orthodox sanatanist organizations and leaders will bear me out in my statement. So I have proved my bona fides to speak for sanatana dharma. Up till now, I was also an opponent of temple-entry by Harijans but my inner voice today, all of a sudden, spoke to me that, unless the so-called untouchables are given the right of having darshan of patitapavana Bhagavan in temples, Hinduism is doomed. Bitter experiences of past months have compelled me to revolutionize my views now. I know my statement will surprise many. Most of them may even call me a renegade now, but to me safety of Hindus and of Hinduism is a sacred religious duty for which I will not mind vilification. . . . The plight of Hindus in these days is very pathetic. They have now become a constant prey to untold sufferings and agonies. Whenever I see a Hindu in distress, tears flood my eyes and I try my best to relieve him or her of it. . . . I rather prefer death to seeing Hindus in such a melancholy condition. . . . But, in order to persuade orthodox sanatanists to agree with me, I request you with all the emphasis at my command to accept a condition that only those Harijans may be freely allowed to enter a temple who have taken a solemn vow to bathe daily, to wear clean clothes, and to discard beef and carrion. Poor sanatanists are also not to be blamed. It is these unclean habits that are really responsible for the practice of untouchability itself. Harijans are themselves to be blamed to a great extent for the disabilities under which they are groaning. To ask sanatanists to allow Harijans to enter temples without, at the same time, rebuking them for their evil habits is, I fear, tantamount to putting a premium on them (habits).

So I entreat you to accept my suggestion, and I assure you that I shall leave no stone unturned to see that it is consented to by my orthodox sanatanist friends too. I will also carry on intense propaganda in its favour, and I am confident by grace of Providence I will attain succes.

Let not the reader think that the reference to the Inner Voice has any connection with my claim regarding the fast. It is an independent thought. For the letter is dated 25th April last. The Editor has unearthed old undisposed of correspondence which was to receive attention. I do not know whether the learned professor retains the views expressed in his letter or whether he has modified the position taken up by him as to the conditional temple-entry by Harijans. But the position taken up by him is typical. It is, therefore, necessary to show the fallacy underlying it. Whilst I appreciate the conversion of the writer on the temple-entry question, I cannot help saying that the condition he seeks to impose upon the Harijans will frustrate the very end he has in view. He forgets that caste Hindus are responsible for the present condition of the Harijans. We have, therefore, to receive them as they are and have faith that our contact and love will, if we are true, make them shed all those habits that may be repugnant to decent society. To blame the Harijans for their present condition is like a slave-holder blaming his slave for the misery and squalor the latter may be living in. We would ridicule the slave-holder, perhaps even accuse him of insincerity, if he made the removal of squalor by the slave as a condition precedent to the grant of freedom. It should also be borne in mind that the Harijans will enter temples subject to the same condition that is applicable to the rest of Hindus. Nature has not made of Harijans a separate species distinguished from caste Hindus by definite unmistakable signs. Hundreds, if not thousands, of Harijans enter temples without being detected. The studies of census reports published in these columns\(^1\) must make it clear to anybody that those who were not classified as untouchables must have entered temples without let or hindrance. The mere fact of a new enumeration, for the first time including certain classes and excluding certain other classes from the Harijan list, surely cannot be used as any test of untouchability or touchability. Only Hindus can claim no merit for the undetected entry of the so-called State-made untouchables into temples. What is now claimed is that caste Hindus should seek merit, in other words, purify themselves, by deliberately banishing untouchability from their midst as a sin. I cannot repeat too often that by untouchability I mean the thing as it is practised today. Let the professor and those who think like him remember that the reform, the anti-untouchability campaign, stands for is no mere make-shift for placating Harijans. It stands for a fundamental change in Hindu practice, it stands for the total abolition of the practice of high-and-lowness that has crept into Hinduism in spite of its lofty and unequivocal declaration that all life is one and that differentiation is maya, is false. Practice of equal treatment of all human beings should be the least direct outcome of that belief not reserved for sannyasis but for the ordinary man in his ordinary dealings with fellowmen.

_Harijan, 15-7-1933_

\(^1\) _Vide_ “Human Manufacture [-I]”, 29-4-1933 and “Human Manufacture [-II]”, 29-4-1933.
296. CABLE TO C. F. ANDREWS

ANDREWS
ISUHOST
LONDON

INFORMAL CONFERENCE FINISHED LAST NIGHT. IN ACCORDANCE CONSENSUS OPINION WIRED VICEROY SEEKING INTERVIEW EXPLORE POSSIBILITY PEACE.

GANDHI

From a photostat: S.N. 21527

297. LETTER TO KRISHNASWAMI

‘PARNAKUTI’, POONA,
July 16, 1933

BHAII KRISHNASWAMI,

I have your letter. I have also learnt from Rajaji of your acquaintance with him. My blessings on your marriage.

Blessings from

Mohanandas Gandhi

SJT. KRISHNASWAMI
Dakshina Bharat Hindi Prachar
Truplicane
Madras

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 6580; also C.W. 4405

1 The cable Was in reply to the addressee’s dated July 14, 1933, from London, which read: “Please cable immediately your own language exact present situation”, (S.N. 21527).

2 Of leading Congressmen held at Poona from July 12 to 14; vide “Speech at Leaders’ Conference, Poona-I”, 12-7-1933 and “Speech at Leaders’ Conference, Poona-II”, 12-7-1933.

3 Vide “Telegram to Private Secretary to Viceroy”, 14-7-1933.

4 The address is reproduced from the C. W. source.
298. TESTIMONIAL TO PARASHURAM MEHROTRA

July 16, 1933

Shri Parashuram Mehrotra has been known to me for several years. I have found him to be an enthusiastic, industrious and reliable young man. His bent is towards editorial work. I hope he will soon secure such work and achieve success in it.

Mohandas Gandhi

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 5848. Also C. W. 3071. Courtesy: Parashuram Mehrotra

299. TELEGRAM TO PRIVATE SECRETARY TO VICE ROY

[July 17, 1933]

PRIVATE SECRETARY TO VICEROY
SIMLA

YOUR WIRE EVEN DATE HAS COME UPON ME AS A PAINFUL SURPRISE. I HAD NOT EXPECTED THAT GOVERNMENT WOULD TAKE OFFICIAL NOTICE OF UNAUTHORIZED PUBLICATION OF CONFIDENTIAL PROCEEDINGS OF AN INFORMAL CONFERENCE AND ON BASIS THEREOF REJECT REQUEST FOR INTERVIEW. IF INTERVIEW WERE GRANTED I COULD SHOW THAT PROCEEDINGS TAKEN AS A WHOLE WERE CALCULATED TO BRING ABOUT AN HONOURABLE PEACE. CONFERENCE UNDOUBTEDLY FAVOURABLE TO PEACE IF IT CAN BE ATTAINED WITHOUT HUMILIATION. IF HOWEVER GOVERNMENT HOLD THAT THEY CANNOT HAVE ANY CONVERSATION EVEN FOR PROMOTING PEACE WITH REPRESENTATIVE OF AN ASSOCIATION ENGAGED IN ACTIVITIES IN BREACH OF STATE LAWS HOWEVER REPRESSIVE THEY MAY BE UNTIL THAT ASSOCIATION FIRST DISCONTINUES SUCH ACTIVITIES WHICH IT BELIEVES TO BE IN PURSUANCE OF INHERENT RIGHT BELONGING TO HUMAN FAMILY I CAN HAVE NOTHING TO SAY. NEVERTHELESS I WOULD LIKE TO ADD A PERSONAL NOTE. MY LIFE IS REGULATED BY PEACEFUL MOTIVES. I HANKER FOR REAL PEACE BUT I MUST CONFESSION THAT I CANNOT BE SATISFIED WITH MAKESHIFT. IF I RESORT TO NON-CO-OPERATION OR CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE IT IS FOR ESTABLISHING TRUE AND VOLUNTARY

1 From the reference to the addressee’s telegram, vide “Telegram to Private Secretary to Viceroy”, 14-7-1933.
CO-OPERATION AND OBEDIENCE TO LAWS IN PLACE OF FORCED CO-OPERATION AND FORCED OBEDIENCE. I THEREFORE HOPE THAT MY REQUEST FOR INTERVIEW WILL BE GRANTED.¹

GANDHI

From a photostat: S.N. 21526; also Bombay Secret Abstracts, Home Department, Special Branch, File No. 800(40)(14), p. 42

300. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

July 17, 1933

CHI. AMALA,

I shall try to send another chain.² Do not worry about anything, not even for me. After all God keeps us all and He is an all-sufficing Protector.

Your Hindi letter was quite nice for you. The alphabet is not yet correctly traced. You should compare it with the original.

You are not going to be unnerved on hearing that I am taken to Yeravda or some such prison.

Love.

BAPU

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

301. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

July 17, 1933

CHI. JAMNALAL,

I don’t get a single moment free, and, therefore, cannot write to you even though I wish to do so. A copy of my letter to the Ashram is enclosed. My ideas are thus changing fast. I don’t know where they will stop. If I am fixed up [in jail] in a day or two I shall not be able to discuss such ideas with you. But you yourself should start thinking.

¹ The addressee’s telegram of even date in reply to this read: “His Excellency had hoped that position of Government was plain. It is that civil disobedience is a movement intended to coerce the Government by means of unlawful activities and that there can be no question of Government holding conversation with a representative of an Association which has not abandoned that movement” (S.N. 21526).

² Vide “Letter to Margarete Spiegel”, 8-7-1933.
Give to Narandas whatever advice you think fit. Vinoba also will read my letter. I have had no time to write to him, and cannot get any even today.

Kamala’s fast has been going on. Perhaps she may end it today. Mehta is taking proper care of her. He gives me a report every day. She started the fast with great courage.

I hope you keep good health.

You will certainly have to join. But don’t be in a hurry. Improve your health a little before joining.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 2918

302. LETTER TO BHAGWANJI P. PANDYA
July 17, 1933

CHI. BHAGWANJI,

I got your letter. There has been no letter from Satara. I quite forgot to write to Narandas about you. I remembered today and wrote immediately. He will now discuss the matter with you. The rest you will know from my letter to him.

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C.W. 360. Courtesy: Bhagwanji P. Pandya

303. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK
July 17, 1933

CHI. PREMA,

You must have received my letter. You know my expectations. My letter to Narandas need not make you impatient. At present what is necessary is to be ready for such a step. Nobody knows when the time to take it will come.

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 10349. Also C.W. 6788. Courtesy: Premabehn Kantak

Addressee’s daughter
304. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

July 17, 1933

CHI. NARANDAS,

A negative reply¹ has come from the Viceroy. So consider me out [of jail only] for a short while. I am getting ready [for jail again]. It is my keen desire that the whole Ashram is surrendered in this final sacrifice. I wish that Ambalalbhai or some such friend looks after the movable property of the Ashram as a trustee. I am thinking of handing over the immovable property to the Government.² Those who wish to leave may do so after that. Those who remain may accommodate themselves where they wish to. I don’t want to force you if you do not approve of this. The responsibility of protecting the Ashram and its ideals rests with A those who stay behind. Let them do as much as they can. I can only guide them. If this happens we have to think where we can put N. and Amala. If Amala wishes to do some Harijan service, she may do so. If Jamnalalji agrees to take responsibility for N., she may go to Wardha. I cannot think of the other problems that may be there just now. I don’t say anything about Duncan because he is after all a man. Moreover he belongs to this place. He can easily be accommodated for Harijan service.³

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, pp. 371-2

305. TELEGRAM TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

KIRKEE,

July 18, 1933

JAMNALAL BAJAJ
WARDHA

REACHING ASHRAM TOMORROW. REVA LEAVING TOMORROW. GANGLDHAARAO WILL BE BOMBAY TWO DAYS.

BAPU

Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, p. 111

¹ Vide “Telegram to Private Secretary to Viceroy”, 14-7-1933.
² Vide “Letter to Home Secretary, Government of Bombay”, 26-7-1933 and “Letter to Home Secretary, Government of Bombay”, 30-7-1933.
³ Vide “Appeal to People of Gujarat”, 30-7-1933.
INTERVIEW TO THE PRESS

POONA,
July 18, 1933

Asked about his immediate programme, he stated that he was going to the Sabarmati Ashram simply for the sake of visiting the people at the Ashram.

It would be a matter of regret for me if I did not go to the Ashram before being imprisoned. Imprisonment is a certainty whether it comes today or in a few days.

What do you think of the Viceroy’s reply? In my opinion, the Viceregal reply has created a regrettable situation fraught with grave danger. The doctrine laid down in that reply, in my opinion, is altogether new. I do not know that civilized States have refused to carry on conversations with their rebellious subjects for the sake of peace. Whilst hitherto they have parleyed with rebels, who have been armed from top to toe, in the present instance the civil resisters are admittedly non-violent. It is also a matter of deep regret that His Excellency should have taken any notice whatsoever of unauthorized Press reports of confidential proceedings in answering a simple request for an interview for the promotion of peace. This again, in my opinion, is a dangerous doctrine. I am not aware of heads of States having taken notice of Press reports in situations such as this. The duty, therefore, before self-respecting Indians is perfectly plain. I cannot imagine greater degradation or humiliation than for one to deny his faith.

Questioned regarding the exact purpose of the conference Gandhiji said it was an informal conference.

Without fear of any contradiction I can say that it was convened solely for the purpose of ascertaining whether Congressmen desired peace or not. I would not have been a party to convening this informal conference had I not been in utter ignorance of the situation in the country. It was, therefore, convened for the sake of guiding me. Having found myself outside the jail, naturally, co-workers expected me to advise them regarding the course of action to be adopted. I could give no decisive advice without knowing the state of affairs in the country. The conference therefore was the only method whereby I could do so and I am glad to be able to say today that, whilst the

---

1 Vide 3rd footnote “Telegram to Private Secreary to Viceroy”, 14-7-1933.
2 This sentence is reproduced from The Hindu, 19-7-1933.
conference as a whole was not prepared to give up or call off civil disobedience, undoubtedly there was every desire to withdraw the movement on honourable terms. But the Viceregal telegrams are clear proof of the fact that, what the Government desires is not an honourable settlement, but a complete and humiliating surrender on the part of the Congress.

I prophesy that what has been impossible today will be possible tomorrow. When that tomorrow will come, I do not know. That it is coming and sooner than men expect, is to me, as much a certainty as the fact of my giving this interview.

Asked whether the majority of the conference favoured withdrawal, and the present decision was forced on the conference, Gandhiji said:

It is not right, and if it had been right, I would not be guilty of forcing my opinion. But I freely admit that there was at the conference a fair body of opinion that favoured complete withdrawal but not in the sense that the Government would have it.

 Asked about the future of Congress policy, Gandhiji stated:

Mr. Aney will be issuing a statement, and I betray no secret when I say that his statement will be found to advise the country to suspend mass movement for the time being. There are causes for this step into which I need not go presently. He will also be advising the cessation of all Congress organizations and secret methods which alone made their functioning possible.

The movement remains under suspension up to the end of this month as announced by Mr. Aney for my sake; and, though the Viceregal refusal has considerably altered the situation, in view of my having regained sufficient strength to do a moderate amount of work, and in order to avoid all possibilities of any misunderstanding, it has been decided to continue the suspension.

Asked if he would be the All-India Dictator, he said:

I am just now in the role of a humble adviser. I do not regard myself as really fully out of Yeravda. My discharge was due to unforeseen circumstances. I have no desire whatsoever to take undue advantage of that circumstance. I am not going to do any act of civil disobedience till after the suspension period, without telling the Government previously about it.

Asked about what would happen to the Harijan movement, he said:

Many people had expected that I would devote the whole of my time to the Harijan movement. These do not understand me and without any disparagement to any of them I would say that they do not understand all the implications of what they thought. In the first instance, my life is not divided into watertight compartments but is one indivisible whole and therefore I could not possibly give up the activities of a lifetime which are as dear to me as the Harijan movement itself. My activities react upon one another. Therefore if I excluded other activities my Harijan service would itself suffer. Then again I could not all the twenty-four hours of the day be doing Harijan work. That is an impossible thing; and if it was suggested that I could give up prison life which the civil disobedience movement implied, for the sake of Harijan work, it means that I should give up a life principle. Therefore I can only render this service to the best of my ability and consistently with the principles that govern my life.

Lastly, as I have already stated, Harijan work requires tremendous individual efforts for self-purification. In that respect, perhaps, it may be distinguished from other movements—social, political or semi-political. The recent fast perhaps best illustrates my point. Therefore I am certain that my attention to other activities does not in any way affect my capacity for serving the Harijan cause.

The Bombay Chronicle, 19-7-1933; also The Hindu, 19-7-1933

307. INTERVIEW TO “THE HINDU”¹

BOMBAY

July 18, 1933

Since the Viceroy has turned down my very simple request, not accompanied by any conditions, there is no present prospect of peace. I made every effort that was humanly possible, but when the door was banged in my face, I became helpless.

The informal conference was favourable to peace. It is difficult to say what would have been the basis of an honourable peace, but it would certainly have been reinstatement, at the very least, of the Gandhi-Irwin Pact, in so far as it was possible, for I could show that there was a breach of that Pact not by the Congress, but by the Government.

¹ The Bombay Chronicle, 21-7-1933, published this as Gandhiji’s “reply to certain questions asked by the London Daily Harald”.

240 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
The White Paper has satisfied no party. It will never satisfy the Congress, but I would not have even discussed the White Paper at the interview. I had a wholly different scheme in view, which could have been acceptable both to the Government and the Congress.

Civil disobedience will certainly be renewed, after the suspension period, unless it is anticipated by the Government taking any precipitate action. But the acting President of the Congress is stopping mass civil disobedience including the no tax campaign. He is also tabooing secret methods, and since Congress organizations can only function through secret methods, he is scrapping all Congress organizations for the time being. Civil disobedience will, therefore, be confined to individual effort. Individuals will offer disobedience on their own responsibility, without the expectation of financial or other help.

You ask what I should do if the movement became violent. I can only say that it had remained non-violent under the gravest provocation. It is not likely now to become violent, but if it does, I know that I have a prompt remedy for it.

_The Hindu, 19-7-1933_

308. TELEGRAM TO HOME SECRETARY, GOVERNMENT OF BOMBAY

SABARMATI,

SECRETARY TO GOVERNMENT
HOME DEPARTMENT, POONA

WOULD LIKE WHILST HERE SEE MIRABAI SLADE PRISONER SABARMATI INSTEAD WEEKLY LETTER SHE IS PERMITTED WRITE AND RECEIVE REPLY. KINDLY WIRE REPLY.

GANDHI

Bombay Secret Abstracts, Home Department, Special Branch, File No. 800(40)(11), Pt. II, p. 29
309. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL

WARDHA,
July 19, 1933

CHI. AMBUJAM1,

Your letters cannot tire me, for I am interested in your true happiness.

You may send the little bigger-size cooker through someone coming. There is no immediate hurry.

I am glad you have a good daughter-in-law.

I shall be relieved when I hear that Kichi’s2 finger is completely healed.

I hope Father is keeping good health.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: Ambujammal Papers.Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

310. DISCUSSION WITH HARIJANS, AHMEDABAD

[July 19, 1933]4

It is for you to suggest improvements in the present methods of your work. It should be done in the cleanest and most hygienic way. I know it. I have done it in South African jails. Baskets are no good for the disposal of the night-soil. You should have

1 Daughter of S. Srinivasa Iyengar. The superscription is in the Devanagari script.
2 Krishnaswamy, addressee’s son
3 This is extracted from “Ahmedabad Letter” by Mahadev Desai, who had reported: “About a hundred of them, many of them in spotless white khadi, gathered round Gandhiji in Sheth Ranchhodbhai’s courtyard. The questions that they asked were eloquent proof of the awakening that had come over them and of the intelligence and fearlessness with which they could discuss their problems. Gandhiji addressed himself to the Bhangis’ questions first, as the poor Bhangi is the most unfortunate among the unfortunates.”
4 From a report in The Bombay Chronicle, 20-7-1933, published under the date-line “Ahmedabad, July 19” which read: “Earlier in the day Gandhiji received a deputation of the local Depressed-Class People.”
strong buckets to be carried by a couple of men. You are so conservative in your ways that you may not like the innovation but I suggest to you that buckets are far more convenient, clean and effective. If you like my suggestion, I am prepared to broach the matter to the local Municipal Councillors. You want public baths. I am glad you do, but I may warn you that some of your people have not been ready to avail themselves of the facilities provided in other places. You must bestir yourselves and strengthen the hands of those who are working for your welfare.

Addressing next all the Harijans, he said:

The apathy of the high-caste Hindus seems to worry you. I am dealing with them as best I can, but this is not the occasion to give them a message. How can I convey them a message through you? I would ask you not to think of them, but to think of yourselves. This is a movement for the purification of Hinduism. Think what contribution can you make to it. If you bestir yourselves, if you shed your unclean habits, if you reform your way of living, irrespective of what the high-caste Hindus do, I assure you their superiority of birth will automatically disappear. Superiority consists in clean and pure living and I assure you that in spite of your unclean occupations you can live cleaner and purer lives than the rest of us. Yours is a service without which the community cannot do. I want you to be conscious of the dignity of your profession, to learn to practise it in a clean manner and I am sure you will be able to dictate your terms. Depend on yourselves, stand on your own legs and work your own salvation.

But, you complain that your own people are not being made members of the Servants of Untouchability Boards, and you suggest that they should be given a larger share in the administration. If the caste Hindus were overlords or a bureaucracy ruling over you, I could understand the suggestion. I would then ask them to surrender all power. But they are no overlords, they are servants pledged to atone for the wrongs their forefathers have committed for ages. How can you share in the atonement? They are doing what they are by way of penance. You have no penance to perform. Rest assured that the moment you claim a share in the administration the burden will be shifted on to you and the caste Hindus will declare themselves free of all responsibility. There is no power or pride of possession in the responsibility to collect funds and administer relief. I have made drastic suggestions for cutting down the administrative expenses and they are being carried out. In stead of asking to be appointed on the Executive of the Anti-untouchability Board, you can form your own advisory boards to help the Anti-untouchability Board with suggestions every now and then. That is how you can make yourselves most useful.

You have asked me why instead of staying with you I have accepted the hospitality of Sheth Ranchhodlal. Will you believe me when I say that I am staying with him in your own interest? You do not want me to make a demonstration of my affection for you? If staying in your midst was the only test, I should not hesitate to do so, but I want you to believe me when I say that I can do your work better by living here than amongst you. If Sheth Ranchhodlal was harbouring untouchability it would have been a different matter. I should then have not thought of staying with him. But you can see that he has turned his house into a Harijans’ home for me.

A VOICE: We do not mind your staying with Sheth Ranchhodbhai. It is the sanatanists who are twitting us, saying, ‘Look even your Gandhi avoids you and stays with mill-owners.’

Well, if you listen to the sanatanists in these matters, you are done for!

_Harijan_, 29-7-1933

311. DISCUSSION WITH ANTI-UNTOUCHABILITY WORKERS, AHMEDABAD

[July 19, 1933]

Gandhiji also took an opportunity of meeting the anti-untouchability workers in Gujarat and helping them with suggestions. They narrated the difficulties of work in villages. He said he was aware of them, and suggested that work in villages will for some time to come have to be predominantly welfare work. Thus they would have to have schools for Harijan children, wells and temples for Harijans, and so on, the thing to be borne in mind being that they should try to enlist the sympathy of the caste Hindus who may be in favour of reform by asking them to send their children to these schools, and to use the Harijan wells and visit the Harijan temples in preference to those exclusively used by the caste Hindus. Necessarily therefore the schools and wells and temples would have to be better in every way than the corresponding exclusive ones.

1 Extracted from “Ahmedabad Letter” by Mahadev Desai
2 From _The Bombay Chronicle_, 20-7-1933; _vide_ also the preceding item.
The task in the towns and cities was comparatively easier. In Ahmedabad they were getting anti-untouchability pledges signed by caste Hindus. The workers must now ask those who sign these pledges to give concrete form to their sympathy for Harijans. To this end they should pay house-to-house visits and collect subscriptions, no matter however small, from each house which may not definitely be opposed to the reform. The coppers thus collected from thousands of homes would be much more valuable than the rupees collected from a handful of wealthy people.

There was a Harijan girls’ hostel opened by the local branch of the Servants of Untouchables Society, but the workers were hard put to it in inducing Bhangi girls to enter the hostel. There was also the fear that the girls belonging to other sections of Harijans would go away if Bhangi girls came. Gandhiji’s advice was emphatic on this matter. Even at the risk of scaring away other Harijan girls, Bhangi girls should be induced to come.

Gandhiji himself carried out his suggestion for house-to-house collection by appealing to people coming to the evening prayers for giving their coppers for Harijan work. The response was spontaneous.

Harijan, 29-7-1933

312. INTERVIEW TO ASSOCIATED PRESS OF INDIA

July 19, 1933

I have seen a report of Sir Samuel Hoare’s speech in the House of Commons on the India estimates debate. It is another surprise equally painful like the Viceregal telegram.

I may say that since the fast I have not been able to read newspapers regularly, and, during the fast, for ten or twelve days I have not even looked at the newspapers for the simple reason that I have had no time. I, therefore, cannot say whether reports in newspapers are truly reflective of the proceedings of the informal conference. My point, however, was not that the reports are necessarily untrue, but it was that no notice should have been taken of unauthorized reports of confidential proceedings. Surely, it ought not to have mattered to the Viceroy what I or anybody had said at the informal conference. The Viceroy could have judged for himself what I might have said at the interview, had it been granted. The proceedings were kept confidential purposely, in order not to prejudice my request for an interview.

I have been asked even now to deny the accuracy of the reports. How am I to do so without going through the files of newspapers, and how many newspapers am I to read? I venture to suggest that it is not a business proposition. It ought to be sufficient that my request was not fettered by any conditions. It was a mere request for an interview to explore possibilities of peace, and I think that it should have been considered on its merits. But perhaps the proper question to put to me at this stage is whether I personally repent having advised the country to take up civil disobedience and whether I would still advise withdrawal. That question I have already answered¹ before now.

The interviewer then asked if the door for negotiation had been finally closed.
Gandhiji readily replied:

Not for me. So far as I am concerned, the door will never be closed, and whenever I see the slightest opportunity, I would not hesitate to knock at the Viceregal door. But I suppose that so far as authorities are concerned, they have finally closed the door, unless the Congress will call off civil disobedience altogether which, I hope, the Congress will never do.

Asked if he was likely to do anything to promote civil disobedience before 31st July, Gandhiji said:

I shall do nothing overt before the end of the month during which civil disobedience stands suspended.

The Bombay Chronicle, 20-7-1933

313. INTERVIEW TO REPRESENTATIVE OF “THE TIMES OF INDIA”

July 20, 1933

In mass civil disobedience a large number of people act like sheep, therefore fact under leadership and sink or swim together. In individual civil disobedience everyone is his own leader and the weakening of one cannot affect any other person. One million individuals may offer individual civil disobedience but that would mean that each one of them has acted independently of others and on his own responsibility. This again does not mean that the people do not have one mind and that they pull in opposite directions and, on the contrary, if individuals act with one aim and under one banner although they may act independently of one another, they will pull in same direction. The beauty of individual ¹ Vide “Interview to the Press”, 18-7-1933.

satyagraha lies in the fact that in it there is no such thing as defeat and it can never be circumvented by an earthly power, no matter how great it is.

Individual civil disobedience includes anything and everything that an individual conceives as proper and is permitted by Congress under the creed of non-violence and truth.

Q. Prison bar helpful country [sic]?
A. If I did not think so I would cease to offer civil disobedience. The truth lying behind civil disobedience is that under an unjust system a freedom-loving man considers himself to be freer in a prison than outside.

Q. As a result of Poona Conference don’t you feel [that there will be a] split into two or more parties?
A. I do not anticipate any such result at all. Whilst there were sharp differences of opinion among Congressmen, I have never known more cordiality and less acrimony and prompter obedience to the chair as at Poona Conference. Indeed I believe that there will be no split in Congress ranks and it will be found that the revised scheme when it is published by the acting President, accommodates almost it every shade of opinion in Congress.

Q. Call off civil disobedience by instalments [sic]?
A. would never consider admissions of a setback in a movement either as humiliation or as weakness and It is for that reason that I have advised cessation of mass civil disobedience which is clearly an admission of setback, and if I had felt that there was no other form of civil disobedience, I would have advised complete withdrawal, had I been the sole representative of that opinion; but in satyagraha individual civil disobedience is the final factor, it is indefensible [sic] and it’s for that reason that I have contended that it is an invincible force. So far as interview with Viceroy was concerned, it was because I was anxious as was the conference that even individual civil disobedience should be stopped if any honourable settlement could be secured had I got the interview. You will therefore see that there was, behind request for interview, no obstinate refusal to call off even individual civil disobedience under any circumstances whatsoever.

I am here during the pleasure of Government, but otherwise at least up to the end of suspension period [that is] 31st July.

In my opinion, friends in England can do very little at present. I am clear—Viceroy’s position [is] wholly untenable. There seems to be no way out but greater, purer suffering by people.

From the manuscript of Mahadev Desai’s Diary. Courtesy: Narayan Desai

314. TELEGRAM TO HOME SECRETARY, GOVERNMENT OF BOMBAY

AHMEDABAD
July 21, 1933

SECRETARY TO GOVERNMENT
HOME DEPARTMENT, POONA

GRATEFUL PROMPT PERMISSION SEE MIRABAI.

Bombay Secret Abstracts, Home Department, Special Branch, File No. 800(40)(11), Pt. II, p. 37

315. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

‘AMRIT BHUVAN’, ELLIS BRIDGE,
July 21, 1933

CHI. JAMNALALJI,

I have had no letter from you recently. I had hoped for one. You must have received the letter which I wrote to you from Poona. I am discussing with co-workers a proposal for sacrificing the Ashram in this yajna. It is almost certain now. We shall decide finally today. The example of the Ashram’s sacrifice need not be copied. Anybody who wishes to regard it as an ideal and act accordingly may certainly do so. It is not necessary just now even in regard to the Ashram at Wardha to copy the example of Sabarmati. If I get time, I will write more.

Abdul Ghaffar Khan’s son, who was in England and had gone to the U.S.A. from there, came and saw me in Poona. He is in Bombay at present. He has had training in a sugar factory in the U.S.A. I don’t know, though, how much he has learnt. Khurshedbehn and others advise that he should work for some time in a sugar factory. Try him in your factory. He has not impressed me as being a very intelligent person, but has impressed me as being a good man. Just now at any rate he says that he will do as I advise. You need not pay him immediately. You may fix the pay after one month if he shows proficiency in his work. For the present, you will have only to provide for his boarding and lodging.

1 Vide “Letter to Jamnalal Bajaj”, 17-7-1933.

My health is fairly good. I am staying with Ranchhodhbhai. I go to the Ashram daily. I hope to see Mirabehn today. I had wired to the Government seeking permission to do so, and I have got it.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 2919

316. AN AMERICAN CRITICISM

The vast majority of letters received from the West on the recent fast have been full of goodwill and appreciation of it and the motive lying behind it. The following letter balances the opinion reflected in the friendly letters and probably represents the majority opinion:

Now that your twenty-one day fast is ended, as announced in small notices in the daily Press, what did it avail? The world was told that it was for the benefit of the untouchables so called. Just what did it do for them?

(The Mahatma Gandhi is no longer front page news; we must search the inside pages to find him in the daily Press.)

India, whose culture and civilization goes back far beyond record, which was given the new tongue of Christ Jesus by Thomas, the disciple, in the first century, and in the centuries just past has been given many opportunities to face the light, still remains in pagan darkness, its caste system of society the greatest sore spot on the modern world.

What is the answer? Certainly not a fast, of whatever duration, by a lone man, of whatever sincerity, a man who late in life took off his clothes, and walked barefoot through the streets of London. That smacks too much of some of the grosser forms of American publicity methods to be effective.

No one thing can raise the lower classes of India out of their poverty and degradation; if it is ever accomplished, it must be the working of many influences, each contributing to the one end. And the start must be from within themseles.

It must be a mental urge for something better.

1 A summary of the article had appeared in The Bombay Chronicle, 22-7-1933 under the date-line, “Poona, July 21, 1933.”
No race whose women are subservient—or “without a soul” as you have it—has ever risen high in the scale of human progress.

Cleanliness is next to Godliness; and the nauseating filth in which the millions of your people live would preclude a start upward, until they begin to emerge from this mire.

A clean mind and a clean body will begin to turn their thought to a new life, which can have in it none of the ‘persecution of the body’ for the ‘sake of the spirit’. For instance, your ‘Holy Men’. Sitting for years in some deformed position, publicly torturing the body to liberate the soul, are no longer taken seriously by any enlightened person; I doubt if by themselves. Do they sit and think; or do they just sit?

The pagan religious rites, of sticking the body full of nails, spears through the tongue, and other revolting tortures, now widely known in America and throughout the world, bring nothing but disgust, and the feeling that they are, indeed, ‘untouchable’.

I have not read Mother India by Katherine Mayo, but am told on good authority (India’s resentment to the contrary notwithstanding, that it is a compilation of facts—so horrible that I have known cases of extreme illness from reading it.

If you really want to do something for the unfortunates of India, whose cause you have so nobly championed, why not cease your attempts at cheap publicity, found an educational system, work out a method by which large and increasing numbers may be enabled to take advantage of it; then see the support the enlightened nations of the world, especially America, would give you. It is a big job, with sixty millions to reach, and it is increasing so rapidly because of unwholesome social conditions which education would correct, and tradition of many hundreds of years to overcome. It will take generations but it will work, and this would be a substantial foundation upon which to build your future greatness.

And a united nation of sixty million people, united in knowledge, in progress, in ambition, in spiritual desire for self-government, cannot be held in bondage, either by a minority of their own countrymen, or by another powerful nation.

After all people who are hostile to certain steps taken by a public man do not trouble themselves to express their disapprobation to him. They ventilate it in the local Press. And since in the great Harijan movement I would love to retain the friendliness of the world, it is well to reply to the letter.
But it is a difficult letter to notice. For it starts with a bias and ends with it. The caste system does not become “the greatest sore spot on the modern world”. He does not even seem to know what that system is. I have myself raised my voice against the evil that has crept into the system, but the evil of it is foreign to the original, and can be removed as it is being removed. Untouchability is the greatest excrescence, and the world knows what Herculean efforts are being made to combat the evil. The fast which the writer belittles was intended to help the movement. I must be unmoved by the writer’s mixing up the fast and my mode of dress with “the grosser forms of American publicity methods”. The proof of the pudding will be in the eating.

But one can heartily endorse the opinion that “no one thing can raise the lower classes of India out of their poverty and degradation” and that “the start must be from within themselves”.

Almost the very next sentence repeats the exploded libel about the women of India being “without a soul”. It is, perhaps, useless to tell the correspondent that many foreign writers of note have marvelled at the comparative freedom enjoyed by the women of India. This is not to say that there is not much to be done for the amelioration of their condition. But this can be said without fear of contradiction that whilst the betterment of the condition of women of the West is of recent growth, the women of India have from ancient times enjoyed in essential matters a freedom which has not escaped foreign observers.

The correspondent has evidently read literature containing ignorant and interested distortions about Indian habits and customs. No one, perhaps, has written more severely than I have done about our insanitation. But to describe it as “nauseating filth” is a gross libel. It betrays violent intolerance of habits other than one’s own.

The correspondent would not have been betrayed into the wild generalization he has indulged in about the tortures which so-called yogis undergo, if instead of relying upon ignorant and sensational literature he had seen things with his own eyes. Just as one swallow does not make a summer, so cannot one yogi so-called resorting to self-tortures warrant the libel that self-torture is the general practice of those who seek liberation of the soul through crucifixion of the flesh, a practice general to mankind and indispensable for the subjugation of the body to the soul.
I must pass by Miss Catherine Mayo and “the unknown cases of extreme illness” from the reading of her libellous production Mother India. One can but pity the readers, if there were any such, who made themselves sick by reading a book which opened the drains of India and made the readers believe that they were India.

In the concluding sentences, the correspondent advises the course to be adopted for the amelioration of the lot of the “untouchables”. The pages of Harijan can tell him what constructive work is being attempted all over India by the Servants of Untouchables Society. It is up to American friends who are giving moral support to the movement to put before the American public a digest of the work reported in these pages from week to week.

Harijan, 22-7-1933

317. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

July 22, 1933

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

I have often wished to write to you but I have been helpless. Every ounce of the energy newly acquired has been spent in attending to the pressing work before me.

I had a nice time with Mother and Kamala. I was not able to see much of Sarup and Ranjit.

Mother is anxious about Krishna. She had long talks with me about her future. If you have any suggestions for me in the matter please let me have them. Of course my movements are uncertain. But that does not matter.

Devdas and Lakshmi, I left in Poona. They are due to come here now. Devdas will most probably settle down in Delhi for the time being. Mahadev, Ba and Prabhavati are with me. They are all soon to disperse, I expect.

I have been slow in regaining pre-fast strength. But I am slowly improving.

Love.

BAPU

A Bunch of Old Letters, P. III
318. LETTER TO PREMLILA THACKERSEY

July 22, 1933

DEAR SISTER,

I simply cannot forget your wonderful love. I had never thought I would be the cause of so much trouble to you, but I was helpless. I know that expressing one’s feelings in words reduces their value, but I cannot help doing so. Hence this brief note. My health is good. My blessings to all, the grown-ups and the young, and to the servants too. Their service left nothing to be desired. A poor human, what return can I make?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 79. Also G. W. 4831. Courtesy: Premilila Thackersey

319. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

July 22, 1933

CHI. JAMNALAL,

I got your letter. All your questions are all right. I will reply to them as well as I can. The reason for handing over control of the Ashram is that it is better to hand over ourselves what the Government is sure to take by force in due course. Instead of carrying away our belongings one after another against land revenue, let them take the entire land. Moreover, when thousands of people have been ruined forcibly, it seems desirable, and even necessary from the point of view of dharma, that an ashram which bears the name of Satyagraha Ashram should voluntarily sacrifice itself. But this does not mean that the Ashram there should follow suit immediately. On the contrary, I feel that we should be satisfied with as many inmates as can leaving it and courting arrest. Vinoba, however, must not do so. He should remain outside for Harijan work. I wish to make the fullest use of the Mahila Ashram. Can children also be sent there? Some of the women at any rate will go. I have to solve the problem of N. and Amalabehn. I see no alternative to sending them there. Both of them should be given Harijan work. For the present, they are to be trained for the work. N. should have as few contacts with men as possible. If the Government does not take possession of movable property, we will keep it somewhere here publicly. The problem of cows is a rather difficult one. I have been thinking what to do about it.

You need not be in a hurry to come out and join. You may do so when the time comes. I hope these details will satisfy you for the present. I am writing under great pressure for time.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 2920

320. LETTER TO DEVDAS GANDHI

July 22, 1933

CHI. DEVDAS,

I got your postcard. The decision to sacrifice the Ashram has been made. I think we did have a discussion whether or not you should come here. You may now do what you think best. If you think it necessary to go to Delhi immediately, you may certainly do so.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 2019

321. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

Saturday [On or after July 22,] 1933¹

CHI. PREMA,

If nothing unforeseen prevents me, I shall arrive there at three o’clock today.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10350. Also C.W. 6789. Courtesy:
Premabehn Kantak

¹ In Bapuna Patro-5: Ku. Premabehn Kantakne, the addressee explains that it was “probably in July 1933”, during Gandhiji’s stay at Ranchhodlal’s bungalow, that she invited him to visit the Ashram library. In 1933 Gandhiji was in Ahmedabad from July 20 to 31.
322. TELEGRAM TO MRS. SENGUPTA

July 23, 1933

MRS. SENGUPTA
CARE “ADVANCE”, CALCUTTA

JUST HEARD SENGUPTA’S SUDDEN DEATH.¹ YOUR LOSS IS ALSO NATION’S. PRAY COUNT ME AS ONE OF COUNTLESS SHARERS YOUR GRIEF.

GANDHI

From a microfilm: S.N. 21530

323. LETTER TO RAMABEHN JOSHI

July 23, 1933

CHI. RAMA,

I get news about your improvement every day. You will soon be completely all right now. I hope to meet you once more before I am arrested.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5354

324. LETTER TO SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA

Copy July 24, 1933

DEAR SATISBABU,

I have your short, sweet and significant letter. I wish I could send you a long love-letter in reply. But that I cannot do; no time.

Yes, I shall go, and many Ashram inmates. The Ashram is being disbanded and handed over to the Government or left for the dumb creation to occupy. The movables will be entrusted to friends, unless the Government want them. In due course, you will have the papers. This was the only course open to me. It is surprising, however, children at the Ashram appreciated the propriety of the step suggested by me. This step does not affect you, the Pratishthan or any other institution managed after the Sabarmati pattern. Their time is not yet; it may never come. You personally are wholly dedicated to the Harijan cause and Hemprabha to khadi. No matter what criticism is levelled at you, there is to be for the time being at any rate no departure from this. You may use this letter if you need to do so. I have not the time, nor is it necessary, to argue why I do not apply the rule that is being applied to Sabarmati, to you and others also.

¹ Jatindra Mohan Sengupta, a prisoner at Ranchi, died suddenly of apoplectic stroke on the night of July 22, 1933.

I hope you will unhesitatingly stop Bengali Harijan if its sale does not pay the expenses. Your unique work in bastis really leaves you no time for anything else. You should make use of the English edition and of the vernacular Press in Bengal.

I have no doubt that I shall do the Harijan work even when I am locked. But God knows better.

Love.

From a photostat: G. N. 9071

325. LETTER TO A. V. THAKKAR

July 24, 1933

Bhagwan Thakkar Bapa,

Harijan Shastri has broken down. He is laid down with fever. The food at Poona did not agree with me. I am carrying on somehow. If you can send Malkani, I will get some help. But don’t worry if you cannot send him. I don’t wish the work there to suffer.

What has been decided about Malkani’s salary? I am certain that he is being paid from the Ashram funds. But the Ashram is being disbanded now. You will read about this in the papers. You should, therefore, arrange to pay him from there. Even from jail I will continue Harijan work. Good-bye.

Bapu

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 1123

326. LETTER TO NANABHAI I. MASHRUWALA

July 24, 1933

Bhai Nanabhai,

I got your letter. I also hear from Phoenix from time to time. Sushila and Manilal have become very much devoted to each other and are happy.

I have decided to disband the Ashram. You will read more details about this in the papers. I do not have time to write more.

Take care of your health.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 6688. Also C. W. 4333. Courtesy: Kanubhai Mashruwala

327. LETTER TO HEMPRABHA DAS GUPTA

July 24, 1933

CHI. HEMPRABHA,

I got your letter. I have no time to answer letters. I have regained considerable strength but not enough to permit me to do unlimited work. Whatever be my lot, yours is the khadi work. I have explained everything in the letter\(^1\) to Satisbabu and so I am not repeating that here. I trust Arun is well.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 1703

328. INTERVIEW ON M. S. ANEY’S STATEMENT \(^2\)

AHMEDABAD,
July 24, 1933

I can say that in some places there is misrepresentation and some material portions have altogether been omitted. I have a copy of Mr. Aney’s statement in my possession. It was drafted in Poona, and I am quite sure that Mr. Aney has not altered the statement, as the mutilated version would lead one to suppose.

Asked how Mr. Aney’s statement had affected the position regarding Council-entry, Gandhiji said that the position regarding Council-entry remained just \(^1\) Vide “Letter to Satis Chandra Das Gupta”, 24-7-1933.

\(^2\) Vide Appendix “M. S. Aney’s Statement Discontinuing Mass Civil Disobedience”, 22-7-1933.
the same as it was before Mr. Aney's statement. If Congressmen wanted Council-entry no single individual could prevent it.

The Bombay Chronicle, 25-7-1933

329. LETTER TO A. I. S. A.

AHMEDABAD,
July 25, 1933

THE HONORARY SECRETARY
ALL-INDIA SPINNERS’ ASSOCIATION
MIRZAPUR, AHMEDABAD

DEAR SIR,

With reference to your letter of 20th instant I have to state that, in my opinion, ‘handling’ means portable and capable of being housed in a tiny hut, and easily movable by one person from place to place.

With reference to the 5th condition, the price includes the carding attachment of the machine, if special slivers are necessary. But I must state that the meaning I give to the conditions cannot be allowed to weigh with the judges. They must be left wholly uninfluenced by any opinion that I may have on the conditions. This is, therefore, purely for your guidance, in the choice of machines and in directing the inventors as to what they should do.

Yours sincerely,

From a microfilm: S.N. 19122

330. INTERVIEW TO ASSOCIATED PRESS OF INDIA

July 25, 1933

Mahatma Gandhi announced to the representative of the Associated Press today that he had decided to disband his Sabarmati Ashram which had been in existence for nearly 18 years. Asked his reasons for taking such a serious step, Mahatma Gandhi said:

The reason is quite obvious for me. Hundreds or thousands who took part in the struggle have lost their all. Having heard the story of the brave suffering of the villagers, I felt that some drastic action was necessary on my part. What was it that I could sacrifice? I have nothing on this earth which I can call my own; but I have some things which are more precious than what might be considered to be mine, and among these precious things, the Ashram is perhaps the most precious and I felt that on the eve of my embarking upon what is to me a fresh and sacred mission in life, I should invite fellow workers of the Ashram to join me and give up for the time being the activities in which they have been engaged all these precious years, and I am glad to be able to say that not one of them had the slightest hesitation in believing that the time had come for the Ashram to make the sacrifice.

Asked what would happen to the many activities of the Ashram, Gandhiji said:

This is a question somewhat difficult to answer; but I can say generally that if the activities were true and fulfilled some of the real wants of India, they will live in spite of the disbandment of the Ashram. For example, the whole of the khadi activity will certainly survive the disbandment. Indeed, the only thing that the Ashram was doing was to make experiments in khadi manufacture by devising new types of spinning-wheels and perfecting those that are in existence, supporting many Harijan families and teaching candidates all the hand processes that cotton goes through before it comes out as khadi. This is undoubtedly an essential work and very important, but I have faith that the work will be continued even after the Ashram ceases to exist as an institution and this may be said more or less of all other activities of the Ashram.

Asked what he was going to do now, Gandhiji said:

I am afraid I must not at the present moment go beyond what I have stated. I hope to make a further statement in the course of the next few days.

The Bombay Chronicle, 26-7-1933; also The Hindu, 25-7-1933

331. STATEMENT ON M. S. ANEY’S STATEMENT

[July 26, 1933]

The statement issued by Sjt. Aney closely follows the advice tendered by me at the informal conference. It does not give any

---

1 Vide the following item.
2 This sentence is reproduced from The Hindu, 25-7-1933.
3 From contemporary Press reports and The Indian Annual Register, Vol. II, P. 333 reasons for the decision taken. It was left to me to give them. This does not mean that they are necessarily the reasons that guided Sjt.
Aney and all those friends who accepted my advice. They must be taken, therefore to be solely mine.

In my opinion, it would have been disastrous if, in the existing circumstance, civil disobedience had been altogether withdrawn. The technique of satyagraha, as I have known it, requires continuance even by one person so long as such continuance does not defeat the ends of truth and ahimsa. It may not be given up either because of the weakness of the people taking part in it or (which is the same thing) the seeming victory of the opponent. The greater the repression the greater the strength of a true civil resister. The continuance of civil resistance, even by one person, insures its revival by those who might have given it up through despair or weakness.

But radical changes in the programme were absolutely necessary.

Sjt. Aney’s instructions taboo secret methods. There is nothing inherently wrong in them. I fully admit the purity of purpose and the great cleverness of the workers in conducting the campaign by secret methods, devised to meet the situation created by repressive measures of the Government. But secrecy is repugnant to satyagraha and hampers its progress. It has undoubtedly contributed in a great measure to the present demoralization of the people. I know that a ban on secrecy will stop some of the activities which appeared to keep the Congress before the public eye. But this doubtful benefit will be outweighed by the certain elimination of a method which is foreign to the spirit of satyagraha and which interferes with its efficacy.

Another change made is the stoppage of the mass movement.
The masses have acted bravely and suffered much wherever they have responded to the national call. But ample evidence is forthcoming to show that they are not able any longer to suffer the prolonged torture of the Ordinance Rule now crystallized into statute by the so-called legislatures. The Congress as an organization finds it increasingly difficult day by day to render them effective aid. The stoppage of secrecy would prevent even the little relief that it was possible to give them. The masses have not yet learnt to act as one man and without direction. They need more training and experience through the example of individuals.
Civil disobedience is, therefore, to be confined to individuals on their own responsibility although they would be acting on behalf of and in the name of the Congress. Those who will so act may expect no financial or other assistance from the Congress. They should be prepared for indefinite incarceration whether ill or well. They may not come out of jails except by termination of their sentences in due course or through the strength of the people. on termination of their sentences they should seek re-imprisonment on the first opportunity. They should be prepared to brave all the risks attendant upon their action including utmost penury and the loss of all their possessions, movable or immovable, or physical torture such as lathi blows.

Naturally such action can only be expected from a small number, especially in the beginning. The very enumeration of the hardships is likely to frighten many people. But experience of patriots and reformers all the world over shows that Nature provides us with the capacity for suffering when it is taken up in the true spirit.

It follows that such response, if it comes at all, must come in the first instance from the intelligentsia. Their example will prove infectious in the long run and pervade the whole nation resulting in a mass awakening that cannot possibly be crushed by any repression, be it ever so ferocious. Moreover, individuals from among the masses can certainly act even now. Only they must understand the implications of individual civil disobedience.

I am convinced that these men and women will represent the national spirit and the nation’s determination to win independence in every sense of the term. It may be objected that the heroic suffering of a few individuals, however praiseworthy in itself, is of no practical value and cannot affect British policy. I differ from such a view. In my opinion, the seemingly long or almost interminable process adumbrated by me will in practice be found to be the shortest. For I hold that true independence, i.e., independence in terms of and on behalf of the masses, can be proved in India’s case to be unattainable by any other method. The method of non-violence which is an integral part of the Congress constitution demands the course suggested by me.

It must be clear to the dullest intellect that British policy cannot change through a constitution which registers the British will and ignores the wish or the welfare of the nation. Any constitution imposed upon India by the British will, unaffected by anything done in and by India, must in the nature of things harden and perpetuate the British policy. It can and will be changed by adequate action taken by India in the face of British repression. In other words, Britain cannot work out our salvation. We must work it out ourselves. Our independence should mean the registration not of Britain’s will but of our will. I have suggested the only way that will forge the necessary sanction for the registration of our will, that is, the will of the dumb millions. For individual action must, in the long run, affect the masses.

Let us not forget the uniqueness of India’s case. I know of no parallel in history. In India British will is enforced through India’s own men and, shall I say, even women. India supplies the civilian and the soldier, India supplies money and other resources for the subjugation and exploitation of the masses. If this terribly immoral state of things is not altered in a day or even in a century, it need cause no surprise.

But our success is ensured the moment we take the right route to our goal. I claim that we took it in 1920. And though it cannot be visibly demonstrated, we have since then taken long strides toward purna swaraj. We could not have gone nearer the goal by any other way. Who can deny that during the past thirteen years we have seen an awakening among the masses, never witnessed during the hundred years preceding September 1920.

My advice does not proceed from a sense of despair, or defeat; I have neither. I am filled with joy that the national response has been so great as it has been. The greatest cause for joy is that the individuals as well as the masses have observed non-violence in action, in spite of themselves and in the face of almost inconceivable provocation. We are too near the time to judge the merit of the non-violence observed by the Frontier Pathans. They might have used violent language. But they have refrained from violent action in a way they have never done before within living memory. Such is the testimony of several sober independent witnesses. If non-violence becomes rooted in the Pathan heart, it will solve several difficult problems for us. What is true of the Frontier Pathan is largely true of the civil resisters throughout India.

I must not he misunderstood. My claim is humble. Danger of a sudden outburst of Violence is always present so long as the violence of the heart is not eradicated. I am sorry to say that there is ample violence in our breasts. We have acted non-violently out of policy, out of helplessness. We would inflict violence if we could do so with effect. I would have India to abjure violence even if it had the power to wield it. I would have it appreciate the fact that if the masses are to work out their own independence, they are so numerous as that if they achieved anything through violent means, it would not be independdence but a fiendish thing that would devour them and perhaps bring ruination to the whole world. The one lesson that the Western nations teach the world in flaming letters, is that violence is not the way to peace and happiness. The cult of violence has not made them or those who have contact with them any the happier or better. If ever we, as a nation, reach that living faith in non-violence and banish violence from our hearts we would not even need resort to civil disobedience.

The latter is required whilst we are trying non-violence as a mere policy or expedient. Even as a policy it is any day far more effective than violence. Under the Dictator’s instructions secret organizations naturally disappear. Every civil resister will be his or her own leader. He or she will carry the burden of the Congress on his or her own shoulders. Such civil resisters will be trustees of national honour.

Whilst Congressmen may be counted by the crore, civil resistance, under the new scheme, will be represented only by a few thousand or even less. If these few are true men and women, I am certain that they will multiply into millions. Meanwhile the remaining Congressmen will engage in various other constructive activities of the Congress such as Harijan service, communal unity, khadi production and distribution, total prohibition, boycott of foreign cloth and other goods that compete with indigenous manufactures or are otherwise detrimental to the interests of the nation, the manufacture of new goods, the improvement of the methods of indigenous manufacture, and in this connection development or resuscitation of village industries, improvement of agriculture and cattle-breeding, organization of labour unions, not for political exploitation but for the betterment of the condition of workers and improvement in the relations between capital and labour. In fact, no branch of national activity may be left untouched by the Congress. This will be possible if we will get rid of the very wrong idea that there is no other Congress activity save that of civil resistance or that the latter blocks all other activities. This will be true, perhaps when there is mass civil disobedience and the campaign has to be swift and sharp. But till that time is reached, due importance must be given to every one of nation-building activities and none should be neglected. Civil resisters represent the non-violent army of the nation. And just as every citizen cannot be a soldier on the active list, every citizen cannot be a civil resister on the active list. And if a soldier may not consider himself a superior being because he fights at the risk of his life for his nation much less may a civil resister will undergoes sufferings for the sake of his nation. Those outside the rank of fighters are equally important limbs of their nation if they regard themselves as national servants dedicating their talents for the nation’s welfare, and not engaging in any activity, private or public, that may be in conflict with the national interest.

Moreover, whilst the Congress as an organization cannot openly help civil resisters, and must under my plan avoid all secret methods, it will be the duty of Congressmen and even others who sympathize with the Congress methods and aim, wherever possible to give relief to the indigent families of civil resisters especially to the utterly destitute peasantry who joined the no-tax campaign. For they must be assured that every inch of the land confiscated during the campaign (I think lawlessly and wrongly) will be returned to them or their progeny when the nation comes to her own as it must some day. I have learnt that at great personal risk to the workers engaged in the task the Congress has successfully administered secret relief to the peasants who have chosen for the sake of national freedom to risk their all. Such relief will be impossible of administration in the future, not merely because of the contemplated stoppage of secret methods but also because the Congress has no ceaseless source of income. The burden of reaching relief openly to such families must on pure humanitarian grounds, if no other, fall on the shoulders of those who are not engaged in civil resistance. The Government cannot have it both ways. If they will slop even private and open relief, they must imprison the dependants of civil resisters or otherwise maintain them. The world would be staggered to know the number of those who once in fair circumstances have courted ruination and are living on doles of three or four rupees per head, per month. I understand that even their houses are in danger of being attached.

I have left the Council programme untouched. To think now of working the reforms to come is, in my opinion, altogether premature.
We do not know what they are to be, when they are to come, if at all. It would behove those who are inclined to participate, to wait for the reforms before they commit themselves to a policy. Then there remain the existing Legislatures. I can give no decisive opinion on this question as I can on civil disobedience. My head reels at the very thought of entering Councils for the sake of winning independence. They may give some relief in specific cases but that is the miasma to keep the nation from its goal. They have no temptation for me in spite of my having sought through Sjt. Rajagopalachari and others the co-operation of the Legislatures and the Government in the matter of the untouchability Bills. The primary responsibility for seeking it lies not on his shoulders but mine. I offer no apology for having sought it. It is wholly consistent with the doctrine of non-co-operation.

There is one thing on which Sjt. Aney has differed from me and some other friends. I have felt strongly that the office of All-India Dictator and Provincial Dictators should also be abolished. But he felt equally strongly that the office should be retained if only as a symbol. But I see grave difficulties in our way. Dictators under the new scheme must, like others, offer civil resistance as soon as they are appointed. All the best men and women must quickly find their way to prison. Therefore a time must soon come when men and women who can really dictate will not be available. Then there could only be dummy Dictators as they have been before. These may easily produce embarrassing situations. Lastly, when every civil resister is expected to be his own leader, there seems to be no warrant for having Dictators. Indeed their mere existence may well stop the flow of individual civil resisters. For they may wait for Dictators’ instructions whereas the new scheme provides for no further instructions. The Congress as an organization should live in its ideal in the final instructions issued by Sjt. Aney. I, therefore, still feel that Dictators should abolish themselves, if my argument appeals to them.

The Viceroy’s refusal to see me even for the sake of exploring possibilities of peace, renders it unnecessary to examine the conditions under which even without purna swaraj but in furtherance of it, civil disobedience may be discontinued. But I may repeat what I have said so often that all non-co-operation is undertaken to ensure real co-operation in the place of forced one and all civil disobedience of laws is resorted to for the sake of rendering voluntary obedience instead of forced obedience. Therefore, I have no doubt that the Congress would be ever ready for honourable peace.

From a microfilm: S.N. 20025
AHMEDABAD,
July 26, 1933

TO
THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF BOMBAY
(HOME DEPARTMENT)
POONA

DEAR SIR,

My first constructive act on return to India in 1915 was to found the Satyagraha Ashram for the purpose of serving Truth. The inmates are under the vows of truth, ahimsa, celibacy, control of palate, poverty, fearlessness, removal of untouchability, swadeshi with khadi as the centre, equal respect for all religions and bread-labour. The present site for the Ashram was bought in 1916. It conducts today certain activities mostly through the labour of inmates. But it does need to supplement that labour with ordinary paid labour. Its principal activities are: khadi production as a village industry without the aid of power-driven machinery, dairy, agriculture, scientific scavenging and literary education. The Ashram has 107 inmates at present (men 42, women 31, boys 12 and girls 22). This number excludes those who are in prison and those who are otherwise engaged outside. Up to now it has trained nearly 1,000 persons in the manufacture of khadi. Most of these, so far as my knowledge goes, are doing useful constructive work and earning an honest livelihood.

The Ashram is a registered trust. The funds at its disposal are ear-marked. Whilst the aim has been to make every department self-supporting, it has hitherto been obliged to receive donations from friends to meet all the obligations. Experience has shown that so long as it remains a predominantly educational service (using the term in the widest sense) and not only charges no fees but actually feeds and clothes the learners, it cannot be wholly self-supporting.

The Ashram owns immovable property estimated at about Rs. 3,60,000 and movables including cash estimated at over Rs. 3,00,000; vide the following item.

---

1 “Over Rs. 3,00,000” was later on corrected as “nearly Rs. 2,00,000”; vide the following item.

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATM GANDHI
The Ashram takes no part in politics so-called. But it does believe in non-co-operation and civil disobedience as indispensable, under certain circumstances, for the observance of truth and non-violence. Hence, the civil disobedience campaign of 1930 was started by the march to Dandi of nearly eighty inmates of the Ashram.

Time has now arrived for the Ashram to make a greater sacrifice in the face of the existing situation—on the one hand the growing terrorism by the Government and on the other the equally growing demoralization among the people.

The statements that have come under my observation since the breaking of my fast show that

1. methods of torture have been adopted by the police in various parts of India in order to cow down individual civil resisters,
2. women have been insulted,
3. free movement of people has become almost impossible,
4. in many parts of India, village work by Congressmen has become all but impossible,
5. civil resistance prisoners have been subjected to humiliations and bodily injury in many lock-ups and prisons,
6. unconscionably heavy fines have been imposed and gross irregularities committed for their recovery,
7. peasants withholding revenue or rent have been punished in a manner out of all proportion to their offence, obviously with a view to terrifying them and their neighbours into subjection,
8. the public Press has been gagged,
9. in short, freedom with self-respect has become impossible throughout the length and breadth of the land.

I have no doubt that these statements will be denied or explained away in official circles. It may be that they are not free from exaggerations. But in common with many Congressmen I believe in them and therefore they are able to arouse us to action.

Hence, mere incarceration can bring little satisfaction. Moreover, I quite clearly see that the vast constructive programme of the Ashram cannot be carried on with safety, unless the Ashram ceases entirely to have anything to do with the campaign. To accept such a position will be to deny the creed. Up to now I had hoped that the existence of the Ashram side by side with the civil resistance of its individual members was possible and that there was bound to be an honourable peace between Government and the Congress in the near future even though the Congress goal might not be immediately realized. The unfortunate rejection by His Excellency the Viceroy of the honest advance of the Congress through me, in the interest of peace, shows clearly that the Government do not seek or desire peace, they want an abject surrender by the largest and the admittedly most, if not the only, popular political organization in the country. This is impossible so long as the Congress continues to repose confidence in its present advisers. The struggle therefore is bound to be prolonged and calls for much greater sacrifice than the people have hitherto undergone. It follows that the greatest measure of sacrifice is to be expected of me as the author of the movement. I can therefore only offer that which is nearest and dearest to me and for the building of which I and many other members of the Ashram have laboured with infinite patience and care all these eighteen years. Every head of cattle and every tree has its history and sacred associations. They are all members of a big family. What was once a barren plot of land has been turned by human endeavour into a fair-sized model garden colony. It will not be without a tear that we shall break up the family and its activities. I have had many and prayerful conversations with the inmates and they have, men and women, unanimously approved of the proposal to give up the present activities. Those who are at all able have decided to offer individual civil disobedience after the suspension period is over.

---

1 The two words “into subjection” are reproduced from Bombay Secret Abstracts.

It may not be superfluous to mention that the Ashram has for the past two years refused to pay revenue dues and consequently goods of considerable value have been seized and sold in respect of them. I make no complaint of the procedure. But it cannot be a matter of pleasure or profit to carry on a great institution in such precarious circumstances. I fully realize that whether a State is just or unjust and whether it is under popular or Foreign control, the citizen’s possessions may at any time be forcibly taken away from him by the State, if he comes in conflict with it. In the circumstances, it seems to me to be simple prudence to anticipate the inevitable in a conflict which promises to be indefinitely prolonged.

But whilst it has been decided to break up the Ashram we want everything to be used for public purpose. Therefore, unless the Government for any reason desire to take charge of any or all of the movables including cash, I propose to hand them over to those friends who will take them and use them for public benefit and in accordance with the earmarking. Thus the khadi stock and contents of the workshop and the weaving sheds will be handed over to the All-India Spinners’ Association on whose behalf that activity has been carried on. The cows and other cattle will be handed to a representative of the Goseva Sangh on whose behalf the dairy has been conducted. The library will be handed probably to an institution that will take care of it. The moneys and articles belonging to the various parties will be returned [to] them or kept for them by friends who will care to take charge of them.

Then there remain the land, the buildings and the crops. I suggest that the Government take possession of these and do what they like with them. I would gladly have handed these also to friends but I cannot be party to their paying the revenue dues. And naturally I may not hand them to fellow resisters. All, therefore, I wish is that beneficial use be made of the land, buildings and the valuable trees and crops instead of being allowed to run to waste as I see has been done in many cases.

There is a plot of land with buildings occupied by Harijan families. They have hitherto paid no rent. I have no desire to invite them to take part in civil resistance. They will now pay the nominal rent of one rupee per year to the trustees of the Ashram and be responsible for the revenue due on that portion.

If for any reason, the Government decline to take of the property mentioned, the Ashram will still be vacated by the inmates as soon as may be after the expiry of the suspension period, viz., 31st instant unless the date is anticipated by the Government. I request a telegraphic reply to this letter, at least, I so far as the Government’s wishes regarding the movables are concerned so as to enable me to remove them in due time if I am to remove them at all.

I am,

Yours faithfully,

From a microfilm: S.N. 21535; also Bombay Secret Abstracts, Home Department, Special Branch, File No. 800(40), Pt. II, pp. 171-81
333. LETTER TO HOME SECRETARY, GOVERNMENT OF BOMBAY

July 26, 1933

THE SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF BOMBAY
(HOME DEPARTMENT)
POONA
DEAR SIR,

I have to correct a statement in my letter addressed to you today. On page 2, line 3, instead of “at over Rs. 3,00,000” please read “at nearly, Rs. 2,00,000”.

Yours faithfully,

From a photostat: S.N. 19123; also Bombay Secret Abstracts, Home Department, Special Branch, File No. 800(40), Pt. II, p. 183

334. LETTER TO SYED MAHMUD

July 26, 1933

DEAR DR. MAHMUD,

I have your two letters.

I must not make the declaration that you suggest. No declarations unaccompanied by immediate action are of any value at the present moment. Even action taken under a sense of duty and with the purest of motives is wholly misinterpreted. But I can repeat my conviction to you that I would not care to go to heaven without taking the Mussalman friends with me. The fact is, the more I examine myself the more I feel that deep down in me there is no distinction between Hindus, Mussalmans, Christians and others. I would disdain to thrive at their expense.

As to your other suggestion about the Benares Hindu University, whilst Malaviyaji is capable of immense sacrifice, he will not sacrifice the University. He is philosophic enough to let it go, if he could not retain it, consistently with his notion of self-respect. But, if I know him rightly, he would consider it a great mistake deliberately to sacrifice the University. What is more, those who are its co-trustees would never allow him to take that step and what is still more is that the students have no desire whatsoever to suspend their training. Whatever, therefore, you and I may desire, the step suggested by you seems to me to be incapable of being taken.

With reference to your second letter, what you say may be half true, namely that I want some individuals to go to prison in order to keep up the attitude of defiance. But I want them to go to prison in order that out of the imprisonment of a few pure civil resisters may rise a manifestation which would be unmistakable and irresistible.

I am glad Begum Mahmud is better and I hope she will be thoroughly restored. For your own health, how I wish you could take nature cure at Dr. Mehta’s sanatorium. I have no doubt that you can be thoroughly restored.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

[PS.]

Salaams from Mahadev.

DR. SYED MAHMUD
FARIDI MANZIL
DARGAHASHARIF
AJMER

From a photostat: G.N. 5090; also S.N. 19124

335. LETTER TO PREMLILA THACKERSEY

July 26, 1933

DEAR SISTER,

I hope you got the postcard which I wrote to you. You must have read the news about the Ashram I being disbanded. I shall have to put some of the girls somewhere. You know Anandi and Mani. I wish to put them and three other girls in your school. One of the latter is Mahadev’s sister, another is Sharda, daughter of the Assistant Secretary of the Ashram, and the third is Narahari’s daughter Vanamala. You have seen the last one too. If you think you can take them in without any trouble and if Lilabehn also is willing, please let me know. If I receive your permission, I shall have to send them immediately. I cannot say what will-happen to me on the 1st. If possible, please reply by wire. If you send the wire to the Ashram address, it is likely to reach me earlier. A letter will reach me earlier in Amrit Bhuwan, as I go to the Ashram at 1 p.m.

_Blessings from_

_BAPU_

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 4832. Courtesy: Premlila Thackersey

336. LETTER TO AMRITLAL NANAVATI

_July 26, 1933_

CHI. AMRITLAL,

I read your letter to Kakasaheb and laughed. You lack sense of humour. If I were in your place, I would have simply laughed at the reply. You should have good-humouredly told Mathuradas that, if he recognized you, he would say that you had as much right as he himself. Mathuradas did not recognize you as a _snataka_\(^1\) and, taking you to be a gentleman from North India, started talking to you in Hindi. You could have ignored him and come to me. I also did not recognize you, but you should not have punished me for that mistake.

It is I who should complain. Your complaining is like a thief punishing a constable.

What is the good of harbouring resentment now?\(^2\)

_Blessings from_

_BAPU_

From Gujarati: C.W. 9652. Courtesy: Amritlal Nanavati

337. LETTER TO D. B. KALELKAR

_July 26, 1933_

CHI. KAKA,

I have your letter.

Many others may have had to suffer what Amritlal had to. It was certainly a painful affair, but nobody can be blamed, or if at all it was Bal\(^3\) who should be blamed. And next to him, or even more than he, Amritlal himself should be blamed. Mathuradas gave the reply that he did only to protect me from unnecessary trouble. I didn’t know anything about the incident at all. I saw that Mathuradas was asking somebody to go away. But how was I to recognize Amritlal? If he gave your name, I don’t know that at all. However, had he taken the incident in good humour, everybody would have laughed at the error. I myself treated Kanu in a similar way here. I did not recognize him and pushed him away when he was trying to touch my feet. Amritlal was not treated as he was knowingly. If you ask why nobody recognized him, I don’t see how a person can be blamed for that. Amritlal should have laughed at the error and replied in Gujarati instead of in Hindi.

\(^{1}\) A graduate
\(^{2}\) _Vide_ also the following item.
\(^{3}\) Addressee’s son

Bal may not have been able to tell Mathuradas anything, but he should have told me. I am not sending the letter to Mathuradas. Sending it to him will only keep alive the incident.

I had no choice but to put you in charge of Harijan. Now Anand\(^1\) has been sent. When he is ready you may leave it off. A person like you who has the gift of writing can easily get his English corrected. You do not have a good style in English, but it is not as if your thoughts do not flow in it at all.

I will certainly like it if you can come here. I have asked Bal to write a long letter to you, but seeing the place for yourself will be a different experience altogether.

The pessimism expressed by Mahadev in his letter is unjustified. But I understand your attitude and what you say about staying with me. It is a complete error to believe that you were a burden on me. However, why do you believe that we can do anything that we may wish to? I am indifferent as to who will come and stay with me. I do believe that the Government will send Mahadev. They know [that I need him].

If you can come, do come please.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 9477. Courtesy: D. B. Kalelkar

\(^1\) Anand Hingorani
338. INTERVIEW TO ASSOCIATED PRESS OF INDIA

July 26, 1933

I thought that my words were quite clear and explicit. I had simply said that had the interview been granted, I would have been able to put forth something that would have been acceptable both to the Government and the people. If you ask me what I would have put before the Viceroy, I cannot tell you, not because it is a secret but because I do not know. When I made that statement, I relied upon my resourcefulness, which has up to now not failed me in putting forth acceptable proposals for a compromise.

I did not go to Lord Irwin with any preconceived proposals but in the course of the conversation, I put them before him, as they came to me, and as both the parties had a will for peace, a way was found and so would it have been with Lord Willingdon, if he had shown the will. Thus there is no mystery about any scheme which I had up my sleeve. If I had it, I should have no hesitation in sharing it with the public.

The Bombay Chronicle, 27-7-1933

339. INTERVIEW TO "THE HINDU"

July 26, 1933

The disbandment of the Ashram would mean that every inmate would constitute a walking ashram, carrying with him or her the responsibility for realizing the Ashram ideal, no matter where situated, whether in prison or outside.

Mr. Gandhi added that the impending disbandment would not mean loss or diminution of incentive, but it would be a greater incentive to greater effort, greater dedication and greater sacrifice. He would disband the Ashram as early as possible after the end of the month. He declared:

Every step regarding the Ashram will be taken with the full knowledge of the authorities.

Asked if he was closing the Ashram for want of funds, Mr. Gandhi said:

The source had reported that Gandhiji was asked as to "what scheme he had in view to unfold to the Viceroy if the latter had granted him an interview".

274
It is malicious and baseless to say so. The Ashram has plenty of friends who have never kept it in want.

Asked if he was closing the Ashram because of disappointment, Mr. Gandhi said that it was also equally baseless to say so. He declared:

I am not only not seriously disappointed, but I am convinced that the majority of the inmates have made all endeavours, humanly possible to come up to the ideal. This much, however, is true that though the inmates, including myself, have made an honest endeavour to come up to the principles, we have all failed. But that is no cause for disappointment. It is a cause for greater effort.

Asked if the suspension of all Congress organizations would mean the prevailing of anarchy in India, Mr. Gandhi replied:

No. Anarchy means want of rule and discipline. The Congress would be under rigid discipline. Individuals’ activities will be within the limits prescribed by the Congress resolution.

Regarding the suggestion to hold a meeting of the All-India Congress Committee, Mr. Gandhi said:

I would not mind, but personally I think it is impossible unless the step is taken to give up civil disobedience altogether. Such an intention should be made known to the Government. Whether it would be advisable or not, is a question the answer to which will depend upon the temperament of each member.

The Hindu, 27-7-1933

340. LETTER TO RABINDRANATH TAGORE

AHMEDABAD,
July 27, 1933

DEAR GURUDEV,

I have read your Press message regarding the Yeravda Pact, in so far as it applies to Bengal. It caused me deep grief to find that you were misled by very deep affection for me and by your confidence in my judgment into approving of a Pact which was discovered to have done a grave injustice to Bengal. It is now no use my saying that affection for me should not have affected your judgment, or that confidence in my judgment ought not to have made you accept a Pact about which you had ample means for coming to an independent judgment. Knowing as I do your very generous nature, you could not have acted otherwise than you did and in spite of the discovery made by you that you have committed a grave error you would continue to repeat such errors if the occasions too were repeated.

---

1 Vide Appendix “Cable from Rabindranath Tagore to Sir Nripendranath Sircar”, after 22-7-1933. Rabindranath Tagore had forwarded a copy of this message along with his letter dated July 28, 1933 to Gandhiji; vide 1st footnote to “Letter to Rabindranath Tagore”, 7-8-1933.

But I am not at all convinced that there was any error made. As soon as the agitation for an amendment of the Pact arose, I applied my mind to it, discussed it with friends who ought to know and I was satisfied that there was no injustice done to Bengal. I corresponded with those who complained of injustice. But they, too, including Ramanandbabu, could not convince me of any injustice. Of course, our points of view were different. In my opinion, the approach to the question was also wrong.

A Pact arrived at by mutual arrangement cannot possibly be altered by the British Government except through the consent of the parties to the Pact. But no serious attempt seems to have been made to secure any such agreement. Your appearance, therefore, on the same platform as the complainants, I, for one, welcome, in the hope that it would lead to a mutual discussion, instead of a futile appeal to the British Government. If, therefore, you have, for your own part, studied the subject and have arrived at the opinion that you have now pronounced, I would like you to convene a meeting of the principal parties and convince them that a grave injustice has been done to Bengal. If it can be proved, I have no doubt that the Pact will be re-considered and amended so as to undo the wrong said to have been done to Bengal. If I felt convinced that there was an error of judgment, so far as Bengal was concerned, I would strain every nerve to see that the error was rectified. You may know that up to now I have studiously refrained from saying anything in public in defence of the Pact, save by way of reiterating my opinion accompanied by the statement that if injustice could be proved, redress would be given. I am, therefore, entirely at your service.

Just now, I am absorbed in disbanding the Ashram and devising means of saving as much as can be for public use. My service will, therefore, be available after I am imprisoned, which event may take place any day after the end of this month. I hope you are keeping good health.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

DR. RABINDRANATH TAGORE

From a photostat: G.N. 4639

341. LETTER TO R. V. SASTRI

July 27, 1933

MY DEAR SASTRI,

I wanted to dictate something for you as soon as I heard of your fever, but it was no use. I have just now a few moments, and I am taking advantage of them to dictate these few lines.

Of course you are bound to go to Madras for recuperation. I hope that, like Mrs. Sastri and her mother, mere change to Madras will produce a miraculous effect upon you and this will find you free of fever. But you ought to make use of the time now yielded to you to learn from Mrs. Sastri the art of simple cookery and return to Poona with a proper quality of rice as part of your luggage. You cannot give up the struggle to live in Poona and to live in perfect health. What hundreds of Tamilians have been able to do you must be able also to do. You should write to me regularly. Mahadev must have written to you already that Anand Hingorani has been sent to fill in the gap. But you have to return as soon as you have regained your strength and yet there should be no premature return. You should not only regain your strength but learn the art of retaining it. Of course, you will take without reservation from the Harijan coffers whatever you need, and if you want me to write to Patwardhan¹ about it I would gladly do so, or to save time you can make use of this letter or the relevant part of it.

Give my love to Mrs. Sastri and the children.

Yours sincerely,

SJT. R. V. SASTRI

From a photostat: S.N. 19125

¹ Anant Vinayak Patwardhan, printer and publisher of Harijan 342. LETTER TO S. SADANAND

July 27, 1933

MY DEAR SADANAND,

I have had rough notes for the last two days from Maganbhai whom I had asked to read the file left by you. He says that the headlines often give an impression wholly different from the contents which they describe. Often events appear which have no basis in fact. Just now I have been reading the Free Press during the few moments that I have allowed myself for newspaper reading and I want to tell you that I am not happy over my reading. Your reporters seem to thrive more on gossip than on actualities. Therefore, many things reported do not inspire belief. What I would like you to do is to give the public only such news that have a good foundation and when the news consist of a forecast of events to come, the reporters should have substantial grounds for giving their forecast. I have one forecast in my mind. If it comes to pass I shall certainly congratulate you and your reporters. In any case, you know that the ban no longer exists.

Yours sincerely,

SIT. S. SADANAND
EDITOR, “FREE PRESS JOURNAL”
DALAL STREET, FORT, BOMBAY

From a photostat: S.N. 19126

343. A TESTIMONIAL

July 27, 1933

Abbas’s work in the Ashram was appreciated by everybody. He taught me many useful things about carding. He has done service in other ways too. It is my hope and my blessing that, wherever he lives, he will observe the Ashram rules and devote himself to service.

MOHANDAS GANDHI

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6308
344. LETTER TO BALIBEHN M. ADALAJA

July 27, 1933

Chili Bali,

I have your letter.

I tried hard to persuade Manu, but she is very eager to go to Poona and does not wish to return to you. She now wants to study, and wishes to go to Poona because there are better facilities for study in that place. I should, therefore, like you to give your willing permission to her. I don’t have the courage to send her to Poona unless you give your consent. Come and see me, if you wish.

Blessings from

Bapu

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 1524. Courtesy: Manubehn S. Mashruwala

345. INTERVIEW TO “THE DAILY HERALD”

July 27, 1933

My merely going to jail is not sufficient sacrifice in the face of the sacrifices and sufferings of thousands of men and women of which I have had knowledge since the breaking of the fast. The Ashram has three lakhs worth of immovable property, that is, land and buildings, and movable property worth nearly two lakhs, including a rich library containing 11,000 volumes. We estimate the value of the books at least at Rs. 40,000. The members of the Ashram and I came to the conclusion that we should no longer enjoy these things when others have been deprived of what was just as precious as the, things of the Ashram to the Ashram people. Moreover, many members of the Ashram having decided to offer individual civil disobedience, it would be wrong to expect the Government to treat the Ashram differently from other properties similarly affected. Of course, there is a fundamental difference. The Ashram is a public trust, with well-defined objects; and if the members of such a public institution adopt an

1 Harilal Gandhi’s sister-in-law
2 Harilal Gandhi’s daughter
3 This was reported as “from a special correspondent”.
attitude which brings upon them the heavy hand of the law, good or bad, the property which is the subject-matter of the trust might not be easily affected. It is for this reason that we have decided that we should voluntarily give up possession of the properties to the Government. Hence this step to be taken of disbanding the Ashram.

Replying to supplementary questions, the Mahatma said:

The immovable property will revert to the Government. The movable property, subject to what the Government have to say, will be given to public institutions.

Gandhiji said that he had not finally decided on his method of individual civil disobedience. He added:

I shall resort to no overt act of disobedience without first informing the Government. I shall be ready with my plan on the 1st August.

Asked about the reports current that he is contemplating another march, Gandhiji said:

That is all bazaar gossip. I have not decided on anything yet. It might be another march or might not be. I cannot say yet.

_The Hindu, 28-7-1933_

---

346. INTERVIEW TO “THE TIMES OF INDIA”

July 27, 1933

In an exclusive interview today, Mr. Gandhi told me that N., Dr. Spiegel and another Englishman, Duncan Greenlees, who was also in the Ashram, were bound not to take part in politics in general and civil disobedience in particular. Mr. Gandhi said:

They are all qualifying themselves for Harijan service. I am, therefore, arranging, if possible, to send them to Wardha, where they will continue their work.

The other inmates, who may not take part in the civil resistance movement, will go to their homes and some old workers and their children will be sent wherever it is most convenient for them to reside or train as the case may be. The disposal of the land, building and movable property of the Ashram will depend largely upon the intentions of Government.

Asked how he would first break the law after the period of the suspension of civil disobedience had expired, MY. Gandhi continued:
No steps will be taken without first intimating Government. What definite steps will be taken, I have not yet been able to decide upon. Of course, Government may frustrate all my plans by anticipating them but that has been my life since the discovery of satyagraha in 1906.

The Times of India, 28-7-1933

347. MESSAGE ON CENTENARY OF ABOLITION OF SLAVERY

[Before July 28, 1933]

India has much to learn from the heroes of the abolition of slavery for we have slavery based upon supposed religious sanction and more poisonous than its Western fellow.

Gandhi

Amrita Bazar Patrika, 29-7-1933

348. A STATEMENT

[July 28, 1933]

Mr. Duncan Greenlees, who is now staying in the Ashram, tells me that in bracketing him, a Britisher, with two foreigners, N. and Dr. Spiegel, I did not accurately represent his position. While in accordance with my request under Ashram discipline he does not propose to take part in the present civil disobedience movement, he naturally cannot bind himself in advance to a particular future course of conduct. A time may come, he says, for him to take his due share as a citizen in politics.

M. K. Gandhi

From a microfilm: S.N. 21544

1 Reported under the date-line, “Calcutta, July 28, 1933”, this and a message from Rabindranath Tagore appeared in the source as “released by Kalidas Nag, Editor, India and the World”. The report added that July 29 had been fixed for international celebration in Hull, England, Wilberforce’s native town, “in commemoration of the event which synchronized with the death anniversary of Wilberforce”.

2 ibid.
349. LETTER TO HEMPRABHA DAS GUPTA

July 28, 1933

CHI. HEMPRABHA,

I have your letter. What more can you gain by meeting me? If we adopt poverty in earnest we must not possess even a farthing. What should we do under such circumstances? Our dharma lies only in following our duty to the utmost. Your work lies in khadi service and to turn Sodepur into an ashram is a part of that. Your achievement will be complete if you can bring about all this and can find God in this alone.

Can you not keep Arun at some place other than Sodepur? Or are you and Arun content with remaining at Sodepur and taking whatever treatment is available there?

I trust you have understood all the changes I am making. I do not find time to write at length on this matter.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1704

350. INTERVIEW TO ASSOCIATED PRESS OF INDIA

AHMEDABAD,

July 28, 1933

Asked by a representative of the Associated Press as to how he would vacate the Ashram and who would take charge of it, Mr. Gandhi said that it was a question which could be better answered by the Government than by him, for the simple reason that when the members of the Ashram vacated the property, it naturally would become Government’s care, but the question was somewhat premature. They would all know in a few days, what would happen to the Ashram property.

Asked if this referred to the movable property also, Mr. Gandhi said he hoped not. That question too would be decided inside two or three days.

It is understood that Mr. Gandhi has written a letter to the Government of Bombay in this connection, a reply to which is awaited by him.

Asked what he thought of the rumours published in the Press that the Government would not give him this time, if he went to jail, the facility for Harijan work that was given to him before, Mr. Gandhi stated that he did not believe the rumour at all. He had not a shadow of doubt that the Government would not go back upon the policy deliberately adopted by them—a policy which was implied in Yeravda Pact—and for which he had never given, so far as he was aware, the slightest reason.

1 Vide “Letter to Home Secretary, Government of India”, 26-7-1933.

_The Hindu, 28-7-1933_

351. NOTES

A Noteworthy Donation

A Brahmin, who has lost his sister and sister’s daughter, sends me a cheque for Rs. 1,750 to be invested and the interest to be used for the benefit of Harijans, in any manner that may commend itself to me. In the course of his letter he says:

I had set apart Rs. 2,000 for charity in connection with the death of my dear sister and daughter. I have used Rs. 250 out of the sum so far for the local charities and I am sending you the balance for Harijan uplift. My own suggestion is that this money should be invested to form the nucleus of a permanent fund whose interest only should be used for the benefit of Harijans. But you are at liberty, if you think it more advisable, to use the capital in any manner you like in connection with the Harijan service. I would like you not to disclose my name.

I respect both the wishes of the donor and I am handing the cheque to the Gujarat Branch of the Servants of Untouchables Society with instructions to invest it and to use the interest for the benefit of Harijans, with my approval, wherever such approval can be easily procured. I hope that this example will be followed by others.

An Overseer's Confession

Letters continue still to come as evidence of the indirect influence that the fast had on several workers. One such worker from Gujarat writes a pathetic letter in Gujarati which I condense below:

When you were in Poona, I often took up the pen to write to you, but my courage failed me. But today, early in the morning, I said to myself that whilst you were so near me I should disburden myself of my sin and tell you how I had robbed poor people. It happened this way: In 1900, you may remember, there was a big famine. I was in charge of labourers who were employed at some famine work. I was then a mere lad, and I saw nothing wrong in helping myself out of the wages that were paid to the labourers under my charge. It is likely that I must have taken nothing less than Rs. 100 in this fashion. I was engaged for nearly eight months. The saddest part of the story is that the labourers were all Harijans, whom I was instrumental in engaging. I was otherwise kind to them and they always seemed to be pleased with me. But I helped myself with one pice per head, out of eight to be paid to the full-day labourer. I was so mean that I could not help taking away one pice from the wages of a boy of about 6 years old. The fact that this boy helped me considerably at the time of distribution of wages enhances my guilt. I drowned my conscience and flattered myself with the belief that I could safely steal the money I did from these poor people, because I was instrumental in finding them employment. I had under me non-Harijan labourers also. They did not always relish my taking one pice per head from their wages and I had to threaten them with dismissal if they did not let me steal the pice from them. But the poor Harijans never said a word in protest when I helped myself regularly every day in the manner I have described.

Nor does the recital of misdeeds stop here. I could not even keep my relations with women labourers quite pure.

Though I may not say anything in self-defence I must inform you that the whole atmosphere around me was soul-killing. There was only one Parsi Engineer who, I believe, was incorruptible.

As some penance for my misdeeds I enclose herewith notes for Rs. 250 of which Rs. 50 are marked for the use of Harijans to be distributed as follows:

Rs. 28 towards education.
Rs. 20 towards supply of water to them and Rs. 10 for propaganda.

The other Rs. 200 you can use as you like.

What this young man did in 1900 was undoubtedly the common practice amongst overseers and I fear very much that it still continues. Poor Harijans, unable to find work, otherwise make a virtue of necessity and even feel thankful to those who rob them. They feel that if they resisted the robbery they were in danger of losing the only means of earning a miserable pittance. But such regular robbery of a portion of their hard-earned daily wage cannot but leave an unpleasant memory behind. I congratulate the writer of the letter on his frankness and his penance. Let this letter be a warning to all Harijan workers and let it serve the purpose of making them clean.

_Harijan, 29-7-1933_

352. SOME DANGEROUS BELIEFS

A professor of English writes as follows:¹

My reading of the situation in Cochin and Travancore is that there will be a most unhappy split if temple-entry for Harijans is your next step, unless people are convinced that the _tapasya_ you have performed has endowed you with the power to understand our temples. Even non-caste Hindus are not convinced that you are completing the work of Shri Narayana Guru, because he built them separate temples. I humbly beg you to visit personally a temple or two in Kerala with Malaviyaji, if possible.

My own orthodoxy borders on superstition. Your fast perplexed me, I fasted and prayed for guidance, and then I felt I must go to Chottanikary temple to pray for your life. There I met the Brahmin devotee about whom I have written once, and after days of discussion we found we could not agree. On the seventh day I had a feeling that you would successfully terminate the fast.

At the temple I witnessed two cures of what new psychology would call hysteria or multiple personality. The cure of mental and nervous disease is common in many temples.

The orthodox people fear that any departure from usage may lessen the sanctity of temples. The Catholic Church at Ettumanur was once noted for such cures. The slackening of caste rules among Catholics is believed to be the cause of the partial disappearance of the power. It is almost impossible to convince people that such explanations are absurd. They live in a narrow static universe.

I am not so much concerned over the feared unhappy split on the temple-entry question as over the dangerous beliefs to which the professor refers. Suffice it to say that I shall leave no stone unturned to avoid a split. But my goal is quite clear. It is not to have Harijans regarded as a separate body in Hinduism or outside it. I shall be satisfied with nothing less than complete removal of untouchability as it is known to us today. The beliefs, however, to which the professor refers seem to me to be most dangerous. No doubt imagination goes a long way in making us do certain things and to refrain from doing certain other things. People have been known to die of fright because they have mistaken a rope for a snake. But it would be highly improper to cultivate the habit of entertaining such imaginary beliefs.

¹ Only excerpts are reproduced here.

Therefore, in spite of the professor’s testimony about the cures, I am unable to endorse the deduction the professor draws from these cures that the extraordinary beliefs, entertained by people in Malabar about the curative powers of certain idols in certain temples in Malabar, are justified. I feel that it is necessary to educate the people out of such beliefs. They cannot promote healthy thinking. And in any case I do not see how the entry of ‘untouchables’ can pollute temples or deities installed therein. And it is clear from the very nature of things that the powers, curative or any other, come not from deities but from the imaginary imputing of those powers to the temples or their deities. Surely many ‘untouchables’ must have entered these temples without being detected and without the efficacy of the deities being in any way affected. In my humble opinion, therefore, it is up to every educated man and woman in Malabar to make a serious effort to rid Hinduism of the beliefs described by the correspondent. Surely it is no matter for joy or congratulation that even the Catholic Church has been affected by the virus of untouchability.

_Harijan_, 29-7-1933

353. AN EXAMPLE TO COPY

A European correspondent writes:¹

... My object in writing this letter is not to deal with points in Harijan but to draw your attention to (or rather to remind you of—you have surely heard of it) the work being done at Hampton Institute, Hampton, Virginia, and at Tuskegee Institute, Alabama, U.S. for the American Negroes. To some extent the problem of the masses of the Harijans of today is the problem of the American slaves on their emancipation in 1865 (I think that was the date). In the _Story of Hampton_ ... is unfolded the story of how noble white American men and women tackled this problem. Again in _Up from Slavery, My Larger Education_ and _Tuskegee and Its People_ by Booker T. Washington ... is revealed the story of what noble black Americans (many of them graduates of Hampton Institute) have done and are doing for their people and not only for their own people but for others. The scientific experiments in farming carried on at Tuskegee, for example, have benefited the country all round. Might I also suggest that it might not be amiss if some of those in charge of Harijan education paid a visit to these American institutions. The advance of American Negro reads like a wonder-tale. Of course, in no case must manual training be emphasized at the expense of higher literary and artistic training. The two should go hand in hand. My ideal is that every shoemaker should have a University degree and that every University graduate should be skilled in some form of manual work. Thus and thus only would varnashrama become without offence to any, but thus also would the whole point of varnashrama fall away.

¹ Only excerpts are reproduced here.

I note that you suggest that wealthy people might build new temples, but does it require wealthy people to do that? Should not the great feature of such new temples be their simplicity? Are not the reformers, the puritans of Hinduism? Cannot Harijans and reformers, with their own hands, build these temples?

Neither the Hampton Institute nor the Tuskegee are unfamiliar to me, but they cannot be familiar to the Indian readers of the Harijan. There is no doubt that the work of Armstrong at the Hampton Institute and of Booker T. Washington at the Tuskegee is worth studying by all Harijan workers and Harijans. The analogy, however, does not hold good in all respects. The work of the white men at Hampton Institute corresponds to some of the work being done by the so-called high-caste Hindus among Harijans. But I feel sure that the duty owing by the former to Harijans, is far more imperative than that of white men towards American Negroes. For we have made of the artificial and assumed superiority of so-called high-castes over Harijans a matter of religion and therefore the work of the Hindu reformer in India is more urgent than that of the white reformer in America, as it also becomes far more difficult. And yet I have no doubt that we have nothing corresponding to Hampton Institute in India. That Institute is a very great enterprise and a noble monument of the industrious and exceedingly well-informed zeal of a handful of white reformers. The Tuskegee Institute is a model for Harijans. Booker Washington has shown to the world what a man of a despised race can do in the teeth of enormous odds. He was able to build that noble edifice at Tuskegee because of his limitless faith and equally limitless application. Indeed, both the Institutes, apart from their special usefulness for Harijans and Harijan sevaks, have a very high value from the general educationist’s point of view. I hope some day, therefore, to give in these pages a gist of the work done by and in both the Institutes. Meanwhile, let it be noted that in both, great stress is laid upon the dignity of manual labour and the endeavour in both is to draw out the best in the students that flock to them.

As to my correspondent’s reference to varnashrama, evidently the whole point of it has been missed, for, as I have interpreted varnadharma, there is no bar in any shape or form to the highest mental development. The bar altogether moral is against change of hereditary occupation for the sake of bettering one’s material condition, and thus setting up a system of unhealthy and ruinous competition which is today robbing life of all its joy and beauty.

As to the temples, I refer to my description of the model temple! I am trying to think that my model temple more than fulfill the requirements of my correspondent. But my reason for reproducing from the letter the reference to new temples is to emphasize the fact that Western thinkers are watching this movement for the removal of untouchability and that they would have us not merely to be satisfied with the mere destruction of the outward form, but they would have us to carry out a thorough-going reform so as to revolutionize many old-rooted ideas and so to purify Hindu society as to affect the whole of mankind.

_Harijan, 29-7-1933_

354. INTERVIEW TO ASSOCIATED PRESS OF INDIA

_AHMEDABAD, July 29, 1933_

As asked by a representative of the Associated Press what he had to say regarding the fears entertained in some quarters that the suspension of the Congress Committees would plunge the country into chaos, Mr. Gandhi stated that behind the question there lay a grave misconception of the situation. The question presupposed that there were lawfully working Congress organizations all over the country, which the acting Congress President had dissolved. The fact was that all such organizations had been declared illegal. What was therefore working were secret organizations, and shadow cabinets, and this was calculated to lead to chaos. That condition had been anticipated, and stopped by the action of the acting President. If there was any chaos now, it would be confined to individuals.
The more he read the criticism levelled at Mr. M. S. Alley’s action, Mr. Gandhi said, the more convinced he felt that, as time passed, people would understand the necessity for his action, as also its beauty. It was the only action possible in order to save the Congress and the national honour and the national spirit that had been awakened among the masses.

Asked if it was true as hinted in the Press report that he had offered to Government to take possession of his Ashram in anticipation of confiscation, Mahatma Gandhi said: “No.” He asked the people patiently to await events, instead of anticipating them.¹

Asked whether he had decided his plan of civil disobedience, Mr. Gandhi said there were undoubtedly many schemes floating in his brain, which it would be purposeless to recount, but as soon as anything took a definite shape, he would gladly share it with the public. But he would share it first with the Government. He said the Harijans were more than friends to him and he might not invite them to joint him.

Asked whether he would launch his civil disobedience on the 1st August and call upon anybody to join him, Mr. Gandhi said that, whether it would be 1st August or when, he was unable to say.

The Hindustan Times, 30-7-1933; also The Hindu, 31-7-1933

355. STATEMENT ON SENGUPTA DAY

AHMEDABAD, July 30, 1933

I have received a message from Mr. Santosh Basu, Mayor of Calcutta, and others asking me to announce 6th August as the All-India Sengupta Day. I also have seen Mr. Aney’s appeal in the same connection. I associate myself heartily with the appeal made by the acting President of the Congress and I hope that at public meetings that may be convened, striking features of the departed patriot’s life will be recalled and endeavour will be made by all to reproduce them in their own lives.

The Hindustan Times, 1-8-1933

¹ This paragraph and the last sentence of the succeeding one are reproduced from The Hindustan Times, 30-7-1933.
356. STATEMENT TO ASSOCIATED PRESS OF INDIA

July 30, 1933

On the eve of what is to me an act of greater dedication than perhaps ever before, I would like to urge all Congressmen not to fritter away their energy in debating over the decision of the acting President regarding individual civil disobedience. As an expert I reiterate my opinion that the decision was the only right course to take. In my opinion it is also constitutional. I would urge every Congressman to study my statement carefully and it will be found that if the programme is zealously worked out the Congress will become a much more powerful organization than it has ever been. Without civil disobedience there is no safety and no freedom. Civil disobedience can become impregnable only in the manner pointed out by me.

To non-Congressmen I would say: Help the largest organization in the country in every way you can. It is not a sectional body. It is national in every sense of the term.

To the Englishmen, whether belonging to the services or others, I would say: If you want peace in the land and real friendship with India, Ordinance Rule is not the way, that of the Congress is the only way. I say this as a friend of the English people. Some of you may regard me today as your enemy. I make bold to prophesy that a day will come when the mists will have rolled away and you will admit my claim.

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: S.N. 21541

---

1 This was published in The Hindu, 31-7-1933, and The Hindustan Times, 1-8-1933.
2 Vide “Statement on M. S. Aney’s Statement”, 26-7-1933.
357. TELEGRAM TO HOME SECRETARY,
GOVERNMENT OF BOMBAY

July 30, 1933

SECRETARY
HOME DEPARTMENT
POONA

HOPE VACATE ASHRAM TUESDAY MORNING AND IF FREE MARCH WITH COMPANIONS IN EASY STAGES IMMEDIATE DESTINATION
BEING RAS WITH VIEW TENDER SYMPATHY VILLAGERS MOST HIT. NO DESIRE INVITE VILLAGERS MASS CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE BUT INDIVIDUALS WILL BE INVITED OFFER CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE TERMS CONGRESS RESO-LUTION. WILL GIVE TALKS VILLAGERS ON TEETOTALISM LIQUOR DEAL-ERS LEAVE LIQUOR TRADE FOREIGN CLOTH DEALERS DEAL EX-CLUSIVELY KHADDAR AND ALL OTHERWISE GO THROUGH CONGRESS
CONSTRUCTIVE PROGRAMME. HINDUS WILL BE ASKED SHED UNTOUCH-ABILITY. SELF AND COMPANIONS WILL MARCH PIECELESS AND DEPEND ON VILLAGERS FEEDING US. IN EVENT MY EARLIER ARREST COMPAN-IONS THIRTYTWO IN NUMBER INCLUDING SIXTEEN WOMEN WILL TAKE UP MARCH.

GANDHI

From a photostat: S.N. 21542

358. APPEAL TO PEOPLE OF GUJARAT

July 30, 1933

It was no easy thing to decide to sacrifice the Ashram, but it was very clear to every inmate of the Ashram that the sacrifice was inevitable. This sacrifice is nothing before the suffering and sacrifice that has been gone through by the peasants of Karnatak, Midnapore and Kaira, the U. P. and of the Frontier. They have been so far given secret relief which has now been stopped or will be stopped, and should be stopped. But that does not mean that those who are starving should be deprived of public relief simply because they were satyagrahis. I hope that all the peasants who are in distress will receive

1 The first and the third paragraphs of this were omitted in the Press reports.
the needed relief from the public and, should Government prohibit the distribution of such relief, those who give the relief will have the ability to resist it and take the consequences. But whether they have the ability or not, the way is clear for me. I have sacrificed my all.

On Tuesday morning I propose, God willing, to march from the Ashram with 33 companions. Some of these will be even physically weaker than I, for there are nearly as many women with me this time as men. But I could not resist their desire to sacrifice themselves. It was to them a call they could not resist. We hope and pray that God will help us to carry out our pledge. Our immediate destination is Ras.
In case we are allowed to reach there, we shall proceed further. But it is quite likely that we may all be arrested as we proceed on the march.
If we are not so arrested, it is our plan to carry the message of fearlessness to every village home.

We will not invite them to offer mass civil disobedience, but we will certainly ask such as may be ready to offer individual civil disobedience, we will ask those who drink to refrain from it, the liquor-dealer to give up his trade, the foreign cloth dealer to deal exclusively in khaddar and we shall carry the message of hand-spinning to every home. We shall ask the so-called high-class Hindus to wash themselves clean of untouchability and to befriend the Harijans. We shall ask the Harijans to observe the rules of hygiene and abjure carrion, and we shall call upon all the communities to achieve communal unity, thus fulfilling the whole of the constructive programme of the Congress.¹

Let me set out in brief what we shall expect of the villages we visit. We will not have a copper on us, we shall cheerfully and thankfully accept what humble fare the villagers may offer us. The coarsest fare lovingly served will mean to us the choicest treat. As this is the rainy season, we shall be thankful to be put up in a cottage having a roof and we shall march by easy stages, as many amongst us are not physically strong, and our programme will not be rigid. We shall halt whenever our legs cannot carry us further but we don’t propose to spend more than a single night at one place.

It is possible that the Government may take me before Tuesday.
Even then the march will continue so long as there is any marcher left free. I am confident that if the sacrifice that we are offering is pure, it will generate a power of non-violence that will put us in reach of the swaraj that millions of us are pining for.

¹ What follows is taken from the photostat source.

From a microfilm: S.N. 21549; also photostat: S.N. 21416

359. LETTER TO ANAND T. HINGORANI

July 30, 1933

MY DEAR ANAND,

Just a line to acknowledge your letter. I have come very near Vidya¹. She knows her course of action but has not enough courage to take it cheerfully. But she is struggling most bravely and I think successfully. She sits by me all the time I am at the Ashram. But she is not likely to see me tomorrow. And she will probably leave for Wardha tomorrow night. You need not worry about her.

I do not know what can be sent you next week. If it is at all possible, I shall certainly send something.

Love.

BAPU

From a microfilm. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

360. LETTER TO G. V. MAVALANKAR

July 30, 1933

BHAI MAVALANKAR,

I think about you every day, but get no time at all to write to you. Today I decided to write this anyhow. I get reports about you from time to time and hear that you are all right. I approve of your self-exile. Without it, you would not have got the rest which you are now getting. As for the world, it will go on without caring for us. Make good use of this opportunity which you have got and improve your health.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1237

¹ Vidya Hingorani, addressee’s wife
361. LETTER TO MAITRI GIRI

July 30, 1933

CHI. MAITRI,

I was pleased to get your letter. Work well now and bring great credit to the Ashram. Bachubhai\(^1\) is a selfless worker. There is very much indeed which you can learn from him. Learn as much as you can.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6241

362. LETTER TO KRISHNAMAIYADEVI GIRI

July 30, 1933

CHI. KRISHNAMAIYADEVI,

I have your letter. I was glad. Your having taken up work there will certainly benefit you. We are now disbanding the Ashram, and so it has now become the responsibility of you all to keep up its good name. Observe its rules now and do so.

I am sending Durga and Satyavati there. Take care of them.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6214

363. LETTER TO KHUSHALCHAND GANDHI

July 30, 1933

RESPECTED BROTHER,

I request my sister-in-law and you and others to rejoice, instead of being unhappy, that Narandas is joining the movement. In my eyes, this is highly sacred work. I have no doubt at all in my mind that it is your great good fortune that all your sons are taking part in this sacrifice. Have faith that wherever Narandas may go he will come to no harm. Moreover he is not alone; there are many. Women, of whom

\(^1\) Bachubhai Ramdas, nephew of Gangabehn Vaidya
some are even physically weak, have joined this pilgrimage. Please believe with me that by all of us taking up this work we shall wipe the tears of many and bring some happiness to thousands of homes, and let both of you give your blessings to Narandas and the whole party. Humble greetings to both.

Regards to both of you from
MOHANDAS

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II

364. LETTER TO MAHAVIR GIRI

July 30, 1933

CHI. MAHAVIR,

You seem to be working well. Go on improving your efficiency in the same manner and produce a fine impression on everybody with your sincere work. Bring credit to the Ashram.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6240

365. LETTER TO TOTARAM SANADHYA

July 30, 1933

BHAI TOTARAMJI,

I have received the letter from you and Chi. Hariprasad. I am fully confident that you will live in accordance with the Ashram rules wherever you might be.

Continue looking after the Ashram lands until the Government takes possession, and utilize the fruit and other produce. Also share them with the weaver brethren.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 2536
366. LETTER TO SHANKERLAL BANKER

SABARMATI,
July 30, 1933

BHAISHRI SHANKERLAL,

Since the Ashram has been disbanded it has been decided by the inmates to hand over the dairy and the cattle at the Ashram to the Goseva Sangh. Hence, on behalf of the Ashram and the Goseva Sangh, since I am its president, I am entrusting the dairy and the cattle to you. You should manage these as a public undertaking. It should largely be self-sufficient. But if the need arises for funds to be raised for it, you may do so. There is some money kept at the Ashram for this work. Arrangement has been made for this to be paid to you as early as possible. The amount is... Bhai Titus will be working as manager of the dairy and as secretary. He should be paid a monthly allowance of Rs. 75. If possible, keep the cowherds who are already employed. I am giving you all the powers in connection with this dairy.

MOHANDAS GANDHI

From the Gujarati original: S. N. 32726

367. INTERVIEW TO THE PRESS

July 30, 1933

Interviewed by Pressmen, Gandhiji said that there was no truth in the Press report that he had drafted a letter to the Viceroy. He said he knew only one fetish in life and that was Truth, and he was not sorry for having made of it a fetish.

In his opinion, prestige came unasked and unsought from right conduct, right speech and right thought. His endeavour ever since he entered public life was to regulate it by those three golden rules.

Replying to a question whether his request to the Viceroy for an interview was accompanied by a threat of revival of civil disobedience, Gandhiji declared that in no

1 In July 1933, Gandhiji had offered to hand over the Sabarmati Ashram to the Government; vide also “Interview to Associated Press of India”, 25-7-1933 and 301-4. However, the Ashram was finally given over to the Harijan Sevak Sangh; vide also “Letter to Vallabhbhai Patel”, 24-9-1933.

2 The figure has been struck off in the source.

3 T. Titus

4 Vide also “Letter to Vallabhbhai Patel”, 24-9-1933.
sense was the request for an interview accompanied by threat of any kind whatsoever, whether direct or indirect, open or veiled.

It was for the sake of avoiding the slightest suspicion of threat that the proceedings of the informal conference were made confidential. It was a public misfortune that the present code of conduct of newspapers not only permitted, but seemed even to applaud the gaining of confidential information by hook or crook, and gave it publicity.

That at an informal conference many things were said in connection with the possibilities that might arise if the interview was not granted or if granted, proved infructuous, could not in any way be interpreted as threat. The relevant fact was that his request for interview carried with it no condition.

The Bombay Chronicle, 31-7-1933

---

368. LETTER TO MIRABEHN

July 30, 1933

CHI. MIRA,

I am writing this at the Ashram. It is now 8.45 p.m. I hope you were not over-excited after the interview.1 You have to put on more weight if you can do so without being ill.

Now that the Ashram is disbanded, you will fall back upon Ranchhodbhai for your needs. I have spoken to him.

I must not2 write more as I have little time at my disposal and my fingers won’t give me much more work for the night.

Love.

BAPU

From the original: C.W. 6284. Courtesy: Mirabehn. Also G.N. 9750

---

369. TELEGRAM TO SILAM

[Before July 31, 1933]3

MR. SILAM
SECRETARY, LOKAMANYA MEMORIAL COMMITTEE

DEEPEST REGRET UNABLE UNVEIL STATUE MYSELF. NO HOMAGE TOO GREAT AT THIS JUNCTURE FOR ONE WHO GAVE US SWARAJYA MANTRA.

GANDHI

From a photostat: S.N. 21417

---

1 Gandhiji had met Mirabehn at Sabarmati Jail earlier.
2 The source has “now”.
3 The telegram appeared in Gujarat Samachar, 31-7-1933.
370. LETTER TO COLLECTOR OF AHMEDABAD

July 14, 1933

You had already given me permission to take away such books as I wanted. Would it be in order for me to take away all the books from the Vidyapith building including the bookshelves in which they are kept? As you know, it has been decided to hand over the books in the Sabarmati Ashram for public use. It is the intention of the trustees of the Vidyapith to hand over the Vidyapith library also in a like manner. Hence my question.2

Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel, Vol. II, p. 161

371. LETTER TO N. R. MALKANI

July 31, 1933

MY DEAR MALKANI,

I can say neither yes nor no off-hand. You will have to judge for yourself when you cannot help plunging into the fire. You should therefore always prepare a safe substitute for yourself. Am I clear?

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 899

372. LETTER TO ABBAS TYABJI

July 31, 1933

DEAR BH-R-R-R3,

What nonsense! You had a perfect right to explode as you did. The prolonged discussions were enough to try anybody’s nerves. But I never doubted your capacity and willingness for suffering when the occasion arose. Do take full rest and plunge when the time comes. This time it is going to be a long-drawn-out affair. That does not

1 In the source, Narahari Parikh explains that this letter was drafted for D. B. Kalelkar who had sent it “after arriving in Ahmedabad on July 31”.
2 According to Narahari Parikh, the Collector had said in his reply “that there was no objection to the books and such shelves as are not fixtures in the building being removed”.
3 This was a form of greeting between Gandhiji and the addressee.
matter. But it gives one breathing time. Once in, however, there should be no rest after. That is the ideal.

Love to you all.

Yours,

M. K. GANDHI

[PS.]

Good-bye. I expect to find myself H.M.’s guest before tomorrow dawns on me.

From a photostat: S.N. 9585

373. LETTER TO PREMI JAIRAMDAS

July 31, 1933

CHI. PREMA,

I do not get letters from you these days. Tell your father¹ that if Shri Aney goes to jail and he becomes the president and if he accepts my views about dictators, he should abolish the post of Dictator and those of Provincial Dictators.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Hindi original: C. W. 11041. Courtesy: Arjun Jairamdas

374. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

[July 31, 1933]²

CHI. NARANDAS,

Your responsibilities are heavy indeed. But I see that God gives you the strength to meet them.

Bhai Apte’s letter is enclosed. I knew that some correspondence was going on with Sharja. She has asked for freedom. Have a talk with her and see if you can take the responsibility. If she observes discipline, I don’t see any harm in accepting responsibility for her.

Mahadev is likely to be arrested at the same time as I am. Even if that happens, the programme should remain unchanged. Anybody who is free tomorrow should discuss all the matters with Jamnalalji. He is not to court arrest just now. He should take possession of the Ashram funds. Any secret funds which he finds should be kept openly. I have looked into the accounts and find that there are no sums which the Government can confiscate. All such sums which we had have already been spent. They represented the contributions for satyagrahis. All the same, the Government is welcome to confiscate whatever there is. All sums are earmarked for specific purposes.

¹ Jairamdas Doulatram
² According to Bapuna Patro-9: Shri Narandas Gandhine, Pt. II, the letter was written before Gandhiji’s arrest at midnight on this date.

If Bali comes there, have a talk with her and come to a clear understanding. If Anasuyabehn shows the slightest reluctance, Manu should go to Wardha. If she is very eager to go to Rajkot, let her do so.

So far as I know, Keshu will definitely go to Wardha. Santok also wants to go there. She wants to take Radha with her and hopes to do to the best of her ability any work which Jamnalalji might give her. Discuss this with her fully.

Send away Balbhadr to Da[kshina] Mu[rti]. Since Rama Joshi has forbidden Dhiru Joshi, make what arrangements you think proper for him. Probably Ramnarayan will keep him till you decide finally. Rama Joshi will have to be given fare to Poona and back. Ask her. See that she is not displeased. Totaramji should look after the Ashram for some time. After that, even if the Government does not take possession of it he should abandon it.

Prabhavati should be given what she requires for going to Banaras or Bihar.

I don’t remember anything more just now. If you wish to ask about anything, you may.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./I. Also C.W. 8391. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi
375. STATEMENT BEFORE DISTRICT MAGISTRATE¹,
AHMEDABAD

August 1, 1933

There has never been the slightest desire on my part to disturb the public peace, as I think. In my opinion, I have never done a single thing consciously to disturb the public peace. On the contrary, I make bold to say that I have made the best endeavour possible to promote public peace and I can show several instances in which I have attained very considerable success in preserving and promoting public peace.
Being a lover of peace all my life, nothing can be remoter from my thought than to disturb public peace.

Bombay Secret Abstracts, Home Department, Special Branch, File No.
800(40)(11), Pt. II, pp. 263-5

376. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

CENTRAL PRISON,
SABARMATI,
August 1, 1933

CHI. AMALA,

You must shed your strange and embarrassing manners.
Effusiveness is no mark of true devotion. True devotion works stealthily. You will not be fit for Harijan work if you do not concentrate and learn to use your hands well. Your spinning is most cumbersome. I hope you do not mind my speaking or writing as I feel.
Pure love has to feel harsh at times.

Love.

BAPU

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

¹ J. B. Irwin; the statement was made under section 3(2) of the Bombay Act XVI of 1932.
377. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

August 1, 1933

I hope you have settled down to work.¹ You will not wait for approach from but you yourself will approach the members of the family and make yourself at home with everybody. I would like you to express your wants to Nalinibehn. You will not on any account endanger your health.

Love.

BAPU

[PS.]

Please share this with Duncan.

From a photostat: G.N. 6004. Also C.W. 3330. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

378. LETTER TO ADVANI²

August 1, 1933

DEAR MAJOR ADVANI,

You might know that before my discharge, owing to my fast, from the Yeravda Central Prison in May last, I was permitted to do Harijan work and thereanent to see freely visitors and equally freely to receive and send letters, to have a typist and to receive newspapers, magazines and other literature. I hope that I would be given the same facilities now. I may state that a weekly newspaper called Harijan is issued at Poona and it is necessary for me to send matter for the paper and otherwise instruct the Editor. I have detained in Ahmedabad the typist I brought from Poona. I have understood from you that you have received no instructions from the Government as yet in this matter. Will you please obtain the necessary instructions by wire?³

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G.N. 3893; also Bombay Secret Abstracts, Home Department, Special Branch, File No. 800 (40) (14), Pt. V, p. 85

¹ After the disbandment of the Sabarmati Ashram the addressee had gone to the Ashram at Wardha.
² Superintendent of Ahmedabad Central Prison
³ This and the correspondence which followed up to August 16, 1933 were published in The Hindu, 19-8-1933.
379. LETTER TO RAMABEHN JOSHI

August 1, 1933

CHI. RAMA,

I still feel sorry that I could not meet you a second time. Since there are no women in the Ashram, I have asked Vinabehn to make careful arrangements for looking after you. I hope, therefore, that everything is all right. Your reply to me may be dictated. I am afraid that the message which I sent regarding Dhiru was rather harsh, but I had no option. About your travelling expenses, ask Chimanlal. I don’t expect any difficulty.

Dhiru and Balbhadra have gone to Bhavnagar. I certainly hope that they will behave well there.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

I have also sent messages to Anandi, Bachu, Sharda and Vanamala and asked them to go and inquire after you.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5355

380. LETTER TO HOME SECRETARY,
GOVERNMENT OF BOMBAY

YERAVDA CENTRAL PRISON,
August 3, 1933

SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF BOMBAY
HOME DEPARTMENT
DEAR SIR,

What purports to be an authentic report in The Times of India dated the 2nd instant, says that I am to be released after being served with an order which will restrict my movements to Poona and preclude any activities connected with the civil disobedience movement. It then goes on: “Should he ignore this order he will be re-arrested.” If the report be true, I would like to say, in order to save

1 A German lady who was working as a nurse in V. S. Hospital, Ahmedabad
2 Vide Appendix “Order Restraining Gandhiji’s Movements”, before 18-8-1933; also the following item.

VOL. 61: 27 APRIL, 1933- 7 OCTOBER, 1933 303
Government possible, unnecessary embarrassment, and to conserve my energy, which I am still regaining since the breaking of the fast, that in accordance with my belief in civil disobedience, I shall be unable to conform to the order reported to be under contemplation. If the object be to secure my conviction I have no doubt that the sweeping powers possessed by Government enable them to do so without going through the vexatious procedure described in the above-mentioned report.

I gratefully observe that Government have kept Sjt. Mahadev Desai with me. He therefore desires me to say that civil disobedience is as much a life-principle with him as with me, and that he can no more refrain than I can from preaching or practising it.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G.N. 3894; also Bombay Secret Abstracts, Home Department, Special Branch, File No. 800 (40) (14), Pt. V, p. 37

381. STATEMENT BEFORE DISTRICT MAGISTRATE POONA¹

August 3, 1933

I have already this morning handed to Col. Martin, Superintendent, Yeravda Central Prison, a letter² addressed to the Secretary, Home Department, on this subject. This gives my view on the subject and I have nothing further to add.

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: C.W. 9724; also Bombay Secret Abstracts, Home Department, Special Branch, File No. 800(40)(14), Pt. V, p. 75

¹ After hearing the directions proposed to be issued under Section 4 of Act XVI of 1932 which was read out to him by D. Maclachlan, District Magistrate, Poona
² Vide the preceding item.
382. STATEMENT\(^1\) DISOBEYING RESTRAINT ORDER

August 4, 1933

I have received copy of this order\(^2\). I regret to have to say that I shall be unable to conform to it.

M. K. GANDHI

Bombay Secret Abstracts, Home Department, Special Branch, File No. 800(40)(14), Pt. V, p. 67

383. TRIAL AT POONA\(^3\)

August 4, 1933

After the Magistrate had explained the circumstances under which the trial was taking place, Gandhiji suggested that as he intended to plead guilty to the charge, witnesses might not be examined. But the Magistrate informed Gandhiji that the procedure required him to record some evidence.

GANDHIJI: I think in 1922, when I pleaded guilty all evidence was dispensed with.

MAGISTRATE: It is very kind of you. I understand what you say. It will of course simplify matters, but it is my duty to record some evidence. But I shall reduce it as much as possible. . . .\(^4\)

Asked by the Court if he wished to cross examine the witness, Gandhiji

---

\(^1\) Given before R. V. Martin, the Superintendent, Yeravda Central Prison

\(^2\) Vide Appendix “Order Restraining Gandhiji’s Movements”, before 18-8-1933. Gandhiji broke the order forthwith and was re-arrested and taken back to Yeravda Jail for trial; vide the following item.

\(^3\) Gandhiji, on his release at 9 a.m., was served with an order to remain within Poona city limits. He was, within an hour, re-arrested for disobeving the order and taken to Yeravda Jail for trial, which began at 3.15 p.m. before Hyam S. Israel, Additional District Magistrate, Poona.

\(^4\) Then, F.W.O’gorman, District Superintendent of Police, the first prosecution witness, narrated the events which led to Gandhiji’s arrest.

VOL. 61: 27 APRIL, 1933- 7 OCTOBER, 1933 305
replied in the negative. . . .

Gandhiji declined to cross-examine this witness also saying:

No, thanks.²

To a question put by the Court, Gandhiji stated that his age was 64, and that he was a Hindu by caste.

M. What is your occupation?

G. (Hesitatingly) I am by occupation a spinner, a weaver and a farmer.

M. Your residence?

G. Yeravda Jail now. (Laughter)

M. Now, of course, but otherwise?

G. Otherwise, Sabarmati in Ahmedabad district.

M. Have you anything to say regarding the prosecution evidence recorded?

G. I think that the statements that several prosecution witnesses have made are quite correct.

Gandhiji, proceeding, stated that he desired to make a brief statement as to why he had committed a breach of the order. The court consenting, he dictated off-hand a brief statement in slow and measured tones. He stated:

I would like to make a brief statement as to why I have committed what must be described as a wilful and deliberate breach of orders of the Government of Bombay. It cannot be a matter of pleasure to me to commit a breach of orders of a constituted authority. I am a lover of peace, and I regard myself a good citizen voluntarily tendering obedience to the laws of the State to which I may belong. But there are occasions in the lifetime of a citizen when it becomes his painful duty to disobey laws and orders of his State. As is well known, such a painful duty came upon me in 1919 and I have not only regarded it as my duty to offer civil disobedience but also to preach it to others.

¹ Lt.-Col. Martin, Superintendent, Yeravda Jail, the second witness to be examined, stated that it was he who served the order on Gandhiji. Then, Assistant Superintendent of Police, the third witness, deposed that Gandhiji and Mahadev Desai were found at 9.40 a.m. still within Yeravda limits having gone out of the jail in a private taxi. On being told to quit the place at once, they refused to do so. After ten minutes, they were reminded of the order, and on their refusal to comply with it, they were both re-arrested by the witness and brought back to Yeravda Jail.

² The taxi driver in whose taxi Gandhiji drove to Golf Links was the last witness. He corroborated the other witnesses.
This law or Act under which I have been tried, is a glaring instance in proof of my contention that the system under which India is being governed today is not merely unjust, but is dragging her down economically and morally.

I have had recently a spell of freedom and was in the midst of people and had an opportunity of coming into contact with a very large number of men and women. I made what was to me a most painful discovery, that men high and low, educated and uneducated, rich and poor, were demoralized, and were living in a perpetual fear of loss of liberty and their possessions.

It was a trial for me to live in the midst of that atmosphere. Being by nature from my childhood a confirmed believer in the methods of non-violence, I sought shelter in self-suffering such as might fall to my lot. That was the only way in which I could relieve myself of some of the agony that was burning in me.

It is for reasons such as this that I am offering all resistance to this system of Government—a resistance that is within my capacity and resistance that a peaceful man like me could offer.

One word more. I think, you, Sir, or Government would, after sentencing me, classify me. I must state that I intensely dislike the procedure of classification of prisoners into A, B and C classes. I have no desire whatsoever to enjoy the special comforts to which other fellow-prisoners might not be entitled. I would like to be classified amongst those whom the Government may consider to be the lowest. I would like, in conclusion, to state that the authorities with whom I had come in contact during these few days have treated me with courtesy and consideration for which I am thankful to them.

After making the above statement, Gandhiji read through it as recorded by the Magistrate and stated that it was all right.

The Magistrate then framed a charge under Section 14 of the Bombay Special Powers Act 1932, for intentionally disobeying an order of the Government under Section 4 of the same Act requiring him among other things to remove himself before 9.30 a.m. outside Yeravda village limits. Asked if he pleaded guilty, Gandhiji replied in the affirmative.

Gandhiji also stated that he did not want to call defence witnesses. At this stage the police prosecutor said that considering Gandhiji’s age he did not press for a deterrent sentence.

The Magistrate delivered judgment and observed that it had been proved that Gandhiji disobeyed an order of the Government. As such he convicted him under Section 14 of the Bombay Special Powers Act of 1932 and sentenced him to one year’s simple imprisonment.

M. I am passing a light sentence considering your age and the present state of your health and also because the prosecution has not pressed for a deterrent sentence.

This concluded the trial and Gandhiji rose after bowing to the Magistrate and was taken by the jailor to his cell. Gandhiji has been placed in ‘A’ class.¹

_The Bombay Chronicle, 5-8-1933_

384. LETTER TO HOME SECRETARY, GOVERNMENT OF BOMBAY

YERAVDA CENTRAL PRISON,

August 4, 1933

_Secretary to Government_
_HOME DEPARTMENT_

DEAR SIR,

On the day of my admission to the Ahmedabad Central Prison, I applied through its Superintendent for permission to resume anti-untouchability work as before my late fast. There is no reply to it as yet. Government know that I have been controlling the policy of the weekly newspaper _Harijan_ and its Gujarati edition, and partly also the Hindi edition. This is only part of the anti-untouchability work I am doing in fulfilment of my promise to myself and the Harijans as an integral part of the Yeravda Pact. This work may not be interrupted except at the peril of my life. I would therefore esteem a reply by Monday next, so as to enable me to attend to next week’s _Harijan_ and to deal with certain important matters that were left pending at the time of my arrest.²

_Yours sincerely,_

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G.N. 3895

¹ Mahadev Desai was then brought before the Magistrate. He was sentenced to one year’s simple imprisonment and was placed in ‘B’ class.
² _Vide_ also “Letter to Home Secretary, Government of Bombay”, 6-8-1933.
385. ETHICS OF FASTING

A learned correspondent from the West thus writes about my late fast:

I have read your reply\(^1\) to a correspondent querying the ethics of your fast. I don’t quite see your point. You seem to think that the fact of your suffering removes all offence from such a deed; but every man who does wrong suffers—according to your reasoning, then, there is no such thing as wrongdoing. If, instead of identifying yourself with your body, you, for a moment, regard your body objectively, is it not then clear to you that violence to or unnatural treatment of that body is as much an infringement of the law of ahimsa as such unnatural or violent treatment of any other extraneous object?

The fact that good men in other ages have contemplated and even perpetrated such fasts is no argument.

This argument has been advanced before, but not so seriously as has been done by my correspondent. As I hold that fasting as a powerful means of purification ought to occupy an important part in the life of the human family, it is best to examine the argument.

The fact of a fast even by the offender does not remove the offence from his deed, much less can it do so when it is vicarious. What the fast does is to prevent repetition of evil. Most, if not all, evil comes from attachment to the flesh. If, therefore, the flesh is mortified, attachment to it is likely to decrease. No doubt this is dependent on the motive with which a fast is undertaken. There is a great deal of truth in the saying that man becomes what he eats. The grosser the food, the grosser the body. Plain living is said to go hand in hand with high thinking. But plain living is only a few steps removed from fasting. Plain living may itself be said to be a mode of fasting. Complete fasting is a forcible reminder of the fact that ‘man does not live by bread alone’.

‘But assume that there is some force in the argument you advance for the offender’s fast, what about vicarious fasting?’ might say the correspondent. The answer is that just as there is identity of spirit, so is there identity of matter and in essence the two are inseparable. Spirit is matter rarefied to the utmost limit. Hence, whatever happens to the body must affect the whole of matter and the whole of spirit. It is within the experience of us all that often wrongdoers are touched by the loving acts of their friends and relatives especially when they consider the latter to be better than they. Fasting for the sake of loved ones is a forcible and unmistakable expression of love and therefore affects those for whose sake it is undertaken. Those whose love encircles the whole of life cannot but affect the whole creation by a supreme act of love.

\(^1\) Vide "An American Criticism", 22-7-1933.

If the necessity of fasting is admitted, the argument that it is unnatural or an act of violence to one’s own body falls to pieces. Just as a fast for regaining lost health is neither unnatural nor criminal self-torture, so is not a fast for purification of self or others.

But all my argument is useless if it cannot be sustained by practice. And if there is any soundness in it, the unbroken practice of all the sages and others from time immemorial clinches the argument. Sceptics, however, need not rely either upon argument or past testimony. Let them acquaint themselves with the rules and the science of fasting for purification and then test its efficacy themselves. That fasting does not appeal to people brought up in the midst of the dazzling materialism is an additional reason for people like my correspondent not to reject summarily one of the most potent methods of purification and penance.

_Harijan, 5-8-1933_

386. LETTER TO R. V. MARTIN

_August 5, 1933_

DEAR COL. MARTIN,

You were good enough this morning to tell me that according to rules I had to pay for any rations I needed outside the scale ordinarily provided for prisoners and that therefore I should tell you what I considered to be my minimum wants. I may say in the first instance that I do not desire to pay for any extra food that I may need. I was admitted as a convict in 1922 and I was not called upon to pay for anything in the shape of food or otherwise, but I recognize that Government may adopt a different policy this time, and if they do, that would be no cause for complaint by me. I should be satisfied with whatever food was provided so long as it did not interfere with the restrictions that I have observed now for many years. The food that I need and has been provided hitherto by the prison authorities is goat’s milk, fresh and dried fruit, fresh vegetables, and, whenever I have needed it, bread.
You have asked me also to tell you what facilities I should like in the shape of newspapers, etc. I do not know that I have any choice in the matter. I must therefore leave it to the Government to decide what they would allow. As to correspondence and visits however, I have to write some business letters in connection with the disbandment of the Ashram, the affairs of the estate of the late Dr. P. J. Mehta and other social and religious obligations and to have visits thereanent. I would like the Government to extend to me the same facilities that they have given me hitherto.

There are however two things which are vital needs, just as much as food for the body. One of these is the conduct of the anti-untouchability movement on which I have already addressed the Government. The second is humanitarian contact with companions who are fellow prisoners. This last was recognized even during my first incarceration as a convict and has continued ever since. I hope that the practice will be so continued during the present incarceration.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G.N. 3896; also Bombay Secret Abstracts, Home Department, Special Branch, File No. 800(40)(14, 1, Pt. V, pp. 87-9

387. LETTER TO HOME SECRETARY, GOVERNMENT OF BOMBAY

August 6, 1933

SECRETARY TO GOVERNMENT
HOME DEPARTMENT
POONA
DEAR SIR,

Government’s reply that my request for permission to resume anti-untouchability work is under consideration but that decision cannot be given by Monday next has been just conveyed to me (10 a.m.).

In thanking Government for the reply, I would like to state that there are three matters which do not admit of delay if my work is not to suffer seriously.

The Editor-in-Chief, Sjt. Sastri, of Harijan is bed-ridden and on sick leave in Madras. The paper is in charge of two men untrained for the work. For last week’s issue, I had made arrangements beforehand and sent some manuscripts from Sabarmati last Monday. Whilst therefore Government are considering my request, I should be permitted to see Sjt. Anand Hingorani or Kaka Kalelkar two persons in charge, and to send manuscripts for next week’s issue.

The second is a letter\(^1\) from Dr. Tagore which was given to me on Friday last. I enclose it herewith. It demands an immediate reply.

The third is this: I have four Europeans under training for Harijan service. They were at the Sabarmati Ashram. They are Miss Mary Barr, N. Devi, Dr. Margarete Spiegel and Mr. Duncan Greenlees. They have been sent to Wardha where they would be in unfamiliar surroundings. N. Devi and Dr. Spiegel are comparative strangers to India and otherwise require delicate attention. I should like to be able to write to them and to Sjt. Vinoba who is in charge of Wardha Ashram and who is to look after them.

There are other matters no less important, but which can await a few days’ delay. I venture to hope therefore that pending their decision, Government will grant me by tomorrow the facilities requested about the three matters I have mentioned.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

---

\(^1\) Dated July 28, 1933; vide 1st footnote to “Letter to Rabindranath Tagore”, 7-8-1933.
388. LETTER TO R. V. MARTIN

YERAVDA CENTRAL PRISON,
August 7, 1933

DEAR COL. MARTIN,

Will you kindly let me have a copy of the Government’s reply read to me last night or let me make a copy?

In accordance with the reply to the first-request, I am now ready with the manuscript for the Harijan. Will you kindly therefore ring up Sjt. Kodandarao, Servants of India Society, and ask him to send Kakasaheb Kalelkar, and if he is not available, Sjt. Anand Hingorani, at 3 o’clock today, so as to enable me to hand over the manuscript and give instructions?

Yours sincerely,

Government of Bombay, Home Department, I.G.P. File No. 20-XIII, 1933

389. LETTER TO RABINDRANATH TAGORE

August 7, 1933

DEAR GURUDEV,

Your letter\(^1\) of the 28th July enclosing copy of your cable to Sir Nripen Sarkar on the Yeravda Pact was handed to me here on the 4th instant. Evidently your letter crossed mine which I wrote\(^2\) whilst I was in Ahmedabad. For the time being I am unable however to send you anything but this bare acknowledgement.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G.N. 4640

\(^1\) Rabindranath Tagore had written: “This is the copy of the message which, with very great pain and reluctance, I cabled to Sir Ripen and from which you will know how I feel about this Poona Pact. I am fully convinced that if it is accepted without modification it will be a source of perpetual communal jealousy leading to constant disturbance of peace and a fatal break in the spirit of mutual co-operation in our province” (Home Department, Printed Political File No. 3/17/33, 1933, pp. 16-7. Courtesy: National Archives of India). For the cable sent by Rabindranath Tagore to Sir Nripendranath Sircar, vide Appendix “Cable from Rabindranath Tagore to Sir Nripendranath Sircar”, after 22-7-1933.

\(^2\) Vide “Letter to Rabundranath Tagore”, 27-7-1933.
LETTER TO HOME SECRETARY,
GOVERNMENT OF BOMBAY

August 8, 1933

SECRETARY TO GOVERNMENT
HOME DEPARTMENT, POONA

DEAR SIR,

I have to thank you for the very prompt reply to my letter of the 6th containing three requests. I have thankfully taken advantage, pending orders on my general request about Harijan work, of the permission granted on the first request, and of the very limited permission granted on the second and the third requests. I may however state that in making my requests I have not been influenced by the fact of my being classified as an ‘A’ class prisoner. Having lodged my protest at my trial against classification, I did not and do not want to make unnecessary fuss about it, and I know that it is open to me not to avail myself of any of the privileges allowed to ‘A’-class prisoners. Moreover, I am quite aware that I allow myself to enjoy physical facilities not granted by Government to other prisoners of even ‘A’ class. I do so not because I have been classified ‘A’, but because those facilities are of physical or medical necessity for me. But I need other facilities which are higher than these and without which life itself becomes an intolerable burden. They arise from the cravings of the soul. But I am anxious as a prisoner to avoid all controversy with Government. I would ask them therefore to be as considerate in regard to my supra-physical needs, as they have been in regard to my physical needs.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G.N. 3898; also Bombay Secret Abstracts, Home Department, Special Branch, File No. 800(40)(14), Pt. V, p. 93
391. LETTER TO HOME SECRETARY,
GOVERNMENT OF BOMBAY

August 10, 1933

SECRETARY TO GOVERNMENT
HOME DEPARTMENT
POONA,

DEAR SIR,

I regret to have to remind you of my letters regarding Harijan work. Kakasaheb Kalelkar whom I met on Monday last told me that there were urgent letters in the matter awaiting me in the post. There are pressing Harijan problems demanding my immediate attention. I do hope therefore that I shall be favoured with the final decision before or on Monday next at the latest.

I attach hereto a copy\(^1\) of the Government of India’s orders in the matter. In my humble opinion they are unequivocal.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G.N. 3899; also Bombay Secret Abstracts, Home Department, Special Branch, File No. 800(40)(14), Pt. V, p. 95

392. TRUE INWARDNESS

An Arya Samajist writes a long letter in Hindi. Here is the gist:

1. Should Harijans in order to rise in the social scale remain Hindus or will it serve the same purpose if they became Christians or Mussalmans?

2. Is not untouchability determined merely by the name of the caste to which one may belong?

3. If untouchability is to be removed from Hinduism, why not invite untouchables to join the Arya Samaj?

4. What is the speciality of Hinduism for which a Hindu need cling to it?

In my opinion these questions betray the ignorance of the questioner about the true scope of the reform that is being attempted.

\(^1\) Received by Gandhiji on November 3, 1932.
The pages of the Harijan make it clear from week to week that it is the so-called higher classes that have to reform themselves by getting rid of untouchability, of high-and-lowness. It is they who have to repent and purify themselves. They have to come in contact with Harijans not for the sake of the latter, not as their patrons but for the sake of themselves and as the servants of Harijans. Therefore the object is not served by Harijans forsaking Hinduism.

And in my opinion religion is a much deeper thing than the questioner would allow. It is not a matter of convenience or of bettering one’s social or material condition. People have been known to cling to their religion although they have had to face social ostracism, material ruin and much worse. One’s religion keeps one true in the face of the greatest adversity. It is the sheet-anchor of one’s hope in this world and even after. It binds one to one’s God, to Truth as to nothing else. Therefore, whilst Harijans must know best what is good for them, I, in their place, could not be satisfied by change of religion. From the practical point of view, they seem to me to be so inextricably mixed up with the so-called higher classes that the vast majority simply cannot help remaining Hindus. It is this helplessness which lays a double burden upon ‘the higher classes’ of doing the much belated reparation by regarding them as respected members of the Hindu family in spite of some of their habits. Indeed, whatever is evil in their habits is due to the criminal neglect of ‘the higher classes’. The quickest way to remove the evil is to remove untouchability and receive them as they are as full-fledged Hindus.

The answer to the second question is in the affirmative. That just shows how precarious untouchability is. If the Harijans would conceal their caste name and simply declare themselves as Hindus they will, as in many cases they do, pass muster except in their immediate neighbourhood. But from the standpoint that I have suggested, such subterfuge can only protract the agony. It cannot cure ‘the high classes’ of the taint of superiority and touch-me-notism.

As to the third question, what I have said above makes it clear that the admission of Harijans to the Arya Samaj does not solve the difficulty. The hearts of millions of non-Arya Samajists will not be touched by the Harijans’ acceptance of the Arya Samaj. It is the ‘superior’ Hindu heart that has to melt. It is the whole of Hinduism that has to be purified and purged. What I am aiming at, what I hope the Servants of Untouchables Society is aiming at, is the greatest reform of the age. That it may take time to achieve it, does not much matter. The reform is assured, if there are reformers enough who will not be baffled by any difficulty and will not lower the flag on any account whatsoever. They will not, if the conviction has gone home that for Hinduism to live, untouchability has got to go.

The fourth is an invidious question. Perhaps it is also profitless. But I must answer it, if only to show what I mean by religion. The closest, though very incomplete, analogy for religion I can find is marriage. It is or used to be an indissoluble tie. Much more so is the tie of religion. And just as a husband does not remain faithful to his wife, or wife to her husband, because either is conscious of some exclusive superiority of the other over the rest of his or her sex but because of some indefinable but irresistible attraction, so does one remain irresistibly faithful to one’s own religion and find full satisfaction in such adhesion. And just as a faithful husband does not need, in order to sustain his faithfulness, to consider other women as inferior to his wife, so does not a person belonging to one religion need to consider others to be inferior to his own. To pursue the analogy still further, even as faithfulness to one’s wife does not presuppose blindness to her shortcomings, so does not faithfulness to one’s religion presuppose blindness to the shortcomings of that religion. Indeed faithfulness, not blind adherence, demands a keener perception of shortcomings and therefore a livelier sense of the proper remedy for their removal. Taking the view I do of religion, it is unnecessary for me to examine the beauties of Hinduism. The reader may rest assured that I am not likely to remain Hindu, if I was not conscious of its many beauties. Only for my purpose they need not be exclusive. My approach to other religions, therefore, is never as a fault-finding critic but as a devotee hoping to find the like beauties in the other religions and wishing to incorporate in my own the good I may find in them and miss in mine.

_Harijan_, 12-8-1933
SECRETARY TO GOVERNMENT
HOME DEPARTMENT
POONA
DEAR SIR,

It is now noon of Monday, and I am yet without any answer to my request for resumption of Harijan work on the same terms as before my fast. This request was first conveyed on the 1st instant from the Central Prison at Ahmedabad and has since been thrice repeated.¹

The strain of deprivation of this work is becoming unbearable. If therefore I cannot have the permission by noon next Wednesday, I must deny myself all nourishment from that time, save water and salts. That is the only way I can fulfil my vow and also relieve myself somewhat of the strain mentioned above. I do not want the proposed suspension of nourishment in any way to act as a pressure on the Government. Life ceases to interest me if I may not do Harijan service without let or hindrance. As I have made it clear in my previous correspondence, and as the Government of India have admitted permission to render that service is implied in the Yeravda Pact to which the British Government is a consenting party, in so far as its consent was necessary. Therefore I do indeed want the permission, but only if the Government believe that justice demands it and not because I propose to deprive myself of food if it is not granted. That deprivation is intended purely for my consolation.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

¹ On August 4, 6, 8 and 10.
394. LETTER TO R. V. MARTIN

August 14, 1933

DEAR COL. MARTIN,

Will you please read the enclosed\(^1\) and forward it as early as you can to the proper quarters? That is of course if no reply has been received to my request regarding Harijan work.

Yours sincerely,

Home Department, Government of Bombay, I.G.P. File No. 20-XIII, 1933

395. LETTER TO R. V. MARTIN

August 15, 1933

DEAR COL. MARTIN,

With reference to the two communications received by you from Government, I beg to state as follows:

1. As to the reply to my letter\(^2\) of the 10th instant addressed to the Government, whilst I am thankful for the permission to hand over the Harijan manuscript to the acting Editor and give instructions, this permission does not meet immediate requirements. It is difficult without being in touch with correspondence from day to day to write usefully for the Harijan. Again, to be in touch with the correspondents on untouchability is just as urgent as editing the Harijan. For instance a difficult experiment under my supervision is being carried on in connection with a Harijan school. I have to be in contact with the teacher if the school is to be a success. I have put some Ashram girls and boys in a Harijan boarding house, an experiment probably the first of its kind. It cannot go on without my constant attention. These are but two out of the many instances I can cite, of matters demanding my personal attention.

The least therefore that I require at once is:

(a) the delivery of all the correspondence in your possession with permission to reply to so much of it as may have any connection with untouchability;

\(^1\) Vide the preceding item.
\(^2\) Vide “Letter to Home Secretary, Government of Bombay”, 10-8-1933.
(b) access to, and disposal of, all correspondence received at the Harijan office;

(c) access to newspapers received by you or the Harijan office so as to enable me to deal with points on untouchability that may have been discussed in those papers.

If the permission is given on these three matters, pending final orders on my request, I shall not need to fast from tomorrow noon, as stated in my letter\textsuperscript{1} to Government yesterday. If it can be obtained in the course of the day, I would like to see Kakasaheb Kalelkar or Sjt. Anand Hingorani today. I should be able then to hand over some manuscript to go on with.

2. What I have said above perhaps answers the Government’s letter regarding the disposal of my correspondence in your possession. I have no desire to receive a fortnightly letter under the classification rules. The bulk of my correspondence is likely to have a bearing on untouchability and would demand my personal attention or instructions. If the correspondence is handed to me I would gladly return that which may not pertain to untouchability. There are likely to be letters concerning business affairs. I should take the Government instructions regarding such letters. The fact of the matter is that I have many public activities besides the political, and as I told you personally this morning, in my opinion the just way to deal with me is, after insuring my strict abstention from participation directly or indirectly in civil disobedience, to give me the facilities mentioned in my letter\textsuperscript{2} to you of the 5th instant.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G. N. 3902 also Bombay Secret Abstracts, Home Department, Special Branch, File No. 800(40)(14), Pt. V, pp. 99-101

\textsuperscript{1} Vide “Letter to Home Secretary, Government of Bombay”, 14-8-1933.

\textsuperscript{2} Vide “Letter to R. V. Martin”, 5-8-1933.
DEAR COL. MARTIN.

Since there is no reply to the request contained in my letter of yesterday, my fast begins from noon today as already intimated in my letter. Will you therefore kindly give the necessary orders for not sending the goats to be milked, and not sending to the market for sweet and sour limes?

Though the fast begins, if there is no objection kindly telephone to Kakasaheb Kalelkar to come to the prison today as early as he can, so as to enable me to hand him the manuscript for Harijan, which is already prepared and to give him instructions.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G.N. 3903; also Bombay Secret Abstracts, Home Department, Special Branch, File No. 800(40)(14), Pt. V, p. 101

DEAR COL. MARTIN.

I see that I have hastily and stupidly told you to restore the goats to me. It shows how disinclined I am to starve. But on reading the notes of the orders you have left with me, they are so far short of the original orders of the Government of India and of my requirements that I must not be precipitate in breaking the fast. If the Government wish to go back upon those orders I shall be sorry, but it may not be necessary.

Vide the preceding item.

2 On August 16, Gandhiji was informed that it had been decided that he would be granted the following special facilities for purposes of work strictly confined to anti-untouchability: (1) to receive newspapers and periodicals, but not to be allowed interviews for publication in the Press, whether with Press correspondents or others; (2) to see not more than two visitors a day; (3) to send instructions or contributions to the Editor of Harijan three times a week, and a limited number of letters to other correspondents and (4) to have at his disposal a convict-typist, books and newspapers needed for Harijan work” (The Hindu; 19-8-1933). Vide also the following item.
work under the new orders which are a manifest departure from the original and which seem to me to be grudgingly given. I observe that you cannot even let me have the letters already in your possession and to hand the manuscript to the acting Editor for this week’s Harijan. It pains me to have to write this letter, but it will give much greater pain if I break the fast now and have to enter upon a prolonged controversy with the Government on many matters that need elucidation. I miss Government response to the meticulous care with which I am endeavouring to observe jail discipline and as a prisoner tender co-operation which as a citizen outside prison walls I consider it a religious duty to withhold. I have read your notes three times and each reading has increased my grief to discover that Government cannot appreciate the desperate need there is for me to do Harijan work without let or hindrance. Much therefore as I am disinclined to continue the fast, I feel that I must go through the agony if I cannot serve the Harijan cause without the tremendous handicap which it seems to me the orders conveyed by you put upon it.

Will you therefore please withdraw the milk and the fruit already received by me, and accept my apology for having hurriedly told you that I would break the fast?

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G.N. 3904; also Bombay Secret Abstracts, Home Department, Special Branch, File No. 800(40)(14), Pt. V, p. 103

398. LETTER TO R. V. MARTIN

August 17, 1933

DEAR COL. MARTIN,

With reference to our conversation of this morning, before I can break my fast the following points require to be settled:

1. I should see Kakasaheb Kalelkar or Sjt. Anand Hingorani before 12 o’clock today for handling manuscript and giving instructions.

2. All the letters and newspapers in your possession should be handed to me, subject to the condition mentioned in my letter¹ of 15th instant.

¹ Vide “Letter to R. V. Martin”, 15-8-1933..
3. The notes\textsuperscript{1} you showed me bind me to the non-publication of interviews in the Press. This is a physical impossibility as I can have no control over persons who would see me. It is not contemplated that I would only see those who would be subject to my discipline. I would be seeing hot opponents, perhaps more often, than friends.

4. The notes contemplate two visitors a day. I can never conduct the movement if I am thus restricted. I have to see visitors as they come if I am to influence them.

5. As a journalist of 29 years’ standing I can say that restriction as to the sending of instructions to the Editor three times per week is wholly unworkable, and it is not clear whether the Editor or Editors are to see me personally or not.

6. The notes contemplate a limited number of letters to other correspondents. I do not know what the Government have in mind by the term ‘limited’. I had to send, during the last dispensation, an average something like thirty letters a day.

7. There is no mention in the notes about letters. I take it that it is an unintended omission and that I shall have all the letters and newspapers, whether received by you or the Harijan office, my work on them being strictly confined to untouchability.

You will now see what a gulf exists between my requirements and the concessions the Government are prepared to grant. If the Government would permit me to handle the tremendous movement of anti-untouchability affecting millions of human beings, they should give full effect to the Government of India orders under the last dispensation. There was in them a frank recognition of my submission and therefore a full response to it. I miss it altogether in the notes. So far as I am aware I have given no cause whatever for change of policy. If permission is given as requested by me, I can give my absolute assurance that I shall take no undue advantage of it, I shall confine myself strictly to anti-untouchability work and shall endeavour to the best of my ability to consult the convenience of the prison staff.

\textit{Yours sincerely,}

M. K. GANDHI

\textsuperscript{1} Vide the preceding item.
I take it that the convict-typist is also a shorthand typist, and that, if everything is satisfactorily settled, I shall have the assistance as before of Sjt. Mahadev Desai and Chhaganlal Joshi.

M. K. G.

From a photostat: G.N. 3905; also Bombay Secret Abstracts, Home Department, Special Branch, File No. 800(40)(14), Pt. V, pp. 105-7

399. QUANTITY v. QUALITY

There is no doubt that workers in a cause are as a rule tempted more by quantitative than by qualitative results of their labours. And though the volume of work done throughout India, as a result of anti-untouchability movement represented by the Servants of Untouchables Society, is not by any means unsatisfactory as a whole, it looks insignificant when it is distributed over the respective provinces and when it is considered relatively to the goal which is complete removal of untouchability, that is, of the high-and-lowness mentality that pervades Hinduism. There was, therefore, despondence markedly reflected at the meetings of anti-untouchability workers that were called during my convalescence after the recent fast. I did not share the despondence myself. For, I had only quality in mind whereas I saw that the co-workers had consciously or unconsciously quantity in mind.

I would have one good teacher in preference to fifty indifferent ones, I would be satisfied with the constant attendance of five children instead of the sporadic attendance of fifty. I would have five workers concentrating their attention on compact, small, selected areas rather than having them to cover large areas to which they could never give concentrated attention.

If this preference for quality is good, as it is for any movement, it is especially so for an essentially religious movement like that of anti-untouchability. In religion, indifference to quality may even lead to disaster. If teachers are a stop-gap, if school children come when they like and workers go about from place to place without establishing personal contact with Harijans, it may be found that both the Harijans and the caste men may have their hearts untouched at the end, say, of ten years’ labours, and the result may be a reaction against the movement on the part both of Harijans and caste men.
In a religious movement faith plays an important part. Therefore many factors are necessarily unknown and unknowable. No one can fathom the movement from time to time as we can most secular movements in which most factors are known and under control. If I want to manufacture one million yards of khadi, given the hands and cotton I would be able to say when I can. But if I have to touch the hearts of five Hindus and wean them from untouchability, I should not know when, if at all, I could accomplish the task. I have simply to work in the belief that my cause being just, if I am a pure enough person to handle it, I must touch the hearts of the five Hindus amongst whom I have been called upon to work. I may not, therefore, have any despondence over my mission nor may I change the venue of my work, nor ambitiously extend its scope beyond my capacity. On the contrary, I must believe that not only shall I be able by gentleness and patience to affect the five fellow Hindus, but that when I have succeeded with them I shall not be long in succeeding with five millions. This, and no other, is the meaning of the saying, “Faith can move mountains” or “To those who work assiduously and in My name I always grant success”.

Therefore, what we need is boundless faith backed by perfect purity of character. An impure mind and a religious spirit go ill together. By purity of character is here meant truth, love and chastity in thought, word and deed. If we have not these we shall neither move the caste men nor the Harijans. If we have not this triple purity, not only shall we fail to steal the hearts of either, but by our failure we shall discredit not merely ourselves but the great cause we represent.

Hence, I have no hesitation in saying that in our campaign against untouchability, if we will take care of quality, quantity will take care of itself. It is hardly necessary to point out that what is said here about quality applies as well to Harijan workers as to caste workers. If the former are to carry out an internal moral reformation, I was going to say, revolution among Harijans, they will do so only by producing workers of unimpeachable purity and integrity, working with single-mindedness in limited areas where they can establish personal contacts.

Harijan, 19-8-1933
THE SECRETARY TO GOVERNMENT
HOME DEPARTMENT
POONA

DEAR SIR,

Col. Martin has kindly given me a copy of your reply\(^1\) to my letter\(^2\) of the 17th instant addressed to him. I regret to observe that your reply realizes my worst fears. Where I thought there was a possibility of a more favourable construction on some of the points, your reply now makes it clear that there was no warrant for any such construction. It therefore becomes unnecessary for me to take up the various points in your letter.

But I have now understood through Mr. Andrews that the difficulty in the way of Government carrying out the orders of the Government of India to which I have already referred is that instead of being a State prisoner I am now a convicted prisoner. If that be the cause for a radical departure from a policy explicitly laid down by the Government, not by way of concession, but as the Government of India have admitted, “because it is necessary that he (I) should have freedom in regard to visitors and correspondence on matters strictly limited to removal of untouchability”, “there being no restrictions on publicity”, I cannot understand how what was considered to be necessary for me becomes any the less necessary now, by reason of my being a convicted prisoner. Just as Government have recognized my physical wants and satisfied them in spite of my being a convict, even so, I venture to submit, do my spiritual wants regarding untouchability demand full recognition from Government.

The last paragraph of your letter grieves me. The reminder contained in it comes as an added injury to my wounded soul, for I have stated to Government more than once that civil disobedience under circumstances like the present is a part of my creed. But I recognize that what I consider as a perfectly lawful and moral activity,

---

\(^1\) For a summary of this in a cable dated August 18 from Viceroy to Secretary of State, London, vide Appendix “Excerpts from Viceroy’s Cable to Secretary of State”, 18-8-1933.

\(^2\) Vide “Letter to R. V. Martin”, 17-8-1933.
Government consider as unlawful and probably even immoral. I must therefore be content to be their prisoner not merely for the natural term of the present confinement, but for such time as India comes to her own if I live long enough to see that day—if, that is to say, there is any possibility still left of Government fulfilling their solemn obligation and my coming safely out of the ordeal through which I am going.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G.N. 3906; also Bombay Secret Abstracts, Home Department, Special Branch, File No. 800(40)(14), Pt. V, pp. 109-11

401. LETTER TO R. V. MARTIN.
August 19, 1933

DEAR COL. MARTIN,

For the last three or four days you have been sending me mutilated copies of The Times of India. I have surmised that the mutilations are due to references to my fast. If my surmise is correct, I venture to think the mutilation is not fair to me. If anything has been said by or on behalf of Government, I should at least know what it is, so that I could make my submission to the Government if there was anything that I might consider unfair in the statements appearing in the Press. In fairness to all concerned, I would suggest that the full text of the correspondence beginning from my letter of the 29th September 1932 addressed to Major Bhandari, with reference to my request for doing Harijan work, should be published, if it has not already been done.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G.N. 3907; also Bombay Secret Abstracts, Home Department, Special Branch, File No. 800(40)(14), Pt. V, p. 113

402. A SILENT WORKER IN THE HARIJAN CAUSE

In the year 1919 when I lay ill in Mani Bhuvan, a well-built gentleman came to see me. I have a faint recollection that he had brought along some money too. I asked him whose son he was. He replied that he was the son of Hariprasad Desai of Bhavnagar. Hearing this, I was reminded of the days when my father was alive. Even in my childhood, I had heard of this well-known family of Bhavnagar. Hence I said to Bhai Yashwant prasad that our friendship was old enough to entitle me to exploit him, to which he readily agreed saying that all that he had was available for my work. I had come to know about his Barsi mill and other enterprises. The contact then established became increasingly closer and in the end we became like father and son. His contribution was always there in all my activities. Whether for the sake of khadi or any other activities, he always allowed himself to be exploited. I have never had to beg from him. Time and again, of his own accord he put sums of money into my hands.

He was a sincere worker for the Harijan cause. He made no difference between himself and Harijans. When khadi work had just begun, he first thought of Harijans and he had thought of going to Bhavnagar to revive the craft of weaving with the help of Harijans. ‘He was aware that the Harijans of Kathiawar were looking around for a living in Bombay, their craft of weaving having almost died. Here I have spoken of the time when he had just begun serving Harijans.

And the end of his career was worthy of this beginning. He has never recognized untouchability. He never had the vanity or the moha that he belonged to one of the highest ranking and well-known Nagar families. He never indulged in long arguments, his motto was to quietly render whatever service came his way. I have just received the news of his passing away. His death is certainly a loss to his family, but I myself have lost a true comrade. And Harijans have lost a sincere and silent worker. May God bless his soul and may He give his children and the other members of the family the wisdom to follow in his footsteps and carry on his beneficent work.

[From Gujarati]

_Harijanbandhu, 20-8-1933_

403. TO THE HARIJANS OF GUJARAT

During my last visit to Ahmedabad, I had a good opportunity to meet Harijan brothers and sisters. I was able to speak to them quite freely. I repeat here what I expect from them.

---

1 A sub-caste of Brahmins
1. The so-called caste Hindus have a personal obligation to fulfil towards you which they must do unconditionally; it is their atonement. But, whether or not they atone for their deeds you will still have much work to do independently and unconditionally. One does not go to heaven without first dying. Whether in this world or the next, it is for each one to free oneself from bondage by one’s own effort. Harijans should not look upon themselves as lowly, weak or crippled.

2. The atonement by caste Hindus is not for your salvation but for their own and it involves service to you. You should be liberal in accepting their services. In this way, you will readily overlook any shortcomings in it. If you are not large-hearted, you will only see their failings. But I am confident you will never be mean.

3. Magnify your own faults so that they appear to be as big as mountains and then make constant efforts to overcome them. In it lies the key to obtaining the rights which you want. Never believe that since others have the same faults we need not mind our own. No matter what others do, it is your dharma to overcome the failings which you find in yourselves. I see no need to recount them all here. I have often shown them to you, but it should not be necessary for me or anybody to do so. You will not be able, at the behest of others, to overcome what you yourselves do not look upon as failings. Hence, it should suffice to say that you should shake off whatever faults you can find in yourselves.

I do not write all this as a caste Hindu; as I see it, varnadharma no longer exists and it cannot be revived by keeping you out of its fold. However, if varnadharma is to be reprieved in my lifetime, know my varna to be the same in which you would be placed, because I claim to have voluntarily become a Harijan. It is by virtue of this relationship that I entertain the above expectation of you. Please do fulfil it. I share your misery and, believe me, I shall be happy [only] when you become happy.

[From Gujarati]

_Harijanbandhu, 20-8-1933_

_404. TO KATHIAWARIS_

Generally speaking one province should not be burdened with the work of another, just as in a well-organized society the burden of one family’s needs is not borne by another. In accordance with this principle, the needs of Kathiawar should be met by Kathiawaris, whether they happen to live in Kathiawar or elsewhere. Hence the burden of Harijan work in Kathiawar should be borne by Kathiawaris. When I visited Ahmedabad for a few days, I met workers connected with the Harijan Schools and ashrams functioning in Kathiawar. Not a single school or ashram should be obliged to close down solely for want of funds. It is a different matter altogether if an institution were to be closed for the sake of better organization, for the conservation of our energies, or, for the prevention of unnecessary expenditure. I have often spoken of my experience that no benevolent work, in fact, stops for lack of funds. Any work which enlists workers willing to serve by offering their all, will find money readily coming its way. I hope workers will regard the service of Harijans in this spirit. It is universal experience that, in the last analysis, every institution and every work depends upon the devoted efforts of one individual. This does not imply that such a person can work single-handed. To entertain such a thought is only a sign of arrogance, but the world is so ordered that there can be only one organizer. The world is not governed by many. The Governor or the Lord of the world, whatever you call Him, is only one. He has countless men and women workers, but He calls Himself a servant of servants and does the work of one. Similarly, it can be said that there can be only one president, secretary or manager for any work. And, if he does not consider himself the master but rather the humblest of servants, the work which he has taken up will make progress. And he should have steadfast devotion to the work. I know there are such devoted workers in Kathiawar and that there is no dearth of money there. Among the Kathiawaris spread all over the country, I see men and women who can, if they would, individually bear the expenditure on service of Harijans in Kathiawar. So I fail to understand the reason why even a single institution serving Harijans should have to close down for want of funds.

[From Gujarati]

_Harijanbandhu, 20-8-1933_
405. THE BREATH OF MY LIFE

God’s ways are inscrutable! The most unexpected event of my life has happened. I have been used to the most unexpected things in the course of a very long public life, but this is the most unexpected of all. What is now in store for me? How I shall use this life out of prison, I do not know. But I must say this that whether in prison or outside prison, Harijan service will be always after my heart and will be the breath of life for me, more precious than the daily bread. I can live for some days at least without the daily bread, but I cannot live without Harijan service for one single minute. It is a constant prayer to the Almighty that this blot of untouchability may be removed in its entirety from Hinduism and that the millions of caste Hindus may see the Sun of Truth which shines upon us, if we would only remove the scales from our eyes, as I have repeatedly said in these columns. My life is a dedication to this cause and I shall consider no penance too great for the vindication of this Truth.

‘Parnakuti’ August 23, 1933, 5.30 p.m.

Harijan, 26-8-1933

406. TELEGRAM TO RABINDRANATH TAGORE

POONA,
August 23, 1933

GURUDEV
SHANTINIKETAN

GOD’S GRACE AM WELL. TOOK ORANGE.

GANDHI

Visva-bharti News, September 1933, p. 17

---

1 On the eight day of his fast, which began on August 16, Gandhiji was released unconditionally.
407. TELEGRAM TO PADMAJA NAIDU

POONA,
August 23, 1933

PADMAJA NAIDU
GOLDEN THRESHOLD
HYDERABAD
DECCAN
GOD’S GRACE AM WELL. TOOK ORANGES.

BAPU

From the original; Padmaja Naidu Papers. Courtesy: Nehru memorial Museum and Library

408. TELEGRAM TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

POONA,
August 24, 1933

JAMNALAL BAJAJ
WARDHA
KEEPING VERY WELL. NO NURSING ASSISTANCE REQUIRED.¹

BAPU

Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, p. 113

409. LETTER TO R. V. MARTIN

August 24, 1933

DEAR COL. MARTIN,

When you sent me to Sassoon Hospital I took with me my clothes and certain other things, but not my books, spinning-wheels, etc. Will you kindly hand these to Kakasaheb Kalelkar, as also books that you might have received whilst I was under your custody and which were not given to me?

¹ Gandhiji had received a wire from the addressee saying that he had sent Chhotelal Jain, an Ashram inmate, to look after him; vide “Letter to Vallabhbhai Patel”, 24-8-1933.

Yours sincerely,

LT. COL. R. V. MARTIN, I.M.S.
SUPERINTENDENT, CENTRAL PRISON, YERAVDA

Government of Bombay, Home Department, I.G.P. File No. 20-XIII, 1933

410. LETTER TO ABBAS TYABJI

August 24, 1933

MY DEAR BH-R-R-R,

Well, many strange things have happened in my life, but this discharge is the strangest. However, there it is and I must take it as it comes; only I do not know what to do with myself. God will clear the way for me. Till then I wait on Him. I am as strong as I can be expected in the circumstances and, in a few days’ time, I have no doubt, I shall regain my strength, lost during the eight days. I am here for a few days and, then hope to go to Bombay and be there for a few days. I must not write to Raihana separately. Tell her that I entered upon my fast with the bhajan that she sent to me.

Love to all.

BH-R-R-R

SIT. ABBAS TYABJI
CAMP, BARODA

From a photostat: S.N. 9586

411. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

August 24, 1933

CHI. AMALA.

I hope you have not gone mad over my fast and that you have been giving full satisfaction to everybody there and working in full speed. As I am dictating this letter I have your letter, written in Hindi, today. Your handwriting leaves still much to be desired. However, I was delighted to have your letter after such a long time. I have not got any of the letters sent to the jail. I may get them now. I must not give you a long letter today.

Love.

BAPU

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

412. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

August 24, 1933

CHI. MARY,

I was sorry to part with you without having much of a chat and then not to be able to write to you all these days was a matter of grief to me. Now that I am able to write again I am dictating as many letters as I can. I hope you are feeling quite at home there. I want you to tell me everything about your at Wardha and the people there. Of me, you will have gleaned from so many sources. So I need not say anything.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 6005. Also C.W. 3331. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

413. LETTER TO MANU GANDHI

August 24, 1933

CHI. MANU,

Write to me regularly. I hope you keep good health there and are quite happy. What arrangement has been made for your study?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 1525. Courtesy: Manubehn S. Mashruwala
414. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

For Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel August 24, 1933

by kind favour of Superintendent

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

My health is not so bad that I cannot write with my own hand, but I don’t wish to exert myself today. You must have read all the news and known what has happened. It has all been like a dream. But I will live as God ordains. I wish to take only one step at a time. Why should I, therefore, worry? Apart from that, however, this time I don’t think I shall be able to see my way easily. In Yeravda, I kept thinking of you all the time. I had not expected to be separated from you in this manner. We remembered you daily on several occasions. We missed your dictatorial orders.

I had carefully selected the best bottles and sent them to you. I hope they reached you safely. The rest of your things were packed separately. If you want any other books or things, let me know. Mathuradas is here with me. Chandrashankar, Ba, Mirabehn and Nair stay with me all the time. Brijkrishna spends the whole day here. Today is Ganesh Chaturthi and so there is a holiday atmosphere. Kaka is here. I have just received a wire from Jamnalal saying that he has sent Chhotelal to look after me. But I am sure I will speedily regain my strength. I experience no difficulty in sitting up in the bed without help. I have eaten fruit in plenty today. I have also had some juice of tandalja, and that has given me some strength. Dr. Gilder and Dr. Patel came and examined me. They have found nothing wrong. There is, therefore, no cause for worry regarding my health. What about your nose? What is its condition? Write to me what you

1 The source has this in English. Gandhiji continued to write this in all his letters to Vallabhbhai Patel, who was in Nasik Jail.
2 Out of the empty bottles which contained honey, etc., used by Gandhiji and Vallabhbhai Patel in Yeravda Jail
3 Gandhiji’s typist
4 Amaranth
5 Dr. D. D. Gilder, heart specialist; later, Minister of Health, Bombay
6 Dr. P. T. Patel are permitted to. I shall be in ‘Parnakuti’ for a few days. Then I intend to spend a few days in Bombay. After that, Rama alone knows.

Blessings from
BAPU

SARDAR VALLABHBHAI PATEL
NASIK

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro–2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine. PP. 20-2

415. LETTER TO VIDYA HINGORANI
August 24, 1933

CHI. VIDYA,

I got news of you from Anand. I hope you are all right in body and mind. I hope Mahadev is keeping well. How are the others? Write to me in detail.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Hindi. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

416. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ
POONA
[After August 24, 1933]¹

CHI. JAMNALAL,

I got your wire. You probably believe that I require careful looking after. But the truth is that except for serving meals to me I hardly require any other service. This time I have not lost all my energy. That cannot happen in eight days. Whatever energy I have lost, I shall soon recover. It was, therefore, not at all necessary to send Chhotelal. But now that he is coming, he will feel happy, and that is enough for me. Probably you also know that Mirabehn is with me. Brijkrishna always runs up from wherever he may be, and so he, too, is here. There are many others besides them. I hope you keep good health. Let me know your experiences of the newcomers. Is your case over? How is Ramdas succeeding?

¹ From the reference to the receipt of the addressee’s wire about Chhotelal. The source bears a note that the letter was received on August 26, 1933.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]
Chhotelal arrived just now.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2922

417. LETTER TO MADELEINE ROLLAND

August 25, 1933

DEAR SISTER,

Just a word to send my have to you and to the Rishi. Mira will tell you all about the latest astonishing event. I hope that you are both well. Andrews too is here now.

Ever yours,
BAPU

From a copy: C.W. 10582. Courtesy: Madeleine Rolland

418. LETTER TO ANASUYABEHN SARABHAI

August 25, 1933

CHI. ANASUYABEHN,

I could not write to you earlier. I tried yesterday but did not succeed. You must certainly have been much worried on my account but why should you be worried now? You must accept by now that fasting has become a part of my life and you should therefore give up your attachment for my body.

I learn that Anandi and others are not there. Give me news of them. I do not write to them thinking they are not there. If they are with you, tell them to write to me. How is Bablo faring? Has Sharda

---

1 The English original is not available. This is a retranslation of a rendering in French.
2 Romain Rolland
3 The reference is to Gandhiji’s fast and the unexpected release.
4 Daughter of Lakshmidas Asar
5 Narayan, son of Mahadev Desai
6 Daughter of Chimanlal Shah
gone too? Does she still suffer from attacks of asthma? You are not pampering her, I hope. If they have left station who is paying their expenses? Have the Harijan children adjusted themselves [to the new surroundings?] Do they respect the rules of the Ashram? How are Amina’s children? Do they learn Urdu and read the Koran?

I am regaining my strength. Shankerlal should write to me regarding the movable property of the Ashram and the dairy.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: S. N. 32801

419. INTERVIEW TO THE PRESS

August 25, 1933

Gandhiji commenced by expressing his thanks to Col. Candy, Civil Surgeon, Poona, his staff and nurses for the very great care with which they had looked after him and also to Lt. Col. Martin, Superintendent of Yeravda Prison and his staff for their kind treatment during the early stages of his fast. Gandhiji said:

I would like the public to be assured about my condition. Generally a week’s fast is nothing for me, and though this time the fast, whilst it lasted, caused terrible physical agony because of my inability to take the necessary quantity of water, I feel on the second day after the breaking of the fast that I shall be able to regain my lost strength within a reasonable time. There need be, therefore, no cause for any anxiety.

This time my discharge having come upon me absolutely unexpectedly, I confess I have no knowledge whatsoever of how I would shape my movements, after my convalescence is over. So I must repeat what I have said so often before, but this time with much greater force than before, that I shall be constantly praying for light and guidance.

1 The Harijan Children’s Ashram at Ahmedabad being run by the addressee
2 The Bombay Chronicle had reported: “Looking remarkably well, Gandhiji received a group of journalists at 10 a.m. today in the spacious hall of Lady Thackersey’s bungalow. Gandhiji spoke very clearly and often with emotion. Towards the end of the interview which lasted nearly an hour, signs of exhaustion were however perceptible, and at Mrs. Naidu’s suggestion Press representatives stopped asking more questions.
I shall seek peace much more eagerly than imprisonment and a possible repetition of fast. I shall therefore again use this unexpected freedom from imprisonment for the sake of exploring avenues of peace.

One thing, however, I do want to make clear. This discharge is a matter of no joy for me; possibly it is a matter of shame that I took my comrades to prison and came out of it by fasting. The statement made on behalf of the Government in connection with the fast, I have not had time to study at all fully. During the fast and a few days previous to it, I was deprived of all news that was published in the Press in connection with it.

In reply to a question, Gandhiji explained this point further and said that the Times of India given to him during this period was mutilated, portions bearing on the fast having been cut out of it. Gandhiji proceeded:

Therefore I do not know all that has been stated in the Press regarding the fast. But what little I had the energy to read yesterday shows that Government have not done me justice.

It should be remembered that when I took my fast in Yeravda in September last, Government gave me fullest facilities for seeing people, giving interviews and writing letters in the matter of anti-untouchability work, not because I was a State prisoner, but because they recognized it was justly due to me to give me those facilities, if they held me in their custody. If, therefore, a mistake was made by them, it was made at that very first fast. Had they chosen, they could have unconditionally discharged me as they did at the time of the 21 days’ fast or this time. The question of jail discipline was just as pertinent then as now, but they did not do so. They thought it a better policy for them to keep me in custody and give me the facilities I have referred to.

Within two days after the Poona Pact was made, facilities for doing Harijan work were suddenly stopped to my surprise and I immediately sent in a respectful protest; but that protest having

---

1 The Times of India, 26-8-1933, had reported that while answering questions on Gandhiji’s fast in Legislative Assembly at Simla on August 24, it was stated that “decision to release Gandhiji” was taken as “Mr. Gandhi was apparently determined to commit suicide. Government were not prepared to allow him to die in jail nor to order forcible feeding to save his life”

2 Vide also “Letter to R. V. Martin”, 19-8-1933.
evoked no satisfactory response, I had perforce to send a letter\(^1\) saying that unless Government gave me facilities for Harijan work without let or hindrance, life would not be worth living for me and in reply to that on November 3 last the following orders\(^2\) were conveyed to me:

These orders were passed with the full knowledge of my requirements and with full knowledge of what they meant in September.

I say once more that when Government arrested me again after the 21 days’ fast, they had to face my request for doing Harijan work without let or hindrance, whether they took me in as a State prisoner or any other. In my opinion, classification is wholly irrelevant to the issue. The sole issue was in September, in November and today is this, namely, my life and the Harijan work in jail or no Harijan work in jail and my death; and so long as I live that will be the issue that will face me, face the Government and face the public. If I am wrong in thinking that, whether outside or inside the prison, I should have the fullest liberty to carry on the programme of anti-untouchability which I have undertaken as a solemn obligation, then my fast should be considered impertinent and should not count either with the Government or the public; but if I am right, then my fast should be treated as a sacrificial seal.

One thing more. It has been said on behalf of the Government that when, owing to the 21 days’ fast I was discharged, I gave more attention to political than Harijan work. I cannot imagine a grosser misrepresentation of facts, which are all capable of being proved today. But I will give a few outstanding instances. The whole of the 21 days and the subsequent days, during which I was unable to do anything at all, I could only pray and think and not do writing or talking; and I can say that during this period I thought of nothing else but God and God’s children, the Harijans. Then when I was at all able to carry on sustained conversation with a group of men, my first act was to address\(^3\) a meeting of Harijan workers in this very hall, whilst I was lying in bed. When I was able to do any public writing, my first writing\(^4\) was for the Harijan.

\(^2\) Vide footnote to “Telegram to Home Secretary, Government of India”, 3-11-1932.
\(^3\) Vide “Discussion with Harijan Workers, Poona”, 2-7-1933.
\(^4\) Vide “All About the Fast”, 8-7-1933.
True, while I was in Poona I did attend the informal conference and held frequent conversations with political co-workers on the subject of civil disobedience. There was no secret about it and I am not ashamed of it. Civil disobedience is an integral part of my life. But the fact is that the bulk of my time was not given to civil disobedience work. As a matter of fact, in view of the advice I tendered to the conference, it was not necessary. Then when I went to Ahmedabad, people may think that the sacrificing of the Ashram must have occupied a tremendous amount of my time, but I am again able to say that tremendous amount of my time was taken up with Harijan service.

Thousands gathered at prayer time and every time, if I spoke at all to these crowds, I spoke on untouchability and I collected funds at every one of these meetings with more or less generous response, every pice of which went to the Harijan Fund. If challenged, I would multiply instances of this character. It, therefore, in my opinion, ill becomes all body much more a Government official, to recklessly charge me with having done a thing which I have not done and then to justify the procedure which, to a simple mind like mine, appears to be a manifest and gross breach of promise, deliberately made to a prisoner in their custody.

When Gandhiji’s attention was drawn to the Home Member’s statement in the Assembly that Gandhiji wished to combine simultaneously two incompatible policies, deliberate incarceration and complete freedom to carry on social work as an ordinary man, Gandhiji replied:

I do not consider that there is anything incompatible in it. I would be asking for incompatible things if I had asked for conducting civil disobedience campaign from inside the prison walls.

Mahatma Gandhi was then asked if in his opinion his political campaign during the last few months had done the country any good.²

Gandhiji replied that he was unable to reply to the question as he had no opportunity to gauge the reaction of his movement on the people. But it was his firm conviction that the movement which was the cleanest weapon possible in the hands of self-respecting people to resist injustice could not but have done good.

 Asked whether the concessions given by the Government were not adequate enough, Gandhiji replied in the negative and said there still remained tremendous work to be done in connection with the anti-untouchability work. The political part of it formed only very little. The task before the reformers was to bring about a change of heart on the part of the Hindus.

¹ Vide “Speech at Leaders’ Conference, Poona-I”, 12-7-1933 and “Speech at Leaders’ Conference, Poona-II”.
² This and the following paragraph are reproduced from The Tribune.

Gandhiji, continuing, said that he could not describe the grief it caused him when on a matter of this character where Government orders had been so explicit in November last, the same officials should have been responsible for goading him on to a fast and then to say that he wanted to become a dictator. This was the unkindest cut of all.

 Asked if Mr. Rajagopalachari, for example, who had been a party to the Poona Pact and who was now in jail, could not seek permission for doing Harijan work like himself, Gandhiji replied in the negative and added:

I will side with the Government in resisting Mr. Rajagopalachari because Mr. Rajagopalachari was not present at the Round Table Conference. I was there as the sole representative of Mr. Rajagopalachari and other Congressmen and I made a declaration that I shall resist with my life separate electorates for the Depressed Classes and therefore it became a matter of sacred obligation to me to conduct this campaign even from inside the jail.

Regarding political situation, Gandhiji was asked what form his efforts for peace would take. Gandhiji replied that he did not know what it would be at the present moment. It was still in the lap of future. It was all impenetrable darkness for him just now. But if Government had the will for peace—and he knew that the Congress had the will—then peace could be had. But on what terms, he could not say at the present moment, not having all the strings in his hand today.

 Asked if he would be approaching the Viceroy again for an interview, he replied that he could not say definitely, but it was quite on the cards.

Gandhiji concluded by saying that he hoped to be restored to health in the course of a week or more and he was now on milk diet and free from pain or discomfort.

The Bombay Chronicle, 26-8-1933; also The Tribune, 27-8-1933

---

420. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

‘Parnakuti, Poona,

August 26, 1933

CHI. AMALA,

I have now got all the letters from the jail.

Yes, you may write as often as you like, only handing your letters to someone who is writing to me so that the postage may be saved. As a rule, there is a regular post from Wardha for me. The best thing for you, therefore, is to hand over your letters to Dwarkanathji or Lakshmibehn.

I wonder what you mean when you say you read the Gita every day. You read it to understand and act accordingly. You must now forget the past and look after the present, never mind how you behaved. I have forgotten all about it and I know that it was all out of excess of love. There was nothing immoral about it.

Your letter to Mira has not been received. Vinoba is quite right in asking you to learn cooking, Hindi, and cotton processes well, if you are to do real work amongst Harijans.

I hope you are keeping quite well and fit.

Love.

BAPU

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

421. LETTER TO RAMABEHN JOSHI

August 26, 1933

CHI. RAMA,

I got your letter, as also Nirmala’s. I am not writing a separate letter to Nirmala. I was happy to learn that you did not worry. Vinabehn gave me news about your health. Dhiru wrote to me from Bhavnagar. He seems to be quite happy. I could not see Chhaganlal this time at all. This time the conditions were completely different. I was not permitted to write to anybody. My health is improving rapidly. Gradually I am recovering strength. Chhaganlal has been removed to Thana. If you have received any letter from him from there, please give me news about him. Also give me news about Vimu, if you have any.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5356

---

1 Dwarkanath Harkare, an Ashram inmate
2 Lakshmibehn N. Khare
3 Addressee’s daughter
422. LETTER TO MITHUBEHN PETIT

August 26, 1933

CHI. MITHUBEHN,

I have your letter. Please do not worry about me. I am steadily regaining strength. I can digest milk.

I trust you are in good health. I need not enquire about your work; it must be going on as usual.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRIMATI MITHUBEHN PETIT

COLABA, BOMBAY

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2705

423. I SHALL DANCE TO HIS TUNE

No one can understand God’s ways. I did not even dream that after my twenty-one days’ fast, I would have to go on another fast within three months and, as a result, I would be out of jail. Who knows what God meant by this play. I, for one, do not know it. But I know this much that whether in jail or outside, I shall not fail to make any effort, of which I am capable in thought, speech and act, to wash Hinduism of the dross of untouchability. When an attempt was made to thwart the effort, I gave up food. I shall not allow a thing bought so dearly to slip out of my hands. But God knows how I can make that effort. I shall dance to His tune. I shall be guided by Him. I have every hope that all men and women will help me in this attempt.

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbandhu, 27-8-1933
424. LETTER TO VITHALDAS V. JERAJANI

August 27, 1933

MY DEAR VITHALDAS,

You want a message from me on khadi. What message may I send? When I hear that the love of people for khadi and the spinning-wheel is diminishing, my love for these things is getting stronger.

MOHANDAS GANDHI

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9784

425. LETTER TO GULAB A. SHAH

August 27, 1933

CHI. GULAB,

I hope you don’t feel a stranger there. Write to me regularly. Do you keep a diary? Have you made any friends?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1736

426. LETTER TO MANU GANDHI

August 27, 1933

CHI. MANUDI,

I hope you are now completely free from fever and are quite well. Write to me a detailed letter, giving your daily routine.

Ba is quite well. Prabhavatibehn has arrived here today.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 1526. Courtesy: Manubehn S. Mashruwala

1 In The Bombay Chronicle, 16-9-1933, this appeared under the title “Mahatma’s Message” with the following introductory note: “On the special occasion of the Gandhi Jayanti, Sjt. V. V. Jerajani, Agent, All-India Spinners’ Association, requested Mahatma Gandhi for a message. This he sent in Gujarati which is translated below.”
427. LETTER TO HIRALAL SHARMA
August 27, 1933

Bhai Sharma,

Do come after ten days. I have no idea where I shall be. You will learn from the newspapers. Make independent arrangements for your stay. I hope your problems have been resolved.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsh (1932-48), between pp. 52 and 53

428. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ
August 28, 1933

Chh. Jamnalal,

I am regaining strength fairly rapidly. I am very eager to see Jnana. I shall be happy if she comes and sees me. Let me know her address.

Kamala seems to have benefited very well indeed. I have advised Janakibehn to stay on here for the present without being afraid of the plague.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2922

429. LETTER TO DR. MANORAMABAI THATTE
August 29, 1933

Take With you only that which is good in us and bring with you only that which is good in the foreign lands you may go to. May God bless you and make you a fitter instrument of service.

M. K. Gandhi

From a photostat: G.N. 8680

1 The letter was written on the eve of the addressee’s departure for England.
430. TELEGRAM TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

POONA,
August 30, 1933

JAMNALAL BAJAJ
WARDHAGANJ

AM ANXIOUS VISIT WARDHA BUT NOT POSSIBLE REACH BEFORE LAST WEEK SEPTEMBER.

BAPU

Panchyen Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, p. 114

431. LETTER TO V. S. SRINIVASA SASTRI

August 30, 1933

DEAR BROTHER,

I treasure your letter\(^1\).

I do not mind anything you have said. On the contrary, I appreciate all you have said. Having said this, I must say that I utterly dissent from your interpretation of Government orders. If you saw all the correspondence, perhaps you will revise your judgment. I am not given to special pleading consciously. You may not have noticed that the Government have themselves dropped the idea of ‘another set of conditions’. On the contrary, they said that they made a mistake in making what you call ‘concession in the first instance’, and the mistake made was not one on merits but had reference to their own convenience.

However, I shall not strive with you in connection with your pronouncement upon my statement, but if you will care to study the whole question I would gladly send you the whole of the correspondence. I hope that you yourself do not consider me to be capable of desiring to blame the Government for the sake of doing so or that that performance would be dearer to me than Harijan uplift. I consider myself capable of a just discrimination and therefore of knowing when the Government is in the right. But this is all beside the point. I have taken so much space with what is now immaterial, in order to tell you that I do not plead guilty to the charge you have made against me.

\(^1\) Dated August 27; vide Appendix “Letter from V. S. Srinivasa Sastri”, 27-8-1933.

Now for the central point of your letter. I quite agree with you that I am wholly unfit for the constitution building at the present stage. In my opinion that time is not yet. It will come only when the nation has developed a sanction for itself. I would therefore gladly retire from the Congress and devote myself to the development of civil disobedience outside the Congress and to Harijan work. The difficulty is, how to do it? Can I do it by seceding from the Congress? That was the question that troubled me at the time of the informal conference and that is the question that confronts me again. I am seeking light. As soon as I have regained sufficient strength, I shall again sound the mind of Congressmen and if I can possibly retire from the Congress I shall gladly do so. My impression, however, is that the Congress mentality has not changed. Whilst it is true that a large number of Congressmen have got tired, very few would care to subscribe to the White Paper or work for securing certain improvements in it. They want a radical change. But I am in no hurry to come to any final decision. I can give you this assurance that nothing will deter me from taking any steps that might be in the best interests of the nation. There is no question even of self-effacement. Performance of duty I have held always to be a thing of beauty and a joy for ever. The awful fact, however, has often been to know where duty lies.

You won’t give me up, but continue to guide me and you will not hesitate to come if you felt like coming. I am not going to hesitate to ask you to come when I feel that I need your personal contact and a constant exchange of thoughts.

Love.

M. K. GANDHI

Letters of Srinivasa Sastri, pp. 260-2

---

432. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

August 30, 1933

CHI. AMALA,

I have your letters. I am glad you have taken to Jamnalalji. You should accept his guidance and do as he says. Take gratefully all the nursing that may be offered to you and that may be necessary for the healing of your body. I hope you have now got rid of all your boils and eruptions.

Love.

BAPU

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

433. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

August 30, 1933

CHI. JAMNALAL,

I have sent a reply\(^1\) to your wire. I should like very much to go there immediately, but I can’t do that. I think it will be better to pay a visit to Bombay first and then to Wardha. I wish to acquaint myself with the atmosphere in Bombay. The Harijan work there also seems to have become slack and, if possible, I wish to infuse some life into it.

My health is steadily improving. I can eat with appetite. Take care of your health. Letters for N. and Amala are enclosed. The former seems to have become a little unsettled.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2923

434. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

August 31, 1933

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

So you are out before your time. I hope you got my wire. I had thought that Mother was going back to Allahabad. I expect full report from you.

Indu has been with me fairly often. She is to come again this evening.

If it is at all possible, we must meet soon. But of course you will be held up there if Mother remains bad. I shall expect a full letter from you. It would be as well to send it by registered post.

\(^1\) Vide “Letter to Jamnalal Bajaj”, 30-8-1933.
I am slowly regaining lost strength. I say nothing about the fast as I expect you now know all about it. More when we meet.

Love.

BAPU

Gandhi-Nehru Papers, 1933. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

435. LETTER TO KASHI GANDHI

August 31, 1933

CHI. KASHI,

I have your letter. We have to forget all talk about Satyavati for Prabhudas. I am looking for some other girl. It will be as his fate decides for him. I do not think lack of money comes in Prabhudas’s way. What comes in his way is his age and the ill reputation he has for his health. Another reason is that as Prabhudas has always lived by himself, he has not come into contact with anybody. Whatever the reason, we have to make the effort and then acquiesce in whatever result God brings about. I am all right.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: S.N. 33073

436. LETTER TO PRABHUDAS GANDHI

August 31, 1933

CHI. PRABHUDAS,

I have your letter. You should give up worrying. What is in your fate will happen. I will certainly give it a thought. I have not given up Gyan as yet. She writes to say that I have not been just to her. I am therefore keen on seeing her. I do not want to do anything in a hurry. Nor do I want to impose Gyan on you. However, I consider it your duty as an elder person to make acquaintance with Gyan.

Rest assured that you need not worry about your engagement. I intend to go to Wardha, too. Something will occur to me when I reach there.

If your health remains good in the plains and if Jamnalalji allows it, it will no doubt be better if you postpone going to the hills.

Blessings from
BAPU
I am not writing separately to Chhaganlal. I have received his previous letter. He is longing to go to Sabarmati. That is all right.

From the Gujarati original: S.N. 32970

437. LETTER TO TOTARAM SANADHYA

‘Parnakuti’, Poona,
August 31, 1933

Bhai Totaram,

I have your letter. It is our duty to endure even when we see the ruination of the Ashram. God willing, we shall regain its possession and shall reside in whatever structures then remain. I hope the Ashram will certainly serve some purpose or other. You and Hariprasad must be keeping good health. I am regaining strength, there is no cause for anxiety.

Blessings from
Bapu

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 2528

438. FRAGMENT OF LETTER TO H. K. HALES

[After August 31, 1933]¹

I assure you that I have no desire to court imprisonment for the sake of it, but if imprisonment comes in my way even whilst I am seeking for peace, I will accept it cheerfully.²

The Hindustan Times, 17-9-1933

¹ The addressee’s letter under reply was dated August 31, 1933.
² Hales, a Conservative member of British Parliament, had written: “It is imperative that you should, at all costs, preserve your freedom in the evening of your life. Every hour is of supreme value and for you, of all men, to be incarcerated for months, at a time when your counsel and advice are so necessary, seems to me almost a crime.” He had concluded the letter with a request to “resist the inclination this time for the sake of your friends, if not for yourself.”
439. LETTER TO AGATHA HARRISON

September 1, 1933

MY DEAR AGATHA,

C. F. Andrews has shared with me your letters to him. This is just to press upon you the necessity of taking fair rest for the sake of putting in more work. ‘A stitch in time saves nine’ has much truth in it.

I need say nothing about my body or the situation created by my unexpected discharge. Deenabandhu has, I know, written to you fully about it.

Love.

BAPU

[PS.]

Poor Mahadev! He is alone now in Belgaum prison. But this isolation will do him good.

From a photostat: G.N. 1467

440. LETTER TO EDMOND AND YVONNE PRIVAT

September 1, 1933

DEAR ANAND AND BHAKTI,

This is just to acknowledge your love letter and to tell you that I am keeping as well as I can. The rest you will have from Mira’s letter.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 8796

441. NOTE

THE DISTINCTION BETWEEN THE TWO

Deenabandhu Andrews wrote last week on the untouchability of South Africa and showed how there was the temple-entry question even there. It is, however, worth noting the distinction between the two untouchabilities. In South Africa, it is based upon colour prejudice and has no sanction either in religion or in law. In India, unfortunately, it is claimed by a large number of Hindus to have religious sanction and we know that it has also the sanction of law. The Indian untouchability is, therefore, much worse than the South African. Both are, no doubt, equally mischievous, so far as the victims are concerned. Both deserve equal condemnation. Only, in India it seems that the fight is likely to be much harder than in South Africa.

_Harijan_, 2-9-1933

442. THE TEMPLE-ENTRY BILL

It is sad to think that the anti-untouchability measure has been hung up for one year by the Legislative Assembly and that the amendment to hang it up received the support of the Government. But the reformers may not rest till untouchability is blotted out of the Statute Book. Meanwhile, the process of having temples opened by consent of trustees and temple-goers and the general propaganda in favour of opening temples should continue.

But I observe that a Harijan Conference at Agra has passed the following resolution:

This Jatav Conference . . . considers that the methods and system of work of the movement is not satisfactory. Harijan movement lays stress on the temple-entry problem more than on economic and educational problems. The former . . . will produce slave mentality. . . . Hence . . . great emphasis must be laid on the educational and economic aspect of the progress. Inter-caste marriage and inter-dining must be on the programme of the movement. . . .

The economic and educational uplift is no doubt an essential part of true repentance by caste Hindus. It is a test of the sincerity of their professions. But the uplift will not be complete without the throwing open of temples. The throwing open of temples will be an admission of the religious equality of Harijans. It will be the surest sign of their ceasing to be the outcastes of Hinduism, which they are today.

It is beside the point that tens of thousands of Harijans do not want to enter temples. If it were properly probed, the fact would be found to be quite otherwise. Thousands of Harijans do want to enter temples. Only they have been so accustomed to the prohibition that the very hope of entering temples had dried up in them. They believe that admission to temples on a par with the other Hindus is an impossibility.

1 Untouchability Abolition Bill. It was introduced by C. S. Ranga Iyer on March 24, 1933; vide 6th footnote to “Letter to ranchhoddas Patwari”, 11-1-1933.

2 Only excerpts are reproduced here.

But whether Harijans desire the consolation of temple-entry or not, whether, if temples are thrown open to them, they will make use of them or not, caste Hindus have to perform their simple duty. They have to open their temples for Harijans to offer worship in, precisely on, the same terms as for themselves. A debtor is not absolved from the duty of payment because his creditor does not care for the payment, or has forgotten the debt altogether.

And when temples are thrown open to Harijans, schools, wells and many similar facilities will be automatically open to Harijans. It is surely easy enough to realize that untouchability may subsist side by side with economic uplift. Many Ezhawas in Travancore and Namashudras in Bengal possess decent fortunes and are yet treated as pariahs of society. The bar sinister is all the more galling to them by reason of their flourishing condition. Dr. Ambedkar suffers from the curse in spite of his high educational attainments and his superior economic condition. He is naturally more sensitive to the insult of untouchability. But the reproach will be automatically removed, immediately caste Hindus proclaim the banishment of untouchability by admitting Harijans to their temples on terms of absolute equality with themselves. It will not then become necessary for any Harijan individually to go to temples, if he does not desire to do so. The declaration of the opening of temples will cover him with the rest. It will be like the abolition of slavery. It will be a vast and glorious step in the much-needed and overdue purification of Hinduism.

Temple-entry permission, to be of use, has naturally to be a voluntary act on the part of Hindus. It has to be, therefore, a genuine change of heart in the caste Hindus. Legislation is nevertheless necessary because of the fact that in law the entry of Harijans into caste-Hindu temples is said to be prohibited. Legislation will constitute the seal of approval of the vast mass of Hindus. I personally should not want, that legislation in the teeth of universal caste-Hindu opposition. My own belief is that caste Hindus as a whole do not oppose temple-entry by Harijans. I should abide by the result of an honestly conducted referendum. Anyway, let the reformers realize that, whatever happens in the Legislature at Delhi, the movement for temple-entry and the necessary legislation must continue.
There are other things in the resolution quoted above which call for explanation or criticism. This must be postponed for a future issue of the Harijan.

Harijan, 2-9-1933

443. LETTER TO DR. MOHAMMAD ALAM

‘PARNAKUTI’ POONA,
September 2, 1933

DEAR DR. ALAM,

God is great. He often confounds us. I little knew that I would have to be discharged in the manner I have been. I am now praying for light as to the next step I am to take. I am sorry I have not read your paper, but I must now do it. You must quickly undergo an examination and ensure good health. I am making steady progress towards regaining lost strength.

Letter for Begum Alam.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

DR. S. MOHAMMAD ALAM
1 LYTTON ROADS
LAHORE

From a photostat: G.N. 31

444. LETTER TO N. R. MALKANI

September 2, 1933

MY DEAR MALKANI,

I had your letter of 11th instant.

Lakshmi had already told me how you and your wife were looking after her, and when I heard that she was under your roof I was perfectly at ease. I now see that she has gone to Wardha; I have not quite understood why before Devdas was removed from Delhi. Her first letter had told me that she would be in Delhi so long as Devdas was there. I have written to Rajaji. I can understand his consolation because he has to be both father and mother to his children, and specially to his daughters. But I know also that deep down in him there is dignified peace.
I hope the work there is flourishing. If you have any suggestions to make either regarding the Harijan work or regarding the editing of the Harijan, you must not hesitate to pass them on to me whilst I am yet in a position to receive them.

Love.

BAPU

Sjt. N. R. Malkani
Servants of Untouchables Society, Birla Mills
Delhi

From a photostat: G.N. 901

445. LETTER TO CHARU PROVA SEN

September 2, 1933

My dear Charu Prova,

I was delighted to have your brief note.

I think you are quite right. It is no joke for anybody to be my co-worker. But I know that God gives all the co-workers and me the strength they and I may need. Therefore, you will get no pity or sympathy from me, but you will have to render a true account of your stewardship.

I hope you are doing well. I am slowly but steadily regaining strength.

Love.

BAPU

Smt. Charu Prova Sen
Rajbari, Faridpur District
(Bengal)

From a photostat: G.N. 8702

446. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

September 2, 1933

Chi. Amala,

I have your letters. You should not expect frequent replies from me. Whenever I can I will certainly write to you.
I had said nothing to you about my health because I had referred to it in some other letters. I am getting on as well as possible. I am regaining strength steadily. Therefore, there is no cause for anxiety. I am taking milk, fruit and vegetables.

I hope that you are steadily qualifying yourself.

Love.

BAPU

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

447. LETTER TO BENARSIDAS CHATURVEDI

September 2, 1933

BHAI BENARSIDAS,

I was happy to get your letter. Proficient and paid teachers should be employed for propagation of Hindi in Bengal. There is no doubt that Ramanandbabu has done immense service to Hindi. Please accept my felicitations on making Vishal Bharat self-supporting. I have seen the account of the Madras tour, it is good. I hope you are keeping well.

Blessings from

BAPU

PANDIT BENARSIDAS CHATURVEDI
EDITOR, “VISHAL BHARAT”
120/2 UPPER CIRCULAR ROAD, CALCUTTA

From a photostat of the Hindi. G.N. 2564

448. LETTER TO VIDYA HINGORANI

September 2, 1933

CHI. VIDYA,

I have your letter. I feel that for the time being you should stay there. Later on we shall see. Anand will stay here for the present. I will try and go over to Wardha by the end of this month. Keep mind and body fit.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Hindi. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

1 Vide “Letter to Jamanalal Bajaj”, 30-8-1933.
2 A Hindi monthly published from Calcutta
449. INTERVIEW TO ASSOCIATED PRESS OF INDIA

September 2, 1933

I am unconscious of any error in giving my previous advice. However, I admit that this unexpected release has produced a situation that demands special treatment. At this stage I can only say that I am giving the matter my earnest and prayerful consideration. I have no ready-made plan before me. I shall consult all friends, listen to all advice and come to no hasty decision. I reiterate my earnest desire for peace. Therefore I shall leave no stone unturned to bring it about in so far as it lies within my power.

Home Department, Political, File No. 4/11/33, 1933, p. 4. Courtesy: National Archives of India

450. ADVICE TO FRIENDS

[Before September 3, 1933]

It is nothing less than a new life for me. On my part I had given up all hope. On the 23rd night after the nausea, I felt I would not survive for long, that I could no longer battle with death. On the afternoon of the 24th I even gave away whatever I had with me.

Things which are more or less routine for us neither fascinate nor pain us, however they may be, pleasant or unpleasant. And whether or not I wish, fasts have become almost a daily occurrence for me. Why should they pain you? You should understand that fasts have become a part of my life and for this reason ought to give up the ignorant attachment to my body. No doubt I had to undergo some privation, but then who has attained Krishna without great suffering?

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbandhu 3-9-1933

1 The source had this extract from the National Call, 3-9-1933, which had reported: “Interviewed by the Associated Press, Mahatma Gandhi replied to the comments of the National Labour Party’s fortnightly organ, the News Letter, which hoped that he would respond to the Government of India’s conciliatory action.”

2 This and the following three items are extracted from Chandrashankar Shukla’s “Weekly Letter”. This appeared under the sub-title, “New Life”.

3 Of August
451. DISCUSSION WITH A PARI GENTLEMAN

[Before September 3, 1933]

Q. I am very much pained to see that in many places Harijan work is carried on with a feeling of obliging the Harijans rather than in a spirit of service.

A. That is true. That is why I go on telling the caste Hindus that whatever they do, they must do for their own sake. That is their atonement, their purification.

Q. But the work is not being done in the manner you desire. The feeling of high and low pervades every vein.

A. I admit it. Untouchability cannot be said to have disappeared so long as this feeling persists. It is not enough to “touch” Harijans.

Q. Such a feeling of high and low prevails even among us, Parsis. We have amongst us the first, the second and the third which do not mix with one another.

A. You are bound to be influenced by us since you have lived with us for so many years. Once a Parsi gentleman came to me and told me that the differences of high and low were created by God. I told him: “You are a Parsi and yet talk like this. But you have been influenced by us and now you have come to repeat it.”

Q. This feeling prevails among Muslims too.

A. The same is true of Christians as well. Recently, there was a conference of Christian untouchables in Madras. Has the world ever heard of anything like this?

Q. I think the feeling of untouchability has to be banished from our hearts, is it not?

A. Everything would be incomplete without it. If untouchability disappears from Hindu religion, many other problems will be solved. I also expect the Hindu-Muslim problem to solve itself, because it also has its root in the feeling of high and low.

Q. As a matter of fact, Zoroaster himself never intended to establish a religion. The religion came to be established later. Now the feeling of distinction between themselves and others has gone deep in the minds of Parsis.

A. It has been taken from the Hindu religion. It comes from the Indian atmosphere. If it disappears from the Hindu religion, it will disappear from elsewhere too. Do you think that I would be convinced that untouchability was wiped out just because some wells had been dug for them or some temples had been thrown open to them? These are only indications. If even this much does not happen, all our talking would be in vain. But we shall have to go much further.

1 This appeared under the sub-title, “For the Whole World”.

VOL. 61: 27 APRIL, 1933 - 7 OCTOBER, 1933 359

Q. For Harijan work, do you have only Hindus in mind or the other people as well?

A. The thought of others is of course implied—in the same way as India’s independence is for the good of the entire world. But I do not go on harping on that point; I talk only about swaraj for India. Similarly, I am absolutely confident that there are going to be widespread consequences of the solution of the Harijan problem. It would affect the whole world. Unless I had that hope, why should I get involved in Harijan work? It is already implied in my writings. I have asserted that I wish to serve the whole world through it.

[From Gujarati]

_Harijanbandhu, 3-9-1933_

452. ADVICE TO A HARIJAN WORKER

[Before September 3, 1933]

I do not need any scheme. I want a person who would act. What purpose would a scheme serve without a person to carry it out? What can we do with a scheme if we did not have the capacity to implement it? You are planning to take up leather work. I like leather work very much. But you have not learnt it. It is not enough that you can make slippers. We have also to take up the work of tanning. If you have that ability, your work and mine would become easy. We do not want to set up big factories. Wee have to see how better tanning of leather could be done in the villages. What did Madhusudan Das do? He gathered the tanners of Utkal and studied how they did their tanning. He was not satisfied with it, and he went to Germany and learnt leather work there. He brought a German [expert] with him and set up a factory. It is in Cuttack. It is no longer under him. I do not know its present condition. Many Harijans learnt the work during the days of Madhusudan Das. Like Madhusudan Das you too should first master

1 This appeared under the sub-title, “Training for Service”.

360 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATM GANDHI
the craft. It cannot be done in one month’s time. You can do very well, if you learn it properly. I can make arrangements for your training.

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbandhu, 3-9-1933

453. DISCUSSION ON FASTING

[Before September 3, 1933]

What we regard as dharma, they [the orthodox] regard as \textit{adharma}. It is ignorance; but you cannot undertake a fast unto death to counter it. It is not a matter for fasting unto death. Such a fast can be undertaken on very rare occasions. It is a very strong measure. This problem is very complex. A conditional fast can be undertaken only in exceptional circumstances. That is why I thought of an unconditional fast, a fast without any conditions, for the purification of the Hindu religion. It would be good to have a relay fast just as Ganga-water \textit{kavad}. If the right persons undertook a right fast for the purification of religion, it is bound to have its impact on the people. It is not an \textit{asuri} \footnote{Demoniacal} act, but a purely \textit{daivi} \footnote{Godly} act. No one can call it coercion if somebody resorted to a 21-day or a 50-day fast for ridding the Hindu religion of the evil that has entered into it, because that fast would not to be broken, whatever the people might do.

Q. How do you see coercion in my proposed fast unto death?

A. You are not concerned with the trustees of the temple. What appears \textit{adharma} to you is regarded as dharma by them. How can you undertake a fast in protest against it? Can you make anyone give up his dharma by resorting to a fast? Let me explain to you when a conditional fast can be undertaken. Suppose my brother is a drunkard. He considers drinking an evil but is not able to give it up. It would be justifiable if I went on a fast till he gave up drinking. But when he declares his intention of renouncing his Hindu faith and \footnote{This appeared under the sub-title, “Limitations of Fasting”}.

\footnote{From May 8 to 29, 1933}

\footnote{Ganga water used to be transported by a relay of runners in a kavad, i.e., a pole carried on the shoulder with pots at the ends.}
embracing Christianity, my fast to prevent him from doing it would be coercion. So, for the time being, your duty is to meet the trustees, argue your point with them, convey your stand through their friends, create public opinion. If public opinion is favourable it must be demonstrated to the trustees, as was done in Guruvayur referendum\textsuperscript{1}. If public opinion is found to be favourable, maybe the trustees might agree. Such a poll cannot be conducted by just asking people to raise their hands at a public meeting; you should go from door to door to collect the votes.

Q. In spite of all this, if they are not convinced, what should I do except going on a fast unto death?

A. Even then it cannot be said that a fast unto death may be undertaken. This is not going to purify the Hindu religion. There are many features of the Hindu religion that call for reform, but people are still not agreeable to it. I have said that the Hindu religion would be wiped out unless untouchability is removed. And it is literally true. But what are we going to do if God Himself has willed that the Hindu religion should perish? We must be prepared to lay down our lives; but there should be an occasion for it.

[From Gujarati]

\textit{Harijanbandhu}, 3-9-1933

454. \textbf{NO EXAGGERATION}\textsuperscript{2}

The following is the gist of a letter from a Gujarati correspondent:

I have read in the \textit{Harijanbandhu} of the 27th August an article\textsuperscript{1} by you in which you say, “I can live some days at least without the daily bread, but I cannot live without Harijan service for one single minute.” I have observed an exaggeration of expression in many of your writings. People are often confused by utterances like this. If every moment of your life is occupied in Harijan service, how can you find time for other activities? You cannot serve two masters at one and the same time. I realize that for you life is an indivisible whole and your various activities are only different phases of it. But the masses cannot comprehend this thing. They would naturally infer from the foregoing sentence that you are going to devote the rest of your life to Harijan service. But that is incorrect, for you will no doubt take up other activities also as occasion arises. This exaggeration of expression has, I believe, even in the past created a confusion in people’s minds. Therefore, if you keep more sense of proportion in your speech and writing, chances of misunderstanding could be reduced to a minimum. I have written this out of regard for you and ask to be forgiven if I am found guilty of presumption.

\textsuperscript{1} In December 1932.
\textsuperscript{2} The original Gujarati appeared in \textit{Harijanbandhu}, 3-9-1933. This was published as “condensed from Gujarati”.
\textsuperscript{3} \textit{Vide “The Breath of My Life”}, 23-8-1933.

It is not clear to me whether the correspondent is himself confounded by my ‘exaggeration’ or whether he represents the confusion of others only. I should be pained, if it is true that many are confounded by my writings. For I believe I have a keen sense of proportion. As a worshipper of Truth I must eschew all exaggeration. What I have written about Harijan service is, I believe, literally true. But Harijan service does not exclude all other service. One can devote oneself simultaneously to several things which are connected with one another. What I have said of Harijan service can, for instance, with equal truth be said of the service of Daridranarayana² also, for that service is not inconsistent with the service of the Harijans. Human life is not mechanical. To every one of us there are things as dear as life itself, and one can say that life would be impossible without them. The measure of the truthfulness of such statements would depend on the intensity of one’s devotion to the causes espoused. While in the case of some people separation from a cause claimed to be dear as life itself will not kill them, with others such a separation will be nothing less than a sentence of death.

But it would be wrong to take such devotion to imply that outward activity connected with the object of devotion must go on from moment to moment. It certainly does imply that outward action must be taken whenever occasion demands it. The seed we sow in the ground does not sprout immediately, but if it is not dead, it grows every minute, though we see it as a plant or tree only after many days or months. The process of growth we see in the physical world we should expect to see in the mental and spiritual world also.

² God in the form of the poor
The truth of my statement about Harijan service can be measured, if at all, only after my death. The full measure is known only to the all-knowing God. For He alone knows our intentions. It can, therefore, try to satisfy the correspondent, and others who think like him, only by repeating that there is no exaggeration in my claim that Harijan service is the breath of my life and that, therefore, I cannot live for one moment without it.

_Harijan_, 30-9-1933

455. STATEMENT TO THE PRESS

_Seventh_ 3, 1933

It is needless for me to redeclare my absolute faith in non-violence and utter disbelief in violence as a means of gaining political rights or political freedom. I deeply deplore the assassination of the Midnapore Magistrate. But at the same time it is impossible not to regret that the rulers will not only not redress the wrongs which lead to such assassinations but insist on ruling by counter-terrorism, which the Ordinances undoubtedly mean.

_The Hindu_, 4-9-1933; also G.N. 1469

456. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

_Seventh_ 3, 1933

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

I have your letter. Evidently your presence has served as a tonic for Mother. If she remains free from fever, you should be free to move out for a few days. If so, you should come to me as early as you can. I am anxious to leave here on Friday or Saturday next for Bombay and be there for about a week and then go to Wardha.

---

1 According to G.N. version, a copy of this statement with slight verbal variations was sent to Agatha Harrison.

2 The G.N. version here adds “my”.

3 The G.N. version has “method for” instead of “means of”.

4 B. E. G. Burge, who was assassinated by three Bengali youths on September 2. The sentence in the G.N. version reads: “I therefore cannot but deeply deplore the assassination of the District Magistrate of Midnapore.”

5 The G.N. version here adds “will”.

6 The G.N. version here reads: “which the Ordinance Rule undoubtedly means.”

364  THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHTAM GANDHI
I do not know the young man you mention. I know the family well. I must have met him too. But I could not identify him, if I saw him. The family has liberal traditions. Krishna is therefore likely to be quite happy with them. I have written to Anasuyabehn about him. She of course knows all these people intimately. But meanwhile I see no harm in your sending for him and seeing him and presenting him to Mother if you find him acceptable. On hearing from Anasuyabehn, I shall wire to you, if necessary. Of course, I am otherwise keeping the matter quite secret. I take it that you have not minded my writing to Anasuyabehn.

Kamala needs freedom from excitement and worry. I am inclined to think that she is the least unhappy in Bombay with Naoroji sisters. I therefore feel that you should bring her when you come here and then leave her here.

In the expectation that we must meet soon, I say nothing of the political situation or of my fasting exploits. I am steadily regaining lost strength.

Poor Mahadev is in Belgaum. It is good to go through the fire. Do please tell Mother that she is continually in my thoughts. She has to live long enough to see the clouds lifting.

My love to you all.

BAPU

Gandhi-Nehru Papers, 1933. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

457. LETTER TO RUKMINIDEVI BAJAJ

September 3, 1933

CHI. RUKMINI,

I was wondering whether you would even write to me, when I got your letter. I do get reports about you from time to time. You have given a rather big name to the child. Before him, poor Madhav will seem plebeian. I hope you and Devendra keep good health. I am fairly well. Mirabehn, Brijkrishna and Prabhavati look after me. Most

1 Gunottam Hutheesing
2 Daughter of Maganlal Gandhi
3 Gandhiji had suggested Madhavdas and Gopaldas as names for the addressee’s son, Devendra, which means ‘the Lord of gods’.
probably I will go to Bombay on Friday and from there to Wardha.

Blessings to you both from
BAPU

SHRI BENARSIDAS BAZAJ
THATHERI BAZAAR, BENARES CITY

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9154

458. LETTER TO SARALADEVI SARABHAI

September 3, 1933

DEAR SISTER,

I have your letter. I shall be in a position to see you on Wednesday. Do come with Bharati1 and Suhrid2. Whatever may be my ideas on education, the brother and sister will definitely have my blessings. I know that for you, going to England at this time is a tribulation. I have known for many years that whatever you do is with a sense of duty.

Blessings from
MOHANDAS

From the Gujarati original: C.W. 11138. Courtesy: Sarabhai Foundation

459. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

[Before September 4, 1933]3

CHI. JAMNALAL,

N. is off the rails again. I can see signs of her unsettled mind in her letters. Till now she was all for Hinduism, and now it is Christianity. That also will be good if she is serious about it. But it doesn’t seem to me that she is. Her imagination tosses her from one thing to another. The vow of silence seems to have unsettled her mind all the more. Read the accompanying letter and then give it to her. If you can find time, also have a talk with her. Or Vinoba may do so. If Dwarakanath can do anything let him try to calm her.

1 Addressee’s daughter and son
2 ibid
3 According to the source, the letter was received on September 4, 1933.
You must have received my wire. I certainly have many things to discuss with you, but I don’t wish to drag you here. At first I felt that I should pay a visit to Bombay for a few days and then go to Wardha. But for the last two or three days I have become a little undecided. Perhaps it may be better to go to Wardha first and then to Bombay. But I am thinking. Since Jawaharlal has been released, it is necessary that I should see him also. I can do that even in Wardha. However. Ultimately, what is decreed will happen. I, therefore, don’t make any plans.

My health is improving day by day. I can drink two pounds of milk and eat vegetables and fruit.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2924

460. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI
September 4, 1933

CHI. NARANDAS,

I had your postcard. There has been no letter after that. I wrote one postcard to you. I hope you have been able to keep up your health. I have made you all prisoners and escaped myself. How strange!

I don’t worry about you, for I believe that your equanimity will help you to remain unaffected by anything.

I am improving now. I intend to leave for Bombay next Friday. I shall probably stay there for about a week. After that, I intend to go to Wardha.

I had Jamna’s letter. Let me know your plans. I had a long letter from Chimanlal.

At present, Ba, Mira, Prabhavati, Mathuradas, Chandrashankar and Nair are with me. Brijkrishna spends the whole day with me. I get more service than I need.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./I. Also C.W. 8392. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

Dated August 30; vide “Telegram to Jamnalal Bajaj”, 30-8-1933.
Chimanlal Shah
461. LETTER TO PARIKSHITLAL L. MAJMUDAR

September 4, 1933

Bhai Parikshitolal,

I have read your letter to Chandrashankar. If you have come to know what made the Hindus of Vina abandon their boycott unconditionally, please let me know. Have they realized their folly?

I hope necessary steps are being taken regarding the problem in Bhalada. If the caste Hindus do not change their attitude, and if it is possible, the Harijans may even have to be removed from such a village. If there is anything else which is worth knowing, please let me know.¹

Blessings from

Bapu

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3997

462. LETTER TO SHOORJI VALLABHDAS

September 4, 1933

Bhai Shoorji,

I was thinking of writing to you, when I got your letter. I hope to reach Bombay on Friday. I will not, therefore, give you trouble by asking you to come here. I am certainly eager to see you, but I will have patience for a few days. I hope the girl’s health is improving, and that you are well, too.

Vandemataram from

Mohandas

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4095

¹ Vide “Congratulations”, 10-9-1933.
463. A LETTER

Silence Day, September 4, 1933

I got your letter three or four days ago and felt pity for you. I am observing silence today and so I have found the time to write this.

You cannot ride two horses at a time. If you wish to observe the vow of brahmacharya, you should never be alone with your wife or any other woman, leave alone sharing the same bed. If you cannot control yourself and avoid being alone with her or stop sleeping in the same bed with her, you should give up the vow of brahmacharya. You should leave the Ashram, too, and lead an honest householder’s life as others do. There is no disgrace in doing so. Everybody should live with due regard to his strength. If anybody attempts more than that, hypocrisy is bound to creep in. I would, therefore, advise you to reflect carefully and come to a definite decision. Your present way does not do justice to your wife either. She cannot satisfy passion when she feels it, but you satisfy yours whenever you please and, thereby, increase her suffering. We accept the women’s independence, but your conduct does not show that you know it. Think carefully about this and then do what seems best to you.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9511

464. LETTER TO DUDHIBEHN V. DESAI

September 4, 1933

I got your letter. I had been waiting for one. Do write to me occasionally. If you have any problem, let me know about it. Don’t worry about me. I am regaining my strength now. I don’t know how long I shall be out. I intend to go to Bombay on Friday, and from...

The name has been omitted.
there hope to go to Wardha after a week. Ba, Mirabehn and Prabhavati are with me.

Blessings from
BAPU

SMT. DUDHIBEHN VALJI DESAI
C/O DAKSHINAMURTI, BHAVNAGAR, KATHIWAR

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 3134. Courtesy: Valji G. Desai

465. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

September 4, 1933

DEAR DAUGHTER AMTUSSALAAM,

How are you now? Ba told me that you were not well but I hope you must have recovered by now. There is nothing to worry about me. So long as God wishes to protect me nothing will happen to me. And when He wishes to take me away no one here can keep me back. Give up, therefore, all fear for me.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Urdu: G.N. 288

466. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

POONA,
September 5, 1933

CHI. AMALA,

I have your letter together with the one from your mother. You do not want me to write to her again, do you? If you wish me to, I will write with pleasure.

The date of my reaching Wardha is not yet fixed, but it would not be before the last week of the month.

While you say that chapatis are a nuisance and while you consider them to be unwholesome, chapatis take no time in preparation and are quite wholesome if they are made with whole wheatmeal.
You say that Hindi is the first language you will know. Give me the list of the 11 languages.

I am getting on well.

Give me your day’s diary.

Love.

BAPU

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

467. TELEGRAM TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

POONA,

September 6, 1933

JAMNALAL BAJAJ

WARDHA

GOING LUCKNOW BENARES UNNECESSARY. DO TAKE TEN DAYS HILL STATION AT ONCE. JAWAHARLAL REACHING HERE PROBABLY SATURDAY. I GO BOMBAY NEXT WEEK. STAYING ONE WEEK. REACHING WARDHA NOT EARLIER TWENTY-THIRD. AM KEEPING QUITE WELL. DISTRUST NEWSPAPER REPORT.

BAPU

Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, p. 116

468. STATEMENT ON HARIJAN DAY¹

[September 7, 1933]²

The Servants of Untouchables Society has declared 24th of this month to be the Harijan Day. It is the anniversary of the Yeravda Pact, miscalled Poona Pact. It is a happy coincidence that 24th is a Sunday. It is to be hoped that the day will be celebrated in a manner befitting the occasion. Each person, each Harijan organization, should take stock of his or its year’s activity and contribution to the removal of the canker of untouchability. Societies and individuals can make a budget or resolution for the year to follow. Subscriptions can be collected from door to door for the work to be done. All the various activities that have hitherto been followed on Harijan Days will,

¹ This appeared under the tide “Harijan Day”.
² From The Bombay Chornicle, 9-9-1933
I have no doubt, be taken up with greater emphasis on the 24th instant.

I hope that Harijans will also take stock of their contribution towards their own purification and, therefore, the purification of Hinduism. But there is no doubt that by far the greatest responsibility rests on the shoulders of caste Hindus. Reformers should make it a point of winning over the orthodox people to the movement by gentleness, humility, self-sacrifice, and increasing purity of character.

M. K. GANDHI

Harijan, 9-9-1933

469. INTERVIEW ON GOSEVA

September 8, 1933

GANDHIJI: I don’t have sufficient enthusiasm to give a message, because nobody does goseva in accordance with my views. I had explained these views to your President. I had also suggested the lines along which improvements could be made in the present movement. The President had agreed to implement my suggestions and had even assured me that he would do so. But he didn’t keep his promise. What is the use, then, of my giving a message?

INTERVIEWER: This refers to only some of the workers engaged in goseva. Many other persons and goshalas are doing this work. They all can know your views on this movement only through a message. If you wish you can in the same message point out the shortcomings and suggest improvements.

G. I may dispose of you with an ordinary message in the same way as when a goseva worker approaches one for contribution; one usually disposes of him by paying him a few coins. But I don’t think that any useful purpose will be served by such a message.

1. Well, leaving aside the subject of message, may I ask you whether you would like, after all these years, to revise any of your views on goseva expressed earlier? What you had said was: ’(1) goseva alone will bring swaraj nearer. (2) As long as cows are being slaughtered, I feel myself being slaughtered. My efforts to save cows are

---

1 This is published as “Introduction” in the source.
2 The interview was concluded on a subsequent date, which is not ascertainable.
3 The interviewer, a representative of an institution, had asked Gandhiji for a message for his monthly.
going on uninterruptedly. All my efforts are directed to stopping cow-slaughter. Anyone who is not ready to give his life to save the cow is not a Hindu. (3) My deepest aspirations are, eradication of untouchability and service of the cow. We shall achieve swaraj only when we succeed in these two tasks. I see moksha lies in their achievement.’

G. I wish to make no change in this statement of my views. But in interpreting them, the context of the circumstances in which I expressed them and the wide meaning which I give to goseva should be kept in mind. In goseva of my conception, I include all living creatures. Probably you do not know that I have said much more than the remarks you have quoted. For instance, I had also said that the ideal of cow-protection was the most important gift of Hinduism to mankind. But this remark of mine referred only to goseva of my peculiar conception.

1. I see what you mean. I will now ask one more question relating to the same aspect. Some people say that while doing cow-protection work in a disinterested spirit, one need not make any distinction between truth and untruth, and that any means can be adopted for cow-protection. What is your view in this regard?

G. To sacrifice truth for the sake of cow-protection would amount to sacrificing the cow herself. Similarly to betray truth for the sake of a public cause is to betray that cause itself. These peculiar views of mine have not commended themselves to the people, and they are not convinced by them. I have, therefore, no desire to interest myself in the present cow-protection movement. In fact, even today I am doing my utmost for cow-protection. How that is so is a riddle. What appears in newspapers will not help you to solve it. But I myself am convinced about it. Maybe you have found the solution.

1. Yes Sir, I understand what you mean.

G. I have made a deep study of the problem of goseva. Very few would have visited as many goshalas as I have. I have carefully studied the working of every institution I visited and have even written down my opinion of them in the visitors’ books.

1. Will you then describe the defects that you have noticed in the present cow-protection work?

G. Those are mostly of the nature described in what you read out.

1. Well, then, according to you how can the cow be protected?

G. I will explain all that, but now the time allotted for this interview is over. So please come once again after fixing an appointment. I will certainly grant an interview. We will discuss the problem further then, and if you are really enthusiastic about this work, then either I will co-operate with you or you will co-operate with me and we will do this work together.

II

[After September 8, 1933]

1. If I have properly understood you, then the distinctive feature of your idea of cow-protection is complete adherence to truth and non-violence, absence of communal ill will, utmost forbearance and love, and attention to the economic aspect, that is, increasing the number of dairies and tanneries and thereby the value of cows. Isn’t this your particular point of view regarding goseva?

G. Perfectly true. Those who slaughter cows are ignorant people. Their ignorance cannot be removed by killing them. To remove their ignorance efforts of a different kind, love and sympathy, are required. And from the economic point of view also, there is no other way but to increase the value of cows.

1. Surely it is not your view that, while doing all this, we need not share or try to preserve the peculiar religious sentiment, that is, the feeling of reverence for cows?

G. No, no. on the contrary, this sentiment or feeling of reverence will be kept alive and preserved only by implementing all the items in my plan of goseva.

1. If we accept your idea, what should we do in future for the progress of the work? Would you suggest a yearly or three-yearly plan?

G. Whether you have a yearly or a three-yearly plan, you must do these things:

1. Stress should be laid on consumption of cow’s milk and consumption of other milk should be stopped;

2. efforts should be made to utilize all the parts of the dead body of a cow and to see that no part is wasted, and propaganda should be carried on in this regard;

3. efforts should be made to improve the breed of cows;

4. the cow’s yield of milk should be improved, etc.

1. Do you expect goseva workers who are engaged in these activities to work also for removal of untouchability and for Hindu-Muslim unity?

G. Not at all. It would be enough if they realize the wider significance of goseva. Much can be done through such awareness itself. It would only mean that you had taken up one special aspect of goseva. It is in this sense that I claim to be doing goseva work while working for the removal of untouchability.

1. If we wish to work in the manner suggested by you, what help or co-operation from you can we expect?

G. I believe that certain virtues are essential for public workers. If you or anybody from among you pass that test, then I can free them from financial worries.

1. Do you think it necessary that a paper like Harijan should be started for this work?

G. To start a newspaper is the next step, or rather the last step. First of all an organization should start functioning, inspired by a particular ideal. Only then would it be proper to start a paper. That has been my attitude in regard to Harijan.

1. At present we lay great stress on the unification of all institutions engaged in goseva. How far do you approve of this?

G. It is a very difficult task, but I totally approve of it. If you succeed in it, I will congratulate you.

[From Gujarati]
Goseva, pp. 5-9

470. WAS IT COERCIVE?

In the current number of The Modern Review, amongst the notes which are always worth reading, there are some paragraphs on my most recent fast\(^1\). The writer of these notes quotes the following from my letter\(^2\) to the authorities dated 14th August last and then remarks\(^3\):

\[\ldots\] But we . . . are constrained to observe that, though fasts undertaken solely for one’s own purification and consolation are the exclusive concern of the individual fasting, fasts undertaken directly or indirectly to bring about political or social changes have coercive effect, even though coercion may not be intended. Like other coercion, this sort of unintended coercion . . . does not lead to universally sincere conduct and lasting reform.

1 From August 16 to 23, 1933
2 Vide “Letter to Home Secretary, Government of Bombay”, 14-8-1933.
3 Only extracts are reproduced here.
I propose to deal with this criticism because it affects a matter that is by no means closed. Fasting has been for years past an integral part of my life and I may have to resume it whether outside or inside prison walls. I cannot, therefore, write too often on the science of fasting, if I may use the sacred word ‘science’ in connection with my fasts. It is necessary to write on this matter as well for those who would thoughtlessly imitate me, as for those who criticize me sometimes without being in possession of full data.

With much of what the writer says I can readily agree. I do admit that my fast of September\(^1\) did unfortunately coerce some people into action which they would not have endorsed without my fast. I do admit also that my last fast coerced the Government into releasing me. I admit, too, that such coercion can and does sometimes lead to insincere conduct. This is about the extent of my agreement.

These admissions do not cut at the very root of fasts. They only show that there is great need for caution and that special qualifications are necessary for those who would resort to fasting as a method of reform or securing justice.

In any examination of moral conduct, the intention is the chief ingredient. Being concerned with the morality of my action, I asserted that the intention behind the fast was not to exert coercion or pressure upon the Government. I wanted the Government to take me at my word and let me die in peace, if they could not see the justice of granting me the facilities I desired. The production of my letter would have absolved them from the charge of heartlessness, if I had died in prison. I did, indeed, know that my fast was likely, in spite of the declaration of my intention to the contrary, to influence Government to some extent. But one may not be deflected from the right course for fear of possible but unintended consequences. If one were to be so deterred it could be shown that hardly any great action could be undertaken.

To make my meaning clearer, let me take the September fast. It is a better illustration for examination seeing that it was unconnected with the Government. It was \textit{intended} to influence both the caste and the Harijan Hindus. But there the intention was most decidedly not to induce, irrespective of merits, the decision I desired, but it was to stir the Hindus to action on my submission. The intention was completely fulfilled and to that extent the fast was not, therefore, from the practical standpoint, open to objection. That it went beyond the intention and coerced some people into giving a decision against their conviction was unfortunate. But such conduct is of daily occurrence in the ordinary affairs of life. People do not always act independently of others or of surrounding circumstances. But I am able to say that vast majority of people concerned with the Pact would not accept it without a full and free discussion, and that what they accepted was accepted because they considered it to be on the whole just and fair. They did not sacrifice principle for saving my life.

\(^1\) September 20 to 26. 1932.

And now whilst I am on the Pact I may observe parenthetically that, if any injustice was done, it is not yet beyond repair. If injustice can be proved to the satisfaction of the parties concerned, it is not too late to redress it. And I need hardly give the assurance that I should regard it as my sacred duty to exert myself to the best of my ability in helping to secure redress of any real injustice.

To revert to the issue under examination, I may say that I began my experiments in fasting on any large scale as an instrument of reform in 1913. I had fasted often enough before, but not in the manner of 1913. My definite opinion is that the general result of my numerous fasts was without doubt beneficial. They invariably quickened the conscience of the people interested in and sought to be influenced by those fasts. I am not aware of any injustice having been perpetrated through those fasts. If Bengal proves injustice, it will be an exception. In no case was there any idea of exercising coercion on anyone. Indeed, I think that the word coercion would be a misnomer for the influence that was exerted by the fasts under criticism. Coercion means some harmful force used against a person who is expected to do something desired by the user of the force. In the fasts in question, the force used was against myself. Surely, force of self-suffering cannot be put in the same category as the force of suffering caused to the party sought to be influenced. If I fast in order to awaken the conscience of an erring friend whose error is beyond question, I am not coercing him in the ordinary sense of the word.

The writer of the notes says that there can be fasts that have no “coercive effect”, but if the expression ‘coercive effect’ can be lawfully used for my fasts, then in that sense, all fasts can be proved to have that effect to a greater or less extent. The fact is that all spiritual fasts always influence those who come within the zone of their influence. That is why spiritual fasting is described as tapas. And all tapas invariably exerts purifying influence on those in whose behalf it is undertaken.

1 The reference is to the fast undertaken to atone for the moral lapse on the part of an inmate of the Phoenix Ashram.

Of course, it is not to be denied that fasts can be really coercive. Such are fasts to attain a selfish object. A fast undertaken to wring money from a person or for fulfilling some such personal end would amount to the exercise of coercion or undue influence. I would unhesitatingly advocate resistance of such undue influence. I have myself successfully resisted it in the fasts that have been undertaken or threatened against me. And if it is argued that the dividing line between a selfish and an unselfish end is often very thin, I would urge that a person who regards the end of a fast to be selfish or otherwise base should resolutely refuse to yield to it, even though the refusal may result in the death of the fasting person. If people will cultivate the habit of disregarding fasts which in their opinion are taken for unworthy ends, such fasts will be robbed of the taint of coercion and undue influence. Like all human institutions, fasting can be both legitimately and illegitimately used. But as a great weapon in the armoury of satyagraha, it cannot be given up because of its possible abuse. Satyagraha has been designed as an effective substitute for violence. This use is in its infancy and, therefore, not yet perfected. But as the author of modern satyagraha I cannot give up any of its manifold uses without forfeiting my claim to handle it in the spirit of a humble seeker.

_Harijan_, 9-9-1933

471. LETTER TO V. S. SRINIVASA SASTRI

‘PARNAKUTI’,

September 9, 1933

MY DEAR BROTHER,

I like your letter.¹

¹ On September 4, the addressee had among other things written: “I was touched by your reply. It was full and reasoned. Neither of us forms an opinion in a hurry or drops it in a hurry. But there is a satisfaction in knowing the other side. In all circumstances, we shall carefully understand and make allowances for each other. . . . I plead for Congress being freed from your rule. If you wait for its consent to the course, a very long delay is inevitable. Grant the freedom immediately. Must you, like the British Raj, put off the consummation till it becomes inevitable?”
I want you to continue to strive with me and believe, as Gokhale used to believe of me, that whilst I often appeared to be uncompromising, I had a compromising and accommodating nature. I have always prized the certificate that he gave me and have endeavoured to live up to it. If the freedom that you desire for the Congress was in my giving, I assure you that I would give it today, but it is not such a simple performance. When at Patna I surrendered all powers to the Swaraj Party, Motilalji handsomely admitted that, though I was always ready to give, the party was only then to take them. The fact is that I do not want power. I look upon it as a privileged service. The moment I feel that I can get out of it to the benefit of the Congress, I will not fail. However, you may depend upon me that I shall strain every nerve to adopt your advice. A great deal will depend upon Jawaharlal, whom I expect here on Saturday.

Love.

M. K. GANDHI

Letters of Srinivasa Sastri, pp. 264-5

472. LETTER TO DHIRU C. JOSHI

September 9, 1933

CHI. DHIRU,

I would be happier if you write with ink and improve your handwriting. Pay careful attention to your studies. Write a letter to Chhaganlal and send it to Rama who will pass it on to him along with her own.

Take plenty of exercise. Write to me regularly.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5813

---

1 At the All-India Congress Committee meeting held in September 1925.
2 Addressee’s father and mother
3 ibid.
473. LETTER TO BHAGWANJI A. MEHTA

September 9, 1933

BHAISHRI BHAGWANJI,

You have done well in going to Rangoon. I hope your trip will bear fruit and there will be complete understanding among the brothers.¹

Vandemataram from

MOHANDAS

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5818. Also C.W. 3041. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

474. LETTER TO MAGANLAL P. MEHTA

September 9, 1933

CHI. MAGANLAL²,

I had hoped to get a letter from you and Manjula³. She must have got my previous letter. I had written it to the Mogul Street address.

I enclose Jakibeans⁴ letter, which I received today. Think over it and reply to her.

Write to me a detailed letter. I can work well enough now. How is your business? Do you continue your study? Do you go out for walks? Urmila⁵ must have grown quite a bit now. I would be very happy indeed if an understanding is reached.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5819. Also C.W. 3042. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

¹ The reference is to the dispute among the sons of Dr. Pranjivan Mehta over their ancestral property; vide also the following item.
² Youngest son of Dr. Pranjivan J. Mehta
³ Addressee’s wife
⁴ Jayakunwar Doctor, addressee’s sister
⁵ Addressee’s daughter
475. LETTER TO BHAGWANJI P. PANDYA

Saturday, September 9, 1933

CHI. BHAGWANJI,

I had both your letters. You do not seem to have received mine. I am sure by and by you will decide to stay permanently in Vadaj. For the present, if you find it convenient you may stay in the Parsi bungalow and cook your own meals. If you find a Harijan who can cook to your taste, train him. Do your work with due regard for your health. I have also explained to Chimanlal that it should not be at the cost of health. If Liladhar himself treats Shanti, I am helpless. There will be no harm, however, if he has the necessary knowledge. Write to me regularly. I shall be leaving for Bombay next Thursday or Friday.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI BHAGWANJI
C/O DR. LILADHAR DHARAMSHI
OLD VADAJ, AHMEDABAD

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 362. Courtesy: Bhagwanji P. Pandya

476. LETTER TO MAHENDRA V. DESAI

September 9, 1933

CHI. MANU¹.

I got your letter. It is better to use pen for writing. I think I owed you a letter. And now you will owe me one. You seem to be making good progress in your study.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 3159. Courtesy: Valji G. Desai

477. LETTER TO DUDHIBEHN V. DESAI

September 9, 1933

CHI. DUDHIBEHN,

I got your letter. I am all right. I will go to Bombay next week. You will find herewith letters for the five boys. I hope when Kusum

¹ Eldest son of Valji G. Desai comes over there she will keep good health. You are doing right in looking after all our children [of the Ashram]. That is just the right thing for us to do.

Valji is in Nasik Road Central Jail. He keeps good health. I have heard that all the prisoners are well. Write to me from time to time.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 3135. Courtesy: Valji G. Desai

478. LETTER TO MADALASA BAJAJ

_Scember 9, 1933_

CHI. MADALASA,

I got your letter. You should not be afraid that you will be a burden on Vinoba. It is a teacher’s duty that he should help a pupil to overcome his or her shortcomings. If you were perfect, why would you require a teacher’s help?

Why are you so much afraid of getting your hair cut? Like grass it will grow again. I have seen the hair of many girls, who had it cut, grow even longer than it was before. If, therefore, you are not very much in love with your hair, get it cut. As for your dress, you don’t require much change except that you should wear shorts. The dress for a girl like you can easily be made comfortable. But we shall meet shortly now.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

[From Gujarati]
_Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad_, p. 315

479. LETTER TO BIPIN BIHARI VARMA

_Scember 9, 1933_

BHAI BIPIN,

I have your letter. I am pained to learn of your illness. May God grant you quick recovery. As for the money, talk over with Brijkishorebabu. I have not yet made up my mind. Write to me again if I am still out. I am sending your letter to Brijkishorebabu.

Blessings from

BAPU

SIT. BIPIN BHARI VARMA, BAR-AT-LAW
SHAKARPUR P.O. NARKATIA GANJ
CHAMPARAN

From a photostat of the Hindi: C.W. 9669

480. DISCUSSION WITH A FRIEND

[Before September 10, 1933]

Don’t lose heart. Of course I can understand your deep sentiment.

But how much you suffered!

Oh, it was the body that suffered, besides I had invited the suffering myself. When God creates for us a situation involving suffering He also gives us the strength to bear it. It would surely be painful for me if I did not act on His prompting to undertake a fast. This is not a new thing in my life.

But what about [the risk to] your life?

The path of life is not straight and smooth. It has so many turns and twists, so many ups and downs. It is not like a railway track on which, once released, the train simply goes on.

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbandhu, 10-9-1933

---

1 This and the following two items are extracted from Chandrashankar Shukla’s “Weekly Letter”. This appeared under the sub-title, “God’s Insurance”.

VOL. 61: 27 APRIL, 1933- 7 OCTOBER, 1933 383
GANDHIJI: If in order to keep up and strengthen one’s faith in God man is called upon to undergo this much trouble, he should be prepared to do so.

A GIRL: Should prayers be compulsory or voluntary?

G. Is eating compulsory or voluntary?

A GIRL: one cannot do without it.

G. In that case, we should not be able to do without prayer too. Just as our body cannot grow without food, our atman cannot grow without prayer. Just as food is the nourishment for our body, prayer is the nourishment for our atman. Without prayer the atman becomes lustreless. How can we say that it is killed? For, the Bhagavad Gita tells us that the atman is deathless. But atman may be deluded. There are countless people in the world who do not pray, they are as good as lost. He who is not conscious of the atman is only an ignorant fool.

Prayer can never be said to be compulsory. It can be only voluntary. If anyone insists on making prayer compulsory, it will result in hypocrisy. But we must make it compulsory of our own accord. It is not one’s duty to eat. One can do without eating for a while. One can never eat when one has already eaten too much. But one can never have too much of prayers. We must make prayer so obligatory for ourselves that we can never do without it. If you girls resolve that you would not tell a lie even if you get a kingdom in return, would it be called compulsory or voluntary? What if you have decided on your own and made it a rule to offer your prayers at 4 o’clock in the morning and at 7.30 in the evening —even at the instance of the elders? In such matters we must be hard on ourselves. You can pray only if you have made such a rule. Nothing in the world happens without a law of its own.

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbandhu, 10-9-1933

---

1 This appeared under the sub-title, “Should Prayers be Compulsory or Voluntary?” C. S. Shukla had reported that in answer to a question put by one of the girls as to why he went on fast, Gandhi ji was explaining the significance of his recent three fasts.
482. ADVICE TO A STUDENT

[Before September 10, 1933]

I am asking you to spin for half an hour every day. Do you think it is too much? Suppose you spin only enough to bring you one pice. If you multiply it by 30 crores it would mean 30 crore pice. How much would it amount to in terms of rupees in a year? The national wealth of this poor country would increase to that extent and the problem of poverty would be largely solved. This is not asking too much from you.

[From Gujarati]
Harijanbandhu, 10-9-1933

483. WHAT SHOULD A BRAHMIN DO?

A Maharashtrian writes:

I hope not many persons have had the experience that this Brahmin has had. Of course, no one should have it. Anyone who is qualified for a job should get one. There should be no discrimination in this regard, on the basis of caste, varna or religion. It should be easy for any person belonging to this country to find himself a job, or practise a profession here.

This represents the ideal. Ideas of ‘high’ and ‘low’ are deep-rooted in our country and hence caste, varna and religion are given greater attention than merit or demerits. Hence it is not surprising that Brahmins are not given employment where there is a ban on their recruitment. Unfortunate incidents will persist, because of our sins and the rot that has entered our religion. We should, therefore, suffer them in a spirit of atonement.

But then, why should one who wishes to observe the dharma ordained for a Brahmin look for employment? Those who profess to be Brahmins, should spread Brahmaidya amongst the people and for livelihood depend upon religiously-inclined patrons. A Brahmin

1 Who had approached Gandhiji after the evening prayers. This appeared under the sub-title, “The Price of an Autograph”.
2 The letter is not translated here. The correspondent had pointed out that an educated gentleman had failed to obtain employment because of his being a Brahmin.
3 Knowledge of Brahman.
who is out to seek employment should find true consolation in the practice of his own dharma, so that he will have no cause for despair.

I hope I will not be criticized on the ground that I who assert that varnadharma has ceased to exist, take refuge in this system when faced with a difficult situation. This is because, to say that varnadharma has disappeared does not imply that no one should observe it. Anyone who believes in it ought to observe it studiously as far as he is personally involved. The fact that this Brahmin claims to be one suggests that he believes in varnadharma. Hence, I would advise him to observe it and give up the lure of employment.

Even in these difficult times, individual Brahmans have rendered no mean service to the country. Compared with others, the sacrifice of Brahmins is indeed greater. However, the supreme sacrifice on the part of Brahmans will be to give up all pursuit of wealth such as employment, etc. The Brahmin’s dharma could shine only by paramartha\(^1\). If the Brahmans understood the idea behind varnadharma and acted accordingly, it could easily be revived. Hence my advice to this Brahmin and to those in a similar plight is that they should become worthy of practising their Brahmin dharma, act accordingly and give up the lure of wealth.

[From Gujarati]

_Harijanbandhu, 10-9-1933_

484. CONGRATULATIONS

Both caste Hindus and Harijans of Vina deserve to be congratulated on having resolved the differences and the internal disputes which had arisen between them and on having ended the boycott of Harijans. I hope the harmonious relationship will endure. I also compliment the Harijan Sevak Sangh on its successful efforts.

A similar atmosphere of tension and bitterness seems to have been generated in Bhalada. As I write this, I have no information whether or not a settlement has been reached there. I hope the people have been reconciled there too.

Such quarrels are a disgrace to us. In every village the number of our Harijan brothers and sisters is very small compared to the rest of the population. To persecute them is like engaging an army to \(^1\) Pursuit of the the highest values fight ants. To suspect Harijans or to implicate them in the death or disease of cattle, is nothing but superstition. It might be that some Harijans were involved, but beating or boycotting them will not make them give up the practice, but by having love for them, by spreading knowledge amongst them, by treating them well and by regarding them as our brothers and sisters, it is likely that they will overcome the habit. In other words, the only royal road to make Harijans real children of God (Hari) is by abolishing untouchability wholly.

[From Gujarati]

_Harijanbandhu, 10-9-1933_

485. LETTER TO MADHAVDAS AND KRISHNA KAPADIA

_September 10, 1933_

CHI. MADHAVDAS AND KRISHNA,

I got the letters of you both. Happiness and unhappiness are a part of our lot, as heat and cold are. One day we may be owning a motor-car and the next day we may have to go walking on foot. Why need that make us unhappy? Never lose courage and patience. They are one’s real wealth. We hope to arrive in Mani Bhavan on Friday evening.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

_SHRI MADHAVDAS GOKULDAS_

_SHAMJI SAVAJ’S CHAWL_

_MANORDAS STREET_

_FORT, BOMBAY_

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./XXII

VOL. 61: 27 APRIL, 1933- 7 OCTOBER, 1933 387
486. LETTER TO CHANDRAKANTA

September 10, 1933

CHI. KANTA,

I have written to Brother about you. I can understand your thirst for learning. But the question before me is where and how to find the money for such a purpose at the present time?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: Chandrakanta Papers. Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library

487. MESSAGE TO WORLD FELLOWSHIP OF FAITHS

[Before September 11, 1933]¹

What message can I send through the pen if I am not sending any through the life I am living?

The Hindu, 12-9-1933

488. MESSAGE TO SWADESHI EXHIBITION AND BAZAAR ²

[Before September 11, 1933]³

If women do not uphold the cause of swadeshi, what can men alone do? your exhibition is organized by women. It must therefore be well ordered and well decorated.

The Hindu, 12-9-1933

¹ This message was reported under the date-line: “Chicago, September 11, 1933”.
² Organised by the Gujarat and Broach branches of All-India Women’s Conference
³ The message was published under the date-line: “Ahmedabad, September 11, 1933”.
489. LETTER TO ANASUYABEHN SARABHAI

September 11, 1933

CHI. ANASUYABEHN,

I had written you a letter specially but you have not acknowledged it so far. I hope it has not gone astray. In it I had asked you about Shrimati’s brother\(^1\), a barrister. Send me a telegram if you have not got the letter. This should reach you tomorrow morning.

I have received Gulazarilal’s\(^2\) letters. Since I shall be seeing him in Bombay I have not answered. I had earlier written to him to come over if the matter was urgent. Otherwise Bombay seemed a suitable place in all respects.

Pass on the enclosed letter to the children.

I am well.

I hope to reach Bombay on Friday.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: S. N. 32798

490. LETTER TO VIYOGI HARI

September 11, 1933

BHAI VIYOGI HARI,

Your letter. We must, first of all, find out the rules of the tramway. The problem is quite simple if it is only a matter of clothing. Even otherwise we have to teach Harijans the rules of cleanliness. The tramway authorities have no right to ask anyone to disclose his identity, hence neither a Harijan nor anyone else is obliged to answer the question. I shall certainly write for Harijan Sevak when I have the time.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI VIYOGI HARI
SERVANTS OF UNTOUCHABLES SOCIETY
BIRLA MILLS, DELHI

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1094

1 Gunottam Hutheesingh, vide also “Letter to Jawaharlal Nehru”, 3-9-1933.
2 Gulzarilal Nanda, Secretary of the Ahmedabad Labour Association
3 Hindi poet and editor of Harijan Sevak
491. LETTER TO RAMA DEVI CHOWDHARY

September 11, 1933

Dear Sister,

Your letter to hand. Your work seems to be proceeding well. May it progress thus. Keep writing to me.

Blessings from

BAPU

Shri Rama Devi
Servants of Untouchables Society
Cuttack

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 2783

492. TALK WITH A JAPANESE MONK

[September 12, 1933]

You can help in several ways. Every country must attain its own freedom. But those who are indebted to India can do her service in many ways.

I am not a preacher. Rather, I am a man of action. I can only show you how to work. This spinning-wheel is a wheel of upasana and also a wheel of action. When you ply this wheel, you work and pray at one and the same time. Here is work for you. This I recommend to you. Look at the yarn it spins. When you have mastered this, I shall show you some other work. I teach only action. And there is no doubt about this. Learning to spin also means that you should know cleaning and carding cotton. Then you can claim to have joined the charkha movement. This is enough for the time being.

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbandhu, 17-9-1933

1 Wife of Gopabandhu Chowdhary
2 This appeared under the title “Charkha—the wheel of Action”.
3 From Gandhi:1915-1948——A Detailed Chronology
4 The Japanese monk was eager to serve India and had asked for instruction.
5 Prayer
493. STATEMENT TO THE PRESS

September 14, 1933

As a rule, during my long course of public service, the next moment’s step has been clear before me, but since my unexpected release from prison on August 23 last, darkness has surrounded me. The path of duty has, therefore, not been clear to me. My present state of health is such that it may yet take several weeks for me to regain my lost strength.

To seek imprisonment as soon as I was physically fit, or to restrain myself for the interrupted year of imprisonment was the question before me.

After hard praying and thinking, I have come to the conclusion that up to the termination of the period of my sentence, that is, up to August 3 next, I must not court imprisonment by offering aggressive civil resistance. This, however, in no way affects the advice given in the statement issued by me after the informal conference at Poona. That I have to suspend action for myself is unfortunate but inevitable.

My release has placed me in a most embarrassing position, but as a satyagrahi, that is, as a humble seeker of Truth, somehow or other it offends my sense of propriety to court imprisonment in the circumstances created by my discharge. Whatever the motive behind it, I may not quarrel with my release. I must examine act on its merits. It appears to me to be petty to force the Government to re-arrest me by taking aggressive action during the unexpired term of imprisonment, unless extraordinary circumstances, which I cannot foresee, arise compelling me to revise my decision. There is no room for smallness in civil resistance.

This self-imposed restraint is a bitter cup. When I said at my trial after arrest that to remain outside and be a helpless witness of the devastating and demoralizing effect of the Ordinance Rule was an unbearable agony, I stated a simple and unvarnished fact. That agony is no less today than it was on August 4. But I must bear it.

I cannot be a willing party to an undignified cat-and-mouse game if Government have any such thing in contemplation. Therefore, when and if I am arrested again and denied Harijan service,

1 Vide “Speech at Leaders’ Conference, Poona-I”, 12-7-1933 and “Speech at Leaders’ Conference, Poona-II”, 12-7-1933.
2 On. August 4; vide “Trial at Poona”, 4-8-1933.
I would not hesitate, if I had the inner urge, to undertake a fast to the finish which would not be broken even if Government released me, as they did on August 23 last, when the danger point had been reached.

I must state the limitations of my self-restraint in clear terms. Whilst I can refrain from aggressive civil resistance, I cannot, so long as I am free, help guiding those who will seek my advice, and preventing national movement from running into wrong channels. It is an ever-growing belief with me that truth cannot be found by violent means.

The attainment of national independence is to me a search after truth. Terrorist methods, whether adopted by an oppressor or his victim can, I am convinced, never be effectively answered by violent resistance but only by civil resistance.

I would, therefore, be guilty of disloyalty to my creed, if I attempted to put greater restraint on myself than I have adumbrated in this statement. If then Government leave me free, I propose to devote this period to Harijan service and if possible to such constructive activities as my health may permit.

It is needless to repeat here that peace is as much a part of my being as civil resistance. Indeed a civil resister offers resistance only when peace becomes impossible. Therefore, so far as I am concerned and so long as I am free, I shall make all endeavours in my power to explore every possible avenue of an honourable peace.

The Bombay Chronicle, 15-9-1933

494. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

‘PARNAKUTI’, POONA,

September 14, 1933

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

I am glad you have written so fully and frankly.

When, on my return from London at the end of 1931, I found you to have been suddenly snatched away from me,¹ I felt the separation keenly. I was, therefore, most anxious to meet you and exchange views.²

¹ The addressee was arrested on December 26, 1931, while on his way to see Gandhiji.
² Gandhiji and Jawaharlal Nehru met and had long discussions from September 10.
With much of what you have said in your letter I am in complete agreement. The experience gained after the karachi Congress has, if possible, strengthened my faith in the main resolution and the economic programme referred to by you. I have no doubt in my mind that our goal can be no less than ‘Complete Independence’. I am also in whole-hearted agreement with you when you say that without a material revision of vested interests the condition of the masses can never be improved. I believe, too, though I may not go as far as you do, that before India can become one homogeneous entity, the princes will have to part with much of their power and become popular representatives of the people over whom they are ruling today. I can corroborate from first-hand experience much of what you say about the Round Table Conference. Nor have I the slightest difficulty in agreeing with you that in these days of rapid intercommunication and a growing consciousness of the oneness of all mankind, we must recognize that our nationalism must not be inconsistent with progressive internationalism. India cannot stand in isolation and unaffected by what is going on in other parts of the world. I can, therefore, go the whole length with you and say that ‘we should range ourselves with the progressive forces of the world’. But I know that though there is such an agreement between you and me in the enunciation of ideals, there are temperamental differences between us. Thus you have emphasized the necessity of a clear statement of the goal, but having once determined it, I have never attached importance to the repetition. The clearest possible definition of the goal and its appreciation would fail to take us there if we do not know and utilize the means of achieving it. I have, therefore, concerned myself principally with the conservation of the means and their progressive use. I know that if we can take care of them, attainment of the goal is assured. I feel too that our progress towards the goal will be in exact proportion to the purity of our means. If we can give an ocular demonstration of our uttermost truthfulness and non-violence, I am convinced that our statement of the national goal cannot long offend the interests which your letter would appear to attack. We know that the princes, the zamindars, and those who depend for their existence upon the exploitation of the masses, would cease to fear and distrust us, if we could but ensure the innocence of our methods. We do not seek to coerce any. We seek to convert them. This method may appear to be long, perhaps too long, but I am convinced that it is the shortest.
In the main I agree with your interpretation of Sjt. Aney’s instructions and my note upon them. I am quite clear in my mind that had those instructions not been issued, the whole movement of civil resistance would have collapsed through growing internal weakness; for Congressmen were deluding themselves into the belief that there were organizations effectively functioning to which they could look for guidance, when, as a matter of fact, under the organized terrorism which the Ordinance Rule means, organized functioning of Congress Committees had become impossible. A false belief in the functioning of organizations, rendered illegal and largely impotent, was fast producing a demoralization which had to be arrested. There is no such thing as demoralization in civil resistance properly applied. You have said rightly that after all “civil disobe-dience is essentially an individual affair”. I go a step further and say that so long as there is one civil resister offering resistance, the move-ment cannot die and must succeed in the end. Individual civil resisters do not need the aid of an organization. After all an organization is nothing without the individuals composing it. Sjt. Aney’s instructions were, therefore, I hold, an affective answer to the Ordinances and if only men and women belonging to the Congress will appreciate the necessity of those instructions with all their implications, the Ordinances will be rendered nugatory, at least so far as the resisters are concerned. They can form a nucleus around which an army of invincible civil resisters can be built up. Nothing ill Sjt. Aney’s instructions or in my note would warrant the supposition that they preclude organized action by Congressmen in any shape or form.

I would like to warn you against thinking that there is no fundamental difference between individual caviol resistance and mass civil resistance. I think that the fundamental difference is implied in your own admission that “it is essentially an individual affair”. The chief distinction between mass civil resistance and individual civil resistance is that in the latter everyone is a complete independent unit and his fall does not affect the others; in mass civil resistance the fall of one generally adversely affects the rest. Again, in mass civil resistance leadership is essential, in individual civil resistance every resister is his own leader. Then again, in mass civil resistance, there is a possibility of failure; in individual civil resistance failure is an impossibility. Finally, a State may cope with mass civil resistance; no State has yet been found able to cope with individual civil resistance.
Nor may much be made of my statement that an organization which feels its own strength can at its own risk adopt mass civil resistance. While, as an opinion, it is unexceptionable, I know that at the present moment there is no organization that can shoulder the burden. I do not want to raise false hopes.

Now about the secret methods. I am as firm as ever that they must be tabooed. I am myself unable to make any exceptions. Secrecy has caused much mischief and if it is not put down with a firm hand, it may ruin the movement. There may be exceptional circumstances that may warrant secret methods. I would forgo that advantage for the sake of the masses whom we want to educate in fearlessness. I will not confuse their minds by leading them to think that under certain circumstances, they may resort to secret methods. Secrecy is inimical to the growth of the spirit of civil resistance. If Congressmen will realize that all property is liable to be confiscated at any moment, they will learn to be utterly independent of it.

I quite agree with you that it is ludicrous for individuals to send notices to the local authorities of their intention to offer a particular form of civil disobedience. We do not want to make a great movement ridiculous. Therefore when civil resistance is offered it should be offered seriously and in an effective manner, in so far as this is possible, in furtherance of the Congress programme.

I notice one gap in your letter. You make no mention of the various constructive activities of the Congress. They became an integral part of the Congress programme that was framed after mature deliberations in 1920. With civil resistance as the background we cannot possibly do without the constructive activities such as communal unity, removal of untouchability and universalization of the spinning-wheel and khaddar. I am as strong as ever about these. We must recognize that whilst the Congressmen can be counted by hundreds of thousands, civil resisters imprisoned have never amounted to more than one lakh at the outside. I feel that there is something radically wrong if paralysis has overtaken the remaining lakhs. There is nothing to be ashamed of in an open confession by those who for any reason whatsoever are unable to join the civil resisters’ ranks. They are also serving the cause of the country and bringing it nearer to the goal who are engaged in any of the constructive activities I have named and several other kindred activities I can add to the list.
Ordinance or no Ordinance, if individual Congressmen and Congresswomen will learn the art of contributing their share to the work of building of the house of independence and realize their own importance, dark as the horizon seems to us, there is absolutely no cause for despair or disappointment.

Finally, if I can say so without incurring the risk of your accusing me of egotism, I would like to say that I have no sense of defeat in me and the hope in me that this country of ours is fast marching towards its goal is burning as bright as it did in 1920; for I have an undying faith in the efficacy of civil resistance. But as you are aware, after full and prayerful consideration, I have decided not to take the offensive during the unexpired period of the sentence of imprisonment that was pronounced against me on the 4th of August last by the court that met in Yeravda Jail. I need not go into the reasons as I have already issued a separate statement about it. This personal suspension, although it may be misunderstood for a while, will show how and when it may become a duty. And if it is a duty, it cannot possibly injure the cause.

Yours,

BAPU

JAWAHARLAL NEHRU
POONA

495. LETTER TO MANIBEHN PATEL

‘PARNAKUTI’, POONA,
September 15, 1933

CHI. MANI,

Since you must be getting letters from Nasik¹ regularly, I did not write any. Now I see that if I had written, you would have got my letters. But let that be. If I am out of prison, I am sure, you will come and see me wherever I may be. I know you will stay in Belgaum for a couple of days and then go to Nasik. I hope you keep good health. I am well. I am leaving for Bombay today. 21st Ahmedabad, 23rd Wardha.

¹ Vallabhbhai Patel was then in Nasik Jail.

Blessings from
BAPU

SMT. MANIBEHN PATEL
CENTRAL PRISON, HINDALAGA
BELGAUM

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro-4: Manibehn Patelne, pp. 107-8

496. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL
ON THE TRAIN FROM POONA TO BOMBAY,
September 15, 1933

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

I got your letter in the train and I am writing this reply immediately. I am going to Bombay. On Wednesday I will go to Ahmedabad. I have to perform two ceremonies¹ there on Thursday. You must have read about that. I expect to reach Wardha on the 23rd. The programme after that will be decided there.

Don’t worry at all about my health. I do take, and will continue to take, the utmost care. I can drink two pounds of milk and eat fruit and vegetables. My weight is 100 pounds. The body is massaged daily. Dr. Dinshaw takes great care of my health. He will come to Bombay also. Premlilabehn literally bathed me in her love. ‘Parnakuti’ has practically become a second home to me. I am very glad that you have continued honey. Should I ask her to send you some? She will be coming to Bombay tomorrow. She frequently visits the place. Aunt² was with me all the time. She is an amazing mixture. There is no doubt about her love, but she always creates difficulties. Jawaharlal’s health is excellent. He has still preserved the qualities of character which his name connotes. He will now go to Lucknow. He stayed in ‘Parnakuti’ with me. He was accompanied by Upadhyaya. Manzar Ali and Professor also were there. Professor had fever, but there is no cause for anxiety. Andrews has remained behind in Poona for two days to have some rest. Devdhar has become very weak. Write a letter inquiring after his health. Shastri is all right now and has returned to Poona. Most probably Chandrashankar will accompany me on my visits. The only difficulty is about his health. Mathuradas also is accompanying. But it is not certain whether he will come to Wardha. Most probably he will accompany up to there. Mirabehn, of course, will be in the party. Prabavati also is with me up to now. I had a long letter from Mahadev. He is fairly well. He reads and spins. Pannalal was in Poona and will now go to Bombay. Kaka also will come to Bombay in two or three days. Ba is quite well. Do the needful about your tooth. Have you kept up the study of Sanskrit? Don’t worry about anything. I have written to Mani and told her that, when she is released, she should go and see you and then see me wherever I am. Kamala Nehru has a cardiac ailment. She is in Lucknow.

¹ Unveiling a statue of Chinubhai Madhavlal and laying the foundation stone of the Sheth Maneklal Jethalal Library; vide “Speech at Ahmedabad I & II”, 21-9-1933.
² Sarojini Naidu

Why should we care whether or not we get any company? Why should one who feels the presence of God need other company? However, you have done right in writing about that, as also about visits.

I have to draw up a tour programme for Harijan work in consultation with Ghanshyamdas (Birla) and Thakkar Bapa.

Anandi is well on the whole. Narahari’s children have been ill for some time. They are being properly looked after and treated. Bablo has gone to live with his aunt. He went on crying till he had his way. Nirmala is all right, and so also Sharda. I get letters from 1 ‘Jawahar’, literally means a jewel.

2 Nehru’s Private Secretary
3 Manzar Ali Sokata, a Muslim leader
4 J. B. Kripalani
5 G. K. Devdhar
6 R. V. Sastri
7 Mathuradas Trikumji
8 Pannalal Jhaveri
9 Vide the preceding item.
10 The addressee was kept alone and the Government had been requested for a companion.
11 Mahadev Desai’s sister
12 Daughter of Chimanlal Shah

398 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATM GANDHI
Anandi. In Bombay I shall be staying in Mani Bhavan, and in Ahmedabad at Ranchhodhbai’s place.

Send for anything you want. Mahadev has taken over charge of making envelopes.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 22-5

497. SOME QUESTIONS

I have several letters from Harijans, lying in my file, putting a number of questions. I take up the most important. Before answering them, I would like to warn correspondents against putting questions for the sake of putting them, or what is worse, of advertising themselves. I would beseech them to avoid the vices or shortcomings of the so-called superior classes or the so-called caste Hindus. I would like the yet very few Harijan workers to be above board, incorruptible and selfless, for they have to shoulder a tremendous burden. Whilst, as I have repeatedly said in these columns, it is the duty of caste Hindus to rid themselves of the curse of untouchability, ultimately the salvation of Harijans will have to come from within. In pursuance of the advice tendered by me, I withhold the names of my correspondents in anticipation of their approval of my action.

The first question I pick up is as follows:

Generally social work is being done in town areas, but practically nothing is being done in the villages, though the latter are admittedly more in need. What is to be done?

I am afraid that what the correspondent says is very largely true. Unfortunately, workers are very few compared to the magnitude of the task before the reformer, and, the majority of workers being town-bred, they are disinclined to go to the villages and settle there.

1 Ranchhodlal Amritlal Shodhan, a mill-owner
2 The addressee used to make envelopes out of waste paper as a hobby.
The Central Board is quite alive to the problem, and effort is being made of penetrate the villages, not without some success. The answer, therefore, to the question, ‘what is to be done’, is that the effort has to be intensified. Village workers have to be found or made and, when once the fear of settling in villages is overcome, the response to the demand for a large number of workers will be much greater than it is today. Given continuance of the effort, success is bound to attend it.

The second question is:

Will it not hasten the removal of untouchability if caste Hindus took Harijans as domestic servants?

This is no new advice. Swami Shraddhanandji used to lay very great emphasis on the necessity of caste Hindus employing Harijans as domestic servants precisely on the same terms as any other. But I fear that receiving Harijans as domestic servants will be, when it becomes at all general, not a spur to the removal of untouchability, but a sign of removal. Nevertheless, it is the duty of every reformer who has got rid of untouchability from his own household to have a Harijan domestic servant. No doubt, for the reformer it would be better still if he would take a Harijan boy or girl, not as a servant, but as a member of his family.

The third question is:

What should Harijans do in the present drive against untouch-ability?

I can only repeat the answer I have given so often before. They should carry on vigorous internal reform among themselves and remove every cause of reproach.

The fourth question is:

In two villages of Kaira, Harijans have been boycotted by caste Hindus because they asked for adequate remuneration for carrying carcasses. What should the Harijans do in such cases?

I am happy to be able to say that in one of these villages, owing to the efforts of workers of the local Society, the boycott was lifted, and the information as to the other village, at the time of writing this, is that there is every probability of a similar amicable settlement. But assuming that in some villages caste Hindus remain obstinate and persist in boycotting Harijans, if the latter have any self-consciousness they would persist in their refusal to render service without adequate remuneration, and, if the boycott proves to be too hot for them, they would quietly vacate the offending village. I know that this is easier said than done. And I know also that there is not sufficient awakening among the Harijans to induce them to adopt the method suggested by me. But I have also no doubt that the time is coming soon when caste Hindus will have to think a hundred times before resorting to such boycotts.

1 Of the Harijan Sevak Sangh.

The fifth question is:

What has come out of your proposal that there should be an all-India advisory board of Harijans to advise the Servants of Untouchables Society?

The proposal referred to was made by me in Ahmedabad. It had reference to the Provincial Board, but what is true of the Provincial Board is also true of the Central Board. It should be remembered that the advice was given to the Harijans and it is for them to make a move and appoint such committees. I have no doubt that the Central Board and the Provincial organizations will function in a proper manner. Much good can be done through them.

The sixth question is:

Do you know that some temples which had been opened to Harijans were subsequently closed against them? What is your solution?

For the time being, we have to assume that such temples were opened under some sort of coercion or that the trustees have been since coerced into closing them against Harijans. I know one or two instances of the latter kind. My solution in either case is that for the time being we should suffer this deprivation.

The seventh question is:

The temple-entry movement seems to have come to a dead stop. Do you contemplate any move?

I do not think that the temple-entry movement has suffered any such stop as the correspondent suggests. The spectacular part of it is, no doubt, under check, but the effort for opening new temples and re-opening old temples is steadily going forward, as the pages of the Harijan can show.

The eighth question is:

Will you be a party to a modification of the Yeravda Pact, if all the parties to it come to a common understanding?
Naturally the Pact would be modified, but, so far as I am concerned, it can never be modified to the detriment of Harijans.

The ninth question is:

Neither the Bombay Government nor the public are giving effect to the Council resolution as to the opening of public wells to Harijans. Will you advise satyagraha on their part?

In the first place, I have no definite information in the matter. Secondly, I am unable to advise satyagraha, at the present stage at any rate.

The tenth and last question is:

Do you favour the idea of an all-India conference of Harijan leaders for dealing with the question of untouchability?

A thoroughly representative conference cannot fail to be helpful. I should, therefore, welcome the holding of such a conference.

_Harijan_, 16-9-1933

498. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

September 16, 1933

CHI. AMALA¹,

I have your several letters. You must shed this wretched fear of me. Whatever I said and did at the Ashram was said and done in pure love and for your good. Why should you fear me, if you believe what I say? You have therefore no need to avoid me or fear me. I am keeping well in spite of blood-pressure.

Love.

BAPU

¹ A German lady who was taking training at the Ashram for Harijan work. Gandhiji later gave her the Indian name Amala.
499. TALK WITH WOMEN WORKERS

[September 16, 1933]

I have been saying for years now that those who understand must participate in the production of khadi. But the suggestion has not been taken up. Had it been adopted, khadi activity would have now become widespread and we would not have had to face a difficult situation. What would we lose if we span for half an hour every day? But today it seems as though it were a mere waste. Weavers who are willing to use hand-spun yarn do not get it. I had to tell some of them that I would arrange to get some for them. But if they could not get it, they may use mill yarn. I did not want them to lose their trade. This half an hour of spinning demanded of you should be regarded as easy. If people do not talk flatteringly when you go to sell them khadi, you should put up with their harshness. You deserve it. But if you do as I say, there would be no question of having to hear harsh things from them.

Q. When women used to spin, there was no arrangement for weaving.
That is true. It was brought to my notice. But what the women used to spin was no yarn at all—what about that? If women were to spin ropes, what should the weavers do? We have so many weaving centres. So, the women themselves are to blame since they did not attempt to learn spinning.

[From Gujarati]
_Harijanbandhu_, 24-9-1933

500. ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

[Before September 16, 1933]

Happiness and unhappiness always follow us like cold and sunshine. What is there to be happy or unhappy about having a

---

1 This appeared in Chandrashankar Shukla’s “Weekly Letter” under the title “The Easy Way”. Two women workers had come to greet Gandhiji on his 65th birthday which, according to the Vikram calendar, fell on September 16. One of them had complained about the fall in khadi sales.
2 _ibid._
3 Addressed to different correspondents, these appeared under the subtitle “Some Letters’. This and the following four items are translated from Chandrashankar Shukla’s weekly letter in _Harijanbandhu_, 17-9-1933.
4 The correspondent had written about his financial difficulties.
motor-car one day and having to go on foot the next day? Never give up courage and patience. They are the real wealth.

One’s dharma is to serve in whatever way one can. Happiness and unhappiness are only attitudes of the mind. But what unhappiness can you have? Unhappiness lies in forgetting Ramanama, and you never forget it.

There is no doubt that God has saved you. He wants you to render more service.

What can we do if some shortcomings come to stay in the body, which in any case is surely going to drop some time? But how can we bestow that power of endurance on all young men? The hope of life does not leave even the old, not to speak of poor little children. God is, of course, the saviour of all.

We cannot insist on applying to Harijans what applies to you and me. We have excluded Harijans from our society. Moreover, we should also look to the situation as it obtains today. Barring a few individuals, where is the boycott of schools and colleges to be found? It would, therefore, be gross injustice if we told Harijans that they would get no help if they went to the common schools and colleges.¹

I am already devoting a major portion of my energy to Harijan work. And whether I am in prison or outside, I shall of course continue to do Harijan work till the last moment of my life.

[From Gujarati]

_Harijanbandhu, 17-9-1933_

501. A LETTER

[Before September 17, 1933]

To a certain extent self-criticism is necessary. But I have noticed that some people get into this habit and then they can make no progress.¹ Self-criticism can be useful only in so far as it helps progress. If we are not committing now all the heinous crimes that we

---

¹ The correspondent had fractured his arm.
² This was in reply to a Harijan worker who had asked why Gandhiji helped Harijans secure scholarships for attending schools and colleges which, at one time, he wanted to be boycotted. What follows is the reply to another correspondent, a Harijan leader, who had requested Gandhiji to concentrate his energy on Harijan work.
³ This appeared under the title “The Mark of Bhakti”.
⁴ This was in reply to a Harijan worker who was obsessed with his own shortcomings.
may have committed in the past it would be as good as piling up those crimes if we wrung our soul by brooding over them. I agree that we must publicly acknowledge a major crime. A votary of truth can do nothing less. But owning up of the crime should not leave any burden on one’s mind. Having once washed off the accumulated dross, does one burden oneself with it? But you seem to be doing something of the sort. It is only when truth reveals itself through us that untruth cannot remain hidden from us. But we cannot always find out what untruth is hidden in which part of our being. My sole purpose in writing this is that you must cast off this burden from your mind. That is the mark of bhakti. After having sought protection from God a bhakta would never feel choked. He would not weep over the tought of his past. He would have no worry about the future. He is master of the present; let him mind it. And God has provided him with the key. “Whatever thou doest……dedicate all to me.” If a bhakta could do this much, he can dance with abandon. If you can thus free your mind, all diseases of body and mind will disappear, and we will take service from you to our heart’s content. Please unburden your mind.

[From Gujarati]
Harijanbandhu, 17-9-1933

502. TALK WITH A HARIJAN WORKER

[Before September 17, 1933]

My way of service is altogether different. Anyone who wishes to do first-class work, anyone who wishes to be a pure, true servant, needs must acquire the ability. Ordinarily one may do any work one chooses. Who is there to stop him? But the reason why our work does not make rapid progress is that the workers take it up without training themselves for it.

I am willing to go abroad for training.

1 Devotion.
2 Devotee
3 Bhagavad Gita, IX. 27
4 This appeared under the title “Be Like Nanda”.
5 The Harijan worker was not content with serving through the charkha and wanted to know how he could render immediate service without prior training.
So much expenditure for so little work! Take whatever vocational training is available here. Then we may think of going abroad. And, anyway, how many persons can be sent abroad?

Please let me know what social service I can do.

This includes everything. Cannot one serve while learning to do it? You must acquire the ability. You will not have what you want unless you are worthy of it. There are any number of people rushing about in the name of service; but have they been doing any good to the community? Anyone who wishes to do constructive work, to render true pure service to his community, acts in a different way altogether. If you want people to build up their character, you must acquire the necessary strength. If you cannot settle down to business, take up some employment and do your job honestly. You can serve the community in this manner also. You would have served your community even by creating an impression that no one can be purer than you. Is it a small matter if people could say about a person that his honesty is unlimited? I can cite some instances of honest servants who have been in charge of the management of their employers’ establishments. Employers worship such servants.

I do not want to earn money.

It is not a question of earning money. If you acquire so much prestige that the Hindu community can look upon you as the ideal of an honest Harijan, it will not be a matter of small importance. I have got to say that there have been saints like Nanda among Harijans. Four or five centuries have passed since Nanda’s time, but they still sing his praise. Why can such a person not be born among Harijans today? If it could happen in his age, it can as well happen now. We can attain the goal we seek only if Harijans become like Nanda. As for me, I am carrying on the campaign among caste Hindus for the eradication of untouchability and at the same time telling Harijans what their dharma is.

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbandhu, 17-9-1933

---

1 Nandanar of Chidambaram, one of the 63 Saivite saints of Tamil Nadu
503. ADVICE TO A WORKER

[Before September 17, 1933]

Workers should be like Malaviyaji, like Narayanshastri, Lakshmanshastri, or Shridharshastri Pathak. They should be men whose character is as pure as gold. How can we find workers by publishing advertisements? Such people would memorize and reel off speeches. What use could they be to us? And, should we carry on with counterfeit coins because we cannot have mohurs? It is like building castles in the air. I do not approve of it all. I have never worked in this manner.

Now, how can I all of a sudden assure you that I am going to produce workers?

[From Gujarati]
Harijanbandhu, 17-9-1933

504. TALK TO STUDENTS OF GURUKUL KANGRI

[Before September 17, 1933]

We can serve Harijans only by purifying our character. True purity is required for it. It means that you must do penance. I undertook fasts by way of such penance. It did have some immediate effect. And it should continue for many years. Although generally we should keep purifying our atman the service of Harijans needs special purification on our part. The purer we are, the better we shall serve the Harijans. Even if there is just one pure man he would have an impact. Such a man would be able to work if he goes among the Harijans, and to melt the hearts of even the sanatanists if he were to go to them. I have no doubt at all that more than Harijans, the sanatanists need to be

---

1 This appeared under the title “Qualities of a Worker”. It had been suggested that some paid workers be sent for fighting untouchability through propaganda. Chandrashankar Shukla prefaced the report with the following: “Gandhi ji expects the propagators to have certain qualification, such as religious knowledge and purity of character. He said, ‘Propaganda cannot be a business. It should be a religious mission’. He disapproved the proposal to have paid workers.”
2 Narayanshastri Marathe, popularly known as Swami Kevalananda
3 Tarkateertha, Lakshmanshastri Joshi
4 This appeared under the title “Purity, a worker’s Capital”.
purified. But who can convince an arrogant man? We would go among the sanatanists and persuade them. If they abuse us, we would not abuse them back. We would not retaliate if they resort to violence. We would nurse them if they were ill; if they are strict about observing rules of conduct, we would be stricter. We would acquire a greater knowledge of the scriptures than they may be having. And then we would be able to make an impression upon them. Wiping out untouchability is a hard task. It cannot be achieved while remaining selfish. We have to work with a benevolent outlook. For that purpose we must purify ourselves day after day.

[From Gujarati]

_Harijanbandhu_, 17-9-1933

505. WHAT SHOULD A BRAHMIN DO?

In response to my article under the above heading, the same correspondent who hails from Maharashtra writes again as follows.

Many questions arise out of this letter. It is not that the others do not have to suffer the inconveniences which Brahmins do suffer. Nowadays everyone finds it more or less difficult to get employment. Till now, Brahmins could easily find jobs. That is not the case now. There is no doubt that the others faced earlier the same situation which the Brahmins are or appear to be facing now. Where castes prevail, such rise and fall will always be. Hence it is difficult to satisfy everyone.

At the root of this difficulty lies something, which deserves consideration. The number of jobs will always be limited. The number of candidates will go on increasing with time. Hence the right way seems to be to learn to turn away from jobs, turn towards other occupations and qualify ourselves for these. In attempting such changes, difficulties will certainly be experienced during the transitional period, but the result can only be good. Other countries have had similar experiences and, those who were hitherto confined to jobs have taken to professions.

1 _Vide_ “What should a Brahmin do?”, 10-9-1933
2 The letter is not translated here. The correspondent had argued that Brahmins could not earn livelihood by imparting the knowledge of Brahman as the general public was not interested in it; the only alternative was employment. Brahmins did not expect any privileges while seeking jobs but at the same time they expected that they would not be penalized for being Brahmins.
Another noteworthy point is to cut down our expenses, reduce our family’s as well as our own wants. The need to make our lives simple is becoming more and more obvious to the whole world. There is an English adage recommending ‘plain living and high thinking’. In India, simplicity is not just a virtue, it is part of dharma.

It is imperative that the women in the family also contribute towards the household expenditure to the best of their abilities. Women of the working class, in addition to housekeeping, earn a little bit by their own labour; why should not other women do likewise? If there is a lone earning member in a family and many mouths to feed, the burden on him cannot but be too much. Hence, those Brahmins who find it difficult to secure employment should consider this suggestion also.

[From Gujarati]

_Harijanbandhu, 17-9-1933_

506. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

_Scptember 17, 1933_

CHI. JAMNALAL,

You must have read everything in newspapers. I deliberately omitted to give details in my letters. I hesitate these days to put any burden on you. I did not feel happy, either, that you had to come down from Chikhalda so soon. We will talk now when we meet. I too shall require plenty of rest. Gopi, Gajanan’s 1 wife, will most probably accompany me, and I have also invited one Kisan 2, who is a very good woman. She used to enjoy good health, but recently it has gone down a little. I know that, true to your nature, you will willingly shoulder all this burden, but I will try to see that we become no burden to you.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

[PS.]

Jawaharlal is leaving tonight for Lucknow. He may perhaps come to Wardha later. Jnana must have arrived there now.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2925

---

1 Son of Rameshwards Birla.
2 Kisan Ghumatkar
507. TRIBUTE TO ANNIE BESANT

[September 20, 1933]¹

Whilst the people will thank the Almighty for relieving Dr. Besant from lingering illness by sending to her the Angel of Death, thousands will, at the same time, mourn the event. So long as India lives, the memory of the magnificent services rendered by Dr. Besant will also live. She had endeared herself to India by making it the country of her adoption and dedicating her all to her.

M. K. GANDHI

The Bombay Chronicle, 21-9-1933

508. LETTER TO TOTARAM SANADHYA

RANCHHOD NIVAS, AHMEDABAD,

[September 21, 1933]²

DEAR TOTARAMJI,

I have you letter. Do go to Wardha and before that anywhere else you think necessary. We shall be meeting at Wardha this month. There is no cause to worry about Hariprasad³.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Hindi original: Banarsidas Chaturvedi papers. Courtesy: National Archives of India

509. SPEECH AT AHMEDABAD-I

September 21, 1933

You have obliged me by asking me to perform this noble ceremony. I feel highly honoured in doing it. The President⁴ has left little for me to say. We heard from him the long list of donations by Sir Chinubhai. While listening to it, it struck me that Sir Chinubhai’s donations match the world-famous Parsi donations. Sir Girijaprasad

¹ Dr. Annie Besant died on September 20, 1933.
² The addressee has supplied the date “September 28”. However, Gandhiji was at Ranchhod Nivas only on September 21.
³ Adopted son of addressee
⁴ On unveiling the statue of Sir Chinubhai Madhavlal, Baronet ⁵ Manibhai Chaturbhai Shah, President, Ahmedabad Municipality
said that Sir Chinubhai’s donations were not meant for the members of one community or religion, but for all. Their benefit was available to all the citizens of Ahmedabad. Sir Chinubhai did all he could to encourage the education which he himself had and which helped him rise in life. The President reminded me that it was Sir Chinubhai who had presented me the address when I first arrived in Ahmedabad.\(^1\) The picture is still vivid before my eyes. In donating this statue to the citizens of Ahmedabad, Sir Girijaprasad has given us a glimpse of his filial devotion. I only say “a glimpse” because, as Sir Girijaprasad has rightly observed, one can never completely discharge one’s debt to one’s parents. Let us all hope—and he has certainly given us reason to hope—that the illustrious son of Sir Chinubhai earns as much as the father and equally liberally gives it away.

Once on an important occasion I had said that the rich have right to earn and accumulate wealth. This world will always call some to adventure. It cannot be stopped. I say then, let these people earn much but let them spend it as if it belonged to the people and give of it generously to others. One of my cherished hopes is that in our country there should be no ill will, no conflict, between the rich and the poor, that both may realize their own dharma and adhere to it. In the world a fierce battle is going on between capital and labour, between the rich and the poor. May our country be saved from this strife. One man’s wish cannot achieve it. But if many cherished the wish we could achieve this ideal. Through Sir Girijaprasad, I wish to convey to the rich people of Ahmedabad—and by the grace of God there are many here—that they should enhance the legacy left by Sir Chinubhai. It is up to the rich to reach the ideal which I have placed before them. It is my ambition that Ahmedabad may set an example for India, in fact for the whole world.

Before performing the noble ceremony of unveiling the statue, I may say one thing. This statue was long ago but because of your desire that it should be unveiled either by Sardar or by me, its installation has had to wait.\(^2\) I was released unexpectedly and when the request came to me, I could not turn it down. I think it is by the grace of God that I have the opportunity to perform this good deed. How

---

\(^1\) Vide “Speech at Reception by Ahmedabad Citizens”, 2-2-1915.
\(^2\) The Bombay Chronicle, 22-9-1933, here reports: Mahatmaji felt acutely for the absence of Sardar Vallabhbhai and said it would have been more desirable if this grand and important ceremony had been performed by his hands.
can I thank you all—men and women who have come here to demonstrate your respect for Sir Chinubhai? You should show due regard for your fellow citizens who have rendered service to the city. May all the citizens of Ahmedabad, rich as well as poor, live in happiness. This is my prayer to God.

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbandhu, 1-10-1933

510. SPEECH AT AHMEDABAD-II

September 21, 1933

You honoured me by asking me to perform a noble ceremony the first thing in the morning. And now you are asking me to perform another such ceremony. I thank the Municipality as well as the citizens of Ahmedabad for the double honour they have conferred on me. My task has now become a little difficult. In the first place, I would like to express my opinion about the suggestion made by Bhai Rasiklal. I heard only this morning about the proposal to associate my name with this library. There is, I think, no institution with which I have allowed my name to be associated. I have decided to allow nothing of the kind. With apologies to the donors, and without hurting their feelings, I would like to say that ever since I entered public life, or rather I was fortunately thrown into it, I have always either prevented or tried to prevent, whom-ever I could so advise, from associating their or their elders’ names with the donations. I do not mean to say that it is a sin to associate one’s or one’s elder’s name with a donation. But such a tendency prevails among people and I have seen this temptation leading to ridiculous results. I have therefore been dissuading all whom I could. I have succeeded in some cases, and where I have failed I have accommodated myself and have also accepted such donations. When I do this I don’t mean to sing my own praise or to point out other people’s shortcomings. I only wish you would not press me to act contrary to what I have been doing and advocating. I have no false modesty. I cannot have it while adhering to my principles.

There is another potent reason. I am only instrumental in having these books donated. I did not own them. There is not a single thing

---

1 While laying the foundation-stone of the Maneklal Jethalal Library.
2 Vide the preceding item.
in the Ashram which exclusively belongs to me. Nor am I a trustee. There is another practice I have adhered to, viz., I should not be a trustee for anything that once belonged to me. I had no right to donate these books. But I exercised the moral right that I enjoyed to persuade the trustees and the Ashramites. Hence I am only a medium or say a post office. I delivered the Ashram’s letter to the Municipality. The same is true in the case of the Vidyapith. I cannot give away its books. Kakasaheb and the Vidyapith Committee have the right. I had proposed to amalgamate the Ashram library with the Vidyapith’s so that the former could be better utilized. The Ashram is after all a place for manual labour. Moreover we cannot afford a paid librarian there. My idea therefore was to combine the two libraries when eventually peace would return and the library too. Now when the Ashram library has been transferred to the Municipality, I received a letter from Kakasaheb telling me that the Vidyapith library and the building were not in our custody and that if the Government returned the books they too should be handed over to the Municipality. In this way the Vidyapith books also came to the Municipality. I am therefore not responsible for the twin gifts and cannot claim credit for them.

I shall give you the third reason. How can learning be associated with my name? Only manual labour can be associated with my name. So please spare me this burden. I do not want to say just now what is more befitting for me to do. I had a talk with the President and Balubhai in the morning and if they like my suggestion they will put it before you. In any case please do spare me.

Now I come to a different subject. In the morning also I made a reference to Sardar’s absence. We have been working together for about eighteen years, and with the passage of time we have been coming closer. The Shastras tell us that husband and wife are two persons but their souls are one. The same applies to the relationship between Sardar and I. I will not ask you to decide who is the wife and who is the husband. We came very close only this time. In spite of working together we never had the time for a heart-to-heart talk. Vallabhbhai stayed with me in Kaira for months but I don’t remember if he ever came to see me except on business. During the other struggles too we had only short business-like meetings. Only this time in jail we stayed together. Since there was no work we opened out to each other. At night too we used to draw our cots side by side and talk of the joys and sorrows of life. I say joys and sorrows because it is customary to put it that way; in fact there was no sorrow to speak of, we only spoke of our moments of joy; sorrows we had left behind for you! If asleep Sardar would dream of India. He is a clever man so he believes what applies to him applies to the universe. He has come to the general conclusion that what is true of Ahmedabad is true of Gujarat and what is true of Gujarat is true of India and what is true of India is true of the world. He often dreamt about Ahmedabad. All the time he thought of ‘my waterworks’, and ‘my municipality’. It is true that Ranchhodbhai had the waterworks installed but isn’t Sardar his heir? Can Girijaprasad say that the waterworks belong to him? When Ranchhodbhai gave up his ownership it went to the city of Ahmedabad, i.e., to Sardar. You will thus see how fond Sardar is of Ahmedabad. I would know nothing about the Vadilal Hospital. I have never interfered in Vallabhbhai’s special activities. I was confident that Vallabhbhai managed them excellently. I came to know a good deal about the hospital while in jail. Although it is presumptuous—since one cannot compare a human being to God—but as Kalapi would put it, I say, wherever I look, I find evidence of Sardar’s performance. Sardar, therefore, can well carry the burden. He is a capable person. I cannot carry it.

I congratulate the Municipality too on having had Sardar as its president. This Municipality came into existence with a rich man [as its president]. Then it had a fakir as its president. I wanted Ahmedabad to be a city beautiful. But beautiful in my own sense of the word. Of course it should have good looking men and women, gardens and scenic beauty but I expect it to have inner beauty as well. Sardar dreams of making Ahmedabad an ideal city and its civic body too an ideal municipality. And he has worked to achieve it. I too share his dreams. When I decided to settle in Ahmedabad I had cherished the dream of beginning my public life here because I saw that this city had wealth and wisdom, it was the capital of Gujarat, the State in which I was born. Ever since then it has been my fond desire to have in Ahmedabad the best library and also other institutions which could draw many people to it. Do not think that the climate of the place is bad. Once there was a proposal that I should go to Mussoorie. Dr. Kanuga said to me that Ahmedabad was as good as Mussoorie. Soon after I gave up the idea of going there. If anything is bad here we are

---

1 Vadilal Sarabhai Hospital.
2 Sursinhji Takhtsinhji Gohil, a poet.
to blame for it. We have made Ahmedabad dirty. Dr. Hariprasad tried hard to make it clean. Yet to this day I cannot certify that Ahmedabad is a clean city. There is no fragrance, the whole city stinks. The neighbourhoods could be cleaned if Dr. Hariprasad could again rally men and women volunteers to do it.

Before I stop, let me set out the ideals I cherish about the library. Have the building of the library planned in such a way that when it expands into new departments, new structures could be annexed to the parent building without their looking hemmed in or without reducing the architecture to a monstrosity. While planning the building see that it can serve as a public lecture hall, a quiet place for students to read and study as also for research scholars. Our ideal should be to make it the largest and the best library in the world. God will grant us the necessary strength. Kakasaheb has suggested that the Vidyapith museum should also be housed in the library. There is no dearth of art in Gujarat. The like of the stone screen of Bhadra is not to be found in the whole world. The crafts of Ahmedabad can hardly be matched. I have been amazed by the skill of the Ahmedabad craftsmen. I have seen them working in the slums. Masters of art do not wait for encouragement. If someone donates Rs. 50,000 to have the museum here itself, it can be done.

Please see that the library makes progress day by day. It would be better if you get one or two persons who could give most of their time to the library. Do not have as your librarian a merchant who can only preserve your books but have someone who appreciates them and can select them. If no one volunteers for the task, offer higher remuneration. Allow the Harijans free use of the library and let them take books home. Please bear the loss if they soil or steal the books. They are lowest even among the poor. Allow this concession to all the poor if you can. That will bring credit to you.

My appeal is the same as that of Bhai Rasiklal that you should select the members of the library committee carefully. It should comprise men of letters. They will help keep the library alive. Do not think of having only the worldly-wise on the committee. Only the learned will know what a good library is and how it can shine forth. Carnegie gave donations to many libraries and many scholars accepted the onerous conditions. But the scholars of Scotland told Carnegie plainly that they did not care for his donations if he were to stipulate such conditions. How would you know what books ought to be had? Masters do not set out to hawk their art. In Gujarat a priceless collection of books lies in the custody of the merchant class. Beautiful collections of Jain literature are wrapped up in their silk cloths. My heart is sore at the sight of these books. What use can these books be when they have fallen into the hands of the ignorant merchants who can only pile up wealth? The Jain religion, too, is withering in their hands because they have reduced dharma to a formal business. Indeed, can dharma adjust itself to the ways of commerce? It is for commerce to adjust itself to the claims of dharma. I therefore appeal to you to have, as far as you can, learned men as members of your committee. May this library prosper.

---

1 Dr. Hariprasad Desai.

[From Gujarati]
Harijanbandhu, 1-10-1933

511. A BELATED ACKNOWLEDGEMENT

Sir Lallubhai Samaldas brought from Japan Rs. 1,699-11-0 for Harijan work. This amount was received in Yeravda, but the letter with names accompanying it was given to me only after my release. I was, therefore, unable to acknowledge the donation before now. It comes from the Indian Silk Merchants’ Association of Kobe and the letter giving cover to the cheque contains the names of forty-two subscribers. The majority are Sindhi merchants. Whilst I thank them for their donations, I warn them that I had expected much more than what they have sent. I knew the generosity of my Sindhi friends in South Africa. They cannot be different in Japan. I, therefore, regard their cheque as an earnest of more to come.

Harijan, 23-9-1933

512. ANOTHER PLAGUE SPOT

The reader may remember that some months ago I drew public attention to the disgraceful condition of the bastis of Allahabad. Professor Malkani has now sent me his impressions of the Delhi bastis. They are published in The Hindustan Times. These impressions show that the Delhi bastis are not much better than the Allahabad

1 Vide “Immediate Duty”, 22-4-1933
2 N. R. Malkani
ones. There is the same tale of indescribable filth and consequent degradation. The scavengers, on whose careful labour largely depends the health of the inhabitants of Delhi, are housed in cells which are windowless and lightless holes. I cannot do better than reproduce Professor Malkani’s closing sentences:

So long as we tolerate such plague spots and so long as we continue to treat most useful servants of society as if they were beyond the pale of humanity, there need be no wonder that we have more than our fair share of diseases which are due to filth and insanitation. Even as a rotten limb affects and corrupts the whole body, so does the condition of scavengers, representing a rotten limb of society, corrupt the whole of it. Unless, therefore, we wake up betimes and adopt summary measures to improve the condition of the scavengers, God’s judgment must overtake us. This question of providing decent habitations for the scavengers is not merely for Hindus to tackle but it is for the society at large to deal with. In this matter, therefore, there need be no distinction between reformers and the orthodox, or between Hindus and non-Hindus. Let us hope that the Delhi Municipality, now that its attention is drawn to the disgraceful condition of its bastis, will waste no time in taking energetic measures and removing the disgrace.

_Harijan_, 23-9-1933

513. SHOCKING, IF TRUE

Dayananda Dalitoddhar Sabha had its conference at Chamba. I take the following from its resolutions:

It is difficult to believe that any State in India considers the refusal by a class of people to do particular work a crime. I hope that the Chamba State authorities have a convincing reply to the charges embodied in the resolutions, or that the practices referred to by the conference will be given up by the State in response to the respectful request of the conference. I notice that those who took part in the conference were educated and responsible men.

_Harijan_, 23-9-1933

1 Not reproduced here. The extract described the filthy and unhygienic condition of the slums in which Harijans lived.

2 Not reproduced here. The Aryas had protested against the illegal prosecution of Halies and other communities for refusing to handle carcasses or do other kinds of forced labour and for declining to offer animal sacrifice to a deity.
514. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

Unrevised September 23, 1933

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

I was ready to write to you only yesterday. My inquiry was completed at 1 p.m. I have now met Kasturbhai, Mrs. Hathisingh and Shankerlal who knows the family well. I am not quite satisfied with my experiences. I have missed straightforwardness. And yet I have nothing to say against the proposed match. Krishna¹ will be happy enough in the new surroundings. What is more, she seems to have set her heart upon the match. She has been corresponding with Raja’s mother. Rajababu is the pet name of her chosen one. There is no question of their leaving anything in Krishna’s name. Of course I made it perfectly clear to them that the suggestion as to leaving something in Krishna’s name was purely mine, and that even so, I had no intention of making it a condition of marriage. I made the proposal, I told them, because I believe in such arrangement for all girls wherever it was possible. If the match is to be finally fixed up, you have to write to Mrs. Hathisingh, Ahmedabad, making the proposal definitely and she will send you her acceptance. She is quite ready for the marriage to take place as early as Krishna wishes. She is desirous (and I concur) that the betrothal and marriage should take place simultaneously. You may now write to young Hathisingh and send him when you like.

I hope Mother is better as also Kamala².

I reached Wardha this morning. Except for the high blood pressure which the doctors register, there is nothing wrong with me. Nevertheless I am not to move about for at least three weeks from today, i.e., up to 15th October next.

Mathuradas³ is in Bombay. Chandrashankar⁴ and Nayar are with me of course, apart from Ba, Mirabehn and Prabhavati. Prabhudas⁵ is also with me.

Love.

BAPU Gandhi-Nehru Papers, 1933. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library.

¹ Addressee’s younger sister.
² Addressee’s wife
³ Mathuradas Trikumji
⁴ Chandrashankar Pranshankar Shukla, Editor, Harijanbandh
⁵ Son of Chhaganlal Gandhi
515. TELEGRAM TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

WARDHAGANJ, September 23, 1933

JAWAHARLAL NEHRU
LUCKNOW

YOUR WIRE, POSTED LETTER¹ TODAY. COMPLETED INQUIRY YESTERDAY. RESULT ON WHOLE SATISFACTORY. YOU WILL WRITE MRS. HATHISINGH FORMALLY OFFERING HAND. GLAD MOTHER BETTER.

BAPU

Gandhi-Nehru Papers, 1933. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

516. TALK WITH HARIJAN WORKERS ²

[Before September 24, 1933]¹

Many people feel that their value in the field of service would not be fully recognized till they could earn money themselves. I would tell these people that they would be well protected if they accepted less than what they may be able to earn elsewhere. They run a risk if they received more than what they may be able to get elsewhere. And why should a public servant accumulate any money at all?

If I fall ill I will have to go to a hospital.

And there you would receive right royal treatment.

I never feel that I have lost what I have given away. I have said that I am the richest man in the world. I have never experienced want of money.

I have kept aside some money for spending it in public service.

If you have the money, you would feel like spending it when it seems necessary. But who are you to spend it?

The subtle pride corrodes man. One can over come the pride that is apparent. But one can do nothing about the subtle pride. It has brought about the miserable downfall of many a man. From the popular point of view the man who has money and yet does not spend

¹ Vide the preceding item.
² The talk appeared under the title “Reliance on God or on Money”. This and the following item are translated from the weekly letter in Harijanbandhu, 24-9-1933.
³ ibid.
it for himself is a saint. It can be said of him that he spends the money for the people. In that case, why should he not hand it over to the people? I say this because I have acted on this principle. I used to think that I had been practising law for the sake of the people. But then I wondered why I should not devote to the service of the people the time I spent in practicing law. That is why I gave up my practice. Whatever money I had in reserve, I used to spend for the people. Then I thought, "Why not hand over to the people what is to be used for them?" Again, I thought why I should not form a trust for the use of money if it was to be given away. I formed a trust but I was not one of the trustees. Nor was I on [the board of] the Phoenix Trust. I am not associated with the Ashram Trust either. I exercise only moral authority. The trustees can drive me out any time they want. After all, I judge others as I would myself. I have been watching one thing after another. Ever since I came to India I have been telling you that it is unbearable that you should have so much money with you.

I feel ashamed of going abegging.

You should not find it difficult. It hurts me to know that you find it difficult to ask for money. What could be done about it? Either you must live in such a way that you would need no money at all, or if you do need it, you should not feel ashamed to ask for it. There are 56 lakhs of vagrants in India and they get their food. And when you are devoting all your twenty-four hours to the country you do have a right to get your food. We have two alternatives: either we go and ask for it when there is the need, or we do not move out even when the need is there. What would be the result? We would be in great trouble at the most, wouldn’t we? God does not ask of us more than that. This is true freedom. Why should we rely so much on money? Why not seek the help of God instead of relying on the money lying with us? That at least is the test I would propose. Years ago I had taken out an insurance policy in Bombay at the instance of my brother. Then from Africa I wrote to Revashankarbhai that the policy should be cancelled.¹ I let go the amount I had been paying for seven years. I asked why not trust God instead of trusting the money? I asked myself whether I wanted to serve the people or myself. If I wanted to serve the people, what need did I have for money? At least a few people must come forward who would voluntarily accept poverty.

Please forgive me for talking to you in such plain words. But

¹ Vide “An Autobiography—Part IV, Chapter IV” 3-2-1929.
who else would talk that way if not I?

[From Gujarati]
Harajanbandhu, 24-9-1933

517. APPEAL AT PRAYER MEETING

[Before September 24, 1933]

I would like to tell all the men and women who have come to attend the prayer that if the Government allows me to remain free, I would devote myself mainly to Harijan work. And so, it is my duty to beg for the sake of the Harijans. Men and women who come to attend the prayers may bring with them whatever they feel like and whatever they can afford. It serves two purposes: some amount is collected for Harijans, and then, we have an idea as to how many persons give for the service of Harijans and how many approve of the work. I do not want a single pie from those who do not approve of this work. If anyone gave for my sake, it would be meaningless. Hence, I wish that only those people who have faith in this work should donate money.

[From Gujarati]
Harajanbandhu, 24-9-1933

518. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

September 24, 1933

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

I had a talk today with Jamnalalji about the proposed match. He seems to know the family well. He is decidedly of opinion that the family, apart from Kasturbhai of course, is not as well off as they would appear to be. He is even of opinion that they may be actually in want. I thought I should pass this news on to you. He too is anxious that I should let you have his opinion. Personally I remain unaffected by it. But he thinks that Krishna should know it. So far as I can judge, nothing will affect Krishna’s choice unless she has something definite against the young man. And she would be quite right. Kasturbhai is strongly of opinion that Krishna’s choice is good.

Love to you all.

BAPU

1 This appeared under the title “The Begging Bowl”.

VOL. 61: 27 APRIL, 1933- 7 OCTOBER, 1933 421
[PS.]
You may succeed in making persons like me not addressing you as Pundit but I see that the adjective with abide with you.

[PPS.]
What I wanted to suggest was that if this if this marriage comes off and if Mother agrees, the religious ceremony may be performed at Wardha. I know the difficulty. I am thinking selfishly I know. I have simply thrown out the suggestion. Let us see what happens. I am likely to see Kasturbhai.

Gandhi-Nehru Papers, 1933. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

519. LETTER TO NIRMAL KUMAR BOSE

SATYAGRAHA ASHRAM, WARDHA,
September 24, 1933

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter.

As Sjt. Satis Chandra Das Gupta is well acquainted with my writings I would like you to show your collection to him, and, if he approves, I have no objection to your printing the book. You may show this postcard to him.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G. N. 10522

520. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

WARDHA,
September 24, 1933

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

I got your letter of the 19th in Bombay and of the 21st today in Wardha after I had entered upon my weekly silence.

* * *

I understand what you say regarding your teeth. I think you should be able to carry on with them for some time.

1 Selections from Gandhi
2 Omission as in the source

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
With me are Ba, Mirabehn, Chandrashankar, Prabhudas, Nayar, Anandi, Nirmala (Mahadev’s), Sharada (Chimanlal’s) and Prabhavati. Brijkishan also is here. He will return home on Tuesday. I met Radha and Santok on the way. Radha keeps good health these days. She is your neighbour. Write to her. Lilavati is in a sanatorium at Deolali. Keshu is here. He is working in Jamnalalji’s gin. I have got his pay fixed at Rs. 50 per month. The nature of his work is good. If he is steady, he will go forward. Jamnalalji seems to be satisfied with him. N. and Amala are problems. The former is an emotional type, and the latter has no sense. She can’t do any work. Both are something of a burden here. I will try to see if the burden can be lightened. Duncan and Mary Barr are doing very well. Both are hard-working and upright. Narahari’s children, Vanamala and Mohan, don’t keep good health and have gone to Kathlal. I met them in Ahmedabad. They were to leave for Kathlal on Friday. Amina’s children feel perfectly happy with the other children. They will stay during the vacation in the red bungalow. Sirius was ill. He is all right now. He was in a hospital. I met Rama Joshi. She was quite well. Her health is improving rapidly indeed. She could raise her arm fairly well. Mani came to Bombay on the very day I left it. She spent most of the time with me. I took her with me even when I called on Elwin. I have advised her to see you and then come to me after getting her teeth and eyes treated. Aunt is still in Bombay, and so also Mathuradas. He feels very much tired. He had shouldered a fairly heavy responsibility. Sastri (of Harijan) is doing well. Chandrashankar will accompany me and send all the Gujarati material from where we are. I have written to Pritiraj to stay on in Calicut. Indu is in Bhavnagar. He is doing fairly well there. Jayaprakash must have returned to his father. He was

1 Daughter of Lakshmidas Asar
2 Daughter of Maganlal Gandhi
3 Widow of Maganlal Gandhi
4 Lilavati Asar
5 Keshav, Maganlal Gandhi’s son
6 An American woman. The name is omitted in this and subsequent times.
7 Amina Qureshi, wife of Gulam Rasool Qureshi
8 Dr. Pranjivan Mehha’s house near the Ashram
9 Verrier Elwin
10 Son of Lakshmidas Asar
11 Indu Parekh, an Ashram student in Bombay till I left. He used to come and see me. He saw Prabhavati daily. I know his charge against me. But I am helpless. He seems to have calmed down a little now. Ramdas’s own mind is his enemy. And so I can’t say anything about him. When will he become really calm?
Nimu\textsuperscript{1} keeps indifferent health. The Bengal problem\textsuperscript{2} is in my mind. I will see what I can do. Jamnalal will not go again to a hill station just now. He had been to one and stayed there for ten days. I will try to persuade him, though he feels better these days.

Anandi and the other girls and Qureshi’s children are in Anasuyabehn’s Harijan Boarding. I thought that was the proper place for our children. They are very happy there. Narandas’s Purushottam is engaged to the daughter of Harakhchand\textsuperscript{3}, the brother of Jivanlal\textsuperscript{4}. I didn’t like the engagement because both the parties belong to the same caste. But they say that she is a good girl, and so Narandas also gave his consent. Jamna\textsuperscript{5} is in Rajkot. Kanu\textsuperscript{6} also is there. He studies what he can in Jamnadas’s school. Mahadev’s Babu\textsuperscript{7} is with his mother’s sister in Bulsar. he has written to me that he will go and stay with Anandi after Diwali. I get reports about Rajenbabu every other day. His health is improving very well. Lakshmi\textsuperscript{9} is here. She was to go to Jullundur. On second thoughts, Devdas got the plan abandoned.
It is still not finally decided what should be done. Prabhudas’ problem is still not solved. That is why he has come with me. . . .
\textsuperscript{10} has

Even if you stop after completing the \textit{Gita}, you will have made fairly good progress.

The Ashram dairy is being run near Kankaria. Titus is in charge of it and Shankerlal Banker exercises general supervision. It is \begin{itemize}

\item \textsuperscript{1} Nirmala, wife of Ramdas Gandhi
\item \textsuperscript{2} The reference is to the agitation of the caste Hindus of Bengal against the Yeravda Pact.
\item \textsuperscript{3} a social worker from Chorwad
\item \textsuperscript{4} Jivanlal Motichand Shah
\item \textsuperscript{5} Wife of Narandas Gandhi
\item \textsuperscript{6} Son of Narandas Gandhi
\item \textsuperscript{7} Jamnadas Gandhi of the National School, Rajkot
\item \textsuperscript{8} Narayan Desai, usually referred to as Bablo \item \textsuperscript{9} Wife of Devdas Gandhi.
\item \textsuperscript{10} The name is omitted in the source.
\end{itemize}
running fairly well. Jawaharlal’s Krishnakumari will most probably be engaged to the son of Kasturbhai’s sister, who has just returned from England after qualifying for the Bar. I met Kasturbhai, his sister and her son. It was the parties’ own choice. They had met in Bombay twice or thrice at Rao’s place. Saruprani" has given her consent. The formal betrothal will take place in a few days. If it does, a big load will be off Saruprani’s head.

I am fairly well. I don’t know whether or not the blood pressure remains high here. The doctors here are not of that level. Nor is there the need. I drink one pound of milk at present and eat green vegetables twice every day. The latter include gourd, ridge gourd, etc. The weight was 99 lb. when I was weighed on my arrival here. I will weigh myself again after a few days. Ba is fine, and so is Mira. Jamnalalji’s Kamala was in Dinshaw Mehta’s sanatorium. She seems to have benefited a little. She has come with me here. Kamalnayan also is here. Vakil’s school is closed at present because of the plague. It will be shifted to Vile Parle now.

My programme, up to October 15, is to rest here itself. Since the Government has not taken possession of the Ashram, it is now being converted permanently into a Harijan colony. Jamnalal has approved of the idea. Friends in Ahmedabad, Ranchhodbhai and others have also approved of it. It is planned to have some Harijan quarters, a tannery, a Harijan hostel and an office of the Harijan Seva Sangh there. I am thinking of handing over the land and the buildings to the All-India Harijan Seva Sangh. If you wish to offer any comments about this, please write to me. I think I have written a fairly long letter.

Are you satisfied now?

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 26-30

1 Mother of Jawaharlal Nehru
2 Kamala Nevatia, wife of Rameshwandas
3 Son of Jamnala Bajaj
4 In July 1933, Gandhiji had offered to hand over the Ashram to the Government; Vide “Letter to Hoome Secretary, Government of Bombay”, 26-7-1933.
521. APPEAL FOR FLOOD RELIEF IN ORISSA

September 24, 1933

Appealing for funds for the relief of flood-stricken Orissa, Mr. Gandhi says that the affected area covers two thousand miles. The people affected number three lakhs. One thousand five hundred villages have been destroyed. Twenty thousand houses have collapsed and the damage is estimated at Rs. 15,00,000. Mr. Gandhi says that it would be necessary to provide relief to people actually in want of food and clothing for twelve months, for they will not have, till the next year’s crops are ready, the wherewithal to keep body and soul together. At least, five lakhs of rupees will be required to help those who can be proved to be clearly indigent.

The Indian Annual Register, July-December 1933, Vol. II, p. 10

522. MESSAGE FOR HARIJAN DAY

[September 24, 1933]¹

On the occasion of the Harijan Day, I sincerely hope that pure love will be roused in the hearts of caste Hindus towards their Harijan brothers and sisters, and that every Hindu, man or woman, will be convinced of the need for the eradication of untouchability.

The Hindu, 25-9-1933

523. LETTER TO N. R. MALKANI

Satyagraha Ashram, Wardha,
[September]² 26, 1933

My dear Malkani,

I have your letter of 8th inst. in reply to mine of the 2nd inst. I was not able to acknowledge that letter earlier, and now I have your latest letter enclosing your report on the bastis. I have already tackled the first portion of the report¹. But I shall write to you later on it, after I have finished reading the whole.

Your suggestions about Harijan work are good. I can be of little help to you, especially at the present moment. But you must discuss them with Thakkar Bapa. You will presently hear something about industrial schools. I quite agree with you as to the importance of the

¹ The message was read at the third Harijan Day meeting held at Wardha on September 24, under the presidency of Jamnalal Bajaj. The first and the second Harijan Day were observed on December 18, 1932 and April 30, 1933.
² Illegible in the source
³ Vide “Another Plague Spot”, 23-9-1933.
tanning industry. I am working at the problem even now.

The work among Bhangis is certainly essential, if it is also uphill.

I endorse your suggestion that you should be offered facilities for travelling and studying the various organizations.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

SJT. N. R. MALKANI
SERVANTS OF THE UNTOUCHABLES SOCIETY
BIRLA MILLS, DELHI

From a photostat: G.N. 900

---

524. LETTER TO V. RAGHAVIAH

September 26, 1933

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter.

In coming to the various decisions I had all the arguments before me. You will not, therefore, expect me, especially in the present state of my health, to cover the same ground again in defence of what I have done. But the time will certainly show which way truth lay.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

SJT. VENNELAKANTI RAGHAVIAH
NELLORE
(SOUTH INDIA)

From a copy: C. W. 10448. Courtsey: K. Lingaraju

---

525. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

September 28, 1933

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

I have your several letters. I had a long chat with Rafi\(^1\). He will tell you all about it. I adhere to the opinion that it will do no good to

---

\(^1\) The addressee, a congressman and tribal welfare worker, had protested against Gandhiji’s fast in connection with the Harijan problem and wrote that he was side-tracking the economic issue.

\(^2\) Rafi Ahmed Kidwai.

VOL. 61: 27 APRIL, 1933- 7 OCTOBER, 1933  427
have the A.I.C.C. meeting. But that does not mean that it will deeply hurt me if such a meeting was held. On the contrary if a sufficient number desire it, it is their duty to send a requisition for the meeting. What I feel is that we may not take the initiative. If you personally feel that it is better to hold the meeting even though there is no requisition, you should hold it. I know that I am not in touch even with the opinion of workers. Therefore my opinion may safely be discounted by those who have a decided opinion the other way.

The other point I would like to clear apart from the impression that Rafi may give you of my talks is about the workers. Whilst I shall try to do what I can, I am firmly of opinion that every province should support its own workers and that every district or tehsil should support its. Unless we reach that state, ours must remain a house of cards. I think that you should take up the begging bowl in the province and set the pace and the example. My ideal is that every worker should find his maintenance from the area he may serve and feel proud of it. Every labourer is worthy of his hire.

The rest from Rafi.

I hope both Ma and Kamala are better. You will tell me in due course what Dr. Bidhan has to say.

Love.

BAPU

[PS.]

Of the personal letters I need say nothing. I hope you had my two letters¹ written . . . ²

526. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

September 28, 1933

CHI. MARY³.

I am delighted you are normal today. I think that it is better for you to take the orthodox medical treatment and get well. Injections

² The source is illegible here.
³ The superscription in this and other letters to the addressee is in Devanagari script.
are the order of the day nowadays. You had better take them. And take what food they permit. If you do not need N’s help, let her come away. I know that the introduction of strangers disturbs doctors in a well-managed hospital.

My God be with you

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 6007. Also C.W. 3333. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

527. LETTER TO BHAGWANJI A. MEHTA

WARDHA,
September 28, 1933

BHAI BHAGWANJI,

I got your letter . . . .¹ May your efforts succeed. Leave nothing undone . . . .² If they cannot live together in perfect harmony, do not hesitate to separate the shares.³

I am not writing a separate letter to Ratubhai⁴.

Vandemataram from

MOHANDAS

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5820. Also C.W. 3043. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

528. LETTER TO NANABHAI I. MASHRUWALA

WARDHA,
September 28, 1933

BHAI NANABHAI⁵,

I got your letter. You ought not to come here despite your weak health. I am quite well. When I have regained complete strength and

¹ The source is damaged here.
² ibid.
³ This was regarding the property of Pranjivandas Mehta.
⁴ Ratilal Sheth, father-in-law of Chhaganlal Mehta.
⁵ Father-in-law of Manilal Gandhi can travel, your love will certainly draw me to Akola. Manilal\(^1\) seems quite busy. He has undertaken a big responsibility.

Jamnalalji gave me a report about Tara\(^2\).

_Blessings from_

BAPU

SJT. NANABhai MASHRUWALA
AKOLA, BERAR

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 6689. Also C.W. 4334. Courtesy: Kanubhai Mashruwala

---

529. LETTER TO NALINIKANT SHETH

WARDHA,
September 28, 1933

CHI. NALINIKANT,

I got the letters sent by you. I have sent a reply to Rangoon. I am quite well.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 7174. Also C.W. 4670. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

---

530. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI \(^3\)

September 28, 1933

CHI. MATHURADAS,

I had been awaiting your letter today when I got it. We shall use the Rs. 250 for aid to be given to the farmers. Amalabehn’s\(^4\) money should be deposited in a savings account if there is no alternative. Can it be deposited there in her name? If you can think of any other way you may let me know.

\(^{1}\) Manilal Gandhi
\(^{2}\) Addressee’s daughter
\(^{3}\) An extract from this letter appears in “Letter to Mathuradas Trikumji”, 28-9-1933.
\(^{4}\) Name given by Gandhiji to Margarete Spiegel, a German lady who was taking training at the Ashram for Harijan work
Has any amount been collected for Utkal? Did you see anybody? You must not exert yourself at the cost of your health. In fact you should stay out of prison for some time and take complete rest. Can you do that?

We have a lot of company here. Rafi has come. He will go tomorrow. There is no special reason; he came merely to have a talk with me.

I have perfect peace here. No one is allowed to visit me before four o’clock. The visiting time is restricted to between 4 and 5, in case anyone comes. I do my spinning at this hour. I sleep on the terrace. I take a fair quantity of milk. Since yesterday I have started taking 3 lb. of it. If I cannot go on I shall reduce the quantity. So do not go by whatever Jamnalalji might report. The blood pressure will go on its own. It is only now that I shall be gaining some weight.

Now for some time Lakshmi will stay here. The Jullunder programme is now being pursued for the present.

I have written to Premlilaben at the Parnakuti address. She should be getting the letter. Please dispel her worry.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

531. TELEGRAM TO “MATHRUBHUMI”
September 29, 1933

MR. MADHAVAN NAIR’S DEATH IS A GREAT NATIONAL LOSS. CONVEY CONDOLENCE TO THE FAMILY ON BEHALF OF JAMNALALJI AND SELF.

The Hindu, 30-9-1933

1 Rafi Ahmed Kidwai
2 Wife of Devidas Gandhi
3 Lady Premila Thackersey; Vide also”Letter to F. Marry Barr”, 2-10-1933.
4 Vide also “Speech at Public Meeting, Calicut”, 13-1-1934
532. TELEGRAM TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

WARDHA,
September 29, 1933

MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI
53 MINT ROAD
BOMBAY

HEALTH EXCELLENT. ASSURE PREMLILABEHN.

BAPU

From the original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

533. LETTER TO AGATHA HARRISON

SATYAGRAHA ASHRAM, WARDHA,
September 29, 1933

MY DEAR AGATHA,

I know I have not been fair to you. You have been pouring letters on me, and I have been satisfied with merely sending you a line. The fact is that I have not yet regained all the lost energy, and what there is of it has to be devoted to the immediate work at hand. Hence, I have to neglect many things that I would otherwise have done. Your letters have come under the category of neglected ones. I have relied upon Andrews and Mira for writing to you. But your two letters, those of 9th and 16th inst., demand a fairly full answer from me.

I understand all that you say and that you have omitted to say about the Midnapore incident. I hope that you got copies of all the statements made by me. I offer no apology for what I have said about Midnapore. I could say nothing less and nothing more; for that statement contained cent per cent truth. But how is one to overtake the deliberate campaign of misrepresentation? Every word that I say is distorted. Where distortion is not possible they do not hesitate to cut out sentences from my statements, which would make them read differently from what they would if they were read in conjunction with the sentences cut out. But I remain unmoved by these tactics.

1 Vide “Statement to the Press”, 3-9-1933.
They are not new to me. I have boundless faith in my mission and in my own truth. The only thing, therefore, to do is not to enter into an elaborate explanation, for it means nothing, but on due occasion to repeat the same truth with added emphasis.

The position of friends in England is somewhat different. They are naturally anxious to show some result. I would, however, ask friends on such occasions to remain unperturbed, because at the present moment yours will be a voice in the wilderness, and if you attempted to be apologetic about what I might have said, you would be doing an injury to the cause. I am trying a tremendous experiment. Non-violence regulates every breath of my life. I do not embellish what I write. I conceal nothing. Therefore, I would not like friends excusing any action or word of mine. When they do not understand it they may remain silent. When they disagree, after having all the facts and after having weighed them, I would not mind their open disapproval. It would really serve the cause. Take this Midnapore statement. I know that terrorism is taking a deeper root owing to the counterterrorism of the Government. The counter-terrorism is much more mischievous in its effect, because it is organized and corrupts a whole people. Instead of rooting out terrorism it creates an atmosphere for the approval of terrorist methods and thus gives them an artificial stimulus. It may not show immediate results, but it certainly prepares the future for wider activities along those lines. Hence, it is necessary to bring out this point forcibly when any eruption takes place as that of Midnapore, and if the truth cannot be said forcibly, it is obvious that silence is the only alternative. A half-hearted operation is much more dangerous than no operation. I say all this with my knowledge of non-violence and of ascertained facts.

Then take my fast, or rather all the recent fasts. If friends over there have not understood them to the extent of being able to justify them, they could ignore them, or, having procured all the materials for a judgment, if the judgment went against me, they should not hesitate to pronounce it, and if they endorse them, then their approval should be unequivocal. You are there in a hopeless minority. All I wish, therefore, for you is to be firm in whatever action you take, that is, if you have faith in yourselves, in the Indian cause and in me through whom today the cause is represented to you. I shall never misunderstand you. I know that whatever you, a mere handful, do you will do whole heartedly. More than that I do not expect, no one can or should.
I do not know whether I have made myself clearly understood by you. If I have failed, you should dismiss this letter from your mind and tell me where you have not understood me.

As for my health I am slowly regaining strength. I am supposed to have quiet and rest at least up to the 23rd October after which, if all goes well, a touring programme will be fixed up. Andrews is in Orissa. Mahadev is in the Belgaum Jail, Devdas in Multan Jail. His wife is here. Pyarelal is in the Nasik Jail. His mother and brother are here, on their way to Nasik. Mira is here, of course.

Love.

BAPU

MISS AGATHA HARRISON
2 CRANBOURNE COURT
ALBERT BRIDGE ROAD
LONDON S.W. 11

From a photostat: G.N. 1468

534. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

September 29, 1933

CHI. MARY.

Your love note to hand. One may not whim patients beyond a point. I made a stupid mistake in sending N. in the very first instance with you. Please do not ask for her. When you are restored and come back to me, I shall be able to convince you that I was right. I am detaining her for her sake. I now understand that Duncan will stay with you. I am glad. I cannot trace Saraswati. As soon as I do, I shall speak to her. If she consents, she will be sent. You must forgive the changes for the time being. If N. had not been withdrawn, no changes would have been necessary. As soon as you are suited there will be no change. I hope however that the nursing staff there is quite suitable and adequate.

May God restore you soon.

Love.

BAPU

[PS.]

I am not sending Mira because she has to give nearly four hours daily to Amala. She is wasting her time.

BAPU

From a photostat: G. N. 6008. Also C.W. 3334. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr
535. LETTER TO RAMESHWARADAS PODDAR

September 29, 1933

CHI. RAMESHWARADAS,

There can be no doubt at all that Ramanama is the most effective remedy for you, me and everybody else who has the faith. It is not for the blameless and the healthy, but for people like us who are sinful and full of disease. We should, therefore, go on repeating it with unwavering faith whether or not we see any result.

Blessings from

BAPU

SJT. RAMESHWARADAS [C/O] BHOLARAM JOHARMAL
DHULIA, DIST. KHANDESH

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 209

536. LETTER TO PARIKSHITLAL L. MAJMUDAR

September 29, 1933

BHAI PARIKSHITLAL,

I got your letter. Jivanlalbhai and Nanabhai 1 will try about the Ashram in Kathiawar after Diwali. We will give them whatever help we can in their efforts. If they can do nothing, I think it will not be possible for us to maintain the Ashram. But I am sure that they will not let it die. Whether the ashrams at Bhavnagar and Vartej should be combined, requires to be considered.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3996

537. LETTER TO JASHBHAI

September 29, 1933

BHAI JASHBHAI

I got your letter. I cannot guide you from here. Do as Chimanlal advises. If necessary, he will consult me. Don’t yield to anything helplessness.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a Photostat of the Gujarati: S. N. 23173

1 Nrisimhaprasad Kalidas Bhatt

VOL. 61: 27 APRIL, 1933- 7 OCTOBER, 1933 435
538. LETTER TO MANIBEHN PATEL

September 29, 1933

CHI. MANI,

I got your postcard. Stay there as long as necessary and get well, and then come. I also had a letter from Father, from which I have come to know that now Chandubhai\(^1\) is with him. I am very glad. Continue to write to me. Inform Dahyabhai\(^2\) that I have written to Karamchand and replied to the questions. I am well.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI MANIBEHN PATEL
PAREKH STREET
SANDHURST ROAD
BOMBAY 4

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-4: Manibehn Patelin, p. 108

539. LETTER TO D. B. KALELKAR

[Before September 30, 1933]\(^3\)

CHI. KAKA,

...\(^4\)

I have been thinking of handing over the Ashram permanently to the All-India Harijan Sevak Sangh for use as a Harijan settlement, a Harijan hostel, office of the Harijan Sevak Sangh and a tannery. What do you think about it? Jamnalalji liked the idea very much. Chhaganlal, Chimanlal and Maganbhai also have liked it.

Let me know your plans.

I am fixed here up to October 15 for reasons of health.
I am well on the whole. I have brought a large army with me.

\(^1\) Dr. Chandubhai Desai
\(^2\) Addressee’s brother
\(^3\) From the reference to Gandhiji’s intention of handing over the Satyagraha Ashram to the Harijan Sevak Sangh; vide “Letter to G. D. Birla”, 30-9-1933.
\(^4\) Some portion has been scored out here.
Anandi, Bachu‘ and Babu‘ have accompanied me, as also Prabhudas. Mohan‘ and Vanamala‘ have gone to Kathlal.

\[ \text{Blessings from} \]
\[ \text{BAPU} \]

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 9478. Courtesy: D. B. Kalelkar

540. NEED FOR A DEFINITION

A curious case was filed in the Court of the Munsif of Orai. The suit was in respect of the official nomination of a Mussalman as a representative of the Harijans of Konch and was brought by three Harijans against the Secretary of State for India in Council and others, for unseating the nominated member and for a declaration that, under the Municipalities Act, only a Hindu Harijan could be nominated. The judgment of the Court went against the plaintiff, owing to the proverbial uncertainty of law. I do not propose to examine the merits of the judgment. I simply want the public to know and realize that the law is not only uncertain about the definition of the Harijan class, described in the judgment as ‘depressed classes’, but there is as yet, if the judgment is correct, no legal definition at all of the term. If such is the case, it is not difficult to understand that this want of definition may easily lead to gross injustice or even more deplorable results. It can be a fruitful source of irritation and internal quarrels; quarrels between caste Hindus and Harijans, between Harijans and Harijans, and between Hindus and non-Hindus. If untouchability is not to be clothed with statutory sanction, it is surely necessary for the public to concentrate their attention on arriving at a proper definition. The reader will understand my meaning more fully, if he carefully studies the following extract from the judgment I have referred to.

\[ Harijan, \text{30-9-1933} \]

1 Nirmala, step-sister of Mahadev Desai
2 Sharda, daughter of Chimanlal Shah
3 Son and daughter of Narhari Parikh
4 \text{ibid.}
5 Not reproduced here. It was stated in the judgment: “The phrase ‘depressed classes’ is nowhere defined in the body of the Municipalities Act. The court is not aware that there exists any legal definition of this phrase as yet recognized by law...”
541. HARIJAN BOARDING HOUSES

The manager of a Harijan boarding house writes:

This is an old tale. I have no doubt that in every boarding house for students, all labour, including scavenging, should be performed by the boarders. Such a plan does not interfere with the boarders’ studies. Indeed, it adds reality to them and promotes the health of the students, and saves money into the bargain. Those managers, therefore, who, for the sake of gaining cheap popularity, or, being too lazy to discuss such matters with their students, will not induce the latter to perform all the necessary labour for their homes, will be doing a distinct disservice to their wards. Such labour should be regarded as part of the students’ education. But there is one condition attached to the demand upon students to do the daily labour. Then there will be no danger of “the low mentality worsening”.

_Harijan_, 30-9-1933

542. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

*SATYAGRAHA ASHRAM, WARDHA,
	September 30, 1933*

DEAR GHANSHYAMDAS,

As you are aware, the ‘Satyagraha Ashram’ grounds with the buildings in Sabarmati were abandoned on the 1st of August last by the Ashram people. I had expected that the Government would, in view of my letter addressed to them take charge of this abandoned property, but they did not do so. It then became a question with me as to what was my duty in the circumstances. I felt that it was wrong altogether to allow the valuable buildings to waste. I consulted friends and co-workers and came to the conclusion that the best use to make of the Ashram was to dedicate it once for all for the service of the Harijans. I placed my proposal before the trustees of the Ashram who are out, as also fellow members. They have, I am happy to say, wholeheartedly approved of it. When the property was abandoned there certainly was the expectation that some day, whether through an

---

1 The letter is not reproduced here. The correspondent had asked if Gandhiji considered it objectionable “to ask the inmates to clean the vessels”.
2 Dated July 26, Vide “Letter to Home Secretary, Government of Bombay” 26-7-1933.
3 Jamnala Bajaj and Chhaganlal Gandhi honourable settlement or India coming to her own, the trustees would resume possession. Under the new proposal, the trustees divest themselves entirely of the property. This procedure is permissible under the Trust-deed\(^1\), service of the Harijans being one of the objects of the trust. Therefore, the new proposal is wholly in keeping with the letter and spirit of the constitution\(^2\) of the Ashram, as also of the Trust.

The question that the trustees and I had to consider was, to whom was the property to be transferred for the specific use I have mentioned; and we came unanimously to the conclusion that it should be transferred to the all-India Harijan organization for all-India use. The objects of the Trust are: (i) to settle on the Ashram ground approved Harijan families subject to regulations to be framed; (ii) to open a hostel for Harijan boys and girls with liberty to take non-Harijans; (iii) to conduct a technological department for teaching the art of skinning carcasses, tanning the hide so obtained, curing it and manufacturing leather so prepared into shoes, sandals and other articles of daily use; and lastly to use the premises as offices for the Central Board or the Gujarat provincial organization or both, and such other allied uses that the committee, referred to in the following paragraph, may think proper.

On behalf of the trustees, I suggest that the Servants of Untouchables Society should appoint a special committee with yourself and the Secretary as ex-officio members, and three Ahmedabad citizens, with power to this committee to add to their number to take over this Trust and to give effect to its objects.

Two friends who have been always associated with the Ashram, viz, Sjts. Budhabhai and Juthabhai, have offered to reside on the premises as honorary managers. They have their own means and have been devoted to the service of the Harijans for a long time. There is also an inmate\(^3\) of the Ashram, who has dedicated his life to Harijan service, and who will gladly stay on the premises. He has almost become a specialist as a teacher of Harijan boys and girls. The committee I have suggested, therefore, should have no difficulty in managing the Trust; nor is it necessary that all the activities I have mentioned should be simultaneously and immediately undertaken.

\(^1\) Vide “Ashram Trust-Deed”, 2-2-1926.
\(^2\) Vide “Satyagraha Ashram”, 14-6-1928.
\(^3\) Bhagwanji Purushottam Pandya who had left Burma to settle in the Ashram.
Some Harijan families, as you are aware, are already living there. It has long been a dream of the members of the ashram to establish a colony of Harijan families, but beyond having a few of them we were not able to make further progress. Experiments in tanning were also conducted there. Manufacture of sandals was going on up to the time of disbandment. The buildings contain a spacious hostel easily accommodating 100 boarders. It has a fairly big weaving shed and other buildings exceptionally fitted for the uses I have named. The property contains 100 acres. I venture to say, therefore, that the site is none too large for the fulfilment of the objects mentioned, but it is large enough for the response that may be reasonably expected for some time to come. I hope that the Society will have no objection to accept the offer of the trustees and to take over the responsibility implied in the acceptance.¹

Your sincerely,

M.K. GANDHI

SJT. GHANSHYAMDAS BIRLA
PRESIDENT
SERVANTS OF UNTOUCHABLES SOCIETY
BIRLA MILLS, DELHI

C.W. 7937. Courtesy: G. D. Birla

543. LETTER TO ATMA S. KAMALANI

SATYAGRAHA ASHRAM, WARDHA,
September 30, 1933

MY DEAR KAMALANI,

I have your letter.

You have not given me any alternative to fasts. But you need not be agitated over my prospective fasts. They are not lightly undertaken and for the most part they are inspired and therefore I may not be held responsible for them. The inspiration may be a hallucination. Whilst the hallucination lasts, reason is suspended and all appeal to it

¹ In his reply dated October 4, 1933, the addressee accepted Gandhiji’s offer and requested him to ask those who were already there to continue to stay and look after the estate as before.

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
becomes vain. Do you not see this insurmountable difficulty in the way of myself or friends dissuading me for a fast so undertaken?

Yours sincerely,

M.K. GANDHI

SJT. ATMA S. KAMALANI
JT. HON. SECRETARY
‘FRIENDS OF INDIA’
46 LANCASTER GATE
LONDON W. 2

From a photostat: G. N. 1531

544. LETTER TO C. F. ANDREWS

WARDHA,
September 30, 1933

MY DEAR CHARLIE.

The pot is calling the kettle black! I see that anxiety complex is again on you? Have I not said ‘Do not trust newspaper reports’? I am not going out touring till doctors pronounce me as fit and in no case before 23rd October. I assure you that nothing will be done in a hurry. And why will you not trust the man on the spot? Surely Jamnalalji won’t let me stir out till he is quite satisfied as to my fitness for doing so.

After all I was able to spare a few minutes to peep into Verrier’s room. He was looking fit. He is making very steady progress.

My weight has gone up and the blood-pressure is decidedly less than at Bombay.

Love.

MOHAN

[PS.] What about Amiyo?

From a photostat: G. N. 3795
545. LETTER TO TEJ BAHADUR SAPRU

SATYAGRAHA ASHRAM, WARDHA,
September 30, 1933

DEAR DR. SAPRU,

I was delighted to receive your letter. Of course, I knew why you were not writing to me. I could never be guilty of thinking that the absence of my letter from you was due to want of affection or courtesy.

I am still trying to regain my lost strength. It is slowly coming to me. I am trying all I can to overtake the orthodox prejudices against harijans. I quite agree with you that “our attitude towards them is the darkest blot on our character”. I know that in this matter I can rely upon your whole-hearted assistance, but in writing to me I don’t like your confining yourself merely to the Harijan question. You may not take any active part in politics or political discussions, but surely you will not debar friends from the benefit of your advice, guidance and ripe experience. Whatever may be the differences between us in our outlook, you know that I have very high regard for you and your opinions. I would, therefore, like you to give me briefly your London experiences\(^1\) and the opinion you have formed upon them.

Seth Jamnalalji joins me in sending you regards.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

SIR. TEJ BAHADUR SAPRU
19 ALBERT ROAD, ALLAHABAD

546. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

WARDHA,
September 30, 1933

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

I got your letter of the 26th.

I had a letter from Mani yesterday. It appears she has an enlarged spleen. She is, therefore, under treatment for it and will take some time before she comes here. Budhabhai, Juthabhai and Bhagwanji at any rate will be there to run the Ashram as a Harijan colony. All three of them are honest, hard-working and efficient. We shall not have to pay anything to the first two.

\(^1\) The addressee had gone to England in April to attend the meetings of the Joint Parliamentary Committee.

Ramdas will settle down by and by. There is no cause for worry.

Anandi keeps fairly well. Prithuraj is in Calicut. Indu writes to me occasionally from Bhavnagar . . . .

I hope you are well. I hope Chandubhai also is all right. Lakshmi will probably go to Madras in a few days.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, p. 31

547. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

September 30, 1933

CHI. MATHURADAS.

I have you letter. It is long, yet short, because you could not have expressed yourself in fewer words.

I can give my opinion if I have with me copies of the letters I wrote to Gokhale and Bapa Sola. You must meet Gokhale. He is an honest man. Whatever opinion I may have expressed must have been only after hearing him. My impression was that Gokhale was not merely a banker. Now who is asking for money and for what purpose? It is not likely to be such a simple question as you think. But hear Gokhale’s version and write to me. Sarojini Devi said she would write to me about it. She has not written as yet.

Let Purushottamdas not be on the Orissa Committee. Would he not even give the money? Have you received any money? from any where?

Do meet Hasanbhai in connection with the market. Meet Lalji Sheth also. You can write to Mathuradas Vasanji and ask him. Even if the present owner gives a satisfactory answer we cannot know the real

\(^1\) Omission as in the source.
\(^2\) An extract from this letter appears in “Letter to Mathuradas Trikumji”, 30-9-1933
\(^3\) The Orissa Flood Relief Committee reason for the boycott. We cannot ask Tersey right now. Send the enclosed letter to him.

What has appeared in the Press about me is correct and yet not correct. Doctors will always write in that way. But anyone who knows will not be scared by that because my blood pressure was definitely higher there than what it is here. Increase or decrease in weight cannot have much to do with my health. But now 101 lb. is the very minimum. I am having sufficient rest. I take 3 lb. of milk. I may have to reduce the quantity now.

I am returning your letter. If you are not keeping good health there, you may as well stay at Singhadh when Mehta goes there. Or you may come here for a few day.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushial Nayyar

548. A NOTE

WARDHA,
September 30, 1933

This money is to be sent to the Servants of Untouchables Society, Delhi, as contribution to the Harijan Fund.

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat of Gujarati: G. N. 3071

549. VARNADHARMA OF THE FUTURE

A “Sanatani” Writes:

It is difficult to give a straight answer to the question posed here. Only a prophet could do it. Others can only hazard a guess. For me, awareness of the present and conduct in accordance with it, are sufficient. Theists as well as atheists can honestly sing: Enjoy who you

---

1 This presumably is the note referred to by Gandhiji in “Letter to Amrital V. Thakkar”, 14-10-1933.
2 A pen name
3 The letter is not translated here. The correspondent, referring to the article “To The Harijans of Gujarat” (vide “To the Harijans of Gujarat”20-8-1933) had expressed his doubts about the revival of varnadharma in its true spirit.
get today, for who knows about tomorrow?” Whereas the atheist’s pleasure merely consists of eating, drinking and enjoying himself, the theist would be pleased to forget himself in devotion to the Lord, that is, in the duty which falls to his lot. I regard myself as a theist and find fulfilment in making the best of what I can do today. As we sow, so shall we reap—that is, the future will follow the present—that is a certainty. Hence, I am not worried about the future of varnadharma. I would also ask “Sanatani” not to worry about it. Those like me who believe in varnadharma and accept my definition of it should think and act accordingly, and they would be said to have observed their dharma in respect of varna.

Moreover, there is another thing which also deserves to be borne in mind. The basic tenets of any religion should be such as could be applied universally. Those which do not fulfil this condition cannot be regarded as the basic tenets. If varnadharma is not such a principle, it owes its origin to certain time, place and circumstances, and, if one of them should change, it must itself change. If the varna is a device which is so short-lived, no thought need be given to whether it should continue to exist or not but I regard the varnadharma as defined by me as a universal principle. The existence of human society depends upon it. If my viewpoint is based on facts, varnadharma will certainly become universal in future, although it may then be called by some other name. Varnadharma implies that everyone must remain content with his hereditary means of livelihood. At the root of this scheme of things there is non-violence, the Divine law, simple economics and human reason. If it is not followed, a civil war, the like of which has never been seen, is bound to overtake us. As millions of people awaken, they will all want to become rich, they will all want to attain greatness, no one will want to take up professions which are regarded as low and class feelings will intensify. I for one feel that this could lead to no result other than fratricidal conflicts.

However, as the instinct for self-preservation is ingrained in human nature, man will escape this fate by taking recourse to varnadharma. Everyone will live practising the profession to which he is born, without regarding any profession as high or low. In that case it would matter little if people were to be known not as Brahmins or Kshatriyas but by some other names. Instead of four, there may be only two varnas, or, even more than four. One thing is obvious—that by observing the great law of varna, we guard ourselves against conflicts arising out of capitalism communism, etc, In such a structure, there would not be, on the one hand, excessive greed, concentration of wealth or arrogance and, on the other helplessness, destitution or poverty. All would live in harmony and no one would regard anyone else as high or low.

Having written this, let my fancy range a little farther. If anyone entrusted me with reconstructing a varna system and I happened to be in India, I would start with the Brahmins. If they become the custodians of knowledge derived from experience and of the code of conduct to be based on it, the other varnas would automatically fall into position. The Brahmins’ knowledge being self-evident and themselves being free from selfish motives, others will readily follow them. Besides, they will also have the power to influence others. The question as to who should be called a Brahmin will not arise. The so-called Harijan of today may become a Brahmin respected by all and the so-called Brahmin may not shrink from calling himself a Shudra. I shall encounter no obstacle in this age of my fancy, because the feeling of ‘high’ and ‘low’ will then have been wholly uprooted and as all will be following their hereditary professions, they will soon take their own places. There is not much point in prolonging the flight of my fancy. Hence, I conclude after thus indicating the way. However, this article of mine should mean that, since varnadharma has been accepted as a non-violent institution, there is no room in it for penal measures or for the use of force. If varnadharma is ingrained in human nature, it will revive spontaneously. If it runs contrary to human nature, it is in the fitness of things that it has disappeared now. Here we are talking of man, not as a certain species of animals, but as one that is progressively shedding the animal qualities and who, having come out of his delusion, is directing all efforts towards the realization of atman. Man is an animal created to discover his atman, and as atman all men are one. Hence, at some time or the other, man will rid himself of the mire of high and low and, of his own accord, accept varnadharma which fosters unity.

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbandhu, 1-10-1933
550. LETTER TO PADMA

October 1, 1933

CHI. PADMA¹.

You will forgive me, won’t you? Daily I wanted to write to you but could not for want of time. I hope you and Sarojinidevi² are all right now. Let me know your daily time-table of work. I will write more in reply to your next letter. Anandi, Babu, Bachu, Prabhavati, Mirabehn and Ba are with me.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 6144. Also C. W. 3499. Courtesy: Prabhudas Gandhi

551. LETTER TO SUDARSHAN V. DESAI

October 1, 1933

CHI. MAVO,

Are you as sweet as mavo³ is? If not, be. Try every day to improve your handwriting. Are you very happy there?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 5763. Courtesy: Valji G. Desai

552. LETTER TO DHIRU C. JOSHI

October 1, 1933

CHI. DHIRU,

I hope the fever has left you now. Spend the vacation there and rest. Gijubhai⁴ says that you can stay there.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 5316

¹ Daughter of Sitla Sahai, a Congress worker from U.P.
² Addressee’s mother
³ Dehydrated milk
⁴ Gijubhai Badheka, author and educationist
553. LETTER TO DUDHIBEHN V. DESAI

WARDHA,
October 1, 1933

CHI. DUDHIBEHN,

I often wanted to write to you but could get no time. It seems you feel quite at home there. I think Kusum’s dharma is, if she understands it, to stay in Ranavav and improve her health. I hope you are in the best of spirits. If there is anything interesting in Valji’s letters, please let me know. I enclose letters for all, Kusum, Balbhadra, Indu, Nanu, Mavo and Dhiru.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 7453. Courtesy: Valji G. Desai

554. LETTER TO D. B. KALELKAR

October 1, 1933

CHI. KAKA,

I got your letter. You kept me waiting for a long time. I understand the reason now.

You need not get Jamnalalji’s permission, since you are an inmate of the Ashram. . . .

I have dispatched today to Ghanhyamdas the letter regarding the handing over of the Ashram. Personally I liked your letter to Vallabhabhai.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 9479. Courtesy: D. B. Kalelkar

---

1 Kusum Gandhi, who suffered from tuberculosis
2 Balbhadra N. Patel
3 Addressee’s sons Vimalchandra Desai and Sudarshan Desai
4 ibid
5 Some portion has been scored out here.
555. LETTER TO JAISHREE RAJI

October 1, 1933

DEAR SISTER,

You have sought May's blessings in the work that you have undertaken. You have them because it is no trouble giving blessings. You have not expressed a desire for anything more. Please do correct me if I am making a mistake in understanding you. And I shall certainly do whatever I can after you have put in plain words what you want.

Vandemataram from

MOHANDAS

From a facsimile of the Gujarati in Bapujini Sheetal Chhayaman, facing p. 8

556. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

October 2, 1933

CHI. MARY,

Duncan brings me your and his love as I am walking on the terrace. I shall treasure that love. But I want you to be free from your weakness and be up and doing as early as possible. May God restore you soon. Of course I keep myself informed of your progress.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G. N. 6006. Also C. W. 3332. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

557. LETTER TO PREMLILA THACKERSEY

October 2, 1933

DEAR SISTER,

I got your letter. Mathuradas also says in his letter that you worry about me. But I am quite happy here. I eat with appetite, the weight is increasing and the blood-pressure is coming down. There is, therefore, no cause for worry, nor is it necessary to go to Mahabaleshwar. I don’t think I would be able to do as much work there as I can here. Besides, I don’t see any immediate need for incurring so much expenditure.

I hope your cold has left you completely.

Ba has gone to Nagpur today for khadi work.

My blessings to the girls.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 4833. Courtesy: Premlila Thackersey

558. LETTER TO C. F. ANDREWS

Unrevised

SATYAGRAHA ASHRAM, WARDHA,

October 3, 1933

MY DEAR CHARLIE,

I have your letter.

I understand what you say about the better and responsive atmosphere is Orissa and I am glad of it. Thakkar Bapa cannot possibly go to Orissa at least just now, but the next best man will be there within a short time.

I corrected your use of the expression ‘fast unto death’, but I see that you have returned to it again. I told you that hitherto all my fasts have been conditional; even the last one was conditional. I can well understand anybody being repelled by an unconditional fast unto death, though I have told you that in my scheme of life even an unconditional fast, under very extraordinary circumstances, has a place, but I don’t need to argue out that extreme position. All I want to say is that in your discussion with Gurudev you should take care to avoid arguments around a ‘fast unto death’, taking the expression literally. Therefore, the best thing would be to centre your discussion around all my fasts which Gurudev has not been able to reconcile himself to, as perhaps the last one, and there too it would be one thing to say that the facts hitherto known will not justify the fast, and another thing to say that under no circumstances could a fast over the Harijan issue, such as I raised at Yeravda, be justified. I have before me a most painful but interesting case in which I have invited a worker to take a penitential fast for the sake of truth and invited a worker to take a penitential fast for the sake of truth and honour. I have

1 From August 16 to 23.
discussed it in the pages of the Gujarati Harijan.¹ You will find it also discussed in the English Harijan next week.²

I hope you are not overworking yourself. I am getting on famously. I wrote to you day before yesterday setting you at ease over my prospective tour.

Love.

MOHAN

From a photostat: G. N. 3796

559. LETTER TO J. C. KUMARAPPA

Unrevised

October 3, 1933

MY DEAR KUMARAPPA,

Your letter has come exactly at the time I expected it. When you acknowledge this you must tell me all about your physical condition. You can come here whenever you like and can any time before the 23rd inst. I may begin the tour after that if the doctors give me a certificate of discharge.

I am doing a fair amount of work and seeing visitors at least for one hour during the day. This is always exceeded. Therefore, you need not worry and I know that you would not tax me.

I hope that your sister is bravely putting up the domestic sorrow that God has sent her. I have come to see that such sorrows are sometimes more real gifts from God than unbroken happiness which is dependent upon external circumstances.

Chandrasankar who is helping me wishes specially to be remembered to you. I expect Kakasahab to be here any time during the week, and he may remain here a little while.

Love.

BAPU

SJT. J. C. KUMARAPPA
C/o C. V. NARASIAH, ESQ.
COIMBATORE (S. INDIA)

From a photostat: G.N. 10100

¹ Vide “A case for Fasting”. 27-10-1933.
560. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

October 3, 1933

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

I got your letter.

* * *

You will read in one of the papers my letter regarding the Ashram. If necessary, I will send Totaramji. Parikshitlal also will stay there. There will be no difficulty.

I have written to Mani and told her that she should come here only after getting herself the right treatment.

. . . will always go on like that. To try to reform him is like trying to straighten a dog’s tail by tying it to a stone. You must have read the news about Krishna Nehru.

I wish to attend to some other work now, and so I will stop here today. Jamnalal, who is sitting near me, asks you not to worry about him. If necessary, he will go to a hill station. His weight has gone up to 190.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, p. 32

561. ADVICE TO JAPANESE BUDDHIST PRIESTS

October 4, 1933

I was glad to be able to see you and have interesting conversations. I have carefully gone through your long letter to me.

I can fully appreciate your desire to see that Buddhism is revived in India; only, I would like to point out to you that whatever Buddhism may mean, the substance of the teaching of Gautama, the

1 Omission as in the source
2 Vide “letter to G. D. Birla”, 30-9-1933, which appeared in Harijan, 7-10-1933.
3 Totaram Sanadhya, an Ashram inmate
4 The name is omitted in the source.

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
Enlightened One, has been incorporated in Hinduism, and in my opinion, comparatively speaking, the purity of the teaching of that great reformer has been best preserved in India. In the countries of its adoption it has, as it seems to me, deteriorated: as for instance, Buddha’s teaching essentially was not merely Brotherhood of Man but the Brotherhood of all Life. Nor is this to be wondered at. In my opinion, Buddha did not found a new religion. As a Hindu of Hindus, he gave a new orientation to Hinduism. I would, therefore, suggest to you that you should amplify your knowledge of that teaching by studying Sanskrit and Pali. A study of Sanskrit is necessary for knowing the setting in which the teaching was fitted and from which it was derived, and it is obvious that a study of Pali is necessary because the original scriptures are to be found in that language. And, since you have decided to cast in your lot with the Indian people, I would commend to your attention the necessity of learning Hindi or Hindustani.

Lastly, may I suggest to you that whatever religious revival may be necessary, it can only be done not by eloquence, not by learning, but by daily increase in the purity of one’s life and a prayerful reliance upon the Great Intelligence, the Living Truth that animates, illumines and sustains the universe.

The Hindu, 12-10-1933

562. LETTER TO MRIDULA SARABHAI

WARDHA,
October 5, 1933

CHI. MRIDULA,

I have your letter. Do stay on for your treatment and to see about the preparations for Mani and then come. I am here only till November 7. I shall give whatever time you want. I may not be able to spare all the time at once. Surely you will be here for a few days? The climate is beautiful.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 11184. Courtesy: Sarabhai Foundation

1 The addressee and Manibehn Patel reached Wardha on October 25.
563. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

WARDHA,
October 6, 1933

BHAISHRI THAKKAR BAPA,

I got both your letters. I am glad you reminded me about Bidhan Roy. My memory seems to be slumbering. If you had not reminded me, I would have cleanly forgotten about the matter. Now a letter will go immediately tomorrow.

And now about the tour. Ghanshyamdas writes and tells me that I should not start before November 15. Dr. Khare\(^1\) also has been insisting that I should take rest for at least six weeks. I, therefore, have agreed not to start before November 8. I will start on Wednesday, the 8th. This has satisfied Jamnalalji. I also feel that there will be no harm if I rest till the 8th. Meanwhile, I will be able to attend to some work which has been pending with me. I shall also have to think about the Harijan settlement. Then there is the problem of the workers in Ahmedabad, and some matters here, too, which require my attention. If, therefore, you think that this delay is justified, please make the necessary changes in the programme. Draw up the entire programme of the tour as follows. Let Jamnalalji draw up model programme for the Central Provinces in consultation with the local workers. Assign to the other provinces their respective weeks and ask them to draw up their own programmes. If this is done, it will not be necessary to make changes afterwards. When the programme is ready, we need not publish the whole programme for nine months at a time but publish in advance the programme for one province only, so that, if we find it necessary to make minor changes, there may be no difficulty. If we follow this method, we may publish the programme for just two provinces together and afterwards the programme for the next province as soon as we have finished one. This will also make the work easier. I will write more after Jamnalalji is ready with his suggestions.

And now about the Harijan settlement, namely, what name we should give to it. I feel that we should not use the word Harijan, but that our aim should be clear in the name that we select. Our ultimate aim is that we should stop using the name Harijan, or that all of us should become Harijans. Hence Vinoba has suggested the name Sarvodaya' Mandir, or Samabhava' Mandir. I naturally like the first name, for I called Ruskin’s famous book by the name Sarvodaya as far back as 20 years ago. That name, therefore, will include Harijans. Discuss the suggestion with Ghanshyamdas and let me know. Explain to him the other thing, too, which I have mentioned in this letter.

\(^1\) Dr. N. B. Khare

I am very happy that Bhai Babal1 listened to your advice and mine. If he had not withdrawn his name, a very embarrassing situation would have arisen.

BAPU

[PS.]

We need not make any provision for Delhi, as we need not make any for Kathiawar. I had heard all about Shrivastavaji’s performance long ago. But to whom can we complain when our own people turn against us?

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 1124

564. LETTER TO MANEKAL

October 6, 1933

CHI. MANEKAL,

You did well in writing to me. What is your present job? What is your pay? The other things you will know from my letter to Radha.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./XXIII, 369

565. LETTER TO RADHA GANDHI

October 6, 1933

CHI. RADHA,

I plead guilty. I remain so busy that sometimes I forget the dear

1 Welfare of all
2 Equality of all
3 Unto This Last.
4 Babalbhai Mehta
ones like you and leave them without [letters]. I remember you all but writing letters to you continues to be postponed on and on. I am content to know that you are all happy and find pleasure in your own respective fields. I would only hope you served as much as you can and bless you for a long life. Whether I write or not I do like your writing to me. I see your face always before me. I am all right. Ba is here. Ramdas and his wife are also here. Devdas is in jail.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./XXIII

566. LETTER TO SULTANA, WAHEED AND HAMEED QURESHI

October 6, 1933

DEAR SULTANA, WAHEED AND HAMEED,

I should have letters from you. I am glad to know that you are happy there. Anandibehn, etc., will be going there in a few days. What have you learnt from the Koran?

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C.W. 11273. Courtesy: Gulam Rasul Qureshi

567. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

October 6, 1933

CHI. MATHURADAS.

I have not been able to reply to your letters on time. I have already written to you about the moneys of the Swaraj Party. Your last letter is yet to come. Till then I have nothing to write.

I have received a long and amusing letter in English from Tersey. I am glad that I wrote. Tell him that I shall not burden him by writing to him again. His health must have improved. If the doctor thinks that it is necessary for him to rest for more than 20 days he should do so. He can do a certain amount of service even while taking rest.

Send the money for Utkal when the new treasurer is appointed or when you are reinstated in your position. Do not worry if that takes some time. In the meantime Harakhchand will be ready to go. Have you heard that Andrews has been made president? I met Sahu. He seems to be a nice man.

I am also returning herewith another letter which you may consider important.

Did you like my letter to Ghanshyamdas? Did you like the step taken? Can you suggest another name for the Ashram?

My health is steadily improving. It was never really bad.

Lakshmi will leave for Madras tomorrow. You would be in touch with the ladies.

Let me know if you think it is necessary that I should write to someone about Orissa.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

568. LETTER TO ANASUYABEHN SARABHAI
October 6, 1933

CHI. ANASUYABEHN,

Anandi and others are getting on well. Anandi is a devoted worker and so when she read the news of Nimu’s going there, she at once said: “Do not send me to Sharda Mandir. Make arrangements for my being taught English, Gujarati and arithmetic, so that I can learn something of these and also serve others.” This pleased me much and I promised her that I would write to you to that effect. Ramnarayan Pathak and Maganbhai are there in the Ashram. One of them can arrange for her to be taught. Following Anandi, Bachu’, Babu ‘and Vanamala’ may also want to do the same. Should they so decide a small class can be formed. Either the girls or I should go

1 Harakhchand Motichand Shah, who had been sent to Orissa in order to help the local Flood Relief Committee
2 Maganbhai P. Desai
3 Nirmala, sister of Mahadev Desai
4 Sharda C. Shah
5 Vanamala Parikh
there. I shall say nothing about myself as Gulzarilal is himself coming to oversee my work.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Tell the girls’ teacher to write and tell me what he teaches.

From the Gujarati original: S. N. 32792

569. NOTES

HOW TO COLLECT FUNDS

Many workers of institutions think that they can get funds for their institutions for the mere issuing of appeals. But that is true only of very few well-known and tried workers. A Muller or a Ramakrishna has been known to get funds even for the silent praying. Mere mute wishes of such rare saints reach people like irresistible wireless messages. But the majority have to plod before they can get any response. And the best way of plodding is to pay house-to-house visits. When a cause is just, as ours undoubtedly is, and the worker is known for his or her integrity, response is assured. Such house-to-house begging is also the best propaganda. Donors are, and should be always exacting. They want to know, or ought to want to know, all the needs of the institution they are called upon to support. Therefore, workers who go on begging expeditions have to be well armed with facts and figures. What is, however, most needed is patience. They must be prepared even to put up with insults. In the end they will find that funds cause the least difficulty when honesty and ability are assured. In the absence of these two qualities, funds are a burden as we find today regarding many so-called religious institutions which are decaying, though they have ample funds.

Unscrupulous and indolent trustees are ill able to discharge their trust, and the moneys in their hands are either locked up profitlessly or wasted on irreligious orgies or other superstitious practices.

A SUGGESTION FROM AMERICA

An American friend, who knows Indian conditions somewhat and is deeply interested in Harijan work, writes in reply to a letter from me:¹

¹ Only extract from the letter are reproduced here.
I feel that where there is room the reports would be more effective if, in addition to telling what has been done, they would also compare it with the previous conditions. Also to tell the approximate number of Harijans in each such locality, so as to show how many people the new facilities will serve and how adequate or inadequate even the improvement is. Also to contrast it with corresponding facilities for upper caste people in the same place.

The underlying note of the American friend’s suggestion is a plea for more truth. The reports of our work can never be too accurate. They must be mirrors both of our strength and our weakness. We may not, therefore, embellish them. Too often reports are made attractive by rosy pictures of institutions to which they refer. But not being true to life, they share the fate of ordinary newspaper paragraphs or advertisements. Readers simply do not read them or, when they do, they distrust them. Comparative statements, such as the writer suggests, will better enable the reader to grasp the meaning of figures and facts. Reports should never contain declamations or writers’ opinions, except when the latter are relevant. They should be brief and to the point. When there is no apparent progress, workers very often say they have nothing to report. Such men forget that what is wanted is a truthful record of their activities. If, therefore, systematic work has been done, a correct record of it cannot fail to be of great value to other workers. We may not always command success, but we can always show increasing effort and concentration which are forerunners of success.

VALUE OF REPORTS

Thakkar Bapa has often complained to me that the various organizations do not send prompt periodical reports and those that are sent often contain opinions and declamations rather than facts and figures. Secretaries and workers do not always realize that reports are required, not for the pleasure of the central organization, but for the guidance of the centre in framing its policy from day to day, for checking and co-ordinating the work of the different organizations and for informing the public from time to time of the progress of the movement. The duty, faithfully performed, of drawing up reports will automatically stimulate the activity of workers all round, and keep organizations up to the mark. Thus, if all workers sent in their reports of work done on the Harijan Day (24th September last), it would be possible to have an idea of the successes and failures in the various provinces. It would also be possible then to know what instructions to issue for the next Harijan Day. I hope, therefore, that, if such reports have not already been, they will be, sent at once to the headquarters in Delhi. And if any reader has anything striking to report about his experiences, I would ask him to send them directly to me. I hope that all the reports would contain accurate account of takings and expenditure incurred in making preparations for the observance of the Day.

_Harijan, 7-10-1933_

570. WHAT THEY BELIEVE

Rao Bahadur M. C. Rajah sent me some time ago a copy of his speech, delivered at the Legislative Assembly on 24th August last, in connection with the Temple-entry Bill¹. The reader will find below copious extracts² from that speech, which interruptions, his repartees and some other non-historical portions omitted.

The value of the speech consists, not so much in the accuracy of his historical statements, as in the fact that many people actually believe in them with as much tenacity as the so-called sanatanists, who credit Harijans with hardly any human rights, believe in statements supporting untouchability. The issue will ultimately be decided, not by historical evidence or by interpretation of Sanskrit texts of doubtful religious value, but by the prayerful and incessant labours of reformers of sinless purity. No religion has ever lived on its past achievements. It dies unless it is nourished and sustained by the continuing _tapas₃_ of its votaries. Not by learning but by right conduct can religions flourish. Untouchability, as we practise it today, crept in when watchfulness of pure custodians waned. It will only go when an unbroken and unbreakable chain of continuing _tapas_ is established. Not even a unanimous verdict of all the pundits and _shastris_ will remove the idea of high and low which has been dragged into the minds of the masses since generations past. The latter will want the evidence of the practice of those whom they believe to be pureminded representatives of their religion.

¹ Introduced by Ranga Iyer.
² Not reproduced here
³ Austere effort
Nevertheless, I commend Rao Bahadur Rajah’s speech to the students of Hinduism from the historical standpoint. It is of some importance to have it indubitably proved that the Harijans of the South, at any rate, represented a civilization which was destroyed by a conquering race, calling itself Aryan (noble) in contempt of the original inhabitants, whom it used for its own selfish ends and reduced to slavery. I must confess that I have always entertained grave doubts as to the truth of the story. I should refuse to credit such claimants of superiority with being repositories of a noble religion. If the historical evidence is beyond question, one is forced to the conclusion that all that is noble in Hinduism came, not from the conquerors, but from the conquered and that untouchability is a corruption which the conquerors superimposed upon it, whilst they adopted the religion and culture of the conquered. Whichever way the truth lies between the two schools of thought, untouchability is a recognized evil that has to be removed if Hinduism is to live. It is further clear that, according to the two schools, Hinduism, whether it is indigenous or imported, did not, in its original state, have any taint of untouchability about it. And in any case, now that there is no distinction between the non-Aryan and the Aryan, who is said to have come from outside India and has fused with the original inhabitants of the country, it is not of much, if any, practical importance to decide or even know who was truly Arya or noble. What is of tremendous importance is the fact that the monster of untouchability will tax the resources of all Hindus before it receives its death-blow.

_Harijan_, 7-10-1993

571. LETTER TO KRISHNA NEHRU

[October 7, 1933]

CHI. KRISHNA,

You are now going to be reborn, for marriage is a sort of rebirth, is it not?

Swarup1 came as a bride to Kathiawar but persuaded her husband to go and settle down in her old province—U.P. Ranjit claims to be a Kathiawari as well as a Maharashtrian. Gunottam is only a Gujarati, and I do not think you will try to take him away to

---

1 Vide the following item.
2 Vijaylakshmi Pandit, addressee’s elder sister
Allahabad. You will have to make Gujarat your home, or may be Bombay. My only wish is that wherever you are, may you be happy and add lustre to the already bright name of your illustrious parents. May God help you and Gunottam. I am unable to attend your marriage, so I shall have to content myself with sending you my blessings.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

[From Hindi]

_Koi Shikayat Nahin_, pp. 113-4

572. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

_October 7, 1993_

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

I have your two letters. The first did not call for a reply.

I see that Krishna’s marriage comes off on 20th inst. I am glad. I must not attempt to come to Allahabad. It is much better for me to remain in the _purdah_ till the medical men declare me to be quite fit. Herewith a letter¹ for Krishna.

I see Mother is not yet quite out of the wood. Let us hope she will be fit enough to attend the wedding.

Your article² for the D. H. I like very much. I am sending it to Agatha for such use as she can make of it. She is a wounderful worker.

Mira had forgotten all about the note of her prison experiences. Her draft is now ready. It will be sent to you to be handed to Andrews and such other use that you may wish.

I am thinking out what is possible to do for the workers.

What is this I read about Tandon’s differences? Have you seen the paragraph?

Love.

BAPU

_Gandhi-Nehru Papers, 1933. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library_

¹ Vide the preceding item.
² This is not available.
573. LETTER TO MANIBEHN PATEL

WARDHA,
October 7, 1933

CHI. MANI,

I have your letter. See all the people whom you wish to see and then come. But please do not take this to mean that you may come in the next millennium. Do bring along Baba. He will like this place. I am improving, that is, regaining my strength. I shall be here till November 7.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRIMATI MANIBEHN PATEL
RAMNIVAS, PAREKH STREET
BOMBAY 4

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna patro-4: Manibehn Patelnne, p. 109

574. LETTER TO JIVANJI D. DESAI

October 7, 1933

BHAISHRI JIVANJI,

I got both your letters. I had read your notice. It is all right. Arrange to send Bablo here after Diwali. He has promised to come. He has, therefore, bound himself. I hope he will keep his promise. I have not received the list yet.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]
I will write the preface² to ‘Varnadharma’ as early as I can.

SJT. JIVANJI DESAI
NAVAJIVAN PRAKASHAN MANDIR
GANDHI ROAD
AHMEDABAD, B.B.&.C.I.RLY.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9931. Also C.W. 6906. Courtesy: Jivanji D. Desai

¹ Dahyabhi Patel’s son
² A collection of Gandhiji’s views published under the title Varnavyavastha. For the preface.
575. LETTER TO BIPIN PATEL

WARDHA,
October 7, 1933

CHI. BABA,¹

I have your letter. Learn to make each letter as beautiful as a pearl. Do come along with Aunt.² I would like it. You will certainly get opportunities to play; there are children of your age. Do you write to Grandfather?

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro-4: Manibehn Patelne, p. 163

576. SURRENDER OF THE ASHRAM ¹

[Before October 8, 1933]

We have given up the trusteeship [of the Ashram]. We have given it up not out of rancour but out of a feeling of oneness with it, because we saw that while keeping it under our control we could not observe our dharma. The Government may take it over, but are not doing so. I do not want it to be ruined . . . . Giving up control of the Ashram does not mean that we would never be staying there. I do hope we could stay there. Even if the Government sells it away, I hope that the inmates of the Ashram would settle nowhere but on that land. . . . may it become a place of pilgrimage for Harijans. May it be for them a temple. May it also be a place which would remind the caste Hindus of their own dharma. The caste Hindus should know that they have reason for atonement and that this will also mean service to themselves.

[From Gujarati]
Harijanbandhu, 8-10-1933

¹ Eldest son of Dahyabhai Patel
³ This and the following three items have been translated from Chandra-shankar Shukla’s weekly letter.
DEAR HARIBHAU,

Received your letter. I shall find time and discuss with Ramnarayan. You must be keeping good health. Jamnalalji tells me that you are preparing for the yatra. I am trying to be an ideal prisoner even here. The ethical codes prescribed by you for Chaitanya Muni appear to be correct. But if he does not have a spontaneous desire and depends on my advice, my duty is to prevent him from changing the dress, because the fault is not in that dress but in its misuse. Chaitanya Muni can become a thorough scholar and render great service by pointing out his religion without fear and following it in practice. He must endeavour to study in depth Sanskrit and Magadhi. This is of primary importance in the dress of a Jain muni. But the munis hardly follow it in practice. Untouchability or what is today known as varnashramadharma has no place at all in the Jain philosophy. They must vehemently point it out, and before they talk about it, they must be fully convinced about it. There is no restriction on a Jain muni teaching anyone. Hence, he must get around at least a few Harijan children and educate them. If he has been convinced that Jainism is not different from Hinduism, he must establish it. If this leads to boycott, he must lovingly face it and continue in his path of service. I think this includes everything.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Haribhau Upadhyaya Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

578. DISCUSSION ON DANGER OF CIVIL STRIFE

[Before October 8, 1933]

Q. Do you think this problem is so important that it must be tackled just now? Many people are afraid that this work will lead to fighting and civil strife among Hindus.

1 This letter appears in “Answers to Correspondents”, Before 8-10-1933 as a reply to a correspondent under “Answer to Correspondents”. The whole letter, with the exception of the first few sentences, has been Reproduced in Harijanbandhu, 8-10-1933.
A. Without doing this work we cannot reach the road to swaraj. And even supposing we did, that swaraj would not be true swaraj, but the reign of blind superstition and irreligion. Today many Hindus believe that Hinduism would perish with the eradication of untouchability. But I see the end of Hinduism unless untouchability is wiped out. In this age people do not fight with swords for the sake of religion. Religious awakening is not and should not be brought about nor religion protected at the point of the sword. But religions will be compared and judged by our reasons and hearts. Untouchability is opposed to reason and sentiment. It is a great crime. As Congressmen we must accept this. If in consequence only a handful of Hindus remain in the Congress, let it be so. The Congress will then be come a powerful organization. Today there is only a risk of civil strife. If, however, untouchability is not wiped out, civil strife is a certainty. Unless we take bold measures against untouchability, civil strife is bound to follow.

[From Gujarati]
Harijanbandhu, 8-10-1933

579. TALK WITH A WORKER

[Before October 8, 1933]

Q. Since removal of untouchability is included in the Congress programme, why should we not do this work as a political activity?

A. The movement will fizzle out if it is carried on as a political activity. It has political implications, and nobody can prevent them from following. But the work itself cannot be considered a political activity. If it is so considered, it will not last, for, it is a pure religious cause. Hence, to those who suggest that it should be restricted to a purely political aim and that such a difficult item like temple-entry should be omitted from the programme, I would say that if this is done, the movement will lose its very life.

[From Gujarati]
Harijanbandhu, 8-10-1933

1 This appeared under the title “Purely Religious Work”.

466 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
580. TALK ON NEED FOR HUMILITY

[Before October 8, 1933]

After taking a vow, do not start soaring in the sky but remain on the earth. We are but grains of sand, we are like particles of dust. I truly believe the saying, “For dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return.” We are born out of dust, we are mere images of clay. What should we be proud of? We are not capable even of building anything like the artistic anthill that ants can build. Sparrows, ants, etc., have attained perfection, which we have not. We are imperfect. We are not perfect even physically. That is why we seek perfection elsewhere. We are never content to be what we are. This “divine discontent” is put in us by God. Because of it, we keep on saying “not this, not this”, and endeavour to go further and further. An ant is perfect, because it does not wish to become better. But we have got to progress. We should, therefore, be humble and live as particles of dust, be ciphers. Modern physicists and astronomers tell us that each atom contains the entire universe within itself. The seers of the Upanishads had known this truth thousands of yers ago. That is why they said: “As in the individual so in the universe.” We can become part of the Divine when we become like an atom, become a mere cipher, for the atom is universal, imperishable. We must, therefore, learn not to soar in the sky, but to become like a particle of dust.

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbandhu, 8-10-1933

581. ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

[Before October 8, 1933]

I believe in the system of the four varnas. But the aim of the varna system was to determine and limit the field of occupations. Restrictions about marriage and dining were never regarded as part of the varnadharma., Ordinarily, people will naturally marry within their own varna but we know from historical evidence that there have always been inter-varna marriages in certain circumstances. I have

---

1 The report, which appeared under the title “From the Mail Bag”, gives only a gist of Gandhiji’s answers to the correspondents.

2 A gentleman had asked why, since Gandhiji believed in the system of the four varnas, he approved of inter-varna marriages.
gradually come to the firm conclusion that as a result of complete confusion in the matter of the choice of occupations there is a total chaos in the functioning of the varna system as well. Today varnadharma exists only in name; the beautiful varna system has been abused to spread the degrading notion of high and low. I have no ready solution to the problem how true varnadharma can be established. But I have no doubt at all that its reival will depend on the present generation following the right path. Its outward form will perhaps have changed a little. In religious matters it should be remembered that we have to seek the spirit behind the outward form, that mere form without spirit is of no use.

Thank you for your frank letter.¹ No person can absolve another from the moral consequences of breach of vow. God alone can do that. But I do not know that God does. However, I can understand your difficulty. But I hope you will wear khadi as far as possible. You need not return the autograph.

(1) God is Truth.²

(2) Hence, for realizing God one should follow truth in thought, word and deed.

(3) Constant repetition of Ramanama from the heart is a sure means of realizing the self.

(4) Realization of self means realization of Truth.

Where there is a clash between sanatanists and Harijans, we should do our best to pacify the parties. We cannot accept foreign cloth, etc., that may be offered as gifts for Harijans.³

The ethical principles which you have explained to the muni seem all right.⁴ If, however, he does not feel a spontaneous call from within and depends on my advice, my duty is to dissuade him from giving up his holy dress. For, the fault is not in the dress itself but in

¹ This was in reply to a student from Poona who had obtained Gandhiji’s autograph by promising that he would spin for half an hour daily, but had subsequently written to Gandhiji saying that he could not keep his promise and requested him to absolve him from it. He had also offered to return the autograph. vide, “Advice to a student”, Before 10-9-1933.

² This and the following three replies are to questions about methods of realizing God.

³ This was addressed to a “Worker”.

⁴ This was in reply to a common friend who had sought Gandhiji’s advice on behalf of a Jain monk who wished to give up his holy dress which he regarded as an obstacle to public service.
its abuse. The muni can render great service by becoming a perfect scholar and fearlessly pointing out the path of dharma and following it himself. He should strive hard and make a deep study of Sankrit and Magadhi. This is the primary duty of those who accept the holy dress of a Jain muni, but few of them do it. They must emphatically tell the people that untouchability and the present-day varnadharma have no place in Jainism, after first convincing themselves about it. There is no restriction on a Jain muni teaching anybody. Hence, he should gather at least a few Harijan children and teach them. If they are convinced that Jainism is not different from Hinduism, they should explain that to the people. If in consequence they have to face boycott, they should do so with love and continue their service. I think this fully answers your question.

I see that you have become impatient.1 There is nothing wrong in being impatient in a good cause. Your ambition is good; I should like you to give it another and a better direction. I have always believed that young people wrongly entertain the ambition of going to England for study. It is a very expensive hobby. It is possible to have in India most of what you can get in England. I believe that it is wrong for us to entertain an ambition which only a handful of persons can realize. If anybody does want to realize such an ambition, he should do it with his own resources, not with the aid of a public organization or even with private help. If you do depend on outside help, you should ask for such help as others also in your position would be able to get.

As far as I can see, your aim in going to England is to earn more so that you can give more money for Harijan work. But you will have to admit that, no matter how much you give, your contribution will be a mere drop in the ocean. Hence, instead of following the tortuous path of earning more in order to give more, why should you not adopt a better way? That way is to dedicate yourself to Harijan work. That would not be like a drop in the ocean, but it would be a glowing example for countless others to follow. I want to impress upon you that education of the heart is infinitely more important than education of the head. And education of the heart can be had here in the same measure as anywhere else in the world. Moreover, it will cost you nothing.

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbandhu, 8-10-1933

1 This was in reply to a Harijan teacher’s request for help from the Harijan Sevak Sangh to enable him to go abroad for advanced studies.
582. SATYAGRAHA ASHRAM IN NEW FORM

[Before October 8, 1933]

The responsibility of the caste Hindus of Ahmedabad as also of the Harijans has increased as a result of the donation of the land and buildings of the Satyagraha Ashram for the service of Harijans. Very few institutions own so many buildings and so much land; I do not know of any Harijan institution as big as this one. However, land and buildings without men are no better than ruins. They have no independent value of their own. The big place is not going to justify itself if just any Harijans go and live there, nor is the object behind it going to be fulfilled. The Ashram can become an ideal institution and a place of pilgrimage only when worthy Harijans live there observing all the rules, and caste Hindus take interest in their progress, devoting their time and applying their talents, etc., to it. It is obvious that the caste Hindus and Harijans living in and around Ahmedabad alone can do all this. I hope both will do their duty.

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbandhu, 8-10-1933

1 This appeared under “Notes”.

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
APPENDICES

APPENDIX I

INTERVIEW TO "THE TIMES OF INDIA"

May 2, 1933

I have received messages from dear friends in England, which make me happy. They seem to have been convinced in their hearts about the propriety of the step I am going to take. They have not said this in so many words but that is how I interpret their messages. I was afraid that they might not be able to understand the uniqueness of this fast. But my fear has been proved to be baseless. Mr. Andrews has sent a message on his own behalf and on behalf of friends. Another message is from Mr. and Mrs. Polak. They have never hesitated to criticize me whenever they have not understood any of my actions. I had a vague fear that they might not approve of my present step. I have been receiving messages from friends in India too and I hope that in a few days’ time they will understand the propriety of my step. Whatever it be, I am becoming more and more convinced that it was not possible for me to avoid this fast. There was no other way if this movement was to be kept on a purely moral plane and saved from being besmirched by selfish and impure elements that have infiltrated into it. Now I hope that those engaged in it will start working with redoubled zest and fulfil the various tasks connected with the removal of untouchability, including the task of educating public opinion in favour of the Bill for the abolition of untouchability. I am convinced that the progress would have stopped if I had not taken the step. I wish that the sanatanists and reformers should work in co-operation during the coming weeks and remove whatever defects they find in the existing laws and come to a settlement.

You ask me [what I will do] if I am released. This is a question I really cannot at the moment consider.

[From Gujarati]

Mahade vbhaini Diary, Vol. III, pp. 279-80

1 Vide “Interview to the press”, 1-5-1933.
DEAREST BROTHER,

After much thought and destruction of several drafts, I have decided that the best reply to your ‘begging’ and most touching letter of the 2nd instant is the enclosed extract. I trust it will sustain you ever so little in the ordeal which will have begun when it reaches Yeravda. It would have been useless and, as you said in your first statement, embarrassing for me to try to dissuade. What remains for your friends and associates is to wish that you may come out of the ordeal not merely unscathed, but armed afresh with the strength of tapas for the struggle that seems without end.

I will not pretend for a moment that I approve of your fast. To one like me, born in Hinduism and bred up in it for long years, the arguments pro and con are thoroughly familiar. From sacred texts one might confute most of the reasoning in your statements. But beyond texts and mere authority is reason and humanity, on which you habitually fall back. Even in that ultimate court I fear we shall not be found on the same side. Our values are different fundamentally. The difference is radical, no sophistry can abolish it.

In spite of what you have said in the last revelation of your heart, I believe that too much self-communion and internal debate have undermined your judgment. The state of ecstasy when values are reversed, when day becomes night and night day, when pleasure becomes pain and pain pleasure, is rare even in the experience of mystics. The attempt to make it habitual and to adopt the language appropriate to that state as the language of everyday speech is, if I may use the expression, to walk on moral stilts. On occasions you appear to me, in strange contrast to your realism, to impose that mode of movement on the common men and women around you. The atmosphere in such circumstances is apt to be thick with disappointment and grievous failure. And if the only correction possible were self-correction, the master must needs find himself doomed to the cell of penitence, which is next door to suicide. You have enough philosophy to understand that to claim divine sanction for a course of conduct is to withdraw it from the field of discussion and deprive it of direct validity to other minds. Whenever I come across the claim in your writing I cannot help quoting to myself the famous line of Kalidasa:

\[1 \text{ Vide ‘Letter to V. S. Srinivasa Sastri’, 2-5-1933.}\]
"You appear to me to be confounded by anxious thought."

Yours always,

V. S. Srinivasan

ENCLOSURE

‘Revolution and Religion’ is a review by John Middleton Murry of a book called Moral Man and Immoral Society by Reinhold Neibuhr. The review appears in the Aryan Path of this month. Below are transcribed the concluding paragraphs in which reference is made to Gandhi.

‘What then are those who are convinced alike of the material and spiritual necessity . . . for the social struggle in the Western world? There is our tragedy. It is a most significant tribute to Gandhi that he should be the figure in whom the rigorous yet imaginative arguments of Neibuhr’s book inevitably culminate. Of the book itself, I can only say that it seems to be of an altogether higher order than any other examination of the menacing problem of Western civilization with which I am acquainted. It is a prophetic book; and I do not believe I shall be found the victim of romantic illusionism when I say that I believe it will prove to be the forerunner of a new and enduring political movement in the English-speaking world.’

Letter s of Srinivasa Sastri, pp. 252-4

APPENDIX III

LETTER FROM JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

Dehradun Jail,
May 5, 1933

My dear Bapu,

Your letter came today. I was half expecting it for your large heart never permits you to forget anyone. I have sent you a telegram already.

As my telegram will indicate, I feel utterly at a loss and do not know what I can say to you. Religion is not familiar ground for me, and as I have grown older I have definitely drifted away from it. I suppose I have something else in its place, something other than just intellect, reason, which gives me strength and hope. Apart from this undefinable and indefinite urge, which may have just a tinge of religion in it but is wholly different from it, I have grown to rely entirely on the workings of the mind. Perhaps they are weak supports to rely upon, but, search as I will, I can see no better ones. Religion seems to me to lead to emotion and sentimentality and they are still more unreliable guides. Intuition—undoubtedly there is such a thing, though where it comes from I cannot say! Perhaps from the stored up experiences at the back of the mind, the sub-conscious self.

1 Vide “Letter to Jawaharlal Nehru”, 2-5-1933.

The Harijan question is bad, very bad, but it seems to me incorrect to say that there is nothing so bad in all the world. I think I could point to much that was equally bad and even worse. All over the world there is this same Harijan question in various forms. Is it not the outcome of special causes? Surely it is due to something more than mere ignorance and ill will. To remove those causes or to neutralize their effect appears to be the only way to deal with the roots of the matter. But why should I write of these matters now! I do not want to argue in this letter as the stage for argument seems to be past.

It is hard to be so far from you, and yet it would be harder to be near you. This crowded world is a very lonely place, and you want to make it still lonelier. Life and death matter little, or should matter little. The only thing that matters is the cause that one works for, and if one could be sure that the best service to it is to die for it, then death would seem simpler. I have loved life—the mountains and the sea, the sun and rain and storm and snow, and animals, and books and art, and even human beings—and life has been good to me. But the idea of death has never frightened me, from a distance it seems fitting enough as the crown of one's endeavour. But at close quarters, it is not pleasant to contemplate.

The last fourteen or fifteen years have been a wonderful time for me, ever since I had the good fortune to be associated with you in various activities. Life became fuller and richer and more worthwhile, and that is a dear and precious memory which nothing can take from me. And whenever the future happens to be dark, this vision of the past will relieve the gloom and give strength.

All my love to you.

Yours affectionately,
J

[PS.]
Kamala is staying in Dehradun. I shall communicate your message to her.

Gandhi-Nehru Papers, 1933. Courtesy: Nehru. Memorial Museum and Library
APPENDIX IV

TALK WITH C. RAJAGOPALACHARI

May 4, 1933

GANDHI: Even jurisprudence admits the right of self-destruction. You will ask me whether Ramatirtha, Ramakrishna, Vivekananda did this sort of tapasya, whether the suicide of Ramatirtha—deliberate or resulting from a trance—produced any results, whether Jesus mounting the cross left any impact.

c. r. But Hinduism does not sanction suicide.

g. I don’t know. But Mahadev was telling me that there is a practice of drowning oneself in the Ganga.

c. r. That is to purify oneself with the water of the Ganga. I do admit that if you are the cause of all these sins you may commit suicide. Logically it would be your victory, but then you do not seek such a victory, do you?

g. I want to atone for the sins. Moral ends require moral means. Cardinal Manning was kept on three biscuits and water. It is easier to undertake twenty-one days’ fast than to die the kind of slow death as Cardinal Manning is said to have died. A moral reform can be brought about only through tapashcharya and self-purification. We should learn from the experience of scientists who have gone through this. My mother and I were born in families where such fasts were an everyday affair. They were a part of their experience. It is probable that my father did not approve of the severe fasts my mother used to undertake but she showed no ill-effects from the fasting and they made us respect her all the more.

c. r. This is only an instance of association of ideas. Can you defend your case by saying that just because your mother fasted you also must? If someone pierces himself with a needle, how will that convince people that it is sinful to regard a person as an untouchable?

g. Then supposing I fast only for a few days? Supposing I don’t die at the end of the fast?

c. r. The two things are not related at all. You seem to believe that there is a secret connection between self-mortification and people’s convictions. Buddha was the first to raise his voice against such self-mortification.

g. In a true fast the mind and the soul co-operate with the body. Buddha was against purely physical fasting.

c. r. Will you have the strength to think clearly after ten days?

1 Vide “Letter to C. Rajagopalachari”, 5-5-1933.
g. On former occasions I did have it. Thoughts become purer during a pure fast even though there may not be any outward sign of that. A co-worker undertook a fast for fifty-five days, still his thoughts have not become pure because his mind was not pure. The very first day he started discussing with me what he would do after the fast. Even now his mind is not steady. He wrote me a letter in which he described the impurity of his mind. But to a man who has his mind fixed on God or on some noble act things that were obscure at first gradually become clearer and clearer.

c. r. This can be true only to a certain extent.

G. In saying this you tread on dangerous ground. You must accept the conclusion of a scientist. One who is pure, who adheres to truth and wants to cling to it is as much a scientist as a physicist.

c. r. But this is an unnatural situation.

G. It may be unnatural for animals, not for human beings. If you wish to see the unseeable you have to become unseeable.

c. r. Do you wish to see the unseeable?

G. Yes, because I want to serve the Harijans in the best way possible. If untouchability is to be eradicated we must touch the hearts of 160 million people.

c. r. There is a superstition of touching wood to save oneself from ghosts and spirits and God is brought into it. But there must be a limit to such beliefs in the occult.

G. I am not ashamed of the occult element. You seem to say that it is harmful to believe in the occult.

c. r. Yes, if it results in death.

G. You want to have the cake and eat it, too. For the sake of argument I shall grant that fasts which end in death are wrong. Your argument implies that mortification of the flesh can never do good.

c. r. It may sometimes.

G. From the medical point of view?

c. r. No. Even from the spiritual point of view.

G. Then you have lost. If that is the case it should be left to the person who wishes to undertake a fast. I did not undertake this fast of my own free will. I was commanded.

c. r. All right. Can friends advise on this?

G. Certainly.

c. r. If there is an eighty per cent chance of death resulting from this, it is a gamble. You will say that it is a good gamble. I feel that you have been brooding over the same thing in jail and so you have lost your sense of proportion. You have a great fondness for conducting experiments. You are now experimenting with death and you are misguided in it. Can you show me even one person who approves of your step? G. Duncan, Andrews.
c. r. What could be the value of their opinion? My opinion has greater weight. Andrews does not even know how to lock a room and he is talking about locking up one’s life. And how can you claim fully to know God’s law? I tell you, you should be more cautious. It is possible to get inspiration from God sometimes but not always.

g. Then you accept the possibility of inspiration from God? If you accept this you have lost your case.

c. r. But the inspiration may be wrong in this instance. It is rashness to close one’s mind to reason. Sometimes God appears in the form of rashness, sometimes of the wicked, sometimes of the fish and sometimes of a tortoise. I just want you to realize that sometimes even you can be wrong. In this case I want you to realize that.

g. But how can I accept my mistake unless the result shows it? I have decided to undertake the fast in spite of myself. Mahadev will tell you from my letters how my mind has been working.

c. r. You are deliberately suppressing your thoughts.

g. If I accept your argument I should stop working altogether.

c. r. But there can be no such inspiration which is against reason.

g. It may not be against my reason...¹

There is only one aim, that of purification. My own purification as well as my co-workers’. Other effects will also flow from it. I see that impurity can exist in my presence. That means there is impurity in me.

I have not attained complete freedom from unwanted thoughts.

Suppose the things I consider impure are proved to be pure, I must still undertake the fast. There are impurities and I feel I am responsible for them. Moreover, it is a mistake to regard this as a political issue. The main thing is that this movement should be conducted in a purely religious spirit.

Religion is concerned with the inner self. It is a matter of the heart, of faith and of eternal verities. The body has no lasting value. God says that everything that has name and form shall perish. Even the sun is not eternal. Science also proves this. But our activities are concerned with material things. My fast is for a wholly spiritual purpose. How can I stand in argument with those who are intellectually much superior to me? But when it comes to what the heart says, I am able to hold my own against them because it does not require any knowledge of Sanskrit. It is a blessing that God dwells in the hearts of the poor and my fast is for heart-searching. There certainly is a tradition of undertaking fasts for rains and other material things... You must respect my convictions. You are telling me to dismiss them summarily. You may strive with me, argue with me. It is possible that I am mistaken but you are telling me to accept the possibility as a certainty. I should be a liar if I undertake the fast with the certainty that it would end in my death. So long as you cannot convince me, by quoting my own statements, that I am mistaken you should not undermine my faith. Nobody can attain to a certitude like God’s. But after all, am I not myself the captain of my ship?

¹ Omissions are as in the source.

[From Gujarati]

Mahadevbhai Diary, Vol. III, pp. 284-9

APPENDIX V

M. S. ANEY’S STATEMENT SUSPENDING CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE

POONA,

May 9, 1933

I feel sure that although the news of the fast of Mahatma Gandhi is bound to cast a dark shadow of anxiety and gloom throughout the country, it will be some relief to his countrymen as well as to his friends and followers throughout the world to know that Government has, at any rate, released him unconditionally and allowed him to observe his vow and practise his great penance as a free citizen. In a statement issued to the Press last night, after his release, he has expressed his views on the conduct of the civil disobedience movement which, I have no doubt, will receive the consideration they deserve from every civil resister. It is perfectly true that during the period of fast, the civil resisters will be in a state of suspense and as a consequence he has advised me to declare officially and suspend the civil disobedience campaign for one month or even six weeks.

In his statement he has emphatically stated what I have been saying more than once during the last four months in reply to various critics of the civil disobedience movement that the civil disobedience cannot be withdrawn so long as many civil resisters are imprisoned, and no settlement can be arrived at so long as Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel, Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan and others are in jail.

‘Indeed the withdrawal of the civil disobedience movement is not within the power of men who are out of prison. It is possible only for the original Working Committee to do so.’ I repeat the position so lucidly and emphatically enumerated by Mahatma Gandhi above, which is the only rational an constitutional position for the Congressmen to take on the point of withdrawal of the civil disobedience campaign. But the question of suspending the campaign to serve any definite object of a limited period undoubtedly stands on a different footing. It is no doubt a serious responsibility which I have been called to shoulder. But I am armed with a weapon—it is an advice that comes from one who is not only the author of the present civil disobedience campaign but the originator and sole authority on the science and practice of civil disobedience itself. In response to his suggestion which also strikes me as a proper thing to do at this time in order to eliminate from the atmosphere all the elements of excitement and render it pure for all of us to inhale, to be in a prayerful mood to invoke the blessings of the Almighty on the great cause for which Mahatma Gandhi is undergoing this penance and supply him with an abundance of spiritual food so necessary for him to sustain through this ordeal, I declare officially that civil disobedience shall be suspended for six weeks beginning with Tuesday the 9th of May.

1 Vide “Statement suspending Civil Disobedience Movement”, 8-5-1933.

In conclusion I repeat my appeal to every man and woman to utilize this period to the best of his or her ability and energy in the service of such work for the uplift of Harijans as may be most commending itself to him or her.

The Hindustan Times, 10-5-1933

APPENDIX VI

BREAKING OF THE FAST¹

So The Day arrived for which hundreds and thousands had prayed for. The scenes were as solemn as on the 8th May. Men and women of all faiths were represented there by those who were present on the occasion in response to the invitation of the door-keeper, Shrimati Sarojini Naidu, who for once in her life had forsaken her extravagant generosity and become niggardly in the interest of the patient, for whom she had kept tireless vigil. On any other occasion of rejoicing, she might have invited the whole city of Poona, but not that day. I had been expecting the Harijan boy who had entered into that contract with Gandhiji on the 8th of May to appear punctually on the noon of the 29th. I had entreated the door-keeper to find him out and allow him in. Unfortunately, I did not know his address; otherwise, I should have fetched him myself. He did not turn up, and the orange juice was supplied not by him but by the kind hostess, Lady Thackersey, who perhaps felt the luckiest woman that day, as Dr. Ansari, the proudest man. The Harijan boy was not there, but the door-keeper had flung the doors open to all Harijans, and the first and only garland offered to Gandhiji before the break of the fast was that of a Harijan girl, who then sat in the midst of her sisters of rank and station. In the centre and with Sjt. Amritlal Thakkar and Seth Jamnalal Bajaj, sat the Harijans among whom there were some who had come from far off Ahmedabad. With the name of Rama on our lips we began the function, which was inaugurated by Dr. Ansari with texts from the Koran on the spiritual meaning of fasting, during which the aspirant after grace had to feast himself on good and fast from all evil. Brothers from the Christ Seva Sangha sang Gandhiji’s favourite: “When I survey the Wondrous Cross.” Prof. Wadia sang the Parsi prayer which, as he said, could be the universal prayer; and Kakasaheb sang the verse in which the devotee offers his prayers to the embodiment of all good, of all freedom from passion and hatred, of all love and compassion, whatever be the name by which men call Him. Then came the Poet’s song wherein he invokes the Almighty to come with a torrent of mercy when the springs of life dry up and with nectared music when all the sweetness is missing. The Poet could not be there, as at the break of the September Fast, to sing it and so I sang it in his name. Last came the hymn of ‘the true Vaishnava’, which is almost as life-breath to Gandhiji and is sung on all occasions when we are called upon to face sorrow and joy with equanimity.

¹ Vide “Note to Mathuradas Trikumji”, 28-5-1933. This was extracted from “Sparks from the Sacred Fire-VI by Mahadev Desai.

Harijan, 3-6-1933

APPENDIX VII

TALKS WITH C. RAJAGOPALACHARI

June 1, 1933

GANDHIJI It is difficult for either party to retreat after having taken such a stand. The position of each is absolutely clear. I can very well imagine that Government wants ruthlessly to implement the policy they have adopted. I can understand its attitude. I am also absolutely clear in my mind as to our reply to it. We should not involve the peasantry and the masses in this struggle. We should not put any burden on them. We should depend only on such people from the educated or enlightened class who are willing to join our party. They also should not depend on any financial assistance from the Congress. Those who need it may secure it from friends, neighbours or others. They should uninterruptedly go to jail. There is no need for demonstrations. For instance, Congress meetings should stop. If necessary, a nominal dictator may be appointed. But I see that there will be difficulty in doing so; it will be as well not to appoint any dictator.

There should be no secrecy in the struggle. And no no-tax programme either. I have always felt that a no-tax campaign for swaraj will be a difficult thing. It is of course important but we have never been adequately prepared for it. The no-tax campaigns we have conducted so far have been necessarily limited in their aims. But conducting a no-tax campaign for attaining swaraj is no joke. Let us make it clear to the public through our statements that in restricting the movement we are not giving it up, or deserting those who have suffered but are taking the struggle to a higher plane. People should have faith that one day we are bound to get back all the land which had been confiscated. Those who do not have this faith may take it that they have lost their land. In wars people lost their lives as well as property.

1 Vide ”Letter to Mirabehn”, 3-6-1933.

We should once again let the people know our demands and our ideals. Let us put forward our programmes before the nation unhesitatingly and do whatever has to be done to bring the nation nearer the goal. I have discussed this with Vallabhbhai. I have thought much over this and have arrived at these broad conclusions.

C.R. But what about the people who have already lost their land, etc.? It is only this thought that confiscated properties will be returned that tempts me to secure power. I see from the constitution they are framing that it would not be difficult to get back the properties. I do not know whether I have this feeling because I am weak or because I understand the mind of the British.

G. There is no question of weakness at all. I have also thought of taking power in our hands on account of this and other such things. And Vallabhbhai has also agreed to it. But today we should not think of taking power in our hands at all. At the moment we should think only of keeping up the struggle on the highest level of intensity. It does not worry me if only half a dozen of we are left to do that.

C.R. 1. Can we do anything more on an organized basis in addition to what we can do as individual?

2. In this scheme it is impossible to keep up contacts and maintain organization.

G. Personally I would be satisfied with whatever I can do as an individual.

C.R. Since you forbid secrecy, plans of certain type become absolutely impossible.

G. I want to inspire the finest spirit of self-sacrifice in a few. For that the pure gold of patriotism is necessary. We will be able to build a beautiful edifice over it. If we are not able to do this the whole thing will fall like a house of cards. Let us manifest true satyagraha through this. One pure thing is much better than many which are not completely pure.

Morning, 6 a.m., June 2, 1933

C.R. Is there anything that needs to be done after your statement on the conclusion of the fast?

G. We should renew the plea I had made earlier for a meeting with the Viceroy. I will again ask for the Gandhi-Irwin Pact to be implemented, people to be allowed to collect salt and do peaceful picketing of foreign-cloth shops and liquor shops.

C. R. They have already sent a reply to your statement. Do you think we should write anything more?
I feel that we should scrupulously keep to the word I gave that negotiations would be resumed from the point at which they were broken off.

But they say we should go to them only after first completely withdrawing civil disobedience.

They can say this only after the negotiations start and the conditions for settlement are discussed. Where is today the agency that will withdraw civil disobedience? Who will withdraw it? So there can be no condition of withdrawal of civil disobedience till the prisoners are released. I do not at all feel defeated. We just cannot admit having done something wrong or having committed breach of the Pact. No settlement is possible on the basis of such a condition. If we agree to any such condition we would lose the game and will be ruined. Our claim is that there has been no breach of the Gandhi-Irwin Pact from our side. If they think otherwise, they can appoint an enquiry committee. I am ready to abide by the decision of an impartial enquiry committee. But they are not ready to accept any such suggestion. I feel this time also we will get the same reply from the Viceroy as we got on the previous occasion. He would say that, if we wanted to discuss anything without unconditionally and completely giving up civil disobedience, in his view there was no point in my meeting him. Still I feel it is necessary to write a letter not suggesting a way out but asking for an interview.

Do you not want to write anything to the Secretary of State?

I already know his views. Rangaswami had told me that Hoare had written to him a friendly letter saying that there was nothing in the White Paper that could not be changed and so he should go and see him. So Rangaswami went and saw him. Hoare thinks that it is his job to polish off rough edges and show to the world that he is getting co-operation from all the parties, even from the Moderates and the Congress. ‘It would be a good thing if Rangaswami could be persuaded to say something in favour of the reform. It would be equally well if he does not’. That seems to be Hoare’s attitude. Moreover, he runs the administration at Simla too. He is behind all this and not the Viceroy. He is carrying on Birkenhead’s policy in a more gentle way. I am not saying anything new in this because I returned from London with all this information. And all of them in England—Irwin, Baldwin, Archbishop of Canterbury—are defending his policy.

Irwin seems to think that there has been so much breach of the Settlement that it cannot be revived and so it is altogether unnecessary to refer to it.

We can raise the issue provided the discussion reaches that stage. But even if we meet, ultimately nothing will come out of all that. Birkenhead and [Lord] Reading also said: ‘If you do not want war you should accept what the Parliament offers you. Parliament will give reforms gradually. You should be satisfied with that. But at the moment there is no mutual faith or mutual respect at all.’
C. R. This whole chapter has been fully discussed by Sastri. shall we ask him his opinion today?

G. If you want to see him you may. He will of course not come here. At the annual function of the Servants of India Society he did not say anything special or make his policy known.

C. R. The policy you recommend can be followed only by a few as it is very revolutionary. But it will have no effect on either the Government or the people.

G. I don’t care. It is possible what you say is true but I am prepared for it. I am hurt by these pin-pricks. Only those who willingly set out will have to suffer.

C. R. Then the mass struggle comes to an end.

G. That exactly is going to be the key to the whole affair. We have made a mistake in letting the mass struggle go on without any plan. Only when the people have understood a definite plan from the beginning to the end, will a mass struggle come. When responsible persons feel that people are prepared to lose their property and are ready for even greater hardships, they will start the struggle.

C. R. Don’t you think that the call for a no-tax campaign in January 1932 was premature?

G. Of course it was. I had told Tandon and others in 1931 that I did not have faith in our strength to carry on a no-tax campaign for attaining swaraj.

C. R. If it was a mistake, should we not rectify it?

G. I will not say that the struggle should be called off even for that purpose.

C. R. Government will not return all the properties even if we withdraw the struggle.

G. Government will not hear of any such thing.

[From Gujarati]

Mahade vbhaini Diary, Vol. III, pp. 296-301

APPENDIX VIII

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS

July 14, 1933

I have been asked whether I will again start Harijan work after going to jail. In answer to this I can only say that I will have to see what kind of imprisonment it is. No matter what it is, I will try to see whether it is possible to continue Harijan work. Our struggle was started in 1920. We have expanded its scope through the Lahore and Karachi resolutions. I hope that the struggle will continue till we attain independence. I have one foot in Yeravda and one here. It is for you to see that our struggle continues. This is an informal meeting. Here nobody, not even the Acting President, has the right to call off the movement. Whatever I say here is also by way of advice. If you want to withdraw the struggle you should call the Congress Committee. If you allow me to write to the Viceroy my role will be that of a negotiator. I will have to get the approval of the Congress for whatever conditions I wish to propose. Independence will be a long way from any settlement that may be reached. It is not in the hands of the British to give us freedom. We will have to achieve it with our own strength. At the moment those who know are of the view that reforms will be introduced by the end of 1935. But before we attain independence we will have to fight and risk our lives for it. Every satyagrahi will have to chalk out his own programme for civil disobedience. Even thirty crores can offer individual civil disobedience, each one being his own leader. Or under the leadership of one person, a hundred men can get together and offer individual civil disobedience. In individual civil disobedience a man’s strength or enthusiasm can never be curbed. It is irrelevant what my position is. Under the constitution I have the full right to carry on civil disobedience. It is possible that I may be jailed before the All-India Congress Committee meets. Will it befit me or any one of you to obey the order when I come to know that I cannot talk with you more freely or an order is passed imposing some sort of ban on me? That is what I meant when I said in my speech that we are under constant restraint.

1 Vide “Speech at Leaders’ Conference, Poona-II”, 14-7-1933.

QUESTION: What is the position of the dictator of the Congress in individual civil disobedience?

ANSWER: One who offers individual civil disobedience need not ask permission from any dictator. Everyone becomes his own leader. There is no need for any head in individual civil disobedience. There is no need for any orders either.

Q. If any taluka wishes to sacrifice itself, can it do so?

A. Certainly. I wish that every taluka would do so. There is no need for any orders from the Congress for it. But that taluka should do so in the name and under the patronage of the Congress. . . . I am not itching to write to the Viceroy. If you do not permit me I will not do so. . . . The condition of releasing the prisoners of Garhwal and Meerut is not essential for a settlement.

Q. Can a person who is going to offer civil disobedience after a few months give his approval to your Suggestion of individual civil disobedience?

A. This is a delicate question. A person can give his assent but he should be faithful to the country and himself. . . . From their childhood I have taught my children to rebel against myself. . . . I don’t expect that one who gives his vote today will be in jail the next day. . . . As long as he lives it is not proper for a satyagrahi to say that the organization is without a guide. . . . Anyone who tries to appear brave is usually not truly brave. . . . I don’t consider as honourable conditions which do not protect the common public. . . . The Congress will not order any farmer to pay land

1 Omissions are as in the source.
Having considered very carefully the recommendations of the informal conference recently held at Poona and the discussions among Congressmen in the Conference and outside, and the advice tendered by Mr. Gandhi, I have come to the conclusion that the country’s best interest will be served by the following instructions being carried out:

Firstly, the civil disobedience campaign should not be unconditionally withdrawn in the existing circumstances.

Secondly, mass civil disobedience, including no-tax and no-rent campaign, should be discontinued for the time being, the right of individuals who may be ready for every suffering, and are prepared at their own responsibilities to continue civil disobedience being reserved.

Thirdly, all those able and willing to offer individual civil disobedience on their own responsibilities without expectation of any help from the Congress organization are expected to do so.

Fourthly, secret methods followed hitherto should be abandoned. Fifthly, all Congress organizations, including the All-India Congress Committee office, should cease to exist for the time being, provided however that wherever possible dictators in the provinces and all-India dictators should continue.

Sixthly, all the Congressmen unable for any reason whatsoever to offer civil disobedience are expected to carry on individually or corporately such constructive activities of the Congress for which they are fitted.

I regret it has not been possible to call off the movement, and it has become necessary for me to issue these instructions. I share with many others, Congressmen or others, the disappointment that Mahatma Gandhi’s very simple request, unaccompanied by any condition, for an interview with the Viceroy in order to explore peace possibilities, was summarily rejected. His Excellency has very wrongly allowed himself to be influenced by unauthorized reports of confidential proceedings of the informal conference which for the sake of furthering peace efforts were purposely held back from publication. His Excellency should know that at the conference overwhelming opinion favoured seeking such an interview for honourable peace. I hold it impossible for any Congress organization or its representative to accept the terms peremptorily laid down by His Excellency as a condition precedent to peace conversation. I hope the nation will compel revision of this attitude by developing requisite strength, whatever the cost be.

1 Vide “Interview on M. S. Aney’s statement”, 24-7-1933.

Despite the instructions, suspension of the campaign till the end of this month stands.

The Indian Annual Register, 1933, Vol. II, PP. 332-3

APPENDIX X

CABLE FROM RABINDRANATH TAGORE TO SIR NRIPENDRANATH SIRCAR

I REMEMBER TO HAVE SENT A CABLE TO THE PRIME MINISTER REQUESTING HIM NOT TO DELAY IN ACCEPTING THE PROPOSAL ABOUT COMMUNAL AWARDS SUBMITTED TO HIM BY MAHATMAJI. AT THAT MOMENT A SITUATION HAD BEEN CREATED WHICH WAS EXTREMELY PAINFUL NOT AFFORDING US THE LEAST TIME OR PEACE OF MIND TO ENABLE US TO THINK QUIETLY ABOUT THE POSSIBLE CONSEQUENCES OF THE POONA PACT WHICH HAD BEEN EFFECTED BEFORE MY ARRIVAL, WHEN SAPRU AND JAYAKAR HAD ALREADY LEFT, WITH THE HELP OF MEMBERS AMONG WHOM THERE WAS NOT A SINGLE RESPONSIBLE REPRESENTATIVE FROM BENGAL. UPON THE IMMEDIATE SETTLEMENT OF THIS QUESTION MAHATMAJI'S LIFE DEPENDED AND THE INTOLERABLE ANXIETY CAUSED BY SUCH A CRISIS DROVE ME PRECIPITATELY TO THE COMMITMENT WHICH I NOW REALIZE AS A WRONG DONE AGAINST OUR COUNTRY'S PERMANENT INTEREST. NEVER HAVING EXPERIENCE IN POLITICAL DEALINGS WHILE ENTERTAINING A GREAT LOVE FOR MAHATMAJI AND A COMPLETE FAITH IN HIS WISDOM IN INDIAN POLITICS I DARE NOT WAIT FOR FURTHER CONSIDERATION NOT HEEDING THAT JUSTICE HAD BEEN SACRIFICED IN CASE OF BENGAL. I HAVE NOT THE LEAST DOUBT NOW THAT SUCH AN INJUSTICE WILL CONTINUE TO CAUSE MISCHIEF FOR ALL PARTIES CONCERNED KEEPING ALIVE THE SPIRIT OF COMMUNAL CONFLICT IN OUR PROVINCE IN AN INTENSE FORM MAKING PEACEFUL GOVERNMENT PERPETUALLY DIFFICULT. THAT THE MINISTERS OF THE BRITISH GOVERNMENT SHOULD BRUSQUELY REFUSE TO RECONSIDER THIS SUBJECT OF A VITAL IMPORTANCE TO US WHILE ALL OTHER PROPOSALS CONTAINED IN THE WHITE PAPER ARE BEING FREELY REHANDLE DOES NOT SURPRISE OR HURT ME TOO MUCH, FOR HAVE THEY NOT OFTEN

1 Vide “Letter to Rabindranath Tagore”, 27-7-1933 and 7-8-1933.
EXULTANGLY PROPHESIED OF THE EVIL DAYS WHEN WE MIGHT BE LEFT TO FIGHT THE FRATRICIDAL TURBULENCE WITHOUT THEIR AID AND FAIL? AND NATURALLY THEY MAY LACK TODAY ENTHUSIASM TO HELP US IN MAKING OUR PATH TOO SMOOTH TOWARDS COMMUNAL RECONCILIATION. BUT THAT THE INDIAN MEMBERS OF THE CONFERENCE BELONGING TO PROVINCES OTHER THAN OURS SHOULD NOT ONLY REMAIN APATHETIC BUT ACTIVELY TAKE PART IN AGGRAVATING BENGAL’S MISFORTUNE IS TERRIBLY OMINOUS PRESAGING NO GOOD FOR OUR FUTURE HISTORY.

RABINDRANATH TAGORE

Home Department, Political File No. 3/17/33, pp. 16-7. Courtesy: National Archives of India

APPENDIX XI

ORDER RESTRAINING GANDHIJI’S MOVEMENTS

ORDER NO. S. D. 3806

TO MOHANDAS KARAMCHAND GANDHI

Whereas the Governor-in-Council is satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for believing that you, Mohandas Karamchand Gandhi, have acted and are about to act in a manner prejudicial to the public Safety and peace and in furtherance of a movement prejudicial to the public safety and peace and whereas the Governor-in-Council has taken into his consideration the record in writing made by the District Magistrate, Poona, of the Statement made by you; now, therefore, in exercise of the powers conferred by Sub-section (1) of Section 4 of the Bombay Special (Emergency) Powers Act, 1932, the Governor-in-Council is hereby pleased by order in writing to direct:

1. that you shall remove yourself from the village of Yeravda before 9.30 a.m. of this day; that you shall not enter Poona Cantonment area; that you shall reside and remain in Poona City municipal limits from 10.30 a.m. of this day; and that you shall not depart from the said municipal limits;

2. that you shall abstain from every act in furtherance of the civil disobedience movement or of any movement prejudicial to the public safety or peace;

3. that you shall abstain from encouraging or inciting any person to interfere with the administration of the law or with the maintenance of law and order or to commit any offence or to refuse or to defer payment of any land revenue, tax, rate,

1 Vide “Letter to Home Secretary, Government of Bombay”, 3-8-1933 and “Statement disobeying restraint order”, 4-8-1933.
cess or other due or amount payable to Government;

4. that except with the previous per permission of the District Magistrate of Poona you shall abstain from being present at or addressing or participating in any meeting of twelve or more persons or any public demonstration or procession.

The Governor-in-Council is pleased under Sub-section(2) of Section 4 to direct that this order shall remain in force for more than one month from the making thereof and until further orders.

By order of the Governor-in-Council, dated at Poona, this 4th day of August, 1933.

R. M. MAXWELL
SECRETARY TO THE GOVERNMENT OF
BOMBAY, HOME DEPARTMENT

Bombay Secret Abstracts, Home Department, Special Branch, File No. 800(4), Pt. V, p. 67

APPENDIX XII

EXCERPTS FROM VICEROY’S CABLE TO SECRETARY OF STATE

August 13, 1933

5. IT HAS BEEN EXPLAINED TO MR. GANDHI THAT THE ORDERS PERMITTED HIM TO INTERVIEW THE EDITOR OF THE “HARIJAN” AS ONE OF HIS DAILY VISITORS AND TO HAND HIM HIS MANUSCRIPT, AND THAT LETTERS SO FAR AS THEY DEALT WITH HARIJAN MATTERS WOULD BE DELIVERED TO MR. GANDHI.

6. GOVERNMENT ARE NOT AWARE WHAT MR. GANDHI MEANS BY SAYING THAT THEY HAVE ADMITTED PERMISSION TO DO HARIJAN WORK IN PRISON IS IMPLIED IN THE YERAVDA PACT, THOUGH IT IS TRUE THAT IN THE EXCEPTIONAL CIRCUMSTANCES PREVAILING IMMEDIATELY AFTER THAT PACT THE GOVERNMENT DID PERMIT MR. GANDHI AS A STATE PRISONER TO INAUGURATE THE MOVEMENT TO WHICH HE APPEARED TO BE DEVOTING HIS WHOLE ATTENTION. PROTESTS WERE MADE AT THE TIME ON BEHALF OF THE ORTHODOX HINDU COMMUNITY, WHO DID NOT AGREE WITH MR. GANDHI’S POLICY IN THIS MATTER, AGAINST HIS BEING ALLOWED FACILITIES TO CONDUCT PUBLIC CAMPAIGN FROM JAIL, AND IT MIGHT WELL BE ARGUED THAT MR. GANDHI, HAVING NOW AFTER A PERIOD OF FREEDOM COURTED IMPRISONMENT AGAIN ON A PURELY POLITICAL ISSUE, SHOULD NOT BE ALLOWED ANY SPECIAL TREATMENT THAT IS NOT GIVEN TO OTHER A-CLASS PRISONERS. NEVERTHELESS THE GOVERNMENT HAVE BEEN RELUCTANT TO TAKE ACTION WHICH COULD BE REGARDED AS UNREASONABLE

1 Vide “Letter to Home Secretary, Government of Bombay”, 19-8-1933.
INTERFERENCE WITH A WORK OF SOCIAL REFORM OR TO TAKE THEIR STAND TOO RIGIDLY ON THE FACT THAT MR. GANDHI IS BY HIS OWN DELIBERATE ACT A PRISONER CONVICTED FOR A BREACH OF THE LAW. IN SPITE OF THE INCONVENIENCE TO JAIL DISCIPLINE AND THE ANOMALY OF THE POSITION, THEY HAVE ALLOWED MR. GANDHI FACILITIES FOR PURSUING HIS WORK ON ANTI-UNTOUCHABILITY WHICH WILL ENABLE HIM TO MAKE AN IMPORTANT AND EFFECTIVE CONTRIBUTION TOWARDS IT. IT WAS NOTICEABLE THAT WHEN MR. GANDHI WAS AT LIBERTY HE DID NOT APPEAR TO DEVOTE THE MAJOR PART OF HIS TIME OR ATTENTION TO THIS MOVEMENT. HIS MAIN ENERGIES WERE EMPLOYED ON POLITICS AND ON THE CONTINUANCE IN WHATEVER FROM MIGHT BE POSSIBLE OF THE MOVEMENT OF CIVIL DISOBEDIENCE. HIS PRESENT CLAIM THAT HE SHOULD BE ALLOWED FROM PRISON TO CARRY ON HIS HARIJAN WORK “WITHOUT LET OR HINDRANCE”, AMOUNTS TO A REFUSAL TO ACCEPT FOR HIMSELF THE NORMAL CONCOMITANTS OF IMPRISONMENT, EXCEPT RESTRICTION ON HIS ACTUAL PHYSICAL LIBERTY, AND IN EFFECT IS A CLAIM TO DICTATE THE TERMS OF HIS IMPRISONMENT.

THE GOVERNMENT ARE SATISFIED THAT THE FACILITIES THEY HAVE ALLOWED ARE AMPLE TO ENABLE MR. GANDHI TO CONDUCT SUCH WORK IN FAVOUR OF THE REMOVAL OF UNTOUCHABILITY AS IS IN THE CIRCUMSTANCES REASONABLE. IF MR. GANDHI NOW FEELS HOWEVER THAT LIFE CEASES TO INTEREST HIM IF HE MAY NOT DO HARIJAN SERVICE WITHOUT LET OR HINDRANCE, THE GOVERNMENT ARE PREPARED, PROVIDED MR. GANDHI IS WILLING TO ABANDON ALL CIVIL DISOBDIENCE ACTIVITIES AND INCITEMENTS, TO SET HIM AT LIBERTY AT ONCE SO THAT HE CAN DEVOTE HIMSELF WHOLLY AND WITHOUT RESTRICTION TO THE CAUSE OF SOCIAL REFORM. MR. GANDHI HAS BEEN INFORMED ACCORDINGLY.

Home Department, Political File No. 3/17/33, 1933, pp. 38-9. Courtesy: National Archives of India

APPENDIX XIII

LETTER FROM V. S. SRINIVASA SASTRI

COIMBATORE,
August 27, 1933

DEAREST BROTHER,

Government might well have given you the old facilities. A curse has disabled them from generous or timely action.

But they haven’t conferred a right on you or made you a promise. What they conceded to you at one time and in one set of conditions they are not bound to 1 Vide “Letter to V. S. Srinivasa Sastri”, 30-8-1933. concede to you at another time and in another set of conditions. The order made after the Poona Pact, from which you quote, does not amount to an irrevocable or unconditional promise. You indulge in special pleading of a bad type when you charge them with a breach of promise. The addition of the words ‘made to a prisoner in their custody’ loses the point it might have had otherwise.

It might be said by an observer who wasn’t prejudiced against Government that, while Harijan uplift was dear to you, putting blame on Government was dearer. It has been said in my hearing by well-disposed persons that you would love nothing so much as to die in gaol and leave Government burdened with the responsibility.

Behind and beyond your present tussle with Government lies the future of the country. How can Congress best secure that future? Your answer is clear. But another answer is taking shape in people’s minds. It is that civil disobedience, both mass and individual, must be given up. A new policy, aiming at constructive national good in legislation, finance and administration all round has long been overdue and must be tried, over and above what is now called the constructive programme of Congress. I believe this feeling is common outside Congress, and is gaining ground inside Congress. How can this orientation be brought about?

It is so different from your present policy, in look so opposed to it, that one doubts whether you can undertake it. Perhaps your whole preparation and equipment lie in a different direction. It is no disparagement to anyone that he is not fitted to lead the nation in all contingencies and in all directions. Unfortunately no man, however big, can be always trusted to know his limitations and make room when the cause to which he is devoted requires it. His very greatness stands in the way of change. And as I have told you more than once, you have out-topped all other leaders so long and so decisively that there is no man in sight to take your place at once.
What a blessing it would be if you could be transformed and re-made, as it were, for the fresh era! But you are too good, too true to yourself to pretend you are the same teacher when the creed is no longer yours and the ritual is something you have never conducted.

In this sore strait, the country looks to you to play a greater part than you have ever played. (Pardon me: what I mean is the greater part of the country as I figure out the parties.) Save your individual conscience, pursue civil disobedience, seek the gaol and embarrass Government as you like; but leave Congress free to evolve a new programme. It simply cannot do so, while it has to give authority and countenance to individual disobedience. You remember I begged you to adopt this course when I was last with you at Parnakuti. You told me you put it to the Working Committee, but they would have none of it. Naturally and in a way properly too. The Committee couldn’t face the odium of abandoning you. I don’t wonder the thought was abhorrent to them.
The moment is come—in my opinion it came long ago— for you to say, ‘I set Congress free to try other methods. I have plenty of God’s work to do, for the nation’s welfare, with Harijans.’

There, then, I have told you the truth as it seems to me. May one hope that you will see the problem from a new angle? I know one thing. There is no self-effacement to which you are not equal. The only thing is, it must seem to you to be called for.

All that a friend and brother can do is to give an indication.

Yours affectionately,

V. S. Srinivasan

Letter s of Srinivasa Sastri, pp. 258-60

APPENDIX XIV

LETTER FROM JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

‘Parnakuti’,

September 13, 1933

MY DEAR BAPU,

In our recent conversation you will remember that I laid stress on the reiteration and clearer definition of our national objective. The objective of political independence has been finally laid down by the Congress and there is nothing to add to it or take away from it. We stand for complete independence. Sometimes a little confusion arises because of vague phraseology and misleading propaganda and it is therefore as well to remove this confusion by a reiteration of our political demand. Even the word ‘independence’ is used with a variety of meanings. Obviously it must include, as the Congress has clearly and definitely laid down, full control of the army and of foreign relations, as well as financial and economic control.

In regard to economic matters, the Karachi Congress by passing the important resolution on ‘Fundamental Rights and Economic Policy’ gave a lead and pointed out the direction in which we should move. I attach great importance to that resolution but I would personally like to go much further and to clarify the position still more.

It seems to me that if we are to improve the condition of the masses, to raise them economically and give them freedom, it is inevitable that vested interests in India will have to give up their special position and many of their privileges. It is inconceivable to me how else the masses can rise. Therefore the problem of achieving freedom becomes one of revising vested interests in favour of the masses. To the extent this is done, to that extent only will freedom come. The biggest vested interest in India is that of the British Government next come the Indian Princes; and others follow. We do not wish to injure any class or group and the divesting should be done as gently as possible and with every effort to avoid injury. But it is obvious that the divesting is bound to cause loss to the classes or groups which enjoy special privileges at the expense of the masses. It is also obvious that the process of divesting must be as speedy as possible to bring relief to the masses whose condition, as you know, is as bad as it can well be. Indeed economic forces themselves are acting with amazing rapidity today and breaking up the old order. The big zamindari and taluqdari system in the United Provinces has largely collapsed, though it may be kept up for some time longer by outside agencies. Even the condition of the zamindars is very bad and the peasantry of course are in a far worse position.

\[1 \text{ Vide “Letter to Jawaharlal Nehru”, 14-9-1933.}\]

We are all agreed that the Round Table Conference and its various productions are utterly useless to solve even one of India’s many problems. As I conceive it, the Round Table Conference was an effort to consolidate the vested interests of India behind the British Government so as to face the rising and powerful national and economic movements in the country which threaten these interests. Essentially, in international parlance, it was a fascist grouping of vested and possessing interests, and fascist methods were adopted in India to suppress the national movement. And because the mere preservation of all these vested interests in India cannot possibly solve our economic ills, whether those of the masses or even of the middle classes, the effort is foredoomed to inevitable failure. Even from the point of view of a democratic nationalism, as you yourself stated at the Round Table Conference, democracy and autocracy can ill go together.

Another aspect has to be borne in mind. The problem of Indian freedom cannot be separated from the vital international problems of the world. The present crisis in the world’s affairs is having its repercussions in India. At any moment it may result in a complete breakdown or in a violent international conflagration. Everywhere there is a conflict and a contest between the forces of progress and betterment of the masses and the forces of reaction and vested interests. We cannot remain silent witnesses to this titanic struggle for it affects us intimately. Both on the narrower ground of our own interests and the wider ground of international welfare and human progress, we must, I feel, range ourselves with the progressive forces of the world. This ranging ourselves at present can of course be ideological only.

These are some of the larger issues that fill my mind and I am convinced, not only that we ignore them at our peril, but that a true appreciation of them will vitalize and give new meaning to our struggle for freedom which we must continue till the full objective is achieved.

These wider issues are of great importance but at present, as you know, the minds of large numbers of our countrymen are greatly exercised over immediate national problems and especially the question of carrying on the struggle. The statements that you and Sjt. M. S. Aney issued some time ago to guide the country have, I am afraid, produced some confusion and there has even been some resentment in regard to particular directions contained in them. There is a vague talk, in quarters which ought to know better, that the Congress has been dissolved. It is obvious that nothing of the kind has been done or could be done under the constitution. Your directions and those of Mr. Aney were, I take it, in the nature of advice or suggestions to meet a certain position that had arisen. The Congress continues as before but it is clear that it cannot function normally when Government declare its committees to be illegal. There can be no regular offices or open activity. To recognize this fact and to adapt ourselves to it is not to wind up any Congress Committee, much less the Congress organization as a whole.

A necessary consequence from this was to avoid the possibility of a few newcomers who formed committees, when the old members and other reliable workers went to prison, or even individuals, committing the Congress to an undesirable course of action. As is known, we have had to face this risk in The past and unreliable persons have come to the helm of affairs in some local areas with the intention of obstructing and even stopping the very activities they were supposed to further. It thus becomes desirable to prevent such unreliable persons from exploiting the name of the Congress Committee. This of course does not prevent Congress workers in any area from co-operating together in an organized way for the furtherance of our programme.

Confusion has also arisen in the country about the implications of individual and mass civil disobedience. I appreciate to some extent the difference but this difference does not appear to me to be a fundamental one, as, in any event, civil disobedience is essentially an individual affair. Individual civil disobedience can develop into mass civil disobedience. Besides, you told me that if an organization felt strong enough to undertake the responsibility and the risk, it could, of its own initiative, take up mass civil disobedience. Indeed you were of opinion that a local organization could, in this manner go ahead in any direction which was not contrary to Congress methods or policy.

Stress was laid in your previous statement on the undesirability of secrecy, although you pointed out that there was nothing inherently illegitimate in secret methods. I think that most of us agree, and certainly I am of that opinion, that our movement is essentially an open one and secret methods do not fit in with it. Such methods, if indulged in to any large extent, are likely to change the whole character of the movement, as it has been conceived, and produce a certain amount of demoralization. Agreeing with this, some of us feel that, to some extent as for instance in communicating with each other or sending directions or keeping contacts, a measure of secrecy may be necessary. Perhaps secrecy is hardly the word for those activities and privacy would suit them better. Privacy of course is always open to all groups and individuals. Secrecy or the avoidance of it, as you said, cannot be made into a fetish.

But secrecy is certainly involved in the production of printed or duplicated news-sheets and bulletins. These bulletins have often served a useful purpose in the past in keeping contact between headquarters and districts and in sending information or directions. You pointed out to me the difficulties and undesirable consequences of running these secret presses and duplicating machines. Many good workers are tied up and have to avoid aggressive action; money has to be invested in such machines and frequently they are taken away by the police. Even from the practical point of view this continuous rain and tying up of workers is not desirable, and undoubtedly it sometimes results in demoralization. You suggested that the best way was to have hand written copies of bulletins, etc., containing the name of the publisher. Generally, I agree with all this and appreciate the force of your argument. But I do feel that under certain circumstances it may be desirable for a local or Provincial committee or group to issue bulletins of directions, etc., secretly. This must not be encouraged; indeed it should be discouraged, but a certain latitude in exceptional circumstances might be permitted.

There is one other small matter which seems to me rather ridiculous. It was right and proper, if I may say so, for you to court imprisonment by giving previous intimation of your intention to do so to the authorities. But it seems to me to be perfectly absurd for others, and even Congress volunteers, to send such notices or communications to the authorities. Any person desiring to offer civil resistance should openly carry on activities which further our cause and thus court arrest. He must not forget or ignore these activities and merely ask to be arrested.

This letter has become long enough. I do not mention here the many other matters which I had the privilege of discussing with you.

Yours affectionately,

JAWAHAR

MAHATMA GANDHI

POONA

Bombay Secret Abstracts, Home Department, Special Branch, File No. 800(40) (11)-C; also Mahatma, Vol. III, pp. 305-8
1. A CASE FOR FASTING

One who describes himself as a Harjian worker writes a long letter of which I give the following substance:

With the Chairman of the local Harijan Seva Sangh and a sister I went the other day to a village. We were in a bullock-cart. On the way the Chairman and the sister were engaged in conversation exchanging jokes. The sister seemed to be fatigued and lay in the Chairman’s lap. This familiarity somewhat startled me. On returning we were to take the train to the city from which we had started. We had to wait for a few hours at the station. The Chairman and the sister occupied a bench. I sat on the platform ground. It was a moonlight night. I had a mind to test them, for I thought that there was something wrong with them. I, therefore, pretended that I would sleep and told the Chairman: ‘We have yet to wait for some time. If you don’t mind I would sleep for a while. I am tired. Will you wake me up when the train arrives?’ Hearing this, the Chairman seemed to be delighted over my proposal and he readily permitted me to sleep. I lay down and pretended that I was in deep sleep. In order to make sure that I was asleep he called out. Not having any response from me he felt free to take what liberties he liked with the sister. They quietly went into a cluster of trees near by. After some time they returned and when the time for the train drew near, he woke me up. I did not like this indecency between the Chairman and the sister. I recalled your 21 days’ fast and the reasons which you had given for it. I took some of the co-workers into confidence. They tackled the Chairman, but he put on a bold front and not only denied the charge of indecency but charged me with jealousy and designs upon the Chairmanship of the local organization. What am I to do in the circumstance?

I have omitted unnecessary details from the letter. Let not the reader try to guess the names of the actors and the scene of the tragedy. Idle curiosity should be avoided. I am drawing public attention to my correspondent’s letter to serve as a warning to all Harijan workers. Let us, therefore, examine it.

In the first instance, the correspondent did wrong in wishing to test his companions and exposing them to temptation. It is always a bad business to become detectives over co-workers; and if, without

---

1 The Gujarati original appeared in Harijanbandhu, 8-10-1933.
wishing it, we discover any moral or other lapses on their part, our business should be not to gossip about them, but immediately to draw, in a gentle manner, the companions’ attention to them. Had my correspondent, when he first scented danger, put the Chairman on his guard, he would have saved him from the lapse, assuming, of course, that the correspondent has given a true version of the tragedy. But, instead of taking the straight course, he adopted the crooked course of testing the couple. We are all fallible human beings ever exposed to temptations. Fortunately for us, ‘there’s many a slip ’twixt the cup and the lip’. Very few are saved from succumbing to temptations, if there is no external interruption. There is no certainty that the correspondent himself, exposed to the same temptation, might not have fallen as the Chairman is said by him to have fallen. Indeed, had he been a little thoughtful, a little considerate towards his companions, he could have prevented their complete fall, by giving up the pretence of sleeping and gently pulling them up. I know cases in which such warnings have proved the saving of people. Thus, it seems to me that this Harijan worker signally failed in his duty towards his friends and fellow-workers. He has, however, asked the question, what he could do. I do not propose to answer the question from his standpoint. Evidently he is anxious to know, not how the parties can be brought to repentance, but how they can be exposed, and the charges against him disproved. It is none of his business to expose his companions, as it was none of his business to tempt them to fall but his business now is undoubtedly to give a private notice to the chairman that he would have to undertake a fast till the Chairman confesses his guilt, or if that is beyond his capacity, to undertake a fairly prolonged fast, so as to bring home the guilt to the parties. Such a fast cannot be taken publicly. It is highly likely that the Chairman and the sister will realize the grievousness of their guilt, but it is not at all unlikely that they might harden their hearts and ignore the fast. That ought not to be a matter of any concern for my correspondent. He will have done his penance for having made himself a detective over his friend and it will be some relief to him from the oppression of the charge brought against him of jealousy and ambition to become the Chairman of the local Seva Sangh. It is hardly necessary to emphasize the obvious truth that the fast, if it is at all taken, should be taken only if the Harijan worker believes in its necessity and efficacy and if he can take it with a clean heart.

It may be that the parties charged by my correspondent have not erred. Let us hope that they have not. But I know that such errors have occurred before now. Let the incident described here serve as a warning to all workers. It furnishes, in my opinion, a clear case for fasting. Harijan service is no sinecure; it is a movement for bringing about a revolutionary change in the mentality of millions of human beings. It is like walking on the edge of a sword and, therefore, requires the greatest vigilance over self on the part of the workers.

_Harijan_, 27-10-1933

2. PREFACE TO “GITAPRAVESHIKA”

WARDHA,

_October 8, 1933_

This selection’ of _shlokas_ for the _Gitaprasisheka_ was made last year (1932) in Yeravda Mandir. My third son Ramdas was in the same jail. The authorities permitted me to meet or write to him occasionally. Ramdas used to read the _Gita_ but could not understand it fully. Ramdas does not lack _bhaktibhava_’; he has the _shraddha_’ too. I selected simple and devotional verses from the _Gita_ and sent them over to him so as to help him. Ramdas liked the collection. I further encouraged him by calling the selection “Ramagita”’.

Baba Raghavad’ happened to see the collection when it was with Kakasaheb; he went through it and felt it would prove useful to Harijan workers. With that in view he asked for my permission to have it published. Being no pandit myself I could not decide if the collection was worthy of publication. Sjt. Vinoba, Kakasaheb and Balakrishna’ of the Ashram were all here. All the three are devoted students of the _Gita_. I told the Baba that I had no objection to the collection being published provided the three Ashram inmates

---

1. The original in Hindi, published with the text by the Calcutta Shuddha Khadi Bhandar, is not available.
2. In the following order: VI. 5, 6, 14, 29 to 32 and 47; VII. 7 and 10; VIII. 14; IX. 22, 26, 27, 29 to 31, and 34; X. 8 to 10; XI. 53 to 55; XII. 15; XIII. 27; XVIII. 46, 61, 62, 66, 78; XI. 15, 16, 18 to 20, 38 to 40, 43 and 44
3. _Attitude of devotion_
4. _Faith_
6. A _kisan_ leader of U.P.
7. Vinoba Bhave’s younger brother approved of it. All the three had consultation among themselves and advised me, with a view to increasing its utility, to omit three of the verses and to add four new ones. The collection thus revised is now presented to men and women workers as well as to other lovers of the Gita. I hope—and it is also my intention—that the collection will be read as an introduction and nothing more and that a study of the Gita as a whole will be undertaken only after it had been fairly digested. All the same it should be remembered that merely memorizing or knowing the meaning of the Praveshika or [even] the whole of the Gita is not going to help realize the atman. The Gita is to be put into practice. When one has knowledge of its technical phraseology and has taken to heart its central idea of non-attachment, it becomes easier to understand the Gita.

[From Gujarati]
Harijanbandhu, 9-9-1934

3. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

Unrevised

October 8, 1933

DEAR THAKKAR BAPA,

I have your letter about the amounts of Harijan fund received by me. I have the account from Mathuradas. I am simply waiting for Chimanlal who is expected to reach here shortly. As soon as he comes I shall attend to the matter.

I have also your letter about the tour. Your second letter has crossed mine. I am quite clear in my mind that the whole of the Central Provinces should be finished at once. I do not mind the cold weather of the Punjab. Therefore it does not matter where I am during the cold weather. Nor do I mind the hot weather. What you have to guard against is the rainy season. Therefore, June and July should be given to those provinces where the rains do not set in early.

I was considerably relieved as you must have been to find Bakhale withdrawing from the Municipal contest. We will now discuss with Mr. Kodanda Rao the principle underlying the advice that you and I tendered. I have told him that I would welcome the discussion.

BAPU

SJT. AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR
GENERAL SECRETARY, S. U. S.
BIRLA MILLS, DELHI

From a photostat : G. N. 1125
4. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

October 8, 1933

MY DEAR GHANSHYAMDAS,

I have your letter.

The difficulty you raise is there and it was in anticipation of it that I suggested the formation of a trust board. My idea is that the property should be held by these trustees permanently, under very defined conditions, with the right even to sell. You and Thakkar Bapa should be permanent members, irrespective of what happens to the popular organization. This proposal disposes of the question from which has arisen the larger one that I am not prepared to discuss in this letter for want of time. Meanwhile I would ask you to study the constitution of the All-India Spinners’ Association. We may postpone the discussion till we meet, and seeing that I am here up to the 7th of November, it might be possible for you to come, even if it be for that one question.

You have referred to the proposed hostel in Delhi. In view of our possessing the Ashram ground and buildings, do you think there is any urgency for the Delhi proposal? Should we not wait and see how the Sabarmati plan progresses before venturing upon another big scheme? I am inclined to think that we ought to concentrate our attention upon making the Sabarmati scheme a thorough success and it will tax the energy of many of us to make it so.

I hope you are keeping well. What about the nose? Weather in Delhi ought to be very fine at this time of the year.

BAPU

C.W. 7938 and 7939. Courtesy : G. D. Birla. Also In the Shadow of the Mahatma, pp. 126-7

---

1 Dated October 5, which, inter alia, read: So far we have no property. But by the acceptance of your offer we will shortly be in possession of a valuable property. The question will thus immediately arise as to who will be the owner of this property. Will it be the Harijan Mandal? If so, then the Harijan Mandal would for all practical purposes mean the persons by whose sufferance it exists and there is no such thing as sufferance in our society so far. Therefore, we have to decide what sort of constitution we are to have in future.
5. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

October 8, 1933

BHAII GHANSHYAMDAS.

Gopi is doing quite well. She is cheerful. I have written to Gajanan.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Hindi original: C. W. 7939. Courtesy: G. D. Birla

6. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, WARDHA

October 8, 1933

Till yesterday I had no idea that I would have to face a large assembly like this, nor did I imagine that I would have to make a speech. I cannot speak very loudly. Doctor friends have advised me not to try it. That is why I have jotted down a few points. You are aware that till the 3rd of August next year I wish to engage myself mainly in Harijan work. I have tried to study Hinduism since my youth and have endeavoured to shape my conduct according to what I was taught in my childhood. I have studied the Hindu scriptures to the best of my ability. I have studied the sacred books of other religions also with reverence. Right from my childhood I have believed that untouchability as we know it today has no place in Hinduism and that it is a great evil which has somehow entered it. Study and experience have confirmed me in this view. I am convinced that Hinduism will perish if we do not get rid of this evil of untouchability.

Removal of untouchability does not mean merely that we should touch the people whom we regard as untouchables. Of course we should touch them, whenever necessary, with love. But removal of untouchability means much more than that. It means that we should give up the feeling of high and low. In a sense the feeling of high and low is found prevailing in all countries. But is cannot be said that this

---

1 Owing to his weak state of health Gandhiji himself did not speak. The speech, which was in Hindi, was read out at the meeting. No Hindi report being available, this has been translated from Chandrashankar Shukla’s weekly letter.
feeling is part of any religion. It is asserted that it is part of Hinduism; but if we examine objectively the fundamental principles of Hinduism, we can see that it too does not sanction such a feeling. It is true, of course, that our daily conduct is strongly influenced by this notion, and we have been taught to believe that it is a special feature of Hinduism. One of the principles of Hinduism is that we should not do to others what we would not like to be done to ourselves. In another verse having the same meaning, it is stated that we should regard all living creatures as we regard ourselves. How the feeling of high and low crept into such a religion is beyond my understanding.

In other words, it is the duty of every Hindu to fulfill completely the pledge that the leaders had taken on behalf of the Hindu community on 25th September last year at a meeting in Bombay presided over by Malaviyaji Maharaj. I hope that all of you who have come here will keep that pledge. It was categorically stated in the Resolution that the Harijans have the same right as the other Hindus to the use of public temples, public wells and public schools. When vast numbers of caste Hindus undergo change of heart and we fully appreciate and follow the dharma of compassion, not only will there be unity between them and Harijans but we shall also live in amity with followers of other faiths and the present antagonisms will completely disappear. I pray to God that He grant us enough strength to purify ourselves thus and that the evil of untouchability that has crept into Hinduism be completely abolished.

[From Gujarati]

_Harijanbandhu, 15-10-1933_

---

¹ The source has “24th”. The resolution drafted by Gandhiji and agreed upon by other leaders at Poona on September 24, 1932, was formally adopted at Bombay the following day. _Vide_, “Resolution at the Hindu Leaders’ Conference, Bombay”, 25-9-1932.
7. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

[Before October 9, 1933]¹

BHAISHRI VALLABHBHAI,

I got your letter only today. You will know from the papers that my work is increasing. The blood-pressure has come down. It remains 160-100. And the weight has gone up to 103 pounds.

Raja is in Coimbatore. He keeps fairly good health. Lakshmi left on Saturday. Krishnadas² has accompanied her. While in Madras, he will inspect the khadi work there. Lakshmi will pay a visit to Coimbatore. Devdas writes to me regularly. He seems to be doing well. He does some reading.

Krishna (Nehru) will be married to Gunottam Hutheesing on the 20th in Allahabad. I am not attending the wedding. They don’t expect me to do so, either. I have already written a letter giving my blessings. You also should write.

Kishorelal will come here in two or three days.

Jamnalalji is of the opinion that Anandi should be betrothed. I also feel that that should be done . . . .³ She says, however, that she does not wish to get married just now. But I think she will marry if I advise her to do so. Let me have your views. If you can, see Lakshmidas and ask him his views. I am writing to him.

. . . ‘I have already written to Mani. Perhaps she may not come even with Mridu⁴.

Jamnalal is going to Bombay today for two or three days for private work.

My tour will probably commence on November 8. I shall probably be accompanied by Thakkar Bapa, Chandrashankar, Mira, Nayar, and Ramnarayan Choudhri.

Blessings to you and Chandubhai from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro–2 : Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 33-4

¹ The date has been inferred from the reference to Krishna Nehru’s marriage and Jamnalal’s visit to Bombay; vide “Letter to Chhaganlal Joshi”, 18-9-1932
² Chhaganlal Gandhi’s son
³ Omissions as in the source
⁴ ibid
⁵ Mridula Sarabhai
8. TELEGRAM TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

WARDHA,
October 1, 1933

JAWAHARLAL NEHRU
ANAND BHAWAN, ALLAHABAD

THANK GOD. HOPE MOTHER WILL BE WELL ENOUGH ATTEND FORTHCOMING WEDDING IN GOOD HEALTH.

BAPU

Gandhi-Nehru Papers, 1933. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

9. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

WARDHA,
October 9, 1933

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

I had your wire to which I sent a reply in the afternoon. I do hope Mother will be strong enough to attend the wedding.

I got today the accompanying from Saraladevi. I have told her Indu’ is left free to do as she chooses and that she is not likely to entertain any marriage proposal as she is still studying. I have told her too that I am forwarding the letter to you. If Indu was at all prepared to consider a marriage proposal, I do regard Dipak’ to be a good match.

Hardikar’ and Kamala Chattopadhyay came in today. Hardikar is suffering from fistula and would need an operation. I shall know more tomorrow. Jamnalalji has gone to Bombay for helping a friend who is in financial trouble. He will be back in four days.

My tour commences on 8th November, all being otherwise well. I am having fair rest.

Kamala never writes nowadays.

Love.

BAPU

Gandhi-Nehru Papers, 1933. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

1 Saraladevi Chowdhriani
2 Indira Nehru, addressee’s daughter
3 Son of saraladevi Chowdharani
4 N. S. Hardikar, founder and Secretary-General of the Hindustani Seva Dal
10. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

October 9, 1933

CHI. MARY,

I had full report yeaterday of your misbehaviour. The doctors say you have a spleen. It points to a diet of milk and fruit and greens. You are doomed to a course of quinine pills. I trust you will be all right again in a day or two.

The Swami’s name is Shri Kuvalayanand, Santa Cruz, Bombay.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G. N. 6009. Also. C. W. 3336. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

11. LETTER TO J. C. KUMARAPPA

October 10, 1933

MY DEAR KUMARAPPA,

I have your letter.

Of course, you will take your time and put the affairs of your sister in good order. I am here till the 7th of November. You have, therfore, ample time.

Veena is expecting you in Ahmedabad so as to be able to give you the treatment that you will need.

You will get the full hour for all that you might have to say when you come here. Kakasaheb will be here for some days yet, but may not be when you come.

Yours sincerely

BAPU

SJT. J. C. KUMARAPPA
“MANORAMA”
PALLAMCOTTAH, (TINNEVELLY DIST.)

From the original: G.N. 10101
12. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

October 10, 1933

Bhai Thakkar Bapa,

I also had a letter about Rohtak, and had read about the matter in the papers too. Lala Sham Lal, thought he is in L\(\frac{1}{2}\)ahore, has assured me that he will look into the matter on behalf of Rohtak, especially as he is minting money in Lahore.

We have no choice but to put up with Mr. Young’s antics. After all, the axe can strike at the tree only if a wooden handle helps it.

You seem to have upset Mathuradas. I read a copy of his letter to you. I wonder what you could have written. Whatever that was, I know that Mathuradas is not at fault in the least. He is always very careful about things. But he easily gets angry. Nobody should get angry with old men like us who have grown up as slaves, even if they blurt out anything thoughtless. But can we expect young people to bear with old men? Please, therefore, apply some balm. I shall of course write to Mathuradas.\(^1\) A copy of the letter\(^2\) to Dr. Bidhan is enclosed. I have sent a copy of it to Devi Babu and also written to him in Hindi.

I enclose the letter received from Assam, and also a copy of my reply.\(^3\)

I see that I shall be confined here till November 7 at any rate. In a way I like that, because slowly I am disposing of the work which has accumulated and can give time to the visitors. Probably I shall also regain more strength during the time. Jamnalalji had unexpectedly to go to Bombay to help a friend, and so he might not have been able to send you a draft of the programme here.

He will return within four days. If you leave out the C.P.\(^4\) and draw up another programme as I have suggested, you will be ready with it sooner. The entire C.P. must be covered at one time. Our party will include (1) you, (2) I, (3) Mirabehn, (4) Chandrashankar, (5) Ramnarayan, (6) Nayar and anybody else whom you might bring with

\(^1\) Vide “Letter to Mathuradas Trikumji”, 11-10-1933
\(^2\) These are not available.
\(^3\) Ibid
\(^4\) Central Provinces
you.

Sastri wants to shift Harijan to Madras. His argument seems convincing. He is rusting in Poona. It is, therefore, likely to be shifted in about 15 days.

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 1126

13. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

WARDHA,

October 10, 1933

CHI. MATHURADAS.

I have received your letters.

I can see that you do not want me to write anything to Gokhale right now. I have seen Gokhale’s letter in the Chronicle today.

Your letter to Thakkar Bapa is full of anger. You seem to have lost sight of one rule. You ought not to read in letters what is scored off. And if you happen to read it, you ought not to read any meaning in it. A person should be given a chance to modify his views. It is sheer ignorance to attribute wickedness even to the most wicked thought once it has been modified. The world would not go on in peace even for a minute if we started throwing our views at one another. I think you have been unnecessarily angry. Thakkar Bapa deserves to be complimented on his alertness. Moreover, his age and his dedicated service of so many years give him a right to say a great deal. When he says something, there is no sting behind it. If there is anybody’s mistake in this, one might say it is on my part. I have written at this length because I would not like even a trace of anger in you.²

Now for the Ashram. I think you are mistaken in the matter. If the Government does not take possession and we allow the land to remain untended it means we are harbouring a feeling of revenge. It would be an unnatural situation. There was nothing to prevent the Government from taking possession of the land and letting it lie fallow. But on what ground can we allow the land to remain fallow if the government does not take it over? In that case, why should we not burn down our movable property? According to what you are saying,

¹ Extracts from this letter appear in “Letter to Mathurdas Trikumji”, 11-10-1933
² Vide also “Letter to Amritlal V. Thakkar”, 10-10-1933 those who burnt their crops acted wisely. I am convinced that the Satyagraha Ashram will fulfil its purpose if the land is donated to Harijans. This is of greater moment than if the land was to remain with the Government. Even if it should go to the Government, we would always want to claim it back in the end. But in this case, the Ashram inmates gave it up for good and placed themselves in the hands of God. If we examine the problem from this point of view, it would be clear that the path adopted alone does credit to a satyagrahi. There has been no place here for greed for money. It was merely a matter of what was right, that is, of non-violence. The Government may well want to turn this land into a wilderness, but we should not let that happen if we can help it. If you are not convinced by these two arguments, write to me again. It should not be difficult to convince you in this matter.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

14. LETTER TO CHIMANLAL PAREKH

[Before October 11, 1933]

I am grieved to learn that you have not succeeded in bringing about conciliation. I am more grieved that the conciliation was obstructed by preliminary difficulties. I cannot decide, without hearing both the sides, what information could be asked and what information the mill-owners could not supply.

It is not necessary to refer such a question to arbitration. Mr. Gulzarilal Nanda, Secretary of the Labour Association, saw me and [I] told him that if I am asked to give my decision, I must have the arguments of both the sides before me. This can be done by written statements.

The Bombay Chronicle, 11-10-1933

1 President, Ahmedabad Mill-owners’ Association. He had informed Gandhiji about his resignation from the Conciliation Board.
15. LETTER TO PADMA

WARDHA,
October 11, 1933

CHI. PADMA,

I got your letter. I hope all of you are all right now. Give me a description of the accommodation. My weight has now gone up to 103 pounds. My diet includes milk, fruit and vegetables such as gourd, snake gourd, tomatoes, etc.

After a few days Anandi, Babu and Nirmala will leave for Ahmedabad. At present there are about 40 girls here. The girls under 12 willingly got their hair cut yesterday. I have been trying to persuade the rest.

You cannot be blamed for the doctor having given you an injection of brandy. You did not drink the thing for pleasure. Moreover, an injection of brandy is not as objectionable as a vaccine. I don't know any remedy for your complaint of the ear-drum. You should show it to a doctor, or a vaid who knows the remedy that can help you.

My tour will commence on November 8. Till then I shall remain here. I hope Sheela is enjoying her time.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6145. Also C.W. 3500. Courtesy: Prabhudas Gandhi

16. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

October 11, 1933

And now regarding the Ashram. You are completely on the wrong track in this matter. To let the buildings and the land fall into ruins if the Government does not take possession of them would be vindictive and unnatural. If the Government had taken over the Ashram and then let it fall into ruin, we would have had nothing to say against it. But on what principle can we let the land be ruined if the Government does not take over? If we do that, why should we also not burn the movable property? According to the principle which you apply, those who burnt their crops acted wisely. I am convinced that by offering the Ashram land to the cause of Harijans, we shall have completely fulfilled the aim for which the Ashram existed. Its aim will have been fulfilled better in this manner than by its remaining in the possession of the Government. In handing over the Ashram to the Government, we secretly hoped that one day we would get back its possession. But by taking the step that we have taken, the inmates of the Ashram have given up their claim permanently and trusted their future wholly to God. From whatever point of view we look at the matter, we find that the course we have adopted is the only right one for satyagrahis. The desire to save property has been no motive at all in this transaction. It was only a question of what was right and consistent with ahimsa. The Government may let the whole country be ruined, but we should not if we can help. If this does not satisfy you, you may ask me again. It shouldn’t be difficult to satisfy your doubts in this matter.

[From Gujarati]
Bapuni Prasadi, p.137

17. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

October 11, 1933

You seem to have forgotten one rule, namely, that one should never read what has been scored out by the writer of a letter. If one reads it by chance, one should not pay any attention to it. A person must be permitted to revise his ideas. It is lack of understanding to think ill of a person for even the most wicked thought, after he has corrected himself. If all of us revealed all our thoughts to one another, people wouldn’t be happy even for a minute. I think you unnecessarily got angry.¹

[From Gujarati]
Bapuni Prasadi, p. 138

¹ Vide “Letter to Amritlal V. Thakkar”,10-10-1933
DEAR FRIEND,

You will pardon me for being a little late in acknowledging your letter of 6th inst. The fact is that my capacity for dealing with the increasing correspondence is limited.

With reference to the suggestion made by you, evidently you do not recognize my limitations. In the first instance, I am not at all sure whether the Government would favour the idea of my visiting Midnapore and if it did, whether it would give me a free hand to work in the manner I might think best. Above all, you know the view that I have expressed. Even a confirmed peace-maker like me can have no chance whatsoever if I have to address only one party of violence. I regard both the Government and the terrorists as representing violence; that of the terrorists is unorganized, insane and wholly ineffective from my standpoint, and that of the Government is organized, deliberate and blasting though also wholly ineffective again from my standpoint. I should have short shrift from the terrorists if I could have no influence with the superior party of violence. Even so, do not for one moment believe that because I do not go to Midnapore I exert no influence over the terrorists. It may be a negative kind. I know what handicap I am working under. But I have boundless confidence in my creed of non-violence and in the end, not so distant as many people may imagine, non-violence will visibly succeed.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

H. K. HALES, ESQ., M. P.
53 GALSTAUN BLDG.
RUSSEL STREET, CALCUTTA

Gandhi-Nehru Papers, 1933. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

1 Vide, “Statement to the Press”
19. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

SATYAGRAHA ASHRAM, WARDHA,
October 12, 1933

DEAR THAKKAR BAPA,

Herewith letters with copies of the correspondence with the authorities from Sahu and a copy of my reply to him. It might be as well for you to address a formal letter to the Collector or to the Home Member, Bihar and Orissa, just setting forth the difficulties unnecessarily created in the way of the prosecution of the movement.

I have your wire about N. Three days ago, just after the prayer meeting, she suddenly disappeared. Of late, her behaviour had been very strange. Her brain has, undoubtedly, softened. I have sent you a telegram in reply which, I hope, you have received. You need not waste any time over her and if she presses herself on your attention she may be reported to the police, though I hardly think that she will do that. Dr. Sharma has telegraphed me and I have advised him not to take any notice of her at all.

Yours sincerely,

BAPU

From a photostat : G.N. 1127

20. LETTER TO MAHENDA V. DESAI

WARDHA,
October 12, 1933

CHI. MANU,

I got your letter written with red and green inks. The whiskers with which you have tried to beautify the letters don’t look well. You can do that after you have learnt drawing. Just now it would be better to write legible, clean and simple letters.

Children should have plenty of things to write about.

My blessings to you all for the New Year¹. May you live long, be great scholars and be very good men.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : C.W. 3160. Courtesy : Valji G. Desai

¹Kartak Sud 1, New Year day, according to the Vikram Era, which fell on October 20, 1933
21. LETTER TO JAISHREE RAIJI

October 12, 1933

DEAR SISTER,

You are not a good business woman. To expect me to commit myself to promise specific help is to expect to produce butter by churning sand. I don’t have even a pie of my own. If, however, I know any specific need of yours which you cannot meet in any other way, and if by chance I come across a likely victim, I may beg some help from him. The fact is that at present my sole interest is in Harijan work.

MOHANDAS

[From Gujarati]

Bapujini Shital Chhayaman, p. 107

22. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

October 13, 1933

CHI. MARY,

I am glad you have been free from fever. If it is not inconvenient, you should come at 4 p.m. and I will see you in your car—you won’t come up.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat : G.N. 6010. Also C.W. 3335. Courtesy : F. Mary Barr
23. NOTES

MANY THANKS

From friends all over India and from the West I have had many telegrams of the birthday greetings. I am deeply thankful to them for these. They will excuse me for my inability to send personal acknowledgements. I would have these friends to pray that God may make me worthy of their greetings. I know that the senders expect that I should be rendering some service to humanity. The wish is always present. God alone knows how far I succeed in the effort.

FORTHCOMING TOUR

If all goes well, my forthcoming tour for the Harijan cause should commence as from 8th November. I am said to be making substantial progress and Dr. Khare, who is just now in charge, is of opinion that I could safely commence the tour from the date mentioned. But this does not mean that I can cope with crowded programmes as I used to before. It is proposed to avoid travelling for two consecutive days, preferably Sundays and Mondays, in the week, to enable me to deal with Harijan editing and correspondence. As usual I shall make collections wherever I am taken. I should like to meet sanatanists at all places. I have no doubt that much opposition to the movement is due to misunderstanding. Naturally I must meet Harijans everywhere and there must be on the programme visits to Harijan quarters. Late hours should be avoided. Those places that feel tempted, in spite of the handicaps suggested here, to send invitations should send them to Thakkar Bapa as early as possible, so as to avoid alterations in the programme and disappointment. All spectacular demonstrations, not required for the cause itself, should be avoided. Every pice should be economized. If addresses are to be presented at all, they should contain a brief description of the work done and statistics regarding Harijans, their occupations and economic condition, instead of a recital of my many excellences, which may be expected to take care of themselves, if there are any.

WILL OTHER UNIVERSITIES FOLLOW?

Sjt. N. K. Behere, a member of the Nagpur University and C.P. High School Board, writes to say that he moved a resolution that “students belonging to the Depressed Classes and the aboriginal tribes should not be charged examination fees”, that he is glad to say that it was passed, with the addition of the clause—“up to the year 1940”—by the University and with a time-limit of five years by the High School Board, and that, therefore, no examination fees will be charged against these students from the Matriculation to the M.A. or L.L.B. examinations for these periods, as far as the Central Provinces are concerned.

I congratulate the Nagpur University, the High School Board and the mover on the passing of the resolution. The addition of the time-limit does not detract anything from the resolution. It is a token of the optimism of the members of the respective bodies. They evidently think that in five to seven years the economic status of the classes exempted will have so improved that they will not need the exemption any longer. May that optimism be justified! Will the other Indian Universities and Boards copy the excellent example set by those of the Central provinces?

_Harijan_, 14-10-1933

24. SLAVERY V. UNTOUCHABILITY

Deenabandhu Andrews writes¹:

A century ago a far more terrible form of ‘man’s inhumanity to man’ that ‘untouchability’ was abolished in the West. Slavery made men and women into chattels, to be bought and sold and possessed by their owners. . . . Negroes from Africa were transported on ships like cattle and set to work in the sugar plantations just like beasts of burden . . . . The results of this slave traffic were to create a colour problem in America and elsewhere which has never yet been solved. . . .

It has been doubted whether any great moral reform has ever been carried through from purely humanitarian motives. The nearest to reach the standard was the abolition of slavery. . . . Great Britain paid £ 20,000,000 out of its own revenue in order to get rid of the evil. Therefore, it is not right to say that in politics philanthropy never gains its own victory. In the year 1833, philanthropy won.

What then will happen in 1933? . . . Surely if India could abolish altogether, within the present year, ‘untouchability’, . . . that would be the greatest philanthropic act of all.

Would that Deenabandhu’s hope were fulfilled. Unless a miracle happens, the wholesale conversion of millions will not take place during the remaining months of this year and, may be, for many more years to come.

¹ Only excerpts are reproduced here.

But what is the meaning of the abolition of untouchability and what was the meaning of the abolition of slavery in 1833? The abolition of slavery was a legislative act. The slavery of the heart was not abolished then and even the lapse of a century has hardly abolished it altogether. This is written, not to belittle the great act of 1833, but to clear our minds and to understand the limitations of the effort of 1833.

Now, in the sense in which slavery was abolished in 1833, untouchability was abolished in 1932 at that representative meeting of Hindus assembled in Bombay in September 1932, under the Chairmanship of Pandit Malaviyaji. It was no bogus affair. It was signalized by the immediate establishment of the All-India Anti-untouchability Board. There has been an incessant campaign against untouchability going on ever since, throughout the length and breadth of the land as the pages of Harijan can amply prove. One life is being definitely held as hostage for the due fulfilment of the solemn pledge of the Hindus.

Let no one underrate the effort of 1932 by saying that, whereas the abolition of 1833 was an act of a legislature, that of 1932 was an act of a voluntary association and, therefore, lacking sanction. In the nature of things the act of 1932 could not well be otherwise. Slavery was a matter of contract enforceable at law, Untouchability as a religious institution is, as Deenabandhu Andrews rightly says, “moral slavery”. This could not be abolished by law. The only way in which it could be formally abolished was adopted in Bombay. Nor, as I have already shown, does the act lack sanction. The sanction, it is true, is moral. But moral sanctions are in the end far more potent than legal sanctions. Let the reader note that the Bills sought to be passed by the Central Legislature are not intended to be acts of abolition at all. One is meant to regulate temple-entry by Harijans and the other to withdraw legal recognition of untouchability. Neither affects the religious recognition and social practice. The Bills are very much needed to expedite reform; they cannot abolish untouchability. Untouchability is not a matter of contract. ‘Untouchables’ cannot be bought or sold.

Thus, I hope, it is clear that the abolition of untouchability analogous to that of slavery in 1833 definitely took place on 24th

---

1 Vide “Resolution at the Hindu Leaders Conference, Bombay”, 25-9-1932
September 1932. Its anniversary was duly celebrated on the 24th day of last September. When the whole mass of Hindus will respond to the Resolution of Bombay will largely depend upon the earnestness of those who passed it and those who are now seeking to enforce it. But that is a process of which it will not be possible to say it took place on a particular day.

And I know that Deenabandhu is not looking forward to any such definite day when the mass manifestation will be a single act for mankind to see. What he wants, what I want and what every reformer is striving after is such a manifestation of the combined energy of Hindus as would show unmistakably to any passerby that Hinduism has shed the distinction between high and low and that there is in it neither high caste nor low caste nor outcaste, whether by birth or in fact. A sinner is equal to the saint in the eye of God. Both will have equal justice, and both an equal opportunity either to go forward or to go backward. Both are His children, His creation. A saint who considers himself superior to a sinner forfeits his sainthood and becomes worse than the sinner who, unlike the proud saint, knows not what he is doing.

The mission of anti-untouchability organizations is perhaps the noblest of any that can be conceived. Let us, therefore, pray with Deenabandhu Andrews that they may be blessed with enough spiritual power to melt the age-long superstition that has corrupted Hindu society and that threatens to destroy Hinduism, if it does not react to the spirit of the times.

_Harijan, 14-10-1933_
25. WHAT ONE MAN CAN DO

A would-be Harijan Sevak writes to the following effect:¹

I have little doubt that my correspondent missed a golden opportunity of serving both the poor sweeper and the ‘orthodox’ family. He should have gently remonstrated with the mother of the ‘polluted’ girl and he would have drawn her wrath towards himself, even if he had not shamed her into repentance. The sweeper would have felt the warmth of a friend in her need. The mother and the other relatives of the girl would at least have been set athinking. He would probably have been drawn into an argument. Perhaps the whole village might have interested itself in the matter and if he had risen to the occasion, he would have laid a solid foundation for substantial service in the future. Or he might have had a broken head. That, too, would have been a good passport for further service. It is clear to me that on such occasions, every lover of humanity should consider it his sacred duty to protect the helpless by tactful and gentle, yet courageous, intervention.

Now for the general question. Had we not lost self-confidence, the question, what an insignificant man can do, would never have arisen. No man is too insignificant for rendering personal service to those who may be in distress. The art does not need previous training. The ability to give effective help resides in every human being who has the will and the necessary courage. Thus my correspondent could certainly go to the Harijan quarters of his village and befriend them in a variety of ways. He could teach their children during his stay in the village. He need not fear the interruption due to his absence. For teaching does not mean only a knowledge of the three R’s. It means many other things for Harijan humanity. lessons in manners and sanitation are the indispensable preliminaries to the initiation into the three R’s. The correspondent could take Harijan children for sight seeing, teach them innocent and even instructive games, could sweep and otherwise keep Harijan quarters clean, could find out cases of ¹ The letter is not reproduced here. It described how a Harijan woman, who had touched a caste-Hindu girl, was subjected to filthy abuse by caste Hindus. He also wanted to know how he could be useful in such a village where superstition reigned supreme and Harijans were treated like beasts.

illness among the Harijans and procure medical aid. He could take careful notes of their economic, social and other wants and transmit them to the Harijan Seva Sangh of his district or province, as the case might be, and thus become an effective link between the Harijans and the Seva Sangh. I have by no means exhausted the list of possibilities of individual effort. Mine is a mere illustrative list. A resourceful sevak can multiply the possibilities endlessly. “Where there’s the will, there’s the way.”

_Harijan_, 14-10-1933

26. LETTER TO C. F. ANDREWS

SATYAGRAHA ASHRAM, WARDHA,
_October 14, 1933_

MY DEAR CHARLIE,

I have your telegram to which I have sent you a reply as follows:

Your wire. Hope Gurudev will be soon restored. My love. Mohan.

Hales wrote to me suggesting that I should at one proceed to Midnapore and I understand that he has published the letter even without waiting for my reply. Here is a copy of my reply¹ to him for your information.

You know that I am taking all the rest that the doctors have advised and not moving out till the 7th of November. My weight has steadily gone forward and blood-pressure has steadily decreased.

I have told the C.U. Press² I have no objection to their publishing the passage on ahimsa.

Love.

MOHAN

Encl. 2

REV. C. F. ANDREWS
SANTINIKETAN
(BENGAL)

From a photostat : G. N. 3797

¹ Vide “Letter to H. K. Hales”, 12-10-1933
² Presumably, Cambridge University Press
27. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

Saturday, October 14, 1933

BHAII THAKKAR BAPA,

You know the story of the person who intended to write ["went to] Ajmer" but wrote to the effect “died today”. And those who read his letter must have been as stupid as he was. If such a thing were suspected it would not have been sent away unrevised. I intended to write “Calcutta” and not “Delhi”. I don’t even know that anything has been given to Delhi. N.’s story is a painful one. If the president suggests that the tour should commence on November 15 but I don’t agree, should even that be a ground for complaint?

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 1128

28. MESSAGE ON DAYANANDA SEMI-CENTENARY

October 14, 1933

Rishi Dayananda was one of the greatest reformers in Hinduism. He stimulated Vedic studies, and fearlessly opposed untouchability among other evils.

The Hindu, 15-10-1933

29. TALK WITH A KHADI WORKER

[Before October 15, 1933]

We require machinery on a large scale for the industries running on steam power, etc. We do not have such machinery at present; we

---

1 Writing Ajmer gaya (went to Ajmer), he happened to drop a diacritical mark making it read aj mar gaya (died today).

2 Vide “A Note”, 30-9-1933

3 The message was sent to Tej, an Urdu daily published from Delhi.

4 Dayananda Saraswati, founder of Arya Samaj.

5 This appeared in chandrashankar Shukla’s weekly letter under the title “Why the Spinning-wheel Only?”.
can get it from other countries only on the terms acceptable to them. We would also require experts to run such machines. We do not have enough of them either. At present, therefore, we shall have to import them from outside. Nor do we have the capital required to meet the needs of a population of 30 crores. Hence, even if it is possible to be self-sufficient through industries run on steam power, etc., it would take a long time. Moreover, if this source of tremendous energy is employed on a large scale in the country, it would lead to a great increase in the present unemployment. It is said that in America every man gets the work of 36 slaves with the help of gigantic machines. This means that with the help of these machines each person does the work of 36 persons. If we estimate that the population of India will be 37 crores when it reaches such a stage, it would mean that 36 crores of them would remain unemployed. In other words, to enable one crore of people in this country to be as rich as Americans, 36 crores would have to commit suicide, or else a Chenghiz Khan or a Ravana should wipe out 36 crores and distribute the country among the remaining one crore. The per capita distribution of land in this country is two or three bighas only. This much land is certainly not enough for one’s maintenance. Everyone, therefore, must have some other occupation at home. This is naturally the spinning-wheel. We require very little capital to make it universal. Other requirements would be available in every village. All that is necessary is a change of attitude among the people. They must shake off their lethargy. The solution of the economic problem of Harijans also lies in this. If the machine age comes into vogue, all the Harijans would be included among those 36 crores.

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbandhu, 15-10-1933

30. REPERCUSSIONS OF UNTOUCHABILITY

Some idea of the wide repercussions of untouchability can be had from the following letter\(^1\) of Sjt. Mulchand Parekh.

\(^1\) Not translated here. The correspondent had described an incident in which a shepherd was considered responsible for bringing about disease and death to cattle because of his association with Harijans and was threatened with ostracism or worse.
Is it any wonder if the cup of sorrow overflows when to such ignorance and resultant superstitions is added the dross of untouchability? There is only one remedy for it and that is that a Harijan worker should tolerantly look upon all these insults as symptoms of the same disease and proceed to find a solution for it. He should gain access to the shepherd’s family, explain things to them with patience and remove their ignorance. If any jealous person has taken advantage of their superstitious nature, he should make a peaceful endeavour to persuade him. These experiences suggest that the workers ought to go to the villages and share the people’s lives. Moreover, the frightened shepherd needs to be reassured. He should be convinced about the futility of a boycott and he should be made to feel secure with our readiness to protect him in every way.

[From Gujarati]
Harijanbandhu, 15-10-1933

31. LETTER TO MADAN MOHAN MALAVIYA

SATYAGRAHA ASHRAM, WARDHA,
October 15, 1933

As all the energy that I have been able to regain has been given to the immediate work in hand, I have not been able to write to you. There was nothing new I had to say and I knew that you would not misunderstand any action that I took. I, therefore, did not send my explanation believing that, if anything I did required explanation, you would not hesitate to demand it of me.

I have kept myself informed of your health, or rather want of it, and I realized long ago that it was vain to plead with you that you should take this change or that. In this as in other matters you are a law unto yourself. I do, therefore, satisfy myself with praying that God, who has taken care of you all these long years and who has blessed you with energy of which the youth of India may well be jealous, will continue to take care of you, so long as He needs your services.

I write this letter with reference to your latest statement. My own impression is that the All-India Congress Committee, if it meets, will by an overwhelming majority pass a resolution endorsing continuance of the civil resistance movement. That being my conviction, I see no reason for convening a meeting for such a confirmation, because the confirmation will not accelerate the pace of civil resistance. It has to take its own natural course. But, if you believe that the All-India Congress Committee will adopt a new programme and give up civil resistance, there is absolutely no reason whatsoever why you should not actively canvass for a requisition on receipt of which Jawaharlal is bound to convene a meeting. And I would venture to submit that if you would promote a requisition you should also in consultation with the requisitionists chalk out a definite policy and programme which you will prosecute unflinchingly. If this is not done and a mere requisition is sent the meeting will simply end in a desultory dis-cussion and ill-thought-out resolutions. Whilst I would gladly attend any such meeting and say my say, I am not keen on attending such a meeting and I would gladly refrain from attending it, if my absence was, from the highest motives, desired by you or any body of responsible members.

PANDIT MADAN MOHAN MALAVIYA
MUSSOORIE

Gandhi-Nehru Papers, 1933, Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

32. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

SATYAGRAHA ASHRAM, WARDHA,
October 15, 1933

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

I had your letter enclosing a copy of your letter to Krishnamurti of Madura.

Here is a copy of my letter\(^1\) to Hales, in reply to his letter which you must have seen in the Press. And here is also a copy of my letter to Malaviyaji.\(^2\) It speaks for itself.

All my good wishes for the wedding. I shall be with you in spirit on that day.

Love.

BAPU

Encl. 2

Gandhi-Nehru Papers, 1933, Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

\(^1\) Vide "Letter to H. K. Hales"

\(^2\) Vide the preceding item.
33. LETTER TO SARUPRANI NEHRU

October 15, 1933

DEAR SISTER,

You are always in our thoughts though I may not write to you. We receive news of you from Jawaharlal. I hope you will be well enough on the 20th. I regret my inability to be there on that day but my heart will certainly be there. May God grant you quick recovery.

Yours,

MOHANDAS

[From Hindi]

Also G.N. 11406

34. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

October 15, 1933

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

Here is a letter for Mother.¹ Let us all hope that she will be well enough to take part in the ceremony.

Have you introduced the Roman character for writing Hindi?²

A typed letter³ is going to you [today]¹ with a copy of my letter to Malaviyaji.

Love.

BAPU

From a facsimile : C. W. 10108

¹ Vide the preceding item.
² Vide “Letter to Saruprani Nehru”, 15-10-1933
³ Illegible in the source
35. LETTER TO JANAKDHARI PRASAD

October 15, 1933

DEAR JANAKDHARI BABU,

On going through the arrears of my correspondence, I came upon your letter of 28th August last. But, before I came upon your letter I was often thinking of you, and only the other day I discussed about you with Jamnalalji.

Your children are so young that it is very difficult for any institution to take them without you and your wife. That means you must find something there. The first thing is that you must humble yourself and put yourself on a level with the common labourer and bring up your children to become labourers. But even labourers should have education. That education should be given by you. Your wife should also labour. If you will accommodate yourself to this life, a great load will be off your mind, which itself would soothe your nerves and much of the dyspepsia would also go under the stimulating effect of the new life, that is, if you take it joyously. Unless we who have received a fairly liberal education effect a revolution in our life, we would simply remain parasites that we are—living on the sweat of the famishing peasant. You should discuss this matter with Brijkishore Babu and others.

I would like you to be the pioneer of the new thought and the new movement, and yet it is really not new, for, I gave it currency when I returned to India in 1915, and have been trying to live in accordance with it, however imperfectly I might have done it. You have, therefore, to perfect it.

Yours sincerely,

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 54
MY DEAR AGATHA.

It was stupid of me not to acknowledge your letter about Vithalbhai Patel by the ocean mail. I am therefore punishing myself by sending this by air mail. I must say I have not taken kindly to it as yet. It is the luxury of the rich and the necessity created by those who would rule the earth, water and air and their inhabitants. You can’t understand how deeply I appreciate letters such as you wrote about V. J. Patel. I had cabled to Bose as soon as I got your timely cable and Bose promptly replied.

I am glad you were in Geneva for that meeting. You will not hesitate to ask for any information of explanation you may need. We here may not always anticipate your requirements.

Here is a copy of my letter to Hales, M.P., about Midnapore. You are likely to have a mutilated version by Reuter. The copy is therefore for your information and use if need be. Hales’s letter was handed to the Press without his waiting for my reply. You might have seen it.

Mahadev is in Belgaum all alone save a cart-load of books. Devdas in Multan and Pyarelal in Nasik.

I wonder if you are getting any daily or weekly newspapers from here. If you or anyone has time to read them I could easily send a selection, unless you will make it yourself.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 1471

1 The addressee had noted down on this letter: “When I was in Geneva in October 1933, I went to see Vithalbhai Patel who was dying in a sanatorium in Gland. Subhas Bose was looking after him, and I wrote an account of this visit to Gandhiji.”

2 Vide “Letter to H. K. Hales” 12-10-1933

3 He was preparing to translate Anasaktiyoga into English which was later published under the title The Gita According to Gandhi; vide Vol XLI.
37. LETTER TO ABBAS TYABJI

October 15, 1933

MY DEAR BHRRR,

You must give me your reasons for disliking and distrusting Kamaladevi. I have to advise and I cannot without your assistance.

Rehana\(^2\) has been quite silent of late.

How is Hamida\(^3\) doing?

Love to you all from,

BHRRR

From a photostat: S.N. 9587

38. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

WARDHA,

October 15, 1933

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I got your letter today. I was getting a little worried. You should certainly stay there as long as you find it necessary. On my part, I have given you complete freedom to come away here whenever you wish. But you should stay where your duty requires you to stay. Do call on Mother. Take care of your health. Write to me from time to time. My weight is 103 pounds at present, and the blood-pressure is 160-100. This should be considered very good. I am continuing the same diet. There has been no change. Anandi and Om\(^4\) help Ba. Anandi, Bachu and Babu will leave after the 20th. Gopi certainly misses you. And as long as you were here I also did not worry about her. She will go to Bombay for Diwali. She will start from here on Tuesday\(^5\). N. has left without telling anybody. When last we heard from her she was in Delhi. Amalabehn is here. Just now at least she is doing good work.

---

1. This was how Gandhiji and the addressee greeted each other.
2. Addressee’s daughter
3. Addressee’s grand-daughter
4. Uma, younger daughter of Jamnalal Bajaj
5. October 17
Krishna’s marriage will take place in Allahabad on the 20th. Prabhudas’s marriage will take place here on the 17th. The bride is a fine girl. She is his own choice. I believe that they will be happy. I had a letter from Lakshmi. Write to Gopi from time to time. Write to Prabhudas also. I know that you need no advice in this matter. Make it a rule to read something daily. Read a little English and a little from the Ramayana, and study arithmetic a little. And, above everything else, there is the Gita. Surendra has been released. He will come here in a few days.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G. N. 3434

39 LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

WARDHA,

October 15, 1933

CHI. MATHURADAS.

My right hand is now tired. Be it so. Now you have become the father of three children. Traramati will be doing well. Who came for her delivery? If enough care is not taken during and after the delivery, the mother has to suffer a lot. Have you studied this science? It is easy.

Herewith the letter from Harakhchand. Act on it. Continue correspondence with him. He is a man of character.

I understand about Thakkar Bapa. I have written to him that it would have been better if he had not offered his criticism. Be that as it may you were not in the least at fault. Still, a public worker like you should show tolerance.

For the present, I do not feel like writing anything to Gokhale. There is a letter from aunt about K. Chattopadhyaya. She saw you and somebody else. Write to me about it.

I have no doubt that in course of time you will understand everything about the Ashram.

---

1 Amba Devi, daughter of Lala Lalchand of Bijnor
2 Sarojini Naidu
3 Kamaladevi, wife of Harindranath Chattopadhyaya
Prabhudas will be married on 17th. The girl is from the North. She is his own discovery. Krishna will be married on the 20th. you must be meeting Premlilabhun. How are you yourself?

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal papers. Nehru memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

40. LETTER TO PANNALAL JHAVERI

WARDHA, October 15, 1933

CHI. PANNALAL,

Chimanlal says that you have given up civil disobedience and now wish to start a dairy. If your faith in civil disobedience is shaken, you can certainly do something else. But I certainly expect that before taking any new step you will consult me.

All the three of you will be doing well.
Prabhudas will be married on the 17th. The bride is from the North.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Manavtana Prahari—Pannalal Jhaveri, p. 31

41. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

SATYAGRAHA ASHRAM, WARDHA, October 16, 1933

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

Herewith the resignation’ of jamnalalji. If you think that it must not be sent in and is likely to cause embarrassment, you need not take any action upon it. You may then return it with your reasons after you are free from the wedding arrangements. If, however, you think that the resignation may be accepted, you may publish it forthwith. I know

1 Ambadevi, of Lala Lalchand of a Bijore. However, the marriage took place
2 Jawaharlal Nehru’s sister who was engaged to marry Gunottam Hutheesingh; vide also “Letter to Manu Gandhi”, 29-12-1933
3 From the Congress Working Committee that the Treasurer can only be appointed by the All-India Congress Committee. Therefore, the treasurership may remain in Jamnalalji’s hands, for the time being. The chief thing is that he ceases to be a member of the Working Committee. I think that the step is a wise and necessary one. Constituted as he is, it is risky for him to seek imprisonment just now, that is, without taking the rest that the specialist considers necessary. But, ordinarily, fighters can’t consult their health to the extent that Jamnalalji’s temperament demands and as he shares the same view of a civil resister’s duty that I have, he is ill at ease, so long as he holds a responsible office in the Congress Organization.

I have given you my reasoning which decided my acceptance of Jamnalalji’s proposal to resign.

Yours,

BAPU

Encl. 1

Gandhi-Nehru Papers, 1933. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

42. STATEMENT TO PRESS

WARDHAGANI,
October 17, 1933

I regret to have to inform the public that Shrimati N. disappeared suddenly from the Wardha Ashram about ten days ago. She had of late become more than usually unbalanced. All the affection that parents, brothers or sisters could show was shown to her, but evidently her fearful past proved too strong for her. It is likely that she is again leading the old thoughtless, untruthful and unclean life.

I give this information to warn young men against tempting her, or being tempted by her. I would like those who may come in contact with her not to give any financial aid. She is hardly responsible for her actions, and it would be a deliverance for her, if some philanthropic institution would take charge of her. If she sees this notice, I would have her to recall all the promises she made to herself and to me, and in humility to ask God to exorcise the devil that has possessed her. She knows that if she asks truly, her prayer will not go in vain. She had such experiences in her sane moments.

She was last heard of in Delhi.

Amrita Bazar Patrika, 18-10-1933
43. LETTER TO C. F. ANDREWS

October 16, 1933

MY DEAR CHARLIE,

I think you told me that you visited the Booker Washington Institution at Tuskegee. For the sake of Harijans I have been reading literature about that wonderful institute. Does your personal inspection confirm what appears in the books about it? Will you write a brief account under the title ‘What I saw in Tuskegee’? Did you meet any of the Red Indians? Can you give me your impression of them? The United States Government seem to be spending large sums on their education and general improvement.

Love.

MOHAN

REV. C. F. ANDREWS
ANAND BHAWAN
ALLAHABAD

From a photostat : G. N. 3798

44. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

SATYAGRAHA ASHRAM, WARDHA,
[October 18, 1933]

BHAI GHANSHYAMDAS.

Despite all intentions of writing to you I have been unable to do so till today. Jamnalal shields me well from the visitors but who can protect me from letters? Never am I able to clear my desk. Because the order of going to bed early has also to be observed. I am writing this having got up at 3 a.m. The implication is not that this letter is the sole cause for rising early. Even during the time allowed in the evening I am prevented from doing anything substantial by the pestering insects.

I have read your article about Jawaharlal. It is good and you have done no harm by writing it. There could be no need to suppress our opinions about one another. When Truth alone is to be sought, suppression of one’s opinion becomes a fault. You must have sent the article to Jawaharlal, if not, do so. He is a very straightforward man.

1 The date is inferred from the reference to Gopi’s departure; vide “Letter to Prabhavati”, 15-10-1933 and corrects his error. I am confident ultimately he is bound to follow the path of Truth. And if his line of thinking proves to be correct, comment would be superfluous. Equality can never mean uniformity. Equality only means uniformity in justice. There is no distinction between an atom and the Himalayas in the eyes of God. He is the same to the atom as to the Himalayas.

Gopi left yesterday. I could not have a long talk with her but she used to come and sit with me every day. She is an extremely simple girl and was very happy here; she mixed with everybody. She went to Bombay on account of Diwali. She was also keen to see the illuminations there. It will be good if she returns after Diwali. I have no doubt that she will be ready. Gajanan has replied to the letter I wrote to him. Gopi too was asked to write a letter. Write to me about your health.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

I shall get someone to write in English about Harijan. It was very good that ..........¹ ultimately did stay ..........¹

From Hindi : C.W. 7940. Courtesy : G. D. Birla

45. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU
October 18, 1933

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

Herewith two garlands made out of yarn specially spun by me today for the bride and the bridegroom charged with my blessings. Will you please put them round their necks on my behalf! I hope they will reach you in time.

I cannot help being sorry that the ceremony has been vetoed by Mrs. Hutheesing. But I suppose in these matters I am a back number.

I understand what you say about Dipak. I would write to Sarala Devi in as gentle a manner as I can.

Love to you all.

BAPU

¹ The source is illegible here.
¹ ibid
I would like you to wire to me when all is over that Mother was able to stand the strain.

_A Bunch of Old Letters, p. 112_

46. SPEECH AT WEDDING OF PRABHUDAS GANDHI

WARDHAGANI

October 18, 1933

At the conclusion of the ceremony addressing the couple Gandhiji said that this was an inter-provincial marriage and not an inter-caste one. He had no hesitation in advocating inter-caste marriages under well-defined limitations, for he believed that there was no varna or division in the original sense of the term and that limiting marriage to the same division or varna was never its distinguishing feature.

He drew the attention of the couple to the fact that marriage was not intended to indulge in one’s passions but to impose a restraint upon them. He hoped that both of them would make service of the country their mission in life and then they would find that their joint life would be one of happiness, contentment and increasing self-restraint.

It gave him much pleasure to find that the bride came from an Arya Samajist family. His relations with the Arya Samajists, he continued, had always been intimate, although they knew that there were honest differences between them. This marriage had brought them nearer.

_The Bombay Chronicle, 19-10-1933_

47. LETTER TO RAMABEHN JOSHI

WARDHA

October 18, 1933

 Chí Rama,

If the doctor says that it is not necessary now for you to stay in the hospital, I would advise you to come here. The weather here is very good indeed. There is quite a large number of girls. You will be able to help Lakshibehn a little, and can also have your arm massaged. I shall not be happy if you stay anywhere else, and shall keep on worrying about the condition of your arm. You should still not use it very freely. You will also get a doctor’s services here. If you decide to come here, the earlier you come the better, so that we can be together for some days. The kitchen here runs for about 60 persons, more than 40 of whom are girls. Anandi, Bachu and Babu will start from here today. Tarabehn is expected any day now.

Prabhudas was married today to a girl from North India. She is 24 years of age, and her name is Amba.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G. N. 5357

48. LETTER TO PANNALAL JHAVERI
ASHRAM, WARDHA,
October 19, 1933

CHI. PANNALAL,

It seems your letter has crossed my postcard.

Your purity has so impressed me that anything you write or any step you take cannot hurt me. By that I do not mean that I shall always agree with you on the rightness of your step. But the more experience I gain the more I realize that there are as many conceptions of dharma as there are individuals. The deeper I delve the greater is my comprehension of the dictum of the _Gita_ : Better to die following one’s own faith.

I certainly wish you success in what you have considered your dharma. I personally did wish that when others slackened, you would be able better to understand satyagraha. I hold that satyagraha has not yet manifested itself in India in its true form. The duty of manifesting it devolves on you and me, that is, the inmates of the Ashram. For you, civil disobedience cannot be a political matter. It can only be a matter of dharma. Dharma reveals itself in its true form only when there is despair all around. If we join the crowd in offering prayers, it would not be an indication of our faith. But it would in some measure be a test of our faith if when others lost faith in prayer a handful of us continued to offer prayers and derived joy from so doing. But what is dharma to me may not be dharma to you. Only what you see as dharma will be dharma to you. I have only conveyed my views to you as an elder. If your reason does not accept it, if it does not appeal to your heart, then do not act on it. Individual civil disobedience must be taken to mean perfection. If you are starting a goshala, are you going to do it on your own, or is there any room for suggestions and guidance? If there is such scope, meet me. I shall then send you my suggestions. Do come over if you feel like coming.

What you write about Gangabehn and Nanibehn seems correct.
It is your duty to guide the two of them. And it is also your right. I may or may not be able to write letters. But both of them have got to write to me. In fact I have been awaiting their letters. I hope you yourself are in good health.

Prabhudas’s marriage was solemnized yesterday. The bride’s name is Amba. She is 24 years old. She is competent, and has a deep sense of sacrifice. She has been to jail twice. She had been trying to come and live in the Ashram for several years but there were restrictions from her guardians. Kishorelal and Gomati have gone to Akola today. Anandi, Babu and Bachu have gone in that direction today.
Prabhudas will be staying here for some time. Amba is of course with him. I am regaining my strength. I am gaining weight. The blood-pressure is going down. There are more than forty girls here.

I have received your second letter. I am here till the 7th Nove-ember. I shall leave on the 8th.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Manavtana Prahari—Pannalal Jhaveri, pp. 31-2

49. A NOTE

[After October 18, 1933]

For the poor and those with abstemious habits, the only after-meal treat for the mouth is water. And so, it is not necessary to offer guests betel-nut, etc.

One should not put one’s hand into the cooked foods. All of them should be served with a spoon or a ladle.

If the guest is an Englishman or Englishwoman, we should place a spoon before them without their asking for it. It is not necessary to cook many articles of food for guests. No special article of food should be cooked for them. If, however, we ourselves are

---

1 Gandhiji states at the end of the note that he was sending it for Amba.
Evidently the note containing these suggestions was written after Prabhudas’s marriage to Amba on October 18, 1933.

2 ibid
addicted to pleasures of the palate, on the day when we have a guest, we should take the occasion to cook only a frugal meal, have it ourselves and serve it to the guest, and humbly and gently mention the fact of the meal being frugal so that we may not seem affected.

We should never let dirt collect in our nails, eyes, ears or nostrils. Even if we are not so on the other days, before guests we should always appear clean and keep the children so, for a cultured guest dislikes dirt and feels repugnant to being served food cooked by persons with dirty hands. The saree is not meant for removing the dirt with, a handkerchief must be used for the purpose.

When eating, one must not make smacking sounds, nor talk while eating. If children have such a habit, we should make them give it up.

We should offer a guest something suitable to sit on. We should have respect for the guest in our mind. If it is there, the guest cannot but see it. We should teach the children always to bow to a guest to greet him.

We should make no distinction between a guest who is an important person and one who is not so, or between a guest whom we know personally and one who is a stranger to us.

Since our aim in the Ahsram is to lead an abstemious life, we should not indulge the palate.

Since we are not to serve a guest relishing dishes, we should not cook sweets, nor season them with condiments, nor make spicy sauces, nor cook too many vegetables. If we have a number of vegetables with us, we should mix them together and serve them boiled as far as possible.

We should take care to see that children do no dirty things. We should place a clean handkerchief before the guest at the same time as we give him a jug of water. We should tell him where he may wash his hands or help him to wash his hands in a utensil.

We should not expect a guest to clean the plates he has used for eating but insist on taking them away from him and clean them ourselves.

We should courteously ask a guest and know from him his needs, and if they are not contrary to our dharma or beyond our means, satisfy them.

I am sending this note for Amba. Preserve it after reading.

From the Gujarati original: S.N. 33080
50. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

SATYAGRAHA ASHRAM, WARDHA,
October 19/20, 1933

CHI. THAKKAR BAPA,

Everyday I think of writing you a long letter and it is postponed everyday. Jamnalal can help avoid interviews, but who can stem the increasing flow of correspondence? I have got to go to bed early and so some letters do remain unattended piling the heap of papers up. I carry on in this pitiful state.

What should I write about N.? I have done my best for her. I think she did try honestly to restrain her passions. But she slipped during her attempts and ultimately ran away. If she drowns herself, I would neither be surprised nor sorry. If she is alive, I would not give up hopes for her improvement. I do not at all repent having readmitted her. It was my duty to do so. She was basking in affection not only here but at Sabarmati also. She used to write to me that she never experienced such affection even from her parents. All were content with whatever little restraint she voluntarily accepted. How can one be changed so suddenly, who remained unbridled for several years? I have not yet judged . . . .

I have never noticed any fault on this part in connection with N. The Agra affair is very sad. We reap what we sow. Let Hinduism perish if the so called sanatanists fail to wake up and, in their vanity resort to goondaism with the help of the masses. It is enough if we continue doing our duty. God’s will prevails ultimately. The affairs at Samartha and Dholka are not only sad but shameful for us also. Similar petty cases take place here too. I intend to write something in Harijan about this matter.

I think it is good that Harijan is shifted to Madras. It was the only way to utilize Sastri fully. Kodand Rao had arranged a small function in honour of Sastri. Deodhar spoke there. He hinted at the

---

1 The letter bears the date October 19, 1933, at the end of paragraph 2, but was signed “Wardha, 20-11-1933”, which appears to be a slip for “20-10-1933”. The letter was evidently written before Gandhiji’s tour of the Central Provinces on November 8, 1933.
2 The name has been omitted.
3 Vide “Two Cruel Cases”
same thing. He said Sastri was withering in Poona and will blossom in Madras. Sastri has gained confidence to run Harijan. He will get help from some others. It will be away from Delhi; but that is no inconvenience. The Hindi edition is already based in Delhi. If Sastri could not settle in Poona to devote himself fully to Harijan he could do so much less in Delhi. His suffering was mental and genuine. Since we were to bring out Harijan with the help of Sastri, it was our duty to look to his convenience. I shall send you Sastri’s letter, if I have not destroyed it, which will give you an idea of his mental distress. It has always been my opinion that the English edition can be produced best and cheapest from Madras. However, you may write to and arrange with Sastri directly in case you and Ghanshyamdas are not fully satisfied with my letter.

My mention of rest on Sunday and Monday may be considered an oversight. You are welcome to include Monday and Tuesday in the programme that you may chalk out.

Tour programme for C. P. will be completed within the time prescribed by you. Dr. Khare has already issued the tour programme for C. P. (Marathi). You may have seen it. He wished to write to you also. Satisbabu has written from Bengal. He has also written to you.

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 1133. Also C. W. 10489. Courtesy: Harijan Sevak Sangh

51. LETTER TO H. K. HALE\textsuperscript{1}

\textbf{SATYAGRAHA ASHRAM, WARDHA,}

\textit{October 20, 1933}

DEAR FRIEND,

I am able this time to send you by return [of post] my reply to your letter of 18th inst.

I have no such modesty as you attribute to me. I meant literally what I said about my limitations. They are obvious. I am dying to co-operate with anybody and everybody and certainly with the Government in restoring peace that is living and real, not the peace of the grave. A living peace cannot be and will never be brought about at the point of the bayonet. The plan of the Government is, at any rate seems to me to be, after that of a physician who seeks to remove a deadly \textsuperscript{1} The letter was published in \textit{The Hindu}, 29-10-1933, with slight verbal variations.

VOL. 62 : 8 OCTOBER, 1933 - 17 JANUARY, 1934 43
disease without probing and dealing with the causes. I can be no party to any such plan. And I should despair of proving my sincerity about non-violence, if it requires further proof after my having lived a life of non-violence in the face of circumstances often most provoking, for an unbroken period of 40 years and more.

As to your suggestion about an All-Parties meeting\(^1\), judged by the accepted standard I have proved a hopeless failure, as witness my last performance at such a meeting\(^2\) convened for the purpose of achieving a communal settlement. I was no less a failure at the various meetings that we held in India for similar purposes.

Your Sincerely
M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat : G. N. 1472 a

52. LETTER TO AGATHA HARRISON

Unrevised October 20, 1933

MY DEAR AGATHA,

I had your long letter. I do not know whether you had sent copies to my two partners. Anyway I have posted it on to Andrews. You thought that we were all at the same place. But just at present we are not.

Your work in Geneva was great. And I know wherever you are you can give a good account of yourself. But I retain the same opinion that I have you some time ago that if you came as a delegate your expenses should be found by your constituency. But if you come for the purpose of seeing things first hand, your expenses can be found from here. Whether it is worthwhile your coming for that special purpose is solely for you to decide. If you feel the need you should come. If you are a good sailor you can certainly come in the 3rd class without the slightest difficulty and see more of life, because you see more of common humanity as a 3rd class passenger than as a saloon passenger. That is my own experience and that of others who have travelled in all classes.

\(^1\) The source has “Witnessed”
\(^2\) The reference presumably is to one of the informal meetings held in London; vide “Speech at Meeting of Friends of India”, 7-10-1931 and “Statement to the Press”, 14-10-1931

\(^3\) The source has “two”.

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
About the ban on Bose’s passport, I am quite sure that they would not remove it at present except under humiliating conditions. I entirely agree with you that what he does not know of Bengal is not worth knowing and I know also that he can render the greatest help in the restoration of peace, but his difficulty would be the same as mine.

I send you a copy of another letter which I am obliged to write to Mr. Hales. The fact is that the Government demand co-operation on their own terms, which nobody freely gives and which no self-respecting man can ever give.

I think that this covers all the important points you have raised in your letter.

Yours Sincerely

BAPU

From a photostat: G. N. 1472

53. LETTER TO RUKMINIDEVI BAZAJ

October 20, 1933

CHI. RUKMINI,

I heard from you after many days. Today is the first day of the new year. I again advise you to remember that life is well governed by observing rules. It is desirable that you should make a rule to write to me, if not once a week, once a fortnight or at least once a month. Personally, I believe that the ideal thing is to do everything according to a rule. Prabhudas was married the day before yesterday. The bride seems a good girl.

Blessings to you both from

BAPU

From Gujarati: C. W. 9701. Courtesy: Benarsilal Bazaj

1 Vide the preceding item.
54. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

WARDHA,
October 20, 1933

CHI. MATHURADAS,

I have not received copy of Andrews’s letter.

In my opinion, the money should be sent to Harakhchand, for he might be regarded as an agent of the Committee. If the money is sent from Calcutta, commission on the bank draft will be saved. Harakhchand’s report can be treated as fully authentic. The Utkal Committee should also know that the money will be sent through Harakhchand.

You do not have to go wandering in the sun to collect the money. If it is necessary to write to anyone, I will do so. I take it you will be publishing reports in the Press from time to time.

There is no alternative but to guide Kamaladevi. One cannot go by rumours. I asked her many frank questions. But she only declares her innocence. I am not trying to stop the divorce. It has become necessary.

The wedding of Prabhudas took place the day before yester-day.

I am enclosing Thakkar Bapa’s letter. You can see how guile-less he was in his previous letter. He was not at all at fault in what he wrote. I have heard many complaints about your temper. But I have always defended you. You should remove the cause for complaint. Forgive Kodanda Rao1 for his jest and write a nice letter to Thakkar Bapa. “Caesar’s wife must be above suspicion” does not mean that Caesar’s wife may never be suspected. What it means is that C.’s wife should never give cause for suspicion, and if she is even then suspected, she can afford to remain unconcerned about criticism. It is in man’s hands to remain pure. That others should consider him pure is in nobody’s hands. Do you know that there are many in the world who find fault with God’s creation?

Taramati and the child will be doing well.

Today is the New Year day. May it bring good to you all, that is to say, may the country received greater services from you.

Blessings from
BAPU

1 P. Kodanda Rao
PS.

Send me Gokhale’s address. Then I shall write to him. Surely you do not wish that I should send back all your letters?

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

55. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL AND KASHI GANDHI

WARDHA,
October 20, 1933

CHI. CHHAGANLAL AND KASHI,

I received your postcard. You must have received my telegram sent after the wedding ceremony was over. I can see from your postcard that you have been worrying. Kashi’s wish was fully respected. Lakshmibehn sang the women’s prayer with the utmost devotion, beginning with the shloka ‘Shantakaram’. After the ceremony was over, she also sang the bhajan ‘Vaishnava Jana’. In Amba, Prabhudas has got exactly the kind of girl suitable for him. She seems to me to have a transparently sincere nature. Brave of course she is. She has twice been to jail and has been yearning for a long time to live in the Ashram. She does not seem to love overmuch any kind of pleasure. She wore no bangles at all at the time of the wedding ceremony. After the ceremony was over, Janakibehn put glass bangles on her wrists. Very likely she will break even these in a short while. Probably you do not know that in the North it is usually customary to wear bangles or put the auspicious red mark on the forehead. It is customary for the bride, after a particular ceremony is over, to wear the garments offered by the father-in-law’s family. I had three saris ready with me. One was got woven by Janakibehn, the other was sent by Santok and the third by Gomati. The sari sent by the last was woven from yarn spun by Kishorelal and Gomati themselves. Gomati happened to have it with her by chance and so sent it to me and insisted that I should give that very sari to Amba to wear. I too liked the idea. But was Amba the kind of girl to accept it? She said: “How would I be the better for it. What I am wearing is good enough. Please let it be”. I found all this so pleasing and natural.

1 From the Ashram Bhajanvali
2 A verse in Sanskrit
3 A devotional song
that I did not at all insist on her accepting the saree. She then wore, during the wedding ceremony, the sari sent by her parents. She had some fever during the ceremony. She had been forbidden to take anything except fruit on the wedding-day. The fever came down in the evening. She passed the whole of yesterday on fruit and milk only. She is now able to move about and is quite happy. For the present, she will stay here. A sari was made for Ba from yarn spun by me. It was neither washed nor dyed. I gave Amba that sari also. A piece of rejo or kokali khadi with fine needlework on it given by Ba and Mithubehn for Jakir has also been given to Amba. Amba has thus come into possession of a fairly good number of articles. For the present, both wish to stay here. Afterwards, they will come to you for your blessings. My previous letter was not written to rebuke you. It was written to make your dharma clear to you and to strengthen your faith.

Blessings for the New Year.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: S.N. 33070

56. AN M.A. IN A HURRY

An M. A. of Kerala writes a long letter from which I take the following paragraphs of public importance:

I can heartily endorse my correspondent’s statement that ‘there can be no peace for me or him and his friends, if untouchability continues in our country’. My word also stands. But untouchability will not be removed by force or, which is perhaps the same thing, by law, not will temples be opened by such means. Legislation is badly required to remove legal obstruction which has been created by certain judicial decisions. But if and when the two Bills are passed, untouchability lurking in the Hindu heart will not necessarily be removed

---

1 Coarse silk for making blouse
2 A variety of khadi
3 This and the subscription is in Gandhiji’s own hand.
4 Not reproduced here. The correspondent had written about the continuing evil of untouchability, indifference of khadi workers towards Harijan work and villagers’ attitude towards Harijans, and suggested steps to instil courage, self-confidence, etc., into Harijans.
nor will public temples be automatically opened. Untouchability will go when the Hindu heart has melted, and the public temples will be opened when the worshippers have discovered that God is no respector of persons and that He does not reside in temples which man’s insolence or ignorance has closed against any body of persons who are desirous of offering worship on the same terms as they.

The correspondent would throw the sole responsibility for opening the Guruvayur temple on me. He should know that it is no one man’s work. It will be done in God’s good time. Workers can but work to the best of their ability. Let him also know that Kelappan’s pledge is not exhausted. His visit to Colombo is temporary. Rajagopalachari works by prayer even though he is in prison. Madhavan Nair, that great and true Kerala servant, is no more. But I have no doubt that his spirit watches over our conduct and misconduct. It will not rest till Hinduism is purified of the evil of untouchability. And the correspondent may rest assured that, when the proper time comes and if God wills it, both Kelappan and I would again stake our lives for the opening, not only of the Guruvayur temple, but many others.

As to the khadi service, the correspondent’s complaint is wholly unjustified. Those who are engaged in khadi service may not very well be expected to give their time to Harijan service. But I know that the vast majority of them have no untouchability in their breasts and that they never miss an opportunity of rendering whatever personal service they can to Harijans. There is no bar to taking Harijans in Khadi service. Lastly I may state that several thousand Harijan families are being supported through the khadi organizations dotted over the whole country.

The correspondent is on surer ground in his complaints about villagers’ attitude in many parts of India. The ignorance of the villagers is colossal. They are wedded to the idea of high and low. Village workers are far too few for the numerous villages. But there is no cause whatever for despair. Villagers are waking up. They have begun to realize that to deny to fellow beings the same status that they have for themselves is to deny God’s equal justice. The correspondent has no notion of the silent but solid work that many workers are doing in and around villages. This Harijan work being purely religious does not lend itself much to the spectacular. It will prosper in exact proportion to the purity and penance of the workers. It will be surely retarded by the impurity, selfishness or mixed motives of workers.

As to putting life into Harijans, it will be there immediately the crushing dead weight of untouchability is lifted from off the heads of Harijans. They should, of course, have, as they are having, religious and other instruction in the many schools that have been and are being opened. Time is on our side and so is the time spirit. No religion can possibly stand the blazing light of the world’s opinion that is being directed towards all religions, and still retain in it proved evils and superstitions.

_Harijan_, 21-10-1933

57. WHAT OF SWEEPERS IF . . . ?

An English friend referring to two ladies who are coming to India writes :¹

They . . . want to do their own “sweeper” work, even though it may get them into trouble with some of the local caste Hindus . . . it may get them into difficulties with the local sweepers, who will complain . . . that they are losing good work, and good wages. Now, what is the right reply to that? Supposing that thousand of millions of caste Hindus and others, up and down India, resolved to do their own “sweeping”, as an act of penance and visible proof that they felt themselves no better than sweepers, many sweepers would lose their livelihood . . . It is to some extent the old story (in a different form) of the displacement of labour as a result of social development. I don’t remember seeing any comment of yours or anyone’s on this point in _Harijan_ . . .

It is quite true that I have not discussed this question in these pages as a difficulty, as it has never arisen that way as yet. In several places, including the late Ashram at Sabarmati and its branch at Wardha, the inmates have been doing their own sweeper work without the local sweepers being ruffled. At Sabarmati, in the beginning stages, we had sweepers, who were paid a paltry sum. It was not possible to pay them more for about two hours’ work which at best was never satisfactorily done. They did not know the hygienic method. They would not easily take to it Sanitary service is by no means a hereditary occupation of long standing. All the evidence hitherto collected by me goes to show that before the Mohammedan conquest there were no professional sweepers; the Hindu social system, being based on rural conditions, did not necessitate such sanitary service as is indispensable in these days of rapid urban growth. I do not, however, wish to convey the meaning that rural sanitation during the purely Hindu period was by any means perfect or even fairly satisfactory. On the contrary, it seems to have been very crude. The highly scientific methods evolved and still being developed in the West are undoubtedly a recent and very beneficial growth.

¹ Only excerpts are reproduced here.

Holding these views, I can only welcome the determination of the two English sisters to do their own sweeper work. If I were in their place, I should invite the sweepers in the neighbourhood to give other service, if they were in want of employment, or to learn the hygienic and clean method of doing sanitary work if they were minded so to do. Whether they took up some other work or no, whether they volunteered to learn better methods of sanitation or no, they could not harbour any feeling of being wronged for not being asked to do sanitary service for the sisters, for I would expect them to work for the betterment of Harijans in a hundred ways. The difficulty can only, and must always, arise when things are done in a patronizing or selfish manner. I would, for instance, be patronizing, if I offered now and then to work a little in a touch-me-not fashion, side by side with my sweeper, just in order to be able to declare at public meetings that even I did sweeping alongside my sweeper. I would be acting selfishly if I did my own sweeping for the sake of keeping my closets cleaner than they would otherwise be and did not want to waste my time in teaching my sweeper the modern method or did not want to pay more for more efficient and more intelligent service. But there never can be any offence taken when I serve my sweeper neighbours in a variety of ways and, by doing my own sweeping, teach them by example that sanitary service is not only not a mean occupation, but a perfectly honourable and most useful occupation which everyone should learn and many may follow with great benefit to society, if it is taken up in a humanitarian spirit.

_Harijan_, 21-10-1933
58. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

WARDHA,

October 21, 1933

CHI. PREMA,

I think I told you in one of my letters that I intentionally did not write to you, so that you might receive all the letters of Dhurandhar\(^1\). But I gather from Amtul’s letter that you expect me to write and that you can get my letters. I was thinking of writing, when I got Sushila’s \(^2\) postcard yesterday. I am, therefore, writing this letter before the morning prayer.

I see that you are all right there. If you are permitted to write, give me your daily-time table and any other details about food, etc., which you can.

I have just now Ba, Mira, Chandrasankar and Nayar with me. Kaka is here at present, Kishorelal and Gomati\(^3\) left the day before yesterday. Swami\(^4\) will arrive shortly, and so also will Tarabehn. Pannalal\(^5\), Nanibehn\(^6\) and Gangabehn\(^7\) are in Ahmedabad. The Ashram will be permanently converted into a hostel for Harijans. The office, etc., will be handed over for that purpose. You must have read all this in papers. I hope you and all the other women liked this idea.

I get long letters from Mahadev. He has collected a library in Belgaum. I hope Durga\(^8\) hears from him. Devdas is happy in Multan, and Pyarelal in Nasik. Ba is getting ready \[to go to jail\].

There are more than 40 girls now under Lakshmibehn’s\(^9\) charge. She is being helped by Dwarkanath\(^10\). Narmada is with Vinoba in Nalwadi.

Prabhudas’s marriage was celebrated on Wednesday. He has got a partner of his choice. She is 24 years old. She has been educated at the Gurukul and seems intelligent.

My tour begins on the 8th. I hope all the women are well and

---

\(^1\) Addressee’s former teacher
\(^2\) Addressee’s friend Sushila Pai
\(^3\) Kishorelal Mashruwala’s wife
\(^4\) Swami Anandananda
\(^5\) The Jhavris
\(^6\) ibid
\(^7\) ibid
\(^8\) Mahadev Dedsai’s wife
\(^9\) Lakshmibehn Khare
\(^10\) Dwarkanath Harkare make good use of every moment of their time. More after I hear from you.

Blessings to you all from

BAPU

[PS.]
I have not revised the letter.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10351. Also C. W. 6790. Courtesy:
Premabehn Kantak

59. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

October 21, 1933

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

I got your letter. I am doing what you wish. There will be no moral difficulty. I should like you to stop worrying.\(^1\) You must have a telescope more powerful than even Premilabehn’s. Through hers a mustard seed will appear as big as a mountain. I hope you remember the planet Uno\(^2\).

Prabhudas’s marriage took place on Wednesday. He got a girl exactly of the type that he wanted, and through his own efforts. She is 24 and is thoroughly simple in habits. Since she is from North India, she cares neither for the vermilion mark nor for bangles. She wasn’t wearing bangles even during the marriage ceremony. Janakibehn has forced bangles on her wrists now. She is fairly well educated. She is an Arya Samajist.

I had a long letter from Mahadev (written from Belgaum Jail). It is like a long poem. I send with this a few extracts from it.

Brijkishan\(^3\) got ill after going to Delhi. Ba is getting ready [for courting imprisonment]. Kishorelal and Gomati left the day before yesterday. Anandi, Bachu and Babu also left. Kishorelal went to Akola. Anandi intended to get down on the way to see Lakshmidas. There has been no letter from Lakshmidas yet. Even if she marries, she will continue to enjoy complete freedom in the Ashram.

What is your weight? What is your food? How much milk and

\(^1\) The addressee had requested Gandhiji to take rest.
\(^2\) This seems to be an error for Pluto, which was discovered in 1930.
\(^3\) Brijkishan Cahndiwala.
curds do you take? May I send anything for you? Remember that even a mother doesn’t serve an item during a meal unasked. And in this case the mother is a person like me. What can you expect then? It is now time to attend the morning prayer. So I stop here.

Blessing from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 34-5

60. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

October 21, 1933

CHI. MARY,

You may take barley not because you have some with you but because you need it. But if you are constipated, it is not barley you need but some green, such as gourd or the like.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G. N. 6011. Also C. W. 3337. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

61. LETTER TO KOTWAL

October 21, 1933

Bhai Kotwal,

As a general rule it can be stated that a person who has faith in civil disobedience and has joined it cannot take up any other work. But, on the other hand, a person who has faith in it but has already taken up some responsibility should not join it at the risk of failing in that responsibility. “Better one’s duty, bereft of merit ……”

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 3605

1 The source has dudhi in Devanagari script.
2 Bhagavad Gita, III. 35.
62. LETTER TO VANAMALA N. PARIDH

October 21, 1933

CHI. VANAMALA,

I hope you have now completely got over your illness. Now go and join Anandi, Bachu and Babu as soon as possible. If you had been well and had come here, both you and I would have been happy.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 5782. Also C. W. 3005. Courtesy: Vanamalabehn M. Desai

63. LETTER TO MOHAN N. PARIKH

October 21, 1933

CHI. MOHAN,

I got your letter. You must have completely recovered now. I will be glad, therefore, if you join Anandi.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S. N. 9186

64. LETTER TO JAISUKHLAL GANDHI

October 21, 1933

CHI. JAISUKHLAL,

I got your letter.

I had heard about Umiya’s illness. I had talked about her with Jamnalalji. You should solve the problem about the charkhas there. One of you should try to gin with the help of one of your charkhas and make the necessary changes in it. Keshu’s letter is enclosed.

Vinod and Kusum wrote to me also. I hope you keep good health.

Blessings from
BAPU

1 Jaisukhlal Amritlal Gandhi a khadi worker.

2 Addressee’s daughter
[PS.]
You must have read everything about Prabhudas’s marriage.
From a microfilm of the Gujarati : M. M. U./III

65. LETTER TO KESHAVRAM S. TRIVEDI

October 21, 1933

Bhai Keshavram,

I have your letter. Please send the khadi to Shri Harakhchand Motichand through the Orissa Flood Relief Committee, Cuttack, Orissa.

Blessings from

Bapu

Shri Keshavram Trivedi
Suddha Khadi Bhandar, Navsari

From a microfilm of the Gujarati : M. M. U./XXII

66. LETTER TO SHANKARLAL D. PARIKH

October 21, 1933

Bhai Shankarlal,

I received your letter a few days ago, but could not get time to reply to it. I cannot postpone doing so any longer, and so I write this. I hope Vanamala and Mohan have completely recovered now. I would advise you not to keep either of them in Kathlal. There was a letter from Narahari specially about them, and he also says that both of them must live with Anandi. It is desirable that they should get used to living with other people and have some experience. They will fall ill occasionally, no matter where they are. Of course if neither of them can be persuaded to go, I shall be helpless. But I think you should try and see if you can persuade them to go. So far as I know, Vanamala used to feel very happy with Anandi, but it is possible that Mohan may find it difficult to forget his attachment for Kathlal. But he has a simple heart and I think it will be easy for you to persuade him. If you have recently got any news about Narahari and Mani1, please let me know. Also tell me what you are doing at present. You have preserved the love of neatness which I had observed in you.

Blessings from

Bapu

From a copy of the Gujarati : C. W. 2685

1 Narahai Parikh’s wife.
67. LETTER TO BHAGWANJI P. PANDYA

October 21, 1933

CHI. BHAGWANJI,

I got your previous letter, but I simply couldn’t find time to reply to it. I had completely forgotten to write to you about the prices of raw and processed yarn. I have sent your letter to Bhai Shankerlal and asked for his comments. Perhaps he will talk with you, too.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C. W. 363: Bhagwanji P. Pandya

68 LETTER TO ANASUYABEHN SARABHAI

WARDHA,

October 21, 1933

CHI. ANASUYABEHN,

Blessings for the new year. Anandi, Babu and Bachu will have arrived there. As Vimu¹ has not come so far, all the girls will go to Sharda Mandir. So there is nothing to say about their studies.

I find that the girls do not get proper food. They cannot be fed differently from the Harijan girls. Talk to them and if necessary make changes in the menu without increasing the expenditure. I believe that the Harijan girls should get the same food as we normally eat. I know it is difficult. We can think about it only when we meet. I have just told you of the girls’ attitude. We should do whatever is possible without doing harm to the Harijan Ashram.

New Year’s blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: S. N. 32824

69. INTERVIEW TO “UNATT”

[Before October 22, 1933]²

Q. Inspite of efforts on the part of social reformers, the standard of living of educated communities in Sind has been rising very rapidly; what would you advise under the circumstances?

¹ Vimala, daughter of Chhaganlal Joshi
² The report was released to the Press from Hyderabad (Sind) on this date.
A. I would advise those who think this is wrong to set an example by living simply and thinking and acting nobly.

Q. Young men believe that unless they are in a position to earn from Rs. 150 to 200 per month, they cannot even think of marriage. At the same time, an ever-increasing number of them keep on imagining that it is legitimate to satisfy sexual instinct in some way or another without undertaking the obligations of married life; how do you view such a mentality?

A. I can only look upon it with shame and deep regret. Such mentality can only lead to suicide. The only cure for it is for young men, who realize the enormity of the evil, to set their faces against it by showing the greatest purity in their own lives and correctness of conduct.

Q. What advice would you give to young girls who have perforce to remain unmarried or who are not in a mood to marry?

A. Such girls should go out of their little communities or even Provinces in search of suitable deserving companions. The sooner we get through the spirit of provincialism and exclusive caste, the better would it be for us. I cannot understand why an educated Amil should be in search of an Amil companion and why he or she should not take a deserving companion from any part of India, the condition being, not selfish gratification of base animal passions, but search after spiritual growth and national advancement.

Q. Would you not advise the Amil girls to break the barriers of Amilism and be prepared to marry any non-Amil—be he a Bhaibund or a Bhatia or any other? What are your views on inter marriages between Sindhis and Gujaratis, etc.?

A. Already answered above.

Q. If you hold that “man and woman should be given fullest opportunity for self-expression”, would you advise that young girls and young boys should be given unfettered discretion in mixing or associating with each other, irrespective of parents’ knowledge or control? Also, should girls be allowed to move about as freely as boys do?

A. Most decidedly not. I believe in the middle path. Most boys and girls should be guided and allow themselves to be guided by their parents and guardians and the latter on their part should cherish and promote the independence of their boys and girls who may be under their guardianship or supervision. If the youth of the country will remain pure they should avoid all secretiveness.

Q. It is maintained by the old people that in view of the peculiar conditions obtaining in Sind, it is not safe to discard purdah, but young men are naturally against this system which they regard as highly pernicious. What would you suggest to avoid the clash on this point of difference between the young and the old?

A. I have never believed in the purdah system. I think it is fast going and the girls, who dare to tear the purdah and demonstrate to their neighbours that no harm has befallen them in any way whatever, will be most potent proofs for removing the prejudice or fear. Tearing down the purdah does not mean that girls should wander about anywhere and everywhere. It is the hiding of one’s face in the presence of men which I consider to be so highly injurious to one’s growth or self-expression. Modesty is the best protection and purdah.

Q. What are your views on co-education?

A. I believe in well-regulated and well-thought-out co-education.

The Bombay Chronicle, 26-10-1933

70. TALK WITH A FRIEND

[Before October 22, 1933]

You are aware of the agreement among the so-called minority communities when the Round Table Conference was in progress in London. The Harijans also were included among them. I staked my life for them at that time. Being a far-sighted man I realized that since some sort of a constitution was coming, if the Government accepted the scheme contained in that agreement our relations with Harijans would come to an end and Hindu society would be permanently divided. Harijans would either separate from the rest of the Hindus and form a new community; or would merge in some other community; but they would not continue to belong to the Hindu fold. I saw that this would mean the destruction of Hinduism. It would be destroyed not because 60 million people would have left it, but because of the reasons driving them to that course. Anyone is free to abandon Hinduism if he so chooses, but we, the caste Hindus, should not be the cause of their doing so. I, therefore, felt that it was my dharma to prevent such a division even at the cost of my life.

Though I was in jail when the Award of the British Cabinet

---

1 This and the following item are from Chandrashekhar Shukla’s weekly letter. This appeared under title “Why Took Up Harijan Work”.
2 Vide “Speech at Minorities Committee Meeting”, 13-11-1931 and “Speech at Westminster School”, 13-11-1931
3 ibid
regarding electorates was published,¹ I still felt that I had no choice but to keep my pledge to oppose it. I, therefore, went on a fast unto death in September 1932. People say now that, even if only incidentally, it rendered a great service to Hinduism. If you believe that I had taken the right step in opposing the British Cabinet’s Award, all the other steps follow logically from it.

Q. Will you kindly explain that in more detail? By your fast in 1932 you did succeed in getting the scheme of separate electorates for Harijans altered, but what was the justification of the other steps?

A. The desire to get the Cabinet Award amended was merely the originating cause of the fast. But with its amendment a duty devolved on the caste Hindus. Hence, when Sir Purushottamdas¹ and Sjt. Ghan-shyamdas visited me in jail, I told them that I would not be content merely with the amendment of the Cabinet Award and that the caste Hindus would have to do a great deal. Then I embodied this in the form of a resolution. It was passed at the Bombay Conference on September the 25th in almost the very words of my draft.¹ It was stated therein that from then on no one would be regarded as an untouchable in Hinduism and that all temples and other public places would be accessible to Harijans to the same extent that they were to the other Hindus. When all the leaders came to me after the Resolution was passed, I pledged my life to the Harijan leaders for the implementation of the Resolution. Hence it became incumbent upon me to take steps even in Yeravda jail. I corresponded with the Government to get the doors of the prison that had closed after that fast opened again, and told it that I would have to keep the caste Hindus awake to their duty, and that, therefore, I should not lose contact with them. As a result of the correspondence, the Government granted me full permission to carry on Harijan work from prison.¹ Then I noticed some impurity among the Harijan workers and in consequence I had to resort to the 21 days’ fast. Then I was imprisoned again in August and asked for the same facilities as before. On their being refused, there followed another fast of 8 days.

Q. Can you say more about this impurity among the workers?

¹ On August 17, 1932; vide “Letter to Narandas Gandhi”, 8-11-1932
² Sir Purushottamdas Thakurdas
³ Vide “Resolution at the Hindu Leaders Conference, Bombay”, 25-9-1932
⁴ Vide, Footnote I “Telegram to Home Secretary Government of India”, 3-11-1932
A. That fast was intended for the purification of the workers. I have given an illustration in Harijan to show when a purificatory fast becomes necessary. Please refer to it. If such impurity creeps into us, religious reform would not spread among the crores of people and the irreligious practice of untouchability which has entered deep into our villages cannot be eradicated. I have already described the great conflict in my heart and the terrible storm through which I had to pass before arriving at the decision to fast. I have not cited in Harijan all the instances of impurity that have come to my notice. I came to know a great many other things during and even after my fast. Many of the workers woke up and told me that they had considered themselves absolutely pure that they could not see the blemishes in them. I have already published the confession of an overseer who had collected a pice each from the labourers. If I were to publish all such instances the pages of Harijan would start stinking. I have, therefore, refrained from doing so. We need not worry about purifying the world. But we can certainly except that those who have dedicated their lives to Harijan work will always remain pure. Fasting is a very common thing in Hinduism, but other religions too have recommended fasting as a means for purification.

Q. Many people feel that your efforts to get the Temple-entry Bill passed in the Assembly and sending Rajaji to Delhi with that aim was a violation of the principle of non-co-operation. Will you kindly explain your point of view ?

A. The Congress principles are intended to facilitate its work. You know that in 1921 when the non-co-operation movement was in full swing a Congressman in Utkal had misappropriated some money, thinking that he would not be taken to a court of law since the Congress had boycotted them. When this thing was brought to my notice, I wired advising that they should have the man arrested. The rules of the Congress should not be such that defeat its own aims. In the matter of temple-entry, I saw that there was a legal impediment, and that if we could not proceed further without getting it removed, we must do so, and bear with any short-sighted person who may see a contradiction in our action. Is there no difference between taking one grain of

\(^1\) Vide “A Case for Fasting”
\(^2\) Vide “Notes”, sub-title “A Noteworthy Donation”, “Some Dangerous Beliefs”
\(^3\) Introduced by Ranga Iyer in the Legislative Assembly; vide also footnote 3, “Letter to Ranchhodhas Patwari”, 11-1-1933 arsenic and 30 grains of it? Medicine should be used to cure a disease and not to commit suicide. It is the moral duty of those who passed the Bombay Resolution to take the help of the law, if necessary, to get the disabilities of Harijans removed. This is clearly stated in the Resolution. How can the supporters of that Resolution oppose this Bill? Or, why should they hesitate to take the help of members of the Assembly? We have not given but accepted co-operation. Supposing that the Government passes legislation enforcing complete prohibition; shall we say then that we do not want it?

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbandhu, 22-10-1933

71. SEATS FOR HARIJANS

[Before October 22, 1933]

To say that Harijans will not be able to use their franchise properly and will not be able to understand the interests of the country is to lay the axe at the very root of the principles of democracy. It is like the imperialists telling us that we are not fit for democracy and will never learn the proper use of the franchise. Mistakes will always be made. We shall progress only through mistakes. But does it mean that we should not have the right to vote? Exercise of the right of voting will in itself be an education for Harijans. Nor would it be proper to say that they would not understand national interests. Their representatives would be persons elected with our own votes. For every Harijan seat, Harijans would elect four persons, and from among these four we shall have to elect one. Would we not find even one person from among them who would understand the nation’s interests? If we really do not find such a person, then the fault would be ours for having neglected them to that extent. The right way is to embrace them and win over their hearts by serving them. It won’t help to distrust them.

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbandhu, 22-10-1933

---

1 This was Gandhiji’s reply to some critics of the representation given to Harijans under the Yeravda Pact.
72. ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

[Before October 22, 1933]

UNDYING MEMORY OF THE BELOVED

I fully share your grief. Your letter reminds me that several friends of mine have been in the same condition as you. But I have seen from experience that our love for the beloved one is not for his or her body but the immortal spirit dwelling in it. As the years pass, your memory of your wife will not grow dim in your heart, but will become stronger and richer. This thought should dispel your grief and give you deep joy and make you see what is real and what is unreal in life. If one individual can possibly share the experience of another, I wish that you would share my experience as I am sharing your grief.

GIFT OF DEATH

If you have to depart, do so peacefully with the consciousness that you are going to your own home and with the Lord’s name inscribed in your heart. If God wills to take some service from you through this very body of yours, He will save your life.

THE BEST USE OF THE ASHRAM

The Satyagraha Ashram has been permanently given away for Harijan work. I feel that this is the best use it can be put to. Since the Government did not take possession of it, there was no other equally good purpose for which it could have been used. This was also the best way of sacrificing the Ashram. Having regard to the ideals of the Ashram, everybody here feels that this is the best purpose for which it could be used. A special committee will be appointed to run it. It will not admit just any Harijan. Whoever is admitted will have to abide by the rules of the place. I see nothing wrong in the Ashram inmates being without a permanent abode and living anywhere contented with whatever comes their way. When everything is over, we may set up another Ashram; that is the only proper course for us.

1 This appeared under the title “Form the Mail bag”.
2 This was in reply to a correspondent who had described his grief at the death of his wife and asked Gandhiji how he could cherish her memory so that it might be a source of joy without any shadow of grief.
3 This was addressed to a woman who was on her death-bed.
QUESTIONS FROM A HARIJAN WORKER

I do not believe that many Harijan workers are taking more than what they need for their subsistence. Some of them take nothing at all. I do not know what is ‘fat salary’ according to you. I consider him the best propagandist who takes only enough for his food and clothing. In our poor country we do not have a leisured class which would provide us national workers.

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbandhu, 22-10-1933

73. REGARDING MUNICIPALITIES, ETC.

A gentleman makes the following suggestion regarding municipalities, local boards, etc.

I think this suggestion certainly deserves consideration. The municipalities themselves may not put the scheme into practice but where the local Harijan Sevak Sangh is prepared to take the responsibility, the school buildings should be made over to them outside school hour rent-free but on condition that the buildings and the furniture would be well looked after. This will save rent and Harijans will have the benefit of better accommodation and amenities.

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbandhu, 22-10-1933

74. SOME MORAL POSERS

The gentleman who has made suggestions regarding the municipalities, etc., has asked the following questions which are useful for all workers.

---

1 The worker had complained that most of the temples remained closed to Harijans, workers doing Harijan service drew fat salaries, khadi workers took on interest in Harijan work and that villages were steeped in ignorance and superstition.

Paragraphs 1, 3 and 4 of Gandhiji’s answers are not translated here as they are covered by “An M.A. in a Hurry”

2 Not translated here. The suggestion was that civic bodies should run night schools for Harijans and encourage them with financial aid.

3 The questions are not translated here. The correspondent had asked:
I would answer them in the following order—

(1) Any vow to be taken must be written out in precise terms. It should be done in the presence of a witness, if available at the time. If a doubt arises, it must be interpreted rigidly, not loosely. Nothing should be appended to it, under the excuse of being left out, which would weaken it. For instance, say, I pledge not to touch liquor. No country has been mentioned in this pledge. I then go to England and someone persuades me to take liquor on grounds of health. Now, I cannot argue that since I happened to be in India at the time of taking the pledge it applied only to my stay there and that I was free to take liquor while abroad. Nor can I permit myself to take liquor as a medicine on the ground that there was no mention of medicines in the pledge.

(2) As in the case of other activities, the time for prayer too must be fixed. It matters little what time is fixed for it. It is best to have it just before bed-time and on waking up in the morning after cleaning one's teeth. It is also necessary to have fixed hours of sleep. No one can achieve concentration of mind all at once. As the saying goes, "even hard black rocks can be cut with a rope." So concentration will automatically follow in the wake of regular praying. So long as this is not attained, one should diligently continue to pray every day rather than worry about it. "You should never accept defeat, even if you die."

(3) Never give up the practice of writing a diary once you have resolved to do so. If not immediately, you will certainly realize its advantages later. This habit itself will guard us against many of our shortcomings as the diary will be a permanent witness to these. All the slips must be noted in the diary. There is no need to condemn them. Criticism is always taken for granted. It is enough to mention, say, ‘Today I was angry with B; today I deceived A.’ There is no need to make observations like, ‘This was very unfortunate, ‘Oh me! I must not repeat it.’ Words in praise of oneself should never be there. It is enough to note down the work done and the slips committed. The diary should not take note of other people’s faults.

(4) This question does not appear to be right. Neither the language of the Gita, nor my own, is aphoritics. It is not proper to compare my language with the Gita’s; I would be happy if I could

(1) What are the factors to be considered before taking a vow and whether in can be modified afterwards?
(2) Can the fixed times of prayer be immediately after waking and just before write the language of the Gita, but I am far removed from it. Whatever we read on a subject with which we have little familiarity, appears to us aphoristic. Technical language is language which is adequate for the purposes of that subject alone. To those who are not familiar with it, it sounds aphoristic. But this is one thing and the *sutras*¹ of Patanjali are another thing. The latter leave many things unsaid. This cannot be said of the Gita. But here the author gives a new connotation to familiar expressions, which makes them difficult to understand. My language has one quality, viz. brevity. However, it is imperfect, whereas the Gita is perfect. When I say that my language is imperfect I do not imply that I have inadequate command over the language, although that too is true. What is implied here is that my thoughts are imperfect. Hence there is bound to be difficulty in understanding them. As my thoughts mature, they will come to be expressed so as to be easily comprehended. Having admitted this shortcoming in my language, I can still say that some readers do not make the fullest effort and then fail to understand even perfectly expressed ideas. And then they blame me! For example, let us take the instance cited by the correspondent himself. Spinning is a tangible activity; it can therefore be actually demonstrated. Agitation of the mind is intangible. It is quite correct to say that restlessness can be got over by practice. Today, we have no means for actually demonstrating [the truth of] this. If we learn to reduce our thought processes to a visual image we would be able to obtain a picture of this practice too as we do of spinning. At present we can only say that mental restlessness can be got rid of through diligent praying. In this, one has to rely on the truthfulness of the student, i.e., his adherence to truth. Who can know a person who pretends to pray while continuing to be agitated? Or, who is there to rebuke the individual who deceives himself every day and while praying daily makes many impossible plans? In other words, the success of practice depends entirely upon the sincerity of the aspirant. If there is insincerity in spinning, it can be pointed out to the spinner, since it can be directly perceived.

(5) “You should be satisfied with whatever little you get” does not imply that a lazy person may rest satisfied with what he gets. The implication is that one should be satisfied with what one gets after making constant and sincere effort. That is to say that in addition to the utmost human effort, God in heaven has His say on the result.

¹ Yogasutras enunciated by Patanjali.
Hence, there is absolutely no need to be despondent if the effort does not appear to bear fruit. This is what the author of the Gita suggests.

[From Gujarati]

_Harijanbandhu, 22-10-1933_

75. LETTER TO MADHAVDAS AND KRISHNA KAPADIA

WARDHA,
October 22, 1933

CHI. MADHAVDAS AND KRISHNA,

I got your letter. My blessings to you both. May you be happy and have peace of mind during this year.

The tour will commence on the 8th.

Ba knows your address, of course.

Ramdas is fine.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati : M. M. U./XXII

76. LETTER TO KANTI N. PAREKH

WARDHA,
October 22, 1933

CHI. KANTI,

I was very happy to read your letter. My blessings to you and Jayanti for the new year. May both of you cultivate greater devotion to service and live long.

Parbhudas’ marriage was celebrated here on Wednesday. The bride is from Bijnor, and excels even Prabhudas in simplicity. She is hard-working and seems good-natured. She is brave and loves serving people. She has no love for pleasures at all. Ramdas is doing fairly well. Keshu has joined a ginning mill. Krishnadas is in the khadi department. There are more than 40 girls here. The whole burden is being shouldered by Lakshmibehn and Dwarkanath. Things are going fairly well. Anandi, Bachu and Babu left for Ahmedabad only recently. Balabhadra and Dhiru Joshi are in Bhavnagar and deeply engrossed in the activities there. I think Indu will cling to the place. Dudhibehn lives in Bhavnagar and looks after the children.

1 Kasturba Gandhi’s brother and his wife

I frequently hear from Devdas and Mahadev, and from Sardar also, of course. I had a letter today form . . . ' too. Prithuraj' is at Calicut. He writes to me occasionally. Mani must have gone to Ahmedabad. Swami has come here today. Kishorelal and Gomati have returned to Akola.

My tour will commence on the 8th.

I think I have written enough now, haven’t I? Make the best use of every moment. Write to me again if you can.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

Mirabehn, Chandrashankar and Nayar will accompany me. At present Ba also is here. She leaves for [Yeravda] Mandir after a few days.

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G. N. 6276.

77. LETTER TO MANIBEHN PATEL

October 22, 1933

CHI. MANI,

I got your postcard. I will wait for you there on Wednesday. I do hope Baba will come. I hope you are improving. Swami arrived today. The rest on Wednesday.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna patro-4 : Manibehn Patelne, p. 109

1 The source is illegible here.
2 Son of Lakshmidas Asar.
78. LETTER TO GANGA T. HINGORANI ¹

WARDHA,
October 22, 1933

DEAR SISTER,

Chl. Vidya ² has read out to me your letter to Anand. You should stop worrying about the two of them. Anand and Vidya are no kids. Their ultimate welfare lies in our letting them do what they wish to. Anand will meet you. Please give him your blessing. Give up un-due attachment. Vidya needs peace. She keeps fit here. She also learns a few things and is in good company. Mahadev too is well. You need not be anxious on his score either. How long can grown up children stay with their parents? They ought to have their freedom. Since God has endowed you with wealth you need not feel the necessity of physical service from Anand or Vidya. Moreover, Vidya is incapable of rendering physical service. She herself needs it.

Blessings from

MOHANDAS GANDHI

79. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

October 23, 1933

CHI. MARY,

Great minds think alike. I was wondering why you would not take your meal here last evening. Of course you can take all your meals here. The liquidness has nothing to do with the indigestion. It points to the necessity of less protein. But you should take some time from me when you come.

Love.

BAPU

[PS.]

If the bowels have been sluggish and you feel any indigestion

¹ Mother of Anand T. Higorani.
² Anand T. Hingorani’s wife and son now, you may mix one portion of milk. Yes, three meals will be perhaps quite enough.

From a photostat: G. N. 6012. Also C. W. 3338. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

80. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

WARDHA,
October 23, 1933

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

I had two wires one from you and the other from Krishna and Raja. Thank God. Mother’s bravery commands my worship. I have pictured her to be a personification of quiet, dignified bravery and sacrifice, ever since I have met her.

One thing I have been forgetting to write to you. If ever you feel that you would like to call a meeting of the A. I. C. C., you must not hesitate to call it. You need not mind my disinclination. I am disinclined, because I feel it will make confusion worse confounded and mean waste of energy, time and money. But I may be quite wrong.

Love to you all.

Blessings from

BAPU

81. LETTER TO MITHUBEHN PETIT

October 23, 1933

CHI. MITHUBEHN,

I have offended you. But I am helpless.

I examined your samples. I will try to find buyers for them. I will also try if somebody agrees to buy up all your stock. You say that you are prepared to sell even at a loss. Let me know what you mean and how much loss you are prepared to put up with. You had asked me for something in the nature of a letter of recommendation. I give it below.

God alone can reward you for the service you have been doing to the poor through khadi work and by running a dispensary. However, the country also will not forget the services of self-sacrificing women like you. It can show it appreciation of them best by welcoming them, taking up those causes and helping you in doing your work better. The people should know that, even if the khadi manufactured through; your help is costly, every pie paid by them for it goes directly into the pockets of the poor. You don’t want even a pie by way of profit. God has given you enough and you are not only satisfied with it but even spend from it for the benefit of the poor.

I hope you keep good health. My tour will commence on the 8th.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]
Give me news about Jaiji and also her address.

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G. N. 2706

82. LETTER TO PADMA

October 23, 1933

CHI. PADMA,

I got your letter. I don’t wish to take you with me during my tour just now. You should become more mature and settle down to something. After that, I may take you if I get a suitable opportunity.
You must have read about Prabhudas’s marriage. Several visitors have turned up and so I stop here.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G. N. 6146. Also C. W. 3501. Courtesy :
Prabhudas Gandhi.

83. LETTER TO RANI VIDYAVATI

WARDHA,
October 23, 1933

CHI. VIDYA.

Have you not received my letters at all? There is no mention of them in your letter which I received today.

Why did you go to Hardoi in spite of the pain? One can be attached even to service. You can render true service only by giving up attachment altogether. Can the cripple not worship? One can also serve through one’s mind. Take a couple of Harijan girls into your house and bring them up.

Lakshmi has not been writing at all. How is that? Write to her that I shall be satisfied if I have a postcard from her. Do you receive Harijan Sevak?

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Hindi original: Rani Vidyavati Papers: Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library

84. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

October 24, 1933

CHI. MARY,

If I knew where N. was, I would immediately wire her to return. I am in search but have failed so far.

Love.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat: G. N. 6013. Also C. W. 3339. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

85. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

October 24, 1933

DEAR THAKKAR BAPA,

Herewith George Joseph’s letter and a copy of my reply to him.

Also herewith a letter of complaint against poor Bapineedu and a copy of my reply.

Yours sincerely,
BAPU

1 The letter was in reply to the addressee’s request to be allowed to go and fetch
2 These are not available.

ibid
[PS.]

I got the letters regarding N. [The National] Call has done great injustice to her and S1. I have written to Sahani; I had expected his reply today.²

From a photostat: G. N. 1129

86. LETTER TOMATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

October 24, 1933

Why would I refrain from criticizing you for getting angry when I think it necessary to do so? . . . ¹ But I certainly don’t want you to apologize against your will. If I wouldn’t force anybody else to do anything against his will, why should I force you? And would you tolerate me even if I tried? But I certainly have a right, and it is my duty as well, to criticize you whenever I feel it necessary to do so. . . ¹ A person apologizes not for the sake of the other party but for his own good. Among persons with equally virtuous character, age is a consideration. I close this chapter here. Forget all that I have written about the matter.

What connection has this affair with your becoming a trustee? ⁵ I was a party to the proposal for making you one of the trustees. If I get a person better qualified than you, I would certainly withdraw your name. But I would remain neutral if we could think of another person as well qualified as you but not better.

[From Gujarati]

Bapuni Prasadi, p. 138

87. LETTER TO MOOLCHAND AGRAWAL

October 24, 1933

Bhai Moolchand,

I have your letter. Teaching is the right vocation for you. Through it you may do what you can for khadi. But for that a thorough knowledge of the technique of khadi is essential.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 752

¹ The name has been omitted.
² The postscript is in Gujarati.
³ Omissions as in the source.
⁴ ibid
⁵ Of the Gandhi Seva Sangh
88. LETTER TO RAMA DEVI CHOWDHARY

October 24, 1933

DEAR SISTER,

I have your letter. If your son and daughter are keen on studies it would be the right thing to arrange for that. It would be excellent if they learn some vocation. It is impossible to have your son touring with me. The present tour is rather [difficult].

Blessings from
BAPU

SMT. RAMA DEVI CHOWDHARY
CHANDNI CHOWK
CUTTACK, ORISSA

From a photostat of the Hindi: G. N. 2782

89. TRIBUTE TO VITHALBHAI PATEL

October 24, 1933

Mr. Vithalbhai Patel’s death removes one of the most painstaking and ablest of politicians. His self-sacrifice and whole hearted application to the work he undertook were beyond praise. His capacity for work was amazing. It has been truely said of him that whether as the President of the Bombay Corporation or of the Legislative Assembly, he cleared his desk every day, and never allowed arrears to grow. His death is a distinct loss to the country at this juncture. I cannot close this tribute without placing on record my deep appreciation of Mr. Subhas Chandra Bose’s magnificent and devoted nursing of Vithalbhai at much risk to his own health.

The Hindu, 24-10-1933

1 The original is damaged here.
2 Wife of Gopabandhu Chowdhary
3 Gandhiji paid this tribute in an interview to the Associated Press.
4 On October 22
90. LETTER TO JANAKDHARI PRASAD

SATYAGRA

ASHRAM, WARDHA,

October 25, 1933

DEAR JANAKDHARI BABU,

I have your sorrowful letter. You must not give way to grief as you have done. I hope you received my letter written to you on 15th inst. There need be no apology for writing to me. Do please write as often as you wish. You have every right to have my opinion and advice. If you can accept the advice I have given in my previous letter, it will solve all your difficulties.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat : G. N. 55

91. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

October 25, 1933

DEAR THAKKAR BAPA,

Here is a letter from Narasimhan¹ about the Southern tour. I do not know why Rajagopalachari wants me to tour in the South as early as possible. You will perhaps know. I am asking Narasimhan to ascertain the reason.

From your letter about N., I suspect that you think that I don’t want to do anything with her, but that is not the case. I am anxious to have her. But she is so unhinged that she might not come at all. Anyway, I am telegraphing today to you and to the American Mission. I know that The National Call’s references to S. are all unmerited and vicious. He has done no wrong to N. N. herself does not know why her passions were excited when she saw him at Sabarmati. In the letter in which she told me this, she had acquitted S. of all blame. Many women, like many men, often get excited over seeing some members of the opposite sex, and N., having led a life of complete abandon would naturally get excited. I am asking S. to see you so that you can make his acquaintance and know him. Now that you are in this case, it is much better for you to understand all the actors. It will help me also to have your estimate of these actors, for I have not seen the last of

¹ Son of C. Rajagopalachari
I see that Ramnarayan cannot come for two months as Ramnath ‘Suman’ was asking to be allowed to replace him for two or three months. And it was a question whether you could agree and whether Ramnarayan would waive his claim in favour of Ramnath. I suppose you know him. He is quite capable and he will do all the work that you expect. Of course, Chandrashankar cannot possibly cope with the correspondence, editing, and drawing up newspaper reports.

I have a copy of your letter to Negi. You seem to have expected a reply from me to your letter about Biharilal, but in your letter enclosing his long letter to you, you told me that you would write further about him. Naturally, therefore, I did not write, but I can now say generally that we may not create work for him. If there is work for which he is fitted, it should undoubtedly be given to him, even though similar work can be done for less wages than what might have to be given to him.

Yours sincerely,

BAPU

Encl. One letter

From a photostat : G. N. 1130

92. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

October 25, 1933

CHI. VASUMATI,

I heard about you through Tara. She is expected here now. Surendra is here. He keeps good health, but seems to have lost considerable weight. Swami also is here. Mani and Mridula are expected today. Prabhudas has married a girl from North India. The marriage took place here. The girl’s name is Amba. Both are still here. My tour will commence on the 8th. Ba, Mira, Chandrashankar and Nayar are with me. Ba is Preparing to go to Mandir. Nanibehn, Gangabehn and Pannalal are in Ahmedabad. Write to me whenever you can. Do you read anything?

Blessings from

BAPU

SMT. VASUMATIBEHN PANDIT, PRISONER
DISTRICT PRISON, THANA
G. I. P. RLY.

From a photostat of the Gujarati : S. N. 9337. Also C. W. 583. Courtesy : Vasumati Pandit

1 This is not available.
DEAR SISTER,

I must congratulate you on your proposed visit to Calcutta for the purpose of ending the custom of purdah among the sisters there. Purdah is not only a superstitious obsession, I feel it also smacks of sin. Purdah from whom? Are all men steeped in lust? Cannot a women retain her purity without observing purdah? Purity is a state of mind. It ought to come spontaneously to all men. In this age of reason women should serve Daridranarayana if they wish to protect their dharma. They should also educate themselves. Service of Daridranarayana implies propagation of khadi, spinning, etc. Harijan service implies washing off the stain of untouchability; both of these noble activities are God’s work. And education can never be acquired while retaining the purdah.

Did Sita observe purdah in her wanderings with Rama in the forests? Has there ever been in the world a women more virtuous than Sita? Exhort the women to end the custom and preserve dharma.

Yours,

MOHANDAS GANDHI

[From Hindi]

Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, p. 118

---

1 The addressee was to preside over the All India Marwadi Women’s Conference in Calcutta. This letter was-message for the delegales and was published in Vishwamitra 29-10-1933
94. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

October 26, 1933

CHI. MARY.

A ‘tragedy of errors’. The man who brought the first note said no answer was required. Now Madan Mohan sends a reminder.¹ Do please both of you come at 4 p.m.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat : G. N. 6014. Also C. W. 3340. Courtesy : F. Mary Barr

95. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

WARDHA,

October 26, 1933

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

Herewith resignation from Dr. Alam. I have told him that it should have been sent to you. I advise its acceptance. It arises out of a letter of bitter complaint received against him from Lahore. I sent him a copy of it. He strictly denied some of the charges made therein. But accepted the one about practice.

Jamnalalji is anxious about his resignation. My own opinion is that his too should be accepted. He is anxious to go to prison but it worries him that he does not go at once.

I suppose Krishna is now in Bombay.

I see nothing in the paper about Mother now a days. Is she better?

Vithalbhai’s death was fully expected by me but the actuality is disturbing me. His very opposition I valued. It cleared my mind and enabled me to put my position more clearly before the country than I otherwise could have.

Love.

BAPU

Encl.

¹ The addressee has prefaced this letter with the following note in her book Bapu: “I wrote a note asking Gandhiji if I might bring to see him an English friend, who passing through Wardha, and onec, had received no reply. So I sent a reminder with a man who was going to the Ashram.”
96. LETTER TO ABBAS TYABJI

October 26, 1933

MY DEAR OLD BEARD,

Your letter about Kamala does credit to you. As I have to advise her, I was bound to know the reasons for your opinion. You have given me the straightest opinion. Raihana holds the contrary opinion. Yours is based largely on instinct and so is Raihana’s. My instinct too has been against her. But I have refused to act on my instinct in the face of her emphatic contradictions. Of course I brought my own suspicions to her notice.

I hope you had a successful time in Amreli. Did it do much good? Did you sell much khadi? Were you able to do some substantial Harijan work?

Love to you all.

Yours,

BHRRR

From a photostat: S. N. 9588

97. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

October 26, 1933

MY DEAR GHANSHYAMDAS,

I must dictate in English in answer to your letter written in Hindi.

It was not necessary to write more about the constitution of the Harijan Seva Sangh. Whether we should immediately bring into being a semi-democratic organization is a question for consideration. I do not know whether under the appointment there is the power, but the plan that I have suggested\(^1\) is feasible and can be enforced immediately, that is, to register the Ashram in the names of the trustees that I have suggested. You should discuss your idea with Thakkar Bapa and Hariji.

As to the Spinner’s Association, I had an absolutely free hand, and I evolved a plan which enabled it to become an easily operating and sound organization with immense possiblity for democrati-

---

\(^1\) Vide “Letter to G. D. Birla” zation. I wanted to write to you as soon as the decision for the transfer of the Ashram was taken, that, in view of that acquisition, the ambitious plan for Delhi should be abandoned. But the hostel scheme is quite sound. Of course, we shall want many such hostels; and I can see immense possibilities emerging from them, if they are properly managed. When I am in Delhi you may take any work you like from me.

So far as Biharilal is concerned, if he will serve in connection with the hostel schemes and so on, we can utilize his services. But I am very much against engaging paid preachers, Harijans or otherwise. And in this matter we cannot be too firm.

As to my stay in Delhi, of course, it is to be regulated by you. My own inclination would be to stay at Lakshminarayan’s place. I believe in sticking to old places, except on sound reasons for a departure. For my health Parmeshwari’s place would be ideal. But I must not be made inaccessible. To do so would defeat the purpose of the tour. My stay should depend upon the work to be taken from me. You will come to wrong decisions, if you always think of my convenience. You can depend upon it that I shall make my own convenience, no matter where you put me. For my stay in Calcutta, you should consult Dr. Bidhan, Satish Babu, etc.

I understand what you say about Mrs. Lahiri. I did not give any opinion, because I had none. As she had mentioned your name and as you know almost everybody in Calcutta, I thought I would forward that letter to you and have your opinion. I have written to Dr. Bidhan also who has issued the certificate. You may dismiss the matter from your mind for the time being at least. If I form any opinion in the execution of which I need your assistance, I shall immediately let you know.

Yours sincerely,

BAPU²

[PS.]

Gopi is doing well. She is certainly happy. How is your health ?³

C. W. 7938. Courtesy : G. D. Birla

---

¹ Lakshminarayan Gadodia
² The signature is in Devanagari script.
³ The postscript is in Hindi.
98. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

October 26, 1933

DEAR THAKKAR BAPA,

I have copies of your two letters to Parikshitlal.¹

What you have heard is quite true. The grass has been given to a shepherd. I believe that some earnest money has been received, which will have to be transferred to the Society. And nominal rent is to be recovered from Ramji² and others who are already residing there. I believe that there is a full map of the Ashram. I am asking Chimanlal to write to you about it. Herewith a letter from Budhabhai as to what he will do. Juthabhai is already, I believe, living in the Ashram and so also Bhagwanji. It must be Juthabhai’s business to see to the proper unkeep of the ground and the premises. The trees are a most valuable part of the estate.

You have asked Parikshitlal to give you draft rules. Evidently my letter sending you a copy of these was not received by you when you sent your letter.

I enclose herewith a letter received from Dr. Bidhan in connection with the collections. You may destroy the letter after reading it.

Yours sincerely,

BAPU

[PS.]

You have done well in going to N.’s rescue.³

Encls. 2 letters

From a photostat : G. N. 1131.

99. “HARIJAN” IN MADRAS

The reader must have been surprised to see the transfer of Harijan publication from Poona to Madras. Sjt. R. V. Sastri and Mrs. Sastri have dedicated themselves to Harijan service. Sjt. Sastri felt that in Poona he was not able to give full service to the cause and that in

¹ Parkishitlal L. Majumdar.
² A weaver
³ The postscript is in Gujarati
Madras he would be able to make use of all the talents God had bestowed upon him. The argument went home to me. The result is the transfer of Harijan to Madras. What will happen or can happen after 3rd August next need not worry the reader or me. ‘One step enough for me’ is as true of organizations as of individuals. The additional advantage of the transfer to Madras is that Madras is the most advanced and cheapest city in all India for English printing. And what can be better than that Harijan should be published in a Presidency where untouchability flourishes in all its unshapeliness? I entertain the hope that the transfer will not only be welcomed but appreciated by the reformers, the sanatanists and the Harijans in the South. Harijan is designed to serve all these three. An easy test of appreciation will be an increased circulation.

Harijan, 27-10-1933

100. A TRAGEDY

The longer I live the more do I realize that the happiness which I enjoy and which so many friends envy persists inspite of tragedies of which I have always had my due share. The latest is the disappearance of N. I have no doubt that her repentance was sincere. She struggled bravely against her past, but it did appear to me on my coming to Wardha that the struggle was getting too severe for her. She was becoming unhinged and losing control over herself. Previously, in one of her letters from Wardha, she had hinted that she might become insane. All the affection that could be shown to her was shown. She was never insensible to it. She was most responsive. But she was also most impulsive. She has gone away without any money or belongings. The reports published about her in the Delhi Press are sensational manufactures and do her grave injustice. She cannot be held responsible for her actions in her present mental state. Her proper place is in a philanthropic institution or in an asylum. Those who will throw a few silver pieces at her out of false compassion, or in order to get rid of her, will do her no kindness. Being irresponsible, she has been squandering what she has received. I would esteem it a favour if those who may come in contact with her will give me her address and show this writing to her.

Harijan, 27-10-1993
Very few people have any notion of what khadi means to Harijans. Simple weaving is almost an exclusive speciality of Harijans, and even though mill spinning and weaving have deprived many Harijans of a source of livelihood, thousands of them are still dependant upon weaving. But a friend argues: “What is the use of keeping alive a perishing industry? Why not give them instead an industry that may be growing? Surely, you do not intend to confine them to worn-out occupations even when you are devising all manner of means for their uplift otherwise.” Indeed, I have desire to confine Harijans, or for that matter, anybody, to spinning and weaving or to any one occupation, if they can be more profitably employed in any other; only I do not take the gloomy view of hand-spinning and weaving which the objector takes. I personally believe that hand-ginning, hand-carding, hand-spinning and hand-weaving have a brilliant future, at least in India. If the millions are to live with any degree of comfort, the mills must seek main custom outside India. The villagers must be induced to supplement their scanty resources by hand-spinning, hand-weaving, etc., assuming that millions of villagers could be better employed, for the indigenous mills to supply all the needs of the nation means long delay—several generations—and then, too, it must mean the need of big capital and dependence for machinery and technical skill upon foreign countries. In the abstract, whilst there may be nothing wrong in depending upon foreign machinery and foreign skill, in practice it cannot but be a terrible handicap upon the mill industry. So long as this industry has got to depend upon external help, it would be untrue to call it an indigenous industry.

On the other hand, khadi, as a village industry, requires very little capital. The implements can all be manufactured in the villages them-selves, and there is no lack of indigenous technical skill. The only thing necessary is to change the mentality of the people. Inspite, therefore, of the most skilful arguments to the contrary, and of imposing statistics with regard to the output of mills, I remain confirmed in my opinion that khadi in India has a very big future. What we may not do voluntarily and out of conviction, we shall be obliged to do through force of circumstances. India has to live, that is, her millions have to live. There is no difference of opinion as to the fact that they are not living today. They are merely existing. There is no other country in the world where so many million of people have only partial employment and where, inspite of the civilization being predominantly rural, the holdings are rarely two acres per head. To manufacture the whole of her cloth requirements through steam or electricity, or any other than the human power behind the wheel, is still further to deepen the unemployment of the population. An industrialized India must, therefore, mean utter extinction of many millions, including, naturally, Harijans, who occupy, to our utter shame, the lowest strata of society.

It is said that through highly industrialized processes every American owns what is equivalent to 36 slaves. If we use America as our model, and if we allowed only 30 slaves to every Indian instead of 36, out of our 31 crores of human beings, 30 crores must perform hara-kiri or be killed off. I know that some enthusiastic patriots will not only not mind such a process, but they will welcome it. They will say that it is better to have one crore of happy, contented, prosperous Indians, armed to the teeth, than to have 30 crores of unarmed creatures who can hardly walk. I have no answer to that philosophy, because, being saturated with the Harijan mentality, I can only think in terms of the millions of villagers and can only make my happiness dependent upon that of the poorest amongst them, and want to live only if they can live. My very simple mind cannot go beyond the little spindle of the little wheel which I can carry about with me from place to place and which I can manufacture without difficulty. In this connection a friend sends me the following paragraph which is going round the Press:

1

To relieve unemployment in certain industries the Nazis have ordered the stoppage of the use of machines which were displacing human labour. Commenting on this interdiction the Manchester Guardian remarks : “There has been a great deal of discussion about the effects of machinery in aggravating the unemployment crisis, but it has been left to the Nazis to do the logical thing and stop using it. . . . Mr. Gandhi’s efforts to replace the spinning frame by the hand-wheel and the mechanical loom by the handloom are being paralleled closely in the German cigar and glass industries.”

The Guardian concludes its remarks by observing that, if Germany’s ‘ethics become mediaeval, there is no reason why her economics should not become mediaeval also’.Replying to these

1 From which only extracts are reproduced here.
comments, a correspondent writes in the Guardian:

Hitler, Gandhi and others who in different ways are endeavouring to slow production to a point at which all goods are consumed may be reverting to mediaeval methods, but handicrafts are neither retrograde nor barbaric. They are taught in every progressive elementary and secondary school . . . So long as machinery promotes the happiness and the prosperity of the masses as well as the classes it is a beneficent agent. But when it leads to the unemployment and starvation of millions, as is happening in the highly industrialized countries of the West, it becomes a curse. Machinery exists for man, and not vice versa, and must be made subservient to the well being of the people and should not be allowed to become their master.

That the village industries in Germany are being revived at the point of the sword is not relevant here. What is relevant is that a country, which has shown the highest technical skill and is amongst the most advanced in the matter of industrialization, is trying to go back to village industries for solving the problem of her terrible unemployment.

Harijan, 27-10-1993

102. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

WARDHA, 3 a.m., October 27, 1933

Totaramji tells me that you know him. Many Harijans also know him very well. But running the Harijan Ashram or Mandir or Nivas, whatever you call it, is to be your responsibility. You should, therefore, follow your own plan. Treat me as an adviser only. I made the suggestion as is my wont and I may make many more such suggestions. Please remember that you are not bound to accept any of them.

Your going out in search of N. has deeply impressed me. Though I have had sufficient experience of your concern for others, your boundless compassion for N. fills me with the deepest admiration. Other friends have roundly blamed me for going out of my way to help her. You, on the contrary, seem to have got annoyed by my apparent indifference on this occasion. I bow to you in reverence a thousand times. Where my love has failed, may yours succeed in melting her heart. I understood your point in what you said regarding Utkal in your letter to Chandrashankar.

BAPU

1 Gandhiji added this to the letter written by Chandrashankar Shukla.
[PS.]
I wish you would now finish off the task of selecting a name for the Harijan Ashram in consultation with Ghanshyamdas.

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G. N. 1132.

103. LETTER TO MOTILAL ROY
October 27, 1933

DEAR MOTIBABU,

I was wondering why in reply to my postcard I had not heard from anyone about you. The delay has been more than made up for by your long and affectionate letter.

Let us be thankful that one eye remains for the present. But, as you say, if God wills it that the other eye should also go, He shall be praised.

I was sorry to hear of Swami Brahmanand’s death. Death is a never failing friend. He comes to our assistance sometimes even when he is least expected. And it is our want of faith that makes us feel sorry when he comes.

I am glad you are prosecuting your khadi programme with an ever increasing faith.

When I travel in Bengal I shall be travelling like a prisoner under custody, going wherever my keepers would take me; and if they take me to your Ashram I should be, of course, delighted. You will, therefore, settle with the Head Jailor, Dr. Bidhan Roy; or you may write to the Asstt. Jailors, Satcowri Babu or Satis Babu.

As to Jawaharlal’s views, did you not see the letters we have exchanged? I have there definately shown where I agree with him and where I disagree. But, if there are any specific points on which you desire my opinion more clearly than I have expressed, do please write to me without the slightest reservation.

Love to you. Mirabehn sends love.

Yours,

BAPU

SIT. MOTILAL ROY
CHANDRANAGAR

From a photostat G. N. 11046

Vide “ Letter to Jawaharlal Nehru”, 14-9-1933
It is three days since Mani, Mridu, her uncle and Babo arrived. Babo doesn’t feel shy with me this time. His health also is fine. He and I play on the Japanese sadhu’s drum. The sadhu is a jewel. He is extremely frank humble, cheerful and courteous. He is learning Hindi. He also spins on the charkha and the _takli_. He observes all the rules scrupulously. I have given many hours to both the young women. This morning I gave nearly two hours. I will give more time still at 11.30. They have come in great haste and are in equally great haste to return. They have, therefore, given me notice that they intend to return today by the Mail train. Mani’s leg seems to require electric treatment and Mridu has to attend on some women who are ill. The two have formed an excellent pair.

Pattabhi was here. I hardly met him for ten minutes. He had turned up without intimation. Jamnalalji rarely permits any body much time with me. Even to the representatives of mill workers [from Ahmedabad] he permitted one and a half hours in all in three sessions. He guards me with the strictest vigilance.

I was certainly grieved by Vithalbhai’s death, though for himself it was a deliverance. We had well known that he would die in a foreign country. He seems to have been looked after very well. Subhas, it seems, was beyond all praise. From all sources I hear reports of his wonderful attention to Vithalbhai. I have written to him. You also should write. My letter was posted before the news of Vithalbhai’s death was received.

Swami will remain here for some time yet. Thakkar Bapa has gone to Brindaban in search of N. His compassion has no limit. The woman is out of her mind. She never misbehaved here. She had gone insane. She has still not come out of the woods. If she comes back, I will take her in again. Amala is working hard at present. Duncan has buried himself in a village. Mary Barr is still here. She has recovered from her illness. Vinoba has been doing wonderful work for Harijans in villages Mani has gone with Anandi. Bablo has left too.

---

1 Omission as in the source
2 Pattabhi Sitaramayya
Devdas writes to me regularly. Dr. Datta paid him a visit. Khurshed seems to be a little ill. I have written to Dr. Datta and asked him to see her too. Do not worry about my tour. I will take care of my health. It is Rajaji’s wish that I should tour the South first. Anandi went and saw Lakshmidas. She is firm in her resolution not to marry [just now]. Give my blessings to Chandulal.

Blessing from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhabelle, pp. 36-8

105. TELEGRAM TO ADWAIT KUMAR GOSWAMI

WARDHA,
October 28, 1933

ADWAIT KUMAR
RADHARAMAN MANDIR
BRINDABAN
DO TAKE N. TEMPLES IF SHE WISHES.

GANDHI

From a photostat : G. N. 806

106. LETTER TO MUNNALAL G. SHAH

October 28, 1933

BHAI MUNNALAL,

I got your letter. If you wished to live with me, why didn’t you say so all these days? It is not proper for you to feel unhappy as you do. You cannot accompany me on my tour. If you sincerely wish to stay in one place and work, you may work under Vinoba or Jamnalalji. But I am afraid you will not be able to stick to any place. If you can disprove my fear, I should like you to do so. I know you very well.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G. N. 8646

1 Dadabhai Naoroji’s grand-daughter
107. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

October 28, 1933

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

There was a wire from Subhas today saying that Vithalbhai’s body will reach Bombay on the 9th and that you should perform the cremation rites. I have replied through the Press that I don’t believe it likely that you will make a request to be released and that the rites should be performed without you, by Dahyabhai. There was no time to consult you, nor did I think it proper to do so. If you have any-thing to say, please let me know. I am writing to Dahyabhai.

I hope you got the letter which I wrote to you yesterday regarding Kaka’s fast. Today is the third day. There has been no loss of weight so far. He continues to work in bed. He is quite cheerful . . . ¹ is still here. But I don’t think we can expect anything from him.

Prabhudas and Amba seem to be happy.

Blessings from

BAPU

1 The name is omitted in the source.

108. LETTER TO JAISHREE RAIJI

October 28, 1933

DEAR SISTER,

You bring credit to your father.² The training you have had in a diplomat’s family has not been fruitless. You have remained non-committed till the last. All right, apply to the Harijan Seva Sangh there if you have not done so, and send me a copy of the application. I will then do what I can.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a facsimile of the Gujarati : Bapujini Shital Chhaayaman, facing p. 9

¹ Sir Manubhai Mehta, Dewan of Baroda State

² The name is omitted in the source.
109. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

WARDHA,
October 28, 1933

CHI. MATHURADAS,

I have your letter. There is no question at all of asking forgiveness of Thakkar Bapa. But be sure that there was no contempt in Thakkar Bapa’s language. His language is not polite. But I see him as the very embodiment of kindness. My close association with him fills me with joy. His love is boundless. I can see it not in his letters but in his work. I have come to believe that no one is lowly in his eyes. How can I convince you of it? You should come here and carry back a little comfort. Why should your mind be in turmoil? What wrong have you committed? What does it matter what others think of you? Why should it disturb you? What is it that troubles you? I can never believe that Thakkar Bapa’s letter could have distressed you so much.

Nobody has complained against your nature to make me consider you worthless. And could you ever be worthy or unworthy in my eyes merely because someone says so? Do I have to know you through others? You must shake off your anguish. Come here and lighten your heart. Your misery makes me unhappy.

I am enclosing two letters from Harakhchand. Read them. If you like my suggestion about appointing him agent, and only in that case, you should place before the Committee the separate letter\(^1\) I am enclosing on the subject.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

---

1 An extract from the letter appears in “Letter to Mathuras Trikumji”
2 Not available
110. A TEACHER’S DOUBTS

A teacher was somewhat puzzled while explaining to his students my writings under Mangal Prabhat' and he has asked certain questions regarding them. Here is the first one :²

My experience to date suggests that one’s good lies in following the path which appears right to oneself. One has to discover for oneself the path followed by great men, and find for oneself who are great men. A great man who appears a paragon to one individual may seem worthless to another. There have been cases in which two individuals both regarding the same person as an authority interpret his words and actions in two opposite ways. The story of Virochana and Indra³ is well known. At every step ‘I’ comes to the forefront. But the task is not accomplished even by my saying this. It cannot be claimed that what occurs to us is always the truth. What appears to me as truth today, may appear to be untruth after a couple of days. What is regarded as truth by a few has often been denounced by many. Hence we come to this terrible conclusion : Man can have a glimpse of truth only after making mistakes, stumbling on the way and treading dangerous paths.

However, all this perplexity arises from a disregard of the prerequisites for the quest of truth. Entitlement and eligibility are as much essential in the case of truth as in any other. The person who wishes to see Truth in the form of God must observe the yamaniyamas⁴. Anyone who has not thus attained eligibility lacks the “insight”; he is as good as blind. Anyone who claims to have seen truth without so much as trying to develop the eye for catching a glimpse of it would look as ludicrous as one who presumes to impart knowledge of astronomy without having studied it.

1 A collection of Gandhiji’s articles on Ashram observances written from the Yeravda Central Prison; vide “1st Footnote Letter to Narandas Gandhi”, 18/22-1930
2 The question, not translated here, was whether the better course was to follow the path of truth according to one’s own lights or to follow in the footsteps of great men.
3 Chhandogypopanishad, VIII. 7
4 Rules and regulations enjoined by Shastras for spiritual aspirants
The teacher’s second question is as follows:

In saying “We have come to the border-line, etc.”, my only intention was to say that we could now have an easy access to the subject. While discussing truth, we inevitably come to non-violence. That there can be no truth without non-violence has been proved to be as plain as the fact that two and two make four.

The teacher’s third question is as follows:

The sentence quoted here is a good example of my inadequate expression. I remember having some difficulty while drafting the article. I could not find the words I was looking for. However, if my condition is pitiable, the teacher’s is no less so.

We all go on chanting the word ‘non-violence’ but little do we inquire into its true nature. We do not act in accordance with what it has been described to be, hence the language used with reference to it seems like a Chinese puzzle. The teacher has used expressions like ‘destroying’, ‘facing’, ‘difficulties’, ‘suffering’, ‘winning them over’, etc., but they have failed to reveal their full meaning to him. His very language suggests it. I do not regard this as his failing. This imperfection is almost universal.

By saying all this, I have put before the reader my difficulty and our ignorance of the subject. I believe I quite understand what I want to say, but I have not yet struck upon the language which would aptly convey my meaning. But I shall not accept defeat. Success is sure to come with repeated efforts

Non-violence does not destroy, it sustains. Hence it meets ‘difficulties’ by overcoming them. My yarn often gets entangled. If I cut it off, so much yarn goes waste. Cutting it off is easy and the process is over in no time. But, it does not lead me to truth. I ‘face’ the knot disentangling it, which is time consuming. But it saves the yarn and I learn a lesson in patience. When the knot is disentangled, my joy knows no bounds. I clear the way for other spinners. I add to my knowledge. I find that the time spent was not wasted, and thus I learn that the apparently easy and quick method of cutting up the knot was

1. It was: “In the concluding part of your article on ‘Truth’ you say, ‘We have come to the border-line beyond which lies ahimsa.’ Do you mean that the former is a means to the latter?”

2. It read: “What do you mean when you say that one makes progress by putting up with difficulties, not by counteracting them? What is your definition of non-violence in the restricted sense?”

92 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
not correct and therefore not quick either. While disen-tangling the knot, not only did I face the difficulty but by living with it after having accepted it as such, I also learnt that I was the author of it. The responsibility for its coming into being rested with me.

I believe I have shown through the above example how many virtues are acquired by suffering in this manner. I think other instances too could be easily interpreted to yield the essence of my writings. Examples will be readily available. But this does not imply that all the problems of non-violence are capable of being solved. Or that somebody has all the keys. This philosophy has not yet reached perfection. Could any be said to have done so? The knowledge of the scientist seems to be no more than the growing realization of his own ignorance. Non-violence is an abstruse science. We shall have to make many experiments, many people will have to sacrifice themselves. All that can be said with certainty at present is that non-violence appears to be the only straight and the shortest path to realization of God in the form of Truth. For a long time we have been treading the path of violence, but we seem to be going farther away from truth.

The killing of lower animals, small insects and even plants involves violence and is, therefore, sinful too. Nothing that is embodied can continue to do so without committing sin. From the worldly standpoint, however, the minimum inevitable violence committed for preserving the body is not regarded as sin.

We can now define violence in its narrow connotation. The wilful, wanton or arbitrary destruction of any living organism even smaller than an insect, is violence; not wishing, committing or abetting it is non-violence.

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbandhu, 29-10-1933
111. LETTER TO ANAND T. HINGORANI

WARDHA,
October 29, 1933

MY DEAR ANAND,

You must get rid of this malaria fiend root and branch. I do hope you did not overtax yourself in going to Multan. Vidya is opening out. She is no longer moody; has walks with me. She likes the club arrangement. She is keeping good health and so is Mahadev. You are not to have any anxiety about her. She is absorbing herself in useful service today. She is doing some serving for me. She is having her English lessons regularly. She got me to write to your mother a long letter.¹ She churned her butter for the first time today. Therefore trust her to God.

Love.

BAPU

¹ Vide “Letter to Ganga T. Hingorani”, 22-10-1933

112. LETTER TO KANTI PAREKH AND JAYANTI PARKEH

October 29, 1933

CHI. KANTI, JAYANTI,

I got your postcard. I think both of you have acquired useful capital. Take care of your health. Maintain the utmost purity of character. Write to me whenever you can. Kakasaheb is here. Today is the fourth day of his fast. He has taken a vow for a fast of seven days. He will break the fast at 1.15 on Thursday. His health is good. The fast is for atonement of sin. Surendraji and Durbari look after him. Prabhudas takes down what he dictates. He is extremely cheerful. He can drink sufficient quantity of water and so there is no trouble. Kishorelal and Gomatibehn are at Akola. They will go to Bombay at the end of this month.
The condition of Ramabehn Joshi’s arm can be described as fairly satisfactory now. She will come here tomorrow and then stay here. More and more girls are joining the Ashram here. The daily programme for them is craft for four hours and study for four hours. Marathi is a compulsory subject of study.

Balkrishna is experimenting with milk diet for building up good health. He fasted for four days and lived for another four days only on fruit. Now he only drinks milk, not even water. Today is the third day since he started drinking milk. He increases the quantity daily by half a pound. Today he will drink three pounds. We may not predict the result just now.

Swami Anand is here. All of them will be here only for a few days now. Kumarappa came and went back.

Vinoba has composed the following verse enumerating the eleven vows. It is sung daily once or twice.

Ahimsa, truth, non-stealing, brahmacharya, non-possession;
Body labour, control of the palate and complete freedom from fear;
Equal regard for all religions, swadeshi and looking upon all human beings as touchables:
The eleven vows one should observe, with humility and resolve.

Mani and Bablo left with Anandi. Vanamala and Mohan must have joined them from Kathlal.

Totaramji and Hariprasad are here. They will be sent to Sabarmati for Harijan work.

Vithalbhai’s body will reach Bombay on the 9th. It will be carried to the cremation ground with due honours and Dahyabhai will light the funeral pyre. Manibehn and Mridulabehn were here and stayed for three days.

If in giving all this news I have repeated any details, I hope you will remember that I have grown old and forgive me. If I remembered all the letters which I write, I would be crushed by the weight of that memory itself. Just as the power of memory is worth preserving, so also the ability to forget is worth cultivating. If we don’t have it, we would always be either laughing or crying. However, this was a little sermon by the way. Instead of omitting any news, would it not be better to take the risk of repeating some details?

---

1. The verse is in Marathi.
2. Adopted son of Totaram Sanadhya
And now replies to your questions. What you say is perfectly true. “What can physical control avail ?”\(^1\) Can we force anyone to remain unmarried? Devdas and Prabhudas remained so till the age of 32, and married only when they found that they could no longer control themselves. Is it not better that one should humbly admit one’s weakness rather than let the mind run after lustful thoughts? I can testify that both of them tried hard to remain unmarried.

He who curbs the organs of action but allows the mind to dwell on the sense-objects—such a one, wholly deluded, is called a hypocrite.\(^2\)

If, then, both of them humbly express their desire to marry, it would be violence on my part to refuse them my blessings. They will continue to cherish the ideal of brahmacharya. One should strive hard to live up to an ideal, but if, despite one’s best efforts, one cannot control one’s mind, it would be better to be content with what one can do rather than live as a hypocrite. Anybody who acts in this manner deserves the blessings of his elders. One should stretch one’s limbs, as the saying is, according to the length of the covering. In short, he who does not deceive himself or the world goes forward in the end. If I have not succeeded in explaining this idea, you may put me your questions when you get an opportunity.

I have had no letter from Indu recently, but Keshu had one. He is quite happy. Balbhadra and Dhiru also are with him. Manibhai Kothari is in Wadhwan. He is doing Harijan and khadi work there. My tour will commence on the 8th. I have already given you the names of the persons who will accompany me. The name of Ramnath ‘Suman’ should be added to the list. He is lover of Hindi literature, and a good writer. He wishes to join the Ashram, ultimately.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G. N. 6275

---

\(^1\) Bhagavad Gita, III. 33. Vide also “Discourses on the “Gita”, 29-4-1926

\(^2\) Bhagavad Gita, III. 6. Vide also “Discourses on the Gita”, 9-4-1926
113. LETTER TO JAYAPRAKASH NARAYAN

WARDHA,
October 29, 1933

CHI. JAYAPRAKASH.

I have your letter. Jamnalalji has given me the letter you wrote to him. Jamnalalji is a bit chary of providing assistance to people in this manner. But he wants to help you. He however feels that a loan should be a loan according to proper legal formalities. The interest may well be slight or none at all but the land you finally decide to mortgage should be mortgaged now. That is one thing. The other is:

How much is the debt you have to repay? How did you happen to borrow from the A.I.C.C.? How did you incur the other debts? After you get the sum you want, are you sure you will not need to borrow any more money? What do you intend to do now? If it is necessary for you to come here to clarify all this, you may come, or reply fully through letter.

I hope you are well. There was only one letter for Prabhavati.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Hindi original: Jayaprakash Narayan Papers. Courtesy: Nehru
Memorial Museum and Library

114. LETTER TO DR. M. S. KELKAR

SATYAGRAHA ASHRAM, WARDHA,
October 30, 1933

DEAR DR. KELKAR,

Will you put down as briefly as you can the reasons for your asking patients under milk treatment to drink as much water as milk you prescribe for them? I hope your experiment are prospering there.

Yours sincerely

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat : G. N. 6108. Also C. W. 3301. Courtesy : M. S. Kelkar
MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

I have your letter about the Hospital¹. You ought to be able to say without fear of contradiction that the Swaraj Bhawan Dispensary is a perfect fraud and thoroughly boycotted. Without absolute proof, I am disinclined to believe that they fabricate cases. I am anxious to have this evidence, because it is necessary for framing my opinion about the Congress Hospital, for, I feel that we should be able to take possession of the Swaraj Bhawan strictly for Hospital work, if the Government management has proved to be a fiasco. If you think that the Congress Hospital or Dispensary should be run in the place where it is now being run and that no attempt whatsoever should be made to regain possession of the Swaraj Bhawan, an appeal certainly becomes necessary and then it should be issued in the names of Mohanlal Nehru² and Kamala.

I am glad that Mother is making steady progress. Evidently the successful conclusion of the marriage ceremony has also something to do with easing the mental strain she was having.

Andrews is expected here on Wednesday.

I understand what you say about Jamnalalji. When do you think it may be safely announced?

Thakkar Bapa writes saying that you prohibited Congressmen from working for Harijan cause, even though they may not be offering civil resistance. Where is the truth! I have known nothing about any such embargo.

Love.

BAPU

¹ A hospital run by the Congress in the Swaraj Bhawan was taken over by the Government in 1931. After some time the British authorities “more for show than for anything else” decided to keep a dispensary open for the public. “But”, the addressee wrote, “there is no evidence that even a single member of the public has ever taken advantage of it . . . I am told false entries are made in their books to show that many patients are being treated.” After the seizure of this hospital, the Congress had started another which from April, 1932 was being run in a cottage adjoining the Swaraj Bhawan. The resources to run the Congress Hospital had been “almost exhausted.”

² Addressee’s cousin
116. LETTER TO MRIDULA SARABHAI

WARDHA,

October 30, 1933

CHI. MRIDULA,

I have your letter.

At first I thought of sending you a telegram about my going. But then I had second thoughts. This letter should reach you tomorrow morning so I have not sent the telegram.

I think I will not ask either you or Mani to come here for the time being. Certainly not before the 8th, because, once the travelling begins, I would not like to send for anyone. It is another matter if you find it necessary to meet me and come. You would be free to do that.

That is why I do not wish to stop you from going to Allahabad for the sake of keeping you near by. But you have already talked to me and there is no need to go just for that. Still it may be necessary for you to have your case prepared and send it. But if you want to go to understand Jawaharlal’s mind do go. You may also place before him all your complaints. Then you may let me know what he feels or ask him to inform me. I have not written anything to him. I have started the work. I have not sent your note, but have conveyed your complaint to Shankerlal. I am required to solve a great many problems within a shore time.

I hope you have had your teeth properly attended to. Illness refuses to take leave of Saralabehn. She keeps having some trouble or other.

Keep writing to me.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 11185. Courtesy: Sarabhai Foundation
117. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

October 30, 1933

CHI. MATHURADAS.

Here is Tersey’s letter. Vithalbhai has to be cremated. Do you have anything to do with the arrangements? You must have seen my note. If anyone hopes for my presence, disabuse him of the idea if you can. Of course if pressure is brought to bear on me I shall be able to manage, but I would rather that was not done. I do not feel at ease outside. My mind is always in jail. I shall tour for the Harijan cause. I hardly think of anything else.

Do make it a point to meet Hasanbhai regarding the market. If everywhere you find only dirt keep yourself aloof. Personal selfishness appears to be playing a considerable part in this matter.

The money for Utkal does not seem to be coming. Then, Harakhcand’s report has come. I shall send it later. The purpose of writing this is not to say that you should work beyond your capacity. As for me, I see the sad state of affairs in Bombay and feel distressed.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

118. LETTER TO H. K. HALES

SATYAGRAHA ASHRAM, WARDHA,

October 31, 1933

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your letter of the 25th instant. I would be the first person to congratulate anybody who brings concord out of the present discord, and I would wish you all success in your effort.

Undoubtedly the Hindu-Muslim tension is bad. I simply do not know how it can be removed. I am making all individual effort that I am capable of, but that is saying very little.

1 An extract from the letter appears in “Letter to Mathuradas Trikumji, 30-10-1933
2 The body of Vithalbhai Patel who had died in Vienna on October 22, was to be brought to Bombay on November 9.
Of course, my failures do not baffle me. I treat each one of them as a stepping stone to success. But that is different from venturing out without the slightest prospect of success. You may, therefore, depend upon it that, whenever I see the slightest opportunity of pushing through a settlement and of my contributing to it. I would not hesitate to plunge in.

The White Paper, when it first saw the light, did not please me. It does so still less today.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

The Hindu, 26-11-1933

119. LETTER TO ANAND T. HINGORANI

October 31, 1933

MY DEAR ANAND,

I have your letter about Devdas. You have given me a good account. I can see from it how delighted Devdas must have been to receive news from an eye-witness. But I must confine this letter to the bombs which you say have burst upon you.

You must not exaggerate things that come from Father. You have to be prepared for these things, and if you will but keep calm and yet firm, all the clouds will vanish. You should talk gently but firmly to both the parents and tell them that you must be allowed to regulate your future. They have given you a liberal education. They may not now quarrel with the fruits thereof. Having made your position absolutely clear in as humble a manner as possible, you should take your own line of action. You may avoid arrest in Karachi. After all, Hyderabad is your scene of action, and there you will act in consultation with friends. One thing you should avoid as a good satyagrahi. You may not consult your convenience or predilections in choosing the scene of action. You should therefore, dismiss the idea of courting arrest somewhere near Wardha. You may not do it outside Sind. It would be inconsistent with the spirit of satyagraha.

I have discussed the whole situation with Vidya, and I think she agrees with me. I did not have to reason with her, but she volunteered the statement that when she resigned herself to your seeking imprisonment and her remaining in Wardha, she concurrently resigned herself not to see you during your incarceration. It would be enough, she said, if you are permitted to write to her as, of course, you would be, and I think that is the correct position even though you may not seek arrest in Karachi. Vidya is really getting on excellently. She does not look moody; she is not morbid and is feeling more and more cheerful. And I expect you too to be cheerful and to write cheerful letters to her.

Love.

From a microfilm. Courtesy; National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani.

120. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL JOSHI

October 31, 1933

CHI. CHHAGANLAL,

Rama and Vimala¹ arrived yesterday. Since you have seen them only recently, I do not write anything about them. I understand from Rama that you get the letters written to you and that you are eagerly expecting a letter from me. You are certainly entitled to expect one. But I did not write any, thinking that, when Rama herself could write very few letters, it would not be proper on my part to claim a share in the number of letters which you are permitted to receive. However, as Damayanti asked even trees for news of Nala, I used to inquire about you from anybody and everybody whom I met and managed to get some news.

You must, of course, make a return for having stayed with me for such a long time, and you have done so handsomely enough. Mahadev also has done that and is still doing it. But, as the sun always carries its shadow as it moves, so also is the shadow always followed by light. Similarly, Mahadev finds peace of mind through something or the other. That seems to be true about you also. You get the company of good books, and now you have been permitted to get butter from outside. What more could you want to keep you happy? You have imbibed over the last many years the teachings of the Gita that one should remain cheerful in all circumstances. If, when the time to put that teaching into practice comes, we fail to do so, surely we would feel ashamed of ourselves. I, therefore, don’t worry about you, confident that you will certainly not fail in the test. I even hope that you will pass with first-class marks.

¹ Addressee’s daughter

Kaka has undertaken a fast. His vow was for a seven-day fast. It will end on the day after tomorrow, that is, on Thursday. The fast is for the sake of ... The fast seems to have had no adverse effect on him. Of course, there is bound to be some weakness. He sleeps in the open air. He gets good sleep. He can drink plenty of water. In that respect, he can do much better than I. Darbari, who regards himself as Kaka’s disciple, and Surendra attend on him. You can, therefore, easily understand that he is being looked after very well. Prabhudas works as his secretary. He takes down a few letters which Kaka may wish to dictate, and reads to him from the Gita, the Upanishads, etc. Swami also is here at present. Kishorelal and Gomati arrived today. The weather here is bound to be beautiful at this time of the year. The Wardha Ashram has become a girl’s Ashram. There are more than 40 girls staying here just now. Lakshmi-behn has been working extremely hard, and Dwarakanath helps her. Recently, we have engaged a musician, but the prayers are conducted by Lakshmibehn herself. I knew that she possessed a sweet voice, but I did not know that she knew nearly a hundred bhajans. Two prayers, the evening prayers on Thursday and Friday, are conducted by Mathuri, and Yoga joins her in singing the ghazal on Thursday.

We celebrated Prabhudas’s marriage a few days ago. The bride belongs to North India. Her name is Amba. She is in her 25th year. The choice was Prabhudas’s own, and the discovery also was his. Amba’s simplicity surpasses Prabhudas’s. She has plenty of courage, too. Prabhudas is very happy. The two will stay here at least as long as I am here. My tour begins on the 8th. Nobody, neither Kashi nor Chhaganlal nor any other relative or friend from outside, was invited for the marriage. The bride also was accompanied by only six persons. One can, therefore, say that this was the simplest wedding we have celebrated. The marriage ceremony was performed by a priest from Wardha under the guidance of Kaka.

1 The name has been omitted.
2 Lakshmibehn Khare’s daughter.
3 Narayan M. Khare’s brother’s daughter.
4 Prabhudas Gandhi’s parents
5 Ibid
Among the girls whom you know, Chandrakanta also is here, and so is Vidya Hingorani. She will stay here at least for a year. Vinoba, as you know, stays in a village (of Harijans) about a mile from here. But the moral responsibility for this girls’ Ashram is his. Anandi, Babu and Bachu had come here with me, but they have returned now. You will be surprised to know that the girls do not like to go to Sharda Mandir for education. They want arrangements to be made at home. I am in search of suitable persons. I don’t think there will be any difficulty. Besides them, there are Vanamala, Mohan, Mani and Bablo. All of them live in the Harijan Children’s Ashram run by Anasuyabehn. They went to it quite willingly. Of course they find it a little difficult to get used to the food, etc. The food for Harijan girls is bound to be quite simple, and they get very little milk and ghee, too. If we insist on bringing up our children on food like theirs, they would soon grow thin. I am, therefore, thinking what arrangement to make so that the children, even while they stay in that Ashram, may get proper food. In the mean time, they somehow manage to get the food which they require. Amina’s children also are staying in this same Ashram. Unlike our children, they feel perfectly at home there. They play and enjoy themselves the whole day. A munshi has been engaged to teach them the Koran and Urdu.

You must have heard that finally the [Sabarmati] Ashram was given over for Harijan work. It has been decided to send Totaramji to the Ashram. Hariprasad also will go there. Both of them are here at present. Pannalal\(^1\) intends to start an independent dairy. I have written to him to come here. At present he is with Nanibehn\(^2\) and Gangabehn\(^3\) in Ahmedabad. Our dairy is being run by Titus near the Kankaria lake under the supervision of Shankerlal\(^4\). I think it is running very well. We have no responsibility even for that.

I suppose you know that the Ashram and the Vidyapith libraries have been handed over to the Ahmedabad Municipality. Raojibhai\(^5\) and

---

1. Sister of Sumangal Prakash
2. Pannalal Jhaveri
3. Pannalal’s Wife
4. Pannalal’s step-mother
5. Shankerlal Banker
6. Raojibhai Nathabhai Patel who had been the head of the Khadi department at the Sabarmati Ashram Mohanlal Bhatt\(^1\) are expected here in a day or two. Ba is preparing to reach the Mandir. Manu is here. Dhiru, Balabhadra and Indu may be said to have decided to stay on in Bhavnagar. Dudhi-behn also has been living there with her children. Nila Nagini’s Sirius is in Sharda Mandir. I am sure you recognize this handwriting.\(^2\) I think I have now given you plenty of news. I can give still more, but I have no time. Swami, therefore, will give the rest.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G. N. 5513

\textbf{121. TELEGRAM TO ANAND T. HINGORANI}

\textit{WARDHA, November 1, 1933}

ANAND HINGORANI
SAHITIPUR
BUNDER ROAD
KARACHI

YOUR LETTER. SHOULD TAKE ACTION HYDERABAD. UNNECESSARY OUTSIDE SIND.\(^3\)

BAPU

From a microfilm. Courtesy : National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani.

\textbf{122. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU}

\textit{Unrevised November 1, 1933}

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

Your several letters to hand. I see you have handed to the Press the two resignations\(^4\). They should clear that air a bit.

I do not follow the Hindu Sabha activities. They are vicious. It is

---

\(^1\) Manager of Navajivan Press

\(^2\) Apparently Gandhiji dictated this to Swami Anand.

\(^3\) Vide “Letter to Anand T. Hingorani”

\(^4\) Of Jamnalal Bajaj and Dr. Sheikh Mohammad Alam
most unscrupulous if they are making use of my name in connection with shuddhi. If you have any literature please pass it on to me. I think that the nationalist Press so called or real has not welcomed its activities and has been known often to condemn it. I do not know anything about the embargo on M. A. K. Azad’s book. As to the Harijan activities, the complaint is wholly unjustified. My conscience is absolutely clear. So far as you and I are concerned, we can clear our minds and hands by exchanging letters, if you like. I do not know what aggressive action is possible or desirable beyond an emphatic condemnation of specific acts.

As to Gorakhpur, I do not see what can be done. I am finding it hard to get funds for your workers and the Dal people. I am still talking about both. Baba Raghavdas told me he was trying grain collections for the peasants in distress. He is under promise to send me authentic details of persecution.

Nariman was here yesterday. I have advised him to see you and told him that you were my political chief! What else could I do? I stand thoroughly discredited as a religious maniac and predominantly a social worker. I told him that if I felt convinced that the A.I.C.C. members desired discontinuance of C. D. and a council-entry programme, I would at once ask you to convene a meeting of A.I.C.C. I do not do so because I believe that the majority will insist on a C. D. programme and I do not want to invite the ordinance sword for it. I have told him too that I would not resist any programme that the A.I.C.C. might want though I could not give my approval to the suspension of C. D. I believe Kelkar’s attitude to be honest and consistent. He frankly dislikes N. C. O. and C. D. He would not join the terrorists or whatever they may be called. Then for a man of political activity, council-entry is the only programme such as it is. Hopeless inactivity is the worst of all and should be discountenanced.

I think I have now covered all the points raised in your letters and even not raised. It is nearing 4 a.m.

Hope Mother’s progress continuing. Herewith note for Kamala.

Love.

BAPU

---

1 Literally, ‘purificatory rite’. Here reconversion to Hinduism.
2 K. F. Nariman
3 N. C. Kelkar
4 This is not available.
BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

There is a saying in English that great men think alike, and, since both of us are great, we thought alike regarding the cremation rites for Vithalbhai.¹ I have written to Dahyabhai. I am not likely to publish anything as being your view. With regard to the wires and cables which you have received, after informing the Major² write one sentence in your next letter to me to the following effect: “On my behalf please thank through the Press all those who have sent letters and wires or cables of condolence.” If the Major cannot pass that on his own, he should write to the I. G. and, if he passes it, we shall publish it . . .³

Nariman was here yesterday. He took a fairly long time with me and I readily gave it. My warden⁴ let me do that. Just now, however, we may pound any amount of paddy we like but we shall get nothing but chaff.

Deenabandhu is arriving here today. He is returning after an extensive tour, and so I expect that he will want much time with me and I shall have to give it.

Kaka’s fast will end tomorrow. He is cheerful. He doesn’t seem to have been visibly affected by the fast. He doesn’t feel a burning sensation [in passing urine] as I do. He can drink plenty of water, no matter whether it is mixed with salt or soda or is hot or cold. If God would grant me the same ability, I should even at this age like to improve upon Bhansali⁵’s performance. I wouldn’t mind if, in consequence, I became crazy like him. He wears a codpiece of hessian suspended from a string of coir tied round his waist. He eats moistened flour and wanders about. He reappears sometimes in the form of ¹ In his letter dated October 29, 1933 the addressee had said that he had informed friends that it would be improper for him as a satyagrahi to request Government to release him for performing the rites.

² Superintendent of the Nasik Jail
³ Omission as in the source
⁴ Jamnalal Bajaj
⁵ Jaikrishnadas Prabhudas Bhansali, noted for his long fasts a postcard and tells me in it that he is getting real spiritual experience only now.

During the fast, [Kaka] also did some writing through dictation. Prabhudas has become his honorary secretary and also recites from the Gita for him. Since Prabhudas has been Kaka’s favourite disciple, the arrangement suits the latter very well. Kishorelal and Gomati also arrived yesterday. I was the cause of their coming.

---

Kaka has done his duty as friend and father to the best of his ability . . . 2 continues to follow his own way in his inordinate pride. But I have not given up hope of him. I do believe, though, that his eyes will not open till he stumbles some day. What you say is quite right. A coward’s wisdom won’t carry him far. On the contrary, if an insolent boy like . . . 3 who is always flying in the air, became wise, his wisdom would never desert him afterwards and would help him fearlessly to mount the gallows. But that seems too good to come true. I think Kaka will soon regain his strength. Don’t worry about him. During the fast, I didn’t let my knowledge as a quack rust, so that, over and above the spiritual benefit from the fast, his body has certainly benefited. You did well in administering a powerful dose of medicine 4 . . . and Pandya 5. But the effect of such medicines does not last long and their reactions are sometimes dangerous. I am not saying this to criticize your medicine. My only purpose is to draw your attention to the truth.

Mahadev writes to me regularly. He has been collecting books from all sources. I suppose one day all those books will go to a public library. I hope he doesn’t go blind in jail through excessive reading. I do intend to send him a mildly-worded prohibitory order. Dr. Datta visited Devdas [in jail]. The latter seems to be making good use of his time. He reads, teaches, plays games and spins. My programme is as follows: Up to the end of this month, the C. P., then Delhi, then the Punjab, then Sind, then Rajputana, then the U. P., Bengal, Assam, etc. This is the plan at present. But it is not impossible that there may be some change in this programme and I may go to Madras earlier. I shall be leaving this

---

1 Omission as in the source
2 The names are omitted in the source.
3 Ibid
4 The addressee, in his letter, had called the dose hiranyagarbha matra and meant ‘suggestion to court imprisonment forthwith’.
5 Mohanlal Kameshvar Pandya, a worker of Kaira District place on the 8th. I shall have to come back later for two or three days for a tour of the Wardha taluka. I will write to Deodhar regarding your letter. Rajendrababu has again been removed to a hospital. I think he will now be kept there for some time.

Blessing from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro–2 : Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 39-43

124. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

WARDHA,
November 1, 1933

CHI. MATHURADAS,

I have your letter. I had a long talk with Nariman. I let him also have my answer to the question in your last sentence, that my desire to give up leadership has not weakened the least bit. On the contrary, it is becoming stronger and stronger. But it cannot be given up just like that. For I had hardly spoken when Nariman remarked that I was issuing a threat. I have got the impression that Nariman would not like to enter the Municipality by opposing the Bill. We then talked about many other things. I shall not take up your time by going over them. Gosibehn and Jamnabehn are here. Andrews is coming today.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI
74 WALKESHWAR ROAD
BOMBAY-6

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

1 An extract from the letter appears in “Letter to Governor of Bengal”, 2-11-1933

VOL. 62 : 8 OCTOBER, 1933 - 17 JANUARY, 1934 109
125. LETTER TO GOVERNOR OF BENGAL

WARDHA,
November 2, 1933

H. E. THE GOVERNOR OF BENGAL
CALCUTTA

DEAR FRIEND,

Though I have not the honour to enjoy personal acquaintance with you, I had the good fortune to know you through Sir Samuel Hoare when I was in London in 1931. On the strength of that introduction, I venture to share the enclosed1 with you. It is a letter from an esteemed worker. It speaks for itself. I have the hope that proceedings described therein could not possibly meet with your approval. The civil resister of whom mention is made in the letter is the writer’s brother. No doubt a civil resister is out for suffering, but I should think that, according to the standard apparently accepted today, all methods of torture would be avoided by Governments claiming to be civilized.

I shall feel thankful to know that you have personally interested yourself in the case I have ventured to bring to your notice.

I am,

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

126. INTERVIEW WITH DR. CONGER

November 2, 1933

DR. CONGER : Is the hand of God behind good only, or is it behind evil also?

GANDHIJI : It is behind good, but in God’s hand it is not mere good. His hand is behind evil also, but there it is no longer evil. “

1 In his letters dated October 27 and 28 Satis Chandra Das Gupta had described the inhuman treatment meted out to his brother Kshitish Chandra Das Gupta and other persons in Hijli Jail for their refusal to salaam the jail authorities.

2 This is reported by Chandrashekhar Shukla who was at the time working as Secretary to Gandhiji and had kept notes of the interview which was later reproduced in his book Conversations with Mahatma Gandhi.
“Good” and “evil” are our own imperfect language. God is above both good and evil.

Q. There is God’s will behind every one of our action, is it not ?
A. Even allowing that there is His will behind every action, man can say that certain things God allows, wills or prohibits. All this is taken to mean His “will”.

Q. You said there was God’s inspiration behind your twenty-one days’ fast. You have also spoken of “wrestling”. What exactly do you mean to convey ?
A. These are the babblings of an imperfect man. Man’s wrestling with God is like that of an infant’s wrestling with the mother. The infant does wrestle with the mother; and when the mother gives it a feed the infant says : “I wrested it from her.”

Here Gandhiji gave the dictionary meanings of the words “wrestle” and “wrest”.
Similarly God, when He parts with something, does so with pleasure, if God has pleasure and pain. A man who surrenders everything at His feet says to Him : “I will die, if you don’t give me a certain thing.”. He defies and challenges God. In millions of examples God lets such men reach the point of death. Then we say that He has thoroughly tested the man. That, however, is our own feeling. If man can somehow know God’s way of putting things, I don’t know what He would say. We foolish beings think that we have exhausted our strength in wrestling with Him. With God there is neither wrestling nor wrestling. If God is just, He would not torture His devotee.

Q. Is God just or not ?
A. God is just. Rather, He is not just but merciful. He is just because He is merciful. These, however, are echoes of our own weak feeling. Man also sometimes talks of giving God His due. But what can a slave give to the Master ? In relation to God man is always a debtor, and never a creditor.

Q. Is faith necessary or effort ?
A. Really both faith and effort are necessary.
Q. Has man got a choice ?
A. Man has got a choice, but as much of it as a passenger on board a ship has. It is just enough for him. If we don’t use it, then we are practically dead.
Q. God has a purpose which He is working out in the world, is it not ?
A. I qualify the statement by saying that this is human speech. I don’t know God’s purpose, because I am not God. I am a man. I therefore try to comprehend God and His purpose not through speech but through life. I cannot deal with the hundreds of thousands of beings in the universe as a unit. I cannot enter into the heart of every one of them, because they are infinite in number. But God is all powerful. Just as He has a purpose for the universe as a unit, He has a purpose for every particle of life too—for man as well as the ant.

Q. Is it a good purpose?

A. It is a good purpose—but “good” in the way of our limited human speech.

The Sino-Indian Journal, Gandhi Memorial Number, December 1948.

127. NOTES

DISTRESS IN ROHTAK, PUNJAB

This is a tale of distress that ought to move philanthropists to action. Any contributions sent to the Editor, Harijan, 8-c, Pycroft’s Road, Triplicane, Madras, will be acknowledged and forwarded the proper quarters.

THE FORTHCOMING TOUR

“How would the collections, made during the forthcoming tour, be distributed?” is the question put by several workers. They will be handed to the Central Board with instructions to use them as far as may be for the province or the district or the taluk or the town, in which they may be collected. Whilst this will be the general rule, I do contemplate receiving in some places large single donations which will be utilized for the Harijan cause wherever the need is the greatest. It must be obvious that any rigid rule restricting the use of collections to the places where they are collected will defeat the very end of workers or donors for fear of the collections not being used in their districts or in the best manner possible. They should realize that the Central Board has an efficient system of account keeping, that accounts are audited

---

1 This was appended to Amritlal V. Thakkar’s appeal for contributions to the fund started by the Harijan Sevak Sangh for rehabilitating Harijans of Rohtak District where 21,000 houses were destroyed due to heavy rains in September 1933; vide “Letter to Amritlal V. Thakkar”, 10-10-1933 and, I believe, published regularly.

HIS LOVE FOR HARIJANS

In the hasty tribute I paid to the memory of Vithalbhai Patel, I omitted to mention the unforgettable scene I witnessed at the Harijan quarters in Godhra, which place I visited in 1917 for its political conference. There was a Harijan conference, too, held at the time, and I had invited the audience to come to the Harijan quarters and hold the conference there, if they were sincere in their professions. Whom should I see there if not Vithalbhai Patel, who was then a member of the Legislative Council, dressed in the peasant garb with a Sadhu's topi on his head? He mixed with the Harijans with the greatest freedom and I know that he evinced the greatest interest in the Harijan cause. With him the sweeper was as good as any other person, no matter what his caste might be. He never concealed his opinion or practice in order to please the orthodox. Let me hope that on the 9th instant, when the last rites are performed, Harijan tears will freely mingle with those of the multitude who will pay homage to the memory of the deceased patriot.

Harijan, 3-11-1933

128. THE CRY OF ORISSA

In the morning of the 17th inst. (October), we went to Khandayta. Here the rushing waters had broken through the banks and for miles and miles a new river had come into being, destroying many a home. Very few houses appeared to be standing. The Marwadi Society has carried on operations here. It

---

1 A similar article in Gujarati appeared in Harijanbandhu, 5-11-1933.
2 Vide “Letter to Janakdhari Prasad”, 25-10-1933
3 The source has 1916. Gandhiji had visited Godhra in November 1917; vide “Speech at Gujarat Political Conference-I”, 3-11-1917
4 The Gujarati version here has the following additional sentences: “And for the first time in the history of Godhra, the Harijan colony was crowd with caste Hindus. The place overflowed with people. Abbas Saheb and his wife were no doubt there.”
5 The Gujarati version here adds: “As I had never seen Vithalbhai in this dress, I could not recognize him immediately. But when I did, we heartily embraced each other and had a hearty laugh. No doubt Vithalbhai had deliberately donned this dress but it also shows his simplicity and readiness to mix with people.”
has been feeding 3,500 persons from 25 villages and doling out 7 seers (1\frac{1}{2} seers of Cuttack is equal to 4 lb.) of rice per month per head and one cotton sheet, and husk for cattle. Thus the Society has distributed Rs. 5,000 among these. At another centre, the Society has been giving relief to 5,700 people from 27 villages; each person gets here 26 tolas of rice. There is a big rush even for this little dole. There are two central depots in Cuttack and two in Puri. Nearly Rs. 15,000 have been spent there. From Khandayta we went to Khadarda. Half the number of houses belonging to Harijans have been razed to the ground. Those that remained have become dilapidated. There we saw a woman only half clad and in perfect destitution. She complained of want of work. In a house nearby, we saw a sister lying on the damp floor and suffering from high fever. These people will need clothes against the approaching cold weather. From Khadarda we went to Jharpada. There we saw eight volunteers working under most difficult circumstances. They distributed medical relief among ailing people and they had rigged up a king of accommodation for admitting very bad cases. You can imagine what sort of nursing these poor patients can get. Here 4 lb. of rice (costing six pice) per week are issued to adults. Half the rations are doled out to minors. Those who are able-bodied get nothing. Therefore relief is confined principally to women and children. I cannot imagine at the present moment a better use for the money of those who are charitably inclined. You should not imagine that anything like adequate relief is being given. More depots could be opened if there was more money. It is possible to make the best use of 40 to 50 thousand rupees per month, for, even at the rate of 8 as. per month, out of half a lakh of rupees only one lakh persons can be reached, and the number affected is surely larger.

I have translated certain extracts from letters received from Sjt. Harak[h]chand Motichand, who has been specially sent to Orissa in order to help the local Flood Relief Committee, of which Deenanbandhu Andrews has accepted the Chairmanship. Thakkar Bapa rebukes me, and he has every right to do so, by saying:

Thakkar Bapa has to be pardoned for forgetting that notice of the marriage was necessary in the interest of the Harijan cause.

How can you close the columns of the Harijan to the distress of the people who are sorely affected by the flood? They are no better off than Harijans. And if you will plead only for those who are labelled as ‘Harijan’, even so there are thousands of these labelled ones also. Surely, if you can give some space to a description of the Devdas-Lakshmi marriage, you ought to take notice of the distress amongst the flood-stricken people of Orissa. You have already issued a moving appeal for Orissa. To open the columns of the Harijan to periodical descriptions of the effects of the Orissa floods is but a logical extension of what you have done.

But love is blind. And he is a lover of humanity in distress, no matter in what quarter of the globe that humanity is to be found. His love is limited only by the limits that God Almighty has prescribed. Therefore, he exclaims: “See what my workers got the other day for my Bhils in the Panch Mahals. Why can’t you get much more for the more numerous population of a whole province?” He is right. And in all humanity I make this appeal to whomsoever may see it. There is no doubt the distress. I have always held that Orissa is the most helpless and the poorest province of India. Thousands of pilgrims visit the ancient temple of Puri for acquiring merit. Hundreds among them are rich enough to satisfy the hunger of the hungry and clothe the naked. Times are not doubt bad. That is just the opportunity for the moneyed people to deny themselves many things they have hither to held necessary for their comfort or enjoyment and establish their right to the wealth God has blessed them with, by unstintingly helping the helpless.

Somehow or other, ever since my return to India in 1915, Orissa has been to me an epitome of India’s distressful helplessness. The Bombay Committee is there, but I must tell the citizens that their response is very poor. At the time of writing I find that only Rs. 12,000 have been subscribed by Bombay. I cannot recall an instance when Bombay had pleaded bad times in the face of hunger and nakedness. Bombay has felt uneasy in its cinemas and theatres, with the cry for help ringing in the ears of her citizens. Let them not do less now than they have done before. And why should not wealthy people of the other parts of India wake up and vie with Bombay in catholic charity? Any money sent to the Editor, Harijan, at 8-C, Pycroft’s Road, Triplicane, Madras, will be acknowledged in these columns and forwarded to the proper quarters.

Harijan, 3-11-1933
129. TWO CRUEL CASES

The record of steady progress reported from week to week in these pages is perhaps more than balanced by the revelations of inhumanity towards Harijans that come to light from time to time. At a village called Samarkha in the district of Kheda, Gujarat, the caste villagers are reported to have burnt the crops of Christian Harijans because one or more of them had the courage to draw water from a public well. The case is now said to be pending before the Courts.

In the village of Dholka, in Ahmedabad District, caste men are reported to have horsewhipped some Harijans, two of them seriously because one of them had the temerity to bathe in a public tank.

These are not the only cases of their kind. They are serious enough to have seen the light of day. We have no knowledge of the many petty assaults committed upon innocent Harijans for the exercise of human rights recognized by law.

These cases should open the eyes of sanatanists. I have not known a single sanatanist defend such inhumanity. Let them either cooperate with the the reformers or act separately, but effectively, in preventing or dealing with such occurrences.

The duty before workers is clear. They may not hesitate to take such cases to court, when it becomes necessary. But, before so doing, they should make every attempt to bring the wrongdoers to a sense of the wrong done and to induce the to make adequate reparation. I imagine that this can be done, if, for instance in the case of Samarkha, well-known men and women from Nadiad or even Ahmedabad, if necessary, went to the village and reasoned with the wrongdoers who have inherited the habit of thinking that caste Hindus may deal with Harijans as if they were mere chattels and not human beings. This dark ignorance of the elementary rights of human beings can be dispelled by the light of public opinion playing upon the darkness. I hope no Hindu thinks that he need not concern himself in the case of Christian Harijans. These have surely the same rights with Hindu Harijans to public activities that caste men have. If the latter do not want to make use of public institutions, it is open to them at their own expense to erect others, for their exclusive use. Sects and communities do build separate schools and hospitals for themselves out of funds they themselves subscribe. No one takes exception to these. But no one has the right to prevent anyone else from using what belongs to the general public. And then, it should be remembered that Christian Harijans are our own creation. The evil of untouchability has spread in quarters wholly unexpected. We may not wince if now we have to pay the penalty for having harboured the evil for untold generations.

Harijan, 3-11-1933

130. NO NEED FOR A TANNERY?

A correspondent has raised the following question:

I can understand the removal of the offices of the Provincial or Central Board of the Servants of Untouchables Society to the Ashram donated for Harijan use. I can also understand the hostel scheme and the one for establishing a Harijan colony. But a tannery does not fit in, and if a tannery should be there, why not also a department for teaching scavenging and sanitation; for, it is as much a Harijan work as tanning?

The fallacy of the argument lies in misunderstanding the purpose of the proposed tannery. It is that tanning should be a great national industry. The leather constitutes an immense business, and instead of exporting raw hide, we should keep it in India and manufacture the various things we need. It must mean a great addition to the wealth of the country. Now tens of thousands of Harijans are engaged in tanning. It is an honourable profession and a lucrative business, and can be much more lucrative if it is well organized. But the tanning done in the villages is of the crudest type. Moreover, all the processes are not performed in a hygienic or scientific manner. If they were performed in a scientific manner, there would be no prejudices against cattle skinning and tanning as they exist today. The idea, therefore, behind having a technological department at the new institution is to give dignity to the occupation, purging it of all crudeness and uncleanness. Then, again, it is not as if only Harijans will be doing the work. They will be doing it side by side with non-Harijans. No one will be forced to learn it and no one can dare suggest that no Harijan tanner would want to learn the scientific or the cleaner method. Lastly, the reference to the technological department is merely by way of illustration. If all goes well, there will be many other departments opened including even one for exploring the best method of rendering sanitary service in which all can take part. Our indifference towards it has resulted in the increase of diseases and in insanitary habits becoming confirmed. I am hoping that there will be no trade or profession neglected which can be of benefit to the Harijans, whether it has been hitherto followed by them or not.

Harijan, 3-11-1933
MY DEAR AGATHA.

I enclose herewith a copy of my letter to the Governor of Bengal. Sjt. Satis Chandra Das Gupta, the author of the enclosures to the Governor’s letter, is a valued and well-known co-worker. His non-violence is deep-rooted, not at all superficial, and one of the truest of men it has been my good fortune to meet. He first came to know of the Hijli Jail practice when he understood that his brother who is a civil resister was given standing hand-cuffs. Bar fetters are different from hand-cuffs. Bar fetters are meant for the legs.

At the present moment I am not resorting to any public agitation in connection with the things that come under my observation. I pass them on to the authorities. Therefore, unless I tell you to the contrary, all such correspondence should not be published at your end either. Apart from this, there is no restriction upon the use to be made by you of such information.

I send you also a copy of a note received from the Frontier Province. That discloses a tale far worse than the treatment in the Hijli Jail as disclosed in Sjt. Satisbabu’s letter to me. Naturally, nobody can vouch for the accuracy of the information from the Frontier Province. But, after the revelations made by Father Elwin, it would not surprise me if the note is found to be an under-statement. The note has just come to me, and I have not yet decided what use I should make of it here.

C. F. Andrews is here.

BAPU

From a photostat : G. N. 1473.

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL.

My own opinion is that the atrocities such as are referred to in the Frontier Province note should first be dealt with privately, and all the

1 Vide “Letter to Governor of Bengal”, 2-11-1933 means that we can employ to induce the authorities to adopt less cruel measures should be employed. I am asking Andrews to deal with the Frontier Province note. And if you have no objection I would like you to show the note to Sir Tej Bahadur and see what he has got to say and if he is at all inclined to move.

I enclose herewith a copy of my letter to the Governor of Bengal about what is going on in Hijli.

Love.

BAPU

133. LETTER TO PRABHASHANKAR PATTANI

WARDHA,
November 4, 1933

SUJNA BHAISHRI,

Deenabandhu Andrews is here. He will leave today and sail for England on the 11th. You had promised him, while in England, to give or get Rs. 5,000 for Santiniketan. Andrews, of course, didn’t like to remind you. If you can send the money, please do so. Gurudev is always in need of money, and so, if he has made any plans on the basis of the sum promised by you, they would have to be abandoned and he would be worried. I hope you keep excellent health. Andrews showed me your letter. Please don’t worry about me. If God wants me to complete the tour, He will preserve my good health. Where shall I find a better watchman or doctor than He?

Vandemataram from

MOHANDAS

134. LETTER TO MANIBEHN PATEL

November 4, 1933

CHI. MANI,

I got your letter. Dahyabhai is putting up a good fight.¹ Let him

¹ According to the addressee it was in connection with the arrangements etc., for cremation rites of Vithalbhain Patel.
fight wherever he sees unworthy motives and insincerity. I hope you are getting proper treatment. Do write to me regularly. I was very glad that Babo came here. Ba will [court arrest] after I go. Anyway we must keep ourselves ready for that.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gurajati]

Bapuna Patro-4: Manibehn Patelne, p. 110

135. ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS

[Before November 5, 1933]

WHAT IS THE LEAST WE CAN DO?

One can have attachment even for service. True service can be rendered only by giving up all attachments. Cannot the weak and the infirm worship God? One can serve even mentally. You can take a couple of Harijan girls into your household and bring them up.

INSTRUCTIONS TO A YOUNG MAN

Live on milk, chapati and boiled greens. Give up chilies and spices. Take moderate exercise in the open. Engage yourself in nation-building activities and go on repeating Ramanama. If you do this, you may be able to overcome wet dreams.

HOW TO CURE THIS DISEASE?

I am sure your disease can be cured. You must give up rich food and medicines. If you spend your time outside the house in the open, live on fresh milk, fresh fruit, greens and chapatis, take moderate exercise within the limit of your strength, avoid reading exciting literature and do not go to films and plays, you can be cured of your disease.

HOW TO CONCENTRATE?

The best way of acquiring concentration is to be absorbed in whatever physical work you may be engaged in. And one is bound to get absorbed in it if one tries to do it to the best of one’s ability.

1 This appeared under the title “From the Mail-bag”.
2 This was addressed to a woman in poor health who felt unhappy because she wished to but could not serve Harijans.
3 Who had asked for a remedy for nocturnal discharge.
Among the names of God, that one will be most useful to us to which we are accustomed. I myself love Ramanama.

WHAT IS INNER VOICE?¹

What you say is logically correct. But if one does not have a clear idea as to what the inner voice means, the principle cannot be followed in practice. I believe that the inner voice is perfect knowledge or realization of the Truth. And because we do not see perfect Truth, because the truth that we see is imperfect, we look upon the seers of the world as our guides and follow them. Definite rules have been laid down to help us realize truth, and we can know Truth only by following them. Hence, just as we cannot know geometry without studying it, so also it is not possible for anybody to hear the inner voice without the necessary effort and training. Hence, according to my definition, a murderer cannot cite the inner voice in defence of his act.

LIMITATIONS OF A FAST²

I am firmly of the view that no one should resort to a fast for personal benefit. If everyone started fasting against others for redress of his or her grievances, there would be chaos in public life. This friend, therefore, should be persuaded to give up his fast.

THINK OF THE MILLIONS³

A person who follows the path of dharma does not feel helpless. One should not incur debt and spend money on medicines. If you compare yourself with the vast millions, you will see that your financial condition is a thousand times better than theirs. If you cultivate strength to endure your financial hardships, all your sufferings will change into happiness. Of the eight persons, whoever can do physical labour should do it.

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbandhu, 5-11-1933

¹ This was in reply to a correspondent who had asked whether everybody would not follow Gandhiji’s example and claim “inner voice” in justification of all his actions, good or bad.

² This was addressed to a man whose friend had lost his job and had gone on a fast to get it back.

³ This was addressed to a correspondent whose financial condition was bad and who had asked for advice.
136. A WORKER’S PROBLEM

A worker serving the Harijan has sent a double-stringed necklace made of gold, rudraksha and coral along with Rs. 13-8-0 which he had received on the occasion of his maternal uncle’s shraddha. In an accompanying note the gentleman says.¹

The short and the straight reply to this is that one should not in the first place act against one’s principles in order to please anybody. Once it becomes clear to us that what we are being persuaded to do is against our principle, there should be no question of giving in to anyone’s importunity.

But I know this reply will not satisfy my correspondent. There is only one root cause of all human failings and that is our lack of faith in God. Chanting His name or visiting temples, etc., as a matter of convention is no sign of our faith in God, but rather a symptom of lethargy or mental weakness. Faith in God ought to be a matter of the heart. And one who has it should find no need to satisfy another. He who has satisfied God has triumphed; and, he who has not known him may please thousands, but is lost for ever inasmuch as he has to deny himself in trying to please one person after another. God is the soul within, because He pervades every single atom. And this is not only a belief but an established fact. Some know Him as Nature rather than by the name of God. Some know Him as the great Power. Even modern scientists concede that there is a power hidden in each atom which sustains the universe. Anyone who acts in subservience to this great Power will never be wanting in strength. His will-power will grow day after day. It is well known that those experienced in the ways of the world have shown the means by which this force can be demonstrated. This power cannot but become manifest in anyone who adopts them. As the Harijanbandhu has already referred to them² they need not be repeated here.

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbandhu, 5-11-1933

¹ The letter is not translate here. The correspondent had asked how one could get over the weakness which obliged one to act contrary to one’s principles in order to please others.

² Vide “Some Moral Posers”
137. KUTCH HARIJAN WORKER BELABOURED

Bhai Gokuldas Khimji of Mandvi, Kutch, is a well-known social and Harijan worker. Writing about him a gentleman says that when I had gone to Kutch I had compared him to the docile cow. I remember that occasion. Gokuldas is indeed humble. He serves wherever he can. He just would not hurt anyone. He has written to Bhai Parikshitlal, Secretary, Gujarat Anti-untouchability League, as follows:

In this case, victory lies with the person who has been beaten up and not with those who beat him up. The beating up of such humble workers as Gokuldas will generate a spiritual energy which will melt the core of caste Hindus and release the Harijans from bondage. The saner sanatanist Hindus of Kutch ought to make efforts to stop such rowdyism. Even if untouchability were dharma, it can be protected by spiritual strength. I do not know if it was ever safeguarded by brute force.

[From Gujarati]
Harijanbandhu, 5-11-1933

138. LETTER TO TOTARAM HINGORANI

WARDHA,
November 5, 1933

MY DEAR FRIEND,

I like your letter. It is full of love for Anand and Vidya. No doubt they are both sentimental. But they are both good as gold. You have every reason to be proud of them. I like, too, your idea of finding constructive service for both of them. But in this desire of yours I detect an excess of affection. I plead for restraint. Anand’s soul will be injured, if he is made or induced to break the sacred promise made to God. You do not need my assurance that Anand adores both you and your noble wife. He would love to do anything to win your approbation and blessings. It would be wrong to exploit parent-worship for weakening him. Therefore for the time being let him do the things he has promised to God to do. He will be safe. God will take care of him. As for Vidya, she has been smothered by the blind

1 The letter is not translated here. He had insisted on taking Harijan children along a certain road. The Rajputs objected to this and beat him up.
124

affection of fond mother-in-law. She is doing khadi work here. Believe me she is keeping good health and so is Mahadev. She has very good company and lives her own life. She has English tuition and I want to add Hindi, if she will have it and her health stands it. If God wills, in a year’s time she will return to you a daughter more lovable and stronger both in body and mind.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a microfilm. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

139. LETTER TO PREMI JAIRAMDAS

November 5, 1933

MY DEAR PREMI,

I was glad to have your letter and the news about Father. Of course I have no home in Hyderabad as dear to me as yours. When I come you will keep me there or wherever on your behalf the Committee keeps me and the large company accompanying me. Is Father allowed to receive many letters? Give him my love and tell him Vidya is flourishing.

Love to you all

BAPU

SMT. PREMIBEHN
CARE SHRI JAIRAMDAS DOULATRAM
MARKET ROAD, HYDERABAD, SIND

From the original: C.W. 9244. Courtesy: Jairamdas Doulatram

140. LETTER TO J. C. KUMARAPPA

November 5, 1933

MY DEAR KUMARAPPA,

I had your note.

I hope you are now properly housed and that the treatment is doing you good.

Ba and Manu are likely to be in Ahmedabad pretty soon.

1 Daughter of Jairamdas Doulatram
My tour commences properly on 8th inst. You shall have the programme. But regard Wardha as my address.

Many of your companions are here just now—Morarji Swami, Gokulbhai, Divanji. They are dispersing as soon as they come.

Love from us all.

BAPU

From a photostat: G. N. 10102

141. LETTER TO N. S. HARDIKAR

SATYAGRAHA ASHRAM, WARDHA,
November 5, 1933

DEAR DR. HARDIKAR,

I have read your long letter to Jamnalalji and had a long chat with Sharma.

I have gone into the figures and have shown him how the budget should be reduced. I have no time to reiterate the reasons. In my view at the present moment and for one year your wants should not exceed Rs. 5,000. From Jalbhai’s letter it appears that Rs. 4,000 can easily be found. A loan is needed for the balance. But I have advised a donation rather than a loan, and it may be Rs. 2,000. So, if Jalbhai has difficulty in finding Rs. 4,000 and if you regulate your expenditure according to my revision, you should have no difficulty for the current year. Fresh effort will be necessary for the next year. But I think that the workers should be told that they may not expect any guarantee regarding the maintenance money. I have adopted this method for all the workers. I would also warn you against raising loans. That will kill the movement. We should not feel helpless for want of funds. I would also like you not to raise further funds in regard to the budget now provided for the year. You will please show this to Jawaharlal and Jalbhai and get their approval, if you endorse my suggestions. On their approval being secured, the money will at once be handed over.

My personal opinion on the insurance policies is that they should be allowed to lapse. In any case, we may not be responsible for them, unless we deliberately adopt the policy of taking out and providing for the policies of all workers.

1 Morarji Desai
2 N. S. Hardikar, founder and Secretary-General of the Hindustani Seva Dal
I hope that the operation' has been wholly successful and that you are making rapid progress.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

DR. N. S. HARDIKAR

From the original: N. S. Hardikar Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

142. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

[November 5, 1933]

BHAISHRI VALLABHBHAI,

I got your letter today. I heard about the Vithalbhai Shraddha Committee as much as you did and from the same source. Surely Mani is not your daughter only ?

Swami had shown me . . . 's analysis. Otherwise I would have missed reading that literature. Why don’t you say plainly that the real difficulty is that you are not with me ? I feel that as much as you do. I, therefore, follow the example of Ekalavya. Being turned away by Dronacharya, he kept an image of the latter in front of him and learnt archery. I don’t want to be an archer, and you do not know how to shoot arrows. You have broken your bow and made it into a plough. I, too, wish to plough in fields.

I daily make a Partheshwar Chintamani and consult him. But how can one be sure that I always get the correct reply ? My point, however, is that I always bear in mind what you would desire.

Ba is getting ready for imprisonment. Charliebhai is leaving on the 11th. He left this place yesterday. He visited all places and met all persons, but to no avail.

The news of Kaka’s fast does not seem to have spread. Here also we didn’t let it be talked about much. He is regaining strength rapidly. Ultimately Prabhudas has decided to go to Almora. I want you to

1 For fistula
2 The date has been inferred from the reference to C. F. Andrew’s departure from Wardha; vide “Letter to Prabhashankar Pattani”, 4-11-1933
3 The name is omitted in the source.
4 Gandhiji is apparently referring to the orthodox practice of making a clay Shivalinga for worship, which in his case would obviously be the inner voice.
write to me even while I am touring. I, too, will write to you.

Kaka, Swami and company will follow Ba (to jail). Morarji and others are here. They are all right. Don’t worry about them. This time you...¹

Khurshed is improving.

Blessings to you and Chandulal from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro–2 : Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 43-4

143. LETTER TO MANIBEHN PATEL

November 5, 1933

CHI. MANI,

I have your letter. Dahyabhai is fighting hard to purify the atmosphere. I will not be going there. Continue to write to me in detail. Ba may start from here on the 13th. After completing Nagpur I have to return to Wardha and so she feels tempted to stay on here till then. In Ahmedabad I believe she will stay with Ranchhodbhai.² Otherwise the Red Bungalow at any rate is there. It will be for me to decide. Do you have any suggestion to make? Do everything possible about your leg. Do not be in too great a haste.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro-4 : Manibehn Patelne, p. 111

144. LETTER TO NARAYAN M. KHARE

November 5, 1933

CHI. PANDITJI,

I manage to get news about you. I see that you have been spending your time well. Here Lakshmibehn has been doing very useful work. She is looking after most of the things. Though a musician has joined, I have requested her to lead the bhajans, etc., during the prayers and she does so. On Thursdays and Fridays, Mathuri sings the bhajans in her beautiful voice. I didn’t know that she could sing with such a full voice. Lakshmibehn is bound to write about the other things, and so I don’t mention them here in order to save time. Kaka’s seven-day fast ended on Thursday. It was necessary. I assume you have heard everything. Chandrashankar, Mirabehn, Nayar and Jamnalalji’s Om will accompany me in my tour. Ramnath ‘Suman’, a friend of Haribhau’s, also will be one of the party. And of course Thakkar Bapa. The tour will last for nine months without a break.

¹ The rest of the sentence was scored out by the jail authorities.
² Ranchhodbhai Sheth

I don’t get full reports about what Rambhau¹ does in Ahmedabad. He himself never writes. Probably you get some news. Gajanan² and Dhiru are doing fairly well. The former is discontented. He says that he doesn’t receive proper education. Yoga³ seemed to be a fine girl. She is intelligent, too. I didn’t know she knew Gujarati so well.

Blessings to all from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati : C. W. 247. Courtesty: Lakshmibehn N. Khare

145. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

WARDHA,
November 5, 1933

CHI. MATHURADAS.

I have your letter.

I received Surjibhai’s book today. I have not forgotten about the preface though I have not written it yet. I shall try now.

I am fully informed about the Vithalbhai Committee, etc., but I just cannot come.

I understand about Utkal. I do not insist on anything. You continue sending the money as you think fit.

I have instructed Chandrashankar to send more details about the tour as soon as they are finalized.

Get from Hansabehn⁴ the correct information about Jivaraj and

¹ Ramachandra Khare, Addressee’s son
² Addressee’s brother’s son and daughter.
³ Ibid
⁴ Wife of Dr. Jivaraj Mehta
let me know.

As for Utkal I shall be satisfied with whatever you can do and whatever I can do by writing. Harakhchand will try independently at the Calcutta end.

Baban Gokhale has sent many papers. I have not been able to go through them at all. Now I shall attend to them in the course of my tour and send a reply. They contain the lawyer’s opinions, etc.

What can be done about Nariman! Even after understanding the situation here he has gone and published his statement. If a meeting of the committee is called, the whole trouble can be put an end to.

\[ PS. \]
Vilap Samiti does not sound good. Would Sharaddha Samiti not be better?

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

146. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

WARDHA,
November 5, 1933

CHI. MATHURADAS,

An amount of Rs. 10,000 has come from Kamalabehn Sona-vala towards the aid for Karnataka. You must meet her and collect it. Her address is: Sham Bhuvan Building, opp. Babulnath, 5th floor. When you get the money, credit it to the Karnataka account and inform me.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar
147. SPEECH TO HARIJANS

NALWADI,

[Before November 7, 1933]

Vinoba has come here to serve you. The Ashram programme is followed here regularly. I hope you will take full advantage of it. Shethji reminded me just now that no one was prepared to remove the carcass of a bullock, and so the Ashram inmates carried it and buried it. The Harijan friends were displeased by this, for they think that others should not do the work allotted to the lowest even among the untouchables. Vinoba has made a thorough study of the scriptures. He says that nowhere has God enjoined that some are high and others low, some touchable and some untouchable. He has been working among Harijans to wipe out these distinctions. Dr. Ambedkar is pained and enraged by the oppression of Harijans by caste Hindus. Why should he not feel angry at the oppression which caste Hindus have perpetrated on Harijans? Why, then, do you make such distinctions of high and low among you? If the position that only the Bhangis may remove night-soil and dead animals is accepted, the work being done among Harijans will stop Brahmana, Kshatriya, Vaishya and Shudra were the four varnas and some others were regarded as belonging to the fifth varna, or as falling outside the varna system. These varnas have not retained their original character. What survives is the distinction of high and low. God has not made anybody high or low. If, living here, we serve you as your Bhangis, you should not be angry. How can we serve Harijans? Should we serve the Mahars but not the Bhangis? Should we make distinctions among Harijans? Hinduism will perish unless these distinctions are wiped out. The majority of the population in India consists of Hindus. If they perish, what would India be left with? It would of course be a different matter if all Hindus became Muslims or Christians. If, however, we feel that Hinduism is good, we must save it from destruction. It has produced innumerable saints and sages. The Gita is one of the greatest scriptures, if not the greatest of all. A religion which has given such a treatise and which has produced great saints like Jnaneshwar, Tukaram and Samartha Ramdas is certainly not

1 This has been translated from Chandrashankar Shukla’s weekly letter.
2 This and the following item are from the report date-lined “Wardha, November 7, 1933”.
destined to perish. We must realize that it is meant to live for ever, that is is imperishable. We must rid it of any imperfections or evil that may have crept into it. The evil of untouchability that has entered it should be wiped out. Mahar, Mang, Bhangi and similar names came into use to indicate different occupations. But because of that it cannot be said that the Mahars are higher than the Mangs and the Mangs are higher than the Bhangis. Mang, Bhangi, Mahar and other Harijans, all serve society. If they did not do so, society could not survive. The workers who have come here have done so only to serve you, and not for money. They will happy only if they can add to your income be ever so little. Accept their service and thank God for this kindness.

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbahadhu, 12-11-1933

148. ADVICE TO A HARIJAN WORKER

[Before November 7, 1933]

From experience I have come to the conclusion that while praying we should not worry about unwanted thoughts and should not feel unhappy if they come. If we try to keep them out, they invade us with greater force. Fear haunts the frightened. The same is true about unwanted thoughts. To keep worrying why we get such thoughts, is like devoting oneself to them through enmity. If we get unwanted thoughts, we should know that enemies have arrived, but we should not invite them. Just as an uninvited guest offended and leaves if he is not welcomed, so also unwanted thoughts will go away if we do not bother about them. But at the same time, as we do not neglect the invited guest just because some uninvited guest has intruded, so also we should not, just because of the invasion of unwanted thoughts, feel disheartened by them and stop the practice of prayer which we want to keep up. The more these thoughts are ignored, the weaker will they grow and the prayer will engage attention more and more. The argument that we should stop praying because of unwanted thoughts would be correct if we ourselves invited these thoughts. It would be sheer pretence to sit down to pray and invite thoughts at the same time. Our mind should non-co-operate with bad thoughts.

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbandhu, 12-11-1993

1 This is from Chandrashankar Shukla’s weekly letter and appeared under the title “Difficulty in Praying.”
149. LETTER TO DUDHIBEHN V. DESAI

November 7, 1933

CHI. DUDHIBEHN,

Dhiru seems to be keeping bad health. Ramabehn—who is here—feels unhappy because of that. Give me a report about him, and write separately to Ramabehn also. I hope you have taken Dhiru and others under your special care.

You must have received the letter I wrote to you at Rajkot. Write to me from time to time. Whenever you get any news about Valji, let me have it. Ask Manu and Mavo to write to me.

How is Kusum?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 3137. Courtesy: Valji G. Desai

150. LETTER TO DHIRU C. JOSHI

November 7, 1933

CHI. DHIRU,

I got your letter. Your handwriting in your letter to Rama was very bad. One should not write to anyone in such bad handwriting. The lines were not straight. You are no longer a little child. There was some anger, too, in your letter. A child should never be angry with its mother. Don’t you admit that we are poor? How can poor people spare money for visiting one another?

You should take care of your health. Let me know what your weight is. Be careful about what you eat. It would be better if you do not eat dal for some time. [Be]1 satisfied with rice and milk. Do you get fruit? Do you take cod liver [oil]2 In any case, don’t [eat]3 more than you can digest. If you are careful, you can make your body as strong as steel. I will reply to your letter some other time.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 5314

1 The Source is mutilated here.
2 Ibid
3 Ibid
151. LETTER TO MAHENDRA AND SUDARSHAN DESAI

WARDHA,
November 7, 1933

CHI. MANU AND MAVO,

I hope you got my letter of New Year blessings. Write to me occasionally. Study with great care. My tour begins from tomorrow.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : C. W. 3161. Courtesy : Valji G. Desai

152. SPEECH AT SELU

November 7, 1933

I believe it to be a happy augury that my tour commences with this sacred act. I do not know if I shall be able to go through the programme that has been chalked out for me for the coming nine months. Whether it is got through or not, my faith tells me that an undertaking which begins under such good auspices must result in good. The idol in the temple is not God. But since God resides in every atom, He resides in an idol. When rites of consecration are performed, special sanctity is attributed to the idol, and those who believe in temples perform worship by visiting them. I hold it a blasphemy to say that the Creator resides in a temple from which a particular class of His devotees sharing the faith in it are excluded. Ramdeoji has, therefore, well said that this will be a true temple only from today, when it is declared open to Harijans.

Harijan, 17-11-1933

153. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, SELU

November 7, 1933

It has been my firm belief for the last 50 years that there is no place in Hinduism for untouchability as we are observing it today. I have studied to the best of my ability all the religions of the world,

1 Vide “Letter to Mahendra V. Desai”, 12-10-1933
2 Gandhiji had opened a temple to Harijans.
and it has led me to the same conclusion. I should consider the sacrifice of my life as none too great for the sacred cause of the removal of this curse of untouchability. I have not a shadow of a doubt that, if untouchability is not removed root and branch, Hinduism is bound to perish, for no religion can nurture itself on the degradation of its votaries.

_Harijan, 17-11-1933_

154. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, WARDHA

_November 7, 1933_

It is good fortune for me that my tour begins at Wardha, which is the geographical centre of India. I want it also to be the centre of this movement. And I hope that the spirit with which Jamnalalji has opened his temple to Harijans and with which Vinoba and his companions have cast in their lot with Harijans will prove infectious and spread through the whole of the country.

_Harijan, 17-11-1933_

155. SPEECH AT SWEEPERS MEETING, NAGPUR

_November 8, 1933_

What Mrs. Abhyankar said on behalf of hundreds of women like her touched me deeply. While she was speaking I looked at Sjt. Abhyankar, and I saw that is eyes had become wet. I have steeled my heart, and I do not shed tears easily; but these words could not but move me. I admit I have been instrumental in making paupers of doctors, lawyers and merchants. I do not repent. On the contrary, I rejoice that many have embraced poverty voluntarily. Why should Mrs. Abhyankar, who is trying to identify herself, along with her husband, with the sweepers, put on golden bangles at all? In a poor country like India, where people walk for miles to get a dole of one pice per day, as they are doing in Orissa today, it does not behove anybody who cares for the poor to wear costly ornaments. In no other way can we identify ourselves with the Harijans. Those who have nothing else have God and are men of God—Harijans. Those who have wealth are men of wealth.

_Offering her two golden bangles Mrs. Abhyankar had said, “Nowadays husbands leave little for their wives. I can, therefore, only make this humble offering for the service of Harijans.”_
All credit, therefore, to Motilalji, Das, Vithalbhai and many others whom I can mention and who parted with their possessions for the sake of the poor.

_Harijan_, 17-11-1933

156. ADVICE TO HARIJANS

NAGPUR,

November 8, 1933

Of course, I have told caste Hindus that they are responsible for whatever evil habits are to be noticed among the Harijans. But this does not mean that you should hug your evil habits. Harijans should contribute to this movement by cultivating cleanliness, both of mind and body, giving up carrion-eating which is looked upon with abhorrence by the whole of humanity, giving up drink, as also the differences of high and low that they are observing among themselves. When they go to temples, they should observe the rules applicable to all temple-goers.

_Harijan_, 17-11-1933

157. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, NAGPUR

November 8, 1933

I am deeply grateful to you for the manifestation of this great affection. Thanks be to God that you have assembled in such numbers to listen to my message. The Chairman\(^1\) is right when he says that this Harijan work is essentially religious from my standpoint. That it has many other results is equally true. There never has been a single truly religious activity but has had its influence on many departments of life. That perhaps is one of the tests by which we recognize a great religious movement. I would like to say in all humility, but with perfect confidence, that I have taken up this movement in no spirit of antagonism to any other religion or community. It would be impossible for any person to point to a single act of mine during the past 50 years which could be proved to have been antagonistic to any person or community. I have never believed anyone to be my enemy.

---

2. Dr. N. B. Khare.
My faith demands that I should consider no one as such. I may not wish all to anything that lives. It is my certain conviction that, if the Hindu heart is completely purged of the taint of untouchability, the event will have its inevitable influence not only upon all the communities in India but on the whole world. This belief is daily becoming stronger. I cannot remove from any heart untouchability regarding several millions of human beings and harbour it towards some other millions. The very act of the Hindu heart getting rid of distinctions of high and low must cure us of mutual jealousies and distrust of and among other communities. It is for that reason that I have staked my life on this issue. In fighting this battle against untouchability. I am fighting for unity not only between Hindu touchables and Hindu untouchables but among Hindus, Muslims, Christians and all other different religious communities. Do not for one moment believe that I am interested in the numerical strength of Hindus. I have never throughout my life laid stress upon quantity. I have ever insisted upon quality at the sacrifice of quantity. If I collected a million false coins they would be a worthless burden to me. One true coin would be its value. A religion cannot be sustained by the number of its lipfollowers denying in their lives its tenets. This great Hindu religion itself will perish, in spite of its so called millions of followers, if its votaries persist in harbouring the evil of untouchability. Not because untouchables can be counted by the millions. If would perish even if they were a handful. Milk is poisoned and has to thrown away whether you put a little or much arsenic in it. If we believe that we are all children of one and the same God and that God is Truth and Justice, how can there be untouchability amongst us, His children ? God of Truth and Justice can never create distinctions of high and low among His own children. I, therefore, invite all without distinction of race and religion to assist this movement by praying for its complete success, so that we may all live in peace and friendship.

And if I want concord amongst all the communities professing different faiths, I cannot desire discord between the so-called sanatanists and reformers. I can harbour no ill will against sanatanists. I ask them to extend the same toleration to reformers that they would have the latter extend towards themselves. If they tolerate the faith and practice of others, why will they not tolerate the faith and practice of the reformers ? They may not help so long as they regard untouchability as an integral part of Hinduism. I and fellow reformers firmly believe that untouchability is an evil; and if it is so and if the reformers will continue to exercise patience and gentleness, the heart of the sanatanists must melt. There can be no room for compulsion or violence in this great movement. I endeavour to place before the vast mass of Hindus the results of a belief derived from such prayerful study of the Hindu scriptures as has been possible for me, and from association with those who are learned in them and, what is more, from my practice based upon that belief. Surely, that cannot promote internal dissensions. I observe that many who oppose this movement have not taken the trouble to understand its implications. The object of this tour is to place the position of the reformers clearly before the public. And I am hoping that, as the scope of the activities of the Servants of Untouchables Society becomes known, the opposition to it will melt away. We want to change the hearts of those who today oppose the movement. We want to remove their distrust. We do not desire to compel them to act against their belief. We want to win them over to the reform by gentlest persuasion, by appealing to their reason and to their hearts. Love can never express itself by imposing sufferings on others. It can only express itself by self-suffering, by self-purification. I am convinced that, if the reformers will show in their own lives an increasing purity, self-denial, and capacity for suffering, they will be sure to melt the hearts of those who are today saturated with untouchability, believing it to be a desirable part of Hinduism.

Is is said that untouchables are so because of the evil in them. But are the ‘touchables’ better? Are they sinless? Indeed, defenders of untouchability claim that some people are always untouchables and that no amount of pure conduct can purify them of the taint with which they are born. They must remain social lepers for ever. The fact is that whatever weakness we may notice about untouchables are a reflection of our own weaknesses and sins. They are a direct result of the ill-treatment that we have heaped upon their devoted heads. Their real rise, therefore, depends upon the removing of untouchability root and branch and upon showing a growing purity in our own lives. Thus the movement is dependent, not so much upon pecuniary help, as upon correct conduct. Pecuniary help is to be an earnest of our determination to rid ourselves of the evil and to achieve self-purification.

The question is repeatedly asked whether the reform includes inter-dining. Though I have answered this question repeatedly, I must continue to repeat the answer as long as the question continues to be asked. Everybody knows what my personal views are. Since my youth upward I have consistently dined with all so long as the rules of cleanliness have been observed. But that has nothing to do with the present movement. Interdining and the rest is a question for each individual to determine for himself. The movement organized by the Servants of Untouchables Society stands for simple removal of untouchability in every shape and form, in so far as it is special to the so-called untouchables. They would have the same public rights and facilities as are enjoyed by every other Hindu, that is to say, they should have access to all public institutions, such as wells, schools, roads, temples, etc.

One word as to the objections raised against Anti-untouchability Bill. Sanatanists have contended that they constitute State Interference in matters of religion. I suppose by interference is meant that which is undue. For it is possible to quote instances where State interference has been sought and has been inevitable in matters of religion. What is sought is freedom from external compulsion. I am no more in favour of such compulsion in matters affecting religion, than sanatanists. These Bills involve no such compulsion, no undue interference. The interference sought is beneficial and unavoidable. If the State compelled the opening of temples to Harijans, it would without doubt be undue interference, but it cannot be undue when the State is called upon to legalize the voluntary opening by a stated majority of templegoers or the trustees. Not to do so would be compulsion. The Temple-entry Bill merely seeks to legalize the action of a majority. The other Bill has been long overdue. It does not abolish untouch-ability altogether. It seeks to rob it of secular consequences. To clothe it with such consequences is to constitute an intolerable interference with the free exercise of religion. Nobody will deny that to make a religious obligation an obligation in law would be a gross and undue interference by the State. The observance of untouchability requires the voluntary recognition of it by both touchables and untouchables. For the State to compel observance by untouchables would be a gross interference in matters of religion. The Bill, therefore, seeks to remove the secular recognition of untouchability, without in any way inter-ferring with the religious observance of it or the religious consequences of the breach of it. If the objectors mean, therefore, what they say and on a careful study should find that the Bills involve no compulsion, they should waive their objection.¹

The poor man perhaps had nothing else to pay and he seems to have paid his all. It is an unsoiled cowrie, as Malaviyaji would call it. We attribute our earnings to fate, but what we give in the name of God, and for the service of His creatures bring us merit. Looking at it as a symbol of sacrifice, it is more precious than gold.

_Harijan, 17-11-1933_

---

158. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

_NAGPUR,_

_Before the morning prayer, November 9, 1933_

_BHAI VALLABHBHAI,_

I got your letter. You must not stop writing to me while I am touring. I will also write to you. What happened regarding Vithalbhai has not passed unnoticed by me. I also have been attacked strongly. I have paid no attention at all to these attacks. Even if I did, what could I do! If you stir dirty water, more dirt will come to the surface. I paid attention only to Subhas’s services. As for the stories we hear regarding Vithalbhai’s last wishes², we can say nothing. I, too, have my doubts as you have.

My work commenced from Tuesday. Wherever I go, large crowds assemble. They don’t seem to resent my talking about untouchability. A fine temple near Wardha was thrown open to Harijans.³

---

¹ Gandhiji then auctioned the gifts which included the cowrie given to him at Katol. The remarks that follow are taken from Chandrashankar Shukla’s weekly letter entitled “The First Week’s Tour”.

² It was reported that Vithalbhai Patel had bequeathed a large sum to Subhas Chandra Bose to be used at his discretion for propaganda abroad. Later, the Bombay High Court decided that the amount should go to Vithalbhai’s legatees. Gandhiji persuaded the family to give it to the Congress for national service.

³ Vide “Speech at Sela”, 7-11-1933
There was a large crowd such as had never had never been seen before in this city. My voice met the demand on it fairly well. Nor did I get tired. I have started with my weight 108 or 109. The collection also, I think, was good. After completing the C. P., I have to go to Delhi and from there straight to the South. Raja says that it is necessary to tour the South first. The opposition of the sanatanists comes mainly from there. I have to return to Wardha on Saturday. The Wardha taluka remains to be toured. Meanwhile Jawaharlal and others will come to see me. Ansari has already arrived. Hence he also may join me. With me are Mira, Chandrashankar, Nayar Ramnath (of the Sasta Sahitya of Delhi), Om and the wife of Rameshwar Birla’s ‘son. The last will be with me for a few days only. Om has become a strong willed girl. Thakkar Bapa also is in the party. Ba will leave Wardha on the 13th. She will reach Ahmedabad about the 15th or the 16th. This time she is very much agitated. She is restless no doubt. But she will go [to jail]. She is convinced that that is the only right course.

Please continue to write to me at the Wardha address.

Blessings to you both from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-2 : Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 45-6

---

1 Dr. M. A. Ansari
2 G. D. Birla’ elder brother
159. LETTER TO MANIBEHN PATEL

November 9, 1933

CHI. MANI,

I have your letter. You have acted wisely in writing to me frankly. In future also do the same. If not you who else will write? I was surprised to learn that Dahyabhai misunderstood my action and got angry. But we need not pay attention to that. Perhaps he is not even acquainted with all the facts. I can even understand his being pained. You yourself should try to calm him as much as you an. If you wish, I will write to him and try to soothe him. I will like it better. You may show him this letter if you like.

Ba will leave Wardha on Tuesday. She will halt at Akola for a short while, i.e., for a few hours and then go there. At present she is in a rather confused state of mind. She is worried also. All the same, she herself announced her resolution of going [to jail]. You should try and strengthen it.

Eat well and improve your health as much as you can. Write to me regularly. Do take the rays as long as you can. You can receive the treatment even in Ahmedabad. What did you do regarding your teeth?

Jawaharlal and others are coming to Wardha on Saturday.

What did Mridu\(^1\) do in Allahabad? Did she return satisfied? Ask her to write to me. What did she do about her teeth? If she has heard more about Saraladevi\(^2\), she should let me have the news.

We had a very good meeting in Nagpur. The tour has started well. Let me know how the funeral went off.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

_Bapuna Patro-4 : Manibehn Patelne_, pp. 111-2

---

\(^1\) Mridula Sarabhai

\(^2\) Mridula Sarabhai’s mother
160. LETTER TO GANGABEHN B. JHAVERI

November 9, 1933

CHI. GANGABEHN,

I got your letter. Serve people as well as you can and be contented. Seeing other men’s mansions, we don’t demolish our own hut. The happiness which people may enjoy in mansions is possible in huts, too. You are doing good work in running a school for Harijan pupils. If you live exclusively on milk and fruit, that is bound to do you good. You need not, then, eat anything else. Nanibehn should write to me. Write always at Wardha. Ask Mahesh also to write to me.

Blessings from

BAPU

Form a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3119

161. INTERVIEW TO PRESS

November 9, 1933

Questioned whether he would issue a statement to the Press in connection with the all-India anti-untouchability tour, the Mahatma said that there was nothing to warrant a statement from him. All that he wanted to say in that connection had been said by him in his address at the Nagpur public meeting the previous night. He said he would be prepared to answer questions but warned them not to improvise questions.

1. Question is badly put. There is no meaning in asking whether I shall be prepared to receive swaraj if untouchability is not removed by then. Swaraj is not a matter of receiving or taking. It is one of evolution. We either grow to it from day to day or we go away from it. If we, as a nation, are becoming more and more conscious of ourselves if the fundamental unity of millions, then we are certainly progressing towards it. Whereas, if we are dissolving, then we are receding from it.

1 This paragraph is from Hitavada.

Q. Do you not realize that the depressed classes have even now got their own superstitions and that they very much hesitate to associate with, for instance, Brahmins, even if the are asked to do so?

A. No, I do not; because, if what you say is true, it means that they want to remain in their present state of degradation. I cannot understand a social leper glorying in his leprosy. If the so-called depressed classes are so disgusted with the so-called high-class Hindus that they want absolutely to cut themselves adrift from Hinduism and Hindus, then they form a separate entity, which means they establish a new religion, or they accept any of the other prevailing religions of India. That is a thing which can happen, if the so-called higher classes continue to wallow in their imaginary superiority and do not perform the elementary duty of regarding the Harijans as their kith and kin. This anti-untouchability movement is an attempt to do this elementary duty by the Harijans.

Q. Harijans seem to be unwilling to mix with caste-Hindus. Is it not a fact?

A. My experience is wholly different. I have talked with thousands of Harijans. They are eager to associate with the higher classes, if the latter behave themselves. What is true is that they distrust the higher classes, and where they do not distrust them, they are afraid of them. And there is this unfortunate additional fact the the notion of inferiority from birth has been so much injected into them that they consider themselves doomed by God to eternal inferiority. This must be a matter of shame and humiliation for every thinking savarna Hindu.¹

The best way for the so-called caste Hindus was to forget that they were higher than anybody else. It was all a reflection of what was today a fact among the higher classes. It ought to cause no surprise to higher classes when they discover that there are differences in untouchability and therefore among untouchables.

_Harijan, 1-12-1933, and Hitavada, 12-11-1933_

¹ The following is from the Hitavada.
162. SPEECH AT STUDENTS’ MEETING, NAGPUR

November 9, 1933

I know this tussle between English and Hindi is almost an eternal tussle.1 Whenever I have addressed student audiences, I have been surprised by the demand for English. You know, or ought to know, that I am a lover of the English language. But I do believe that the students of India, who are expected to throw in their lot with the teeming millions and to serve them, will be better qualified if they pay more attention to Hindi than to English. I do not say that you should not learn English; learn it by all means. But, so far as I can see, it cannot be the language of the millions of Indian homes. It will be confined to thousands or tens of thousands, but it will not reach the millions. Therefore, I am delighted when the students ask me to speak in Hindi.

You, both the speakers, have spoken of me in terms, which if I believed to be true of myself, I do not know where I would be. But I know my place. I am a humble servant of India, and in trying to serve India, I serve humanity at large. I discovered in my early days that the service of India is not inconsistent with the service of humanity. As I grew older in years, and I hope also in wisdom, I saw that the discovery was well made, and after nearly 50 years of public life, I am able to say today that my faith in the doctrine, that the service of one’s nation is not inconsistent with the service of the world, has grown. It is a good doctrine. Its acceptance alone will ease the situation in the world and stop the mutual jealousies between nations inhabiting this globe of ours. You have said truly that in taking up this war against untouchability, I have not confined myself to Hinduism. I have said more than once that, if untouchability is removed in its fulness from the Hindu heart, it will have farreaching consequences, in as much as it touches millions of human beings.

As I said last night to the great meeting in Nagpur, if untouchability is really removed from the Hindu heart, that is, if the high-caste Hindus purge themselves of this terrible taint, we shall soon discover that we are all one and not different peoples, Hindus, Muslims, Christians, Parsees, whatever we may call our-selves. We shall feel the unity, once the barrier of untouchability is removed. As I have often said, untouchability is a hydraheaded monster, appearing in many shapes. Some of them are very subtle. If I have jealousy for any human being that also is a species of untouchability. I do not know if my dream about the removal of untouchability. I do not know if my dream about the removal of untouchability will be fully realized while I am living. All those who are religiously inclined, those who believe not in formal religion but in the essence of religion, cannot but believe in the removal of a subtle type of untouchability that affects the lives of a vast mass of humanity. If Hindu hearts can be purged of this evil, our eyes of understanding will be more and more opened. It is not possible to estimate the gain to humanity when untouchability is really removed. You can now have no difficulty in understanding why I have staked my life for this one thing.

---

1 Gandhiji had begun his speech in Hindi. But as there was a cry for English, he spoke in English.

If you, the students who have assembled here, have followed me so far and understood the implications of this mission of mine, you will soon extend the help I want from you. Many students have written to me asking what part they can take in helping this movement. It is a surprise to me that students are obliged to ask this question. The field is so vast and near you that you need not ask the question as to what you may do and what you may not. It is not political question. It may become one, but for you and me, for the time being, it is not connected with politics. My life is governed by religion. I have said that even my politics are derived from my religion. I never lost sight of the principle that governs my life when I began dabbling in politics. As this is a humanitarian campaign, students must devote a part of their spare time, if not the whole, to the service of thousands of Harijans. By giving me this magnificent purse you have certainly equalled the brightest records of students’ meetings which I have addressed in my many peregrinations throughout the length and breadth of India. But I want much more from you. I have found that, if I get many helpers who can give their spare time, much work can be done. This work cannot be done by hired labour. With hired labour we cannot go to Harijan quarters and sweep their roads, enter their houses and wash their children. I have described in the columns of the Harijan What students can do.¹ A Harijan teacher has shown what a Herculean task it is for him to tackle. Even wild children are better than Harijan children. Wild children are not sunk in utter degradation, as the Harjian children are, nor do they live in such filthy surroundings. This problem cannot be tackled by hired labour. No amount of money can enable me to do hired labour. No amount of money can enable me to do this. It must be your prerogative. It is an acid test of the education received by you in schools and colleges. Your worth will not be measured by your ability to make faultless English speeches. Your worth will be measured by the service you render to the poor and not by Government posts worth Rs. 60 or Rs. 600 that you may have got. I wish you would do this work in the spirit I suggest. I have not met a single student who has said that he cannot spare one hour per day. If you write your diary from day to day, you will find that you waste many a precious hour in the 365 days of the year. If you want to turn your education to good account, you will turn your attention to this work while this hurricane campaign lasts. Erstwhile students are serving Harijans within a radius of 5 miles round about Wardha. They are doing good silent work; therefore, you do not know them. I invite you to see their work. It is hard but pleasurable. It will give you joy, greater than your cricket or tennis. I have repeatedly said that money will come if I have real, intelligent, honest workers. As a boy of 18 I began my education in begging. I have seen that money can be found easily if we have the right kind of workers. Money alone will never satisfy me. I would ask you to pledge yourselves to devote a definite number of spare hours to Harijan service. As you, Mr. President, have said, I am a dreamer. I am indeed a practical dreamer. My dreams are not airy nothings. I want to convert my dreams into realities as far as possible. Therefore, I must hasten to auction the gifts I have received from you.

¹ Vide “Students and Vacation”

_Harijan_, 17-11-1933
163. EXTRACTS FROM SPEECHES

[Before November 10, 1933]

For me the money you give is a token of your identification with the cause. Mere money will not avail; I must have your heart also with your money.

You may not think that you have lost your money. Those who have given have gained it, and those who, though able, have refrained have in reality lost it. The money spent in gambling, drink and lust is a double loss, for you lose your money and lose also your reputation and health. Whereas those who give even a pice for the service of humanity gain more than they give. Untouchability is a blot on Hinduism. It is a canker eating into its vitals. I see with my eyes and smell with my nose that the body of Hinduism is in the process of destruction. If you think with me, you should contribute your mite to this cause. Once we lose the spiritual power of Hinduism I do not know where we should be. A man without religion is like a ship without a rudder. The money, therefore, that you give is to my mind a token of your desire to save Hinduism from spiritual destruction.

_Harijan_, 17-11-1933

164. NOTES

TRUE AHIMSA

Jamshed Mehta, a true servant of humanity, sends me a rendering, received by him from a friend, of a discourse on ahimsa in _Jnaneshwari Gita_. Chapter XIII. I have taken the liberty of further condensing it and putting it in a form perhaps more easily to be understood, without in any way marring the sense of the original. Those who still harbour untouchability in their bosoms will do well to

---

1 These are reproduced from Chandrashankar Shukla’s “Weekly Letter” which says the speeches were delivered before Gandhiji visited Gondia, which he did on November 10.
2 _Ibid_
3 What follows was spoken at a wayside meeting of villagers who made an on-the-spot collection.
4 Jnaneshwar’s Marathi commentary on the Bhagavad Gita.
test it on the touchstone provided by the great saint of Maharashtra. Is untouchability compatible with his definition of ahimsa? Let the extract speak for itself:

Before considering what is real ahimsa, it is necessary to see what it is not. In order to secure a good rainfall, people perform what they call sacrifices in which they kill animals. This is not ahimsa. Is it not like cutting off one’s own hands so that they may be cooked and served as food? Is it wise to cut off all the branches of a tree, in order to put a fence round it, with those branches? Then, again, to save many people from diseases, people cut away whole trees, or take out all the bark, or make extracts of living animals and take out secretions from other creatures. Is it not like pulling down a house in order to build a verandah or shed for the house, and burning your clothes in order to have a fire to warm yourself?

Real ahimsa or love originates in one’s heart and is known by one’s conduct even as gold is known by its qualities. A man who is full of love never forgets that the world is full of life like his and takes great care that he does not harm any living thing. He sees his love reflected in the eyes of those whom he meets. He is the friend of all. As a cat holds her kittens between her teeth without hurting them, so does a man of love deal with all with whom he comes in contact. He walks gently and noiselessly lest his footsteps may disturb the sleep of others. He always makes room for those who need it. He so regulates his voice as not to jar on others. He is silent when he need not speak. His speech is never intended to offend anyone. He does not want to upset other people’s plans or to frighten them. He never utters words which lead to discussions and disputations, or which hurt the feelings of others. There is no deceit in his talk, nor doubt not ambiguity. He never stares lest his stare may offend people. He does not move his hands aimlessly as he has no desire to harm even a mosquito. He does not carry even a stick, not to speak of other weapons. His hands are used only for salutation or service.

These are but the outward signs of the inner abiding love as a plant is of the seed that has borne it. His mind is the Master of all the organs. Thus, real ahimsa is an attitude of the mind expressed through the different sense organs. He alone who is filled with love for all that lives and whose mind, speech and action are in full union is truly noble.

_Harijan_, 10-11-1933

165. A COMMON PLATFORM

A correspondent sends me an essay by Sir C. V. Kumaraswamy Sastriar, ex-High Court Judge, Madras. It occupies three sides of a foolscap in print. It is written on behalf of 'Sanatanists’. It is an attempt to show that untouchability has existed from time immemorial and that the legislation such as is contemplated is futile. It, however, concludes with this significant paragraph:

Several social inequalities and exclusive outlooks are being softened or removed by time and education. The old order is changing, and with it the older conception of humanity. Several communities once considered depressed or servile have, owing to rise in education and material well-being, become possessed of rights and privileges. No lover of India would claim that communities and castes should be in a state of antagonism, or that social injustice and inequalities should not be adjusted. But nobody can view without pain and alarm the methods adopted and the aids sought, which will only accentuate the ill-feeling between the caste Hindus and the depressed classes, without any considerable material advantage to the latter. Their state of depression lies in other and deeper causes and its removal lies in combined effort by the caste Hindus to improve their material and educational state.

This paragraph, in my humble opinion, vitiates the prior reasoning in support of untouchability as a sacrosanct religious institution. It seems to admit that it is a social evil which the learned ex-Judge will gladly see uprooted. And every reformer will agree with him when he says “nobody can view without pain and alarm the methods adopted and the aids sought, which will only accentuate the ill-feeling between the caste Hindus and the depressed classes, without any considerable material advantage to the latter.” Only, the reformer must add that Sir Kumaraswamy’s fears are imaginary. Reformers have adopted no method and sought no aid so as to accentuate ill-feeling. Sir Kumaraswamy has not given himself time to study what the reformers are doing and how they are doing it. Indeed, I can show him that they are even postponing the material advantage to the Harijans where ill-feeling, already existing, is likely to grow into a fight with blows. Thus, for instance, reformers have been postponing summary action even regarding the use of certain public wells to which Harijans are beyond doubt entitled in law. As for the aids sought, reformers will readily agree that social prejudices cannot be removed by summoning the assistance of law. But they do invoke and insist on legal and legislative aid when the law is interpreted to uphold untouchability. No reform in respect of an evil can succeed in the teeth of legal protection thereof. It is hardly necessary to state the legislative obstacles can only be removed by legislative hindrance and nothing more. What they desire is that untouchability should have no legal sanction. They recognize that, even when that is withdrawn, as a social evil it will demand attention for a long time to come.

I welcome the last sentence of the paragraph. When there is “a combined effort by the caste Hindus to improve their (the Harijans’) material and educational state”, untouchability will not be long disappearing from the land. If the sanatanists distrust the reformers, let them work independently. Will Sir Kumaraswamy move the ‘sanatanists’ to action? If he succeeds, there will be no ill-feeling left. Does he know that in the name of sanatana dharma its so-called representatives have burned the crops of innocent Harijans, assaulted them and otherwise molested them when in the exercise of their just and legal rights?

Harijan, 10-11-1933

166. FOR HARIJAN TEACHERS

One who is responsible for the management of over twenty five Harijan schools writes a long letter stating the difficulties experienced in the management of the school and asks how I would conduct them if I had the direct management thereof. I need not recount his difficulties which he has described carefully. What I am about to say is an attempt to answer them.

While we are bound to give scholarships and other help to those Harijan boys and girls who attend the established schools, there is no reason whatever slavishly to reproduce the mode and methods of those schools in the ones under our own management.

We have to recognize that we get Harijan children with great difficulty to attend any school at all. We cannot expect any degree of regularity in them and, thanks to our past criminal neglect, they are so unkempt that we have, in the beginning stages, to handle them in a manner wholly different from the ordinary.
On first admission their bodies have to be minutely examined and thoroughly cleaned. Their clothes might have to be cleaned and patched. The first daily lesson, therefore, will for some time consist of applied hygiene and sanitation and simple needle-work. I should use no books probably for the whole of the first year. I should talk to them about things with which they are familiar and, doing so, correct their pronunciation and grammar and teach them new words. I should note all the new words they may learn from day to day so as to enable me to use them frequently till they have them fixed in the their minds regularly. The teacher will not give discourses but adopt the conversational method. Through conversations he will give his pupils progressive instruction in history, geography and arithmetic. History will begin with that of our own times, and then, too, of events and of persons nearest us, and geography will begin with that of the neighbourhood of the school. Arithmetic will begin with the sums applicable of the pupil’s homes. Having tried the method myself, I know that infinitely more knowledge can be given to the pupils through it, and without strain on them, than can be given through the orthodox method, within a given time. Knowledge of the alphabet should be treated as a separate subject altogether. The letters should be treated as pictures which the children will first be taught to recognize and name. Writing will follow as part of the drawing lesson. Instead of making daubs of their letters, pupils should be able to make perfect copies of the models placed before them. They would not, therefore, be called upon to draw the letters till they had acquired control over their fingers and the pen. It is criminal to stunt the mental growth of a child by letting him know as much only as he can get through a book he can incoherently read in a year. We do not realize that, if a child was cut of from the home life and was merely doomed to the school, he would be a perfect dunce for several years. He picks up information and language unconsciously through his home, not in the schoolroom. Hence do we experience the immense difference between pupils belonging to cultured homes and those belonging to uncouth homes, which are no homes in reality.

In the scheme I have adumbrated, the schoolmaster is expected to treat his occupation seriously and feel one with his pupils. I know that, in putting the scheme into operation, the want of schoolmasters of the right type is the greatest difficulty. But we shall not get the right type till we have made the right beginning.
THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI

I must postpone the consideration of the stage when we have to arm the pupils with books.¹

_Harijan, 10-11-1933_

167. LETTER TO MANSHANKAR J. TRIVEDI

November 10, 1933

CHI. MANU,

You did well in seeing the Princess². Now tell her the whole thing yourself. I could barely write a short letter to her. I didn’t discuss all the details. Write to me. Elizabeth² also may write if she wishes. You must have heard about Kakasaheb’s sevenday fast. . . .³ has disappointed me.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

[PS.]

Address Wardha.

From a photostat of the Gujarati : S.N. 22621

¹ Vide “School Books”, 1-12-1933.
² Efy Aristarchi
³ A Roman Catholic whom Gandhiji gave the name Vimala. The addressee intended to marry her.
⁴ The name has been omitted.
168. INTERVIEW TO PRESS

NAGPUR,

[November 10, 1933]¹

Four days is too little time compared to the nine months in front of me. Therefore, I cannot say whether I shall be able to bear its strain. I can only say that, if God wills that I should finish this tour, then, in spite of all this strain, He will give me the strength to finish it.

_Harijan_, 17-11-1933

169. SPEECH AT GONDIA

November 10, 1933

Gandhiji deprecated the attitude of the higher castes if the allegations² made by the Harijans were true. He wanted a cleansing of the hearts and not a mere show. If, however, they wanted to keep them separate still, they must declare so openly and be prepared to meet the consequences. He could not reply to the other charge against the _bidi_ merchants, as he had no knowledge of the same. He pointed out how both depended on the co-operation of each other and asked them to give up aloofness. The term Harijan which the previous speaker resented as showing separateness, Mahatmaji said, had been chosen by a Harijan and not invented by him. He said he preferred to call himself a Haijan. He asked the _bidi_ merchants to give fair treatment to their labourers, and thanked them for the donations they freely gave to the cause taken up by him. Mahatmaji then referred to the sales of khadi in the local Bhandar which he said were very poor. For a town like Gondia, only Rs. 1,000 worth of khadi was sold per month. He showed how the Harijans stood to gain by people espousing the cause of khadi.

_Hitavada_, 16-11-1933

¹ The interview was given on the fourth day of the tour which commenced on November 7, 1933.
² A Harijan boy had complained against the caste Hindus who made a show of unity and sympathy and against the _bidi_ factory owners who did not treat their Harijan employees well.
170. TELEGRAM TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

[November 11, 1933]

FIND UNABLE GIVE TWO DAYS. CAN GIVE THREE HOURS ANY MONDAY AFTERNOON. TWENTY-SEVENTH INSTANT RAIPUR. FOURTH DECEMBER JUBBULPORE.

171. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

WARDHA,
November 11, 1933

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

I have just returned from a heavy tour programme and having read your letter telegraphed as follows:

It is impossible to give more than one day and more then three hours. It is difficult enough even to give three hours. The programme is so packed that hardly any time is given for rest. Four hours for rest, bath and dinner, have hitherto dwindled down to two. A programme in which tens of thousands of people are concerned cannot easily be postponed or disturbed. The enclosed copy will give you an idea of the work, and where you find hours of rest, except for Friday afternoon, they have been encroached upon, changing the time from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. to 12 o’clock to 2 p.m.

I entirely agree with you that the proposed conversation will not clarify matters to any satisfactory extent. If the A.I.C.C. meeting is held, I do not know how I shall be able to attend the sittings. Will it not be better for me to abstain from attending? If it is desirable, I will send my views in writing. The opinion I have expressed in my public letter to you is becoming more and more confirmed.

1 Vide the following item.
2 Vide the preceeding item.
3 Vide Appendix “Tour Programme”, 7-11-1933

154 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
You must have seen Lahiri’s statement about the Hijli Prison. It more than confirms Satisbabu’s letter. I have heard from the Governor. His Secretary says that “His Excellency will look into the matter to which you refer”.

I have read the appeal for the Hospital. I hope it will have the response it deserves.

I carefully read your letter about the Government demand. In anything you do about Swaraj Bhawan, do you not think that you should consult the trustees and not merely inform them? I have not been able even to show your letter to Jamnalalji for sheer want of time. He twits me by saying that as I am in Wardha you are ignoring him entirely, not even acknowledging his letters. I told him that your letters to me are as much for him as for me and that just now the few of us who are out have little time for performing acts of mere courtesy.

You cannot expect rapid progress for an old patient like Mother. The wonder to me is that she has survived the attack she had. I hope the progress though slow continues.

Love.

BAPU

Encl. 1

Gandhi-Nehru Papers, 1933. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

172. INTERVIEW TO THE PRESS

WARDHA, November 11, 1933

I do not know what better proof any critic can demand than these meetings and demonstrations that untouchability is rapidly disintegrating. This does not mean that the mass mind has changed altogether. But if the evidence of the last four days is sustained throughout the tour I should feel certain about the cremation of the untouchability monster within a measurable distance of time.

Harijan, 17-11-1933

1 Gandhiji wrote to the Governor of Bengal on November 2, 1933; vide Letter to Governor of Bengal, 1-11-1933
2 Vide “Letter to Jawaharlal Nehru”, 30-10-1933
I am essentially a lover of peace. I do not have the slightest wish to create dissensions among the Hindus. It would be best for the sanatanists and reformers to confer among themselves and make an effort to arrive at an understanding. But if that effort fails, both parties should resort to peaceful and honourable methods and both should learn to tolerate one another. I believe myself to be both a sanatanist and a reformer. I have tried to gather in me all the goodwill which caste Hindus can have towards Harijans. God alone knows how far I have succeeded in the effort. I am also trying, as best as an imperfect human being like myself can, to see with Harijans’ eyes and to realize what is going on in their hearts. It is not given to man to know the whole truth. His duty lies in living up to the truth as he sees it and, in doing so, to resort to the purest means, i.e., to non-violence. I do not want to hurt the feelings of the sanatanists. I want to convert them to my view in the gentlest manner. I want, if I can, to steal into their hearts. I would love to melt their hearts by my suffering. I firmly believe that untouchability as we practise it today has no sanction in the Shastras. But I do not wish to enter into a discussion of what the Shastras support and what they do not. I only put before you, as humbly as I can, the truth as I see it, and am prepared to sacrifice my life, if need be, in an unceasing effort to live up to that truth. It is clear to my mind, beyond the shadow of a doubt, that, if untouchability is not eradicated, both Hinduism and the Hindus are bound to perish. Ever since I was a child of ten I have considered untouchability as a sin. My heart has never been able to reconcile itself to untouchability based on birth. I tried to study the Shastras to the best of my ability. I consulted as many pundits as I could. And a majority of them have supported my view. But truth is not to be found in books. Truth resides in every human heart, and one has to search for 1 Gandhiji had gone to Deoli to open a temple to Harijans but some sanatanists opposed the plan. A shastri from the South requested him to stop the movement and avoid creating dissensions in Hindu society.

---

2 From The Bombay Chronicle
it there, and be guided by truth as one sees it. But no one has a right to coerce others to act according to his own view of truth.

I would appeal to the temple-goers here who are in favour of Harijans’ entry into the temple to go into the temple only after the sanatanists, who have blocked the way, leave the place. We do not want to score a victory over them. Do not be angry with them, do not insult them; on the contrary, feed them if they are hungry and would accept your hospitality. We have to win them over by love. We may not ask for police aid against them.¹

I do not say this because I am a non-co-operator but because I believe in the law of non-retaliation. Again, I believe that religion can never be protected by force or hooliganism, but by penance and suffering. I am, therefore, prepared to give up my life, if need be, as a final act of penance.

He hoped that those who were arrested would be discharged and that the temple would be opened to Harijans without delay and without friction.

_Harijan, 24-11-1933_

174. _A PICE PER HEAD_

Shri Harakhchand writes in his letter² of October 26.

I hope readers will not be annoyed with me for giving all this description. It is not proper if someone says that it is an old story or that the floods are a past event. When the floods came, those who were destined to die died. Those who survived immediately got all possible help. But it becomes the moral obligation of the kind-hearted to look after those who were rendered homeless till the next season is over and the new harvest is ready. Such letters prove that this is the right time for fulfilling this duty.

Readers will find that in some places the rice given per head is less than what even one pice can fetch. If this picture is clearly impressed on his mind, the reader would not be happy to partake of his meal without keeping aside a part of it for such unhappy people. If all contributed according to their capacity, thousands will get enough to keep themselves alive. Millowners can send clothes. Khadi lovers can

¹ The following paragraph is from Harijan, 17-11-1933.
² The letter is not translated here. Vide also “Pice Per Day” send khadi. Only recently Harakhchand received anonymous hundi of Rs. 1,000 for distributing khadi.

[From Gujarati]
Harijanbandhu, 12-11-1933

175. LETTER TO GANGA PODDAR

[November 12, 1933]

I am writing to Rameshwar. It was of course a grave sin but you can atone for and forget it. Bring back the ornaments and resolve against ever committing such a lapse.

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 216.

176. LETTER TO RAMESHWARDAS PODDAR

WARDHA,
November 12, 1933

CHI. RAMESHWARDAS.

Ganga has certainly committed a grave lapse but she repents of it now. One who repents deserves to be forgiven. Do not say a word [of reproach] to Ganga; receive her with love. The ornaments have to be brought back, that she will do. You can send her back afterwards. Remain calm, chant Ramanama. We are all prone to errors but those who confess theirs are blessed. Let us all wish that Ganga’s repentance proves sincere.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 174.

1 Vide the following item.
177. LETTER TO MANILAL AND SUSHILA GANDHI

WARDHA,

November 13, 1933

CHI. MANILAL AND SUSHILA,

I cannot reply immediately to your letters. I don’t have time even today, but have found some to write this letter as Kishorelal told me the substance of your letter to Nanabhai. If I could, I would certainly have tried to guide you in regard to the dispute among you there. But I really cannot judge in such matters unless I see all the people concerned. However, why do you always feel dependent on me? Go on doing fearlessly what you feel to be the right thing. Don’t mind if you make mistakes. Whenever you realize that you have made a mistake, rectify it unhesitatingly without thinking of the consequences. If you always act thus, you will be able to judge what the right course is in every matter. I shall not live for ever. You should try to swim with your own strength. That is the right thing to do. Don’t mind if you drown while trying to swim. If you realize that you have made a mistake in adopting the course which you are following at present, you should abandon it. If you don’t see any mistake, you must cling to it no matter even if you die or become a pauper in consequence. But, while doing that, do not get angry with anybody or adopt untruthful means or lose your peace of mind or patience. Bear the hardships which may follow. Instead of seeking the protection of an imperfect father, seek that of the Father of all, of Omnipotent God. That will make you strong. This is the only lesson I wish to teach you. If you have learnt it, you may rest assured that you have received perfect education.

You will read accounts of my tour in papers and elsewhere. I don’t have time to give you other news either.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4811

1 Vide “Letter to Vallabhbhai Patel”, 25-12-1933.
178. NOTE TO VIDYA A. HINGORANI

WARDHA ASHRAM,
November 13, 1933

Hindus are in grave error. They have become cowards. They are not prepared for sacrifice; they do not wish to purify themselves nor do they want to give up their bad habits. What else can you expect? In these circumstances, those of us who are awakened should do their duty by purifying themselves through sacrifice and have the faith that therein lies the ultimate solution of the problem.

BAPU

179. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

HINGANGHAT,
November 13, 1933

CHI. MARY,

I did not know that you were going to Betul so soon. I am writing this during the few minutes I have at Hinganghat. You will read all the account of my doings in Harijan.

I thought Amala might listen if she knew who had made the suggestion. Hers is a difficult case. But God succeeds where and when we fail. Let us trust her to God. I hope you are keeping well body and mind.

You must write often and that to Wardha from where letters will be redirected.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 6015. Also C.W. 3341. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr.

1 The reference is to the riot in Sind resulting from the marriage of a Hindu girl with a Muslim.
CHANDA,
November 13, 1933

DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

I have just arrived in Chanda and whilst the others are coming, I have taken up your letter. It is now 9 p.m. The programme is fairly strenuous. I was in Hinganghat at 6 p.m.

Tiwari has handed me your letter. I have also read yours to J. So far as he knows there is probably very little left in A.I.C.C. a/c. The books are not with him. He has sent for the accounts. Meanwhile I have suggested that Rs. 500 might be sent at least on a/c. If the funds are exhausted, I do not know what is to be done. I have an earmarked a/c at my disposal. I am loath to part with that fund. I am drawing upon it for Hardikar and I want to do likewise for the list of workers you have sent me. It too will be soon exhausted. In the circumstances, the office staff has to be reduced if not given up altogether, i.e., if the civil resistance movement is to continue. The more I look about me, the more convinced I feel that those who are in the fight will have to do without funds except such as may remain in hands such as mine. I have just managed for Gujarat and Karnatak. The lady who was to have paid Rs. 50,000 has just sent the message that she would like to pay Rs. 10,000 to you. If she does, I shall expect you to pay the U.P. workers out of this. Anyway I think it is best for you to confer with Jamnalalji and if necessary with me as to the management of the funds that are still available. I have sent notices everywhere that no more help need be expected through me. I am trying to run through whatever is at my disposal.

Now about the informal meeting. You will see from the programme herewith that I am in Delhi between 10 and 14 December. Thakkar Bapa says I can take up the bulk of 14th for our meeting. I am supposed to entrain for Andhra on 14th immediately after 4 p.m. Ansari who was with me on Sunday suggested Delhi. You will now make your choice—24th inst., 4th Dec. or 14th Dec., i.e., if the conference is to come off at all.

1 Jamnalal Bajaj who was the treasurer of the A.I.C.C. at this time.
As to the Harijan tour, I am not worrying at all over the proposed boycott in U.P. I am finding no difficulty here. Congressmen and non-Congressmen are co-operating in arranging for the tour. You are unnecessarily hard on the liberals whom I would include among non-Congressmen. We have to get work even from them. They work according to their lights. In any case, I do not want a single Congressman to work for this movement who would go to jail. I have said this to everyone who has come to me. I am sending back some of the best workers who have just come out. Ba I hope is going soon and so is Manibehn Patel. Kakasaheb, Swami, Surendra are going. Those Congressmen who are too weak to go or who have lost faith in civil disobedience and who are anxious to work for the Harijan cause I am taking, but not those who want Harijan work as a mere cloak. This movement, if it is to become universal, must be able to continue even if every Congressman is in jail or it must perish. I feel too that congressmen should not handle this movement to strengthen the C. D. movement or the Congress hold on the people. It would be going about it the wrong way. Such an attitude will damage both the Congress and the Harijan cause. Cases of this type have come under my notice. I have expressed strong disapproval of any such work. I think I have now sufficiently answered all your questions. If not, please ask again.

You will have noticed that the Sarkar Salaam1 in Hijli has stopped. Shall I write to Sir Tej about the Frontier treatment?

I had a nice letter from Krishna. She seems to be happy in her new home.

I hope Mother’s progress continues.

Love.

BAPU

Gandhi-Nehru Papers, 1933. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

---

1 Vide “Letter to Governor of Bengal”, 2-11-1933
181. TELEGRAM TO SHRIKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

CHANDA,
November 14, 1933

SHRIKRISHNA CHANDIWALA
KATRA KHUSHALRAI
CHANDNICHOWK
DELHI

JAMNALALJI REPEATED WIRE BRIJKRISHNA¹ MUST LIVE. MAY GOD
SPARE. WIRE CONDITION YEOTMAL.

BAPU

From a photos tat; C. W. 10957

182. LETTER TO RAMNIKLAL MODI

CHANDA,
November 14, 1933

CHI. RAMNIKLAL,

You seem to be worrying about Tara. I hope this is a polite way of saying things. You and I can’t afford to worry seriously. If we do, we would discredit the knowledge that we profess. How would it seem if we, who recite the Gita daily and read in it that we should not worry, still go on worrying every day about something or the other? I met Tara. I liked her attitude, etc., very much. About her dental trouble, she is trying some treatment.

Surendra told me everything about you. These days all of us are being tested well. We may call it the primary test.

I am writing this letter while touring. I rose at three in the morning and, after brushing the teeth, the first thing I am doing is this. The prayer will start at 4.20. I am in Chanda just now. We shall leave for Saoli at six. Probably you know that Harijans there spin and weave.
The party going to Saoli is a large one. it includes Janakibehn, Radhakishan², Dhotre and others. Those accompanying me on the tour are Thakkar Bapa, Vishwanath, Chandrashankar, Ramnath, Mira-

¹ Brijkrishna Chandiwala, brother of the addressee, who was seriously ill; vide
“Letter to Mathurdas Trikumji”, 15-11-1933
² Radhakrishna Bajaj behn, Nayar and Om. We have to work hard during the tour. The crowds are equally big wherever we go. What else need I write about?
You must have known everything through Tara. If I had the time, I would write a long letter. I do not, cannot, write to you and to many others. I do wish to write, but I have to suppress the wish.

Surendra and Durbari are still in Wardha. A Japanese sadhu has come to live there. His cheerfulness is a joy to see. He is learning Hindi. Ba left yesterday with Swami for Ahmedabad.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 4175. Also C.W. 1674. Courtesy:
Ramniklal Modi

183. LETTER TO TARABEHN R. MODI

November 14, 1933

CHI. TARA,

I had promised to give you a letter to Ramniklal, but I think I could not do so and I had been feeling unhappy because of that. I had decided to write the letter the first thing this morning. It is enclosed. When will Ramniklal get it now? Write to me always at Wardha.
Let me know what you do regarding the teeth. Write about all the thoughts that may come to you, and also describe the experiences that you get from time to time. I hope you have made it a regular practice to read Harijanbandhu.

Do you know that Om is accompanying me on the tour? There are many others also just now, up to Saoli. We are learning many things. The body seems to be bearing the burden well enough.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 4176. Also C.W. 1675. Courtesy:
Ramniklal Modi

1 Vide the preceding item.
184. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

CHANDA,
November 14, 1933

Bhai Vallabhbhai,

I must have your letters regularly. You have made me grow accustomed to them. We are in Chanda today. it is four o’clock just now. At six we leave for Saoli.

I didn’t like the manner in which things were done regarding Vithalbhai. All the same, I have learnt much from here, from the way in which people attended in large crowds. They don’t worship the man. They worship, in their own way and on their own terms, the image of the man which they have formed in their minds and which they love. I have not read the accounts in papers and do not know details. But I have got a complete picture in my mind of the whole thing.

I learnt from The Times of India about eggs having been thrown during the students’ meeting' in Nagpur. I didn’t see anything in the hall. I didn’t even see any commotion anywhere. Nor do I know anybody else in the hall having noticed anything. Chandrasankar told me only this, that an egg had fallen on Om. Nobody knows whether it was aimed at her or the ex-president sitting by her side or at me. The truth is that the paper has magnified the incident out of all proportion. The students’ love was beyond words. They even gave me a purse of Rs. 700. It is the same in the case of U.P.

Ansari came and saw me on Sunday. [His] health is a little better. [He] wished to see Vithalbhai, but could not. During the last days he had become very restless. Ansari had nothing in particular to say. He had come only to pay a formal visit. He has gone to see some patients in princely families. He left the same evening. I was observing silence then, though not when he arrived. So far I have experienced no difficulty in the tour. It is now time for my meal and then to get into a car. So I must stop here today. Ba and Swami left Wardha yesterday. Ba will go to Ahmedabad via Akola. Manu has gone to Rajkot where Rami’s daughter is ill. Always write to me at the Wardha address.

1 Held on November 9, 1933

Blessings to both from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-4 : Manibehn Patelne, pp. 46-7

185. LETTER TO MANIBEHN PATEL

CHANDA,

November 14, 1933

CHI. MANI,

I got your long letter. You did well to speak out your mind. You would only harm yourself if you hide your thoughts from me. After a man’s death, we must not remember his shortcomings, but should remember only his virtues. My absence had nothing to do with his actions. It is not that I fail to appreciate his virtues. I did not go there because I could not have taken part in anything. I feel that at present I should be either in Yeravda or among Harijans. When I say that I am out of prison only for the sake of Harijans, I do so not only for the benefit of the Government of the world but because that is how I really feel in my heart. I simply cannot take part in any other activity. People also seem to have understood this. I could not have tolerated the restrictions imposed by the Government and would not have been able to have things according to my own way. I would not have been able to advise you or Dahyabhai. And so I bore the attacks in silence.

Apart from this, there is another thing, too, in my life which you should know. Rasikś was on his death-bed and he even wished that I should be by his bedside. But I did not go to Delhi, Ba did. Rasik died. I did not shed a single tear. I was taking my meals when I received the wire. I finished my meal and resumed my work. There have been many such incidents in my life. I have formed certain views about death and they are becoming stronger as the years pass. I do

---

1 Rami Kunverji Parekh, daughter of Harilal Gandhi
2 The addressee had asked why Gandhiji did not attend Vithalbhai Patel’s funeral.
3 Harilal Gandhi’s son who died on February 8, 1929; vide “Letter to Mirabehn”, 9-2-1929 not look upon death as a calamity. Marriage may be that, death never is. Does this set your doubt at rest? If not, ask me again.

You have given a good description of the events there. It was very painful. We should understand the meaning of people’s love. That love is not of the individual but of the virtues which they want to see in, and, therefore, attribute to him. Their love, therefore, is a pure thing. It is a sign of the popular awakening and an eye-opener for the world. Nobody can doubt that Vithalbhai was a lover of freedom.

Now about Ba. If I had had time, I would have explained the point more clearly in that letter.¹ Ba’s mind has weakened. She wants and yet does not want to court arrest. Deep down in her heart she knows that it is her duty to do so, and cannot forsake that duty, but she does not like to go as I am out. I have not put any pressure. I have left her free to do as she wishes. What I wanted to say was that you should urge her and strengthen her resolution to do her duty, for she believes in you and loves you. Anything I might say is likely to be regarded as an order and might kill her individuality. I, therefore, tell her nothing. But even my silence is interpreted by Ba to mean that I want her to go.

I understand [what you say] about your teeth and legs. Follow the doctor’s advice. It is very necessary to wait for a while, you need not insist on immediate action.

I am writing to Dahyabhai.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

Write at Wardha only.

[From Gujarati]

_Bapuna Patro-4 : Manibehn Patelne_, pp. 113-4

¹ Vide “Letter to Manibehn Patel”, 9-11-1933
186. LETTER TO DAHYABHAI PATEL

CHANDA,
November 14, 1933

CHI. DAHYABHAI,

I understand your feeling and disappointment. You can know my feelings and mind from my letter to Manibehn.¹ What can I do when I am helpless? Just as a soldier deprived of his sword is no good, so am I without civil disobedience. Moreover my whole life has been pledged. My pledge is either I would be in jail or would be immersed in Harijan work. I cannot even think of any other activity. The faults of Vithalbhai have departed with him. He had many good qualities and it is the memory of these that we have to treasure. You are perhaps not aware that I wrote a letter to him and he sent me an affectionate reply. My personal relations with him were never strained. Differences of opinion never affect personal relations. There is no need to explain all this to you. But Manibehn writes that you and other nephews too are a little hurt; so I am offering this explanation to you. I am very much perturbed as Vallabhbhai is in jail. If he were out I would have left it to him to remove all family misunderstandings. Because he is in jail the task of removing such misunderstandings falls on me all the more heavily. Do not hesitate to write to me frankly if you feel that this explanation is not adequate.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI DAHYABHAI VALLABHBAII PATEL
RAMNIVAS
PAREKH STREET
BOMBAY 4

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-4 : Manibehn Patelne, pp. 115

¹ Vide the preceding item.
187. LETTER TO RUKMINIDEVI BAZAJ

November 14, 1933

CHI. RUKMINI,

I had your letter. Keep the rule. I have started writing letters today at three in the morning immediately after rising. These days I get up every day at three and write as many letters as I can in one hour. We are leaving for Saoli today at six. I shall be accompanied in the car up to Saoli by Janakibehn and the other grown-ups. Saoli is a big centre of khadi manufacture, where khadi work is carried on on our behalf. I hope all of you are well. I hear from your father-in-law occasionally. Keshu is quite happy.

Blessings to you both from

BAPU

[PS.]

Write always at Wardha.

From Gujarati: C.W. 9702. Courtesy : Benarsilal Bazaj

188. TALK TO KHADI WORKERS, SAOLI

November 14, 1933

Gandhiji exhorted them to introduce improvements in their implements which would give them an increased output and a consequent increase in wages. He said.

Even then if you do not give up your bad habits, an increase in wages would not add to your happiness, for you will squander away what you will get. What is necessary then, above all, is for you to purify your life, give up evil habits, and you will add not only to your resources but also to your well being.

Harijan, 24-11-1933

1 Rameshwarlal Bazaj
2 Some of the women workers had complained of scanty wages.
I should advise you not to put too much strain on your body. It was not at all necessary for you to have run after the bier all the way.\(^1\) It is not an absolute moral duty to do so. I knew that my absence would be misunderstood, but why should I forsake my dharma for fear that others might not understand it? If I can live mentally outside jail, it can be only for Harijan work. That being so, I can do nothing unconnected with such work. Unable to offer civil disobedience, I am like a bird who has lost its wings. I would not have been able to endure some of the things which happened there. Looking at the matter even from that point of view, therefore, I couldn’t have come. Moreover, the date for the commencement of the Harijan tour had already been fixed. I didn’t go to see Motilalji’s widow. I haven’t gone to see Rami’s daughter, who is on her death-bed. Similarly, I am not going to visit Brijkishan, who is as dear to me as a son and who too is on his death-bed.\(^2\) You should write to him. Perhaps a wire may be necessary.\(^3\) I did not go to see Rasik when he was on his death-bed. I didn’t go even after he died. But I needn’t tell you all this. I have given a few instances thinking that perhaps you do not know about this aspect of my life. In fact, even you need not reply to such charges against me. Those who have failed to understand me till now will not be convinced by arguments. We must trust to the effect which my life as a whole may produce. Our deeds will have their effect sooner or later. No arguments can prevent them.

Your not coming did not please me. I had thought that you would suddenly turn up on Sunday without previous intimation. It seems that there will be no meeting.\(^4\) If it is held, it will be in Delhi on December 14. Ansari wants it to be on that day. If so, you should attend.\(\ldots\)\(^5\)

---

\(^1\) The addressee had attended Vithalbhai Patel’s funeral.
\(^2\) Omissions as in the source
\(^3\) Omissions as in the source
\(^4\) Of the A.I.C.C.
\(^5\) Omission as in the source
Do your best regarding Utkal. The article 1 in Harijan seems to have brought some money. You need not worry about this problem. There is no necessity at all for you to strain your health. As one should avoid indolence, so also should one avoid excessive work. The verse समतें धीमे उदयते, etc., 2 is ever fresh in my mind. The Gita is like a living mother to me, like the Kamadhenu 3. There is no exaggeration at all in this statement.

[From Gujarati]
Bapuni Prasadi, pp. 139-40

190. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

November 15, 1933

CHI. JAMNALAL,

Shri Harkare saw me about a memorial to Salpekarji. If a fund to be called Salpekar Smarak Harijan Seva Nidhi, is started and contributions are collected for it, I have agreed that my name may be used for that purpose. But I have told him that this may be done only if you approve of the plan and agree to help. A sum of not less than Rs. 5,000 should be collected for this fund, and it may be given to me in Chandwara in the form of a purse. A small committee may be formed for the purpose and the money may be spent for Harijan uplift in consultation with me. If you approve of this plan, help and guide Shri Harkare accordingly.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 2926

---

1 Vide “The Cry of Orissa”
2 Even-mindedness is yoga. Bhagavad Gita, II. 48
3 The cow of Hindu mythology which yielded all desires
191. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, WUN

November 15, 1933

I tell you, if you do not know already, that my friendship with Bapuji Aney has grown with years. I can give you many reminiscences of his sweet manners and brevity of speech, his resourcefulness and industry. I cannot conceal from you my grief at his enforced absence from our midst today.

I was not prepared to hear this from you, I want an unsoiled cowrie from you, which means, I want you to sacrifice a little of your comforts to spare money for the Harijans. I do not think any one of you denied yourself, out of sympathy with the flood-stricken people, a single meal or a single comfort. If that be true, it does not behove you to plead inability when asked to contribute to this cause, which is one of penance and purification for us, caste Hindus.

Harijan, 24-11-1933

192. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, YEOTMAL

November 15, 1933

This song conveys a message of peace and fearlessness. How can we retain untouchability consistently with our prayer to be at peace with the whole world? If we want to be just to the whole world we have to be just to the Harijans.

Ever since I set foot on the soil of Berar, the name of Bapuji Aney is reverberating in my ears. After years of comradeship a friendship has grown between us, the measure of which I cannot describe to you adequately. I expect to hear his name being echoed in every nook and corner of Berar.

Harijan, 24-11-1933

---

1 M. S. Aney was in prison.
2 The people of Wun had excused themselves from giving a purse on account of the flood havoc.
3 The flag song.
MY DEAR AGATHA,

I had your long letter.

I see that you are ever thinking of Andrews as a good mother would think of her son, looking after him and anticipating his wants and protecting him from all harm. You are quite right in saying that without some such care his anxiety complex overtakes him and he then suffers, and his work with him. Nevertheless, if you feel that for more efficient work you should come to India for a month or two, you should not hesitate. In this, both he and I agreed, but he is there on the spot and you will do what you think proper after consultation with him and other friends. Not that at the present moment any substantial work can be done. Sir Samuel Hoare has made up his mind about everything. He believes in his ‘mission’. He almost thinks that we are incapable of looking after our own affairs or even knowing what is good for us. He will not let us make mistakes. The immediate needs of the Britishers blind him to the realities. I feel that, in these circumstances, friends over there can do very little beyond watching, waiting and praying. We must look after ourselves, and if we succeed in demonstrably helping ourselves, you over there will be able to do substantial work.

Hijli affair seems to have been satisfactorily settled. I suppose I am right in presuming that my very simple letter to the Governor of Bengal had its effect.

It may be said that the funeral ceremony over the remains of Vithalbhai Patel passed off fairly well. So far as the public were concerned they demonstrated in an unmistakable manner what they stood for. The procession is described in Anglo-Indian papers to have been at least a mile long. The whole of Bombay turned out to do honour to the memory of the deceased. They identified themselves with the cause for which he stood, viz., India’s unadulterated Independence, not of association with Britain but undoubtedly of the slightest control. That the people are today helpless and unable to help themselves does not affect their mentality. They know what they want and they seize every occasion that offers to them to let the world know their mind.

I wish you would succeed in bringing Subhas Bose to England.

I am dictating this during the few minutes that I have at my disposal before motoring away to the next destination. I know you had last week an accurate letter from Chandrashankar Shukla. I am not going to put the strain on him by sending you another descriptive letter. The same demonstrations and enthusiasm continue unabated. I do feel that untouchability is going much more swiftly than many may imagine. No less than 1,50,000 people must have taken part in the numerous meetings and demonstrations. If they did not want to endorse the movement, one would think that they could not possibly have attended in such large numbers. They know that at the present moment I am touring solely in regard to untouchability, and that no political mission is mixed up with it, and yet they attend, and, in spite of the very hard times we are going through, they give their pices and their rupees. It is, therefore, sad to think that the Anglo-Indian papers are seeking to minimize the importance of the tour and even seeking to discredit it. I wonder if they had telegraphed to you the so-called egg-throwing incident at Nagpur and the preparations for boycott in the U.P. I enclose cuttings about the incident and my very brief reply. Of course, the sanatanists’ opposition is undoubtedly there. But, up till now I have not noticed any support being given to them by the public at large. The sanatanists would not have hesitated to damage the movement if they had any public support worth the name. More I have not the time to say. But you must read Harijan as part of my weekly letter. Distribute it as much as you like, and if you want more copies you can have them for the asking. And you may take it that it will hide nothing of the opposition to the movement. I have refrained from dealing with the egg-throwing question and the opposition in the U.P., in the pages of the Harijan, first, because I have dealt with the two things in the public press, and secondly, because they have no bearing on the movement. They have a political bearing in the sense that the Anglo-Indian newspapers are resorting to unscrupulous tactics. But I do not want to deal with such things in the pages of the Harijan. I want it to be free from political controversy even though just now I am out of prison. Immediately I am inside prison walls I may not take notice of any politics even though they may have profound influence upon the Harijan movement. And I am trying as much as it is humanly possible to act as if I was a prisoner. If, however, you find any omissions in the Harijan or my letters, you will not hesitate to draw my attention to such omission.

I take it that you will share this letter with the friends who, you think, should see it.

Yours sincerely,

BAPU

From a photostat : G.N. 1474

194. LETTER TO EFY ARISTARCHI

AMRAOTI,
November 16, 1933

MY DEAR EFY,

I have your letter with the very beautiful card which you want me to keep in my copy of the Bhagavad Gita. I am not going to carry out your wish literally, for, that will defeat it. I do not read from the Gita every day. I listen to its reading in the morning. And since your idea, I take it, is that I should have the picture daily as a bookmark I propose to keep it in the book which I may be reading for the time being and transfer it from book to book.

I see that you are having Gujarati lessons, probably from Manu, for, you have addressed your name in Gujarati.

I am glad that you are coming in close touch with Manu and Elizabeth. You ask me what I wish about this love affair. I regard both as very lovable, very sincere and very earnest, but what I fear is that they do not measure the full consequences of the proposed marriage. I thoroughly appreciate their viewpoint. For them it is enough that they love each other. But I have always held that whilst young people should first make their choice, its finality should be dependent upon the approval and blessings of the elders. I have seen young love so often disappointed in after years. However deliberate the choice, somehow or other later years proved the choice to have been ill made. In this case I see grave danger ahead. The most fatal objection, however, that I can see to this proposed match is that Elizabeth desires, and from her own standpoint perhaps naturally so, that the progeny should be brought up in the Roman Catholic faith. I do not mind it at all. But, even though Manu may have no objection, his parents and his people whom he loves dearly will never be able to reconcile themselves to their grandchildren being brought up in a faith other than their own.

Then there is the question of the whole Hindu culture. I see, even at the present moment, a conflict going on between Hindu culture and the Christianity of Indians; the latter are being torn between two almost opposite attractions. Somehow or other, Christianity has become synonymous with Western culture. Perhaps rightly so, for, the religion of the Western people is predominantly Christian and therefore Western culture may be fittingly described as Christian culture as Indian culture would certainly be described as Hindu culture. The progeny of Elizabeth must be brought up in entirely different surroundings unless Manu decides to tear himself away from his own surroundings and lives an exclusive life or decides to settle down in the West. I think that, spiritually considered, Elizabeth herself should not be a party to the possibility of Manu having to tear himself away.

Then there is the question of Elizabeth herself. She would be hard put to it to accommodate herself to Indian surroundings. Her constitution may be undermined or she would have to live a life out of all correspondence to her surroundings. There is ample justification for Europeans saying that they cannot possibly exist in India without incurring expenses out of all proportion to the Indian average. It is difficult enough even for Mira, in spite of her tremendous love for India, in spite of her iron will, to bend herself to the Indian simplicity, and Mira is the general average. But even she has to be protected against herself and compel [led] to give herself facilities which her associates are not given. She would have become bed-ridden long ago if I had not laid down the law from the very first and I know that she has extraordinarily accommodated herself to the Indian life. But, even she would have failed completely if she had married an Indian and made the futile attempt of bringing up her children after the Indian style. No-body who has not lived in India like Indians can possibly have a conception of what I am writing. India is the poorest country in the world. And if is a tremendous job for a Western girl to come to India and marry an Indian with a fixed determination of living the essentially Indian life. I do not recall a single Indian who has taken a European girl for his wife living the life of the average Indian. He simply cannot do it if he will do justice to his wife. And I myself much less . . . 1 reconciled to ourselves to Manu having lower his idea for the sake of Elizabeth. 2 It is for reasons such as this I have cried out for celibacy for those who dedicate themselves completely to God, i.e., to the service of God’s creation. There is no difficulty in my treating Mira as my daughter or you, but, imagine me having any European girl as daughter-in-law. I should be frightened. I could not shoulder the burden, because I could not reconcile myself to Devdas, for instance, having to tear himself away from his natural surroundings. I feel it to be premature for Indians to contract marriage relations with Europeans. When India has improved her conditions or when Europeans have boys and girls who have become inured to uttermost simplicity and have become domiciled in India I can look forward with happiness to Indo-European marriages.

Now, I think, I have given you a long enough letter and ample matter for thought. You know, at least somewhat, what I would wish, but I do not, in any shape or form, expect you to give effect to my wish, if what I have said does not appeal to you. And, if you think otherwise about the future of Manu and Elizabeth, you will not hesitate to tell me so. Whilst I deeply appreciate your losing yourself in me I would not be guilty of enslaving your reason or your heart. Imperfect as I am, I would not have you to become a partner in my errors. You must, therefore, exercise your full judgment in everything you do in association with me. My love for you will be none the less for your differing with me when you feel the need for difference in thought speech or action.

I have not put before you one more thing that I have stated in my letter to Elizabeth. I would simply state the proposition without arguing it.

I believe that, when husband and wife profess a different faith, the progeny should be brought up in the faith of the husband. There are, to me, sound religious and philosophic reasons for this proposition. If this proposition does not appear to be sound, you should

---

1 some words are illegible.

2 Perhaps the sentence should read: And I [am] myself much less [inclined to] reconcile ourselves ot Manu having [to] lower his ideal for the sake of Elizabeth.
ask Elizabeth to show you my letter to her.

I am working just now under tremendous strain. I get very little time for carrying on correspondence. This letter too, I am dictating under trying circumstances. I would therefore, like you, if you think it wise, to share this letter with Elizabeth as also Manu. But, if you think it wise not [to] do so, please tell both of them that I have their joint letter as also Elizabeth’s previous letter, both of which I appreciate and about which I have written to you.

I hope you received my letter wherein the £15 sent by you were acknowledged. I cannot warn you too often against unduly denying yourself.

Love.

BAPU

PRINCESS EFY ARISTARCHI
HOTEL SCHOTZKY
FREIBURG 1-B
(GERMANY)

From a facsimile in Mahatma, Vol. III, facing p. 344.

195. LETTER TO MANU GANDHI

November 16, 1933

CHI. MANUDI,

I got your two letters together today. You did quite right in going there. Now help Kusum to get all right. I suppose you will return to Wardha after she has recovered. Bali’ also felt happy. I am not writing to her separately. Write to me regularly at Wardha.

Blessings from

BAPU

SMT. BALIBEHN
C/O VORA HARIDAS VAKHATCHAND
BEHIND HIGH SCHOOL
RAJKOT

1 Balibechn M. Adalaja, Harilal Gandhi’s wife’s sister.
196. SPEECH AT HANUMAN VYAYAMSHALA, AMRAOTI

November 16, 1933

This vast gathering must have seen that there is no Godmade distinction between caste Hindus and Harijans. The distinction is purely man-made, and is an offence in the eyes of God. If the Harijans are given full opportunities for advancement, they will certainly equal, if they will not beat, others in many a field of life. The sight we have witnessed this evening must be an eye-opener to us and must inspire us to purge our hearts of the taint of untouchability.

Harijan, 24-11-1933

197. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, AMRAOTI

November 16, 1933

I have visited many places throughout the length and breadth of this country and such big meetings are to me the manifestations of the grace of God. I believe that with God’s favour only can we conduct such huge assemblies. With His grace also I have taken up the Harijan work. It is a religious work and should therefore be done with truth, peace and sacrifice. It could not be done otherwise. If we want to expiate for the injustice done to the Harijans and if we want to atone for the wrongs we, the savarna Hindus, are still doing them, we must treat them as we treat other savarna Hindus. I would like to tell you all that, unless we behave with them on equal terms, there is no chance of our improvement also. I visited the Harijan quarters with the help of Dr. Patwardhan, and have also seen other work here, and have now heard the address read out to me by the local Municipal Committee. If the Municipality of this place could not do anything in this matter, it is not to be blamed. I have seen many other municipal committees and the conditions are just the same all over. But I must say that now even the Western scientists after their research have come to the conclusion that if we leave out any particular section of our society

1 About a hundred Harijan boys had displayed their skill in physical drill before the gathering to the accompaniment of a band.
out of our fold, we are sure to go down economically. After these 25 years of observations, my belief strengthened that wealth should always go hand in hand with religion. There should be harmony between religion and wealth. I have come to realize from my Harijan work that one who tries for wealth in accordance with religion gets both. I believe it to be the duty of every savarna Hindu that he should try to take up the Harijan into his fold. If we do our duty towards the Harijans, all of us Hindus, Moslems, Parsis, Christians, will live peacefully. To my mind there is no better way to unity of these people than Harijan work. Now I must tell you what every one of you can do in this respect. The Harijan movement is a great yajna and each of you can put his little bit in it. Those who have money can give it for this cause. Those who have the leisure and intelligence to spare can teach the Harijan boys and give them lessons in personal hygiene and cleanliness. The Congressmen are doing this work at present. But I want that non-Congressmen also should undertake this work. It is the religious duty of every one of you to do this work.

I do not value politics as much as I value this work. Politics is nothing to me. It is my belief that if we do this work with religious fervour everything will be obtained. I am not travelling with any other intention in this work. And when I see people assemble in such large numbers to hear me, I hope they will stand by me in this work. In July last the Harijan Sevak Sangh was started and some of you must have taken the vow to wipe out this curse of untouchability. It is the birthright of the Harijans to make use of public institutions and to enter into the temples. But as long as there is a single soul boycotted as being a Harijan, I shall not regard untouchability as being wiped out totally. It is up to you, therefore, to change your hearts and consider the Harijans as your brethren.

The Harijan Sevak Sangh is composed of people of different schools of thought but they can do this work together. The workers in this field should not aspire after any kind of honour or title. They should not have the slightest tinge of personal interest or selfish motive. This work should also be free from any sort of political meaning but I do not value political things as much as this. The Harijan work is for the purification of the Hindu religion. I have great hopes in this matter. I have always been an optimist and my optimism in this case is increasing every day. But even if I fail it remains my duty to continue this work. Very few sincere workers have so far come forward. I, therefore, pray to God that He should give you all the necessary strength and guidance to do your duty in this respect.¹

I must remind you of the pledge given last year in your name.
You will remember that a meeting of representatives of Hindus was held in Bombay in September last year, Pandit Malaviyaji being in the chair. Among other things they resolved that untouchability, being a blot on the Hindu religion, had to be removed and that Harijans were entitled to the same public utilities, and in the same manner, as caste Hindus. There was in that resolution a special reference to Hindu temples, and legislation was contemplated if it was found to be necessary for attaining the end. It is, therefore, the bounden duty of every caste Hindu to fulfil the pledge by throwing open to the Harijans temples, wells and other institutions precisely on the same terms as they are open to caste Hindus.

We are the cause of the degradation to which the Harijans are reduced. We must spend money if the wrong is to be redressed. He who will give to the cause will gain. We may not be satisfied, therefore, with giving out of superfluous cash, we have to give even if we have to stint ourselves. Some of us will have to give our all for Harijan service.

It gladdens me to find both Congressmen and non-Congressmen working together in this movement. Since questions are being asked as to how far Congressmen can join this movement, I would like to reiterate what I have said before. The Congress adopted removal of untouchability as an integral part of its programme in 1920. It is, therefore, the duty of every Hindu Congressmen to fight untouchability and help Harijans in every way open to him. But, if the movement were confined to Congressmen alone, it could not make the headway we all desire. Every savarna Hindu has to do his bit in the movement. But whilst every Congress member is expected to fight the evil, he or she is not expected officially to join the Harijan Seva Sangh. If they are active civil resisters, they ought not to hold office in these organizations. And no Congressmen who believes in and wants do offer civil resistance need in any way feel constrained to suspend or give it up altogether. The case is wholly different with those who feel the call to give up civil resistance for the sake of Harijan service or

¹ The following, except the last paragraph, is from Harijan, 1-12-1933.
who have lost faith in the former.

In this movement of self-purification as in satyagraha there is no room for camouflage.

Harijans have complained that some self-seekers have crept into the movement. In a purely religious movement there is no room for such people. Only those can or should take office who have the spirit of service in them.

Some of the ladies of this place have offered me ornaments and the little children have given me a little silver casket which I wish to put for auction. I shall accept money from you all, be it even a cowrie but it should be given with a pure heart. I assure you that it will make you happy and will be helpful to the Harijans.

Hitavada, 23-11-1933, and Harijan, 1-12-1933

198. LETTER TO KIKABHAI L. WAGHELA

[Before November 17, 1933]

The schools I open are not meant solely for Harijans and I certainly do not open schools which are not open to Harijans. What you state about enquiries into the condition of Harijans employed by municipalites will not be overlooked by me.

The Hindu, 18-11-1933

199. INTERVIEW TO ASSOCIATED PRESS

AKOLA,

[On or before November 17, 1933]

Gandhiji interviewed by the Associated Press, regarding a private report from America that he was going to New York in the spring season, denied having received any invitation to this effect.

He added that he had only recently declared to a Press correspondent his utter inability to go to America or elsewhere, stating that he would not depart from his vow of devoting his energy solely to the Harijan cause up to the end of next July.

The Bombay Chronicle, 18-11-1933

1 The addressee, a Harijan leader, had requested Gandhiji not to open separate schools for Harijan children.

2 This appeared under the date-line “Ahmedabad November 17”.

3 The report appeared under the date-line “Akola, November 17”.
200. PICE PER DAY

Sjt. Harakhchand, writing on 26th October, says:

Here the reader should stretch his imagination and ask himself what it must mean when people gladly walk miles to secure doles giving them less than one pice worth of rice per day and then search his heart as to whether he can honestly plead hard times when he is called upon to give a donation towards partially feeding the hungry skeletons of Orissa. He must not expect a collector to go to him before he will part with his rupee or whatever sum he can give. He should send his money order without delay. Or he will, to save commission, combine with his neighbours so as to send the maximum amount covered by the minimum commission.

Harijan, 17-11-1933

201. ADMIRABLE

The arrangements made by Dr. Khare and his Harijan Committee for the programme last week were admirable. It could not have been got through even as it was, had not a very large number of willing and able companions helped Dr. Khare who never spared himself or them during those trying and strenuous days, although he has chronic heart trouble. I understand that the heavy expenditure involved in having lofty electric lights and the solid platform at the huge mass meeting was met from voluntary contributions and was in no way a tax upon the purses presented. My host’s house was for the time being turned into a dharmashala and Sjts. Tikekar Brothers spared no pains or expenses in making happy and comfortable our large company and others who had come for numerous functions. All Congressmen and non-Congressmen seemed to me to have acted in perfect co-operation for making the visit to Nagpur and the surrounding places the success it undoubtedly was. I tender my

1 The letter is not reproduced here. The correspondent, describing the magnitude of the relief work in Orissa, had stressed the urgent need of funds. Vide also “A pice Per Head” congratulations to Dr. Khare and his colleagues for the efforts they unstintingly put forth on the occasion. The great cause of purification deserved all the pains and vigilance given to it.

_Harijan_, 17-11-1933

202. THE UTILIZATION OF DONATIONS

Workers desire further elucidation than I have already given in these columns as to the mode of using the donations that are being received during the Harijan tour. I have conferred with Thakkar Bapa on the point and I can announce definitely that not less than 75 per cent will be used for Harijan service in the places where they are received, provided that a satisfactory budget is presented and the Central Board approves of it. Indeed, even the full amount will be surrendered wherever it is found necessary to do so. The only thing, therefore, to do is for workers in each centre to prepare businesslike schemes and produce honest and industrious persons for the due execution of the schemes, and the money will be forthwith coming as soon as needed. There is no desire to lock up the donations or to deflect them without cause from the places where they are collected. It is intended to keep a certain portion for the Central Board, but there, too, not for overhead charges, but for constructive work directly handled by it.

_Harijan_, 17-11-1933

203. SPEECH AT ANJUMAN MUFID-UL-ISLAM, KHAMGAON

_November 17, 1933_

When I heard that your Anjuman had invited me, I was very glad. I am very thankful to you for your kind address and for the purse you presented to me for Harijan work. I was very glad to read the contents of your address. You very rightly state that so long as untouchability remains there is no hope for Hinduism. I have been with the Mussalmans all my life. The great virtue which I find in Islam is that it teaches equality and brotherhood of man, be he king or slave. Most of you must be _Hafiz_ and must have read the Koran. I have also tried to study and learn all the best in it.

What you have said about Hindu-Muslim unity has appealed to me most. I find that there are too many misunderstandings. Still,
Hindus and Muslims cannot remain apart like this. After all how long will this go on? I have found, however, that at present I have failed to bring unity but I surely see success in this failure. It should also be remembered that unity does not mean joining powers to crush someone else. If this is our idea of unity, we had better remain as we are. At present I am only concentrating on Harijan work and have left this question for a time.

I can quite understand your anxiety to retain your culture. You do not seem to believe in common educational institutions which, in your opinion, are calculated to lead you astray from your religious and cultural wealth. I look on this question of sectarian education differently. Common schools or communal schools do not matter with me. What is the good of the common schools when prejudices create differences of heart? What harm is there in communal schools when there is purity of heart for all? So you will see that communal schools or common schools are of little importance. Purity of heart, trust in each other and love for others are things more important than the question of sectarian education.

I really did not expect a purse from you. More than this, I need your blessings to give me strength to fight untouchability. I need your help to rid India of a great curse. It is our common cause, not for India alone but for the whole world. It is the service of humanity. I am very thankful to you for your kind address and the purse presented to me.

The Hindustan Times, 25-11-1933

204. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, KHAMGAON
November 17, 1933

I am grateful to you for the address you have presented and also for the purse and donations. I thank the association of the Muslims for their purse. During my visit to the Chokhamela' Harijan Boarding, the brothers gave me cash and the sisters rings. I am thankful for these gifts as well. I appreciate the good work you have done in Khamgaon and its neighbourhood for removing untouchability.

1 A Harijan saint of Maharashtra
This evening, Thakkar Bapa has thrown open Udasiji’s Siva temple to the Harijans in Lasoor. He has performed this sacred task for the sake of our Harijan brethren. I am told no Harijan was present on the occasion. The Harijans are still suspicious because of the treatment we have meted out to them. It is the duty of the Hindus, or of those who consider themselves caste Hindus, to do justice to them, and atone for the atrocities they have heaped on the Harijans in the past, and give up the ignorant belief prevalent today that the temples are meant for caste Hindus alone. Udasiji has done his duty by this act. Whether the Harijans come or not, we should discharge our duty towards them with love and the result is bound to be good. When the Harijans are convinced that our invitation is prompted by love, they will come by themselves.

Here I wish to say one thing, that the law applicable to Hindus applies to Harijans as well. Rules of public conduct and should be applicable to all alike. Harijans should follow the rules for visiting public institutions. They should keep their bodies clothes clean and follow the rule of personal cleanliness. Harijans who eat carrion have no right to enter temples. Having travelled widely, and after studying history, I have found that those who eat carrion are despised everywhere. There is no doubt that those who are godfearing and in whom wisdom and purity have dawned can give it up. Likewise, I request them to give up drinking. I know that it can be argued that there are many among caste Hindus who take alcohol; but it is not right to follow them in their vices. He who takes alcohol loses his humanity. He even forgets the difference between mother, sister, daughter and wife. Although by birth I am a caste Hindu, by choice I am a Harijan. Therefore, from this point of view, considering myself a Harijan, I implore them to give up this vice. I know that alcohol is used even in their rituals. This is what some pseudo-pundits have taught them and they have believed it. Therefore I beg of you to give up this vice which makes beast of man. In fact, it is this thing which is untouchable. In the same way, Mahars, Chamars, Bhangis and others should do away with the distinctions amongst themselves. This is the Harijans’ share of duty in this work of self-purification.

Now, I wish to say something to the caste Hindus. I also want to say what I conclude from this vast congregation that has gathered here.

1 Vishnudas Udasi
to hear my speech. Ever since I returned to India, I do exactly as my conscience dictates. Let no one imagine that I do one thing but have something else in my mind. I claim to believe in God, whether you call him Khuda, Allah, or Ishwar. I stand in awe before Him. He is witness to all my work. I have also taken a vow with Him as my witness that I shall do Harijan service in a truly religious spirit. there are many things I can do, but if I did them it would be my downfall. Out of the prison I wish to do only one thing; otherwise my life is false. I consider myself a layman, but layman or learned, it is the duty of everyone of follow his dharma. I consider this work a religious duty. Whatever I have learnt from my parents and teachers and from my own experience, all this I would like to present before you. I have had the reward of whatever service I have rendered before. God alone can reward my service. At the moment, I wish to work only for the removal of untouchability. If you like my views you can come and if you do not like them you can avoid me. During these days, I have felt your affection and therefore I shall bear it even if you abuse me today and, if you beat me I shall bear that also and shall pray to God to forgive you. But if you do not agree with my views, courtesy demands that you should avoid coming here. I however see that you come here, give money and jewellery gladly; I therefore take it that you are with me. Are you paying my fees for the work I have already done ? I do not require fees. God gives me my reward. But when you come here in such large numbers and help me with money, etc., I conclude that you are with me in whatever task I have undertaken now; that is, this has become the sanatan dharma today. I have met a hundred and fifty thousand people today. Are they all reformers ? No. They are sanatanists and they are doing this work today. If today you do not voluntarily take part in the removal of untouchability, tomorrow you will have to do it against your will. When popular rule is established, do you think the Harijans can be prevented from entering schools or excluded from other rights ? There was a time when people would not travel along with them in trains; why do they do it now ? In the same way, I ask the mill-owners whether they do not touch the untouchables ? They do, but only for pecuniary gain. There is no virtue in this. I say what you are obliged to do for pecuniary gain, could you not do the same out of your own free will and because it is religious?

In the address presented to me on behalf of the Municipality, it is stated that we should give up the move to have the law regarding temple-entry enacted, because many people think that legal interference is undesirable in religious matters. I wish to tell them that the Harijans have as much right to go to the temples for worship as we have. But the draft of the Bill which has been presented has no element of force at all. On the other hand it seeks to remove the element of coercion which exists in the law as it is today. I myself do not like interference by law in religious matters but how do these Bills interfere with religion? If any lawyer can prove this, I shall give it up; but I know for certain that this is not the case. After all, I was myself a legal practitioner once upon a time. Lawyers contend that, today even if the public wish to throw open a temple to the Harijans and the majority of the trustees also agrees to it, the temple cannot be thrown open even if a single trustee raises objection. The law does not allow freedom for independent decision, and so it does amount to coercion. The aim of this Bill is to remove this coercion. Whatever fault there is in the law can only be removed by law; there is no other way. It would have been interference with religion if by law all temples were to be thrown open; but there is no such provision in the Bill. There is obviously no compulsion in this. The temples can be thrown open only when the trustees or the public wish to do so. If they do not, there is no compulsion. At the Bombay Conference the Hindu leaders in the name of Hindu society took a pledge to secure for Harijans the right to have darshan of the idol. The legal obstruction of fulfilling that vow is to be removed with the help of law. That is all that this Bill means. In this there is no interference by law in religion. Now the members of the Municipality may ponder over my words.

When I visited the Harijans, they made several complaints and asked me whether I considered those who were doing Harijan work as true servants of the Harijans. I replied that I did not know about the local workers but all those who join in any movement cannot be said to be good and truthful. From their complaints I learnt that in Malkapur Harijans are not allowed the use of lavatories. If this is true, what a grave injustice it is that those who clean the lavatories cannot use them. Tomorrow if they stop cleaning them what can you do? Caste Hindus are not even so organized as to be able to take up mutual scavenging. No good can result from such behaviour. Similar complaints have been made about a place called Monar. All others can bathe in the water that flows there but Harijans are prohibited from doing so. They can bathe only in the unclean water drained after use by us for bathing. I do not know how far this is true, but if it is true it is a great disgrace. Such water is unfit even for animals. We wash even cattle with clean water. Are these Harijan brethren worse than animals? What is their fault? And even if they have been at fault, is this the treatment which should be meted out to them? This has become our daily conduct. Irreligion we have made our religion. I shall also mention here the sad news from Rajputana that Harijans have to drink from the water stored for cattle. If this is our religion, it is doomed. Where there is so much hatred, so much antipathy, its doom is inevitable. If we say that this has the sanction of the Shastras and call this Hindu religion, I shall say that it is completely at variance with universal experience and it cannot last long. We may deceive ourselves, we may deceive others, too, but we cannot deceive God. In my concept of Hindu religion, as I have learnt it through experience and after deep study, there is no place at all for the present form of untouchability; and therefore I have taken the vow that even at the cost of my life, untouchability must go root and branch. Every single breath of mine all the twenty-four hours seems to say “Remove untouchability”. You can serve Harijans only by becoming their servants. We have to become not the masters of Harijans, but their servants. I did not ask you to sit and dine with them; although as is my wont I accept from anywhere the type of food I allow myself if it is cooked clean by anybody. But I must tell you it was wrong to have sent away the Harijans in this contemptuous manner.

Kabir as well as other saints also have said that God lives with him who is forsaken by the world. Whom the world shuns God accepts. Such instances are to be found in all religions. I remember a story of the days of Hazrat Omer. When one of his commanders sent him 5,000 gold coins he started weeping at the sight. When his wife asked him why he was weeping, he replied, “Till today God was with me; today the world has come to me.” So, you have disowned our Harijan brothers, but God is in truth with them alone. Therefore you must remove the feeling of abhorrence that has crept into your hearts.

I have heard many people say, “As one sows in the previous birth, so one reaps in this birth.” But it is not right to say so; it is adharma. There is pride in this statement. When our parents or wife or children are in trouble, do we say that is the fruit of their doings in a previous birth and neglect them? We then look after them and serve... them. Then why this indifference towards others? I also believe in rebirth but it cannot be interpreted in this manner. This argument we accept only. To ignore others on finding them in trouble and to laugh at them and to tell them to “pay for the sins” of their previous birth is to turn God, whom we call the Ocean of mercy and justice, into a demon. I do not believe in such previous births.
Therefore, I beg you to think deeply over what I have said and, if you are convinced, give up this hatred and contempt and this feeling of high and low. If you are yourself convinced that this is the right thing to do but you are afraid of the public, well, the public is here [with you]. The truth is that the fear is in your own heart. If you give up this fear and hatred, the blot of untouchability will be removed from the Hindu religion and it will be for the good of us all.

Wherever I go, you give me money. Even to give money is to help in the work for Harijans but please do not if you have Rs. 10 throw away a couple of rupees thinking that this is one way among others of spending your money. No, even if you give one pice, give it whole-heartedly, give it with love denying yourself some necessities.
He who gives a pice in this spirit will recover a thousandfold.
Therefore considering it a sacred cause, please help it as much as you can.

[From Hindi]

Harijan Sevak, 8-12-1933
205. TELEGRAM TO SHRIKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

AKOLA,

November 18, 1933

SHRIKRISHNA

KATRA KHUSHAL

DELHI

GOD BE THANKED. BLESSINGS. CHIKHALDA TILL MONDAY.

BAPU

From a photostat : G.N. 2401

206. DISCUSSION WITH SWAMI LALNATH

November 18, 1933

[The Swami] said that he wanted Gandhiji to give up his tour or give up talking about the Bills and that, therefore, he was offering satyagraha and paying Gandhiji in his own coin.

But this is not satyagraha but the negation of it. You want me either to get you arrested by the police or to take the car over your bodies. I would do neither. I would go on foot. Then perhaps you would hold my feet and make me your prisoner.

Yes, we would hold your feet and implore you to stop this tour.

That would surely be violence.

I cannot hide our intention from you. We want to be hurt by the police or by your volunteers. When this happens I know that you would give up the tour.

But I have told you that I shall certainly not summon the police

---

1 Brother of Brijkrishna Chandiwala, who had been seriously ill; vid “Letter to F. Mary Barr”, 21-10-1933 and “Letter to Mathuradas Trikumji”, 15-11-1933 and “Letter to Vallabhbhai Patel”, 4-12-1933, and “Letter to Kasturba Gandhi”, 7-12-1933.

2 Swami Lalnath had at Dhamangaon and Amraoti made abortive attempts to hold up Gandhiji’s car by lying prostrate before it.
and I shall not let the volunteers hurt you.

We must then continue to obstruct your passage.

You are very unreasonable. A satyagrahi must not be unreasonable. You want to provoke the public to violence. A satyagrahi never tempts anyone to do wrong. And how can you resort to such unbecoming behaviour, especially in religious matters? No earthly power can force me to act contrary to my convictions.

Then you should show us the better way.

I can certainly do that. You should go back to Benares and ask the Lord of the Universe to wean me from my error. You should fast as I did.

That we have not the ability to do.

Then I am very sorry. I do not like this unseemly business. You should go to your advisers and tell them to persuade me by argument or prayer. If they cannot do so, they should tolerate what I am doing, even as I tolerate their opposition. You can see that I am simply putting the case against the evil before the thousands who come to listen to me.¹

_Harijan_, 1–12–1933

¹ _Vide_ also the following item.
Before I come to our main subject today it is necessary to say something about the incident which took place while I was on my way here. Some persons who have come from Kashi are accompanying me. Amongst them is a Swami. They have a right to go with me in this way. My tour is continuing at such a rapid pace that they cannot follow me everywhere, they come where they can and lie down on the road in front of the car in which I travel. Volunteers remove them and the car continues its journey. The gentlemen do not abuse anyone; they do not indulge in violence. And, I trust, the volunteers do not beat them either. Today, too, they came to the gate. This pained me. I have always been pained at the absence of civility in those who come in the name of sanatan dharma. I did not like to continue my journey after having them removed. Hence, I sent for the Swami who is their leader and tried to reason with him. It is because of this that I am late. I told him that it was not proper for those who claimed to safeguard religion to act in this manner. As the author of the modern technique of satyagraha I told him that their action did not amount to satyagraha, that this kind of action would tire them. If they caught hold of me, beat me up or abused me, I would not answer with obscene language, but would tolerate all that with a feeling of love. I would continue on foot, if they obstructed my car from going further. The Swami then replied that in that case they would cling to my feet and that I would have to walk over them. I replied that I would not do so; nor would I seek the assistance of the police. That would not do me credit. I would seek their help if I was afraid, but I have no fear whatever. In my life, I have been beaten up, but I never asked for police protection. Would I then stoop to do so in the evening of my life while working for dharma? Hence, I requested them to give me the way. I told them that they ought to have realized that in sanatan dharma, in Hinduism, there is freedom to express all kinds of opinions. Finally, the Swami went out and returned after consulting his colleagues and said that if, today, I took another route they would not obstruct me again, and their prestige too would be saved. I agreed to it and took another route.

1 Vide the preceding item.
The persons accompanying the Swami are young men full of enthusiasm. Someone has put the false notion into their heads that I am out to destroy sanatan dharma. They believe that what I say is contrary to the Shastras. They have a right to believe this. If I am mistaken, they should strive hard to convince me. That is the way of Hinduism, and it is a civilized way. But I am not happy because sanatan dharma is degraded by their uncivilized conduct. Hence I would humbly like to say to those who were opposing me in the name of sanatan dharma that they would be able to put a stop to my activities by appealing to my reason, by touching my heart and not through coercion or uncivilized conduct. I am one bound by a pledge. It is my dharma to abide by the pledge I have taken in the evening of my life. To you who come here to listen to me I pour out my heart. It is in your hands whether or not to act in accordance with what I say. God will know whether you put it into action or not; I shall not be here to find it out.

This morning, some persons who were protesting stood in my way with black flags. My dharma is not to be annoyed with them but to have a feeling of love towards them. They may greet me with black flags if they believe that what I am doing is improper. A servant of Harijans should be indifferent to praise or blame. This rule applies not only to me but to people all over the world who are engaged in public life. Anyone who does not follow it is sure to feel miserable. Why should I feel miserable at this? What difference does it make to me whether they wave black flags at me or white? My work alone will bring me praise or blame.

I learn that today the sanatanists burned my effigy. What does it matter to me even if crores of my effigies are burnt? It makes me unhappy because it involves some waste of money. But I stand to lose nothing on that account. If the people do not approve of what I say, if they disregard it, I can exert no pressure upon them. I can hardly force them to listen to me against their will. That is not my way of action; mine is a straight forward path. Even if the Government did not let them burn it,¹ those who wished to do so have as good as accomplished it. If I look at a woman with a lustful eye, I have as much as sinned against her. God is hardly going to forgive me because I could not accomplish my evil desire! He will argue that it was He who prevented the sinful act; I on my part had already committed it. Likewise, does it matter if the gentlemen could not actually burn the effigy? So far as they are concerned, they have as good as burnt it. Anyway it is all right if they burned it. Despite this, for the sake of dharma, I do wish they had not done so.

¹ Someone in the gathering said that the magistrate had not allowed the burning of the effigy.

The sanatanists have brought out a leaflet alleging they were beaten up by the volunteers. If it is true, it was wrong on the part of the latter to have done so. I will not tolerate it. I do not approve of anyone wishing to protect me indulging in abusive language, rudeness or physical violence. Biyaniji\(^1\) says the volunteers did nothing of the kind. I wish only to warn the volunteers. Perhaps my sanatanist brothers are irked by the large audiences at my meetings. Perhaps they may try to prevent the people from attending. They have every right to do so. Let no one obstruct the sanatanists, but we should try to persuade them politely. If they are not convinced, let them do as they wish. No one should inform the police. Let no one do anything to protect me. God has saved me in similar circumstances a number of times. So long as God wishes to take work from me He will keep my body healthy and safe. When my life-span has ended, no power on earth can keep me alive.

Entertain no doubt that the current movement is a test for Hindu society. The whole world is watching whether Hinduism rids itself of the evil of untouchability. If untouchability is wiped out of the hearts of Hindus, a feeling of brotherhood would come to be established between Hindus, Muslims, Christians and Jews. Untouchability has spread its innumerable tentacles far and wide. It has spread even to those whom we regard as belonging to other faiths. I do not regard this as dharma. Hatred or contempt has no place in Hinduism. Many shastris have informed me that there is no sign in the law books of untouchability as practised today. However, even if it is there, we shall have to reject it; otherwise we shall have to give up the claim that Hinduism is basically a non-violent and tolerant faith. This movement of ours is being carried on before the eyes of the world, not in seclusion. It is your duty as well as mine to do whatever we do, in a civilized, truthful, peaceful and courteous manner. I request the sanatanists, too, to carry out their task in a similar manner. I find no civility in the attempt to stop me car. They had better give up black flags and the burning of effigies. Nowadays, black flags are used as a mark of protest. When the satyagraha movement was on, black flags were sometimes used to express protest, but I had not approved of it. It is not a civilized practice. It bears no mark of satyagraha. A satyagrahi’s dharma is to win over through friendship the heart of anyone who has become an enemy and bring about a change of heart in him. The rules of satyagraha do not vary when applied to dealings between one Hindu and another, between Hindus and Muslims or, between Indians and the British. The rules of satyagraha are equally applicable to all. There can be no room in it for breach of the peace, lack of civility, violence or hatred. Hinduism would come out triumphant if both the sanatanists and reformist Hindus acted in accordance with it, regardless of whether untouchability remains or not. Hinduism cannot survive if untouchability continues. However, it would be welcome if both the parties kept to the path of truth. This is a tremendous movement in which twenty-two crores of Hindus are being tested. It is also a test for Harijans. It is the caste Hindus who have sinned, hence, it is they who have to atone for it. Since Harijans are also Hindus, I say that it is a test for them too.

\(^1\) Brijlal Biyani

It is worth knowing what these ten or twelve people who have come from Kashi want. They say that I am free to continue the work of abolishing untouchability, I may carry on the work of temple–entry, but that I should not plead with the people in favour of the Bills on these two subjects which are before the Central Legislature, that I should not endeavour to get them passed. Others too claim that legislation will mean interference with religion. For the last two or three days I have been hearing such echoes. I have answered them to the best of my ability. We are bound by a pledge. Last year in September, representatives of the Hindus took a pledge under the chairmanship of Malaviyaji Maharaj in Bombay. I had drafted the original form of the pledge. The resolution which was passed was almost identical with the one proposed by me. I had given my word to Dr. Ambedkar and to Rao Bahadur Rajah that I was offering my life as hostage to see it that the Hindu society abides by the pledge. Hence it is my duty to persuade caste Hindus to do so. Both temple-entry and enabling legislation are part of the pledge. The Temple–entry Bill is harmless. Moreover, they are hardly likely to be passed because I want it. If it were so, they would have been passed long ago. One of the Bills has been published for [eliciting] public opinion. It is your dharma as well as mine to work for its passage. It puts an end to the legal obstacle. Those temples which, under certain circumstances, could not, till this day, open their doors to Harijans will be permitted to do so. Today, it seems, although many people may be in favour of throwing open the temple doors, a single person can prevent it. This Bill seeks to remove the obstacle. There is no coercion. Those who believe that the image loses its sanctity by Harijans entering the temple may stop going there. But the majority are of the opinion that God does not come to dwell in the image until the Harijans are admitted. What should those who believe this do? If they did not have the legal obstruction removed, their pledge would be broken. The Bill harms no one. It has not the remotest suggestion of coercion.

The second Bill does not affect religious untouchability. It only says that untouchability has no place in law, in law–courts. On the one hand, we want the law not to interfere with religion and, on the other, we seek to perpetuate untouchability through the civil code. How could it be? Lawyers point out that today untouchability is sanctioned by law. It will be eradicated by having these two Bills passed; for that caste Hindus will have to undergo a change of heart. The Bills seek to protect those who disregard untouchability as well as the untouchables who enjoy no such protection today.

If we did not willingly abolish untouchability today, we shall have to give it up under compulsion in the future. We did not willingly let Harijans occupy the railway compartments; today they sit there in spite of us. Overwhelmed by selfish motives, we employ them in the mills. There is no merit in doing an act grudgingly.

At present, we are perched on their shoulders, we ought to get off. I ask you to contribute money in order to bring them justice. You and I would not want to live in the homes where Harijans live. They do not observe rules of sanitation, as they do not have the necessary facilities. They are illiterate. The task of removing their hardships cannot be accomplished without funds, hence I ask you for funds. Please do not contribute grudgingly. This is not like throwing away money on idle entertainment. This is an act of sacrifice, of dedication. If you contribute in the spirit of sacrifice, I shall be convinced that you have made a significant contribution. Even a cowrie given in a charitable spirit will suffice, whereas a rupee parted with in a niggardly spirit has no value. The service of Harijans is after all the service of God. But God gets His work done through man. He gets His work done by one who feels His presence and fears Him. Your money by itself is not going to be enough for Harijans. Your real contribution is your sympathy for this cause. In the morning, Shrimati Durgatai placed her gold bangles, silver mug and tumbler before me and said that she had preserved with care these things which were dear to her; and that today she was giving them away for the service of Harijans. I ask all men and women to make such a sacrifice.

[From Gujarati]

_Harijanbandhu, 3–12–1933_

208. LETTER TO GORDHANBHAI PATEL

[November 19, 1933]

BHAI GORDHANBHAI,

Manibehn writes to me saying that you were grieved at my absence in Bombay at the time of the funeral. In a way I am happy about it. Your grief suggests that you regard me as a member of the family. You have a right to regard me as such. But if you regard me as one of the family you should ask me when you fail to understand my action. My differences with Vithalbhai had absolutely nothing to do with my not going there. My present circumstances were the sole reason behind my not going over. I am out of jail solely for Harijan work. The programme had already been fixed. I would not be willing to submit myself to such Government restrictions as do not deserve to be endured. Besides, I could not see myself likely to be useful in any other way. Again, my view of death as also my attitude towards funeral rites were likely to render me of no use whatever. Therefore, looking at it from any point of view, my attendance was not necessary, nay, it would have been improper. Why, I would not have permitted part of what happened. For me it should suffice to let you know that my differences with Vithalbhai were not in the least instrumental [in my decision]. You may not be aware that on receiving news of his illness I had written to him to which he had promptly sent a long and sweet reply. When his illness had aggravated, I had also wired to him, to which again he had replied. He also asked you to keep me informed about his health. Mistaking your wire to have been from Gordhanbhai, the Secretary of the Mill–owners’ Association, I sent a letter of thanks to the latter. He wrote to me that the wire was not from him. I hope this explanation would pacify you. If not, please do ask me again.

[From Gujarati]

_Bapuna Patro-4 : Manibehn Patelne, pp. 156-7_

---

1 Vide “Letter to Dahyabhai Patel”, 19-11-1933
209. LETTER TO MANIBEHN PATEL

(CHIKHALDA),
November 19, 1933

CHI. MANI,

You are doing well to give expression to all that you and other relatives feel. I could not bear either Dahyabhai or Gordhanbhai misunderstanding me. If you are in Bombay, I think you will read my letter1 to Gordhanbhai. If you wish to say anything after reading it, you may do so.

You must have got my letter. I see no need for me to write to the Press. I don’t think it always necessary to reply every time I find newspapers misunderstand my actions or deliberately misrepresent them. If, however, you two, brother and sister, so desire, I will certainly do it. My position is quite clear. There is considerable truth in what Dahyabhai says. We can certainly point out blemishes in [C.R.] Das and others. Is there anybody who is blameless? But my not going there has nothing to do with Vithalbhai’s shortcomings. He certainly deserved the same honour that the other leaders got. His self-sacrifice, determination, ability and his loyalty to the Congress were in no way inferior to those of the others.

Your own generosity fills me with admiration. But mind you, it is not peculiar to you. I have seen such generosity in countless women. They are always ready to forget the wrongs done to them. It is this virtue which is their special honour. But men have taken undue advantage of it. But that is a different story. May I take credit for your behaving so admirably in my eyes just now?

Write to Wardha.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-4: Manibehn Patelne, pp. 115-6

1 Vide the preceding item.
210. LETTER TO DAHYABHAI PATEL

November 19, 1933

CHI. DAHYABHAI,

You must have received my earlier letter. Enclosed is a letter to Gordhanbhai. Give it to him after reading it. Do not forget that it is your duty to strive with me if you are not satisfied [with my explanation]. Pass on their letters to Ba and Mani.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-4: Manibehn Patelne, p. 156

211. LETTER TO JAYAPRAKASH NARAYAN

CHIKALDA, November 19, 1933

CHI. JAYAPRAKASH,

I have your letter. On reading it I have come to the conclusion that you should now withdraw yourself from the struggle. This struggle will go on for many years. After you have paid all your debts and the burden of earning a livelihood becomes somewhat lighter you can join the struggle. Many people who would have wanted to take part in the struggle have, for similar reasons, withdrawn themselves from the scene. Those who plunge into the fight have to give up attachment to the family. Our family system is in need of much reform. But this is a separate question. You might consult Jawaharlal. I have restrained many people like you. If you feel Prabhavati also should be restrained you may do so. If you consider it necessary you may see me about this. Do not decide in haste.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Hindi original: Jayaprakash Narayan Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

1 Vide “Letter to Dahyabhai Patel”, 14-11-1933
212. LETTER TO KISAN GHUMATKAR

Unrevised

AS AT WARDHA,

November 20, 1933

MY DEAR KISAN,

Have mercy on a poor old man. Why do you doubt me when I say I never was angry with you? Did you give me any cause for anger? Even now I do not know anything against you that would make me angry. It is but natural for young people not to understand old people. How should you understand what it is to be without teeth or muscle, or know at 20 what you would yourself feel when you are four times twenty? Old men are not too deep for young people to understand. They may be imbecile. Whatever your own experience in other cases, it is inapplicable in my case.

How nice it would have been if you would have joined me at Wardha. I would love to have you even now. But can you stand the very heavy strain of the tour? Are you strong enough in body and mind to be able to go through the eternal rush? What does Dhurandhar say?

I do receive news about Prema through the visitors who visit her companions. But you should continue to tell me all you come to know about her.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat : G.N. 9069. Also C.W. 9688

213. LETTER TO MANEKLAL KOTHARI

November 20, 1933

CHI. MANEKLAL,

I liked your long letter. The simpler you grow the better. Vocational training will preserve the children’s health, physical as well as mental.

Your comparison between the Indian States and the British

1 The addressee’s health had suffered after imprisonment in Thana jail.
[Government] is correct up to a point. But the reason behind this difference is that the States on their part are enslaved. The master’s shortcomings are always found doubled in the case of his slaves. Hence what you experienced is due to the influence of the British Government. This does not mean that the States were any better before. But formerly their faults used to be removed jointly by the ruler and his subjects. Today such a phenomenon is well nigh impossible, because there is rot at the root.

The introduction of machines will certainly bring about an improvement in the economic condition of a few. Machines would not provide employment to thirty crores of people. They ought to get some additional work besides agriculture. And it cannot be anything but spinning. It would therefore be better if you start using khadi in your house. It is the experience of many that one can afford khadi if one restrains one’s fondness for clothes. If all of you spin for some time daily and have the yarn woven, you will find khadi quite inexpensive. Also, Purushottam, Jamnadas, etc., can help you in this regard.

Ramdas is at Wardha. Keshu, Krishno are also there. Manu has gone to Rajkot because Kusum is ill. May be you know it. Ba has gone to Ahmedabad.

My health continues to be good. If you do not read the Harijanbandhu, start reading it now.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Write to me at Wardha.

From a microfilm of the Gujarati : M.M.U./XXIII

214. LETTER TO RADHABEHN M. KOTHARI

November 20, 1933

CHI. RADHA,

I have written a long letter1 to Maneklal, so I will not write a long one to you. It will satisfy me if you serve as much as you can.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Gujarati : M.M.U./XXIII

1 Vide the preceding item.
215. LETTER TO KOTWAL

November 20, 1933

BHAI KOTWAL,

The work which has come to us unsought is swadharma. Anybody who is wedded to an institution should not, as a general rule, join the present battle. One’s dharma cannot be pointed out to one by somebody else. He who has seen it adheres to it despite the opposition of the whole world.

We should not sit in judgment over anybody. Every case should ultimately be judged on its own merits. It is therefore dangerous to be guided by solutions of hypothetical cases.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 3604

216. LETTER TO VAMANRAO

November 20, 1933

BHAI VAMANRAO,

I have been able to take up your letter only today. What little I have read about Shivaji was as a student at school. It is shameful but true. Afterwards I learnt about him more from the elders. But when I realized that British historians, particularly those belonging to the official community, could not see things from our point of view even if they wanted to, I adopted a yardstick: Without reading up any other material I concluded that just the opposite of whatever I had read must be true and I started believing that Shivaji was really a great king, brave and patriotic. These qualities were more than enough to arouse my feeling of reverence for him.

To expect more from me at this time is to be like a cruel milkman who extracts the last drop of milk from the cow till she starts bleeding.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: S. N. 32846
217. LETTER TO VIDYA A. HINGORANI

November 20, 1933

CHI. VIDYA,

Why don’t you write? What sentence did Anand get? Are your studies progressing well? And your cooking? Don’t be disheartened. Know that there is virtue in eating what one has cooked with one’s own hands. Have you secured a sewing machine? Is the [sewing] class going on? How is Mahadev?

Blessings from

BAPU

[P.S]

Ask Kanta as also the other girls to write.

From a microfilm of the Hindi: Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

218. LETTER TO DHIRU C. JOSHI

November 21, 1933

CHI. DHIRU,

I hope your anger with Rama has now left you.¹ Take care of your health. Continue to write to me. Whether you are writing to Rama or to me or to somebody else, you must see to it that your handwriting is good. Ask Balabhadra to write to me.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5316

¹ Vide “Letter to Dhiru C. Joshi”, 7-11-1933
219. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, MORSI

November 21, 1933

These differences are verily offshoots of the curse of untouchability, for they proceed from a sense of superiority and inferiority. The fourfold division of varna is based on duty and not on right. Dharma does not confer rights but lays down obligations. Where all perform the duties that have fallen to their lot, no one is higher than the others. Once we are able to purge ourselves of untouchability, and with it the spirit of high and low, we shall realize the unity underlying all races and religions. In spite of the differences of races and religions, we shall learn to tolerate and respect one another and consider all human beings as children of one God and, therefore, brothers and sisters of one another. God is the Creator of all life; all his creatures are, therefore, equal in His eyes. Humanity is a gigantic tree having innumerable branches and leaves, and the same life throbs through them all. The realization of unity in diversity is implied in the removal of untouchability.

Harijan, 1–12–1933

220. LETTER TO D. B. KALELKAR

IN THE TRAIN,
November 22, 1933

CHI. KAKA,

You must have received the reply which I sent through Kishorelal. It was not right for you to have tried to climb the hill. You cannot get strength so soon. Be careful for some time yet about food and going out.

I have not been able to reply to . . . ’s son. Letters are accumulating every day. The programme of the tour has been so fixed that I get time to write letters only on the weekly silence day and between 3 and 4 a.m. every day. I don’t see any possibility of being able to help. . . ‘s son just now. Whom can we appeal to for money ? . . . ‘s difficulty also has not been solved. must, therefore, rely on his own efforts at present. If I can rest peacefully any time in future, I may be able to do something for persons like him. But I am not likely to enjoy such peace in my lifetime. If you think you must write to him yourself, you may do so. I don’t know when my teeth will be examined. I have been told that the condition of the teeth may be responsible for the pain in the elbow. It is very unlikely to be so, for there is no other trouble. The blood–pressure has disappeared completely, and the weight is going up. I have already reached 109.

1 The reference is to the bitterness between the local Brahmins and non-Brahmins.

2 The name has been omitted.

I also had a letter from Soman’.

* * *

Chandrashankar is giving perfect satisfaction by his work. He seems to have learnt very well the art of looking after physical health. He is successfully copying Mahadev. I didn’t know that he could write English so well. He has considerably lightened my burden. He is always engrossed in work.

I am sure you read the Harijan regularly for accounts of the tour.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original : C. W. 9480. Courtesy : D. B. Kalelkar

221. LETTER TO JIVANJI D. DESAI

IN THE TRAIN,
November 22, 1933

BHAI JIVANJI,

The Preface is not out of my mind. I understand what you say regarding Ratilal. It is not possible to give him any advice. What is destined will happen. If Baburao says anything, let me know. If the previous power [of attorney] cannot be revoked, this one may not be of any use.

Give me a report about S. in every letter. See him sometimes.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G. N. 9932. Also C.W. 6907. Courtesy : Jivanji D. Desai

1 The names have been omitted.
2 Ibid
3 Ramachandra Soman
4 Some lines have been omitted.
222. LETTER TO PRABHASHANKAR PATTANI

IN THE TRAIN,
November 22, 1933

SUJNA BHAISHRI,

I got your loving letter. I read the verse. Knowing that God is behind all, good and evil, I remain unaffected. If He was behind good only, I would certainly have felt uneasy. He alone is good. If I could persuade you to join me in this tour, your health would automatically improve. But I know that is impossible. I hope you glance through the issues of Harijan.

Why doesn’t Ramabehn¹ remember me?

MOHANDAS

223. LETTER TO DR. JIVARAJ MEHTA

ON TRAIN,
November 22, 1933

DEAR JIVARAJ,

I have your letter. I had got your wire too. Let me know the results of the investigations and when you are restored write and tell me your conclusions. As for myself, I am doing splendidly.

Vandemataram from

MOHANDAS

[PS.] You may treat Wardha as my address.

DR. JIVARAJ MEHTA
ALEXANDER ROAD
GAMDEVI, BOMBAY

From the Gujarati original: Jivaraj Mehta Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

¹ Addressee’s wife
224. MESSAGE TO THE PEOPLE OF BERAR

November 22, 1933

In his message Mahatmaji says that the people of Berar gave an unlimited response to his call for Harijan service. The organization was most efficient and looked to all the comforts in the tour which has been a pleasant one.

The attendance at public meetings held throughout the tour was the largest ever seen and it gives me cause to hope that untouchability is fast dying.

Hitavada, 26–11–1933

225. LETTER TO N. S. HARDIKAR

AS AT WARDHA,
November 23, 1933

DEAR DR. HARDIKAR,

You promised “more again” in your letter, but the promise has not materialized. Nevertheless, friends have been keeping me informed of your progress, though for the last eight days I have had no news of you. I wonder if you are still in hospital. Wherever you are, I hope you have made steady progress.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

DR. N. S. HARDIKAR
K.E.M. HOSPITAL
PAREL, BOMBAY

From the original: N. S. Hardikar Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

1 Given in an interview to The Times of India
MY DEAR MAHADEV,

On getting up at 3 a.m. I found your letter to Mira lying on the little stool which is being carried from place to place as a footboard for me to stretch my legs on. It took me nearly 40 minutes to go through it and yet without reading your comments on the translation of the verses specified. It would take me at least twelve hours to read up my translation of the original and think out what I should say. It will take at least another three hours to reduce them to writing. That time I cannot give just now. Then there is the question—shall I help you much? I fear, not. For what you say is quite true. I ought not to have yielded to Swami’s demand for my own translation except perhaps for private circulation among friends. I realized my unfitness for the task as I was proceeding but I continued. The defects you have noticed are there. How can I give what I have not—scholarship? Want of good knowledge of Sanskrit was a great drawback. The remedy is clear. You should go on with your translation taking such help as my translations can give to bring out my thought but not always following my translation. Give that rendering which is acceptable to you. Ignore the notes where they are useless. Give your own where they are necessary. Having done that, take up the Gujarati, correct the translation where it is defective and polish the language where it needs polishing. Re-write and add notes where necessary. That will complete your task. Then when the whole result comes into my hands, I shall work on it and make such changes as I may deem fit in order to bring out my meaning. This I can do easily. We must then bring out a revised version of the Gujarati and publish your translation in English. So doing, you do not need to stop your work for want of my detailed reply to your comments. I shall circulate your comments among friends and get their opinion and let you have it all.

Your other messages will be attended to.

1 The addressee was translating Anasaktiyoga into English. Vide footnote 3.
2 The English translation was published in 1946 under the title The Gospel of Selfless Action or The Gita According to Gandhi.
I am glad you are going through the trials of various sorts. Only do not wash yourself out with mere literary work. You should take plenty of exercise and keep the body in a fit condition. You must not damage your eyes on any account whatsoever.

No more today.
Love from all.

BAPU

From a copy: S.N. 26906

227. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

RAIPUR,
November 23, 1933

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I got your letter. You have given two addresses. In your previous letter you gave the Siwan address and in this one you have given the Sitabadiara address. I am writing this letter at the latter address.

I have already written to you about Jayaprakash. I addressed that letter at Siwan. The present fight is not for people who have debts to pay and wish to discharge their responsibilities towards their brothers and sisters. This fight requires one to sacrifice one’s all. How do a poor man’s brothers and sisters get education? We should adopt such a way that our brothers and sisters grow up in poverty and get educated and start earning as soon as possible. That leaves the problem of Father. The fifty rupees which he gets should suffice. Both of you should renounce your share in his property. Jayaprakash can remain in the present fight only if he is thus prepared to embrace poverty. This is a soldier’s dharma. The other dharma is towards one’s family. It also is worth following if one wishes to do so. When it becomes an absolute dharma, it is in conflict with the good of society as a whole. That is what we find among us today. It is the aim of satyagraha to remedy this situation. But anybody who does not understand satyagraha and still follows it fails in both dharmas for he will remain discontented. If you do not understand anything in this, you may ask me to explain again. But I don’t think you will find any difficulty in understanding it.

I have already sent you the programme of my tour, and do not repeat it here. There is nothing now which you should specially come here to discuss with me. But I shall be in Jabalpur on Tuesday. Then I go to Delhi.

My weight is 109 and the blood-pressure 155–100. The diet remains the same.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 3435

228. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

RAIPUR,
November 23, 1933

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

You really seem to have stopped writing to me. It was necessary for Jamnalalji to resign even for his own peace of mind. The resignation was desirable from the point of view of its effect on others, too. It has cleansed the atmosphere completely. A load is off Jamnalalji’s mind and he feels much stronger now. I don’t wish to write more. Please however have no doubts about the propriety of the step.

I hear that there has been a small breakdown in your health. Let me know if there has been any such thing. If you can tell me your weight, do so. Is there any trouble with your nose ? I hope you wouldn’t think it necessary to keep back anything from me.

Mahadev is being tested well. I am glad about it. There are difficulties now regarding Gujarati letters. I intend to write to the Colonel in the matter, though I don’t like to do even that.

I have had no letters from Devdas recently. Khurshed is improving. She remained ill for a fairly long time. I can’t write more since it is time for the post.

I am going on well enough. The crowds are as large as ever, perhaps larger than before. And they are equally mad with love.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna patro–2 : Sardar Vallabhbhai, p. 48

1 E. E. Doyle, Inspector–General of Prisons, Bombay
229. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, RAIPUR

November 23, 1933

I have repeatedly said that this work can be done only by those who sincerely believe untouchability to be a stain on Hinduism. This is a movement requiring the change of heart of millions. It cannot be led to success by any political manoeuvres. It can be done only through self-purification. This is a great sacrificial fire in which we have to burn our load of sins and come out purified. Those who do not take to this work with faith and spirit will fail to move the hearts of millions. We shall be nowhere if we deceive ourselves or the Harijans. The success or failure of this movement depends on our getting the right type of workers. We are on our trial today. If we miss today the oppportunity that God has given us, we may never hope to get the opportunity again in this generation. What we refuse to do voluntarily today we shall have to do in future per force, and we shall repent for having lost this opportunity. I pray to God that we may come out successful from this trial and save Hinduism and ourselves from destruction.

Harijan, 1–12–1933

230. SPEECH AT ALL–INDIA SWADESHI EXHIBITION, RAIPUR

November 23, 1933

In a country where 95 per cent of the population live on the land, even if all the processes of cultivation were carried on through machines, there would still be need for a supplementary cottage industry. The spinning-wheel supplied that supplementary industry to the Indian peasant from time immemorial. Many minor industries are nowadays suggested for the purpose, but none of them can be universalized as the production of khadi can be. I consented to open this exhibition, for I know that thousands of Harijans get their living through khadi, which has saved them from destitution. We may revive

---

1 According to Chandrashankar Shukla’s report, the speech was addressed to Harijan workers. However, according to The Bombay Chronicle, 29–11–1933, and Hitavada, 3–12–1933, this was in reply to addresses presented by the Municipality, the Local Board and other institutions.
many other indigenous industries, may even start new ones, but we may not lose sight of khadi as the centre of all swadeshi.

_Harijan_, 1–12–1933

231. EXTRACTS FROM SPEECHES

[Before November 24, 1933]¹

Injustice is being done all the world over, but we have given to it the sanction of religion. These distinctions have not been created by God. The Harijans are on the lowest rung of the ladder not because of any inherent defects but only because they have been kept down by the so-called higher castes. God had bestowed on them the same talents that He had given us, but we deny them the opportunities for using them. They should surely have the same rights and privileges and the same opportunities of growth that we enjoy.

We are now awake to the wrong we have done to them, and the least we can do by way of penance now is to contribute money for their uplift and to share with them all the amenities of life that we have created for ourselves. We are all creatures of the same God and, therefore, equal in His eyes.

From the money that you give for this cause, you will reap a hundredfold, for it is like grain sown in good, manured soil. The money spent after luxury and lust is, on the other hand, wasted like grain sown in barren soil.²

I am told you have suffered heavily. But you should know that no nation has ever come to its own without having passed through the severest fire of suffering. Voluntary suffering only adds to our strength. I, therefore, congratulate you for having suffered. But I should also like to remind you that one of the causes that add to our sufferings is this curse of untouchability. We have oppressed the weak. We reap as we have sown. It is for us now to undo the wrong we have done to the Harijans and remove the yoke of servitude from their ¹ Reproduced from Chandrashankar Shukla’s “Weekly Letter” which bears the date–line “Raipur, 24–11–1933”. The places where Gandhiji spoke have not been indicated.

² Ibid
³ What follows was spoken at a village.
Caste Hindus must first ask you to forgive the wrongs they have done to you. But I should also tell you, as a Harijan by choice, that you should give up your evil habits, especially carrion and beef–eating. The whole world looks upon carrion with abhorrence. And beef–eating should be given up because that is a sine qua non for a Hindu. The cow is the giver of plenty, and by killing her we kill ourselves. Then, I would urge you not to accept leavings. And, above all, you should abolish the distinctions of high and low that have crept in among yourselves. And these things you should do, not in a bargaining spirit but because they are good in themselves. I would, therefore, ask you also to give up drink, irrespective of the fact that many other Hindus drink.

_Harijan, 1–12–1933_

232. CIVIL RESISTANCE AND HARIJAN SERVICE

A friend writes :

I observe that there are some people in the Harijan service organizations not working in the spirit in which you want them to, that is, merely for the sake of serving Harijans. They are seeking its shelter in order to satisfy other ambitions. . .I know that you do not desire civil resistance to be mixed up with Harijan service organizations. If you propose to make any public use of this letter you may emphasize this last point and make it clearer.

I am thankful to the friend for giving me the benefit of his experience. It is a most difficult task to keep a big organization like the Servants of Untouchables Society with branches all over India free of all self–seekers and time–servers. I have discussed the subject fully with Seth Ghanshyamdas and Thakkar Bapa. I know that they are both anxious to keep the organization as pure as possible. Personally I can do no more. It was because of my utter helplessness that I undertook the fast of 21 days. On discovering impurities amongst Harijan servants, I saw that it was no use merely writing about impurities. I was searching for a way out of the difficulty. The reader should believe me when I tell him that the fast was the last thing in the world that I was thinking of, but as I have described in these pages, it came to me all of a sudden and gave me great relief. I know that it did much good. But, how far could the fast of a single mortal go? Hence

---

1 What follows was addressed to Harijans.
2 Only extracts from the letter are reproduced here.
it was that I developed the idea of a chain of such purificatory fasts. The idea has by no means been dropped. It comes to me again and again. But it does not admit of a mechanical organization. Several co-workers are ready to inaugurate or take part in the chain after it is inaugurated, but I have not yet found the way to begin it. The proper way will have to come to me or to the co-workers before the chain can be begun. Meanwhile I can only reiterate my conviction that untouchability will not be removed root and branch except through the service of men and women who take it up for its own sake and in a religious spirit. Unless we have a fair number of such servants throughout the length and breadth of India, we will never succeed in changing the hearts of millions of human beings. The savarna Hindus are at one end, Harijans at the other, and the evil custom of ages, which has assumed the dignity of religious tenet, will not be uprooted without penance and purification. Whilst it gladdens my heart that thousands of people flock to the meetings that are being held in towns and villages and that they willingly give their pices as a token of their approval of the movement, I am painfully conscious of the fact that, if the thousands were suddenly called upon to enforce in their own lives what they seem to approve by their attendance at these meetings, they would fail to respond, not from want of will, but from sheer inability. I have discovered this again and again amongst my closest associates who have frankly confessed their inability to enforce immediately in their conduct what they knew was the right thing and what they knew had to be done immediately. They had to put up a brave fight against their traditional repugnance. The mere intellectual grasp that untouchability is an evil, corroding Hinduism, and that belief in it is tantamount to disbelief in God, His goodness and His Fatherhood, is not enough to destroy the monster. The vicarious penance of the comparatively pure is needed to bring about a change in the hearts of both savarnas and Harijans.

A movement, so grand and so pure, so religious and so humanitarian, must not be exploited by anybody for his own end. Certainly, not for its political consequences. It will be discovered, as the movement progresses, that the political approach can only end in accentuating the strife. It can only add to the confusion already existing and add one more, if not many more warring parties, to the existing ones. May God save us and save the movement from such a calamity!

So far as the connection of civil resistance with the movement is concerned, I am as emphatic as ever that Congressmen who desire to offer active civil resistance should not accept office in the various organizations, and much less can they be used for serving the purpose of civil resistance. Civil resistance is a unique weapon, it does not admit of alloy. It is a weapon of the fearless and, therefore, needs no shelter; but it has to be wielded in the open daylight. Therefore, whilst Congressmen who are also civil resisters on active service may do, as they are bound to do, such service to the cause as they can, they may not belong to the Servants of Untouchables Society or any of its branches. By holding office in the organizations they will harm both civil resistance and the Harijan cause. It would be like a man going to a temple to pray and using the act of worship for advancing civil resistance. Neither God nor man will be cheated in that manner and, as I have said often enough in these columns, the great reformation of Hinduism will not be brought about, if it is to depend purely upon Congressmen. For, much as I would like to think that every Indian is a Congressman, I know that such is not the case. Nor is every Hindu a Congressman, if only because every Harijan is not a Congressman. Therefore, a Harijan organization must in the very nature of things be strictly non-political and non-party and should contain in it both Congressmen and non-Congressmen, office-holding being restricted to those who are not active civil resisters and who will not exploit the office secretly or openly to advance the cause of civil resistance.

_Harijan, 24–11–1933_

_233. HARIJAN WORKER’S DUTY_

A correspondent sends me the following questions for answering:

(1) In the propaganda against untouchability, should a worker make use of the Hindu Shastras and religious texts to show that Hinduism does not sanction untouchability as we practise it today?

(2) Should a Harijan sevak, even in his private capacity, take part in inter-dining functions?

(3) Should a Harijan who is employed as a domestic servant sit at meals alongside all the members of the family?

These three questions, the correspondent says, have been seriously discussed in the columns of a newspaper and the readers have been advised that Harijan workers ought not to make use of religious texts in advocating the abolition of untouchability, and that, in the larger interest of the movement, the workers should not enforce their views about inter–dining and the rest, even in their private matters. I hold totally different views on these matters. For me, the removal of untouchability is fundamentally a religious question. Hinduism could not hold me if I believed that untouchability, as it is practised today, was an integral part of it. That it has been handed down to us as a custom is an undoubted fact, but so are many other bad customs among which untouchability is the worst. It becomes necessary, therefore, to show that it has no sanction in religion.

Whilst the Servants of Untouchables Society has very wisely limited the scope of its corporate activities, it does not regulate or restrict individual practice about inter–dining. The removal of untouchability does not require inter–dining with Harijans. Inter–dining is not a universal obligation. A Harijan worker must be left free to dine with whomsoever he pleases, and, therefore, with Harijans, without in any way being regarded as being on that account a less effective worker. My own practice is well known, and I should personally feel a hypocrite if I suppressed it ‘in the larger interests of the reform’. I should undoubtedly refrain, if inter–dining were a mere matter of convenience or indulgence for me. Far from being either, I regard it as a desirable and an inevitable social reform. But it should not be mixed up with the drive against untouchability. The central point in the untouchability movement is the removal of social and religious injustice towards those who, being regarded as untouchables, are debarred from public utilities and spiritual comfort within the religion to which they belong. I should feel no deprivation if no one in the world took food that might be cooked or touched by me. But it would be a great deprivation to me if I could not send my children to the public school, or could not rent a house in any locality open to the other members of the public, or could not seek spiritual comfort in a temple designed for the other members of my faith.

As to the Harijan employee, if the members of a family employing a Harijan drew a line between him and non–Harijan servants, they would undoubtedly be guilty of observing untouchability. But I very much fear that we are a long way from that bright and happy day when we shall be all masters and no servants, or all servants and no masters, all members of the human family, regarding ourselves as blood–brothers and blood–sisters.

Harijan, 24–11–1933
234. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

[ AS AT] WARDHA,
November 24, 1933

CHI. AMALA,

I was glad you were doing so well. Did I say I would write twice a week? I thought I had said you could write twice a week.

Of course you may give as much time to Hindi as you like. Yes, when you are quite fit, you will find your place wherever I put you.

Love.

BAPU

SMT. AMALABEHN
SATYAGRAHA ASHRAM
WARDHA, C.P.

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

235 LETTER TO C. F. ANDREWS

November 24, 1933

MY DEAR CHARLIE,

I have just heard from Sir P. Pattani that he would begin to pay Gurudev Rs. 1,000 per month from December till the Rs. 5,000 are paid out.¹ It will be all right now.

The enthusiasm of the people and the attendance are phenomenal and exceed my expectations which were fairly high. You will find it all faithfully described in the columns of Harijan which as you must have observed has been transferred to Madras. The people are paying handsomely. If these crowds are not an indication that untouchability is fast going, I do not know what can prove it. It must take time for the mighty reform to be felt.

Later,

The foregoing was written amid interruptions. Your letter written during the voyage or in Bombay has just been received. About Gurudev’s visit to Bombay I have written very little. I do not even know what is going on. I can hardly read papers during this rush. But of course he would be quite all right in so far as the reception is concerned. Of money he is not likely to get much. My appeal about Orissa is bringing very little.

¹ Vide “Letter to Prabhashankar Pattani”, 4-11-1933

Of course, Elwin should go his way and be left in God’s hands. But friends must issue warnings when they have doubts as to the propriety of actions on merits. It is difficult to say when it is God’s voice and when it is not. Strangers have to judge every act on its merits. This is applicable of course to my claim in connection with my fasts. I wrote a long letter to E. on what appeared to me his hasty departure from Matheran and avoidance of Wardha. I have not heard from him at all after his going back to Karanjia.

I hope I shall not have to cable you to return. The Magistrates have not worried me up to now. And when and if they do you would be too late for guidance. You should therefore trust me to God even as Efy is doing, even as you are trusting E. to God. I know that He is guiding me.

Love.

MOHAN

[P.S.]
Send your letters to Wardha.

From a photostat: G.N. 983

236. LETTER TO AGATHA HARRISON

November 24, 1933

MY DEAR AGATHA,

No long letter this week. Here is a letter¹ for C. F. A. The cuttings will give you some indication of the progress of the tour. These of course you will share with friends as you may think necessary.

I do not think of the political atmosphere. It is as bad as ever. It does not worry me much and it will not worry me at all if there was chivalry and gentlemanliness on the part of the officials. The insatiable desire for humiliating everybody and every organization is terrible. But enough of this grumbling.

Love

BAPU

¹ Vide the preceding item.

From a photostat: G.N. 1475
237. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

November 24, 1933

CHI. VASUMATI,

I wrote several letters to you. I hope you got them. I got one letter from you. You seem to have done quite good reading. It seems you have given up the study of English. Tara has got one tooth extracted and is suffering extreme pain. She had to be kept under chloroform for one hour. She is a little better now. I have started a long tour. Except for two days [in the week], I have to travel every day. I am accompanied by Mirabehn, Om and Chandrashankar, and of course Thakkar Bapa. There are others too, but you do not know them. So far I have kept good health. Ba and Manibehn have gone to Ahmedabad. Totaramji will take Hariprasad with him and go and live in the Harijan Ashram. The Satyagraha Ashram has now become Harijan Ashram. My weight stands at 108. My normal diet is milk, oranges and one green vegetable.

I have dictated this letter to Om during my meal.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : S.N. 9338. Also C.W. 584. Courtesy : Vasumati Pandit

238. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, RAIPUR

November 24, 1933

Ever since I came to your province you have been showering love on me and I am still bathing in it. Here also you have further delighted me by presenting me this purse. You would be right if you believe that you should give me money to please me, and especially so if you fulfil one condition. It is that those who have given money should feel that they have contributed to a yajna of self-purification. The money that is given can only be a token of your contribution to that yajna. But if they think that they have done all that they need to by giving the money, it would be the worst characteristic of a clever Bania. It would be as if by giving that money they had bought the right to enjoy themselves as they wished. Such charity can be of no benefit to the Harijans. I do not deny that money is very badly needed for Harijan work; but it is more important for their service that you should accept the Harijans with your heart. The real purpose of this tour is that you should discard the notion of untouchability from your heart and banish feelings of high and low. If you give me no help in realizing that aim and give me only money, it would be difficult even to use that money. If you do not know it, please note that at least 75 per cent of the money collected from this place will be used for the Harijan work here. There are two conditions, however, and they are also meant for the success of this work. In the first place, a good scheme for the use of that amount should come from you, and along with that there should be an indication of the persons who would carry out the scheme. A scheme may be good on paper, but it will be useless and will fail if there was nobody to implement it. That is why I said that, if your heart is not behind your contribution, the money you have given will be as good as useless. And if this happens, it would be diverted to other places where better workers and better schemes are forthcoming. You would not be happy if this happens. We who have come here do not wish to do any such thing. Our intention is to use at least 75 per cent of the money in the place from where it is collected. If, however, you do not give your full co-operation in this work, nothing can be done with the money alone.

It is a matter of joy for the country and for Hindus that at every place people gather in such large numbers. I am working in the faith that all these people come to the meetings to help me in my work of removing untouchability. If they come because they think that I have served the country in the past, and in order to praise my past services, they are guilty of great deception. I think of no other work just now. I have undertaken this tour only for Harijan work, and not to hear my praises. Hence, only those who wish to help me in this work or criticize it should attend the meetings. Those who wish to oppose the work should express their opposition courteously and in a becoming manner. In a religious cause, forgetting courtesy means forsaking dharma itself. Rudeness and lack of courtesy go ill with religion. Religion must be accompanied with gentleness, courtesy, culture and compassion. I do not wish to waste my time.

It would no doubt pain me to know that the Hindu masses are not with me. But it would pain me all the more if they attend the meetings to deceive me and themselves. I have got to follow my dharma even if everybody deserts me. The scriptures say that you need not have anyone on your side for following dharma, that you need God alone. Following dharma is a matter for each individual himself. One must do one’s duty to the best of one’s ability. God will look after the rest. The dharma of fighting untouchability is precious like a gem. I have placed it before you. This is no ordinary gem which can be used only by one person or which would wear off by use. Millions can use the gem of dharma; the more the people use it, the brighter will it shine.

There is no doubt at all that unless we wipe out the blot of untouchability from Hinduism, both Hinduism and Hindu society will perish. Peoples and their religions are being compared and judged all over the world. We are living in an age when we can travel to distant places in a few days by train and go round the world by sea. And now aeroplanes too are coming into use. In an age like this, all religions are exposed to the eyes of the world. If we fail in this scrutiny we may be sure that we are doomed. The world has a right to make such a comparison. That which cannot be placed before the world and which is not acceptable to reason and the heart cannot be sanatana dharma. Sanatana dharma means imperishable Truth.

I was glad when I was told that Bharatdasji intends to throw open his temple to Harijans. The site of the temple is very beautiful. I performed the opening with God as witness. The Harijans had cheerfully come in large numbers. The scriptures have laid down two or three conditions for the Harijans or other people who visit a temple. They must enter the temple with a pure heart and body. Observing rules of personal cleanliness is as necessary in the case of Harijans as in that of the other Hindus, and, therefore, they should be duly observed by them. The second condition is that they should give up eating beef and carrion. The latter is prohibited in every religion. I am not aware of civilized and religious-minded people eating carrion, anywhere in the world. It is abhorred by all mankind. Harijans must give up these two things irrespective of whether or not they are accepted by the caste Hindus. If they consider themselves Hindus, they must give up beef also. Now there is a fourth thing, which I cannot describe as an inseparable part of Hinduism, though it is so according to me. And that is abstention from intoxicating drinks. Other Hindus may or may not give them up, but you should definitely do so. It is a very bad habit. A bad habit should not be copied. Moreover, you want to progress, and so you must give up drinking. Other Hindus will follow your example. Giving up intoxicating drinks will save the country crores of rupees and change a man from a monster into a human being. You must not consume the thing that makes you forget how you should behave to a mother or a sister. Those who are used to collecting and eating leavings must give up that unclean habit for good. Eating the leavings is not for human beings. It is the fault of the caste Hindus that you have got into this habit. In their ignorance caste Hindu women give leavings to Harijans. Instead of that, they should keep apart a certain portion every day for Harijans from what they may have cooked for themselves. My mother always used to feed us and take her meal only after keeping apart the portions for the guest, the poor and the cow. It is a cultured tradition in a good household that such portions be kept apart. Similarly, you also should take out something for the Bhangi Harijans and give it to them with love. It is not civil to throw food in the fold of the dress or in a vessel from a distance. It is an act of contempt. There is no politeness in it but lack of it. Caste Hindu women should give up throwing leavings to Harijans and the latter should stop accepting them. Harijan men and women who visit temples should observe the rules that may be applicable to all the varnas equally.

The Satnami Harijans at Dhamtari told me the painful story that the barbers and the washermen there do not work for them because they are considered untouchables. Those who told me this were as clean as ourselves. When I visited their dwellings, I found that they were not more unclean than the houses of other Hindus. In the course of my tours in the country, I have got an impression that the houses of Bhangis are cleaner than those of other Hindus. It is tyrannical that washermen and barbers should not serve such people. It is painful and a matter of shame for us that when such a great movement of self-purification is going on barbers and washermen should refuse to serve these people. I do not blame the washermen and barbers for this. It is the doing of the so-called high-caste Hindus who have misled them. They have put the idea into their minds that they would be incurring sin if they worked for the Harijans. Since they have got such an idea, they hesitate to serve the Harijans. This should not be. Other people who know better should explain this to the barbers and washermen. Educated young men from among the caste Hindus should learn hair-cutting and washing clothes. And they should go to Harijans and tell them that they are ready to cut their hair and wash their clothes. If the educated people do this, the simple-hearted barbers and washermen would do it too. When they find that even the people who are not bothered about money are doing such work, they also would do it. There is no question of religious degradation in this. No sanatanist has told me that barbers, washermen, doctors, etc., cannot serve Harijans. I do not know how the idea that it is dharma to refuse such service originated. Such barbarism should go forthwith.

[From Gujarati]

_Harijanbandhu_, 17–12–1933

---

239. LETTER TO SARALADEVI SARABHAI

[November 25, 1933]¹

DEAR SISTER,

I do not read newspapers. But I take it you came back on the date mentioned in Mridu’s letter. Let me know about the condition of your health.

I learn from Mahadev’s letter that your brother-in-law who was at Belgaum suddenly died. I did not know about it at all. What consolation could one give you?

You will all be well. You can treat Wardha as my permanent address.

_Blessings from_

_BAPU_

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 11139. Courtesy: Sarabhai Foundation

¹ From the postmark

---
240. SPEECH AT BALODA BAZAAR

November 25, 1933

Gandhiji declared open to Harijans a private temple, saying that the temple had on that day become a true abode of God with the Harijans’ entry into it. Asking Harijans to observe three conditions of temple-entry, which apply equally to all temple-going Hindus, he said:

I request you to contribute your full share to this movement of self-purification, not by money but by a thorough cleansing of the heart and body and by removing the evil habits that have crept in amongst you. Though I admit with shame that the caste Hindus are responsible for many of these evil habits, I should like you to do your own part by giving up carrion and beef-eating and observing the common rules of cleanliness. These three conditions apply equally to all Hindus who want the right of worship in Hindu temples. I should like you to give up drink also, irrespective of the fact that even some caste Hindus indulge in that intoxication. You may not imitate their vices. Drink is one of the most degrading of vices, reducing man to the state of brute. It vitiates both body and soul. It spells utter ruin of the moral and domestic life. I would, therefore, request Harijans in all earnestness to give up that vice and set a noble example of self-purification not only to caste Hindus but perhaps to the whole world.

Harijan, 8–12–1933

241. SPEECH AT BILASPUR

November 25, 1933

You may know, if you do not know already, that I have been closely associated with labourers ever since I went to South Africa. Whenever I have gone among labourers, in South Africa, India or whatever part of the world, they have recognized me as a fellow-labourer and received me as one of themselves. You will perhaps be surprised to know that even labourers in Lancashire instinctively recognized me as one of themselves and flocked around me in hundreds and thousands. The only difference between us is that I have become a labourer by choice whilst you have been made labourers by force of circumstances and would perhaps love to be masters if you could. I early gave up the ambition of becoming the master for I would then have belonged to an inconsiderate class and could not have identified myself, as I do today to the best of my ability, with the penniless pauper, the half-starved and the naked, the lowliest and the lost. I want labourers not to deplore, much less to despise, their lot and to realize the dignity of labour. It is meet that you have come forward with your purse as a token of your sympathy with the Harijans. Who has suffered so much as they? They are at the lowest rung of the ladder. The terrible hardships and privations they have to undergo can never be imagined by those who have not been victims to them. Other labourers may aspire to a mass wealth and to become masters some day and thus to rise in the scale of social prestige; but the Harijans can never entertain that ambition. The stigma of untouchability attaches to them from the mother’s womb. They are born outcastes and remain outcastes till death. They have to live in segregated areas and are denied the amenities of life that the others enjoy. Even water, that free gift of God, is denied to them. I ask the Labour Federation to abolish all distinctions between Harijans and yourselves. I make the appeal deliberately for, being in direct touch with the mill-hands in Ahmedabad, I know that labourers do observe the distinction between Harijans and non-Harijans. I expect labourers, more than all others, to efface these distinctions. It has been my deep faith that we shall some day achieve communal unity through labourers. I consider labour to be a powerful unifying agent. It is a great equalizer. It should be a matter of shame to have communal divisions among labourers, who all earn their bread by the sweat of their brow and, therefore, belong to one vast brotherhood. Let them, therefore, begin with a thorough removal of untouchability. It will be a great step towards communal unity. Once the bar sinister against Harijans is removed, the way will be open for a wider unity among Hindus, Mussalmans and other sister communities.

1 This appeared in Harijan under the title “Conditions for Temple-entry”.
2 Delivered at the B. N. Railway Labourers’ Federation. This appeared in Harijan in two parts under the titles “A Great Equalizer” and “On Behalf of Humanity”.

A Mussalman friend asked why Gandhiji, a national leader, had chosen for the time being to work only among a section of the nation. This question drew the following reply from Gandhiji.

I am trying to serve all communities today through this work. They are branches of one big family. I have found in the Hindu branch a disease which, if not removed in time, will spread through the whole family and destroy it. The evil of untouchability has travelled far beyond its prescribed limits. In trying to root out untouchability among Hindus, I am trying to serve all the communities. Though the method of achieving communal unity through conferences has failed, I have not despaired of a heart–unity being achieved in the end. God has sent me this work, and I am doing it in the faith that the way to a real communal unity will be paved through it. It is thus to my mind a service of the whole nation. The effort I made in 1920–21 to achieve Hindu–Muslim unity will go down in history and will serve as the foundation of the edifice of communal unity whenever it is achieved.
I have never repented for having made that effort. For me it was not a matter of expedience. I am not aware of having done a single thing in my life as a matter of expedience. I have ever held that the highest morality is also the highest expedience. Some European friends assure me that I am waging this war against untouchability on behalf of the whole of humanity. Once this canker is removed from Hinduism, Hindus, Mussalmans and others will sink their differences and will embrace one another as blood–brothers, and all communities will feel that they are all branches of the same tree.

Harijan, 8–12–1933

242. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

RAIPUR,
November 26, 1933

MY DEAR AMALA,

What have you done to your finger? Dwarakanathji says you have hurt yourself. I hope you are not overstraining yourself. I want you to do everything with joy and infinite patience.

It appears that on the 15th December we shall be passing through Wardha as was originally arranged. The programme was altered so as to omit Wardha and go via Calcutta. But now the original programme has been restored. While I admire your self–restraint in not coming to the station last time, I would like you to come on the 15th, if you get Dwarakanathji’s permission.

I see that you are spinning much better than you used to, and you have prepared your strand nicely and neatly. I am sure that by proper application you would be able to spin finer, stronger and much more even. I hope that there is not much waste nowadays and that you know how to mend your wheel if it goes out of order. I hope you are just as happy as our Japanese friend. You will be surprised to know, when years ago in South Africa I first cut my own hair, it looked as if rats had been at it. My lawyer friends cracked jokes at my expense. But I survived their jokes and I was able to do much better next time. The same thing happened with my first trial at ironing shirts and collars. I do not mention this incident to induce you to repeat your experiment. You should get your hair cut by the barber who gets a fixed salary no matter how many heads he treats.

Love.

BAPU

[Spiegel Papers. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library]

243. LETTER TO M. BAPI NEEDU

November 26, 1933

MY DEAR BAPI NEEDU,

Please tell all the workers that I expect great things from Andhradesha, not merely fat donations but also many pure–hearted and self–sacrificing servants of Harijans.

Yours sincerely,

BAPU

The Hindu, 6–12–1933

244. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

RAIPUR, November 26, 1933

CHI. JAMNALAL,

I got your letter.

Lakshmidas seems to have written what he did on the basis of what Anandi might have told him. I hope you remember that she had even come to know the name. But we needn’t worry about this. Lakshmidas is not likely to misunderstand anything. I am sure that you didn’t divulge the name.

I have written to Dwarakanath about the honey. I have asked him to send a bottle with somebody to whichever place it may be convenient to do so.

Jawaharlal writes and informs me that the Working Committee will be meeting in Jabalpur on the 5th. He seems to be expecting that you will attend. Do you feel inclined to come? If you don’t wish to, I will not mind. Come if you feel like it. This will mean that you will have to leave that place on the 3rd or the 4th instead of on the 7th. I certainly don’t like that you should sacrifice so many days from your stay there.

Mathuradas is coming here tomorrow. I don’t know what brings him here.

I observe that Om has a sharp intelligence. And she has simple habits, too. She has fine health. She seems to be enjoying everything. I also give her some writing work. She sleeps near me. Her capacity to sleep is quite good! She has won everybody’s love.

Has Janakimaiya recovered some peace of mind? Is Kamla progressing satisfactorily? Can she walk? How do Madalasa\(^1\) and Vatsala\(^2\) spend their time? I send with this an important letter received from Manilal. Keep it in a file. It contains some comments about the Cow-protection Society and a list of the jewellery.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2927

245. LETTER TO RAMABEHN JOSHI

November 26, 1933

CHI. RAMA,

You may write to me. How do you feel there now, both physically and mentally? Is there any difficulty about the arm now? How is Vimu?\(^2\) Does Dhiru write to you? I hope you got Nanabhai’s letter. There is no cause for anxiety.

What is Nirmala Joshi’s\(^3\) address?

1 Addressee’s daughter, wife of Shriman Narayan
2 Vatsala Dastane
3 Addresssee’s daughter, Vimala
4 Wife of Kevalram Bhimji Joshi

VOL. 62 : 8 OCTOBER, 1933 - 17 JANUARY, 1934
Did you get a letter from Chhaganlal? I am eager to know whether he got my long letter. Ask Vimu to write to me.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5358

246. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK
_November 26, 1933_

CHI. PREMA,

I got news about you from time to time from Sushila, and also from some others. I am glad that you got my letter. Whether you gained or lost, you will be able to judge only after you are released. There is no doubt that the experience is invaluable.

I understood your time-table. I am very happy that you have been able to preserve your health. The key was in your own hands and I see that you have used it well.

What can I write about Harijan work? It is going on. I have been experiencing people’s boundless love. My body also has been giving excellent service. The weight had risen to 110 lb. This is no ordinary improvement. Chandrashankar is trying hard to fill Mahadev’s place. Mirabehn also is here. And there is Ramnath, whom you do not know. Besides, there is Janakibehn’s Om. She is a brave girl and also has a fine intelligence. God has kept her in excellent health, too.

I don’t have time to write more now. I have to write many other letters. It is only during the silence period that I can write most of my letters.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 10352. Also C.W. 6791. Courtesy: Premabehn Kantak
247. LETTER TO D. B. KALELKAR

November 26, 1933

CHI. KAKA,

I never get time to write a sufficiently long letter to you.
I was shocked to read...’s letter. Is he really mad? I hesitate to believe that the lady yielded to force, though it is possible that she was unwilling. Even if, however, it was a case of rape, she ought not to resort to abortion. She should rear the child with love. However, she must live away from her husband.

* * *

What happened about your teeth!
Do you still suffer from backache?
I received the three books on astronomy.
I suppose Chandrashankar writes to you and gives you other news.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original : C.W. 9475. Courtesy : D.B. Kalelkar

248 LETTER TO VIDYA R. PATEL

November 26, 1933

CHI. VIDYA,

How are you now? Are your monthly periods normal? Do you pass normal stools? Do you get any discharges in urine? Do you hear from Raojibhai? What is your diet?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : C.W. 9635. Courtesy : Ravindra R. Patel

---

1 The name has been omitted.
2 A paragraph has been omitted.
249. LETTER TO CHANDRAKANTA

November 26, 1933

CHI. KANTA,

Are you getting well? Are you satisfied? What news about Sumangal? Ask Prabha to write to me. Tell my walking sticks, Yashodhara, Lambus, Jekore¹, Meera, etc., that they should not expect separate letters from me, but that they will get replies from me if they write to me.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From a photostat of the Gujarati: Chandrakanta Papers. Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library

250. LETTER TO JANAKDHARI PRASAD

AS AT WARDHA,
November 26, 1933

DEAR JANAKDHARI BABU,

I have your letter. I wish that I could have a heart-to-heart chat with you. I shall try to write to you at length in spite of the pressure under which I am working. But I know that the letter will never yield the result that a brief conversation can.

From your letter, I had gathered that you were not fit to seek imprisonment, and knowing your domestic difficulties as I now do, I feel that until those difficulties are satisfactorily solved you ought not to think of imprisonment.

By labour I mean any kind of physical labour that you may be able to perform. Such labour for you is tailoring, shoemaking and any other healthy labour that you can think of. Whilst you will not immediately earn much, it will mean a mighty revolution in your life. Your children will then be brought up as labourers.⁴ As such they will not have to struggle so much to live, as you do just now. And when your attitude is changed, you will set for yourself and the whole family the labourer’s standard of life. Your wife, if she accepts the revolutionary change, will also be doing her share of labour.

¹ Jayakunvar Doctor
² Vide also “Letter to Janakdhari Prasad”, 15-10-1933
You will be interested to know that my sister¹, because she will not live in the Ashram, owing to non-observance of untouchability, earns about Rs. 15 per month by grinding. Giri, who with her three daughters and two sons was in the Ashram for seven years and whom I declined to support on the breaking up to the Ashram, but whom I advised to take to some labour is now earning from the labour of her two daughters nearly Rs. 30 per month by preparing sweetmeats and fritters for a hotel-keeper. And her son is earning about the same as a carpenter. Dal Bahadur Giri was not a labourer. He was living an almost aristocratic life. I believe that the widow and her daughters are happy. They have not cut off all connections with me. Two daughters are grown-up girls, marriageable, but have no present intention of marrying. They can read and write but they have learned the dignity of labour, and therefore are not a burden on society. Now I hope you understand what I mean by physical labour.

Now for the education of your children. If you accept the revolution that I have suggested, naturally the children will be brought up by you. You will give them not merely a literary training but you will give them also a training for labour with their hands. Immediately you begin this life you will find it to be a pleasure and all your difficulties will automatically be solved, and you will be rendering a distinct service to society by setting a wise example. I do want you to get out of the mood of despondency and helplessness. Do write again if this does not explain all I mean.

Yours sincerely,

BAPU

[From Hindi]

Kuchh Apani Kuchh Deshki, p. 190

251. LETTER TO VIDYA A. HINGORANI

November 26, 1933

CHI. VIDYA,

I got your letter. Anand has escaped with a light sentence. Send him my blessings. Have you received any letter from your father-in-law? If you give up your inhibition, you will need no servant. God has endowed you with money but what should a poor mother do? Try to stand on your own two feet, albeit gradually. Mahadev is growing in age. He will not need much help for long. Dwarakanathji writes that some arrangement has been made now. Don’t you churn butter? Do render some kind of public service and consider everyone around you as your own. You must not worry at all; write to me at once if there is anything amiss.

¹ Ralibehn

Blessings from
BAPU

From a microfilm of the Hindi. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

252. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

November 26, 1933

CHI. BRIJKRISHNA,

Your letter. I sent a wire to Dr. Ansari immediately on getting it. He must have seen you. What a pity that no one can be found in your house or outside to recite the Gita. Tulsidasji has offered us a Gita in the form of Ramanama to cope with such a situation. We do not have to commit Ramanama to our memory—it is done no sooner than it is uttered—what we are required to do is to commit it to our hearts. Regard Ramanama as the true medicine for you. If God spares your life, you should teach the small children of your family to recite from the Gita.

What more shall I say? You are with us every moment. You have to course acquitted yourself well in the role of a worthy son. But how shall I become a worthy father?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 2402

253. SPEECH AT RAJKUMAR COLLEGE, RAIPUR

November 27, 1933

When I received your invitation I felt at once that, if the Reception Committee here could make the necessary time, I would love to address this audience of students who, when they have finished

1 Published in Harijan under the title “Princes and Untouchability” their education, will be called upon to bear a great responsibility and burden. And it was a matter of great pleasure to me that the Reception Committee was able to set apart one hour for this function. I thank you, Sir, for having extended this invitation to me, thereby enabling me to deliver my message to the youths who are at present under your kind care. You were thoughtful enough to send a message to my host, Shuklaji1 that, whilst I could address this audience in Hindustani if I so chose, you would appreciate it if I addressed them in English; and you were good enough, when I exchanged a letter with you, to tell me that many of the boys under your care did not know Hindustani. I at once decided to address you, in spite of my ordinary practice to the contrary, in English. Your Principal inadvertently supplied me also with a text for my message. I would like you, sons of Chiefs in these territories, to remember that you would be expected not merely to confine yourselves, in these days of progressive enlightenment and rapid inter-communication, to your comparatively very small territories, but you would be expected to extend your horizon; and if you will do so, as I have no doubt you will be obliged to do by force of circumstances, it will be necessary for you not merely to know the languages of the province in which your lot is cast, but you will be expected to know also the language that is most universally used in this country. And you may not know, all of you, I am sure, do not know, that over 22 crores of the people of this country know sufficient Hindi or Hindustani to be able to understand what is spoken to them and to express themselves, however broken their language may be. No Indian having to shoulder the responsibility that you will have to shoulder can possibly afford to ignore such a universal language. There is a method in my mad love of Hindi. I am a lover of the English language, and I would like to speak in the English language as well as is possible for a foreigner to do and compete with Englishmen. I know that I am far away from that consummation. Whatever English I know is due to my having lived for years among Englishmen and English-speaking men. I count hundreds of Englishmen and women as close friends. So you will not misunderstand me when I tell you that it is your duty to understand Hindustani and I will beg the Principal and his staff to realize the special condition of this country and to feel with me that it is desirable for the Chiefs of India to understand Hindustani, through which alone they can know the India of the people.

1 Delivered at the B. N. Railway Labourers’ Federation. This appeared in Harijan in two parts under the titles “A Great Equalizer” and “On Behalf of Humanity”.

This brings me to the central point of my message. We have been in the midst of Englishmen in various walks of life. I have had the painful duty very often of criticizing the policy of the rulers. I have not minced words. I have spoken straight from my heart, but as I have told you, I claim the closest friendship with hundreds of Englishmen. I cannot forget some of their priceless virtues. I propose to single out one of them for you. In England there is a living family tie between its noblemen and their domestic servants. It was a matter of joy to me on visiting them in their homes to find that there was a subtle bond of affection between them and their servants. There was no untouchability there. What I have told you is literally true of hundreds of the noblemen of England. Wherever I went, it was an unexpected pleasure to me at the end of the visit to be introduced to the domestic staff not as inferior beings but as members of the family.
I wish that you would copy this virtue in your own lives. There is unfortunately among us a feeling that Chiefs are Chiefs and they can never make common cause with the ordinary people and so you find the tragedy—however necessary it may be today—that special schools and colleges have got to be built for you. You dare not, you will not, go to common schools and colleges. You may not know that King Edward and the present King, I am speaking subject to correction, worked in the Navy as if they were ordinary sailors and that both father and son shared the hardships of a sailor’s life. Will you do that?
You are confined as it were to hot houses and are taught to believe that you have been gifted with special divinity by God. Believe me there is absolutely no difference whatsoever between you and the common folk except this that you have opportunities that are denied to them. But if you do not make use of the opportunities God has given you, it will be counted against you in God’s book of accounts.
Know that the essence of education lies in drawing out the very best that is in you. You and I can take the positive comfort that is in you.
You and I can take the positive comfort that all of us have an equal potential capacity for being good or bad. I, therefore, feel that all your education will be vain, if you do not learn the art of feeling one with the poorest in the land.

This brings me in the natural course to untouchability. In no other part of the world has a patent evil like untouchability been claimed to possess religious sanction as it has in Hindu India. But, if you have agreed with me so far, you are bound to regard the Harijan as an integral part of common humanity. You have to realize your oneness even with him. It may be that your parents will dispute the proposition that untouchability is an unmixed evil. You will then have to show the courage of your conviction even as young Prahlad did. The idea of hereditary superiority and inferiority is, in my opinion, repugnant to the spirit of Hinduism which teaches oneness of all life in unequivocal terms. The religions of mankind are being examined and tested both analytically and synthetically. And I have no doubt that, if Hindus cling to untouchability, Hinduism and Hindus will be swept out of existence. I cling to Hinduism because it gives me all the solace I need and because I have found in it no warrant for untouchability as we know it today.

If I have invited you to copy the virtues of Englishmen, I must with deference to English friends present here warn you against their vices. That immortal poet–saint Tulsidas has left us a verse full of deep truth. He says that we should live even as the fabled swan does, sift virtue from vice and take the former, leaving the latter alone. I would have you, therefore, to leave alone their two national vices, drink and races. Many Englishmen deplore them. I have seen many an English home being ruined by the craving for liquor and gambling at the races. And so have many princes been ruined by them. I hope that you will learn to shun these two evils.

_Harijan, 8–12–1933_

254. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

November 27, 1933

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

Here is Gasavi’s letter. I am telling him, I see no objection to the Party so long as it is not claimed as the Congress Party and that in any case he should seek your advice.

I note that we are to meet at Jubbulpore on 5th December. I shall try to give more time, if it is at all possible.

Have I not sent you the programme for C.P.? More than that was not ready till now.

So you are being gradually disburdened of shares and the like. I

1 For the verse from the Ramcharitmanasa.
am not sorry. From my point of view the ideal thing would be a voluntary surrender of all the property you have, either to an institution or to those members of the family who do not want to throw themselves into the battle which is bound to be prolonged and perhaps increasingly bitter. In the final heat only those will be able to stand who have no property and nowhere to rest their heads on. But it is no use worrying over the future. Whatever happens you will be found in the front rank.

I am glad that Mother is making steady progress. I wonder if she knows all that is happening.

Yes, I did read your attack on the Hindu Sabha. It might have been less fierce. The summary made you speak like a partisan.

Love.

BAPU

[P.S.]

You will find the dates in the enclosed programme.

Gandhi–Nehru Papers, 1933. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

255. LETTER TO C. RAJAGOPALACHARI

November 27, 1933

Did I tell you Jamnalalji’s Om’was one of the party? She is a gem—healthy, open, brave, willing and exceedingly intelligent. She is only 15 but looks twenty. All the member of the party are happy but she seems to be the happiest. Of Thakkar Bapa it is difficult to speak in exaggerated language. He is the spirit of service personified. Most methodical in his work, never allowing arrears, most considerate, yet the most exacting. He knows no rest. He reads up correspondence in the car. He has no time for chatter. He could not have made a better secretary I have prized him always as a rare man but I have come ever so much closer to him than before.

But I must stop now, hoping that you are keeping well.

Love.

BAPU

From a copy: C. W. 10756. Courtesy: Rajmohan Gandhi

1 Uma, youngest daughter of Jamnalal Bajaj
256. LETTER TO DUNICHAND

November 27, 1933

DEAR LALA DUNICHAND,

Please excuse the delay in replying. When I tour in your district, I do not know any other house that would harbour me and then you would be your own committee and therefore you will decide my fate for your district.

Let me save a few pice by making this serve for both—you and Mrs. Dunichand. She will be free to travel with me. Let her know that we already make a big party and descend like locusts upon every home we go to.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

LALA DUNICHAND
KRIPA NIWAS
AMBALA CITY
(PUNJAB)

From a photostat : G.N. 5584

257. LETTER TO DUDHIBEHN V. DESAI

November 28, 1933

CHI. DUDHIBEHN,

I got your letter; I was waiting for it. How is your health? I see that other Ashram girls also are there. Who are they? Look after all of them.

Do you read or write anything?

The Wardha address is given on the back.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : C. W. 3188. Courtesy : Valji G. Desai
258. LETTER TO MAHENDRA AND SUDARSHAN DESAI

November 29, 1933

CHI. MANU AND MAVO,

I got the letters of you both. I am still not satisfied with your handwriting. You should try to improve it. Write to me from time to time. I often feel during the tour how fine it would have been if I were going with you. I always enjoy moving around with children, especially on foot as during the Dandi March.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : C.W. 3161. Courtesy : Valji G. Desai

259. LETTER TO GORDHANDAS PATEL

WARDHA,

November 29, 1933

DEAR GORDHANBHAI,

It was your duty to write the letter you did; it certainly was your right. Your pain is deep. A letter from me cannot erase it, but time will. It must have been a surprise to you that I did not attend Krishna’s wedding. Garlands I send to many girls. On the death of persons who are Hindus I never send wreaths. I did not send wreaths for Motilalji, or Das or Lalaji or Lokamanya and I have never sent wreaths on any occasion of death in India. Nobody felt the need for my presence either. Before I expressed my opinion as to how Vallabhbhai should proceed, he had himself decided along the same lines. I had a letter from him to this effect. But I do not expect to convince you by arguments. Only believe me that the episode you refer to has absolutely no bearing on the way I acted. I have tried to follow to the best of my ability what I considered to be my duty towards Vithalbhai.

I did not come to Wardha for two days for rest. I got two days for silence every week which I naturally spent at Wardha, because the tour that week was to cover the Wardha district and the adjoining areas. But that is not a defence. If I had considered it my duty to go to Bombay, I would have somehow managed it. But I did not consider it my duty and that incident had nothing to do with it.

Blessings from

MOHANDAS

From a photostat of the Gujarati: Vithalbhai Patel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

260. LET EVERY CASTE HINDU REMEMBER

That the following resolution was unanimously passed on his behalf by the meeting of his representatives held in Bombay on 15th September, 1931, Pandit Malaviyaji being in the Chair:

This Conference resolves that henceforth, amongst Hindus, no one shall be regarded as an untouchable by reason of his birth, and that those who have been so regarded hitherto will have the same right as other Hindus in regard to the use of public wells, public schools, roads and all other public institutions. This right shall have statutory recognition at the first opportunity and shall be one of the earliest Acts of the Swaraj Parliament, if it shall not have received such recognition before that time.

It is further agreed that it shall be the duty of all Hindu leaders to secure, by every legitimate and peaceful means, an early removal of all social disabilities now imposed by custom upon the so-called untouchable classes, including the bar in respect of admission to temples.

_Harijan_, 1–12–1933

261. NOTES

THE LATE LALA GANGARAM OF SIALKOT

It was only through the kind offices of a friend that I came to learn of the recent death of Lala Gangaram. He died on the 4th [November] of heart failure, at the age of 60. I had the privilege of meeting him in Lahore at the late Rambhajdutt Chowdhury’s house in 1919 when he was introduced to me as a thorough-going Harijan worker. His was a life of dedication to the Harijan cause. He was instrumental in founding Harijan colonies. His death is a distinct loss to the cause. I offer my condolences to the family of the deceased and to the Harijans who were under his special care.

¹This was repeated in the Harijan issues of December 8, 22 and 29. Vide also “Resolution at the Hindu Leaders Conference, Bombay”, 25-9-1932
AVOID WASTE

Reception Committees have been encouraging the habit of presenting flower garlands and bouquets by everyone who will do so. Such presentations are a waste of time and money in a tour undertaken on behalf of the lowliest. If garlands must be presented, let them consist of undamaged strands of yarn which can be used for weaving. There are Harijan weavers who are idle for want of hand-spun yarn. These will not weave mill-spun yarn. The best thing is to avoid all garlanding. And where reception without garlanding is considered impossible, let the garlands be accompanied by money. The practice of accompanying garlands with money became a feature after Wun and it has already added a few hundred rupees to the amount of donations received. Let the public note what one pice means in this country and in the hands of the hungry and despised. It makes the dole that charity gives per head to the famishing in flood-stricken Orissa. Let the doubters see the hovels in which the Harijans are living. Let them visit the low-lying Harijan lane of Hinganghat, where in the rainy season it is hardly possible to exist. They will then understand the value of the pice that goes into the pocket of a Harijan. I would like the public to save their pice and give them to me for the sake of Harijans. It will be part payment of the heavy debt caste Hindus owe to Harijans.

Harijan, 1–12–1933

262. SCHOOL BOOKS

There seems to me to be no doubt that in the public schools the books used, especially for children, are for the most part useless when they are not harmful. That many of them are cleverly written cannot be denied. They might even be the best for the people and the environment for which they are written. But they are not written for Indian boys and girls, nor for the Indian environment. When they are so written, they are generally undigested imitations hardly answering the wants of the scholars. In this country, wants vary according to the provinces and the classes of children. For instance, wants of Harijan children are, in the beginning stages at least, different from those of the others.

I have, therefore, come to the conclusion that books are required more for the teachers than for the taught. And every teacher, if he is to do full justice to his pupils, will have to prepare the daily lesson from the material available to him. This, too, he will have to suit to the special requirements of his class.

Real education has to draw out the best from the boys and girls to be educated. This can never be done by packing ill-assorted and unwanted information into the heads of the pupils. It becomes a dead weight crushing all originality in them and turning them into mere automata. If we were not ourselves victims of the system, we would long ago have realized the mischief wrought by the modern method of giving mass education, especially in a case like India’s.

Attempts have undoubtedly been made by many institutions to produce their own text-books with more or less success. But in my opinion they do not answer the vital needs of the country.

I lay no claim to originality for the views I have endeavoured to set forth here. They are repeated here for the benefit of the managers and teachers of Harijan schools, who have a tremendous task before them. They dare not be satisfied with mere mechanical work resulting in simply making the children under their charge indifferently and in a parrot-like manner learn the books chosen anyhow. They have undertaken a great trust which they must discharge courageously, intelligently and honestly.

The task is difficult enough but not so difficult as one would imagine, provided the teacher or the manager puts his whole heart into the work. If he becomes a parent to his pupils, he will instinctively know what they need and set about giving it to them. If he has it not to give, he will proceed to qualify himself. And seeing that we have started with the idea that the boys and girls have to have instruction in accordance with their wants, no extraordinary cleverness or possession of external knowledge is required in a teacher of Harijan and, for that matter, any other children.

And when it is remembered that the primary aim of all education is, or should be, the moulding of the character of pupils, a teacher who has a character to keep need not lose heart.

_Harijan, 1–12–1933_

263. A ‘DOUBLE HELL’

A Harijan servant in Orissa gives me a graphic description of his visit to some Harijan quarters in Balasore District, near Bhadrak:¹

¹ The letter is not reproduced here. The correspondent, describing the waterlogged, stinking Harijan quarters and referring to the article “Another Plague
Is it any wonder that we have malaria, plague, and cholera rampant in our midst? It is impossible to avoid these diseases so long as we neglect these useful members of society, consign them to the dirtiest places and, because of the monster of untouchability, we would not teach them to do their work in a proper and efficient manner. I suggest to workers all over the country that they must concentrate their effort upon the plague spots which they visit. Let us not be baffled by the vastness of the problem. Things will right themselves if everyone will attend to the work that comes his way. I would, therefore, advise the workers of Bhadrak to go to the merchants, make out a simple plan of improvement, present them with a budget, level up the ground, put up plinths and rebuild the fifteen houses. It cannot be a heavy budget and I doubt not that by sufficient importunity they will be able to raise a fund to reduce that plan to execution. The donors will find that the donations are a sound investment in a health-promoting project. It would be like putting their courtyards in order.

_Harijan, 1–11–1933_

264. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

ITARSI, December 1, 1933

BHAISHRI VALLABHBHAI,

I am writing this letter at 3.15 a.m. in a dharmashala at Itarsi. Mirabehn has gone to wash her face. After that we will pray, and then leave immediately to catch the train to Kareli, from where we have to go to Anantpur. Jethalal¹ is working there. Yesterday we were at Betul, and from there we came here by train, held a meeting and slept in this dharmashala.

I got your letter. How much can we do to counter what is being done by _The Times of India_? Still I go on doing what I can think of. I get very few opportunities to read newspapers these days. I feel that the Harijan work is being indeed watched by Hari. The power that draws hundreds of thousands of people at every place [that we visit] will also expose the lies. If we remain careful enough and make no mistakes, we shall have done our duty.

---

¹ Jethalal Govindji Sampat. _Vide_ “What I Saw in Anantpur”, 15–12–1933
I know very well that your spirit is following me in my tour. How do you know it is not protecting me? Didn’t I see every moment in Yeravda that you feel a mother’s love for me? The same love is visible in every line of your letters. And it is all-embracing. That is why you are carefully watching every day from there.

Please don’t worry about me, nor about what is happening in the country. This is God’s work. “Who can repair what has gone amiss, O Lord?”

We are in the train now. I take it that you will do whatever may be necessary regarding your nose.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-1: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 49–50

265. REMARKS ON DHARMASHALA, ITARSI

December 2, 1933

We were given shelter in this dharmashala for which we are thankful to its managers. I was greatly pleased to learn that Harijans who observe rules of cleanliness are also admitted.

M. K. GANDHI

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Madhya Pradesh aur Gandhiji, p. 117

266. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

December 1, 1933

CHI. AMALA,

I have your letter. I call it good because it is truthful. I knew you were deceiving yourself and me. Will you now tell me what your nature demands? If it demands simply being in my presence, it cannot be satisfied. If it demands more teaching work and a life natural to most Europeans, I shall try to help you with hope of success. You should confer with Jamnalalji when he returns. Meanwhile do so with Dwarakanathji. You ought to be steady and brave. To desire to die is cowardice. There is nobody about you who has any wish to repress you. You have built in front of you a mountain of difficulties. Make your choice resolutely and act.

It is nearing 3.30 a.m. now. I get up always as usual, at 3 a.m.
Just after washing I read your letter and began this. You must be wise and sure.

Love.

BAPU

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

267. LETTER TO SURENDRA MASHRUWALA

December 2, 1933

CHI. SURENDRA,

I have your letter.

Yes, for the present you may build up your health. You may go after Jamnalalji returns from the hill-station. There is no doubt that just now there is no other duty for us except that of serving the Harijans and going to jail. Even in respect of these two I see that very few would now remain who would choose the second course. Hardships in jails are likely to increase now. Life in jails requires the utmost degree of physical and psychological tapascharya. Only a handful of us, therefore, would be ready for jail-going now. Those who do not understand the religious meaning of suffering in jail have no place in jail at all.

There is no escape from undertaking fasts unto death. Whether it comes today or tomorrow is another question.

The above portion was written at three sittings. This is the fourth. It is 3.30 in the morning. I am with Jethalal in his Ashram at Anantpur. The solitude of the hour is perfect. Mirabehn and Om are sleeping on one side. There is no sound except of their breathing. Now to resume the question of the fasts. They, too, will come by and by. They will commence when we are fit for them. Today foolish people are freely using this most effective weapon, but everywhere I hear stories about their fasts. Fortunately, few people can remain hungry for a long time. Hence the number of those who merely copy the example of others is insignificant. But their cases demonstrate that when used without one’s being qualified for it the weapon has no value at all. It is such a wonder weapon that it can never do harm. When an unqualified person resorts to it, it will harm his health a little that is all. Such people cannot even prolong their fast to the point of death. My purpose in writing all this you is that we have nothing to think or do except cultivating fitness. We should not even wish that the fasts should commence. We should be ready, that is all. While I am alive, no one else need on his own resort to a fast for the service of the Harijansor in connection with satyagraha for any other object. Tell durbari that he can write whenever he wants. He need have no hesitation at all. If he throws himself into service heart and soul, many of the difficulties will solve themselves.

How do you use your time these days? What is your diet? You must drink milk and eat ghee as you need to build up your helth. Do not count the cost. They will be easily available. Therefore accept them. If we do not get them, we should not feel disappointed. But when they are available, we should regard it our duty to accept them.
When you have cultivated indifference to taste, it is unnecessary to feel hesitant in such matter. If you do not get either of the two things in jail, are you not going to do without them? “He whose understanding is secure, who is undeluded, who knows Brahman and who rests in Brahman, will neither be glad to get what is pleasant, nor sad to get what is unpleasant.” 1 The body has been rightly compared to Chintamani. If we look upon it as an instrument [of service] given by God, we are duty-bound to take proper care of the God-given instrument. Even in jail you should not hesitate to inform the authorities about your physical condition. After thus taking the necessary steps for the protection of the body, we may sing, ‘Let this body perish or survive.’

It is now four o’clock and the others have got up. Preparations have started for the prayer and so I must stop.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C. W. 10735. Courtesy: Gomatibehn
Mashruwala

268. LETTER TO VIDYA A. HINGORANI

December 2, 1933

CHI. VIDYA,

I hope you are in good spirits. Do you go out for walks? What do you eat? Give up the craze for examinations; but do not give up the love for learning. Whatever time you can spare, devote it to im-

1 A Parsi prohibition worker of Surat District
2 Bhagavad Gita, V. 20; for Gandhiji’s translation, proving your Hindi. Once you have mastered Hindi, turn to English. You may devote some time to English even now; but Hindi should have precedence. Did Dr. Choithram get my letter? Have you any information?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Hindi: Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

269. SPEECH AT SAGAR

December 2, 1933

It is a good omen to me and to my cause and service of Harijans that such a big rush of people has come for me. I believe that they really want to drive out this curse of untouchability from the Hindu society. All are equal in the eyes of God and they have equal right to use public wells, schools and temples. The present movement is directed towards self-purification and one should not think oneself high or low in one’s estimation.

The form in which untouchability is practised in India is to be found in no other country and it does not find support in the code of Manu. I am not an atheist. I have fifty years of experience and have not observed such distinction.

Replying to a long letter received from sanatanists, he said he had not practised adharma. If he did so he would be guilty in the eyes of God and man alike.

Even if I am left alone, I will preach this very thing.

Continuing, he advised the audience not to insult or injure the sanatanists but to love them as a mother loves her child. He firmly believed that a day would soon come when the sanatanists also would be with him.

Turning to the Harijans, he advised them to cultivate habits of cleanliness and give up carrion-eating and to abstain from drink. He dwelt on the efficacy of prayer and advised the Harijans to pray every morning in Hindi, because no knowledge of Sanskrit was necessary for prayer. He recalled his own 50 years’ experience and showed how God had relieved him in moments of difficulties. While going to the temples they should go after a bath and in clean dress.

The Bombay Chronicle, 8–11–1933
270. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, JABALPUR

December 3, 1933

If this effort to abolish root and branch the distinctions of high and low succeeds, it will have a healthy reaction on all spheres of life, and the struggle between capital and labour will cease and give place to co-operation and concord between the two.¹ If we have understood the full implications of this war against untouchability, we should have no difficulty in realizing that untouchability based on birth is only one of the countless phases of that curse. We should thus be better serving the cause of freedom and communal unity that I have at heart. My faith in the movement has grown from day to day. I implicitly believe that, if we succeed in abolishing untouchability from Hinduism, all the quarrels between classes and communities that we see today in India will cease. The differences between Hindus and Mussalmans and between capital and labour will be composed. Once the hearts are purified, it will be found easy to overcome all difficulties in the way of a heart unity. The phase we are at present dealing with does not exhaust all the possibilities of the struggle. The untouchability as practised today in Hinduism is the worst of all the phases. Masquerading under the name of religion, it has contributed most to the degradation of man by man. I have said that untouchability is a many-headed monster and appears in many shapes and forms, some of them so subtle as not to be easily detected. There are many degrees in untouchability. I was conscious of all these implications when I took up this war and made up my mind to devote my full energy, in the evening of my life, to this work.

All true scouts have my blessings.² In my many wanderings over many parts of the world, I have come in contact with thousands of boy scouts. True scouts are brave, considerate, courteous, and intelligent. They should have a full sense of their duty. They have been working to preserve order at the numerous fairs in the country where millions gather. I would also like them to give a part of their time to the service of the Harijans. Anyone who sees Harijan quarters with my eye will be convinced that there is ample scope for service for all who have the will and the capacity to do it. It does not require extraordinary intelligence. The only thing required is a sense of identification with the Harijans.

¹ In an address presented by the local labour union, it was asked why Gandhiji did not work for ameliorating the condition of labourers and protecting them against exploitation by capitalists.
² The National Boy Scouts had presented an address to Gandhiji.
There is no end of difficulties in the way, but there is not a single difficulty for which there is no remedy. The beauty of a religious movement lies in the fact that all difficulties blocking its progress are automatically solved. God himself clears the way. His is the guiding hand, we are but His instruments. If we gird up our loins to fight this age-old sin against God and man and observe fully the conditions laid down by Shastras and followed by sages of old and humbly seek Divine aid in our undertaking, we are sure to win the grace of God. These conditions require a thorough observance of truth and non-violence and the utmost sacrifices and sufferings. If we have all that and, above all, charity and goodwill for our opponents, the difficulties, howsoever great, will surely melt away.

Harijan, 15-12-1933

271. TELEGRAM TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

JABALPUR,

December 4, 1933

BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

KATRA KHUSHALRAI

CHANDNI CHOWK, DELHI

YOUR WIRE LETTER. AM CONSULTING ANSARI. GOD BLESS YOU. WIRING LATER.

LOVE.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 2403

272. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

JABALPUR,

December 4, 1933

BHAISHRI VALLABHBHAI

We arrived at Jabalpur last evening. It is 6.30 just now. I got your letter yesterday in Katni. I saw the work being done at Anantpur. It is all solid, but for that very reason it is also slow. Jethalal is an extremely efficient worker.

Gordhanbhai is very much displeased with my conduct. I am of course trying to explain things to him. His idea is to spend the money in foreign countries. I have advised him against doing that. He has not consulted me yet regarding the will. If he does, I will naturally remember what you have said in your letter. The whole thing seems strange, but I wouldn’t be surprised if what we hear were really true. Whatever it is, the truth will come out in time. The big guns are expected today. I see that all will meet tomorrow.\(^1\) We shall be put up at different places. Aunt is coming. Ansari also may come.

Brijkrishna is on his death-bed. You know that during the fast he had looked after me with the utmost devotion. I keep myself informed about his condition. There is a wire from Dr. Ansari saying that there is a possibility that he may survive the crisis.

I learnt only from your letter that Mahadev had been given a companion\(^2\). Joshi is keeping very well. I heard about Ba only yesterday after we had arrived here. I am glad.

The Harijan work is progressing satisfactorily. So far everything may be said to have gone well.

_Blessings to you both from_

_BAPU_

\[\text{[From Gujarati]}
Bapuna Patro-2 : Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 50-1\]

273. _LETTER TO GODAVARI_

_December 4, 1933_

CHI. GODAVARI\(^3\).

I am longing to see you ever since I arrived. Rajendra Singh\(^4\) inquired in the morning and I sent a message [for you] to come at 8 o’clock, but you have every right to come whenever you wish.

_Blessings from_

_BAPU_

From Hindi : C.W. 9670

\(^1\) An informal meeting of the Congress Working Committee was being held at Jabalpur.

\(^2\) Girdhari, J. B. Kripalani’s brother’s son

\(^3\) Wife of Seth Govinddas, who had been accepted as daughter by Gandhiji in 1932.

\(^4\) Gandhiji’s host at Jabalpur.
274. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

December 5, 1933

CHI. AMALA,

This is being written before morning prayer time. I have your further letter. You must not conceal things from me or act unnaturally to please me. That would be a wrong way to go about it. You will please me most by being quite natural. Your own room is quite untidy. You are not taking care of your finger. It is high time you got well. You should go to a hill, if you cannot be better there.

Love.

BAPU

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

275. LETTER TO N. S. HARDIKAR

J[UBBUL] PORE,

December 5, 1933

DEAR HARDIKAR,

What has overcome you has been the fate of many hospital patients. You will soon get over the mental weakness. If the surrounding atmosphere causes mental weakness, you must find your strength from within.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

DR. N. S. HARDIKAR
C/O MR. M. PAI
KRISHNANIVAS
LINKING ROAD
KHAR, B. B. C. I.
BOMBAY SUBURBAN

From the original: N.S. Hardikar Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
December 6, 1933

I have said that those who come to these gatherings as an appreciation of my political services and not because they believe in removal of untouchability deceive themselves and me. I invite only sympathizers and opponents to these meetings, the latter if they wish to signify their opposition. I want you to be true to yourselves and reject me if you do not see eye to eye with me in this matter.

There are two sets of pundits who give opposite interpretations of Shastras. The layman then has to make use of his Godgiven reason and choose between the two. Untouchability, I have found, appeals neither to the intellect nor to the heart. The essential urge of the heart is towards compassion and sympathy for the sinner. Temples are meant for sinners, where they can wash away their sins. What is the use of temples to a liberated sinless soul, who sees God everywhere? If you believe that Harijans are in their present plight today as a result of their past sins, you must concede that they have the first right of worship in temples. God has been described by all the scriptures of the world as a Protector and Saviour of the sinner.

There is untouchability in the Shastras in a particular sense. Anger, lust and other evil passions raging in the heart are the real untouchables. It is a prostitution of Shastras to interpret them as sanctioning the distinctions we observe today. A true man of piety will consider himself a sinner and, therefore, untouchable. We in our haughtiness have hitherto misinterpreted the Shastras and have raised a sin to the status of a religious tenet. I claim to be a true sanatanist, because I make the greatest effort I can to live up to the truth as I see it. Diversity there certainly is in the world, but it means neither inequality nor untouchability. An elephant and an ant are dissimilar. Nevertheless God has said that they are equal in His eyes. The inner 1 Earlier, the meeting was addressed by a sanatanist Swami with Gandhiji’s permission. The burden of his speech was that the large gatherings came to pay homage to Gandhiji as a political leader and not because they accepted his views on untouchability.

---

2 In the address presented there was a reference to the debate between Shankara, the reformer, and Mandanmisra, the formalist, which took place in Mahishmati, the ancient seat of learning, now Mandla.
oneness pervades all life. The forms are many, but the informing spirit, is one. How can there be room for distinctions of high and low where there is this all-embracing fundamental unity underlying the outward diversity? For that is a fact meeting you at every step in daily life. The final goal of all religions is to realize this essential oneness.

_Harijan, 15-12-1933_

277. LETTER TO KASTURBA GANDHI

_FOR SHRIMATI KASTURBA GANDHI_ _FROM M. K. GANDHI BY KIND PERMISSION OF_ _SUPERINTENDENT, YERAVDA GAOL_

_FOR SHRI AMATSALAM BY KIND PERMISSION OF_ _SUPERINTENDENT, YERAVDA GAOL_

You must have got the letter sent with Ranchhodbhai. Take care of your health. Do not worry about anything. You shouldn’t go on thinking about things. Trust my life to God. Can there be any better protector than He? There has been no change in my food. Wherever I go, _pendas_¹ are kept ready for me. Generally I accept them, but sometimes I refuse. My personal needs are looked after by Mirabehn and Om. Mirabehn has only one thought day and night. She doesn’t attend any meeting, but spends all her time in keeping things ready for me. She keeps well. I had got cold but I am better now. I am in Jabalpur today. Gopi’s parents live here. I met them and her younger sister. Govinddas’s house also is in this town. Brijkrishna is still seriously ill. Ask somebody to write to him. Prabhavati writes to me. Take proper care about your food. If you need anything, get it through Ranchhodbhai or Chimanlal. How is your mouth and the foot? Who are your companions? Write to me at the Wardha address. I hope all the women are in good health. Tell Amatsalamm that I have written a letter to her. Ask Mani to write to me. I hope she keeps good health.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

[From Gujarati]
_Bapuna Bane Patro, pp. 1-2_

¹ A sweetmeat
278. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

December 7, 1933

CHI. NARANDAS,

I have discussed with Harakhchand and Jivanlal the proposal for Purushottam’s betrothal. They are eager to settle another connection and have pressed me not to enter into negotiations with any other party for the time being. Accordingly, I am doing nothing for the present. I feel sure that Harakhchand will offer his daughter. I think you also know this. I think about you every day. I hope all of you are well. As for myself, I am being protected by God.

Blessings to you all from

BAPU

279. LETTER TO BHAILAL M. PATEL

December 7, 1933

BHAI BHAILAL,

I got your letter. I am happy to learn that you have been doing Harijan work with single-minded devotion. May your devotion remain the same for ever and your work bear fruit.

Vandemataram from

MOHANDAS

From a photostat of the Gujarati G.N. 3300.

280. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

JABALPUR,

December 7, 1933

BHAISHRI VALLABHBHAI,

I had a very long letter from Gordhanbhai which of course I didn’t preserve. He had pointed out in it all my shortcomings and contrasted them with Vithalbhai’s virtues. I had returned a very loving reply to that letter. I have received no acknowledgment. As for the money which is lying with me, he had sent me an oral message. I told Mathuradas in reply that I would not let it be used in foreign countries. You must have seen that he has now made a public appeal to me. We shall know the whole truth by and by. I hope to be able to manage the situation well enough. You needn’t worry.

I will write regularly to Ba. This time she was not very willing to go to jail. But God will see that everything is all right. Thakkar Bapa had shown me your letter. It was not his fault at all. He tries hard indeed to save me from all inconvenience. He doesn’t let any troublesome people come near me. He saves me from a great many things, but sometimes he is helpless. I am sure we shall learn from experience and things will keep improving. Don’t worry about this either. “God’s will be done.”

Kishorelal is ill. He is a little better now. He is in Bombay. Write to him.

Jivraj’s health seems to have been affected very much. He is in Hotel Rugby in Matheran.

Mathuradas was in the crowd. He is still with me. He will remain with me up to Delhi. His health also seems to have been affected. He suffers from backache. He cannot move freely. If he takes rest I think he will regain strength. It may be said that, at the meeting, they talked a little and then left. Maulana Saheb and the Doctor tried to persuade me not to be uncompromising. On my explaining my conflict of duties, they became silent. The matter was discussed in minute detail. I felt that Nariman had no sense. I told them: “If somebody writes ‘Whither India?’ and another writes ‘Whither Congress?’, I hope it wouldn’t seem too much if I write ‘Whither Nariman?’.” Jawahar is indeed a jewel. About Jamnalalji I needn’t write anything. He has put on weight. His health is all right, more or less. Chikhalda benefited him very much. The condition of his ear is as bad as that of your nose. One is without nose, and the other is deaf. To whom may I complain about these difficulties? Please let me know, however, if the injections help you now. I like your idea of trying neti. But who will

---

1 The reference is to the sum accumulated with Gandhiji from the monthly instalments of about half the salary that Vithalbhai used to draw as Speaker, Central Legislative Assembly.
2 Dr. Jivraj Mehta
3 He had attended the meeting of the Congress Working Committee.
4 Literally, ‘jewel’.
5 A yogic practice of cleaning the nasal canal teach you the method? I claim to be an expert in it. Can I not be called there as one? If you don’t know the correct way there may be a little bleeding. Generally a straw is used in the beginning. I would advise you not to do so. Fine cloth will suffice. If you do it slowly, there will be no difficulty. Krishanadas’Mahadev and Devdas were taught by me. Devdas used to bleed, but the reason for that was different. He had, therefore, to give up the practice.

Janakibehn had accompanied Jamnalal. The two left last evening.

I learnt only from you that Giridhari was placed with Mahadev. Surendra and Dubari are at Wardha. Both of them are well. Madhavji has just been released. He has come here to see me. He will leave for Karadi today. He is all right. Chandrashankar is doing full justice to his work. Kaka and Swami have gone to Matheran for four or five days.

I will reach Delhi on the 10th.

Blessings to both from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-2 : Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 51-3

281. LETTER TO SURENDRA MASHRUWALA

December 7, 1933

CHI. SURENDRRA,

I have your letter. We live but for a moment, and live with our labour or at any rate ought to do so. Only so shall we become fully alive.

Do not be obsessed with the idea of the fast. One must be ready for it and cultivate fitness for it, that is all.

I see no harm in both of you entering the temple from there. We have no money and should not have any. For that reason it seems right to me that you should go [to jail] from there. Jamnalalji would

1 Once Gandhiji’s secretary
2 A Parsi prohibition worker of Surat District
3 Madhavji V. Thakkar
4 Meaning jail
not leave you in peace.

Madhavji wishes to go to Karadi. I approve. He is not at Wardha. He has to choose his field of work, and therefore can choose only Karadi. Moreover, it seems but proper that one of you three should go [to jail] from there. Since Madhavji has money, let him go from Karadi.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C. W. 10734. Courtesy: Gomatibehn Mashruwala

282. LETTER TO DURBARI

DEAR DURBARI,

I got your letter. Personally I like the idea of wearing the sacred thread and vest. From your point of view it certainly cannot have any religious significance. But respecting harmless customs is also religion. You should meet members of your family if you can do so without letting it interfere in any way with your mission of service. Serving any of them individually is now outside your field of duty. However, it is not proper for me to confuse your thinking. Your dharma lies in what Surendra advises. He alone will save you. However, you will have to give up the desire of living even with him. It is not at all likely that you will be together in jail. Of course it would be good if that happened of its own.

I am glad that your health has improved.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C. W. 10736. Courtesy: Gomatibehn Mashruwala

283. LETTER TO VIDYA A. HINGORANI

DEAR VIDYA,

I got your letter. When I advised you to give up inhibition’ I meant that you should not hesitate to take what help you need from other brothers and sisters. One can get such help through heart-felt humility. If you can’t get it, then do engage a maidservant. The attempt should be gradually to do away with the practice of employing servants and do all work by ourselves; but this is possible only when your health improves. Do not think that I am asking you to do everything all at once. Do it as your strength permits.

1 Vide “Letter to Vidya A. Hingorani”, 26-11-1933

Have you understood me now? Do write to me all details.

Blessings from

BAPU

284. SPEECH AT LEONARD THEOLOGICAL COLLEGE

Jabalpur,

December 7, 1933

I, who believe in the equality of the great religions of the world and from my early days have learnt to honour other religions as my own, have no difficulty in inviting and taking the co-operation to the followers of other religions in this movement. It is part of my nature. This is essentially a matter of repentance on the part of the so-called higher classes. They have to do reparation for the wrongs they have hitherto done to a portion of themselves on whose backs they have hitherto ridden. It is an effort on the part of Hindu reformers to blot out this shame from the face of Hinduism. I have not hesitated to say that either untouchability lives and Hinduism perishes, or untouchability goes and Hinduism rises purified. It is a life-and-death struggle between the darkness of superstition and the light of reform. If this reform in Hinduism comes about, I have not the shadow of a doubt that it will be a service not only of all the communities of India but of the whole of humanity. I am not thinking of achieving this reform by any form of compulsion, including legal. It is said that, in trying to seek support for the two Bills now before the Assembly, I am really supporting a policy of legal compulsion. I do not want to repeat here the whole argument against that contention; but I want to assure you that there is no compulsion in the Bills; and those who care to study them will endorse my opinion. This must be a reform from within. It is not a political movement. I do not want to deny that it will have great political results, but I have never for a moment thought of achieving through this movement the political rise of the so-called upper class Hindus. It is to my mind a movement of downright purification.
Having made these introductory remarks, it is easy for me to tell you on what terms you can give your assistance to the movement. You should work in co-operation with and, if I may say it, in subordination to the Society that has been formed for suppression and eradication of untouchability, namely, the Servants of Untouchables Society. That is to say, you should put your talents at the disposal of the Society. I do not mean metallic talents. These have to come from those who have to make repentance and reparation. I have seen during the few days of my tour that millions are ready for the reform. They can tangibly signify their support only by giving their coppers. But men and women of intelligence are wanted to work for the Harijans in a variety of ways. For the so-called caste Hindus to serve the Harijans in a constructive manner is to get off their backs, to go down on their knees to them, to treat Harijan children as their own and Harijan men and women as blood-brothers and sisters. It is almost a superhuman task and cannot be done without Divine aid. But Divine aid comes largely through human agency. I confess that we have too few teachers and other professional men and women in our ranks. We want to cope with the ever increasing demand. I invite the aid of agencies like yours in this work. You will now understand what I mean by subordination. This is the right way.

But there is also the wrong way. You may choose to work independently. You may have the conversion of Harijans to Christianity. You may see in the movement a chance for propaganda. If you work among the Harijans with such an aim, you can see that the very end we have in view will be frustrated. If you believe that Hinduism is a gift, not of God but of Satan, quite clearly you cannot accept my terms. You and I would be dishonest if we did not make clear to one another what we stand for.

Harijan, 15-12-1933

285. A LETTER

[Before December 8, 1933]\(^1\)

A public servant has no personal feelings to be considered. He must be a cypher. He can have no pride nor power nor prestige except such as service gives him. He must [be] तुत्त्वत्त्वात्त्विजीतः// मानाभावात्त्विजीतः—2. Therefore, you may not be ruffled on my behalf or

---

1 This was published in a report date-lined “Harda, 8-12-1933”.
2 One “who is evenminded in praise and blame”, who “holds alike respect and disrespect”. Bhagavad Gita, “Discourses on the “Gita” on behalf of the cause. The cause is not in your or my hands. It is in God’s all-powerful hands. You and I are His instruments. You must rejoice in your humiliation and feel strong.

_Harijan_, 15-12-1933

286. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

_Deceber 8, 1933_

CHL. MARY.

We pass through Betul on 15th. I am quite sure that if I carried on a propaganda for selling puff powder you will find me deserted and pieless.

You are right about sword practice.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 6016. Also C.W. 3342. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

287. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

_Deceber 7/9, 1933_

CHL. AMALA.

Your letter. My blood-pressure fluctuates between 155 and 168. Are you any the wiser for the information? Why should you bother about things you cannot understand! Ask me how I am and you will get the answer. Let technical matters be left to the doctors. I have told you that I am not going to drive you from the Ashram. If the life suits you and you can conform to the discipline, stay there by all means.

You must cook your own simple vegetable if the general thing contains condiments. Or you may ask Dwarakanathji to have plain boiled vegetable for you.

Ba is quite all right.

I hope you are eating fruit.

So you are teaching Sumitra English!

Love.

BAPU

1 The letter was written on December 7 and the postscript on December 9.
[PS.] You ought to come to the station on 15th. The finger should be all right.

BAPU

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

288. LETTER TO KISAN GHUMATKAR

December 9, 1933

MY DEAR KISAN,

I had your letter today in the train. Unless you have already left, I suggest your joining the Madras Mail at Wardha on 15th instant. I take the Grand Trunk Mail at Delhi on 14th inst. I am glad you are strong both in body and mind.

Love.

BAPU

SHRIMATI KISANBEHN
GANESH TERRACE
GIRGAUM BACK RD.
BOMBAY
C.W. 9689

289. LETTER TO RUKMINIDEVI BAZAJ

December 9, 1933

CHI. RUKMINI,

I got your postcard. During a tour how can one get time to write letters? Even today I have got only a few minutes and am using them to write this. It is God’s kindness that Devendra is growing so well. I hear occasionally from Radha. I have just heard that Santok’s mother passed away.

I hope you get the Harijan.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9155
290 LETTER TO NANABHAI I. MASHRUWALA

December 9, 1933

BHAI NANABHAI,

I got your letter. I have sent a wire to Vrajlalji. I hope Shanti is recovering. One wishes that the children were as careful about their health as they are about their studies. I had a letter from Gomati regarding Kishorelal. He is not likely to become completely healthy now. I also had a letter from Manilal and Sushila. I have written a long letter to them.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6690. Also C.W. 4335. Courtesy: Kanubhai Mashruwala

291. LETTER TO MANU GANDHI

December 9, 1933

CHI. MANU,

It seems you have completely forgotten me. You don’t even reply to me. Shouldn’t you write at least about Kusum’s health? How is she? I had a letter from Ba from jail. She is worrying about you and Kusum. Write to her. How are you? How is aunt Bali? I am writing this in a running train.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Write to me at the Wardha address.

292. SPEECH AT JAMIA MILLIA, DELHI

December 10, 1933

I have learnt enough Urdu while I was in jail and if I happen to go there again I shall come out as an Urdu scholar.
Islam enjoins upon us tolerance towards others’ religions. It doesn’t say that other religions are false. He alone who does good to others is a true man. This is the principle of the Koran as also the teaching of other religions. The students of the Jamia, I hope, will spread the message of unity and freedom throughout the country.

I do not propose to attend the Hindu-Muslim unity conference. I want unity of hearts among the followers of the two faiths so that Mother India may attain freedom.

[From Hindi]

293. SPEECH AT LABOURERS’ MEETING

DELHI,

_Delhi, December 10, 1933_

[Gandhiji] congratulated the organizers of his programme on the happy beginning made with a visit to Harijan quarters and followed by the labourers meeting.

Thanking them for the purse, the Mahatma said he knew that half the amount in the purse was contributed by the employer (Mr. G. D. Birla) and half by the labourers from the Labour Welfare Fund. To present such a big sum was the work of rich persons and not of labourers, and besides this, most of them were Harijans and it did not behove him to take money from them to remove the curse of untouchability. It was the duty of high-caste Hindus like Mr. Birla to contribute money to wipe out untouchability, and he hesitated to accept money from Harijans, but all the same he accepted it, since they volunteered it, but, added the Mahatma, he would have preferred it if the Harijans had given up liquor or smoking and contributed those savings for Harijan work. The money thus contributed would have been more helpful in the noble mission. He recalled, in this connection, the contribution raised by Bhopal students yesterday by raising a pie-fund.

Continuing, the Mahatma said the Hindus, in patronizing the Harijan movement, were really doing a penance (prayashchitta) for their age-long sins, and this penance must be sincere. If they failed to do it, God alone knew what their fate would be.

1 About 5,000 labourers and others attended the meeting held in the Birla Mills. A purse of Rs. 2,000 and an address on a banana leaf were presented to Gandhiji. He remarked: “The idea of presenting the address on a banana leaf is very good, but you should have given me some fruit to eat.” Soon after a basket of fruit was brought.
Referring to the Harijan reform work done in the Birla Mills, Mahatma said:

It is no news to me that you have wiped out untouchability in the Birla Mills. Ghanshyamdasji has merely paid the debt that he owed as a high-caste Hindu to the Harijans and as a millowner to labourers.

It was the religious duty of every Hindu, be he a mill-owner or poor man, to root out untouchability from this land. In doing so, they were merely doing their duty and did not deserve any thanks.

Continuing, the Mahatma sounded a note of warning in the following words:

Wipe out untouchability or Hinduism will be wiped out from the world.

Referring to some sanatanists, who did not agree with him in this reform movement, Mahatma said:

I have tried my best to persuade sanatanists to my view and have given my best attention to their arguments, but they have failed to convince me by a single proof from the Shastras giving sanction to untouchability.

Continuing, the Mahatma appealed to the labourers to give up liquor, smoking and other evil practices and lead a pure life internally as well as externally. He laid stress on God’s worship and added that faith in God alone could put an end to their sorrows. He concluded with a prayer for the welfare of labourers, saying that he also regarded himself as a labourer by choice. It was better to be a labourer than to be an employer. (Cheers)

The Mahatma humorously remarked:

I feel very much tempted to finish the fruit, but give it to Harijan children and they will reach me.

The Hindustan Times, 11-12-1933

294. DISCUSSION WITH HARIJANS

DELI,

December 10, 1933

Q. Do you consider temple-entry as the only way to solve our troubles?

A. It is my firm belief that caste Hindus will not have fulfilled their obligations till they have opened all their temples to Harijans. It is immaterial to me whether Harijans come to worship in those temples or not. It is a matter of sheer justice and penance for caste Hindus. It is repugnant to my sense of justice that Harijans should be excluded. from places of worship which are open to other Hindus. I would not consider untouchability as having been eradicated, unless and until the bar against Harijans’ entry into temples is removed altogether.

Q. Will you not help us in our economic distress? To us economic uplift is the chief thing.

A. The economic uplift has not been overlooked. But I should not be satisfied if you were given crores of rupees and yet were still considered untouchables, or if palaces were built for you and you were still kept out of the pale of Hindu society. I should be satisfied only when you are put on a par with caste Hindus in every respect. Thus economic uplift is only one of the many items in our programme.

Q. We should not conceal from you our misgivings about the money collected by you being properly used for our welfare. It depends upon your getting honest workers to work out the scheme, of whom there are very few at present. Would you not then put the funds into our hands to be used according to our discretion? We must tell you frankly we do not trust the present workers.

A. I do not mean to say that no Harijans can take part in the disbursement of the funds. But as the whole reform is conceived as a matter of penance and reparation on the part of caste Hindus, they have to find the best way of using them. They must be guided by the advice of Harijans, but the actual administration of the funds has to rest with them. I may assure you that the least part of these funds will be spent for propaganda. By far the greater part will go directly into the pockets of Harijans. I have no reason to believe that all those who are doing Harijan service today are actuated by selfish motives. There must be a few cases where workers are not as you and I would have them to be, but the majority have taken up this work in the proper spirit. Many of them are of unimpeachable character and would do credit to any movement. Apart from all this, however, I want you to visualize the conditions of thousands of Harijans who are so suppressed that they have fallen below the average standard of humanity. They are voiceless. They consider themselves sub-human. In Orissa, some years back, an old man came to me with a straw in his mouth. I tried to awaken in him the sense that he was my equal as a human being. Another Harijan came to me in Cochin all trembling with fear. He was considered invisible in those parts and was afraid of coming into the world of touchables. These people are a standing reproach to us. In the work I am doing, I have these in mind. This service, then, has been taken up, not so much to please Harijans as to discharge a peremptory obligation. We want to wipe out our shame and to die in that effort if need be. We are striving to the best of our ability to render you selfless service, but if Harijans do not accept it, I shall know that we are too late. But the month’s experience convinces me that the vast majority gladly accept this service. We do not wish to leave a single phase of your life untouched. We approach you as servants and not as patrons.

1 In December 1927; vide ,"Our Shame and their Shame

Q. You have only added a new name ‘Harijan’ to the many names we already had. Even this new name is significant of our separateness from the others. Unless this sense of separateness goes, in fact as well as in name, how are we to be satisfied?

A. The name ‘Harijan’ was suggested by one of your own class. Thousands have welcomed the name as a good substitute for the offensive names ‘untouchable’ and ‘avarna’. So long as untouchability is not completely removed, a name to distinguish you from others will be required, and an inoffensive name is any day better than one that stinks in the nostrils. When untouchability is gone and Harijans are merged into the Hindus, I do not know by what name—Harijan or Hindu—the whole community will choose to call itself, but till that day comes, distinguishing names will have to be used. You should know that I have become a Harijan by choice and am trying to serve you as one of yourselves; and I am sure that the service will, in the end, be accepted by all Harijans, if I have offered it in a selfless spirit. I would plead with you for a little more patience to see what is being done. The Harijan Sevak Sangh has no other end in view but your good.

_Harijan_, 22-12-1933

295. LETTER TO MANILAL AND SUSHILA GANDHI

DELHI, _December 10, 1933_

CHI. MANILAL AND SUSHILA,

I got the letters of you both. Which remarks of mine hurt so much? I don’t remember what I said to Kishorelal, but I have never thought you timid or cowardly. On the contrary, I have always been proud of your courage. But I do think that you are too dependent on others, that you do not have sufficient capacity to think for yourself. But that is not your fault. Partly it may be mine. You have nothing to feel ashamed about. I wrote a long letter to you by the last mail, from which you will be able to know clearly my views in this regard. Even your seeking my advice from here is a sign of your feeling of dependence.

If you make a mistake, I will not blame you even in my thoughts. I would do that if you betrayed the trust reposed in you. I do wish that you should keep the promises which you may have made to the people or to friends. I am not at all afraid of your present course. At the most the result would be your financial ruin. Let it be so. But don’t let people think that you acted foolishly. If you feel that you have made a mistake, admit it and free yourself. It is not as easy for me to give advice in this matter as you seem to think. If it were so, why wouldn’t I advise you immediately?

And now regarding your expenses. My remarks were not meant as criticism nor did they express my pain. I only wished to say that, having lived there in a certain manner, you could not easily change your mode of life here. I don’t wish that you should try our manner of life here at the cost of the health of all three of you. You yourself have calculated your monthly requirement at Rs. 150. I have put it at Rs. 200. But now even Rs. 150 can be obtained only as a favour. I would rather that you lived on plain fare than that you should depend on anybody’s favour. In short I am not satisfied with your way of life. I know that Sushila is much more careful than you in this matter. After reading your letters, I even felt like sending a cable to you asking you not to worry. But with whose money would that have been? How can a poor father send a cable to reassure his son? I, therefore, content myself with this letter. Have no fear of me, either of you. Live as both of you may think proper. Even if you cannot continue to live there despite your sincere efforts and come over here, God will provide you means of livelihood. Do whatever you do after independent thinking.

Nimu is pregnant again. Ramdas feels extremely miserable. I have tried to comfort him. A man and a woman cannot succeed in this aim without hard effort. But Ramdas is a weak man and thinks too much, so that even his weakness makes him unhappy.
Probably you know that Lakshmi also is pregnant. I came to know these facts about both of them only recently. I come to know about such things only after some time. Ba is happy in jail. Manibehn is with her. I am all right.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 4812

Blessings from
BAPU

296. LETTER TO RAMABEHN JOSHI

DELHI
December 11, 1933

CHI. RAMA,

I will write a long letter to Joshi. It seems that Dhiru feels weak. If you write to him regularly, I think he will be all right. I am glad that he seems to like the place.

I feel greatly relieved to know that you are happy there. Work hard and serve well. Learn everything you can. Ask Vimu to write a letter to me.

I now get letters from Ba. Her going to jail seems to have pleased the women very much. Mani is still with her.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 5360

297. LETTER TO VIDYA R. PATEL

DELHI
December 11, 1933

CHI. VIDYA,

I got your letter. It is good that you are under the special care of Ramabehn. Obey her. I have advised Dwarakanath that for some time you should be kept on milk, fruit and vegetables. That will improve your blood. You also require steambaths and hip-baths. The eyes should be sprinkled with warm water four or five times daily. The water must be clean.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C. W. 9639. Courtesy: Ravindra R. Patel
298. NOTE TO VIDYA. A. HINGORANI

BIRLA HOUSE,
NEW DELHI,
[December 11, 1933]

What is it you want? It is a matter of a few days. But I don’t wish to keep you if that upsets you or makes you unhappy. After all, later on you have to go to Wardha. But if you want to go to Multan I would not stop you. I want to make you happy and brave somehow. If I send you back to Wardha, I will do so only after making all the arrangements, otherwise we shall see what can be done. I will not send you to Bhavnagar. Dudhibehn’s programme is not certain. As long as I am here there is no such hurry. Shall talk tomorrow in the morning after my silence is over.

From a microfilm of the Hindi. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

299. TELEGRAM TO BHULABHAI DESAI

NEW DELHI,
December 12, 1933

BHULABHAI DESAI
WARDEN R [OA]D, BOMBAY 11

JUST HEARD YOUR ARRIVAL. HOPE COMPLETELY CURED.

GANDHI

Bhulabhai Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

300. LETTER TO KASTURBA GANDHI

DELHI,
December 12, 1933

BA,

This is the second letter to you in jail. I hope you are getting Jam-e-Jamshe 2 and Harijanbandhu now. Write to me if you want anything else. Mathuradas is still with me. I arrived in Delhi on the

1 The source has “December 1934”, which seems to be a slip. In December 1933, Gandhiji was in Delhi from 10th to 14th. And his silence day fell on the 11th. Vide also “Letter to Vidya A. Hingorani”, 25-12-1933.

2 A Gujarati daily published from Bombay
10th. I shall be leaving for Andhradesh on the 14th and Mathuradas will go to Bombay. Do not worry about me in the least. I will write to you regularly and tell you exactly how I am keeping. I take milk, mavo, etc., in sufficient quantity. The cold which I had has disappeared. Dr. Ansari is here. I am staying this time with Ghanshyamdasji. Jamnalalji also is likely to arrive here today. Prabhudas and his wife also are here. He will settle and take up some work somewhere on this side. Do not worry about Manilal. I have written to him a long letter. I don’t wish to suppress him. Santok’s mother has passed away. I have written a letter to her today. Brijkrishna is seriously ill. He is confined to bed. He is being treated by Dr. Ansari. They are hopeful that he will get all right. Radha seems to have fallen ill again. If you or any other women want anything, write to me about it.

I hope your jaws are functioning all right. How is Mani’s knee? Have you with you anything to read?

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Bane Patro, p. 2

301. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

DELHI,

December 12, 1933

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I got your letter, as also Jayaprakash’s. If both of you come to a firm decision that you would dedicate yourselves to service, I shall have nothing to say. I only explained to you both that it was not morally wrong to do one’s duty towards one’s own family, but that, if one wished to follow the path of service, one must renounce such private duties.¹

If you try to do both, you will probably fail in both. There will be no difficulty in sending Rs. 50 every month for Rajeshwar.² But that does not satisfy me. What arrangement have you made for your own expenses? What have you decided regarding the debt? By solving these problems anyhow, you will not have solved the basic problem. But I will not dwell further on this matter. I don’t wish to discourage Jayaprakash. We should hope that, since his motive is pure, everything will be all right.

¹ Vide “Letter to Prabhavati”, 23-11-1933
² Younger brother of Jayaprakash Narayan

You have not yet gone and seen Mother. You should do so now. Since your visit to me has been delayed so long, I shall now be far away. If you do not wish to get arrested there, you may come and see me during my Andhra tour, and then from Wardha you may go wherever you like. I think it would be best to go to Bihar. If you decide to go to Bihar, it is not very necessary for you to come and see me. If, however, you are very keen to come, by all means do come. I leave it entirely to your own wish. I shall be in Madras on 20, 21 and 22. I will start from here on the 14th. From the 16th to the 19th, I shall be around Bezwada. I shall be back in Andhra from 23rd to 31st, and the headquarters will be at Bezwada. You may now decide as you like.

Vidya felt bored and has come here. She has brought Kanta with her. I have not decided yet whether to let Vidya go to Multan or ask her to return to Wardha.

Om has been with me. I continue the same diet. The quantity of milk varies from three pounds to one pound. The cold which I had has gone. The weight was 108 pounds when I was weighed in Jabalpur. I have not been weighed after that. You need not worry about me at all. God will keep me in whatever condition. He wishes and get work done through me as He wills.

Could you see Rajendrababu? Did you see Father? How is he? I hear from Ba from time to time. Mani is still with her. Sushila, Pyarelal’s sister, is here. Her mother also is here. I have not met her yet.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G. N. 3436

302. LETTER TO JAYAPRAKASH NARAYAN

DELHI,
December 12, 1933

CHI. JAYAPRAKASH,

I have your letter. Your debt has thrown a new light on the situation and I have tried to explain to you your duty. Borrowing from another source does not solve the main problem. How will you repay the loan? What has been arranged about your expenses? I am hoping that it will not be difficult to arrange for Rs. 50 to be paid to Rajeshwar1 every month. I shall have a talk about it and let you know more definitely.

I hope you are now better. Father too will be well. I have written in detail to Prabhavati. So I stop here. Also I do not have the time for more.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Hindi original: Jayaprakash Narayan Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

303. LETTER TO KANTI GANDHI

DELHI,
December 13, 1933

CHI. KANTI2.

I hear that your teeth have become infected. But generally I feel satisfied with the reports I hear about you. I assume that you will get this letter. I often think of you. Somanji wrote to me about you and your companions and said that you had read and studied well. My tour is a difficult one, but it is progressing satisfactory. People come to the meetings in large numbers.

I am sure you know that Ramibehn’s Kusum is ill. Radha is ill again. So far I have been able to bear the strain of the tour.

Blessings to all from
BAPU

From Gujarati: C. W. 7284. Courtesy: Kanti Gandhi

---

1 Rajeshwar Narayan, addressee’s brother
2 Son of Harilal Gandhi
304. DISCUSSION WITH SANATANISTS

DELHI,

December 13, 1933

I claim to be a sanatanist as I consider my conduct to be in consonance with the spirit of the scriptures.¹ You may, if you like, reject my claim. I have studied the Shastras to the best of my ability and have arrived at the conclusion that untouchability is repugnant to the spirit of Hinduism.

They, however, contended that no one could be called sanatanist who did not believe in untouchability, shraddha, idol-worship and other outward observances. Gandhiji retorted that the only true test of sanatan dharma was the touchstone of truth. He added that the outward observance was nothing if a man lived a crooked life. What did outward form avail to a man who was a drunkard, rake and gambler?

When he was told that the attempt to have temples opened to Harijans was bound to lead to bloodshed, he said that was practically impossible, as there was no compulsion contemplated by anybody. No temple was to be opened where the overwhelming opinion of temple-goers was not in favour of such opening.

Harijan, 22-12-1933

305. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, ALIPUR

December 13, 1933

I would ask you to believe me when I say that there is no political motive behind my Harijan work. The political consequences of the removal of untouchability have no attraction for me. Indeed, I believe that, if we approached this question with a political motive, we should fail to serve the Harijans and we should damage Hinduism. That real removal of untouchability will have political consequences is true enough. A duty religiously performed carries with it many other important consequences. ‘Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and everything else will be added unto you’, is to my mind a scientific truth.

I must remind you of the pledge given last year in your name.

¹ The sanatanists had contended that Gandhiji had no right to call himself a sanatanist.
You will remember that a meeting of representatives of Hinduism was held in Bombay in September last year, Pandit Malaviyaji being in the chair. Among other things they resolved that untouchability, being a blot on the Hindu religion, had to be removed and that Harijans were entitled to the same public utilities, and in the same manner, as caste Hindus. There was in that Resolution a special reference to Hindu temples, and legislation was contemplated if it was found to be necessary for attaining the end. It is, therefore, the bounden duty of every caste Hindu to fulfil the pledge by throwing open to the Harijans temples, well and other institutions precisely on the same terms as they are open to caste Hindus.

_The Hindustan Times, 14-12-1933_

306. DISCUSSION AT SERVANTS OF UNTOUCHABLES SOCIETY MEETING

DELHI, December 13, 1933

Regarding the utilization of collections made during the tour Mahatma Gandhi said that 75 percent of these collections would be spent in the locality concerned so far as possible provided a suitable scheme was prepared and approved by the Central Board. The Provincial Boards should, however, not neglect their ordinary collections in the hope of getting money out of his collections. He stressed:

You dare not utilize any part of these collections for propaganda or office administration. They can be utilized to the single pie for constructive work alone. I am not touring India to finance your offices or to help your propaganda but to raise money enough for constructive work alone. You should collect money separately to meet the expenses of your office administration. If you do work out of the funds that I raise, the money paid by the public would be returned to them hundredfold. It should, therefore, be zealously guarded and cautiously spent.

Asked as to what opinion he could express about the work done so far, Mahatma Gandhi replied:

You cannot get any compliments if you want to get them. But I can say that you could have done the work much better and as for the future I can only say that you should do better than in the past.

1 Gandhiji had addressed the Central Board of the Society.
Regarding the question of democratization of the constitution of the Society, Mahatma Gandhi said that the present constitution should be worked democratically rather than bringing in a constitution democratic in form but autocratic in spirit.

His Holiness Garmuria Gosain of Assam and Mr. D. N. Sharma explained that ex-tea-garden coolies belonged to various provinces of India and were mostly Harijans. Their population in Assam was 10,50,000 out of whom only 5,000 were literate. They were commonly addicted to liquor or other such vices. They had been economically exploited by Kabulis and Marwaris.

Mahatma Gandhi said that he knew about this deplorable state.

It is a social problem but to me it seems that the harvest is ready but the labourers are few. We require workers to solve this question. It cannot be solved by law. It requires work in the midst of these people from day to day without expectation of immediate result. It would be better to prepare statistics of these men by provinces so that a way might be found out to invite workers from other provinces to go there and work. Money alone will not give the kind of workers required. If I succeed in reaching Assam I will study the conditions and try to raise some local workers. If I fail in this, I would have no doubt that Assam is the most backward of all provinces. The question is, however, not only of untouchability but of a different type, but if Assam produces the proper type of workers there will be no difficulty in getting funds enough for carrying on that work.

The Hindustan Times, 16-12-1933

307. SPEECH AT STUDENTS’ MEETING, DELHI

December 13, 1933

It is no exaggeration to say that our relations were as intimate as between blood-brothers. His burning patriotism, his great sacrifice and his unsurpassable love for his children, whom also he gave to the service of the motherland, ought to be as patent to you as they were to me. I had the good fortune to be in the closest touch with him ever since I first knew him up to the moment of his death; and I could see that every moment of his life his thoughts were given to the nation he served so singularly. To him swaraj was no distant dream; it was his very life-breath. His hankering after freedom grew in intensity from day to day. It is, therefore, in the fitness of things that you should

1 The meeting was held in the Hindu College.
2 Gandhiji had unveiled a portrait of Motilal Nehru.
have before your eyes the portrait of such a great patriot, so that you may be constantly reminded of his sterling qualities and try to assimilate them in your own lives. No lip homage paid to a patriot you admire will be of any use to you, if you do not mean to imitate the virtues that made him great. Your keeping his portrait before you must be significant of your resolve to follow in his footsteps. Remember, too, that he was above all distinctions of high and low. He never gave a place to untouchability in his long and varied life. He had the heart of a prince. He knew how to earn as well as to give away.

He then asked the students to give a more tangible proof than money of their love for the Harijans by clearing the Augean stables, in other words, the Harijan bastis of Delhi. He had seen the terrible contrast between the palaces of New Delhi, where money had been poured out like water, and the veritable hells in which the Harijans were forced to live; and he spoke with an agony too deep for words.

I saw three bastis out of four, one of them being the worst of all. One cannot imagine, unless one has been with one’ own eyes, that there can be such a place for human habitation. I have no words to describe the filth and ugliness I saw there. It is enough to give one a feeling of nausea. You should gird up your loins and clean these plague-spots. I was happy to learn that there are among you students who have a desire to serve the Harijans by physical labour also. When you have removed the filth from the bastis, you will discover many other ways of most useful service.

_Harijan, 22-12-1933_

308. STATEMENT TO THE PRESS

DELHI

Wednesday, December 13, 1933

I have just read Sir Mohammed Iqbal’s answer¹ to Shri Jawaharlal Nehru’s indictment² of the communal spirit whether among Muslims of Hindus in so far as they may be represented by their sectarian organizations. Reluctant though I am to intervene in the controversy, I may not leave unchallenged the statements made by Sir. Mohammed Iqbal regarding me.

¹ Vide Appendix “Mohammed Iqbal’s Statement”, 6-12-1933
² For extracts from Jawaharlal Nehru’s statement, vide Appendix III.
My position in London was clear. I was helpless for effective action on communal matters without Dr. Ansari. I was bound by the Congress mandate and before I could recommend any modification I should need Dr. Ansari’s guidance. Having forfeited, for the time being, Maulana Shaukat Ali’s confidence, I told Muslim friends that Dr. Ansari held ‘my conscience on Muslim matters in his pocket’ and that therefore they should co-operate with me in securing his presence at the Conference. To this they would not agree, unless I would first accept their demands. My effort having failed, I tried every other resource at my disposal to achieve real unity and hopelessly failed.

The offer to act as camp-followers to the Congress seemed then, as it has proved since, to be a mockery. Behind the talks, there was an oppressive sense of unreality. What Sir Mohammed Iqbal calls two conditions attached to my personal acceptance of Muslim demands, were no conditions but the necessary consequence of my acceptance. Political unity was desired for a political end which for me, as for any Indian be he Hindu, Muslim, Christian or any other, could only be complete national independence in the fullest sense of the term. Muslim demands were presented for arriving at common action. Muslim friends in London were playing other minorities against the vital national interest. If they accepted me as their ally, as I offered to be in uttermost sincerity, my alliance could only be for combating every force that was inimical to India’s freedom. It was, therefore, necessary to fight the spirit of separateness, no matter from what source it arose.

No Muslim had defended separate electorates as a thing good in itself. Even in their case, Muslim friends had admitted it as a necessary evil to be tolerated for a temporary period. The doctrine, therefore, did not admit of indefinite extension. The demand put forth on behalf of the so-called untouchables was clearly anti-national. But if it was consistent with national interest or was necessary for the protection of the Harijan interest, my resistance was truly inhuman as Sir Mohammed Iqbal characterizes it. But in that case, Muslim friends should not even have offered to be neutral if I accepted their demands. But I hold that my resistance was not only not ‘inhuman’ but it was conceived in the best interests of the Harijans.

I claim to be a Harijan by choice. I do not yield to the tallest

---

1 At the Round Table Conference in 1931
Harijan in the desire to conserve the Harijan interest. Evidently Sir Mohammed Iqbal has had no time to follow what I have done or am doing in this behalf. Had he even cursorily followed my doings, he would not have allowed himself to say, as he has said, that “Mr. Gandhi has made it a mission of his life to prevent the fusion of the untouchables with the other communities and to retain them in the fold of Hinduism without any real fusion between them and even the caste Hindus.” He should know that the rooting out of untouchability is the aim of my life which I have pursued without interruption for the past fifty years and that I have claimed and am fighting for the same rights without reservation for the Harijans that the caste Hindus have in matters religious, social and political.

My work about Harijans is purely religious. It has no political motive behind it. It is essentially humanitarian in the highest sense of the term. It is a movement of internal reform in Hinduism. It is one of expiation and reparation by caste Hindus for inhumanities heaped upon the outcastes of Hindu society. My Hinduism, like my nationalism, is not exclusive or inconsistent with the interest of any portion of humanity. I would refuse to call that freedom which may involve the sacrifice of Muslim or any other interest that is not hostile to the freedom of India. I approached every question in London in that spirit.

My belief in the necessity of communal unity is just as firm as ever before. What could I do now, it may be asked. My position is the same now as before. I would accept any solution that may commend itself to the Muslims as a whole and that is not in conflict with any other national interest. Naturally, I endorse the suggestion made by Shri Jawaharlal Nehru. Nothing can be fairer. As a nationalist I claim to represent all communities equally, the largest as well as the smallest.

The Hindustan Times, 14-12-1933
It is not to keep you segregated that the schools are being opened and wells are being dug for you. All this is being done because I cannot bear to see you get no water at all. How can I tolerate that the Harijans get water from the same trough from which dogs and cattle drink water? You belong to the cities and perhaps get water from the taps. But in villages, the caste Hindus are so arrogant that they do not permit the Harijans to go near the wells at all. Even when they give them water, they do so from a distance and with words of abuse. You and I ought not to tolerate such a thing. Wells are being dug for Harijans not to keep them as untouchables, but in order that they may at least get clean water. And these wells are not exclusively for the Harijans. Others too can draw water from them. But the Harijans have a right to use them. They oughts not to have to take water from a trough. The fact is, we have not been able to dig as many wells for them as are needed. And you also see that many caste Hindus are voluntarily opening their wells for the use of Harijans. The same is true about schools. Our efforts to get Harijans admitted to the general schools are continuing. But till such time as we can get Harijans admitted into all general schools, the question is whether we should open separate schools for them or let their children remain without education. That is why we are opening schools for them. Other children also are welcome to join these schools. But the Harijans at any rate have the fullest right to join them.

By calling you Harijans, we have given you a sweet name in place of an offensive one. Many Harijans have accepted it. It is a better name than the offensive word “untouchable”. And the name was suggested by a Harijan. It at least avoids the discourtesy involved in addressing somebody by an offensive name. When untouchability has disappeared, either all Hindus would call themselves ‘Harijans’ or the Harijans would be completely absorbed in the Hindu society. The third alternative is that the Hindu community itself would be wiped out. But it is to avert this danger that a great effort is being made

---

1 The address presented by the Harijans of Shraddhananda Nagari suggested that separate wells, temples and schools should not be opened for Harijans as this would mean their separation from the Hindu fold.
today. That is the work being carried on by the Harijan Sevak Sangh for the eradication of untouchability.

I am happy that I have come to the Shraddhananda Colony. Is there any Hindu who is unfamiliar with the name of the late Shraddhanandaji? There can hardly be anyone who feels the love and kindness for Harijans which Shraddhanandaji did. He was extremely unhappy that the Hindus in their arrogance had created a class of untouchables. The Hindu community will have to wash away that sin or perish. You should help in washing off that sin. Take this message to other Harijans, too. Contribute your mite to this yajna of self-purification which is being carried on. Maintain both outer and inner purity. Give up eating carrion and beef. These three things you must definitely do. The fourth thing is that you must give up liquor. Give it up even if other Hindus drink. You have been degraded by others and you have to rise by your own efforts. That is why I appeal to you to give up liquor. Please do this much and persuade other Harijans also to do it. You have presented a purse to me. But I do not want a single pie from the Harijans. It is we who have to give to you. We owe you a debt. However, I have accepted the purse since you have given it. The sum would be returned to you many times over. It is, however, not necessary for you to give anything.

[From Gujarati]

Harijanbandhu, 24-12-1933

310. SPEECH AT WOMEN’S MEETING, DELHI

December 14, 1933

In the eyes of God who is the Creator of all, His creatures are all equal. Had He made any distinctions of high and low between man and man, they would have been visible as are the distinctions between, say, an elephant and an ant. But he has endowed all human beings impartially with the same shape and the same natural wants. If you consider Harijans untouchables because they perform sanitary service, what mother has not performed such service for her children? Does she then become an untouchable on that score? As she can become pure after a wash, sweepers also can come under the same rule.¹ It is the height of injustice to consider the Harijans, who are the most useful servants of society, as untouchables and outcastes. I have undertaken this tour to awaken the minds of Hindu sisters to a sense of this sin. It can never be an act of merit to look down upon any human being as inferior to us. We are all worshippers of one God, whom we worship under different names. We must, therefore, realize our essential unity and give up untouchability as well as the spirit of superiority and inferiority between human beings.

¹ These two sentences are from The Hindustan Times, 15-12-1933.

_Harijan, 22-12-1933_

311. WHAT I SAW IN ANANTPUR

Anantpur is a little village in Saugor District, C. P. (Hindi), containing 177 houses with a population, therefore, roughly of 885. It is 35 miles from the nearest railway station. It has no Post or Telegraph Office. There is a weekly service from the nearest Post Office, Relly, 12 miles from Anantpur. It is a typically poor village of poor India. The villagers are occupied not more than four months in the year. There was hardly any supplementary occupation for the villagers as a whole before an event that happened four years ago.

It was in 1929 that a young man, with a single-minded zeal rarely surpassed, chose Anantpur for his experiment, after a year’s travelling in search of such a village. He is khaddar mad. He believes in the message of khaddar even as much as perhaps I do. I doubt if he would not replace ‘perhaps’ by ‘if not more than’. I would submit to his correction, if he made it. His faith in himself would put to shame the tallest among us. He believes that the only permanent cure for the enforced idleness of the peasantry of India and their consequent chronic poverty is the universal adoption of the spinning-wheel. His name is Jethalal Govindjee. He does not know English. He is no Gujarati scholar. Himself a town-bred man, by dogged pertinacity he has inured himself to the hardships of village life and lives like, and in the midst of, villagers. He has three companions with him. He is a thorough believer in one thing at a time and, therefore, will not pursue other social service, no matter how tempting it may be. If the spinning-wheel is well-established in every cottage, he thinks that all the other problems that puzzle and drag down villagers will solve themselves. He will say: ‘I shan’t preach temperance or thrift to the villager, for no drunkard will take to the wheel if he will not give up his drink, and to preach thrift to a pauper is a mockery. It will be time to preach it, when I have put a few coppers in his pocket. Since I believe that every revolution of the wheel will mean a revolution in his daily life, I am going to be patient with his vices and many drawbacks. And I have faith that, if I am a clean man, my cleanness cannot but touch both the inside and the outside of the villager.’ With varying fortunes, but with an unvarying faith, he and his companions have plodded for the past four years. Their formula is Self-dependence writ large. Khadi must support itself. The way to make it do so is for the villagers to spin, and weave too if possible, for their own use. They may sell only the surplus, as they do with the grain they grow. No cloth can be cheaper than that spun and woven in one’s home, even as no bread can be cheaper than home-baked from grain grown in one’s own field and ground in one’s own home. The business of these servants of the villagers is merely to instruct and help. They visit every cottage and offer to teach them ginning, spinning, carding, weaving and dyeing. They improve their wheels and manufacture new ones for sale only from the material available in the village. This has given extra work to the village carpenter and the village blacksmith. Every item is well thought out. They have an almost complete record of the condition of every cottage and its dwellers. They have made a fairly accurate study of the villagers’ wants and woes, customs and manners, and have published their report in Hindi. Their workshop is a busy hive. Work is being done in a neat and methodical manner. A common log-book is kept containing a day-to-day summary of the work done by each worker. I have mentioned only four foundation workers. Needless to say they have raised workers in seventeen villages they are serving within a five-mile radius of Anantpur.

A word as to the condition of the cottages I saw. I visited over six, including one belonging to a Harijan. I may not omit to mention that the Harijans have been found to be the readiest to take to the message.

The cottages I saw were low roofed, with walls made of mud. There was no ventilation in them worth mentioning, no boxes, hardly any metal pots. The inmates were in rags, except where they had made khaddar for themselves. The only belonging I saw consisted generally of empty mud granaries to contain grain for the year. One room served as kitchen, dwelling and the rest. Their beds were straw covered with rags, again except where they had woven khaddar for themselves. Their food consists of jawar chapatis and a pulse, with or without oil. Of milk and ghee they hardly ever have anything. The Chamar whose cottage I saw was an exception. He sported two cows. Whether he or his children ever get a drop of milk for themselves is another story.
The villagers were poorly fed and worse clothed. Some children go stark naked from year’s end to year’s end. They warm themselves in the sun by day and before a wretched fire at night. There are families in Anantpur who, I am told, started this khaddar industry literally with an investment of one pice for cotton. This was doubled the next day by the sale of yarn spun from one pice worth of cotton and thus by progressive realization they are able now to have their own clothes.

I translate the following from the leaflet prepared for the occasion of my visit:

The following is the cost of the complete outfit:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Item</th>
<th>Cost</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Ginning machine</td>
<td>Rs. 0-7-0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Carding bow with gut and striker</td>
<td>'' 0-9-6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Spinning-wheel with spindle</td>
<td>'' 0-6-6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Winding frame</td>
<td>'' 0-1-0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Handloom for 32 inches width with all accessories</td>
<td>'' 3-0-0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Total</td>
<td>4-8-0</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

We serve seventeen villages lying within a five-mile radius, containing 1,100 cottages with a population of 5,500 in round numbers. As a result of our labours, eighty per cent of the population have learnt spinning, sixty percent have learnt carding.

Over hundred persons have learnt weaving.

The average strength of yarn has now reached fifty-six, the average count ten.

Their average working days are hundred and twenty during the year, the balance of the time lying quite idle. Of the idle hours, now an individual gives on an average five hundred hours during the year to khaddar work. Our ideal is to reach 1,600 hours per year.

The progress of our work now depends upon our ability to raise more workers. We have today three principal workers, three assistants, five sub-assistants, five helpers and four candidates.

Our average monthly expense is Rs. 325 found by the All India
Spinners’ Association.

I bring this great experiment to the notice of the public to show not only what it means to Harijans but also to all villagers. The aim of the experiment is not exclusively Harijan service, it is service of the under-fed and the under-clothed, exclusively through the spinning-wheel. I have known nothing simpler, cheaper and yet more effective than this experiment of village uplift through khaddar. The progress seems to be undoubtedly slow just now, but I expect that it will be found to be the quickest in the end.

_Harijan, 15-12-1933_

312. THINGS TO REMEMBER

During the past month of touring there has been a great deal of waste of time, a great deal of anxiety to the organizers and a great and unnecessary strain on my very limited physical resources, owing to the mad rush made towards the passing car. I cannot recall occasions when people near me have not trodden on my naked toes or scratched my legs. God has saved me from serious injury hitherto. But the crowds can take no credit for the immunity. Their affection is mad. And madness can do nobody any good. The thing can be easily managed if the volunteers will act in a business-like manner and will not themselves, like crowds, go mad as they often do. People cannot be instructed on anything all of a sudden. Leaflets containing detailed instructions should, therefore, be issued to the public and read and explained to them by volunteers as they come to the venue of meetings. The very best arrangement of the kind was made at Harda. Although the party was taken through a crowded and decorated bazaar, it took no more than ten minutes to pass through. In other places the same distance has often taken more than half an hour. Success at Harda was due not merely to previous preparations, but also to volunteers with one continuous rope held by them being posted at regular intervals, thus making it impossible for anyone to break through the lines. Let me now without further comment tabulate the instructions which I suggest for general adoption.

1. Leaflets containing detailed instructions should be issued to the villagers in simple language easily to be understood by them. These should be read to the parties as they stream in from villages.

2. Crowds that gather at stations awaiting my arrival should stand in rows upon rows without causing inconvenience to the passengers and without moving from their places when the train steams in.
(3) A few minutes before the arrival time, volunteers should be posted in front of the crowd with a continuous rope, held waist-high in their hands in order to avoid the people behind unconsciously moving towards me and the train.

(4) Volunteers should on no account fall prostrate before me.

(5) Volunteers should never lead or take part in the various cries. Apart from its interfering with efficient service, their leading or participating in them robs the cries of spontaneity.

(6) Volunteers should not shout their instructions to the public, but should pronounce them with deliberation and gentleness. Only one volunteer detailed for the purpose should pronounce them.

(7) The public should be requested not to crowd round the cars.

(8) Volunteers should not board my or any other car, except when asked to do so by a responsible member of the Reception Committee.

(9) The public should not gather at the stations which I may be passing through between 8 p. m. and 6 a. m., and in no case should they shout the usual cries at night. Such shouting during night betrays want of consideration for the passengers and the party whom they profess to respect.

(10) Those who gather at stations whether by day or night would do well to remember that I am not conducting a tour for receiving addresses. It is intended to be wholly a call for self purification, an invitation to the so-called high class Hindus to repent of the wrong done by them to Harijans and for making collections on behalf of the cause. Therefore, those who gather at the stations are naturally expected to bring or collective donations for Harijan service.

_Harijan_, 15-12-1933

313. LETTER TO AGATHA HARRISON

Unrevised

December 15, 1933

MY DEAR AGATHA,

I am writing this in a moving train in the early morning. Mira is just now off writing regular mail letters. She cannot combine nursing, cooking, bottle-washing, proof-reading for _Harijan_ and European and American correspondence, without breaking to pieces.
Your letters are valuable.

What you say about Bhulabhai Desai’s work does not surprise. I had expected nothing less.

As to the imaginary interview in Rome, of course, I never saw the reaffirmation by the Rome pressman.⁴ I was in prison. But if I see the first statement and the reaffirmation, I would be able to throw light on it. That those who won’t believe will receive no help is only too true. But that does not matter. I must satisfy honest doubters. The quickest way for you is for yourself or some friend to secure the Times file and copy the two statements and send them on to me before 3rd August next ². Long enough notice for you!

It will be a good thing if your effort results in Bose being allowed to go to England. Why he is kept out of London I cannot understand.

The usual cuttings accompany this. The orthodox opposition to the reform is slowly getting out of the bewilderment in which the phenomenal mass attendances at the meetings found it. Though they are very few so far as I can judge they have money to sustain them. They are therefore trying to create disturbances at meetings. But I hope to be able to cope with the opposition.

The political situation remains much the same as before. The official mind is revealed in the speech of the Commissioner of Burdwan.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 1476

314. LETTER TO HORACE G. ALEXANDER

December 15, 1933

MY DEAR HORACE,

Agatha has sent me your letter to her about that imaginary interview in Rome. It is wonderful how journalism has become degraded. Thank God the bulk of mankind remains unaffected even by the most widely read newspapers. But this reflection in no way absolves me

---

¹ Signor Gayda; vide “Cable to Croft”, 17-12-1931 also “Letter to Sir Samuel Hoare”, 6-3-1934.
² The date on which Gandhiji’s term of imprisonment would have expired; vide, “Statement to the Press”, 14-9-1933.
from having to deal with the particular allegation. If Agatha can trace the two statements of the Rome journalist, I can deal with the matter at once.

I hope both you and Olive¹ are keeping well.
Love to you all.

BAPU

From a photostat : G.N. 1422

315. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

December 15, 1933

CHI. AMALA,

I was desappointed not to see you.² I wrote in answer to your fear that I would not drive you out. You must compose yourself and live and think and speak naturally. If you love me, you cannot fear me.

I have no blood-pressure. Do write.
Love.

BAPU

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

316. LETTER TO ESTHER MENON

December 15, 1933

MY DEAR CHILD,

I had your touching letter. Well, you have to rejoice in your suffering both mental and physical. You must now do what satisfies your own inner voice. And the end will be all right. Of course Maria³ will be cut up. But we are all in God’s hands, not a blade moves but by His command. If we had all our own ways, the world will go to pieces. It is perhaps as well that our wishes are often frustrated. It is the test of our loyalty to God that we believe in Him even when He refuses to fulfil our wishes. I want you therefore to enjoy perfect

¹ Addressee’s wife
² Vide “letter to Margarete Spiegel”, 7/9-12-1933.
³ This is underlined in the source.
⁴ Anne Marie Petersen
peace even while things seem to you to be all going wrong.

My prayer, my thoughts and my love are with you. For the rest weekly Harijan is my weekly letter to you as to many friends and companions.

BAPU

From a photostat No. 123. Courtesy: National Archives of India. Also My Dear Child, p. 102

317. LETTER TO J. S. HOYLAND

December 15, 1933

MY DEAR HOYLAND,

You asked me some time ago, whether you could publish those hymns. Of course you can, provided that you give me no credit for the composition. You may say in the introduction that I had prepared a rough translation for the use of English friends but principally for Mira and that you had worked upon the translation.¹

I receive your postcards lovingly signed by so many friends. I know that my work finds a place in your silent prayer meetings.

Love to you all.

BAPU

From a photostat: C.W. 4510. Courtesy: Woodbrooke College, Birmingham, and Jessie Hoyland

318. LETTER TO MAHALAKSHMI M. THAKKAR

WARDHA,
December 15, 1933

CHI. MAHALAKSHMI,

Do not worry about the children. Nor about Madhavji.

I have had a discussion about the children. If Madhavji wants to do what seems to him his dharma, don’t stand in his way. If you wish to come and see me you may come wherever I am.

Blessings to all sisters from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6824

¹ Vide 1st footnote of ”Letter to Narandas Gandhi”, 12-4-1933
319. DISCUSSION WITH A SANATANIST

[Before December 16, 1933]

You should realize that there are shastris who claim to be sanatanists and who support the reformers’ contention. How am I to reject their testimony as false? They fortify me in my opinion that untouchability has no sanction in the shastras. I do believe in the Vedas, the Upanishads, the Smritis and the Puranas. But to me the Gita is the key to a knowledge of the Shastras. It enunciates the principles on which all conduct must be based. It sums up the whole of the Shastras and, therefore, absolves laymen from having to explore the other books. But I go a step further. The Vedas are not the four books known as such. They contain only fragments of the originals. Eternal truth cannot be buried in or confined to printed books. The Vedas are, therefore, indefinable and unwritten. They reside in one’s heart. And our Shastras tell us what discipline and study are necessary for opening out the heart for receiving the truth. One’s experience, therefore, must be the final guide. The written word undoubtedly helps, but even that has to be interpreted and, when there are conflicting interpretations, the seeker is the final arbiter. I had to make my choice. Years ago I made it and came to the conclusion that the Shastras did not countenance untouchability as we practise it today.

_Harijan_, 22-12-1933

320. SPEECH AT HARIJAN WORKERS’ MEETING

Vijayawada, December 16, 1933

It gave him great pleasure, [Gandhiji] said, to have met them all and witnessed the evidences of their literary powers. He had always known, he said, that the people of Andhadesha were good at composing poems and rendering them sweetly and as such he could not help feeling that the recitations witnessed that evening were to some extent useless. Poetry and art should be the vehicle of truth and never be utilized for flattery. For, such a use of poetry would not only make for degeneration of the art but would also be a violation of truth. Now that they were all engaged in a movement for the purification of Hinduism, he expected everyone so engaged to tread the path of

---

1 Who met Gandhiji on the way to Vijayawada, formerly known as Bezwada. Gandhiji reached there on December 16.
truth. He had great expectations of Andhradesh and he knew she could rise equal to them.1

Be you caste Hindu or Harijan, let what contribution you are making to the Harijan cause be absolutely unalloyed. There can be no room for selfishness, hypocrisy, untruth and violence in such a movement. As a religious movement it ought to touch the hearts of Harijans and savarnas alike. For hundreds of years considerations of high and low have gone deep into our hearts. Religious weapons alone kill untouchability.

An array of Hindu saints and sages have taught us that penance was the only way to protect and purify religion. Needless to say that there can be place for selfishness and egoism in a penance. I hope and pray that those engaged in Harijan service will be guided by the purest of motives.2

He appealed to all those savarnas and avarnas who were engaged in this work to realize the paramount importance of self-purification and to look upon this work as a shuddhiyajna.3

Mr. Shambu Sastri asked if Gandhiji accepted the authority of the Vedas.

Most certainly.

You respect them and abide by them?

Certainly.

The next question was whether he would accept the position that Harijans if admitted to temples should also abide by the injunctions of Shastras by which temples were regulated.

All Shastric rules that apply to savarnas when observed by Harijans must enable them to get entry into temples.4

All my past and present actions have been in accordance with religion as I have understood it. I have no doubt that the present endeavour for the removal of untouchability has Vedic authority behind it. I must, however, admit that there are two schools of thought on this question. Both claim to be sanatanists and base their opinions on the Hindu scriptures.

I hold that those who are conducting this drive against untouchability as a religious movement must treat their opponents

1 What follows is from The Bombay Chronicle.
2 What follows is from The Hindu.
3 Gandhiji then invited questions from those present.
4 What follows is from The Bombay Chronicle.
with tolerance give them always a dispassionate and patient hearing and in no case show any anger in word or deed. We are out to convert them. Let us seek their help and co-operation too. I implicitly believe that they will one day join us if only we worked with scrupulous care in a religious spirit. Our hearts should be full of love for them and if we are pure we are sure to win their hearts.

_The Hindu_, 17-12-1933, and _The Bombay Chronicle_, 20-12-1933

321. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, VIJAYAWADA

December 16, 1933

After apologizing for his inability to make himself heard by them all, Gandhiji acknowledged with thanks the several addresses presented to him and their monetary accompaniments.

But would it not have been better if all the purses had been pooled into one? We could have saved several precious minutes thereby but it is our misfortune that it was not done. People wish to present addresses and purses each in his own name or in the name of his village, although all of us belong to the same country and are in the same condition.

Proceeding, Gandhiji stated that so far Bezwada had contributed in cash about Rs. 3,982-8-0 and he was sure that before he left them, the figure would be rounded off into Rs. 5,000. This he knew would not be a great thing for the town to do. In this connection he could not help feeling the absence of Messrs A. Kaleswara Rao and Pattabhi Sitaramayya. But, they must pursue their path of duty and not drop Harijan work which had now become widespread and was an important item of work. Unless they destroyed the evil of untouchability, Hinduism, he feared, would die out. It was not dharma to consider a fellowman an "untouchable". Harijans must have all rights that Savarnas enjoyed. They had committed a great sin by having kept Harijans out of their rights all these ages. Savarnas must, therefore, he said expiate for the sin by undergoing a _prayashchitta_. Wherever he had gone on this tour he had witnessed huge concourses of people at similar meetings and he took it as a mark of their approval of the work he was carrying on. That people contributed their mite also pleased him. To the Harijans he would appeal for support not in monetary shape but in co-operating in this _shuddhiyajna_ by observing external and internal purity. Internal purity could be attained by thinking of God and Ramanama and external purity through bath and other means of clean living. He would appeal to such of the Harijans as were addicted to drink, and eating carrion and cow-flesh, to give up these. No one who was addicted to these could be considered to be a Hindu and he could not be admitted into temples. Drinking was a heinous sin and a man under its influence could not distinguish between mother and wife.

Before concluding, he referred to the address presented on behalf of the Andhra Hindi Pracharakas’ Association and said that he was immensely gratified to see the work carried on in Dakshina Bharat for promoting Hindi. He was also glad to note that in this matter Andhra led the rest of South India. He appealed to them all to help in the propagation of Hindi as it was an effective means of serving their country and their nation.

The Hindu, 17-12-1933

322. SPEECH AT MUDUNURU

December 17, 1933

Addressing the gathering, Gandhiji expressed his regret at not being able to stay in their midst longer than a few minutes or go into the temples for want of time and also the difficulty of getting out of and into the car at every place. He wished to save as much time as possible as he had to cover a number of villages. If, therefore, he did not enter the temples, let them not go under the impression that he did not wish to enter the shrines of God. He was sure that the work he was doing was his work. He wished to open as many of the temples in this country as possible to Harijans. He hoped that Harijans would offer worship at the temples daily along with their other Hindu brethren observing all the regulations that applied to savarnas and all the rules of cleanliness. By so doing and by giving up (where they were addicted to the habits) drink and carrion or beef-eating Harijans would be promoting real purification to Hinduism.1

The Hindu, 18-12-1933

---

1 Gandhiji then declared open to Harijans two temples.
323. INTERVIEW TO "THE HINDU" ¹

SIDDHANTHAM,
December 17, 1933

May I ask a few questions on some points that strike me as worthy of being brought to your notice?

[GANDHIJI:] Most certainly, I am ready. Go ahead.

In a recent meeting which he addressed in Madras Mr. M. K. Acharya has stated that 95 per cent of the Harijan do not want ‘the Gandhian creed’. What is your view on the matter?

I do not know what ‘the Gandhian creed’ is. If I do not know it, how do the Harijans know it or Mr. Acharya himself? I do not claim anything special to me. There is no such thing as ‘Gandhian creed’ so far as I know. I know only this. I am engaged in giving Harijans clean water. I am engaged in giving them facilities for education. I am engaged in finding accommodation for them in public caravanserais where they cannot get it. I am engaged in weaning them from drink and carrion. Do they not like all these? I am engaged in teaching them the elementary rules of hygiene. Do they not want it? I am engaged in teaching them what the fundamentals of Hinduism are and in having public temples thrown open to them. Mark the distinction. They may not want to enter these temples and if somebody said that they do not want to, I will not be able to prove conclusively to the contrary, though the prima facie evidence that I have is all in my favour. Whenever they find temples are thrown open to them, they are simply delirious with joy, as I found them to be today when I opened two temples² and entered them with them. I do not care whether they want to go to the temples or no. I simply feel that savarnas should do their duty. There is nothing ‘Gandhian’ about it. Every Hindu who believes that untouchability must go must understand this work.

It was observed by another person that Gandhiji being a believer in varnashrama, which was but a graded system of untouchability, he was not qualified to tackle this problem. What do you think of this view?

For me varnashrama does not mean a graded system of untouchability. I have explained what I mean by varnadharma. It does not mean to me grades at all. It is not a vertical division. It is a horizontal one. In my view, all varnas stand absolutely on the same plane, i.e., of equality. Hence there can be no question of untouchability. Varnadharma is a mighty economic law which, if we subscribe to it, would save us from the catastrophe that is in store for the world. I have sufficient warrant in Hindu scriptures for saying that Brahmins and scavengers are absolutely on a par in the eyes of God.

¹ Its special correspondent met Gandhiji in the afternoon.
² Vide the preceding item.

It has been suggested in some quarters that the Harijan movement is a form of civil resistance propaganda and that by this tour you are promoting civil resistance. What is your opinion on this suggestion?

Then I am between two crossfires. Congressmen accuse me of having damaged the cause of civil disobedience by taking up this whirlwind campaign. Those who suspect me of ulterior motives accuse me of strengthening civil disobedience. I am unmoved by these charges or insinuations, and can only re-declare that I have absolutely no ulterior motive. It is a peremptory religious call which I am obeying. The tens of thousands who attend the meetings do not even hear the expression ‘civil resistance’ from my lips. This is purely a religious revival. This does not mean that I have changed my views on civil resistance. The very science of civil resistance demands absolute honesty. If I use this campaign for furthering civil resistance, I should be guilty of dishonesty. Civil disobedience does not need such dubious aids.

What do you think of the progress of Harijan uplift work in the provinces you have toured so far?

My impressions are altogether happy and, if they are continued in the other provinces, I would have no hesitation in saying that untouchability is fast dying out. On no other basis can I account for the tens of thousands of people who flock to the meetings and give me their coppers, well knowing what these are to be used for.

The Hindu, 18-12-1933

324. SPEECH AT MASULIPATAM

December 17, 1933

Replying to the addresses and acknowledging the purses and other presents, Gandhiji said that on reaching Masulipatam his first thought was of Dr. Pattabhi Sitaramayya. He was sure the Doctor’s spirit was pervading at the meeting though he was not physically present in their midst. He thanked the District and Taluk Boards and the people of the district for the work they were doing on behalf of the Harijans. But he felt that so long as there was even a single temple which admitted savarnas but remained closed to Harijans, which benefited the former but did not equally benefit the latter, there would be no rest for him nor should there be any for them. If distinction of high and low, touchable and untouchable continued amongst Hindus, he was sure Hinduism would slowly die out.¹

We shall dig our own grave if we do not purge ourselves of this curse of untouchability, we shall have to pay with bitter tears if we in our pride miss the God-given opportunity today. We should have no peace till this monster is buried and those whom we have hitherto kept under our heels are put on a par with us in every respect. Let us awake to the sense of this sin and save, before it is too late, ourselves and our religion from going to perdition.

_Chi. Nara Hari, 18-12-1933, and Harijan, 29-12-1933_

325. LETTER TO NARA HARI D. PARIKH

AS AT WARDHA,
_December 19, 1933_

CHI. NARA HARI,

I am starting to write this letter at six in the morning in Masulipatam. I get up daily at three and try to write as many letters as I can. The writing is interrupted at six, and at seven generally travelling is resumed. On Mondays and Tuesdays there is no travelling. Today is Tuesday, and so I have been able to continue to write. (After I had written so far, Malkani and Bapi Neddum came up and took half an hour of my time.)

I had preserved your long letter. Your work seems to be going on very well. I hope it will continue in the same manner. There are ebbs and tides in Mahadev’s work. He loudly sings “All days are not alike”. (Another interruption, and I gave 20 more minutes to Venkatappa.) Mahadev is now realizing the truth of that line in his own experience. That is how all of us learn and grow.

Anandhi and others are fairly well settled. Proper arrangements have been made for their study. Ramanama also is being taught by

¹ The following is from Harijan, 29-12-1933.
Shankarbhai and a music teacher. I get letters from Vanamala and Mohan. Mani has joined them. Bablo also is there, and so are Qureshi’s children. N. has run away. Her son is in Sharda Mandir. Ba has been taken to Yeravda.

All the questions which you have asked regarding spinning are relevant. But those problems cannot be solved at present. I can’t write about them now, either. I have in my mind the solutions of all the problems. Whether they will work or not can be discovered only when they are tried. If I am alive, I will explain them some day and, God willing, we will even try them.

Kaka’s health is fairly good. He must have gone to Ahmedabad now. He was happy to stay with Swami for a few days. I have not heard from him recently.

Kishorelal is quite ill. He is confined to bed.

What experiences of the tour should I describe? The crowds at the meetings are larger even than before and contribute generously to the fund.

Surendra and Durbari are at Wardha. They will probably go to Karadi now. Both are fairly well. A large number of girls have joined at Wardha and requests are still being received. Vinoba continues to live in the hamlet. Balkrishna cannot be described as enjoying normal health. The same is true about Chhotelal.

Blessings to all from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati, S.N. 9061

326. LETTER TO KASTURBA GANDHI

December 19, 1933

BA,

I got your letter today. The letter addressed to Sabarmati must have been received. I will continue to write to you regularly. I will write every Monday or Tuesday, for on those two days I get some free time. Take care of your health. I will send the slivers. If I don’t have any extra stock with me, I will get them from some source and send you. I have been having some blood pressure. I was examined by Dr. Ansari in Delhi. Do not at all worry about me. I will surely write to Manilal and Sushila every fortnight. I wrote to them long letters. I will send your blessings to everyone. Do not worry about anybody. I have written to Manu also regarding Kusum. The latter is really ill and may or may not survive. Kishorelal has been having fever intermittently. He is in bed. Brijkrishna also has been bed-ridden for a long time. Devdas is well, and so also Rajaji. Give my blessings to all the women there. I hope all of them are doing physical work and maintaining good health. Ramanama is an unfailing remedy. I had prepared an abridged Gita for Ramdas. It is being printed. When it is ready, I will send a few copies there. If you want anything else, write to me. Address your letters always to Wardha. I hope you are supplied newspapers. You have asked for a discourse from me. I will not send one this time. I will see if I can do so next week. It is certainly very good that you read the Gita regularly. Who teaches you to read it? What food do you get there? You remember don’t you, that you can write to Premlilabehn\(^1\) or Trivedi\(^2\) for anything that you may want. You will have fewer visitors there and so the best course will be that you should write one letter to me and receive one from me every week. However, you may do as you like. Om is all right. Premabehn’s friend, Kisan, has joined me recently. You remember her, don’t you? She is very hard-working and has been well educated.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Bane Patro, pp. 2-3

---

327. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

MASULIPATAM,

December 19, 1933

BHAI THAKKAR BAPA,

The accompanying letters are for your information. Bhagwanji’s argument is perfectly correct. I will write to him a

---

\(^1\) Premlila Thackersey

\(^2\) Prof. Jayashankar P. Trivedi of Agriculture College, Poona

---

298 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
suitable reply. Such activities will certainly be undertaken.

I have still not received a copy of the resolution passed by you. Shouldn’t you send me one formally? I shall be able to know about my duties from its wording.

The work here is progressing rapidly. Malkani is fast becoming an accountant. He has also become a newspaper correspondent. If he maintains good health, he will work to the best of his ability.

The crowds at the meetings are as large and the contribution as generous as in the C.P.

I have still not been able to observe the four-hour rule. Nobody, however, is to blame for that. Such a rule can only be an ideal. In any case, God will ordain everything as He wills. I learnt as long ago as my young days to live according to Mira’s bhajan:

Hari has tied me with a slender thread,
I let Him pull as He wills.
I, therefore, don’t experience any difficulty. He who enables us to sit and to walk may also put us to sleep.

I should like you or Ghanshyamdas to see the members of the Delhi Municipality about the quarters of Harijans in Delhi. They must be improved.

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1134
328. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

December 19, 1933

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I got your letter written from Patna. Since you have started the injections, it would be better to complete the course. Perhaps you may benefit. I myself, though, have little faith in it. But once we have started a thing we should go to the end.

There will be no difficulty in sending Rs. 50 every month to Rajeshwar. I have discussed the matter.

I have already explained in my previous letter¹ about your coming to see me. If your health has deteriorated, won’t you have to pay all your attention just now to proper treatment?

Do you experience any difficulty in seeing Rajendrababu?

I have not weighted myself recently, but my health is quite good. The blood pressure has returned to my normal. It is 158-109.

Om is fine. Kisan has joined me now. I am sure you know her. She is the woman who had started crying in Bombay. She is a close friend of Prema. She was also in jail with Mirabehn. She is a Maharashtrian, and is a highly educated lady. She is very eager to serve. She joined me at Wardha. Suman’s place is taken by Ramnarayan.²

Keep on writing to me.

[PS.]

20-22, Madras,
23-January 3, Andhra Desha, Headquarters Bezwada.

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G. N. 3437.

¹ Vide “Letter to Lakshmibehn M. Sharma”, 6-5-1933
² Ramnarayan Chowdhary
329. LETTER TO VANAMALA N. PARIKH

December 19, 1933

CHI. VANAMALA,

Bravo! You have started signing in English now! After some time, I suppose you will even be able to detect mistakes in my English. I hope you are working hard enough to accustom your body to bear strain. What have you been studying? Ask Mohan to write to me. Sultan\textsuperscript{1} Bablo, Hamid\textsuperscript{2} and Vahid\textsuperscript{3} also should write to me. Do you remember that you did not complete your letter?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: N. G. 5783. Also C. W. 3006. Courtesy: Vanamala Desai

330. LETTER TO BHAGWANJI P. PANDYA

December 19, 1933

CHI. BHAGWANJI,

I am late in replying to your letter, though I had intended to reply quite soon. What you have suggested is right. But carry out your idea tactfully and without using compulsion. Very few non-Harijans will join. For them the rule will be compulsory. For the Harijans, the problem will be one of education. You cannot use compulsion on them. They will gradually learn to use lavatories. In the locality where Ramji lives, we may certainly construct lavatories if it is possible to introduce them there. Parikshital, Jethabhai and you may discuss the matter and do what you think best.

Do not give up your interest in the Vadaj school. The number of children attending it should increase. Don’t leave even the grown ups. This will of course require patience on your part. Give up desire for the success of your work. Write to me from time to time.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C. W. 364. Courtesy: Bhagwanji P. Pandya

\textsuperscript{1} Children of Gulam Rasul Qureshi

\textsuperscript{2} Ibid

\textsuperscript{3} Ibid
331. LETTER TO SHARDA C. SHAH

December 19, 1933

CHI. SHARDA ALIAS SHARDAGAURI ALIAS SHARDAKUMARI.

Why should not my letter to Anandi be considered as addressed to all of you? Supposing I write all the names in the same letter? Once you all have considered and made her your elder, how can you now complain? Which question of yours did I leave unanswered?

I am glad to hear that you are studying well. But what about your frequent illnesses? Does it mean that you go on forgetting as you go on learning?

What do you eat?

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 9965. Courtesy: Shardabehn G. Chokhawala.

332. LETTER TO VIMALCHANDRA V. DESAI

December 19, 1933

CHI. NANU,

I got your letter. Your handwriting still leaves much to be desired. If you realize that one should write every letter in a word as carefully as one draws a picture, you would take pains to write a beautiful hand.

333. LETTER TO HEMPRABHA DAS GUPTA

December 19, 1933

CHI. HEMPRABHA,

Your letters are coming infrequently now. I do not worry as I have understood the reason. I hope that you at least have not been hurt over my Bengal tour. How is Arun\(^1\)? And how are you keeping now?

\(^1\) Addressee’s son
So far my tour can be said to be proceeding very well. Moreover, God is giving me the energy for this hectic travelling.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi : G. N. 1705

334. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA AND RAMAKRISHNA
CHANDIWALA

December 19, 1933

CHAI. BRIJKRISHNA,

How is it that I have received so far no letter or wire? I hope that a suitable house has been found and your health is improving. Send me all the news. It will do if I get a post-card daily and a wire when necessary.

Blessings from

BAPU

BHAIE RAMAKRISHNA OR SHRIKRISHNA,

Discussions should be avoided in the presence of Brijkrishna. Stick to Doctors Ansari and Sen.

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi : G. N. 2404.

335. LETTER TO TOTARAM SANADHYA

December 19, 1933

BHAIE TOTARAMJI,

I got your letter. I like the scheme. It must be implemented as far as possible.

I trust the children from Utkal give you satisfaction.

Hariprasad must be engrossed in service.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi : G. N. 2537

336. LETTER TO KALYANJI V. MEHTA

December 20, 1933

BHAIE KALYANJI,

I got your letter. I am writing this reply in a running train. I did hear about you from time to time. I hope your health is good. You have been exercising good self-control in not coming to see me. We can't have any money to waste. How is Kunvarji? Napoleon has stopped writing to me now. Is Mithubhen all right now. How is the leg? Write to me from time to time.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 2710.

337. REPLY TO CIVIC ADDRESS, MADRAS

December 20, 1933

MR. MAYOR, COUNCILLORS AND FRIENDS,

I deeply appreciate the honour you have done me this morning by presenting me for the second time with an address.¹ It is always a matter of great pleasure to me to visit the South because, as you know, I have relations with the South of a very long standing. I came in closest touch with the indentured Indian people in Natal as early as 1893 and some of you may recollect that my first contact in Natal was not only with the South Indians but with the Tamil Indians, and the very first case of distress that I had the good fortune to handle was one in connection with a Tamil.¹ Ever since that the South has bound me with ties not to be surpassed by any other part of India.

You, Sir, may not know, but some of the Councillors and some of the other citizens will perhaps recall the fact that when I first had the honour of receiving an address at the hands of this great Corporation, among the several names that I registered for myself was that of an expert scavenger. It was at that time that I referred to the condition of your public streets and how those streets were used for insanitary purposes, even by men who should know better. I expect that there has been a vast improvement in that direction. But today my mission of scavenging is of a special character, a deeper character and, as I found it, of a purely religious character, taking religion in its broadest sense, not in the narrow sectional sense in which we, at the present day, unfortunately use the term.

The reform I am aiming at today concerns a body of scavengers belonging to the Hindu society and does not make it none the less religious in the broadest sense of the term. I feel that it is a deeply humanitarian mission to which I have not hesitated to invite the cooperation of non-Hindus within, necessarily, the limits that I had the pleasure of mentioning before a body of missionaries, I believe in Jubalpore.\(^1\) As days advance, you will understand what this scavenging mission stands for. It stands for abolishing the distinctions of high and low which untouchability undoubtedly means; but you will not expect that, on my entering the Tamil land, I should give an elaborate view of what I consider is the duty of the Hindu humanity towards useful servants of society. That I must reserve for another occasion.

¹ The Corporation had presented an address to Gandhiji on March 7, 1925; vide "Speech in Reply to Corporation Address, Madras", 7-3-1925
¹ Balasundaram; vide An Autobiography, Part-II, Ch XIX,

Be it enough for the present, Mr. Mayor and Councillors, for me to thank you once more for the address that you have been good enough to present to me. I hope that I will carry with me throughout my tour your sincere prayers in the mission that I have undertaken.

The Hindu, 20-11-1933

338. SPEECH AT ALL INDIA SWADESHI EXHIBITION

MR. PRESIDENT AND FRIENDS.

I have started out in Madras under happy and good auspices. I had the honour of receiving an address from the Corporation and now I have the honour of receiving another address from the Southern Indian Chamber of Commerce at the hands of my friend Mr. Jamal Sahib.\(^3\) I have the pleasantest recollection of the long conversations with him in London not more than 18 months ago or something like that. We discussed then things of interest common to the whole of India and now I find myself again in his company. With your blessings, friends, I look forward to the success of my mission in Madras and later on in the whole of Tamil Nadu.

You have, Sir, asked me to declare the Swadeshi Exhibition open. All of you may not be aware that I am a man who thinks and chooses things. I regard myself somewhat as an expert in matters of swadeshi. I have been instrumental also in organizing more than one exhibition of this kind in India. You cannot have everything that grows or is manufactured in India exhibited. You will naturally have to make a definite choice in things if you are to make an exhibition of this character of educative value for the public. For instance, you would not exhibit any seeds that grow in India like grass. You have to pick and choose those seeds and grains which you want to introduce to the public. I have given, friends, only an illustration out of many that crowd my memory now. I have spoken about this in order to introduce to you a very delicate thing.

\(^1\) Vide “Speech at Leonard Theological College”, 7-12-1933.

\(^2\) Gandhi opened an exhibition organized by the Madras Mahajan Sabha in the morning.

\(^3\) Jamal Mahomed

I do not accept invitations to open all and every swadeshi exhibition. I want to know whether the delicate wines produced in India are exhibited also. If they are, naturally, the fanatical prohibitionist that I am, I will say to you: “Thank you, but I can-not open this exhibition, where wines, which are harmful to the moral and economic well being of the country, sparkling though they may be, are exhibited”. Not equally on the same lines, but somewhat on those lines, I object also to open exhibitions where mill cloths, may be hundred percent swadeshi, are exhibited. I do not say it is injurious in the same sense that wines are. But if I am expected to open an exhibition of manufactured mill-cloths—and not things made in cottages in India—you will make a very poor show. I do not want to pit myself against mill-cloth. What I want to say is this. If you go into the history of the mill industry in India, you will discover it does not need a swadeshi exhibition for its distribution. The mills themselves are their own swadeshi exhibition. They have got all the facilities of their own. But what of khadi?

I do not want to say I have opened a swadeshi exhibition where all sorts of things are exhibited. It must be an exhibition, not only for your edification but of instruction to those to whom it should be useful. I have opened exhibitions in other places and I have been asked to open in a very big city like this a swadeshi exhibition. I had therefore to introduce this word of caution. Now, do you or do you not think of the various needs of the Harijans? As you know, I am under a self-imposed vow, during seven or eight months that remain for me, to do some kind of propaganda work for Harijans. I have restricted myself predominantly to do Harijan work and no other work. I can talk to many people on varied subjects and there is no end to the varied subjects that do or can interest me. At the present moment, I propose to confine myself to the few things that are necessary for the Harijan cause.

What can a swadeshi exhibition do for Harijans, you may ask. I think khadi has got a great deal to do with it, because the introduction of hand-spinning and hand-weaving of cloth, you will be surprised to know, has brought a ray of comfort and light into the dark homes of thousands of Harijans. I had the good fortune to go to many Harijan homes even during this brief tour and discovered the potency of khadi for Harijans. You will also be surprised to know that there are many things—I hope those things are exhibited here—at which Harijans have worked for the most part, if not entirely. There is the leather industry. The leather industry will be nowhere in India but for the initial work which the Harijans put into it. You will not expect me to take you into the history of it; my friend, Jamal Sahib, will give you chapter and verse about it. But I can tell the history in terms of rupees, annas and pies. Not less than nine crore rupees worth of hides go out of India which, if we are to deal honourably by Harijans, will all be absorbed in India, or at least not leave the shores in the raw state in which the hides are now sent. I can multiply instances. But I do not want to detain you or detain myself.

I have great pleasure in declaring the Exhibition open and I hope you will take advantage of this Exhibition, make it of educative effect, interest yourself in these things that have been brought to the stalls and trace the history of their manufacture and then you will be surprised at the resources the poorest country in the world has at its disposal if we would only work at them intelligently and also work in co-operation with the downtrodden millions in India. If you would get off their backs and treat the Harijans, the Mahars and the other oppressed and depressed classes as our own comrades entitled to the same privileges and the same honour that we claim for ourselves, then in spite of the tremendous handicaps under which we are working this land of ours can become a land of plenty, a land of prosperity and not of downright pauperism in which the country now is.

I thank you for inviting me to open this Exhibition and I hope the public will generously patronize it.

The Hindu, 20-11-1933

339. SPEECH AT WOMEN’S MEETING, MADRAS

December 20, 1933

SISTERS,

It gives me great pleasure to be able to renew your acquaintance. This is not the first time that I am addressing a meeting of ladies in Madras. I have before me an extremely heavy programme to be gone through inside of forty minutes. Therefore you will excuse me for being very brief.

I have come here to ask you to do one thing. Forget altogether that some are high and some are low. Forget altogether that some are touchables and some are untouchables. I know that you all believe in God as I do, and God cannot be so cruel and unjust as to make distinctions of high and low between man and man and woman and woman. This untouchability is the greatest blot on Hinduism. And I have not hesitated to say that, if untouchability lives, Hinduism dies. If only to use man’s language, God has been patient with us but I have no hesitation in saying that even God’s patience can be exhausted, and He will no longer be patient with this atrocity that man is doing towards man in Hindu India.

Gandhiji made a break in his speech at this juncture and said:

You have not given me the purse.

Dr. Muthulakshmi Reddi immediately handed to Gandhiji the purse, saying that it contained cash to the extent of Rs. 430.

You have given me a lean purse. But lean or fat the purse is meant to serve Harijans.

Dr. Muthulakshmi Reddi said that many of them had contributed liberally to the purse that was going to be presented to Gandhiji at the public meeting at Tilak Ghat.

That is the excuse you want to give; all right, I see you are all for equality with men.

I regard this purse as token on the part of the donors of their desire to do some slight reparation to those whom we have injured in the name of religion.

Well, anyway, ladies have parted willingly with their jewellery, some with their rings, others with their bangles and necklaces and so on and I invite you to do likewise, but on this understanding, that the jewellery you may part with is not to be replaced and that you should consider the giving as a privilege in connection with the Harijan movement. I conclude with a prayer to God Almighty that He may bless this effort and that He may so change your hearts that you will forget the distinctions between touchables and untouchables.

There is one thing which a sister wants me to say and which I gladly do, namely, to put in a word on behalf of Hindi. I expect that some of you would like to serve in other parts of India, in the northern parts of India. You cannot mix with the masses in the North unless you understand Hindi. Know that 22 crores of the people of India know and understand Hindi. Enlightened sisters of the South cannot neglect the language of the 22 crores.

Well, I have finished, and those who want to part with their jewellery can do so.

The Hindu, 20-11-1933
STUDENTS AND FRIENDS,

You are not new to me nor am I new to you. I remember you well. In 1896 when, of course, many of you were not even born, I made the acquaintance of the students of Madras, when I was an unknown man to you or for that matter to anybody else except those who are called the ‘coolies’, that is to say, the people of Tamil Nadu. I was even at that time known somewhat amongst them, but I remember what a welcome you gave me at that time. I thank you for the purse that you have given me as also for the address you have presented to me. I do not need to argue with you, and to convince you that untouchability is the greatest blot on Hinduism. I do not need to convince you that after all the education you have received, if you believe in the distinction between man and man, all your education is worthless; but I do want you to realize, if you are convinced, as you state in your address you are convinced, that untouchability is an evil, which we should get rid of. I want you to serve the cause; I want you to serve the Harijans. I had expected you to say in your address in what way you had served them. When I received an address from the students of Delhi, they told me in what way they were serving the Harijans of Delhi, and even the Harijans outside Delhi in the villages. I hope you will follow their example. They did not pretend that they had done wonders. They made some time ago an humble beginning. I wonder if you also had made an humble beginning—I wonder if you know how much you can do in order to ameliorate the conditions of Harijans and how much you can do by silent service to rid ourselves, our society, of this blot. The way to convince the society that untouchability cannot be a part of religion and that it is a hideous error is for you to develop character. You will show it in your own lives that to believe in some people being touchable and some untouchable is not only not religion, but it is the reverse of religion. Whereas, if you had no character to achieve or lose, naturally people are not going to put any faith whatsoever in you. You have got to move the masses. You have got to change the hearts of the masses. Never mind what the orthodox people who claim to have studied the scriptures may have to say; they do not represent the masses nor do they represent the real interpretation of the scriptures as I hold it. It may be that I am in error, but in any case there are a few people who react upon the masses, as you can also react upon the masses. I promise you that in the end only those who are working among the masses will be the deciding factor. Masses will not argue. They will simply want to know who are the men who go to them and tell them that untouchability in which they have believed for such a long time is an evil, and if they find that those who have approached them, and told them that untouchability is an evil have credentials, they will listen to them, and if they have no credentials they will not listen. This is an incredibly simple proposition that I have been putting before you which each one of you can test for yourself.

How can you serve these men, who are living in your midst? I have shown a way for the many students that I have addressed. Take a broom and a bucket in your hands, not by way of tamasha, not by way of a spectacle, but sincerely, and work with the broom and the bucket and clean out all those dirty places of Madras. Go in their midst and wean them from drink, teach them the elementary principles of hygiene and sanitation, to which most of them are utter strangers, be it said to our disgrace. Having considered that they were beneath our attention, that they were the lowest people on earth, untouchable, unseeable and unapproachable and so on, we had come to the conclusion that we need not attend to them nor take care of what they were doing. They took us at our word and thought they were not human beings, and that they were hardly animals, and so they neglected themselves. They simply eked out a miserable existence. It is in the midst of these people that you have got to go, and bring to them a ray of light. I hope that you will go to these places, and bend your backs and work in their midst, and assure them that you are there not with any mental reservations, nor with any base motives, but with pure motives and serving them with the motive of taking the message of peace and love in their midst. If you will do that you will immediately find that their lives are transformed as also yours. I do not ask you to steal a single moment from the hours that you may need for your studies, but I ask you to utilize your idle moments, and I have no doubt that if each of you will examine yourself, you will find that every day you have so many idle moments. I do not ask you to give all your moments, but if you will combine and will serve the Harijans in Madras, you will find a revolution in their lives as also in your own lives. May God enable you to understand this! May God give you the strength to follow this message.

One thing more I have to tell you. I have lodged a complaint against the students of Madras, namely, that, although they claim to be part of India, and not particularly Madras, how can they neglect, especially I say to my sisters, the language that over 22 crores of Indians understand, namely, Hindi? You have got in Madras the Hindi Prachar Sabha giving you all the facilities to learn Hindi. I know that many students have taken advantage of the facilities, but I am sorry to tell you that that is not enough. I had expected that your address this time would be presented written in Hindi, and I had also expected that you would call upon me to speak in Hindi. But I had to give it up at once. I am now engaged in one mission and one mission alone and therefore without taking much of your time and my time on a discourse on Hindi, I began with the burden of my subject. I close with this warning that when you begin to take upon your shoulders the burden of the country, you will find what a great handicap you are labouring under if you do not know Hindi or Hindustani. I thank you once more.

In conclusion, Mahatma ji said that he hoped that the students would relieve him of the burden of the address. He would auction the same. As no bidders were forthcoming, Mahatma ji said that ladies could also bid giving their jewels. He was willing to give away the address for a pair of bangles or a ring. Thereupon two ladies in the gathering sent up one bangle each. Miss Swaminathan gave away a pair and took away the address.

_The Hindu_, 21-12-1933

341. SPEECH AT WOMEN’S MEETING, MADRAS

_Dear Sisters_,

The Reception Committee of the Harijan Sevak Sangh has left very few minutes for me; hence eager though I am to make your acquaintance more fully than I can during the few minutes, I must restrain myself and run away from you after saying a few words. It gives me great joy to know that many of you are Harijans sisters. If any demonstration was needed, this very meeting is an ocular demonstration; but for the knowledge that some of you are Harijan sisters I at least should not know which are Harijans and which are not. It shows that untouchability cannot be God appointed institution. It is an institution appointed by man at his worst. And it is for _savarna_ Hindu men and women to rise in revolt against that institution and blot it out. It, therefore, gives me pleasure to receive for the Harijan cause this 1 Address on behalf of the Mother’s Association and the Harijan women were presented to Gandhiji.

---

little purse from the Mother’s Association.

But I want to say one word now to the Harijan sisters. I want them and I want the menfolk among Harijans to play their part nobly in this movement of self-purification. There are three or four things which undoubtedly demand attention. One thing is the observance of the elementary laws of sanitation, purification of the body. Those laws you should conform to. Then there is the question of carrion-eating and beef-eating and I know some Harijans take to these evil habits. These two things must be given up. The fourth thing is not special to Harijans because many so called high class indulge in the bad habit that I am about to mention. And that is the drink evil. No matter what the so called high class Hindus may or may not do, you, at least, should tell the menfolk; and if you are also given to that habit then you yourself give up that habit altogether. Having worked for the last 50 years amongst the poor people and amongst those who are given to drink, I know what I am talking about. I saw in Natal, in South Africa, our own sisters dead drunk and wallowing in the gutters. When they were dead drunk, they did not know the distinction between good and bad. You will, therefore, save yourselves from it if you are addicted to that habit. May God give us all, Harijans or not, the strength to follow the message that I am endeavouring to give throughout the length and breadth of India.

_The Hindu, 21-12-1933_

342. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, MADRAS

December 20, 1933

This is a wonderful demonstration that you have made of your affection. I hope that every one of you realizes the seriousness and magnitude of the mission that I am trying to carry out in the name of God, for His sake and for His forsaken children whom we have come to understand as ‘Harijans’. There can be, in God’s eyes, no distinction between man and man even as there is no distinction between animal and animal. Had God designed one part of humanity to be lower than the other. He would have put some distinguishing mark upon parts of our bodies whereby these distinctions could have been unmistakably seen, felt and demonstrated.

Go where you will from end of India to the other, you will fail,

---

1 The meeting held at Tilak Ghat on the Triplicane Beach was attended by over one lakh people.
as I have failed, to notice any such distinguishing feature in connection with those who call themselves high caste Hindus and those whom high-caste Hindus describe as ‘untouchables’, ‘invisibles’ and what not.

I therefore ask you seriously to consider this urgent question. I have said, and I repeat what I have said from a thousand platforms before this vast audience, that if we do not remove root and branch untouchability from our hearts, we are a doomed race, and Hinduism like many other ‘isms’, will perish and the discredit will be ours.

In the midst of this din and noise, I must not put before you the implications of this great movement. Suffice it to say that when untouchability is removed from our hearts Harijans will feel the glow of freedom, and then we would treat them as we do ourselves, we would know that they have the same rights absolutely and without exception as we have, and that ‘Harijans’ would be subject to the same discipline that savarna Hindus are. If by God’s grace this message reaches your hearts, we shall forget all distinctions of high and low.

Now I would like you kindly to disperse quietly so that I too can go safely to my car. You must kindly go back to your homes. The proceedings are finished.

The Hindu, 21-12-1933

343. SPEECH TO CHILDREN

MADRAS

December 21, 1933

Little children, boys and girls, only one word. Remember that little children also have to play their part in this movement of purification. And the only thing that I want to say is: ‘Children, be always good and always remember God in all troubles.’

The Hindu, 21-12-1933

344. SPEECH AT ROBINSON PARK, MADRAS

December 21, 1933

I thank you sincerely for the addresses that you have given me. I thank you equally for the purse and the gifts that you have

1 Gandhiji visited the Bharat Sabha, Vellala Teynampet, which was running a night school and religious classes for Harijans.
presented to me. All these moneys will be used for the uplift of Harijans. For this great movement of self-purification, I want men and women to take their full share. Let us shed all our vices and bad habits. Let us pray to God that He may give us pure minds. If any one of you is addicted to carrion-eating, give up that bad habit. Observe the rules of hygiene and sanitation. Educate your children, and give up the drink habit, if you are in the habit of drinking. It is one of the greatest enemies of the human race. That many savarna Hindu drink spirituous liquors is no reason for Harijans to drink it. It is drink that makes men mad and makes them forget the distinction between wife, mother and sister. May God give strength to you to go through the process of purification. Now, you will excuse me for not giving up more of my time. I have still a big programme to carry through. Finally, I ask you to give me free passage without any noise. I thank you for this magnificent demonstration of your affection and interest that you take in this movement of purification. May God bless you.

The Hindu, 22-12-1933

345. SPEECH AT LABOURERS’ MEETING, PERAMBUR

December 21, 1933

FELLOW LABOURERS,

I thank you for the address you have given me.

If you will make common cause with labour all over India, you ought to be able to understand Hindustani. Unless you do that there is no junction between the North and the South. But that is not the burden of my mission tonight. Tonight I want to tell labour that labour at least should have no distinctions of high and low.

Having lived in the midst of labour for the last forty years, I know to my great sorrow that among labourers also there are distinctions. There are Harijan labourers and non-Harijan labourers. Even among non-Harijan labourers there are distinctions. You must forget these distinctions. Harijan labour and non-Harijan labour are all absolutely one. I say to those of you who claim to be Hindus that there is no warrant in religion for untouchability as we observe it today.

It is impossible that God who is the God of justice could possibly make those distinctions that man observes today in the name

---

1 In reply to the address presented by the Madras and Southern Mahratta Railway Employees’ Union.
of religion. Lastly, those who are given to carrion-eating or beef-eating should give these up and if labour is to come to its own, you must give up the wretched habits of drink and gambling. I know that these two vices have degraded labour and desolated many homes among labourers. I therefore hope that you will give up the evil habits of drink and gambling. May God give you the strength to shed the evil of untouchability, drink and gambling.

The Hindu, 22-12-1933

346. NOTES

GARLANDS

It is devoutly to be wished that organizers will wean people from presenting me with garlands of flowers. If garlands must be presented, they should be of charkha-spun, even, strong and fine yarn, which can be used without difficulty for weaving purposes. Garlands are not produced without money or, which is the same thing, labour. All the money and all the labour available is required for Harijan service. And, in any case, I cannot afford to have labour or money spent for my pleasure, vanity or glorification. The showering of flowers is an injurious custom. The hard stems of yellow flowers, when they are thrown from a distance are calculated to break eye-glasses and injure the eyes. My eyes have, more than once, narrowly escaped damage from these stems.

Let the money thus saved be used for adding to the purses collected. Indeed, I notice that there is room for economy in most arrangements. Motor-cars are used too lavishly. Only those of the local persons whose presence is necessary should accompany me from place to place. Workers are trustees for the Harijan cause, and as such they are expected to guard the Harijan chest with greater care and vigilance than they would bestow upon their own.

AUCTIONS AND JEWELLERY

I have seen a paragraph in a newspaper adversely criticizing my appeal to the women for gifts of jewellery and my auctioning things received as donations. Indeed, I would like the thousands of sisters who attend my meetings to give me most, if not all, of the jewellery they wear. In this country of semi-starvation of millions and insufficient nutrition of practically eighty percent of the people, the wearing of jewellery is an offence to the eye. A woman in India has rarely any cash which she can call her own. But the jewellery she wears does belong to her, though even that she will not, dare not, give away, without the consent of her lord and master. It ennobles her to part with, for a good cause, something she calls her own. Moreover, most of this jewellery has no pretension to art, some of it is positively ugly and a harbinger of dirt. Such are anklets, heavy necklaces, clasps worn not for adjusting the hair, but purely as a decoration for unkempt, unwashed and often evil-smelling hair, or row upon row of bangles from wrist to elbow. In my opinion, the wearing of expensive jewellery is a distinct loss to the country. It is so much capital locked up or, worse still, allowed to wear away. And in this movement of self-purification, the surrender of jewellery by women or men I hold to be a distinct benefit to society. Those who give do so gladly. My invariable condition is that on no account should the jewellery donated be replaced. Indeed, women have blessed me for inducing them to part with things which had enslaved them. And in not a few cases men have thanked me for being an instrument for bringing simpli-city into their homes.

Now a word about auctions. I have seen nothing wrong about them. They set up a healthy rivalry and are an innocent method of evoking the generous impulse in man or woman for a noble cause. I have resorted to the method now for years without ever noticing the slightest civil effect produced by these auctions. Why is it wrong to pay a price beyond its intrinsic value for an article which one prizes, even though it be as a memento, if it is not wrong to pay fabulous prices for worn-out manuscripts of authors reputed to be great? Surely, the price of an article is what a man voluntarily pays for it. And let it be remembered that people who bid at my auctions do not pay fancy prices for pleasing me. I know they do not. I can recall occasions when I have not been able to induce bids, even though the audiences have been otherwise as enthusiastic or responsive as anywhere else.

ABUSE OF FASTING

Cases of abuse of fasting have recently come under my observation. One person wrote threatening to fast if I did not send my autograph, three if I did not visit their places during the tour and another if his village did not produce Rs. 5,000 for khadi, Harijan and kindred constructive activities. I have no doubt that all these are instances of abuse of fasting. Why should I give my autograph, or visit a place or workers find money under threat of a fast? There should be a moral obligation on the one against whom a fast is taken. Fasts are legitimately taken in the interest of some public good or for doing service to those for whom they are taken. I am well aware that the dividing line between use and abuse is often too thin to be noticeable. The better test, therefore, perhaps is whether the person fasting has undergone the requisite discipline for taking fasts calculated to influence conduct other than his own. In the cases quoted, so far as I can see, there was utter absence of qualification or previous preparation. Moreover, legitimate fasts, even if repeated by many, should be capable of response. In the cases under consideration, if a thousand persons asked for my autograph, or a thousand workers in a thousand village desired my visit to their places or a worker required poor people to pay the money he wanted, it is clear that response might easily be a physical impossibility.

Harijan, 22-12-1933

347. SPEECH AT GEORGE TOWN MEETING, MADRAS

December 22, 1933

FRIENDS,

Up to now we have done no business. What has happened is, the precious few minutes that are at my disposal have been taken away in the reading of addresses. Therefore, before I get the right to speak to you, I must do some business. (Laughter) I must ask you now to dispossess me of all these trinkets that have been given to me and exchange them for pure gold. (Renewed laughter) Then, I cannot be guilty of stealing away this diamond ring; and I shall, therefore, have to offer it to you.

I shall now begin the business portion of the meeting.¹

Gandhiji then spoke a few words in Hindi, thanking both the donors and the successful bidders for the help they had thus rendered for the cause of the Harijans. This was a great punyakaryam², he said; and in such acts of service, they must feel a pride. He exhorted them to remove from their hearts notions of high and low because of birth. Untouchability, he reiterated, was a great sin; and whoever made a resolve to rid his heart of this impurity of treating a certain section of his brothers as untouchables was really a better man. Gandhiji then explained in a few words why he called untouchables Harijans. He had learnt in Tamil a great saying—

¹ Gandhiji then auctioned the articles presented to him. Several ladies offered him jewellery.
² Meritorious act
Dikkatravarukku deivametunai, and this indeed was the justification for the name ‘Harijan’ as applied to this class of unfortunate people. It was not his own coining; it was an untouchable who persuaded him to use it. He then concluded with an appeal to their hearts to cleanse their religion by removing the blot of untouchability.

This is a great yajna; and and I wish to God that He gives you wisdom to take your proper place therein.

_The Hindu, 22-12-1933_

348. SPEECH AT JAIN MANDIR, MADRAS

December 22, 1933

Now I proceed to business. You people go to far-off lands exploiting people and amassing wealth. I am now going to exploit you.

The audience greeted this statement with laughter and cheers. Putting up for auction an ivory casket, Gandhiji said:

What will you give for this?

The first bid for the casket which would be worth roughly Rs. 15, was Rs. 101 by Mr. Rammath Goenka.

Get along, Rs. 101 is nothing for you, Gujaratis assembled here.

Rs. 201 was the next bid.

Shall I let it go . . . Once, . . . twice, . . . I will not yet say “thrice” . . . . There is yet time. . . . A few hundred is nothing to you.

You know I have come on a mission of reform. It is the cause of Truth, as I see it, and I appeal to you to help in it. The purse you have presented me is a poor one compared to what you can afford.

Proceeding, Gandhiji said that the work of Harijan uplift he was now engaged in was a sacred one. So far as he could understand the spirit of the Vedas, he saw nothing to warrant distinctions of high and low, touchable and untouchable. In the eyes of God, according to true advaita, all men were equal. It was only maya that made them see such distinctions between man and man. They must no longer consider their fellow-men as untouchable or unseeable. Could any man say that his head or eye or ear was superior to his hand or feet or any other part of his body? All were equally important. Similarly every section of society was important as any other and they must look on all men as equal. He saw nothing in this doctrine that was against the dictates of dharma. He had full confidence that the work he was carrying on was God’s

1 “God is the help of the helpless.”
2 The Gujarati, Marwari and Sindhi residents welcomed Gandhiji at 9.30 a.m.
3 Non-dualism work and that it was the path of Truth. He prayed to God to confer prosperity on them and he appealed to them to utilize their wealth in the service of Truth and their fellow-men.

_The Hindu, 22-10-1933_

349. SPEECH AT VAISHYA ASSOCIATION ¹

MADRAS

December 22, 1933

Since ancient times, we have been taught that before God, elephant and ant, Brahmin and Shudra are alike. So also are they alike before a _samadarshi_² or seer. What a pundit or sage does, a _prakrit_ or man of the world should do. Religious injunction is the same for both. You cannot teach truth to a pundit and untruth to a _prakrit_ man. Vaishyas believe that untruth will do in business. But this is not what the Shastras or dharma teaches. In the universal religion, there is neither high nor low. The distinction between high and low is the root of all our sorrows. The abolition of untouchability is a _shuddhiyajna_³ for Hindus. What you gave today is your share in the _shuddhiyajana_ and is the earnest money of your _pratijna_.⁴

You ask me whether purification can come from inner or outer forces. The question is well put. Purification by outer means is valueless. If I forced you to bow to me, it would be against dharma. It is only by the inner effort that religious objects can be achieved.

I beseech you to do that willingly today, which you will be compelled to do hereafter.

_The Bombay Chronicle, 27-12-1933_

350. SPEECH AT ANDHRA MAHA SABHA, MADRAS

December 22, 1933

After unveiling the portrait, Gandhiji said that Mr. Nageswara Rao Pantulu in flesh and blood was different from Nageswara Rao Pantulu in canvas. The latter ¹ The Southern India Vaishya Association presented an address to Gandhiji. The speech, delivered in Hindi, was translated into Telugu by K. Nageswara, Rao Pantulu.

² One who sees all as equal; _vide_ “Discoures on the Gita”, 29-9-1926

³ Purifying sacrifice.

⁴ Pledge; the reference is to the pledge taken at Bombay on September 25, 1932; _vide_ “Resolution at the Hindu Leaders Conference Bombay”, 25-9-1932 became a static personality. Ever since he had known Mr. Pantulu he had one speciality about him and that was that Mr. Pantulu always believed in giving himself away to those who needed him or his help. Mr. Nageswara Rao Pantulu had told him that the bulk of the profits he made from ‘Amrutanjan’1 went to the relief of the distressed, to help those who were in need. Mr. Nageswara Rao Pantulu had absolutely no other purpose. Mahatmaji prayed that Mr. Nageswara Rao Pantulu might continue to evolve from step to step till at last everybody could go to him and get comfort and help. They must all translate in their own lives all the noble qualities that they found in or imputed to Mr. Nageswara Rao Pantulu.

The Hindu, 22-12-1933

351. SPEECH AT HINDI PRACHAR SABHA CONVOCATION 2

MADRAS,
December 22, 1933

After apologizing to the graduates and pracharaks3 for his inability, due to pressure of time, to hand over to them their respective degrees in person, he assured them of his congratulations and blessings. He had very little by way of advice to give them for what there was to say had already been said by Mr. Tripathi.4 But one point he would like to emphaize—about the need for following that advice. Hindi prachar in South India, and as he had seen, more particularly in Andhradesha, had made steady progress; but he would not be satisfied unless Hindi was understood by everyone to such an extent that not one would desire him to speak in English. His appeal to them was to push on with their work with courage and determination. They had started well and he hoped they would carry it on. It was stated that Hindi presented some peculiar difficulties to people of these parts of India. Perhaps this was true to some extent. But he felt no Indian language would present any insurmountable difficulty to an Indian. There was an element of Sanskrit common to all Indian languages which, so far as he could see, should make it very easy for them to gain at least a working knowledge of any Indian language. They found no difficulty whatever in mastering a foreign language like English or even such difficult languages as Tamil. Why should Hindi, therefore, present any great difficulty to them? It was the language of 22 out of the 35 crores of India’s population, and it was bound to be the common language of India.

It was stated by some, Gandhiji said, that Muslims could not understand Hindi and they understood only Urdu. But he could see no difference between Hindi and Urdu as they obtained among common folk. In Islamic books and a section of Muslims, it was true that a large percentage of Persian and Arabic words were employed thus

1 Trade name of a balm
2 Gandhiji presided over the third annual convocation of the Dakshin Bharat Hindi Prachar Sabha held at the Gokhale Hall.
3 Trained teachers; literally, ‘propagators’
4 Ramnaresh Tripathi, who delivered the convocation address

320 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
rendering Urdu difficult for Hindus to understand. Similarly, some Hindus also use a large percentage of Sanskrit words in their books and conversation, making them difficult for Muslims to comprehend. But when he talked of Hindu and Urdu being identical he was not referring to this kind of Hindi or Urdu. He referred to only the language in vogue among common folk in North India, which contained a good mixture of Sanskrit, Persian and Arabic words and still was understood by everyone, Hindu or Muslim. It was this language he wanted every one of them to learn to understand and speak. Unless they did this, he was afraid people from the South could not touch the heart of the masses in the North and vice versa.

The Hindi Prachar Sabha, he said, had been working in Dakshin Bharat for over fifteen years and yet, he asked, what had people done to avail themselves of its services and, by learning the language, to promote Indian national unity? Did they not find time and money to waste on the races, cinemas and amusements? Could they not spare a part of these for the learning of Hindi? He had heard the Sabha was in need of adequate accommodation and had been trying to acquire buildings of its own but could not for want of funds. If everyone came forward to learn the language paying a small sum for the Sabha’s services the necessary money could easily be found and the Sabha need not continue expecting help from Northern India. It was the duty of South India to make the Sabha self-dependent. He would therefore repeat his appeal that South Indians must one and all avail themselves of the Sabha’s services and help in this national work.

The Hindu, 23-12-1933

352. REPLY TO DEPRESSED CLASSES DEPUTATION

MADRAS,
December 22, 1933

Come in Rao Bahadur. Can I give you a chair? Now, Rao Bahadur, I have got your letter. Shall we begin with it? Or what shall we do? Just as you would regulate the proceedings.

“Will you permit its reading?” Mr. Srinivasan submitted. Gandhiji said:
Yes, you please.

. . . Mr. Bashyam Iyengar threw out a hint that the letter consisted of six typed pages.

It all depends on Mr. Srinivasan, who is the Chairman here. But so far as I am concerned, I have read it from top to bottom.

1 Gandhiji then auctioned the shawl, the convocation ‘robe’, which had been presented to him at the beginning of the proceedings.

2 The executive of the Madras Depressed Classes Federation waited in deputation on Gandhiji in the evening. The deputation consisted of R. Srinivasan, V. Dharmalingam Pillai, Swami Sahajananda, P. V. Rajagopala Pillai and Pushparaj. Others present were; V. Bashyam Iyengar, President of the Provincial Board of Servants of Untouchables Society, K. Nageswara Rao Pantulu, V. Venkatasubbiah, K. Bashyam and R. V. Sastri, Editor, Harijan.
Mr. Srinivasan suggested that it might be allowed to be read for the benefit of his colleagues as there was hardly time to circulate it to them. Gandhiji asked Mr. Pushparaj to go ahead.

You will excuse me, If I am not attending to it. Because, I have almost got it by heart. In the mean time, I shall be putting my papers in order.¹

The best thing would be for me to take up point after point and deal with it. What you say about the Poona Pact is common ground between us; and I entirely endorse the view that if savarna Hindus do not work the Pact in the manner it is intended it should be, it can become nugatory and of no benefit whatsoever.² I will admit that in its entirety.

How far the Central Board at Delhi or the Provincial Boards will be able directly to affect the elections, I do not know. I think it is a very difficult and delicate subject. Therefore what I have directed is that with these elections generally we should not interfere. But we do interfere where injustice is done to a Harijan candidate. When that happens, as it did in Bombay, we try to set it right.

Gandhiji related the Bombay incident at some length and mentioned his efforts in effecting the withdrawal of the candidate (for election to the Legislative Council) who had ranged himself against one who was a member of the Servants of India Society, uniformly known to be decisively friendly to Harijan interests.

In Delhi there was the danger of the Harijan candidate not being elected to the Municipality. We intervened and room was specially made for the Harijan candidate. In Cawnpore, there was a Harijan candidate and it was wrong for savarna Hindus to have opposed him. I came to know about it after the election. The gentleman who was defeated wrote to me; and I replied that it was wrong on the part of the savarna rival to have so ranged himself against the Harijan candidate. We tried our best to get this gentleman resign his seat. At that time it was not successful. What has since happened I do not know. There are other instances, as well.

I give these instances to show that where there is a Harijan candidate, whose bonafides is not impeached in any manner whatsoever, the Central Board have tried to influence the savarna Hindu candidates to withdraw from the contest. But where Harijan candidates are opposed to one another, or when savarna Hindus are conducting the elections, the Board does not interfere—which you really want the Board to do. You desire that the Board should regulate the elections or so influence the elections, as to have the right type of men elected. But, I think, the Board will then lose its influence. Today the Board is daily rising in influence, because of its absolute neutrality except where, as I said, a Harijan stands to suffer. That is the line of demarcation we have placed. If you examine the situation, I have no doubt you will agree with me.

¹ The letter was then read out and Gandhiji gave the reply.
² The deputationists had apprehended that the Yeravda Pact would not be effective in view of caste Hindus’ “tactics and unfair methods” and that they could be prevented from electing men of their choice.

If you want to make this Board an effective instrument of service, it must keep itself apart and aloof from politics, and when the level of our character rises and the root that lies at the heart of untouchability is affected and expelled, there would be levelling up of everything all along the line. That is my hope. But with these lapses of mere moral character, the Central Board should not interfere. Once we endeavour to do that, I think, you would find that the whole of the structure will fall to pieces.

The Board is absolutely unaffected by politics; and, as I have so often said, the Harijan movement is purely religious. If I succeed in doing so, and If the Board accepts that policy in all sincerity and works it out earnestly, you will find nothing better for our purpose. The movement will become purer, and the Board would be wiser and achieve its ends quicker for its aloofness and abstention from direct intervention in politics.

Passing on to the next point raised in Mr. Srinivasan's letter, namely, economic condition of Depressed Classes and the removal of untouchability, in general, through the instrumentality of the Government, Mahatma Gandhi said that he totally agreed with them—that the Board should not do a single act which would interfere with the encouragement afforded by the Government; and the Board, he assured, would not do it, no matter what views he held in connection with the Government.

There is no doubt I have been holding very strong views against the present system of government. It is a mischievous system, taking the interests of India as a whole. But I cannot possibly apply that doctrine in connection with Harijans, unless I would so throw myself in the turmoil and resist the Government, there also. I cannot do it.

I say, honestly, I could not possibly resist doing it, if the Harijans were capable of looking after themselves, as you [Mr. Srinivasan] are and as Mr. Pushparaj is. That is, so far as you individuals are concerned. Taken as a mass they are absolutely helpless. When they can help themselves, stand equal to savarna Hindus and brush shoulders with them, I shall be at ease and then say: ‘No; I cannot look to your interests.’ That I cannot possibly do.

Let them take all the advantage they can from the Government and let them take all the advantage they can from the savarna Hindus. The two mixed together will enable them to redress the balance somewhat. Even then, I do not believe they would be able to redress the balance because this crushing down that has gone on for ages is not going to be lifted off entirely in a few years, no matter what atonement is done by savarna Hindus. It would take a long time before the Harijans come to their own and feel they are just as good as they might be.

I can give you this absolute assurance that I shall never interfere with the policy of the Government in so far as the Harijans are concerned. Here also I will say I am conducting this tour in a manner so as to disarm all suspicion; and I will never take advantage of the Harijan movement in order to further the aims of the Civil Disobedience Movement. It would then not be civil but criminal. I do not ask your word of certicate. But I do say that I have never had any criminal intention in all my life. In order to justify that civil nature, I am keeping this Harijan cause apart. If, on the other hand, I wanted to use it for a political purpose, I would not have hesitated to make an open declaration that ‘of course, I am going to use the Harijans for conducting the civil resistance movement’. No; emphatically no. On the contrary, those Harijans who are living with me, and who, according to their declarations, owe their all to their association with me, pleaded with me to allow them to join the movement, when I was disbanding the Ashram. ‘Why do you keep us aloof? Are we less patriotic and less capable of offering resistance?’ You dare not do it,’ I warned, ‘because’. I said, ‘you, as representatives of Harijans, would be putting yourselves in the wrong.’

The Servants of Untouchables Society is today under the control of men who cannot afford to offer civil resistance. Messrs A. V. Thakkar and G. D. Birla are the moving spirits there. Not only that; all Congressmen, who have got this civil resistance in them and wanted to do so, are also prohibited from taking office in the Central Board, Provincial Boards or any of their branches.

There still remains one question as to the activities of the Society and its relationship with the Government. There again, I would say, ‘Do not put that weight on the Board’. If you do that, it would lose its universal influence. I want the Board to have a universal influence and its influence felt effectively everywhere. In matters you have mentioned, the Board will never interfere with the Government. The government may even adopt measures that may be harmful. Then it will be for you to put your foot down. We should not do it. There again I endorse what you [Mr. Srinivasan] have said in your letter.

In your politics also you say you must be allowed to develop along your own lines. I entirely grant it. There will be no interference on the part of the Board. So then, when the Government’s policy is questionable in connection with Harijans’ interests, it will be for you and for you alone to decide whether to resist it, even by constitutional and legitimate means. But so far as the Board is concerned, I will say, ‘We have drawn the line of demarcation and there we stand.’ If they do stand, I know the Board will command the respect of the Government also. So all along the line, they will be acting on the square—all right angles and no acute angle.

Now, to education. On this subject, I think the Central Board can present you with an absolutely good record. Everywhere scholarships are being given freely. So many hundreds of Harijans are now in receipt of scholarships which they cannot get from the Government or any other agency. We never say to a single person: ‘Do not go to the Government.’ That is not a policy which is applicable to this Board. We encourage them to seek assistance from the Government departments. Where there was not enough, the Board supplemented it. We have done it in so many cases. That is our policy in connection with education.

Then, ah! you say that repatriation is the result of my activities in South Africa. That is a very unkind cut. (Laughter) I say that history will give a different verdict.

When I landed on the South African soil in the year 1893, repatriation was on the anvil. Do you know that a Bill was actually passed in the Natal Legislative whereby every Indian, who after finishing his indenture wanted to settle in Natal, was required—to do what?

1 The deputationists had complained that the policy of admitting Harijan children into common schools, where caste Hindus predominated, was not working well and was not conducive to the educational progress of the Depressed Classes. They sought Gandhiji’s help in raising funds for scholarships, stipends and for establishing hostels.

2 The deputationists had stated that those who had been repatriated from South Africa as a result of Gandhiji’s work were undergoing great suffering and hardship for want of employment.
MR. R. SRINIVASAN: Pay poll tax.
GANDHIJI: How much?
MR. SRINIVASAN: £ 1 a head.

No fear. They stipulated £ 25. I resisted it. The original intention was that after indenture had been finished, they must go back. That is to say, indenture should expire in India. I promoted petitions in the Natal Parliament. I did it through the mercantile community, as it was not possible for me to do it through individual Indians at that time. The provisions were altered in consequence; and that is a matter of record. Therefore you will see, historically, repatriation was taking place when I went to South Africa; and on my going there, it became impossible. You then express your fear that this untouchability movement may end as the movement in South Africa ended. I wish it ended like that. (Loud laughter) Repatriation is now voluntary and repatriates get money compensation. In 1893, it was involuntary and compulsory without any compensation whatsoever. If that was the crime I have committed—(Renewed laughter)—I plead guilty.

Winding up this part of the discussion, Gandhiji said that the scheme of repatriation had proved a failure. He knew it was a failure because he was in correspondence with those who could speak with direct knowledge in South Africa. He was guiding Indians there to the extent he could; and warning them against coming to India where they would be outcastes even among outcastes. In these circumstances, he said, he had nothing to repent for, in regard to South Africa.

Let me now come to the temple-entry question; and I will at once say that I accept your point.\(^1\) If you say you do not want it at all, I agree. But it is due to the savarna Hindus to say, ‘Come to our temples. They are as much open to you as they are to us. It is entirely your choice whether you will enter or not’. I do not invite Harijans to take part in this agitation for temple-entry. But you can signify your approval, if you wanted, that this is also your right, but you may not exercise it. Or you may take a different attitude. That is entirely for you to consider. But so far as I am concerned, it is simply a one-sided thing. It is a matter of repentance for savarna Hindus and a change of heart. You are entitled to come to those places which you consider to be our sanctuaries. You have just as much right as any savarna Hindu. When that right is recognized, it is for you to exercise that right or not.

About the drink evil, Gandhiji said that he was always circumspect and careful

---

\(^1\) The deputationists had stated that they were not opposed to temple-entry but it was not advisable for them to take active part in the movement.
in offering advice to this community.¹ He was aware that it was prevalent among other communities. But only the Harijans, who were under the great handicap of having to fight uphill, could not afford it. They had got to be, like Caesar’s wife, above suspicion.

The savarna Hindus may wallow in lakes of red water; but you must fly away from it. I do not, however, want to wound your susceptibilities. I tell you, gentlemen like you may take it amiss; but the large body of Harijans don’t. After all, you and I know that I have been working in their midst for years and years in order to wean them from drink. Therefore, I think you ought not to seek to restrict my freedom. You can certainly warn me; and I accept it—shall shape my language in such a manner that it does not offend any person whatsoever; and you may take it from me that I would not say a single word to offend anybody.

Lastly to the name Harijan. You say that the Depressed Classes were not consulted. They consulted me. That is the point. (Laughter) I have visited all parts of India. ‘Why are we called Harijans?’ I am asked. Why should they not have a better name? That is the generality of feeling. ‘For Heaven’s sake do not call us coolies,’ they pleaded. At one time this word had a particular significance. A whole race was called by that name. If it was not now used it does not mean there has come about a change of heart. The offence to the ear has been removed. That is what the new name has achieved. It is not, as I said, my coining. An untouchable pleaded with me not to be known by an expression of eternal reproach. ‘Depressed’ or ‘Suppressed’ reminded them of slavery, he very rightly said. ‘I have no name to suggest; will you suggest?’ I asked. Then the man suggested ‘Harijan’. He quoted in support from Narasinh Mehta, the Gujarati poet who had used it in his works. I jumped at it. I knew also the Tamil saying Dikkatravarukku deivame tunai. Is not ‘Harijan’ a paraphrase of it? They are God’s chosen, who are outcastes. That is what ‘Harijan’ signifies as applied to suppressed classes.

The certificate you have given in the last paragraph of your letter² is too early for me. You all have listened to what I have had to say.
say to the points raised. We shall all work together with the same end in view. I am sure God is with us; and therefore success is assured. I have no misgivings at all. I know untouchability is dying. To me the monster seems to be still taking a few breaths; but they are last breaths. (Loud applause)

MR. R. SRINIVASAN: I hope so.
Yes; we can honestly hope.

The Hindu, 23-12-1933

353. INTERVIEW TO “MADRAS MAIL”

MADRAS,
December 22, 1933

Asked about his statement that he had given Pandit Jawaharlal a power of attorney to act for him as leader of the Congress Party, Mr. Gandhi said that he had noted the Pandit’s reply and the implication that he was joking when he made the statement.

That is not wholly true. There was and is a serious background to my statement. Having abandoned politics for the present, and decided to devote myself to the elimination of untouchability from Hinduism I cannot govern the Congress Party. When I am asked by individuals to give my views privately on some point at issue I may do so, but I am not in a position to define or discuss policies. This is Pandit Jawaharlal’s work. And I have no desire to interfere with his absolute discretion. Hence my remark about power of attorney.

Will not the Pandit’s well-known communist leaning mean that Congress policy will be given a communist bias under his guidance?

No. I do not think so. Jawaharlal is too honest a man for that. I do not think he will depart from the fundamental Congress policy without giving ample notice to his colleagues. I do not think that Jawaharlal’s own views are yet sufficiently crystallized to make any fundamental departure from Congress policy likely. He is a firm believer in socialism, but his ideas on how best the socialist principle can be applied to Indian conditions are still in the melting pot. His communist views need not, therefore, frighten anyone.

Reminded that the masses cannot be expected to make fine distinctions between ideological discussions and frank exhortations to pursue certain courses,

1 According to a report in The Hindustan Times, 15-12-1933, concluding the discussion with workers in Delhi on December 14, Gandhiji had said that he “had given general power of attorney to Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru and asked those present to discuss everything concerning the Congress and other things with Pandit Jawaharlal”.

328 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
Mr. Gandhi admitted that there was always a danger of the crowd misunderstanding a speaker’s purpose but declared that it was not Jawaharlal’s intention to inflame crowds.

Conversation then turned on communist opposition to large estates, which, apparently, Jawaharlal shares.

I do not think that the land should be parcelled out. It would be a serious loss if the influence of the big hereditary landholder were wholly destroyed. I do think, however, that the actual cultivator should have a title in the soil, and a larger share of its produce. At present, in many places, he gets far too little. He should get a fair share and not a bare maintenance.

Referring to agrarian movements in various parts of the country, Mr. Gandhi declared:

Whatever the Government do, this tremendous awakening is not going to die out. It has come to stay. What has impressed me most is that it has been accompanied with so little violence, thus constituting an unconscious manifestation of the effectiveness of non-violence.

Asked whether he had contemplated the danger of middlemen, in the shape of money-lenders or marketing agents, etc., acquiring a foothold between the landowner and the cultivators as a result of recent land legislation, Mr. Gandhi replied:

It would be a deplorable thing if the middlemen got hold of the land. We must safeguard the interests of the actual cultivator, by which I mean the man who himself tills the land. He may employ many labourers to assist him, but so long as he works on the land himself he fulfils my definition of a cultivating occupant.

My work for the Harijans is purely religious. It has no political motive behind it, and is essentially humanitarian. It is in no sense of the term a political movement.

But you will not deny that the movement must have political consequences?

That is true. I do say that, though such political consequences will be by-products of the movement, they do not constitute its purpose. Any religious movement must have repercussions on other aspects of life, for religion in its broadest sense governs all departments of life.

Mr. Gandhi admitted that the movement was liable to exploitation for political purposes, and was aware of the assertions, voiced recently by Sir N. N. Sirkar, that its purpose was to consolidate Hinduism against the other minorities, but he firmly and emphatically denied that he had any such object. In fact he declared that he differed from the Hindu Mahasabha in this regard.

The Hindu Mahasabha’s activities are essentially communal, and are designed to further Hindu interests as distinguished from other.
THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI

The Harijan movement has no communal bias. It aims at the internal reform of Hinduism, at ridding it of artificial distinctions of high and low. I am fighting for the same rights, without reservation, for the Harijans that caste Hindus have in matters religious, social and political. I am not aiming at increasing the numbers of Hindu voters as such. So far as one single person can, I am trying to keep this movement entirely free from politics.

When the scribe1 referred to the view held by many members of the minority communities, Muslims, Christians, etc., that the political effect of the movement, and the political end sought by others, whatever Mr. Gandhi’s own purpose may be, is to secure the domination of a consolidated Hindu majority, overwhelming all minorities by its numbers, Mr. Gandhi repeated his resolve to keep the movement free from all taint of politics.

I want to absorb Christians, Muslims and others, as one indivisible nation, having common interest, then minorities will not feel themselves to be minorities. If untouchability is abolished, the bar to closer intercourse between Hindus and the minorities will disappear, and with its disappearance will come a new unity of aim and interest, a new oneness. This Harijan movement is in no sense exclusive. It aims at removing untouchability in every shape and form.

Reminded that Dr. Moonje recently declared that Hinduism included all, Muslims, Christians, Parsis, and the rest, Mr. Gandhi replied:

The object of Dr. Moonje differs greatly from mine. They are haggling over seats in the Legislature. That movement is solely political, mine is non-political.

To question whether he approved of the bullying methods of some of his lieutenants in the matter of temple-entry, Mr. Gandhi forcibly replied:

If anybody in the Harijan movement tries to use force he is acting against my wishes. I try to keep the movement from descending to low levels, but there are difficult elements in any movement. For myself, I refuse to open a temple unless satisfied that the wish that it should be opened to Harijans is general. Recently I refused to open a temple because the trustees seemed to be sharply divided. Only where temple-entry is approved by an overwhelming majority of the actual worshippers and by the trustees of the temple, will I consent to open it.

Asked for his views on the Temple-entry Bills now before the Legislative Assembly, Mr. Gandhi declared that the Bills were necessary to free the hands of

1 The correspondent trustees and worshippers who might be willing to open temples to Harijans but were prevented from doing so by judge-made laws.

Unless we free Hinduism from these restraints it will become stagnant, and perish.

Unless we can root out untouchability from Hinduism it must perish, it will deserve to die, and I will not regret its passing away. Untouchability must go. What I say to Europeans is: ‘Come down and work with us as free citizens, rather than as members of the ruling classes.’

Mr. Gandhi said that he was amazed at the warmth of the welcome that Madras had given him, at the size of the crowd on the Triplicane Beach on Wednesday evening.

It took me 30 minutes to reach the platform, and 45 to return from it to my car again. There were over one lakh of people, and it did good to see how Harijans and caste people mixed together in the crowd. That would not have happened a few years ago. Untouchability is going.¹

Madras Mail, 22-12-1933

354. INTERVIEW TO “THE HINDU”¹

MADRAS,
December 22, 1933

As usual I have experienced nothing but deep affection from the people wherever I have gone. But I must confess that I was unprepared for the demonstration at the Beach and the demonstrations that I witnessed during the visits to several labour areas. The numbers that attended these demonstrations everywhere exceeded past records.

Whilst there is no doubt that personal affection and attachment had to do a great deal with them, I am convinced that the vast mass of humanity that seemed to cling to me fully understood and appreciated what I stood for and what I had come for. If their religious sense had revolted against the drive against untouchability, the exhibition of their affection, even if I could not have lost it altogether, would have been tempered with moderation and restraint, if not reasonable coolness. I am used to reading the mass mind by taking at a sweep the expression in their eyes and their general demeanour. I could find no trace of disapproval of what I have been doing in connection with untouchability. The manner in which they came forward with their contributions when I asked for them was also significant and went to strengthen the impressions I have given. I am, therefore, filled with hope for the future.

¹ A cutting of this report was enclosed with “Letter to Jawaharlal Nehru”.
² Given on the eve of Gandhiji’s departure from Madras.

I feel that even in the South untouchability is shaken to its very roots. I would like to say to my sanatanist friends that I have no desire whatsoever to wound their susceptibilities. I want to find points of agreement; and I know there are many. The points of disagreement are few. If my approach to them cannot bring about immediate agreement, I know that time will, if I have patience which I feel I have.

I would like to add one word as to the behaviour of the Police. Today was really a trying time for them, as I had to pass through the business parts of George Town; and it gives me pleasure to be able to say that their behaviour was friendly and helpful. They became as it were one of the people and handled them in a gentle manner. I am grateful to them for this exhibition of friendliness.

The Hindu, 23-12-1933

355. MESSAGE TO TAMIL LOVERS’ CONFERENCE

December 22, 1933

I hope that the love of Tamil lovers will prove lasting and stand the severest strain. The superficial knowledge that I have of Tamil has enabled me to appreciate the beauty and the richness of the language. To neglect it would appear to me to be criminal.

M. K. GANDHI

The Hindu, 23-12-1933. Also C. W. 9699. Courtesy : Madras Library Association

356. SPEECH AT GUNTUR

December 23, 1933

BROTHERS AND SISTERS,

Guntur is not new to me. I thank you for your address and the purse you have offered to me. The lawyers of Guntur have subscribed

1 The signature is in the Tamil script.
2 Gandhiji’s speech in Hindi was translated into Telugu by Konda Venkatappayya.
a sum of Rs. 145. I myself was a lawyer once. I say I cannot accept such a small sum from the lawyers. They are not so poor. I understand from this that the Guntur lawyers have not interested themselves in the Harijan cause. This sum of Rs. 145 can be given by a single vakil. I ask them, ‘What are you going to do?’ I know the lawyers of Guntur. That is why I am telling them so. Last time when I was here, they gave me a bag of money. All days are not alike. Then money was plentiful, now a little scarce.

I have just visited Mr. Punna Rao’s Gurunatheswara temple at Tilakpet. Because of the name given to the deity, the temple has become unpopular as the deity was named after the paternal uncle of Mr. Punna Rao. In truth, there is nothing wrong in the name ‘Gurunatheswara’, though the name “Gurunath” may be wrong. In my opinion God should not be named so as to perpetuate the memory of a human being. It is not proper that the name of the donor should go with the charity. This is my personal opinion. The name of the God should not really matter. Mr. Punna Rao, the late Gurnadham’s brother’s son, has told me that he has no objection to change the name of the deity. The deity will hereafter be called ‘Gouri Vishweshwara’. I have signed the paper containing the new name.

Mr. Punna Rao wants to throw open the temple to the Harijans. But I have asked him not to do it now and for this reason. Temple-entry and change of name at one and the same time is not desirable under the peculiar circumstances of the case. I am not against any temple being thrown open to the Harijans. But I am not for compulsion. When the bhaktas and the trustees are willing, the temple should be thrown open to the Harijans. Now that the deity’s name has been changed, the trustees and myself are anxious to see how many of you will visit the temple. Three months hence from today, i.e., on the 23rd of March next, this temple will be thrown open to Harijans. It cannot be done unless public opinion favours it. If public opinion favours it, the temple will be thrown open on the 23rd of March next, by which time I hope the issue will be settled. I hope you will attend this temple from now on and witness the entry into it by the Harijans on the 23rd of March next.

If the savarnas do not do justice to the Harijans the Hindu religion will perish. No religion perishes owing to extraneous causes. It lies in nobody’s power to do it. But a religion will perish if those who follow it tread the path of adharma.

_The Hindu, 24-12-1933_
It gives me much pleasure to be able to come here. But I must also tell you that it gives me much trouble. The car could not negotiate its road to my satisfaction. Therefore, most of the way I had to walk. Walking itself is no trouble. But the fact is I had no time and yet I have to come here. The promise having been made, I have to fulfil that promise.

By cutting the knot, I have performed the opening ceremony of the Harijan Ayurvedic Kuteeram. I hope it will be a proper institution for healing the ills of those surrounding this place. Though, through the kindness of the organizers of this function, the address has not been read to you, I have read it. The address is a report of your present activities and somewhat your hopes for the future. I do wish that your hopes for the future may be fulfilled, but as a worker of 50 years standing I want to utter a word of caution.

You have a very ambitious programme and if the managers or trustees of your programme are vigilant, painstaking, honest and men of unimpeachable character, it is just possible that you can work up the programme. But if there is want of vigilance, want of care, want of honesty, want of ability, I promise that not even one item of your programme will be fulfilled. For my part, I will appeal to the Harijan Sevak Sangh to give you an equal contribution for the work you might do. Well, I can make this promise on behalf of the Harijan Sevak Sangh, viz., that if you will produce a workable scheme and men of character that will satisfy the Harijaan Sevak Sangh, and if you produce proper accounts which can be inspected from time to time by the Harijan Sevak Sangh, certainly the Harijan Sevak Sangh will be able to render you help, financially. Therefore, if you do not receive help from the Harijan Sevak Sangh you will have to blame yourself and not the Harijan Sevak Sangh. But you will be able to get help from the Harijan Sevak Sangh if you satisfy the conditions I have suggested. As far as I know from the previous history of the Harijan Sevak Sangh it never went back from the promises it made.

The Harijan Sevak Sangh has enough of money to satisfy your wants.

To those who have assembled here I appeal to make use of all the institutions that may rise in your midst in every legitimate way possible. I want to hear of Harijan institutions coming into being here.
and everywhere. The object of the Harijan Sevak Sangh is not to displace your labours but to supplement them. The Harijan Sevak Sangh will have more than justified its existence if it will be able to serve Harijans properly. Therefore, you can easily under-stand that the reputation of the Harijan Sevak Sangh depends entirely upon your hands and your own approval.

One thing more I would like to say and that is the same I have been repeating everywhere. That is this. In this movement of purification Harijans will have to play an honourable and valuable part. I repeat that you should all observe, if you have not already been observing, the laws of hygiene and sanitation. It does not mean that all savarna Hindus are living in sanitary conditions. As a Harijan by choice, I ask you to rise above these things and purify yourselves, unmindful of what savarna Hindus do or what they are. Similarly if there are any Harijans, who are eating carrion and beef, I invite them to give up these habits and, if they have never touched these things, I want them to become missionaries and do propaganda work against such habits. And then comes the drink curse. If you are, or any one of you, addicted to drink, give it up, for drink is a poison. You should not take that poison because many savarna Hindus also take poison.
You do not want to sink with savarna Hindu but you want to swim with them, and if you have developed vigorous arms and can swim well, savarna Hindus will also rise; I know for certain that the time is coming in the near future when the Harijans will be able to help savarna Hindus out of the mire in which they are falling. Therefore I want every Harijan to work in robust faith.

To savarna Hindus I want to say one word. If you do not forget all distinctions of high and low, rid yourselves and your hearts of untouchability altogether, you and I and the Hindu race will perish. I want you to believe this although thousands of persons may say anything to the contrary. What I say is out of rich experience.

The Hindu, 24-12-1933

358. TESTIMONIAL TO P. M. RAO

December 23, 1933

Shri Poovada Mrityunjaya Rao was most attentive during my day’s tour through Guntur District.¹

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: C. W. 9755. Courtesy : Andhra Pavilion in Gandhi Darshan,
Delhi, 1969-70

¹ Gandhiji had covered Guntur District by car on December 23 in one day.
359. SPEECH AT PEDDAPURAM

December 24, 1933

FRIENDS,

Let me tender you my congratulations on the most admirable arrangements made in order to secure a straight passage for me to the meeting place. You can well imagine that I have very limited energy to work my way through pressing crowds. It was therefore most refreshing for me to find here that I had not to push my way through crowds. I thank you for the several addresses and the purse just presented to me and I thank you also for the restraint with which you have refrained from desiring to read those addresses.

You know the purpose of this tour. I want you to join me in driving out the curse of untouchability. I want you to join with me in whole-heartedly believing that untouchability as we practise it can have no religious sanction. The very thought that any single human being can be born untouchable is most debasing. We are too near our own times to notice how Hinduism is disintegrating under the load of this heavy curse and I must repeat here what I have said from a thousand platforms that if untouchability is not removed, Hinduism dies. It therefore gladdens my heart when I see such a large number of people gathering at this meeting and giving their coppers. But I must not detain you and detain myself discoursing on this problem of untouchability.

I have a heavy programme in front of me for the day. I will therefore close by repeating my thanks to you for the admirable arrangements, the address and the purse, and by the prayer that God may give us sufficient strength to go through this process of purification.

I would like to give a few brief minutes to the sale of these frames containing the address and to the sisters here to discard their precious ornaments. If any of you have not contributed to the purse and desire to pay your share to this purse, you will kindly do so. But now these two frames have suffered a reverse. The glass is broken. Let this be a lesson for the future that no frames are presented to me. I know that Andhra is an artistic province of India. You must therefore discover the artistic and simple method of framing the addresses you present.

The Hindu, 25-12-1993
360. SPEECH AT GOLLAPALEM

December 24, 1933

I first learnt to beg pennies from indentured labourers in South Africa. Such collections have always been charged with refreshing blessings. I cannot recall a single instance of a man or a woman who repented for having given to me. Causes for which I have begged were good. The Harijan cause for which I beg now is undoubtedly the best for which I have begged. I am now inviting savarna Hindus to a purificatory rite and to repentance. Whatever little a savarna Hindu does for Harijans, he does to uplift himself or herself and Hinduism.

The Bombay Chronicle, 27-12-1933

361. SPEECH AT RAMACHANDRAPURAM

December 24, 1933

I am grateful to you for your addresses of welcome and the money you have given me. But what you paid does not satisfy me. I expect more. I am now disposing of the two addresses presented to me in auction.

I congratulate you on the excellent arrangements you have made for holding this meeting. This place is richly endowed by nature; and beautifying things is a special characteristic of nature. By God’s grace, you have not spoiled the beauty of nature but maintained it intact. All of you know that you have in your midst an ashram known as the Valmiki Ashram. I have just visited that Ashram, which gives shelter to Harijan boys, and I had the pleasure of hearing the bhajans and keertans sung by those boys. I was very much impressed by them. They have presented me with a beautiful address in which they ask for your support. The Ashram stands in need of your support—from all of you; it deserves all the support that the people of the taluk give it.

Nature intended all human beings to be equals; but man in his arrogance has created invidious distinctions by classing some as high and some as low. God does not recognize these inequalities. You may

---

1 Presented by the Ramachandrapuram Taluk Board and the Hindi Premi Mandali

2 After the auction, Gandhiji’s speech in English was translated into Telugu by B. Sambamurti.
see anywhere or anything in nature, but you cannot see this kind of inequality which man has created. So unless you eradicate the evil of untouchability, you cannot establish equality, which is nature’s law. I ask you all to join me in my prayer to Almighty to give you strength and courage to eradicate the curse of untouchability entirely. I do not want to detain you longer. If you succeed in collecting any more money among the ladies, you will please bring it to me.

The Hindu, 26-12-1933

362. SPEECH AT RAJAHMUNDRY

December 24, 1933

I would ask you to kindly listen to me for a few moments. I thank you for all these addresses and several purses. It gave me very great pleasure to be able to renew my acquaintance with Rajahmundry and its citizens. You have taught me to expect great things from you and I hope that you will in this Harijan cause, live up to the expectations that you have raised.

I see here the address presented by the Hindu Samaj. I have gone through its programme that was sent to me. It is an ambitious programme; but no programme whether ambitious or unambitious can possibly be fulfilled without the necessary change of heart amongst the millions of savarna Hindus. Untouchability is like a slow poison killing the Hindu body, and even as you cannot sustain a body that is slowly perishing, you will not be able to sustain this perishing
Hinduism unless you remove the curse of untouchability.

I am too sorry to have to inform you that it will be impossible for me to go on with my speech unless I secure complete silence on your part. Now by the time you sit down, I propose to do a little bit of work and therefore I propose to put up this address by the Municipality for auction.

The Hindu, 26-12-1933

---

1 The speech was translated into Telugu by B. Sambamurti.
2 At this stage there was some disturbance and commotion in the gathering.
One important question that you have raised is that the Harijan Sevak Sangh should be principally manned and managed by you. That shows that you have not followed the pages of the Harijan. That shows also that you have not understood the origin of the Board. The Board has been formed to enable savarna Hindus to do repentance and reparation to you. It is thus a Board of debtors and you are the creditors. You owe nothing to the debtors, and therefore, so far as this Board is concerned, the initiative has to come from the debtors. You have to certify whether the debtors discharge their obligation or not. What you have to do is to enable and help them to discharge their obligations; that is to say, you can tell them how they can discharge their obligation, you can tell them what in your opinion will satisfy the great body of Harijans. They may or may not accept your advice. If they do not, naturally they run the risk of incurring your displeasure. A debtor may go to a creditor and say to him, I have brought so much money, will you take it? The creditor may say, ‘Off you go; I want full payment or none.’ Or the creditor may say, ‘What you have brought is not part payment, but worse.’ All these things you, creditors, can do. And so, when this Board was established and some Harijan friends wrote to me, I told them that Harijans should form themselves into advisory boards or boards of inspection. I want you to understand this distinction thoroughly. You will please see that there is no desire not to accept your advice or co-operation or help. I am only putting before you the true and logical position. This is a period of grace that God has given to caste Hindus, and it is during this period of grace that they have to prove their sincerity. And I am moving heaven and earth and am going about from place to place, simply in order that this obligation on the part of savarna Hindus may be fully discharged.

A member of the deputation then suggested that the Board should appoint advisory committees of Harijans of its own selection.

Do not ask the Board to select a committee of Harijans, but select your own committee and say to the Board you have elected

---

1 A deputation of Harijans from East Godavari District met Gandhiji at Rahamundry.
these members and it should carry on correspondence with them. There is another danger in the suggestion. There may be factions and divisions among you. Different committees may be appointed by different factions. The Board may recognize all of them. But that will be unfortunate. Let there be no quarrels among you. Present a united front to the debtors. The debtors may put you against one another, though the Board, if it is worth its name, will not do that. The Congress has been able to present a united front. Today, the Congress is full of simple men like you and me. You should have a body of business-like men who will put down with a strong hand all quarrels among you. Then you will dominate the Board without being on it. Do not be easily satisfied. Tell the debtors you are not going to be satisfied with 5 shillings in the pound but that you must have 20 shillings in the pound. This is not a matter for bargaining.

Harijan, 5-1-1934

364. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

December 25, 1933

CHI. AMALA,

I have your letters. Whatever I did was done out of pure love. That you did not feel the love is my misfortune. Anyway you need not fear a repetition of the performance. You shall develop in your own way. You know what is wanted. You will do it after your style not mine. Only keep your mind and body fit. Do your Hindi in your own fashion. Take care of yourself and your things. Keep your room and yourself tidy. You should select good and easy Hindi books.

Do write fully and freely. Your letters have not hurt me. I am first class.

Love.

365. LETTER TO TARABEHN R. MODI

RAJAHMUNDRY,
December 25, 1933

CHI. TARA,

It was good news that the trouble about your teeth is over. Your decision to go to Ahmedabad only after seeing Ramniklal is correct. Now that the complaint about your teeth has disappeared, your health should improve still further. Keep Ramniklal informed. I deliberately don’t write to him. From the religious point of view, [my tour] is progressing very well. The body also gives excellent work. You must write to me twice or thrice a week.

Blessings to all from

BAPU

CHI. TARABEHN MODI
C/O DR. SHANTILAL
REVASHANKAR JHAVERI’S BUNGALOW
SANTA CRUZ

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G. N. 4178. Also C. W. 1677. Courtesy : Ramniklal Modi

366. LETTER TO KUSUMBEHN DESAI

RAJAHMUNDRY,
December 25, 1933

CHI. KUSUM,

I have replied to your letter by wire. You have woken up too late. You stopped writing to me. Every day I hoped I would get a letter from you, but it seems you have resolved not to write. When I got your letter, I already had a long list of recruits. Among them there are three women; Mira, Kisan and Om. In all we are nine. What work do you do at present? How do you spend your time? Does Pyarelal write to you? How is he? Do you read Harijanbandhu? My health is fairly good. It can stand travelling all right.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G. N. 1849

1 The source has “December 26”. However, Gandhiji was at Rajahmundry on December 25 in the morning and then left for Sitanagaram.
367. LETTER TO RAMABEHN JOSHI

December 25, 1933

CHI. RAMA,

I got your letter. It is certainly good that you try to work with the arm only little by little. There is plenty of other kind of work for you to do.

You should not mind if Dhiru feels unhappy at being separated from you. If his health remains good, he will in time become self-reliant in Bhavnagar. Dudhibehn’s company is bound to benefit him. Moreover, Kusum also is there. Let him, therefore, stay on there permanently. It will be enough if you continue to write to him regularly.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G. N. 5361

368. LETTER TO KASTURBA GANDHI

December 25, 1933

BA,

You must have got the long letter which I wrote to you last Monday. This Monday we are in Sitanagaram. It is situated on the banks of the Godavari. It is a small village, in Andhradesha, and has an ashram in it. Being a village, it is completely peaceful. We came here in a boat. The river is quite big and, therefore, small steamers can sail on it. We visited Madras and spent three days there. Sastri was of course there. I met Jethalal. Gangabhabhi lives in the city itself. I met Jethalal’s wife, too. Both are in good health. Jethalal gets a pay of Rs. 150 and is, therefore, quite happy. I met Urmiladevi’s son also. There was a large number of visitors. Lakshmi is quite well. Papa also is in Madras. Lakshmi stayed with me all the three days. She was happy in the company of Mirabehn, Kisan and Om. We shall be meeting once again, for my tour of that part is incomplete. My health is all right. I was again examined by two doctors. There is, therefore, no reason at all for you to worry about me. Have Dahibhen’s teeth improved? Do you get the Jam-e-Jamshed? You asked for something like a discourse. I think I must give you one today.

The chapters of the Gita recited today were IX, X, XI and XII. In Chapter IX, the Lord says that those who worship Him attain to Him.¹ In Chapter XII, He explains who should be called a bhakta.² The beauty of the description is that it does not contain any quality which even the most ignorant person cannot cultivate. Any man or woman who strives unaided by another can become a bhakta and be one with the Lord. The qualities mentioned are these. The bhakta has ill will for nobody but is a friend of all and has compassion for all; he has no feeling of personal attachment towards anything or anybody, is devoid of ego, is equal-minded to happiness and unhappiness and is of a forgiving nature. He is ever contented, is self-controlled and keeps his vows; he has dedicated his mind and reason to God. He causes pain to none and has no fears and worries, desires nothing, is pure in mind and heart and skilful in work, has renounced everything and treats friend and enemy with equal regard, is indifferent to respect and disrespect, bears heat and cold, is unmoved by praise or censure, looks upon wherever he happens to be as his home, that is, has no home of his own, doesn’t speak unnecessarily and has a steady mind. Such a person [says the Lord] may be described as my bhakta. If all of you reflect over this deeply, you will realize that anybody who wants can become a bhakta without help from any other person.

Blessings to all from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Bane Patro, pp. 3-4

¹ IX. 29
² XII. 13 to 20
SITANAGARAM,
December 25, 1933

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

You waited for a letter from me and I waited for one from you. I was under the impression that I had not received a reply to my letter. We are touring with such speed that I can’t remember dates or days. I don’t remember, even, to whom I have to write and what. That I am past sixty may also be one reason for this.

Chandrashankar has unnecessarily alarmed you about [my rising] at three. If I did not get up at that hour, I would feel very uneasy. You should insist, rather, on my going to bed early. That rule is certainly not being observed just now. Still, all the doctors tell me that my health has remained very good so far. Nor do I write as many letters as you think I do. I write only such letters as I must. If you were with me, you also would press me to write some of them. I must admit that your complaint that I left you alone [in jail] is just. But the problem will be solved by and by, I am sure. Stop worrying about me completely. I don’t overstep the limits of my health. If you saw how I work, you would admit that I was taking very good care of it. Or truly speaking I should say that God has been preserving it. What would He do, however, if I opposed Him? That He has been saving me from serious dangers is a sign that I have lost myself in Him. In Madras I was in danger every day of getting crushed, but I was saved. That was not man’s doing. It was God’s will. The rule about five hours has been observed mostly on paper only.

I will certainly write to Ba every week. So far I have not let a single week pass. God will keep her firm. Who else can do that? There is no cause at all for worrying about Mani.

I had sent a wire immediately to Kanjibhai, and I had received a reply both by wire and letter. I have again replied by letter and said that he should not come thus far for my sake. If, however, he himself

1 Kanhaiyalal Desai of Surat thought it necessary to come, he might certainly do so. I have even given him [convenient] dates. I forgot to mention all this in my letter to you. His letter was a fine one.

I think it will be difficult to meet Raja, though Lakshmi saw me in Madras. She is running the sixth month and cannot, therefore, moving about freely. She keeps good health. Raja wants the delivery to take place under his care. Devdas also will go to Madras. Lakshmi was in good spirits. Raja will be released on 6th February.

. . . 's condition is the same that it has been. He is discontented with himself. He is miserable because. . . is again pregnant. He cannot exercise self-control and afterwards he feels unhappy. I have tried my best to comfort him. But on the whole he is better where he is.

Princess Aristarchi writes to me every week without fail. She sends money too. There is no limit to her kindness. She is now helping Trivedi’s Manu . . . . I have written to the Princess and requested her to explain to him his duty. It is true that Manilal and Sorabji are quarrelling with each other. Their quarrel is about the policy to be followed there. I couldn’t advise either of them in this quarrel. But I have written to Manilal and told him that he should follow what seems right to him, without departing from civility. I have advised him not to make the quarrel a personal affair. I believe their differences will be resolved.

Gordhanbhai continues to write about Vithalbhai’s donation. I have not read all that he has written. I will take a suitable opportunity to reply to him and then keep quiet. I had a very sweet letter from Subhas. I did send it to the Press. I am sure it must have been printed.

The tour is going on very well. There is no heart-burning anywhere. So far I have not met people in the South bent on creating trouble. About the future, God alone knows. The crowds are as large as ever. We are in Sitanagaram today. There is perfect peace here.
This is a small village. Today is my silence day. Tomorrow also I shall be here. If I had not got these two days at one place, it would have

1 The names are omitted in the source.
2 Omission as in the source
3 Son of Parsee Rustomji been difficult for me to go on with the tour.

I met Sastri\textsuperscript{1} in Madras for an hour or so. It was just a friendly meeting. Munshi\textsuperscript{2} and Lilavati\textsuperscript{3} came and saw me there. Munshi seemed to be in good health. There was a wire from Bhulabhai. He has not recovered completely.

Kaka and Surendra Mashruwala are in Gujarat.

Kishorelal has still not recovered. Swami is in a place between Sanoli and Bombay. I suppose you hear about him.

Have I told you that Kisan is in the party with me? She is a very good young woman. Being a friend of Prema, she couldn’t but be so.

\textit{Blessings to all from}

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

\textit{Bapuna Patro-2 : Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 53-7}

\textsuperscript{1} V. S. Srinivasa Sastri
\textsuperscript{2} K. M. Munshi and his wife \textsuperscript{3} \textit{Ibid}
370. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL JOSHI

December 25, 1933

CHI. CHHAGANLAL,

I started to write a long letter to you, and dictated a page of this size. That was in Jabalpur. Then I could not proceed further with that letter. And now I am writing this one. It is the night of silence day, in Sitanagaram. The silence is not yet over. I will break it at 9.30 p.m. It is 8.30 p.m. only. It is not incorrect to say that I can write only on Mondays and Tuesdays. I always get up at three in the morning and write what I can between then and prayer-time. I may, of course, be interrupted even during that period. When I am in a train, sometimes, I cannot even get up at three.

I am having a wonderful experience during this tour. The crowds are larger than they used to be in the past. But these numbers may easily deceive us, for we have to reach crores of people. Nor is it that all the people who come immediately change their way of living. The only consolation is the thought that this propaganda does not seem to displease all these hundreds of thousands. We can therefore hope that sooner or later the practice of untouchability will disappear completely.

You should make your study of the Gita thorough in every respect. You should master both the grammatical construction and the literal meaning of the verses. I am sure you can recite the verses with correct pronunciation of the words. Again, the other reading may be limited in extent but it should be deep. A person who digests one book knows more than another who reads a thousand without digesting any of them. Do you have a spinning-wheel with you? Wardha seems to have agreed with Vimu and Rama in every way. Rama’s hand may become completely all right. Dhiru seems to be happy in Bhavnagar, but we cannot still feel that the problem about him is solved. He is still weak, but his health is much better than it used to be. Dudhibehn does of course look after him carefully. Kusum also is there. Nanabhai, too, takes care of him. Balabhadra is very happy there.

Appa Patwardhan has come here to see me. He will leave now. Kisan has joined me from Wardha. She is a friend of Prema and is a very good young woman. She has, however, become a little weak physically.

Chandra Shankar is carrying the burden of two journals quite well. This time Thakkar Bapa’s place is taken by Malkani. The work is going on well. Ramnarayan also is helping. Kishorelal has been ill and suffering a good deal. He has been getting fever and it does not leave him. Brijkrishna also was seriously ill. He is improving now. His life was actually in danger. But, then, is there anyone of whom that is not true? However, people who are not so ill that they have to remain in bed do not think that their lives are in danger.

Ba is having a holiday in Yeravda, so to say. Dahibehn’s teeth are giving her trouble. Shanta and Lalita are quite well. Dwarkanath seems to be managing the affair at Wardha fairly efficiently. And there is also Lakshmibehn who, as you know, has identified herself with the Ashram. Kaka and Surendra Mashruwala are in Gujarat.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5314

371. LETTER TO DUDHIBEHN V. DESAI

December 25, 1933

CHI. DUDHIBEHN,

I have not heard from you for some time. You should write to me regularly. For my part I may not be able to write to you sometimes in all this rushing about of the tour.

Look after all the children. You should not forsake your duty towards Kusum because of anything that Jamna might say or write to you regarding her. Even if Kusum loves adornment I would not let her satisfy her desire. That is my weakness. As for you I cannot imagine that you could love adornment. Ask the children to write to me. I am not writing separately to them this time.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 3190. Courtesy: Valji G. Desai

372. LETTER TO GOVINDBHAI R. PATEL

December 25, 1933

Bhai Govindbhai,

On receipt of your letter I inquired and learnt that an invitation had been received from Pondicherry, and most probably I shall be visiting the place. If I go, I should certainly like to call on Shri

1 Wife of Raojibhai Nathabhai Patel
Aurobindo. It would be a great disappointment to me if I could not see him. If, therefore, you can arrange for a meeting without much fuss, please do so. After the programme is finalized, I also will write and request for an interview.¹

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI GOVINDBHAI
SHRI AUROBINDO ASHRAM
PONDICHERY

From the Gujarati original : C. W. 10739. Courtesy : Govindbhai R. Patel

373. LETTER TO VIDYA R. PATEL

December 25, 1933

CHI. VIDYA,

I got your letter. I am glad that you have improved, even if it was with the help of medicine. What we want is that you should improve, no matter how. Write to Manu from time to time.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : C.W. 9636. Courtesy : Ravindra R. Patel

374. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

December 25, 1933

CHI. MATHURADAS,

I have received your letters. But where do I have the leisure to write replies? Today being a silence day, I am scribbling as many letters as possible.

You should take money from the Harijan Fund account with Jamnalalji to meet the cost of the tin sheets sent to Nasik and to make up the deficit Gosibehn has in the Harijan budget, then let me know how much money is still left. I think it is only proper that Gosibehn is paid every month. I shall continue my efforts to raise money from Bombay.

¹ According to the addressee, the contents of this letter were conveyed to Shri Aurobindo through Mother, and Shri Aurobindo wrote in pencil on the note saying: “You will have to write that I am unable to see him because for a long time past I have made it an absolute rule not to have any interview with anyone—that I do not even speak with my disciples and only give silent blessings to them three times a year. All requests for an interview from others I have been obliged to refuse. The rule has been imposed on me by the necessity of my sadhana and is not at all a matter of convenience or anything else. The time has not come when I can depart from it.”

In what form a reply should be given about Vithalbhai is a real problem. I shall think over it.

I have not seen Munshi’s statement. He has talked to you. He has also told you many other things about himself. I have told him to do what he thinks proper. I also said that I had no intention at the moment of guiding anybody.

The newspapers say that Jivraj has taken charge. If the reports are correct, congratulate him. I was a little worried. Surely he is taking some rest? What does he have to do?

I have not been able to write to Gokhale, Bapa and others. I hope to write to them tomorrow.

I had known about the Orissa Committee at Ahmedabad. It will be good if some money is collected.

Do take rest and get rid of your pain.

Taramati must be doing well.

Brijkrishna seems to have fully recovered. There was a telegram.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

375. LETTER TO VIDYA A. HINGORANI

December 25, 1933

CHI. VIDYA.

I got your letter. It is good you have gone to Father’s. I shall send you out when you are physically fit. I prefer Wardha but if you would rather go to Bhavnagar, I shall send you there. Now at least you should improve your health, do some physical labour, give up worrying and crying. Learn English and Hindi. Go on writing to me.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Hindi : Courtesy : National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

350

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
376. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

December 26, 1933

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

Here is a cutting from the M. Mail Though the whole conversation practically referred to you and your views, naturally the interviewer could not reproduce it all. I was shown the proof. It is a fair presentation of the substance of what I said. Please read it carefully and correct me where you find me to have erred about yourself. There is a great deal of misunderstanding about you in our circles too. But it does not worry me.

You will find also the programme so far as it goes.

I hope Mother is progressing.

Love.

BAPU

Gandhi-Nehru Papers, 1933. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

377. LETTER TO RAIHANA TYABJI

December 26, 1933

DEAR DAUGHTER RAIHANA,

I had no idea that you were confined to bed. I thought: ‘Raihana has now forgotten Bapu.’ As for me I had no time when I could write. It is God’s grace that you are now all right.1

I had a long letter from Hamida. I have replied to her. Kamaladevi and I talked about many things. I have often thought about you during the tour. I yearned to hear you sing: “Arise, awake, O Traveller”, but how could I hope for such good fortune? I even felt the wish to join your band singing bhajans. My party includes Kisan and Jamnalalji’s Om. Where has Father gone? Give my sincere greetings, vandemataram, love, etc., to him and to Mother. Blessing to Saroj4 and you, and a kiss to Kamalmian.

BAPU

1 Vide “Interview to Madras Mail”
2 Vide Appendix “Bapu’s tour Programme”,
3 Up to this the letter is in Urdu.
4 Saroj Nanavati
I hope you read Harijan regularly.

From a photostat of the Gujarati : S.N. 9655

378. LETTER TO KALYANJI V. MEHTA

December 26, 1933

BHAI KALYANJI,

Does death spare anybody? Who knows what our plight would be without that friend? I want all of you, and particularly Napoleon' to console yourself with the thought that her death was release for Gangaba. Who would listen to this philosophy of mine on such an occasion? But my wisdom about death is not derived from Shastras only and, therefore, I offer such consolation on all occasions of death. Soldiers like us ought to know its true nature. There can be no doubt that Gangaba’s soul rests in peace. No evil can ever befall one who had struggled even a little to be good while living. Mahalakshmi’s malaria can be cured with proper treatment.

Blessings from

BAPU

KALYANJI MEHTA
C/O DR. NATHUBHAI DAYALJI PATEL
BACK VIEW
OPPOSITE CHARNI ROAD STATION GARDEN
BOMBAY

From a microfilm of the Gujarati : M.M.U./XXII

379. LETTER TO RANI VIDYAVATI

December 26, 1933

CHI, VIDYA,

Your letter has been lying with me for so long, but how to reply? I have to attend to heavy correspondence during travel. There is no other remedy to improve your health.

The work of Harijan service is not difficult for you. Try to improve the conditions of the Harijans right where you are living.

1 Chhotubhai K. Mehta, son of Kunvarji Mehta
Keep writing to me.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Hindi original: Rani Vidyavati Papers. Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library

380. LETTER TO SWARUPRANI NEHRU

December 26, 1933

DEAR SISTER,

I was happy to receive your letter. Well, we cannot expect now to regain full strength, but you have no longer any reason for worry. Krishna is happy. Ask Sarup to write to me occasionally, Krishna too should write. Does she plan to stay there for a few months?

May God give you peace.

My tour is progressing satisfactorily though it is quite taxing. By the grace of God the body has withstood it so far. Ba’s letters keep coming. She is cheerful.

Yours,

MOHANDAS

[From Hindi]

Indira Gandhi-Gandhi Papers. Courtesy : Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Also G.N. 11407

381. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, ELLORE

December 27, 1933

I wish to thank you all for this great reception which is an exhibition of your great affection. I thank you for the various purses and addresses including one from the Municipality and another from the District Board. You will not expect me to refer to the details of the various addresses in the too short time before me.

My first and sacred duty is to unveil the portrait of the “Lion of the Punjab”, the late Lala Lajpat Rai. You will not expect me to recount before you his many valuable qualities and services. I had the privilege of enjoying his confidence till he died. He was the President of the historic session of the Congress in 1920. Today to me and to you the one outstanding quality of his is his unadulterated love for the untouchables. He has taught Hindu India to keep to its sense of duty to the so-called untouchables, the Harijans. Lajpat Rai always proclaimed that untouch-ability was the greatest blot on Hinduism. If he had done nothing else, we, Hindus, should revere his sacred memory for his war against untouchability. Who can deny his services to the country, his bravery and his fearlessness? It was not by an idle epithet that he was called the “Lion of the Punjab”.

I must pass on to other things. You will be pleased to know that Mulpuri Chukkamma even from Vellore Jail thought of Harijans and out of her poor belongings she sent me this ring. Her letter bearing the signature of the Superintendent of the Central Jail is here with me. Who can help deriving inspiration from such acts?

Wherever I go, I find evidence of enthusiasm on the part of the people, readiness on their part to open out their hearts to the so-called untouchables, the Harijans. Wherever I go, I find a readiness on the part of the people to part with their possessions, to part with their coppers, with their silver, with their gold and women are not behind men in making their sacrifices. I know for certain that they know for what purpose they have given their bangles or their rings or whatever they hold very dear. They know that all these moneys and all these ornaments are being given in order that Harijans may be served. This cause, the more I think about it the more I feel, is a cause for all humanity and for all time. If Hindus succeed in exorcizing this devil of untouchability, if they succeed in transforming their hearts and if they succeed in purifying themselves of this blot, I have no doubt whatsoever that we, all the communities belonging to different religions, will live in happiness, contentment, peace and real friendship of the heart. I have no doubt whatsoever that, if we achieve full success in this mission, in this war against untouchability, as I have said, I have no doubt that we shall be able to achieve the heart unity. Suspicions will melt away before the sunshine of mutual trust, mutual affection and mutual respect. Let us, therefore, you and I and all, pray to God Almighty that He may bless us with sufficient strength and wisdom to see this error and correct it, no matter what it was. Let us remember that all these centuries we have suppressed a portion of ourselves and in so doing we have degraded ourselves, and we have depressed ourselves. No power on earth has yet succeeded in suppressing any portion of humanity without degrading itself and without depressing itself. The more I see, the more I feel that, if we do not drive away this untouchability, Hinduism itself will perish and it will be a loss not only to us but it will be a loss to the world. A religion that owes its inspiration to the Vedas, to the Upanishads, to the Puranas, to Ramayana, why should that religion perish—for what purpose, for what reason, except that we did not observe the message of the Upanishads, that we did not observe the grand message, the grand proposition enunciated in the pages of the Vedas, the Upanishads that God alone is and no one else and nothing else? Do you suppose the preachers of that one God, God of Justice, preached that there could be any divisions of high and low amongst ourselves? It is an impossible thing. The more one thinks about these things, the more it is surprising that a people so cultured as Hindus are supposed to be, should have hugged untouchability as a part of their religion. And remember lastly that all the religions in the world are today in the melting pot. They are all being critically examined and tested and public opinion will not forgive you and me if we do not energetically drive away this evil from our midst. I must not now take any more of your time on untouchability.¹

1 What follows is from The Hindu, 29-12-1933

354 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI

Mr. Gandhi then said that as he was speaking at Ellore, the headquarters of the Andhra Provincial Anti-untouchability Association, he wished to draw attention to the fact that he had received some complaints against some of its office-bearers. Mr. Gandhi said that he and Mr. Thakkar, the vigilant Secretary of the Central Board, found after investigation that there was absolutely no foundation for the charges made. He always kept his eyes and ears open for receiving any bona-fide complaints, but he insisted that anybody who complained should do so on two conditions. Firstly, he must announce his name to the public instead of sending anonymous letters and secondly he must substantiate all his allegations by unimpeachable evidence.

Mr. Gandhi delivered his speech in English and before closing he said that it was a great regret to him to have done so, even in Andhradesha where Hindi had progressed very much. He had to speak in English to facilitate translation. It would not at all be difficult for the Andhras to learn Hindi as many of the words were derived from Sanskrit out of which the Telugu language was formed.

The Hindu, 28-12-1933 and 29-12-1933

¹ The following is from The Hindu, 28-12-1933.
The Harijan cause is like fire. The more ghee you put into fire, the more it requires. So also, the more you give to the Harijan cause, the more it requires. Those who give to the cause gain, they never lose; and those who do not give undoubtedly lose. What you gain by giving is merit. What you lose by not giving is your self. For men and women belonging to savarna Hindu castes have been persecuting Harijans now for ages. And if we are just now passing through evil times, I am convinced that our treatment of Harijans has not a little to do with it. I have, therefore, been asking the women of India to drive away the ghost of untouchability from their hearts. It is wrong, it is sinful, to consider some people lower than ourselves. On God’s earth nobody is low and nobody is high. We are all His creatures; and just as in the eyes of parents all their children are absolutely equal, so also in God’s eyes all His creatures must be equal. Therefore I ask you to believe me when I tell you that there is no sanction in religion for untouchability. I would, therefore, ask you to give a place in your hearts to all the Harijans around you. Welcome Harijan children in your own homes. Go to Harijan quarters and look after their children and their homes; speak to Harijan women as to your own sisters.

This cause of Harijans is essentially for the women of India to tackle; and I hope that you, the Hindu women of this place, will do your duty. I hope those of you, who have the wish and the ability to surrender all or any part of your jewellery, will do so. There is one condition attached to the gift. If you give anything whatsoever, it must not be replaced. I want you to feel that you personally have given something to this cause, which you cannot do when you give rupees or notes. For they come from either your parents or your husbands. But jewellery is your own property. When you surrender your jewellery without any intention of having it replaced by your parents or husbands, it is definitely your own sacrifice. I want you all who have understood the spirit of the message I have delivered to you to make that definite sacrifice.

Harijan, 5-1-1934
383. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, VIZAGAPATAM

December 28, 1933

You drove me today, on my alighting at the station, through a row of Harijans who were being fed at that time through the charity of some townsman. Whilst he may be entitled to thanks for his liberality, I must confess that it was not a soul-stirring scene. I hung my head in shame as the car was driven through the road along which Harijan men and women were feeding. Just imagine how you and I would feel if some insolent person drove his car through the road where we were taking our meals. I know the custom under which caste dinners are given. All traffic along the road on which dinners are given is entirely prohibited, so that it is possible for diners to have their meals and to be served in perfect peace. As I have said repeatedly, this movement of purification goes down to the roots of our hearts. I have not asked savarna Hindus to appear as patrons before Harijans and throw the leavings of their dishes to them. But I have invited them to open out their hearts to Harijans and to ind there a sanctuary for them. But what I saw today was like the act of a patron towards his dependents. And do you know, not only my car was driven through the rows of people taking meals, but other cars followed and the crowd also followed these cars. And I noticed that it was a hard thing for those poor people to protect their food from dust blowing on it. It was not, to say the least, a becoming performance. And you can now understand my grief at having been obliged to witness it.

I know there was no evil intention behind this act. I know also that there was not a single person who had any desire to insult these Harijans who were given free meals. I understand also that those who took me through that road thought it would please me to drive through the rows of Harijans taking meals. I know it was nothing but simple thoughtlessness. As we have been told by Shastras, to live a religious life is like walking on the edge of a sword. And in a worldwide movement like this of self-purification among millions of human beings, a single thoughtless act takes the shape of sin. Every act of ours, therefore, in connection with this Harijan movement has to be dictated and dominated by punctiliousness, extreme caution and inward searching. Having witnessed this scene, I thought it would be wrong on my part not to make a public reference to it. By drawing your attention to it, I have endeavoured to warn the public taking part in this movement of self-purification against a repetition of the scene of this morning.

This brings me to what we are doing today through the length and breadth of India. I have not the shadow of a doubt that untouchability is an unmitigated curse on Hinduism. If the Shastras represent the will and wish of God, there can be no warrant whatsoever in them for untouchability, for which you find no parallel in any part of the world save India. It is bad enough when dictated by selfish motives to consider ourselves high and other people low. But it is not only worse but a double wrong when we tack religion to an evil like untouchability. It, therefore, grieves me when learned pundits come forward and invoke the authority of the Shastras for a patent evil like untouchability. I have said, and I repeat today, that we, Hindus, are undergoing a period of probation. Whether we desire it or not, untouchability is going. But if during this period of probation we repent for the sin, if we reform and purify ourselves, history will record that one act as a supreme act of purification on the part of the Hindus. But if, through the working of the time spirit, we are compelled to do things against our will and Harijans come to their own, it will be no credit to the Hindus or to Hinduism. But I go a step further and say that if we fail in this trial, Hinduism and Hindus will perish.

_Harijan, 5-1-1934_

384. NOTES

SOME QUESTIONS

It is wonderful how the very same questions are being asked again and again at the different places visited by me and this by those whom one would expect to be readers of _Harijan_ or otherwise to be acquainted with what I have said on those questions. But so long as they continue to be asked, I suppose I must deal with them and hope that the readers who are familiar with them will not mind the trespass on these columns. I need not repeat the questions. The following answers will suggest the kind of questions asked.

1. There can be no compulsion in the matter of temple-entry.

2. No temple will be opened to Harijans without the approval of a clear majority of trustees or an overwhelming majority of persons believing in temple worship and entitled to use the temple in question.
for purposes of worship.

3. There is no compulsion whatever in the Temple-entry Bill or the Anti-untouchability Bill. Harijans should be subject to the same rules of admission as are applicable to the other Hindus.

4. If anybody satisfies me that the Shastras enjoin untouchability as it is observed today, I shall at once give up the agitation.

5. But my settled conviction is that modern untouchability is an inhuman institution having its root in selfishness and the desire for exploitation of fellow-beings found to be amenable to suppression.

6. The untouchables are made and unmade by census enumerators and commissioners as has been abundantly proved in these pages.

NOTOYS PLEASE

Andhradesha easily beats other provinces in presenting toys and the like. Some produce little silver cups, some trays, some other fancy things not easily portable. I cannot induce buyers on the spot to bid for numerous things and however tempting they may be for the cause, they become a nuisance to carry and keep count of. I would, therefore, advise organizers to discountenance, if not forbid, such gifts. In several places heavy frames and portraits have been presented. They become a positive burden and are unsalable in the market. On no account should frames be presented. I would like the tour to retain its serious character and be business-like involving little or no waste in any matter. I may mention incidentally that, in presenting purses, bank-notes should be used wherever possible, instead of coins. In swift travelling, covering ten to fifteen places in a day, it is difficult to count all the cash from day to day and keep accurate accounts. In any case, the accountants, devoted though they are, are over-worked and often have to keep late hours in order to keep themselves up to date. Big organizations like the All-India Harijan Sevak Sangh cannot be efficiently and yet cheaply conducted without attention to minutest details and without the intelligent co-operation of the workers and volunteers taking part in it.

_Harijan_, 29-12-1933
This Society was established in Calcutta in 1923. In the report on the flood-relief work in Orissa sent by Sjt. Harakhchand and published in the Harijan Sevak, there is a mention of this Society’s valuable services. On my way to Bezwada from Delhi the other day, some workers of the above Society met me at Palwal station. They are helping the flood victims in the district of Gurgaon. At the station they gave me a report containing a detailed account of their work and told me: ‘If you read this, you will know that we made no distinction between untouchables and others; in fact we paid special attention to the poor helpless Harijans.’ The account of the services rendered from November 19, 1933 to December 13, 1933 is to be found in this report. The Society’s volunteers worked in 144 villages. They distributed 2,809 quilts, 1,846 shirts, 1,256 skirts and 872 maunds, 5 seers of grain among 4,098 flood victims. They distributed medicines to 3,052 patients suffering from itch, cholera, cough and other maladies. Wherever needed, the sick were given milk, barley, sago and other things. Houses damaged by floods are being rebuilt. The Society is working in seven places: Palwal, Dighout, Bannikheda, Banchari, Hodal, Hasanpur and Gulabad. I thank the Society and the young volunteers who are working in the above seven places. The number of Harijans and non-Hindus helped by the Society is also separately given in the report. As long as this pernicious tendency towards discriminating between man and man persists, even in times of common relief operations, so long, unfortunately, separate mention of Hindus, Harijans and non-Hindus is and will continue to be necessary in this unfortunate land.

[From Hindi]
Harijan Sevak, 29-12-1933

386. LETTER TO MANU GANDHI

December 29, 1933

CHI. MANUDI,

I felt happy after reading your long letter. I daily think about you. Tell Kusum that I cannot help her now. What will it avail her to think of me? Let her go on repeating Ramanama. It will give her peace of mind. You should teach her to do that. Sing the Ramadhun to her. You can sing many bhajans. What can I say to comfort aunt Bali? If I were free from other duties, I would go to her and help her run her home and free her from her worries. But it is impossible during this life that I can even stand in such relation to her. What you write about death is perfectly true. It will come to all of us sooner or later.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 2664. Courtesy: Manubehn S. Mashruwala

387. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

December 30, 1933

CHI. AMALA,

Let us be natural. You should write when you feel like writing and let me write when I can spare a moment. Not a day passes when I do not think of you. I am glad you are making steady progress. I would like you to feel perfectly safe and free from nervousness. You should tell me all about your pupils. Do you see Ramdas and his wife often?

Love.

BAPU

[PS.]

I am keeping excellent health, diet remaining the same.

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

388. LETTER TO RUKMINIDEVI BAZAJ

December 31, 1933

CHI. RUKMINI,

I got your postcard. You do not seem to have received the postcard I wrote to you on my way here. I have had no letters from Santok for some time. You did well in meeting Jamnalalji. Have you learnt the Marwari speech? I am sure you have acquired perfect command over Hindi now. Besides Om, Kisanbehn is accompanying me. Has Om written to you about her? She is a friend of Premabehn’s. I have caught cold.

Blessings to you both from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9156
389. LETTER TO CHANDRAKANTA

December 31, 1933

CHI. KANTA,

I had expected your letter. Write regularly. Give me news about Vidya, Shanti, etc. Om and Kisan are quite happy. Kisan probably does not remember you. What did you do at Banaras? I am sure you will have met Sumangal.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: Chandrakanta Papers. Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library

390. LETTER TO JOACHIM ALVA

[1933]¹

MY DEAR ALVA,

When I tell you that I am writing this between 3 and 4 a.m., before the morning prayer, you will understand the pressure under which I have to cope with my correspondence. That is the reason for the delay in replying to your letter. It was good of you to let me have that excellent letter. I suppose you do know that I tried to meet you at Yeravda and then you were removed.

I trust you are a regular reader of Harijan.

Love.

BAPU

[PS.]
Permanent address Wardha, C.P.

From a photostat: C. W. 10959. Courtesy: Joachim Alva

¹ This was sent to the addressee after his release from Nasik Jail, where he had been interned in 1933.
391. LETTER TO KASTURBA GANDHI

CUDDAPAH STATION,
January 1, 1934

BA,

Send me a copy of the discourse I sent you last time. I got your letter only today. I am writing this letter on my silence day. Do not worry about Manilal. I am sending your letter to him. You need not get alarmed by what Pragji said. Both are mature persons. If they have made a mistake they will correct it. Arrangement has already been made for jame-e-jamshed. Mathuradas informs me that this has been done, and so I have done nothing further about it. I hope you get it now. All the same, I am inquiring again. I will try about the Raman-yan and the Bhagavata. Don’t feel the slightest hesitation in writing to Premlilabehn for anything you want. After all, what are you likely to want? What few things you want she will send with great love. But about anything which you do not require immediately, it will be enough if you write to me. I will then make the necessary arrangements. Can you use your dentures? Do you gargle with potassium permanganate water? Thakkar Bapa is not in the party with me this time. He will meet me on the 15th. Just now Malkani is with me. He also is working very hard, along with the others. Chandra-shankar keeps fairly good health. Om and Kisan are taking good care of their health. Om works as hard as she can. She is a simple-hearted and straightforward girl. And so is Kisan. Surendra has regained his strength.

The Andhra tour ends on the 3rd. After that we shall go to Mysore. Wherever I go, there is bound to be a lot of activity and some hardships too. But I am carefully protected by everybody and so don’t feel the hardships much. As Mirabehn looks after the smallest detail, I don’t feel the discomfort of travelling at all. You will be permitted to receive a letter from me every week only if you forgo your right of receiving visitors. I for one will go on sending a discourse every week. Be satisfied with visitors who come to see the other women. However, do as you wish. If you are keen on having visitors, there would be many ready to go. They would even wish to go. We have deliberately made it a practice to receive the fewest possible visitors. But let me know your wish without any hesitation. Janakibehn is all right. I think I have already written to you about her son Ramakrishna’s tonsils being removed. Kamala has now resumed solid foods. Kishorelal is still not free from fever. But there is no cause for worry. These days my silence commences on Sunday night. I, therefore, don’t speak till Monday night. The silence will be broken today at ten minutes past nine. Hence I shall hardly have to speak to anybody, since soon after it will be time to go to bed. I have to get up at three in the morning. Brijkrishna’s fever has come down. But he has yet to regain strength. Hemibehn is no more. Now the discourse.

---

1 Vide “Letter to Kasturba Gandhi”, 25-12-1933

Last time I wrote about the attributes of a bhakta. I also explained that there could be no bhakti without service. This time I will write about how one can serve, since people frequently ask me that question. Some say that service is possible only under certain conditions. Some others that it is possible only after certain studies. I explained last week that these were wrong notions. One can serve under any conditions. If we offer up to Shri Krishna all our gifts and possessions, we shall get full marks. Anybody who can give one crore but gives only half a crore, will not get more than 50 marks. But he who has only one pie and gives it will get 100 marks. If, therefore, you and the other women prisoners there behave in this manner towards the women with whom you come into contact or towards the officials, you are fulfilling the dharma of service. Behaving towards the officials in the spirit of service means never wishing them ill, showing them due respect and not deceiving them. All the rules should be obeyed and the women undergoing imprisonment for criminal offences should be treated as if they were your blood-sisters. If you let them feel your love and see your purity of heart, that also will mean practise the dharma of service. In both cases one’s motives must be clean. If a person behaves in a good way with a selfish motive or through fear, his actions cannot be reckoned as service. We often see one person doing a thing with a selfish motive and another doing the same thing with a benevolent motive. There can be no room for self-interest in anything done as an offering to the Lord. One who serves in this manner daily gains more strength. His studies and his work, both are inspired by the motive of service. Even the laughing or playing, eating or drinking of a person who is thus dedicated to service are informed with the spirit of service. All his actions, therefore, will be innocent. The Lord always gives to such bhaktas the strength they need. You probably remember the three verses in the women’s prayer which have a bearing on this. They are as follows:

    As for those who worship Me, thinking on Me alone and nothing else, ever attached to Me, I bear the burden of getting them what they need.¹

    With Me in their thoughts, their whole soul devoted to Me, teaching one another, with Me ever on their lips, they live in contentment and joy².

    To these, ever in tune with Me, worshipping Me with affectionate devotion, I give the power of selfless action, whereby they come to Me !³

Refer to the Anasaktiyog for the meaning of these verses. You will find them in Chapters 9 and 10. Remember that we read the Gita to put its teaching into practice. All that I have said above is, you should know, on the basis of the Gita.

Blessings to all from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Bane Patro, pp. 4-6

392. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

January 1, 1934

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I could not reply to your letter earlier. I get the time only at 3 a.m. or when I am travelling in a train. This I am writing in a train. There is no question of your doing anything else till you have completely recovered your health. If Father can spare money, you certainly need not hesitate to ask him for help. I don’t know how he is financially placed at present. You should ask him and find out. One need not hesitate to ask one’s father about his financial condition. If he is not in a position to give you any help, you may let me know. I will make some arrangement immediately.

I wrote the above in the train. I will now complete the reply.

I hope Jayaprakash is benefiting from the treatment. You have not told me in your letter how both of you meet your expenses, nor what steps have been taken regarding the debt.

I am in good health. There has been no change in my diet. I have not been weighed lately but I think the weight must have increased. Mirabehn’s health is fairly good. She doesn’t do anything

¹ Bhagavad Gita, ix. 22, x. 9 and 10 ; vide “Discourses on the “Gita”, 28-8-1926
² ibid
³ ibid
except looking after me. She doesn’t attend meetings. Om and Kisan help her. They attend meetings sometimes. Kisan’s health is improving. Ramnarayan doesn’t seem to be keeping well. He will carry on as long as he can.

Ba writes to me from time to time. Rama, Ranchhodbhai’s daughter, has got married. She and her husband came to me at Ellore for my blessings. I have not heard from Manibehn at all.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 3438

393. LETTER TO MANILAL AND SUSHILA GANDHI

January 1, 1934

CHI. MANILAL AND SUSHILA.

I have not yet received the letter which is due from you. I hope you got the long letters which I wrote to you. Ba is worrying about you a great deal in jail. She has been upset by some things that Pragji has said. She believes that you, Manilal, have quarrelled with everybody there. I do not believe this, of course. I merely write what Ba has written to me. She has asked me to convey her exact words. Since she is in jail and can write only one letter, I naturally feel that I should satisfy her wishes, whatever they are. That is the only reason why I have mentioned this.

I keep very good health. The details are always given in Harijan.

Nanabhai continues to be in poor health. Kishorelal has been having fever for a long time and it does not go. I inquire and get reports about him regularly. I trust he will be all right in a few days.

Santok’s mother has passed away. Kashi’s sister, Hemi, is also dead. Devdas is well. After his release, he will go to Madras to be with Lakshmi at the time of her delivery.

I don’t think it is necessary for me now to write anything about the differences among you there.

1 Ranchhodbhai Sheth, a mill-owner of Ahmedabad
Om has made a copy of Ba’s letter and so I am sending the original to you. Earlier I had intended to send it to Ramdas.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 4813

394. LETTER TO PESTONJI

January 1, 1934

BHAI PESTONJI,

Kakasaheb has written a special letter to me about you. I shall certainly be happy if you join me. If you find it convenient, you may complete the whole tour. Our mode of living is, of course, simple. We travel by third class and work hard day and night. We have to do physical work and make do with whatever food and accommodation we get. If you are physically strong and if your mode of living is simple, you will feel no hardship. If you have the courage, come and have this experience. I would certainly welcome a young man of your ability and straightforwardness. Send a wire if you decide to come. We shall be touring in Mysore State for about seven days. If, therefore, you come, buy a ticket for Bangalore. You will know there where I am touring. Send a telegram to me at Bangalore. I will get it wherever I am and will make the necessary arrangements. Someone will meet you at Bangalore station. You will not be stranded even if the telegram does not reach me.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 8046

395. LETTER TO SURENDRAG MASHRUWALA

January 1, 1934

CHI. SURENDRAG,

I learn that you started crying and returned to Bombay out of fear of being beaten. There is no reason for you to feel upset or ashamed about it. Have you not read how scared I used to be at the age of seventeen or eighteen? I would however also advise you not to go to jail out of a false sense of shame. This time a few will have to go to jail repeatedly. If on examining yourself you now wish to return home, you may do so. Serve there and go to jail when God prompts you and gives you full courage. Remember that God always gives the strength to bear physical pain to those who have surrendered themselves completely to him. But such strength is not acquired by thinking. It is a gift from God, which His devotees invariably receive. Follow the course which you find the easiest for yourself. Write to me.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : C. W. 1527. Courtesy : Manubehn S. Mashruwala

396. LETTER TO VIDYA A. HINGORANI

January 1, 1934

CHI. VIDYA,

I have your letter. It is not a reply to my letter. Perhaps you got it late.

I was of course confident that Kakaji would send you a reply and that too a good one.

If you have to go to Karachi, then do travel alone in daytime. Do not fear anyone. Have faith that God is there to protect us. I want to see you fearless, industrious, sociable and physically strong. And I have no doubt that you can be.

How is Mahadev? How much milk does he take? Does he trouble you now? Do you take him for outing?

What is the news about Anand? What do you study? Read Hindi books daily. Study English also as much as possible.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Multan is near to you. It would be good if you meet Devdas. But meet him only when you really wish to. He is in the New Central Jail. Om [and] Kisan are well.

From a microfilm of the Hindi : Courtesy : National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

368 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
397. LETTER TO LAKSHMI GANDHI
January 1, 1934

CHI. LAKSHMI,

Though we could not talk much, your three days’ stay brought me satisfaction. Your depression ought to disappear. I am enclosing a copy of the letter received from Ba. Read it if you can and send it on to Devdas.

Ask Papa¹ to write to me. A letter for Anna² accompanies this.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi : G.N. 2003

398. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA
January 1, 1934

CHI. BRIJKRISHNA,

What is this ? I got a wire but no letter followed it. The wire being reassuring I take it that you are now wholly free from fever. But I want a letter with all the facts. Do send me a wire first if you have not written already. It will be all right to address it to Bangalore, rather Bangalore City. We are all well.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi : G.N. 2405

399. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL
CUDDAPAH (ANDHRA), January 2, 1934

CHI. VALLABHBHAI,

Today I am writing this letter at 3.20 [a.m.]. After cleaning my teeth, I thought of you first. I find this the most quiet time for writing. I will of course have a nap during the day. Today also there will be no touring. Please don’t worry about me at all. I really keep good health.

Since you don’t write about yourself, I wonder whether you are keeping back anything from me. Please don’t.

¹ Addressee’s sister
² C. Rajagopalachari; the letter is not available.
I have been writing to Ba every week and will continue to do so. As desired by her, I send her some discourses on the Gita just as I used to do from Yeravda Mandir.

Mahadev is now permitted to write and receive only one letter. He tries to include several in one. He will get others’ letters through Jivanji. He is being tested severely indeed. I am sure he will get an M.A. degree even in this. He is buried in the translation of the Gita.

You know Kishorelal’s condition. He refuses to part with his fever. He himself has now appointed a committee consisting of Nath’ Swami and Gomati. He will abide by their advice.

I got a letter from Ba yesterday. Om made copies of it, one of which I am sending to you. Om is a very active girl. Besides, she is eager to learn everything as quickly as she can. Being frank and truthful, she is progressing very well. Kisan’s health is not as good as it used to be. Otherwise she also is a hard worker. Both the girls are extremely simple in their habits. They have become intimate friends.

Radhakant Malaviya came yesterday to see me. He has brought with him a scheme for preserving milk in dry ice and wants my help in carrying it out. But to ask for my help in such an enterprise is as futile as to churn sand for butter. Probably you know that he has been to England for practical training.

Malkani has been working very hard. He is filling Thakkar Bapa’s place well enough. The entire staff works sincerely and leaves nothing to be desired. So far the work has been progressing very well.

... is now showing his teeth. He has ... under his complete control. He doesn’t intend now to give the sisters their share. He got the power of attorney given by ... to all three revoked and got a new power of attorney executed exclusively in his name. When I wrote to him protesting against all this, he gave me an evasive reply. I have now written to Nanalal. But I don’t think it will have any effect.

Anandi, Bablo, Babu, Mohan, Vanamala, Bachu and Amina’s children are making good progress. Ramnarayan Pathak gives three hours every week. Jamnadas [Gandhi] remains what he has been, thin and weak. He seems to be uneasy too. I think I wrote to you about the

---

1 Kedarnath Kulkarni, Kishorelal Mashruwala’s guru
2 The names are omitted in the source.
3 ibid
4 ibid
5 A Gujarati writer, then professor at the Gujarat Vidyapith, 1920-28 death of Santok’s mother. Prabhudas will settle down to khadi work in some village near his father-in-law’s place. If he continues to be in Almora, the expenses would go up very much.

Having thus remembered the family budget today, I end this letter here. I am writing to Mani, but I hope her plight is not similar to Mahadev’s. Let me know if you have any information about it.

To you both or rather to all,

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro-2 : Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 57-9

400. LETTER TO MANIBEHN PATEL

CUDDAPAH

4 a.m., Before Prayers, January 2, 1934

CHI. MANI,

I do not know whether I shall be able to hear directly from you now. I do get news of you from Father, but that is not enough to satisfy me. I, therefore, write to Dahyabhai for more. Write to me if you can. Keep your body and mind fit. I am doing well enough. I write a long letter to Ba every week as a regular thing. Nothing more today.

Address your letters to Wardha.

Blessings from
BAPU

SMT. MANIBEHN PATEL, PRISONER
HINDALGA CENTRAL PRISON
BELGAUM

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro-2 : Manibehn Patelnne, p. 116

401. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

January 2, 1934

MY DEAR DAUGHTER,

I must write in English as I must write during the few moments I have to spare. You may not blame me if letters I write do not reach

1 The source has “Kadkha”.

VOL. 62 : 8 OCTOBER, 1933 - 17 JANUARY, 1934

371
you. But you have lost nothing if any letter has not reached you. I am moving about so rapidly that there need be no surprise if some of my letters go astray without anybody’s fault. But my not writing does not mean that I do not constantly think of all of you. I do. But I write sparingly for want of time and in order to enable others to have a chance of writing. My letter to any one of you should be regarded as letters to all.

By the time you are discharged I shall be travelling in the extreme south of India. If you think that it is worth while coming all the way merely to see me, you shall come. I would strongly advise you to restrain yourself and do all the talking through correspondence.

Of course you should see your mother and also Narandas. They are both within easy reach. But the final decision rests with you. My advice to all the others is just what I am giving to you.

I am glad you have kept so well.

I have heard about Velanbehn and Durgabehn, also Lilavati. They must all write to me when they are discharged. I hope you have all made the best use of your time.

My health is excellent. The last weight was 108 lb. My food is milk and oranges and one green vegetable plain boiled without salt. I take other fruit when it easily comes my way. This is either fresh grapes or pomegranate. Generally speaking I take no dates at present. I do not seem to need them. My work commences at 3 a.m. and ends generally at 9 p.m. Of course I try to get some sleep in the middle of the day.

Your Hindi writing as also your Gujarati is not bad. I hope the Ramadan fast has not weakened you. Has Amina been taking it? Tell her I often receive news about her children who are getting on nicely. I have just got a report from their Urdu teacher.

Love to you all

BAPU

[PS.]

Om and Kisan are with me, keeping well.

From a photostat: G.N. 289
402. LETTER TO SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA

January 2, 1934

DEAR SATIS BABU,

Your letter of 30th ultimo has given me much relief. The money you have received was meant to ease some pressure. It was the utmost that could be given to you. I hope your workers will succeed. It is most exacting and exasperating work. They must be prepared to take insults as cheerfully as they would take cheques and bank-notes.

I like the idea of Dr. Roy personally fixing the tour programme. I see in the papers received today that he had a serious accident. I hope it is not so serious as reported. I have wired but you will give me full details.

I am glad you have regained your weight. But 128 is not enough for your build. There is no reason why you should not have your fine muscles which you used to have before. Regarding the body as God’s instrument, you are bound to keep it as fit as it is possible to keep it consistently with the obvious and necessary limits.

I hope Arun’s doing well. He has to attend on me when I tour in Bengal. But he won’t be allowed if he is in a weak state of health.

Love.

BAPU

[PS.]

What about Bengali Harijan?

From a photostat: G.N. 1626

403. LETTER TO DUDHABHAI M. DAFDA

January 2, 1934

BHAI DUDHABHAI,

I got your letter. By God’s grace everything will turn out well. I came to know only yesterday that Lakshmi’s is expecting. I have advised that if Manjukeshabehn offers to shoulder the responsibility,

---

1 Addressee’s son
2 Since Bengali Harijan could not support itself, Gandhiji had advised the addressee to discontinue its publication
3 Addressee’s daughter who was brought up in the Sabarmati Ashram
Lakshmi may go to Bardoli for her delivery, otherwise she should get herself admitted in the Vadilal Hospital at Ahmedabad. It has all the facilities, and some Ashram women also are working in it and they will be able to look after her. Let me know if you have any suggestion to make in this regard. I will decide finally after I hear from Maruti' and Laskhmi. I have made the necessary arrangements for you to get a copy of the Harijanbandhu. Let me know if you do not get it. What help did Sunderjibhai give? Let me have his address. I have forgotten it completely. A girls’ hostel is being run in the Sabarmati Harijan Ashram. Are you willing to send the girls there? If yes, I may inquire. They may admit them there. My blessings to all the children.

Blessings from
BAPU

SJ. DUDHABAI MALJI
HARIJAN TEACHER
SATHRA BHAVNAGAR STATE
KATHIWAR

From a photosatat of the Gujarati : G.N. 3251

404. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

January 2, 1934

CHI. MATHURADAS.

I spoke to Shankaran. I also had a talk with a lawyer who is a good man. We came to the decision that Sasmal’s help should be sought. Calling upon the services of a lawyer from outside is correct. There are few lawyers in Madras handling criminal cases, and such as there are, are not of the first rank. That is why people have to look outside. But you have nothing to do right now. If there is anything, I shall let you know. Tell Shankaran that as he has met me, you are not required to do anything.

As for Ba’s inquiry, I am not aware of any good books in Gujarati except Tribhuvandas’s Nani Shikhaman. A book of this kind is needed for Maruti’s Lakshmi. Do you know of any such book? Write to me if you know of any. Which is the best book of this kind in English? Consult Jivaraj. It is very good that he is well settled. How is his health? Do you meet Kishorelal often? How is your own health? I have written to Jamnalalji in connection with the money to be paid to Gosibehn for the Harijan work.¹ Taramati and the child will be doing well.

1 Lakshmi’s husband

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.] This is Om’s effort.

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

405. LETTER TO HEMPRABHA DAS GUPTA

January 2, 1934

CHI. HEMPRABHA,

I have your letter. Khadi too is in the hands of Rama. Khadi will flourish if it has Rama in it and that is possible only when we have Rama in us. Let us therefore make all efforts for khadi but let us not worry about it. Rama will do the worrying. The right to worry is His only, our dharma is but to serve. The less you worry, the greater will be the success. But I want to see you cheerful in spite of failures.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi : G.N. 1706

406. LETTER TO HARIJAN WORKERS,

CUDDAPAH,

January 2, 1934²

GANDHIJI : The Harijan movement goes to the root of the evil. If untouchability goes, the castes as we know them today go.³

HARIJAN WORKERS : Surely not.

g. I talk of the extreme form of untouchability. But the evil is so widespread that in some form or other it runs through the whole Hindu social system and corrupts it. The distinction of high and low is

¹ Vide, “Letter to Jamnalal Bajaj”, 31-12-1933
² Extracted from Chandrashekhar Shukla’s “Weekly Letter”
³ A Harijan worker had asked whether Gandhiji wanted the caste system to at the bottom of untouchability. If the extreme form goes, the rest is bound to go. If it does not, our movement will be a mere camouflage. So long as the idea of high and low is not abolished, untouchability cannot be said to have been abolished.

H. W.  What, then, of the varna which you seek to defend?

G.  I do. But you must know my definition of it. It is as different from the present caste system as chalk is from cheese. Varna say I understand it is an economic law which operates, whether we know it or not. Conformation to it will bring happiness to mankind. Disregard for it is disrupting society today all over the world. Varna is the antithesis of the doctrine of ‘might is right’. It abolishes all distinctions between high and low.

H. W.  But nobody gives the meaning you give to varna.

G.  That may be. Evolution of human thought is evolution of the meaning of words. I have no difficulty in seeing my meaning in the original mantra from which the theory of varna is derived, nor in the Gita verses referring to varna. Regulations about dining and marriage have no direct connection with varna. The distinguishing feature of varna is occupation.

H. W.  Then you will restrict everyone to his father’s occupation?

G.  Neither I nor anybody else can impose the restriction on anyone. Varnadharma is not a man-made law to be imposed or relaxed at his will. It is natural to man in his regenerate state. He may disregard it to his cost. Everyone is free to follow or disobey it. It was discovered in India and followed more or less faithfully and knowingly for centuries. It is being followed ignorantly and helplessly even now by the bulk of the people. In the eye of that law, Brahmin and Bhangi are absolutely on an equal footing. A Bhangi who does his work willingly and faithfully will find favour with God. A Brahmin who, no matter how learned he may be, does not follow his calling will incur divine displeasure. The law does not confer privileges, it defines duties. Truest democracy can be evolved only by a due recognition of and obedience to the law. Thus, in my opinion, there is no evil in varna. The evil consists in considering one varna as higher than another.

H. W.  Surely, the varna that you describe exists only in your imagination! What we see around us is the solid fact of hundreds of castes, each claiming to be higher than some other.

1 Rigveda, x, Purushasukta
2 Vide, for instance, Bhagavad Gita, iv. 13.
That is unfortunately so. I am simply answering your question and showing you the vital difference between caste and varna. Castes are a human manufacture, are daily weakening and have to go. Varna as defined by me may be said to exist in my imagination. Its definition is not imaginary. It is inherent in the mantra on which it is based and is given in so many words in the Bhagavad Gita.

Harijan, 12-1-1934

407. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, CUDDAPAH
January 2, 1934

Replying to the addresses¹ and acknowledging the purse and other presents, Gandhiji said that the Cuddapah Municipality built beautiful houses for the Harijans under their employ. The quarters were kept clean and tidy. He was very glad to find a co-operative society and a temple in their midst, and adequate water facilities.²

This place is well worth a visit. I congratulate the Municipality on having provided to the most useful servants of the town quarters the like of which I have not so far seen anywhere during the tour. I wish other municipalities would follow your example.

Gandhiji then appealed to the audience to co-operate with him wholeheartedly in ameliorating the conditions of Harijans.

The Hindu, 4-1-1934, and Harijan, 12-1-1934

408. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ
December 31, 1933/[January 3, 1934]³

CHI. JAMNALAL,

I got your letter written from Calcutta. I could not judge from the letter whether or not you had met Satis Babu during your stay there. I suppose you did meet him. You haven’t mentioned anything about your health, either. Write about it in your next letter. The fact that Shivprasad escaped unhurt is indeed a remarkable thing. The tour is progressing very well. My body is standing the strain better than I had expected. There is, therefore, no cause at all for worry. Om is doing well enough. She is not a girl who will let others worry for her. She is slowly getting trained for the position of secretary. She is not

¹ Presented by the Municipality, the Depressed Classes Association and the District Board
² The following paragraph is from the Harijan.
³ The postscript was written on Wednesday, which fell on January 3, 1934.
vigilant enough to satisfy me, but I don’t wish to goad her to be more sharp at the cost of her health. I ask her to do only as much work as she can do without strain. I am sure you know that Kisan is accompanying me. She is a very good girl. She has become very friendly with Om. Her health went down in jail. Before that she was fairly strong and was quite smart. The tour seems to have benefited her. At present Malkani is with me. I needn’t say anything about him. He is working hard. Damodar is working satisfactorily. He has proved his sincerity and capacity. Did you send the sum which was to be sent to Delhi from the Harijan account? Gosibehn will have to be paid something every month. Pay that also from some account. Pay her what Mathuradas suggests. She should have been given the full amount from Bombay, but the people there are not giving it. I will write now, but while the correspondence is going on she must get the amount from somewhere.

Blessings from
BAPU

PS.

Before Morning Prayer, Wednesday

How is it that Janakibehn complains against your temper? If there is any truth in her complaint, overcome your weakness. I asked Om and she also tells me that sometimes you make even Madan Mohan weep.

Tara has always been a sincere worker. If she keeps good health she will fully prove her worth. I had a wire from Dr. Sharma (of Delhi). He has sold his property for Rs. 10,000 and paid off his debt. Now he wishes to come and live in the Ashram. He will come with his wife. I have advised him to write to you. I think he should be taken in. If he proves worthy, well and good. Otherwise he will be asked to leave the Ashram.

I hope you work with due regard to your health. Janakibai Soman’s mother wishes to stay there. Could she be accommodated where Vidya and the others were?

From a photocast of the Gujarati: G. N. 2928

409. SPEECH AT PEDDAVADUGURU

January 3, 1934

Mahatmaji thanked the people for the address and the purse and said that he

1 Ramachandra J. Soman’s mother would not have any objection for earmarking the sum for the Kesava Vidyanilayam—a residential school for Harijans in memory of the late lamented P. Kesava Pillai—provided a workable scheme and workers were forthcoming. The moneys that were collected would of course be spent for imparting education to Harijans and providing other facilities for their uplift. Neither grants of money nor mere removal of physical untouchability were sufficient to complete the process of purification which the savarna ought to undergo to atone for their past sins and neglect. What was necessary was to banish the very idea of distinction between high and low, touchable and untouchable from their thought. This was easy if people could control their mind. But generally the reverse was true and hence the difficulty. Hinduism would suffer extinction if untouchability continued to exist. He prayed the Almighty to give them the will and courage to serve the Harijan cause and remove the evil.

_The Hindu_, 4-1-1934

410. EXTRACTS FROM SPEECHES TO WOMEN

[Before January 4, 1934]

The real ornament of woman is her character, her purity. Metal and stones can never be real ornaments. The names of women like Sita and Damayanti have become sacred to us for their unsullied virtue, never for their jewellery, if they wore any. My asking from you your jewellery has also a wider significance. Several sisters have told me that they feel all the better for getting rid of their jewels.

I have called this an act of merit in more ways than one. No man or woman is entitled to the possession of wealth, unless he or she has given a fair share of it to the poor and the helpless. It is a social and religious obligation and has been called a sacrifice by the Bhagavad Gita. He who does not offer this sacrifice has been called a thief. The Gita has enumerated many forms of sacrifice; but what greater sacrifice can there be than to serve the poor and the needy? For us today there can be no sacrifice higher than to forget the distinctions of high and low and to realize the equality of all men. I also wish to bring home to the women of India that real ornamentation lies, not in loading the body with metal and stones, but in purifying the heart and developing the beauty of the soul.

---

1 Of Rs. 1,116
2 Reproduced from Chandrashankar Shukla’s “Weekly Letter”
3 The source does not mention the dates or the places of the meetings, which were held in Andhra. Gandhiji left Andhra on January 4.
4 What follows was spoken at another meeting.
5 III 12
On one occasion he recalled to them the sacrifice of the late Shrimati Annapurna Devi, who was the first in Andhra to set to her sisters a noble example of sacrifice and service, and said:

The very first day she met me she took off her ornaments—not one, but all. The women who witnessed the scene were amazed at what was happening. And then there was a shower of ornaments. And do you think she looked less handsome because of her having given away the ornaments? Rather she looked to me more handsome. The English language has the proverb, ‘Handsome is that handsome does.’

_Harijan_, 12-1-1934

411. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

TUMKUR,

January 4, 1934

CHI. MARY

No letter from you for a long time. Duncan got on very well. He was with us all the way and I saw him just for a second even in Adyar, for I happened to visit Adyar at the instance of Mrs. Wood. Do tell me how you are getting on. I hope Chandra is flourishing, and causes you no bother. I am sending this to your village address though you should now be in Wardha. I hope your eyes are behaving better.

Love.

BAPU

SHRIMATI MARY BARR
C/O SHETH DEEPCHANDJI
BETUL, C.P.

From a photostat : G.N. 6017

412 SPEECH AT DODDABALLAPUR

January 4, 1934

Gandhiji thanked the citizens for the purse and hoped that every one of them, if they had not already done so, would get rid of untouchability from their hearts. He read in their address that there were 800 Harijans living in Doddaballapur and that fifty per cent of the Harijan children were attending schools. They were entitled to congratulations on this account. But they could not possibly give themselves satisfaction by showing that so many Harijan children attended Harijan school. It was absolutely necessary for them to teach Harijan boys and girls and for this it was

---

1 _Vide, “A Good Servant Gone”_ necessary for them to root out untouchability from their heart. It was wrong to consider a single person as untouchable. They should all forget that any single human being was lower than themselves. In conclusion, Gandhiji hoped that God would give them all strength to blot out the curse of untouchability.

_The Hindu, 4-1-1934_

---

413. DISCUSSION WITH WORKERS

_TUMKUR, January 4, 1934_

Questions were put to Gandhiji about temple-entry by Harijans. Gandhiji said that the opposition to temple-entry was on the wane and that he found practically no opposition throughout his present tour to his work.

Asked what they should do if the majority were in favour of temple-entry and the State remained neutral, Gandhiji said:

> Let the majority and the minority fight it out. The State will not interfere. Only when the majority and the minority come to a clash will the Government interfere and that too to maintain peace and tranquillity. The majority cannot be obstructed by the minority.

To another question, Mahatma Gandhi replied that there was no such thing as utter majority.

_The Hindu, 5-1-1934_

---

414. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, TUMKUR

_January 4, 1934_

It gives me great pleasure to renew my acquaintance with you. I am not new to you, nor are you new to me. But the mission that brings me here today is different from the mission that had brought me here years ago. Your address itself has made clear what I expect of you. I thank you for the purse that has been presented to me on behalf of the Harijans this afternoon. In your address you have recounted many of the virtues to which I might even be a stranger. You have showered upon me compliments that may be wholly undeserved. You have been good enough to admit that you are getting more and more convinced.

---

1 These included K. Ranga Iyengar, T. Subramanyam and Narayana Setty.
2 Gandhiji had visited Mysore State in connection with Desbandhu Memorial Fund collections and stayed at Nandi Hills from April 19 to the end of August 1927 to recoup his health; vide Vol. XXXIX.
that the eradication of untouchability from our society will not only purify Hinduism, but will transmute our national weakness into national strength and bring about greater solidarity among our people professing different religious faiths. After that admission I had expected a recounting on your part of the many things that you might have done on behalf of the Harijans. You express regret that, barring a few individual efforts, you have done little yet for the removal of untouchability. Happily the best of our ability requires the purification of our own hearts. If we really mean that on God’s earth there is no one low and no one high, we shall accomplish the mission that has brought me here today. This belief in the distinction between the high and the low has eaten into the very vitals of Hinduism and what I have stated from a thousand platforms is but this simple truth that, if we do not now get rid of this canker, there is the impending danger of Hinduism itself perishing. I therefore hope and pray that every one of those who are here present at this meeting will realize the truth of what I have said and will make the best possible effort to get rid of this curse of untouchability.

Proceeding, Mahatmaji expressed his regret at not being able to visit all parts of the town as he would have wished. Owing to physical weakness, it was not possible for him to visit public institutions doing useful work. He hoped that the people of Tumkur would take the will for the deed.

The Hindu, 5-1-1934

SISTERS,

It gives me much pleasure to see you again after a lapse of many years. You have in the opening portion of your address expressed anxiety about my health on account of the constant travels. Who would show anxiety, if not you the mothers of India, for your children? And I am one among the millions of your children. But you should know that the way you can relieve my anxiety is by doing according to the message that I have come to tell you. You can relieve my anxiety by paying handsomely for the mission that I am conducting. Sisters in other parts of India, having felt the same anxiety

1 The meeting, at which 5,000 ladies were present, was held in the R.B.A.N.M. High School compound. that you feel, have showered their jewellery, their bangles, their rings, and their necklaces on me. The silver and copper that you may give me is, truly speaking, according to our custom, not your property. That belongs to your parents or to your husbands. But what I want is something that you can definitely call your own and that can only be your jewellery. But the giving up of your jewellery is the least of all the things that I want you to do. It can only be a singing of your determination to carry out the message to its full extent. And that message is that you should consider the Harijans as your own blood brothers and blood-sisters and as your own children. It is wrong and sinful to consider a single human being as an untouchable. God has created all men and women alike. Although our forms may be different and our dispositions may be different we are still, at the bottom, one. Even as the leaves of one tree are one, whether they are small or big, so I want you to have no distinction of untouchable and touchable. And that is what I call purification of the heart.

The Hindu, 5-1-1934

416. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, BANGALORE

January 4, 1934

FRIENDS.

I am deeply touched by your welcome. I do not want all this enthusiasm of yours and all this exhibition of affection towards me to waste away without turning them to good use. If you therefore have patience with me for a few brief moments, you will see that I turn all that enthusiasm and affection to good account. What I am about to do will also be a test of the genuineness of your enthusiasm and your affection.

You know the message that I want to tell you. I would like us all, every one of us, to purify our heart of the curse of untouchability. In one of the many addresses that I had the honour and pleasure of receiving today after entering the border of Mysore State, it was truly stated that this curse of untouchability had permeated Hindu society to such an extent that it almost ruled our lives and the signatories to the address were good enough to say that the message I was trying to deliver to the Hindus of India was producing its effect and went on to admit that, if we could but get rid of this poison of untouchability, all our differences even between different communities would vanish.
There you see what I am asking every one of us to do. I am pleading with you that we should get rid of this position of untouchability all along the line, so that we won’t have only a particular class labeled as Harijans but we should all become Harijans, namely, and truly, children of God.

Today if we appeared before our Maker with this uncleanness in our hearts, He will disown us because we have ourselves become disinherited. And this little purse that you have given me, I regard as earnest of your determination that you will henceforth cease to regard any being on earth as lower than yourselves. If among earthly parents there is no grade among their children, do you think that God has grades among His children, the God Whom we consider as the One and only Being, if He may be called a being, Who holds the scales of justice absolutely even? If you have actually understood the spirit of my message, you will understand when I say to you that those who give to the Harijan cause gain. I go further and contend that you can never give to much too this cause.

The Hindu, 5-1-1934

417. PLEA FOR CATHOLICITY

During my frequent travels I have noticed that the reception committees are not too mindful of expense in catering for the wants of guests. They will insist on producing sweets or other delicacies and a multiplicity of dishes. I have firmly discountenanced these at all times, but this time when I am making collections for the Harijan cause, which I regard as a mission of penance and purification, I feel pained when there is any attempt at lavish hospitality. In two places I observed that Gujarati cooks were brought in to produce Gujarati dishes. I regard this as a wholly unnecessary procedure. I believe that we should be able to accommodate ourselves to the food eaten in the provinces other than our own. I know that this is not so simple a question as it appears. I know southerners who have made a Herculean effort to take to Gujarati food and failed. Gujaratis will not take to the southern mode of cooking. Bengal produces dainties which the other provinces will not easily relish. If we would be national instead of provincial, we would have to have an interchange of habits as to food, simplify our tastes and produce healthy dishes that all can take with impunity. This means a careful study of the foods taken by different provinces, castes and denominations. Unfortunately, or fortunately, there are not only different combinations in different provinces, but there are different styles in the same province, among the different communities. It is necessary, therefore, for national workers to study the foods and the methods of preparing them in the various provinces and discover common, simple and cheap dishes which all can take without upsetting the digestive apparatus. In any case it must be a matter of shame for workers not to know the manners and customs of different provinces and communities. In liberal household cooks ought to be able to cook foods eaten in the various provinces. Why should not a Gujarati be able to produce dishes which a Tamilian or an Andhra or a Bengali ordinarily eats? I know that we cannot meet at the top. Nor is such a meeting necessary or desirable. Rich people will have not only provincial combinations but specialities designed for their own households. These cannot be universalized. What can be and should be aimed at are common dishes for common people. This I know is easily possible if we have the mind. But to make this possible, volunteers will have to learn the art of cooking and for this purpose they will have also to study the values of different foods and evolve common dishes easily and cheaply prepared.

---

1 A Gujarati version of this appeared in Harijanbandhu, 31-12-1933

I have strayed somewhat from my main purpose which is to ask organizers of the tour in the provinces not to pamper us but to be rigorously simple and economical in catering for us. We are or profess to be conducting a mission of self-purification and representing the cause of the outcastes of Hindu humanity. As such we have no right to the satisfaction of any but the barest wants and creature comforts. Fried things and sweets must be strictly eschewed. Ghee ought to be most sparingly used. More than one green vegetable simply boiled would be regarded as unnecessary. Expensive fruit should be always avoided. I know that I am the culprit in the matter of fruit. Friends would pamper me and go out of the way to procure the richest fruit for me. I can only assure them that I do not need any other fruit than oranges, which experience has proved to be necessary for me. In spite to all my vaunted abstinence, I know that of my party I am the costliest member to feed. I am sorry that it should be so, but mother goat to whose milk I owe my bodily strength and sister orange who keeps me fresh cannot compete in cheapness with rice and wheat. Let not my numerous hosts, however add to my indebtedness by importing tempting superfluities. Let them not pander to my weaknesses, if they will help me to do my duty towards Harijans.

_Harijan_, 5-1-1934
418. LETTER TO MAHALAKSHMI M. THAKKAR

January 5, 1934

CHI. MAHALAKSHMI,

Did you get the letter that I wrote to you in jail? I still do not know what happened to Madhavji finally. You should not worry at all about the children. Please have faith that what Madhavji has done after careful thinking and after consulting me is right. Nevertheless, do what you wish. I want complete freedom of thought and action for women. Write to me everything. Let me know also how you spent the time and what you read in jail. Read the back numbers of Harijanbandhu.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat fo the Gujarati: G.N. 6825

419. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

January 5, 1934

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I got your two letters on successive days.

I have arranged with Ghanshyamdas about Rajeshwar. Send me his address. Since when has he not been receiving the money?

To which question about Jayaprakash and you have I not replied? My impression is that I have replied to all questions arising from your letter. It is possible, though, that you did not get that letter. If that is so, please ask me again.

Since you have started on the medicine, try it out. I also don’t have much faith in it. I very much wish that Jayaprakash and you should be all right. I do not think that you are at all ill. But if the doctor says you are, what is one to do?

I have not been weighed recently. But I keep good health. I also eat well.

Brijkrishna may be said to have recovered completely. He walks about a little now. Devdas was released unexpectedly. I don’t know anything more.

Ba writes regularly. Kisan will continue to accompany me for the present. She is well. She also helps a little in the work. Vidya did not keep good health and the girl with her turned out to be a thief. She has, therefore, left and gone to her father.

1 On January 2, 1934

I understand about Rajendrababu. Tell him that I have written to him.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat to the Gujarati: G.N. 3439

---

420. LETTER TO V. L. PHADKE

January 5, 1934

BHAI MAMA,

I have your letter. I have suggested not that the management of the institutions should be handed over to the Harijan Sevak Sangh but that the Harijan Sevak Sangh should provide their expenses. From now on, therefore, it will be necessary to satisfy the Sangh. When somebody provides us funds it is only fair that we satisfy them about the way we spend the funds and the way we run the institutions.

Sardar did not mean by the words used in his letter ‘the other world’. He meant ‘in jail’ or ‘outside jail’. Is not that, too, ‘the other world’? We can call it ‘the other world’ on the earth. But you need not get alarmed or start worrying because of that. For the present, you are expected to devote yourself exclusively to your [work]. Those who wish to go to ‘the other world’ on the earth will certainly get their turn. It is a matter of a few days only. You must be getting the news about me from Harijanbandhu.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3827

---

1 Secretary of Antyaja Seva Mandal and founder of the Harijan Ashram at Godhra

2 The source is illegible here.
421. LETTER TO JIVANJI D. DESAI

MYSORE
January 5, 1934

BHAJ JIVANJI,

I have gone through the report of the discussion with me about cow-protection. It is accurate. You may, therefore, use it if you wish.

Has the Municipality taken over control of the Vidyapith library or did we ourselves rearrange the books? Has the construction of the library building started? If not, ask Balubhai when it will begin and let me know.

Have any machines been left in the press or have they all been confiscated.

Has anything been done about the books to be published?

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]
The report of the discussion is enclosed.

I hope Kaka got the letter which I wrote to him. In it I have written something for you to convey to Mahadev.

From a photostat of the Gajarati: G.N. 9933. Also C.W. 6908. Courtesy: Jivanji D. Desai

422. LETTER TO CHHOTUBHAI KUNVERJI MEHTA

January 5, 1934

MY DEAR NAPOLEON,

I have your letter. Why do you say you do not know what to write? Smart children like you can write a lot. You can write about your studies, your friends, your experiences.

I hope Gangaba’s going has not grieved you. There was a girl called Lucy. She had six brothers and sisters of whom some had died. Still she used to say that they were seven. That implied great wisdom. For, it is not through the body that somebody is a brother or a sister. It is through the soul dwelling in the body that one is a

1 This is not available.
2 Addressee’s mother
3 The reference is to William Wordsworth’s poem “We Are Seven”.

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
brother or a sister. And the soul does not die. It only changes its abode. Just as man does not live in a useless house, the soul also does not continue to dwell in a useless body. Gangaba will live on in a new body. Why should you grieve for her?

It is our selfishness that makes us cry. But you are brave, and so selfishness will not come near you at all.

Can you understand this? Do write to me from time to time now. Tell Kunverji also that he should write to me.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Motanan Man, p. 65

423. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

MYSORE,
January 5, 1934

CHI, BRIJKISAN,

I wrote you two letters. Your letter does not acknowledge either. There is no village by the name of Srinagar in Andhradesha, so your letter must have been sent to Kashmir. The address I sent you was Sitanagaram. God has been very merciful in making you rise from your death-bed. Now you must be very careful and make your body sturdier than before. You must follow Dr. Ansari’s instructions to the letter. Why did Ram Babu leave off? For how many months have you rented the new house? What is the rent? I am taking the touring well.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi : G.N. 2406

424. SPEECH AT HARIJANS' MEETING

MYSORE,
January 5, 1934

You should conform to the rules of hygiene and sanitation—internal as well as external. Internal sanitation consists in taking the name of God—the first thing to be done after getting up in the morning. That is the breakfast for the soul.

When he was told that the Harijans of the locality had given up beef-eating, he added:

It is a matter of deep joy to me and congratulation for you that you have given up beef-eating. I would like you to be able to say the same thing about drink. What is the use of paying for some coloured water which makes us so mad that we forget the distinction between mother, wife and sister? I have heard Harijans telling me that drink is prescribed for them on occasions of marriage and death. I can tell you, without fear of contradiction, that is a suggestion of the devil. It is nowhere written in scriptures. I would ask you, brothers and sisters, not to go near the devil. I hope you will take my advice to heart and it will give me great joy when you will be able to say that you have given up drink also.

_Harijan, 12-1-1934_

---

425. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, MYSORE

_January 5, 1934_

It has given me much pleasure to renew acquaintance after six long years. As you are aware, I came to Mysore State in order to regain my health that I had lost during the tour which I was conducting at that time. And naturally I have the most pleasant recollections of my stay in Mysore. From His Highness the Maharaja Saheb and his Dewan and other officials to the subjects of H.H. the Maharaja Saheb, I experienced nothing but the warmest affection. You can, therefore, understand more fully probably than before how much joy it must have given me to have come in your midst again. You have added to the joy and pleasure by asking me to perform the ceremony of unveiling a portrait of the late Sjt. Venkatakrishnayya, the Grand Old Man of Mysore. I congratulate the artist upon his effort, because it is a faithful representation of the figure which was quite familiar to me.

Perhaps, all of you do not know that I had the pleasure and privilege of seeing the Grand Old Man of Mysore in flesh and blood during my last visit. I had then become acquainted with his many virtues. I knew than that he occupied a unique place in your hearts. I am quite sure you do not expect me or want me to recount his many virtues. You who were on the spot knew them much better than I could possibly do during a brief visit. I only hope that those of his virtues for which you and I prize his memory will be translated into our lives. We may not flatter ourselves with the belief that we have discharged the obligation to his memory by your inviting me to unveil this portrait and witnessing the ceremony and by my unveiling it.

I must now pass on to the mission that has brought me here. The Municipal address reminds me that I should see things which are worth seeing, so that I may carry away happy impressions of the effort that has been and is being made here on behalf of the Harijans. The Reception Committee with very great forethought had arranged to take me, before bringing me to this meeting, to various *cheries*¹ and showed me the improvements made during these six years. And you are quite right in thinking that after an examination of these places I should carry away nothing but happy impressions of what has been done on behalf of Harijans. I must congratulate the State and the Municipality of Mysore on the neatness and cleanliness I observed in all the places visited this afternoon. And I am glad for the assurance that the Municipality will not lose any time in looking after the domestic comforts of the Harijans of this city. In my opinion, sweepers in every city are its noblest servants. It must be a matter of humiliation and shame to have the sweepers and scavengers consigned to the dirtiest places and utterly neglected. In my opinion, they hold the key of the health of every city in their pockets. Any city that dares neglect its scavengers and sweepers commits the crime of neglecting the health of its citizens.

But my mission covers a much wider theme than the economic welfare of Harijans. We are, no doubt, bound to jealously guard their economic and educational welfare. But this is not enough, if we are do reparation to Harijans for the untold hardships to which we have subjected them for centuries past. They are entitled to precisely the same rights and privileges as any other citizen. And as Hindus they are entitled to the same social amenities and religious privileges that any other Hindu is entitled to. My mission, therefore, is to invite savarna Hindus to wash themselves clean of the guilt of untouchability. And if, during the short period of grace open to savarna Hindus, they fail to do this duty, I have not the shadow of a doubt that Hinduism will perish. You can now understand that this cannot be done by a municipality or even the Maharaja Saheb himself. If you and I will not change our hearts, what can even Rajas and Maharajas do? It is, therefore, my privilege, as it is my duty, to invite you to cleanse your hearts of untouchability, the distinction of high and low. If you understand thoroughly the spirit of this message, the change of heart is an incredibly simple performance; and you can see in the twinkling of an eye how, if this change comes about in savarna Hindu hearts, the economic, social and religious progress of Harijans must follow. It will then be a sign and seal of this change of heart. All these purses you have been kind enough to give me I consider as an earnest of your determination to make that change of heart. May God give you the strength to do it and save Hinduism from impending doom.

¹ Localities

_Harijan, 12-1-1934_

426. EXTRACTS FROM SPEECHES

[Before January 6, 1934]

You should know that our duty to Harijans does not end with giving them good houses or giving them separate wells, schools and so on. If we gave them all these and still kept them untouchables, it would only mean replacing iron chains by golden ones; but the slave would still be a slave. Harijans must have all the amenities that we enjoy. But I go further and say, you must absorb them, you must bridge the gulf that lies today between them and you. The purification we are striving for is not complete till we have purged our hearts of this distinction. You and I may not be satisfied with anything less.

You, mothers, should wash your children every day, and so should you wash yourselves. In the morning you should have what I call internal wash, that is to say, the first thing you should do on getting up is to take Ramanama and then pray to God that you should pass the day in sacredness, so that no wrong word may pass your lips and no wrong act may be done by you. And then you should give yourselves an external wash.

At Anantapur\(^1\), opening a water-tap for them, he said:

May this water be the water of life to you. Water is an emblem of purity. Just as we purify the body by bathing with water, so can we become pure in heart by a morning wash, _i.e._, by taking the name of God.

I am trying every moment of my life to be guided by ahimsa,

---

\(^1\) Reproduced from Chandrashankar Shukla’s “Weekly Letter”, which bears the date-line “Bangalore, 6-1-1934”

\(^2\) What follows was addressed to Harijan women at another meeting.

\(^3\) On January 3.
by love. I am essentially a lover of peace. I do not want to create dissensions. And I assure those who oppose me that I shall not do a single thing which I know may be contrary to truth and love.¹

But we have created a hope in the hearts of Harijans. They have begun to feel that they are going to be freed from this serfdom. I expect of you that you will fulfil it. It is said in all religions of the world that, if the poor are deceived, if the hopes given to them are not fulfilled, they heave a sigh of despair, a curse. And I have no doubt that, if, after all that we have said and promised, we play false, the curse of these poor people is bound to descend on us and we shall perish.

_Harijan, 12-1-1934_

427. LETTER TO PARIKSHITLAL L. MAJMUDAR

_January 6, 1934_

_BHAI PARIKSHITLAL,_

At the moment I cannot think of anything that I can do from here about the laws regarding Bhundi Bhunchhi². You have done the right thing in writing to the Dewan. Please let me know if there has been any reply from him. If I get an authoritative report on the subject from a newspaper correspondent in Kutch, I would publish it in _Harijan_. Is the report that you have received authentic? Please inquire and let me know. Try and get a copy of the legislation. Most probably it was published in _Navajivan_. The cheque which Chhaganlal Joshi has sent to you is an instalment of that sum of Rs. 5,700. I had made arrangements for it before I got your letter regar-ding the use of a disinfectant. Hence the cheque. I will discuss the matter further when I meet Thakkar Bapa on the 16th.

_Blessings from_

_BAPU_

_SJ. PARISHITLAL MAJMUDAR_
_HARIJAN ASHRAM_
_SABARMATI_
_GUJARAT_

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G.N. 3999

¹ This was said at a meeting held in Nellore on December 30. What follows was said at another meeting.

² A tax imposed by the Kutch State on members of the Meghaval caste who were parties to a widow-marriage; _vide_, “Bhundi Bhunchhi” 428. SPEECH AT STUDENTS’ MEETING, BANGALORE

January 6, 1934

A servant of Harijans must be above suspicion like Caesar’s wife. He must have a character above reproach. His eyes must be clean so that they may not offend. His hands also must be clean and his touch must be pure and gentle. His heart will not harbour a single impure thought. His ears must be turned to listen to the music of the spheres, his feet will take him to the purest work, never to dens of evil and he will give his ear to all he hears but will spare his voice.

In the end Gandhiji exhorted them to join one of the greatest of reform movements in modern times.

429. LETTER TO GOVINDBHAI R. PATEL

January 7, 1934

BHAISHRI GOVINDBHAI,

I have your letter. I had received the postcard, too. I wrote a long letter to Shri Aurobindo four days ago asking for an interview. I am now awaiting a reply. You may, if you wish, send me any literature which you think I should read.

Vandemataram from

MOHANDAS

From the Gujarati original : C. W. 10740. Courtesy : Govindbhai R. Patel

430. SPEECH AT APEX BANK HALL, BANGALORE

January 7, 1934

My connection with the co-operative movement is of a perfunctory character. I tried to understand it as interpreted by Sir Daniel Hamilton I know what boon it can become to agriculturists. I wish to tell you what I said long ago at a co-operatives’ meeting at Bombay, when I had the honour of being invited by Lord Willingdon . . . . It is necessary for co-operative societies to trace the course of every pice lent. Find out what the borrower is doing with his money. This thought has never left me.¹

¹ An address was presented to Gandhiji at the Provincial Co-operative Apex Bank Hall.
² What follows is from The Hindu.
Gandhiji made a touching reference to the late Mr. K. H. Ramayya, Registrar of Co-operative Societies. He said that while he was in Bangalore six years ago, he used to meet the late Mr. Ramayya often and used to cut jokes with him. It was only yesterday that he had learnt of the passing away of Mr. Ramayya. Mahatma was really sorry for this. The great work that he had done for the cause of Co-operation in the State was too well-known to need repetition by him.

The Bombay Chronicle, 9-1-1934, and The Hindu 8-1-1934

431. SPEECH AT CIVIC RECEPTION, BANGALORE

January 7, 1934

I am deeply grateful to the Bangalore City Municipality for presenting me with this address. You have reminded me in your address that you were good enough to do me the honour of giving me such an address when I was in your midst last time. And it flatters me to see that I still retain a corner of your hearts. I tender you my congratulations upon all the things that you have done and are doing on behalf of the Harijans whose cause has brought me here. I tender also my respectful congratulations to His Highness for the liberality with which his Government has been dealing with this problem. You have admitted in your address that, while so much is being done by the Municipality for the Harijans, much more yet remains to be done. It would be wrong on my part if I did not re-echo that sentiment expressed in your address. During the morning peregrinations, I had the painful duty of witnessing some of the habitations occupied by the Harijans. It is difficult to call them even huts. I had, therefore, not hesitated to describe them as ‘holes’. These holes are no protection whatever to the Harijans against wind, rain and sun. These dwellings are built of debris, which the Harijans could lay their hands upon.

You have every right to pride yourselves upon the beauty of Bangalore. I am free to confess that Bombay cannot be described as ‘Bombay, the beautiful’. There are such hideous and ugly spots in Bombay that it is a misnomer to call that city ‘beautiful’. Comparative speaking, therefore, I have no hesitation in giving Bangalore the first prize for a beautiful city. But I would like you not to be satisfied with the comparative merit. I would like you to set before yourselves a minimum standard of comfort for the poorest of your citizens.

Proceeding, Mahatmaji thanked the citizens for the kind invitation extended to him to come over to Bangalore and stay for a short time after his all-India tour.
I have experienced so much kindness and so much attention that I assure you that I need no temptation whatever to bring me here if only the call of duty enables me to take advantage of your hospitality and your climate.

Mahatma Gandhi next said that the touching reference in the address to the absence of his wife had moved him deeply. They had taken the way that duty had shown them. Her duty had taken her away to Yeravda and his duty had him in their midst. He assured them that nothing would give them both greater pleasure than to enjoy their hospitality once more.

The Hindu, 8-1-1934

432. SPEECH AT TEMPERANCE ASSOCIATION, BANGALORE

January 7, 1934

It is a matter of pleasure to me that you have invited me to meet you and say a few words on the subject of temperance. Some of you perhaps know that this is one of the matters that I took up before I was known to anybody and before I had conceived the thought of entering the political arena. When as a young man I went to South Africa, I observed that the coolies, indentured Indians, were fast going down owing to the drink habit. The law in South Africa made it a crime for indentured Indians to carry drink home. They could drink as much as they liked at the canteen. The result was that many women were found literally lying in gutters. It was not a thing of which any Indian could be proud. I pleaded with the Government, but mine was a voice in the wilderness. So the thing went on. But it made a lasting impression on my mind. I knew what I had to do when I came to India after a long exile.

I am not a temperance man. I am a prohibition man. I fought with my countrymen in South Africa and said, “We should not fight for an equal right to drink.” I could not persuade them for a long time, but I did succeed in persuading a majority of them that to fight for rights was one thing and to fight for indulgence in vice was another. If the whites were not punished by the State for drinking, we could not plead for the same exemption. Here, in India, the Government are trading in liquor. I know from bitter experience of Harijans that they drink in spite of themselves. I have in mind an esteemed co-worker in Calcutta, namely, Satis Chandra Das Gupta. He gave up a remunerative job. He was and is still considered the right-hand man of Dr. Roy. He gave up his chemical work and today he lives near bastis. He administered pledges to Harijans not to drink. These they broke again and again. That broke his heart and he fasted for 15 days. It had a marvellous effect on the Harijans. They said they would not now go back on their pledges. Satis Babu had to go through that agony. It was a joy for him. A worker who fights drink tooth and nail has to go through this. Many Harijans have said to me, “Take away this temptation from us and we shall be all right. Do not put it in our way.” When we are not able to control ourselves in so many things, how much less can the Harijans and the labourers control themselves? I have lived, eaten and drunk with them. They have no places of recreation. They live in wretched holes. They have no money to spend for creature comforts. What little they get, therefore, goes to canteens. I only give you the description to show you how keenly and bitterly I feel in connection with the drink evil. I have not the shadow of a doubt that we shall not be able to combat this evil successfully till prohibition comes. I have fixed views about prohibition. I have given you the result of my experience that, without prohibition, it is impossible to bring about sober habits among the labouring population in India. And I have observed that the Harijans are most addicted to this vice. India is a country in which total prohibition can succeed. People are not habitually given to drink. It is not a fashionable vice. The climate does not demand its use. But government revenue is touched by prohibition. Therefore they say, “Find other sources of income before you ask us for total prohibition.” I say, “If you get revenue from impure sources and then say, ‘Replace this revenue,’ you cannot be heard. There should be no bargaining about it.”

_Harijan_, 19-1-1934
433. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, BANGALORE

January 7, 1934

It gives me very great pleasure to see Mr. V. P. Madhava Rao present here. I had the pleasure of meeting him six years ago when I was in your midst. That, in spite of his advanced age, he should have come here to give me his blessings must move the hardest heart. I regard it as a blessing for the Harijan work I am doing and it is a matter of great joy and solace that such a great gathering of learned men of Mysore who have seen so much life should be here to bless his movement. But, I miss the presence, at this meeting, of Mr. Humza Hussain, who was the Chairman of the Reception Committee when I came here six years ago. I have a vivid recollection of his many kindnesses and how I wish he had been here at this meeting to greet me as an old friend. May God give his soul peace.

I am very grateful to you for the purse that you have presented me. I was almost going to say a “good purse”, but I have hesitated to use this adjective, because I know that the citizens of Bangalore are quite able to put together a larger purse and I know that by the time I say goodbye to you, I shall have many generous contributions to the cause of Harijans. After all, it is the least reparation that we can do to these brothers and sisters whom Hindus have systematically suppressed.

I have read your address from top to bottom. And I congratulate you and the Maharaja Saheb’s Government on the many things that you have been able to recite in that address. But, neither the State nor the people of Mysore nor I can find any cause for satisfaction unless untouchability is entirely rooted out from our hearts. While I gratefully acknowledge all that you have done for Harijans, I ask you not to rest content till all Harijans enjoy all the rights that savarna Hindus enjoy in all walks of life. Let us undergo this necessary purification, while there is this brief moment of probation still left to us by God. Be sure, if you fail in this hour, God’s wrath will swiftly descend on the Hindus.

But, one word to Harijan brothers and sisters. You cannot be free from this self-purification. You too have to make your sacrifices at the common altar. And that consists in the strict observance of 1 Held at the National High School in the evening, the meeting was largely attended.

2 Retired Dewan of Mysore, Travancore and Baroda, chairman of the Mysore State Harijan Sevak Sangh.
sanitation, internal and external. Secondly, in giving up carrion and beef-eating wherever that habit still persists. In every part of the civilized world, carrion is abhorred with detestation. It is considered unfit for human consumption. And no one can call himself a Hindu and partake of beef. The sacredness of the cow and her worship is an integral part of Hinduism. Thirdly, I would ask every Harijan man and woman present here to give up the habit of drink. Let no Harijan say that savarna Hindus also drink. It is no answer. I would beseech you, as a fellow Harijan by calling, to shun all the vices of savarna Hindus. In spite of all the reparations that savarna Hindus make to you, in the presence of God after all, in the ultimate end, your salvation rests in your own hands. It was therefore a matter of great joy when day before yesterday¹ Harijans gave me their assurance that they had given up beef-eating and would try to give up drink. Let us all pray to God that He may give strength to the Harijans to carry out their resolve to leave off drink.

The Hindu, 8-1-1934

434. TALK WITH HARIJAN WORKERS²

BANGALORE,

January 7, 1934

It is for you to supplement the work done by the State.³ You may find workers to go and live in the midst of Harijans. This is merely all illustration. The rule is, you begin where the State ends. The State cannot attend to individuals. That is the prerogative of private persons. Each worker should measure his own capacity. We must not do anything for spectacular effect. Our work may not be pretentious, but it must be solid. We have to come in intimate touch with the people—savarnas as well as Harijans. Such contact with the people can never be established by the State. That is essentially the work of the Social reformer. Temple-entry work is to be done by workers specially qualified for that work. If they show character, it will move the Harijan mass. The workers must not go in the midst of Harijans as strangers or patrons but go as friends and servants. Such work is being done in Wardha. If there is one true worker, he will multiply himself.

Harijan, 19-1-1934

¹ Vide “Speech at Harijans’ Meeting”
² Extracted from Chandrashekhar Shukla’s “Weekly Letter”
³ Gandhiji had been asked, “When the State is doing so much, what are we to do?”
435. NOTE TO N. R. MALKANI

January 8, 1934

MY DEAR MALKANI,

Here is some solid work for you. Prepare a statement about the two untouchability Bills, give the text of the two Bills, procure Government circulars and keep with the statement all the literature available.

BAPU

From a photostat : G. N. 904

436. LETTER TO PARVATIBEHN P. DESAI

BANGALORE,

January 8, 1934

CHI. PARVATI,

I have your letter. I had news of Pragji for the first time from you. Do you have any friends in Dharwar ? Let me know whenever you get a letter from there. When was he taken to Dharwar ? Keep me informed about yourself and the children. Address your letters to Wardha. Did you write the letter yourself or did you get it written by somebody else?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati : G. N. 5036

437. LETTER TO KASTURBA GANDHI

BANGALORE,

January 8, 1934

BA,

I have still not received your letter, but I believe it will reach me after some wandering. I hope you are getting the newspaper now. You must have received the Bhagavat and the Ramayana. Write for anything else you may wish to have. I had a letter from Manilal, as also one from Sushila. They are both well. Manilal is unperturbed and asks you not to worry about him. Sita is growing up fast. She is always playing about. Devdas has been released earlier than expected. He has gone to Ahmedabad. I had a wire from him. Perhaps he will visit you.

1 Wife of Pragji Desai

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
There were letters from Ramdas and Nimu too. I keep on writing to Manu, but again there has been no letter from her. Kishorelal’s fever has come down a little and so it can be hoped that he will have fully recovered in a few days. There is nothing but good news about Mani. Om, Kisan, Chandrashankar, etc., are all well. I am in Bangalore today. Everyone has been inquiring after you. Shankerlal and Gulzarilal have come here. There is to be a meeting of the Panch regarding the workers’ wages. Tomorrow is Tuesday, and so it will meet tomorrow. Afterwards I have to go to Malabar. I will be going to the area which you once visited. Urmila Devi’s son has a job in Madras now. I keep good health. There is no cause at all for worry. At every place people come in large crowds and give me purses, jewellery, etc. Kanti is better now. I see that Bal will be seeing me in a few days. His health also is quite good. I hope all of you there are well. What progress have Shanta and Lalita made in their studies? And now the discourse.

Today I will write something about what the Gita says concerning yajna. The subject is introduced in Chapter III. In that chapter the Lord says that he who eats without performing yajna eats stolen food. This is a very serious statement indeed, for eating stolen food is like swallowing raw mercury. Nobody can digest it and, if anyone eats it, he will get eruptions all over the body. Hence Akho Bhagat has said: “Eating stolen food is like swallowing raw mercury.” If, therefore, a person stops performing yajna even for a while, he becomes a thief. All of us should know that this yajna means. Fortunately for us, it is easy for all whose heart is in the right place. It requires no wealth, no intellect nor education. Yajna means any act of service. Only about a person whose whole life is a ceaseless yajna can it be said that he does not eat stolen food. Hence those who do just a little work as yajna may be said to be not guilty of theft to that extent. Looking at the matter from this point of view, we see that all of us are guilty of theft more or less. Our yajna can be said to be perfect only when we have shed all selfishness. To do this means to give up the sense of ‘I’ and ‘mine’, to cease feeling that this belongs to me and that to somebody else, that this is my son and that somebody else’s. There should not be even a trace of such a feeling in one’s heart. He alone can do this who offers up his all to Shri Krishna. He who has done that does everything with God as witness, as

1 Sister of C. R. Das
2 III. 12
His servant and in a spirit of service. Such a person is always happy and peaceful in mind. Happiness and suffering are the same to him. He uses his body, mind, intellect, possessions—all that is his—for the service of others. All of us cannot do such perfect yajna. If, however, we have the aspiration in our heart to serve the whole world, what work is there which most people can do and which would include service to the whole world? Asking this question, we found that the answer was spinning, which is the work that countless people can do in the spirit of service. One who spins will have done that much labour for the service of the world. But I mention this only as an example. What I wished to explain was the meaning and importance of yajna. I shall be satisfied if I have been able to explain it.

Blessings to all sisters from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Bane Patro, pp. 7-8

438. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

BANGALORE,
January 8, 1934

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

After completing a letter to Ba, I am writing this to you. It is now past four in the afternoon. It is my weekly Silence Day. We are in Bangalore today. Tomorrow there is a meeting of the Panch to consider the demand of the [Ahmedabad] mills for a reduction in the workers wages. Shankerlal [Banker], Gulzarilal and others have already arrived. The mill-owners will arrive tomorrow. I have told them that I would be able to give five hours for the meeting. We are leaving for Malabar tomorrow night.

The pressure of work remains heavy. But I keep good health. Subba Rao1 came and examined me yesterday. He was pleased. The blood pressure was 155-100. This is excellent. At the moment it is expected that Thakkar Bapa will meet me in Calicut on the 16th.

I am staying here in a State building2, the same where I had put up before. The people’s enthusiasm is great. The Dewan came and saw me. He talked a great deal about you. He has sent his salaams to you. He shows very great love.

1 A noted physician of Bangalore
2 Kumara Park
I had a letter from . . . ‘He wanted my permission to sell off his car. Soon after, I got a wire from Thakkar Bapa, informing me that he was really willing to sell it. I, therefore, gave my consent, although I didn’t understand the position at all. In such matters I depend entirely on you. I, therefore, often follow the example of Ekalavya. He made a clay image of Dronacharya and learnt archery by practising before it so that he could become Arjuna’s equal. I form a mental image of you and consult it. Assuming that you would advise me to give my consent in this matter, I sent a wire saying yes.

Napoleon’ has been very much affected by the death of Kunvarji’s wife. I see this from his loving reply to my letter of condolence. I have written to him again. I see from . . . ’s1 letter that he is not happy. I have asked him what the reason is.

Munshi has resumed practice. You must have read about Jivraj.

Dr. Bidhan may be said to have returned from the jaws of death. He tells me so in reply to a wire which I had sent to him. A bone is fractured. He will have to be in bed for some 15 days at least.

I had a letter from Mama in which he has referred to a letter of yours. He says that it is not practicable now to collect separate contributions and keep separate accounts for the Harijan work, nor will the people give such contributions. Hence, for Navasari, Godhra and other centres for which separate funds and accounts were being maintained, budgets within our means have been passed and it has been decided to obtain the money from the funds of the Harijan Sevak Sangh. The control of the institutions concerned will not be changed. The only change will be that they will receive reasonable grants and will run under the supervision of the Harijan Sevak Sangh. Their independent existence will in no way be endangered. Mama has volunteered to devote himself wholly to this work for the present. I plainly refuse to guide anybody. I don’t feel inclined in my heart to do so. If you have any questions to ask or wish to know more about the Harijan Sevak Sangh, you can write to me. I don’t know what I should tell you. If, however, you give me the slightest indication as to what you want, I will give, that is, send all the required information. You need have no fear that I myself will write out the reply. I spare my hand and brain unnecessary exertion and economize time in

---

1 The name is omitted in the source
2 Chhotubhai K. Mehta
3 The name is omitted in the source.
doing my work.

Devdas has been released before his time. There was a wire from him. He will of course come and see me. The wire was sent from Ahmedabad. Most probably he will pay a visit to Ba.

Manilal and Sushila write to me. His affairs are all right. Keshu also has got a good job. Ramdas is very much upset. He can enjoy no peace of mind at all.

It seems that Kishorelal is steadily improving. Brijkrishna has survived. He can walk a little now. Jamnalal has a cold and so on. Shankerlal thinks that his health is certainly not too good. But his weight has increased and he has now reached about 200 lb.

Om and Kisan are quite well. And so is Mirabehn, of course.

Blessings to both from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 59-61

439. LETTER TO SHANTIKUMAR MORARJEE

January 8, 1934

CHI. SHANTIKUMAR.

I am often hoping for a letter from you and when I don’t get any I take it that you have refrained from writing out of consideration for me.

I hope the operation went off well. Please write or get someone to write to me sometimes. Normally, I am told, it is a simple operation.

I suppose you do read Harijan. God is protecting my health.

Blessings to you both from

BAPU

[PS.]

It is safer to write at the Wardha address.

1 The addressee had been operated upon for hernia.
440. LETTER TO K. M. MUNSHI

January 8, 1934

BHAISHRI MUNSHI,

I have your letter. I have not received Lilavati’s so far.

I will send you the literature on the Bills regarding untouchability. If I cannot get a whole loaf of bread I shall be willing to accept even a quarter. It is only when I am offered instead of bread a stone purporting to be bread that I refuse to accept it. But I have no fear that you will ever give me a stone instead of bread. Please, therefore, continue to give me whatever you can.

I see no harm if a party like the one you suggest comes into existence. Please go through the changes that I have made in your draft. The reference to civil disobedience is not proper. An element of corruption had certainly crept into it. But even a reference to that is completely out of place in this draft. Our opponents are bound to take advantage of it. We might even take that risk if such reference were relevant. Nor was corruption the cause of my suspending that part of civil disobedience which I have done.

This party is not being formed in order to attract other parties to it. The reason for forming it is that those Congressmen who do not or cannot take part in the civil disobedience movement desire to ensure their continued [political] existence and to do some service. I, therefore, consider any reference to other parties as unnecessary. After the party is formed, it may start negotiations with other parties for any purpose. What its name will be will have to be thought over. Just as you thought it proper to consult me, I would advise you to consult Jawaharlal too. If you endanger your health by running about too much, you are going to hear from me.

Blessings to you both from

BAPU

From Gujarati : C. W. 7530. Courtesy : K. M. Munshi

1 The addressee, along with Rangaswamy Ayyangar, had prepared a draft scheme to revive the Swaraj Party as the constitutional wing of the Congress and had submitted it to Gandhiji.
I got both your letters. Do not worry about your having opened Manilal’s letter. You are free to open any letter. How can I possibly keep anything secret from you all. You fear your own shadow, fancying a whole lot of misfortunes. Both of you have resolved to stay on there and have the necessary experience. You should therefore stick to the place now. Go on cheerfully doing what you can and be happy. If you do that, you will certainly get over your diffidence.

I may say I have now begun to understand why you suffer. Without knowing it, you are trying to appear better than you are, wish to do so, but you should check such a wish. One should not feel miserable at what one is. One should try to improve oneself but should not worry if one fails. That is the essence of the Bhagavad Gita’s teaching and therein lies true. Humility you have in ample measure but you feel sore in your mind fancying that you lack something. To do so is the very opposite of humility. Humility always makes one contented with what one is. Why should you, seeing someone’s palace, pull down your little hut? Why should you not think of your hut as much better than a palace? It is not true that those who live in palaces are happier than those who live in huts. Happiness consists in being contented.

Why need you feel sore over your inability to overcome your impure thoughts? Everyone in this humility world is full of blemishes. Out of countless persons who try to overcome their impure thoughts, only one succeeds in doing so. The vast majority should be satisfied with doing the best they can and leave the result to God.

You need not feel the least constraint in writing anything to me. You should make it a rule to write to me at least once a week. You will feel light in your heart if you do so. Never entertain such futile thoughts that you could not write to me because you were unworthy. Should you on your own think yourself unworthy, or feel so only if I thought you unworthy? Will you try to curb my thoughts? If God thinks me worthy, why should I think myself to be unworthy? God never regards anyone as unworthy. How, then, could parents with feet of clay think their offspring unworthy? Are they themselves likely to be so perfect that they can claim the right to judge their offspring and think them unworthy? No one is competent to judge who in this world is worthy and who is not. All of us being imperfect, we should bear with one another and do the best we can and purify ourselves. Parents have no right to sit in judgment over their offspring, nor has a husband the right to sit in judgment over his wife. This is implicit in ahimsa. Therefore overcome your sense of frustration and take heart.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Mrs. Sumitra Kulkarni Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

442. MESSAGE TO THE PEOPLE OF MYSORE

January 9, 1934

I carry with me very pleasant recollections of my brief stay in the State. I hope the people of Mysore will keep up their reputation for being enlightened by removing untouchability root and branch.

The Hindu, 10-1-1934

443. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, PALGHAT¹

January 10, 1934

Early in the morning, I entered Malabar—with due deference to our friends who call themselves sanatanists—the land of inequalities. As I was passing by familiar places the face of a solitary Nayadi, whom I had seen during the previous visit, rose before my eyes.² It was about ten or eleven in the morning when, in the midst of a discussion about untouchability, unapproachability and invisibility, all forms of which are found in no part of the world except in Malabar, a shrill voice was heard. Those who were talking to me said, ‘We can show you a live Nayadi.’ The public road was not for him. Unshod, he was walking across the fields with a noiseless tread. I went out with the friends and saw the Nayadi. I asked him to come and talk to me. Evidently he was frightened and he did not know when a blow would descend upon him. Trembling he talked to me. I told him that the public road was a much for him as for me. He said, ‘It cannot be so.

¹ The meeting, held at 8.15 in the morning, was attended by about 4,000 persons. Addresses of welcome were presented to Gandhiji by the Municipality and the Taluk Board.
² Vide, “Speech at Public Meeting, Palghat, 15-10-1927
may not walk on the public road’. I close that scene and ask the sanatanists or anybody else to show me the authority in defence of this inhuman conduct. You will find me smiling with you, laughing with you, and cracking jokes with you, but you may also know that behind all those jokes and smiles and laughs, the face of the Nayadi and that scene will keep haunting me throughout my tour in Malabar.

As I was coming here, I was greeted by black flag demonstrators mixed with national flag demonstrators. I tell you that I appreciated the black flag demonstrators more than the national flag demonstrators because I could see untruth in its nakedness behind the black flag. What if those who had black flags had smeared themselves as Brahmins do? He is no Brahmin merely because he carries a black flag or red flag and has marks on his forehead. Brahminhood is not known by external marks. The scriptures I swear by and in whose defence I would love to die tell me that he alone is a Brahmin who knows Brahman. Brahminhood is the essence of humanity, self-effacement, pity. All those virtues which our ancestors have taught us to prize have to incarnate themselves in a Brahmin. He is a Brahmin who is a living treasure of scriptures, but not he who makes a demonstration of untruth by carrying a black flag.

I have come to Malabar to speak out of the very depths of my soul. There are many things in Malabar over which, as you know, I have gone into raptures. You have scenery which is second to none in the world. Man, if he behaves himself, can live an easy life in Malabar. Woman in Malabar is the freest in India. All the women I have seen in Malabar have a majesty which has always commanded my respect. As you know, I had the pleasure of meeting the ex-Maharani of Travancore. Her simplicity commanded my admiration and at first sight I fell in love with her. But there is nothing to be proud of in the Malabar untouchability. It is the vilest thing on earth. I want you to wipe out this shame of untouchability from Malabar; and if you can do it, the whole of India naturally will follow; and you can do it if you will. I have entered Malabar in high hopes. It is for you to fulfil it or frustrate it. Only write down this prophecy in your hearts that, if untouchability as we practise it today lives, Hinduism perishes. I ask you to believe in what I am saying and to save Hinduism from impending doom. You have the opportunity of making your choice. Make it now or never.

Harijan, 19-1-1934
444. SPEECH AT WOMEN’S MEETING, PALGHAT

January 10, 1934

Do you know why I have come here? I have come here to ask you to do penance. I have come here to ask you to forget that there can be a single human being who can be called ‘untouchable’. You, the women of Malabar, are freer than any women in any other part of India. And if you choose to, you can save Hinduism from peril. Even if millions of people came and said that untouchability was a divine institution, I will repeat it is an institution of the devil. I have just now come from a little settlement where I saw Nayadi brethren and some sisters. It is your shame and my shame that they have got to live on a little rice thrown at them from a distance. I have nothing more to say to you. And if you want to commence by doing penance, then you will commence by discarding your ornaments and silver to contribute funds to help these helpless human beings.

The Hindu, 12-1-1934

445. SPEECH AT MEETING OF NAYADIS, KUZHALMANNAM

January 10, 1934

Well, I have received this address, which I suppose you have not read. Therefore whatever is written in the address will have very little value and this I regard as a breach of truth. As a matter of fact, if you would have read this address to me in Malayalam, then I might have known that you represented your own feelings and it would have some educative value. Also, your lot was not unknown to me. I have just now come to Malabar, as I am touring in other parts of India for one purpose only, namely, to abolish distinction between Nayadis and non-Nayadis. There is no sin as great as unapproachability or untouchability. So long as Harijans are crushed by that devil called untouchability, we have to work to crush that devil. I want that untouchability must be wiped out of Hinduism, or Hinduism would perish. I would like you to take part in the movement for purification in the best manner possible, taking advantage of every other facility that might be offered, in the way of education, to your children and yourself. If you are given to the habit of drinking, you must give it up; if you do not observe the simple laws of hygiene you must observe them. You must also observe sanitation and must be clean both externally and internally.

1 The meeting, held at Gowder Picture Palace, was attended by about 1,000 women.

The Hindu, 11-1-1934

446. SPEECH AT WOMEN’S MEETING, GURUVAYUR

January 10, 1934

FRIENDS,

I thank you for the address presented to me and the purse. This is the first place in Malabar where an address has been presented by women. By that if you mean that you represent the women of the taluk, then it means that men have no addresses to present to me. It may be that you are not touched by the spirit of self-purification. I see that the women of Malabar have not summoned sufficient strength to present an address both on behalf of men and women. The women must lead the battle against untouchability. In point of education, Malabar women are much more advanced than their sisters in other presidencies. I want you to turn this to the best possible advantage. When I put to auction articles presented to me I hope that women would put to shame men by taking them for higher prices. I can point out that you can commence this today by offering one bangle, necklace, etc. But you are smiling or laughing. I take it seriously. Women in less advanced parts of India like Madras and Andhra commenced to bid by offering two or three bangles. I shall be presently putting the women’s spirit to rest as soon as I finish a few remarks. I want to tell the sisters who have gathered here that after I entered into Malabar this morning I have been considering what special message I can deliver, because Malabar shows this disease of untouchability in a most aggravated form.

I feel that if the women of Malabar determine to work for this cause with redoubled energy, this devil can be wiped out. In others parts of the world, women won their rights by making sacrifices and suffering. But for Malabar women it should be a double speciality, and that for the simple reason that the women of Malabar occupy in India a most unique position. Therefore, if the women of Malabar led a battle against the devil of untouchability, it would be wiped out soon. It is only in Malabar, I discovered on entering, that they are dressed in spotless white garments. It is only of late that the fashion has grown among women of wearing variegated colour garments. Yet, I have noticed that colours are not so much loved in these parts as one would find in other parts of India. I do not know the secret of your domestic life. But I have flattered myself with the belief that this white garment of women of Malabar represents their internal purity. I hope that my belief would be well-placed if untouchability is removed root and branch in Malabar. I suppose, in point of education, the women of Malabar will carry the palm. What I want the women of Malabar to do is to save Hinduism from impending danger. I would like you to throw over board your laziness and indifference whatever it may be. I would like you to keep watch very vigilantly as you would do over babies. You will treat your babies with affection. It is not so with your religion. The more vigilant you are, the more scientifically precise you would be. Before you, the women of Malabar, lies a mission. Will you try to abolish the distinction between high and low? Believe me, those whom we are considering as lower than ourselves are not lower in the estimation of God. The prevalence of untouchability is due to insolence which leads to devilish interpretation of religious books. I have never been in the habit of using exaggerated language and if I may seem to be using strong language, I feel that this conviction of mine is a very fundamental one. What I have stated in addressing women applies to men also. You are not free from disbelief. Religion requires more men and women to guard it. To put it briefly, the present movement stands for self-purification.

The Hindu, 12-1-1934

447. LETTER TO YVONNE PRIVAT

AS AT WARDHA, C.P.

January 11, 1934

MY DEAR BHAKTI,

It is just 3.20 a.m. and I have finished reading your letter undated. Women will not think of dates! They work for eternity and therefore they disregard human divisions of time!

Your accusation is, from your point of view, justified. We have been rushing at such a speed that it has become impossible to keep pace with the correspondence. Your letter (previous) is lying with me somewhere but I had no time. Today for very shame I take your letter first in order that it may not go into a bottomless file. Though neither Mira nor I have written to you for some time, you are ever before the mind’s eye. Your inseparableness, your ever genial faces and your readiness for sacrifice—these and many such things are a perpetual reminder to me of the times we had together.

I know you are doing good work there. I did read about the church people’s revolt against Hitler.

I expect to hear more about the result of Ceresole’s\(^1\) visit to Germany. Do please give my love to him.

I am surprised to learn that you are not getting Harijan regularly. I am writing to the Editor at once.

I hope both of you are prospering in every sense of the term.

I say nothing about me, as you will learn all about me from Harijan.

With our love to both of you.

BAPU

[PS.]

Devdas has just come out of prison. Ba, Pyarelal and Mahadev are still in jail.

BAPU

From a photostat : G. N. 2337

448 SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, GURUVAYUR\(^2\)

January 11, 1934

FRIENDS,

I would like you all to give me perfect silence.\(^3\)

We have here a forcible illustration of the age-old truth that ‘Man proposes but God disposes’. I had hoped to be able to speak to you on subjects of the greatest importance to you, to me and to the whole of the Hindu world. Instead of being able to do that, I have been obliged to devote precious forty minutes to a scene that I witnessed this morning.\(^4\) I found two fellow countrymen lying here, stretched on the platform, one of them bleeding through the mouth and both of them apparently senseless. The first thing, therefore, that

\(^1\) Pierre Ceresole, a Swiss conscientious objector to war, who founded the International Service.

\(^2\) The meeting was attended by about 2,000 people.

\(^3\) This sentence has been taken from the Hindu report.

\(^4\) Just before the meeting started there had been a scuffle between the volunteers and two sanatanists, Radheswara Sastri and Kalpanathji, resulting in serious injuries to both.
fell to me to do was to give the best attention that was possible for me to these fellow countrymen. And so they have been sent under the charge of Prof. Malkani to the dispensary here for medical attention. In so far as a lay nurse like me can judge, I do not think that their lives are in any way in danger. And let us all pray that they may soon be up and doing.

I understand from the two other friends who have come here on behalf of the All-India Varnashrama Swarajya Sangh that they had all come here on behalf on this Sangh. They had as perfect a right to attend this meeting as any single one of you. They had a perfect right to stage a hostile demonstration, if they intended to, on a peaceful footing. However repugnant it might appear to me that those who represent sanatan dharma should resort to such demonstration, I perfectly recognized their right to make such a demonstration yesterday at Palghat, and I had no hesitation in making public reference at the meeting there to their demonstration more than to the demonstration of those who had come to greet me out of affection for me and sympathy for the cause. And I gave then and there the reason for my saying that I appreciated this black flag demonstration more than the demonstration of affection. I must not repeat the reason here, but I must refer you to the public speech¹, if at all it finds publication in any of the local journals. Here I want only to say that it was a matter of deep grief to me to find that these two countrymen were hurt, no matter for what cause, no matter by whom. If any single volunteer or any single person connected with the organization of this meeting had any hand in assaulting these friends, I have no hesitation in saying that he has disgraced the cause and has hurt Hinduism, which he thought he was serving.

I have said repeatedly that this cause of Hinduism can only be served by men and women who are above suspicion and who have a character to keep and to lose. In a movement of self-purification there is no room for a hasty word, for a hasty action, for abuse, certainly not for bodily harm. And if there are any persons here present who were instrumental in causing hurt to these countrymen of ours, whose lives should be as dear to you and to me as our own blood relations’, then I invite them to purge themselves of that guilt by making a public declaration of their having done this injury and taking the pledge never to repeat such a dishonourable act.

¹ Vide “Speech at Public Meeting, Palghat”
Keenly and deeply as I feel the taint of untouchability and deeply as I feel convinced that, if this untouchability is not removed root and branch from Hinduism, Hinduism is bound to perish, I would not have untouchability removed by force or show of force or compulsion of any kind whatsoever. Removal of untouchability is not a matter of law or of compulsion. Removal of untouchability is a matter of change of heart, perfect purification on the part of millions of Hindus. And that can only be brought about by the sacrifice of thousands of workers themselves, and not by causing injury to other people. Hence has every scripture that I have read pronounced from the house-tops that religion can only be defended by tapascharya. I will, therefore, beseech every one of you, who crowd round me wherever I go, to remember that this movement is a movement of personal, individual self-purification and self-conviction. And if you cannot approach this question from that point of view, I would far rather that I was deserted by you and that all the meetings were deserted by you. And if any man or woman is eager to come and listen to me or to give me an ounce of milk, he or she should do so, provided he or she has got that complete identification with the cause and a perfect spirit of self-purification.

Having said this and having made this declaration of my faith under the shadow of the great temple of Guruvayur, I would like to make this appeal from the bottom of my heart to those who are organizing the activities of the Varnashrama Swarajya Sangh, and kindred bodies also, to understand that they will not defend what they call sanatan dharma by staging demonstrations of the character that they have been doing. They sent a body of men throughout the tour in C. P. who wanted to fall prostrate before the car and impede my progress at every stage. There were often clashes between volunteers who were looking after me and this body of six or seven young men. Fortunately, no serious or untoward event happened, though scratches certainly were inflicted on either side even during the C. P. tour, I quickly made friends with those people who were staging those obstructive demonstrations and told them as earnestly as I could that that was not the way to protect Hinduism. Some of them were youngsters who did not even know what they were doing. With the exception of one, I doubt if any of them had any idea of the elements of Hinduism. And I had hoped here also that, if there were such men

1 Vide “Discussion with Swami Lalnath” who wanted to stage demonstrations, I should come in touch with them, discuss with them, understand them and know who they were.
But I was sorry that hardly had I put my foot in Malabar when I was faced with the scene that I witnessed here. It would have been better if I had been able to make their acquaintance before and ascertained what they wanted to do. But they chose to take a different course. I still invite them to meet me and tell me what they would exactly want me to do; and, short of stopping this tour, I would make every facility for them, and every convenience for them to express their thoughts or even to make whatever peaceful demonstrations that they might want to stage. But what I am most anxious to avoid is goondaism in every shape and form on the part of either party. I give the same credit to those who call themselves sanatanists for honesty of purpose that I would claim for myself, but both must have an equal right to give expression to their views and mould public opinion. After all, sanatan dharma is not the prerogative of one set of people. I claim myself to be a representative of sanatan dhama in every sense of the term that they claim. I base my vehement oppo-sition to untouchability upon the same Shastras by which they swear, and I should stand by my interpretation of the Shastras even though I were the solitary one amongst the millions of Hindus; because the same Shastras tell me that I may not resist the inner call of my fundamental being. Thank God, however, that I do not stand alone in the interpretation that I have been placing before you. On the contrary, there are learned shastris who have just as much right to interpret the Shastras as those who call themselves the exponents of sanatan dharma. And they give precisely the same interpretation that I have placed before tens of thousands of men and women. And it is my settled conviction, based upon an unbroken experience extending over a period of nearly fifty years, that untouchability as we practise it today has absolutely no warrant whatsoever in the Hindu Shastras. I claim that Harijans have precisely the same common rights of worship, of use of public institutions and in all other walks of life that the tallest of Hindus enjoy in common with the rest of Hindu mankind. And, therefore, I have not the shadow of a doubt that caste Hindu will not have performed their elementary duties by Harijans until they have thrown open the gates of Guruvayur and such ancient temples to the Harijans, precisely on the same terms on which they are open to other Hindus.

But I have infinite patience; and, as you know, although Kelappan’s fast had progressed for many days, although many of these reformers were actually in the temple threatening to declare a sympathetic fast with Kelappan and although the reformers thought that the prize was almost within their grasp, I sent a peremptory telegram1 from my own fasting bed, calling upon Kelappan to suspend the fast and to withdraw the men who were inside the Guruvayur temple. And I did so because I felt that the fast was premature and I smelt coercion in it. I mention this in order to show that I will not be guilty of being party to the opening of a single temple under coercion. But I do want temples to be opened where public opinion is absolutely and clearly ripe for the opening of those temples. If there is any legal obstruction in the process, I want that legal obstruction to be removed. That is the meaning, and the only meaning, of the Temple-entry Bill, and no other. This Bill simply removes the powerlessness that many trustees today feel about opening the temples under their charge because of the legal obstruction. There is not the slightest trace of compulsion or coercion about this Temple-entry Bill or the kindred Bill called the Anti-untouchability Bill.

But I heard a whisper this morning that behind this temple-entry agitation there is a nefarious design, if not on my part, on the part of my co-workers, that we should take possession of these temples and own them. I have no hesitation whatsoever in categorically denying this statement. I have certainly no such design whatsoever, and I do not know of a single co-worker who has any such design. And if there is any such co-worker who has such a design, he has no place whatsoever on this platform. The possession will remain undoubtedly in the hands of those who are today lawfully in possession.

A kindred question that was asked was whether behind this there was also a design to undermine Brahminism. I can only tell you that I cannot be guilty of any such design; for, to me to undermine Brahminism is to undermine Hinduism. This does not mean endorsement of the claim that the Brahmins, so called, may put forth today. No man can be accepted as a Brahmin by society merely by reason of his birth. The Shastras themselves say that a born Brahmin who does not act according to the requirements of Brahminism will forfeit his right to be called a Brahmin by the people in general. There are Brahmins themselves today in this very movement who say that they cannot be called Brahmins unless they carry out the precepts of the Shastras referring to them. I believe that the Brahmin is the cornerstone of Hinduism, as of every other religion. But there you must understand the meaning of the word Brahmin. The Brahmin is the person who has realized Brahman. If he has not that realization in every act of his, he shows that he is ever after it and nothing else. Such a Brahmin demands my ten thousand prostrations every morning, but not the Brahmin who is dictated by self, who is multiplying himself day after day and thinks mostly of himself, rarely of others, nor even the Brahmin who smears himself with ashes from top to toe and can punctiliously and correctly recite the Vedas. It may be necessary for him to smear himself with ashes. It is necessary for him to translate the Vedas in his own life. It is necessary for him to exhibit Brahman in every act of his life. It is necessary for him to be pure and to impart that purity to all his surroundings. It is necessary for him to be ever ready to die so that others may live. Now you understand what regard I have for the true Brahmin and Brahminism.

1 Vide, ”Speech at Public Meeting, Coimbatore”, 16-10-1927

Having heard this probably the writer of a printed letter which was placed in my hands this morning does not want replies to the several questions which he has put me and to which he has expected replies this morning. But I can say this much to him that, if he wants a detailed reply to everyone of the questions that he has raised here, he can get it by turning to the file of Harijan. He will there find also that, in putting the interpretations that he has put in his letter on several things, he has undoubtedly misread the message of the Gita and the message of Hinduism.

Lastly he has asked for an interview with me. I am sorry that he cannot have it at Guruvayur, but he can have it at Calicut on the 16th instant at ten o’clock in the morning. I had an invitation for a discussion yesterday at Palghat with some learned pundits. I was sorry to have to disappoint them so far as Palghat was concerned, because, when I received their invitation, I was making preparations for leaving Palghat. But I have given them ten o’clock in the morning at Calicut on the 16th instant, and I would be glad to see this friend and any other friends who may wish to converse with me on every one of the points that I have discussed here and any other points that may arise in the course of that discussion. Though the 16th instant is supposed to be an off day, it is not a day of recreation for me. Therefore I was obliged to restrict the interview to half an hour in my letter to the pundits. But I propose now to devote one hour for that discussion, so that the pundits may have the whole half hour to themselves, if they chose to take it.¹ I have absolutely nothing to withhold from any single person, nor have I the slightest desire to hide my ignorance. I have already set forth my limits. I do not profess to be a learned man in any sense of the term. I profess to be a humble seeker, ever ready and ever anxious to follow literally every precept of Hindu religion as I know it. I, therefore, freely confess that, if the pundits or anybody else invited me to to a recital of the Vedas or an exposition of the Vedas and so on, they would floor me entirely. But they will not easily dislodge me from the position that I occupy. If a knowledge of God or if a knowledge of the fundamental precepts of Hinduism had depended upon a meticulous knowledge of all the Vedas and a forest of books, then hardly any person would be able to say, ‘I know something of God.’. But these scriptures say that to know God is possible for every single human being on earth if he purifies his heart.

1 The Hindu report here has; “who has multiplied insults”.

VOL. 62 : 8 OCTOBER, 1933 - 17 JANUARY, 1934 417

I must thank you sincerely for the silence with which you have listened to me. Now I want you to join me in prayer to God Almighty that He may direct our steps in the right direction and that He may give us the strength that is necessary to exorcize this devil of untouchability from our hearts.

Lastly, please remember that those who believe that untouchability is an evil and who believe also that it can be exorcized only by self-purification should never hurt a single hair of those who are opposing this movement. On the contrary, you and I have to see to it that we win them over by our own correct conduct and by gentle persuasion. I, therefore, ask you to treat those two friends, who are now in the dispensary, and those who might be representing the Varnashrama Swarajya Sangh, with respect and affection and as your guests. Irrespective of what they may do, let them experience the warmth of your hospitality and affection and not your bitter reproach.

_Harijan_, 26-1-1934, and _The Hindu_, 12-1-1934

¹ The pundits did not accept the invitation. Instead they wrote to Gandhiji that they would see him if he was prepared to discuss the Shastra with them not for an hour but for days together and that too in Sanskrit.
449. SPEECH AT PATTAMBII

January 11, 1934

It has given me some surprise that in Malabar, the land of eternal green, you have to use artificial paper flowers. I thought that in Malabar, where Nature has been so beneficent to you, you could avoid all artificiality. But I suppose that in order to appreciate the beauty of this land you require the help of a person who comes from a treeless desert as I do. Just as you have gone in for artificiality in the matter of flowers, you go in for artificiality in the matter of untouchability, and then you think that that artificial product comes from Divinity itself. I have come to warn you against the belief that untouchability, unapproachability or invisibility can have any divine sanction. In my opinion it is one of the greatest sins that we, Hindus, have been committing against man and God. You degrade human beings, as we have been doing in this part of the world, and then to say that they are what they are because of their past deeds is a complete caricature of the law of karma. I claim to know somewhat, from first-hand evidence, of the working of the law of karma, because practically a period of fifty years I have devoted to find out what this law of karma could be. And this much I do know that to apply it to everybody else but ourselves is to distort it altogether; and if I had more time than I have at my disposal, I could show to the satisfaction of every one of you that you can never apply the law of karma as you apply it to the Nayadis and others. If we were to apply the law of karma as I have suggested, that is to say, towards ourselves, you would find the land here and elsewhere transformed. I have, therefore, come to beseech every one of you to exorcize this ghost of untouchability. If you do not, you may be sure that that ghost will eat us up.

Harijan, 19-1-1934

450. NOTES

FRIENDLY DISCUSSION ALWAYS WELCOME

During my brief stay in Madras I saw in the papers that a public appeal signed by certain gentlemen was made to me. In it, I was asked to hold a public discussion about untouchability. Later on I received a printed copy of that appeal, with the following opening words typed at the top:

1 Extracted from Chandrashankar Shukla’s “Weekly Letter”
As a man posing to know more, please come out and discuss. Don’t say, “No time, no time”. It is a shame to say so when your very existence is questioned. World will laugh at you and will mock at you.

Then follows this astonishing paragraph:

Abandoning all his political activities which had really brought him into the limelight of Indian politics, destroying—for all practical purposes—the great Indian National Congress which had made him its virtual dictator and blindly entrusted its destiny into his hands and agonizing not merely the orthodox sanatanadharmis but also all lovers of Indian nationalism in the land, Mr. Gandhi has, of late, begun a whirlwind propaganda against untouchability and in favour of temple-entry legislation, whereon he has been putting forth his ipse dixits and obiter dicta before the public, not as his own individual views or in the name of Rousseau, Tolstoy, Lenin, etc., but under the banner of sanatan dharma, sociology, abstract justice and so on!

I had some such appeal again whilst I was travelling in Nellore District. The telegram inviting me to a discussion says:

It appears to us that you have not understood the Hindu dharma and have been leading the Hindus astray from the path of true moral and religious life.

I was not able to reply to these invitations there and then: the last invitation was received at Venkatagiri\(^1\) at 10 o’clock at night. The next day I was to reach Tirupati, near which I was to go to the proposed discussion. I had to be content with sending a verbal message to my host at Tirupati. As to the first invitation, I had sent the message that I was ready to hold a friendly discussion with anybody and to be convinced of my error, if it could be brought home to me. I had to say that my time was limited and that the discussion would only take place, at my decision, wherever it might be for the time being. My limitations I had set forth in these columns times without number: I am no Sanskrit scholar, but I know sufficient to detect errors in translations that may be given to me. I claim to have read the Shastras to my satisfaction, and I claim to have endeavoured from my youth upwards to put into practice the fundamental precepts of the Shastras. Thus I have no hesitation in putting before the public, with the utmost confidence, the conclusions I have reached regarding certain fundamentals of Hinduism. One of the conclusions I have reached is that there is no warrant in the Shastras for untouchability as it is practised today. My conclusion is supported by shastris no less learned than those who challenge my conclusion, and the former claim to be just as good sanatanists as those who hold the opposite view, but I always believe in regarding opponents with respect and, therefore, listening to what they might have to say. I have held discussions with them more than once, and these have resulted in strengthening my convictions. Therefore, whilst I feel that my opinion will not be shaken by any such discussions, I am quite willing to find time for those who could be good enough to suit themselves to my daily engagements. I dare not disturb the programme that has been settled in advance for several months to come. I have already had discussions with sanatanists during the tour at several places. If those who write to me directly or indirectly through the Press will observe the laws of common courtesy and if they have the desire to find a basis for common work, I have no doubt that there are many points of agreement, even on the question of temple-entry and the proposed legislation. Much mis-understanding can be removed by mutual and friendly discussion. I may mention for the information of the general reader that, as against sanatanists who are enraged against me and fling all sorts of abuses at me, I frequently meet those who, having understood the central point of my message, have become supporters. I have no weapon with me except the one of an appeal to the reason and heart of the people. The reform that I am advocating can only come through a change of heart on the part of millions of Hindus. Therefore, it is in the interest of my mission that I lose not a single opportunity of meeting my opponent, whenever it is possible for me to do so.

\(^1\) On December 30, 1933

Harijan, 12-1-1934

451. LETTER TO GOVINDBHAI R. PATEL

January 12, 1934

BHAI GOVINDBHAI,

I have written to you saying that I had written a long letter to Shri Aurobindo. I have received no reply till today.

I have written to you in reply to your English letter, too, and said that you may ask me any questions you wish to when we meet.¹

MOHANDAS

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 10744. Courtesy: Govindbhai R. Patel

452. LETTER TO MANILAL AND SUSHILA GANDHI

January 13, 1934

CHI. MANILAL AND SUSHILA,

I got the letters from both of you. I hope you get my letters regularly. Of late I have not missed a single mail. With my last letter I had enclosed a copy of Ba’s letter.

Sushila has given sufficiently detailed news about Shanti. If he does not waste money in fanciful ventures, I am satisfied.

Sushila wishes to know who are in my party. I think I have already written about that. Chandrashankar, Mirabehn, Om, Kisanbehn (Premabehn’s friend), Professor Malkani (Thakkar Bapa’s representative), two accountants—Vishwanath and Damodar—one store-keeper Sharma and one typist—these form the party.

Personally I like Sita being talkative and mischievous. It is for the parents to put these qualities to good use. They can in this way impart a good deal of education. Naughtiness and talkativeness are a kind of energy, like steam. The energy of steam is conserved and used to drive big trains and steamboats. A child’s energy can be used in a similar manner. If we understand it and use it wisely, it can produce excellent results. Instead of making Sita write the letters of the alphabet, you should teach her just now to draw geometrical figures. After that you may teach her to draw pictures of objects and last of all to write the letters. But before doing that you should teach her to recognize the letters, and to understand the meaning of words. You can give her some knowledge daily through stories. You can easily teach her some-thing about history, geography, science and tell her stories from the Ramayana and the Mahabharata. She can learn all these things in play. This will not tire you; on the contrary you will enjoy teaching her in this manner. Through this you yourself will learn something daily and Sita will get the best possible education. She can learn English, Gujarati and also Hindi at the same time. What help do you give to Manilal?

¹ According to the addressee, he communicated the contents of this letter to Mother and inquired if it was true that Gandhiji had “asked for at least a line in Shri Aurobindo’s hand; and Shri Aurobindo has written a full letter in his own hand—which he does not usually do”. In reply, Shri Aurobindo wrote in pencil on the note: “Yes, I wrote to him a short letter explaining the nature of my retirement and regretting that I could not break my rule as long as the reason for it existed. It was addressed to Bangalore, I believe, and ought to have reached him, unless it has been pocketed by the C.I.D. I suppose even if he had left Banaglore it would have been forwarded to him. You can write and inform him of the fact.”

Did either of you see West? Please meet him and give me some news of him. I shall be satisfied if he is not unhappy. You should show yourself always ready to help.

Ba seems to be all right. This time she does not appear to enjoy as much freedom as before.

I did not understand Pragji’s letter to you. I do not remember in what context we had the talk and what I had said. In any case, what I may have said does not apply to you two. The facts are not the same in all cases. We may have discussed what his duty was in India. It is of course true in a sense that, if the struggle here succeeds, the solution of the problem in that country will soon follow. But that certainly does not mean that anybody should leave that country and come away to India. The rule that ‘better is death in the discharge of one’s duty’ is perfectly true in this case. You two, therefore, should go on doing the work which is your dharma at present. It will be enough if you do not depart from the path of dharma in doing that work.

Devdas has been released. He will spend his time in Delhi and other places for the present. He will come and see me. He has kept good health. He paid a visit to Kanti. The latter has displayed boundless courage. He doesn’t leave jail at all. Let us see how long he keeps it up.

Kishorelal can be said to be a little better. The fever has not yet wholly left him.

Write to Devdas and Lakshmi. And continue to write to Ramdas and Nimu regularly. I hope you are getting Harijan.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

I wrote this letter a little after 3 a. m. before prayer time in a town called Tellicherry.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 4814

1 Bhagavad Gita, III. 35
453. LETTER TO DAHYABhai PATEL

January 13, 1934

CHI. DAHYABhai,

I have your letter. I got three letters almost simultaneously which may be regarded as an instance of telepathy.

Mahadev is being tested severely. Possibly he might suffer a little loss of health, though no other hardship. I have sent a detailed message in reply to the letter to Jivanji. However, the next time you have a chance write as follows:

"Whilst I need not receive Mahadev’s letters, he must not think that I cannot have time to read them. The Gita portion was technical and I felt that there was no immediate need for me to give my opinion. And the fact is that I have so little regard for my own technical meaning of the verses. Where the meaning does not fit in with my interpretation as a whole, I should naturally have to examine it but speaking in general terms one meaning would be to me as good as any other and therefore I should readily accept Mahadev’s considered interpretation in preference to my own which after all must have been an adoption of some single author’s version. He should therefore prosecute his researches and his work of translation without waiting for my opinion. When it is all completed of course I shall have ample time, God willing, to go through it.

I take it that Mahadev has read B. Shaw’s Adventures of the Black Girl in Her Search for God. I am sending him today, Adventures of the White Girl in Her Search for God by Cff. Maxwell. If he gets it safely, he will acknowledge it in his next letter.

When I reach Belgaum I shall try to see Mani and Mahadev.

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-4 : Manibehn Patelne, pp. 158-9

---

1 The two paragraphs that follow are in English.
FRIENDS,

I am very much obliged to you for the addresses and the purse you have presented to me. You know the nature of the mission at the present moment taking me from one end of India to the other. In pursuance of that mission early this morning I have come here to ask you to rid yourselves of the devil of untouchability from your hearts. I see in all your addresses there is one note running, namely, that this monster of untouchability might be laid low. Let us not make the mistake of supposing that this is a work that has got to be done by somebody else. It is essentially a work that has got to be done by everybody—by himself or herself—for it is a matter essentially of a change of heart on the part of the caste Hindus or savarna Hindus as they are called. They have to cease to think that they are caste Hindus or that some of them are savarnas and others avarnas. This distinction of high and low has destroyed society altogether and as we want to save ourselves from impending destruction, we must cease to think that anybody on earth is lower than ourselves. The poison of untouchability has spread so far and so wide that even amongst caste and caste there is a grave degree of untouchability. In this distinction of high and low, we have gone further, and the poison has enveloped all the communities. There is untouchability not merely amongst Hindus and Hindus, savarnas and avarnas, savarnas and savarnas, but there is untouchability also between Hindus, Muslims, Parsis, and Christians. I am convinced that, whilst there may be other reasons for inter-communal quarrels, I have no doubt whatsoever that untouchability is the main and deciding reason for the majority of these quarrels. Therefore, if we will exorcize this principal manifestation of the devil of untouchability, I have not even a shadow of doubt that we will be able to right the wrong all along the line. One of your addresses mentions that most of the temples are not open to Harijans and that only one temple, opened by the followers of Shri Narayana Guru, is open to Harijans. I congratulate the trustees of the temple on their liberality and I hope that their example will be followed by other trustees; but it will largely depend upon the temple-going public to bring about that change. If the temple goers are sincerely penitent

1 The meeting, which was attended by more than 6,000 people, was held at the Tellicherry maidan at 7.30 a. m.
and feel that hitherto they have done serious wrongs to Harijans by prohibiting them from entering the temples, I have no doubt that their expression of opinion cannot be challenged and the temples will be soon opened. I am therefore hoping that you will organize public opinion so that the temples may soon be opened to Harijans precisely on the same terms as they are open to other Hindus. I am surprised to discover that there was in some place near here bad blood between untouchables and untouchables, that is between Pulayas and Thiyyas. I do hope that the Harijans all over will set their house in order and rid themselves of untouchability within untouchability. Now you have given me this purse which I only consider as a token of your determination to deal with this evil in a final manner.

The Hindu, 15-1-1934

455. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, MAHE

January 13, 1934

FRIENDS,

I have a peculiar pleasure in being in your midst since you are in a part of French India. I had the pleasure of visiting Chandanagore in Bengal more than once. But this is my first visit to French India in this part of the country. For me whether it is French India or British India it is one and the same country. The same blood flows through my veins that goes through yours, the same soil, the same atmosphere, the same manners and customs and many things too numerous to mention are common to all of us. But for the difference in the uniform of your police and the French language I read here and there I would notice no difference whatsoever. Therefore it is a matter of no surprise to me that you have, whilst I am passing through Malabar, invited me and presented me with a purse for the Harijan cause. Indeed I would have been surprised, and painfully surprised, if I had found that, whilst I was actually passing through this road, you took no notice whatsoever of the self-styled representative of the Harijans. Therefore I am glad to be able to be present in your midst even though it is only for a few minutes. I was glad to discover that an important temple in this place was thrown open to Harijans precisely on the same terms as to other Hindus. I congratulate the trustees on having performed this very simple religious duty. Now, I hope you know what I am after in pursuing this mission. I would like you to understand that mere opening of temples, mere opening of schools for Harijans does not constitute the whole of my mission. It means that savarna Hindus have got to purify their hearts and, make due reparations to the Harijans whom they have hitherto suppressed. It means that we should abolish all distinctions of high and low and realize that we are children of one country and as such, should realize that, being children of one country, there can be no distinction of high and low. May God help us to realize this very simple idea. I am glad of this Hindi address and I would like every one of you here to appreciate this message of Hindi.

---

1 At the meeting Gandhiji was presented with addresses on behalf of the public and students of Hindi.

The Hindu, 16-1-1934

456. SPEECH AT OPENING OF DISPENSARY, PAKKANARPURAM

January 13, 1934

I have been invited to open the dispensary that you see in front of you in the name of a young brave worker who sacrificed himself for the sake of his country and died some years ago in about 1921. His name is Balakrishna Menon. And this dispensary will be called after his name. In those days of non-co-operation at its height, he, in common with others, was confined in jail and it is in his memory that this dispensary is to be named. Medical relief has been given to hundreds of Harijans. Within the last four or five months over two thousand patients have been treated free of charge. Let us hope that this dispensary will grow day after day, that is to say, it would be an instrument of ever-increasing service to ailing humanity. I understand that a young medical practitioner has offered to give his services free of charge. Let us hope that such self-sacrificing young men will multiply in this land. We do need young medical men who have the requisite spirit of self-sacrifice and who will consent to live in villages. It is absolutely necessary that Harijans should receive medical aid. I know and I am grieved that there are medical practitioners in India who disgrace their profession by refusing to touch Harijans lest the touch might pollute them. Therefore, it fills me with joy whenever I find a medical practitioner who is entirely free from those superstitions and at the same time has the spirit of sacrifice to enable him to give his services free of charge. Whilst giving medical relief, providing for education and arranging for free water supply are necessary in the interests of Harijans, there is something still more necessary to be done by the savarna Hindus. We have to cease to be patrons. We have been oppressing the Harijans for centuries. We have to purify ourselves from this taint of untouchability immediately and take the Harijans to our bosom. We have to consider them as our blood-brothers and sisters. It is a sin to consider any single human being to be lower than ourselves. It is blasphemy to consider that God can have any partiality with regard to His children. I would consider this dispensary a success if it lends itself to eradicate the distinction of high and low to some extent.

The Hindu, 16-1-1934

457. SPEECH AT WOMEN’S MEETING, CALICUT

January 13, 1934

DEAR SISTERS,

I see that all of you are seized with a peculiar fear lest I might induce you and you might feel irresistibly tempted to part with all your ornaments. Some of you have already begun to give your trinkets. I propose to give you tonight a beautiful story of a girl called Kaumudi. I saw her for the first time this morning at Badagara and in response to an appeal I made to the ladies to give their jewellery, and, if they had the desire, all their jewellery, this little girl Kaumudi—I call her “little” comparatively—I suppose she was about 20 years, probably 21\(^1\)—and she came forward and began with her two beautiful bangles, the only bangles she had on her wrists.

I was more than satisfied but not she. Out she came with her very beautiful necklace. I thought she would stop at that. But she would not. Her hands involuntarily went to her ears and she suddenly thought there was something in her ears also, and was delighted to give her ear-rings. I was very deeply touched, but I suppressed my emotion at that time. I straightaway enquired whether she was an independent girl or whether she had obtained the consent of her father. And I immediately learnt that she had done this in the presence of her father because he was on the platform helping me to get my addresses and other trinkets. I then learnt that the father was also entirely with his girl in her giving everything that was on her person to the Harijan cause. All she wanted was an autograph for her two bangles. Of course I gave her more than my autograph. I wrote there in Hindi that her great sacrifice would be a truer ornament than her gold and jewel things. She went very delighted. And I had her definite promise that she was not going to ask her father to replace those articles of jewellery. She has enough and more articles to wear and jewellery also. Of course for a Malabar girl this is not an amazing performance. Because so far as my knowledge goes, Malabar girls are the simplest of all the girls in the world. Somehow or other they have left on my mind the impression that they have the least desire for jewellery. I may be wholly mistaken. Anyway that is the impression that they have left on my mind.

\(^1\) In fact she was 16 years old; vide Vol. LVII, “Kaumudi’s Renunciation”, 19-1-1934.

I must conclude this soul-stirring story by adding another story. Now nearly ten years ago or more there was a girl in Andhradesha who was married and when I made an appeal to the sisters there—it was an imposing meeting of women in a theatre—she was the first to give me her ornaments. Although Sri Annapurnamma’s jewels were comparatively simple, still her necklace or her chain as I might call it was a long heavy chain of pure gold. I must not describe other articles of her jewellery. Alas, she is no more. But let me inform you that she was true to her promise cent percent that she would not replace those rich articles of jewellery. She had very rich parents, who would gladly have given her all their jewellery to replace hers. But from that time up to the time of her death which took place now three years ago she never wore an article of jewellery. It is my certain conviction that Annapurnamma gained by giving and so has Kaumudi. I have lingered on those two very sacred illustrations and I want to tell you that in discarding your jewellery for a cause so sacred as the Harijan cause you will be doing nothing wonderful. [Women have done such things] when they have taken up the defence of a sacred cause like this. I have to ask you, to beseech you, to purify your hearts of the sin of untouchability, to treat Harijan boys and girls as if they are your own children, brothers and sisters. We have for long ages suppressed Harijans and today if we sacrifice our all for their sake we shall be only making some slight and tardy reparation for all the wrongs inflicted upon them in the name of religion. Therefore, whatever you give, whether it is a trinket or heavy piece of jewellery or

1 In April 1921; vide “Orissa and Andhra”
2 She died in 1927; vide “A Good Servant Gone” silver, I want you to give as merely a token of your determination to rid yourselves of this taint of untouchability, the idea that you are high and somebody else is low. May God give you wisdom to see this very simple truth and enforce it in your life. Now you can give the things, whether jewellery, or silver or paper, whatever you want to give.

The Hindu, 15-1-1934

458 SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, CALICUT

January 13, 1934

I am much obliged to you for these addresses that have been presented to me this evening and I thank you for the self-restraint you have imposed upon yourselves by not desiring to read these addresses to me. Only you have thereby appreciated the fact that I have been going from one place to another from day to day, now for over two months, and at the end of the day I am therefore fatigued. You, wise men that you are, have appreciated this act and absolved me from the duty of having to listen to these addresses. You having exercised this self-restraint, naturally it was up to me to read those addresses and be prepared. But I must say to you that I had no notion whatsoever that I was to have all these addresses nor have I been given copies of these addresses. Had I been given copies I would certainly have read them. However I have no doubt whatsoever that these addresses contain nothing more than what I have noticed in the numerous addresses that I have been receiving throughout these two months or more. Almost without exception they have expressed to me great joy, not only their sympathy with the cause that I am espousing for the time being but they have in these addresses signified their intention, nay their determination, of doing everything that these various bodies of gentlemen or ladies could possibly do in their own sphere to advance the Harijan’s cause.

It has given me a great deal of satisfaction and joy to discover that there is consensus of opinion on the part of the intelligentsia. I would have been painfully surprised if it had been otherwise. Not only has it been so with reference to the intelligentsia but as far as mere assent goes, I have found to my great delight the masses also are equally with this movement. I am not easily self-deluded. I have no doubt that I have, must have, my due share of self-delusion or else life perhaps would be a positive burden to most of us if not to all of us. But due allowance having been made for self-delusion I can say that all these scenes that I witness every day cannot possibly be a matter of masses or classes coming to me to signify their praise or their satisfaction for services that I might have performed in a previous life or in days gone by. This life has rushed and with me it has rushed with such rapidity that it is impossible for me to have a clear photography of the events that have happened and, that being the case, I should be intensely surprised and also disappointed that these classes and masses had signified not only their satisfaction and their sympathy by their presence at these meetings but also given me donations more or less and had done certain acts also as a consideration for those services. I would let that pass by. I am assuming that all your addresses contain a serious and solemn pledge that you are determined to do everything that is humanly possible for you to do to render the reparation that is overdue to the Harijans.

1 The meeting was held at the Town Hall. Addresses were presented to Gandhiji on behalf of the Municipal Council, Malabar Chamber of Commerce, Taluk Board, Harijan Yuvak Sangh and other bodies.

Malabar, if one were to draw the untouchability map of the whole of India, I suppose will easily wear the black crown and Malabar would be the blackest spot so far as untouchability is concerned. It is a matter of regret but it is no use ignoring the fact. I would turn this blackness to good account and I would invite you to gird up your loins and make such Heruclean effort that at the end of the struggle it may be possible to say of Malabar that Malabar had been in the vanguard of progress in this battle against the monster of untouchability. Let it be said of Malabar that Malabar counted no sacrifices too great for removing this evil of untouchability. And what could be a better and more sacred reminder for this meeting than the portrait of Mr. K. Madhavan Nair?

I had the pleasure of knowing him long ago. When I first visited Calicut I had the honour of being introduced to him but I must confess that I did not know him so intimately as I came to know him when he paid me a visit at Yeravda. I then came into very intimate touch with him, and when Mr. C. Rajagopalachariar was here and the Guruvayur referendum was going on, naturally I was corresponding with him as with other friends almost from day to day. Then Smt. Urmila Devi and my wife came into close contact with Mr. K. Madhavan Nair. My wife is a simple woman. She knows nothing, she does not know the English language, certainly she does not know Malayalam, but she was able to tell me in her very simple language that she was very much struck by the simplicity of his character. She merely strengthened the impression that Mr. Madhavan had left on my mind and that impression is still indelible. I have the most vivid recollection of my contact with him and what struck me most was his transparent humility. This is his faithful picture and I congratulate the artist on presenting the citizens of Calicut with this picture. I think there you can easily see humility written in his features. I don’t think that the artist has enhanced the transparency of his humility. I think the artist is incapable of doing that. To look at Mr. Madhavan Nair and look at the living eye would give you a better illustration of that humility. The whole of his behaviour is on the picture. Mr. Madhavan Nair is in front of me today as I saw him in Yeravda. He stands vividly before me and this is the one peculiar impression that he left on me.

I discovered also that he was a man of very few words. You do not find many people who are economical in the use of language or their words. In his contact with me Mr. Madhavan Nair showed this quality in a supreme degree. His letters were compact, nice, neat and the briefest possible. Whatever he had to say he expressed in a few words and he had finished. That was the man. If you were to recall the men who had died in body but are even now still living, you will discover that they are living not because of their intellectual gifts but because of virtues which you and I and every one of us can cultivate if we have the will and if we will make the necessary effort in order to cultivate them. Therefore I would say you will be doing wrong to the memory of the man whom I have described as I have known him, if you think that you have performed your duty by calling upon me to unveil his portrait and for having witnessed this ceremony and having heard a few words in praise of his memory; nay, you will be doing wrong. But you will be doing the right thing if you will treasure as a perpetual reminder to you that you also would like to be if not wholly at last some what like Mr. Madhavan Nair. At the end, to put a finishing touch, Mr. Madhavan Nair died in harness so far as the Harijan cause is concerned. He was a true co-worker in the Harijan cause which is a matter of self-purification, repentance and reparation. I give you my evidence that Mr. Madhavan Nair, when he took up this cause, had the spirit in him, for every act that he did in connection with the Harijan cause was an act of sacrifice, repentance and reparation. There was no meanness about anything that he did. May his memory ever remain in my heart and in your own hearts.

I thank you once more for having presented me with addresses. Since I think that this is not proper time for auctioning these addresses, I hope that tomorrow you will help me to realize some money from these addresses because I know that Calicut will not send me away with disappointment.\textsuperscript{1}

\textit{The Hindu}, 15-1-1934

459. \textsc{Speech at Malabar Christian College, Calicut}

January, 13, 1934

It was a great joy to me when I received the invitation to come to you to receive a purse for the Harijan cause and to speak a few words to you. You have naturally expressed your sympathy with the cause. But you boys ought not to be satisfied with the certificate that your Principal has given to the institution and therefore by implication to you also.\textsuperscript{2} You are called upon to do something much more vital, to regard untouchability not as an institution descended to us from Divinity but as an institution which has been devised by the devil himself for encompassing our undoing. We, all of us, no matter to what faith we may belong, are children of the same Creator. There is but one Creator. We do say that with our lips, but we deny that profession in every walk of life and in so many of our activities. That lie we ought to get rid of from our lives. And who can do this better than the students? You must therefore make the announcement fearlessly that if we are children of the same God, then we are all equal. Do not in your mind cross-examine and say, ‘How can we be equal?’ Some of you are very bright boys, and have received prizes and occupy front ranks in the classes, and how can those who are at the top of the class be on a par with those who are at the bottom of the class? This is a fine conundrum for you and me and you ought to solve it wisely and not unwisely. Very often we solve these puzzles as we solve puzzles in arithmetic and geometry. If you are able to solve \textsuperscript{1} Gandhiji then unveiled the portrait of K. Madhavan Nair. Later during the day Gandhiji visited the office of the \textit{Mathrubhumi}, a Malayalam daily, and addressing its staff described Mr. Madhavan Nair as the soul of the Trust due to whose ceaseless effort the paper occupied its unique place. It was not too much to say that it had occupied a unique place in Malabar. He appealed to the staff to follow in the steps of the late Mr. Madhavan Nair, who was whole-heartedly in favour of the Harijan movement, without mental reservations or anything of the kind. Pure and simple, it was a religious movement.

\textsuperscript{2} The principal of the college had observed that Harijan boys in the institution were treated on a par with others.
these wisely, then I will give you illustrations of earthly parents. Those of you who have brothers will realize that all have not the same degree of intelligence and of virtues. You are not certainly of the same age. You do not enjoy the same vigorous constitution. And yet do you find your parents distinguishing between you and those who are brighter and more diligent? On the contrary perhaps your parents will give more to those who are helpless and are in need of help than to those who are brighter and well able to take care of themselves. Do you suppose then that the Divine Father, the Father of all fathers that the world has ever seen, will treat some from their very birth to be untouchables and therefore the lowest and others to be the highest at the top of ladder? I suppose this is a self-proved proposition of untouchability as you are practising it today. The purse will be turned to good account if it is given as an earnest of your determination to change your hearts and to regard no person as untouchable on the face of the earth. Religion teaches us to consider ourselves as the lowest and everybody else as the highest. Do all of you behave like that? Untouchability has undoubtedly to go. It is eating into the very vitals of our being and it crushes the very soul. If you are able to understand my words then you will so change your hearts and transform them that you will not allow untouchability in any shape or form to find a residence in your hearts. You will not allow untouchability towards boys belonging to other religions. You will go to Harijan quarters, instead of wasting your time, you will go there, serve the Harijan boys, and find out what their wants are. If your parents give you five pies or whatever it is, you must at least spare a portion of that money for the Harijan boys who are in greater need than yourselves. You will give your leisure minutes for the service of Harijan boys and girls. You will go to their quarters and sweep them. You must teach them how to lead a clean life. It is not enough that you clean your body but you must clean your heart and soul. The first thing to do, when you get up from bed, is to ask God to keep you clean in heart and body. If you will do these things, the purse that you have given is a token of your determination to get rid of untouchability.

_The Hindu, 15-1-1934_
460. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

January 14, 1934

Bhai Ghanshyamdas,

Malkani has shown me your letter. I have written frankly to Biharilal. I send you a copy of my letter. We have to be outspoken and firm in our dealings with him. It does not seem possible in this tour to achieve all that can be accomplished in a walking tour. But whatever has been achieved appears to be good enough. Public opinion has undergone a great change but not much change is evident in the conduct. Let us see what happens. I can see only God’s hand in this work. This is not a trite observation. This task is beyond the power of one lone person or even of thousands. Nothing more can be written or said on this subject. It simply means that my faith in God is growing stronger than ever. I am having a direct experience of the feebleness of my own powers.

I hope you are maintaining good health.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi : C. W. 7943. Courtesy : G. D. Birla

461. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, KALPETTA

January 14, 1934

Friends,

It was not a task to me but a real pleasure to be able to drive through this very beautiful tract of the country. I have learnt a great deal of what lies at the back of the addresses to which you have just now listened. The deceased Subbiah Goundan, it seems, has left by his will all the landed property he ever possessed for the Harijan cause. It is a rare gift and a rather rich gift. A great burden rests upon the executors of the will and the Trustees in connection with this Trust. They cannot make of this colony the success that the testator must have desired it to become, unless they devote themselves heart and soul to the scheme which has to be worked under this bequest. Let me hope that the Trustees or the executors are worthy of the trust that has been reposed in them and that they will discharge the

---

1 The meeting was held to mark the opening of Muthal Thirunelli Harijan Colony under the auspices of the Sahodara Sangham.

2 Amounting to 165 acres of land.
trust to the entire satisfaction of the public. I deliberately say “the public” because the Trust becomes public property immediately it is devoted to public use. It is under this hope and with this assurance that I gladly declare this colony open and wish it every success. The materials for the experiment or realization of the scheme are in front of us all. We have in front of us not one or two but many Harijan brothers. All of us witnessed the music and the dance that they gave us. It was not a matter of enjoyment or amusement for us but it ought to carry a deep lesson to us. I suppose all of you realized as I did at once that there was no music about their instrument nor was there any charm about the dance. But that was the only thing that they do in order to pass their idle hours. The responsibility for the want of music about their instrument and about their dance lies not upon their shoulders but upon your shoulders and my shoulders. We need not have gone into their dance or their music in order to understand their primitive nature. Their appearance, their dishevelled hair and everything about their person is sufficient to tell us how criminally neglectful we have been to our kith and kin. They wear the same loin cloth or the scarf from year’s end to year’s end, till it turns into rags. They rarely bathe and when they do bathe, you may take it from me that it will not be in specially clean water. Again the responsibility for this disgraceful state of affairs is yours and mine. And if I had the management of this colony I tell you I would straightaway invite these people to live in the colony, give them decent pay and insist upon their taking regular baths and transform them into presentable human beings. I suppose that is precisely what we would do, each one of us, if we discovered suddenly that nearby was our own blood-brother residing in precisely the same savage condition that these brothers of ours are living in. And if that happy state of things is brought about without any loss of time, you and I will have more than well spent our time here. This address almost concludes with these words “May your efforts be crowned with success.” Well, I can only say that my efforts can never be crowned with success unless your efforts are also crowned with success. For, my efforts merely consist in inviting all the savarna Hindus to change of heart by serving Harijans in every way possible. Lastly I ask these Harijan brothers to respond to the call of self-purification.

_The Hindu, 16-1-1934_
FRIENDS.

I have just got several purses on behalf of the citizens of Calicut which amount to Rs. 4,388-5-9. On the principle that you may not look a gift horse in the mouth I must in all courtesy thank you for the gifts that you have given on behalf of the Harijan cause. But as a self-chosen or self-appointed Harijan servant I must lodge my respectful protest against the leaness of the purses from the capital of Malabar. You will be surprised to learn that Bangalore, not the capital of Mysore, but the second city in Mysore, not as big as Malabar, produced much more than you have given this evening. And I am fully aware of the capacity of Calicut to give for the Harijan cause. But nothing is lost yet. You have got here many tempting things, and at the end of a few remarks that I want to make, it is open to you and perfectly possible for you to make up for the deficiency and what is today undoubtedly a lean purse can be turned by you into a fat purse.\footnote{This paragraph has been taken from \textit{The Hindu}.}

As I have said from many a platform after entering Malabar, if there was a map of untouchability made for the whole of India, Malabar would be marked as the blackest spot in all the land; and as matters stand today, I suppose you will admit that you will have to plead guilty to the charge. Then if you are convinced of the sin of Malabar, as confessedly you are convinced by the very fact of your giving me this purse, you will admit that Malabar has to make the greatest reparation in order to rid itself of the greatest sin. It does not matter, and it ought not to matter, the least little bit that some of you who are monied men do not originally come from Malabar. Those who make their livelihood or their fortunes in Malabar should realize that every pie they get is tainted with this sin. Therefore, in the matter reparation and repentance, they stand exactly on the same footing as the original Malayalis.

This morning they took me to a most beautiful bit of Malabar; they took me up the hills with the most romantic scenery. There I was taken to a village called Kalpetta, and I recalled a hymn—I think it was composed by Bishop Heber. But whether it was composed by him... or some other bishop, this is the line that I single out from that hymn for your edification. It is said that, as he was approaching this Western coast of India, involuntarily this line came to his lips, or to his pen: “Every prospect pleases, man alone is vile.” I have no doubt that he had not this black spot of untouchability in his mind when he wrote this line. The orthodox interpretation of this line is wholly different from the one that I put upon it. But poets can never be confined even in cages of their own construction. Poets write for eternity. Their words are charged with a meaning of which they have no conception when they utter or write them. Scented breezes come from plantations that Nature has designed for man in Malabar. But through untouchability he has violated Nature and thus become vile. We have endeavoured to disfigure God’s mightiest creation, namely, man. The soul of man presents a beauty never to be surpassed by any ravishing beauty of vegetation. But the so-called savarna Hindus or the so-called high class Hindus arrogated to themselves the right of suppressing a portion of Hindu humanity. They endeavoured, however, vainly, as we shall presently see in a few years, perhaps. But man has left no stone unturned to suppress, in the name of Divinity itself, the soul of man by putting thousands outside the pale of society.

I will tell you what I saw today in Kalpetta in the midst of the ravishing beauty of vegetation. I saw wild specimens of humanity, with a stinking odour. Please do not say hastily that they are untouchables. I want you to think with me a little more deeply than possibly you are prepared to do and realize with me that for this indescribably painful scene you and I are responsible. These very men, in an hour’s time, if you desire, can be transformed into beings cleanly and outwardly as respectable as you and I may be. A little hot water, or soap, a little white khaddar, and you will immediately find that they are just as presentable as you and I are. Internally, God alone can be the judge between them and us. It is quite possible, in fact, in my opinion it is quite certain, that we are much more sinful or much viler than they can be. Our slates are sullied with writings not particularly creditable to us. Their slates have still to be written upon. Are you now surprised that, when I saw these countrymen of ours, I involuntarily said in my mind to the poet, ‘you were right in saying,

\[\text{1 The lines are:}
\text{What though the spicy breezes}
\text{Blow soft o’er Ceylon’s isle,} \text{Though every prospect pleases,}
\text{And only man is vile.}\]
“Every prospect pleases, man alone is vile”. Now, put your hand upon your heart and tell me whether, if you gave up all your wealth and all sisters discarded every article of jewellery of which they are possessed, would it be a sufficient reparation for the injuries that you have been partners in inflicting on these countrymen of ours? I wish to suggest to you that you will be fit servants of Harijans when you have begun the act of reparation by discarding all your possessions for their sake. But I know that is an ideal state of things, and I know also that, if I could possibly carry you along those ideal lines, then India would again be really a land of thirty crores of gods.

But I am labouring under no such delusion. I consider myself a practical idealist. I take from human nature what it yields and go my way. My business is to present to you the realities of the situation, to stimulate your intelligence and your imagination, to touch your hearts and then leave you to do the very best that you can possibly do for a cause so noble and so sacred as that of the Harijans.

I would like you, lastly, to realize that if we, that so-called savarna Hindus, failed in this elementary duty by the Harijans during this brief period of probation, Hinduism will be a thing of the past. History teaches us that many a civilization, many a culture perished beyond redemption because of the inherent weakness of the representatives of those bygone civilizations. Do not, therefore, run away with the belief that Hinduism will be an exception and escape the impending doom, if we, Hindus, prove unworthy representatives of the priceless treasures that the rishis have left for us.

Harijan 2-2-1934, and The Hindu, 16-1-1934

463. LETTER TO NAN AND TANGAI MENON
January 15, 1934

DEAR NAN1 AND TANGAI2:

Love and kisses to you. I hope the climate3 is suiting you and that you are both happy. Are you picking up Malayali tongue? You would write to me frequently.

Love.

BAPU

My Dear Child, p. 120

1 Daughters of Esther Menon
2 ibid
3 Of Kodaikanal in the Palani Hills, South India
464. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

January 15, 1934

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

It is four in the afternoon just now. Today is my weekly silence day. I am writing this in Nagji Purushottam’s bungalow in Calicut. Devdas and Lakshmi arrived today. Thakkar Bapa and Shankerlal will arrive tomorrow. I will see the Zamorin\(^1\) tomorrow at 2.30 in the afternoon and then will leave for Trichur at five.

The question is whether Lakshmi should go to Delhi for her delivery or remain in Madras. She and Devdas will see Raja in about two days. They will come to a final decision after that. Devdas has got the permission to go to Delhi, but I think he should spend about six months in Madras to gain experience. Lakshmi would not like her delivery to take place in his absence and Raja would not like it in his. Thus there is a problem within a problem. Doesn’t the meaning of life consist in solving even such seemingly trivial problems in the right manner?

I have specially called Shankerlal here for a brief discussion regarding khadi. I observe that perhaps needless expenditure is being incurred in our department. I wish to place before him what I have observed. I think we should stop the needless expenditure on sending khadi from one province to another. I incline finally towards the practice followed in Anantpur. The practice followed at Saoli seems good. Krishnadas [Gandhi] and Jajuji are experts and they complement each other perfectly. Krishnadas is acquitting himself very well. Keshu is quiet. Ramdas is discontented. He also will become calm by and by.

Devdas visited Ba. He is full of praise for her courage. She is of course harassad a little. But without harassment there would be no pleasure in being in jail.

I paid a visit to Guruvayur. There is no resentment there at all. It is true, though, that the Varanashrama Sangh had sent pahelwans\(^2\) from North India to demonstrate with black flags and get beaten up a little. Two of them had taken control of the dais. They got hold of a man by his feet, whereupon the young men there asked them to get down. An altercation and fighting followed. The pahelwans got beaten up a little. They are quite all right, but they did their play-

---

1. Of Calicut, now Kozhikode
2. Professional wrestlers acting cleverly. I sent the two to a dispensary and started the meeting and went on with it as if nothing had happened.\(^1\) The crowds continue to be as big as ever. Small and big contributions continue to come in. Another Annapurna, named Kaumudi, came into the limelight. She gave all her ornaments.\(^2\) “Who can harm him whom Rama protects?” So we will live as He ordains, do His bidding and dance as He wills.

Two Hungarian women, mother and daughter, met me in Bangalore. Both are expert painters. They lead a simple life. Just now they have dedicated themselves to the service of India. Bhajan music fills them with ecstasy.

N. seems likely to go to America. S. too may go. I have not written much to you about their doings. What could I write? Besides, I don’t have the time either.

Amala is getting on fairly well.

A letter from Mani is enclosed. I have written to Swami for slivers and the books. Since the books will not be of the same size, I don’t know whether he will be able to pack them together. But Swami is resourceful and, if it is possible, he will manage to do that.

Dahyabhai had sent to me Mani’s letter to you.

If I go to Belgaum, I will surely try to meet both. But my going there is not certain.

Write to Mani that one need not be with one’s elders in order to serve them. If one does their work, one serves them. It is not wrong to wish to be near them. On the contrary, it is natural to do so. But there is no necessary connection between serving them and being near them. Poor girl, she would be thinking that her letter must have been forwarded directly to you. But you must have noticed that it had made a trip to Sabarmati for a dip in the river.\(^3\) It thus got moistened at for or five places. This is of course no new experience to us. But it is our resolve—is it not?—to remain contented with whatever happens.

I have not been able to satisfy Gordhanbhai. But he doesn’t write to me now. Towards him, too, I have done my duty as I saw it. I have asked him to let me know the total sum received from Vithalbhai and also to send me the correspondence between them. If I get it, I think I shall have to publish it.

\(^1\) Vide “Speech at Public Meeting, Guruvayur”

\(^2\) Vide “Speech at Women’s Meeting, Calicut”, also Vol. LVII “Kaumudi’s Renunciation”

\(^3\) There being nobody knowing Gujarati on the staff of the Belgaum jail, Gujarati letters written by prisoners were first sent to Sabarmati jail for censoring.
Let him always write to me at Wardha. Even if, however, he writes everything only to you and if I get every such letter, I shall be fully satisfied. I want you yourself to guide him in this matter. I take it that you will write about Ba. I have already written to you about Lakshmi. I am writing to Mridula and Nandubehn. Devdas went and looked up Brijkrishna. He is quite well. He has survived. He needs rest, which he is taking.

It is certain that Raja will be released on 6th February.

You should learn not to go on thinking about things, whatever the cause. For that, you should either memorize the Gita or learn Sanskrit or go on reciting the Ramadhun both in the straight and the reverse order.

I get no time at all for worrying, so you needn’t advise me not to worry.

Blessings to both from BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-2 : Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 62-5

465. LETTER TO GANGABEHN VAIDYA

January 15, 1934

CHI. GANGABEHN,

I did get news of you from time to time. I deliberately refrained from writing to you. As you were permitted to receive only one letter I thought you should be able to get other more important letters.

But, whether I write or not, I always remember all the women workers.

My message to all the women is this: Irrespective of the resolution or promise made or given at the time of the march to Ras, let all the women think again independently and take a fresh decision. I will accept it. I adhere to my previous view. Nobody should persuade anybody else to adopt a particular course. Everyone should decide for herself. It is their religious duty to do so. Each should act according to her capacity and her inclination. It is an accident that I am out of prison. No one should stay in the Red Bungalow. Nobody should stay at any place where he or she is permitted to stay as a matter of favour. A time may come when one may not get a place to

1 Vijayagauri, wife of Dr. Kanuga
2 On August 1, 1933; vide “Appeal to People of Gujarat”, 30-7-1933 live in or anything to eat. We have learnt that it is our dharma to bear such hardships without grumbling and without feeling unhappy about it. This is the essence of the Gita. If other people do not now welcome us, it means that they are not in a position to do so. Why should you be unhappy about it? However, things have not yet reached that stage. It will indeed be good if they do. It will be a real test for us.

Every one of the women should not expect a separate letter from me for the present, but I expect them all to write to me.

You should, of course, write for all. And you should pour out whatever is in your heart. If you need anybody’s help for writing the letter, you may take it. Everyone should tell me in her letter what work she has been doing.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]
All letters should be sent to the Wardha address.

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro-6 : G. S. Gangabehnne, pp. 81-2. Also C. W. 8814. Courtesy : Gangabehn Vaidya

466. LETTER TO SULOCHANA A. SHAH
January 15, 1934

CHI. SULOCHANA,

Did you enjoy yourself? Give me an account of how you spent the six months and let me know what you intend to do now. Be quite frank.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 1750

467. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK
January 15, 1934

CHI. PREMA,

I am writing this only to tell you that I will await the long letter which you propose to write.

Kisan is quite well. I cannot give her as much attention as I would like to.
Go through all the issues of Harijan, both Gujarati and English.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G. N. 10353. Also C. W. 6792. Courtesy: Premabehn Kantak

468. LETTER TO AMINA G. QUERESHI

January 15, 1934

CHI. AMINA,

Write to me a detailed letter. Let me know your reaction after you have seen the children. Do what you think right for the future. Tell me what you did in the jail, what you read and all other things.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 10622. Courtesy: Amina G. Qureshi

469. LETTER TO MRIDULA SARABHAI

January 15, 1934

CHI. MRIDU,

It is of course too much to expect a letter from you. When all of you consider me someone to be pitied, how can I expect any letter?

I think it is only due to his attitude that there is no acknowledgement of the letter I had written to Saralabehn. I keep getting some news at least about all of you.

I am writing this letter to pass on Mani’s message. She has received Rs. 30 from you. She has received Rs. 25 from Nandubehn'. Hence she does not at all need any more money. She has written many other things. But it only implies that she is at peace and her health is good. There are fewer facilities this time. There is no company at all. She is occupying herself in reading and spinning. She has also received the books you had sent for her.

You must be keeping yourself informed about me through the Harijan.

1 Vijayagowri Kanunga
Write to me. Give me news about everyone’s health. Write only at the Wardha address.

\[ \text{Blessings from} \]
\[ \text{BAPU} \]

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 11186. Courtesy: Sarabhai Foundation

470. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

January 15, 1934

MY DEAR DAUGHTER AMTUSSALAAM,\(^1\)

I must not attempt to write more Urdu. I am really too tired now to write any more. The hand aches and it is past 8.30 p. m., silence day. But I must write some letters. I hope you got my letter in the jail. I have told you that you should not come to me.\(^2\) I am far away from you. But if you cannot resist the wish, you must come. You should of course see your mother and Narandas. In any case write to me fully. I hope you are well in body and mind.

Love.

\[ \text{BAPU}\(^3\) \]

From a photostat : G. N. 290

\(^1\) The superscription is in Urdu.

\(^2\) Vide “Ashram Bhajanavali”

\(^3\) The signature is in Urdu.
471. MESSAGE TO THE PEOPLE OF MALABAR

[January 16, 1934]

Having travelled throughout Malabar I have no doubt that the removal of untouchability entirely rests with workers. If they will prove their faith through character that is above reproach and through devotion that counts no sacrifice too great, the hearts of opponents will be melted.

The Bombay Chronicle, 20-1-1934

472. LETTER TO KASTURBA GANDHI

January 16, 1934

BA,

There is no letter from you probably because Devdas visited you. But I hope you received my letter. I have been writing every week regularly and also sending the discourses. Devdas came and saw me. He arrived yesterday. Lakshmi also has come. Both are well. We shall part today. I think they will both go to Delhi after meeting Rajaji. But it is not finally decided. Devdas told me everything about you. It is rather strange that they did not permit you to get oil for massage from outside. But I was glad to learn from Devdas that you remain cheerful whether or not you get the oil or whether the food is good or bad. If the reading of the Gita and other sacred books did not bear even this fruit, it is the same whether one had read them or not. My discourse this time will therefore be about reading books. We read in many works that reading of holy books by itself earns merit for one. Such statements are intended to encourage us. If we take them literally, we shall benefit nothing by reading them. One should ponder deeply over what one reads. Pondering deeply means thinking how we can apply their teaching in our life. But today I have been having a large number of visitors and so I don’t write more. We are in Calicut today. I am sure you remember Shyamjibhai. Vali is doing

---

1 This was given to Mathrubhumi for publication.
2 Gandhiji gave this message before he left Calicut for Cochin on January 16, 1934.
3 The first discourse appeared in the letter dated December 25, 1933; some public work. Narmada, too, is engaged in the same work. We shall be leaving Calicut this evening. Urmila Devi is here. They all inquire after you.

Blessings to all from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Bane Patro, p. 9

473. LETTER TO MANIBEHN N. PARIKH
January 16, 1934

CHI. MANI¹,

Give me detailed news about yourself. How did you spend your time, what did you read and what did you think about? Write about the children, too, and tell me whatever you wish to.

Everybody may do as he or she wishes. There is no time to write more.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5975. Also C.W. 3292. Courtesy:
Vanamala M. Desai

474. LETTER TO GOVINDDAS
January 17, 1934

BHAI GOVINDDAS,

I have your letter. I was delighted. I too wish to meet you. The itinerary is enclosed. The dates for U.P. are not fixed. Utkal is followed by Bengal, Assam and Bihar.

God sustains me.

I trust you are keeping well.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: C.W. 9709. Courtesy: Bharat Kala Bhavan, Varansasi

¹ Wife of Narahari Parikh
FRIENDS.

It gives me very great pleasure to renew my acquaintance with you after so many years. But that pleasure is not unmixed with pain because of the fact that in an enlightened State like Cochin untouchability is still flourishing. It was perhaps whilst I was driving through the streets of Trichur this morning, to speak a few words to you, that I saw a Nayadi in flesh and blood. He was shivering with fear. It was a sign of humiliation for you, for me and for all Hindus. It is high time that you wipe out that shame. It is also a shame for us that there should be even at this stage men—I don’t know anything about women—defending untouchability, unapproachability and invisibility in the name of religion. I venture to suggest to you that throughout the civilized world such a sin cannot possibly be hinted at in the name of religion.

His Highness the Maharaja by himself cannot possibly change your hearts, and I would be wholly wrong were I to go away with the belief that untouchability could be removed by a stroke of the pen. Nor can this change be brought about by any sort of compulsion. Therefore I would say to our sanatanists, or rather those who call themselves ‘sanatanists’, that they need not fear the propaganda that I am carrying on. I have to appeal to your reason and to your hearts and urge you to do your best. The Hindus claim to be essentially a nation of toleration. And if there is such a thing as untouchability in Hinduism, it will become a religion of intolerance.

I therefore respectfully put to those who are today intending to do this propaganda against untouchability to wipe out this blot on Hinduism. I have received several letters on this matter and most of the pricking letters that I have received on this problem are from Travancore and Cochin.

One word to reformers. If we have sense of our own conviction, if we only understand the sanatanists, we should tolerate what our brethren may say of us. After all it will depend upon the character of the reformers as to what is to be the nature of the reform that they are making. The goal of this campaign against untouchability depends on the purity of the reformers in this campaign. If they stick to their present character and ceaselessly endeavour in their task, then this monster of untouchability will be wiped out. But patience is required.
on the part of the reformers. Surely, they must not lose faith though there is no support from the surroundings.

One word to Hindi friends. I really expected that there would be so much atmosphere in Malabar about Hindi and so many Hindi scholars, that it would be easy for me to speak in Hindi altogether. I was astonished, however, to find that there was no translator who would translate my Hindi speech, and there was so much disinclination on the part of the audience to allow a Hindi speech. May I suggest to you that this disinclination also bars our way to progress in the campaign against untouchability? I shall simply put it in one sentence. There must be exchange of workers between North and South. Though we have an inexhaustible supply of workers amongst the Hindi speaking people, if workers from the North cannot possibly come here and explain, it becomes an impossible barrier. You may retort, 'what about you when you go to the North? Why should not they understand our speech?' If you will think a little deeper, you will realize that it is an impossible demand. Among Malayalam, Telugu, Canarese, Tamil, what speech should the Northerner adopt? I am myself a lover of all Indian languages. And I have attempted at the age of sixty-five to learn all these languages. I have become a special lover of Southern languages. But my intimate knowledge of this state of affairs demands that, if we are to work for such reform as eradication of untouchability, a common knowledge of Hindi is absolutely indispensable, because it is a language spoken by twenty crores out of thirty crores of people, and since we call ourselves Indians we can expect the thirty crores to try to understand the speech of twenty crores of people.

The Hindu, 19-1-1934

476. SPEECH AT KURUKKANCHERI

January 17, 1934

It is a matter of exceedingly great pleasure for me to renew your acquaintance. The names Ezhavas and Thiyyas are not new to me at all, nor is the name of Shri Narayana Guru new to me. I had the honour of meeting him and having long discussions with him while he was on this earth. It was at that time I came in close contact with many Ezhavas and Thiyyas. I met the leaders and had many friendly discussions with them. I have very pleasant recollections of the \[1\] This was in reply to the address of welcome by Thiyya Harijans. A report of the speech was also published in The Hindu, 19-1-1934.

affection I received from them without exception. Since then constant correspondence has been kept up between them and myself. Whilst some have differed from the view I have expressed, their affection has not suffered in any way. I treasure that affection. Therefore I am glad that I am once more in your midst.

I have carefully read the whole of your address. All the remarks that you have made about the institution of caste, as you have interpreted it, have my fullest sympathy. But you know from your experience that the vast majority of questions in this world have at least two sides. They appear differently and bear different meanings also. Caste, in so far as it is based on untouchability, is an institution of the devil, and we must get rid of it at any cost. But I have explained repeatedly that caste expressed as varnadharma is an eternal law which we may not break except at our own risk. There are many laws of Nature, which are still hidden from us. That does not mean that they are not in existence or that they do not operate in our lives. The law of varna was discovered by our ancestors ages ago; and, as I have understood and interpreted it, it has appeared to me a wholly beneficent law. But like many laws and institutions of Nature this law of varna has been distorted, and we see it today in its hideous form. Man—Hindu man—has disfigured it and made it doubly hideous by tainting it with untouchability. Varnadharma is an economic law. It is my certain conviction that, if the whole world followed that law, the strife that we see around us would cease at once. It is pre-eminently a law of concord, never of discord.

But I have not come here to give you a dissertation on the law of the varna. I simply want to say that I am in full agreement with you in your fight against untouchability. I entirely endorse your remarks that it has corrupted not Hindu society alone, but has affected other societies also. The assumption of superiority of one class over another is a poison slowly killing us. When Narayana Guru Swami enunciated his formula of one caste, one religion and one God, he had, in my opinion, no other meaning in his mind. He said, ‘I will not tolerate this assumption of superiority on the part of anybody.’ I do not recall in my many discussions with him that he had anything to say against the beneficent interpretation of varnadharma that I have given.

Let us not, therefore, destroy the tree for its bad or poisonous branches. If you know anything whatsoever of gardening, you know that a gardener who finds diseased branches prunes them. He deals with the whole tree if he finds the tree rotten at the root. He will be considered a foolish gardener deserving summary dismissal who, because he sees some diseased branches, lays the axe at the root. In our society let us act as wise gardeners. Let us understand the disease that is corroding Hinduism. Let us get rid of untouchability or, in other words, of the evil of superiority and inferiority. Let us first get rid of this evil and purify our hearts. And when we shall have successfully done so, we shall be able to pronounce opinion on the working of the law of varna as I have explained it. Today we know it chiefly as a species of untouchability. Lastly, it is my conviction, and I want you to be infected with that conviction, that untouchability as I have described it to you is fast going. And if you are fired by that conviction, I want you to put forth your best effort to exorcize that devil.

_Harijan, 9-2-1934_

477. SPEECH AT UNION CHRISTIAN COLLEGE, ALWAYE

_January 17, 1934_

It is a matter of great pleasure to me to renew acquaintance with the students and professors of this college. I have very pleasant recollections of my meeting with the students that were in the college at the time of my first visit. It was good of you to think of me while I was passing through this part of the country.

My message is exceedingly simple. It is no new truth that has dawned upon me today. I have to the best of my ability striven to live up to it for the past fifty years. And the more I have succeeded in living up to it, the greater has been my inward joy. Nor is it for the first time that I am delivering this message to India. But because of some incidents in the recent past, it comes to the people as a new thing. My message is simply this that savarna Hindus, who have been considering themselves superior to those whom they have called untouchables, unapproachables, invisibles or avarna Hindus, should realize that this arrogation of superiority has no sanction whatsoever in the Shastras. If I discovered that those scriptures, which are known as Vedas, Upanishads, _Bhagavad Gita, Smritis_, etc., clearly showed that they claimed divine authority for untouchability as I have described it to you, then nothing on this earth would hold me to Hinduism. I should throw it overboard as I should throw overboard a rotten apple. My reason is offended and my heart is wounded at the very thought that God Himself, who has created both savarna Hindus and avarna Hindus, should impose this bar sinister between His children. The very thought that the rishis, who gave the Vedas and the Upanishads and who in every mantra that they pronounced taught the unity of God, could ever conceive of any such thing as untouchability as it is practised today in Hinduism must be repugnant to every intelligent person. But prejudices and superstitions die hard. They cloud the reason, befog the intellect and harden the heart. And so you find learned men defending this untouchability.

But you, students, should know that behind this message there lurks also a much greater message. This monster of untouchability has invaded every form of society in India; and the idea behind this message is that there should be not only no untouchability as between Hindus and Hindus, but that there should be no untouchability whatsoever between Hindus, Christians, Mussalmans, Parsis and the rest. I am convinced that, if this great change of heart can be brought about among millions of savarna Hindus and their hearts can be purified—as certainly they will be purified—we should live in India as people trusting each other and without any mutual distrust or suspicion. It is untouchability with all its subtle forms that separates us from one another and makes life itself unlovely and difficult to live.

You can now, therefore, understand why I am drawing upon the sympathy of all Indians, to whatever faith they may belong. Indeed I have not hesitated to ask the support of the whole world, not by way of pecuniary offering but by their sympathy, their prayers and their study of the question with all its implications. I want their heart sympathy, which is infinitely greater than any pecuniary offering. I do not stretch out my hand before them for money because they are not debtors to Harijans. It is for savarna Hindus to discharge this debt.

To conclude, this prayerful support and sympathy can only be given by non-Hindus, if they have no distrust of this movement and if they are satisfied that this is a movement of inward purification and deeply religious. Remember that I have not idly given this message which has come straight from the heart. I have gladly taken your purse which is a spontaneous offering from you. But I have accepted it as a bond between you and myself and as a token of your determination to give me the fullest support you are capable of giving. And since I am a good accountant, I shall ask an account from you and shall want to know from time to time what part you have played in this movement.

_Harijan_, 26-1-1934

478. LETTER TO HARIJAN WORKERS OF KUPPAM

[Before January 18, 1934]²

DEAR FRIENDS,

It is altogether wrong and reprehensible for people to threaten to fast if I do not go to a particular place. You can easily see that if many people issued such threats they can make it impossible for me to go anywhere. I hope, therefore, that you will apologize and withdraw your threat.

_The Hindu_, 18-1-1934

---

1 Sundarraya Iyengar and other Harijan workers in a letter had informed Gandhiji of Iyengar’s intention to go on a fast from February 8, in case Gandhiji did not visit Kuppam during his forthcoming visit to Tiruppattur.

2 The newspaper report is dated January 18.
APPENDICES

APPENDIX I

(A) TOUR PROGRAMME

FROM 7TH NOVEMBER 1933 TO 15TH NOVEMBER 1933

7th November
Selu: Open [ing] of a temple and a public meeting, etc., (morning 9 a.m.)

8th November
6-0 a.m. Departure from Wardha
7-0 a.m. Halt at Bori
7-40 a.m. Arrival at Nagpur
7-40 to 8 Reception at Dhanotoli
8-0 to 8-30 Visit to sweepers’ quarters, opening of a well recently constructed by the M.C.
8-30 to 8-45 Khalasi Line Untouchable Girls’ School
8-45 to 9-0 Sadar Bazar D.C.A. Girls’ School
9-0 to 9-15 Chokhamela Hostel
9-15 to 9-30 Pachpaoli D. C. M. School and Mang Boarding
9-30 to 10-0 Mahar Students’ Boarding, Untkhana
10-0 to 1 p.m. Rest
1 to 5-0 Katol public meeting, etc.
5-0 to 6-0 Rest
6-0 to 7-0 p.m. Public meeting

9th November
6-0 a.m. to 6-30 Visit to Anath Vidyarthi Graha
6-30 to 10 a.m. Ramtek
10-0 a.m. to 2-0 p.m. Rest
2-0 p.m. Departure for Saoner
3-0 to 4-0 Public meeting, etc.
4-0 to 5 Back to Nagpur
5-0 to 6-0 p.m. Rest
6-0 to 7-0 p.m. Meeting with workers
7-0 to 8-0 p.m. Students’ meeting

10th November
6-0 a.m. Departure for Tumser
8-0 Public meeting, etc., at Tumser

\[1 \text{Vide} \quad “\text{Leaves From a Diary”}, \ 25-2-1934\]
9-0 a.m. Departure for Bhandara
10-0 to 11-0 Opening of a temple, presentation of addresses
11-0 to 2-0 p.m. Rest
2-0 p.m. Departure for Gondia
5-0 to 6-0 p.m. Rest
6-0 to 8-0 p.m. Public meeting, etc.

11th November
1-20 a.m. Departure by train, change at Nagpur at 5-0
8-0 a.m. to 9-0 a.m. Deoli, in Wardha District

12th to 13th November
Rest at Wardha

13th November
4-0 p.m. Hinganghat
8-30 p.m. Chanda

14th November
6-0 a.m. to 3-0 p.m. Halt at Saoli
6-0 p.m. Public meeting at Chanda

15th November
5-20 a.m. Departure from Chanda
6-30 a.m. Arrival at Warora. Departure for Wani

(The above programme is subject to alteration by Dr. Khare if Mahatmaji’s health is unable to stand the strain of the tour.)

(B) CIRCULAR RE : CHANGE IN TOUR PROGRAMME

CAMP WARDHA,
November 7, 1933

DEAR FRIEND,

RE: CHANGE IN GANDHIJI’S PROGRAMME

It has been found necessary, quite unavoidable, to make a substantial alteration in the order of the programme of Mahatmaji’s proposed tour, extending over 9 months—November 1933 to July 1934. After touring in the Central Provinces, where the tour has commenced from today, and after attending the Central Board meeting at Delhi—
December 10 to 14—he will go directly to Andhra, and the rest of the Madras Presidency, instead of going up to the Punjab, Sind, etc., and will thereafter work his way to Bengal and Assam and then westward. The new order will, therefore, be as follows :

C. P., Delhi, Andhra, Madras City, Mysore States and Malabar District, Cochin and Travancore, Tamil Nadu, Orissa, Calcutta, Bengal, Assam, Bihar, U.P., Punjab, Sind and Rajputana, Gujarat and Kathiawar, Bombay City, Maharashtra and Hyderabad Dn., and Karanataka at the end of July 1934.
The dates of the tour in the various provinces and other details are given in the subjoined table. The details of the tour in each province will be settled and filled up by the Provincial Secretaries in consultation with their Presidents in accordance with detailed instructions already issued. But the four elementary rules to be observed are mentioned below:

1. There should be full four hours cessation of public work for meals and correspondence in the middle of the day, preferably from 10.0 a.m. to 2.0 p.m.

2. The day’s work should not begin earlier than 6.30 a.m. and not [continue] later than 8.0 p.m.

3. Railway journey is any day preferable to motor journey, but where the latter is unavoidable, it should not exceed 75 miles in one day.

4. Mondays and Tuesdays in every week are non-working days and should be kept free of any travelling or public engagement. To be accurate, the period from 8 p.m. on Sunday to 8 p.m. on Tuesday is reserved, 24 hours for silence and 24 hours for correspondence and other work.

A. V. THAKKAR,
GENERAL SECRETARY,
SERVANTS OF THE UNTOUCHABLES SOCIETY

(C) TOUR PROGRAMME PROVINCEWISE

THE PROGRAMME OF GANDHIJI’S HARIJAN TOUR

Two days per week, preferably Monday and Tuesday, will be free from travelling and appointments to give Gandhiji time for correspondence and writing for the Harijan. Thus there will be five working days per week so far as the tour programme is concerned.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>PROVINCE</th>
<th>TOTAL DAYS</th>
<th>DATES</th>
<th>WORKING DAYS</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>C.P.</td>
<td>318th Nov. to 8 Dec.</td>
<td>23</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Delhi</td>
<td>510th Dec. to 14th Dec.</td>
<td>3</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Andhra</td>
<td>146th Dec. to 29th Dec.</td>
<td>10</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Madras City</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>30th Dec. to 3rd Jan. 1934</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mysore–Malabar</td>
<td>10</td>
<td>4th Jan. to 13th Jan.</td>
<td>8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cochin–Travancore</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>14th Jan. to 20th Jan.</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tamil Nadu</td>
<td>20</td>
<td>21st Jan. to 9th Feb.</td>
<td>10</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(INCLUDING 6 DAYS’ FULL REST)</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Orissa</td>
<td>711th Feb. to 17th Feb.</td>
<td>5</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bengal</td>
<td>2818th Feb. to 17th March</td>
<td>20</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Region</th>
<th>Dates</th>
<th>Days</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Assam</td>
<td>March to 24th March</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bihar</td>
<td>March to 7th April</td>
<td>10</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>U.P.</td>
<td>April to 12th May</td>
<td>20</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Punjab</td>
<td>May to 26th May</td>
<td>10</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sind</td>
<td>May to 2nd June</td>
<td>5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rajputana</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>3rd June to 9th June</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rest at Ahmedabad</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>10th June to 16th June</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Gujarat–Kathiawar</td>
<td>14</td>
<td>17th June to 30th June</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Bombay City</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>1st July to 7th July</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Maharashtra–Hyderabad Dn</td>
<td>17</td>
<td>8th July to 24th July</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Karanataka</td>
<td>7</td>
<td>25th July to 31st July</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

This programme must be regarded as tentative and is subject to change, but only when required for the sake of the cause itself.

A. V. Thakkar

Gandhi–Nehru Papers, 1933. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

APPENDIX II

MOHAMMED IQBAL’S STATEMENT

Lahore,

December 6, 1933

“The offer made by the Aga Khan to Mr. Gandhi in London in 1931 still holds good. If under Pandit Jawaharlal’s leadership, the Hindus and the Congress agree to the safeguards which the Muslims think necessary for their protection as an all-India minority, the Muslim community will still be ready to serve as camp-followers of the majority community in India’s political struggle” says Sir Mohammed Iqbal in a statement issued today referring to Pandit Jawaharlal’s charges against the communalist Muslim leaders.

Sir Mohammed Iqbal observes that the Aga Khan made a similar offer to Mr. Gandhi in 1932 but Mr. Gandhi would not guarantee acceptance of his position by the Congress and also the Hindu and Sikh delegates did not endorse Mr. Gandhi’s position and further Mr. Gandhi wanted the Muslims not to support the untouchables’ claims. After explaining the Muslim attitude towards nationalism and democracy, Sir Mohammed Iqbal puts the straight question to Pandit Jawaharlal, “How is India’s problem to be solved if the majority community neither concedes the minimum necessary safeguards to the minority community, nor accepts a third party’s award? The position can admit of two alternatives only. Either, India’s majority community must accept for

---

1 Vide “Wanted a Manifestation of Christ in Daily Life”, 30-3-1934 itself the permanent position of an agent of British imperialism in the East or India should be redistributed on the basis of religious, historical and cultural affinities so as to do away with the question of electorates and the communal problems in its present form.”

The Bombay Chronicle, 7–12–1933

APPENDIX III

EXTRACTS FROM JAWAHARLAL NEHRU’S STATEMENT

. . . I do not think that the Muslim communal organizations, chief of whom are the Muslim All–Parties Conference and the Muslim League, represent any large group of Muslims in India except in the sense that they exploit the prevailing communal sentiment.
But the fact remains that they claim to speak for Muslims, and no other organization has so far risen which can successfully challenge that claim. Their aggressively communal character gives them a pull over the large number of nationalist Muslims who merge themselves in the Congress. The leaders of these organizations are patently and intensely communal. That, from the very nature of things, one can understand.

But it is equally obvious that most of them are definitely anti–national and political reactionaries of the worst kind. Apparently they do not even look forward to any common nation developing in India.

At a meeting in the British House of Commons last year the Aga Khan, Sir Mohammed Iqbal and Dr. Shafaat Ahmad Khan are reported (in The Statesman of December 31, 1932) to have laid stress on “the inherent impossibility of securing any merger of Hindu and Moslem, political, or indeed, social, interests”. The speakers further pointed out “the impracticability of ever governing India through anything but a British agency”. These statements leave no loophole for nationalism or for Indian freedom, now or even in the remote future.

I do not think that these statements represent the views of Muslims generally or even of most of the communally inclined Muslims. But they are undoubtedly the views of the dominant and politically clamorous group among the Muslims. It is an insult to one’s intelligence to link these views with those of nationalism and freedom, and of course any measure of real economic freedom is still further away from them. Essentially, this is an attitude of pure reaction—political, cultural, national, social. And it is not surprising that this should be so if one examines the membership of these organizations. Most of the leading members are Government officials, ex–officials, ministers, would–be ministers, knights and title–holders, big landlords, etc. Their leader is the Aga Khan, the head of a wealthy religious group, who combines in himself, most remarkably, the feudal order and the politics and habits of the British ruling class, with which he has been intimately associated for many years.

Such being the leadership of the Muslims in India and at the Round Table

1 Vide “Wanted a Manifestation of Christ in Daily Life”, 30-3-1934
Conference it is no wonder that their attitude should be reactionary. This reactionary policy went so far as to lead many of the Muslim delegates in London to seek an alliance with the most reactionary elements in British public life—Lord Lloyd and company. And the final touch was given to it when Gandhiji offered personally to accept every single one of their communal demands, however illogical and exaggerated they might be, on condition that they assured him of their full support in the political struggle for independence. That condition and offer were not accepted and it became clear that what stood in the way was not even communalism but political reaction.

Personally I think that it is generally possible to co-operate with communalists provided the political objective is the same. But between progress and reaction, between those who struggle for freedom and those who are content with servitude, and even wish to prolong it, there is no meeting ground. And it is this political reaction which has stalked the land under cover of communalism and taken advantage of the fear of each community of the other. It is the fear complex that we have to deal with in these communal problems. Honest communalism is fear; false communalism is political reaction.

To some extent this fear is justified, or is at least understandable, in a minority community. We see this fear overshadowing the communal sky in India as a whole so far as Muslims are concerned; we see it as an equally potent force in the Punjab and Sind so far as the Hindus are concerned, and in the Punjab the Sikhs.

It was natural for the British Government to support and push on the reactionary leaders of the Muslims and to try to ignore the nationalist ones. It was also natural for them to accede to most of their demands in order to strengthen their position in their own community and weaken the national struggle. A very little knowledge of history will show that this has always been done by ruling powers. The Muslim demands did not in any way lessen the control of the British in India. To some extent they helped the British to add to their proposed special powers and to show to the world how necessary their continued presence in India was.

I have written all this about the attitude of the Muslim communalist leaders not only to complete the picture but because it is a necessary preliminary to the understanding of the Hindu communal attitude. There is no essential difference between the two. But there was this difference that the Congress drew into its ranks most of the vital elements of Hindu society and it dominated the situation and thus circumstances did not permit the Hindu communalists to play an important role in politics. The Hindu Mahasabha leaders largely confined themselves to criticizing the Congress. When however there was a lull in Congress activities, automatically the Hindu communalists came more to the front and their attitude was frankly reactionary.

It must be remembered that the communalism of a majority community must of necessity bear a closer resemblance to nationalism than the communalism of a minority group. One of the best tests of its true nature is what relation it bears to the national struggle. If it is politically reactionary or lays stress on communal problems rather than national ones, then it is obviously anti-national.

I cannot hold the Mahasabha responsible for these statements but as a matter of fact they fit in with, and are only a slight elaboration of, the Mahasabha attitude. And they bear out that many Hindu communalists are definitely thinking on the lines of co-operation with British imperialism in the hope of getting favours. It requires little argument to show that this attitude is not only narrowly communal but also anti-national and intensely reactionary.

It is perfectly true that Hindu Mahasabha has stood for joint electorates right through its career and this is obviously the only national solution of the problem. It is also true that the Communal Award is an utter negation of nationalism and is meant to separate India into communal compartments and give strength to disruptive tendencies and thus to strengthen the hold of British imperialism. But it must be borne in mind that nationalism cannot be accepted only when it profits the majority community. The test comes in the provinces where there is a Muslim majority and in that test the Hindu Mahasabha has failed.

Nor is it enough to blame Muslim communalists. It is easy enough to do so for Indian Muslims as a whole are unhappily very backward and compare unfavourably with Muslims in all other countries. The point is that a special responsibility does attach to the Hindus in India both because they are the majority community and because economically and educationally they are more advanced. The Mahasabha, instead of discharging that responsibility, has acted in a manner which has undoubtedly increased the communalism of the Muslims and made them distrust the Hindus all the more. The only way it has tried to meet their communalism is by its own variety of communalism. One communalism does not end the other; each feeds on the other and both fatten.

I cannot say what following the Hindu or Muslim communal organizations have. It is possible that in a moment of communal excitement each side may command the allegiance of considerable numbers. But I do submit that on both sides these organizations represent the rich upper class groups and the struggle for communal advantages is really an attempt of these groups to take as big a share of power and privilege for themselves as possible. At the most, it means jobs for a few of our unemployed intellectuals. How do these communal demands meet the needs of the masses? What is the programme of the Hindu Mahasabha or the Muslim League for the workers, the peasants and the lower middle classes, which form the great bulk of the nation? They have no programme except a negative one, as the Mahasabha hinted at Ajmer, of not disturbing the present social order. This in itself shows that the controlling forces of these communal organizations are the upper class possessing social groups today. The Muslim communalists tell us a great deal about the democracy of Islam but are afraid of democracy in practice; the Hindu communalists talk of nationalism and think in terms of a “Hindu Nationalism”.

1 Made by Bhai Parmanand, Dr. Moonje and others

Personally I am convinced that Nationalism can only come out of the ideological fusion of Hindu, Muslim, Sikh and other groups in India. That does not and need not mean the extinction of any real culture of any group, but it does mean a common national outlook, to which other matters are subordinated. I do not think that Hindu-Muslim or other unity will come merely by reciting [it] like a mantra. That it will come I have no doubt, but it will come from below, not above, for many of those above are too much interested in British domination and hope to preserve their special privileges through it. Social and economic forces will inevitably bring other problems to the front. They will create cleavages along different lines, but the communal cleavage will go.

I have been warned by friends, whose opinion I value, that my attitude towards communal organizations will result in antagonizing many people against me. That is indeed probable. I have no desire to antagonize any countryman of mine for we are in the midst of a mighty struggle against a powerful opponent. But that very struggle demands that we must check harmful tendencies and always keep the goal before us. I would be false to myself, to my friends and comrades, so many of whom have sacrificed their all at the altar of freedom and even to those who disapprove of what I say, if I remained a silent witness to an attempt to weaken and check our great struggle for freedom. Those, who, in my opinion, are helping in this attempt may be perfectly honest in the beliefs they hold. I do not challenge their bona fides. But none the less, the beliefs may be wrong, anti-national and reactionary.

I write as an individual, and, in this matter, I claim to represent no one but myself. Many may agree with me; I hope they do. But whether they do so or do not, I must say frankly what I have in my mind. That is not perhaps the way of politicians, for, in politics, people are very careful of what they say and do not say lest they offend some group or individual and lose support. But I am not a politician by choice; forces stronger than me have driven me to this field and, it may be, that I have yet to learn the ways of politicians.

_The Bombay Chronicle, 2–12–1933_

---

1 Illegible
APPENDIX IV

BAPU’S TOUR PROGRAMME

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>DATE</th>
<th>MORNING</th>
<th>AFTERNOON</th>
<th>NIGHT</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Dec. 28</td>
<td>Train</td>
<td>Vizagapatam</td>
<td>*Vizianagaram</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dec. 29</td>
<td>Anakapalli</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td></td>
<td>(till 3 p.m.)</td>
<td>Train</td>
<td>Train</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dec. 30</td>
<td>Buchireddipalem</td>
<td>*Nellore</td>
<td>Venkatagiri</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dec. 31</td>
<td>Renigunta</td>
<td>*Cuddapah</td>
<td>Cuddapah</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jan. 1–2</td>
<td>Rest days at</td>
<td>*Cuddapah</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jan. 3</td>
<td>Vuravakonda</td>
<td>*Anantapur</td>
<td>Train</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jan. 4</td>
<td>* Bangalore</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jan. 5</td>
<td>* Mysore</td>
<td></td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Letters for the day may be sent to place marked with *.

Gandhi–Nehru Papers 1933. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

---

1 Vide “Letter to Vallabhbhai Patel”, 18-4-1934
1. MAY THE OLD MAN LIVE FOR A HUNDRED YEARS

[January 18, 1934]

You would add to the glory of Gujarat and its people by celebrating the eighty-first birthday of Abbas Saheb. No one can compete with Abbas Saheb in zeal, self-sacrifice and generosity. I came in contact with him during the inquiry regarding the Punjab Martial Law. Knowing that he belonged to the Tyabji family and had been a Congress worker for a long time, I suggested his name for the Committee. Though a staunch Mussalman, he can live with a staunch Hindu like his own bloodbrother. Among such Hindus I am as one of his family. His secrets are not unknown to me. Everyone in his family contributes to the national service according to his or her capacity. May the old man live for a hundred years!

[From Gujarati]
Gujarati, 28-1-1934

2. FRAGMENT OF LETTER TO JIVANJI D. DESAI

[January 18, 1934]

PS.

I was forgetting one thing completely. I cannot give the right decision on the question of closing of the Prakashan Mandir. The matter was discussed in my presence. I had expressed the view that, if some people took up the task of propagating Gandhi literature, we could leave it to them and let those who wished to court arrest do so. We do not wish to stop anyone from courting arrest so that we can carry on the work of publication. But the converse of this also may be worth considering. We can decide about that only after taking into account all the relevant factors. I cannot judge about them from this distance. You should, therefore, pay no attention to my opinion but do what all of you think is best. If there are strong differences of opinion among you, send me the views of all together with their reasons. I shall then be able to give the final decision. There is no

---

1 The message also appeared in The Bombay Chronicle, 25-1-1934.
2 The date is from Chandulal Dalal’s Gandhijini Dinvari. need to do anything in a hurry. But I have no doubt about one thing. No one should give up his responsibility and court arrest. The view which Mahadev has expressed from jail could not be different from what it is. It should, therefore, be ignored and everybody should think for himself or herself. Mahadev may not have the necessary data to enable him to form the right view.

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9934. Also C.W. 6909. Courtesy: Jivanji D. Desai

3. SPEECH AT PALLURUTHY

January 18, 1934

I am thankful to the organizers for having taken me through the school building and the temple. I am thankful also for the frankness with which your opinion is expressed in this address. I am glad that this address is really more in the nature of advice to me than anything else. The best way to reciprocate is to tell you frankly what views I hold. You have advised me not to conduct this campaign in the name of Hindu religion. I am very sorry I cannot endorse your advice. It is wholly wrong to say or even think that this movement is conducted in order to consolidate Hindu religion or consolidate anything. If I commit sin and want to do penance, I do it not to consolidate myself but to purify myself. For me, this untouch-ability is a sin that Hinduism commits against the untouchables. It becomes and remains a sin inasmuch as the savarna Hindus consider the untouchables, whom I now call Harijans, as untouchable Hindus. Therefore I can only call this a movement of reformation and purification in Hinduism. I become a debtor only to those who call themselves Hindus. I do not become a debtor to those who have nothing to do with Hinduism. You just now took me to the temple and there showed me everything including the worship that is done according to the Hindu traditions. If your form of worship is the same as mine, my heart naturally goes out to you. But if you say you are no longer Hindus and you have adopted some other faith, my obligation to you as Hindus ceases. My obligation to you as fellow-beings, of course,

1 This was in reply to the address presented on behalf of Shri Narayana Dharma Paripalana Yogam. The speech was also reported in brief in The Hindu, 20-1-1934.
does not cease.

There is that fine and necessary distinction which you cannot get over. God has made Nature so that we are one in many. There are different faiths in this world. I believe them all to be true. But so long as there are different faiths and we belong to one faith, there are special obligations attached to that faith. That does not mean that I would not work for Mussalman fellow-men or Christian fellow-men or Parsis or Jews or any other. But I can realize unity with no one if I lose my foot from the platform on which I am standing. I believe in God much more than I believe in the fact that you and I are alive and that I am speaking to you. I may give you an illustration of what I mean. In appearance, I am speaking to you and you are listening to me. In reality, your hearts and minds may be somewhere else. My heart also may be somewhere else and my mind may be in something else. Then my speaking or your listening would be a deception. Therefore my speaking and your listening, though they are an appearance, may not be a reality. But my heart, word and deed are pledged to the Being called God, Allah, Rama or Krishna. You will now easily recognize that it is true when I say that my belief in God is far more a reality to me than this meeting which I am addressing.

But I must not take you into deeper waters. The sum and substance of what I say is this. If I appear to you as a Hindu, I do so in order to discharge an obligation I owe to you. I am supposed to have been born in a savarna family. As a savarna Hindu, when I see that there are some Hindus called avarnas, it offends my sense of justice and truth, and it cuts me to the quick. It is an abhorrent thought to me that in the faith in which I was born and nurtured there should be a single human being considered lower than myself. Therefore I have become an untouchable by choice, and if I discover that Hindu Shastras really countenance untouchability as it is seen today, I will renounce and denounce Hinduism. As a student of Hindu religion and of comparative religions, I see no such warrant in Hindu Shastras. But Hindus today practise untouchability. Therefore it becomes my duty to warn them against that evil. If, however, you embrace any other faith, or have no faith whatsoever, I can have no appeal for you. You cease to be untouchable Hindus. If you want to cut adrift from Hinduism, you are absolutely free to do so. I cannot hold you to Hinduism by force. I can only hold you by the force of love. I may so endear myself to you by my service that you may feel that, although you have been classed as untouchables by certain Hindus, there is no untouchability in Hinduism. It may be in God’s dispensation that I have come to you too late. But God will not punish me for that, because He knows that for the last fifty years I have rebelled against untouchability. Now, I think, you fairly understand what I stand for. The movement is not anti-Mussalman, anti-Christian or anti-Jew. It is anti-humbug. That is what I stand for.

A concluding remark as to the use of the word ‘Harijan’. It is not a word of my coinage. It was suggested by an untouchable. Untouchability is a hateful and detestable thing; but, so long as one has to talk of those who are considered today untouchables, it is surely better to use an unoffending name than an offending one. I give you an illustration from life. In South Africa, Indians were not called Indians but coolies. I was called not an Indian lawyer but a coolie lawyer. To the Whites, the words coolie and Indian were synonymous. I protested against the word coolie, just as this untouchable brother protested against the word untouchable, and I suggested that the word Indians should be used to designate the inhabitants of India. So long as men were known by their countries, some name was necessary to signify the inhabitants of India ‘Indians’ was an unoffending designation. Precisely in the same manner the word ‘Harijan’ is used.

Lastly, let me in all humility tell you that I have not come to help those who feel their strength. I know that no word of offence which you use against the savarna Hindus will be too strong. I know also that, if your resentment expresses itself in acts, savarna Hindus will deserve those acts. But I know infinitely more than you do what Harijans are, where they live, what their number is and to what condition they have been reduced. You can speak of this place, possibly of the whole of Cochin, possibly of Cochin and Travancore, still more possibly of Malabar. But I claim to be able to speak of Harijans from the North to the South, the East and the West of India, and I know their abject position. My only business is, if it is at all possible, to lift those who are in the mire. I want to do it because I want to lift myself. With their abjectness I feel myself also abject. I know that, if Hindus were freed from the coil of untouchability, you would find that all the corroding distinctions, not between Hindus and Hindus only, but also between Hindus and non-Hindus, will disappear as if by a magic touch. I have delivered during the brief period at my disposal the whole of my message. The choice is entirely yours. You may accept this reparation or it is perfectly open to you to reject it.

If you still fail to understand me, I can only pray in the lines of a celebrated English hymn:

We shall know each other better
When the mists have rolled away.

_Harijan_, 2-2-1934

_4. SPEECH AT THURAVUR_¹

_January 18, 1934_

In the course of his reply, he asked the audience if they knew anything about the story of the purse presented to him then. The real collection, he said, was Rs. 420, out of which a sum of Rs. 195 was reported to him to be expenses for the reception. The purse was only the balance of the collection. That meant that nearly 50 per cent of the collection was devoted to expenses in feeding him and entertaining him otherwise. Neither they nor he could justify those expenses. The Reception Committee should have spent the amount they collected as a miser. They should render to him an account of their expenses. Till recently, he was not able to go through the accounts of each of the districts on account of great pressure of work he was in. But immediately he got the time, he began to enquire. He had received a rough account of the expenses of this place. They collected Rs. 420 and spent Rs. 159 out of it for his reception. At this rate, he would have to tour with his food in his pocket as had been his wont some time ago. The cost of that pandal came up to Rs. 80. Of course, a portion of that amount could be realized by the sale proceeds of the pandal after the function was over. The pandal was an avoidable item. There was no justification whatever to spend a single pie from the Harijan purse for the pandal and other reception luxuries. Another item was Rs. 25 spent for volunteers. Another item was Rs. 20 spent on printing. The last two items of expenditure were Rs. 35 for conveyance and Rs. 35 for miscellaneous. The last item was the last straw to break the camel’s back. It may be that all these amounts were spent legitimately. He meant no reflection at all on the integrity of the workers, but it reflected indeed on the want of forethought or want of consideration for the cause on their part. They had not thought of the religious nature of the programme, they had not thought of the reparation to be made to the Harijans. Reparation meant reparation and nothing else. The _savarna_ Hindus should consider themselves as the debtors of the Harijans; those who did not feel as debtors should be deemed to be not in sympathy with the cause. He did not wish to receive anything from those who had no sympathy for this cause.

_The Hindu_, 21-1-1934

¹ This was in reply to addresses of welcome and a purse of Rs. 225.
5. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, ERNAKULAM

January 18, 1934

Mahatmaji, replying to the address, said that he saw the destruction of Hindu religion and Hindu dharma in the custom of untouchability. The Hindus brought into being the untouchable Harijans and later proclaimed they were created by God. The Shastras did not sanction caste or untouchability which was the root cause of all the evils the country was subject to. He did not want to fight with the Christians or Muslims for greater rights for the Hindus. It was a movement of self-purification for the Hindus. Cochin could be converted to a punyakshetra. They had the seashore on one side and the rishis had proclaimed such tracts to be holy. Suryanarayan was shedding his radiance from above, and that was the best time for them to take a vow that they would consider no one inferior to them. He felt deeply grieved that in such States like Cochin and Travancore ruled by far-seeing, enlightened and benevolent Hindu rulers, whose ideals and simplicity of life were remarkable, untouchability should have found a place. It was not the duty of rulers alone to get rid of the evil. As long as they had in their hearts the thought of untouchability, the rulers were helpless. He did not care very much for their addresses and presents. What was required was their wholehearted co-operation in the removal of the curse of untouchability.

The Hindu, 20-1-1934

6. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, ALLEPPEY

January 18, 1934

In the course of his reply, Gandhiji thanked the temple authorities for placing the temple premises at the disposal of the Reception Committee and he was thankful that the temple premises being in the possession of the Thiyyas or the Ezhavas of the locality, there was no trouble on that score. Then about the preference of a reply in English, Gandhiji opined that the Alleppey public was not singular in the choice of that language. He added:

You want to examine me and know how well or ill I speak in English. I do not pretend to be a scholar of the English language. In spite of my great love for the English tongue and English people, I have failed to master that language up to now. I commit mistakes in spelling the English words and my English idioms have often been inaccurate, the English words I use are not always appropriate. How can I do otherwise? I learnt the English language not to become a scholar but to convey my thoughts. I consider myself to be a practical man and use the English language as occasion arises to serve my purpose. If I speak in Hindustani, the audience will appreciate my speeches more. Anyhow, often I yield to the wishes of the English-educated people since I want them to work for me. If I were to take a referendum to know the mind of the audience, I know they would record a thumping majority for the Hindi language. Hundreds of words are common to Malayalam and Hindi. I follow my Malayalam translators rather closely and correct them, if they committed mistakes. Even today, I had to do this correction business more than twice, because the translator did not get at the spirit of my speeches. One point I have to bring home to you, i.e., please pick up at least an elementary knowledge of the Hindi language so that you may be enabled to get into the hearts of the twenty crores of your brethren in India. Maybe, it is not a substitute for either English or Malayalam. Malayalam is your mother tongue. It is a sin not to know it and not to know it well. Only, if you have an all-India heart or an all-India will, Hindi could be learnt. English helps us to become internationalists for that is the language of the international commerce of the day. Each is good in its own place and will serve its purpose accordingly. May I illustrate this point? Malayalam in the Punjab is useless, so is English for a Punjabi farmer. But if you speak to the Punjabi in Hindi, e.g., Salamalikum', he will smile at you and he will say, 'I know him'.

1 Presented by the Municipality
2 The meeting, according to The Hindu which also published a brief report, was held at the Kidangamparambu Maidan. Addresses of welcome on behalf of the public of Alleppey, Hindi Premi Mandal and Kudumbi Association were presented to Gandhiji. Gandhiji began the speech in Hindi but had to switch over to English on public demand.

Instead of dealing with the several addresses presented here, I deal with the addresses or letters not presented here but showered on me from outside this audience. I hold two letters in my hand. One is a printed letter written from Shertalai, the other, a typewritten one, from Alleppey. Now this is how the printed letter starts: “We beg to state that your present attempt to strengthen the Hindu religion by removing the evil of untouchability will end in utter failure.” Then follows the advice after this introduction. The second letter has this: “You are well aware of the fact that the greatest obstacle in the way of the creation of a united Indian nation is religion.” I am not a stranger to this kind of advice. I had had letters from Travancore and Cochin even when I was in Poona, ailing. They were all nicely and courteously worded, but strong in their emphasis on their belief that religion was the greatest obstacle in the way of the country’s progress. Ever since I have set foot on the Cochin-Travancore soil, I have been flooded with communications of this sort. I cannot possibly disregard all these letters. I know that for this belief, which is evidently growing upon some young men in Cochin and Travancore, the savarna Hindus are primarily responsible. They have dignified irreligion in the name of religion. They have defended sin as if it was virtue with divine sanction. These young men have felt, in their impatience, that, if religion is as savarna Hindus describe it to be and practise it, religion is an evil. Having become impatient and angered, they have not stopped to think out the question and have condemned religion wholesale. If I have real religion in me, I have got to be patient and gentle to these brethren of mine. I have reasoned with them by correspondence, and reasoned with them today at Palluruthy.¹

---

1 This has been taken from the report published in The Hindu, 21-1-1934.

I must tell these friends that my present attempt has nothing to do with the strengthening of Hinduism. I ask you to take me at my word when I say that I am wholly indifferent whether Hindu religion is strengthened or weakened or perishes; that is to say, I have so much faith in the correctness of the position I have taken up that, if my taking up that position results in weakening Hinduism, I cannot help it and I must not care. I tell you what I want to do with Hindu religion. I want to purify it of the sin of untouchability. I want to exorcize the devil of untouchability which has today distorted and disfigured Hinduism out of all recognition. I know that, if this evil can be removed root and branch, those very friends who say religion is the greatest obstacle to the progress of India will immediately change their minds. But if it is any consolation to these friends, I tell them that, if I came to the conclusion that Hinduism sanctioned untouchability, I should denounce it. But even then I would not go so far with them as to say that religion itself is useless and that God is not God but devil. For me the result will be that I shall lose faith in Hindus and Hinduism, but my faith in God will be strengthened. And I want to tell you why it will be strengthened. Faith is not a delicate flower which would wither under the slightest stormy weather. Faith is like the Himalaya mountains which cannot possibly change. No storm can possibly remove the Himalaya mountains from their foundations. I am daily praying for strength from God to be able to say to God,

¹ Vide “Speech at Palluruthy”, 18-1-1934.
when Hindus disappoint me, ‘Although Thy own creation has disappointed me, I still cling to Thee as a babe clings to the mother’s breast.’ And I want every one of you to cultivate that faith in God and religion. It is my conviction that all the great faiths of the world are true, are God-ordained and that they serve the purpose of God and of those who have been brought up in those surroundings and those faiths. I do not believe that the time will ever come when we shall be able to say there is only one religion in the world. In a sense, even today there is one fundamental religion in the world. But there is no such thing as a straight line in Nature. Religion is one tree with many branches. As branches you may say religions are many; as tree Religion is one.

What is at the bottom of this movement for purification in Hinduism? It is not designed as a movement hostile to any religion. It is designed to bring all faiths nearer together. Do you for one moment suppose that, if savarna Hindus make reparation in the terms that I have suggested and if they forget the distinctions of high and low, they will forget those distinctions only in regard to Harijans and not in regard to others? Today this poison of untouchability has overtaken the whole of Indian society. Harijans are not the only untouchables. They are on the extreme fringe. But all Hindus are untouchables to themselves, and all Hindus to non-Hindus. Non-Hindus have noted this fact; and I suggest to you that our differences and quarrels today have their main root in this canker of untouchability. I ask you to believe me implicitly when I say that, if untouchability is removed, it must result in bringing all Indians together and, if I may say in all humility, all humanity nearer. It is not a small movement, but a big movement fraught with great consequences. Can you imagine that, if it were otherwise, as a wise man, which I consider myself to be, I would ceaselessly wander from place to place in the evening of my life to deliver a message which has the consequence of strengthening Hindus for fighting against Mussal-mans, Christians, Jews and Parsis, among whom I have friends as dear as blood-brothers? I have that implicit faith in my mission that, if it succeeds—as it will succeed, it is bound to succeed—history will record it as a movement designed to knit all people in the world together, not as hostile to one another but as parts of one whole.

I think I have given sufficient answer to those who have sent me these letters.

Harijan, 26-1-1934, and The Hindu, 21-1-1934
7. KAUMUDI’S RENUNCIATION

It has been my privilege to witness many touching and soulstirring scenes during a busy life packed with a variety of rich experiences. But at the moment of writing this, I cannot recall a scene more touching than that of the Harijan cause. I had just finished my speech at Badagara. In it I had made a reasoned appeal to the women present for jewellery. I had finished speaking and was selling the presents received when gently walked up to the platform Kaumudi, a girl 16 years old. She took out one bangle and asked me if I would give my autograph. I was preparing to give it, when off came the other bangle. She had only one on each hand. I said, “You need not give me both, I shall give you the autograph for one bangle only.” She replied by taking off her golden necklace. This was no easy performance. It had to be disengaged from her long plait of hair. But the Malabar girl that she is, she had no false modesty about performing the whole process before a wondering public counting several thousands of men and women. “But have you the permission of your parents?” I asked. There was no answer. She had not yet completed her renunciation. Her hands automatically went to her ears and out came her jewelled ear-rings amid the ringing cheers of the public, whose expression of joy was no longer to be suppressed. I asked her again whether she had her parents’ consent to the sacrifice. Before I could extract any answer from the shy girl, someone told me that her father was present at the meeting, that he was himself helping me by bidding for the addresses I was auctioning and that he was as generous as his daughter in giving to worthy causes. I reminded Kaumudi that she was not to have the ornaments replaced. She resolutely assented to the condition. As I handed her the autograph, I could not help prefacing it with the remark, “Your renunciation is a truer ornament than the jewellery you have discarded.” May her renunciation prove to have been an earnest of her being a true Harijan sevika.

Harijan, 19-1-1934
8. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

January 19, 1934

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

You do not receive my letters at all. What does that mean? I wrote three letters to you which you have not acknowledged. I have written to Jayaprakash also. I shall now be going there in a short time. We shall meet then. I am well.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3441

9. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, KOTTAYAM

January 19, 1934

Gandhiji, in the course of his reply, said that the organizers should produce a certificate from the Harijans before he could believe whatever they had stated in the address. The address attempted to show that the Harijans were perfectly all right. But the case of Harijans was not really so. He warned the savarnas against entertaining any false belief. Things were not as rosy as had been depicted. He had received bitter complaints from the Ezhavas and Thiyyas. Some of them wanted to destroy God from their and others’ religion. He did not blame them for entertaining such a misconception. Gandhiji emphasized the need for the economic uplift of the Harijans and pointed out that temple-entry would not solve their problems. Economic uplift alone would make the Harijans conscious of their degraded position. He expressed his belief that the address was not a true expression of the feeling of the public that had assembled.

Continuing, Gandhiji said that the campaigning against untouchability was not an easy job. Its virus had upset the whole society. He had received piteous wails from Christian Harijans. If Christians had grades of untouchability, even for that sin savarnas were responsible. There was no use in reminding him that there was in Kottayam a church, a mosque, and a temple existing side by side. They existed in many other parts of India and even outside India. He made an earnest plea for the removal of untouchability from “this land of Dharma Rajya”. He had heard with considerable strain that there was a Christian party and a Nayar party in the State that did not work for the common end. People had been repeatedly dinning into his ears that there were mutual jealousies and rivalries in their midst. The Maharaja and the officials would be unable to remove those evils. The people themselves had to remove them root and branch. If untouchability was removed from the heart, all other ills would also be removed. He would not go away satisfied if the opening of the roads and temples were not a token of the heart-unity among them.

---

1. The meeting, which was held at the Municipal Maidan, was attended by about 2,500 people. An address of welcome was presented to Gandhiji along with a purse of Rs 30.

Gandhiji said that he had received from Travancore the most hair-splitting letters on untouchability. It was not a matter for surprise that religious faiths of the Ezhavas were being rudely shaken. He did not want them to surrender reason and import interpretation. A reproduction of the Vedic life of old on the part of the savarnas was necessary before they could impart religion to others. He asked them to pray to God to give them the strength to confess their guilt, purify their heart and discharge the duty they owed to the Harijans.

The Hindu, 21-1-1934

10. LETTER TO SHANTIKUMAR MORARJEE

January 20, 1934

CHI. SHANTIKUMAR,

I got your letter. You must have left the hospital now and are probably able to walk about. I have come to such a distant place that letters take four days to reach me.

I have heard about Dr. Mulgaonkar, but I don’t know him much personally. Please give him my compliments for wearing khadi. Ask Gokibehn to write to me.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 4722. Courtesy: Shantikumar Morarjee

11. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, PONMANA

January 20, 1934

Speaking in Hindi, Gandhiji expressed pleasure at having received a Hindi address. That was an oasis in a desert. He was glad to note that five private temples in the State had been thrown open to Harijans. The temple and the Ashram, under whose shadow they were sitting, were also open to all castes. The address had stated that many people had taken to khaddar. He doubted if the people in Travancore had heard of that word when he visited them last time. It was the hope of the Harijan Seva Sangh to save Hinduism from ruin. Purification of the heart was all that was needed. The savarnas were one in the matter of extending every help to the Harijans except temple-entry. That indicated that the savarnas did not want to remove the distinction of high and low. If Harijans were Hindus, as they considered them to be, it was necessary to give them also admission to the temples.

1 The meeting was held in the morning in the Chatambi Swami Ashram.

Referring to a charkha that was placed on the platform, Gandhiji remarked that the charkha was still capable of improvement. If everyone would introduce and popularize the charkha in his home, then it would go a great way to solve India's problems. Every endeavour was being made to uplift Harijans. In that endeavour the Harijans had also to co-operate. The Harijans had to give up habits of drinking and eating carrion.

_The Hindu, 22-1-1934_

12. SPEECH AT QUILON

January 20, 1934

Gandhiji expressed his gratification to the Government for throwing open all public roads, tanks, etc. It was most appropriate on the part of H. H. the Maharaja. But much more remained to be done by the people themselves. He, however, pointed out that, if the hearts of the people were not pure, the orders of kings would be of no avail.

He felt obliged to the organizers of the meeting for the honest statement that they had not made much progress in the removal of untouchability. The reason ascribed was lack of funds. Before untouchability could be removed, the hearts had to be purified. For the purification of the heart no money was needed. True, the funds made available were not proportionate to the magnitude of the task. The duty of the savarnas was to teach the Harijans and give them free education. Harijan seva was _atmashuddhi_. Removal of untouchability ought to be the ultimate goal of all. The Shastras did not sanction untouchability. It was necessary to open temples. But more important than that was the removal of untouchability.

_The Hindu, 22-1-1934_
I am no stranger to Travancore or Trivandrum. If you will permit me, I should say I am with you a fellow citizen of Travancore. And I shall tell you why I would love to become a citizen of Travancore. I have had the audacity, if you like to call it, or courage as I would call it, to say that Malabar, which includes Travancore and Cochin, was the blackest spot in the untouchability map of India. The worst forms of untouchability are to be found in Malabar. And Malabar is the home of Shankaracharya, the teacher of the advaita doctrine. How untouchability of the worst type can be consistent with the teaching of Shankara passes my comprehension. But, since I have become a Harijan by choice, I should love to suffer with the Harijans who are supposed to occupy the lowest rung of the ladder even in the Harijan scale. I cannot possibly do so unless I could take out a naturalization certificate and become a citizen of Travancore. For, do you know what I saw this morning when I went to a Harijan school? There I saw two Harijan boys, belonging to what are called the Vetas. One lives and learns on this earth. I learnt then and there that Vetas are invisible like the Nayadis—synonymous terms. In the note that was passed to me, it was stated that Vetas had the greatest difficulty in finding pure drinking water. Once during the Boer War, as a humble member of the Ambulance Corps that I was, I found myself in the position of the Vetas. Not that there was any prohibition against the soldiers and ambulance men who were marching through that scorching country, but it happened to be a waterless desert; it was a decree of prohibition from Providence itself. The midday sun shone scorching overhead. We were all—white soldiers and brown ambulance men—parched with thirst. Suddenly we came upon a little pool filled with dirty water. That was to serve as drinking water for us. This morning I immediately recalled that scene and said to myself how infinitely worse the Vetas must feel when day in and day out they are consigned to dirty pools for drinking water, not in a waterless desert, 1 Over ten thousand people were present at the meeting which was held at the Municipal Maidan. Addresses of welcome on behalf of the public and the Hindi Prachar Sabha were presented to Gandhiji together with a purse of Rs. 1001. A report of the speech also appeared in The Hindu, 23-1-1934.

but in a place where ample fresh water is perennial. Are you now surprised that I should love to identify myself with a Veta and feel with him by living with him and seeing what you feel when you see fresh water all around and are debarred from using it? If God wills it, He will give me the strength and the will to go through the fire. You now understand the nature of the message that I want to deliver to you this evening.

But there is always a ray of light even through apparently impenetrable darkness. The communique of the Maharaja’s Government in connection with this untouchability business was this morning placed in my hands. I was able, at the meeting, where I saw the order of His Highness the Maharaja’s Government, to tender my congratulations. As I then read this order, it seemed to me in short that there would be no State recognition for those public institutions which debarred untouchables from their use. Whilst it was possible for me to tender my congratulations, you must not run away with the belief that such relief of a very modified type can give me satisfaction. This deep-seated disease requires not a temporizing but a drastic remedy. If the Hindu patient is to live, then this disease has to be removed root and branch. I wish that the young Maharaja and his advisers may take courage into their hands and apply the only remedy that can undo this mischief. The remedy is incredibly simple. They have simply to say that there will be no State recognition in any shape or form of untouchability, unapproachability or invisibility. As an ex-lawyer, who still has some memory of legal lore, I make bold to say that such a legislation or such a proclamation will not amount to any interference with any single individual’s religious belief or practice. It is the bounden duty of a State which has subjects entertaining different faiths to take an impartial and detached view in matters of religion. By identifying itself with practices prevalent among a section of its subjects and by giving legal protection to those practices, the State interferes with the progress of reform and interferes with the free play of people’s conscience. All that the State has got to do is to say to its subject, ‘The State has nothing to do with your religious beliefs and practices. We will interfere when you, in prosecuting your religious practices, interfere with common law rights or with the peace of the State.’ But the existing State-recognition of untouchability makes it a current coin.

I feel that an extremely heavy responsibility rests upon Hindu princes when, as I feel, the very Hindu religion runs the risk of being utterly destroyed if this virus of untouchability is not expelled from the Hindu body. Those who feel as deeply as I do about this matter cannot possibly rest until the so-called Harijans are clothed with precisely the same rights as non-Harijan Hindus possess today.

Now one or two words only with reference to the individual duty of everyone in this audience, man or woman. This is a movement essentially of self-purification, of savarna Hindus frankly acknowledging the debt that they owe to Harijans, and rendering full reparation to them. This can only be brought about by a complete change of heart on our part. As I have already described to you, the State aid can only be of a negative character. The State cannot possibly change the individual heart. That can only be made by prayer to Almighty. It is not possible for a single human being to change the heart of a fellow being. I know that I cannot do it. I can only make an appeal to your reason and to your heart. But it is God alone who can arm the word that I speak to you with the power to shoot like an arrow and make a lodgment in your heart. If you can believe the word of a man who is perpetually seeking after truth, believe me that throughout all my waking hours, and if I can say so, during my sleep also, my one constant prayer to God is that He may give that power to my words, so that the Hindu heart can be touched and it may be purged of the virus of untouchability and Hindus and Hinduism may be saved from this impending doom.

Please remember that your duty and my duty does not end with merely recognizing the Harijans as blood-brothers and blood-sisters. That is the beginning of the end. The end is that we should rid ourselves of every form of untouchability that is eating into the vitals of Hindu society. As an address reminded me only this morning, it was not enough to treat Pulayas, Nayadis and others as blood-brothers; for, untouchability existed among savarna Hindus themselves, caste against caste. It is true that the poison has gone so deep that it has corrupted the whole of our society. It has even affected our fellow-countrymen—Mussalmans, Christians, and others. What, therefore, you and I have to do is to forget that there is anybody high or low on this earth. Then, being the children of the same Creator, the same God, no matter to what faith we may belong, no matter what hue we may have, we are all equal in the eyes of our Maker. Do you not see that, when we have been able to purge ourselves of this virus, not only shall we, Hindus, be able to look the world in the face but we shall also be able to live in peace with our neighbours, be they Mussalmans, be they Christians, Jews, Parsis or others?

Now you will understand why I consider insignificant the purse you have been good enough to give me, considering that Trivandrum is the capital of a great State of India. Do you know that both Bangalore and Calicut have given no less than six or seven thousand rupees to the Harijan purse? If you were to tell me that poverty had hit Travancore harder than Calicut or Bangalore, I must refuse to believe it. Bangalore at least is not a land flowing with milk and honey as Travancore is. As somebody was saying, no man need die of positive hunger in Kerala. You have got the richest milk that mother coconut can yield, and you can have all the sweetness you desire from the banana, which is very cheap here. When I was travelling through the South in 1915, I lived for days together on bananas and coconuts; and as an expert diet reformer, I can tell you that you can well hold body and soul together for many days, indeed many years, on bananas and coconuts. So if you were to advance the plea of poverty as against Harijans, you would be absolutely out of court. While, therefore, I am in Trivandrum, I expect all of you, who are here and who have listened to me, to make up for this very serious defect in your purse.
Sisters can copy little Kaumudi, who lives not very many miles from you, and discard all the jewellery that they wear. And you, the citizens of Travancore, can put your heads together and decide that your purse should be the richest, because you represent the blackest spot, and you can undertake to make up for the defect I have shown to you.

But you will permit me to point out another serious defect.
Since I have been travelling in Travancore, I have discovered that the people have paid like misers, but the organizers have spent money like spendthrifts. Therefore, as it has astounded me, it will astound you to learn that the feeding charges of my party, which certainly descends like locusts on a field, and such other expenses which should never be deducted from purses given for the Harijan cause, have been deducted. You will be astonished to know that in many cases more than 50 per cent has been spent. What would God tell me when I say to Him that in the name of Harijans so many thousand rupees were collected and 50 per cent were deducted for feeding and entertaining

---

1 Vide “Kaumudi’s Renunciation”, 19-1-1934.
me? I know that, if I did not protest against such expenses my claim to represent the Harijans would be summarily dismissed by Divinity. The fact of the matter is that you have not treated this Harijan question as seriously as it should have been treated. It is a deeply religious question. It affects the well-being of the poorest in the land. It affects the well-being of those who are despised by society.

I wish you and I and every one of us would hang down our heads in shame, if we were guilty of misusing or using improperly a single pie collected on behalf of the Harijans. I assure you that I do not want a single convenience which cannot be cheaply supplied. One little flickering light will suffice for my purpose. I want no flags or buntlings for me and my party. If you gave me the open sky and the velvety sand of Travancore to lie upon, I should never utter a single word of reproach. But I will reproach everyone connected with this cause who misspends a single pie when it might have been saved for the Harijan cause. I want you all to understand the seriousness of this mission. I want you then to bestir yourselves, put your shoulders to the wheel and make a Herculean effort, whilst there is yet time, to save ourselves and the ancient faith from the impending doom. I do not wish to convey the meaning that only the Committees in Travancore have been guilty of useless expenditure. God alone knows how many other Committees have been guilty of this. But this I can tell you that, ever since this tour began, I have been cross-questioning every Committee, and I have called for accounts of receipts and expenditure from every Committee and am awaiting accounts from them. There is no reflection here on the honesty of a single person. But those of you, who are studying law or who are lawyers, will at once understand when I say that neglect or carelessness on the part of a trustee, which everyone connected with this movement is, amounts to a crime. A trustee is expected to give greater attention and care to the protection of his ward than he would bestow on his own protection.

Harijan, 2-2-1934
14. INTERVIEW ON TRAVANCORE GOVERNMENT COMMUNIQUE

TRIVANDRUM,
January 20, 1934

Interviewed on the communique of the Travancore Government, declaring public tanks and wells open to all castes, Gandhiji said:

I have already tendered my congratulations to His Highness and Government on the communique but I have also said that it cannot possibly satisfy me, much less the Harijans. There can be neither satisfaction nor rest until the States refuse to recognize untouchability in any shape or form. That will not interfere with anybody’s personal or religious freedom. But today untouchability receives State protection. I venture therefore to hope that H. H. the Maharaja and his advisers will at least take up an impartial attitude by withholding State recognition of untouchability.

1 The communique read:

“In their report, the Temple-entry Enquiry Committee have recommended, inter alia, prompt action on the following lines:

‘Distance-pollution or theendal should be removed by appropriate legislative measures subject to reservations in the matter of entry into temples and into their adjuncts like temple tanks, temple wells, homapurats, anakotsals, etc., and subject to the following provisos:

‘(a) Public tanks used for bathing purposes should be thrown open, after separate cisterns are attached to them or portions of them are walled off, where people could wash their clothes, etc., before getting into the tanks for bath.

‘(b) Public wells should be thrown open after they are provided with cisterns in which water should be stored from the wells by Municipal or Health Department employees and from which water should be drawn through taps.

‘(c) Government satrams should be thrown open after they are provided with separate kitchens, as in the case of such as are already open to all classes.’

“Government share the view of the Committee that distance-pollution or theendal must cease and are of opinion that no general public funds should be spent by Government in the maintenance of public tanks, public wells, satrams, etc., admission to which is denied to any person by reason of his belonging to a theendal caste. They have resolved, therefore, that all public roads, public tanks, public wells, satrams, etc., maintained by them out of their general public funds shall be thrown open to all classes of people irrespective of the caste to which they belong. Measures to carry out these objects soon are being considered.

2 The other recommendations of the Committee are under the consideration of Government.”
With regard to one of the recommendations of the Travancore Temple-entry Enquiry Committee, relating to a reference to a parishad of learned men, Gandhiji said:

In my opinion, this is not a question to be decided by a parishad merely of learned men. Such parishad, if it is composed of men who are not merely learned but are also holy and wise, can guide the people but not the State, for in a composite society, such as ours is, a State has to adopt an attitude of perfect neutrality. Supposing that parishad gave it as its opinion that untouchability, such as we know it, is a Hindu religious obligation, then the State cannot clothe it with legal protection. Those who believe in it will observe it, but they shall not compel non-believers to do so. But the state of law today is such, that men who do not believe in untouchability are compelled to submit to it.

In reply to the question whether the temples in Travancore did not stand on a different footing from most in British India, and whether they were not really a trust property in the hands of Government, Gandhiji said:

Trustees are bound, so long as they retain that office, to carry out faithfully the conditions of the trust. All therefore that they can do is to resign their office, if they regard untouchability as a sinful practice.

Asked if Government in that case should give up the wardenship of temples, Mahatma Gandhiji said:

Most decidedly, Government should certainly give up their custodianship of temples.

The Hindu, 22-1-1934
15. NOTE

IS THE BULSAR MUNICIPALITY FAILING IN ITS DUTY?

Nowadays I seldom see Harijanbandhu. But this issue happened to fall into my hands. It would be regrettable if the Bulsar Municipality has broken its pledge. If they have anything to say in their defence I shall publish it in these columns. I hope that a public institution will not ignore our scavenger brothers who cannot make their voice heard.

[From Gujarati]
Harijanbandhu, 21-1-1934

16. LETTER TO RABINDRANATH TAGORE

January 21, 1934

DEAR GURUDEV,

The news about the Government measures in Midnapur has dazed me. They appear to me to be worse than the Martial Law measures of the Punjab in 1919. I get here only The Hindu. Are you doing anything? Is Bengal doing anything? Our cowardice chokes me. Or do I see cowardice where there is none? Can you give me any solace?

I hope you are keeping well.

With deep love,

Ever yours,

M. K. GANDHI

[PS.]

I am in Coonoor between 29th January and 5th February.

From a photostat: G.N. 4641

---

1 A correspondent had stated that the Bulsar Municipality had done nothing towards the construction of a night school in spite of the resolution passed by it to that effect, and that it was delaying the implementation of another resolution regarding the construction of tenements for Harijans.

2 Ordinances promulgated consequent upon the assassination of B.E.G. Burge, the District Magistrate, Midnapur, by three Bengali youths on September 2, 1933.
17. LETTER TO JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

THE CAPE,
January 21, 1934

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

I have your three letters before me. As to the money, I thought you had it already. I had issued instructions. I am sending a reminder.

I hope the consultation in Calcutta has resulted in some good to Kamala.

I had no desire to apologize for you. The interview\(^1\) represents the interviewer’s impressions. But there is no apology there. I have given my full interpretation of your mind and actions. I do feel that your concrete programme is still in the melting pot. You are too honest to say: “I know the whole of my programme today.” You have no uncertainty about the science of socialism but you do not know in full how you will apply it when you have the power.

You have unnecessarily raised the question of your place in the Congress. So far as I am concerned, you do not disturb me at all. I should be myself in a wilderness without you in the Congress.

More I need not say now. I have not the time either to give you a longer letter.

I have received your notice about 26th. I could not have issued it unless I was in a position to say definitely what to do. But I do not mind it.

A brief telegram in The Hindu about Government measures in Midnapur has however dazed me. The measures appear to be worse than the Punjab measures of 1919. The shock is almost unbearable. Our cowardice disconcerts me. Not knowing what the papers are saying, if anything at all, I may be wrong in my analysis. I have never felt so helpless as I do at the present moment.

I have written to Dr. Bidhan and to Gurudev.\(^2\)

I hope Mother is better.

What about Rafi?

Love.

BAPU

---

\(^1\) Vide “Interview to the Madras Mail”, 22-12-1933.

\(^2\) Vide the preceding item.
Jayaprakash had written to me about his affair and I wrote to him at length. His brother will have the scholarship. With the burdens he has, he should really begin to earn. But he won’t. I am keeping in touch with him.

Gandhi-Nehru Papers, 1934. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

18. LETTER TO RUKMINIDEVI BAZAJ
January 21, 1934

CHI. RUKMINI,

I got your letter. This postcard is just to let you know that all of you are constantly in my thoughts.

You must have completely recovered from the effects of your fever.

It is warm here but over there all of you must be freezing in the cold. Were any earthquake shocks felt there?

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]
Do you get Harijanbandhu or [Harijan] Sevak?

SHRI BENARSILAL BAZAJ
THATERI BAZAR
BENARES CITY

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9157

19. LETTER TO JIVANJI D. DESAI
January 21, 1934

BHAI JIVANJI,

Don’t be in a hurry to spend that sum of Rs. 150. Please ask Miss Agatha Harrison, 2 Cranbourne Court, Albert Bridge Road., London S. W., whether she wants copies of the book for free distribution and, if yes, how many copies she requires. Then send them. It appears that I shall not be going to Belgaum after all. I don’t at all

1 An earthquake had rocked Bihar on January 15 and resulted in largescale loss of life and property.
feel like writing to the authorities for employing a Gujarati. You want me, don’t you, to go through the articles written from Yeravda Mandir about untouchability and equal regard for all religions.

Please take proper care of Hamid. See that the others do not get the infection.

I am quite well.

Blessings from

BAPU

SIT. JIVANJI
NAVAJIVAN KARYALAYA
AHMEDABAD
B.B.&.C.I. RLY.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9935. Also C.W. 6910. Courtesy: Jivanji D. Desai

20. LETTER TO GOVINDBHAI R. PATEL

January 21, 1934

BHAJ GOVINDBHAI,

It seems my stay in Pondicherry will be a very brief one. But if I can, I should very much like to see Mother and to go round the Ashram. Sri Aurobindo’s letter reached me yesterday after a good deal of wandering. I cannot follow all that you say in your letters. I may say this for myself, that nothing is dearer to me in this world than the search for truth.

MOHANDAS

SHRI GOVINDBHAI
THE ASHRAM
PONDICHERY

From the Gujarati original: C.W. 10741. Courtesy: Govindbhai R. Patel
21. TELEGRAM TO RAJENDRA PRASAD

[On or before January 22, 1934]¹

YOUR WIRE HEART-RENDING. WISH I COULD BE WITH YOU AIDING DISTRESSED PEOPLE. HOPE YOU WILL GET ADEQUATE HELP FROM PUBLIC. KEEP ME INFORMED. HOPE YOU ARE BETTER.

The Searchlight, 24-1-1934

22. LETTER TO SRI PRAKASA

Unrevised January 22, 1934

MY DEAR SRI PRAKASA,

I am glad that you could not follow my article² on ornaments. That has enabled me to get a letter from you and also to have a confession from you that you do not read Harijan. I had thought that you would insist on reading it as a general weekly letter from me. It is never too late to mend. I recommend your getting it regularly and reading it.

Now for your argument. I never said that foreign cloth was in itself an evil. I did say and say it even now that the use of foreign cloth in India by Indians is an evil.

I do not put the use of ornaments in the same category as foreign cloth. But I do preach disuse of ornaments. Not having fundamental objection to the use of ornaments as to the use of foreign cloth, I do not mind selling ornaments to those who would wear them. It is enough for me if I get one woman to discard ornaments. You may not know that one-hundredth part of them are sold as ornaments, ninety-nine parts are melted and turned into gold and sold as currency. The other parts of your argument touch upon a wider field and involve a discussion of capital and labour, poverty and riches, etc. These I omit for want of time.

May I take your letter to mean that you are now quite restored

¹ Vide “Letter to Vallabhbhai Patel”, 22-1-1934.
² Vide “Notes”, 22-12-1933 and have got over the Slough of Despond? I hope Bapuji\textsuperscript{1} is keeping well.

_Yours sincerely,

BAPU_

23. _LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ_

January 22, 1934

CHI. JAMNALAL,

I got your letter.

A wire has been sent to Devi Prasad. I have also written to him. I have called Lester only to meet her.

I have written to Satisbabu that he should go to Puri. You must improve your health.

I am very much disturbed by the happenings in Midnapur.

Om\textsuperscript{2} and Kisan\textsuperscript{3} have become a wonderful pair. Om is always cheerful. She does not even know what it is to feel depressed. She can sleep for twelve hours, but I see nothing to object to in that. She does not seem to have any special likings. She eats whatever is served. Let us see how she shapes.

I am getting on quite well.

Please send Rs. 4,000 to Jawaharlal for the support of coworkers if you have not already done so.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2929

---

\textsuperscript{1} Dr. Bhagwandas, addressee’s father.
\textsuperscript{2} Uma, the youngest daughter of the addressee
\textsuperscript{3} Kisan Ghumatkar
24. LETTER TO MADALASA BAJAJ

January 22, 1934

CHI. MADALASA,

Have you resolved not to write to me till I write to you? Are you testing me in this way or sparing me out of pity for me?

Tell me how you are in mind and body. Ask Vatsala to write to me. What are you studying? Do you take your meals at regular hours?

Om is quite happy. She is getting fatter.¹

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, p. 315

25. LETTER TO KASTURBA GANDHI

KUMARIKA, TRAVANCORE,

January 22, 1934

BA,

We are in Kumarika today. I got your letter. You have visited this place once in Urmila Devi’s company. This is the farthest end of India. The Himalayas represent her head. We may, therefore, call this place Mother India’s feet, which are daily washed by the sea. Since nobody lives here, perfect silence reigns. I bathed in the sea, and so did Om, Kisan and Chandrashankar². There is no danger of cold here. Devdas and Lakshmi will most probably have gone to Delhi now. They went and met Rajaji. There has been no change in my diet and I keep very good health. I have secured a typist from Madras. He has been loaned to me by Anna³. He is good. As Thakkar Bapa has come now, Malkani has gone to Delhi. I have just received a letter from Ramdas and one from Nimu. At present they all seem to be well. Ramdas takes care of Sumitra’s eyes. He has not yet recovered his peace of mind, but I think he will do so. There is no cause for anxiety.

¹ The source has these two sentences in the form of questions. Om, however was with Gandhiji at this time.
² The source has “Chandrashekhar”.
³ Harihar Sharma
I understand about Dahibehn’s health. Let us all remember that the mind has a powerful effect on the body. In jail one is a prey to too many thoughts, which one should learn to control. If one can preserve one’s equanimity in all conditions, one can be happy. Shanta should by now have grown very wise. Tell her I want her to live for eighty years more and do service. I hope Lalita also is quite happy. Do not hesitate to request Premlilabehn¹ for any article of food you may require in the interest of your health. Kanti is better now and keeps cheerful. He has lost some weight, though. I will write to Jamnabehn. I have at present no news of Madhavdas². There was a letter from him some days ago. Now that you have specially inquired about him, I will write to him in your name. I have received a letter from Manilal and one from Sushila. There is nothing special in them. Both keep good health. Manilal is perfectly calm now. Surendra is still in Wardha. He is helping Jamnalalji there. All the women prisoners are expected to be released today. I have written a few words to each of them. And now the discourse.

The Bhagavad Gita says that the Lord’s bhakta should cultivate solitude. This requires to be carefully grasped. We came into the world alone and shall leave it alone; why, then, should we yearn for anybody’s companionship during the uncertain interval between birth and death? However, though we come alone we also see that we are not altogether alone. We have the company of our parents. Were it not for that, we would not be able to live even for a moment. When we grow up, we generally get married. That also gives us similar company. Then we get the company of friends too. For spiritual progress also we require company to some extent. Why, then, does the Gita advise cultivating solitude? Let us try to understand this point. Think of any companions and you will see that the bond is a sign of our dependence. Father, mother, husband, wife, friend, everybody makes us dependent on him or her to some extent. But one who is a bhakta of the Lord is full of compassion. He is dependent on God alone. He is the only true friend and, besides, He is our charioteer too.... What else can he want who has His company? Mother Gita, therefore, advises us to seek solitude. This does not mean that we should shun the company of fellow beings. It only means that we should not desire it. We should not lose heart when we do not have it and, on the other hand, even in the midst of crores of people, should feel mental solitude and nearness to God. I hope you remember the bhajan: “Friends of the body are selfish, one and all; they will refuse to accompany one at the end.” One who cultivates solitude will never be unhappy anywhere, for he sees only Vishnu in all places. Prahlad, the bhakta, saw Vishnu even in a red-hot pillar. With some effort, everybody can cultivate such love of solitude. All of you have got, unsought, an opportunity to do so. Try and cultivate it.

¹ Premlila Thackersey
² Brother of Kasturba Gandhi

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Bane Patro, pp. 9-11

26. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

KANYAKUMARI,
January 22, 1934

BHAJ VALLABHBHAI,

This time I have not received your letter so far. But I write this as per my rule. We are in Kumarika today. As nobody lives here, the utmost peace reigns. The only sound is of the rupees being counted. The sea is just in front, but it is not roaring.

Devdas and Lakshmi must have reached Delhi now. They visited Raja'. He has not written to me after the visit.

Dr. Bidhan is all right now, though the bone has not set completely. He was lying in bed and working.

It seems the Bihar earthquake has completely destroyed Motihari. Rajendrababu seems to have plunged into relief work as soon as he was released. There was a heart-rending wire from him. I have sent him a wire1 of sympathy. Satisbabu has rushed to Bihar. He informs me that 15,000 people have been hurt. Many people were killed, but their number is not known. A large number of even big houses have been rendered uninhabitable.

Muriel Lester is arriving in February. Most probably she will come and see me in Coonoor. I shall be there from 29th January to 5th February. She is coming from Hong Kong.

1 C. Rajagopalachari
2 Vide “Telegram to Rajendra Prasad”, On or before 22-1-1934.
Prithuraj is accompanying me on the tour for a few days. He has joined from Calicut. He will then go to see Velabehn. In other respects his health has improved very much. He has been helping Chandrashankar. He needs help most.

I found no opposition in Travancore. The crowds were as big as at other places. The Ruler showed complete indifference. C. P.¹ did not come to see me at all. Devdhar is in Trivandrum, where he is making some enquiries about the Co-operative Society. His health has been affected, but he can work and is, therefore, satisfied.

Most probably Kelappan will marry a Christian lady. His connection with the Harijan Sevak Sangh will then end. The lady is a good woman. His desire to marry her seems to be six years old. There is nothing immoral in his intention, but I see that his views are not in harmony with the policy of the Sangh.

I got a letter from Ba. There is nothing special in it. All the same, if I can get a copy made I will send it. I hope you got Mani’s letter which I had sent to you.

All the women will be released today. I have written to all of them. Kishorelal² is still bed-ridden. Jamnalal is going on with his programme energetically. For the present Surendra has been drafted to help in that work.

A German youth named Khuro, has arrived from South Africa. He is in my party at present. He is said to be a correspondent of The Hindu. Poor man, he has been robbed of a sum of Rs. 1,000. Thakkar Bapa has fallen in love with him. He cheerfully works as watchman and porter. He is quite robust and never feels fatigued. He is very active and highly educated. He has become a British subject.

S.’ was taken away by the police. N.’ must have left by now.

Blessings to both from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 65-7

¹ C. P. Ramaswami Iyer, then Dewan of Travancore
² Kishorelal G. Mashruwala
³ The names have been omitted
⁴ Ibid
27. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

January 22, 1934

CHI. BRIJKRISHNA,

Your letter of December 23 has only now reached me here. Other letters too have reached. Henceforth you have to follow the doctor’s instructions and see the result.

The rent of the house is too high but what else can be expected in New Delhi?

Is Krishnan Nair maintaining good health? Is anyone with him?

I am keeping well and so long as God wants to take work from me He will keep me well, since I have made it His responsibility.¹

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 2407

28. LETTER TO HEMPRABHA DAS GUPTA

January 22, 1934

CHI. HEMPRABHA,

I have your letter. Though difficult it is our dharma to bear the unbearable. I am myself having tangible experience of the difficulty just now. Only by passing through the ordeal can our study of the Gita prove its worth.

Let us see what happens and where God leads us.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

I am writing this from Kumarika.

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1707

¹ A word here is obscured by the postmark.
29. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

January 23, 1934

CHI. AMALA,

I had intended to write to you earlier but had no time to do so. I could not appreciate your not writing to me. It was unnatural for you. You would do so, when you are thoroughly absorbed in the work for its sake and not mine.

I am trying to send you to Sabarmati as early as I can. But I have to obtain the permission of the responsible authorities.1 I have not the control there that I have at Wardha. It is a voluntary surrender. I would be guilty of untruth, if I now tried to exercise control.

But please do not think that you are not rendering Harijan service there.

Do write and tell me all about your studies, your work and the tuition you are giving. Are you keeping perfect health now?

Love.

BAPU

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

30. LETTER TO RAMABEHN JOSHI

KANYAKUMARI,

January 23, 1934

CHI. RAMA,

I did get your letter. I am dictating this to Prithuraj. If you train other girls for service and take their help, you will be able to cope with the work. You have done well in starting the study of Hindi. There are so many things which one can learn and all of them may be worth learning. Out of them all one should select the most important subject and concentrate on it to the exclusion of other things. Unless one does this one will learn nothing. Be careful lest, in trying to learn too many things, you endanger your health which has been improving. I am glad that Vimu2 feels at home where she is. When did you last hear

2 Vimala, addressee’s daughter from Dhiru? I wrote to him only yesterday. I had a letter from Kusum in which she had given some news about Dhiru. He seems to be keeping well now. I had written to Joshi again, but I couldn’t know whether he got the letter. I keep very well.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5362

31. LETTER TO PARIKSHITLAL L. MAJMUDAR

January 23, 1934

BHAI PARIKSHITLAL,

You probably know Amalabehn’, the German lady. She is very eager to serve Harijans personally. She is extremely sincere. She is proficient in languages and knows eleven languages of the West. She can be of use as an English teacher. But she is ready to do any work. No salary is to be paid. Can you absorb her there? She is dying to get to work. Try her for some time. You may retain her if she is useful, otherwise send her back to Wardha. Her food of course will be simple. She has stayed there before. If you are frightened of her, you may refuse. Do not feel the slightest hesitation in saying ‘no’.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4000

---

1 Addressee’s son
2 Chhaganlal Joshi, addressee’s husband
3 Margarete Spiegel
32. LETTER TO BHAGWANJI P. PANDYA
January 23, 1934

CHI. BHAGWANJI,

I got your letter. Can’t you get a house in Vadaj even on rent? Is it not possible to get some land near the Harijans’ quarters? You can put up a hut there and live in it. I think the Vadaj experiment is one which should not be abandoned. But please don’t worry about this. I only mean that you should do your best. In other respects it seems you are spending your time well enough. What do you do for your meals?

Do write to me regularly.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 365. Courtesy: Bhagwanji P. Pandya

33. LETTER TO MULCHAND PAREKH

KANYAKUMARI,
January 23, 1934

BHAISHRI MULCHAND,

I rarely come to know about happenings in Gujarat, being, as it were, an exile. I knew about your fever only when you wrote to me about it. I got the postcard just now, and it is fortunate that today is Tuesday, when I am generally not touring, and so can reply to you immediately. If for none else, at least for the sake of Harijans, do recover soon. For the rest, the body must bear the punishment that it may have earned. You will probably have recovered by the time you get this postcard, for I am only at the feet of Mother India. But you are sitting in her lap.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI MULCHAND PAREKH
VARTEJ

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 67
34. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

KANYAKUMARI,
January 23, 1934

CHI. MATHURADAS,

Send me a book of your choice on the subject of child care. It will be very good if your pain goes completely. Ba constantly remembers both of you. There is a reference to you even in her last letter.

My affairs are going on very well.
Persuade Taramati to write.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

I have just receive your letter of the 18th to Chand-[drashankar]¹. You have forgotten to send the cutting. If a person like you forgets, how can I find fault with others? The danger of Swami’s fast has been averted at least for the present. That is why I have not made any noise about it.

BAPU

SHRI MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI
74 WALKESHWAR ROAD
BOMBAY (B.B. & C.I. RLY.)

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

¹ Chandrashankar Prabashankar Shukla, Editor, Harijanbandhu
35. LETTER TO GORDHANBHAI L. BHAKTA
January 23, 1934

BHAI GORDHANBHAI,

I had got your letter. Let me know if you have received any further information about Madhavji. I had only the information you gave me. Where is Bhai Durbari? How is he? Where was his case taken up? Write to me all that you know.

Blessings from
BAPU

SHRI GORDHANBHAI L. BHAKTA
BHAKTA PATIDAR VIDYARTHII ASHRAM
NAVSARI
B. B. & C. I. RLY.

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 10992. Courtesy: Gordhanbhai L. Bhakta

36. INTERVIEW WITH THE MEMBERS OF SELF-RESPECT PARTY
[January 23, 1934]

Q. What is your programme with regard to the Harijan work?
A. My programme is to provide for them schools, hostels, medical aid, facilities for water—generally to do everything that would put them on a par with others.

Q. What of Christian and Mussalman untouchables? We want a programme affecting them also.
A. I have no such grand programme applicable to all. Not that I do not like it, but it is beyond my power to handle. It comes under the movement of swaraj. When swaraj comes, it will be applicable to all, to all the poor of India. Swaraj means among other things a redress of their wrongs.

Q. In South India, we know they are paid wages in kind and there are no fixed hours of work. Why do you not try to get for them more wages and fixed hours of work, instead of appealing for temple-entry?
A. These things do not arise out of untouchability, but from

1 Extracted from Chandrashankar Shukla’s “Weekly Letter”
2 The date is from Harijan, 2-2-1934.
other causes.

Q. The two questions are interwoven.

A. I know they overlap each other. If I succeed in solving this question, I solve the rest. As a physician I know what to do. A physician finds the root of the disease and treats it. Similarly I treat the seat of the disease.

Q. Of course you are more experienced than we are. But we feel that the Harijans want food for their stomachs and a social status. You merely harp upon temple-entry.

A. Surely, you are wrong. You will find only a passing reference to it in all my speeches during the tour. But I cannot do without it.

Q. But do you not say this is a movement of self-purification?

A. I do. There is no question about that. I said that at Palluruthy in the plainest terms possible. The Harijans there accused me of pleading for reform as a Hindu. I pleaded guilty. I do not hide my colours. They said that, if they got all economic facilities, everything would follow; I said, it won’t. And I can give you many instances in support of what I say. You may revile temples if you like. You may not go to them. But you must have the right to go and worship there. You may or may not use it. Not all the Thiyyas feel as you do. Those very Thiyyas at Palluruthy took me to a temple which was essentially a Hindu temple. They were all young men. And did not Narayana Guru Swami establish temples? I know of thousands of Harijans who, when they hear of a temple being opened, have a new lustre in their eyes. They do not know why, but they feel different men. I have seen them transported with joy on entering a temple. They felt themselves face to face with Deity.

Q. We respect you only as a revolutionary leader of a revolutionary people.

A. Then, say a Hindu revolutionary is appearing on the scene and revolutionizing Hinduism. But if I have done wrong to somebody, who is to do reparation but me? I say to Harijans, you may accept the reparation or reject it.

Q. You gave us the name Harijan. We feel, therefore, as if we are a separate community to be known by a separate name. Are you not wounding our susceptibilities by giving us this name?

A. I may be wounding the susceptibilities of half a dozen, but not of others. No other name has been received all round with so much approbation as this has. You should remember that it is not of my coining. So long as they have to be separately designated, some name is necessary. Then why not one that is inoffensive? I have many rationalist friends. One of them complimented me and said, “You speak like a rationalist!” I said, “What else did you think me to be?” You are rationalists in name; I am a rationalist in spirit. But I tell you this much: Let us agree to differ in the matter of temple-entry, and let us agree to work together where we do not differ.

1 Vide “Speech at Palluruthy”, 18-1-1934.

_Harijan, 9-2-1934_

37. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, TINNEVELLY

_January 24, 1934_

Before I refer to the proceedings of this morning, I must take the very first opportunity that has occurred to me of making a reference to a great calamity that has descended upon India, I mean the great earthquake that has desolated fair Bihar. I read yesterday the Viceregal communication. I read also the reports of the Government of Bihar that were published in the papers; and I had a most heart-rending telegram from Babu Rajendra Prasad as soon as he was discharged from his prison. All these communications show what puny mortals we are. We who have faith in God must cherish the belief that behind even this indescribable calamity there is a divine purpose that works for the good of humanity. You may call me superstitious if you like; but a man like me cannot but believe that this earthquake is a divine chastisement sent by God for our sins. Even to avowed scoffers it must be clear that nothing but divine will can explain such a calamity. It is my unmistakable belief that not a blade of grass moves but by the divine will.

What are you and I to do in the face of a calamity of this magnitude? I can only say to you that all of us should contribute our mite to lessen the misery to the best of our ability. But I may not be deflected from the purpose to which, as I believe, by the direction of God, I have dedicated myself for the few months at my disposal; nor have I the authority to turn from their destination the funds that I am just now collecting from you. But with all the earnestness that I can command and in the name of the affection which I know you cherish for me, I must ask you, in spite of your having contributed to this purse, to give all you can save for the sake of those who are today without shelter, food and clothing in the land of Sita. You must show to your brethren and sisters of Bihar, by your sharing your food and clothing with them, that the same blood courses in your veins as in the veins of the Biharis. You can send your contributions to Babu Rajendra Prasad, or you can send them to me and I shall see to it that every pie you give reaches the proper quarters.

---

1 The meeting was held in the morning at the Municipal Market. The audience numbered about 20,000. Reports of the speech also appeared in _The Hindu_, 24-1-1934, and _The Hindustan Times_, 25-1-1934.

For reasons given by the Government and for other reasons best known to them, many persons in their employ are prohibited, or they think they are prohibited, from contributing to the Harijan purse. The orthodox people, who think that I am sinning against them and against the Almighty by engaging in this work, do not give their contributions to this cause. Nor do I expect non-Hindus to contribute to this purse. Therefore, on behalf of afflicted Bihar my appeal is addressed to a much larger audience than those to whom the Harijan appeal is addressed. Here, in the face of this great calamity over which we have no control, let us forget that some of us are Congressmen and others are non-Congressmen, that some of us are Hindus and others are non-Hindus, that some are officials and others non-officials, that some are Englishmen and others are not. Let us remember we are all Indians eating the Indian grain and salt and living on the dumb Indian masses. And as such let us all act and work with one will and absolute unity. Let us supplement in a perfectly unobtrusive manner the measures of relief that may be devised by the official world. Remember that time is the most essential element at the present moment. I shall be glad to know that my appeal has not fallen on deaf ears. I want you to remember that not many years ago, when floods had overtaken this fertile land, the whole of India had come to your succour. Now is your turn to run to the rescue of Bihar.

For me there is a vital connection between the Bihar calamity and the untouchability campaign. The Bihar calamity is a sudden and accidental reminder of what we are and what God is; but untouchability is a calamity handed down to us from century to century. It is a curse brought upon ourselves by our own neglect of a portion of Hindu humanity. Whilst this calamity in Bihar damages the body, the calamity brought about by untouchability corrodes the very soul. Therefore, let this Bihar calamity be a reminder to us that, whilst we have still a few more breaths left, we should purify ourselves of the taint of untouchability and approach our Maker with clean hearts.

_Harijan_, 2-2-1934

38. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, TUTICORN

January 24, 1934

I want you to remember that Province in the north-east of India. It is the place where Sita grew up and Janaka ruled. It is the land where Gautam found divine knowledge. It has many other sacred associations and it is known to you, to me and to every child in India as Bihar and Bihar means “fair land”. Today that fair land has become desolate through earthquakes. Several thousands are said to have died. Many more thousands have suffered injuries from which they are even now suffering excruciating pain. Many fair cities have become heaps of ruin. Aid has been coming to them from all parts of the world. The King has sent a message of sympathy. This divine calamity has suddenly reminded us that all humanity is one; and as is but right and proper, in the face of this calamity the Government and the people have become one. For the time being distinctions between Congressmen and non-Congressmen have been abolished, and all parties are supplementing the efforts of one another. I want you to be “superstitious” enough with me to believe that the earthquake is a divine chastisement for the great sin we have committed and are still committing against those whom we describe as untouchables, _Panch-amas_, and whom I describe as Harijans. Let us derive the lesson from this calamity that this earthly existence is no more permanent than that of the moths we see every night dancing round lights for a few minutes and then being destroyed. This earthly existence of ours is more brittle than the glass bangles that ladies wear. You can keep glass bangles for thousands of years if you treasure them in a chest and let them remain untouched. But this earthly existence is so fickle that it may be wiped out in the twinkling of an eye. Therefore, whilst we have yet breathing time, let us get rid of the distinctions of high and low, purify our hearts, and be ready to face our Maker when an earthquake or some natural calamity or death in the ordinary course overtakes us.

1 About 25,000 people attended this meeting and various addresses and purses were presented to Gandhiji. At the end of the meeting the addresses were auctioned.
The electric light company in this town has generously provided this feast of lights and I tender my congratulations to them. I would like them to spare some of the money and send it to afflicted Bihar. There are, I know, in Tuticorin many merchants and others who can pay much more than they have paid now. I know also that, for many reasons, only a limited number of people would contribute to this Harijan purse. But I invite all of them without distinction of age, caste or creed, including Government servants, to give whatever they can to the sufferers in Bihar.¹

_Harijan, 2-2-1934, and The Hindu, 26-1-1934_

39. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

January 25, 1934

CHI. MARY,

Your letter. I am glad your class and you are getting on. So far as I am concerned, I do not mind your staying there even permanently if thereby you find full self-expression and inward joy. But it is better, I know, to decide in conjunction with Jamnalalji.

Yes, the combination of _takli_-spinning and English is fine.

Have you followed the desolation of Bihar by nature and of Midnapur by man’s greed of wealth and power? The two things more than fill my thoughts today and I am constantly seeking God’s guidance.

You seem to be keeping well.

I had a firmly written letter from N., as airy as before but full of love. S. has been taken away by the police. They are being sent to America.

Love.

BAPU

[PS.]

Herewith programme.

From a photostat: G.N. 6018. Also C.W. 3347. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

¹ _The Hindu_, 26-1-1934, carried two reports of the speech, dated January 24 and 25. These have been collated with the _Harijan_ version.

² Betul. _Vide_ also “Letter to F. Marry Barr”, 4-1-1934.
40. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

January 25, 1934

Chh. Prabhati,

I have not heard from you recently. I feel worried because of the terrible earthquake. Where is Jayaprakash? How are both of you? Following the earthquake I had expected a detailed letter from you. I take it both of you must be busy with relief work just now. Is Rajeshwar at Kashi? I have asked you in a previous letter to send me his address, etc. I have also inquired from which month I should send him the amounts. I will arrange to send them after I get your reply.

I have also asked you to let me know what you have done regarding other expenses.

Blessings from

Bapu

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3442

41. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, RAJAPALAYAM

January 25, 1934

I thank you for your addresses and purses; but neither your addresses nor your purses will give me any satisfaction whatsoever, unless you have made up your mind that there shall be no untouchability in your hearts. And that means that we have to forget that there are some people who are high and some that are low amongst us. Untouchability as we are practising it today can have no divine sanction. You know what is happening today and what has happened in Bihar. Many of you may not have at all heard the name of Bihar, and yet it is as much a part of India as this Presidency. The people who are living in Bihar are as much our countrymen as people in this part of India, and there, it is said, nearly 20,000 people died in an earthquake. Many thousand more are suffering from injuries sustained and still more are homeless. Now why should this calamity

---

1 Younger brother of Jayaprakash Narayan
2 Over ten thousand people attended the meeting. Purses and addresses of welcome were presented by Gandhi Reception Committee and various other organizations. A gold medal with Gandhiji’s figure inscribed on it was also presented. At the end of the meeting the addresses were auctioned.
come upon us? I request you to think with me. Is this great calamity a punishment for our sin? What is the great sin we are committing and have committed? Why should we not take this as a warning to us? The wrong we have done is staring us in the face. We believe, in the name of religion, that thousands of our own countrymen are born ‘untouchables’. Is it right? It is an insolence that we must get rid of, at all costs. I would like you, even as you have paid to the Harijan cause, to contribute your mite to the poverty-stricken citizens of Bihar. Do not think that you can give no more because you have given for the Harijan cause. If your neighbours go without food and without cloth, you have got to protect them. I hope therefore that you will all do whatever is possible for them.

The Hindu, 26-1-1934

42. LETTER TO LAKSHMI NARAYAN AGRAWAL

January 26, 1934

Bhai Lakshmibabu¹:

Rajendrababu has given me news of your having lost all your nearest and dearest.² How can I console you? Where thousands are dead, consolation can hardly mean anything. This is a moment when we must tell ourselves that everyone is a relative. Then no one will feel bereaved. If we can cultivate this attitude of mind, death itself is abolished. For that which lives cannot die. Birth and death are an illusion. Know this to be the truth and, overcoming grief, stick to your duty.

Blessings from

Bapu

[From Hindi]

Jivan Sahitya, pp. 256-7

¹ Secretary, All-India Spinners’ Association
² All members of his family were killed when their house in Muzaffarpur
  District in Bihar collapsed during the earthquake.
Gandhiji addressed the gathering as “Brother Banias” and said that though he began his speech with a smile he knew their hearts were heavy with the Bihar disaster. He wanted them to give not in a miserly manner.

I believe that every pice in the rupee given to the poor Harijans’ cause is a pice given for self-purification and for reparation. I must omit the other parts of the interesting address. You have spoken about Hindi and you have spoken about the message of the charkha and if merchants will not be the custodians of the national wealth—and the symbol of our nation’s prosperity is the charkha—who will be? Again, if your word is sincere, I should expect you to be able to speak and understand the lingua franca as you call it.

And if you really swear by the charkha, then I should expect you to be dressed in hand-spun and hand-woven khadi. And if you did so, you would only give the poorest of the poor some return for the vast trade you have with the poorest of the poor. Therefore I would ask you to translate your address into action.

Now I must begin speaking straightaway about Bihar. I have just now received a letter written by Babu Rajendra Prasad who was discharged from the jail hospital. The hospital where he was laid up, which is as big as the General Hospital at Madras, shook in the earthquake. You can imagine what the tremor must have been like when a big hospital would have to be emptied. And today that hospital is a howling wilderness. Heaven knows where all the sick men of that hospital are located. That is only about one hospital. In Jubbulpore, in Bihar [sic], in Muzaffarpore and Motihari these are practically razed to the ground. Twenty-five thousand people at least are supposed to have died. That means, buried alive. Many more thousands are lying in an injured condition. Still many more are homeless and foodless, and still under fear of the recurrence of the earthquake.

They are all in open spaces, in shivering and bitter cold of which you in Madura can have no notion. You and I can afford to sit in a

---

1 The reception, which took place in the morning in the Victoria Edward Hall, was arranged by the Madura Ramnad Chamber of Commerce and the Bombay Hindu Merchants of Madura. Addresses and purses were presented to Gandhiji. A brief report also appeared in Harijan, 2-2-1934.
comfortable hall like this. All your enjoyment and my enjoyment will go on uninterrupted. I believe many of you will find yourselves in a theatre or cinema tonight. Well, I want you to think of this that has happened in Bihar and then ask yourselves whatever big or little you can do for those who are suffering. I want you, whilst I am here, to collect a fat purse not in a miserly manner but to divide your spoils with the people who are afflicted in Bihar. I know that you are all believers in God. Our forefathers have taught us to think that whenever a calamity descends upon a people, that calamity comes because of our personal sins. You know that when the rains do not come in time we perform sacrifices and ask gods to send us rains and forgive us our sins owing to which rains are detained. And it is not only here—I have seen it in England and South Africa. When there is a visitation of locusts or the rivers are in flood, they appoint days of humiliation and days of fasting and pray to God to remove the calamity from their midst. And then I want you to believe with me that for this absolutely unthinkable affliction in Bihar your sins and my sins are responsible. And then when I ask myself what can be that atrocious sin that we must have committed to deserve such a calamity which staggers us and which today probably has staggered the whole world,—within living memory there is no record of an earthquake of this magnitude in India— I tell you the conviction is growing on me that this affliction has come to us because of this atrocious sin of untouchability. I beseech you not to laugh within yourself and think I want to appeal to your instinct of superstition. I don’t. I am not given to making any appeal to the superstitious fears of people. I may be called superstitious, but I cannot help telling you what I feel deep down in me. I do not propose to take up your time and my time by elaborating this. You are free to believe it or to reject it. If you believe with me, then you will be quick and think there is no such thing as untouchability as we practise it today in the Hindu Shastras. You will think with me that it is a diabolical sin to think of any human being as an untouchable. It is man’s insolence that tells him that he is higher than any other. I tell you, the more I think of it the more I feel that there cannot be a greater sin than for a man to consider that he is higher than any single being. All the good men of the world and all the wise men of the world whom I know anything of, and I know a great deal, have all said that they are the lowest of the low. But here unfortunately with us our life is bound up with the idea of high and low. I want you, wise merchants that you are, to realize the truth. If you realize the truth and forget that there is anyone who can be called an ‘untouchable’ and lower than ourselves and if you feel that this is the least prayaschitta that you ought to make, then of course you will take the earliest step to send succour to Bihar people. I would like you, the Chamber of Commerce and the Gujarati friends, to remember this thing and take some concrete measures today and report to me.

The Hindu, 27-1-1934

44. *REPLY TO CIVIC ADDRESS, MADURA*¹

January 26, 1934

MEMBERS OF THE MUNICIPAL COUNCIL AND FRIENDS,

In the first instance I would like to tender my apologies to you for not keeping the appointments in connection with the receipt of your address. But Nature allows no interference with her superior will. So in spite of all the best efforts put forth yesterday, it was not possible to reach Madura before quarter past eleven last night. I thank you for the address that you have given me. I am glad to note that you have made reference to hand-spinning, Hindi and such activities which are dear to me. And since you believe in hand-spinning as a cottage industry essential for the seven hundred thousand villages of India, I should expect that the councillors in their homes and in all manner open to them would insist on the use of hand-spun and hand-woven khaddar.

I am glad that you recognize the importance of Hindi as a national language. I have no doubt in my mind that as English is the language highly important for the international and commercial purposes, so is Hindi important for the interprovincial purposes. Yet I wish that it was possible for you to have enabled wanderers like me to speak to you in the national language.

I tender you my sincere congratulations on the absence of the Hindu-Muslim problem here. I wish that your example will prove contagious and infectious and that all over India we shall forget the Hindu-Muslim differences.

You tell me that so far as Harijans are concerned you give them equal opportunity in the matter of education and other civic amenities and privileges. I am sure, at least I hope, that you do not mean all that you have said in this paragraph. For, if you really believe what you say, it means Harijans who are already labouring under a heavy handicap must eternally labour under that handicap because they are to get no more than equal opportunities. You will succeed in giving them equal opportunities only when you have removed the handicap under which they are labouring. I will tell you what I mean. I have come after having visited three cheries under the guidance of my friend, the translator—Mr. A. Vaidyanatha Aiyar—and as I claim I have an eye for sanitation, I had no difficulty in discovering that, if you will pardon my saying so, the Municipality has done very little to its most useful servants. You will admit that it will be ludicrous to suggest that the inmates of the cheries have equal opportunities to live as they like with the citizens of Madura who may be living in palaces. One cheri I visited is surrounded by water and drains on all sides. In the rainy season, it must be a place unfit for human habitation. Another thing is, it is below the road level and all those places are flooded during rains. The cottages in all the three cheries are built anyhow. There is no lay-out of streets or lanes and cottages in many places have no vents worth the name. In all cases without exception they are so low that you cannot enter in and get out without bending double. And in all cases the upkeep of the place is certainly not even to the minimum sanitary standard. It gives me comfort that you have resolved to construct model cheries with lighting and water facilities. May I suggest to you that in all such matters time is of the essence? I wish that in giving effect to this resolution of yours you have a rigidly fixed time-limit within which you would demolish the present cottages and get these poor people a chance of living somewhat like you and me. And here let me remind you that you are most fortunate in having a band of sisters who are devoting their whole attention to the betterment of these fellow-citizens of ours. You can harness their energy and their effort free of charge. I thank you once again for the address you have given me.

¹ This was in reply to the address of welcome by the Chairman of the Municipality.

The Hindu, 27-1-1934
45. SPEECH AT WOMEN’S MEETING, MADURA

January 26, 1934

Gandhiji addressing the ladies said that he was very glad to see such a huge gathering of ladies. Their presence in such large numbers showed not merely the love they had for him, but that they entirely approved of the cause for which he had purposely come there. They must show their affection by removing untouchability. Untouchability was the greatest of the sins. No human being should ever say that he or she was superior to another person whether they be amongst caste Hindus or as between caste Hindus on the one hand and Harijans on the other. He also asked them to show their love by giving monetary help which was the least they could do. That was to be only an earnest of what they had to do. In conclusion, he appealed to them, as he would be leaving the meeting immediately, to give whatever ornaments or money they were willing to part with for the Harijan cause into the hands of Mirabehn.

The Hindu, 28-1-1934

46. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, MADURA

January 26, 1934

I am very much obliged to you for all these addresses, purses and gifts. This is not my first visit to Madura, but I think that the crowd that I see now is mightier than what I saw last time. I hope this is a sure sign of your determination to get rid of untouchability. I do not need now to repeat to you that it is a very great sin that savarna Hindus are committing against humanity in believing that untouchability has divine sanction. I have not hesitated to say that most probably the calamity which has come to India through the earth-quake in Bihar is a fit punishment awarded to us by God for this great sin of untouchability. But whether it is so or not, it is necessary that you should go to the alleviation of the sufferings of the people of Bihar. I might say that when we have visitations of this character they have not

---

1 The meeting held at the West Masi Theatre at 3 p.m. was attended by more than five thousand women. Purses and addresses of welcome were presented by various women’s organizations. A few women donated their jewellery also.

2 The meeting was held at 5.45 p.m. on the grounds near Manal Road and was largely attended. Addresses of welcome and purses, one of them of Rs. 4,944, were presented to Gandhiji on behalf of the public.
only a physical reason, but they carry with them also spiritual consequences; and if it is a superstition, it is a superstition which I share in common with practically all mankind. You may, if you like, reject this belief of mine. But if we would but rise from the inertia which has overtaken us and has paralysed our vision, we would at once see as clearly as daylight that untouchability as it is practised today cannot be defended on any ground whatsoever. And hence it is an evil which is lying in our hearts and has vital connection with every one of us. It does not lend itself to any legal or parliamentary treatment. It depends wholly upon each one of us definitely changing our hearts. This is, as I have always said, an act of self-purification and reparation. The gifts that you have given are merely an earnest of the reparation that you are to make, and it consists in every savarna Hindu definitely believing that there is no person who can be regarded as an untouchable by birth. It means that we must get out of us that unseen and insolent belief that we are superior to some others. On this earth there is no person high and no person low. We are all the children of the same one God and therefore each one of us is undoubtedly equal in God’s estimation. And I believe that if you can get rid of the belief of high and low, all the different communities and classes could live in unity and amity.

Continuing, Gandhiji referred to a subject which he said was assuming serious proportions in Madura. It was one touching upon the wellbeing of the Harijans. As he had already demonstrated with facts and figures, several thousands of women belonging to the Harijan class earned a few pice a day by the spinning-wheel. But the practice among some merchants in passing off mill-cloth as hand-spun khaddar was depriving even the few pice that went into the pockets of the Harijans. By this he did not condemn mill-cloth but only wanted that mill-yarn should not be passed as khaddar. And he at the same time asked the purchasers to make sure that the cloth they purchased was genuine khaddar.¹

_The Hindu, 28-1-1934_

¹ At the end of the meeting Gandhiji auctioned the gifts and addresses.
47. SPEECH AT HINDI PRACHAR SABHA, MADURA

January 26, 1934

Gandhiji . . . congratulated the certificate-holders and prize-winners and proceeded to speak about the merits of the Hindi language. He pointed out that being akin to all other Indian languages Hindi was the easiest medium for the intercourse of thought among the peoples of India. Further, unlike the English language, it had an atmosphere about it which was thoroughly Indian. In all walks of life in India, Hindi served as a common medium of communication of thoughts and ideas. It was particularly useful for merchants and commercial people. By devoting one hour a day one could get a working knowledge of Hindi in about six months, but more than that one should keep in touch with it so as not to forget what one had learnt. To acquire literary proficiency one will have to devote more time.

The Hindu, 28-1-1934

48. SPEECH AT MEETING OF LABOURERS, MADURA

January 26, 1934

FELLOW LABOURERS.

It has given me very great pleasure to be in your midst. I call you ‘fellow labourers’, by design. When I was hardly 23 years old, or 24 it might be, I came in touch with Balasundaram. Balasundaram was an indentured labourer. I had the good fortune to handle his case. I then learnt a great deal about the hardships of labour. The bond between the labourers and myself became closer and closer and I threw myself entirely into their hands. If I did not become an indentured labourer myself, they realized that I was one with them myself. That is the reason why I call myself a labourer. Now I want to tell you something of what this self-purification movement is.

I have just heard that when I was fasting in the Yeravda jail you were the first to hold a meeting to show your sympathy. You did then

---

1 After the address of welcome, which was in Hindi, was presented, Gandhiji gave away prizes and certificates to the meritorious students. At the end of the meeting Gandhiji auctioned the address and the other presents.

2 The meeting, arranged by the Madura Mills Labour Union, was held at 7 p.m. in the compound of the Mills school. Over five thousand labourers attended. Harijan, 2-2-1934, also carried a report.

3 Vide “An Autobiography—Part II, Chapter XX”, 3-2-1929
a great deal of work. But I am not sure that you understand what all that meant. You know that even among the labourers there are vast divisions and one considers the other lower than oneself. Now, so long as you believe that there are some who are lower than yourself or some who are higher than yourself, you have not got the spirit of the movement. Therefore, you must feel in your heart that there is nothing in this difference and abolish it. Among you also I know that there are many caste Hindu labourers and many Harijan labourers. You must forget, if you have understood this movement, that there are any untouchables. And, you must consider every labourer as equal as you and your blood-brother are. If you can rise to that stage, you would immediately understand what happiness there will be for your own good and for the good of the country. Under the circumstances, I would like to tell you, friends, in this self-purification movement you will be expected to discard the intoxicating drink altogether. If there are any amongst you at all who are used to eating carrion and beef, you must leave it. You will give up gambling. Do not incur debts. And, if you have in your midst any Muslim labourers also, you must deal with them and live with them on terms of affection. You ought to take a personal interest in the work that they may be doing.

While you have perfect right to demand good treatment from the employers, adequate wages from them and proper quarters, it is expected of you that you will render proper and honest service for the wages that you get. If you will only consider for a moment, you will find, by reason of your being employed as labourers of a particular concern, you become part proprietors of that concern, in the same way as those who had invested money. Labour, as a matter of fact, is as much money as metallic coin. In the same way as money, labour is also put in a particular concern. Just as without money your labour will be useless, so all the money of the world will be useless if there is no labour. Therefore, you must take a pride in the concern where you are labouring. While on the one hand you will be after your rights as part proprietors, on the other hand, considering that concern as yours, render your honest service for that concern.

Last, I am glad that you have given me a small purse for the Harijan cause and I thank you also for the photo-frames you have given. They will also be sold for the Harijan cause.

The Bombay Chronicle, 3-2-193
49. TELEGRAM TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

Madura South,
January 27, 1934

JAMNALAL BAJAJ
GONDIA

TELEGRAM JUST RECEIVED. IF PATNA REQUIRES YOUR PRESENCE INTERRUPT PROGRAMME NOT OTHERWISE.

BAPU

Panchven Putrako Bapake Ashirvad, p. 122

50. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

January 27, 1934

CHI. AMALA,

I have your postcard. My letter must have crossed it. You will have seen from it that I was actually moving to have you sent to Sabarmati if only by way of trial.'

I hope you are keeping well. Did I tell you that that German friend was with us for some days? He has made himself quite useful.

Love.

BAPU

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

51. SPEECH AT MUNICIPAL COUNCIL MEETING
KARAIKUDI

January 27, 1934

MR. CHAIRMAN AND MEMBERS OF THE MUNICIPAL COUNCIL,

You were good enough to supply me with a copy of the translation of your address, for which I thank you and also for the address itself. I thank you also for the purse that you have given me. I suppose this includes the offerings of the public and not merely of the Municipal Corporation.

Now you have said that the Council has under consideration various ambitious schemes and efforts will be made to carry them out soon after the present depression is got over. I suggest to you that this is hardly enough. Apart from the fact that this is so vague, there is no thought of a definite realization of the object, and that Harijans’ uplift cannot wait for better times to come. Better times will follow our proper treatment of the Harijans.

It is not necessary for me to elaborate that which has affected the whole of my fundamental being. If the members of the Council have been at all following what I have been saying at different places or will follow what I shall be saying at the different places I shall be visiting in Chettinad, I think you will find what I am really after and what it is possible for all municipalities to do within their means. What I have suggested is nothing so drastic that it would be beyond the capacity of the municipalities to do. I am fully conscious of the steps you have taken and the enterprise you have shown for the benefits of the citizens here. I thank the gentleman who has contributed Rs. 10,000 for the uplift of the Harijans. I thank you once more for the address.

The Hindu, 29-1-1934

52. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, KARAIKUDI

January 27, 1934

It is a matter of great satisfaction to me to renew my acquaintance with you. I thank you for the addresses and the purses that have been presented to me for the Harijan cause. The proprietor of the Anand Bhawan has helped me this afternoon by presenting a donation of Rs. 151 for the Harijan cause and Rs. 151 for the afflicted countrymen in Bihar. I wish you all to follow that example. You must have read today a notice published by Babu Rajendra Prasad and supported by Pandit Madan Mohan Malaviya. The notice invites the whole of India to observe tomorrow as the day for the relief of the Bihar sufferers. It means that the whole of India is invited to contribute its mite towards relieving the material sufferings of our countrymen in Bihar. As you know several big palaces have been desolated by this calamity. I hope therefore that you in Chettinad will not allow tomorrow to pass by, without expressing your tangible sym-

1 Nearly 15,000 people attended the meeting. Purses and addresses of welcome were presented to Gandhiji. At the end the addresses and presents were auctioned.
pathy towards those who are suffering so terribly in fair Bihar. Let us not delude ourselves into the belief that when we have paid a few rupees or given a few bangles towards alleviating this suffering, we shall have discharged our obligations. I would like you tomorrow to enter into the sanctuary of your hearts and examine the causes of this calamity. Geologists and such other scientists will undoubtedly give us physical and material causes of such calamities. But the belief has been entertained all the world over by religiously minded people, especially by the Hindus, that there are spiritual causes for such visitations. I entertain the honest and deep conviction that such visitations are due to the great sin that we have committed towards humanity and to God. For long, long years, we have not been treating our fellowmen properly as our own brethren and should we not take this as a warning sent to us to correct our way of life? This earthquake has razed big palaces to the ground and has done immense harm to thousands of people, but the great harm caused by the insolence of man to brother man has not only destroyed the body of Harijans, but it has terribly destroyed the Harijans’ soul itself. Whilst therefore you are, as I wish you will be, thinking over your duty towards the afflicted people of Bihar, I do hope that you will understand that there is an invariable connection in a way between this untouchability designed by man and this calamity. God could never design that one class of men should suppress another class of men. I would therefore like you tomorrow to send your subscriptions to the afflicted men in Bihar with a determination that henceforth you are not going to maintain untouchability and consider a single human-being lower than yourself. No matter what may be said to the contrary, I maintain that in the books of Hindu Shastras there is no warrant whatsoever for untouchability as we practise it today. You in Chettinad have been blessed with riches. You have enough intelligence to understand the conditions to which these Harijans have been reduced today. I wish you, young men, whom I see around me, and young women also to examine the conditions of these men and devote both your intelligence and your material resources to the improvement of their conditions. I have called this movement a movement of self-purification and penance. I invite these women and men to take their full share in this movement.

The Hindu, 29-1-1934
53. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, DEVACOTTAH

January 27, 1934

Replying to the address he said that he was not at all surprised with the purse given to him, because he had expected a large amount from Devacottah. He was glad to find himself amongst them to renew old acquaintances. He then appealed for liberal contributions to the earthquake-stricken Bihar. Many thousands were buried alive and many more were injured. Many more thousands were left there homeless, foodless, and clothless, lying in the open and shivering with cold. They needed relief. He appealed to them to observe tomorrow as All-India Bihar Day when liberal contributions should be made to alleviate the sufferings of the afflicted people in Bihar. He hoped that the youths of Devacottah would prove true to their promise contained in their address that they would go from door to door to raise a large sum on behalf of the Bihar sufferers.

The Hindu, 29-1-1934

54. TELEGRAM TO RAJENDRA PRASAD

MADURA, [On or before January 28, 1934]
I AM DOING EVERYTHING POSSIBLE. WIRE MAGANLAL PRANJIVAN 14 MOGUL STREET RANGOON FOR SUBSCRIPTION. WIRE POSITION.

The Bombay Chronicle, 29-1-1934

1 Over 16,000 people attended this meeting. An address along with a purse was presented to Gandhiji. At the end of the meeting the address and the presents, which included gold and silver articles, were auctioned.
55. LETTER TO PREMI JAIRAMDAS

January 28, 1934

MY DEAR PREMA,

I have your card. Tell Father I shall be touring in Tamil Nad till nearly 23rd February, and then for 10 days in Karnatak. The programme after that is not yet fixed.

Love.

Yours,

BAPU

[PS.]

Hope Dr. Choithram is keeping well.

SHRI PREMBEHN
PREMBHAVAN, MARKET RD.
HYDERABAD
SIND

From the original: C.W. 9248. Courtesy: Jairamdas Doulatram

56. LETTER TO PREMABEHN KANTAK

January 28, 1934

CHI. PREMA,

I could only now finish reading your letter. I had to read it in three instalments.

I was certain that you would not desire to come to see me. When I heard, however, that you wanted to come, I advised you to exercise self-control but did not forbid you to come. The resolution which you and others made to return to jail as soon as you were released was the only proper course for you. But how can we force those others who have weakened?

I see from your letter that it is doubtful even whether you will get this letter.

I had indeed preserved, with great love, the yarn spun from the slivers sent by you. Labels in Mahadev’s beautiful handwriting were also attached to it. But I don’t know what happened to it during my fast. It is possible that Mahadev has preserved it and got it stored away safely somewhere. Mahadev is at present strictly forbidden to write letters and so it is a little difficult to write to him and inquire.

You should see that the yarn which you spun is woven into khadi without delay. Ramji should be asked to weave it.

I see that you have done a very good amount of reading. If you feel inclined, read carefully Tulsidas’s Ramayana, the Bible and the Koran. If you can, complete the study of Urdu which you have started. You have made excellent use of your time.

Many things have been left out in your letter. I do hope you have written another after that.

What you write concerning Lilavati is correct. It is difficult to say anything about her future.

I advised you to go through the issues of Harijan so that you might know what developments had taken place on that issue during the past few months. If, however, you did not get time, it is natural that you could not read them.

This time you may get ‘C’ class. I would welcome that.

I see that Kisan’s body and mind have improved. She is still weak, though. I don’t think we can burden her with any work. She does whatever work she can do, but she soon gets tired. She needs plenty of sleep. The company which she gets here seems to have proved congenial to her. Though she is twice as old as Om, the two have become good friends. It is difficult to say which of the two has the chief share in this. Both seem to be extremely sociable. To me she doesn’t seem to be 28 at all.

I didn’t get, after all, the letter which you wrote from jail. About myself, what should I write? My health has remained quite good and can stand the strain of work all right. I hardly get time to write letters.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 10354. Also C.W. 6793. Courtesy: Premabehn Kantak

---

2 On both the occasions the addressee was given ‘B’ class.
57. SPEECH AT LAYING OF FOUNDATION-STONE FOR HARIJAN SCHOOL, DEVACOTTAH

January 28, 1934

I am obliged to you for this address and for your determination to help the poor and give them all possible facilities and freedom. I am glad to learn that you have opened a free library to all without caste distinction. It has also given me very great pleasure to lay today the foundation-stone for the school which is designed for the use of all people without distinction including Harijans. I hope that the school will be a prosperous one in the sense that it will be attended by all classes and you will take care to engage such teachers as will give real education, to the boys and girls who enter here, both of the heart and the head.¹

The Hindu, 30-1-1934

58. SPEECH AT HARIJAN CHERI, CHITHANUR

January 28, 1934

Gandhiji complimented them on their having a progressive school, and referring to the Harijan-Nattar problem, said:

I had known about the trouble between the Harijans and Nattars. It is undoubtedly unfortunate that among the Hindus themselves there should be any such trouble. It is undoubtedly shameful that there should be interference even with your freedom to dress and to move how you like. I have not the shadow of doubt that you have precisely the same rights to the use of temples and roads and to regulate your habits of dress as the so-called savarna Hindus have, and I would like you to shed the fear you have of being molested in the exercise of your liberty. I would like you to be brave and courageous and face the sufferings in the exercise of your freedom. You should also remember and know that at the present moment there is a growing body of reformers who are your true friends and servants, and I have no doubt that they will stand by you in your sufferings. But remember in your sufferings let there be no hate.

Continuing, Gandhiji made a forceful appeal for their abstaining from drink and eating carrion.

The Hindu, 30-1-1934

¹ At the conclusion of the meeting the presents were auctioned.
59. INTERVIEW WITH THE NATTARS, DEVACOTTAH

January 28, 1934

Gandhiji spoke at first for fifteen minutes. He said even while in Poona the Nattar-Harijan question had been brought to his notice. He knew what was happening here. Nattars and Harijans had quarrelled and he knew of it. But he wanted to tell them as a Hindu that the Harijans had not asked for anything to which they were not entitled as Hindus and as human beings. The Harijans had every right to wear what dress they pleased or what ornaments. Why should they not? Why should the Nattars have a sense of offence at this? He asked Nattars to understand what was happening in the world today. They could not resist reforms. They should be kind to the Harijans who were their blood-brothers. They were the children of the same great God, ‘whose mercy was full to all men alike’; the Nattars and Harijans were members of the same family.

Learned men might hold that untouchability had a sanction in the Hindu Shastras. But he would assure them that he had looked into the question most carefully and would assure them that there were many learned men and many holy men who were Hindus who held that untouchability as practised today had absolutely no sanction in the Shastras. Could untruths be in the Shastras? Untouchability was an untruth. Therefore, they should not debate this question but act in accordance with truth.

One elderly Nattar stood up and stated that they had no quarrel with the Harijans who kept the old order in Hindu society. But now the Harijans were violating established traditions and customs. The Nattars never objected to Harijan women wearing what dress they liked. In regard to the Harijan men it was only on public occasions and in temple festivals that the Nattars insisted on the Harijans observing old customs.

Gandhiji replied that the Nattars should look into the question and decide whether any particular tradition was good or bad and act accordingly. But the Nattar leader continued to insist that established tradition could not be violated. Gandhi answered that there were certain laws common to all human society and one of them was that no body of men could force on another body of men particular modes of dress and ornaments, etc. If the Harijans wanted a change in regard to these matters, why should they be prevented? If, on this account, the Nattars molested the Harijans and the matter went to a court of law the Nattars’ case would be rejected at once. Religion, dharma and established law alike forbade such interference.

He then made a final appeal to the Nattars and said that they should not allow matters to drift but make up their minds to do justice to the Harijans and treat them kindly and affectionately as brothers. Such a procedure would benefit both the Nattars and the Harijans alike. If he had any doubt that his advice would benefit the Harijans only and not the Nattars, he would have hesitated to tender this advice. But he was absolutely convinced that his advice would be beneficial and bring lasting good not only to the Harijans but to the Nattars also.

After the Nattar leader garlanded Gandhiji, the function terminated at 5 minutes to 1.45 p.m.

_The Hindu, 30-1-1934_

60. INTERVIEW TO “THE HINDU”

_January 28, 1934_

I had an hour’s conversation with a very large number of Nattars. Their leaders spoke frankly. I put it to the Nattar representatives present that it was wrong for them to plead the usage of custom in favour of depriving fellow-beings of liberty of action as to their mode of dress or use of ornaments. I am hoping that my conversation will produce the desired effect.

The Nattars were very attentive to what I said to them. What gives me hope however is the fact that there are some Nattars who are earnest about reforms. Besides, there is also an increasing awakening among Harijans themselves regarding their elementary rights. There is no mistaking the fact that the phenomenal awakening that has taken place over the untouchability question is slowly affecting the villagers who were hitherto untouched by anything happening outside their own respective villages.

Answering another question, whether there was any attempt on the part of H. H. Puri Shankarachariar to see him at Devacottah, Gandhiji replied:

His representative did see me and I said I would gladly have friendly discussion with him by appointment, but there was no time left in Devacottah. The letter reached me only a few minutes before 1 o’clock yesterday, when I was to have a conference with the Nattar representatives but as I have said, I would gladly set apart an hour at Coonoor, if that would suit His Holiness. In fact, I have gone out of my way to hold friendly conversations with those who claimed to be sanatanists.

_The Hindu, 29-1-1934_

1 The Hindu representative had asked Gandhiji to give his impressions of the Nattar-Harijan problem.

2 Vide the preceding item and also “Among the Nattars”, 9-2-1934.
61. TELEGRAM TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

PODANUR,
January 29, 1934

SETH JAMNALALJI
WARDHA

SENT REPLY WARDHA. UNNECESSARY INTERRUPT WORK UNLESS RAJENDRAPRASAD REQUIRES YOUR PRESENCE. SPECIALLY SENDING PATNA RELEASED SABARMATI MEN. RAJENDRAPRASAD WANTS THEM.

BAPU

Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, p. 122

62. TELEGRAM TO PADMAJA NAIDU

COONOOR,
January 29, 1934

PADMAJA
GOLDEN THRESHOLD
HYD. (DN.)

CERTAINLY ATTEND EXCLUSIVELY BIHAR CALAMITY.1 LOVE.

GANDHI

From the original: Padmaja Naidu Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

63. LETTER TO RAOJIBHAI N. PATEL

January 28/29, 1934

CHI. RAOJIBHAI,

I got your letter. It seems all of you have had invaluable experiences this time. Do come, if you needs must see me. If correspondence will do, then exercise self-control. I am at such a distance that you cannot reach here without spending a large sum. About three weeks more yet will be spent in Tamil Nadu. We shall be able to go to 1 An earthquake had rocked Bihar on January 15, resulting in largescale loss of life and property.

Karnataka only in the last week of February. It, therefore, seems to me best that everybody who can manage without coming here should do so. If, however, you feel that it is absolutely necessary for you to come, then come without any hesitation.

It is not yet fixed where I shall be on which date.

(I dictated this while eating and had to stop; now I am writing the rest of the letter in the train which is taking me to Coonoor.)

You will know the programme when you reach Madras. You cannot come to meet me anywhere unless you first come to Madras. You must have seen the wire I sent yesterday to Chimanlal. Rajendrababu needs experienced persons. If you can go, do so. It is one’s duty at this juncture to suspend the programme of jail-going and rush to Bihar instead.

I am quite well. You will know more if you go through the back issues of Harijan.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]
I have given more details in my letter to Chimanlal. Please read it.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9001

64. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

ON WAY TO COONOOR,
January 29, 1934

CHI. MATHURADAS,

I have your letter. It was good you talked to Jinnah and others. Of course in my opinion nothing is going to come of it. Nothing will be gained by the Congress becoming a party to it. In my view the British Government’s decision should be accepted. Because except for my opposing it on behalf of the Congress, I can recall no one opposing the British decision. And if it is a question of giving Muslims

1 These are not traceable.
2 Ibid
3 This was in reply to the addressee’s suggestion for an appeal to foreign countries for help to the victims of the Bihar earthquake.
what they ask, why should the decision be opposed? This of course is true: the White Paper will remain white and its articles will remain unimplemented. If that happens the resolution about policies will remain buried and with it all else.

I have not been able to write to Gokhale and Bapa Sola. Each day I want to write but I am not able to do it. Even this I am writing on the train. Even though I get up at 3 a.m. I cannot attend to all the secretarial work. I hope to do it at Coonoor.

Bihar and Midnapur have raised a storm in my heart. I have written about it to Swami. Read it if you have not done so. Rajendra Babu asks for the help of the Ashram inmates who have been released. I have sent a telegram to Ahmedabad and another to Swami also. I would have suggested that you go, too, if you were fit. If the need arises for you to go even at the obvious risk to your health, you may have to go. I do not see the need at the moment. I have written to Rajendra Babu to write to me if my presence is found necessary in Bihar.

If a party is formed as suggested in Rangaswamy’s draft, it can join the convention to oppose the White Paper. It is another question whether or not joining it is proper. I have not given any thought to it. What should one say about a thing which does not yet exist?

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

65. TELEGRAM TO RAJENDRA PRASAD

[On or before January 30, 1934]

YOUR TELEGRAM. DOING NEEDFUL.

The Bombay Chronicle, 31-1-1934

---

1 Rangaswamy Iyengar, Editor of The Hindu, along with K. M. Munshi, had prepared a draft scheme to revive the Swaraj Party as the constitutional wing of the Congress; vide “Letter to K.M. Munshi”, 8-1-1934.
66. APPEAL TO THE WORLD

[On or before January 30, 1934]¹

I have received the following wire from Babu Rajendra Prasad:

Please consider the propriety of appealing to foreign countries, particularly to Indians abroad. The reconstruction of the province requires crores. Several thousands have perished and many times more injured and rendered homeless and resourceless.

The flourishing towns of Monghyr, Muzaffarpur, Darbhanga, Motihari, Samastipur, Sitamarhi and Madhubani are heaps of bricks. Others like Patna, Chhapra and Bhagalpur fared better, but even there, hundreds of houses were demolished and hundreds are standing seriously damaged.

Countryside crops in vast tracts were destroyed or damaged by the flood caused by the eruption of water and sand through fissures in the earth. Extensive areas were rendered a desert by heavy deposits of sand and other extensive areas covered with spouted water.

Wells are choked up and are causing scarcity of drinking water. Many sugarcane factories were disabled and endangering the crop of one lakh acres unless prompt steps are taken to save.

I heartily endorse it and hope that Indians living in different parts of the world will send the utmost they can. I have in mind especially my old friends and fellow-workers in Africa. And merchants and others living in England and on the Continent, Japan and America are also requested to send liberal contributions.

In point of distress nothing perhaps has surpassed the Bihar calamity in India within living memory. Reluctant though I have always been to appeal to non-Indians for pecuniary help, not from any prudery, but out of delicate consideration, I gladly adopt Babu Rajendra Prasad’s suggestion and invite numerous non-Indian friends in Europe, America and Africa and other parts of the world to render such help as they can.

Contributions may be sent direct to Babu Rajendra Prasad, Patna; or to my address, Wardha, Central Provinces.

The Hindu, 3-2-1934

¹ The Bombay Chronicle, 1-2-1934, published the appeal under the date January 30 and The Searchlight, 2-2-1934, under the date January 31.
67. TELEGRAM TO HIRALAL SHARMA

COONOOR,
January 30, 1934

DR. SHARMA
KHURIA

CAN SEE NO DIFFICULTY BUT AWAIT MY LETTER.

GANDHI

Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha. p. 54

68. LETTER TO HIRALAL TYABJI

January 30, 1934

DEAR DAUGHTER RAIHANA,

I have your letter through the sisters Schill and Boari. Of course you are absolved from the promise. What I said was the general experience of mankind. There was no question whatsoever of your honesty being doubted. But I understand what is weighing on you. That weight must be lifted. I know that you will grow in any event.

I wish I could join your prayer meeting. You are doing better than what I have been able to achieve.

It is quite good news you give me about Gopi’s diary.

Father tells me about some yogi treating you with good results and a promise of better. Who is he?

Tell Father I have his long letter. I cannot help him in supplementing his recollections of our first meeting. I have but a faint recollection of meetings prior to the meetings in Godhra. I have a fair recollection of our meetings since then. And the brief meeting at Baroda station when you and Hamida were sitting in my lap I shall never forget. It was all as if I had met members of the same family!

Love to you all. I take it you have been collecting for Bihar.

BAPU

From a photostat: S.N. 9654

1 The addressee had closed down his clinic and sought Gandhiji’s permission to stay at the Ashram at Wardha.

2 The superscription is in Urdu.
69. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

COONOOR,
January 30, 1934

CHI. JAMNALAL,

I got your letter. I sent a wire¹ to Gondia and have also sent one² to Wardha. Do not leave the work you have taken up unless Rajendra babu specially asks you to go. Rajendrababu will not do so without reason. I also have decided to do the same. I have no doubt that you would not readily leave the work you have taken up. You may leave it and go only where your presence is indispensable. Just now I don’t think that is the case. In reply to Rajendrababu’s request, I have sent some of the inmates of the Ashram who were recently released. I have received today a wire saying that some of them have proceeded there. I have not included Surendra among them as he is working with you. If you don’t need him, you can send him. He should take some woollen clothes if he goes. If you require him, however, he need not go just now. I have sent a wire to Swami asking him to go.

Om is doing well.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gajarati: G.N. 2931

70. LETTER TO JANKIDEVI BAJAJ

January 30, 1934

CHI. JANKIBEHN,

Is it right to complain if Jamnalal gets excited owing to weakness of the brain? Should we mind the bad temper of a person who is sick? It should be always ignored. Or did you write the letter for my amusement? Tell Madalasa that she seems to have forgotten me completely. That will not do. Om is fine.

How is Ramakrishna? How are you? Take care of Vali.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2930

¹ Vide “Telegram to Jamnalal Bajaj”, 27-1-1934.
² Vide “Telegram to Jamnalal Bajaj”, 29-1-1934.
71. LETTER TO KASTURBA GANDHI

COONOOR,
January 30, 1934

I have had no letter from you yet. Today we are on a mountain in Madras. Its height is the same as that of Almora. The greenery is probably more beautiful, but we cannot see snowcovered mountains here. The Himalayas are very very far away. We shall be staying here up to the 5th. Amtussalaam has come here. She wanted to return today, but we have prevailed upon her to stay on up to the 5th. Her health may be said to be fairly good. Kusum (Rami’s daughter) has attained the divine feet of Rama. I got the letter only yesterday. Bali is grieving very much. Manju was there and could solace her. I have had no news about Harilal recently. Ramdas writes regularly. Devdas-Lakshmi have gone to Delhi. Devdas may be said to have settled down quite well. Brijkrishna is all right now. As a result of the earthquake in Bihar, between twenty and twenty-five thousand people have died. Hundreds of thousands have become homeless. There has been a loss amounting to crores of rupees. Rajendrababu has just been released and has plunged into relief work. Collections are being raised all over the country. I too have been collecting something. I have been receiving wire after wire. He [Rajendrababu] has asked for Ashram inmates (men) to be sent to Bihar, and I have, therefore, sent a wire. I do not know yet who will go. Lilavati is pretty ill. Velanbhn has lost 25 lb. She has gone to Baroda, taking Anandi and Mani with her. Durga1 has gone to Bulsar with Bablo2 and Bachu3. Premabehn is back [in jail]. She is quite well. I am not sending a discourse today. You should still have one with you. I am well.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Bane Patro, pp. 11-2

1 Wife of Mahadev Desai
2 Narayan Desai, Mahadev Desai’s son
3 Nirmala Desai, Mahadev Desai’s sister
72. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

COONOOR,
January 30, 1934

BHAi VALLABHBHAI,

I have still not received your letter this time. I think I shall get it in a day or two. I am writing this in Coonoor, sitting in sunshine. I first wrote the articles for Harijan. Then I had my meal. After that I finalized the programme of the Tamil Nadu tour and had a nap. And now I have sat down to write letters.

These days Bihar takes plenty of my time. You know now the extent of the destruction there. I get wires from Rajendrababu almost every day. I do whatever he wants me to do. There is no need for me to go to Bihar just now. He has asked for those inmates of the Ashram who have been released. I have sent a wire to the Ashram accordingly. As many of them as can go will go. I have not received any reply as to who will be able to go. I talk about Bihar at every meeting. I have even collected some jewellery and cash. At the moment I seem to be getting a good response. It remains to be seen how the aid is utilized.

Amtussalaam has come here. She was ready to return immediately today. But I have detained her till the end of my stay in Coonoor. She will descend with me on the 6th and will go back to Gujarat to her work. Gangabehn and other women are resting.

I shall be going to Belgaum towards the end of the next month or in the beginning of March. But the plan may also have to be abandoned if meanwhile I receive a call from Bihar. If finally I do go to Belgaum, I will write for permission to see Mahadev and Mani.

Kanjibhai is expected here in a day or two. Shantikumar has undergone an operation for hernia. He is better now. Shankerlal came and saw me in connection with khadi work. He is at present laid up with influenza in Bombay. Dr. Rajan and Nageshwararao are with me here. We are staying in the latter’s bungalow. Kishorelal is still bed-ridden. I have sent a wire to Swami asking him to proceed to Bihar.

Prithuraj has been helping Chandrashankar. Velanbehn has gone to Lakshmidas at Baroda, taking Anandi and Mani with her. She has lost 25 lb. in jail. Bablo and Durga have gone to Bulsar. Amina will go with her children to Pyare Ali. Mani Parikh has gone to Kathlal just now with the children. Afterwards she will visit Narahari. They will then decide what to do. Prema has gone back to jail. Though Lilavati is ill, she also seems to have insisted on going.

1 Shantikumar N. Morarjee.

Blessings to both from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro—2: Sardar Vallabhaine, pp. 68-9

73. LETTER TO RAJENDRA PRASAD

[Before January 31, 1934]

BROTHER RAJENDRA PRASAD,

What am I to write? What comfort can I give? I have been upset. To give up what I am doing looks like adharma, but even if I abandon it, what will I be able to do? Since yesterday, I have been narrating the tale of Bihar in every speech. People listen. Some contribute on the spot. I ask everyone to send money to you direct or pay it to me if they think it proper. Be writing or wiring to me. I do not read papers daily. What do you advise me about my tour in Bihar? Would it be proper for me to come there in connection with untouchability? Should I come there in connection with the alleviation of suffering? Will not my not coming there be preferable? I shall do as you advise.

The Hindu, 1-2-1934

---

1 According to the source, the letter was in Hindi. The original, however, not traceable.

2 The report in the source is dated January 31.
74. FRAGMENT OF LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

January 31, 1934

. . . sent there at once.

My health is quite good. Weight 110, b.p. 155-100, food as before. Mira is also quite well. Do not expect her to write much or at all just now. She is off writing. The rush through space leaves nobody much time for writing. This is being written between 3 and 4 a.m.

You must keep your body fit.

Love.

BAPU

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

75. LETTER TO JIVANJI D. DESAI

January 31, 1934

BHAJI JIVANJI,

I got your letter. Please give the accompanying letter to Kakasaheb if he is there.

I understand what you say about Durga. I shall know in a day or two whether I shall be going to Belgaum or not. Even if I go, it will be around February 25 or 26 or even later. Will Durga wait till then? I will certainly try to secure permission if I do go to Belgaum. But it is possible that I may not get it. Such risks have to be taken. If they do give me the permission, probably they will do so even if Durga has seen him in the mean while. But one can’t be sure. I stop here as some visitors are coming.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9936. Also C.W. 6911. Courtesy: Jivanji D. Desai

1 The first two sheets of the letter are missing.
76. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

January 31, 1934

BHAIGHANSHYAMDAS,

Your letter. I liked the comparison of the earthquake and the Harijan problem very much because it is the truth. It is self-evident that the poorest have suffered little; but is it not equally true that those in possession of even a little have turned destitute? I am doing from here what is possible.

The Bengal tour has put me in a dilemma. It is good that you are there. I have written a long letter today to Dr. Bidhan. Please see it and take a decision there. On my part, I feel that the only decision open to me is to go unless you people raise an objection.

I keep getting letters from . . . . But this you have to consider. At present . . . cannot fully satisfy . . . . Her physique cannot stand the strain. What is the solution if . . . cannot exercise self-restraint? The problem is complex. I shall write to . . . .

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: C.W. 7944. Courtesy: G. D. Birla

77. LETTER TO AGATHA HARRISON

February 1, 1934

DEAR AGATHA,

I am writing this between 3 and 4 a.m. Have just finished a note to Henry. Andrews tells me you too have not been overwell. Evidently you in England need more change and rest than we here seem to need. And you must take it if you will get the maximum work from the body. I hope that this letter will find you fully restored.

I do not even look at the letters Chandrashankar has been writing to you. I hope that he has been keeping you fully posted with news from here.

Of the desolation of Bihar you know as much as I do. Rajendra Prasad is making a Herculean effort to relieve suffering. He has rendered full co-operation to the Government. At this instance I have made an appeal to the non-Indian friends all over the world. You must have seen Reuter’s cable. Chandrashankar will be sending you a copy. The male members of the Ashram who have just come out of prison have suspended their civil resistance and gone to Bihar. The calamity is of such magnitude that all the help that the whole world may give will be a drop in the ocean. But I suppose there is a spiritual result seen and unseen of such material help. The stricken people will derive comfort from the thought that the whole world is thinking of them and coming to their assistance. I am presently writing to Andrews and Holmes¹ and Rolland.

1 The names have been omitted.

2 Ibid

Of the gradual but sure dissolution of untouchability you know all from the cuttings that Chandrashankar has been sending you in addition to the copies of Harijan.

The measures the Government have adopted to crush the spirit of the people defy description. The gagging of the Press has made it well-nigh impossible to know the news accurately and to publish what little oozes out in spite of the strictest censorship. Copies I am sending you of original documents will give you an inkling of what is happening. I do not want any public propaganda but you may make what use you like among friends and among the official world there. As you are aware, the two attempts I made to gain the ear of the authorities ended in failure. True, I had courteous replies but no admission of error. On the contrary both from Bengal and Bombay I received a blank denial of the charges made including repudiation of the evidence of what Mira had seen with her own eyes. I am trying my best to find a way to honourable peace. But there can be none so long as the Government persist in repression. My fear is that it has been worse in the Frontier Province than in Bengal. But news is more difficult to get from there even than from Bengal. All this, however, does not mean that I have given up all hope. For I can never lose faith in prayer which is the same thing as nonviolence whether it be through letter-writing or civil resistance or mute prayer only. I simply mention the difficulties in the way. Friends in England should have as accurate news as I can gather or rather the news that comes to me unsought. My one preoccupation is war against untouchability. I wonder if you realize that I hardly have time to read the voluminous post that follows me during the tour. I read only the portion that

¹ John Haynes Holmes
Chandrashankar thinks I ought to read. Things are worse than what you saw at Knightsbridge. It is only here in Coonoor where I am resting from incessant travelling that I am able to give you this long letter.

Now a word about an Indian Bureau outside India. I am opposed to the idea. I must not argue. The money given by Vithalbhai Patel cannot be used for that purpose. It can be used only for constructive work in India, e.g., untouchability, khadi, national service. On this point I am perhaps the only “whole-hogger” but there it is. I am convinced that when India as a whole is awakened nothing can stop her march to freedom. She is being awakened. This lull does not affect the march. It is a precursor to the full awakening. Foreign propaganda must be taken up by foreigners. That friends all over are taking up to the best of their ability.

You will share this with friends.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 1477

78. LETTER TO C. F. ANDREWS

COONOOR, February 1, 1934

MY DEAR CHARLIE,

I have your letters. Chandrashankar has been sending a regular weekly letter to Agatha. I can hardly cope with the correspondence. Chandrashankar overtakes it and Harijan work by dropping out of the tour three days in the week. I am moving more swiftly than before and keeping good health!!!

You will see the long letter I have written to Agatha. I need say nothing therefore in this about public affairs.

You have balanced all the bad news you have given me by telling me that Esther’s difficulties are all solved and that Menon has at last decided to come to India. I am sure it is a sound decision, if it is a firm one. I am glad you gave that message to Nellie Ball. She is a brave woman with an unquenchable faith in God. Please repeat my love to her. I must not attempt to send her or the Alexanders or the Hoylands separate letters. Do tell them all that they are constantly in my thoughts. As to your brother and your sister in New Zealand, what can I say? With your nature I know you will be happy if you can be personally by their side. But your preoccupations are far too many to make that possible. I hope you are getting enough from the sale of your books to give them what financial aid you can.

1 Vide the preceding item.

I told you about Sir Prabhashankar’s donation to Santiniketan.

Dr. Ambedkar returned to India some time ago. He has not written to me. I shall resist no solution that pleases Harijans and the so-called caste Hindus, provided of course that separate electorates are not revived. What I call the most valuable work done during these three months would have been impossible if politically they had been completely isolated.

Love to all whom you may see.

Mohan

From a photostat: G.N. 984

79. LETTER TO ATMA S. KAMALANI

Coonoor,
February 1, 1934

My dear Kamalani,

I am very much behindhand in my correspondence. I reach your letter of 29th December only today.

I appreciate the committee’s suggestion. It shows their anxiety to show better results. Please assure them that I know they are doing all they can. My own conviction is that a paid Indian mission cannot do better and cannot render them effective help. It will be wrong to deduce necessity for a permanent Indian organization from some good work that a man like Bhulabhai Desai may do. Such men may go to England more frequently than they do. But a permanent organization can do no good and may do harm. People have to work out their salvation here and no amount of misrepresentation or suppression of news will be able to restrain them when mass realization of strength has come to people. What will be effective there is equal mass

1 Hon. Jt. Secretary, “Friends of India”, London realization there of the consciousness of wrong being done to India in every way. That realization can only come through the persistent efforts of societies like yours, even as here it is our effort that must count. The money that Vithalbhai sent to me was to be used for constructive work here. I propose to publish the correspondence as soon as I can put together the papers. I could not have accepted the purse for any other purpose. I know that in holding the views I have expressed here, I belong to the minority. But the conviction that came to me in 1920 has grown stronger. Even in the heyday of the struggle I never felt the want of an Indian organization in foreign lands. Had there been any, perhaps neither the band of true Englishmen and Englishwomen who are working there now nor the band of true Americans working in America would have come into being.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G.N. 1530

80. LETTER TO C. VIJAYARAGHAVACHARIAR

February 1, 1934

DEAR FRIEND,

I have your touching letter. Did you suppose I was coming to Salem and leaving it without seeing you? You are not to come to the meeting and I will certainly come and hear all you might want to say to me. From your wire I was led to think that you were not bedridden.

I cannot think of my very large party taking meals at your place when you are not well. But in Salem wherever I take my meal, I should still be under your shadow. According to the latest programme, I reach there on 14th at 11 a.m. and be there till 7.20 p.m. I hope you will be much better by that time, if not thoroughly restored.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

From C. Vijayaraghavachariar Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library
81. LETTER TO RAMI AND MANU GANDHI

February 1, 1934

CHI. RAMI AND MANU, 1

I got your letter. Kusum’s 2 withering away is bound to grieve you all. Even I, though my heart is as hard as stone, felt grieved for a moment. Both you sisters will have calmed down when you get this letter. After all, everybody will die sooner or later. Why, then, should one grieve over death? Keep writing to me. I will expect a letter from Rami. Ba will be very much pained at the news. Probably you know that she receives letters only from me, once a week, and also writes to me only. No other letter, therefore, will be delivered to her. If you wish anything to be conveyed to her, you may write to me.

What is the position regarding Manu’s studies?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 1528. Courtesy: Manubehn S. Mashruwala

82. LETTER TO PADMA

February 1, 1934

CHI. PADMA,

I got your letter. I do not recollect having received your New Year greetings. On the contrary, I have been harbouring a complaint against you for not writing to me. I have noted the work you are doing there. I hope you will do it with a calm mind. You say nothing about your weight. You don’t write even to Sarojini. 3 Write regularly from now on. About Bihar . . . 4

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 6147. Also C.W. 3502. Courtesy: Prabhudas Gandhi

---

1 Daughters of Harilal Gandhi.
2 Rami’s daughter; the name literally means a “flower”.
3 From the postmark
4 Addressee’s mother
5 The rest of the letter cannot be deciphered
83. LETTER TO GANGABEHN VAIDYA

February 1, 1934

I got your wire. Rajendrababu has asked only for men workers. I therefore sent a wire to Ahmedabad instructing that such workers should be sent. There is not much likelihood of his asking for women workers. You may, therefore, finish as much work there as you wish to and leave for your place. Even those who have gone to Bihar will probably return in two or three months.

I had received your letter also. Let me have some news about Durga, Mahavir, etc. None of them writes to me. But I hear that . . . does not behave properly. Take care and see that he is not spoiled by us. Chandrashankar thinks that Bachu, being gentle of nature, gives way in everything.

Who among the women did the most reading and study? Who maintained the best health? What happened regarding Maitri’s betrothal? How is Ramibai?

Blessings from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-6: G. S. Gangabehnne, p. 82. Also C.W. 8815. Courtesy: Gangabehn Vaidya

84. LETTER TO BALIBEHN M. ADALAJA

February 1, 1934

I can from this distance understand your suffering. Rami will get over the shock but I know you will not. I have fully understood the love in you, and I honour you for that. You have merged your life in the lives of Chanchi’s children. You have made yourself a real

1 Supplied in the source
2 The name is omitted in the source
3 Addressee’s brother’s son
4 Harilal Gandhi’s wife’s sister
5 Chanchal, Harilal’s wife mother to them. In hurting you, I have hurt myself. But if I did hurt you, I did it for the good of the children. What consolation can I offer you in your present sorrow? I would have had a right to do so only if I had nursed Kusum in her illness. And how can I talk philosophy to you? I, therefore, leave you to God’s care. He will give you peace of mind. I am sure your love will not go unrewarded. May God lead you to your good and illuminate your love with knowledge. Get rid of the element of ignorant attachment which mingles with your love.

Please write to me.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 1529. Courtesy: Manubehn S. Mashruwala

85. LETTER TO AMINA G. QURESHI
February 1, 1934

CHI. AMINA,

I have your letter. We may meet early only if you come over to see me; otherwise we can meet only when I go over there, which does not seem likely before six months.

Since Qureshi has said so, you may wait for him. I certainly do not like the idea of taking the children to Bombay. They are studying all right. The treatment for eczema is continuing. Having once taken the burden off Pyare Ali I do not like thrusting it on him again. But I do not know if I am mistaken in taking this view. You should therefore act as you think proper after considering my opinion.

You have the right to pour out your heart to me; it is also your duty. Hence, be bold and write to me whatever you want to say to me in person. Recover your health. Don’t you think it would be necessary for you to regulate your diet for the purpose?

Write to me.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C.W. 10623. Courtesy: Amina G. Qureshi
The first question discussed was that of Harijan unemployment, which is very acute in these parts. The deputation suggested the opening of a leather factory to give employment to Harijans. Mahatma replied that such a leather factory in Coonoor could give employment at best only to a few Harijans, and even that would go into the hands of the professional cobblers. The Central Board was engaged in drawing up a comprehensive scheme of economic survey and relief. The suggestions of the deputation should go to the Central Board. He asked the deputationists for statistical information regarding Harijan unemployment in the various occupations.

The second point discussed was the necessity for a special paper for Harijans wherein all the grievances of the Harijans could be legitimately ventilated. The deputation was anxious that the Central Board should assist in financing such a venture. Mahatma did not think money should, at this stage, be spent on such a venture. Money was needed for more urgent items of relief. And then he pointed out that there were widely circulated Tamil and English papers which would not cut out representations from the Harijans. The deputation should make the best use of such papers.

The next question discussed was how far Ghandiji felt the savarna Hindus were changing their mind in regard to untouchability. Mr. Manickam asked: “So far as the tour has progressed, do you find adequate change of heart among the savarasn?” Ghandiji’s reply was characteristic.

I have no doubt whatever in my mind that the change of heart is taking place. I do not want to issue a certificate of merit to the savarna workers, but the change was phenomenal and even beyond expectations. The Hindus are now forming themselves into two groups—one that of the reformers who consider themselves to be Harijans and not merely patrons of the Harijans, and the other those who refuse to have anything to do with the Harijan movement. I have no doubt whatever that the former will grow and soon absorb the latter.

Mr. Manickam then asked: “But Mahatma, we read in the papers that even after your persuasion the Nattars are adamant and swear by old tradition.” Mahatma

1 The deputation consisted of 12 persons and was headed by R. T. Kesavalu and R. T. Manickam.

February 1, 1934
Ah, I do not know what the newspapers have published, but the old Nattar representative who spoke to me seemed as though he had been coached, but what matters is that over a hundred Nattars listened to my advice with goodwill and let me tell you there are important Nattars who agree with me and are helping our workers.

Gandhiji assured the deputationists that they need have no fear, and that the desired change would come soon.

The deputationists observed: “From the very beginning our Sabha has stood out for Joint Electorate with reservation of seats. We are assuring our community that our future is safe in the hands of the reformers. Unless we can carry this conviction to our community, joint effort would be impossible. Hence our anxiety to get your assurance of the coming change.” Gandhiji replied:

The proof of the pudding is in the eating, and what should convince you is the work going on before your eyes. Even here in Coonoor in my rest eager crowds surround me and I ask them for money for the Harijan fund. They give me their annas and sometimes their rupee. This movement is a religious movement, and everywhere people are recognizing it now. That is why even here the crowds daily increase in giving me more money.

The next question discussed was regarding the number of seats assigned to the Harijans in the Madras Legislative Council as per the Yeravda Pact. He assured the deputationists that their thirty votes would always help them in turning the corner in regard to their problems as they arose in the Council.

If you realize as I do the value of thirty votes in the Council, you will have no fears. In South Africa, the Indian community with very much less voting strength could turn the scales in their favour at critical junctures. Here your position is absolutely strong unless everyone else in the Council is opposed to you which is impossible. So my word to you is: Have no fear for the future.

The last question was regarding the sweeper Harijans in general. “Because Harijans are sweepers and scavengers, savarnas refuse to treat them as social equals.” Gandhiji replied:

Not at all. Here it is a question of utter stupidity. We must remove this ignorance. In my Ashram, I myself and all the inmates are sweepers and scavengers. This is no new question to me. The sweeping and scavenging work is first-class social service. With knowledge coming, this superstition will die.

The deputationists fervently prayed that Gandhiji should come again to these parts soon.

Oh, if you want me to come again, I shall. Only promise me life till my 99th year. I shall be in Coonoor in my 99th year.

_The Hindu_, 3-2-1934

87. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

[Before _February 2, 1934_]

CHI. AMALA,

Do be patient. If I at all can I will come. I hope you have replaced your glasses. Do not worry about money when it is a matter of supplying needs.

Love.

BAPU

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

88. BIHAR AND UNTOUCHABILITY

A friendly wire says, “Will you not lay aside untouchability and go to Bihar?” An angry wire says, “Must Mahatma fiddle while Bihar is burning?” Both the wires pay me an undeserved compliment and exaggerate my capacity for service, as they assume that I can do more than my comrades. I have no such hallucination about my capacity. Rajendra Prasad is one of the best among my co-workers. He can command my services whenever he likes. The Harijan cause is as much his as it is mine, even as the cause of Bihar is as much mine as it is his. But God has summoned him to the Bihar relief as He has chosen the Harijan cause for me. When the call comes from Bihar, I hope I shall not be found wanting. Champaran discovered me when I was a mere wanderer. Babu Braj Kishore Prasad and his band of workers gave me their complete allegiance when India was wondering what place I had in her public life. I am tied to Bihar by sacred ties which are indissoluble. Therefore I need no spur to send me to Bihar. Perhaps I am serving her best by remaining at my post for the time being. All the world is directing her attention to the catastrophe. It would be presumption on my part to rush to Bihar when all are ready.

---

1 In the source the letter has been placed between letters of January 31 and February 2.
to assist her. Those also help who know how and when to wait.

But another wire says I must use the Harijan collections for Bihar relief. I think it would be a clear breach of trust on my part if I listened to the advice. We may not afford to be unnerved in the face of great calamities. Not all the riches of the world would restore Bihar to her original condition. Time must elapse before reconstruction takes place and things become normal. What is necessary is that those who have anything to give are induced to give the most, not the least, they can.

But I make bold to suggest that, in reconstructing life in Bihar, if the wisest use is to be made of the help that is being sent, the organizers would have resolutely to set their faces against reproducing evil customs and habits. They may not encourage untouchability or caste divisions unperceivably based on untouchability. Nature has been impartial in her destruction. Shall we retain our partiality—caste against caste, Hindu, Muslim, Christian, Parsi, Jew, against one another—in reconstruction, or shall we learn from her the lesson that there is no such thing as untouchability as we practise it today?

Tremendous responsibility rests both upon the Government and the unofficial agency as to how reconstruction is to be undertaken. And as both are working in co-operation for this purpose, it ought not to be difficult to rebuild Bihar on human and sanitary lines.

I share the belief with the whole world—civilized and uncivilized—that calamities such as the Bihar one come to mankind as chastisement for their sins. When that conviction comes from the heart, people pray, repent and purify themselves. I regard untouchability as such a grave sin as to warrant divine chastisement. I am not affected by posers such as ‘why punishment for an age-old sin’ or ‘why punishment to Bihar and not to the South’ or ‘why an earthquake and not some other form of punishment’. My answer is: I am not God. Therefore I have but a limited knowledge of His purpose. Such calamities are not a mere caprice of the Deity or Nature. They obey fixed laws as surely as the planets move in obedience to laws governing their movement. Only we do not know the laws governing these events and, therefore, call them calamities or disturbances. Whatever, therefore, may be said about them must be regarded as guess work. But guessing has its definite place in man’s life. It is an ennobling thing for me to guess that the Bihar disturbance is due to the sin of untouchability. It makes me humble, it spurs me to greater effort towards its removal, it encourages me to purify myself, it brings me nearer to my Maker. That my guess may be wrong does not affect the results named by me. For what is guess to the critic or the sceptic is a living belief with me, and I base my future actions on that belief. Such guesses become superstitions when they lead to no purification and may even lead to feuds. But such misuse of divine events cannot deter men of faith from interpreting them as a call to them for repentance for their sins. I do not interpret this chastisement as an exclusive punishment for the sin of untouchability. It is open to others to read in it divine wrath against many other sins.

Let anti-untouchability reformers regard the earthquake as a Nemesis for the sin of untouchability. They cannot go wrong, if they have the faith that I have. They will help Bihar more and not less for that faith. And they will try to create an atmosphere against reproduction of untouchability in any scheme of reconstruction.

_Harijan_, 2-2-1934

89. SOME QUESTIONS ANSWERED

I have a collection of questions in front of me. These I have answered during the Kerala tour. Some of the questions being of general interest, I propose to give them below with their answers.

Q. The local support one gets for Harijan work is very poor. People give readily when you come. Will you make an appeal for help to my work?

A. It is no use blaming the people. If they do not give, the fault must lie with you. You have not inspired sufficient confidence in you or your work. You have to be patient and concentrate on producing the best quality of work, and you will find the support coming without fail. I know of no healthy activity failing for want of pecuniary support. But people are like God. They try the patience of workers and answer prayers only when they have proved their sincerity and worth.

Q. Does the pay of Harijan workers at Harijan centres run by the Harijan Sevak Sangh come under welfare work or overhead charges?

A. It depends upon the nature of the work done by the worker. If he is doing constructive work, such as teaching in a Harijan school, it is welfare work. If he is keeping accounts or the like at an office, his

---

1 A Gujarati version of this appeared in _Harijanbandhu_, 28-1-1934.
pay would be part of overhead charges.

Q. There is a suggestion made by you that a society which disregards its servants suffers. Do you imply that Harijans are servants?

A. I do. I have stated a fact. Harijans today are as a body servants of the society, and as such they are treated in a disgraceful manner. He who runs may see how the society suffers in a thousand ways for its criminal neglect of its most useful servants. This neglect accounts for a tremendous economic, social, sanitary and moral waste. My statement of fact does not imply that Harijans should be compelled to remain servants for ever.

Q. There is lack of sympathy on the part of khadi workers for the Harijan cause as shown by the absence of Harijan recruits in khadi service.

A. So far as I am aware, the charge is not true. There are many Harijans in the khadi service. Certainly there is no bar anywhere against the employment of Harijans in that service.

Q. A practice is growing up of Harijans adopting caste surnames, e.g., Nambudri, Nambiar, etc. What do you say to this?

A. I know the practice. It is not new. I dislike it. Harijans do not want to steal into the so-called saevarna society. The latter has openly to admit them as blood-brothers and sisters. The present movement is one of self-purification, penance and reparation by saevarna Hindus.

Q. You desire ladies to sacrifice their jewels. Why do you not ask the caste man to sacrifice his pride by giving up his thread?

A. There is no parallel between the two cases. The thread is a symbol of consecration for those who believe in it. I do not wear it, because it has no meaning for me and I know that millions go without it. In so far as it is used as a mark of superiority, it is worse than jewellery and the mere discarding of the thread would be valueless if pride, of which it is a symbol, is also not discarded. There is nothing to prevent Harijans from adopting it if they choose. But I should strongly discountenance the practice, as it would be an imitation without the original meaning behind it.

Q. I represent a brotherhood which is out to break caste distinctions and to preach harmony between religions. Sree Narayana Guru advocated one God, one religion, one caste. What is your message for me?

A. I wish you all success. I do believe in harmony between all religions. I have myself worked at it in my humble way. Caste distinctions, in so far as they imply superiority of one over another, have to be abolished altogether. That is merely a phase or a grade of untouchability. But in so far as caste in the sense of varna fulfils Nature’s law of conservation of human energy and true economics, it is good to recognize and obey the law. You may deny the existence of any such law. I can then only refer you to the few proofs I have given in the columns of Harijan in support of it. I had the honour of meeting Sree Narayana Guru when he was still in the flesh and had a discussion with him on the point. Belief in one God is the corner-stone of all religions. But I do not foresee a time when there would be only one religion on earth in practice. In theory, since there is one God, there can be only one religion. But in practice, no two persons I have known have had the same and identical conception of God. Therefore, there will, perhaps, always be different religions answering to different temperaments and climatic conditions. But I can clearly see the time coming when people belonging to different faiths will have the same regard for other faiths that they have for their own. I think that we have to find unity in diversity. I need say no more about caste beyond this that, in so far as abolition of distinctions of high and low are concerned, there is but one caste. We are all children of one and the same God and, therefore, absolutely equal.

_Harijan, 2-2-1934_

90. NOTES

THE CHEAPEST PLATFORM

In discussing the economics of public tours, in which vast crowds have to be considered, workers have suggested that platforms alone cost Rs. 50 at the least computation. This need not be so. Provision for vast crowds presupposes that the cause is popular and that, therefore, there will be voluntary help forthcoming. In such favourable atmosphere it should not be difficult to borrow bricks. Labour should be voluntary. Mud should be used in the place of mortar. A solid platform can thus be made for a rupee or thereabouts. No skilled labour is necessary for erecting such a platform. The only expense to be incurred will be that of carting bricks to and fro. But even such a platform can be dispensed with. If a ring is kept in the middle of the audience, large enough for a motor to turn round comfortably, and a broad passage left for it to pass through to the ring, the motor can be used as a solid platform. This was successfully tried at Sivaganga and Manamadura. If a higher platform is needed, the top of a motor-lorry makes a platform high enough for the largest audience. This, too, I have tried successfully in previous tours. The fence of the ring should be fairly strong. Strong wooden posts and stout cords can be borrowed for the purpose, and the ring can be erected inside of two hours if sufficient voluntary labour is available. Volunteers worth the name should be able to prepare these things without fuss and without any strain.

“Gita” Reciters

The readers of Harijan know what Gita means to me. I have always regarded the learning by heart of such books as the Gita a very desirable thing. But I was never able to learn all the chapters of the Gita by heart myself though I made several attempts at it. I know I am very stupid at memorizing. So whenever I meet anyone who knows the Gita by heart, he or she commands my respect. I have already met two such during the Tamil Nad tour—a gentleman at Madura and a lady at Devacottah. The gentleman at Madura is a merchant unknown to fame; and the lady is Parvatibai, a daughter of the late Justice Sadasiva Iyer, who during his lifetime instituted an annual prize for the person who could best recite the Gita from memory. I would like, however, the reciters to realize that the mere recitation is not an end in itself. It should be an aid to the contemplation and assimilation of the meaning and the message of the Gita. By patience even a parrot can be taught to recite it by heart. But he would be no wiser for the recitation. The reciter of the Gita should be what its author expects him to be—a yogi in its broad sense. It demands from its votaries balance in every thought, word and deed and a perfect correspondence between the three. He whose speech and action do not accord with his thoughts is a humbug or a hypocrite. It is necessary to sound this warning, for, of the people who flock to my prayer meetings, many run away, I am afraid, with the thought that they acquire merit by mere attendance at these prayers. And since the majority of them are undoubtedly sympathizers with the battle against untouchability, it is necessary to warn them that they are expected to act in accordance with their belief and show by their action that there is no untouchability in them and that there is no person lower than themselves.

For Sanatanists

As attempts are being made during the tour to draw me to a public debate with Shankaracharyas and other learned men and as there is much misrepresentation about my replies to proposals for such interviews, I should like to repeat through these columns what I have said in my letters and verbal messages. I have no desire to engage in a public debate on the origin of untouchability. I do not believe in such debates, nor do I lay any claim to Sanskrit scholarship. But I am ready, nay eager, to hold friendly conversations with any sanatanist for the sake solely of arriving at a mutual understanding, discovering points of contact, and, generally, elucidating truth. For instance, a challenge is often sent to me with reference to my oft-repeated statement that there is no warrant in the Shastras for untouchability as it is practised today and that in the matter of the use of public temples there is no prohibition in the Shastras against those who are today regarded as untouchables. I have explained in these pages more than once what I mean by Shastras and what interpretation I put upon the verses that are commonly cited in support of untouchability in general and temple-entry prohibition in particular. I do not expect all my critics to read the Harijan. I would, therefore, gladly explain my meaning to sanatanist friends and in my turn try to understand their objections. Surely it is possible to have much common action, even though there may be differences on some matters. The reader may also know that such friendly discussions have taken place often enough during the tour. But some persons have made it their mission to discredit me anyhow. So they make suggestions for open debates which they know I have refused to adopt, or seek appointments which it is physically impossible for me to make unless I would cancel a whole day’s programme and disappoint thousands of men and women. They are not to be placated by anything I may say or do. Time will do what no action of mine can.

Harijan, 2-2-1934
91. TELEGRAM TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

COONOOR,
February 2, 1934

MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI
74 WALKESHWAR RD.
BOMBAY

YOU CAN COME COONOOR. HERE TILL TUESDAY MORNING.
AWAITING RAJENDRAPRASAD’S INSTRUCTIONS REGARDING BIHAR.
NO HARIJAN TOUR THERE.

BAPU

From the original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

92. LETTER TO SATIS CHANDRA DAS GUPTA

February 2, 1934

DEAR SATISBABU,

I have your letters and wire. You will have seen my long letter to Dr. Bidhan. I would then like your revised opinion. Your acceptance of my argument has produced a revulsion in me. But I must not reargue the point. If we will imbibe the Gita spirit, we must have detachment even in the midst of a raging fire. Who knows what God intends by things that baffle us.

You will be well rid of Harijan¹, if there is not a natural demand for it. You may issue leaflets now and then. In closing down you should say firmly why you are closing.

You will study my letters to Hemprabha. The letter has become a serious thing without my meaning to write so seriously. It shows how full I am just now of these things.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 1625

¹ Bengali Harijan, which the addressee had been editing.
93. LETTER TO VIDYA A. HINGORANI

COONOOR,

February 2, 1934

CHI. VIDYA,

I got your letters. I did not mean that you should not go to Karachi. I had left it to you to decide whether or not to go there. Therefore I wrote: “If you want to go, you should go after Anand’s release.” There is no doubt about it at all. But it would be quite proper to go even before it if Mother-in-law and Father-in-law send for you. These things you can understand better. I feel very happy to hear about Anand. What is the term of Choithram’s imprisonment? You had better look after Mahadev yourself as far as possible. Does Mahadev get oranges or mosambis? You must give him juice of mosambis and grapes.

Dudhibehn’s address: Dudhibehn Desai,
Dakshinamurti, Bhavnagar (Kathiawar).

I have received a letter from Father. I am writing to him.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Hindi. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

94. LETTER TO K. B. KEWALRAMANI

Copy

February 2, 1934

MY DEAR KEWALRAM,

I was delighted to receive your letter. Vidya is a very good girl of whom you have every reason to be proud. But now I divide the honour with you of being father to her. And often an adoptive father has been found to do better by reason of his having special interest in adopting. But I have a superior reason for possibly doing better than you. Vidya was born to you helplessly. She has deliberately adopted me as father and so she renders willing obedience. If we engage in healthy competition, she will gain.
As you have broken the ice, you will not hesitate to write whenever you feel the urge.

Yours,

SHRI K. B. KEVALRAMANI
S.D.O., WANIYALLA
P.O. MAILSI (PUNJAB)

From a microfilm. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

95. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

February 2, 1934

CHI. AMALA,

I have your unbalanced letter. You are morbid. Why should you continually think of yourself and brood over the wrongs done to you by other people? Why can you not think of the wrongs other people are suffering from? Brooding over our own wrongs makes us unbalanced. Identification with other people’s wrongs makes us stronger. But now that I have received permission to send you to Sabarmati, I hope your grief will be over. I have sent a wire just now to send you to Sabarmati. It is likely therefore that this will be sent to you there. You will share all your thoughts freely with me and let me know how you feel in the new surroundings. You may choose your work. Do not overstrain yourself and you should take the food that suits you.

Love.

BAPU

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

96. LETTER TO RABINDRANATH TAGORE

February 2, 1934

DEAR GURUDEV,

I received your letter only just now. There is a campaign of vilification of me going on. My remarks on the Bihar calamity were a good handle to beat me with. I have spoken about it at many meetings. Enclosed is my considered opinion.¹ I see from your

¹ Vide “Bihar and Untouchability”, 2-2-1934

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
statement that we have come upon perhaps a fundamental difference. But I cannot help myself. I do believe that super-physical consequences flow from physical events. How they do so, I do not know.

If after reading my article, you still see the necessity of publishing your statement, it can be at once published either here or there just as you desire. I hope you are keeping well.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

[PS.]
The last lines are disgracefully written but I was tired out and half asleep. Please forgive. If I am to catch the post today, I may not wait to make a fair copy.

From a photostat: G.N. 2289 and 4642

97. LETTER TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

February 2, 1934

CHI. JAMNALAL.

I read the letter about Kamalnayan and also his note. He wants to finish the course here and to pass the Madhyama examination in Hindi. I would suggest this modification. He should finish the entire Hindi course and take the final examination. He should improve his English, learn Sanskrit also and then go, not to England, but to America. It will certainly be possible to make good arrangements for his study there. After spending sometime in the States, he may travel all over the world. The experience he will gain thus will be useful to him. He would learn better after his intellect matures. I am glad that he has no blind love for degrees. In short, I do not wish to curb his desire to see the West. But I think it advisable that he should be better equipped than he is just now.

What work have you entrusted to Surendra?

I have decided to send Amalabehn to Sabarmati. We shall see what to do if the place does not suit her.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2932

1 For the text of the statement, vide Appendix “Rabindranath Tagore’s Statement”.
98. LETTER TO JIVANJI D. DESAI

February 2, 1934

BHAJ JIVANJI,

I got your letter.

Thanks for the information about the books. I get no free time at all. I came to Coonoor but even here it is the same story. Every day there is some programme. I am trying to make up a little for the hours of lost sleep during the last several days and to catch up with the correspondence. Much of the time is spent in this way. I am eager to go through the preface and the matter [sent] from Yeravda Mandir. I will see if I can. If I find the work too much, I shall say no. But I will try not to do that.

I have written to Balubhai today regarding the Library.

The tour programme for Karnataka has been altered. We shall now be going to Belgaum. But that will be at the end of this month. I intend to send a wire¹ tomorrow requesting permission. If I get it, I will wire to you. Up to the 21st, I shall be in Madras. Then I will go to Coorg, then to Mangalore, then to Karwar and after that will come the turn of Belgaum. Will Durga wait till then?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9937. Also C.W. 6912. Courtesy: Jivanji D. Desai

99. LETTER TO DRIVER

February 2, 1934

BHAJ DRIVER,

I got your letter all right. I like your sincerity. Many young men have gone through what you have. You need not feel unhappy about it at all.

My feeling after reading your letter is that your duty as yet is neither to come to me nor to go to Father Elwin, but to remain where you are and learn to live in poverty. You should save as much as you can and use the money for helping people. Try to teach students whatever moral values you can. So long as you do not feel vairagya¹, you should continue in your present way of life. Renunciation of your present way of life before you have come to feel strong aversion to it will not be proper, nor will it endure. When intense vairagya has developed in you, nobody will be able to stop you. Do write to me whenever you wish to. I hope you find no difficulty in deciphering or understanding my Gujarati.

¹ Vide “Telegram to Home Secretary, Government of Bombay”, 3-2-1934.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 8045

100. LETTER TO RAMABEHN JOSHI

February 2, 1934

CHI. RAMA,

I have sent a wire today regarding you, saying that you may leave the Ashram² if you wish. Personally I do feel that, since both of you keep good health and feel quite happy there, it might be better for you not to leave the place. That Chhaganlal will shortly be released needn’t bother you. He can come and see you there. Relations will of course never cease to be relations, but we have loosened that bond.³ All the same, my present attitude is that everyone may act as he wishes and try to progress as much as he can. You may, therefore, do as you wish.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2932

¹ Renunciation.
² Kanya Ashram, Wardha.
³ Chhaganlal Joshi had expressed a desire to stay with his sister for some time after his release.
101. LETTER TO KAPILRAI AND SHASHILEKHA MEHTA
February 2, 1934

CHI. KAPIL AND SHASHILEKHA,

I had not received your letter when I got your wire, which was only the day before yesterday. I got the letter to-day. At first I could not understand the wire. If you did tell me about Shashilekha, I must have forgotten it. On my inquiring this afternoon, Prithuraj said he did not know the Kapilrai who had sent the wire. You two have my blessings of course. May you live long and serve the country well. May you help each other in leading a life of self-control.

Blessings from
BAPU

SJT. KAPILRAI MEHTA
SWADESHI MUSEUM
VALANDA’S HAVELI
AHMEDABAD

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3970. Also C.W. 1600. Courtesy: Shashilekha Mehta

102. LETTER TO S. AMBUJAMMAL
February 2, 1934

CHI. AMBUJAM,

I have both your letters. I could not reply sooner due to lack of time but you are always in my mind.

It is a very good thing that you are reading the Ramayana, and that you are doing Harijan service is also to the good.

Did you collect any funds for the Bihar calamity? Did Father give anything?

Continue writing to me; I do attempt to write a legible hand.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: C.W. 9595. Courtesy: S. Ambujammal

1 Daughter of S. Srinivasa Iyengar
103. LETTER TO HEMPRABHA DAS GUPTA

February 2, 1934

CHI. HEMPRABHA,

I get your letters regularly. The earthquake has given me a jolt. But I have learnt that it is madness on our part to regard ourselves as different from others. If we regard all as one, no one dies or lives. “As in the body so in the universe.” The body ever dies, yet lives. Similarly the Cosmos as expressed in the creation ever dies yet remains alive. As we are but a mere drop in that scheme, our death is no death. Transformation of the body will go on, so what shall we mourn for? Shall we then become hard-hearted? No, but if all of us living beings are one in spite of the seeming difference, we should die for one another, in other words make sacrifices to our utmost. This same idea has been expressed wonderfully in the first mantra of the Is Hopkinsanashad. If you are not familiar with it tell me and I shall send it to you.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1708

104. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, KOTAGIRI

February 2, 1934

FRIENDS,

It is a matter of great joy to me to be able to see you this afternoon. I was looking forward to coming to this beautiful hill. I know that some of my co-workers have been zealously working in the midst of hillmen. I know, too, that you have not that vicious kind of untouchability amongst you that we have on the plains. Nevertheless, no one, in India, can be absolutely free from that virus. Even you have distinctions of high and low. And so long as we have got that habit of considering ourselves higher than somebody else, we have not got rid of untouchability, and so long as we have got that distinction in our midst, remember we have not got rid of untouchability. Therefore, I

---

1 This was attended by about 6,000 people, mostly Badagas, a hill tribe. They presented to Gandhiji a purse and an address of welcome. A part of the speech was also published in Harijan, 9-2-1934.
would like all to consider and to know and realize that we are all children of the same God, and that therefore among us, His children, there can be nothing like some being high and some being low, and that all should have the same rights as everyone else.

And then, I want to draw your attention to one thing, of which I have just heard, that hillmen are very much given to the habit of drinking intoxicating liquors. Those who are given to that habit should realize that it is drink which makes man thoroughly mad. Intoxicating liquors are in no way necessary for retaining ourselves. Not only so, a man who drinks, very often, more often than not, forgets the distinction between his own wife and his own mother. Drunken men and drunken women also have been known all the world over to do things of which they would be ashamed if they were sober. Only yesterday, I heard as I was driving that two drunken men were quarrelling amongst themselves, with the result that one died on the spot, and the other is now lying in the hospital. As this is a movement of self-purification, I would like every one of those who are given to this vicious habit to come to a firm resolution never more to touch fiery liquors. It will be a matter of very great joy to me if my fellow-workers are able to report to me that many of you have given up drink altogether.

Now, whilst I thank you for these coppers and silver pieces that you have given me for the Harijan cause, I have to ask you to give some more coppers and some more silver for another cause which is as sacred as the Harijan cause. In the north of India, there is one of our fairest provinces. The name of that province is Bihar, the birth-place of Sita. It was there that only a few days ago, a terrible earthquake took place. Several thousands of men died. Many more thousands of men and women are lying in hospitals. The whole world is directing its attention to the afflicted people of Bihar. Thousands upon thousands of men and women are homeless, shelterless and clothless. Many palace-like buildings are now simply heaps of broken bricks. It is for these that I would like you to give the most, and not the least, that you can. If you have not got sufficient money on your persons, make collections after I am gone; you can make them tomorrow and send them either to Patna to Babu Rajendra Prasad, who is in charge of the relief work, or you can bring them to me whilst I am still in Coonoor. In many places, remember, men and women have denied themselves their food, their clothes, and shared them with those who are suffering that terrible affliction.

For me, personally, this earthquake has a much deeper lesson than that it has brought physical ruin to thousands of homes. It is my firm conviction that such calamities descend upon mankind from time to time as a fit punishment for its sins. I love to think that it is a punishment awarded to us for the great sin of untouchability. If you cherish that belief with me, you will take care to remove the least taint of untouchability from your midst. May God help you and me to realize this dream that India should be free once more from all kinds of impurities.

_The Hindu, 4-2-1934_

105. _TELEGRAM TO HOME SECRETARY, GOVERNMENT OF BOMBAY_

\[COONOOR, \ \ [February 3, 1934]\]

SECRETARY
HOME DEPARTMENT
BOMBAY

I EXPECT BE BELGAUM ON SIXTH MARCH. COULD I SEE MANIBEHN PATEL AND MAHADEV DESAI PRISONERS CENTRAL PRISON HINDALGA. GOVERNMENT KNOW MY INTIMATE CONNECTION WITH BOTH.¹

GANDHI

Bombay Secret Abstracts. Home Department, Special Branch, File No. 800 (40)(16)C, p. 11

¹ The addressee’s reply read: “With reference to your telegram dated the 3rd February 1934, I am directed to inform you that Government regret that they cannot allow you to interview prisoners Mahadev Desai and Manibehn Patel at present confined in the Belgaum Central Prison.” Vide “Letter to Jivanji D. Desai”, 2-2-1934.
106. TELEGRAM TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

COONOOR,
February 3, 1934

MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI
74 WALKESHWAR RD.
BOMBAY

WEEKEND TWELFTH THIRTEENTH GANDHI ASHRAM TIRUCHENGODU.

BAPU

From the original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library.
Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

107. LETTER TO HERMANN KALLENBACH

February 3, 1934

MY DEAR LOWER HOUSE,

You have complained that I have not acknowledged your cables and letters. It is not so. But if my letter has miscarried I cannot help. Anyway you are always before my mind’s eye and I do expect some day to greet you here. When are you coming?

Love.

UPPER HOUSE

From the original: Gandhi-Kallenbach Correspondence. Courtesy: National Archives of India

108. LETTER TO KAMALNAYAN BAJAJ

February [3], 1934

CHI. KAMALNAYAN,

Father’s letter in English was delivered to me yesterday and I have already replied to it. I got your letter today.

I have advised that you should pass the Uttama examination in Hindi and acquire a good command of English. If you thus let your intellect mature first and learn good habits of study and then go to the West, you will derive the most benefit from your visit. When the time for going comes, I would advise you first to go to the U.S.A. After that you may go to England and then to the other countries of Europe. And last Japan and China.

2 Ibid

I am glad that you are not eager to take a degree. You should stay in America for one year, observe things carefully, and improve your English through study. After that you may visit other countries and stay in them according as you feel inclined. In all you should spend two years abroad. This will give you plenty of experience and you will be able to plan your future. We can make any changes in this plan that you deem desirable from experience. The chief thing is that you should give up for the present the idea of going to the West. I think you will require four years for completing the course in Hindi and acquiring the requisite proficiency in English. I see the necessity for the study of Sanskrit for the sake of Hindi itself. I don’t believe four years to be too long a period for you to wait. Convey my blessings to Ramakrishna. I hope you often think of him.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
_Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad,_ p. 278

109. LETTER TO DUDHIBEHN V. DESAI

COONOOR,
_February 3, 1934_

CHI. DUDHIBEHN,

I don’t remember not having replied to any letter of yours. But I wouldn’t be surprised if in all this wandering about some letter had remained unanswered. I don’t find your letter in my files. Generally no letters are destroyed before I have replied to them.

Ask Motibehn to write to me.

I have asked Valji to come here. I will see about his health when he comes. I am hopeful that he will get all right.

Irrespective of whether I write or not you must continue to write to me.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 7463. Courtesy: Valji G. Desai
110. LETTER TO VALJI G. DESAI

February 3, 1934

CHI. VALJI,

Having sent a wire to you, I didn’t write. After reading your letter I see that your coming may even be delayed. But I assume that it will not be and, therefore, do not send the issues of Harijan. My programme is enclosed. The earlier you come, the sooner can your illness be tackled. You will find the work ready for you. I had arranged to send you to Bihar, but now I will not do that. With your present health it will be difficult for you to work there.

The rest when we meet.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 7462. Courtesy: Valji G. Desai

111. LETTER TO MITHUBEHN PETIT

February 3, 1934

CHI. MITHUBEHN,

I could take up your letter only today. Just now I stay so far out of the way that the post takes some time to reach me. Moreover, I cannot attend to letters immediately they are received. My replies, therefore, are very much delayed. I can’t judge about the question which you have asked. I am frightened by the very description that you have given. How will you be able to do justice to your present work in Bombay and to this additional responsibility? All the same, if you can see your way and are confident, how can I discourage you? I would, therefore, say only this. Do what you think right and may God prosper you in your undertaking. Chunilal had put to me the very same question that you have. I told him that I could not guide him, that he should do what he thought right and that I would not blame him whatever decision he took. I say the same thing to you. You should not expect from me a categorical opinion in such matters. Are you all right now?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 2702
112. LETTER TO MANSHANKAR J. TRIVEDI

February 3, 1934

CHI. MANU,

I got your letter. Since you remain as straightforward as you used to be I have no fear on your account. Your assurance that you will not marry without my blessings will protect you. I have written to Father not to hurt your feelings in any way. In your letters to him, see that you never forsake civility. If he appears to you to use harsh language just now, there is nothing behind it but love for you and concern for your future born of that love.

There is an error in your belief concerning one matter. I do not have with me a copy of the letter to the Princess. I don’t think there will be any in the office either. You say in your letter that it is your belief that, provided the children remain Hindu by culture, I wouldn’t mind in what faith they were brought up. I am not likely to have written anything to that effect, since for a Hindu, culture and religion are one and the same thing. Is there any Hindu culture apart from the Upanishads, the Gita, the Mahabharata and the Ramayana? I must have said in my letter that, if Elizabeth could adopt Hindu culture in her life, I wouldn’t mind her remaining a Roman Catholic in religion. This is very different from saying that the children may be brought up as Roman Catholics. I want you to understand this difference. I have no quarrel with you. I do not distrust you or Elizabeth in the least. But I want to correct a misunderstanding under which you seem to be labouring. To me all religions are alike. But since religions are many, there is diversity even in their oneness. All living beings are one in essence, but as embodied creatures they are infinite in number and diverse. To realize the unity of all life in spite of our having different bodies is the supreme end of human endeavour. If the bodies were not different, there would have been no need to realize the unity of life. The fact that you are a Hindu and other people are Muslims or Christians does have some meaning. That meaning must be respected in the case of your children. I am convinced that if you two wish to live happily and in peace after marriage, your children ought to be brought up as Hindus, and Elizabeth, or rather Vimala—I had forgotten her new name—should adopt Hindu culture. If she cannot forget Europe, you must live in Europe. If she wishes to serve India, she must become an Indian at heart. Without doing that, she may certainly be able to serve the country although with a superior attitude, but you believe her to be a true servant at heart. As she has changed her name, she must change her heart too. But she cannot do that by force. She will succeed in being an Indian at heart only if she is born with such a predisposition. You also must have in your mind a clear picture of the future. If you wish to dedicate yourself to the service of Mother India, you will have to imbibe in your life what I have explained to you in my letters. If, therefore, you have any doubts on that, you should ask me to explain again and again till you are satisfied. Don’t hesitate to write to me. I don’t know whether I shall be able to write to you after July. You should, therefore, put to me during the months which remain whatever questions you wish to and have your doubts cleared and get from me whatever help you want.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1010

113. LETTER TO GOVINDBAHI R. PATEL

February 3, 1934

Bhai Govindbhai,

I have your letter. A new programme has been drawn up, in which the visit to Pondicherry has been dropped. I must confess that I do not have the same curiosity that you have. I have respect for all individuals. I have known about Sri Aurobindo since a long time. You have many Gujaratis there. There are others, too. I would want to know something of an ashram which shelters so many people. It was in order to satisfy this desire that I made the attempt. But that is over now. It would have given me some satisfaction if I could have at least met you all.

Mohanadas

From the Gujarati original: C.W. 10742. Courtesy: Govindbhai R. Patel
114. LETTER TO DR. JIVARAJ MEHTA

COONOOR,
February 3, 1934

BHAJ JIVARAJ,

I have your pathetic letter. That is the way of the world. Attachment and hatred ever pursue us. But your mind is strong and I therefore hope that you will have got over your feelings. I am writing this letter merely as a consolation and to let you know that I often think of you. I expect many services from you. There is no need at all to reply to this letter.

Mohanadas

From the Gujarati original: Jivaraj Mehta Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

115. SPEECH AT OTTUPATRAI

February 3, 1934

FRIENDS,

I am very much pleased to have come here and to have met you. You know that this movement that is now going on is a movement for self-purification. Those who call themselves savarna Hindus have to purify themselves by fraternizing with Harijans and ceasing to consider them as untouchables, or lower than themselves. Harijans have to do certain things, not by way of exchange but because they also have to purify themselves; they should conform to the laws of clean life and cleanliness, both internally and externally, giving up carrion, beef, liquor and drugs. I understand that here you offer as sacrifice to your God buffaloes or other animals in order to appease Kali. You must not, for one moment, imagine that God can ever be pleased by sacrifice of animals. There are savarna Hindus, so called, who also resort to this barbarous practice. But, all the world over, it is now recognized that there can be no religion in sacrificing animals. I should like you, therefore, to think that there can be no virtue in offering animals as sacrifices to appease Kali, or any other goddess or 1 This was one of the Harijan cheries Gandhiji visited during the day. About 200 inhabitants accorded him a warm welcome.

god. After all, there is but one God, whether you worship Him as Kali or whether you worship Him as Vishnu or Shiva or Brahma, no matter by what name, but, there is only one God, and that God is the God of Truth and Love, not of vengeance. Therefore, I hope that, henceforth, there will be no two parties amongst you, but that you will all unite in order to stop this animal sacrifice in the name of God.

_The Hindu, 7-2-1934_

116. SPEECH AT THANDAKARANCHERI

February 3, 1934

FRIENDS.

It gives me much pleasure to be in your midst. You should know that I am a scavenger myself by choice, and you must take me literally when I tell you that I have cleaned hundreds of commodes in my life. Everyone in the Ashram which I was conducting—and I have over one hundred men and women there—had to do this work every day. I call scavenging one of the most honourable among the occupations to which mankind is called. I do not consider it an unclean occupation by any means. That in performing the cleaning operation you have to handle dirt is true. But, that every mother has to do, every doctor does. But, nobody says that a mother’s occupation when she cleans her children, or a doctor’s occupation when he cleans his patients, is an unclean occupation. And therefore I consider that those who call themselves superior class of Hindus commit a grave sin when they consider scavengers as untouchables. I am travelling up and down in order to convince these so-called superior Hindus that it is a sin to consider any human being as untouchable. But, I am travelling also to tell fellow-scavengers that whilst we may handle dirt, we must ourselves be clean inwardly and outwardly. After we have done the work of cleaning, we must clean ourselves and wear clean clothes. I know that many scavengers eat carrion or beef. Those who are doing this should abstain from that, and then I know that many of them are given to the evil habit of drink. Drink is a bad, filthy, unclean, degrading habit.

_The Hindu, 7-2-1934_

---

1 This was another cheri which Gandhiji visited. Here the inhabitants were mostly municipal scavengers and about 300 of them had gathered to hear Gandhiji.
117. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, COONOOR

February 3, 1934

FRIENDS,

It is a matter of keen pleasure to me that I have been able to live in your beautiful climate all these few days, and this meeting this afternoon adds to that pleasure. The address, presented on behalf of Harijans, tells me that I am rendering a great service by awakening the conscience of the so-called savarna Hindus. I do not believe that I am rendering any service to anybody but myself. I called this a movement of self-purification and penance, which it undoubtedly is, and what I am trying to do, from day to day, is nothing but going through a process of self-purification myself. I could not live at peace with myself if I did not declare the truth as I see it in connection with untouchability. I have no doubt whatsoever that, if the so-called savarna Hindus do not cleanse themselves of the sin of untouchability Hinduism and Hindus must perish. We proudly call ourselves children of God, and yet, in the name of God and religion, deny to our own brethren, the children of God, those rights and privileges which we enjoy. I have not a shadow of doubt in my mind that such belief constitutes a great sin. This sin of untouchability does not confine itself merely to those who are called Harijans or Adi-Dravidas or untouchables, but it has taken in its snaky coil all the communities of India. And so, in a way Christians, Mussalmans, Parsis, Jews and Hindus have all become untouchables to one another. My great hope therefore is that when we have cleansed ourselves of untouchability all these offshoots of untouchability will be demolished.

Gandhiji then made a fervent appeal on behalf of Bihar earthquake victims.

The Hindu, 7-2-1934

---

1 At this meeting Gandhiji was presented with a purse and three addresses of welcome which included one from the Adi-Dravida Jana Sabha and a Tamil verse specially composed in his honour. A brief report of the meeting was also published in Harijan, 16-2-1934.
118. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

February 4, 1934

Why have you not given me the full details of the earthquake? Did you get the letter I sent through Rajendrababu? You should now give me all the news. You will learn more from the letter to Jayaprakash.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 3440

119. LETTER TO JAYAPRAKASH NARAYAN

February 4, 1934

CHI. JAYAPRAKASH,

I have your letter. You had written that some arrangement had been made about your own expenses and that only Rajeshwar needed a monthly sum of Rs. 50. On the strength of that letter I arranged for the remittance to Rajeshwar. Does the Rs. 125 you now mention include the allowance to Rajeshwar or is it in addition? If it is in addition it is too much. Then you say in your letter that you will manage about the loan somehow. This does not seem to me quite right. You must make arrangements for everything right now. A public servant must not leave undecided anything that can be immediately decided. Write to me everything in detail. I do want to help you out of your difficulties. But there is a limit to what I can do. You must therefore help me to help you.

Where were you two during the earthquake? What did you feel? Has the earthquake made any change in your situation? You must both be engaged now in providing help to the victims.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Hindi original: Jayaprakash Narayan Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

\[1\] This note was a postscript to the letter from Uma Bajaj to the addressee.
FRIENDS.

It is a matter of great pleasure to me to be able to visit this beautiful place. I thank you for the addresses you have presented and the purses that you have given on behalf of Harijans. You have in your general address apologized for the leanness of your purse, although this place is inhabited by very rich people. You need not have rendered any apology whatsoever, because this is essentially a movement in which the cooperation, not of the few rich but of the millions of poor people, is asked for and invited. As I have claimed, this is a movement of self-purification. It is not an article of commerce which can be bought and sold on the market. Whilst therefore I welcome the coppers of even thousands of rich men, I welcome still more the coppers of millions. Even these offerings would be valueless unless they were a token of the change of heart on the part of the giver. The evil of untouchability cannot be driven out from our midst even if some persons were to offer one crore of rupees or more. It can only be brought about by individual efforts on the part of millions of self-styled savarna Hindus. It is they who have to exorcize the devil of untouchability from their hearts. It is they who have to do reparation to Harijans, untouchables, whom they have systematically suppressed for centuries in the name of religion. What is required is not a superficial makeshift but a fixed determination to rid ourselves of untouchability in every shape and form. This great change can only be brought about by an effective appeal to the hearts of the millions of savarna Hindus. Conviction has to be brought home to them that hitherto, in considering a portion of Hindu society as untouchables, we have committed a great sin against God and humanity inasmuch as this taint of untouchability has travelled far beyond the limits that were prescribed by Hindus. So far as untouchables are concerned, we have to put our house in order so that we may forget all distinction of high and low among mankind. It is a matter therefore of great joy and

1 More than 10,000 people attended the meeting, which was held in the Municipal Maidan. At the end of the meeting Gandhiji auctioned the presents received from the public. A brief report of the speech was also published in Harijan, 16-2-1934.
thankfulness that, wherever I go, crowds of people come and give their coppers in order to signify the determination that untouchability shall no more rule their hearts.

The Harijan address rightly lays stress upon the desirability that the Harijan purses collected in different parts of Tamil Nadu and elsewhere should be utilized for Harijan uplift and that alone. A statement has already been made from more than one platform that not only will the bulk of money collected in districts or provinces be utilized in those provinces or districts, but that the bulk of that money will be utilized only for constructive purposes. And naturally, workers will be expected all over to keep themselves in touch with the opinion and the sentiments of Harijans as to the best manner of using the money for Harijan service.

The Jain address lays stress upon the fact that, alike in my speech and in my action, I represent the best that is to be found in Jainism. I accept the compliment in all humility. I believe in the truth of all religions of the world. And since my youth upward, it has been a humble but persistent effort on my part to understand the truth of all the religions of the world, and adopt and assimilate in my own thought, word and deed all that I have found to be best in those religions. The faith that I profess not only permits me to do so, but it renders it obligatory for me to take the best from whatsoever source I may find it. It is in that spirit that this movement or campaign against untouchability is conceived. For this “touch-me-notism” has not been confined to Harijans, but it has affected caste against caste and religion against religion. I for one shall not be satisfied until, as the result of this movement, we have arrived at heart-unity amongst all the different races and communities inhabiting this land, and it is for that reason that I have invited the co-operation of all the people living in India and even outside.

Now, a word about the land of Sita. You know how nearly 25,000 died in the twinkling of an eye through that terrible earthquake. Tens of thousands of people are living homeless and clothless. Rich people suddenly find themselves reduced to pauperism. Palaces have been desolated, and thousands of homes are nothing but a mass of debris. I would like you therefore to tender your tangible sympathy to those afflicted people in Bihar. Whilst I shall be selling these addresses, I shall request the volunteers to spread themselves out in your midst, and receive from you what you think you can spare for your afflicted brethren in Bihar. I hope that you will give not the least you can, but the best you wish to.

The Hindu, 7-2-1934

121. SPEECH AT OM PRAKASH MUTT, OOTACAMUND

February 4, 1934

I am very much obliged to you for giving me this opportunity of visiting this Mutt and the extraordinary neatness and cleanliness have certainly impressed me very greatly. I wish this Mutt every prosperity in the spiritual sense of the term, and I hope that it will be a source of inspiration to those who live in the Mutt. Having visited it, I shall naturally be interested in its future career, and it will give me very great pleasure to find that it is making a steady progress and is, as it will be, an asylum for those who want to seek spiritual comfort and guidance.

The Hindu, 7-2-1934

122. INTERVIEW WITH ADI-HINDU DEPUTATION

February 4, 1934

In replying to the deputation Gandhiji said that the document presented to him was an ably-drawn-up document. But there was nothing new in it. He had seen the disabilities mentioned in it and where he had not seen them, he knew of them. He agreed with the deputation that most systematic effort alone could remove the disabilities. He was himself a Harijan. He had said so twenty-five years ago. He had said repeatedly that if he were to be born again he would like to be born a Harijan.

Referring to the name “Harijan” he said that while some objected to it there were other Harijans who were delighted with it. He himself would not insist upon it but would call them by any name they liked. He realized that without their assistance this reform movement could not go on quickly. That was why he asked for it and liked to meet and discuss with friends like them wherever possible.

Turning to the question of elections, Gandhiji said that he would share the 1 Gandhiji was taken round the Mutt which was maintained for Harijans and a report of the working of the Mutt and the inspection note of the President of Hindu Religious Board, Madras, were read out to him.

2 The deputation represented Harijans of Tamil-speaking areas. They submitted a printed memorandum detailing the Various hardships to which they were subjected. Vide also “Our Shame”, 9-3.1934.
fears of the deputation only if the Harijans were at the mercy of the caste Hindus or in case the Harijan candidates had sold themselves to the caste Hindus, but surely such a contingency could be prevented under the new scheme. Under the panel system the first choice belonged to the Harijans exclusively. Whoever was chosen by the Harijans would alone have the chance ultimately in the election. There need be no fear that the caste-Hindu nominee would have the better chance because the Harijans would have to do the original nomination. He added that his whole effort was to see that the vast majority of the caste Hindus put their weight in favour of Harijans. When that happened, as he was convinced it would, the position of the Harijans would be unassailable. He invited the deputation to share this conviction with him.

You hold me as a hostage for the due fulfilment of the Yeravda Pact. As a hostage I am travelling from one end of India to the other, leaving the comparative peace of Yeravda.¹

The Hindu, 7-2-1934, and Harijan, 16-2-1934

123. TELEGRAM TO K. SRINIVASAN

February 5, 1934

JUST LEARNT OF MR. RANGASWAMY’S² DEATH. DEEPEST SYMPATHY WITH HIS FAMILY AND STAFF OF “THE HINDU”.

The Bombay Chronicle, 6-2-1934

124. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

COONOOR, February 5, 1934

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

I am writing this letter in the morning after cleaning my teeth. I have already written to you regarding . . . ’s address. You must have received it through Om. Kanjibhai was to come here, but he has had to remain behind because of the earthquake in Bihar. But he definitely wants to come, and so does Bhulabhai.

The attempt which I made to see Shri Aurobindo was for the sake of the Gujaratis [in Pondicherry]. His refusal was courteous. He said that he saw nobody. The Revered Mother did not reply at all. My visit to that town has been dropped now. In a way I am glad that it has been. But I intend to send Chandrashankar and Bapathere. Let them see and observe as much as they can. We lose nothing by addressing ‘Mother’ as ‘Mother’. The etiquette of addressing a person by the name which has been bestowed on him was observed even at the Round Table Conference. You will probably say that it would be ruinous to follow the example of the Round Table Conference. But my point is that even there people were obliged to observe this etiquette.

¹ This paragraph is extracted from Chandrashankar Shukla’s “Weekly Letter” published in Harijan.

² Rangaswamy Iyengar, editor of The Hindu, had died in the early morning of February 5.

³ The names are omitted in the source.

Your guess as to Raojibhai’s reason for going to . . . ¹ is correct . . . ² also has gone there now and Ramdas tells me that our Harilal, too, has been there. He who has many sons and daughters should have a mother as well, shouldn’t he!

I think I have already written to you about the Zamorin. He lives in utmost simplicity. There is no ostentation at all. His palace too is a palace only in name, and there is hardly any furniture. He showed me the utmost courtesy. I was introduced to his son. He offered me coconut water and gave me fruit when I left. He was very pleased that I confined the conversation to formal courtesies. He is old and said that his memory was becoming weak. He is a good man. I am glad I called on him.

Coonoor is a beautiful place. If one can get accommodation here, the daily necessities are cheap. It is very cold in winter though not extremely so. Our workers have been doing good work among the hill people. I had received an invitation from them, and so I suggested that, if they wished to give me eight days’ rest, they should let me have it in Coonoor so that I could work among the hill people and also dispose of the papers which had accumulated. I am staying in Nagesvara Rao’s bungalow here. I am lodged above the garage. It is a small but good room. The garage can be used as a room. My room above it is a clean one. I am glad I came here. The hill people come to see me every day. In Ooty, on the nearby hill of Kotagiri, and here, we had large meetings such as had never taken place in these parts. Deputations of Harijans came and met me. There is a fine mutt exclusively for Harijans, which I visited. The hill people are much addicted to drinking. Our workers have been doing good work among them. Raja

¹ The names are omitted in the source.
² ibid
Bihar has been receiving good help; people from all over the country have been sending money and clothes. From the Ashram, Panditji¹, Parnerkar², Raojibhai³, Bal⁴ and others have gone there. Swami⁵ and Dhotre also have gone. Mathuradas has been planning to go and may go any day. Others also are ready, but I have kept them back. I will follow Rajendrababu’s instructions. Whether or not I should go, that also I have left to him. I have told him that he may call me there whenever he wants me. My own inclination is to go there after covering Karnataka and Orissa. That will mean I shall reach there about 20th March. I have been collecting money at every place I visit. This time I come into contact only with people who give me coppers. I do meet, of course, a few who belong to the middle class. They give what they can. But there is no limit to the generosity of the poor. Every day hill women come and give me a few coins tied up in a corner of their saris. Ramachandran of the Ashram is with me at present. I am sure you know him. He is a scholar and a fine man. Jivaraj’s health has been very much affected. But he is a brave man and continues to look after the hospital. At intervals he pays visits to Matheran and takes rest for a few days.

You must have heard about Perin⁶ and Jamnabehn. Prema and Lilavati (Asar) went back [to jail] as soon as they were released. Lila-vati is an obstinate girl. Perhaps she will die in jail. Amtussalaam is here. She has taken ill. Her loyalty is wonderful. I am sending Amala just now to Sabarmati for Harijan work. We will watch how she behaves there.

Bidaj also has been handed over to the Harijan Sevak Sangh. It is intended to take the dairy back to the Harijan Ashram. That will enable us to give training to some Harijans and ensure that the dairy is run well.

A copy of Ba’s letter is enclosed. Please convey to Mani whatever you can from this. I have asked for permission to see her

¹ Narayan Moreshwar Khare
² Y. M. Parnerkar who managed the Ashram dairy
³ Raojibhai Nathabhai Patel
⁴ Bal Kalelkar
⁵ Swami Anandananda
⁶ Dadabhai Naoroji’s grand-daughter and Mahadev. I have sent a wire. A reply is expected in a day or two. I will go there on the 6th March. I also have heard about . . . ¹. Tell Mani that Mridu has sent a long message for her: ‘She still suffers from her disease. She remembers Mani every day. She expects to be free in March. If Mani wants any other books, she may call for them. She has had letters from Durga, Mani Parikh, Velanbehn and others. After resting for some time, she hopes to return to jail.’ Abbas Saheb’s 80th birthday seems to have been celebrated with enthusiasm. Kaka worked hard for that. The old man was very much pleased. Kalyanji ² is writing a short biography of him. All our men of letters visited him in this connection and refreshed the memory of half-forgotten old days.

I am glad that you are experimenting with neti³. A wick made with hand from a piece of fine cloth may be found more useful. It can suck up harmful matter. You can make such a wick from your worn-out dhoti. It is necessary to do pranayama exercises along with it. Neti and pranayama will certainly help to keep the nostrils open. I am glad that your constipation has disappeared. I am sure the change which you have made in your food will benefit you.

Kelappan did not intentionally hide the fact of his relations with that lady. He didn’t think there was anything improper in it. He also was influenced by “Self-respect” and “Jatpattod”⁴. Nor is there anything against the lady. Kelappan is not a bad man. He is only simple-minded and also obstinate. I wish to put Rajaji in charge of the work in Malabar. I have not made up my mind finally, though. I may also appoint Ramachandran instead.

Your plan for Aunt seems a good one. Let her remain where she is. Hasn’t she been indiscreet enough? But your fear is baseless. The refreshment served by Sir Chimanlal is not likely to contain much. If most people don’t relish what he serves, what can the poor man do?

The visit to Bengal is still undecided. I can’t say what will finally happen.

I had a wire from Muriel [Lester]. I have asked her to come and

¹ The name is omitted in the source
² Kalyanji V. Mehta, a well-known Congress worker
³ A Hathayoga practice for cleaning the nasal passage
⁴ Name of a social reform body
⁵ Jatpant Todak Mandal, another social reform body
⁶ In the form of his writings
see me near Coimbatore, and also suggested that she should tour with me for some time. Amritlal Sheth has not written to me recently. He served an ultimatum on me too. I don’t mind, let the truth come out even from the bowels of the earth. Isn’t even man’s body a piece of earth?

_Blessings to you both from_

BAPU

[PS.]

The frost has ruined crops all over the country this year. In some parts it has been frost and in some other parts it has been unseasonable rains. These things seem to have a direct connection with the earthquake.

[From Gujarati]

_Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 70-5_

125. MESSAGE TO ASSOCIATED PRESS

February 5, 1934

I am filled with sadness over Mr. Rangaswamy’s death. I had the privilege to enjoy close relations with him. He was the right-hand man of Pandit Motilalji. His counsels were valued in Congress circles. He was one of the soberest among journalists. He was upholding the tradition left by Mr. Kasturiranga Iyengar, the tradition which has given the influence which _The Hindu_ had. I had intimate conversations with him when I was in Madras recently. His death is a loss to _The Hindu_, the Congress and the country.

_The Bombay Chronicle, 6-2-1934_

---

1 Former editor of _Janmabhumi_
126. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR
February 5, 1934

CHI. MARY,

I hope you got my letter at your Betul address.

The Hyderabad visit has been put off by nearly 20 days. I do not go there before 10th I think. Even that is not quite certain. And then I am not supposed to stay there for more than 4 hours.

We are all doing well. No time to say more.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 6019. Also C.W. 3348.Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

127. LETTER TO MADHAVDAS AND KRISHNA
KAPADIA
February 5, 1934

CHI. MADHAVDAS AND KRISHNA,

How is it that there is no letter from either of you? Ba frequently remembers you in her letters. Nobody can write to her directly. She can write and receive only one letter every week. And if she has had a visitor during a week, she can’t receive a letter during that week. Hence all news should be conveyed through me. So write a detailed letter to me. If you address it to Wardha, it is bound to reach me. How is Krishna? How is business? I receive Manilal’s letters regularly. Both are well. About me, you must be reading everything in Harijan-bandhu.

Blessings from

BAPU

SHRI MADHAVDAS GOKULDAS
SHAMJI SHIVJI BUILDING
MANORDAS STREET
FORT, BOMBAY

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./XXII

1 Vide “Letter to F. Marry Barr”, 25-1-1934
2 The source has “Bethel”.
I have your letter. What you say about Bihar is correct. Large numbers were killed and now in this cold thousands have become homeless. Much help is being sent from all parts of the country. From among the Ashram inmates, Panditji, Parnerkar, Raojibhai, Soman, Bal, Swami and Dhotre have gone there. Dhotre is the gentleman from Wardha. If more workers are required, I will send some others. I have had letters from all the women. All except Velanbehn are well. Velanbehn has gone to Baroda, taking Anandi and Mani with her. If necessary, she will go and consult a doctor in Bombay. She has lost weight considerably. It will take her some months to be restored. Durga has gone to Bulsar. From there she will go to Belgaum, I also will be there on March 6. Lilavati was having fever, but she has returned to jail along with Premabehn. Devdas has not gone to Patna. There is no need, even, for him to do so. Tara is fairly seriously ill. She is in Ahmedabad at present. Mani Parikh is at her maternal uncle’s. Afterwards she will go to Kathlal. I shall meet Rajaji tomorrow. Amtussalaam is here. She has taken ill, but is better today. It seems she will go to Kashi and stay with Krishnakumari. Muriel Lester, in whose Ashram I stayed in England, will meet me tomorrow—Gangabehn has gone to Wardha to see Surendra. He is working there with Jamnalalji. Mahalakshmi is in Bombay with her children. I had letters from Manilal and Sushila. Both say that you should not worry about him. Sita is happy. Kallenbach was on a visit to Phoenix for two days. There has been frost in Gujarat and other parts of the country and most of the crops have been completely destroyed. The frost was severe and lasted many days. We must submit to God’s will. Vallabhbal is fairly well. There was a letter from Mridula. She also is well. I have inquired about Madhavdas. I will most certainly let you know. I have not forgotten about it. There was a long letter from Ramdas. He and Nimu and the children are in good health. Keshu and Krishna are still in Wardha and are quite well.

1 Vide the preceding item.
There have been no letters from Radha recently. Brijkrishna is fairly well. He is slowly regaining strength. There is a well-known paper named The Hindu published from Madras. There was a wire today saying that its Editor had died. I have sent a wire of condolence. Prabhavati is well. She is still in Patna. I hope you and the other women are in good health. I will start from here tomorrow morning and go to see Raja. And now the discourse.

There is a saying among us: “One road, two purposes.” What road is that following which will always serve “two purposes”? “Two purposes” should not, either, be understood to mean only two. Here “two” means more than one. One may, therefore, also say: “One road and a hundred purposes.” In Bihar thousands of people were buried alive in the matter of a minute. This cannot but make us think that one should not waste a single moment. “Make the best of today, for who has seen tomorrow?” —sang Mira. We don’t know what will happen even after a minute or a second. One may pass away even in the act of yawning. What, then, is that golden road following which would serve all purposes? There is only one, viz., helping others. That means service of the neighbour. Another name for it is paramartha. The word means ‘supreme purpose’. A third name for it is Hari-bhakti. We sing in the prabhatiyans of Narasinh Mehta that such bhakti is not practised by telling beads or putting marks on the forehead or bathing in the Ganga. Bhaktas tell us that it means pledging one’s head. We should, therefore, always wish the world’s good all the hours of the day whether in jail or outside, and do whatever service may fall to our lot in order to advance it. I hope this will be enough for today’s discourse.

Blessings to all from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Bane Patro, pp. 12-3

---

1 Vide “Telegram to K. Srinivasan”, 5-2-1934
2 Devotion to God
3 Devotional hymns for early morning
129. LETTER TO MATHURI N. KHARE

February 5, 1934

CHI. MATHURI,

I was very happy to see your handwriting after a long time. You have improved your handwriting, too, a good deal. I am also very happy that you find everything there congenial. I hope you do sing bhajans. Write to me from time to time. I am glad that you write to Rambhau.

Blessings from
BAPU

From Gujarati: C.W. 270. Courtesy: Lakshmibehn N. Khare

130. LETTER TO MANIBEHN N. PARIKH

February 5, 1934

CHI. MANI,

I got your letter. You women may be said to have made excellent use of your time in jail. Amtussalaam told me everything. I have no doubt at all that the children have benefited too. It would be advisable to show your eyes to Dr. Haribhai. He is a specialist in eye diseases.

I have no time to write more.

Blessings from
BAPU

SMT. MANIBEHN PARIKH
BHAIISHRI RAMANBHAI LULLUBHAI SHAH
KATAKIA POLE, KALUPUR
AHMEDABAD, B.B. & C.I. RLY.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5976. Also C.W. 3293. Courtesy: Vanamala M. Desai
131. LETTER TO VIDYA R. PATEL

February 5, 1934

CHI. VIDYA¹.

I got your letter. I hear that you now wish to marry. If that is true, you should tell me without any hesitation or false sense of shame. If you do wish to marry, let me know when. Should your elders find a partner from the Patidar community or may they select any suitable and virtuous young man? Tell me your views frankly. Don’t consider what I would like. In such matters the young man or woman must have sufficient freedom. The elders can only guide them.

I am glad that you help Vali. You must have heard that Kusum has died. I hope you wrote to Manu. She has felt it very much.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 9584. Courtesy: Ravindra R. Patel

132. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, CHOKKAMPALAYAM²

February 6, 1934

I thank you for the address and the purse presented for the cause of the Harijans. I have understood that in this centre and round about it you have done much work for the spread of khaddar, removal of untouchability and the abolition of drink. I congratulate you on your achievement of these measures as all these evils run into one another. If we have driven out untouchability altogether we will be in a brotherhood. The message of untouchability is nothing less than real brotherhood union. It is not a brotherhood of merely Hindus but a brotherhood of all— Muslims, Christians and others. That is the full message of anti-untouchability. Now I have a heavy programme. Therefore I cannot remain here any longer. I hope you have made

¹ Daughter of Raojibhai Manibhai Patel
² The meeting, held at 8.30 a.m., was attended by about 4,000 men and women. Purses and addresses of welcome were presented on behalf of the village and Avanashi Taluk Board. At the end of the meeting the addresses and the jewellery were auctioned.
collections for the sufferers in Bihar. If you have not done so you should forthwith make collections and remit the same to Mr. Rajendra Prasad or to me. Within two or three minutes you must help me in auctioning these things.

The Hindu, 7-2-1934

133. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, TIRUPUR

February 6, 1934

FRIENDS.

I am very much obliged to you all for the addresses and the different purses. I have already gone through a fairly long programme and I have once more to tax my mind in this assembly and I know that you have been waiting patiently for some time. I shall therefore be very brief. I have gone through the English translation of the addresses you have presented to me. I tender my congratulations to the Municipal Council for all that has been done by it for the Harijan cause. But neither the Councillors nor the people can rest satisfied until untouchability in every shape and form is removed. I know that it is not within the province of the Municipal Council to throw open the temples. But it is up to the so-called savarna Hindus to formulate public opinion to such an extent that every temple in Tirupur is opened to the Harijans. I am quite convinced in my own mind that until all the public temples are open to the Harijans precisely on the same terms as to the other caste Hindus, we shall not have got rid of untouchability. The so-called untouchables must have absolutely the same rights and facilities that are enjoyed by the so-called savarna Hindus. I have gone through the address presented by the khadi merchants. I know what khadi means for the Harijans. Throughout the length and breadth of India, tens of thousands of men and women who belong to the Harijan class and who have no other employment are getting a few pies now. It is therefore a matter for shame that spurious khadi should have sprung up in our midst and since we have no legal protection for khadi the only thing that we can do is to take care to strengthen the public opinion. The same complaint was brought to me in Madura and the only thing for the time being that I was able to suggest was that the public should be warned against taking any khadi that was not certified by the All-India Spinners’ Association. I also heard a rumour that I have changed my opinion about the absolute necessity of khadi. I can give my assurance that my opinion has not undergone any changes whatsoever. On the contrary, the opinion that I expressed in the year 1919 has become strengthened by experience. And I am convinced that khadi is the only solution for the deep and deepening distress of the untouchables. Khadi is cheap at any price, for every pie that you spend in buying khadi goes directly into the pocket of the poor people. But I must not tire you with the arguments that I have advanced so often from the various platforms. I am only hoping that in this great movement of self-purification we shall not only get rid of untouchability but many other impurities from which our society is suffering. And I hope that those Harijans who are present at this meeting will fully bear in mind that they have also to contribute their share in this movement.

1 At the meeting, purses and addresses of welcome were presented on behalf of the Tirupur Municipal Council and the khadi workers. At the end of the meeting Gandhiji auctioned the addresses. A part of the speech was also published in Harijan, 16-2-1934.

Lastly, I cannot help expressing myself about the land of Sita in the north-east of India. Many cities have been swallowed up by the hungry Mother Earth. Palaces are now mere heaps of bricks. Nearly 25,000 people are said to have perished. And almost in the twinkling of an eye thousands of people were rendered homeless. And in the sharp, severe wintry weather of the north of India these people are living without any shelter and without food. I request you to share in every way their suffering. And I would like to hear in the course of the day that you have gathered together the funds to be sent to Mr. Rajendra Prasad.

_The Hindu, 7-2-1934_

\(^1\) Vide “Speech at Mass Meeting, Ahmedabad”, 14-4-1919.
I am glad to visit your city a second time. You have prepared for me a very heavy programme tonight. You have presented so many addresses and given me so many purses that it will take some time before I can dispose of them all. I must therefore ask you kindly to be patient with me for some time. And those who have got tired should retire without making any noise. I would like those who have already become restless kindly to be still so that I may follow the proceedings. You have presented so many addresses that you do not expect me to give a detailed reply to all of them. You will please accept my consolidated thanks for all those addresses and the purses presented. You know from your addresses the purpose of my mission. We must, if we are to live, get rid of this virus of untouchability. I have not the least doubt that if savarna Hindus will not purify their hearts of this taint of untouchability, Hinduism and Hindus must perish. That there is a ferment in Hindu society is evidenced by the meetings of this character wherever I had come. All these crowds have been there before whenever I have toured throughout India. So far as I am aware, invariably this time crowds have been larger still. Every attempt that was humanly possible has been made to make clear the purpose of my mission to the crowds. Their presence coupled with their copper and silver pieces are to my mind an unmistakable sign that they are ready for the great reform that I have placed before them. And if untouchability is not removed root and branch I have no doubt that it would not be the fault of the masses but that it would be entirely due to the fault of the workers and the leaders who are today leading the movement. I would, therefore, like all the co-workers and the leaders to realize the significance of this movement. I would like them clearly to see that this is a movement of self-purification, self-sacrifice and reparation to those whom the so-called savarna Hindus have suppressed for centuries. I was therefore considerably disturbed this afternoon when on my coming to Coimbatore I saw a few Harijan friends.

1 The meeting, held in the Gandhi-Irwin Stadium, was attended by about thirty to forty thousand people. Besides the municipal address, several other addresses were presented to Gandhiji which at the end of the meeting were auctioned. The speech was translated into Tamil.
who complained to me of the ill-treatment meted out to them in a village not three or four miles from here. They tell me that on the part of savarna Hindus there is a deadset against them. They tell me that even their labour is boycotted. I have assured them that so far as it is possible for me during the brief hours that I am here I shall try to understand the situation. But it seems to me that with so much life in Coimbatore, with this demonstration of so much sympathy for the Harijan cause, it ought to be a very simple matter for some of the leaders here to go to this little village and understand the situation and patch up the quarrel between savarna Hindus so called and the Harijans. Whether here the complaint made by these Harijan friends is justified or exaggerated or it is absolutely true is not just now relevant to what I was saying. I bring this complaint to your notice not only that you may bestir yourselves and get redressed but also to illustrate forcibly what I am advocating. If we were not being eaten up by this canker of superiority and inferiority there never would be any occasion for such quarrels and disturbances. I therefore pray to God and I want you to join me in the prayer that He may give us discretion, wisdom and strength to understand the implications of this campaign against untouchability and to exorcize this evil from our midst.

Now before I proceed to the sale of the articles that you have given me, I would like to say one word in connection with our suffering countrymen and countrywomen in Bihar. And in recalling to your mind the desolation that has overtaken that fair land, I cannot possibly forget the name of Rangaswamy Iyengar who is no more.
The columns of The Hindu have shown what wide sympathy he had for the suffering Bihar and how his appeal was supported by the many subscribers to The Hindu. I have no doubt that his place whether as a journalist or as a servant of the nation is not easy to fill. He had, as I know, an amazing industry and wisdom which stood well for the Congress at critical times. I would like you to associate yourselves with me in tendering our sympathy and respect for the bereaved family and in doing so I would ask you to respond to the appeal that he made on behalf of the sufferers of Bihar. I have been latterly at the end of these meetings collecting subscriptions from all and sundry for Bihar. In front of this vast crowd I have not the courage to suggest that the volunteers should spread themselves in the midst of the audience and make collections for Bihar. But if you will consent to it and if the volunteers themselves have got the courage I would suggest to them that they spread themselves in the midst of the audience and collect for Bihar before disposing of the articles.

The Hindu, 8-2-1934

135. TELEGRAM TO AMTUSSALAAM

POLLACHI JN.,

February 7, [1934]¹

AMTUSSALAAM
CARE ASAR MERCHANT
TIRUPUR
HOPE ARE WELL CHEERFUL. LOVE.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 291

136. LETTER TO KUSUMBEHN DESAI

February 7, 1934

CHI. KUSUM,

Vallabhbhai writes to tell me that some relation² of yours— was it a brother?—died recently in Zanzibar. Who could the person be? Give me details and whatever other information you think may interest me. If you have not met the women who have been released, try to meet them. I hope you read Harijanbandhu. You can know all about me from it.

Blessings from

BAPU

SMT. KUSUMBEHN DESAI
DR. CHANDULAL’S CLINIC
BROACH, B.B.& C.I.RLY.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1850

¹ Gandhiji was in Pollachi on February 7 of 1934.
² The addressee’s younger brother Harishchandra had died of black fever in South Africa.
137. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, POLLACHI

February 7, 1934

I wish you would all keep perfect silence. You have given me sufficient material to speak for one full hour, but the Reception Committee has given me only 20 minutes. Twenty minutes have already elapsed. The train has come late and I know you were all waiting for a very long time. If you help me, I would finish sooner. You all know for what purpose I have come. You have presented me with addresses and you have shown therein the need and importance of removing untouchability. Those whom you consider untouchables are your brothers and sisters. Untouchability exists between caste and caste and between Hindus and Mohammedans, Christians and Jews. These defects should be removed from our land. We should forget the feeling of high and low and consider that we are all sons of one God. I need not impress upon you the importance of contributing for the Bihar earthquake relief fund and there is no necessity for speaking on one and the same subject very often. The charkha before me is a very attractive one and the workmanship deserves much praise. I do not consider that we can spin much yarn on it, but in value it is made up of silver. It weighs nearly 40 tolas and I wish to auction the same for a decent sum.

The Hindu, 9-2-1934

138. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, PALNI

February 7, 1934

I thank you for the addresses and the numerous presents that you have presented. Now you know what I want to say. You are near God and you must forget the distinctions of high and low. We are all children of the same God. No one should be considered as untouchable. You have given me many things and the very fact of your piling up many gifts on me shows that you are absolutely in sympathy

---

1 At the meeting addresses of welcome were presented to Gandhiji by the Municipal Council, the Taluk Board and the Harijan Seva Sangham.
2 The meeting, held near the hill temple, was largely attended. Besides various addresses and a purse, individual offerings were made which included a silver charkha, cups and coins all of which were auctioned at the close of the meeting.
with this movement of self-purification. We are under the shadow of the sacred hill of Palni. And we know to our shame that the temple on the sacred hill is not open to the Harijans precisely on the same terms that it is open to every other Hindu. Why should it be so? Did this God in this sacred temple tell you that there are people who must not enter His temple and that they are untouchables. In my opinion God cannot reside in a temple which prohibits the entry of the meanest of His creatures. How could He be so unkind when you know and I know He is all mercy and kindness?

_The Hindu, 9-2-1934_

139. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, DINDIGUL

_February 7, 1934_

FRIENDS,

I am sorry that you have been put to a great deal of trouble. We tried our utmost to reach here in time, but the car could not bring us here earlier than we have come. It was a heavy day and to add to our and your weariness and trouble we missed the way.

I thank you for all the addresses that have been presented and the purses and I thank those who have presented the purse for the sufferers in Bihar. I hope that before you send me away from Dindigul tomorrow morning, you will collect some more money for Bihar. If you know the nature of the calamity that has descended on that land of Sita, any relief sent for Bihar would not be enough. I am sure you are aware of the purpose of the commission that has brought me here, and I hope that all of you are acting according to the professions made in these addresses. To my mind, it is a wicked thing—one of the most wicked of things to make distinctions between man and man and regard some as untouchables by birth and deny them chances of improvement. Had God designed any persons to be untouchables, surely He would have attached some visible sign whereby we could have distinguished them from ourselves; we do not see any such sign whatsoever. Why should some of our own brethren be treated as worse than some animals so that they have to undergo life-long misery on account of their birth? The sooner, therefore, we

---

1 The meeting, held at the Rock Fort Maidan, was attended by more than 20,000 people. Various addresses of welcome and presents were given to Gandhiji. At the end of the meeting all those things were auctioned.
get rid of this taint of untouchability the better it is for us and let us ask God to give us sufficient strength to cleanse ourselves of that sin. I must not detain you any longer than is absolutely necessary. I must therefore try to dispose of these numerous things that have been given to me and I begin with this silver statue.

The Hindu, 9-2-1934

140. LETTER TO NARMADABEHN RANA

February 8, 1934

CHI. NARMADA,

I got your letter. I was happy to read it. I did hear about you, though I did not know all the details about your reading.

Since Amtussalaam was with me, all the women here had learnt about it.

Your handwriting has certainly improved a little, but I want it to be as neat as pearls. Make it so during your next term of imprisonment.

I was glad to read Kastur’s handwriting at the end of your letter. I am very glad indeed that she will keep you company this time. I don’t have time to write separately to her.

Do you read Harijanbandhu regularly?

Blessings from

BAPU

KUMARI NARMADA ABHESING RANA

JIJINU VALUKAD

Via BHAVNAGAR

KATHIAWAD

From Gujarati: G.W. 2778. Courtesy: Ramnarayan N. Pathak

141. TO SUBSCRIBERS

The Harijan finishes one year of its existence with this issue. The subscribers and readers know the limits within which it is working. It devotes itself solely to the Harijan cause. Even so it eschews all matters which may be calculated to bring it in conflict with the Government. It eschews politics altogether. These limitations were essential, if it was to be a paper controlled by a prisoner. For reasons which I need not repeat here, though I am not a prisoner in law, I am conducting the paper as if I was one in fact. It can, therefore, naturally draw only those men and women who are interested in the campaign against untouchability and who would help the cause even if it is only to the extent of subscribing to the paper and thus helping the only paper that is solely devoted to the cause of anti-untouchability and is the mouthpiece of the Harijan Sevak Sangh. The subscribers know that it will not be continued at a loss. I believe that the paper, in order to justify its existence, must be a felt want, and it must, therefore, have the minimum number of subscribers to pay its way. The readers know also that, as it avoids all advertisements, it has no other source of income. Therefore, subscribers whose subscriptions are due are requested to send their subscriptions promptly to the Manager, Harijan, Triplicane, Madras. The despatch of the paper will be automatically discontinued for those inland subscribers who fail to send their subscriptions after the receipt of two issues after this. Those who had constituted themselves as voluntary agents will kindly perform that office for the next year, if they are satisfied that the paper has justified its existence.

The rates of subscription are: Inland Rs. 4, Foreign Rs. 5/8.

Harijan, 9-2-1934

142. IS IT CRIMINAL?

Nowhere have the reception committees been so extravagant as in Travancore in the matter of reception expenses. In some places, it seems the expenses have been almost half of the purses collected. I had a memo of expenses already from two places. The former included motor hire, printing and feeding charges. As usual I have asked for detailed and audited account of expenses. I have the fear that even the cost of printing addresses has been set against the purses. If so, it amounts in my opinion to criminal misappropriation of purse funds. The purses belong to Harijans. The cost of collection may be a proper charge against them where the committees are composed of poor people. In every case the purses should be handed intact. The expenses that may be passed will be refunded to the committees concerned. This was the practice followed in Andhra. In C.P., so far as I am aware, entertainment expenses were in every case borne by private persons. The following rules should be borne in mind by the committees in future.

1. The fewest number of volunteers should be employed.
2. Motor hire for local purposes should be minimized.
3. Motor hire for the party should be separately shown, so as to enable one to collect from those who are travelling at their own expense.
4. Printing charges should be incurred only when absolutely necessary.
5. No decoration charges can be allowed to be debited against the purse.
6. On no account can address expenses be paid out of the purse fund. I have repeatedly said that addresses need not be presented at all. I know that they have, when they are spontaneous, a propaganda value of the right sort. But if addresses continue to be presented thoughtlessly, the sacrifice of propaganda value may have to be made. The burden, therefore, rests upon reception committees of permitting only those addresses that are spontaneous and have a value in terms of the Harijan cause.
7. Accounts for feeding the party should be separately rendered when they are meant to be a charge against the purse. I must say in fairness to the committees that outside Travancore I have not known committees having to defray the feeding expenses. And seeing that my party is very big, consisting of 15 persons, even providing one meal is no light task in a poor country like India. Travancore is still a comparatively new field and, being the home of orthodoxy, I and my party naturally became untouchables among orthodox people, who were before good enough to have me in their homes. Add to this the fact that the Government circulars, warning their servants against their countenancing me or the movement, and possibly similar instructions from the Travancore authorities, frightened even moneyed laymen from having any dealings with me. The wonder to me is that, in spite of the vague or justified fear of the high-placed, the common people flocked to the meetings even in Travancore, as never before. I am not, therefore, surprised that the poor members of reception committees in some places in Travancore had to find feeding expenses from the purse. But, in every such case I must scrutinize the bill of fare as I would if it was rendered by a hotel-keeper. The committees know by this time that the simplest food only is expected. No sweets, no elaborate dishes, no spices are required. The largest item, I fear, is goat’s milk and fruit. These ought not to be provided at every place. As usually the three meals are taken at three different places, milk and fruit may be provided once for all at the morning meal. Fruit should be only local season’s fruit and oranges. Fruit is unfortunately a medical necessity for several members of the party. Reception committees are not to be expected to provide these through private individuals, nor may they be allowed to spend what they like from the purses. Thakkar Bapa, who is in charge of the party, should be left to decide what the bill of fare should be. Local committees would be expected to see that honest dealers provide the necessaries at market prices.

The thing to remember is that all of us working for the cause are trustees for the moneys collected and, therefore, have to spend like misers, taking greater care of the trust funds than we would of our own. If, as against this, it is said that without spectacular displays and demonstrations no money is to be got, my answer without hesitation would be that we must do without it. Either the moneys given are an earnest of reparation or they are not. If they are such an earnest, they will come spontaneously after conviction is brought home to the would-be donor. My experience of begging for public causes covers a period of now over 40 years. I cannot recall a single occasion when I have had to resort to spectacular displays. It was done by hard work, concentrated, patient and gentle arguments and unshaken faith in the cause. And of all the causes for which I had the privilege of collecting, the Harijan cause undoubtedly is the noblest, because it affects the most suppressed part of humanity on the face of this globe. It will prosper if it had true men and women behind it. The needed money will come without much effort. Honest and selfless work is the truest prayer. And no such prayer has ever gone unanswered.

Harijan, 9-2-1934

143. KHADI AND HARIJANS

Those who, apart from the whole programme of anti-untouchability, are interested in the economic betterment of Harijans should know that khadi gives employment to thousands of Harijan men, women and children who otherwise had no employment. It entirely supports some families and supplements the slender resources of many more and keeps the wolf from the door. Its capacity to be the only universal source of employment to the starving millions is not now seriously questioned. It is this poor man’s stay which is being undermined by unscrupulous methods. I learnt in Madura that some dealers in cloth were palmimg off khadi cloth woven from mill-spun yarn as hand-spun and handwoven. I was shown specimens which were exact copies of special khadi varieties. Lovers of khadi and Harijan servants who believe in the potency of khadi to serve Harijans are requested not to buy khadi which does not bear the hallmark of the All-India Spinners’ Association. I heard also that mill-cloth, too, both foreign and indigenous, is largely sold in the market as khadi. And to fill my cup of woe, I am being represented as having changed my views on khadi and having put indigenous mill-cloth on a par with khadi. This is a misrepresentation of my view of khadi. My faith in khadi is, if possible, stronger than ever from the moral, economic and national (in its widest sense) standpoint; there is no comparison between khadi and mill-cloth, even indigenous. Exploitation of the poor through mill-cloth or mill-yarn is an impossibility in the case of khadi. Exploitation of the poor through mill-cloth and mill-yarn is inevitable in some shape or form, be it ever so mild. The use of genuine khadi constitutes some (be it ever so small) automatic return to the poor for their continuous exploitation by the comparatively rich and can in the aggregate become a mighty return, though never adequate, to the masses living in the villages. None of these functions can ever be performed by mill-cloth even if every mill was nationalized. In the mill industry, even if it was conducted purely as a trust for the nation and ably managed, there could never be automatic distribution and there must be displacement of a vast amount of labour. In khadi, with the spinning-wheel in every cottage, there can be no displacement of labour and there is always automatic distribution of the product of labour. Hence for me there can be no comparison between khadi and mill-cloth, there can be no juxtaposition. For, the two are not of the same kind. Khadi may never reach the finish of the mill-cloth, nor its variety nor yet its cheapness in terms of the market. The measurement for each is different. Khadi represents human values, mill-cloth represents mere metallic value. A yard of khadi is cheap for me at 4 annas per yard. Mill-cloth of the same count and texture is too dear for me at 2 annas per yard. My plea, therefore, is for discrimination and avoidance of confusion of thought. Let each stand on its own platform. Let mill managers not grudge khadi the place it occupies. It ill becomes them to produce cloth that looks like khadi and thus cheat the buyers into the belief that it is khadi.

_Harijan_, 9-2-1 934
Two events in Chettinad deserve special notice. One was a visit to a Harijan village, Chittannoor, near Devacottah. It has a caste Hindu as a teacher living in it with his family. Both are devoted workers attached to Harijans. They are conducting a little school and are giving the Harijans medical and such other aid as is within their power to give. The school is being conducted on behalf of the local Sangh. I had a long chat with the Harijans. Their spokesman read to me a statement of the hardships inflicted on them by Nattars. The readers of Harijan are familiar with them. On my way back, I saw a deputation of Nattars who waylaid me with garlands and coconut. I told the leader about the Harijan complaints. He gave clever and evasive answers. This was a foretaste of what was in store for me at Devacottah, where I was to meet a party of Nattars by appointment. They were over one hundred. I gave them an hour and had an exhaustive, interesting and illuminating conversation. "Custom" was the only justification for the inhuman treatment that is being meted out to the Harijans, though in a less cruel form than before. "Nowadays we don’t interfere with their manner of dressing, except for certain festival days", replied the old leader of the party quite courteously but equally firmly.

But what right you have to dictate their dress for any day at all?"

"It is the custom handed down by our forefathers”, the old man replied.

"Supposing someone regulated your dress?” I interposed,

"Why not? We have to submit to many things that the higher castes prescribe for us, and the Harijans have to submit to us.”

"You need not submit to anybody’s dictation. There is no higher and no lower”, I replied.

"How can that be? The Harijans cannot be allowed to cross the limits prescribed by custom”, the old man persisted.

"But, surely, you won’t adhere to a custom which is manifestly bad”, I gently remonstrated.

Prompt came the reply, “Who is to judge what is bad for me? All custom must be good, because it comes from our forefathers.”
I had no argument against this. I accepted my defeat. But I warned the old man and my other hearers that many customs had gone and what they refused to do now voluntarily and gracefully they would be obliged reluctantly to do later by pressure of circumstances. In spite of the persistence of the old leader, the conversation was carried on with good humour and ended with a collection for the sufferers of Bihar.

There is much and glorious work for the young worker to do. The old man knew that he had no case. But he evidently thought that he must defend the indefensible.

_Harijan, 9-2-1934_

145. LETTER TO PADMAJA NAIDU

AS AT GANDHI ASHRAM,

TIRUCHENGODU,

February 9, 1934

MY DEAR PLAYMATE,

I do not write to the Old Lady because one never knows where she is from day to day. I had your joint love wire and your own letter regarding Bihar. I gave you my hearty consent the moment I got your wire. But that raises the question whether I should come just now to Hyderabad at all. I have just now been going only to those places which want me in spite of the Bihar calamity. No doubt wherever I go I make Bihar’s wail heard and even collect. But when one flies through space, collections can’t be fat. But it is a sight to see how the poor vie with one another in pressing their coppers into my hands for a province whose name many of them hear from me for the first time.

I have been in correspondence with Vaman Joshi on the subject. Please see him and advise by wire what you all want me to do. If you want me to come to Hyderabad now it will be only four hours. What is possible later I do not know. And if I am to come Vaman Joshi wants me to stay with him. I have told him my permanent abode there is Golden Threshold and if I am to stay elsewhere it can only be subject to the consent of the family. So after due consultation you will advise me on both the matters.

---

1 Vaman Gopal Joshi alias Veer Vamanrao, Marathi Play-writer and President of Berar Pradesh Congress Committee
And now the last question. How are you? And how are the others? I can almost answer the question about yourself. But it is better to know the answer from you.

The Hungarian painters have been meeting me often and telling me a lot about you.

I hope you read Harijan.

Love to you all.

BAPU

From the original: Padmaja Naidu Papers: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

146. LETTER TO RUKMINIDEVI BAZAJ

February 9, 1934

CHI. RUKMINI,

I got your postcard. I am writing this letter before the morning prayer. I rise daily at three.

The line “Who can harm him whom Rama protects?” is constantly in my mind. But sometimes I also feel that after all nobody is immortal. Doesn’t everybody die sooner or later? The only question is when. Why, then, grieve over or rejoice at it? In the final reckoning, are not night and day the same?

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9158

147. LETTER TO S. R. NARAYANA IYER

February 9, 1934

Please tell all Badaga brothers and sisters that it was a daily pleasure to me whilst I was at Coonoor to see the white-clad men and women. How I wish they would give up the drink habit, and in order to retain for ever the whiteness of their garments they would take to khadi and hand-spinning. The latter will keep them occupied, still their minds and wean the drinkers from drink. It will also add something to their tender resources or enable them to have khadi woven from yarn spun by them.

The Hindu, 13-2-1934
148. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL JOSHI

KUMBAM,
February 9, 1934

CHI. CHHAGANLAL,

I am in Dindigul. We resume travelling in a little while at seven. It is 6.40 just now. I will try to write as much as I can. We get our morning, midday and evening meals at different places. God has kept me in health so far. He will pull back the thread of life when He wills. “The Lord has bound me with a slender thread, I turn as He pulls.”

I got Ratubhai Desai’s letter yesterday. He has given a full description. You have really used your time well for reading and studying. I regard it as God’s kindness that prisoners are not permitted to read at night. If you think it necessary to see me after your release, do come over. I shall probably be in Utkal about the time you will be released. Muriel Lester is touring with me these days. I suppose you remember that I had stayed with her. She has been to China and Japan. Most probably she will remain with me till the 21st. (At this point we had to leave and resume the tour.)

We are now in a place called Kumbam situated in a valley between the Eastern and the Western Ghats. We held a meeting here at the end of day-long wandering and, after dinner, I received some visitors and am now writing this. It is past 7.30 p.m. Thakkar Bapa and others are having their dinner. After they have finished we shall have prayers. These days the prayers consist only of the Sanskrit verses and the Ramdhun. The recitation of the verses is led by me and the dhun is led by Mirabehn. She can sing a few bhajans, but I myself prevailed upon her not to take all that trouble. In the morning we recite verses from the Gita, completing all the chapters in a week so that we have enough verses to recite. The bhajans, therefore, have been omitted. Prithuraj has joined me from Calicut. He gives good help to Chandrashankar. And now another friend, selected by Swami, will be joining us. Perhaps Valji also may join us. He has made the request because of his poor health. The other members of the party remain the same.

My body is in excellent condition and gives very good service. Recently I have even stopped drinking warm water with honey in the morning. I am living on milk, fruit and one boiled and unsalted vegetable. I don’t feel the need for anything else.

You must have heard that some of the towns in Bihar have been razed to the ground by the earthquake. Because of that, I have sent some of the inmates of the Ashram, who had been released, to Bihar to help Rajendrababu. For the present, Panditji, Parnerkar, Bal, Soman, Maganbhai and Raojibhai gone there. Swami and Dhotre have gone from Bombay. Most probably Lakshmidas also will go. He has stayed back because Velanbehn is ill. She is suffering from some vaginal disorder. Did I write to you that Dudhabhai’s Lakshmi is pregnant? Radha is so so. She is still at Deolali. Keshu may be said to have settled down finally. Ramdas is comfortable where he is, but is restless all the time as is his nature. Prabhudas is likely to settle in a village near his father-in-law’s place. He and his Amba are very happy indeed. Devdas has joined The Hindustan Times on a pay of Rs. 250. Lakshmi is expecting a child. She is with him in Delhi. The delivery will take place there.

Pyarelal’s time to be released is drawing near. Mahadev is being tested well, And so is Manibehn.

(I was again interrupted at this point.) I am now completing the rest of the letter at three in the morning after cleaning my teeth.

Rama has expressed a desire to leave the Ashram and go to live with her relations. I have told her that I do not approve of her intention, but I have permitted her to do as she pleases. I did not approve because Wardha suited both mother and daughter and they kept good health there. It is not necessary that she should stay with you when you are released. But you can go and see them and also take that opportunity to observe how things are at Wardha. You don’t have to make a journey to see your family. That they may require you to do so is another matter. My present attitude is that everybody should choose his own way and progress along that way, and that nobody should copy me or anyone else. Ba is all right. It is a rather different tale this time. Be it so. If all the castles we build in our fancy were to materialize, the earth would soon be destroyed.

Amina must have gone by now to live with Pyare Ali. Her children seem to be quite at home in Anasuyabehn’s home. But I have heard that Qureshi has other views on the subject. Even if that is so, there will be no harm whatever. Gangabehn has gone on a pilgrimage to Wardha. Everybody writes and tells me that all of them will settle down in a short time.
Sardar is enjoying himself. Chandrashankar and Mira are quite well. Chandrashankar continues to acquit himself well in Mahadev’s place.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5515

149. LETTER TO K. M. MUNSHI

February 9, 1934

BHAISHRI MUNSHI,

I got your letter and the copy of Narasaiyo—Bhakta Harino. I will await your and Lilavati’s letters, which may be sent with Mathuradas or anybody else who may be coming this side. I hope all of you are well. Jagadish’ must have completely recovered from his illness now.

Malkani is preparing a note for you concerning those Bills. I read Narasaiyo whenever I can snatch a few minutes and I enjoy it immensely. I like the book. If I had time, I would go through all your books, as Vallabhbhai does.

Even if nobody is coming this side, do let me have your letters by registered post.

Work for Bihar relief is going on all over the country. I am not surprised that it has been taken up there too. I would certainly be surprised if it were not.

Blessings from

BAPU

From Gujarati: C.W. 7531. Courtesy: K. M. Munshi

1 K. M. Munshi’s son by his first wife
Gandhiji, addressing the gathering, said that it was not without difficulty that Thevaram was included in the programme of his visit. At one time, it seemed as if he would not go over there, but the workers who invited him to Madura would not take ‘no’ for an answer.

I am glad indeed that I have come here to see your beautiful place which is at the foot of the hills and it did my heart good to see so many enthusiastic volunteers from Combai to Thevaram which seemed to be like an unbroken line of volunteers on either side. I wish that all that man power and all that energy was utilized for at least retaining if not adding to the beauty of this valley. Let it not be said that what nature had so lavishly beautified man had dirtied. I could see that, all along the broken road, volunteers had worked somewhat to make it passable for the cars. But I would like the volunteers to copy the Harijans who worked for two months in order to make a proper passable road at Vannivalasi. These Harijans were a mere handful. You are at least hundred times as many as they are and therefore I would suggest to you that you make a proper road between Combai and Thevararn. It is not necessary for us always to look to Taluk Boards and District Boards to make roads for us. And don’t for one moment deceive yourselves into the belief that Taluk Boards and District Boards make roads for you for nothing. Every road so made is made out of your own money. How much better then would it be if you made your own roads directly not out of your money but out of your labour which is much better than money.

And then as I passed through the little town streets, I could not help regretting that it was not kept in perfectly sanitary and hygienic condition. I could see at once as I was driving through this valley that the valley, though very picturesque, must be malarial. But I have no doubt that by judicious labour well spent you can make this valley free from malaria. If the volunteers whom I have seen this morning were to devote a little of their time every day to making this valley malaria-free, they could do so without much difficulty, certainly without much expense. I saw that you had covered up the dirt in your drains with dry earth. Deeply as I appreciate the consideration that you have shown to me, I would appreciate it much more if you made your drains dry for all time. And I can tell you as an expert in village sanitation, having done some practical work myself, that all these things can be done if there is voluntary labour, without practically any expense whatsoever. But it cannot be done, will not be done, so long as the curse of untouchability remains in our midst and eats into the very vitals of the community.\(^1\)

1 Vide “Leaves from a Diary”, 25-2-1934.

_The Hindu, 12-2-1934_

151. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

February 10, 1934

CHI. MARY

Your letter. It is perhaps as well you are having more of khadi and that you are to have Narmada with you.

Love and kisses to Chandra.

My going to Hyderabad on 8th or 9th March seems to be a certainty. It will be only for a few hours.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 6020. Also C.W. 3349. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

152. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, SRIRANGAM\(^2\)

February 10, 1934

I am not new to this holy city.\(^3\) I well remember the occasion when I had a very friendly and sincere discussion with some _shastris_ about the temple. I remember that we had at that time a general discussion about untouchability, and although the _shastris_ had held to their own throughout the discussion, there was a courtesy and friendliness observed which were very pleasant to me. So, today as I was coming here, I found occasion to congratulate both the reception

\(^1\) After this meeting Gandhiji drove to the Zamorin’s Palace where a women’s meeting was held. Besides an address of welcome, several women presented to him their jewellery. Gandhiji urged them to banish untouchability.

\(^2\) The meeting, held in the High School playground, was largely attended. _Harijan_, 23-2-1934, also gave a summary of the speech.

\(^3\) Gandhiji had visited Srirangam on September 20, 1921.
committee and those who have organized black flag demonstration. The reception committee, I congratulate because of their wisdom in saving every pie for the Harijan cause instead of wasting on decorations, and the black flag demonstrators for the reason that there was nothing but the black flag decorations; no vociferous shout or anything that would appear discourteous. Indeed, it was a remarkable surprise to me that those urchins who were holding the black flags were all smiling and even joined in shouts of joy.

Before I deal with the subject of untouchability somewhat more fully than I do at most places, I should like to refer to the personal loss that I feel in not having by my side Mr. Rangaswamy. I can never forget the warm affection that he retained up to the end of his days for me.

I have already, when the occasion arose for the very first time, referred to Mr. Rangaswamy Iyengar of The Hindu and therefore omitted “Iyengar” on this occasion. For me both the losses are great, but here in Srirangam I naturally recall the name of Mr. Rangaswamy Iyengar who belonged to this place. As I told you, when I was here last time, I had that discussion with some shastris in connection with untouchability.

I have no doubt in my mind that the views I expressed at that time were absolutely correct. Since then I have had many discussions with many learned shastris, I had occasion also to study, as far as a layman like me can do, Shastras which have any bearing upon untouchability and I came to the definite conclusion that there was no warrant whatsoever in the Shastras for untouchability, as we practise it today. There is no warrant whatsoever for prohibiting the entry of any single Hindu, be he called untouchable or otherwise, to public temples. I do not propose to go into the discussion of the whole subject, but I want to give this absolute assurance on my behalf to those who are opposed to temple-entry by Harijans that there shall never be any force or compulsion used in this agitation for temple-entry. You have been kind enough in your address to refer to me as a true and sincere sanatanist. I think, in all humility and truthfulness, I can accept that description. I have claimed to be a sanatanist myself for the simple reason that from my youth up I have endeavoured to the best of my ability and knowledge to live up to the Shastras, as I have understood

1 Someone in the audience had asked if he was referring to A. Rangaswamy Iyengar or K. V. Rangaswamy Iyengar. them, and, as such, I feel that it is the duty of every true Sanatanist to do repentance in connection with untouchability, to purify himself and get rid of this taint. It is his bounden duty to admit Harijans to the same rights and privileges that he himself possesses, but he may not be satisfied till he has endeavoured his utmost to secure temple-entry for Harijans on the same terms that he enjoys. What is more, at Bombay, in the month of September, when the fast was going on, representative Hindus met there in an assembly and came to a solemn resolution¹ in the name of Hindus² in general to the effect that Harijans had the same right of temple-entry as the savarna Hindus, and if in order to attain to that state, if there was any legal obstacle, means would be adopted to remove that legal obstacle also. Therefore, for a man like me, it becomes a double duty to prosecute the claim of Harijans to temple-entry on the same terms as caste Hindus, but that ought not to frighten a single person for the simple reason that it merely amounts to a determination to educate Hindu public opinion along proper lines. Whilst I deplore that this great temple of Srirangam is not open to Harijans precisely in the same manner that it is open to caste Hindus, I have absolutely no desire that that temple should be opened to Harijans until the caste Hindu opinion in general is ripe for such opening.

It is not a question of Harijans asserting their right of temple-entry or claiming it. They may or may not want to enter that temple, even when it is declared open to them. But it is the bounden duty of every caste Hindu to secure that opening, but it cannot be opened because a humble individual like me thinks that it should be opened. It can only be opened when there is a consensus of opinion on the part of caste Hindus. The difficulty therefore comes in only when a single Hindu says, ‘so long as I am opposed to it, Srirangam temple should not be opened.’ If such an impossible doctrine were to be accepted, we can never think of any progress in Hindu religion. We should never be able to deal with so many social abuses on these terms, and I do not know the history of a single Hindu temple, or for that matter any mosque or church, which has remained prohibited to a class of people because of the opposition of one single solitary worshipper.

Having made my position, therefore, with reference to temple-

² The source has ‘Harijans’, evidently a slip.
entry so absolutely clear, I would like all those who are opposed to this movement to consider whether they will not recognize the time spirit and recognize that all the disabilities that are imposed upon Harijans can never be enforced.

I want to give my evidence before you that throughout this tour I had the privilege of seeing tens of thousands of caste Hindus in these three provinces that I had visited, namely, C.P., Andhradesha, Tamil Nad, and if you can say, the fourth, Malabar. I have not a shadow of doubt that unsophisticated caste-Hindu mind is today ready to recognize the right of Harijans to enter temples and to enjoy all the other privileges that caste-Hindus enjoy. Therefore, I suggest to those who are opposed to the movement that they should not confuse the issue. If they do not like the temple-entry question, let them leave that alone, but let them give their perfect co-operation on several things that are being done today in the country. I am supposed to meet a deputation of sanatanists this afternoon. I invite the hottest sanatanist to that discussion. It is intended to be a purely friendly discussion and I have no doubt that there are many points of agreement between them and those who are called reformers. There, I should like to leave this question.

The Hindu, 12-2-1934

153. INTERVIEW TO HARIJANS, SRIRANGAM

February 10, 1934

If it is a fact that 98 per cent of the staff of the Sangh are Brahmins,¹ it is the most creditable performance, showing that all Brahmins are not bad and that those who work in the Sangh are repentant and are in earnest about this reform. My own conviction is that real Brahmins have nothing to do with untouchability.

Q. Can you not make it a rule that half the members should be Harijans?

A. In the Sangh, it is not possible to have 50 per cent Harijans as members, for the simple reason that Harijans are not debtors but creditors. This is a debtors’ association. The fear that underlies your question is wholly unjustified, because the members of the local Sangh have no authority to spend money without the sanction of the ¹ Gandhiji had been asked why it was that 98 per cent of the staff of Harijan Seva Sangh were Brahmins.

Central Board. You will find the bulk of the money collected spent among Harijans. The idea is to spend as little as possible on administration. And you should know that members are volunteers getting nothing.

Q. Do your workers deserve our confidence?

A. Yes, those who work in the Sangh do deserve your confidence. If you examine their administration of funds, you will find it quite satisfactory. Because you have seen some Brahmins acting badly, selfishly, you think that all Brahmins are bad. It may be that Brahmins as a class are bad though I have no proof whatsoever to confirm that charge. But I have proof to show that Brahmins connected with this movement are in an overwhelming number of cases honest men and have joined this Sangh, because they are re-pentant and because they feel that untouchability is a hideous wrong.

_Harijan_, 23-2-1934

154. SPEECH AT THE NATIONAL COLLEGE, TRICHINOPOLY

_February 10, 1934_

I thank you for the address and the purse that you have presented me. For the number of students that I see before me, I do not consider your purse to be big enough. The students in several other parts of India during this very tour have subscribed far more liberally than you have, but I am not here to criticize the slenderness of your purse. Whether whatever you have given is little or much depends upon the condition of your hearts. If, whatever you have given comes out of the fulness of your hearts, surely it must be enough. In any case, I trust that it is but an earnest determination to get rid of untouchability; for students, as I have said so often, it is not enough that they merely satisfy themselves by presenting purses to me. They have to give their leisure hours to serving Harijans and there are many ways of rendering their service most effectively. I may also tell you that in any part of India students are rendering service. I suggest to you that you appoint certain corporations amongst yourselves who will devote themselves to this service during a particular week or a day as the case may be. You can visit Harijan quarters, take charge of Harijan children, and treat them as if they were your own blood-brothers and sisters, and you can give them education that they are so much in need of. You can take them to see different places of interest, you can give them elementary lessons in hygiene, you can sweep their quarters, and secure their co-operation in doing so. These are however only some illustrations of the many ways in which you can render service. I have no doubt that earnest students will find out several ways of rendering service. I hope that you will set about rendering this service without further delay. May God give you strength for it.

_The Hindu, 12-2-1934_

155. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, TRICHINOPOLY

_[February 10, 1934]_

This is not my very first visit to Trichinopoly. I have many pleasant recollections of previous meetings; but the numbers present tonight beat all previous records. And it is a matter of joy to me that this movement of self-purification can attract crowds so large as this. I do, however, hope that you, who have attended this meeting in such large numbers, have not done so in order to look at a _tamasha_. Mine is a definite invitation to all caste Hindus to purify themselves of the taint of untouchability. I invite you to give your money also for the same purpose, and you give me liberally of your coppers, of your silver coins and even of your jewellery. It is difficult to believe that all this you do, although you are not in the movement. And if, as a matter of fact, such large numbers of people all over India support the movement, I think it is indicative of a very great reformation in Hinduism.

But among the addresses that I have received here I find one from my Mussalman friends. After saying many complimentary things about me, the address thus concludes:

_A soul (who is) more devoted to public cause and who always considers the good of others better than his own, cannot be found than in you. You are the only leader now and there is no one else. Hence we pray that you give us on this occasion the consolation of our realizing our cherished hopes of your taking up the work of uplifting, not only the cause of all the Hindus and_

---

1 The meeting, held in the Puthur Maidan, was according to _The Hindu_, 12-2-1934, attended by 30,000 people. At the end of the meeting a collection was made for the Bihar Earthquake Relief Fund.

2 From Gandhiji’s itinerary published in the _Harijan_, 23-2-1934
Christians, but also of us, Mohammedans, in a word, the public cause, i.e., of our people getting their rights of citizenship and of their being saved from their economic bondage.

I may, in answer, give this absolute assurance not only to these Mussalman friends, but through them to all whom it may concern, that in the evening of my life I am not likely to take up a sectional cause to the injury of the public cause. And if at the present moment I appear to be advocating a sectional cause, you may depend upon it that behind that sectional cause lies deep down the desire that the whole of the public may benefit by it. For I do not believe that life is divided into separate air-tight compartments. On the contrary it is an undivided and indivisible whole; and, therefore, what is or may be good for one must be good for all. Whatever activity fails to stand that unmistakable test is an activity that must be abjured by all who have the public weal at heart.

Having throughout my life believed in this doctrine of universal good, never have I taken up any activity—be it sectional or national—which would be detrimental to the good of humanity as a whole. And in pursuing that universal goal, I discovered years ago that untouchability, as it is practised today among Hindus, is a hindrance not only to the march of Hindus towards their own good, but also a hindrance to the general good of all. He who runs may discover for himself how this untouchability has taken in its snaky coil not merely caste Hindus but all other communities representing different faiths in India, that is to say, Mussalmans, Christians and others. In dealing with the monster of untouchability my own innermost desire is not that the brotherhood of Hindus only may be achieved, but it essentially is that the brotherhood of man—be he Hindu, Mussalman, Christian, Parsee or Jew—may be realized. For I believe in the fundamental truth of all great religions of the world. I believe that they are all God-given, and I believe that they were necessary for the people to whom these religions were revealed. And I believe that, if only we could all of us read the scriptures of the different faiths from the standpoint of the followers of those faiths we should find that they were at bottom all one and were all helpful to one another.

Hence it is that I have not hesitated to ask all non-Hindus to help me with their prayer in this mission, and it is because I have a living faith in my mission and because that faith is based on an extensive experience that I have not hesitated to say with the greatest deliberation that, if we, Hindus, do not destroy this monster of untouchability, it will devour both Hindus and Hinduism. And when I ask you to purify your hearts of untouchability, I ask of you nothing less than this—that you should believe in the fundamental unity and equality of man. I invite you all to forget that there are any distinctions of high and low among the children of one and the same God.

And therefore it is that I have not hesitated to plead on bended knees before those caste Hindus who call themselves sanatanists that they should join hands with me in this movement of self-purification. If they would only patiently study it and its implications, they would discover that there are more points of contact than of difference between them and the reformers. They cannot possibly, if they will study the movement, justify themselves in subjecting to indignities all those who are considered untouchables. Not far from Trichinopoly there is a place called Mel-Arasur. There the Harijans have claimed to use public tanks in common with the others. Law permits the use of these tanks by Harijans. Nevertheless caste Hindus have taken the law into their own hands: and I understand that in a variety of ways they have persecuted these brethren of ours. This is but one illustration out of many that I could give you of the ill-treatment of Harijans. No religious sophistry can possibly justify conduct such as this.

_Harijan_, 16-2-1934

156. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

February 11, 1934

CHI. AMALA,

I have your three letters at the same time. I am glad you are happy. You may certainly learn Gujarati. You must not play with your body. Keep it in good order by taking proper food and do not neglect your health on any account. Do not imagine all sorts of evil. It is wrong to fear me.

Love.

BAPU

SHRI AMALABEHN
HARIJAN ASHRAM
SABARMATI
B.B.&.C.I.RLY.

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum And Library
I must not take many minutes. You cannot be comfortably sitting in the sun as you must have been for a few hours, and I have yet to cover a distance of 76 miles, nor is it necessary for me to say much, for your purses and addresses show that you are alive to the object of the mission. I appreciate the message that some sanatanists have sent through the members of the Reception Committee. Some of them, I understand from your address, have been good enough to give their own mite towards Harijan uplift, but they have sent me their advice that I ought to drop the claim that I am putting forth for temple-entry on behalf of Harijans. Claiming as I do to be a sanatanist as they themselves are, I cannot give up the claim on behalf of Harijans to enter our temples precisely on the same terms as sanatanist Hindus do, but I can give them this absolute assurance that so far as I am concerned, and so far as Harijan Sevak Sangh is concerned, there never shall be a single Harijan entering a single Hindu temple unless there is a clear or rather clearest possible consensus of opinion of temple-goers to that particular temple that Harijans should enter. My prosecution of the claim therefore ought not to affect a single opponent of temple-entry, for temple-entry will surely depend upon their being converted to my view. So long as they remain opposed to temple-entry, it is quite clear, from what I have told you, that there can be no temple-entry by Harijans, but I do want to give this warning that, so far as I can judge, public opinion is daily veering round to the fact that savarna Hindus will fail in their elementary duty to Harijans if they prevent them from making use of public temples precisely on the same terms as caste Hindus do. Remember please, that the reformer and the sanatanist base their interpretation of the duty of caste Hindus upon identical Shastras. Their interpretations differ undoubtedly. Society can only gain by both parties courteously, gently and honourably putting their own interpretations before the public.

The Hindu, 12-2-1934

---

1 This was a huge meeting. Addresses of welcome were presented on behalf of the Karur Municipality and the public.
2 From Gandhiji’s itinerary published in the Harijan, 23-2-1934
158. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, ERODE

February 11, 1934

Gandhiji thanked them for the addresses and purses and said that they would not expect him to speak for long at that time of the evening, knowing that he left Trichinopoly that day very early in the morning and that he had to go another 42 miles by motor to the place of his night halt. He was glad that he was allowed to take all addresses as read, as he was in receipt of copies of them in advance. He was glad to know of the Harijan work done by the local Municipal Council and he asked them not to be satisfied with the work already done but to continue their work till untouchability was rooted out from their hearts. In the eyes of God there was no difference between man and man and it was a sin to hold any difference. The Hindu religion was in danger and removal of untouchability would certainly avert it. He knew that sanatanists did not agree with him. But if they had rightly understood the Harijan movement, its principles and work, they would have no grievance against him. He was trying to meet sanatanists wherever possible in his tour, and to convince them to have a change of heart.

The Hindu, 13-2-1934

159. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, TIRUCHENGODU

February 11, 1934

FRIENDS,

I thank you for these addresses and your purses. You do not expect me at this late hour of the night to make a long speech. I must also confess that I am fairly tired; nor perhaps is it necessary that I must say much to you. You know the burden of my message and it is in a few sentences. It is high time that we changed our hearts and got rid of untouchability altogether. And that means, we must abolish all distinctions of high and low. We are children of one and the same God and God could not possibly do anything worse with

About ten thousand people attended the meeting. Besides the civic address, various other institutions presented addresses of welcome along with purses. At the end of the meeting the addresses were auctioned and a collection was made for the victims of the Bihar earthquake.

About 5,000 people attended the meeting. At the end of the meeting the addresses were auctioned and a collection was made for the victims of the Bihar earthquake.
his own creation. It is your own experience as parents that you do not observe distinctions among your own children. It is therefore that I have been always saying that it is a great sin to have untouchability among us. It is not a divine institution. It is man-made and if Hinduism and Hindus are to live, it must now be unmade. Let caste Hindus pray to God that this curse of untouchability be removed from their hearts. Let us say with one voice that Harijans are entitled to the same privileges and rights as caste Hindus are.

I hope you have not forgotten the sufferers in Bihar. Although it is so very late, I would gladly give some minutes for collections for Bihar. And while the volunteers collect money, I propose to sell these addresses.

The Hindu, 13-2-1934

160. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

[On or after February 11, 1934]

DEAR DAUGHTER,

You are stupid. Who told you I was displeased? Do you not see I have put myself in front of you? I came up to you twice and you were asleep. I do not come to you often, for I am busy. But I direct everything from here. But you are stupid, obstinate and sensitive. No silence today or tomorrow. You must learn to obey cheerfully. Your peace lies in obedience not in wilful silence or anything else. That is the meaning of discipline and faith.

Did you understand?

BAPU

From a photo: G.N. 292; also Bapune Patra-8: Bibi Amtussalaam Ke Nam, p. 44

---

1 According to the addressee, this letter was written by Gandhiji on his reaching Rajaji’s Ashram where she was lying ill; Gandhiji had reached the Ashram on the evening of February 11.
161. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

February 12, 1934

BHAI GHANSHYAMDAS,

I had a talk with Miss Lester about Midnapore and asked her to see the Governor. She wrote a letter to him to which he replied by wire. She is now going. You should read the letter I have given to her. I have asked her to see you and learn all the facts. Give her all the information. If it is necessary, arrange for her to meet Dr. Bidhan and Satisbabu. She will leave on Friday to be back here with me. She has been given some money for the expenses and her ticket has been paid for. Shall I charge it to you? Of course, Jamnalalji is always there. I do not quite know what would be the correct thing to do.

I have written this in great haste. Your letters have been received. I shall answer them by and by. I do not get the time.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: C.W. 7945. Courtesy: G. D. Birla

162. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, PUDUPALAYAM

February 12, 1934

FRIENDS,

You know that here I am not supposed to have come to visit the village really but to visit the Ashram.¹ It is highly unlikely that I would have come to Pudupalayam but for the Ashram. That does not mean that I do not want the change of heart here also that I am asking for from all caste Hindus. But it means this, that I have come to see what service the Ashram has been rendering to you. The Ashram being in your midst, my visit to you should be considered as superfluous. If I discovered that in spite of the Ashram being in your midst for so many years, you have not yet got rid of the taint of untouchability, I should very nearly despair. As a matter of fact, places like Pudupalayam ought to serve as a proper test in order to know how far the caste-Hindu mind has been touched on the matter of untouchability.

¹ The Ashram was started by C. Rajagopalachari in 1926 for constructive work among the villagers. Removal of untouchability was one of its aims.
For you have in your midst a body of the servants of the people who in their own life have no taint of untouchability about them at all. They are all pledged to regard Harijans as their own blood-brothers and sisters. I would certainly like to think that you are also treating the Harijans in the same manner. But I know that it is not your position today. Though you have made considerable headway in that direction you have still your doubts about the necessity of removing untouchability altogether. You still like the distinction of high and low. You still feel, some of you at any rate, that if Harijans came into their own they will not give you the same service that they are giving today. I think that it is wrong; it is sinful to keep persons under suppression simply because, if their suppression was removed, they might not render us the service that they have been rendering hitherto.

We have no right whatsoever to force service from fellow human beings. I can therefore only hope and pray that you will get rid of whatever untouchability there is still left in you. Believe with me that untouchability has no divine sanction, but that it is a positive sin. I did not expect the purse you have given me. Your purse I consider to be a handsome purse. I have no doubt that you have heard of the province of Bihar and you must have heard about the earthquake that has desolated many of its fair and rich cities.

I understand that the purse you have presented is just now collected and it is absolutely a spontaneous offering. Therefore I dare not suggest that you should make collections for Bihar at this very moment; but I would like you to think of your suffering countrymen in Bihar and put together whatever money you can and send that money to Rajendrababu. You should know that nearly 25,000 people have died and many more thousands are today homeless and without clothing and living on doles supplied to them.

_The Hindu, 14-2-1934_
BA,

We are in Rajaji’s Ashram today. Nearly 250 persons must have dined here. The same number slept in the place last night. Mathuradas was among them. Harijan Sastri and his wife also have come along. Valjibhai is in the party. His health cannot be described as good. I got your letter. You remember Asharbhai of Tirupur, don’t you? He and his wife Padmavati had got ill after they were released from jail. They are somewhat better now. There was a long letter from Bal today. He and Raojibhai are working together and looking after the store. Soman and Parnerkar are in Patna. Maganbhai looks after the journals. Bhansali is living in a cave near Than. He has got his lips stitched up, but an opening has been left through which a tube can be inserted. He drinks through it flour mixed in water. He eats nothing else. He wears a loin-cloth made of bark. I had a letter from Chhaganlal Joshi. He is all right. These days he gets milk, etc., in his food and so keeps good health. He reads a lot. There was a letter from Pyarelal in which he has described his progress in the study of the Gita. His health is fairly good. Gangabehn has left Wardha and returned to Borivli. From there she will go to the Ashram. There was a letter from Devdas. He is quite well. Amtussalaam is lying in bed in front of me. She has been having fever, but is better today. She will go to Sabarmati when she is all right. Krishnakumari is in Kashi and lying ill at her paternal uncle’s. Velanbehn is being looked after in her illness. I have written to Madhavdas. There has been no reply. I will let you know when I get one. I am sending copies of your letter to Ramdas, Devdas, etc.

Blessings to all sisters from

BAPU

[PS.]

I omit the discourse today. I hope you will not mind if I do that sometimes? I have no time at all and, therefore, cannot write it well. I will send you the slivers.

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Bane Patro, pp. 13-4
164. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

PUDUPALAYAM,
February 13, 1934

Bhai Vallabhbhai,

It is in Raja’s Ashram, and it is Tuesday morning. About 50 people have joined it, but he is able to manage them all. The climate is so fine that there can be no difficulty on its account.

Muriel Lester and her friend joined us at Coimbatore. They left yesterday to see the Governor of Bengal. The suggestion was made by me. The subject of discussion will be exclusively Midnapur. I don’t think anything will come out of the effort, but it was our duty to do this much. The two ladies will return on Sunday.

Amtussalaam is laid up in bed. She is lying just in front of me. Her heart is gold, but her body is brass.

You must have read the Poet’s attack. I am replying to it in Harijan. He of course made amends afterwards. He gets excited and writes, and then corrects himself. This is what he does every time.

Bhansali has got his lips stitched up. He mixes flour and water and drinks the liquid with a straw. He says he got a tailor to stitch up his lips. And he adds that he enjoys complete peace of mind. He intends to wear a loin-cloth or a shirt. He is somewhere near Than in Kathiawar.

There was a very good letter from Chhaganlal Joshi. He has read a good deal. His mental condition also is good. His health is good. It seems he has also been getting milk, etc., in sufficient quantity. The date of his release is drawing near.

I have permitted Amala to go to Sabarmati. Just now she feels quite happy.

Valji has come here. His health is so so. Swami’s friend, Himmatlal Khira, has come. His health has not been fully restored. I, therefore, don’t think that he can stay here. Mathuradas has come for a few days. There is nothing special behind the visit.

I have received Rajendrababu’s call. I shall have, therefore, to break off the tour somewhere and go. I have sent a wire and am awaiting a reply by wire. I have informed him that I cannot go before the 24th at the earliest.

1 Vide “Rabindranath Tagore’s Statement”.

Ba’s letter is enclosed.

Devdas is happy in Delhi. Prithuraj is carrying on well. His work is satisfactory.

Lakshmidas must have gone to Patna now. I am not thinking just now of sending any more workers.

I have just received a letter from Bal. The Ashram batch is working hard. It seems to be giving a good account of itself. Bal and Raojibhai are in joint control of the store. Parnerkar and Soman are in Patna. Maganbhai is in the publicity department.

A copy of Ba’s letter is enclosed.

Please be satisfied with this much today.

Blessings to both from

BAPU

[PS.]

There is a letter from Kusum from Broach. She has been to Africa in connection with her brother. She had a long letter from Pyarelal. But its contents are meant for me. He has written in it about the Gita and about his studies. I was forgetting an important thing. I have just received the Government’s reply to the effect that I cannot see Mani and Mahadev.

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 76-8

---

1 Ramachandra J. Soman
2 Maganbhai Prabhudas Desai, joint editor of Harijanbandhu
3 Vide 1st footnote of “Telegram to Home Secretary, Government of Bombay”, 3-2-1934.
165. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, NAMAKKAL

February 14, 1934

FRIENDS,

You have brought me to one of the most picturesque sights in all India and an ideal place for holding a meeting such as this. You have presented me with a number of addresses and purses and made different other gifts. The movement which is now going on is one of religious self-purification. Through this we must endeavour to attain a status of absolute equality for Harijans, whom caste Hindus have suppressed for centuries. I regard your monetary offering as a token of whole-hearted support for this movement. I see from the Taluk Board address that you have been endeavouring, in whatever way you can, to help the Harijan cause. I hope, however, that you will not cease your efforts until Harijans attain perfect equality with the caste Hindus to which I have just now adverted. I have here an address from the Harijans. They say that they have built a temple by the public subscription of philanthropic men. But, evidently, it is unfinished and they need financial help to complete it. I hope that leaders here will go into the matter and do whatever is necessary. The Harijans would like me to visit the cheries and the temple site. I wish I could go and see them. But it is hardly possible now, seeing that I have a heavy programme in front of me for the day. Now I must proceed to the disposing of these addresses and these articles you have given me.

I see you have not yet made any collections for the stricken people of Bihar. I would, therefore, like volunteers to spread themselves among the crowd and collect what they can. I take it that you know 25,000 people have been swallowed up by mother earth in a second. And while we here are enjoying ourselves, more or less, thousands of our countrymen in Bihar are shivering from cold and are shelterless. I would, therefore, like you to subscribe liberally for the Bihar Relief Fund.

The Hindu, 16-2-1934

1 The meeting was held at 7.50 a.m. and was attended by over fifteen thousand people. Addresses of welcome were presented to Gandhiji on behalf of the Taluk Board, the local Harijans and others.
I have had to carry out a strenuous programme today and you have given me a heavy agenda with little time to speak after it. I have to catch the train to Tanjore at 7.20 p.m. and so I wish to finish this work soon. Nor is it necessary for me to speak to you now, about the message of my tour. In one sentence I will say that all castes must have equal rights. When we feel that we are all God’s creatures, there can be no untouchability in our midst. We are all Harijans, I think that caste Hindus are not acceptable to God because we have not done our duty to the Harijans. If we are to get God’s blessings, we must elevate the Harijans. They must be given the same privileges as are enjoyed by caste Hindus. This great crowd prevents me from speaking further. I would remind you of Bihar and the sufferings of the people of that province from the earthquake. I shall speak about it if you will allow me that pleasure. If you have not helped your brothers in Bihar, I will like you to help them as much as you can. You do not allow me to speak now. I shall now auction these things and then finish this work.

The Hindu, 16-2-1934

---

1 Over fifty thousand people attended the meeting. Twelve addresses of welcome and as many purses, including those from the Municipality, citizens, District Board and various other organizations, were presented to Gandhiji, as also many valuable gifts of silver and gold.

2 The audience had become noisy.
167. LETTER TO HIRALAL SHARMA

February 15, 1934

BHAI SHARMA,

I have your telegram. I am writing this in a moving train. There does not seem to be any hitch now in your leaving for Wardha.

Amtuussalaam has well and truly fallen sick. I shall meet her on Monday. Could you possibly come to Madras before going to Wardha if she has not recovered by then? Send me a wire if you can come. I do not wish to inconvenience you for nothing. She has an amazing faith in you.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, between pp. 54-5.

168. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

February 15, 1934

DEAR DAUGHTER AMTUSSALAAM,

You must be better now. I have sent a letter to Dr. Sharma. I hope to find you fully recovered when we meet in Madras.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Urdu: G.N. 293

169. LETTER TO JIVANJI D. DESAI

NEGAPATAM,
February [15], 1934

BHAI JIVANJI,

I got your letter. You must have read in Chandrashankar’s letter that I did not get the permission.\(^1\) I shall be in Belgaum most probably on March 5/6. I would be happy if Durga and you could see me there.

\(^1\) Gandhiji was at Negapatam on 15th February.

\(^2\) To see Manibehn Patel and Mahadev Desai in the Belgaum Prison, \textit{vide} “Telegram to Home Secretary, Government of Bombay”, 3-2-1934.
You may see Mahadev earlier. I certainly have something to write in reply to Mahadev’s letter, but since we shall be meeting in a few days, I don’t write anything just now. Tell him I am well. He ought not to take it to heart that I shall not be able to see him. Inquire and find out how Girdhari is doing. I am keeping excellent health. Raja is with me. It is not certain how long he will stay. I am likely to have to go to Bihar earlier than expected. I shall know more on the 20th. Ask Mahadev not to worry about anything.

Give the accompanying papers to Kakasaheb.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9938. Also C.W. 6913. Courtesy: Jivanji D. Desai

170. LETTER TO K. M. MUNSHI

NAGAPATTAM,
[February 15, 1934]

BHAISHRI MUNSHI,

I have your letter.

I have read Dinshaw’s letter and your note. It seems to me that now there is no point in my giving my opinion in the matter. Those mill-owners who hold independent views with regard to artificial silk can follow their own course. Many mills have not kept the pledge at all. Actually, there is no effective organization of the mills. I do not find that they are bound by any moral obligations. Hence, we should be content with whatever work can be got out of them through entreaty.

I do not approve of everybody rushing to Britain, though occasionally I may be of assistance in that. But that even people like you should go there in search of peace and physical comfort is too much. Are there not enough number of places in India? If not Mahabaleshwar, go and stay at Abu or Coonoor. Go to Mussoorie. Go to Darjeeling. Almora is the best, where, in the distance, is the beautiful Ramakrishna Math. There is one at Ooty too. It is a beautiful place.

1 From the contents and from ‘Nagapattam’ in the date-line where Gandhiji had been on February 15, 1934.
Even a person used to the western style of living can stay there. Go to the mountain resorts in Burma. There are beautiful places in Ceylon also. But if you find comfort only in Britain, what is wrong with the British rule? You have taken to legal practice out of necessity. I would expect you to spend the minimum not the maximum of the money you earn out of the profession. Remember that Britain means the West.

Moreover, do you know what kind of fire is raging in India? On the one side is Bihar, on the other side is Bengal and on the third side is the Frontier Province. When there are such cataclysmic disturbances, how can you think of going out? Even if one cannot do anything, one can at least be present here and write? Once when someone was flogged, Ramdas Swami could not protect him. But for every weal made by the cane on the victim’s back, Ramdas Swami showed one on his own back. This may be a legend, but I have seen with my own eyes the father who collapsed and died on hearing about the death of his only son. If our love has extended outside, when our own people are burning why should we also not burn at least a little? I have said what I wanted to say. What use is showing one’s wisdom to a person who is already wise? After all, you are your own master. Do what you think is your duty.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the original: C. W. 7529. Courtesy: K. M. Munshi

171. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, TANJORE

February 15, 1934

I do not know whether you enjoy it or not, but I must confess to you that the scene presented before me is a magnificent scene; not because of the crowd that surrounds me but because of the sun just rising over our head. For delivering my message I cannot conceive a more auspicious occasion than early morning. How I wish that my message should enter straight into your heart and you felt as repentant as I do, that we and our forefathers suppressed a large part of Hindu humanity and that, in the name of religion. I have been told not once

1 A summary of this speech was published in Harijan, 23-2-1934, in the usual “Weekly Letter”.

VOL. 63 : 18 JANUARY, 1934 - 19 MAY, 1934 159
but repeatedly that our sanatanist friends would associate with all other reforms with reference to untouchability, if only I would surrender the claim of temple-entry on behalf of the Harijans. They little know that that advice is tantamount to asking me to surrender the force which sustains me.

I looked at the Tanjore temple and then within probably a few seconds or a few minutes of passing by the temple, I saw the sun rising above the horizon. I asked myself whether he rose only for caste Hindus or whether he rose for Harijans as well. I discovered at once that he was absolutely impartial and had probably to rise more for the Harijans than for the caste Hindus, who had plenty of wealth and who had shut themselves in their palaces, shutting out light even beyond the rise of the sun. Poor Harijans, they do not sleep after sunrise; on the contrary, being a labourer the Harijan has to get up even before sunrise. And therefore whilst many of us may be still sleeping on our cots and on our mattresses, the Harijans get a proper sun-bath. If that temple designed by God opens out to the whole world, shall a man-built temple open less for Harijans? Not one of these temples can be opened without the free consent of those who are in the habit of going to these temples or who believe in these temples. Why should therefore the sanatanists or any other person worry about my conviction about temple-entry, when the matter was purely a voluntary thing? But what grieves me is this, that under the excuse of this temple-entry question, in many other things where the sanatanists say there is a perfect agreement they are not moving their little finger. Let them treat Harijans on terms of absolute equality in all other matters. They will then have done something to retrieve the great blunder. There I must leave my message. I can only hope and pray that all of you will recognize the simple truth and you will have sufficient strength to act according to it.

The Hindu, 16-2-1934
February 15, 1934

I deeply appreciate the honour you have done me by inviting me and presenting this address to me. I appreciate it more because you have expressed your opinion in a frank and courageous manner. I must say that one expression that you have used is enough warrant for me to continue my mission. You have said I should concentrate on cultivation of intensive public opinion. I am doing absolutely nothing more than cultivating public opinion in favour of justice being done to Harijans. I know the difference on the question of temple-entry. That is my only point of difference with sanatanist opinion. Nothing is going to be done, so far as I can prevent it, or so far as the Central Board of the Harijan Sevak Sangh can prevent it, to force temple-entry. Temple-entry is a question purely for the caste Hindus to solve. If caste Hindus say as a body that Harijans shall not enter the temples, I shall say it will be unfortunate, it will be marching against the spirit of the times; but, so long as that opinion persists, no Harijan will enter any temple. My duty is merely to confine myself to the cultivation of public opinion in the direction. I come to the parting of the ways when I am told that I should not whisper a word about the subject. I cannot do that. For I feel, as a lover of my faith, to say that caste Hindus will not be doing their elementary duty so long as they prohibit temple-entry to Harijans. I hold it to be impossible for a man who has studied Hindu Shastras with an unbiased mind to feel otherwise. When an overwhelming majority favours the entry of Harijans into a particular temple, it should be opened.

Wherever I have gone and opened temples to Harijans, I have done so in the presence of thousands of caste Hindus and with their consent: the thousands of caste Hindus who were most concerned about the temple said, “We want the temples to be opened.”

But if you say that no temples should be opened so long as there is one caste Hindu who says, ‘No, the temple should not be opened,’ then, I would say that that is coercion with a vengeance. I

---

1 The meeting was held in the Municipal Council Hall. This version of the speech has been collated with that of The Hindu, 16-2-1934.
2 Harijan gives the date as February 16, which is evidently a slip as Gandhiji was in Kumbakonam only on the 15th.
would call it exercise of force when one man says, ‘My ideas ought to prevail against the idea of 9,999.’ The majority should no doubt consist of Hindus who believe in temple—not scoffers. Therefore without the overwhelming opinion of caste Hindus, temple-entry is an impossibility. But where there is such a majority, I should never give up my attempt to veer round others to my way of thinking. I deliberately feel that it is an insult to prohibit Harijans who conform to all the laws that are laid down for the entry of caste Hindus to temples. In justice you should not adopt that method. I say there is no sanction in Hinduism as I have been able to study it all these years for the prohibition of Harijans into temples. Nevertheless, I deeply appreciate the candid expression of your opinion. I do not think that it is proper for anybody to accept one’s opinion because he has got some merit or enthusiasm for the cause. Therefore I appreciate your opinion all the more.

_Harijan_, 23-2-1934, and _The Hindu_, 16-2-1934

173. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, KUMBAKONAM

February 15, 1934

I thank you very much for the addresses you have presented to me. I have been asked in an address before me purporting to be from the Reception Committee to open a day school for the Harijans at Koranatukaruppu but I am sorry I will not be able to do so. There is no time left for me to visit that school. . . . Co-workers should not put the strain upon me of doing the work which they themselves should undertake. They may take me to cheries and show me the work they have done. It is their duty to keep the cheries clean and to open and conduct schools. In a hurricane and intensive tour my energy and time should be reserved to the chief object of my mission. And therefore I was deeply grieved when I received an anonymous telegram that I should not receive reception at the hands of those to whom the function was entrusted.

A staunch Congressman as I am, for me, in connection with this

---

1 The following lines have been taken from _The Hindu_, 16-2-1934.
2 According to _The Hindu_ two addresses of welcome along with purses on behalf of the Reception Committee and the local Harijan Seva Sangam were presented to Gandhiji. This speech has been collated with the report published in _The Hindu_, 16-2-1934.
Harijan service, there is no Congressman or non-Congressman; and if there is a non-Congressman who is a lover of Harijans and a lover of his religion and has capacity to work, it is the duty of Congressmen to work under him and take directions from him. If Congressmen were to limit Harijan service to themselves, it is easy enough to see that Hinduism will not be able to purge itself of the taint of untouchability, because thousands who don’t consider themselves Congressmen will remain outside the orbit of that service. Let it, therefore, be remembered by all those who have this cause at heart that, in a movement deeply religious, in a movement of self-purification, there is no room whatsoever for divisions. This movement has no political motive behind it, and the very best manner of our being able to show that there is no political motive behind it is to conserve our energy, bring on the same platform the energy of all those who consider it necessary to purge Hinduism of this sin of untouchability.

Harijan, 23-2-1934, and The Hindu, 16-2-1934

174. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, NEGAPATAM

February 15, 1934

You have overloaded me with these frames containing addresses. I have been pleading for no addresses, no frames. I laugh but what counts behind that laughter is that absolute sincere conviction that those addresses and frames are wholly unnecessary in connection with a movement like this which is absolutely and purely for self-purification. But since you will insist upon presenting so many addresses, I will endeavour to turn them to Harijan account by selling them. And those who will present such addresses should take care that they help in taking to Harijan service and I wish that those who contribute either their money or their labour or their lot to this noble cause will share with me the belief that they are not only purifying themselves but raising the status of the whole of India with their purification, for seemingly though my message is addressed to caste Hindus—the so-called savarna Hindus—it is a message, I venture to think,

---

1 The preceding paragraph has been taken from Harijan, 23-2-1934.
2 Gandhiji arrived at Negapatam at 7.30 p.m. Addresses of welcome and purses were presented by the Municipality, the Charkha Sangh, Harijan Seva Sangam and Negapatam Taluk Board. At the end there was a collection for the Bihar Earthquake Relief Fund.
addressed to all mankind. If I can but succeed in persuading the caste Hindus to wipe out this curse of untouchability, I believe that Hindus would have taken a long step towards the realization of brotherhood for which the whole world knowingly or unknowingly is aspiring. I would have you believe me when I say that there is absolutely no warrant for untouchability, as we practise it, in the Shastras and I want to suggest to all who would study the Shastras the golden rule of interpretation. If you take an isolated text from the Shastras it is possible to prove in them anything that you may wish to prove. Therefore in order to save ourselves from falling into death-traps it is necessary to understand the drift of the Shastras and I make bold to say that the drift of the Shastras can only point to brotherhood and not to distinction between man and man.

The Hindu, 17-2-1934

175. SUPERSTITION v. FAITH

The Bard of Santiniketan is Gurudev for me as he is for the inmates of that great institution. I and mine had found our shelter there when we returned from our long self-imposed exile in South Africa. But Gurudev and I early discovered certain differences of outlook between us. Our mutual affection has, however, never suffered by reason of our differences, and it cannot suffer by Gurudev’s latest utterance on my linking the Bihar calamity with the sin of untouchability. He had a perfect right to utter his protest when he believed that I was in error. My profound regard for him would make me listen to him more readily than to any other critic. But in spite of my having read the statement three times, I adhere to what I have written in these columns.

When at Tinnevelly I first linked the event with untouchability,¹ I spoke with the greatest deliberation and out of the fulness of my heart. I spoke as I believed. I have long believed that physical phenomena produce results both physical and spiritual. The converse I hold to be equally true.

To me the earthquake was no caprice of God nor a result of a meeting of mere blind forces. We do not know all the laws of God nor their working. Knowledge of the tallest scientist or the greatest spiritualist is like a particle of dust. If God is not a personal being for me like my earthly father, He is infinitely more. He rules me in the tiniest detail of my life. I believe literally that not a leaf moves but by His will. Every breath I take depends upon His sufferance.

¹ Vide “Speech at Public Meeting, Tinnevelly”, 24-1-1934.

He and His Law are one. The Law is God. Anything attributed to Him is not a mere attribute. He is the Attribute. He is Truth, Love, Law, and a million things that human ingenuity can name. I do believe with Gurudev in “the inexorableness of the universal law in the working of which God Himself never interferes”. For God is the Law. But I submit that we do not know the Law or the laws fully, and what appear to us as catastrophes are so only because we do not know the universal laws sufficiently.

Visitations like droughts, floods, earthquakes and the like, though they seem to have only physical origins, are, for me, somehow connected with man’s morals. Therefore, I instinctively felt that the earthquake was a visitation for the sin of untouchability. Of course, sanatanists have a perfect right to say that it was due to my crime of preaching against untouchability. My belief is a call to repentance and self-purification. I admit my utter ignorance of the working of the laws of Nature. But, even as I cannot help believing in God though I am unable to prove His existence to the sceptics, in like manner I cannot prove the connection of the sin of untouchability with the Bihar visitation even though the connection is instinctively felt by me.
If my belief turns out to be ill-founded, it will still have done good to me and those who believe with me. For we shall have been spurred to more vigorous efforts towards self-purification, assuming, of course, that untouchability is a deadly sin. I know fully well the danger of such speculation. But I would be untruthful and cowardly if, for fear of ridicule, when those that are nearest and dearest to me are suffering, I did not proclaim my belief from the house-top. The physical effect of the earthquake will be soon forgotten and even partially repaired.
But it would be terrible if it is an expression of the Divine wrath for the sin of untouchability and we did not learn the moral lesson from the event and repent of that sin. I have not the faith which Gurudev has that “our own sins and errors, however enormous, have not got enough force to drag down the structure of creation to ruins”. On the contrary, I have the faith that our own sins have more force to ruin that structure than any mere physical phenomenon. There is an indissoluble marriage between matter and spirit. Our ignorance of the results of the union makes it a profound mystery and inspires awe in us, but it cannot undo them. But a living recognition of the union has enabled many to use every physical catastrophe for their own moral uplifting.

With me the connection between cosmic phenomena and human behaviour is a living faith that draws me nearer to my God, humbles me and makes me readier for facing Him. Such a belief would be a degrading superstition, if out of the depth of my ignorance I used it for castigating my opponents.

_Harijan_, 16-2-1934

176. LETTER TO MANILAL AND SUSHILA GANDHI

CUDDALORE,
February 16, 1934

CHI. MANILAL AND SUSHILA,

I got the letters from both of you. I am writing this letter before the morning prayer in Cuddalore near Pondicherry. If you can prevent personal estrangement with Sorabji, try to do so. You shouldn’t mind his having withdrawn the advertisement. It is desirable that there should be no bitterness between you two. I have already started receiving letters on this subject. Bhavani Dayal has published an open letter against you. There was a letter in _The Times [of India]_ on the opposite side too. If I can find it, I will ask them to enclose a cutting. I only tell you about the reports which reach here. Whether or not there is any truth in them, you two alone can say. Some of these reports may also be inspired by selfish motives. I send you whatever falls into my hands. Maybe these reports also affect the collections for the Bihar fund. What is the circulation of I.O. now?

Devdas and Lakshmi are in Delhi. He has been appointed on a salary of Rs. 250. Rajaji has joined me now. My health continues to be good. I enclose with this some letters from Ba.

I had asked for permission to see Mahadev and Mani, but it has been refused, I had asked for it because I am to go to Belgaum. Kishorelal has gone to Deolali. His health is fairly good. Many of the inmates of the Ashram who have been released have gone to Bihar. Kakasaheb will get imprisonment at last. They have arrested and set him free several times. They have arrested him again but this time will not set him free.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4815
177. LETTER TO GOVINDBHAI R. PATEL

February 17, 1934

Bhai Govindbhai,

I have your letter. Where can I see you? Your condition is difficult to fulfil. If you get into the car with me, it might be possible. Or you may tell Chandrashankar, who will be staying behind in Pondicherry. My efforts must necessarily be limited by my capacity.

Vandemataram from

Mohandas

From the Gujarati original: C.W. 10743. Courtesy: Govindbhai R. Patel

178. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, KARAikal

February 16, 1934

It is a matter of very great pleasure to me during this tour to enter the French territory for the second time. I had the pleasure of entering the French territory for the first time in India in Malabar, in Mahe. It was a great joy for me to meet both the officials and the people there. It does not surprise me today that you have given me this purse. It can be said that it was France that first gave the world the three significant words, “Liberty, Equality and Fraternity”. But it is not given to all to enforce the three things in practice and I am ashamed that Hindus have been the worst criminals in this respect. It was reserved for them to invoke the name of God for untouchability. But after having studied the Hindu Shastras for a number of years to the extent that a layman could do, I have come to the definite conclusion that there is no warrant for untouchability in the Hindu Shastras. Historians have testified from the dawn of human wisdom to the unity of God; and the unity of all life in God was taught in the earliest hymns that the world first knew—the Rigveda. They first taught that God was one and all; life was created by Him and born in Him. Untouchability that we practise today is the very negation of this magnificent truth. I am, therefore, glad to see this crowd of men and women and the purse and gifts they have offered testify to the fact that they at least do not believe in untouchability. You will not consider yourselves discharged from the duty that every one owesto Harijan brothers and sisters by merely paying contributions to the purse. But I flatter myself with the hope that your money and your presence here are an earnest of your determination to treat the Harijans as brothers and sisters of the same blood. I hope that you have already subscribed and, if not, you will now subscribe, to the Bihar Earthquake Relief Fund now being collected. That Divine visitation which within the twinkling of an eye destroyed over 25,000 souls, shows in a striking manner that we are all one. Let us be one in life as on the dreadful day they were one in death.

1 Gandhiji reached Karaikal, a French territory, at 8.45 a.m. A huge crowd had gathered at the place of the meeting. Addresses of welcome were presented to Gandhiji on behalf of the public and Harijan Seva Sangam. Besides that a purse was also presented by the Vice-President of the Consulate General. At the end of the meeting Gandhiji auctioned the gifts.

The Hindu, 17-2-1934

179. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, SHIYALI

February 16, 1934

I see that some people are waving black flags on the fringe of the meeting. I congratulate them on their courteous behaviour even as they are waving their black flags. They have a perfect right to exhibit their feeling in the manner they are doing. I know that they have deep down in them the suspicion that the money that is being collected will not be used in the manner it has been proclaimed. Those that are at the back of these black flags are also under the impression that I am purely a tool in the hands of the capitalists and rich men. Whether I am a tool in their hands or not is not a relevant matter. It is enough that there is a belief that I am their tool. But I can give them this assurance that, so far as I am aware, I am no tool in the hands of anybody but God Almighty.

There are so many things, as I said yesterday, in common between those that call themselves “self-respecters” and myself. “Self-respecters” say there is no God of Justice on this earth and, therefore, they say, if they have to believe in a God, it is humanity. I confess I am superstitious enough to believe in God. But I do not propose to quarrel with them about the use of words, and if the word humanity will please them, I shall call my God by that word. They say their motto is love and sympathy. I congratulated them upon their

---

1 Extracted from Chandrashankar Shukla’s “Weekly Letter”

168 THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI
motto and told them I could subscribe to their motto to the fullest extent. Then they said they wanted equal distribution of the riches of the world. As an ideal, I had no difficulty in subscribing to their creed. I gently suggested to them that, while they were talking about the ideal, I was endeavouring to approach the ideal by lovingly dispossessing the rich men of India of as much as they would give me, whether it is for the Harijan cause or for the sufferers of Bihar or some such cause of the poor. I am glad to be able to inform those who are waving the black flags or who are at the back of these black flags and you, the audience in general, that several thousands of fairly well-to-do men and women have gladly shared their possessions with the poor.

_Harijan_, 23-2-1934

180. SPEECH AT ANNAMALAI UNIVERSITY, CHIDAMBARAM

_February 16, 1934_

You have in your address told me that you are conducting a night school and that some of you are interesting yourselves in the education of Harijans and rendering other kinds of service. Whatever good and useful work has to be taken up it can much more readily and much more easily be taken up by the younger generation than by the older. I have said that this is a movement of self-purification and self-humiliation. You do not need to be told that untouchability has come to us as a blighting curse. That it should have come to us in the name of religion is really sad. Yet untouchability has crept into the Hindu religion.¹

I do not know when untouchability crept into Hindu religion. But after studying Hindu Shastras, or the books that go by that name, as carefully as a layman having no axes to grind and having no preconceptions of any kind whatsoever, I came to the conclusion that there was no warrant in the Shastras considered as a whole for untouchability as it is practised today. There are undoub-

¹ According to The _Hindu_ report, Gandhiji was received by the Vice-Chancellor of the University. An address of welcome along with a purse was presented to him. He was given some other gifts also.

² _Harijan_ gives the date as February 17, which is evidently a slip.

³ The preceding lines have been taken from _The Hindu_. What follows is from _Harijan_.

VOL. 63 : 18 JANUARY, 1934 - 19 MAY, 1934 169
tedly some passages—not a single passage in the Vedas, but some passages of doubtful authenticity in the Smritis—which bear the interpretation that there is some kind of untouchability countenanced by them. But there is nothing whatsoever in those passages to warrant the belief that untouchability of today is a Divine institution. There is nothing in them to enable us to identify the body of men who are today described as untouchables with those referred to in those passages. I have talked to learned shastris who swear by untouchability and asked them to show me passages enabling them to regard the present Harijans to be the ones contemplated by them. They say they rely on the census reports. You know how these reports are prepared. No student of history can wholly rely on census reports. It is not the function of census enumerators to decide who should be considered untouchables. They but give us roughly the numbers of inhabitants of various places. They give us several other statistics which cannot be considered conclusive. If you study the different census reports, you will be astounded to see that the same men who are classed as touchable in one census report are classed as untouchable in another report, and vice versa. Can you imagine that on such flimsy evidence human beings can be deprived of their elementary rights? Had we not been wanting in fellowfeeling, we would not have countenanced this for a moment. It is up to every one of you to study this question; and if you come to the conclusion that it is an atrocious injury to our brethren, you will do all in your power to undo the mischief. For, if untouchability persists, Hinduism and Hindus will perish. What are the qualifications, then, required of a Harijan servant? A character that is above suspicion, boundless patience and a faith which will not be shaken by the rudest shock given to it—these are the qualifications indispensable for one who wants to serve Harijans. This is an effort to save the ancient faith of ours from disintegration. If you will work at it, it will be your real education. You may read books, but they cannot carry you far. Real education consists in drawing the best out of yourselves. What better book can there be than the book of humanity? What better education can there be than to go, day in and day out, to Harijan quarters and to regard Harijans as members of one human family? It would be an uplifting, ennobling study. Mine is no narrow creed. It is one of realizing the essential brotherhood of man. To my mind, the message of the Vedas is unity of God and unity of all life in one God. How can Harijans be left out of that unity?

_Harijan_, 30-3-1933, and _The Hindu_, 18-2-1934
181. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, CUDDALORE

February 16, 1934

I am sorry that I have not been able to come to you at a better time than this, what might be called, unearthly hour. But in order to finish the Tamil Nad tour on the appointed date and in order to accommodate Pondicherry friends at the eleventh hour, there was not any other hour possible except this. I am sure that you do not mind this accommodation for your neighbours and it was only while I was assured that you would not mind this hour that I consented to go to Pondicherry tomorrow morning. While I thank you for your purse, you will allow me to say that you could have done much better than you have done. We have no greater cause than the cause of the Harijans. Every pice or every rupee that we may pay for the Harijan cause, is merely part payment of an obligation that we have owed to them for centuries past and yet no financial compensation that we may make to our Harijan brothers and sisters can possibly undo the wrong that we have done to them and are still doing, unless we raise the bar sinister. Every pice or every rupee that I therefore get for the Harijan cause, I interpret it to mean the determination on the part of the givers that they have abolished from their own hearts distinctions of high and low. I hope therefore that, in your present life, each man and woman in this audience is showing to Harijan brothers and sisters that they are, so far as they are concerned, in every way their equals and in no way their inferiors. I hope that you have collected funds for the sufferers of Bihar.

The Hindu, 18-2-1934

1 The meeting in the maidan at Manjakuppam was held late at night. An address of welcome along with a purse was presented to Gandhiji.
182. APPEAL TO ORGANIZERS AND CO-WORKERS,
CUDDALORE

[February 16, 1934]¹

You should understand my limitations. You should also understand the object of my mission. My limitations are prescribed by my physical capacity or incapacity. They are also prescribed by Father Time. Everywhere, organizers draw up for me a programme which taxes all my energy and resources to go through from day to day. My mission today is primarily to appeal to the savarna Hindus and call upon them to repent for the injustice that has been done for centuries past to Harijans, to tell them in language as precise as I can command that, so far as my study of Hindu Shastras goes, Harijans are entitled to the same rights and privileges as non-Harijan Hindus enjoy, to tell them with all the emphasis at my command that, if this elementary justice is not rendered to Harijans, Hinduism must perish. Co-workers, therefore, should not put a strain upon me to do work which is their primary duty to perform. They may, when I have time, take me to cheries to admire the work they have done, but it is their business to sweep them clean; it is their business to open schools and conduct them. It is their business to take a ray of hope to Harijan cottages from day to day. In my present intensive hurricane tour, my energy and my time should be reserved for the chief object of my mission.

Harijan, 23-2-1934

183. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, PONDICHERRY²

February 17, 1934

FRIENDS,

I have great pleasure in visiting your town. You do not expect me to make a long speech; I have a very heavy programme in front of me. This message of untouchability [sic] is a message in which all can take part with pleasure. The removal of this curse is primary means to realize the brotherhood of man in the place of suppression and subjection in the name of religion by caste Hindus. You, who have ¹ Gandhiji was in Cuddalore on February 16, 1934.

² Nearly ten thousand people had gathered in the Odianchalai ground, where the meeting was held. A part of the speech was also published in Harijan, 2-3-1934.
come under direct French influence should have no difficulty in understanding what that means. Equality and brotherhood were brought into France several hundred years before people began to realize that there was any such thing as brotherhood of man. The bravest of them fought and bled for that realization. The aspiration for which so many heroic souls fought and bled is an aspiration that is a universal treasure. The present attempt is essentially an appeal to convert the stony hearts. And let those here understand that it is not through suppression but through full expression that divinity can be realized. I have therefore every hope that you, in Pondicherry, have no untouchability in your midst. And if you have it I hope that you will remove that blot from your midst. You have given me a purse for the sufferers of Bihar also. I wish that you could have collected more for these sufferers. You should know that nearly twenty-five thousand people were swallowed up in the bowels of the earth in the twinkling of an eye. Tens of thousands have been rendered absolutely homeless. Palaces have been razed to the ground. It does appear to me that in the light of this calamity the paltry sum of Rs. 57 is nothing. I invite you therefore to make an honest effort and send a good sum worthy of you to Babu Rajendra Prasad. And now I must hasten away and I ask you to help me in the disposal of these few things.

The Hindu, 18-2-1934

184. LETTER TO PRABHASHANKAR H. PAREKH

February 18, 1934

BHAISHRI PRABHASHANKAR

I got your letter. I am returning the letter which you sent with it. You have not understood rightly the reason for my not mentioning your mother. Why need I be angry with you? Moreover, it would be against my nature to vent my anger against you on an ailing person. There is no question at all of my cooling off towards you. The truth is that even in personal letters I don’t always make formal inquiries about others in the family, old or young. My letters to you were on business, and since your writing about your mother in your letters seemed to me in keeping with your nature, I didn’t think it necessary to say anything in reply. Of course I wish her and your wife the best of health. My good wishes for their health would not be any stronger

1 Father-in-law of Ratilal, Dr. Pranjivan Mehta’s second son.
if I expressed them in words. I daily recite a sincere prayer wishing good health to the whole world, and I strive ceaselessly to live fully in the spirit of that prayer. You will be surprised to know that even in my letters to Ba or to Manilal far away in Africa, I make few inquiries of this kind. Please tell Mother all this. I cannot say whether or not I shall be going to Rajkot. As I shall have to go to Bihar, perhaps I may get no time to go to Rajkot.

Though you have sent Bhagwanji’s certificate, how can I disregard my own experience or change my view based on that experience? Why should you fail to do your duty because Chhaganlal\(^1\) fails to do his? If the Doctor’s intention to give the daughters a share each is clear, that should be enough for you. Ratilal can never suffer by giving the sisters their share. He himself is in no condition to look after his own affairs. I believe that you, as his guardian, should not permit his money to be squandered away. I don’t wish to say anything to Ratilal himself in this matter, as he is incapable of thinking. Champa\(^2\) would naturally be under your influence. Hence all the responsibility rests on you. But I see that you are not discharging it properly. What is the use, then, of your sending me a certificate from Bhagwanji or certificates from any number of other people? Manibehn\(^3\) can afford to forgo her share and Jekibehn\(^4\) feels utterly weak and helpless. I am sorry, but I see no justice in Ratilal refusing his own sisters their share of the property.

_Vandemataram from_
_MOHANDAS_

[PS.]

Bhai Bhagwanji’s letter is enclosed.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 8767

---

1\(^1\) Eldest son of Dr. Pranjivan Mehta
2\(^2\) Wife of Ratilal
3\(^3\) Daughters of Dr. Pranjivan Mehta
4\(^4\) _ibid_
FRIENDS,

Time is short, and you have given me much work to do. Therefore, I would like you to help me to shorten the proceedings. There are two things that I want to say. Whilst I am deeply grateful to the Municipal Council and the District Board for their addresses, and to individual members for the purses that they have given me, I would like to utter a word of request through these two bodies, to other bodies, that they will conserve my energies and time, just now, when I am going through a hurricane tour, by presenting me addresses, if they mean presenting them, on the common platform. Most bodies have very kindly and generously presented addresses on the common platform. I have no difficulty in understanding, and even appreciating the natural desire of local bodies to present their addresses in their own offices. But when they are concerned with a person like me, a humble servant of the nation, trying to utilize every moment of his life for the service of the nation, they might waive their undoubted right of taking me to their own offices and make common cause with others who might present their addresses. In the midst of this noise, I do not propose to mention the second thing that happened at the station last night. So far as the immediate objective of the mission is concerned, I deeply appreciate all these addresses, purses and gifts, as, to me, they are a token of your desire to help the Harijan cause and to get rid of the evil of untouchability. I hope that you will not be satisfied until the disease of untouchability is rooted out from our midst in its entirety, for, at the bottom of this movement, there is no less a desire than the realization of the Brotherhood of Man. Now I must ask you to take these things from me and give fat prices.

_The Hindu, 19-2-1934_
186. SPEECH AT CHRISTKULA ASHRAM¹, TIRUPPATTUR

February 18, 1934

FRIENDS.

It seems that I have come to one of my homes in coming here. I have been wanting to come to this place for—I might also say—several years, and when the tour programme in the Southern Presidency was being arranged by Dr. Rajan, I had told him that if it was at all possible, he ought to include this Ashram in the programme. But I do not want to waste many words this evening.

The whole of my party are absolutely tired out. I will therefore just give you the gist of my message, and it is this: Untouchability is the greatest sin that Hindus, the so-called caste Hindus, have committed against God and man, and I have felt the enormity of the crime so deeply that I have stated from many a platform that either untouchability goes, or Hindus and Hinduism go. And let me say what I mean by it. It is not enough that caste Hindus begin to touch Harijans. Mere touch can give me no satisfaction whatsoever. Their hearts must be touched and they must necessarily believe that it is an affront to their own dignity to consider a single human being as lower than themselves. And in that sense, you could easily understand that it is an attempt to realize the Brotherhood of Man, not merely Hindu man but man in general, no matter to what part of the world he belongs or to what race he belongs, or to what faith he belongs. And, for the caste Hindus to change their hearts, in connection with those who are regarded by them as untouchables by birth, it is merely a stepping-stone to this grand realization. Therefore, all those who are caste Hindus naturally can take part in this movement. It is their duty to do so. They have tomake the beginning. But I have invited the whole world to take part in this movement and the whole world can take part in this movement by sympathizing with and understanding the movement and by prayer to God. Repentance and reparation have naturally to be done only by the caste Hindus.

What are the Harijans to do? Since this is a movement of self-purification, they also have to play their part. And that is to examine themselves and get rid of the vices, the bad habits, for which, undoubtedly, originally they probably were not responsible. Whoever was responsible, is just now irrelevant to consider. Somehow or other, these bad habits, or vices, have got to be got rid of. For instance, the laws of hygiene, personal cleanliness, they should understand and they should conform to them. If they are given to carrion-eating, they should give it up. In no part of the civilized world is carrion ever eaten, and so far as my knowledge of all the other races of the earth is concerned, there are very few races outside India who are given to carrion-eating. And since Harijans consider themselves to be Hindus, it is necessary for them to give up beef-eating, if they are given to beef-eating. Personally, I am of opinion that in a country like India, where there are millions of human beings who have to depend upon cow’s milk, where they can at all get that, it is a proper thing for anybody to abstain from eating beef. The third thing is to give up drink. I know that many Harijans are addicted to drink. Some of them have told me that they should not be asked to give up the habit before the caste Hindus, who also, many of them, are given to the habit of drinking, are asked to give it up. The logic of this argument may be admitted. But there is no moral justification for saying that if one man commits a vice, others also should do likewise, or may do likewise. Why should I tell a lie because tens of thousands of my neighbours may be telling lies? If thousands commit suicide, why should I commit suicide? And I want to say that taking intoxicating liquors is almost like committing suicide, because a man or a woman who takes intoxicating liquors and gets mad, kills his or her soul, for the time being. Surely, death of the soul is far worse than death of the body. I will ask all those Harijans who are given to the drink habit to give it up.

¹ A summary of the speech was also published in Harijan, 2-3-1934.

Lastly, I do not know whether you have been told anything about the sufferers of Bihar. Bihar is the land where Sitadevi was born, and it is one of the fairest provinces of India. In the twinkling of an eye, almost twenty thousand people have been swallowed by mother earth. Tens of thousands of people are homeless, and for them not only all over India but also all over the world subscriptions are being collected. I do not care how poor you may be, I want you to give your coppers, or your silver pieces, or whatever you can, for the sufferers in Bihar.

_The Hindu_, 20-2-1934
187. TELEGRAM TO JAMNALAL BAJAJ

Madras, February 19, 1934

JAMNALALJI
WARDHA

HOPE YOU QUITE WELL. DATE MY REACHING BIHAR UNCERTAIN BUT NOT LIKELY BEFORE FOURTEENTH MARCH.

BAPU

Panchven Putrako Bapuke Ashirvad, p. 124

188. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

February 19, 1934

CHI. AMALA,

Your two letters came the same time. I am glad you like the place and the people. You should arrange your hours as you think proper in consultation with the manager. For the girls, you should do as the manager advises. When you have acquired sufficient control you may make drastic changes. For the lice, rub spirit into the roots of the hair and wash them with carbolic soap and the lice will disappear. The hair should be combed daily with a clean comb. Let the girls take for the time being the food that is cooked for them.

There can be no harm whatsoever in your being interested in natural scenery and Islamic architecture.

Love.

BAPU

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

189. LETTER TO VITHALDAS JERAJANI

Madras, Monday, February 19, 1934

I understand everything. Keep up your effort. You are bound to succeed soon. But as a result of independent thinking, I have come to the following conclusions. They may be modified with further experience. For the present think over them.
1. We must sell unbleached khadi, though we may get it bleached on special request from anybody.

2. We must now try to spread khadi in villages. We should assume that the age of cities for this work is over.

3. We must refuse to be satisfied that khadi has spread till all khadi produced in an area can be sold locally.

4. Concentrating our efforts in cities has done untold harm to our aim of making khadi a permanent feature.

5. It clearly follows from this that there should be no need to send the khadi produced in one province to other provinces. If we create several Manchesters in India, we shall kill khadi with our own hands.

6. We should apply this rule to Bihar right now and decide that it should consume all the khadi which it produces. This will be the best way of using the fund.

7. If this line of reasoning is correct, we should pay more or all our attention to the strength, evenness of texture and appearance of khadi at the production stage itself.

Please don’t use all this as a reason for slackening your own effort. Sale, and that in cities, is your special field of work. If, however, you remember our original aim, it is desirable that you should plan your efforts in keeping with that aim.

(Send a copy of this to Shankerlal and get it translated into English for Rajaji. Get the translation done by Valjibhai.)

How is Lakshmi? How can I expect her to write to me now?

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9808

---

1 This paragraph was apparently meant for someone handling Gandhiji’s correspondence.
190. LETTER TO PARIKSHITLAL L. MAJMUDAR

February 19, 1934

BHAI PARIKSHITLAL,

Ramji’s letter is enclosed. You can get work from him only with the utmost gentleness coupled with equal firmness. Read my letters to him before passing them on to him.

If you experience any difficulty on account of Amalabehn, let me know.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4021

191. LETTER TO TARABEHN R. MODI

February 19, 1934

CHI. TARA,

I got your letter. I often wonder why people fall ill so often. I have finally come to the conclusion that illness is a kind of death. Death is the result of violation of Nature’s laws by us, and, therefore, is a blessing. Similarly, illness also is the result of violation of Nature’s laws and should be regarded as a blessing. Death and illness both give us pain because we don’t look upon them as Nature’s kindness to us. If we understand this truth, we would spare ourselves all the trouble which we take now to cure illness. May be we succeed in our efforts, but they seem to make our minds more sensitive and even weaker. Please do not understand from this that you should stop the treatment which you are taking. But it certainly means that you should take it with a detached mind and remain unconcerned whether the disease is cured or not. I am trying here to explain the teaching of the Gita in a new way.

You may convey the foregoing to Ramniklal1 and add this: I have read your letter. You have been making good use of your time. If you didn’t do that, who else may be expected to do so? When you are released, you will see many changes. But the original determination remains unchanged behind them all. If we understand it, we shall win everything, otherwise we shall lose all. All things with name and form are bound to perish; the essence behind them never perishes. That is the case with our goal too. I realize this more and more clearly with each passing day. Give me a detailed description after you are released. I wish to write about many other things, but I am surrounded by a big crowd. It is nearing the time for the evening prayer. Hence I stop here.

1 Ramniklal Modi, addressee’s husband

THE COLLECTED WORKS OF MAHATMA GANDHI

_Blessings from_

_BAPU_

[PS.]

If Nanibehn can write, ask her to do so. Otherwise give me a report about her.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4179. Also C. W. 1678. Courtesy: Ramniklal Modi

192. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

VELLORE,

_February 19, 1934_

CHI. VASUMATI,

I got your postcard. I am dictating this letter in the hope that it will reach you. I have kept excellent health, though the travelling has been quite hard. Valjibhai has joined me now. He was not keeping good health and has joined in the hope that touring in my company will improve it. Harjivan also is with me at present. He will leave for Kashmir on the 24th. The tour of Tamil Nadu will end on the 21st. After that, we have to visit Rohini and Poviya’s Coorg and shall spend two days there. Then we shall be in Karnataka for ten days and after that most probably I shall have to go to Bihar. Rajendrababu wants me there. Ramdas and Nimu are in Wardha. Ramdas’s mind doesn’t seem to have become steady yet. Nimu is again pregnant. Devdas and Lakshmi are in Delhi. Lakshmi also is pregnant and this is the eighth month. Maruti’s Lakshmi also is in the same stage. Radha is fairly well. She is still at Deolali. Keshu is in Wardha. He seems to have settled down there. Kishorelal was seriously ill. He was in bed for a long time. He has now gone to Deolali. The place will probably do him good. Brijkrishna is fairly well. He has risen from his death-bed, so to say.

VOL. 63 : 18 JANUARY, 1934 - 19 MAY, 1934  181
I did not criticize your desire to learn English, but wrote to strengthen it. I want you and all other women to learn English. Madhavji and Mahalakshmi have arrived here today (the 19th). They wish to discuss and solve the problem of their children.

Kaka is in jail for two years, and so also is Jawaharlal. Bal is in Patna. Ba is all right. Shanta and Lalita also are with her. You may read what you like in Gujarati, I have nothing to say about it. I understand that Anasaktiyoga alone cannot satisfy your hunger. It would not satisfy mine, too. I may mention a few books. All books written by your father-in-law, all works of Ramanbhai, the poems of Dalpatram, the four parts of Kavyadohan, Vanaraj Chavdo, Forbes’s Rasamala, some of the books of Manibhai, Chandra-kant, Maniratnamala, a translation of the Mahabharata, all works of Anandshankarbhai. Is this enough to satisfy your hunger?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9382. Also C.W. 627. Courtesy: Vasumati Pandit

193. LETTER TO BHAGWANJI P. PANDYA

February 19, 1934

CHI. BHAGWANJI,

I got your letter. Please remember that whatever they are, they are Harijans. Bear with them, for they are but a reflection of ourselves, and go on serving them with single-minded devotion, unmindful of the result. They are not even aware that the words we regard as obscene are such.

1 Navalram Lakshmiram Pandya, a Gujarati man of letters
2 Ramanbhai Nilkanth
3 Dalpatram Dahyabhai Trivedi (1820-98)
4 Anthology of poetry edited by Dalpatram
5 By Mahipatram Roopram Nilkanth, father of Ramanbhai Nilkanth
6 By Sir Kinlock Forbes
7 Manibhai Nabhubhai Dwivedi
8 By Ichchharam Suryaram Desai
9 Anandshankar B. Dhruv
I have received the papers regarding Bidaj.
I have also heard from Chhotubhai’s father.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Gujarati: C. W. 366. Courtesy: Bhagwanji P. Pandya

194. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

KODAMBKKAM,
MADRAS,
February 19, 1934

BHAJI VALLABHBHAI,

Today is my silence day. Preparations for the evening prayer are going on. I am surrounded by people, among whom is Muriel Lester. We are in a poor suburb of Madras today. Ganesan has found a new place. There will be a tannery, etc., here. A dispensary is already in existence. This place is like the walled enclosure of a mahajan or a dharmashala, but it is in a dilapidated condition just now. There is a verandah on four sides enclosing a big open space, in which grow three or four trees. They have had even to fetch water from a distant spot.

Miss Lester has been to Bengal. The Governor gave her three hours and even invited her to dinner. She was treated with the utmost courtesy. He assured her of his determination to tolerate no excesses, but in the end nothing came of the visit.

I must now prepare to leave for Bihar. It seems I shall have to go immediately after finishing with Karnataka. Let us see what happens. We visited the Christkula Ashram yesterday. Dr. Paton lives there. His superior is an Indian named Jesudasan. He is a good man. He is a friend of Kumarappa\(^1\). It is a fine place. They have built a church there and spent a large sum on it. One may say that Christianity has been given an Indian garb.

Durga and Mani Parikh have been to see Mahadev. But I have not heard from them as yet.

Nanibehn Jhaveri has been operated upon in Ahmedabad for bleeding. Tarabehn Modi is also in Ahmedabad. She is in pain.

\(^1\) J. C. Kumarappa
I got your letter regarding Bihar. What you say is perfectly correct. I will certainly make an effort when I go there. Kripalani is likely to come tomorrow.

I am enclosing with this a letter from Kusum regarding her brother. It is heart-rending. Kusum is very careful about propriety and never crosses its limits. You must have come to know about Kaka. His efforts have borne fruit. He will now take rest for two years. You must have read about Jawaharlal, too.¹

Srinivasa Sastrī’s wife is ill and is in a hospital. I had sent Mathuradas to inquire after her. I shall see what I can do tomorrow. There is a heap of papers which require to be attended to, and I have still not been able to write a single line for Harijan. I will do as God commands.

The frost in Gujarat seems to have damaged the crops much more than I had thought. But who is likely to listen today to the woes of cultivators?

I visited Pondicherry. I could see nobody there. Mother didn’t reply at all. But Govindbhai came and saw me when I was in another place. He told me the whole story. The Ashram is being watched, and so there was some risk even in letting me visit the place. Half the number of the inmates are Gujaratis. Govindbhai was also in the Ashram formerly. The daily routine in this Ashram is as follows: They get up at five in the morning. Every sadhaka has a separate room for himself. There are about 150 sadhakas. They come from everywhere. Among them are Dilip’ and Harin’ Chattopadhyaya, the husband of Kamaladevi. The Ashram has rented about 40 houses. The food is similar to that provided in our Ashram. Shri Aurobindo comes out only on three days in the year. Shri Aurobindo and Mother don’t sleep at all. Shri does recline in an armchair between 3.30 a.m. and 4.30 a.m., but he does not sleep. The sadhakas have to send up their diary every day. They can ask questions. Letters from Shri and Mother are delivered to them four times a day. Between them, they write about 200 letters daily. No letter remains unattended to. Shri knows innumerable languages. He reforms sadhakas through secret

¹ On February 16, Jawaharlal Nehru was sentenced to two years’ imprisonment for sedition.
³ Dilip Kumar Roy, a musician
⁴ The source has Hiren which is obviously a slip influence on their minds. Harin Chattopadhyaya has given up drinking, etc. Liquor and meat are forbidden in the Ashram. This is the description given by Govindbhai, and he has invited me to join the Ashram. I hope you will be satisfied with this.

Blessings to both from
BAPU

[PS.]
I have received a postcard from Tulsi Maher. He is safe. He has not given more details.
[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 78-80

195. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

February 19, 1934

BHAI GHANSHYAMDAS,

Your letter. I am considering whether I should write to the Governor or not. The [compulsory] saluting in Midnapore has been stopped but there has been no admission of the error. Miss Lester has now asked the Viceroy for an interview. But these things can bring about no result at the moment. Still, we do not want to miss any opportunity of compromise.

Whatever the Congressmen may say Bidhan Roy should make full effort to seek an interview.

My Bengal tour is postponed at least till I have done with Bihar.
We shall see about it later.

You will try to see Jawaharlal, won’t you?
I send you the letters from . . .\(^1\) and . . .\(^2\). They came only yesterday. I now feel that . . . should be advised to remarry; and this time I consider his own choice essential though ultimately what is in his destiny has to happen. It is now useless for ... to continue to live with .... Arrangements should be made for . . . to live separately and continue further her education; and should she want to remarry she should be allowed to do so.

It might be good to send her to Wardha Mahila Ashram or some such place. I am aware of the difficulties involved in all this but such

\(^1\) The names have been omitted.
\(^2\) ibid
is our dharma, I have no doubt.

Miss Harrison will leave England on March 2. Her coming is all to the good. Haven’t I written about this already?

Blessings from
BAPU

196. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA
February 19, 1934

CHI. BRIJKRISHNA,

I have been unable of late to write to you. I have now reached Madras on the morning of the silence day. I got your postcard. It would appear you are progressing. Do what Dr. Ansari says. I am going on well. Now it will be the Karnataka tour. After that probably Bihar.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 2408

197. LETTER TO BENARSIDAS CHATURVEDI
February 19, 1934

Bhai Benarsidas,

I got your letter. I have gone through the rules. My visit to Calcutta now has become most uncertain. But if I do go there I shall certainly try to find some time for you.

Blessings from
BAPU

Shri Benarsidas Chaturvedi
Vishal Bharat Karyalay
120/2 Upper Circular Road
Calcutta

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 2569
198. TELEGRAM TO RAJENDRA PRASAD

[Before February 20, 1934]

MET PROFESSOR. LEAVING HYDERABAD 9TH EVENING. REACHING PATNA 11TH NIGHT.

The Bombay Chronicle, 21-2-1934

199. TELEGRAM TO HIRALAL SHARMA

MADRAS,
February 20, 1934

DR. SHARMA
KHURJA

HOPE FAST ENDS WELL. AMTUL FREE. WILL REMAIN SOME DAYS. NO ANXIETY. PROCEED WARDHA SOON AFTER FAST.

BAPU

Bapuki Chayamen Mere Jivanke Solah Varsha, p. 55

1 The report in the source is dated February 20, 1934.
2 J. B. Kripalani
3 In his Hindi letter dated 15-2-1934 Gandhiji had enquired from the addressee whether he would be able to go to Madras to see Amtussalaam before going over to Wardha (vide "Letter to Hiralal Sharma", 15-2-1934). Sharma had agreed to go as regained the strength lost during his last fast.
200. LETTER TO ESTHER MENON

February 20, 1934

MY DEAR CHILD,

I hope Tangai is completely out of fever now. After all you could not get honey at Pondicherry. A basket of fruit with honey was sent yesterday. Miss Lester is with me now. Agatha Harrison leaves on March 2nd.

Love to you all.

BAPU

SHRI ESTHER MENON
ANNE MARIA SCHOOL
PORTO NOVO

From a photostat: No. 124. Courtesy: National Archives of India. Also My Dear Child, p. 102

201. LETTER TO TULSI MAHER

February 20, 1934

CHI. TULSI MAHER,

What is this? Why only a few words on a postcard? Why have you not given me all the news? How much loss has been incurred there? What is the State doing in the matter? Give me all details. I shall be leaving for Patna in a few days.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 6545

202. INTERVIEW TO “THE HINDU”

February 20, 1934

Two achievements stand out prominently in my Tamil Nad tour. In spite of the hard times, people have given freely; and in spite of prognostication to the contrary, tens of thousands of people, including a very large number of women flocked to our meetings, although they knew for what purpose the meetings were held.

Q. How is it proposed to harness such enthusiasm as you have aroused in the present tour for constructive effort?

A. In order to make sure that the work will be continued, the Central Board is allowing 75 per cent of the collections to each province to be used for constructive schemes, to be produced by them. If they succeed in doing so, naturally the work done now will be all properly garnered. Constructive work will consist of conducting schools, hostels and, wherever necessary, digging wells and doing work that would tend towards the social, moral and economic uplift of the suppressed classes.

Gandhiji gave the information that total collections, including value of jewellery presented up to Sunday last, amounted to Rs. 1,06,491-1-5 in Tamil Nad.

A couple of questions were then put regarding the temple-entry movement. Gandhiji said:

While I have purposely kept the temple-entry question in the background, the sanatanists have always been keeping it before the public. My own impression is that the public mind is overwhelmingly in favour of entry of Harijans into temples on the same terms as other Hindus. But I have no desire whatsoever to force the issue. For me the acid test is of a change of heart on the part of the caste Hindus; and temple-entry unaccompanied by that change of heart is to me of no consequence. I am, therefore, concentrating my efforts on educating public opinion on the question.

Q. Have you been able to effect any change in the attitude of the sanatanists?

A. I am sure that the rank and file of sanatanists have been visibly affected by the manifestation of the mass mind. After all those who flocked to our meetings were the sanatanists of yesterday. So far as sanatanists are concerned, I cannot say that their attitude has changed, although I have noticed that they have begun to realize that the public are not with them.

Q. Are you satisfied with the provisions of the Temple-entry Bill in the Assembly? Opinion, even among those friendly to the cause, does not seem to be quite favourable to the Bill in its present form, owing to legal difficulties.

A. The Bill in the Assembly is certainly capable of improvement. When the proper time comes, I would be prepared to offer suggestions. Those who oppose the Bill are so prejudiced against it that they are not disposed even to consider improvements.

Q. Opinion among sanatanists being favourable to the uplift of Harijans, it is suggested that you can enlist their support for social uplift and leave the temple-entry question, which is only one aspect of the big problem, to solve itself?

A. I have never been able to understand the attitude of those sanatanists who propose in a bargaining spirit that on my abandoning the temple-entry movement, they would co-operate with me on the social, moral and economic uplift of Harijans. They must respect the conscience of reformers who believe that temple-entry is an integral part of the Yeravda Pact.

When next the interviewer sought for an expression of his views on one or two political questions, Gandhiji’s curt reply was that he could not answer them.

Asked about his further programme, Gandhiji said that as soon as he finished the Karnataka tour, he proposed to go to Bihar in response to Babu Rajendra Prasad’s invitation.

The Hindu, 21-2-1934

203. A TESTIMONIAL

February 21, 1934

Kaimal has been a very skilful and attentive driver throughout the exacting tour in Tamil Nadu.

M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: G.N. 798
204. LETTER TO DILIP KUMAR ROY

WARDHA,
February 21, 1934

DEAR DILIP,

It was a great grief to me that though I was in Pondicherry, I was not able to see any of you.

Ambalal Sarabhai gave me your letter of October only yesterday. It had gone with Bharati1 to Oxford. I wrote to you about your book when I received it. I hope you got that letter.

Do write to me whenever you feel like writing. I am glad H.2 is there. Has he given up drink altogether? Tell him he owes me a letter. I would like to hear from him.

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

Golden Book of Dilip Kumar Roy, p. 122

205. LETTER TO PURUSHOTTAM GANDHI

February 21, 1934

CHI. PURUSHOTTAM,

I got a letter from you after many days. I didn’t know at all that you had been so ill. I hope you will get well soon. Now that you have been engaged, your duty towards your body has increased. Get married only after you have set your health right again. The idea of trying Sharma’s treatment appeals to me, too. He is at Khurja just now, and will probably go to Wardha in a few days. If he does so, do certainly go there. His treatment too is not always effective. He himself admits that. All the same, I am personally convinced that your deliverance will come only through some such remedy as his. Write to me and keep me informed about your health and also your general progress.

I had heard about Kanu having been assaulted. But he is a brave boy and I don’t worry about him. I had received Jamna’s letter. Show this letter to her. I am not writing to her separately. I have written even

1 Daughter of Ambalal Sarabhai
2 Harindranath Chattopadhyaya, husband of Kamaladevi this under much pressure of other work.

Give my respectful greetings to elders.

_Blessings from_

_BAPU_

[PS.]

Tell Jamnadas that I had received his letter. Ask him to write again.

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./II

_206. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, CONJEEVARAM_

_February 21, 1934_

FRIENDS,

This is about the last city that I shall have visited in Tamil Nad during this tour. It is true that on my way to Arkonam, in order to catch the train, I have to pass through Arni and one or two other places. But this is the most important place of the day. This is the peak of Sanskrit learning. There is a great temple in your midst, and therefore I should imagine that this place should be prepared to come forward to do reparation to Harijans. But such good luck is not in store for us. Sanskrit learning is still being used by some who know Sanskrit against Harijans. Your great temple still bars its gates in the face of Harijans, and I am convinced that the God of Truth and Justice cannot preside in a temple where access is denied to Harijans, and the sin of this denial falls not only on those who are versed in Sanskrit, but on you and me, and all those who call themselves caste Hindus. But I know that public opinion is rising fast in favour of opening temples to Harijans, and I would like you to persevere in formulating public opinion till it becomes so irresistible that pandits and trustees of temples notwithstanding, temples will be opened to Harijans. In one of your addresses mention is made that in this place not much work for Harijans has been done for want of workers. Surely, out of this vast assemblage there must be sufficient number of workers forthcoming who will work for Harijans. There must be students enough in Conjeevaram who would give their leisure hours to this precious service. I do hope you will make every effort to establish in this city a centre of activity for Harijans, and please remember that this is a penance of self-purification and that every one of you can purify himself by eradicating untouchability from his heart. You can, if you feel the inward urge, demolish all distinctions of high and low, and I hope that God will inspire you to work in this great cause of humanity. Lastly, I would like you to remember the sufferers of Bihar, and while I am disposing of these addresses and other things you have given me, I will like volunteers to collect for the Bihar sufferers.

The Hindu, 23-2-1934

207. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, ARNI

February 21, 1934

I thank you for your addresses and the purse. The message on the eve of leaving Tamil Nadu is that every one of us should cleanse our hearts of the sin of untouchability. We must regard all Harijans as our own blood-brothers and sisters. That means that we must forget all distinctions of high and low. We are all children of one and the same God, and, as such there can be no distinctions of high and low amongst us. Harijans should have the same rights and privileges that other Hindus have. Their children must have access to public schools. They must have access to all public wells, tanks and such other places of utility. All public temples should be flung open to them precisely on the same terms that they are open for Hindus, and if we succeed in doing these things, the natural result will be that we shall realize the essential brotherhood of man. For, removal of untouchability does not merely mean restoration of the privileges and rights of Harijans, but it means the removal of distinctions between man and man, no matter where they exist. I would like you to justify the spirit of brotherliness towards the sufferings of Bihar. I know that collections have been made amongst you, but they were only for Harijans. I hope that you will, all of you, do whatever you can towards the relief of the distress of tens of thousands of people who are homeless and foodless.

The Hindu, 23-2-1934

1 About 15,000 people had gathered to attend the meeting. Three addresses of welcome and a purse of Rs. 801 on behalf of the general public were presented to Gandhiji.
208. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, ARKONAM

[February 21, 1934]¹

FRIENDS,

Tonight, and at this meeting, finishes the long Tamil Nad tour. At the outset I would like to say, as I would be leaving this province presently, how thankful I feel to the police and the railway administration in the South for the help rendered to me on all the occasions throughout the province. It is a great pleasure to me to say that they were acting, the police I mean, as if they were, as they undoubtedly are, or should be, servants of the people. As I am saying this, I am reminded of a conversation I had with two gentlemanly detectives who were appointed in London to look after me. They told me that the constables in London, as the police there are called, before being detailed off for duty for the day, had to go through a rehearsal every morning, at which they had to declare, “We are the servants of the people and we shall act as such.” Whatever my difference with the English official world, I claim to understand the virtues of my opponents. And so, I have ever recognized in the London constable an ideal policeman. I dare say as a human being he also has his limitations. But knowing, as I do, the police at close quarters in several parts of the world, I can say truthfully that my recollections of conduct of the London constables are altogether pleasant. Therefore, it is no mean compliment that I am paying to the police from my experience of them throughout the tour, when I recall the London constable.

I must not omit to mention also the volunteers, who have done duty in all parts of the South. Many of them are often untrained. In spite of their embarrassing fussiness, I would be ungrateful if I did not mention that they were, in every case, indispensable for the success of the tour. They were obliged to work under most trying circumstances, because nobody expected the unprecedented crowds which were witnessed at every place. My thanks are, therefore, due to all these parties who have enabled the tour to become the success which in my humble opinion it has been. I can only hope that my co-workers and others who are identified with the Harijan cause will reap the fullest benefit out of the tremendous awakening that one has seen through-

¹ The report of the speech in Chandrashankar Shukla’s “Weekly Letter” in Harijan has been collated with the report published in The Hindu.
² From the report of the speech in The Hindu out the province. Unless the workers set themselves to their tasks immediately, there is every danger of this awakening, or the energy created by it, being frittered away. It would be a great tragedy if such a thing happened in a movement of self-purification, which this is. I hope, therefore, that all those who are connected with the Harijan cause will ever remain on the watch-tower and not only watch themselves, but watch also what the public is doing in connection with the cause.

And remember, too, the magnificent result that we intend, or we expect, to achieve from this removal of untouchability—it is no less than the realization of the Brotherhood of Man. You cannot—millions of caste Hindus cannot—do reparation to several million Harijans, whom they have suppressed for centuries, without setting free a power, a force, that will envelop the whole of the human family and knit all its members together into one. And it is because I have never lost sight of this goal that I have called this movement a deeply spiritual and exclusively religious movement. And it is because I realize to the fullest extent how untouchability, as we practise it today in the name of religion, is a stumblingblock in the realization of this brotherhood that I have not hesitated to say that, if we do not cleanse ourselves of this cursed untouchability, Hinduism and Hindus are bound to perish. As I, therefore, leave you tonight, I should like to leave you with the full hope that you will endeavour to realize to the fullest extent the ideal that I have sketched before you. It is easy enough to do so, if we will but change our hearts. May God help you to do so! I know that there are people among us who still cling to the belief that untouchability is not only not a sin, but is an obligation imposed upon us by the Shastras. As against that, I can but give you my own personal experience based upon uniform conduct for the past fifty years, and that experience is backed by a study of our Shastras such as is possible for a layman, and at that, a busy man like myself. After that prayerful study, after discussion with learned shastras who believe in untouchability, I have come to the deliberate conclusion that untouchability has no warrant whatsoever in the Hindu Shastras. It is a sin before God and man. The sooner we get rid of this sin, the better it is for us, for the whole world.

Now I must commence business. Whilst I am conducting auction sales, I would like volunteers to be in your midst and collect for the sufferers of Bihar.¹

¹ This paragraph has been reproduced from The Hindu.
209. LETTER TO ESTHER MENON

February 22, 1934

MY DEAR CHILD,

Two baskets were sent to you. The first one contained honey and Tamil-Hindi books I got on the way. The books might be of use there.

I hope Tangai is now quite restored.

Maria has a grievance against you. I have asked her to talk about it to you freely.

I have read the certificates. They are good. You will tell me of the result of Menon’s effort.

Kisses to the children and love to you all.

BAPU

From a photostat: No. 125. Courtesy: National Archives of India. Also My Dear Child, p. 103.

210. LETTER TO SAROJINI NAIDU

PANNAMPET, February 22, 1934

MY DEAR SINGER,

I have your long letter through Mathuradas. Yes, I think that it lies ill with Hindus to object to the communal award whatever it may be. But the All Parties meeting has no appeal for me. I would do anything to achieve heart unity. But I see no atmosphere just yet. It will come and that sooner than many expect. I am biding my opportunity and waiting on God.

At Midnapore I am doing what I can. But what is it you suggest?

As for Bihar, I had put myself at Rajenbabu’s disposal. I now leave Hyderabad on 9th for Bihar. I shall be in Hyderabad for nearly 12 hours, this time on Padmaja’s permission staying with Naik. I wonder if you will be there.

Love.

SPINNER

From the original: Padmaja Naidu Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library
I am writing this letter in a train. I got your letter. I had so much work to do that I could not write on Tuesday. Today is Thursday. You can ask me to do anything for you or put me any question that you may wish. I will attend to it or reply to it. At least I will try. You have asked me about Harilal. He had gone to Pondicherry. There also he begged for money and indulged in drinking. He even got some money. I do not know where he is now. I think he will now remain what he is. We must wait till God gives him wisdom. Will not our good and evil actions, too, have their effect in this? How sunk in passion I was when he was conceived! You and I must reap as we sowed. Parents are in this way undoubtedly responsible for the character of their offspring. Now there is only one thing we can do, namely, purify ourselves. Let us be content with the effort that we are making for that. Our purification is bound to have a conscious or unconscious effect on Harilal. There has been no letter from Manu recently, but Jamnadas gave me news about her. I will write to Sushila. Purushottam has been betrothed to Harakhchand’s daughter. His health cannot yet be considered as good. The wife of Ranchhodbhai’s brother has died, and Motibehn remains depressed because of that. Her responsibility has increased now. Ambalalbhai and Mridula came and saw me. He and Saralabehn are going to England. They will stay there for three or four months. Devdas-Lakshmi are all right. Lakshmi does feel the burden of the pregnancy. Ramdas-Nimu are well. I am sending a copy of your letter to them. The original letter I am sending to Manilal. I have sent a copy to Vallabhbhai too. He also worries about you. There has been no reply yet from Madhavdas. Mathuradas is with me. He will stay for a day or two more and then return to Bombay. Esther Menon has returned from England. She came and saw me. Miss Lester has gone to Ceylon. Rajaji parted from us yesterday at the end of the Madras tour. It seems he will go to Delhi. Amtussalaam is still weak, and so I have kept her in Madras. Rajaji will look after her. You must have received the slivers. Write to me again when they are exhausted. I will send some more. Kusum has been very much affected by the death of her brother in Zanzibar. Pyarelal was released yesterday. Kishorelal is at Deolali. He is somewhat better now. Lakshmi will have her baby at Bardoli. Manjukesha will look after her. Moti or Lakshmi also will be there at that time. Nanibehn Jhaveri has been operated upon for the trouble in her joints. I think I have given sufficient news. I will leave Hyderabad on the 9th and go to Patna. Rajendrababu has called me there. Prabhavati also is there. It seems I shall have to stay in Bihar for quite a while. And now the discourse.

If you do not remember the bhajan “The Name is my support, Your Name is my support”, look it up. These days I keep thinking about the idea. Tulsidasji has sung a great deal of the power of the Name. The Name means Ramanama or any name of God. Tulsidas has said that the name Rama is more powerful than Rama himself. In other words, the man called Rama who lived in the past was subject to limitations. His body was perishable but his name is immortal. The qualities of the man who bore that name had limitations, but the attributes of God signified by Ramanama have no limit. We may imagine in Him any attributes that we like. Because His attributes are infinite, God transcends all attributes. That is, He is above all attributes. Since we cannot exhaust the attributes of God by any enumeration of them, cannot we say that He is above attributes? If we inscribe in our hearts the name of God which has such power, there can be no doubt that we shall cross this sea of life and reach the other shore. Repeating that name will drive away all miseries. That is, we shall endure whatever suffering falls to our lot. If such repetition becomes automatic with us, we would need nothing else. That is why the poet wrote and sang that song: “My only support is Rama’s name,” all else is false. “All friends of the body are selfish and will refuse to accompany us at the end.” If we have learnt to repeat Ramanama, it alone will go with us.

Blessings to all women from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Bane Patro, pp. 14-6
212. SPEECH AT HUDEKERI

[February 22, 1934]

It is a matter of very great joy to me that God has enabled me to come to this beautiful land of Coorg. Ever since I have come here, I have been simply drinking in the natural beauty of the place; and I presume your hearts are as beautiful as your scenery. And yet there is lurking in my mind a doubt as to the beauty of your hearts; for I see that, though there is not that poisonous untouchability here that is found in the plains, there is still some of it in your midst. For, in your address you have said that temples are not open to Harijans. It is just like a father saying to some of his children, ‘I give you food, clothing, housing but I won’t let you come to the sanctuary of my heart.’ Imagine what those children would feel. So long as you do not allow Harijans to enter temples on the same terms as you do, I cannot say your hearts are beautiful. I wish, therefore, that you will take a lesson from Nature and wash out that black spot on your hearts.

Harijan, 2-3-1934

213. SPEECH AT PANAMPET

[February 22, 1934]

A moment’s reflection will show you that it cannot but be a religious question, because we have been told by those who claim to understand Shastras that untouchability is a divine institution. When it comes to me in the garb of religion, I can only meet it by showing that religion has nothing to do with it as we practise it today. Then, take the temple-entry question. What is it if it is not a religious question? In order to have temples opened, I have got to touch your hearts; and anything that touches one’s heart, touches one’s faith, immediately becomes a religious thing. Indeed, those sanatanists who claim that un-touchability is of divine origin fling the taunt in my face that I know nothing of religion. Of course, I cannot endorse that taunt, for the simple reason that the whole of my life is saturated with the 1 This has been taken from Chandrashankar Shukla’s “Weekly Letter”.

2 From Gandhiji’s itinerary
3 Extracted from Chandrashankar Shukla’s “Weekly Letter”
4 From Gandhiji’s itinerary
religious spirit. I could not live for a single second without religion. Many of my political friends despair of me because they say that even my politics are derived from my religion. And they are right. My politics and all other activities of mine are derived from my religion. I go further and say that every activity of a man of religion must be derived from his religion, because religion means being bound to God, that is to say, God rules your every breath. If you recognize that truth, naturally God regulates every activity of yours. But, then, it is as a man of religion who is trying to live up to it every moment that I am here to tell you that untouchability is not of divine origin. I am here to tell you, after having searched the Shastras in the manner in which a layman like myself can do, that untouchability is a sin against God and man. I am here to tell you that there is no warrant in the Shastras for untouchability as we practise it today and that, therefore, it is sinful to deny entrance into our temples to Harijans.

_Harijan, 2-3-1934_

214. NOTES

FOR BIHAR’S SAKE

Hardly a meeting has been addressed by me since the calamity of Bihar without reference to it. It must gladden Babu Rajendra Prasad’s and every Bihari’s heart to know that I have had the most generous response even from the poorest in the most distant villages. Harijans have vied with non-Harijans in giving their coppers. Where they have not given anything at the meetings, they have been able to say, ‘I have already sent my mite to Rajendrababu.’ At these meetings women have given their bracelets and men their rings, young students their fountain pens because they had nothing else to give. All together, up to now, the Bihar collections made at the meetings have amounted to Rs. 5135-4-1. Of course, this is nothing compared to the amount required for the relief. But the value of the gifts of the poor lies not in their metallic content, but in their being evidence of genuine sympathy. Man does not live by bread alone. Fellow feeling is often more precious than bread.

And whilst I am writing about the villagers’ contributions, I am glad to be able to announce the receipt of a cable remittance of Rs.1,969-3-2 from the Yokohama Indian merchants. The amount has been duly forwarded to Babu Rajendra Prasad at Patna. There is no doubt that the Bihar calamity has stirred the hearts of men and women all over the world.

GOKHALE AND HARIJANS

Several young men have, during the tour in the South, written to me attributing to Brahmins untouchability and other evils from which Hindu society is suffering. I am writing this note the day after the 19th anniversary of Gokhale’s death. I am, therefore, naturally reminded of his love of Harijans. It is not possible to imagine a man freer from the taint of untouchability than he. With him there was no inequality between man and man. Once, in South Africa, a man had come to him, asking him to attend a meeting of a sectional character. He was disinclined. An appeal was made to his Hinduism. He was indignant over what he felt to be a reproach and said with a warmth which astonished the hearers, “If that is Hinduism, I am not a Hindu.” He could not stand the assumption of superiority by any person or community. In his dealings with fellow men, he exemplified in his own life the spirit of universal brotherhood. He mixed with the greatest freedom with the so-called Pariahs. There was no patronizing air about him. He evolved the ideal of service. Public men and women were not leaders but servants. For him the greatest leader was the greatest servant. And Gokhale was a born Brahmin in every sense of the term. He was a born teacher. He loved to be called Professor. He was humility personified. He surrendered his all to the nation. He might have amassed a fortune, but he deliberately chose a life of poverty. Will not the haters of Brahmins be proud of a servant like Gokhale? And Gokhale was not the only one of his kind. It is possible to make out a long list of Brahmins who have stood up for equality between man and man. To decry the Brahmins as a class is to deny ourselves the benefit of the selfless service for which many of them have specially fitted themselves. They stand in no need of certificates. Their service is its own reward. In the words of Gokhale written on a momentous occasion in his life, “Service undertaken at the bidding of no one cannot be given up at the bidding of anyone.” The safest rule, therefore, is to take a man at his present worth, irrespective of his birth, or race or colour. In the campaign against untouchability, we may despise no service, be it ever so small, so long as it is service and not patronage.
A WORTHY EXAMPLE

In response to my speech to the students of the Trichy National College, I got the following letter, signed by thirteen students, on the day of my departure from Trichy:

We, the following students of the National College, paying our respects to you, Sir, express our desire to work for the cause of the Harijans and other schemes like child-welfare scheme. But students as we are, our time is not wholly ours. We are willingly prepared to devote our leisure hours for such holy duties.

We humbly request you, Revered Mahatmaji, to be kind enough to give us instructions for our future guidance and bestow on us your sacred blessings.

The signatories are to be congratulated on their decision. Let us hope that they will carry it out with unflagging zeal. The signatories want guidance. The only guidance I can give is to ask them to do to the Harijans as they would have the Harijans do to them if they were untouchables. In other words, they should regard Harijans as their blood-brothers and sisters. If they will visit Harijan quarters in that spirit, they will always find the right word and the right action.

_Harijan_, 23-2-1934

215. ‘AN APPEAL FOR PEACE’

A correspondent from Bengal writes:

The present quarrel between the reformers and the sanatanists is causing much bitterness on both sides. It is desirable that the quarrel should be stopped at an early date. I would, therefore, appeal to both the parties to show mutual tolerance. India is a country of many races and creeds, and it is essential for the peace and progress of the country that there should be tolerance between different creeds and races. Tolerance has been one of the most beautiful features in the history of India. There is no reason why there should be quarrel and bitterness when Gandhiji carries on a reform movement against untouchability. But it is necessary for Gandhiji and his followers to show some tolerance while carrying on their movement. The reformers might think that untouchability is bad. But they should not try to deprive orthodox people of the right to worship as they like in their own temples.
If the Anti-untouchability Bill and the Temple-entry Bill are passed, will not orthodox Hindus be deprived of this right? Suppose an orthodox Hindu builds and endows a temple and allows all savarna Hindus to enter the temple and worship the deity, but excludes Harijans whom he considers untouchable. According to the Anti-untouchability Bill, his desire to exclude the Harijans will not be respected, because the law will not recognize any person as untouchable. According to the Temple-entry Bill, if the majority of the upper caste Hindus desire to admit the Harijans, they will be able to override the desire of the donor. That would be obviously unfair.

I believe that among the reformers there would be many who would not like to deprive orthodox Hindus of reasonable facilities in the matter of conducting religious ceremonies. Such liberal reformers should not support these Bills which would deprive the orthodox people of their legitimate rights as explained above. Difference of opinion should not cause bitterness, if there is no attempt on the part of either party to deprive the other of its reasonable privileges.

As regards existing temples, it is necessary to consider the interests of three parties: (1) reformers, (2) sanatanists and (3) Harijans. At present Harijans do not enjoy the right to worship in the temples. It is proposed that they should be allowed to worship in the temples. The sanatanists believe that they cannot worship properly if Harijans are admitted. The sanatanists may be wrong in thinking so, but there is no doubt that they do think so. Is it not natural that they should feel sorely aggrieved, if a privilege which they have enjoyed long is taken away? Will it not be the most peaceful way of introducing the reforms to build new temples where reformers and Harijans may worship together? The reformers may, of course, boycott orthodox temples. If (as the reformers claim) a great majority of the countrymen are against untouchability, the orthodox temples will be deserted and the reformers will be able to demonstrate that untouchability has left the country. Gandhiji is collecting lakhs of rupees in his tour and should have no difficulty in building new temples for reformers and Harijans if he likes. The money is worth spending, if it can save a split among the Hindus.

At Trichy, the other day, a pleader, describing himself as a liberal sanatanist brought a written statement from which I extract the following:

We believe that the item relating to temple-entry may be dropped for the present and the resources of all Hindus including the sanatanists may be pooled together for promoting the material, moral, educational and spiritual welfare of Harijans in consonance with the tradition of Hindu religion, so that the Harijans may become the equals of savarnas in every respect and there will not be any curse of untouchability, if they are treated as our kith and kin. No impartial observer will fail to recognize that the removal of the customary social disabilities effecting the Harijans is absolutely necessary. The reform must proceed gradually step by step. Our Harijans should be admitted to our homes just as Europeans and Muslims are admitted. Our Harijans should be admitted to the several callings or professions open to savarnas and ought not to be segregated, and they should be taught to assert their rights of elementary citizenship. It is likely that, in the course of fifty years, our Harijans will be admitted into the temples.

These are two typical statements. Both want the temple-entry question to be dropped. The first letter makes an “appeal to both parties to show mutual tolerance” but in effect insists on even one sanatanist excluding Harijans from temples, even though all the rest may be prepared to admit them. In naked terms, this is coercion of the worst type—a minority of one bending the will of the majority to its will. None but tyrants are reported by history to have succeeded in enforcing their will against all others, and that they did to their own utter destruction. So far as I can speak for the reformers, their position is plain. They do not wish to see a single temple opened to Harijans until there is an overwhelming majority of existing temple goers in favour of such entry. There is, therefore, no question of compulsion or coercion, unless the enforcement of the will of an overwhelming majority may be so called. The majority may be, ought to be, expected to be forbearing and accommodating towards a minority. How that can be done I have already shown in these columns. But the minority wants no accommodation, it insists on the present position remaining intact. This would mean stagnation and ultimate death. Hence it is that I have been saying: either we kill untouchability or it will kill us as surely as the rising of the sun on the morrow.

There is no question of mutual bitterness or quarrel. Reformers have no bitterness on account of the sanatanists’ opposition, for they give to them the same credit for honesty of purpose as they claim for themselves. The reformers are showing exemplary toleration in that they refrain from opening temples where there is a fair division of opinion, even though a clear majority may be in favour of reform. The reformers’ task is, therefore, confined to the conversion of popular opinion to their side. And if the sanatanists will but recognize this undoubted right, there need be no friction whatsoever.

Whilst the first writer asks nothing from the sanatanists and wants everything from the reformers, the second recognizes that the temples will have to be opened some day to Harijans. But he pleads for time and recommends common work in all other matters. The only amendment I would suggest is that, whilst the temple-entry question may not be given up altogether, the agitation should be carried on with the greatest consideration for the orthodox sentiment. If the sanatanists would respect this very moderate position, instead of staging opposition, sometimes not quite wisely, and would make common cause in all other matters, the whole movement could be carried on with the greatest decorum and without wounding anybody’s susceptibilities.

As for the proposed legislation, it is necessary for the sake of removing the obstacle that is said to exist at present in the way of reform. There is no compulsion in it, unless the prevalence of the will of one person against any number, be it ever so large, is insisted on. And in no case have I any desire to see the Bills passed in the teeth of the opposition of a majority of Hindu members. I should wait till the majority of Hindus of the existing or any future legislature or legislatures are ready for the long overdue reform.

Harijan, 23-2-1934

216. LETTER TO SARALADEVI SARABHAI

February 23, 1934

DEAR SISTER,

I had received your long letter. But I did not reply to it thinking that perhaps you would be above to come. But you did well in not coming. I notice that your body has become weaker than I had thought. You seem to be more worried than you describe. That should not be the case. I have imparted knowledge to you. It is no bookish knowledge but the knowledge of heart. Even if we wished that all our family members live in financial comfort, it would not always be so. We have seen kings being reduced to paupers. But that which is really important anyone who desires can learn and retain. Why then should you be perturbed if somebody in the family loses money? Does real happiness depend on money? But why need I dwell on all this before you? You are already aware of it. That is why I have only to ask you to practise what you already know. Make conscious efforts to forget family troubles.

I have explained to Mridu that she should go with you. Whether she doe so or not, if an operation is advised, you should return only after undergoing it. Ask the children to write to me some time. Let them remember what I have told them. I cherish great hopes of them. My blessings to them.

May God grant you peace.

Blessings from
Mohanadas

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 11140. Courtesy: Sarabhai Foundation

217. SPEECH AT VIRAJPET

February 23, 1934

It was an agreeable surprise to me to receive an address in very choice, correct Hindustani. I am a lover of Urdu and Urdu literature. But I have noticed that down South it is rare to find an Urdu scholar; and I was not prepared to find good Urdu writing and speaking in Coorg. This address asks me to do whatever is possible in order to unite Hindus and Mussalmans throughout India as you are united here. Of certain things which I hold as dear as life itself, Hindu-Muslim unity, i.e., unity among all the races in India, is one; and as I did some years ago in Delhi, I should be prepared, given the occasion and the inspiration, to stake my life again for the same cause. My life is one indivisible whole, and all my activities run into one another; and they all have their rise in my insatiable love of mankind. Seeking to realize oneness of life in practice, I cannot be happy if I see communities quarrelling with one another or men suppressing fellowmen. I am, therefore, glad that this address admits that this Harijan movement is one for realizing the substantial oneness of man. And if I have thrown myself heart and soul in the campaign against untouchability, it is because I know that untouchability is the greatest stumbling-block in this realization.

Harijan, 2-3-1934

1 Extracted from Chandrashankar Shukla’s “Weekly Letter”, dated February 23
I finish this evening this all too short visit to your beautiful province. Though the two days, or almost two days, have been strenuous, they have been most agreeable to me—agreeable not merely because of the magnificent scenery that surrounds you, but also because untouchability has such a slight hold on you. In your address, you have confined yourselves to facts and figures in connection with Harijans. I appreciate the manner in which you have prepared your address, which in fact is a report. It gives me illuminating and exhaustive information about Harijans. It is a matter of regret that Harijans here are daily becoming landless. I see that what little land they still possess is lying fallow. It is up to the local Harijan Sevak Sangh to examine critically this situation and see what it is possible to do to prevent the Harijans from losing their lands. It may be that there are economic causes applicable to all which it is not in your power to prevent. It, therefore, becomes necessary for the Harijan Sevak Sangh to understand the economic condition of Harijans who have become landless. It may be that as a result of the investigation it will be found that, though they have lost their land they are not the poorer. But, should it be otherwise—as I fear it is—it will be up to the Harijan Sevak Sangh to apply the necessary remedy in order to improve their economic condition.

But, in my opinion, the greatest question with you, so far as Harijans are concerned, is the temple-entry question. It seems to be monstrous that public opinion here should not be able to open temples to Harijans. I see that you have no fixed prejudices such as are to be seen on the plains. I would, therefore, ask all workers who have the Harijan cause at heart to apply themselves to the solution of this problem; and I would like you to cherish the ambition that you may give the lead to India in this respect.

I would like also to mention to you the sufferers of Bihar. You are living somewhat in isolation from the rest of India. You seem also to be mostly self-contained. I hope that has not hardened your hearts.

According to The Hindu, 25-2-1934, the meeting was held at Raja’s Seat Maidan at 6.30 in the evening. About 15,000 attended. At the end of the meeting a collection was made for Bihar relief.
After all, you are but a part of the whole of India; and the sufferings of Indians in the extreme North should be shared by you as by others. You may know that Bihar is a sacred land because of the birth of both Sita and Gautama Buddha. Our countrymen in Bihar believe that every particle of the soil in that land is sacred. And to a man like me, it would almost appear that God has selected that sacred land for castigation for the sin of untouchability. It does not matter to me in the least degree that my imagination may be wrong. But let us cherish the thought and make greater effort to purify ourselves. After all, if we will feel that all mankind is one, the distress of one single man on any part of the earth should be shared by us. How much more so, then, when it is in connection with those whom we consider as our kith and kin! And after all, that to me is one of the implications of the removal of untouchability. If we believe that all mankind are touchable, it necessarily follows that we should share the sufferings of all mankind. Therefore, whilst I conduct the auction, volunteers will go amongst you, and you will give to them whatever you can. It is not that you will thereby give much material help to the sufferers. But in the face of a calamity so great as has befallen Bihar, every copper given is a token of tangible sympathy with the sufferers. And do we not all know that sympathy in distress often goes much further than material help brought to us?

_Harijan_, 2-3-1934

---

219. LETTER TO MANILAL AND SUSHILA GANDHI

_February 24, 1934_

CHI. MANILAL AND SUSHILA,

Miss Schlesin has complained bitterly against the article on Thambi Naidoo which appeared in _Indian Opinion_. I think her complaint is justified. The criticism of Thambi is altogether improper. There is a saying in English to the effect that one must speak nothing but good about the dead. Miss Schlesin even says that the criticism is not just either. Please write to her. And explain the matter to me too. Besides, take whatever steps may be necessary to perpetuate Thambi’s memory.

We are in Coorg today. It is a small hilly tract below Mysore. It is a very beautiful region, quite small in size. The population must be at the most a hundred and fifty thousand. It is 6 a.m. just now. I rose at 2.45. At seven we descend from here and go to Mangalore.

I shall be going to Bihar from Hyderabad on the 9th. I don’t know how long I shall have to remain there. I hope Sorab is helping you in the Bihar collection.

I stop here today.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4816

220. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, PUTTUR

February 24, 1934

FRIENDS,

It is a matter of great pleasure to me to be able to come to your taluk. I thank you for all these numerous addresses, purses and ornaments. Karnataka is always used to receiving me with many ornaments and many purses. I do not think any province has beaten Karnataka in the giving of Jewellery. I think that you have made a good beginning. In your principal address you tell me that suffering as you do from malaria and general depression you cannot present a substantial purse. I do not know what you call a substantial purse. But I can tell you that the purse you have given me is substantial enough from my standpoint. I know that you are none too rich and you tell me that because you cannot present a substantial purse you will lay your hearts at my feet. Well, that is an expression which is merely courteous. But instead of putting your hearts at my feet, if you will lay them on my head, I should be more than satisfied. If your hearts are at my feet, I can make no use of them. But if you will put them on my head, I can do without any purse and any ornaments and make of them the fullest use possible. I propose to take you at your word and take your hearts away with me and hold you to account, if you dare to neglect Harijan service hence-forth, and the way to do it is simple. You can all, men, women and children treat Harijans as if they were our own blood-brothers and sisters. When I have said that, I think, I have said all.

I was to have gone to the Harijan cheri in the afternoon but

---

1 The meeting was held at the Travellers’ Bungalow and was attended by more than four thousand people.
having come here half an hour in advance of time we were taken to the cheri just now. If we treated them as our brothers and sisters, we would certainly not have neglected them to an isolated spot as these Harijans are, and it cannot be a matter of congratulations to you that they are cut off from you by a ditch, so that in the monsoon season the Harijan cheri must be almost inaccessible. Then on going to the cheri, what do I see? The children are absolutely unkempt. I do not know that their hair has ever been washed. I suggest to all these sisters and these young men who have Harijan service at heart to go to the cheri and transform it. It will cost you nothing but a little time. And that will be one test of your word that you have given your heart to the work.

Lastly I hope that you have collected funds for the sufferers of Bihar. I hardly think I need describe the sufferings of Bihar to you. But this you should know that the sufferings of Bihar are going to last for some time. Therefore as Rajendra Babu has suggested, you can make your payments to Bihar in instalments. I am supposed to leave for Bihar on the 9th March. And I should like to be able to tell the Biharis on your behalf that you are fellow-sufferers with them. Now I must hurry forward.

_The Hindu_, 26-2-1934

221. SPEECH AT BANTWAL

_February 24, 1934_

There is really no message to deliver to you who have produced so many purses and made so many presents. But if you will have a message you must realize that your duty is not finished with giving presents and purses. But your duty commences with the realization that this is a movement for self-purification. Therefore, I expect you to wash yourselves of the sin of untouchability. And that means that you will forget all distinctions of high and low. It is not elevating, but only degrading, to imagine that a single human being can be inferior to oneself.

_Harijan_, 9-3-1934

---

1 Gandhiji was asked to deliver a message after he had received a length of cloth woven from yarn spun by a person in the spinning _sajna._
222. SPEECH AT JNANODAYA SAMAJ, MANGALORE

February 24, 1934

I thank you for the purse and for your address. I am glad that you have frankly admitted the existence of the drink evil amongst fishermen here. I myself belong to a fishermen’s village. And therefore I know what fishermen do. And I suppose, it is from their habits that we have got the phrase, ‘‘He drinks like a fish.’’ I am glad, however, that your Sabha has been tackling this drink evil. I am glad that your effort is being crowned with some measure of success. Having worked at prohibition, I know how difficult it is to deal with this drink curse. I hope, however, that you will not relax your effort because you may not see full success. I would leave with you one suggestion: that you must not be satisfied with merely asking the people not to drink. I have found that many people drink because they have nothing else to do. Therefore you must find out a variety of ways whereby you may occupy their attention, their minds, their hands and their feet. You must study what other people have done wherever this drink habit has been tackled.

What you say about the necessity of salt for fishermen is but too true. I have certainly every hope that some day or other we shall tackle this salt problem. I have absolutely no sense of despair about it. It is a humane cause. And no humane cause, if it is backed by proper effort, has ever suffered reverse.

The Hindu, 26-2-1934

223. SPEECH AT WOMEN’S MEETING, MANGALORE

February 24, 1934

In the course of his reply, Gandhiji said that this was not the first time he had met the women of Mangalore. He remembered at least two occasions when they had tired him out by their gifts of jewellery. He would now see what they would do for Harijans. He could not be satisfied with a couple of hundreds of rupees. If the Hindu

1 Gandhiji was presented an address by the Jnanodaya Samaj, a body engaged in temperance work among Moghaviras, a community of fishermen. The speech was also reported in Harjan, 9-3-1934.

2 Extracted from Valji Desai’s “Weekly Letter”. The meeting, which was held at the National Girls’ School, was attended by about 1,500 ladies.
heart was to be cured of the taint of untouchability, women must do the lion’s share of the work. It was a movement of purification, in which women were any day more efficient than men, for women had been the guardians of religion all the world over, owing to their superior capacity for renunciation and penance. He hoped, therefore, that women would remain in the forefront of the Harijan movement and fulfil all his expectations. He did not think there was a single mother present who discriminated between her children. If human beings made of clay were rarely guilty of such discrimination, how could God, Whose progeny all of us are, classify one class of men as touchable and another as untouchable? He was certain that there was no warrant in the Shastras for untouchability. A religious book could never teach irreligion. Advaita (oneness) was the fundamental principle of the Vedas, which ruled out all distinctions between man and man. He, therefore, hoped they would not consider anybody as untouchable and would look upon Harijans as their blood-brothers and sisters. He has just been to Sjt. Rangarao’s Harijan School. If he had not been told that the children were Harijans, he would never have discovered it, as he noticed no difference between them and the children he now saw before him. The Harijan boys had sung as sweetly as the girls sang here. To consider anyone as inferior to oneself was a heinous sin, and he prayed to God that they would not fall victims to it. Gandhiji then appealed to them on behalf of the suffering people of Bihar, whose very dust, as the Biharis said, had been sanctified by the footfalls of Sita and Buddha.

Harijan, 9-3-1934

224. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, MANGALORE

February 24, 1934

FRIENDS,

I am grateful to you for all these addresses, purses and various presents including caskets. I am not a stranger to you, nor you to me. I have therefore no hesitation in endorsing the opinion expressed by the giver of purses that it was a very poor purse. But I appreciate your difficulty. You have already sent a good sum for the relief of distressed Bihar, and you are no exception to the general rule that prevails all over India, perhaps all over the world, the deep depression that has overtaken it. I am therefore not surprised at the leaness of your purse. I know that untouchability is not a cause which can be

---

1 A summary of the speech was also published in Valji Desai’s “Weekly Letter”, Harijan, 9-3-1934. About 10,000 people attended the meeting. A purse of Rs. 1,001 and several addresses of welcome were presented to Gandhiji.
advanced by mere purses however fat they may be. Not even a crore of rupees subscribed by a few millionaires can remove the stain of untouchability, unless the hearts of caste Hindus are changed.
Therefore, as I have said at many meetings, I would like to repeat here also that every rupee that comes to the Harijan cause is of no value unless it is backed by a change of heart on the part of the donors.
Throughout the Central Provinces, Andhradesha, Malabar, and Tamil
Nad, it has gladdened my heart to see tens and thousands of people, giving their coppers for me in spite of the warning given to them by me that they must be a token of their determination to get rid of untouchability. I therefore rejoice to see in the municipal address that there is a change of heart on the part of the citizens of Mangalore in connection with untouchability and, as their address says very properly, without the opening up of temples to Harijans removal of untouchability cannot be said to be complete. If Harijans are an integral part of Hinduism, they must have the same rights and privileges as to temple-entry as the caste Hindus enjoy. No amount of economic betterment can possibly bring Harijans on the same platform as caste Hindus without the same rights and privileges for temple-entry as caste Hindus. But temple-entry is not a matter that can be forced. It can only be brought about by educating caste Hindu opinion. I hope therefore that you will make ceaseless efforts to educate caste Hindu opinion in the right direction. You have saved my time considerably by giving me the information that you have understood your duties by the sufferings of Bihar. But I would like the volunteers to spread in the midst of the audience and if those who have not given at all to the Harijan purse will kindly give their coppers or whatever they would like to give, it would be indication to me of your own wishes in the matter. Meanwhile I shall conduct a sale of all the numerous things on behalf of the Harijans.

The Hindu, 26-2-1934

225. LEAVES FROM A DIARY

February 25, 1934

There is a little place called Vannivalasi, about 10 miles from Udumalpet in Dindigul District, which was one of the places I had to visit on my way to Dindigul. It may be called a model hamlet, having

1 The Gujarati translation of this was published in Harijanbandhu, 25-2-1934.
become one inside of a few months through the earnest labour of a few staunch workers in the Harijan cause. The Secretary of the local Sangh is an enthusiast. He has prepared a diary of the work done and he presented me with an English rendering of it. I condense it below:

The condition of the village before the starting of this Sangham.

Population

| | |
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th></th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Harijans</td>
<td>185</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Others</td>
<td>125</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Harijans’ Habits

1. Almost all the adults were in the habit of drinking.
2. They lived on thieving.
4. They used to go to the surrounding villages for taking part in riots on receipt of money.
5. There were no literates in this village.
6. They were very lazy.
7. Sanitation bad.

Other Hindus’ Habits

1. They were also all illiterates.
2. Several of them were leading the lives of thieves.
3. Addicted to drink.
4. Laziness was not uncommon among them.
5. Morals not so bad. 4-4-’33

On 29-5-’33 sixteen people of a hill tribe, by name Koottathar, inhabited this village. Their main occupation is begging.

Only 20 people (belonging to 3 families) are living on their hereditary properties. All the others of the village are chiefly coolies or something equivalent to that.

This was the condition of the village and its people before the starting of the Sangham in this village.

1 Vide “Speech at Public Meeting, Thevaram”, 9-2-1934
CONDITION AFTER

5-4-33 The cleaning of cheries and bathing of Harijan children, youths and old people were begun.

27-5-33 Entered Harijans’ houses, removed the filth inside them and completely whitewashed them.

29-5-33 We began to fetch the Harijan children to the river Amaravati and induce them to bathe.

Public meeting. Asked the Harijans to live pure and be busy.

Allotted a separate quarter for the homeless Kootathar tribe, who were alien to the village.

2-6-33 Three houses belonging to the Harijans were reconstructed.

Reconstructed the road running from east to west. Reconstructed the village bathing-ghat. Streets were reconstructed. A house that stood in the middle of the road was demolished and a new one was built in a good quarter of the village.

9-6-33 It was made a rule that all Harijans must begin their daily work only after prayer in their houses.

13-6-33 The Harijans promised that they would not touch pork.

17-6-33 The public promised to do away with the evil of untouchability.

25-6-33 Began to look after the profession of the Thotti (scavengers).

1-7-33 The workers of this Sangham began to visit the Harijan houses daily and clean them.

9-7-33 A separate quarter outside the village was allotted for latrines.

17-7-33 The streets were reconstructed.

18-8-33 A new house was built by a caste Hindu for Harijans’ use.

7-11-33 The villagers began to reconstruct the road running westwards.

30-11-33 A street was reconstructed.

12-12-33 Light posts were removed to the bathing-ghat.
A separate road was constructed for the arrival of the Mahatma to the village. Two hundred people worked to construct the same.

The neat appearance of every cottage and the lay [out] of streets furnished an ocular demonstration of the solidity of the work. The workers’ daily routine is also interesting and worth copying.

| Morning | 5 to 6 | ... Prayer |
| 6 to 7 | ... Cleaning streets |
| 7 to 8 | ... Bathing of Harijan children |
| 8.30 to 9 | ... Breakfast |
| 9 to 11.30 | ... School hours |
| 11.30 to 12 | ... Rest |
| Evening | 12 to 1.30 | ... Cooking and taking meals |
| 1.30 to 2 | ... Rest |
| 2 to 4.30 | ... School hours |
| 4.30 to 5.30 | ... Reading newspapers and telling villagers the important news of the day |
| 5.30 to 6.30 | ... Going to the cheries and giving talks about sanitation |
| Night | 6.30 to 7.30 | ... Cooking and taking meals |
| 7.30 to 8 | ... Rest |
| 8 to 10 | ... School for adults |

This is one of the rare examples of what earnest, persistent work can bring about.

_Harijan_, 16-3-1934

---

226. LETTER TO ESTHER MENON

_Date: February 25, 1934_

MY DEAR CHILD,

I have your letter. I am glad fruit reached you safe.

Another basket was sent. Do not hesitate to ask for more when you have the need.

I don’t wonder at Maria’s dragging my name with your alleged breach of promise. My conscience is clear. I would not have tolerated... your remaining with me if a breach of promise to the children had been involved. But from Maria’s letter I gather that her complaint against me is deeper and wider. I wish she would discuss the whole thing with you. And if she does not, you need not worry. I have written to her at length and invited her to unburden herself completely.

Yes, I would like Menon to get the Bangalore job. I have gone through the certificates. They are good and should procure Menon a good job. Do you want the certificates back?

I leave for Patna on 9th March from Hyderabad (Deccan).

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: No. 126. Courtesy: National Archives of India. Also My Dear Child, p. 103

227. LETTER TO NAN MENON

February 25, 1934

MY DEAR NAN,

I have your very good letter. I am glad you are spinning every day. You know the golden rule: whatever you do, do well and with your whole heart in it.

Love and kisses.

BAPU

My Dear Child, p. 120

228. LETTER TO TANGAI MENON

February 25, 1934

MY DEAR TANGAI,

I hope you are quite well. Never wander in the hot sun. Eat plenty of fruit and avoid starchy things.

Love and kisses.

BAPU

My Dear Child, p. 120
229. LETTER TO PADMAJA NAIDU

February 25, 1934

MY DEAR PLAYMATE,

Can’t give you a love letter. Whether I am to plant your stolen tree or do some other thing depends upon you and not me, for you will be pulling the strings. Only don’t you tax me overmuch—and then you can’t brave the sun. More when we meet. You must be fit.

Love.

S

SLAVE-DRIVER

SHRI PADMAJA NAIDU
GOLDEN THRESHOLD
HYDERABAD
DECCAN

From the original: Padmaja Naidu Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

230. LETTER TO MRIDULA SARABHAI

February 25, 1934

CHI. MRIDU,

I received your letter. I have destroyed it. You should not have stretched the meaning of what I said. I merely warned you. Ultimately only your decision matters. In such matters anybody else’s opinion should be considered as of no value; because the same act can uplift one person and degrade another. It depends on one’s mental state. Neither Mummy and Papa nor I would wish you to be weak in the least. I am certain that none of us could wish that your progress should be stopped. I would not even give any advice that would inspire doubt in your mind on this score. So your decision is of course acceptable to me. Besides, I would not even know all the details.

I do not feel that you have in any way shown disrespect to me, or are doing so by your decision not to go to England. Have no fear. I am not going to stop guiding you or advising you when it is necessary. This is because I have great expectations of you. In every way only good is in store for you. I did not think either that you had got excited. My blessings are ever with you.
Your earlier letter is lying with me. I have had a long discussion with Bhai about the definition of swadeshi. The Swadeshi Board cannot be of much use right now. Even so, the Board should issue certificates if only to establish its control. I am beginning to feel convinced that no certificates can be issued in regard to products of mills which cannot ensure control on the prices of these products or on the working conditions of the labourers or on other managerial matters. Therefore, the swadeshi propaganda body should only concern itself with popularizing such goods as are not in demand but on whose production and consumption it can have some control. In other words, such a body can and should have control only on small-scale and cottage industries. It would have been well if we could have discussed this matter. But we had very little time to talk. Only for this reason, you may come to Patna if you want. Before that there is only one Tuesday when I shall be at Belgaum. You may come over there if you wish.

One question in your last letter has remained unanswered. Seeking release on parole cannot be permitted. Maybe there are conditions under which this would be proper but I cannot imagine them. Vallabhbhai did not consider it even when Dahyabhai was on his death-bed. He was under a lot of pressure, too. That is why what you write is correct.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 11187. Courtesy: Sarbahai Foundation

231. SPEECH AT STUDENTS’ MEETING, MANGALORE

February 25, 1934

MR. PRINCIPAL, BOYS AND GIRLS,

It is a matter of great pleasure to me that early in the morning I was able to see two beautifully kept clean cheries in which the scavengers of Mangalore are living, and then the sacred function of laying the foundation-stone of a common temple organized by the Old Boys’ Association and now I find myself in the company of the students. You have given me a small purse. I call it a small purse because in several places students have given me much more than you have done. I do not want to draw distinctions and cavil at the smallness of your purse because I have no recollection of Mangalore, and for that matter Karnataka, having ever proved stingy or miserly. All the recollections that I have of Karnataka are very pleasant, so far as subscriptions and collections are concerned. I do not think that throughout my various tours, Karnataka has come second best. It has always occupied the first position, that is, it has been amongst the first to subscribe. Therefore, I have no doubt that this time also you have done your best. I know how depression has overtaken our entire land.

1 The meeting was held in the Kanara High School compound. Gandhiji delivered the speech after unveiling the portrait of Vithalbhai J. Patel. A summary of the speech was also published in Valji Desai’s “Weekly Letter”, Harijan, 9-3-1934.

You have told me that you have got now two or three Harijan students and, circumstances being as they are, you have taken some pride in informing me of this fact, and it gives me some pleasure, but it gives me also considerable food for thought that we should be able to congratulate ourselves that there are even two boys belonging to the Harijan community in this big High School, because you are numerous and your High School, as you very properly say, ranks very high and in a High School of this nature there are only two Harijan boys. Well, that is like an oasis in the desert of Sahara, very pleasant and very nice when you are walking through a desert. But the question is why we should find ourselves in a desert at all and why this school should not have hundreds of Harijan boys here. No matter where I go, I discover the same capacity to draw the best out of you and amongst Harijans also. I was talking to an elderly lady, who has got a house, a princely house. It has got a beautiful fence, very nice large rooms, absolutely no dust anywhere, fit enough for a prince to live in. When I compare it with the palace of the old Maharani of Travancore, I tell you, there is not much distinction between this house and the palace which I had the pleasure of seeing in Travancore. When I talked to the old lady who is the owner of the house, she was able to anticipate what I was driving at and therefore able to give me a smart reply. I was struck with the intelligence of this old lady.\footnote{From the Harijan report it seems that the lady was a Harijan.} Therefore, it seemed as if these Harijan boys are not behindhand in intelligence or in capacity. They are not backward. It is our backwardness. It is the caste Hindus who have descended upon them like a blight and have suppressed them. So, as we have kept them and still keep them under suppression, we find it worth while to congratulate ourselves when we have two boys. I have taken a long time in describing this thing but I want to drive a lesson home to you. I know that you have a principal and a staff of teachers, who are exceedingly interested in the welfare of Harijans. They want to do as much reparation as it is within their power to the Harijans. I suggest to them and to you, the student world, that you will not rest satisfied until you have got the numerical strength of depressed class boys or Harijan boys and girls in the High School increased. You have no prejudices, because you have got three Harijan boys now. You must set to work. Go to the cheries, and to the other places where these people are living, and find out every boy and every girl who can study and see to it that they are on a par with you. That is what I would like to leave with you this morning. And who can work more efficiently than the student world? That is what I have been saying everywhere. If the students desire to do so they can really change the condition of things so far as Harijans are concerned and that without any undue strain upon their time or upon their mind. They can do it during their recreation hours. It will really stimulate their minds, their curiosity and fill them with the spirit of service and with the spirit of love.

_The Hindu, 28-2-1934_

232. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, MULKI

_February 25, 1934_

I am obliged to you for this address and the purse. I must congratulate you on your being able to recite the many things you have done in connection with the removal of untouchability and I hope that your belief that sanatanists’ opposition against temple-entry is dying down is well based. There is the last sentence in your address which requires explanation. You have prayed to God Almighty that by the power of Harijans, the Hindu society may be strengthened. If thereby you mean that justice having been rendered to Harijans and reparation having been made to them by caste Hindus, Hindu society will be purified and therefore by reason of this purity it will gain moral height, I can join in that prayer whole-heartedly. Whereas if this prayer means that because caste Hindus who by reason of their being pampered and degraded have become infirm in bodies will receive

---

1 A brief report of this was also published in Valji Desai’s “Weekly Letter”, _Harijan_, 9-3-1934.
access to physical strength from the able-bodied Harijans, it is impossible to join in that prayer. I must tell you that thought has never crossed my mind. And I shall never allow myself to be associated with a movement which is based upon physical strength. It is my conviction that no religion on earth can be sustained by brute strength. On the contrary, “those who rely on the sword shall perish by the sword” is an eternal truth. Religion is a mighty tree which derives all its sap from the moral height of those who profess that religion. Hence I have repeated from a thousand meetings that this is essentially a movement of self-purification and repentance. You will be glad to know that this purse of Rs. 501 contains Rs. 200 given by the fishermen. I congratulate them on their handsome donation. I know that they are a flourishing community. And I know also that if they got rid of the drink habit and if they had the free supply of salt they could do much better. Free supply of salt depends upon circumstances over which we have no control. But upon the liquor habit, we have full control. And I would like my fishermen friends to carry on this reform which they have well begun in Mangalore. It is a habit that destroys the soul.

The Hindu, 28-2-1934

233. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, UDIP:

February 25, 1934

FRIENDS,

Udipi has been on my brain for many-many days. Of course the fame of Udipi has really preceded you, for so many people have explained to me the beauty of Udipi. And then there is your famous temple, where God himself turned away from the Brahmins, because they would not allow Harijans to approach Him. And then I was promised all sorts of things if I came to Udipi, including, of course, jewellery and rich ornaments from ladies. Well, now you have begun redeeming the promise by giving me a purse containing Rs. 1,240. I have just now come after opening a khadi store and in order to open it

1 At the end of the meeting the presents were auctioned and fetched Rs. 312.
2 A brief report of the speech was also published in Valji Desai’s “Weekly Letter”, Harijan, 9-3-1934.
3 According to a legend the image of Krishna in the temple had turned round to give darshan to Harijans.
I had to cut a cord with silver scissors. But I must take you into my confidence and tell you that the scissors were not required to cut the cord, which was slender. Well, I am expecting now that you will create such public opinion in this place that the temple, which is now not open to Harijans, will be presently opened to them. That opinion can only be formulated by the gentlest of means. Since opening of temples is part of self-purification and reparation to Harijans, no temple is worth opening except when the temple-goers desire by a majority of opinion that those temples should be opened to Harijans. If you will be true to your promise, I expect to see Harijan activity redoubled in Udupi so that you will become an example to the other places in Karnataka. I cannot imagine a nobler task for citizens of any place in India than that they should remove the sin of untouchability from their midst. We are all children of one and the same God and God would not be God of justice if He discriminated between His children. Therefore the message of anti-untouchability is the message of realization of brotherhood of man. Therefore I hope that we will all cleanse our hearts of untouchability, that is, distinction of high and low.

The Hindu, 28-2-1934

234. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, KUNDAPUR

February 25, 1934

FRIENDS,

I thank you for your addresses and your purse. It is a matter of great joy as also a good omen that we have as our chairman a gentleman eighty years old. That shows that old men are not behind hand in appreciating the necessity of the reform. You know what we are aiming at. Untouchability has got to be removed root and branch. This is a very simple proposition. But, as I have said elsewhere, untouchability is a hydra-headed monster and it has affected every branch of society and therefore we have become untouchables one to the other, and one community has become untouchable to another.

---

1 At the end of the meeting Gandhiji auctioned the presents which fetched Rs. 400.

2 A brief report of the speech was also published in Valji Desai’s “Weekly Letter”, Harijan, 9-3-1934.

3 This was Savarkar Manjaya Sherigara.
community, till at last there is absolutely no caste, no section, which does not consider itself superior to some other section or caste. There may be and there are many other causes but I am convinced that this superiority and inferiority complex is at the bottom of many of our communal troubles. Therefore the implication of this campaign against untouchability is that we want to achieve brotherhood of man.
And that essential brotherhood of man is unattainable so long as we believe that untouchability has Divine sanction. It is therefore up to the caste Hindus to consider and make their choice. They perpetuate untouchability and they and Hinduism die. If they will kill untouch-ability altogether, that is the only way to live. I have therefore called it a movement of self-purification, a movement of repentance and reparation to Harijans. For centuries past caste Hindus have suppressed Harijans and, in suppressing them, we have degraded ourselves. Let us now learn the lesson before it is too late and root out untouchability from our hearts. I see that you have a Hindi class conducted here. I congratulate you on it. I wish that you will popularize this national language much more than you have done hitherto. Hindi or Hindustani is the language spoken and understood by nearly twenty crores of Hindus and Mussalmans. It is a language in which you have a mixture of Sanskrit words, Persian, Arabic and what not, so simple, that either party understands it. It is an incredibly simple language to learn and you ought to take sufficient trouble to master the elements of that language.1

The Hindu, 28-2-1934

235. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

February 26, 1934

CHI. AMALA,

Am I not right in calling you idiotic? Instead of appreciating a postcard from one of the best of ashramites when I do not write myself, you write a peevish postcard and harp on the badness of the people in Wardha! Do you not owe an apology? And what shall I do with your apology? You will do the same thing again and again.
Therefore I shall bear your idiocy. I must take you as you are and hope to see you as you ought to be even as you have to take me as I

1 At the end of the meeting Gandhiji made an appeal for the Bihar Earthquake Relief Fund.
am and hope for the best. So we may be quits and get to business. I am glad you are getting on. Remember I need more than 6 hours’ sleep during 24 hours. And so do you. You can take more without difficulty. Therefore you ought to. Keep yourself in good order and condition. Mind the hot weather. Don’t wait till you collapse. Keeping good health in all weathers is an art.

Do you know that on the address part of a postcard nothing but name and address should be put. You put more and I had to pay a fine of 1_ as. Next time beware.

Love.

BAPU

[PS.]

On 9th I leave Hyderabad for Patna and reach there on 11th.

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

236. LETTER TO DUDHIBEHN V. DESAI

February 26, 1934

CHI. DUDHIBEHN,

I had your letter. If you are afraid of the children getting smallpox and if you have no religious objection to vaccination, I think it would be best to get them vaccinated. I oppose vaccination because I disapprove of it from every point of view and have little fear of death, but you or others certainly need not object to it because I object to it. Dharma is a matter of each individual’s own conscience.
It is not a rule that all who get smallpox die. Show this portion to Motibehn too—she has asked me about this.

I am writing today to Mavo'.

I hope you don’t worry about Valji. He keeps fairly good health. He has certainly been helping me. Thanks to his being with us, Chandrashankar gets plenty of free time. He could even go on leave.

I hope you keep good health.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 7464. Courtesy: Valji G. Desai

1 Sudarshan Desai, son of Valji Desai; vide the following item.
237. LETTER TO SUDARSHAN V. DESAI

February 26, 1934

CHI. SUIDARSHAN,

You have ceased to be Mavo and have now become Sudarshan. I hope you will forgive me for not writing to you in time for your birthday on your completing six years. May you live long and serve the country well. Your handwriting cannot still be said to have improved. It is too early yet to take you with me on my tours. I can’t say whether you can stand the strain of touring with me.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 5742. Courtesy: Valji G. Desai

238. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL JOSHI

KUNDAPUR,

February 26, 1934

CHI. CHHAGANLAL,

I got your message through Lakshmidas¹. The description is good, the whole of it. You seem to have done very good reading.

My mental condition at present is such that I don’t feel happy when somebody asks me for my decision on any matter and I hesitate even to offer advice. Since, obeying my nature, I regard myself as released only for Harijan work, I feel very reluctant to offer advice to or guide anybody. Moreover, in individual civil disobedience where is the need for advising anybody? My attitude, therefore, is that you should follow your own inclination. Don’t think what would please me. You may assume that your wish will be mine.

Having said this, I will now say what I think. I think it would be better not to remove Dhiru from Bhavnagar. You may go and see him. I think it would be advisable to let Rama stay in Wardha. You should, therefore, go and see her too. If you are very eager to see me, you can do so in Belgaum on the 5th and the 6th. How can they let you come to Belgaum without permitting you to cross into British territory once? If they do permit you and if you very much wish, don’t have the slightest hesitation in coming. You need not go anywhere to attend a wedding. It may perhaps be your duty to satisfy your wish to see your brother. I have said all this without taking into account your feelings or those of Rama, Dhiru and Kalyanrai. Not only are you free but it is your moral duty to make whatever changes may be dictated by those feelings. Reflect over verses 6 and 7 in Chapter III [of the Gita]. “What then will constraint avail?” applies in circumstances like these. We can control our feelings only up to a certain point. If we repress them beyond that limit, they poison the system and erupt like raw mercury. Everybody, therefore, should fix his or her own limit.

¹ Lakshmidas Gandhi, a satyagrahi of Bombay, who was in Thana Jail with the addressee

Pyarelal has been released. He is in Wardha. Chandrasankar has gone somewhere there for 15 days. I therefore wonder if they will meet at some place. I don’t write anything about myself, as I wish to save time. If I had sufficient time, I would fill pages.

I have just received a wire informing me that Lakshmidas1 has been having enteric fever for the last eight days. The mercury shoots up very high. Swami is with him. He is in Patna.

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5516

239. LETTER TO DHIRU JOSHI

February 26, 1934

CHI. DHIRU,

It seems you have completely forgotten me now. Do you still get fever?

_Blessings from_
_BAPU_

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5317

---

1 _Bhagavad Gita_. III. 33
2 Lakshmidas Asar. He had gone for relief work to Bihar, where he fell ill.
240. LETTER TO NANIBEHN JHAYERI

February 26, 1934

CHI. NANIBEHN,

I have been expecting your letter, but it has not yet arrived. Gangabehn too has lapsed into silence, no doubt because she wants to be kind to me. But what if I did not care for such kindness? What is the result of your operation? Who did it?

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Manavtana Prahari—Pannalal Jhaveri, p. 28

241. LETTER TO PRABHAVATI

February 27, 1934

CHI. PRABHAVATI,

I had your letter. I have written to you regularly. It was you who wrote your last letter after keeping me waiting for a long time.

To save time, I am not writing separately to Jayaprakash this time. It is 3 a.m. just now. I will ask for the money for Rajeshwar after I arrive there. About the other money we shall talk when I am there. I had read all the letters from Jayaprakash. But I don’t have all the letters with me when I am replying to the last one. The previous letters may have been left behind. I may also forget what I had said in reply to a letter. Hence I may have to ask again sometimes. After I had been told that some other arrangement had been made, there was nothing for me to do. When I remembered about the difficulty, I asked you again. We shall now discuss the matter when we meet there. My question regarding the earthquake was about you both. It was whether the earthquake had affected you two mentally and economically as it has done many others. But we shall discuss this also when we meet. I hope both of you are well. If necessary, when I arrive there we shall also discuss where you should live. For the present I hope both of you keep yourselves occupied in some public work there.

I am in excellent health.

BAPU

From photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 3443
242. LETTER TO KASTURBA GANDHI

February 27, 1934

BA,

I have not yet received your letter this time. I also am wandering about in a part where the post is very irregular, because there is no railway. I am touring small villages on the coast and there are so many streams and rivulets that building a railway would be too expensive. At the foot of the hills is the sea. The rivers flowing from the hills form a big estuary which can be crossed only in a boat. In a region like this, it is not possible to travel fast and, therefore, letters take very long to reach. This morning we boarded a steamer at a place called Kundapur, and it will bring us to Karwar at night. We shall be on the sea for twelve hours. You have been to Mangalore. We were there yesterday. From there we reached Kundapur at night, crossing many rivers on the way, and at that place we boarded the steamer. The people here speak Kannada. All these places are in the region from where Gangadharrao hails. The province is called Karnataka. On the 5th and the 6th I shall be in Belgaum. Since we are on the sea-coast, the air is cool. It has been decided that, after completing Karnataka, I should go to Patna. I shall be in Hyderabad on the 9th, from where I will board a train for Patna. I will most probably meet Sarojini devi in Hyderabad. Padma at any rate is there. In Wardha, which is on the way to Patna, Pyarelal is likely to meet me. He has just been released and after his release he has gone to Wardha. Most probably Jamnalaji also will go to Patna. Thakkar Bapa will not come with me to Patna but will go to Delhi instead. He will have to work there. Lakshmidas is in Patna. He is quite ill. He has got typhoid. There was a wire from Swami to that effect. Chandrashankar has taken leave for 15 days and gone to see his wife. I have written to him and asked him to call on Madhavdas. I have received no reply to my letter to Madhavdas. Narandas will be released on the 9th and Chhaganlal on the 3rd. There was news of Vasumati having been released. I have not heard from her. Prithuraj is still with me. At the moment he does not wish to go to Patna. Poor Velanbehn must be pining to see him. I have not received Manilal’s letter as yet. Mahadev keeps good health. Durga has been to visit him. She was accompanied by Jivanji. Prabhavati and Jayaprakash are in Patna. They are doing relief work. And now the discourse.
Last week I wrote about the power of the Name. But the question arises: how should one repeat the Name? What good does it do to keep repeating it when thousands of idle thoughts distract the mind? Either one should repeat the Name from the heart, or not at all. This is partly right and partly not. If one repeats the Name for outward show, it has no meaning. On the contrary it is a sin to do so since it amounts to deception. But a person may wish sincerely to repeat the Name, and yet his mind may be continually distracted by other thoughts when he is repeating it. He should not lose heart, however. He should go on repeating the Name in spite of the distraction of thoughts. If he keeps up the practice, some day the Name will get inscribed in his heart. This is the reason why the power of the Name has been glorified. Even an illiterate or dull person can repeat the Lord’s name. One can learn to do so in one second. After that one has merely to keep repeating it. By and by this becomes so much a habit that one does not feel happy unless one is going on with it. When the habit becomes so strong that one goes on repeating the Name at all hours of the day, whether eating or drinking or working or resting, then it may be said that the Name has sunk in one’s heart. Such persons are rare, but they rise above all suffering. An interesting story about Hanuman illustrating this was told in the Ashram once by Panditji’s guru. I will narrate it next week.

Blessings to all from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Bane Patro, pp. 16-7

243. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

February 27, 1934

BHAL VALLABHBHAI,

I am writing this letter on Tuesday on board the Dayavati. We are going from Kundapur to Karwar. Chandrashankar has gone home. Since Valji is with me, there was no inconvenience in letting him go. I have to leave Hyderabad on the 9th and reach Patna on the 11th. Soon after reaching there, I shall be entering upon my weekly silence, but it seems necessary that I should reach Patna on that date. It was difficult to leave earlier. All Preparations had been made in Karnataka and it would have been difficult to return to Karnataka from Bihar. Ambalal and Mridula came and saw me. They had just come to see me through their love for me. Ambalal and Saraladevi are going to England. So long as Bharati\(^1\) and Suhrid\(^2\) are there, the two can not feel easy in mind. On the one hand, they give complete freedom to all their sons and daughters and, on the other, there is a strong bond of love. I have found them a wonderful couple.

I have already written to you about the Professor’s visit. He also had nothing particular to discuss.

Miss Lester has gone to Ceylon. Agatha Harrison will leave London on March 2 and come to India.

Lakshmidas has been suffering from enteric fever for the last eight days. There was a wire about him from Swami yesterday. I have asked him to wire to me every day. Prithuraj is with me. So far he has not expressed a desire to go. But I have given him my permission. Velanbehn must be very unhappy. Swami informs me that Lakshmidas is being properly looked after.

Enclosed are a letter from Ba and Bhansali’s postcard which I had preserved for you. I have already given you the contents.

You must have read in The Times [of India] about me. It is all poison. Even if I make a joke, it is described as my belief. Could I do anything except joke with that “self-respect”? But even that has been misrepresented. How can one counter such propaganda? This is only the poison that comes into the open. There is plenty being poured out behind the scenes. How can one reply to it? I am firm in my faith that this falsehood will not succeed against truth. So far I have not found that faith to have been proved false in any instance.

Chhaganlal (Joshi) will be released on the 3rd. I have written to him. Pyarelal is in Wardha. Chhaganlal seems to have done good reading while in jail. He has acquired some proficiency in Marathi also. He seems to have read a good deal on other subjects, too. I have told him in my letter that he may come and see me in Belgaum if he wishes. Kanjibhai did not come after all.

Thakkar Bapa will part company with me at Itarsi. He need not come to Patna just now. I have not yet been able to decide what Pyarelal should do. In the last resort he can of course resume the work which he was doing. The prevailing atmosphere is such as would

---

\(^1\) Daughter of Ambalal Sarabhai
\(^2\) Son of Ambalal Sarabhai
\(^3\) J. B. Kripalani confuse anybody.

I have had no letter from Devdas.

Raja left our party at Arkonam. Amtussalaam must still be at Tiruchengodu. I have had no letter from her after leaving Arkonam. I shall reach Karwar tonight. I would not be surprised if I got a letter from her there.

Jamnalal was to go to Patna, but has postponed doing so because of cough.

I have not heard from Dahyabhai recently. When you write to Mani, please tell her how my attempt failed. How painful it would be not to be able to see her or Mahadev though I would be in Belgaum for two days? But we are helpless.

The dairy, which was being run separately, has been made a part of the Harijan Ashram. It has been decided to make a separate trust for it.

... has been released. He was fined, and he paid up the fine. Such things go on. He was not keeping good health.

You must have come to know that Vinabehn\(^1\) is no longer in your hospital now. She has taken a separate house in Bombay and is living there. She has got custody of her daughters and intends to file a suit against her husband for their expenses. She will probably get them. I met Kamaladevi’s son and mother in Mangalore. The son was dressed in U.P. style. I called on Sadasiva Rao’s mother and mother-in-law. Kamaladevi’s mother and son had called on me. A case is going on against Sadasiva Rao. Today was the last hearing. We shall know the outcome in Karwar. If I get time I will let you know about it.

Blessings to you both from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 81-3

---

\(^1\) The name is omitted in the source.

\(^2\) Mrs. Lazarus. Kumarappa introduced her to Gandhiji.

\(^3\) Vadilal Sarabhai Hospital run by the Ahmedabad Municipality
244. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

February 27, 1934

DEAR DAUGHTER AMTUSSALAAM,

Every day I have been intending to write to you but where was I to find the time? I am writing this on finding just a few minutes to spare. I hope you are doing well. I have heard nothing so far from Sharma. I do not know if some information has come your way. I am in a region where letters, etc., reach very late. We are all doing well.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Urdu: G.N. 294

245. LETTER TO NARANDAS GANDHI

February [27]/28, 1934

CHI. NARANDAS,

The date of your release is approaching.¹ I didn’t wish to write to you in jail. What could I write about? There was no need to express sympathy and no special news to give. You would hear the ordinary news from others. And so I did not write. But I did inquire and get news about you from time to time. Pyarelal has given a more detailed report about you. You should now narrate all your experiences.

Dharma requires that you should return to jail as soon as you are released. That is what Prema did. I would not suggest that you must necessarily do so. It may even be your duty to remain outside for some time and observe things. If your health has suffered, it may be necessary to recover it first. Or it may be your duty to go to Bihar. I will not think about all these points and decide. You should do that yourself. I am sure that whatever decision you come to will be in accordance with dharma. If you remain outside, you may come and see me at Wardha. If you wish to go to Rajkot first, you may do that and then see everybody in Ahmedabad, discuss all matters with them.

¹ As Gandhiji says in the last paragraph, he started writing this letter on the previous day.
² The addressee was in the Nasik Jail.
and then come to see me at Patna. I will reach Patna on the 11th.

Chimanlal will explain to you the reason why the dairy has been sent back to the Ashram. It has been decided to make a new trust, but that will be done after I know your views in the matter. It has also been decided to hand over the land at Bidaj to the Harijan Sevak Sangh. But I will change my mind if you have some other plan.

Chhaganlal will be released on the 3rd. See him if you can.

We have stopped using the Red Bungalow, because Champa has changed her colour. She does not want to do even her clear duty to Jeki and others. We cannot, therefore, live in her bungalow as her dependents.

Lakshmidas is seriously ill in Patna. He is suffering from typhoid. There was a wire from Swami to this effect the day before yesterday. Prithuraj is with me. He joined me at Calicut. Velanbehn also is very ill. It seems an operation will be necessary.

Devdas’s Lakshmi, Maruti’s Lakshmi and Ramdas’s Nimu are pregnant. The time for all three confinements is almost the same. It is approaching now.

I was glad to know about Purushottam’s engagement. The marriage should take place after some time. He is not yet fully restored to health. If, however, Purushottam himself desires that the marriage should take place immediately and the girl also is of the same mind, we are helpless. Purushottam intends to undergo Dr. Sharma’s treatment. Sharma will most probably come and stay in Wardha. If he does so, Purushottam may certainly get himself treated by him. But what can we do if Dr. Sharma doesn’t come over?

If you have not heard about N., you will hear it from somebody. Amala is at Sabarmati. Mary Barr is at Wardha, or under the charge of the Ashram at Wardha. Duncan is living in a jungle. His tapascharya is hard indeed. He lives on a hill near Betul. He recovered from a serious illness and went back to the same place.

Amtussalaam came to see me but fell ill. She must be in Rajaji’s Ashram now. I have had no news about her after leaving Arkonam, i.e., after the 22nd.

I finished this letter in three parts in the midst of loud noises. I began writing this yesterday. I get up at 2.45 every day, and only then can I write fairly detailed letters. If anything is left out, then

---

1 The name has been omitted.
sometimes it is completely forgotten afterwards. You should write to me regularly—if you do not come to see me immediately.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]
Kanu is displaying great courage.¹

From a microfilm of the Gujarati: M.M.U./I. Also C.W. 8394. Courtesy: Narandas Gandhi

246. LETTER TO KSHITISH CHANDR DAS GUPTA

Unrevised February 28, 1934

DEAR KSHITISHBABU²,

Hemprabha has described to me how you and your wife are ailing. My whole heart goes out to you. Have I not seen you as one with a strong wiry constitution? It is difficult for me to imagine you as ailing. But there it is. A satyagrahi’s reward is his suffering in which he is expected to rejoice. Sudhanva is depicted as dancing in the frying pan. Therefore whilst as a frail being I grieve over your illnesses, as a satyagrahi I congratulate you on your suffering. Do please drop me a line when you can and tell me all about your experiences and, if your wife can write in Hindi or English, I must have a line from her too.

May God bless you both.

Love.

BAPU

From a photostat: G.N. 9070

¹ He had gone to jail at the age of thirteen.
² Brother of Satis Chandra Das Gupta.
247. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

February 28, 1934

CHI. AMALA,

Your Gujarati is good. Your letter is undated. If you have malaria, you ought to take quinine. In all illness please do as the doctors there may advise. You cannot mechanically follow me and seek my permission about taking medicine. In such matters everyone must be a law unto himself or herself.

If you do not believe in God as a permanent, living and the only Reality pervading all, naturally you cannot feel Him while praying or in the earthquake. The belief comes to a certain extent through reason and finally through faith. As children we derive belief from parents, as grown-ups we reason and then we have faith or become sceptics. You will grow to faith in time because I believe you to be a seeker and because you have faith in one who believes in God.

I wrote to you yesterday.

Love.

BAPU

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

248. LETTER TO PARIKSHITLAL L. MAJMUDAR

February 28, 1934

BHAI PARIKSHITLAL,

Thakkar Bapa has replied to your letter.

There will be no difficulty about providing your monthly expenses. Please send a detailed budget to Thakkar Bapa as desired by him. Ambalabhai has undertaken to make up the deficit. You need not spend time in collecting funds.

If Amalabehn gives you any trouble, please let me know. She is very good at heart, possesses great purity of character and is very eager to serve. But she lacks imagination and is obstinate. Nevertheless she yields to love.

You must have now got the cow. Train as many Harijans as possible in that work.

Blessings from

BAPU
[PS.]

Enclosed is a letter for Amalabehn. Read it and pass it on to her. If she is having fever, call in a doctor.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4025

249. LETTER TO HEMPRABHA DAS GUPTA

February 28, 1934

CHI. HEMPRABHA,

What can I write to you? The devotion of Tulsidas will help you, it will give you tranquillity. Is it a complete translation of the Ramayana? What is the price? I shall be content if even 1,000 copies are sold in Bengal.

That such a strong constitution as that of Kshitishbabu has been afflicted with illness pains me. His wife too has followed suit. But all this is part of satyagraha. Whatever may happen to the body the soul must remain shining bright.

I reach Patna on March 11. Perhaps we shall meet there one day.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 1709

250. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, SIRSI

February 28, 1934

Gandhiji said the name Sirsi was not unfamiliar to him. When his Karnataka programme was arranged, Sirsi was bound to be included, as so many of his comrades lived in it, and if he could not exact Harijan service from comrades, he had little right to expect it of others. It was his constant experience that untouchability was vanishing from places where his comrades were to be found in large numbers. And who were his comrades? They only were his comrades who looked upon the entire people of India, Muslims, Christians, Jews, etc., no less than Hindus, as brothers and sisters, who, while holding India dearer than life itself, did not wish ill to any other country on earth, who did not despise or hate anyone even in a dream, who were ready to lay down their lives in the quest of truth. Such comrades could never consider anybody as untouchable or inferior to themselves. He was, therefore, confident that in Sirsi at any rate he would not meet anyone capable of upholding untouchability, and he was, therefore, not surprised to hear that its Municipality had accorded assistance to the local sangh and given free studentships to Harijan boys. Indeed, it would have been a painful surprise to him if it had been otherwise. The Municipal address admitted that they had “not yet been able entirely to throw off notions of superiority”. That admission was creditable to them, for consciousness of imperfection is the first step in the march towards perfection. However, he hoped they would surmount the superiority complex, which was at the root, not only of untouchability, but also of communal bitterness. Removal of untouchability would go a long way in bringing about universal brotherhood. . . .

1 Extracted from Valji Desai’s “Weekly Letter”

Gandhiji congratulated the trustees of the temple¹ for flinging it open to Harijans, but he was deeply pained to hear that animals were offered at that shrine. He would not consider any place holy where animals were slaughtered for sacrifice. Millions killed animals in other countries for food, but did not pretend that they did so to propitiate God. It was an insult to human intelligence and an outrage on the human heart to imagine that one could propitiate the deity by sacrificing animals. One can please God only by self-sacrifice and self-denial. He, therefore, hoped that the trustees of the temple would take a strong line and put an end to the evil practice in question. He would go so far as to say that Harijans ought not to be encouraged to visit any temple where animal sacrifice was offered.

_Harijan, 9-3-1934_

251. LETTER TO ANAND T. HINGORANI

_March 1, 1934_

DEAR ANAND,

I got both your letters at the same time, i.e., last night. I am glad of your closer bond with Jairamdas. May it ever grow closer.

It gives me great joy to find Jairamdas agreeing with me. He never agrees except through his whole heart. I know that I retain Dr. Choithram’s devotion even when I cannot secure his agreement with my views. And I do not want his or anybody’s mere mechanical assent to my proposals.

Vidya will have to be both gentle and firm with Mahadev whilst he is growing. To bring up children is a great art. Vidya must master it.

¹ Marikamba Temple
For the time being you should both be in Karachi. After I reach Patna, I shall know whether you are wanted. If you are, I shall send for you. If not, what to do will be considered.

A paper which requires security to be given is no good. I am quite clear that no paper is wanted today.

I think I have answered all your questions.

Love.

BAPU

SHRI ANAND HINGORANI
C/o R. B. TOTARAM HINGORANI
SAHITIPUR
BUNDER ROAD, EXTENSION
KARACHI

From a microfilm. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

252. LETTER TO RAMABEHN JOSHI

March 1, 1934

CHI RAMA,

I have your letter. Joshi will soon be released now. You two, therefore, may discuss and decide the matter. I will approve of whatever decision you arrive at. I have written to Joshi in detail. I thought both of you, mother and daughter, were quite happy there. I also believe that it can do no good to continue to stay in a place where one feels ill at ease.

Write to me from time to time.¹

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5364. Also Bapuna Patro-7: Shri Chhaganlal Joshine, p. 299

¹ This sentence is to be found only in Bapuna Patro-7: Shri Chhaganlal Joshine.
253. LETTER TO VIDYA ANAND HINGORANI

March 1, 1934

CHI. VIDYA,

You have spoilt your handwriting. Don’t be lazy in writing to me.

I have written to Anand about Mahadev. If Anand goes to Patna, you will have to stay in Karachi or Multan. No time to write more.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a microfilm of the Hindi. Courtesy: National Archives of India and Anand T. Hingorani

254. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, SIDDAPUR

March 1, 1934

Gandhiji said that the complaint was perhaps rather exaggerated, but he had no doubt that it was substantially true. He, therefore, hoped that the savarna Hindus of Siddapur would remove the disabilities of Harijans. Or else it was no use their contributing to the Harijan fund. No one should regard such donations as a licence for the sins for the removal of which they were made. Donations intended as atonement for sin should be a token of future abstinence from it. In future, therefore, they should treat Harijans as blood brothers and sisters. Oppression of Harijans was a potent factor in our present degradation and India could never expect to be happy so long as Harijans were in chains. . . . A peasant presented Gandhiji with samples of arecanuts, cardamoms and pepper, on which he had marked the comparative prices of these products in 1929 and 1933.

Adverting to this, Gandhiji said he would point out a remedy which they might apply if they chose. That remedy was spinning. They must grow profitable crops and utilize their leisure fully. They must not sit idle because spinning did not promise any large returns. Something was better than nothing. They must produce strong and uniform yarn, get it woven and wear the cloth themselves, or sell it if not required for personal use.

Gandhiji did not wish to suggest that there were not many other measures necessary for a radical cure of the depressions, but that was a larger question to be

1 Extracted from Valji Desai’s “Weekly Letter”
2 Of the local Harijans that they were treated as slaves dealt with by statesmen and politicians. His appeal was directly to the men in distress, and he was trying to show what each individual could do for himself to alleviate the distress. And that was obviously to make use of enforced idleness further intensified by the distress. It was open to others to suggest more remunerative occupations. He could find no other that would apply to millions of men and women.

_Harijan, 9-3-1934_

255. OPINION INVITED

DRAFT RULES FOR THE DISBURSEMENT OF GANDHIJI’S HARIJAN PURSE TOUR FUND

(1) About a month or two after the collections of the purse fund of each province, the existing financial relations between the Central Office and the Provincial Office may cease in favour of the new financial relations arising out of the new Purse Fund, which are described below. The fund is called the Gandhi Harijan Purse Fund.

(2) The money for all welfare work expenses incurred after the passing of the welfare schemes should be charged to the Purse Fund, that is, it will come out of the 75 per cent quota of the Purse Fund, or out of the 50 per cent in the case of principal cities. Grants for administrative and propaganda expenses will be continued to be paid according to the existing system, that is, one half or two-thirds, or whatever the ratio may be, of such expenditure, out of the central fund, from which the Purse Fund will be kept separate.

(3) Except for Bombay, Calcutta, Karachi and similarly circumstanced cities, at least 75 per cent of the money collected in each town, district or province will be spent in that place, or area or province, if the following two conditions are satisfied:

(a) A scheme, including all the old commitments, of welfare work for utilizing the quota of the Purse Fund money is proposed, submitted and approved by the Central Office.

(b) Whole-time, honorary or part-time workers are forthcoming for working out the approved scheme or schemes, and their names approved. In appointing permanent workers, care should be taken to see that they have had at least 2 years’ continued service.

(4) The Purse Fund should be spread out over a period of not less than two years, according to circumstances, at the discretion of the workers of the locality concerned, with the approval of the provincial workers.

---

1 These were framed by Harijan Sevak Sangh, Delhi.
(5) The money will be forthcoming by instalments, as may be required, on presentation of monthly bills of expenditure incurred on welfare schemes. Reasonable advances, however, will be made to keep the work going.

It is the special desire of Mahatma Gandhi that out of the Purse Fund not a single rupee should be spent for administration and propaganda of the provincial, district or other offices and that the purse money cash should be utilized for no other purpose than the execution of schemes for Harijan welfare work.

(6) The earmarking of donations should be done at the time of the donation and not after. And in each case, when earmarking is done, it will be accepted only if Gandhiji approves.

(7) Special cases of districts requiring extra help over 75 per cent would be considered only on the grounds of the poverty of the district, or the extraordinary scope for work in the district or the unusually large number of Harijans in the district.

(8) In regard to taluk organizations and their finances, schemes from the taluks which have paid money to the Fund will receive due consideration in relation to such schemes. There need be no paid secretary or office in the taluks.

(9) The Provincial Secretary as also District Secretaries, should cease to be office men, but should become necessary parts of the welfare schemes. The charges of the provincial staff needed for supervising schemes in the districts will thus be met from the 75 per cent quota and taken from the districts in proportion to their budgets. Workers necessary for supervising welfare schemes may be treated as part of the constructive expenses.

All those who belong to various Harijan Sevak organizations or are otherwise interested in the cause are invited to send to the Secretary, Central Board, as early as possible their suggestions on the foregoing draft rules. The object is to incorporate in the final rules the wisdom of those who have helpful suggestions to make. Perhaps it is more difficult to spend the money wisely than it was to collect it. The chief difficulty will be to find whole-time, trustworthy and otherwise competent workers. In making their recommendations, therefore, local sanghs and individuals will bear in mind the difficulty about workers. Schemes, moreover, which would admit of employing Harijans by preference must be more acceptable than those in which such special qualifications may be required as to make it impossible to employ Harijans. Suffice it to say that the aim of every scheme should be the greatest and the quickest amelioration of the educational and the economic condition of Harijans with the funds available. Thus the general rules can only be indicative and elastic, so as to cover as wide a range of schemes as might be formulated by the provincial and district sanghs.

_Harijan, 2-3-1934_
256. NOTE

FOR BIHAR

From far-off New Zealand, the Wellington Indian Association has cabled £93 for Bihar relief. The amount has been transferred to Babu Rajendra Prasad.

Harijan, 2-3-1934

257. A WAIL FROM MELA-ARASUR

I cannot recall a place where I have not received addresses from Harijans. Most of them have dealt with general grievances, but in two or three cases I can recall having had instances of specific complaints against the tyranny of caste Hindus. Mela-Arasur is a village in Lalgudi taluk, not far from Trichinopoly. After the usual complimentary paragraph, the appeal proceeds: 1

We, the inhabitants of the village of Mela-Arasur, have got two tanks of drinking-water, one of which is big and the other small, but both of which are being utilized by the savarnas to our exclusion. We are debarred from touching the waters of the tanks. . . . We are about eighty families. . . . Our petition to the Government to remove this ostracism . . . resulted in the putting up of notification that nobody should be obstructed from using the waters of the tank, but did not succeed in removing the ban, for the savarnas would take our attempts to heart and would not employ us in their fields. . . . Thus, in this poor condition, we are undergoing a lot of inexpressible difficulties for the past nine months. . . .

. . . We take this opportunity of presenting to you . . . knowing that you alone will be able to relieve us of it. . . . Furthermore, we request you to be kind enough to relieve us from poverty and suffering by giving to each family some donation at least for sustaining three months, in such manner as you think it best.

This was received at Trichy and I made public reference to it in my speech. 2 If the statements made are true, the position reflects no credit on the savarna Hindus of Mela-Arasur. It is to be hoped that the provincial Harijan sevak sangh will use all its efforts to secure justice for the helpless Harijans who are so dependent upon the caste Hindus. It is relevant to know whether the Harijans have facilities for getting pure water apart from the tanks in question. If they have not, humanity demands that the supply of pure water is guaranteed to them by those who deny the use of public tanks to which the Harijans are entitled in law. The boycott of Harijans for their having dared to enforce their right to the use of the tanks is adding insult to injury. I hope, however, that the good offices of the local Harijan sevak sangh will result in justice being done to the Harijans and in the restoration of good relations between the two divisions of the same family.

---

1 Only extracts are reproduced here.

The last sentence of the appeal demands an answer. Even if I had the ability, I would not have the wish to satisfy the signatories in their appeal for a “donation” that would sustain them for at least three months. Such donations are a waste of public money. They degrade those who receive them and put a premium on laziness. The able-bodied should ask for work, never charity. I know that in these days of scarcity even work is difficult to find in the case of the general body and more so in that of Harijans. But I believe that a person who is ready for any honourable labour will not have much difficulty in finding some work. I would, therefore, urge all friends of Harijans to discourage appeals for doles and endeavour to find employment for the unemployed who would not refuse to do any honourable labour.

Harijan, 2-3-1934

258. TO THE SUBSCRIBERS OF “HARIJAN SEVAK”

Harijan Sevak has completed its first year. Subscribers know the policy of this journal. Political questions are not even touched upon. It exists solely for the service of Harijans, and the attempt is as far as possible to make it self-supporting, which it is in a way, since any deficit that occurs is not made up by the Harijan Sevak Sangh. But looked at from another angle, it is far from self-supporting for the number of subscribers so far is far below the mark. There are at present roughly 1,600 subscribers. To make the journal self-supporting we need at least another 800. But if even the present number is further reduced, then there would be no justification left for continuing the paper. Subscribers are therefore requested to send in their subscriptions as soon as they get this issue. Readers who fail to send the subscription will not be sent copies of Harijan Sevak. The annual subscription of the paper is Rs. 3-8-0 and half-yearly Rs. 2.

Friends who have helped the paper by finding subscribers or in any other way are requested to continue their help in the current year also. Let everyone remember that news items of a general interest are not published in Harijan Sevak and also that it is the sole organ of the Harijan Sevak Sangh brought out in Hindi.

M. K. GANDHI

[From Hindi]

_Harijan Sevak_, 2-3-1934

259. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

March 2, 1934

DEAR DAUGHTER AMTUSSALAAM,

I got your letter yesterday and read it fully. My being pained does not mean that I was displeased with you. And now I have forgotten even the cause. There was no question of forgiving, you had committed no grave error. What more do you want? Stay there as long as Rajaji wants you to.

There is no hurry about going to jail. You have admitted that you will not even talk about going to jail till you are perfectly fit. You may be sure, too, that you will benefit by Rajaji’s company as long as you can have it. So stay on and take what service you can. I have not received any letter or wire from Dr. Sharma. Now, don’t be crazy. Be cheerful and keep writing to me.

_Blessings from_

BAPU

From a photostat of the Urdu: G.N. 295
260. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, BELLARY

March 3, 1934

Gandhiji congratulated the Chairman on his frankness and said that it was for the first time that he had heard of such dissociation. He had also learnt that the sanatanists resented his attempt to procure legislation on temple-entry. He assured them that there was no question of compulsion in the proposed Bill. On the other hand, it was designed to remove the legal compulsion that was then existing. He, therefore, appealed to the Bellary sanatanists to help where there was no difference of opinion. He pleaded for mutual toleration. Surely they could have no ground for complaint if they accepted the assurance that no temple would be opened without the express consent of an overwhelming majority of bona-fide temple-goers. The Bill therefore, even if it was passed, would not be sufficient automatically to open a single temple. It was designed to authorize the opening of temples to Harijans when a clear majority desired it. This was not possible under the existing law. Apart from this question, surely they could have no objection to the education of Harijan children, the opening to Harijans of public wells or tanks, or their general economic betterment. He could say without hesitation that the moneys that were being collected were not to be used for building temples. They were to be used solely for constructive work of the kind mentioned above. Whilst, therefore, he made this appeal to the sanatanists, he said, he would like to test the feelings of the vast gathering in front of him. He, therefore, asked the volunteers to go amidst the men and women present and collect whatever they might give for the Harijan cause, knowing what it was to be used for.

Harijan, 23-3-1934

261. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL JOSHI

[After March 3,] 1934

CHI. CHHAGANLAL,

I got your letter. You must have received mine in jail. You may stay in Dwarka and Rama may also join you there. But a player would always know better than a spectator. In all cases my views follow the basic principle, but they are of little value because of my ignorance of

---

1 Extracted from Valji Desai’s “Weekly Letter”. While presenting the purse the Chairman of the Reception Committee mentioned that there were some savarna Hindus who did not contribute to the fund. But there were others, too, who dissociated themselves from the presentation of the purse.

2 The addressee was released on March 3.
the facts. The sun is said to be a source of life and energy. As a general principle this is true. But it would make one who is burning with heat feel much hotter. That is the fault not of the sun, but of that person. Such a person would want the sun to be hidden. It is thus for you to determine how far you would follow general principles. It is not for me to forgive or not to forgive you for what you decide to do. I shall have to approve of it as being the best course for you.

Your duty towards your mother is included in your duty towards Mother India. Or you can include the latter in the former. If you did that, however, you should adopt a different way of life. Both the duties are right and each proper in its place. But you cannot combine the two. That is also true regarding your duty to your brother’s wife. However, we shall discuss all this if and when we meet. Meanwhile keep me informed about developments there. I shall be there on the 11th.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5527

262. LETTER TO W. H. BROWN

DHARWAR,
March 4, 1934

DEAR FRIEND,

Sjt. A. V. Thakkar has shown me your letter of even date in connection with the flying of the national flag on the bonnet of the car that drove me from Hubli to Dharwar. You are right in surmising that the flag could not have been put up with my consent. It was put up only in Dharwar at the instance of Sjt. A. V. Thakkar who, noticing the absence of it on our car, said to the responsible workers that if it was omitted by design, there was no occasion for the omission, as to his knowledge the flying of the flag was not declared illegal. I overheard the conversation, but I expressed no disapproval of the attitude taken up by Sjt. Thakkar. My position has been one of absolute neutrality. I have not asked for the flying of the flag, nor have I discouraged it anywhere. Indeed at least at one place I recollect having been called upon publicly to unfurl the flag in the Central Provinces, and I did so without any hesitation. I have scrupulously abstained from taking part in any political agitation directly or indirectly ever since my premature discharge, and in the prosecution of the self-imposed vow I propose to do so up to the end of 3rd August next, so far as it is humanly possible. But this abstention does not in any way mean that I have ceased to be a Congressman, or that I should hide my colours. My abstention means that I would not offer civil resistance myself, nor incite others to do so during the period named. I take it that Sjt. Thakkar is right in his interpretation of the law as it stands that the flying of the national flag is not an offence.

I may add that throughout the tour in the C.P. and the Madras Presidency, I have often driven in Cars flying the national flag.

I am due to leave Belgaum at 3 p.m.

Yours sincerely,

M. K. GANDHI

W. H. BROWN, ESQ., I.C.S.
DISTRICT MAGISTRATE
DHARWAR

From a photostat: G.N. 1019. Also C.W. 7777. Courtesy: G. D. Birla

263. SPEECH AT RAILWAYMEN’S MEETING, HUBLI

March 4, 1934

Gandhiji claimed to be a fellow-labourer, as he had lived in the midst of labour from his youth upwards. He asked the workmen not to be disheartened or lose faith in themselves or feel helpless before those whom they called capitalists. Labour itself was a form of capital. It was not necessary that a man’s capital should be measured in coins. In ancient times it was described in terms of the cattle possessed by him. Capital owned by a working man was his labour. The difference, therefore, was not in kind or quality, but it was purely in quantity. Capitalists might possess thousands of rupees, whereas a labourer or a working man possessed labour which might represent only 8 annas per day. But the combined labour of 50,000 working men would represent capital earned in one day of Rs. 25,000. Instances could be given to show that under certain circumstances the golden coins of the capitalists had proved valueless when they could not command labour, whereas the labour of one single labourer had proved invaluable. If, therefore, the labourers acted as one man they could be as good capitalists as their employers. Employers and employed were, therefore, interdependent. And no cause for complaint need ever arise if each party recognized its limitations. What he had said, Gandhiji proceeded, applied to Harijans.

Extracted from Valji Desai’s “Weekly Letter” with double force. When they had become conscious of their own strength, no power on earth would be able to check their economic progress.

_Harijan_, 23-3-1934

264. A LETTER

[Before March 5, 1934]

As you may have known, I am not now coming to Orissa soon. I go to Bihar first. I do want to finish Orissa before July. I shall be able to know my way clear after reaching Bihar which I do on 11th March.

_New Orissa_, 7-3-1934

265. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

_BELGAUM_,

_March 5, 1934_

CHI. VASUMATI,

I got your postcard on my arrival here last evening. I find it difficult to guide you or anybody else, for my mind is still in Yeravda. I take interest in things outside only in connection with Harijan work. I also feel that all of you should act as you wish. Wasn’t our last decision to the effect that everybody should act on his own responsibility and according to his own inclination? Isn’t this the only way in which everybody would be tested? Nevertheless, I realize that I am in duty bound to advise a person like you. I advise according to my lights anybody who consults me.

I am as eager to see you as you are to see me. But I suppress my wish. My immediate reaction is that you should go to Wardha, and observe things there. I shall be passing through it on the 10th. You can join me a few stations before Wardha or at Wardha and travel with me for a few stations beyond it, and discuss your problems with me. Stay at Wardha and have some experience of the work there. If you don’t like this plan, you may stay in Borivli. I would not advise you to go to Ahmedabad. There are few places there where you can stay. The Red Bungalow must be avoided. Nor can you stay in the Harijan

---

1 The addressee is not identified in the source.
2 The news item reporting the letter is dated March 5.
Ashram. Thus Wardha is the only place where you can live peacefully.

I understand what you say regarding your study. Reading books is not enough. You should reflect over them. For that you should read some of them over again. If you wish I would make another list and send it to you. You should also study a book on grammar. The Gujarati Vanchanmala series also is not bad.

Probably you will wonder why I don’t call you to Patna. Just now the conditions are very difficult there. I don’t even know what kind of accommodation we might get. People have no peace of mind at all. There are fears of more tremors still. In such conditions, I don’t feel inclined to ask anybody to come there to see me. But I shall be able to write to you more after reaching Patna.

Durga is coming here today to see Mahadev. Probably she also wants to take this opportunity to see me. It was only yesterday that I came to know about her coming. Dahyabhai and Chandubhai of Broach also are coming. I really feel how pleasant it would have been if you had come, too, along with them. Perhaps I shall find that you have indeed come. I am writing this early in the morning after the prayer. My health is excellent. From here we go to Nipani on Wednesday, thence to Bijapur and then take a train to Hyderabad.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Where is Gangabehn? If she is there, please tell her that she had promised to write to me again but has not done so.

266. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

March 5, 1934

CHI. AMALA,

I have your letter. My weight is 107. Food as usual. B. P. not taken for some time. Health quite up to the mark.

Yes I had your Gujarati letter. It was quite good. By all means learn Sanskrit.

I wish I knew German grammar. I am sorry I was never able to learn German.
I can suggest no reason for the change of ‘उ’ into ‘अ’ when it is joined on to ‘म’ except that it is easier to pronounce.

I am glad you went to Sharda Mandir.

I cannot believe R. approving of the persecution of the Jews in Germany.

Of course I want you to attain perfection. Nothing like trying for it.

Love.

BAPU

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

267. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

BELGAUM,
March 5, 1934

CHI. MATHURADAS,

You must have received a letter I had sent for Pyarelal.

I have had two letters from you. From Mercara to Mysore has been a good experience for you. I think it was worth it. Life would not be interesting without such experiences. When the thornless ‘cultured’ roses start growing, they will never have the glow of the roses of today. The beauty of the rose is as much in the thorn as in the flower. Thorns enhance the beauty of the flower.

It is very good that you went to Madhavdas. I did not have any special message for him. I had written a letter to him because Ba was worried. As there was no reply from him I felt like taking advantage of Chandrashankar’s presence there. If he had not been there, I would have sent it only to you. Now I have received the letter from Madhavdas. He seems to have exercised great restraint. He never informed anyone. You should visit him occasionally.

Continue to enquire at the Red Cross.

I would be surprised if I was allowed to go to Midnapore. I am not surprised by the prohibitory order.

Durga, Jivanji, Mohanlal, Dahyabhai and Dr. Chandulal have arrived today. It is my silence day. Therefore, I have not been able to talk to anyone.
Muriel Lester has gone straight to Delhi as she had no time.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

268. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

March 5, 1934

We had a good experience during the tour from Mercara to Mysore. I am glad we had it. Without such experience life would be uninteresting. When they are able to grow “cultured” roses which have no thorns, such roses will not have the bloom which the roses have now. The value of the rose lies as much in its thorns as in the flower itself. The thorns even increase the value of the flower.

[From Gujarati]
Bapuni Prasadi. p. 143

269. LETTER TO BRIJKRISHNA CHANDIWALA

March 5, 1934

CHI. BRIJKRISHNA,

The tour this time is proving so demanding that I am unable to write letters to my satisfaction. So you have entered your thirty-fifth year! My blessings are ever with you. God will see to your well-being and take further services from you. As for the treatment, you must implicitly follow Dr. Ansari’s directions.

Mother, I trust, has recovered.

I reach Patna on the 11th instant.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 2409
270. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

March 5, 1934

DEAR DAUGHTER AMTUSSALAAM,

Your letter. You have my orders to remain there till you have gained sufficient strength.

Blessings from
BAPU

AMTUSSALAAM

From a photostat of the Urdu: G.N. 296

271. ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS

BELGAUM,
March 5, 1934

There was a meeting of Harijan workers at Belgaum, when Gandhiji had his silence and Harijan-editing days there. One of the workers had brought typed questions from which the most useful may be culled.

Q. Is your Harijan work based purely on religious or political grounds?
A. Purely on religious grounds.

Q. When you know that there are pandits and sanatanists who derive untouchability from Shastras, why do you take the opinion from those who hold the contrary view?

A. I have taken my opinion from nobody. My opinion on untouchability was formed many years before I had discussed the question with a single pandit. But when I began to preach against untouchability, and more especially when, owing to my first fast, the question attracted world-wide attention, I had to study the position of those who defended untouchability as having its origin in the Shastras. And in doing so, if I found pandits who defended untouchability, I

1 Extracted from Valji Desai’s “Weekly Letter”. The questions were put to Gandhiji at a meeting of Harijan workers. Since it was a silence day the questions had been typed out.
also found men who held strongly that the Shastras did not warrant any untouchability as it was practised today, and I found also that they were just as learned as the others. Surely, I was entitled to use in support of my opinion the authority of these pandits. But supposing these pandits came to hold a different view, I believe that my conviction is strong enough to stand without the support of any pandit.

Q. You have said times without number that you have committed Himalayan blunders. Are you quite sure that you are not committing another such blunder again?

A. I am not sure at all, for I do not profess to be omniscient. But if I discover that I have made a mistake, I should have no hesitation in retracing my step. And I know that God will forgive all errors committed unconsciously, as He has done in the past.

Q. Some say that there should be no separate schools for Harijans at all, whereas others say that separate schools are absolutely necessary.

A. My opinion is that, whilst every facility should be provided for the admission of Harijans to public schools, for some time to come preparatory schools will be absolutely necessary for preparing Harijan children for the primary schools. It is futile to expect Harijan children all at once to flood public primary schools. There is also a possibility of opposition to wholesale admission. Hence preparatory schools are necessary if we honestly want to foster the education of Harijan children.

_Harijan, 23-3-1934_
DEAR SIR SAMUEL,

You will recollect that whilst I was returning to India in December of 1931 you had a cable caused to be sent to me in regard to an interview alleged to have been given by me to a journalist in Rome and that I had sent a categorical denial.¹ To this there was a counter-denial which I had not seen till recently, being in jail within less than one week of my landing in Bombay.

After my discharge from the last imprisonment in August last, I was told by Mirabai Slade that an English friend—Prof. Maclean of Wilson College, Bombay—had thought that although the matter was stale, it was worth while my clearing it up, as the denial by the Rome journalist had created a profound impression at the time of its publication and had probably precipitated the Viceregal action against me in 1932. Agreeing with Prof. Maclean, I at once asked Mirabai to write to Miss Agatha Harrison to procure the relevant newspaper cuttings. After much search she was able to get them. The last and the most important I received from her last month in the midst of my hurricane tour in the cause of the anti-untouchability campaign. For ready reference, I send you copies of the three cuttings marked ‘A’, ‘B’ and ‘C’ respectively.

It should be noted that these cuttings were for the first time seen by me on their being received from Miss Harrison. I have now read and reread them several times, and I have no hesitation in saying that ‘A’ and ‘C’ are a caricature of what took place. ‘A’ professes to be a summary of a long statement said to have been made by me to an Italian journalist. In ‘C’ The Times correspondent, on seeing my denial regarding the alleged interview, makes a halting admission that I might be correct in so far as Signor Gayda did not “request any formal interview and no such interview was granted,” but insists that the statements attributed to me were substantially correct. But truth will perhaps be better served by my simply stating what I do know than by analysing ‘A’ and ‘C’.

1. I never made any statement, much less a long one, to Signor...

¹ Vide “Cable to Croft”, 17-12-1931.
Gayda as suggested in ‘A’.

2. I was never invited to meet Signor Gayda at any place. But I was invited by an Italian friend to meet some Italian citizens at an informal drawing-room meeting at a private house. At this meeting I was introduced to several friends whose names I cannot now recall and could not have recalled even the day after the meeting. The introductions were merely formal.

3. At this meeting the conversation was general, and not addressed to any particular individual. Questions were put by several friends and there was a random conversation as at all drawing-room meetings.

4. It was therefore wrong for Signor Gayda or The Times correspondent to reproduce my remarks as if they were one connected statement to one particular person.

5. Signor Gayda never showed to me for verification anything he might have taken down.

6. The conversation, among other things, referred to the Round Table Conference, my impression of it and my possible future action. Many of the things that have been put into my mouth in ‘A’ I had never said. All my hopes, fears and future intentions were expressed in as precise a language as it was possible for me to command and use in my speech at the close of the Round Table Conference. Whatever I said in private conversation was but a paraphrase of the sentiments expressed in that speech. I am not given to saying one thing in public and another in private, or to saying one thing to one friend and something else to another. I could not have said that there was a definite rupture between the Indian nation and the British Government, for I had said to several friends about the same time that I was determined to strain every nerve to prevent a rupture and to continue the peaceful relations established by the Irwin-Gandhi Pact. Being an optimist, I do not believe in a final rupture between human beings.

7. I never said that I was returning to India in order to restart the struggle against England. Certain possibilities about which I was questioned at the informal meeting have been so described in ‘A’ as if I was actually going to India to bring them about if I could.

I would add that the public had neither the original notes supposed to have been made by Signor Gayda nor the latter’s own version wherever published. In ‘A’ and ‘C’ they had only the impressions of The Times correspondent about what Signor Gayda wrote or said.

I do not know how you were affected by ‘C’. If your faith in my denial was shaken, perhaps in any case I should have been acquainted with the rejoinder to my denial as you had kindly brought to my notice the first report. I do not know how you will take this letter. If you have any doubt about my bonafides, I would like to clear it, if it is at all possible for me to do so.

Miss Slade was the “follower” referred to in ‘C’. I enclose herewith her recollections of the conversation.¹

I am not publishing this letter. I am sending copies to several friends for their private use. But I would like you, if you could, to give it publicity, or to ask Prof. C. F. Andrews, Woodbrooke, Selly Oak, Birmingham, to make such public use of the letter as he might wish.²

Yours sincerely,
M. K. GANDHI

From a photostat: C.W. 7942. Courtesy: G. D. Birla. Also In the Shadow of the Mahatma, pp. 130-3

273. LETTER TO HIRALAL SHARMA
BELGAUM,
March 6, 1934

Bhai Shrama,

Your letter is good.

My advice to you is to use the house Jamnalalji suggests. You should take the children too. Your duty is to look after them. You should use the tent if one is provided. Your day must be spent wholly in the Ashram. I find your temperament is such that you can adjust anywhere. I want you to reach the Ashram soon. I have to take plenty of service from you. I want to know your wife too. I pass through Wardha on the 10th instant. You can try to arrive there by that date. I wish to send Amtus salaam when you are at Ashram.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a facsimile of the Hindi: Bapuki Chhayamen Mere Jivan ke Solah Varsha, between pp. 56-7

¹ For the texts of enclosures ‘A’, ‘B’ and ‘C’ and Miraben’s recollections, vide Appendix “Background to “Letter to Sir Samuel Hoare” with Extracts from and introduction by Horace Alexander”.

² Sir Samuel Hoare in his reply dated April 7 said that he did not propose himself to send Gandhiji’s letter to the Press, but that he had no objection to Andrews doing whatever he thought desirable in regard to it.
274. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

BELGAUM,

March 7, 1934

CHI. MATHURADAS,

Herewith a copy of the letter to Sir Samuel Hoare¹. You can make whatever private use of it you wish. There should be no mention of it in the Press. In case you do not know what it is all about, you do not have to be exercised over it. Pyarelal knows and will understand at once.

Miss Agatha Harrison will be arriving on the 16th by a tourist steamer. Bhulabhai knows her well. She and Pyarelal are as sister and brother. If you can manage to see her on board the steamer you should take Pyarelal with you; Bhulabhai too, if he can go. Her needs will be of an Englishwoman; so she should be provided Western style toilet facilities. She should therefore be put up at Bhulabhai’s or at Jalbhai’s. If neither of them is prepared to have her and if you cannot think of any other place, let her for the present stay at the Y. W. C. A. as she suggests in her letter. I shall write to her. If possible I shall send the letter along with this. I am enclosing the latest letter from her. You can get the name of her steamer at Grindlay’s. After you have read her letter send it on to Ghanshymdas. He is at the moment in Calcutta. I shall write or wire to her from Patna advising what she should do. In the meanwhile you may introduce her to a few people in Bombay. Introduce her to Munshi, to Shah or, if you like, to one of the Liberals. Pyarelal can think on the matter more fully. I have no further guidance to offer. You may ask me anything you want to. If Aunt² is there she will certainly meet her. Give Miss Harrison the copy you have of my letter to Sir Samuel.

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

275. SPEECH AT MERCANTILE ASSOCIATION, NIPANI³

March 7, 1934

I speak as a merchant to fellow-merchants. The difference is that you are doing business for your respective families, perhaps not ex-

¹ Vide “Letter to Sir Samuel Hoare”, 6-3-1934.
² Sarojini Naidu
³ Extracted from Valji Desai’s “Weekly Letter” ceeding more than 100 members in each case at the outside, whereas I do business on behalf of a family consisting of several crores of people, called Harijans. I have found that mercantile credit does not depend upon the cash that merchants can produce, but upon the prestige they have for redemption of their promises. A bank having hoards of gold in its coffers would lose credit in a moment if it dishonoured a cheque drawn upon it, that is to say, if it did not redeem the promise underlying the cheque that it would be honoured on presentation, if there was a credit balance in favour of the drawer. I, therefore, hope that you will not fail to redeem the promise which you are reported to have made in respect of crores of Harijans.\(^1\)

Harijan, 23-3-1934

---

276. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

ROADBELL,

March 8, 1934

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

I have not heard from you recently. I am writing this letter before the prayer. We left Belgaum yesterday. This place is a small town but there is a railway station.

I am writing this letter after a longer interval than usual as Dahyabhai, Chandubhai, Durga and Jivanji had come to see me in Belgaum. Dahyabhai saw Mani. Durga, Jivanji and Bablo saw Mahadev. One may say that Mani and Mahadev are all right. Mahadev is engrossed in his work. I heard everything from Chandubhai. Kanjibhai has still not come to see me. Please take care of your nostrils. Keep up the practice of neti. And remember that the correct way of doing it is with a piece of fine cloth.

Miss Lester has gone to Delhi. Harrison is arriving on the 16th. Ba’s letter is enclosed. Her brother has passed through a severe illness. Lakshmidas is out of danger now. Taraben Modi is very ill. She has developed a tumour in the throat and it has burst. Her teeth have been giving her much pain. Kishorelal’s fever has still not left him.

I will reach Patna on the 11th. Thakkar Bapa and his retinue will go to Delhi. If after going to Patna I find it possible to continue the \(^1\) Gandhiji had been told that there was some disinclination on the part of the merchants to redeem the promise. However the Chairman assured him that there was no basis for such apprehension.

Harijan tour, I will ask him to join me.

Lilavati (Asar) is pretty ill. I don’t worry, however, since Prema is with her. Amtussalaam may still be described as ill. Brijkrishna is improving. I suppose you know that there is an epidemic of a children’s disease in Ahmedabad. Please be satisfied with this much today. It is now time to see visitors.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhaine, pp. 84-5

277. LETTER TO TARABEHN R. MODI

March 8, 1934

CHI. TARA,

It is 3.30 a.m. just now. This is a small village. We reached the place at 9 last night after travelling the whole day. I was given your letter immediately on arrival and am writing this reply now.

Five systems of treatment are current in India at present: (1) allopathy, (2) ayurveda, (3) unani, (4) homoeopathy and (5) nature cure. I leave out the use of mantras and magic. Of these, allopathy is the most widely in use. I am inclined towards nature cure and, if further help is needed, I would have recourse to allopathy, but within limits. In certain cases surgery is indispensable and some of the drugs, like quinine, are very effective. I would put you under nature-cure treatment and, for the trouble you are having with your teeth, etc., I would advise you to take help from allopathy. But I am not with you just now and don’t wish to offer guidance from this distance. I, therefore, feel inclined to let things go on as at present. Allopathic practitioners are comparatively more honest. In the West, they are continually experimenting. Their treatments, therefore, are often found to succeed. But I would say this even from here. After commencing a treatment, one should think no more about it and watch the effect patiently. One should not feel impatient for the result. Let it be what it will, good or bad. After all, how do we know what result is good and what bad? “What we regard as misery is not misery, nor what we regard as happiness happiness. The only misery is forgetfulness of Narayana’s name and the only happiness is constant memory of Him.” Let the attachment to the body fall away slowly. Keep on writing to me. I will then write if I have any suggestion to make.

Don’t think about anything till the body is completely restored to health and you can work. There will be plenty of time to serve after you have recovered.

Kishorelal is at Deolali. Fever does not leave him completely. Going to Deolali does not seem to have made much difference. I had a letter from Vasumati. Pyarelal is in Bombay.

You have done well in renting a separate room there. But who is with you to help you? Who does your cleaning, sweeping, cooking and other chores? I am sure you must be realizing the usefulness of the Ashram in your present circumstances. The test for us consists in creating the atmosphere of the Ashram even when there is no Ashram now.

The noise has started now. The hands of the clock are moving to 4.20. Wherever I go, a thousand or two thousand persons attend the morning and evening prayers. Since it is a new place every day, people don’t feel it a hardship to forgo one night’s sleep. They come to the morning prayer even from great distances.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 4180. Also C.W. 1679. Courtesy: Ramniklal Modi

278. LETTER TO LILAVATI ASAR

March 8, 1934

CHI. LILAVATI,

Please believe me you are as much in my thoughts as I seem to be in yours. I didn’t write to you after you had been imprisoned because I didn’t think you would get my letter. But I see now that you can get letters, and so I am writing this. You don’t seem to have received the letter which I wrote to you after you were released. You were rather hasty in returning to jail, but I have no doubt that you have proved your courage by doing so. I am sure all will be well with you. Now exercise strict self-control and get rid of your fever. Don’t worry about anything. Don’t think about events outside. If you are permitted to write to me, write as long a letter as you would like to. I am fine. I hope to reach Patna on the 11th. Is Prema permitted to look after you?

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 9327. Also C.W. 6602. Courtesy: Lilavati Asar
279. LETTER TO KASTURBA GANDHI

BIJAPUR,

[March 8], 1934

BA,

I got your letter. Since, even after much waiting, I didn’t hear from Madhavdas, I wrote to Mathuradas and asked him to look him up. He did so, and the letters received from Madhavdas and Krishna are enclosed. A letter from Manilal also is enclosed. Apart from what you will read in these letters, there is nothing more to write about these persons. You should now stop worrying about Manilal. I hope you do remember that he is past forty now. He is able to look after himself and doesn’t worry about anything. He does his work and shoulders his expenses. Manilal is quite happy. You, therefore, ought not to worry about him. From Belgaum I have come to Bijapur. At Belgaum Durga, Jivanji, Dahyabhai, Bablo, Chandubhai and Mohanlal came and saw me. Durga and Jivanji visited Mahadev and Dahyabhai saw Mani. They are all quite well. Siddhimati also came and saw me. She must have gone to Ahmedabad with Durga. Pyarelal writes to me from time to time. Jamnalalji has gone to Patna. I will reach there on the 11th. Thakkar Bapa will separate from the rest of the party. Valjibhai has been with me and will accompany me to Patna. Kisan and Om also are with me. I have dictated this letter to Om while eating my meal.

Blessings to you all from

BAPU

[From Gujarati]

Bapuna Bane Patro, pp. 8-9

280. LETTER TO MATHURADAS TRIKUMJI

March 8, 1934

CHI. MATHURADAS,

Herewith the second letter from Agatha Harrison. As she says in the letter, let her carry out her programme in Bombay at her ease and then go to Poona. I suppose she will be putting up at the Servants [of India Society] at Poona.

I sent yesterday a copy of my letter to Hoare. I am sending another copy now. Yesterday’s copy is meant for Agatha and today’s 1 January 8 in the source. However, Gandhiji was in Bijapur on March 8.

copy is for you.

It seems Faiba is coming to Hyderabad. It is good. A lot of work has cropped up for me in Hyderabad.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]

The monthly expenses of Agatha are Birla’s responsibility. She estimated £200 for this visit. Of this, £100 was arranged in England and £100 will have to be found here. See if Bhulabhai can take that burden.

From the Gujarati original: Pyarelal Papers. Nehru Memorial Museum and Library. Courtesy: Beladevi Nayyar and Dr. Sushila Nayyar

281. LETTER TO F. MARY BARR

[Before March 9, 1934]

CHI. MARY,

Your letter. As I am in Hyderabad for 12 hours, do come and then you will travel back with me.

Love.

BAPU

[PS.]

Your fast is good. You must describe it more fully when we meet. Kisses to Chandra.

From the original: C.W. 3350. Courtesy: F. Mary Barr

282 OUR SHAME

Reference has already been made in these columns to a memorandum which was received by me at Coonoor on behalf of ‘Adi-Hindus of Tamil Districts’. It is signed by thirty-six representatives some of whom are members of municipal councils or taluq boards. From this, I condense below the catalogue of their disabilities. In condensing it I have not materially changed their language. Criticism interspersed with the recital has been removed as being superfluous. The list is otherwise untouched.

1 This letter was written before Gandhiji reached Hyderabad on March 9.
1. We have no access to eating-houses, laundries, shaving saloons, coffee and tea clubs, restaurants, choultries, schools, agraharams, wells, tanks, water-taps, springs, post offices (located in villages) and other places of public resort, not to speak of temples in several places.

2. In some places, holding umbrellas, wearing sandals, wearing dhotis below the knees are considered as a great crime. Wearing jewels made of gold by our women-folk and using clean cloth over their body would be regarded as an ill omen by some caste Hindus.

3. We are not allowed to carry our dead within particular union board areas alongside the highway, simply because there is a temple of a deity on the road-side. We are compelled it carry the dead body through a paddy field even when there is knee-deep mire during rainy season.

4. The Headman of the so-called untouchables within a particular union board area is not allowed by the caste Hindus to get on horseback and pass along the highway during his investiture ceremony as Headman of the said classes.

5. In some village bazaars, bleached cloth cannot be touched by us when we are desirous of buying it for festivals.

6. If cooked bread or other eatables are touched in bazaars knowingly or unknowingly, the whole cost of the food-stuff will be extracted from our people for the sin of touching them.

7. Since a very high percentage of our people living in rural areas have no habitation of their own in most of the districts of the presidency, but are allowed by sufferance to live on the lands of the land-owning classes, any demand for wages for work contributed by our people in their lands is highly resented by their masters. They do not get living wages and the hours of work are unlimited. These are often paid in unwholesome grain in short measures.

8. For marriage occasions or processions of our deity, we cannot get the services of caste Hindu musicians when we cannot find some among us.

9. Young men of our community riding on bicycles are being regarded with severe displeasure. In remotest villages, jutkas (horse cabs) cannot ply for us, as the caste Hindu owners refuse to take us. The same is the case with motor buses.

10. In public latrines, built out of public funds in a particular municipal area, the so-called untouchables are actively prevented from using them. After a good deal of assertion, they were provided with separate latrines.

11. In some of the dispensaries run under the control of particular local bodies, our people do not get proper treatment at the hands of caste Hindus employed there.

12. In the temporary water-sheds erected by caste Hindus during the hot season, the distinction made by them in pouring water to the Adi-Hindus for drinking purpose is highly intolerable and offensive.

13. When our people get into local bodies and panchayats the orthodox caste Hindus resign their seats by way of protest, and in some cases our people are given
14. When an Adi-Hindu rests on the pial in front of his house, he should get up and bow his head before a caste Hindu and worship him with due veneration when the caste Hindu happens to pass that way. If this custom is neglected by the Adi-Hindus, they will be taken to task severely by the caste Hindus.

We are often asked to set our own house in order. This is simply begging the question. Where the Hindu society is one vast system of gradations and degradations based on caste and birth, there is no use in accusing the so-called untouchables of being divided among themselves. After all, the so-called untouchables are themselves victims of circumstances.

15. In municipal areas, separate water-taps are maintained wherever caste Hindus object.

16. To rural elementary schools maintained out of public funds our children have no free access. When they are admitted, they are given separate seats, or they are asked to sit on the floor. If the pupils approach the caste Hindu orthodox teachers employed there, knowingly or unknowingly, to clear some doubts, they are pushed back by the teachers with the help of slates or sticks for fear of pollution. In some cases, our children are made to stand outside the main school premises in all seasons, in order to receive instruction through the window, and hence our children cannot even see the blackboard. When the lower elementary course is completed in the separate schools established for our children, we are not admitted in the higher elementary schools run under the public management in the same village. Even trained teachers belonging to Adi-Hindu community are not appointed in such higher elementary schools. Our children cannot use the common latrine. It is a great pity that even our representatives serving on different local bodies do not pay surprise visits to such schools, where caste Hindus predominate, for fear of molestation and endless trouble. Singanallore and Irugur villages near Coimbatore have become famous in this respect. The elementary schools in urban areas are not free from such defects.

In high schools our students cannot take drinking water from the pots used there during hot season; but they must depend upon some caste Hindu students to pour water for our young men and girls. Even vessels are not given to our students, but the students have to use only their hands as vessels for drinking. To the common tiffin rooms our students have no free access.

17. In post offices located in inaccessible places, we cannot post letters straightaway or transact any other business. Even for buying post cards, covers or stamps, we will have to stand at a great distance from such post offices and beg some caste Hindu passers-by to comply with our request. There are two things involved in this. Firstly, we cannot pass through the public pathway. Secondly, we are prevented from transacting business straightaway in the post office.

18. We feel sorry that your august person has not taken birth in the Adi-Hindu community to realize our practical difficulties.
This is a formidable catalogue. There is no exaggeration in it, if one or two mental reservations are understood. Every statement is true of some place. No disability is universal. Some are rare. And all are being abated by voluntary effort. These reservations should be known in order to get the proper perspective. They do not in any way reduce caste Hindus’ shame or warrant inaction on the part of reformers. The shame of caste Hindus will continue so long as these disabilities are practised in the name of religion, no matter to how little or great an extent. It is the clear duty of sanatanists so called to denounce the disabilities in the severest possible language and join hands with the reformers in protecting Harijans from humiliation heaped upon them under the sanction of religious custom. The eighteenth grievance which the signatories have specially underlined I regard as a compliment paid by them to me. Yes, it is quite possible that I would have felt the force of these terrible grievances much more, had I been born an Adi-Hindu. Not having had that luck, I have become one by adoption. There will be no rest for me nor society, so long as untouchability persists.

Harijan, 9-3-1934

283. LETTER TO G. V. MAVALANKAR

March 9, 1934

BHAISHRI MAVALANKAR,

Thakkar Bapa is going there specially to see you. He wants to discuss with you the position about the Relief Fund, of which he is one of the Trustees—what the total amount is and where the sums have been deposited. If you send me particulars of where other funds, too, are deposited and of withdrawals from them, I can think further about them. If you wish to make any suggestions, kindly send them in writing.

I hope you keep good health.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1238

284. SPEECH AT WOMEN’S MEETING, HYDERABAD

March 9, 1934

As you women are the housekeepers I expect that much reform and good work can be done by you. By their very instinct women are more patient and can better bear suffering than men, and therefore, any work that is undertaken by women is sure to be successful. It is inhuman not to recognize one section of our own people whose religion is the same as ours. It is indeed very pleasing to me to see a very large crowd of people all eager to work for the betterment of a section of our people. I am thankful to you all for the money and the jewels that you are giving me today out of free love and love for the work that I have undertaken. It is not these which matter but it is the practical work that leads to the salvation of those in suffering. I hope that the ladies of Hyderabad will devote their time and do as much work as possible, for which money will be forthcoming if good service is rendered.

The Hindu, 13-3-1934

285. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, HYDERABAD

March 9, 1934

He thanked the public for their addresses and purses. He was speaking to them in a language which was partly Urdu and partly Hindi because he considered both the languages to be one and the same. The distinctions between higher and lower classes should not be perpetuated, for all were one in the service of the country. He had given his thought to the question for the last 50 years and he felt that there should be no distinctions drawn between the Harijans and the other classes. In fact, there should also be no distinctions between Hindus and others like Muslims, Christians and Parsis; they should all be united, like the five fingers on one hand. Hindus owed a special responsibility for removing the blot of untouchability. Friends from America, Japan and other countries were writing to him, saying that there was no untouchability in those countries.

Replying to orthodox opposition, Gandhiji said that his critics alleged that he was out to destroy Hinduism. The charge was not at all true; he was only trying to remove a stigma from it. In conclusion, Gandhiji made a fervent appeal to all to help him in the work of ameliorating the condition of Harijans.

The Hindu, 13-3-1934

286. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, SECUNDERABAD

March 9, 1934

Gandhiji began his speech with the remark that until he was told to that effect he did not know that the girls were Harijans. There was no means of distinguishing 1 Held in the V. V. School premises, the meeting was attended by about 10,000 people. Many officials also attended the meeting.

them from the caste Hindus, although the latter might think it a sin to sit next to them. He had come to Hyderabad in the course of his work for Harijans and he appealed for help. The public were quite welcome to give him whatever gifts they liked but it must be distinctly understood that the money would be spent for Harijans. Harijan work was for the purification of the soul and the age-long curse was fortunately fast disappearing. There was no room in the movement for hatred or selfishness. Gandhiji appealed to the orthodox also to help him in removing the obstacles in the way of the Harijan community, such as want of educational facilities, disabilities as regards water, etc. It was doubtful whether a high-class Hindu would care to treat a patient of the Harijan community. There would be no end to the tale of sorrow and shame, concluded Gandhiji, if he wished to recount the sufferings of Harijans, and he appealed to all to help him.

The Hindu, 13-3-1934

287. INTERVIEW TO ASSOCIATED PRESS OF INDIA

HYDERABAD, March 9, 1934

I have not the faculty of others for looking ahead, much less across three months. When the period of my self-imposed inactivity for the moment ends on 31st July there will be time enough to consider the position. Till then, I have my hands full with anti untouchability work and the Bihar programme.

Questioned about the duration of his stay in Bihar, he said he was entirely in the hands of Babu Rajendra Prasad in that regard but hoped to take advantage of his present visit to tour Orissa and Assam in connection with anti-untouchability work. Gandhiji emphatically denied the report that his visit to Hyderabad marked the end of his tours for the uplift of Harijans. He said he was only suspending his programme on account of the emergency in Bihar. He added while much had been achieved in the past few months a great deal still remained to be accomplished.

Asked about the results of his recent tour in South India, Gandhiji said it was an unqualified success. He found nothing throughout his visits in those parts to support the suggestion that South Indians were less disposed than people in other parts of India to help in the eradication of untouchability. On the contrary, he declared, everywhere he observed as much enthusiasm over his campaign as elsewhere while in throwing open the temples and contributing to anti-untouchability fund South Indians were second to none. Guruvayur was an exception which bore out his experience in South India. Even here he was confident that popular opinion would prevail.

The Hindu, 10-3-1934

---

1 Gandhiji had been asked what the future programme of the Congress would be.
288. A WAIL FROM UDUMALPET

Udumalpet is a township between Podanur and Dindigul. Among the addresses received there was one from its Harijans. I extract the following from their long and bitter address.

In this town we are not allowed to draw water from any of the common fresh water wells. Our females and children have to depend upon the mercy of caste Hindus for a pot of drinking water. We have to be waiting for hours and hours together and put up with all abuses the caste Hindu showers upon us before we can get a pot of water.

Owing to extreme poverty many of us are homeless and shelterless. We are exposed to the sun and rain and are suffering from innumerable difficulties. In our cheries the huts are so closely situated that very often we meet with fire accidents which cause loss of life and property. The town municipality is not attending to the sanitation of our cheries. They never clean our cheries.

There is no proper drainage, no regular cleaning of night-soil, no facilities for the hygienic living of our men. No street light is found in our cheries and there is no regular street for us to walk on. The town municipality confers so much benefit on all other portions of the town, but won’t attend to our cheries.

If the complaints are true, they require immediate attention from the Municipal Council, the public and the Local and Provincial Harijan Sevak Sanghs. I shall be glad to publish a refutation, if there is any exaggeration in the complaints. Meanwhile I defer further criticism.

Harijan, 16-3-1934

289. TO AFFLICTED BIHAR

PATNA,
Silence Day, March 12, 1934

This is just to report myself to you. I have placed myself at Rajendrababu’s disposal. Though I was at land’s end when the calamity descended upon you, my heart was with you. Rajendrababu knew that he could call me when he desired. I would like you to remember that the quake of untouchability is much worse than that of Mother Earth.

1 The Gujarati translation of this was published under “Notes” in Harijan-bandhu, 11-3-1934.
2 This is the message Gandhiji had written in the Earthquake Bulletin.
Let this reflection chasten us and make the calamity more bearable.

M. K. GANDHI

The Searchlight, 14-3-1934

290. LETTER TO GANGABEHN MAJMUDAR

March 12, 1934

CHI. GANGABEHN,

You have many times promised to Chhaganlal that you will go to Vijapur, but you have never kept the promise. I wouldn’t have felt it if the land at Vijapur were mine. But it belongs to the poor and your failure to do your duty of ensuring its proper management hurts me. You look upon me as your father. I didn’t seek that honour. Now do your duty as a daughter and do the work for the sake of which you adopted me as a father and end my pain. I hope you and Kiki are all right.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 9583. Courtesy: Chhaganlal Gandhi

291. LETTER TO CHHAGANLAL GANDHI

Patna,
March 12, 1934

CHI. CHHAGANLAL,

I got your letter. I am enclosing a letter to Gangabehn. You may use it if necessary. Let me know if there is anybody else who can persuade her. Would you say that we can pay for weaving a higher rate of wage than that fixed by Shankerlal? I hear from Prabhudas from time to time. I reached Patna last night. For the present I have decided to stay in Bihar. I shall be able to arrive at a definite decision after I have been here for some time.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 9582. Courtesy: Chhaganlal Gandhi

1 The land at the Vijapur Ashram was purchased in the addresssee’s name. Chhaganlal Gandhi had tried to persuade her to transfer the documents in favour of the Ashram trustees.
292. LETTER TO MANU GANDHI

PATNA,
March 12, 1934

CHI. MANUDI,

You wrote after keeping me waiting for quite a long time. I understand the reason now. Bali writes and tells me that you did not listen to her advice. You should avoid pickles and oil. You should live only on milk, unspiced vegetables, fruit and rotli. If you do so, you will not fall ill. One should learn to relish food that is good for one’s health.

I will convey to Ba the contents of the letters from all of you. She will feel very happy. I hope you have all completely recovered now.

Write to me regularly. Obey Bali’s instructions. Write to your friends at Wardha.

Blessings from
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 1530. Courtesy: Manubhn S. Mashruwala

293. LETTER TO K. M. MUNSHI

PATNA,
March 12, 1934

BHAISHRI MUNSHI,

It is only today that I am able to answer your letter. To me, at this juncture, your letter is like a lake of fresh water to a traveller in a desert. I thank you both. Your decision is perfectly correct. If you are forbidden to go to a hill-station, why don’t you go to Hajira? I, of course, have never been there. But all those who have been there have praised it very much. Is Sinhagad also considered a hill-station? Take treatment for whatever disease there may appear to be in the intestines or any other part of the body, but do it in a spirit of detachment. Thinking constantly about a disease only aggravates it. Dhyayato vishayanpunsah, etc., applies in this case too.

Sarojinidevi tells me that you have started visiting astrologers. Even if there be truth in their predictions, they ought to be shunned. She told me about the new party also. If a party of Congressmen is formed with a definite programme, I would certainly welcome it. Even if it makes some honest mistakes I would tolerate it. The members will learn from mistakes. If, however, they refuse to learn, the party will only be a burden.

1 Bhagavad Gita, II. 62.

VOL. 63 : 18 JANUARY, 1934 - 19 MAY, 1934

At present I desire two things from you. First, consider yourself as a trustee and earn as much money as you reasonably can. You should regard even such indulgences as you think necessary for your happiness as a trust. Secondly, I should like you to build up your body. For that purpose, you may try nature cure methods if they appeal to you. Not far from where you live are Mehta of Poona and Kuvalayananda of Lonavala. Both the institutions have branches here.

Sarojinidevi told me about the Socialist Party also. I read its manifesto. I did not like it. I think I should write about it. I will do so when I get the time. Purushottam has asked my opinion. If from the very start they think what the Government will do, how will the Party be able to go ahead with its programme?

I can definitely say that I shall be here for one month at least. I will await Lilavati’s letter. She still does not seem to have discovered the best way of using her abilities.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

[PS.]
Will you make a list of Gujarati books specially suitable for women and send it to me? Of course I do not want you to give too much time to it.

From Gujarati: C.W. 7533. Courtesy: K. M. Munshi

---

294. LETTER TO RAMIBEHN K. PAREKH

_PATNA_ ,
_March 12, 1934_

CHI. RAMI,

I saw your handwriting after many months. Please write to me from time to time. Ba is always inquiring about you all. She would feel happy if I could give her some news about you. Take care of yourself. Ask Kunverji to write to me.

_Blessings from_
BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9720

---

1 This word is not clear in the source.
295. LETTER TO BALIBEHN M. ADALAJA

CHI. BALI,
March 12, 1934

I have been writing the whole day and feel so tired now that I cannot write any more with the right hand. I am, therefore, writing with the left. Your letters sometimes bring tears to my eyes. You, who are like a tigress, behave like a slave towards children whom you regard as your own. This seems to be the fruit of your and your parents’ virtuous deeds in past lives. You say that Manu is not your daughter. If so, she is a daughter to nobody now. She used to be one to Ba. Since, however, Ba started going to jail, their bond is no longer what it used to be. You seem to be living only for Chanchi’s children. It cannot but hurt me to remove Manu from your charge. I must admit that I did not always feel thus. But your love for the children has won my heart. I am father or grandfather in name only. In trying to be father and mother to countless children, I have remained so to none. My only consolation is that all of you tolerate me. Don’t let your love for me diminish and continue to regard me as your father.

God will surely lead all of you to your good.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: C.W. 5052. Courtesy: Surendra N. Mashruwala

296. LETTER TO AMTUSSALAAM

DEAR DAUGHTER AMTUSSALAAM,

March 12, 1934

Your letter. Make yourself comfortable there, and go to Wardha on getting well. Dr. Sharma’s wire has been received just now; he is going to Wardha. I shall tell you when it is time for you to go to jail. That is my worry. You have to concern yourself only with getting completely well. I cannot have you here because of the difficulty of accommodation, food, etc. We shall see later on. Send the letter to Krishna and let me have her address.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Urdu: G.N. 297

1 Chanchal, also known as Gulab, wife of Harilal Gandhi
2 Krishnakumari, an Ashram inmate who had been in jail with the addressee
297. LETTER TO G. D. BIRLA

PATNA,
March 13, 1934

BHAI GHANSHYAMDAS,

I am sending with this the second letter received from . . .\(^1\) The girl is unhappy. I have consoled her. I do not know to what extent what I am doing will be agreeable to you brothers and to . . .’s father and other people. I suppose I shall continue writing to her till you people wish me not to. . . . has, in my opinion, as much right as . . . If. . . is inclined to remarry, it is our dharma to encourage her. I am sure she will not want to, still, she must have the freedom. Be frank with me in this matter. You may certainly restrain me, though . . . has now become like a daughter to me.

I enclose with this a copy of a letter I have written to Sir Samuel.\(^2\) I also enclose a copy of another\(^3\) I have written to the magistrate of Dharwar. The latter is merely for your information. As regards Sir Samuel there is something I want you to do. Ask Scarpa, if he is here, what happened at that meeting. He was present there, and even if he was not, the meeting had been arranged through him. It will be good if he can provide the names and addresses of the people who were present. I want to collect whatever facts I can. So far this affair has been discussed only in English. The whole thing is a fabrication. It is like “Ajmer” being twisted into “Aj mara”.\(^4\)

You want to come to see me. I shall call you after a short while for Harijan work. I have let Thakkar Bapa go to Delhi. He was not needed here. Of course a worker like him is useful everywhere. There was no special need . . . But you wish to discuss about . . . and . . ., or Bihar or the correspondence taken up with Sir Samuel. You may come whenever you want to. I shall be in the Motihari region from Wednesday to Friday, returning here on Friday evening.

Agatha Harrison will arrive in Bombay on the 16th. Lester has seen the Viceroy. She will be here tomorrow.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a copy of the Hindi: C.W. 7947. Courtesy: G. D. Birla

---

\(^1\) The names have been omitted.
\(^2\) Vide “Letter to Sir Samuel Hoare”, 6-3-1934
\(^3\) Vide “Letter to W. H. Brown”, 4-3-1934
\(^4\) Literally, ‘died today’. Gandhiji is referring to a joke involving the misreading of the word ‘Ajmer’ in the Persian script.
298. LETTER TO KASTURBA GANDHI

March 13/14, 1934

BA,

You must have received my letter of last week. It was dictated to Om. Today is Tuesday. I am writing this after brushing my teeth. It is not yet four. I am in Patna. The Relief Committee has rented a building. In the compound they have put up tents. Some persons are staying in these tents, too. Rajendrababu, his sister, Prabhavati and her husband, all of them are here. Jamnalal also is here. Bal, Maganbhai, Swami, Kripalani, Somaji and the others are here, too. Tomorrow I shall be visiting the part which has been worst hit. Lakshmidas is better now. He can even walk about a little. He is regaining strength. Velanbehn is trying hard to come, but has not come so far. I had letters from Manu, Bali and Rami this time. All of them had fallen ill together, so that none of them could write. Manu and Bali say that in their illness all of them forgot the grief of Kusum’s death. They are all better now. Rami must have gone to Bombay or will go now. Manu has been able to make no progress in her study. She started eating pickles, etc., as a result of which she got fever and also sore throat. They all send their pranams to you. In fact in every letter there are pranams for you. Kaka is happy in Hyderabad. Chhaganlal Joshi is in Dwarka and so Ramabehn also has gone there with Vishnu. Vasumati is in Borivli. Gangabehn had gone to Kutch, from where she has returned and gone to Ahmedabad. Krishnakumari is ill. Amtussalaam is still with Rajaji. Pyarelal is in Bombay. Kusum Desai had come to meet me at Wardha Station. The station was on the way when I came here. I came in Hyderabad. Sarojinidevi had come there. She also is quite happy. Thakkar Bapa has gone to Delhi and Mama has accompanied him for keeping accounts. We are, therefore, only seven now. Before that we were sixteen. Ramdas met me. He travelled with me for one or two stations. He is all right. And now the discourse:

As I wrote in my last letter, I will narrate the story told by Vishnu Digambar Shastri. It has been devised to explain the meaning of bhakti. When Rama returned with Sita to Ayodhya in the flying-chariot Pushpak, he was accompanied by Hanuman and others. It was time now to bid them farewell, and so a durbar was held. Rama embraced all and Sita blessed them by putting her hands on their heads. The eyes of all were moist with tears. Rewards were distributed to all. It was Hanuman’s turn to receive his. Sita took off the necklace of precious jewels which she was wearing, put it round Hanuman’s neck and embraced him. But what could Hanuman have to do with a necklace of jewels? He snapped it into two and started opening up each bead with his teeth and, not seeing Ramanama inside, would throw it away. Everybody was stunned. The necklace which Sita had given from off her neck to be thus treated! Sita asked Hanuman why he was acting in that manner. Hanuman replied: “Mother, what shall I do wearing a necklace consisting of jewels which do not contain Ramanama? I want to have nothing but that.” The reply increased their amazement. Somebody said: “If that is so, Ramanama cannot be seen in your body either; what about it?” Hanuman burst out laughing and said: “All right. Look.” He then tore open his chest and there flowed out a stream of blood in every drop of which they saw Ramanama. They all shouted: “Enough, enough. We have seen it. Please forgive us.” Hanuman closed the cut and the court was filled with shouts of victory to him. Sita embraced him and bathed him in tears of joy.

This is an invented story. It is not found even in the Ramayana. There was no need for Hanuman to tear open his chest in order to show his bhakti. But we have to learn something from this story. Hanuman did not care for a reward. To him his service was its own reward. His bhakti was not for show. Nor did it require expression in words. Service itself constituted bhakti for him. Rama filled his whole being and accompanied every breath of his. He thought of nothing but Rama whether working or resting, eating or drinking, waking or asleep. He had put himself, mind, speech and body, in the hands of Rama. His heroism was dependent on his bhakti. It sprang from it. If we try, we can attain to bhakti like Hanuman’s. If Ramanama is on our lips all the hours of the day, some day it will sink into our heart; and once it has sunk into the heart it is bound to fill the whole being.

Prabhavati specially sends her pranams to you. She has inquired after everybody. I started writing this letter yesterday and have finished it today, Wednesday. It is still not four.

Blessings to you all from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Bane Patro, pp. 17-9

299. LETTER TO VALLABHBHAI PATEL

PATNA,
March 14, 1934

BHAI VALLABHBHAI,

You must have received the letter which I wrote from Belgaum. It was posted only on Thursday.
I am writing this letter on Wednesday morning. It is not yet four. Having finished a letter to Ba, I have taken up this. I arrived in Patna on Sunday night. Today at 6 I am leaving for Motihari. I spent the whole of yesterday in discussions with co-workers. We are getting a good amount of money. But the need is equally great. We shall have to see to it that every pie is put to good use. Jamnalalji is here. Lakshmidas is recovering. He can now walk about in the house. Rajendrababu’s health may be described as completely all right. He has forgotten his complaint under the load of the work which has fallen on him. I visited the city yesterday. Many Government buildings have been rendered unserviceable. In Patna alone there has been an estimated loss of about a crore and a half. Eighty persons were killed and 400 injured. But the destruction in Patna is nothing compared to that in the other parts. Committees administering the Viceroy’s fund and Rajendrababu’s fund are separate. We have to see now what we can do.

Miss Lester and her friend returned from Delhi yesterday. Both of them will accompany me. The friend will shortly have to return to England. Miss Lester will remain in India. She wants to study the whole situation. Agatha Harrison is arriving on the 16th. She also will come here.

Thakkar Bapa and party separated themselves at Hyderabad. He will rejoin me later when I am able to take up the tour of Orissa. I see that I shall have to remain here for about a month. It will probably not be necessary to stay longer.

We passed through Allahabad on our way. As we had to wait there for three hours, I called at Anand Bhavan. Swaruprani (Nehru) felt comforted. I was with her for a long time. I spent some time with Kamala (Nehru) too. She is ill. The mother-in-law and the daughter-in-law, both were confined to bed. Kamala was waiting for Dr. Bidhan.

Shastri (of Harijan) had two fine boys, to both of whom he and his wife were devoted. The younger boy was five years old. He is dead. The parents are now disconsolate. The boys were both extremely intelligent. They could follow Tamil, Hindi and Bengali and could dance and sing. The parents had given them the best kind of training.

I cannot write more today. My eyes are too tired. It will soon be time for prayer. I cannot go to sleep again.
There is no letter from you even this time. For my part, I shall go on writing.

Blessings from
BAPU

[From Gujarati]
Bapuna Patro-2: Sardar Vallabhbhaine, pp. 85-6

300. LETTER TO VASUMATI PANDIT

PATNA,
March 14, 1934

CHI. VASUMATI

I have your letter. For the present you should go to Wardha. I do not call you here right now because I shall be touring the area affected by the earthquake. I do not intend to take anyone with me there. It will be easy for you to come here from Wardha, and in any case you have to get some experience of that place.

Tell Durga that I have written to her and that, after consulting Anasuyabehn, she can certainly go to Ahmedabad.

Blessings from
BAPU

[PS.]
You may address your letters to Patna.

SMT. VASUMATIBEHN
C/O SMT. GANGABEBH VAIADYA, RAMBAUG
BORIVLI, via BOMBAY

From a photostat of the Gujarati: S.N. 9384. Also C.W. 629. Courtesy: Vasumati Pandit

301. LETTER TO GORDHANBHAI L. BHAKTA

PATNA,
March 1[4], 1934

BHAII GORDHANBHAI,

I have your letter. You have given much information. Let me know if you come to know more about Durbari. You should stick to

---

1 The source bears the date “15”, evidently a slip, for the postal stamp reads “Motihari, March 14, 1934”, the day when Gandhiji was at Motihari and Patna.
the Ashram for the time being. God will clear the way for you when the moment comes. It is enough that you keep yourself ready.

Blessings from
BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C. W. 10993. Courtesy: Gordhanbai L. Bhakta

302. LETTER TO RANI Vidyavati

PATNA,
March 14, 1934

CHI. Vidyavati,

I have your two letters. There is nothing definite about my tour of U. P. If it does take place, I shall be certainly coming to your area.
Write to Hridaynathji and Thakkar Bapa. If I come, whatever money is collected will remain with me. It will not be given to any local man. It will be spent only after consultation with the All India Spinners’ Association and therefore with me. Hence, have no worry with regard to the money.

Blessings to you and Laxmi from
BAPU

From the Hindi original: Rani Vidyavati Papers. Courtesy: Gandhi National Museum and Library

303. Remark in the Visitors’ Book of Sharda
Sadan Library, Lalganj

March 14, 1934

Though the building has collapsed, learning cannot be destroyed. Let the people therefore acquire the wealth of learning from the library.

M. K. Gandhi

From a photostat of the Hindi: G.N. 10502

304. Speech to Villagers

March 14, 1934

There is one thing I want to say to you. Those of you who are getting work from the Central Relief Committee are in honour bound

1 This was while Gandhiji was on his way from Lalganj to Motihari. The source does not identify the village where Gandhiji spoke.
to work well. Do good honest work; and you who are not already working should do so. To give money for bad work or for no work, is to make beggars. And you must put away untouchability from your hearts and lives.

_Mahatma_, Vol. III, pp. 253-4

305. INTERVIEW TO UNITED PRESS

[Before March 15, 1934]

The report is entirely misleading. What I said was: “If the Harijan sufferers in Bihar needed special help, apart from others, the Central Board of the Servants of Untouchables Society would have to consider how it could be rendered.”

But that would mean that the Bihar Central Relief Committee had neglected the Harijan sufferers in the affected areas.

I am quite sure that such an occasion would never arise, because the Central Relief Committee, as at present reconstituted, is well able to take care of the Harijan sufferers in Bihar.

_The Bombay Chronicle_, 16-3-1934

306. LETTER TO ESTHER MENON

[March 15, 1934]

MY DEAR CHILD,

I have your two letters. I am writing this at 12.15 a.m. in Motihari thinking it was 3 a.m. I got up and found it was 12 midnight. But I had no desire to sleep with the correspondence in front of me.

I see what you say about Menon. I must not write to the Diwan of Mysore in a personal matter. Menon should apply to all the possible hospitals and go where he may be wanted irrespective of climate. You will have to be where the climate and other considerations suit you and the children for the time being. Like the legal profession, the medical is crowded at the top. Anyway you must keep me informed of what is happening. You should tell Menon that he is

---

1 The United Press correspondent drew Gandhiji’s attention to the report published in _The Statesman_ that he intended to spend part of the Harijan Fund for Harijan earthquake victims in Bihar.

2 The report in the source is dated March 15.

3 From the reference in the letter to Motihari where Gandhiji reached on this date.
at liberty to write to me whenever he likes.

I hope the children are faring well. Yes, you will have to take them to a hill-station during the hot weather.

I understand what you say about the promise. Whether there was a breach or not you alone can judge. I am sorry that Maria was angry over my not going to Porto Novo. She gave me to understand that she had caught the spirit of my self-denial. It was as much a deprivation to me as it was to her. But self-denial to be true has to bring joy not sorrow, never anger.

Love to you all.

BAPU

From a photostat: No. 127. Courtesy: National Archives of India. Also My Dear Child, p. 104

307. LETTER TO MARGARETE SPIEGEL

March 15, 1934

CHI. AMALA,

It is just now 12.40 a.m. The alarm that should have gone off at 2.30 a.m. went off at 12 midnight. Having got up, I am attending to arrears at an affected place in Bihar.

That many Hindus are callous to the sufferings of animals is but too true. It is a mark of degradation and lifelessness of the religious spirit. You do not need to be a Hindu but a true Jewess. If Judaism does not satisfy you, no other faith will give you satisfaction for any length of time. I would advise you to remain a Jewess and appropriate the good of the other faiths.

My weight is 107; the b.p. has not been taken for days now.

Love,

BAPU

Spiegel Papers. Courtesy: Nehru Memorial Museum and Library

308. LETTER TO AMRITLAL V. THAKKAR

March 15, 1934

BHAI THAKKAR BAPA,

The enclosed was sent by Dr. Ambedkar. Please go through it and let me have your opinion.

VOL. 63 : 18 JANUARY, 1934 - 19 MAY, 1934
I hope you have written to Venkatasubbiah’ in connection with the demand for a separate plot for Harijans in Porto Novo.

I have started touring the affected areas here. It seems it will easily take one month at the least. After that it may be possible to tour Orissa and Assam. Hariji\(^1\) is pressing me to visit the U.P. at an early date. Please consider all this.

I am writing this at 1 a.m. in Motihari. The alarm which was set for 2.30 rang at 12. I cleaned my teeth without having looked at the clock. And then the heap of letters would not let me go to sleep again. I have brought along with me here only Mirabehn, Lester and Hogg and no one else from the party. There is not such an abundance here of transport and other facilities.

Having grown used to your company, I rather miss it. But what can one do?

I also used to get dreams.

BAPU

[PS.]

You should continue to write at the Patna address.

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 1136

309. LETTER TO LORD WILLINGDON

As from Patna,
Motihari,
March 15, 1934

Dear Friend,

Miss Lester has described to me, under your permission, the conversation she had with you. The impression left on her mind is that you consider me to be insincere. That I am mistaken about the many views I hold may be found to be true. But I know that I am not insincere. Beyond giving you my assurance that I have never in my life been insincere to anybody on earth, I do not know how to prove my sincerity. I should be glad to explain whatever in me might have appeared to you to be insincere. I have felt called upon to write to you because any doubt about my \textit{bona fides} in a person occupying the very high position you do must postpone the peace between England

\(^1\) Of the Servants of India Society, Madras
\(^2\) H. N. Kunzru
and India, which I am working for and praying for all these long years. I would like you to believe me when I tell you that I am your and England’s sincere friend.

To

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY

From a photostat: G.N. 6564

310. LETTER TO AMINA G. QUreshi

March 15, 1934

CHI. AMINA,

I had your letter. Aren’t you yourself also to blame for your persistent ill health? You just don’t take care of your diet. You must have spices, you cannot do without rice and you also want this and that. You ought to live on milk and fruit. Your body too is bulging out of shape. Hamid must be allowed to stay in the hospital and get rid of his eczema. You and the children must regain your health somehow.

Blessings from

BAPU

[PS.]

Write to me at Patna address.

From the Gujarati original: C.W. 10624. courtesy: Amina G. Qureshi

311. LETTER TO PARVATI P. DESAI

March 15, 1934

CHI. PARVATI,

You have been to see Pragji and still given me no news of him. Why? How is Pragji? What does he read and what physical work does he do? What is his food? Is he happy? Who are his companions? Why is he silent? How are you and the children?

. . . ¹ write . . . ² to me.

Blessings from

BAPU

From a photostat of the Gujarati: G.N. 5037

¹ Not decipherable in the source
² ibid
312. LETTER TO BHAGWANJI P. PANDYA

March 15, 1934

CHI. BHAGWANJI,

I got your letter. You have done well in buying a clipper and scissors. One must become one’s own barber.

Galiharilal will not come.

I understand about Manibehn. Forget her if you can. . . .

Blessings from

From a copy of the Gujarati: C.W. 367. Courtesy: Bhagwanji P. Pandya

313. LETTER TO SHARDA C. SHAH

PATNA,
March 15, 1934

CHI. BABU,

How very sad that I receive news about you but you do not give any news yourself! It means that you people would write letters to me when I provoke you to do so, not otherwise. Isn’t that so? I would certainly expect that you would not behave in that manner. I have always thought that you were a wise and sensible girl. I hope you remember that your health is in your hands. Do you?

Blessings from

BAPU

From the Gujarati original: C.W. 9968. Courtesy: Shardabehn G. Chokhawala

314. FRAGMENT OF STATEMENT

March 15, 1934

Precis of Mr. Gandhi’s statement made on Thursday 15th March, in North Bihar, when I asked him to give half an hour to concentrate on his memories of the tea party in Rome [in] Dec. 1931.

I was asked to go to some lady’s house to tea. I went, not know-

1 The sentence that follows seems to make no sense. For Gandhiji’s comment when asked by the addressee to explain it, vide “Letter to Bhagwanji P. Pandya”, 9-4-1934.

2 On the so-called interview given to Signor Gayda of Giornale d’Italia in December 1931. The statement was presumably made to Mirabehn, who was with Gandhiji at the time as also during his tour of Bihar in March 1934.
ing that a specially invited set of people would be present. I do not remember nor did I take particular notice at the time of the names of any of them.

They asked me more questions than I cared for as I had made it clear in Italy that I would give no interviews. They pressed me a good deal.

As I was giving my usual answers to the usual stock questions, one of them asked for a pencil and paper and began taking notes. Mahadev Desai generally takes notes of what I say, but as it happened to be, Devdas and Pyarelal all arrived later on— you also stayed away that afternoon.

I should like to see the original of the notes that the Italian caller took, for I cannot even imagine that I said what The Times reports. If I did, I must have been intoxicated or in some other . . . .

India Office Library, London

315. SPEECH AT PUBLIC MEETING, MOTIHARI

[March 15, 1934]

This is no time for talking. I have come to see and help you, and not to talk. But there are just two things I want to say to you. The first is this. The relief committees have the money, and either beggars or workers will take it. And I want no beggars. It would be deplorable if this earthquake turned us into mendicants. Only those without eyes, or hands, or feet, or otherwise unfit for work, may ask for alms. For the able bodied to beg is, in the language of the Gita, to become thieves.

The second thing is this, that God had Himself sent us this gift. We must accept it as a gift from Him, and then we shall understand its meaning. What is the meaning? It is this, that untouchability must go, that is to say, nobody must consider himself higher than another.

If we can understand these two things, this earthquake will be turned into a blessing. At present we count it as a sorrow, and no wonder when we see these fair fields and lands devastated. But I pray to God that He may give us strength to make a blessing out of this destruction.

---

1 From the report of the speech in The Searchlight, 18-3-1934
Mahatma Gandhi tendered some valuable advice to the relief workers of Champaran District who met him on the eve of his departure from Motihari.

Regarding the problem of reclamation of land Gandhiji said that it was a difficult problem for the Central Relief Committee. He thought that the Central Committee should take up only such programme of work as they could do full justice to.

It was true, further stated Gandhiji, that the people looked up to them for redress of all difficulties due to land problem, but he thought that beyond representing their case to the authorities concerned the Relief Committee should not take upon themselves any responsibility.

Neither the Government nor the zamindars, further said he, could be unmindful to this question for they were vitally interested in the reclamation of lands or else it would affect their revenue and rent.

Asked how he liked the idea of loans being advanced by the Bihar Central Relief Committee to the affected cultivators for reclamation of their lands, Gandhiji

---

1 The deputationists had told Gandhiji that they badly needed loans and not gifts for rebuilding their fallen houses and restarting their businesses.
said that the question of granting loans to the cultivators was the question of granting loans to the middle-class people also in the towns and loans in neither case could be realized by a private agency like the Central Relief Committee.

Any monetary help in this direction, said he, could only be in the nature of free gifts. But he was doubtful if the Central Relief Committee had ample means at their disposal to meet the requirements of a large number of people who stood in need of such help.

Concluding, Gandhiji said that they should not court popularity, but conserve all energies in order to utilize them when other agencies had failed and need of rendering help became very acute.

The Bombay Chronicle, 19-3-1934

318. TEMPLE-ENTRY V. ECONOMIC UPLIFT

