a certificate for proficiency in arithmetic if I cannot do addition and substraction? If I do not know who Ashoka was and what he did, what is the use of my having a similar certificate in history? This contains the reply to your letter.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: Chandrakanta Papers. Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library

¹ Vide “Notes”, sub-title, “Duty of Disciplinarians”.

374 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
512. LETTER TO PARASRAM MEHROTRA

BORSAD,
June 20, 1931

CHI. PARASRAM,

I had your letter. Why do you ask whether or no I have confidence in you? If I had none, could I have exhorted you to make big sacrifices? Yet, I may tell you that I cannot pronounce you free from restlessness. Can you spin 250 yds. in an hour on the takli? The pictures you have sent are highly objectionable.1 All of them deserve to be burnt up.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

I will look into members’ spinning.

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 7489; also C.W. 4966. Courtesy: Parasuram Mehrotra

513. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

BORSAD,
June 20, 1931

BHAJ GHANSHYAMDASJI,

I have your letter and the reply to Lindsay’s letter. I shall go through the reply and suggest if anything yet remains to be said.

It is good that khadi is being hawked. Here is my message:

“If swaraj means food for the poor, can any aspirant for swaraj, man or woman, use any cloth other than khadi? Khadi, though costly, costs less because we have to make do with less of it than the quantity of other cloth that we would otherwise consume.”

You have mentioned “hawking of khadi and propagation of swadeshi”. What do you mean by the latter phrase?

It will be fine if the Bose and Sen Gupta affair is settled.

1 In the pictures Gandhiji had been represented as Lord Krishna and the other leaders as five Pandavas.
That the Working Committee has passed a resolution does not mean that my going has been finally decided. For one thing I have received no invitation and even if I do receive one, many obstacles lie in the way. The Provincial Governments have grown very slack in the implementation of the Delhi Pact. I have no enthusiasm left for going to England. Read carefully my article in Young India and also the one to be published tomorrow in Navajivan. I have come exactly to that view now. That way alone lies the well-being of the people, not otherwise. I have some slight doubt regarding the last two words, but even that is growing fainter now.

Yours,

MOHANDAS

From Hindi: C.W. 7890. Courtesy: G. D. Birla

---

514. LETTER TO SUMANGAL PRAKASH

BORSAD,

June 20, 1931

CHI. SUMANGAL,

I have your letter. If you are on the way to recovery what need is there to get yourself involved in any hocus-pocus? Please write to Ramdasji that witchcraft should be shunned even if it is effective in curing illness because it weakens one’s faith in God.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: Sumangal Prakash Papers. Courtesy: Nehru memorial Museum and Library

---

1 On June 9 at Bombay; vide footnote 1, “Substance Not Shadow”, 18-6-1931
2 “Substance Not Shadow”, 18-6-1931, which was reproduced in Hindi Navajivan of the same date. For the Gujarati article, vide the Addendum.
515. MY NOTES

NUDITY AND SOCIETY

An article on this subject has appeared in Jain Mitra. Its author, Jain-Nyaya Tirtha Paramesthidas, has asked me to reply to the article; I wished to express my view in this issue, but in spite of best effort I could not find the necessary time. I hope to reply to it at the earliest opportunity.¹ As the problem is not of immediate importance, I have had naturally to give priority to other more urgent matters.

STUDENTS²

A student writes:³

I hear that such undertakings are demanded in other provinces also. I will not discuss here the question whether this involves a violation of the Settlement but this raises another question which requires discussion. Why should parents give such an undertaking; and if they do, what would be its value? It is likely that the authorities will act wrongly in many things which lie outside the terms of the Settlement. When that happens, one’s duty lies not in acquiescing in such action or co-operating with the authorities but in not co-operating with them. No one should interpret the Agreement to mean that the people should now give up resistance to authority and sit back with folded hands. An agreement may clarify certain things, but may not clarify some others. The people should certainly not sacrifice their self-respect in matters not so clarified. Hence I would certainly advise parents or students not to give such undertakings if they are demanded from them and if for that reason the latter cannot attend Government schools, they should stay away from them. All persons thus concerned should remember that the present uncertain state will not last long. Before the beginning of the next year at the latest, we shall have known whether the Congress demand is going to be accepted. There is no need to say what should be done in case it is rejected.

¹ Vide “Digambar Sadhus”, 5-7-1931.
² Vide “Notes”, sub-title, “Self-respect above All”.
³ The letter is not translated here. It enclosed a guarantee form to be filled in by guardians that their wards would not participate in political activities.
FREEDOM ABOUT SALT

Can we carry salt from a village where it may be manufactured and sell it in surrounding villages where it cannot be?

If the villages are so near that one can reach them on foot one can certainly sell there the salt manufactured by oneself.

Does the Simla Notification make any difference to the law hitherto in force that, within 10 miles of the coastline, no one could stock more than one Bengal maund of salt?

There can be no such law though I had heard of a notification to that effect having been issued. The latest notification issued should be understood to cancel all previous notifications that may be inconsistent with it. The correct position is this: According to the Agreement one may stock the salt needed for one’s consumption or manufactured by oneself within the limits of one’s village and intended for sale in places which one can reach on foot.

Can one stock salt for sale? Fishermen need more salt in the month of Bhadrapad. Can one stock enough salt for them and sell it to them at that time?

The answer to this is included in the reply above.

Can we make in Government land the pits and beds for manufacturing salt? Or should we make them in our own?

Such pits can be made wherever salt can be manufactured. As for private land the owner’s permission would be required, and hence the Agreement implies that pits may be made in Government land or one’s own.

IRRELIGION IN THE NAME OF RELIGION

There is a village, named Raghvanaj in Matar Taluka. It is well known that under Thakkar Bapa’s supervision, wells for Antyajas are being dug at many places in Gujarat, and one such well is being dug at Raghvanaj. The person supervising the work there had sent to Thakkar Bapa a report, the following extract from which deserves to be pondered over by all Hindus.¹

This is the height of tyranny. I do not blame the Dharalas much for the incident. The blame lies with the so-called highcaste Hindus. The Dharalas are merely acting under the influence of the atmosphere which the former have created. In wielding this whip of my pen, I have little hope of waking up the Dharala men and women, but I do certainly hope to be able to wake up Congress workers and the readers of Navajivan. In such a situation, the Congress workers who come to know of it should themselves take up the spade and start working, explain the meaning of dharma to Dharalas and others who may be oppressing the Antyajas and teach the latter to shed fear and to be self-reliant. All this can be easily done as soon as we get ready to work with our own hands. But we would do so only if we feel revolted by such oppression.

¹ The passage is not translated here. It described how Dharala masons were punished for working alongside Dhed volunteers.

MILLIONS SMOKED AWAY

A correspondent from Calcutta writes as follows:

It is not very likely that my writing on the subject would end the present waste of millions on smoking. But, apropos of this letter, I may remark here on a phenomenon which I have been observing. We seem to have become indifferent in keeping up the reforms which had spontaneously spread during the satyagraha movement. The inference to be drawn from this is alarming. If we behave well only while we are fighting and lapse into slackness as soon as the intoxication of battle is over, it would be difficult, if not impossible, to preserve swaraj after it is won. In that case, would it not be desirable that the struggle be prolonged? Perhaps such a conclusion is not altogether justified, but I certainly fear that it may be in the interest of the country that the struggle should continue sufficiently long so that the people may acquire the capacity to preserve swaraj. The fight ended before we had acquired strength enough to assimilate the reforms brought about while it was going on. May I hope that readers who have become indifferent in this matter will draw the appropriate lesson from this, shake off their indifference and wake up others as well? To those who realize that the satyagraha fight is a fight for self-purification, every day is a day of battle or, if you like, of peace, for the effort for self-purification should not be relaxed even for a moment.

[From Gujarati]

Javajivan, 21-6-1931

1 The letter is not translated here. It said that cigarettes, boycotted during the struggle, were coming back into use.
Everyone must have read the resolution of the Congress Working Committee. It says in substance that if other conditions are favourable and if I am invited, I should attend the Round Table Conference to put before it the Congress demand even if the communal question remains unsolved. I did not like the resolution. I opposed it. I even placed before the Committee for discussion a draft resolution along the lines I desired. But I was defeated and the resolution to the above effect was passed by a majority.

Though I am often described as an autocrat, I consider myself a man who accepts the supremacy of the people’s voice; it is in my nature to give in to a panch. Panch means the voice of the people. I, therefore, accepted the resolution passed by the majority. There is an exception to this rule. We cannot give in to anyone on a question of principle. But there are not many principles in life. One who at every step refuses, in the name of principle, to listen to others is autocratic and selfish. Questions of principle arise only rarely. Here there was no such question, and so I gave in. I had often declared my determination not to attend the Round Table Conference if the Hindu-Muslim, i.e., the communal question was not solved. But I could not convince the Working Committee of the correctness of my position. Ordinarily it would not be proper for me to put before the public my argument. No member has a right to publish anything that is discussed in the Working Committee. But in this case, the Committee has given me permission to do so. The Committee felt that in order to enable me to explain my position as also its own policy it was necessary to give me such permission.

The reasoning behind my reluctance to go to the Round Table Conference without solving the communal question was as follows: Even if the question was solved, the acceptance of the Congress demand in England was unlikely, but if it was not solved the sanction behind the demands would be lost. ‘You cannot put your own house in order and cannot unite yourselves, and still you ask for independence!’ Even if the members do not say this openly out of politeness, they would think thus and we would read their thought in their eyes. And they would, on the whole, be justified in taunting us thus.

\[^1\] Vide footnote 2, “My Notes”
It would be better to accept our weakness rather than invite ridicule by going in such a pitiable condition. A satyagrahi never hides his weakness. According to the law of satyagraha, from the admission of weakness new strength is born. The first step in conquering weakness is its admission.

No one should conclude from my argument that the Working Committee’s resolution is an attempt to hide our weakness. It reflects the consequence of weakness and hence amounts to unconscious hiding of it. The logical consequence of the admission of the weakness would be not to go to the Round Table Conference. That alone would be true admission of the weakness. One who does not have the strength to walk and admits that in words but actually tries to walk, has not truly admitted his weakness and by walking weakens himself all the more. He may even faint and collapse.

Now if we admit our incapacity to solve the problem and do not send a representative of the Congress to the Round Table Conference, what should we do instead? That would not mean that we give up our fight for purna swaraj. The Round Table Conference is only one means of securing it. We may have to let go that means. Everyone will understand this much at once. But we should even give up the desire and the hope to secure purna swaraj through the Round Table Conference. We have then to swallow one bitter dose, and that is that whatever fight we start will not be for purna swaraj in name, though the result would be the same.

If the communal question cannot be solved satisfactorily now, then it means that the methods which we have tried so far to solve it were wrong or inadequate. The attempts so far made aimed at bringing about understanding among the Hindu and Muslim politicians. They were of the nature of a fight for power among them. From such fighting no unity can come, none has come at least. If, therefore, the Congress desires unity of the heart, it should get out of that field and try to gain power over the hearts of Muslims and the other communities as it has gained over those of the Hindus. Such an attempt is bound to result in a unity of hearts. There is no scope for failure in it. The power of the Congress has its source in service of the people. If the Congress programme is so organized that the Muslims and the others continue to get equal benefit, then they also will come to know the Congress.
It is not that today nothing is done for their service. Nevertheless we must acknowledge the fact that Muslims, Sikhs and others do not respond to the Congress as much as the Hindus do. Instead of finding fault with these communities for this state of affairs, it would be better and more graceful for the Congress to admit its deficiency.

When the Congress will be overflowing with Indians other than Hindus, then there will be no difference between a communal solution and a national solution, the Muslims or other communities will not be afraid, because they are fewer in number, of the far more numerous Hindus, and the Hindus, physically weaker though in a majority, will not be afraid of the physically stronger Mussalmans or Sikhs. Each community’s strength will benefit the other communities. Unless such conditions are created, paper swaraj will fly off with a puff like the sheet of paper on which it is written.

What is paper swaraj, and what is the other swaraj? Let us see. The swaraj got through the Round Table Conference means the swaraj constitution accepted by us and passed by British Parliament into law. This is the swaraj on the statute book, i.e., paper swaraj. Behind it, there would not be the signatures of the millions; in fact the millions would not be trusting one another. If Hindus and Muslims in Kanpur and Kashi are fighting one another, then such swaraj would be no better than chaff.

True swaraj is that which will have signatures of the millions behind it, whose cool shelter the millions would enjoy, and in which the incidents at Kanpur and Kashi would be past history to us and we would laugh heartily at our past follies. Whether or not such swaraj has become statutory, it would be true swaraj and would be like wheat, for it would be nourishing.

I am of the view that if we cannot solve the communal question satisfactorily and if we decide to fight for the swaraj of my conception, then our boycott of the Round Table Conference will be a sign of our strength and will uphold our self-respect.

This is the fight of my conception. Even if the communal question is not solved and the representative of the Congress does not attend the Round Table Conference, something is bound to be done. Let the communal-minded Hindus and Muslims and others share a little power with the British under that Constitution and think that they are participating in ruling the country. The Congress instead of asking for power from that Government will demand the things for which they want power and, if they are refused, it will fight through satya-graha. We do not want political power for its own sake, we want it for a certain end. That end is service of the millions. If we cannot get today the reins of power in our hands to improve their economic, moral and social conditions, we need not on that account stop that work.

By giving such a turn to the fight for swaraj, we can bypass the communal tangle and invite all the people to join the fight. Nobody will be able to keep out of it. Those who refuse to join will lose their face. All those who have the spirit of self-sacrifice and courage cannot but join in the demand for what is necessary for the uplift of the millions.

For example, a fight for revision of the land revenue laws to make them more equitable and to reduce the burden of land revenue would be for the benefit of all communities and in time everybody would join it. Such a fight would result either in the desired reforms being effected or in those holding power handing over the power to the rebellious people. Either result would mean the same to us. As a result of such a fight communal discords would disappear and the people would know who their servants were and who their masters. The people’s strength would increase day by day, they would get true political education and know where their interests lay. This, according to me, would be true swaraj. If we adopt such a course in time we would find purna swaraj in our lap.

But I could not convince the Working Committee of the soundness of this scheme. The majority of the members felt that as the Settlement had been signed, if other circumstances were favourable I must attend the Round Table Conference despite the absence of a solution of the communal question. I will go out of respect for the collective decision of the Committee. And if I go, I will use all my ability to present the Congress demand and to get it accepted. But if the communal question is not solved, I believe it highly improbable that our demand will be accepted, and if it is not accepted and if it is decided to resume the fight, I would try to give the fight the turn I have explained above.

[From Gujarati]

Navajivan, 21-6-1931
517. LETTER TO J. C. KUMARAPPA

BORSAD,
June 21, 1931

MY DEAR KUMARAPPA.

Here is another letter from Syt. Chatur Behari Lal Andley. You know best whether it is of any importance.

Yours sincerely,

BAPU

Encl. I
Syt. J. C. KUMARAPPA
65 ESPLANADE ROAD
BOMBAY

From a photostats G.N. 10096

518. LETTER TO NATHAM MUSLIM ASSOCIATION, ABIRAMA

[AS AT] SABARMATI,
June 21, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your telegram¹. I know that Indian life is in danger in Burma, but what can be done from here? You have to make such effort as you can on your side and wherever safety is threatened you should migrate to safer places. And in order that some action can be taken at this end, you should send full particulars of loss of life and how the loss occurred. Are the Burmans in the villages hostile to Indian trade and Indian residence? Are our people well-behaved towards them? If you will give me all these particulars it might be possible to create public opinion here.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

The Hindu, 2-7-1931

¹ It read: “Lives, properties of innumerable innocent Indians in Burma still in great danger. Massacre reported daily. Pray persuade authorities take immediate necessary steps to restore peace and harmony.”
BHAI KASHINATH,

I got your letter.

I certainly intend to write something about the Digambar Jain Sadhus.\(^1\) I am thinking what I can write.

I had a talk with Haribhau, too, about your decision to leave. I understand your reasons. You two cannot save yourselves from falling. The fact is that you have already fallen.

He who curbs the organs of action but allows the mind to dwell on sense-objects,—such a one, wholly deluded, is called a hypocrite.\(^2\)

Here we should understand \textit{vimudhatma} to mean merely that the person lacks true knowledge and that, therefore, his outward self-control is of no value. The man who lets his mind dwell on lustful thoughts cannot be regarded a \textit{brahmachari} simply because he refrains from physical gratification. In other words, one must banish from one’s mind all evil thoughts which may arise in it. Anyone who wants to succeed in this effort would take the necessary steps, which you never did. Now you should recognize the lack of self-control in you both, live humbly as an ordinary married couple and practise only such self-control outwardly as you can do mentally as well. Think over the meaning of the bhajan: “Unless the mind is free from desire, renunciation cannot endure.” Do not feel that I am reproaching you. Rest assured that I have only tried to open your eyes to the truth so that you may wake up.

I am enclosing a note\(^3\) saying that the sums which you owe to \textit{Navajivan} and the Ashram should be written off. You may use it. I think that this was a mistake on your part. You should not have incurred debts in that way. Instead of borrowing money and then seeking exemption from repaying the loan, at the very time of drawing the money you should have asked for so much more by way of honorarium. We ought not to value in terms of money the work done for a public cause. I write this for the sake of purity in our dealings. Only if we maintain the highest standards of purity in our practical affairs can we come out of our abject condition of mind. He who never feels inwardly poor is richer than even the richest millionaire.

\(^1\) Vide “Digambar Sadhus”, 5-7-1931.
\(^2\) \textit{Bhagavad Gita}, III. 6
\(^3\) Vide the following item.

I am going to Bombay from here on Wednesday. Both of you may come before that if you wish to. You may, however, save your time and money, if you can be satisfied with my blessings conveyed to you through a letter from here. We haven’t yet learnt the lesson of simplicity. This charge applies to nearly everyone. The fault lies with the circumstances. I have always had plenty of money at my disposal, so that I have not succeeded in exercising strict control in its use. I have therefore often wished how good it would be if people stopped giving us money and we did not even know how we would get our next meal. Read again my article' in Navajivan on this subject.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5281

---

1 Vide “Public Expense”, 21-5-1931
520. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

BORSAD,
June 21, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

Write off the sums which the account books show as due from Bhai Kashinath. He has not the means to pay them.

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./I

521. LETTER TO LAKSHMINARAYAN GADODIA

BORSAD,
June 21, 1931

BHAI LAKSHMINARAYANJI,

I read your humorous but painful letter, containing the account of all that happened in Kashmir in connection with the flag. The sketch is very interesting and reveals the deplorable conditions in the Indian States. It was your insistence on a written order that saved you. It is evident an ordinary man, had he carried the flag, would have been arrested. Let us see what this Round Table Conference accomplishes.

Yes, Kotak is doing good work in Kashmir.

Door to door propaganda is required for the boycott of foreign cloth. That is more effective than picketing and the result is more or less permanent.

Should not Dr. Ansari do something about the quarrels in Delhi? You may suggest this to him.

Yours
Mohanandas

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 5622

522. LETTER TO PADMA

June 21, 1931

CHI. PADMA,

I am writing this reply on the blank portion of your letter, but I will not use the whole sheet. You must take careful measures and improve your health completely. If you wish, you may go and live with Sarojinidevi\(^1\), after obtaining the permission of Sitla Sahay\(^2\) and also of Narandas. But you must get all right before leaving the Ashram. You are bound to get well if you take regularly the medicine prescribed for you. Your handwriting has improved a lot. With a little more effort, it will be still better.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6122

523. LETTER TO RAOJIBHAI N. PATEL

BORSAD,
_June 21, 1931_

BHAI RAOJIBHAI,

I have your letter. If the superior officer does not listen to you and redress the injustice, I would advise you to put up with it for some time. Perhaps after a few days I may be able to advise you to take further steps in the matter.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 8992

524. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

BORSAD,
_June 21, 1931_

CHI. NARANDAS,

I have your letter. It was Panditji who told me about Maganbhai. I certainly thought that there must have been some misunderstanding on his part over other matters as there was over this. But Panditji speaks out what he has in mind and then thinks no more about it. That is a great virtue in him.

Mahadev told me that Manju was perfectly all right now.

The Punjabi vaid seems to charge rather high fee. If, however, his medicines are effective, why should we not let ourselves be treated

\(^1\) Addressee’s mother
\(^2\) Addressee’s father
by him and pay him his fees? Do not allopathic doctors sometimes charge Rs. 1,000 for a day? Some of them give free service to us. This vaid thought that, if he could charge others, he could certainly charge us too. If he is an honest vaid, we should not mind his fee. He does not charge for a visit separately, but charges for visits and medicines together. Allopathic doctors charge for them separately.

Shivabhai had a talk with me about his wife. Even if he cannot come, I see that we have no choice but to admit his wife. If she becomes too much of a problem, inform Shivabhai. It would be better if she stays with Gangabehn or with some other woman of equal standing.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U.II

525. LETTER TO LALJI PARMAR

BORSAD,
June 22, 1931

CHI. LALJI,

So I have a letter from you at last. Do not be so lazy again. Write to your father and tell him plainly that you do not wish even your engagement to take place just now. Improve your handwriting. Write to me regularly every week. How much do you weave daily now?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3293
526. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

BORSAD,

June 22, 1931

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I got your letter. You are doing right in giving your address in every letter. You should not feel worried but do your duty in the given circumstances. If you can come away early, you can stay with me for many days. Nothing is yet certain about my going to England, but, even if I go, I shall not be able to take you with me, however much I may wish to do so. The work which I have to do there will not permit me to do that. Moreover, the expense of taking you with me will be far too much. That would not become people like us who are trying to live simple lives. If, however, you come away from there to stay with me, why need you return? While I am away, you will live in the Ashram. You are bound to keep good health there. All that is necessary is that you should come away soon.

For some time, Rajendrababu will stay hereabouts. Afterwards, he will certainly return to Patna. But that will be after some time yet.

The Committee will meet on July 7.

I am in Borsad, but you should write to me to the Bardoli address.

[Blessings] from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3415
527. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

BORSAD,
June 22, 1931

CHI. PREMA,

I have your letter. You have given enough details. I think it would have been good if you had come and seen me. I could follow Kisan’s letter. Write to her and tell her that I liked it.

Gangabehn’s eagerness to teach the girls all she can is quite sincere and is also admirable. I should like to give her all possible help in strengthening it. You, too, should help her.

Panditji has much to complain against you. Go to him and listen to all that he has to say, and reply to his complaints courteously. It will be difficult to find an inmate of the Ashram as sincere as Panditji. Win him over. Why should he have reason to complain against you? You are by nature harsh, curt, reserved. This much is true. I don’t think that these are serious defects, but they are bound to create difficulties. You should, therefore, try to overcome them. Straighten out matters with Panditji immediately.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Up to the 24th, letters should be directed here. On the 25th and the 26th, I shall be in Bombay. On the 27th, most probably I shall be in Bardoli. But it is not certain.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 10257; also C.W. 6705. Courtesy: Premabehn Kantak

---

1 A friend of the addressee; she had worked hard in Bombay during the civil disobedience movement.

2 The addressee in her book, Bapuna Patro, explains that her insistence on discipline and her intolerance and discourteous behaviour towards elderly inmates of the Ashram had caused much resentment.
528. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

BORSAD,
June 22, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

This letter will be brought to you by one Mahadev Mailar and his wife, Sidhudevi. Mahadev was an inmate of the Ashram. He was married at an early age. He observes complete brahmacharya and tells me that his wife, too, understands the importance of the vow. Mahadev works in an Ashram which is being run in a place called Hosari. He and his wife will ultimately settle in that Ashram. Just now, they wish to learn Hindi. They will learn other things, too, but they are especially eager to master Hindi. See what arrangements you can make for them. Personally, I think you can enlist the services of that crazy fellow Parasram. Though crazy, he has clung to us. I don’t feel like shifting him from Kanpur, but we may do that if necessary. It is certainly desirable that the Ashram should have perfect arrangements for teaching Hindi.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

I have told Mahadev that, if his wife is found to be of no use to the Ashram, she will have to leave. We shall have to bear the expenditure on them. They, on their part, are of course willing to work so that the Ashram is not out of pocket on their account.

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./I

529. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

[June 22, 1931]¹

CHI. NARANDAS.

There is only one point in your letter which calls for a reply. In what context did I tell Soman that he might take his meals separately from others? I don’t remember having told him this, but I will carry out whatever he remembers that I told him. The general rule is what you

¹ From the contents, the letter seems to have been written a day before the letter to the addressee dated June 23, 1931; vide “Worth While Questions”, 26-4-1931

392 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
Janakibai is a pious woman. We should keep her in the Ashram as long as she feels happy in it. If you think it proper, show this to Bhai Soman. What does he do these days?

Mahavir’s fever must have left him.

Mirabehn and Gaur Gopaldas intend to go to the Ashram. Mirabehn now realizes that her place is in the Ashram or wherever there is some work to do. She is convinced of this and wishes to live accordingly. That is why she is going there. Assign her any work you think proper. Make whatever arrangements you do on the understanding that, if I have to go to England, she will accompany me. If I have to go, it will be in the middle of August.

I am intentionally sending Gaur Gopal there. He is a youth of a very straightforward nature. You must have come to know that he belongs to a zamindar family. Make him as comfortable as you can and assign to him any work you think proper. See that he acquires proficiency in Hindi and learns to card and spin well. I should like him to complete the whole course in weaving. Arrange his work in such a way that he gets some time for reading.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Mirabehn will leave by the Kathiawar Mail tomorrow. It arrives there at 7.30 or 8 a.m. She will hire a tonga from the station to take her to the Ashram. If Ranchhodbhai or somebody else agrees to go to the station and take her in a car to the Ashram, that will save her time. Get Mirabehn’s room vacated for her. Balvant and Gaur Gopal will probably be travelling with her.

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-9: Shri Narandas Gandhine, Pt. I, pp. 263-4; also C.W. 8176.

Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi
530. LETTER TO GANGABEHN VAIDYA

BORSAD,
June 22, 1931

CHL. GANGABEHN,

I expect much from you at this time. If you wish to cultivate oneness with all the women and see that the girls make great progress, you should, instead of undertaking too many tasks, be content with a few and give more time to general supervision. If you try to do every small thing yourself, you will not be able to exercise general supervision. You should also give up thinking about new plans of work and the ambition to jump high. At present you have quite a large number of grown-up women and girls under your charge. If this field of the Ashram activities is perfectly organized, the Ashram will overflow with women and girls. Think that your family is of unlimited size.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro-6: G.S. Gangabehnne, p. 55; also C.W. 8778. Courtesy: Gangabehn Vaidya

531. ADVICE TO FARMERS, BORSAD

BORSAD,
June 22, 1931

Answering various questions put to him, Mahatma Gandhi said that everyone who could afford should pay all dues, including past dues and taqavi. By affording, he meant ability to pay without borrowing and without selling their belongings. He had, from the moment he entered Borsad, made it clear to the authorities and in his personal conversation with the Collector, that it was on that basis that he proposed to work and offer help and it was on that basis that the lists were prepared and payments made.

He was happy to see that all but Rs. 2,000 to Rs. 3,000 had been paid and he had been given an assurance that this sum also would be paid up in two or three days. There was now, therefore, no question of further calls upon them during the present year. He had, however, written to the Collector, asking him to furnish the names of those whom he might suspect of having withheld their correct position from him. He would be severely disappointed if he had been misled by any of the landholders.

He warned them and told them that if there were any whom they knew, they should bring their names to his notice and induce them to pay land revenue. Regarding village officers who were still awaiting reinstatement, he said that he was in correspondence with the authorities and hoped to have a satisfactory decision about them.

Concluding, Mahatma Gandhi exhorted Patidars, who had taken prominent part in the struggle, to get rid of untouchability and treat other backward communities, such as Dharalas and Barias, as themselves.

Asked what they should do regarding their confiscated lands sold to third parties, Mahatma Gandhi said that he hoped still to secure all such lands, but if the so-called purchasers came to take possession no opposition should be offered them. If they were still in possession, they could till the land but they should realize that they ran the risk of having to lose labour and seed if they were called upon to give up possession, which they would have to do. Whilst no one should work on such land on behalf of purchasers, no molestation should be offered against those who wished to work.

_The Bombay Chronicle, 24-6-1931_

532. LETTER TO KUSUM DESAI

    Monday [On or after June 22, 1931]²

CHI. KUSUM,

I got your letter. Since you are so far away, I am helpless. I am decidedly of the opinion that you should give up your intention of joining the Congress and should cling to your work. Many others besides you have taken up similar work at my instance. It would surprise and pain me if you cannot observe even this measure of self-restraint. However, follow your own inclination.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1823

---

¹ A community in Gujarat, consisting chiefly of peasant farmers
² _Bapuna Patro-3: Kusum Desaine_ places this letter after the one dated June 18, 1931; June 22 was Monday.
533. LETTER TO J. C. KUMARAPPA

BORSAD,
June 23, 1931

MY DEAR KUMARAPPA,

I forgot to get Sardar to wire though we talked for one minute. You did well to send a reminder. I have now written. You may expect a wire from Bardoli tomorrow or the day after.

BAPU

ADHYAPAK J. C. KUMARAPPA
GUJARAT VIDYAPITH
AHMEDABAD

From a photostat: G.N. 10097

534. LETTER TO MANILAL AND SUSHILA GANDHI

June 23, 1931

CHI. MANILAL AND SUSHILA,

I got your joint letter (only three lines from Sushila). Corruption you will find everywhere. The reformer and public worker should do what he can to remove it, himself remain untouched by it, and cease worrying. However, personally I do believe that persons like you would get better support in India and so be able to do some work. But now that you have gone back there, you should stay on for some time and, if you wish to wind up the work, do so properly before you come away. It would certainly be good if Indian Opinion continues. But rather than that it should pass into the hands of persons who may not run it well, it had better stop. Everything that exists is bound to perish sooner or later. Let Indian Opinion, then, meet its end at your hands. Meet Kallenbach, Omar Sheth and others, and do what you think proper after discussing the matter with them.

You should plan to return here when the struggle is resumed. It seems certain that it will be resumed next year, though I will make every effort to see that it does not become necessary. Don’t decide anything in haste or excitement.

It is a painful thing that Sorabji should refuse to pay even the policy premiums. The Ashram cannot pay them. Do not mind if the premiums already paid are lost. Now that Jalbhai also is there, see if you can persuade the two brothers and make them pay the premiums. Is any surrender value of the policy payable, or nothing at all? What is Sorabji’s financial condition?

Nothing is yet certain about my going to England. Ramdas and Nimu have gone to Almora to enjoy the climate for a few days.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4785

535. LETTER TO RAMABEHN JOSHI

BORSAD,
June 23, 1931

CHI. RAMA,

I got your letter.

The Sisodara programme is all right. Vimu must have returned there now. Has she grown? What did she do all these months? Ask her and write to me what she dictates.

I am going to Bombay today for two days. I have asked Mirabehn to go to the Ashram. She has stayed quite long with me.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5331

536. LETTER TO RAOJIBHAI N. PATEL

June 23, 1931

CHI. RAOJIBHAI,

If influential workers in Limbasi\(^1\) take the lead and permit Antyajas, opposition from the few would subside of itself. But they must be real workers, and not merely workers in name. Why not call the people of the village together and tell them that you would disband the Ashram? If the people don’t let you, there is no need to hurry; if they agree, then too there is no hurry. But it would be good if they say yes. Our work would get publicity.

\(^1\) A village in Matar taluka, Kaira
My statement that looking for another place of work would mean parigraha was intended to apply to all. Are not all Ashram residents under the vow of aparigraha? I mentioned only the ideal. If a person who is disinclined for some reason to return to the Ashram finds himself without work at a given place, he may certainly look for it elsewhere.

I read your letter to Mahadev about the headman. What can we do in the case? It should be proved that he cannot pay. I cannot do that from here and so a letter from here can have no effect. If you write to me from there, giving evidence regarding his condition, or if I get such a letter from somebody else, I may possibly be able to do something in the matter.

Blessings from

BAPU

---

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 8993

537. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

BORSAD,

June 23, 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

I sent some letters today with Mahadev Mailar. This will be brought by Mirabehn.

Did Kaka see Mathew? If the latter gives some time to the Vidyapith, he will earn respect there. If, however, he does not like the idea, it may be dropped. When I return from Bombay, I will send for him and know from him what he wants.

Mahavir’s fever seems to have continued for quite some time. If Mahadev’s wife can get trained, both seem ready to work. We should have, but don’t have, a good full-time teacher of Hindi. I will try again to make some arrangement.

Write to Ratubhai and tell him that Chhaganlal and Lilavati cause much pain to the Doctor. If he has still any control over them, he should try to do something in the matter. I have written a strong letter to Chhaganlal and Lilavati. I don’t know what effect it will have.

Keep a watch over Balvant. Exact hard work from him. Make some arrangement for his education, too. I know that it is easy to make such suggestions, but that it is difficult to carry them out. I want you to do only as much as you can. It is not out of my mind that you have very few workers.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]
I suppose I informed you that the Ashram will have to bear the boarding expenses for Balvant. Gaur Gopaldas will arrive there tomorrow morning. He will leave this place with me in the evening. He will spend the night at Anand and arrive there in the morning.

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./I

538. LETTER TO JAMNADAS GANDHI

BORSAD,
June 23, 1931

CHI. JAMNADAS,

When I asked whether the construction could not be postponed, I meant the proposed extension. I suggest that it may be postponed till the end of this year, if possible.

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 9326. Courtesy: Jamnadas Gandhi

539. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

BORSAD,
June 20/[23], 1931

CHI. NARANDAS,

You must have got the message which I sent with Mahadev concerning Narahari’s request. I have come to the conclusion that we need not send anyone at present for picketing.

Manju seems to be safe now. Read my letter to Hariyomal. Persuade him to take milk.

Blessings from
BAPU
[PS.]
I am starting from here on the 24th and not on the 23rd. [PPS.]

Tuesday [June 23, 1931]

CHI. NARANDAS,

Why did Shankarbhau leave? With whom does Shanta live? How is Kusum?

Blessings from
BAPU

Bapu

From a microfilm of the Gujarati M.M.U./I

540. LETTER TO CHIEF SECRETARY, CENTRAL PROVINCES

BORSAD,
June 24, 1931

DEAR SIR,

I write this letter regarding the case of Syt. Gopal Anant Ogale' who was sentenced on the 2nd of April 1931 to one year’s rigorous imprisonment under Sec. 124 I.P.C. I have gone through the article and the translation put in as Exhibit in the case and I venture to submit that in terms of Cl. 13 Sub-section 1 of the Settlement Syt. Ogale is entitled to discharge because in that article there is no incitement to violence. That there may be sedition in the article, it will be admitted, is irrelevant so far as the Settlement is concerned. For the sake of protection I understand that the case is under appeal but I suggest that the clause referred to of the Settlement is unequivocal. As there is no incitement to violence and as he was arrested during the civil disobedience movement he is entitled to discharge. Indeed, it seems to me that as soon as the Settlement was published, the prosecution should have been withdrawn under Cl. 12 Sub-section 1

1 Then Editor of Maharashtra, Nagpur
2 The reply to this letter, inter alia, states: “The Governor in Council has no doubt that the case in question is not covered by the Agreement. . . . None the less before your letter was received the Governor in Council, as an act of grace, had instructed the Government Advocate, . . . and Mr. Ogale was released on the 29th June last.” of the Settlement. As the matter relates to a citizen’s liberty I request prompt attention and early reply.

Yours sincerely

THE CHIEF SECRETARY
CENTRAL PROVINCES GOVERNMENT
NAGPUR (C.P.)

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-C, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

541. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

BORSAD,
June 24, 1931

DEAR MR. EMERSON,

You will remember the complaint¹ you sent me about Cawnpore and about which I agreed that if the particular allegations were true, it is a distinct breach of the Settlement. I had therefore written to the Secretary. Here is his wire² in reply. I shall send you his letter also when it arrives.

Yours sincerely,

Encl. 1

A.I.C.C. File No. 387, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

542. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

BORSAD,
June 24, 1931

DEAR MR. EMERSON,

Here is a copy of a precis of an important case in Meerut. The precis is so admirably prepared that it makes easy reading. I do suggest that it is a terrible thing that a cultured man like Syt. Shital Prasad Tayal³ should not be reinstated. I do hope that you will intervene in the matter. You will observe that the incumbent alleged to be permanent did not take up the post and the temporary man was

¹ Vide “Notes”, sub-title Malaviyaji and Working Committee
³ A teacher in Meerut Cantonment who had been dismissed for taking part in the Congress session at Lahore and collecting funds for khadi. The addressee in his reply dated July 10 declined to reopen the case.
made permanent two months after the Settlement.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

Encl. 1

Home Department, Political, File No. 33/21/1931. Courtesy: National Archives of India

543. LETTER TO H. W. EMERSON

BORSAD,

June 24, 1931

DEAR MR. EMERSON,

I thank you for your letter 1 of the 19th inst. with reference to the question of fire-arms. I will not, for the time being, trouble you with any further argument though I dissent from the view taken by you. I shall watch the working of the instructions issued to the local governments. I take it that I am free to make use of the contents of the Memorandum in my correspondence with local governments on this question. I shall not make use of it till I hear from you. 2

Yours sincerely,

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-B, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

1 Which stated: “... You refer to the modification in the original draft of clause 16 of the Settlement of March 5th. My recollection is that, so far as arms are concerned, the change was made not to cover the case of arms of which the licenses had been cancelled, for these were clearly illegal possessions, but in regard to the seizure of licensed arms taken in the course of searches and in regard to which no offence had been committed under the Arms Act or otherwise. I am quite clear that in this connection the present issue was not raised, since I have always realized that the basic question was that of a re-grant of cancelled licenses...”

2 The addressee wrote back on July 4, 1931: “You are certainly free to quote the Memorandum...”
DEAR MR. EMERSON,

Your personal letter will be destroyed as soon as I have finished this.

I believe in the English saying, “Take care of your pennies and the pounds will take care of themselves”. If we act on the square over the comparatively little settlement\(^1\), the big issue in London will take care of itself. I do therefore want (p. 69) you please to straighten out things on your side. There is a tendency in the Provinces to crush the Congress and the Congress spirit. It is like distrusting or belittling one’s partner.

On my side, I do not want you to spare me. Your indictments I shall appreciate. I do not want to hide or overlook a single breach on our part. I want us to make (p. 70) full reparation for every wrong act we may do. For I desire with all my heart a permanent settlement, an honourable partnership. This is impossible if we conceal our weaknesses or condone breaches on the part of workers. If you only saw the letters I daily write, the discussions I daily hold on the necessity of a faithful (p. 71) performance of what you have called gentlemen’s agreement.

Khansaheb’s speeches have not all been correctly reported. I wish it had been possible for you to have met him.

I shall write to you about Pandit Jawaharlal later.

You must not get ill.

The newspaper (72) cutting with your comment came as a tonic relieving the depression of exhausting correspondence dealing with all kinds of complaints.

Hope you are feeling better.

---

\(^1\) The Provisional Settlement of March 5, 1931. For the text of the Settlement, Vide “Provisional Settlement”, 12-3-1931
BORSAD,
June 24, 1931

DEAR MR. MAXWELL,

May I remind you about several letters regarding the Settlement to which answers are long overdue? They cover important matters and I would be grateful if you could let me have early replies. Meanwhile I have to draw your attention to the fact that with reference to the restoration of forfeited watans\(^1\), undertakings are required before restoration. I send you a copy in connection with one such watan. The other parties are:

Messrs Hanamant Ramchandra Deshpande of Bilgi,
G. C. Joshi of Guledgud,
Hanumantrao Desai of Andamurnal, Taluk Bagalkot.

These undertakings in my opinion are in breach of the Settlement and they should be waived as they were in Gujarat in connection with Mukhis\(^2\).

Whilst I am dictating this letter, I have a letter from Barsi town from Mr. D. V. Sulakhe. His is a case of confiscation pure and simple. He has sent a petition to His Excellency, but he has not been given any reply. The petition of which I have a copy sent to me bears date 16th March.

Yours sincerely,

Encl. 1

R. M. MAXWELL, EST.
PRIVATE SECRETARY TO HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR OF BOMBAY
MAHABALESHWAR

A.I.C.C. File No. 16-C, 1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

---

1 Hereditary land grants or cash allowances for performance of service
2 Village headmen
DEAR MR. BHADRAPUR,

In your letter the other day you said that the non-Dharala population of Ras was fully entitled to protection at the hands of the Government and that you were enquiring into the complaints made by me to you. You will agree with me that no assurance on paper can possibly bring relief to those who are actually being injured. The only relief they can see and feel is when the injury ceases. Unfortunately the same injury that I complained of seems to be continuing. This time in order to verify so far as it was possible the complaints made by the residents of Ras I sent Syt. Mahadev Desai to make a local investigation. The enclosed is his report. You will see therefrom that the hedges of the poor cultivators are still being destroyed. Valuable babul trees are being cut down and wood taken away. I understand from Mr. Perry that, for fear lest the Dharalas might be molested by the Patidars, additional police still continued to be posted. I wonder if the police is able to afford any protection to the Patidars and others. But whether the function of this additional police is or is not to protect the non-Dharala population of Ras, will you please let me know whether the Government intend to protect the Patidars of Ras from continuous molestation or whether they are to look after themselves in the best manner they can. I shall be away from Borsad for two days, possibly three. May I ask for immediate attention to the complaints and may I know when I may expect reply to my letter about the Mukhi?

Yours sincerely,

K. B. BHADRAPUR, ESQ.
COLLECTOR OF KAIRA DT.
KAIRA

A.I.C.C. File No. 3,1931. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library
547. LETTER TO C. F. ANDREWS

AS AT SABARMATI,

June 24, 1931

MY DEAR CHARLIE,

I have your letter. I shall look forward to Mrs. Polak’s book¹. I know it will revive old and pleasant memories and it will tell me of things I have perhaps altogether forgotten.

It is a good thing that your two books² are reaching the proper people.

As is your wont you are distressed over what your eyes see and ears hear. This time it is the terrible unemployment in Lancashire and what you see and hear acts as an effective barrier against perceiving the truth. I have seen from extensive experience the truth of a legal maxim which says: “Hard cases make bad law.” Many legal maxims are also sound moral maxims as this one is. I can say with perfect detachment although I am immersed in the Indian turmoil that the way you suggest is not the way to help Lancashire. If it was wrong any time for Lancashire to impose its cloth upon India by hook or by crook it is wrong also today and more so because India has become conscious of the wrong. And if India now refuses to be party to the wrong, surely she won’t be adding wrong to wrong but she would be assisting the process of undoing the wrong done by Lancashire. That the labourers were not conscious of the wrong that was being done is no justification for the wrong itself being sustained by the party wronged, that is, India or anybody else. The proper course is to show the labourers how they have been unconsciously assisting the wrong done by Lancashire to India and therefore how necessary it is to retrace the step. The first thing to do therefore is, if Lancashire cloth cannot be sold outside India, to find some other employment. What that can be it is difficult for me to say. I do not know how England itself is clothed. Why should not the same machinery be used for preparing the clothing of the kind required by England or better still, why should not the machinery be scrapped and the unemployed take to handicrafts? I know these are vague ideas without any basis for them but I have given them to show which way my mind is working.

¹ Mr. Gandhi: The Man (1931) with a foreword by C. F. Andrews
² Mahatma Gandhi’s Ideas (1929) and Mahatma Gandhi: His Own Story (1930)

Let me help you by putting before you another fact. Foreign cloth boycott has created a kind of atmosphere. Its effect upon Lancashire is nothing so serious as it is made out. In the first place do you know that before the boycott became a live thing Lancashire sent to India only 12% of her output of piecegoods? Have you studied the illuminating figures published in a recent issue of Young India showing conclusively that Lancashire had to fear not so much Indian boycott as the ever-growing Japanese competition? My heart goes out to the unemployed. It goes out to you in your terrific moral struggle. But I cannot be helpful in the way you suggest. Of that I am quite clear. That there is a way out I have no doubt and probably if I came to London, after a study of the situation on the spot I should be able to suggest some practical solution. And if I came at all I would certainly do as you want me to, first of all proceed to Lancashire and see the unemployed face to face.

But I am not at all sure that I shall be able to go. As yet of course there is no invitation. The Settlement is causing me much anxiety. The local governments are not playing the game. Lathi charges too are now and then resorted to. Jawaharlal sends me bitter complaints from Allahabad. But I shall see what is possible when the time for sailing comes. Jawaharlal cannot accompany me unless he forms part of the deputation. I do not think it would be advisable though of course if he was in London his presence would relieve me of a great deal of responsibility. Malaviyaji and Ansari are a certainty. They are most likely to be invited apart from the Working Committee and so is Mrs. Naidu. I note you will house me with Muriel.

Love.

Mohan

From a photostat: G.N. 970

---

1 Vide “Japanese or British?”,

VOL. 52 : 28 APRIL, 1931 - 1 JULY, 1931 407
548. LETTER TO MIRABEHN

June 24, 1931

CHI. MIRA,

You are on the brain. I look about me and miss you. I open the charkha and miss you. So on and so forth. But what is the use? You have done the right thing. You have left your home, your people and all that people prize most, not to serve me personally but to serve the cause I stand for. All the time you were squandering your love on me personally, I felt guilty of misappropriation. And I exploded on the slightest pretext. Now that you are not with me, my anger turns itself upon me for having given you all those terrible scoldings. But I was on a bed of hot ashes all the while I was accepting your service. You will truly serve me by joyously serving the cause. “Cheer boys cheer, no more of idle sorrow.”

Love.

BAPU

Bapu’s Letters to Mira, p. 156

549. LETTER TO G. FINDLAY SHIRRAS

BORSAD,

June 24, 1931

DEAR PRINCIPAL SHIRRAS,

Some students from your college have come to me for advice regarding your refusal to admit to the college certain students who had taken part in the civil disobedience movement. Without entering into a discussion of the Delhi Settlement, may I suggest that at the present moment it would be hardly proper to refuse admission to the students who took part in the movement? Is it not a fact that the whole of the student world was stirred to the very depths by the national awakening, and whether they took any direct part in the movement or not there is no doubt that they were all filled with the spirit of the

1 The addressee had gone to the Ashram.
2 Concerning this, Mirabehn says: “The struggle was terrible. I too was on a bed of hot ashes because I could feel that Bapu was. This was one of the occasions when, somehow or other, I managed to tear myself away.”
time. For the sake of peace therefore I would urge you to withdraw your orders and admit all the students without imposing any conditions. I have given my opinion¹ to the students which I have published in Navajivan that any undertaking given by the students as to non-participation in any future struggle or regret about participation in the past would be wholly inconsistent with self-respect. I would also go further and say, what I have not said in my opinion referred to above, that it would also be inconsistent with the students’ inmost belief. I hope you would not consider this letter a presumption.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

PRINCIPAL SHIRRAS
GUJARAT COLLEGE
AHMEDABAD

From a photostat: G.N. 817

550. LETTER TO N. D. KOWALI

BORSAD,
June 24, 1931

DEAR FRIEND,

